

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 1, 1913

NUMBER 1

Editorial

THE DIVINE RULE OF EVIDENCE.

APPLIED TO THE QUESTION OF THE BOOK OF MORMON PLATES.

In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.—1 Corinthians 13:1.

In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.—Matthew 18:16.

And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.—Isaiah 8:2.

In the foregoing scriptural quotations we have laid down the divine rule of evidence,—and it is also the human rule, for by this rule men habitually establish matters of fact, in the courts, and elsewhere.

Latter Day Saints should not be asked to conform to any rule other than that to which all other people conform, and by which rule matters religious and secular are tested and established. We were reminded of this some days ago while in conversation with a young man, at which time the little verbal tilt took place, as follows:

"I wish to see those plates from which the Book of Mormon is said to have been translated."

"I am afraid that you will be disappointed."

"Can't I see them?"

"I don't think so."

"Well, where are they?"

"Joseph Smith said that he received them from the angel, and he returned them to the angel. I do not know where they are."

"Oh, I did not know that. But why were they not kept to exhibit? It seems to me that everyone could be convinced in that way?"

"Did you ever see the cross on which Jesus was crucified?"

"No."

"But you believe that he was crucified?"

"Yes."

"You believe that such a man as George Washington lived? You do not have to see his bones to convince you of that?"

"No; but I could see them if I wished to."

"How do you know that you could?"

"Why, they are there, at Mount Vernon."

"How do you know they are?"

"Well, they are there if they have not been removed."

"How do you know that? How do you know they ever were there?"

"Well, people say that they were put there."

So there we were again, back to human testimony. Practically everything that we believe, outside of our very limited field of personal observation, we believe on the testimony of witnesses who have lived in the past or are now living. Every great biblical fact rests on that foundation (outside of direct personal testimony or revelation to us from God or his Spirit).

There is not a single original manuscript of the Bible in existence. In that particular the Book of Mormon is on as sound a basis as the Bible. The plates are gone; the manuscripts are gone. No one can see either of them.

A little thought will show one that had the plates been preserved it would be impossible to take them to Canada, England, Germany, Australia, France, Russia, Africa, South America, and into all parts of the United States, to show them to all prospective converts. The great, overwhelming majority, in the very nature of the case, would be forced to accept or reject on the testimony of others, so far as that one point of the actual existence of the plates is concerned. Thomas actually tested the wounds in the side of the Master, but they were not exhibited and could not have been exhibited everywhere in the world. Others had to believe on the testimony of Thomas and the other disciples. The great fact of his resurrection rests on human testimony, so far as the biblical record is concerned, and it is not confirmed by profane history. Had these plates been preserved, "experts," so-called, could have been hired to testify that they were forgeries, just as men were willing to testify that the disciples came and stole the body of Jesus from the tomb and then made up the story of the resurrection. After all, it would have resolved itself into a question of the veracity of witnesses.

But God took his usual course. And in harmony with the rule laid down in the Scriptures, he appointed witnesses to establish these things.

In the front of every copy of the Book of Mormon is found the testimony of eleven witnesses, eleven persons, besides Joseph Smith (making twelve in all), who solemnly testify that they saw the plates, handled them freely, and saw the engraving upon them.

That ought to settle the question of the existence of the plates.

These were neighbors of Joseph Smith, or the majority were, and they had no interests to further by such testimony. Joseph Smith was young, without influence, and in great poverty. He had neither money nor influence with which to bribe these witnesses.

In addition to the facts set forth by all of the eleven, three of the number testify to other truly remarkable facts. They declare, "with words of soberness," that an angel of God came down from heaven and brought and laid the plates before their eyes. So that according to the old rule of evidence the existence of the angel and his connection with the plates, as stated by Joseph Smith, is established, as well as the existence of the plates, unless these witnesses can be impeached, and that has never been done, and can not be done.

The good character of these witnesses, particularly of the three mentioned, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, has been well established. They were respectable men of the community. One of them, Oliver Cowdery, if we remember correctly, was of such good report that the Methodists were eager to claim him as a member of their church a number of years after he had borne this testimony, though proof of his connection is lacking. Another of these witnesses, David Whitmer, died in Richmond, Missouri, where he had lived for forty-three years. And twenty-one of the leading men of the city, including General Doniphan, and Judge Dunn, of the Fifth Judicial Court, testified to his good character in a signed statement published in the Richmond Conservator, March 24, 1881. So we may conclude that these are reputable witnesses.

It has been said that they repudiated their testimony. But this is not true, though it may yet be heard in certain quarters, where the truth is not highly esteemed. All three of them reaffirmed their testimony shortly before their death, as we are prepared to prove. David Whitmer himself took the trouble to issue a pamphlet denying this report, which he had discovered in the Encyclopedia Britannica. In this pamphlet he said:

"I will say once more to all mankind, that I have never at any time denied that testimony or any part thereof. I also testify to the world, that neither Oliver Cowdery nor Martin Harris ever at any time denied their testimony. They both died reaffirming the truth of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon. I was present at the deathbed of Oliver Cowdery, and his last words were, 'Brother David, be true to your testimony to the Book of Mormon.' He died here in Richmond, Missouri, on March 3, 1850. Many witnesses yet live in Richmond, who will testify to the truth of these facts, as well as to the good character of Oliver Cowdery."—David Whitmer's "Address," page 8.

If any fact can be substantiated by human testimony, that fact is that Joseph Smith had in his possession the plates from which he translated the Book of Mormon, and that these men at least believed with all their hearts that an angel had appeared to them and borne witness to the divinity of the work. This furnishes the necessary prima facie evidence to convince any reasonable man that the book is worth investigation. With this in mind he must read the book and weigh it on its merits, just as he would any other book that claims to contain inspired teaching. Its character, moral precepts, the nature of its teaching, coupled with other internal evidences, as well as external evidences, such as archæological evidences and scriptural proofs must be considered and weighed by such an investigator. When this is done, in prayerful spirit, we need not fear the results. ELBERT A. SMITH.

LOVE AS A BASIS OF GOVERNMENT.

On the occasion of the Abraham Lincoln centennial, February 12, 1909, Representative Nye, addressing the United States House of Representatives, said:

"Love as a basis of state has never yet been tried. Statesmen have not advocated it; no one has dared to trust it; but the time will come when we will see, or our children or children's children will see that this is the one potent and omnipotent force of all the universe."

All earthly governments are founded on force. The army, the navy, the police force, constables, sheriffs, marshals are everywhere present to compel men by force to obey the law. This is offensive to anarchists, and those of anarchistic tendencies, but it is and always will be necessary in any purely human government. For every human government has to do with at least some men who will not obey law unless they are compelled to do so. For the good of society they must be restrained or intimidated all the time by force, and even then from time to time they break forth in terrible acts of violence.

But in the great government-to-be, where Christ shall reign in person, there will be a selected community where all persons will obey the law because they love the great Lawgiver. Jesus makes love the basis of his government: "If you love me you will keep my commandments."

The church as the visible representative of the kingdom of God on earth, the imperfect promise of the perfect and glorious kingdom that is to be, must cherish this principle. And surely we should be proud to be numbered in such an organization and help to spread such a message of love toward God and toward our fellow men.

Contrast the forces of love with the forces of hate. See what havoc hate will work in any community, great or small. The writer has recently been in attendance at a murder trial. Away out on the desert there was a very small community of people at a little way station on the Santa Fe Railroad. There was the station agent and his wife, the section foreman and his wife, a storekeeper, and an ex-storekeeper.

One would think that in such a small community out there in the desert people would draw together and support each other. But instead, even there, faction occurred and bickerings ensued. Instead of helping each other they tried to be as mean as possible to each other. Taunts and injustice fanned the flames of hate to the danger point; and then one man shot and killed another. So to-day one member of the little community is in his grave, another is facing trial as a murderer, while the others, as prosecuting witnesses, are doing their best to hang him. That is what hate will do in a small community. He that hateth his brother is a murderer. There was not one murderer there, but a community of murderers.

If we wish to see the operation of hate on a larger scale we have but to turn our eyes toward the struggle that at this writing is still going on between Turkey and the Balkan states. For centuries the Turks, who are Mohammedans, have been murdering the Christian inhabitants of Macedonia and neighboring provinces. The citizens of the neighboring Balkan states have retaliated in kind; and now, having at last united forces, their attack upon Turkey has precipitated one of the bloodiest and most extensive wars of modern Europe. Hate set sixteen hundred thousand armed men in deadly combat, with the ever present danger that all Europe and even Asia might be involved. All this is the legitimate result of hatred,—bitter, unreasoning hatred between Christian and Mohammedan. This is called a religious war. Some say it is a "holy war." But there never was a holy war. There never will be one. There may have been wars in which one side was justified, but always at least one side has been in the wrong, and often both, so that the struggle was unnecessary, and never should have been.

Hatred is destructive, and is responsible for all the long list of bloody wars and tragedies of the past. Love is constructive, and is responsible for the very existence of the race.

Some one has called attention to the power of love in a very striking manner. When we stop to think about the long line of ancestors who have preceded us, our minds go back to father, grandfather, great-grandfather, great-great-grandfather, back, back, back, year by year, generation by generation, century by century, into the dim and distant past, to the very beginning.

Every one of these ancestors at one time was a frail infant in arms, absolutely dependent upon a mother's care. The human being at birth is the most helpless of all creatures, and unless some mother, or one who is willing to take the place of mother, gives him a mother's care, he can not live for a single day.

So we may reflect that if at any point in this long chain that stretches behind us, if at any single link in all the dim past, love had failed, you and I would not be here to-day.

From this illustration we obtain a very striking conception of the mighty power of love, as a conservative, constructive, beneficent force in the production and perpetuation of humanity.

This is the great force, overlooked by earthly governments, that Jesus proposes to utilize to its fullest extent in his great government. Under his rule and dominion men will obey the law because they love each other, and because they love the great Lawgiver.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BROTHER W. H. KELLEY INJURED.—By letter from Brother F. M. Sheehy dated San Francisco, California, December 16, we learn that "Brother W. H. Kelley is in the hospital there from an injury received by being run into by a street car on Market Street, December 10. Three ribs were fractured. He is doing well toward recovery. The doctor says it is not serious and he will be around again shortly."

"CHARITON HERALD-PATRIOT."—The last quarterly conference of the Lamoni Stake which was held at Lucas, Iowa, received lengthy notice in the Chariton Herald-Patriot. It is a splendid indication when our work gets such favorable recognition in the newspapers. The press generally is waking up to the fact that the Reorganization stands for something worthy of attention.

ADDRESS NEEDED.—A Sister Richner sends us a letter concerning Kirtland for publication which evidently is incomplete, a last page being missing. No address is given. Will the sister please send us her address, so we may write to her?

Hymns and Poems Selected and Original

The Coming of the King.

Soon the bright and glorious morning
Of the Resurrection Day,
Shall dawn with brilliant beauty o'er the land;
When my saints will rise to meet me,
As I come through opening clouds,
When the great Millennium army I command.

I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
When the night is o'er, then dawns eternal day.

Soon the trumpet's blast will waken
Those who sleep in earthly beds,
Then the gates of Paradise shall swing ajar;
There amid supernal splendors,
In my presence evermore,
Shall my saints rejoice in glory, bright and fair.

I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
When the night is o'er, then dawns eternal day.

When I speak the church shall tremble,
And the world shall feel the power,
Then my servants shall be called priests and kings;
They shall teach and rule the nations,
Until every knee shall bow,
And the universe my coronation sings.

I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
I am coming in the morning,
When the night is o'er, then dawns eternal day.

(Given in tongues and interpretation by the Spirit through Bishop R. C. Evans, in Toronto, Ontario, Wednesday, October 23, 1912, sung to the tune, "When the roll is called up yonder, I'll be there.")

Sleep.

O God, for thine incomparable sleep,—
Greatest of all thy wondrous gifts to man,—
How can we thank thee! 'Tis as though a ban
Of utter hate broke suddenly, and deep
Forgiveness lapped us round; 'tis like a sweep
Of cool, wet wind through some plague-smitten khan
Where burning fever dogs each caravan.
It draws our souls from hell, for heaven to keep.

For without this, what other gifts avail?
Wisdom is helpless; vain are power and gold—
Even the beauties of thy world grow pale
And comfort little. Suddenly pain's hold
Is loosed; through unplumbed depths of sleep we rise
To see thy glory in the earth and skies.
—By Katharine French, in the January Century.

Original Articles

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

In these days of advanced civilization, of world-peace proclamations, the age in which we are hoping and praying for those conditions when swords shall be beaten into plowshares and spears be converted into pruning hooks, the query naturally comes to most of us, that along with all this other hammering out and reshaping, isn't there something more befitting the times that we can construct, than our modern gallows and electric chair?

"Don't, don't give us a rehash of that old subject!" exclaims somebody in disgust.

All must admit that it is an old subject—aye, worn threadbare. Shame on us, the American people, that such should be the case before something were done!

"Why have the death penalty at all?" asks noble Kansas, who has tried its abolition and found such a course satisfactory. But we citizens of other States hardly dare suggest anything of the kind at home, for in spite of our boasted progress we must confess, albeit blushing, that even in our churches there are those who would hold up their hands in holy (?) horror at such suggestion and cry, "Crime would increase!" Kansas and her proofs to the contrary notwithstanding.

It can not be that we are ignorant or heathenish. We claim enlightenment. We call ourselves Christian. Not many of us but know that somewhere in sacred writ is recorded, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." We also know that He who alone has power to give life should be allowed his own time in which to recall it.

But as was mentioned before, we are living in an advanced age of enlightenment. Such being the case, it is obvious that we, with our nearly one hundred millions of heads, ought to know more than God with his one! Besides that, those words were spoken so long ago that we have outgrown them; so we snap our fingers in his face and keep on with our capital punishment.

Granting, for argument's sake, the inadvisability of the total abolishment of same, yet I can not understand why, after all these years of boasted Christianity, we, a people claiming to be disciples of Him who was the very personification of loving mercy, can consistently stick to hanging and electrocution as our legal modes of putting criminals to death, when painless methods are so numerous. Is it that in the very warp and woof of our national fabric there is a tough old thread of savagery? of heathenish cruelty?—something we brought with us from the "Dark Ages"?—a desire to see human beings suffer physical torture! Or is it only thoughtless-ness? indifference? a lazy willingness to jog along always in the same old rut, each year gullied deeper in human blood?

Let us picture the average American and his way of thinking upon these things. Suppose that a murderer has been committed in the next county. He is acquainted with neither the murderer nor his victim. He only knows that one human being has taken the life of another. As he reads to you the story of the crime, you remark that you hope the poor fellow will get only life imprisonment.

Our average American turns upon you fiercely, "Why, hanging is too good for that villain!"

The trial proceeds—closes—the sentence of death is pronounced. A year goes by. Gradually the previous hateful, aye, devilish desire for revenge in the heart of our average American is being replaced by pity for the poor condemned one, so soon to be deprived of life, and with it comes an undefined sort of half wish, prompted by a conscience not yet dead,—thank God, only sleeping,—that legal shedding of blood might be for ever blotted from our statutes, and imprisonment substituted.

The execution day comes. That evening our average American heaves a sigh of relief as he reads in the "daily" that the "drop" worked perfectly, or that he electrocutioner did not bungle and that death came instantaneously and not from slow strangulation or that other horrible burning from electricity which most of us can not even imagine.

And what of the criminal during the weeks intervening between his trial and execution? He, too, has read of bungling executions, of protracted tortures, of faulty mechanics in the instruments of death. Alone in his cell he has time to picture numerous sickening horrors that he may have to undergo before his torture ends in death. Is it not a great wonder that insanity does not claim every condemned wretch before the execution day arrives?

Just put yourself in his place for a minute.

"Ridiculous!" explodes the objector, in whose mind is firmly fixed the theory that society would go to the dogs in ten minutes were it not for these diabolical life-extinguishers, "It is impossible for me to conceive of myself committing the crime he did! I'll have you understand, I'm no murderer!"

True, we can not call you a murderer; but we are at a loss for an appellation for you. What do you call yourself?—you, a citizen who is content to stand by without protest and see a fellow human tortured to death! Such being the condition of your heart, I am much afraid that, given the same provocation, you would have committed the identical crime he did, or a worse one. You self-righteous,—inhuman animal, don't you see that it is to your own interest to have this law changed? Ten to one you will be looking through the bars of a murderer's cell before the end of five years—begging for a merciful death!

Another class feel, and conscientiously, that a painless ending of life for the convict would not be severe enough punishment for the crime committed. Would it not be sufficient for your son if he were the condemned one? According to your answer, then, let it be to every parent's son or daughter. What if we should err by showing him compassion? Rest assured that God, who alone knows what chastisement is deserved, will surely mete it out to him in due time.

Others scoff at the idea, dubbing its promoters "chicken-hearted," and so on; yet I have been told that according to our present system he may order his last breakfast from a bill of fare than which the highest in the land could have no better, and as a final mark of kindness and pity he is given whisky enough to all but intoxicate him, that, his brain dulled, he may not so fully realize the horror of what is coming.

Now, in the name of all that is sane and sensible, which is the better way of showing pity, our present mode, with choice viands and bad whisky, or an execution by some method unaccompanied by physical suffering, and permitting the unfortunate the clear use of his faculties until the last?

To those who object that murder would increase were it not for the fear of a dreadful death we cry, "Nonsense!" It is on the increase anyway. Far better if we cut out the death penalty altogether, substituting imprisonment, and as has often been advocated, keep the prisoner employed during the remainder of his natural life, the proceeds of his labor to be used in caring for the needy or in some equally helpful way.

Such procedure might surprise us by putting upon those murderously inclined the quietus which our present practice has failed to do, for according to the opinions of some the average criminal fears death less than the prospect of a life of hard work.

Anyway, it would to a certain extent make of him a public benefactor; and better than all else, our hands would be free from the stain of his blood!

For, even should we substitute anaesthetics, or something similar, as our death-dealing agent, instead of our present neck jerking and shocking systems, I repeat I am not so sure but that we as a nation of people may find ourselves up against something of a proposition when arriving over on the other side, we try to account for the blood we shed in defiance of the word of the great One who shall then sit in judgment, and from whose decision there will be no appeal.

NINA BROOKS.

LEAVES FROM LIFE.

EXPERIENCES.—BY ADDIE GRAY.

I have no personal ambition to serve when I relate some of my experiences, and I know there is an influence that is able to manifest to those who read it that it is true.

While reading in one of the old HERALDS, as I often enjoy doing, I noticed an article written by George Shelly, of Cadillac, Michigan. The date was October 18, 1905. He stated that his object in writing was to get some one else to take up the subject. He asked the question, Have we on record in the Bible more than one instance of the Holy Ghost being received before baptism, since Christ preached the gospel? He said he had heard it stated by some of the elders that Acts 10 was the only place that could be shown that was conclusive evidence of the Holy Ghost being received before baptism; it being given at that special time to convince Peter that the Gentiles were not unclean, as he had supposed. To some it may seem if that claim can be sustained at the present time it would give strength to the sectarian claim. However, believing that if blessings we are shown, they're not meant for us alone, we pass them on.

I will now relate some of my experiences that befell me before I became identified with the gospel in the last days. My most peaceful thoughts are as to how I may attain to the glorious resurrection and the life that characterizes and is incident to such an end. My childhood was an experience of hard work, and as I grew up in girlhood I had a great desire to receive an evidence of our heavenly Father's existence and of my acceptance. I longed for an evidence that would never pall, flash, and go, but remain with me as an anchor through life. As time rolled on I continued to ask the great Creator of all things to reveal the Savior to me in such a way that I would never forget, however rough my path in this life might be; and if it were my lot to meet with hardships and injustice that I could look up and say, "All is well"; and if my motives were misunderstood I could wait with sweet peace and resignation, knowing that all things were seen and known.

On one occasion, while at home one Sabbath after the morning's work was done, I took my Bible and went upstairs, for my mind seemed clearer and my thoughts more collected while alone, and while meditating on the same a calm, gentle influence rested on me, mingled with a peaceful joy. This seemed to inspire me with courage, and often, when the day had faded, I would strive to take an honest memory invoice of my actions, as no one's principles can be called temptation proof. I realized that every act affects character, and the least result in character affects life. Sins may be forgiven, but consequences are lasting, and the yielding to weaknesses is slowly but surely paving the way for some large yielding that shall bring life-changing consequences; and often after comparing my walk in life with the bible rules, I could see much that was not in harmony with its teachings, if in no outward acts, in thoughts. Then I would try to counteract them by good and strong thoughts and self-control. I also tried hard to practice faith, humility, and patience, believing that the virtues of a religious life have value just in proportion as they teach us to live as model persons.

I did not feel inclined to speak my mind to anyone, for I thought that I would not be understood; although I longed to see some one to whom I could unfold my mind and feel edified.

In talking, one time, with mother, who had been brought up in the Baptist Church, she mentioned the passage in Romans 9: 16 and a few other verses in the Bible favoring election, but in the light that she explained it I thought it did not agree with the rest of the Bible in regard to the motives of the Lord, and that it lacked love, mercy, and justice. However, it did not affect me very much, for from my earliest remembrance or reason I never could believe in predestination. I have considered those passages later and believe an election on God's part is the expression of his choice for a certain purpose, office, or condition. God has elected or chosen that some of his creatures should be angels and some should be men, etc. David declares that man was made only a little lower than the angels, and crowned with glory, honor, and dominion, etc. (Psalm 8: 4-8.)

As time passed by I went to live in the city of London. I became more in earnest than ever. Oh, how I tried to keep myself as well poised and self-controlled as could be! How anxious I was to perform every moral and social duty with scrupulous exactness; and being most conscious of my human frailty I worked hard for self-improvement, with a determination to excel; and studying the good moral example of our Savior's teaching and that of the apostles, I tried hard to live in harmony with the same, and believed that people who lived as they should did so through a love of the good acts they performed, and not through the desire for reward.

Here I rested, placing my chief reliance for salvation on a faithful discharge of all the relative duties of life, and if I pursued the path of duty no good thing would be withheld from me, for the Scriptures tell us God is no respecter of persons. How I admired those who preached effective sermons by their examples; whose lives correspond with their actions, and who practiced and believed self-control to be the highest and noblest form of dominion. "He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that takeh a city," for it will keep reason on the throne and make evil desires serve.

As time passed I united with one of the religious denominations in the city, but was not satisfied with regard to myself. I believed that God was able to reveal himself, and I desire that evidence. So, after attending the pastor's weekly class one evening, at the conclusion of which he gave the privilege, if any person desired it, to ask any questions, to remain in, and he would try to explain. Our scripture lesson that evening was concerning the time when Peter saw the vision which convinced him that the Gentiles were not unclean. I believed the pastor was a man blessed of God, and took advantage of the privilege offered. It was all I could do to decide to mention to him the strong desire I had of receiving an evidence that I was accepted of God. This was the first time I had ever mentioned it to any person, but to my astonishment and disappointment he made light of it, and I felt humbled, discouraged, and almost sick at heart.

After returning home, and before retiring for the night, as usual I took my Bible, and on opening it my eyes rested on the words, "And the Lord answered me and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry."—Habbakkuk 2: 2, 3. The words seemed inspired, and they appealed to me with such force that they were as though they had been spoken to me, and I rejoiced, my drooping spirit rose, and I fully believed I would receive the blessing that I so much desired if I would patiently wait.

About this time I was troubled with wicked thoughts that were not of my own suggesting, for I had been trying to live for years as particular with regard to my thoughts as my actions, and did not cherish but hated them. I would sometimes become almost weak in body, struggling with the wicked suggestions that would be presented. I would then resort to some place where I could be alone and ask God for strength to resist and overcome. Oh, the comfort I received from the words, "My grace is sufficient for thee." How solemn and thoughtful I feel as I write, for it seems so fresh in my memory, the remembrance of those evil suggestions compared with the striking contrast of the glorious manifestation of the goodness of God, which I afterwards received, has strengthened me many times since, and does to this day. They seem as an anchor to my soul although more than thirty years have passed since then. Out of the cup of bitterness comes strength, sweetness, and insight.

As days passed I still firmly believed that God would reveal himself to me and give me a clear understanding of my acceptance. After retiring to my room one evening, and just as I was about to arise from my knees, an influence rested upon me, calm at first, but stronger and stronger, until my whole frame was enveloped, and joy, and love for all the human family permeated and filled my whole being. It was in truth indescribable, and language utterly fails me to describe the feelings of perfect joy and peace that I was in possession of. It needs the overflow of the heart to give the lips full speech. I knew that the lady that I was living with was in her room, and I felt a strong impulse to go to her door and ask her to come to my room, which I obeyed; but if I had only myself to please I would not have done so. She came with a lamp in her hand, and remained for some time, while I looked up to her with eyes beaming, and face radiant with that joy that passeth all understanding. She seemed much affected, as this influence rested upon me, with more assurance than ever of a loving and merciful Savior. I then knew, with a clearer and more perfect understanding of the real existence of the Creator of all things than of the knowledge I had of that lady's presence, and I felt like saying, Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men, and that my ways were directed so my time might all be used for the good and happiness of others.

I often asked God to direct me, and I did what I believed to be right, leaving it with God to take care of the consequences. I felt the true meaning of the words: "Oh that my words were now written! Oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth." What comfort we have in knowing that the prophets and the Bible are true. Those evil temptations all left me, and never had I to contend with them, from that time to this.

The Spirit will bear witness to what I have related.

I longed to always be in possession of that heavenly sensation, and I asked our heavenly Father if it was his will, that it might never depart; but it gradually became weaker and weaker for about two or three days, and then faded away. But the thorough assurance it left of a Savior's existence, and the feeling that no matter how roughly I might be blown about by the winds of life I would be encouraged to steer my bark safely, were wonderful. I think I can say that there is not a person living who could convey the perfect felicity and blessedness of that evidence in words. God will assist the spirit who truly tries. I desired judgment and discernment to know what my duties were, so I might perform them well, and be able to look back on days well spent, and that the life I lived might not contradict my profession. The shaping of our own life is our own work, and as moral life consists in the government of ourselves and the sincerity of our lives is considered, and not the oratory of our prayers, we advance as we learn to educate our ideas so that our consciences may become better guides.

As I was preparing for church one Sunday evening Miss Kennedy called for me to go with her to the little Latter Day Saint church that she had but recently become a member of; but I did not feel inclined to go. It was not because I was prejudiced, for I had not as yet heard either good or evil about them or their belief, but I felt satisfied with myself and satisfied that I knew that my heavenly Father had acknowledged me. As we walked along, Jennie talked of the gospel and its effects. However, I thought there might be some excitement connected with this new faith of which she talked for I had often been in revival meetings and seen the excitement that is rife at such times.

When we came to the church that I attended I was unwilling to go farther, but she continued to plead; so finally, for her sake, I consented to go. Elder J. J. Cornish preached that evening, and he seemed to have a very open countenance, good personality, and general bearing.

There was a baptism that evening, so Jennie and I went with the rest to the water's edge. They had to cut the ice before they could baptize. After this I went occasionally with her to the Saints' church, and as I listened to their claims I plainly saw that as carefully as I had tried to observe all the Bible required of me, there were some very important ordinances I had overlooked and had not obeyed. I had been baptized, or at least sprinkled, when I was a very young child, but could find nothing in the Bible to support that doctrine. I read in that grand old book that in connection with a pure and clean life there were principles recorded that, if obeyed, would produce certain results. Why the Lord established such rites I was unable to say, but there they were recorded by the inspired writers in many places in the Bible. While the teachings of the Latter Day Saints did not harmonize with my ideas, their presentation of them, with Bible references added, and of the restoration of the old Jerusalem gospel, convinced me that it was because we had been so long under the influence of man-made creeds.

On one occasion I heard the pastor of one of the largest churches in the city of London say that he did not understand the book of Revelation in the Bible, written by Saint John, and that it was shrouded in mystery. Why, if we read of the encircling of the walls of Jericho, the dipping of Naaman the leper in the waters of Jordan, and of many other such incidents in both the Old and New Testaments, it will show that if a proper candidate obeys certain commands, certain blessings will follow. God's ways are not our ways, and he is able to give us an evidence that the greatest wealth can not buy nor the most absolute poverty deprive one of. This evidence is also an inspiration to live a more helpful, hopeful, and cheerful life, and it will also help us to understand that disappointments in life are sometimes blessings in disguise. As Thomas Gray says: "The hues of bliss more brightly glow, chastised by sabler tints of woe."

As time passed I began to think seriously about the matter, as to which I had better do: remain where I was, or obey the gospel restored in this last dispensation. To do the latter would be a great and sore trial for me, as I had made an open acknowledgment of the goodness of God, and in a public meeting my experience was referred to by the pastor as one of the principal events that had occurred during the year. Now I believed it would belittle that evidence in the minds of others. How solemn I feel as I write, as I think of that hard, hard struggle I had to leave that church! But I had resolved to spend my life in God's service, and I must seek to be directed by him. After I had investigated and understood the gospel as it is explained in the Bible, I decided to be strong and firm and to sacrifice party for principle, if necessary.

I soon began to hear all manner of stories. People seemed not to know the difference between the Utah Church and the true one. The lady with whom I lived told me that she thought too much of me to have me go with such people. If their doctrines and practices are impure, I have never seen it; if any have fallen, it has been their own individual weakness, and were never upheld by the church, but strictly the opposite. I have been associated with the people who represent the gospel, and find them to be people, as a rule, who strive to live lives consistent with the teachings of the Bible, and will compare favorably with any other denomination; and in the majority of cases, a closer walk is observed, on account of the greater light they have the privilege of enjoying. This gives consolation more glorious than all the fame, honors, and wealth which the world has been able to heap upon her votaries, or ever can. We are advised to wisely use our spiritual blessings (Luke 12: 47, 48), and, in the passage cited, we are taught that the servant who knew his lord's will and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes, etc. Unto whomsoever much is given, of him much is required. Paul persecuted and wasted the true church, but when he was shown differently he tried to recompense for the wrong he had done, and he suffered all kinds of persecution for the gospel's sake. In the first chapter of Galatians he says, "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel, let him be accursed." Then why do people find fault with those who strive to uphold the dignity and just privileges of the gospel, and who educate their consciences as a safe guide to follow our Savior's teachings, and who are martyrs in the interest of others?

I had been attending the meetings at the Latter Day Saints' Church for some time, and I desired to truly know if they taught and preached the same gospel that was taught and preached by our Savior, and that according to the prophecies in the Bible. If it was the one that would be committed to the earth in the latter days. As I have previously mentioned, I knew the Lord to be a God of revelation. I went to him with strong prayer and faith, asking him, if it was his will, to make known to me the true standing of the church, and if it was as they represented; if so, I was willing to sacrifice party for principle.

One night, after retiring, something appeared to me as a dream, yet not a dream, the like I have not had, before or since. I saw the entrance of two roads a little way ahead of me, and knowing I would have to choose one of them to get to the desired place, I was anxious to choose the right one. I was not sure which one to take. At the entrance to one of them, the one I thought to be the right one, there appeared a group of people, who stood quietly talking. I stood there bewildered and meditating as to what to do. I was almost convinced that the road at which the people stood was the right one, but as I saw myself, and the condition I was in, I could not force myself to pass them and enter that road. So, with a heavy heart, I started to travel the doubtful road, but had not gone far before I saw that I could not get to the place I so much desired to reach, as great, high banks rose up before me. I began to repent of what I had done when I saw what I had lost, and my sorrow seemed so deep that I began to reason with myself; oh, that I had been more courageous and brave, and passed the people. Suppose it had taken the last bit of my strength.

I left the church of which I was then a member, and was baptized a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church, by J. J. Cornish, and confirmed the following Sunday, in April, 1877. Shortly after I was baptized, and while coming from a prayer meeting of the Saints one Sunday afternoon, I felt directed (although it was hard for me to do so) to talk to the pastor of the church that I had formerly attended, and tell him that I had left his church and was now a baptized member of the Saints' Church. I called at his private residence. He seemed pleased to see me, and we spent a short time in conversation, and then he offered up a short prayer. As he took my hand to bid me good-bye, he said, "Addie, I am sorry, sorry. I shall never think any the less of you." Oh, how my heart went out in sympathy for him, and I felt that I would be willing to sacrifice almost anything if it could only cause him to understand and know what he had formerly thought unnecessary for a person to know, with regard to a direct evidence of the Creator of all things, and of their acceptance with him. As also what the Latter Day Saints had to offer would bear the light of investigation. I am convinced that it only needs honest inspection to insure enthusiasm. I also believe that after the restoration of the gospel has been clearly and satisfactorily shown from the Bible, if people continue in their opposition, they are welcome to all the glory they may receive after death.

One of the best arguments in favor of the latter day gospel, in my opinion, is a comparison of the people who work for it, and those who, knowing they are wrong, oppose it. It is almost an insult, sometimes, to listen to some of the discussions that have occurred in the past, even with the open Bible to peruse.

While visiting about a year ago in Michigan, a friend of mine told me I ought to read some of the books in the high school and college and see how they favored infidelity, which I believe is called the higher criticism, but in reality is only a refined name for skepticism. What is termed higher criticism of the Bible rejects all such incidents as Noah and the deluge; where our Savior and the apostles referred to Jonah and the great fish is passed over by them as an indication that they were honest, but fanatical and mistaken, and made serious errors in what they wrote. Man's science may not always harmonize with the Lord's, as his ways are not ours, but the Bible declares that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are his ways higher than ours.

In imagination I can value the glorious privilege that people had in the first century, during our Savior's mission, but was it appreciated? Just so in this dispensation, people are not alive to the fulfilling of the prophecies contained in the Bible. Perhaps some will live to severely regret their folly.

Our pathway may not be an easy one, but I am satisfied that God does consecrate our afflictions for our gain when we suffer innocently. The Lord has declared that whomsoever he loves he chastens. "Heaven is not always angry when it strikes; but most chastises those whom most it likes."—J. Pometret.

May I so live that I may merit the claim to be numbered with the true church, the bride of Christ, so that I may be worthy to share the kingdom's honors.

SAREPTA, ONTARIO, CANADA.

Of General Interest

WOMEN, MERCHANTS AND WAR.

THE NEED OF WORLD PATRIOTISM.

The highly educated classes—the college faculties, the jurists, the lawyers, the physicians—are on record almost as a unit for arbitration, says an editorial in the January Century. The first great peace conference at Washington was a bead-roll of distinguished Americans. As usual, this country is sound at heart, and it is necessary only to organize its right thinking to consummate purpose. With two munificently endowed peace foundations—that of Mr. Carnegie and that of Mr. Ginn—this is not likely to be difficult.

In this campaign two classes may be of most service, and they are those that have most to lose by war—women and men of business.

The precipitation of women into public affairs, whether individually they may or may not desire it, is one of the significant signs of the times. Among thoughtful and moderate minds, even of those who advocate this extension of the suffrage, there is great anxiety as to what women will do with it. But, with or without it, the influence of women against war may be made determinative. This will be less difficult since the question to be dealt with is not one of expertness or subtlety, like the tariff or finance, but one of moral discernment and enlightened self-interest.

The attitude of the commercial world toward war has been twofold. On one hand it has done much to restrain the military spirit; on the other hand, most wars have had their origin in the motive—often the sordid motive—of trade. We say “most,” for it is idle to deny the high ethical character of certain revolutions and wars of liberation. It is too broad a generalization to say, with Benjamin Franklin, that “There never was a good war or a bad peace.” Bad as it is, there are worse things than war, such as the brutal infliction or the supine endurance of national injustice. But the question before the world in the twentieth century is not the defensibility of war, but its lack of efficacy. Arbitration is urged because it is “a more excellent way” to any desirable result. A former president of the New York Stock Exchange, when asked recently if America would not profit financially by the Balkan War, said, “No; for the moment we may sell more guns and ammunition, but in the long run, nowadays, a war anywhere is a commercial disaster.” In support of this, witness the demoralization of the great central markets of the world during the Balkan War, partly through fear of larger complications, which would have precipitated a cataclysm indeed.

Again and again in a threatened conflict capital has “saved the situation” by withholding the sinews of war. There is a rumor that such a refusal was made to Turkey before the Balkan attack, on the theory that the nation had violated its obligations toward the Christian peoples who have since risen against it. Such a great influence as the commercial forces of the United States could be determinative of the national attitude toward war.

By the exercise of tact, moderation, and “sweet reasonableness,” the advocates of peace through arbitration can organize these forces not only into a permanent safeguard of our own country, but into a buttress of peace and happiness throughout the world. We are only just beginning to realize the destiny of America, so inspiringly set forth in these words of the next President of the United States:

“We must shape our course of action by the maxims of justice and liberality and good-will, think of the progress of mankind rather than the progress of this or that investment; of the protection of American honor and the advancement of American ideals rather than always of American contracts, and lift our diplomacy to the levels of what the best minds have planned for mankind.”

In the light of this high utterance, one may confidently look to President Wilson for a continuance of the enlightened policy toward arbitration which has been a distinguished feature of the administration of President Taft.

---

The Saxon has marked around this earth, as no other race before him, the scarlet circle of his power. This thin, red Saxon line, so thin with his numbers, so red with his blood, was made possible only by his heroism and his racial fealty.

Where this line has not gone, man has not found. It has crossed every sea; it has traversed every desert; it has sought every solitude; it has passed through swamps where only the sacred ibis fishes; over sands that have never been moistened; over snows that have never melted. There has been no storm it has not encountered; no pain it has not endured; no race it has not fought and no disease it has not contended with.

This Saxon line has been to the earth a girdle heroic and tragic, binding within itself all the old and ancient places of the world. It has been silent in its duty, ignored in its achievement and scorned in its devotion. Yet it has given down to this now neglectful race a world such as mankind has never known before; an empire over which the sun and stars shine together and where night never falls nor day dawns.—From The Saxon and His Empire, by Homer Lea.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Still Lives.

A bird sang its song on yonder tree,
The summer breeze stole it, and wafted to me
Its every note—and did e'en repeat
These words: "Sweet, sweet, love is sweet."
The nest is deserted, the little ones flown,
The bird and the mate he sang to are gone,
But the song still lives.

A kind word was spoken long years ago,
And the good it did you never can know,
Unless you've been hungry of heart as I,
For a word of love which never can die.
Who uttered the word I never knew,
Nor whose were those love-lit eyes of blue;
But the word still lives.

A prayer was offered, and not in vain
Did it wing its way again and again
To the heart of God. For in echoes sweet
It came back to earth; and rich, complete,
Was the blessing it brought to the darling son
Whose mother's prayers reached the Infinite One:
And the prayer still lives.

—Mrs. David Weston Gates.

The Prayer Union.

Dear Home Column: I can not express to you the joy that came to me when reading the letter of our dear Sister Eleanor. How I missed her name from our column, and I, like her, have wondered if the Prayer Union did still exist, and have been told that the Woman's Auxiliary had taken its place!

Our sister asked if there are any who still observe the weekly hour of prayer, if so, to make it known through the Home Column. Well, I, for one, have striven hard against great odds at times to be faithful to the promise I made when I sent my name to be enrolled. I must own I have failed sometimes, but my testimony is that when that has happened, and I have taken the matter to God and asked him to accept of my prayer, then, as though it had been at the appointed time, he has indeed blessed me, and I have received much of his Spirit, by which I have been fully assured that he is indeed willing to accept of the efforts we make to do our part.

I was in England when the Prayer Union started, and I got the names of several sisters to send in, as well as my own. I have always encouraged the meeting together of the sisters for prayer and have seen great results from the faithful prayers of the sisters, being a member of the United Sisters' Mission that started in the house of Sister Bradshaw, in 1872, with about five of us. It was by the efforts of the sisters' meetings that the first Sunday school was started in London, England, and many are the blessings we have had. But when the Prayer Union started with its set subjects and text memory verses, I gladly embraced that as well as our own, as being something for a special purpose, and I have always felt that the weekly subjects were divinely given, even to the grand provision for a fifth Thursday, in which I felt much joy. I know there are many sisters who would fall in line with the Prayer Union if they knew of it.

The little branch I joined when I came to Canada a year ago last June had no sisters' meetings, and they did not know of the Prayer Union. I believed the weekly notices had ceased to appear in the HERALD before any of them were baptized. There was a Prayer Union started while I was there, Sister Tarzwell was elected president with good results, and I believe if they could see in the HERALD the weekly subjects, they could get a better understanding of it, and they would take it up with greater zeal.

May God bless the Prayer Union. It certainly is not dead, but will yet, I truly believe, be a power for much good among the people of God. I hope to hear from other sisters who are able to do better justice to the subject than I can.

Ever praying for the good of this great work, I am
Your sister in bonds,

ESTHER FURNESS.

Request for Prayer.

I would like to have the Saints pray for me, for I feel that I need the prayers of all the Saints because I am badly afflicted. On the second Sunday in January I would like for the Saints to go fasting. Pray that God will banish this all from me, for I know God can do this if he thinks it is necessary to my welfare.

RUFUS CULP.

Letter Department

VALPARAISO, INDIANA, December 15, 1912.

Editors Herald: Will you please ask the Saints through the columns of the HERALD if there are any Saints residing at Valparaiso, Indiana, or attending the university. If so, kindly let me know. There are three of us here and we would like to get acquainted with any Saints here.

Yours for the advancement of the cause,

F. E. McCULLOUGH.

VALPARAISO, INDIANA, 358 College Avenue.

KINGFISHER, OKLAHOMA, December 15, 1912.

Editor Herald: It is my desire to hear, through some of the eldership, our position on some points concerning the sacrament. It has been quite a problem to me to be able to give our reasons.

I notice when Christ partook of the passover with his disciples, the feast was kept with unleavened bread, and as he sat at meat with them for the last time he broke bread and gave wine to them in remembrance of him, he evidently used the unleavened bread, as no other was allowed at that time.

So why do we use the leavened bread? I want our strong reasons for this.

I will not give references; all are familiar with them.

I notice a revelation in Doctrine and Covenants which says water may be used instead of wine. Was water ever used in the Savior's time? I can not find it anywhere. And I understand that all revelation must be in harmony with the Scriptures. I do not say this is not, but I am bothered as to the explanation of our positions, and would be pleased for any information.

Yours for the advancement of the truth,

MRS. ETTA SMITH.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, December 9, 1912.

Dear Saints' Herald: We feel to bear a united testimony in your columns, of the goodness of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. We have felt a greater portion of the Spirit of God, and feel that his hand is guiding us in an unknown path.

We are very thankful for the influence of God's Holy Spirit, which has been with us since we came into his church. We believe in obeying both the spiritual law and the temporal law. We can truly say we desire and do in God's way, honor those whom he has placed in his church as leaders, and trust all whom he has truly called; and we obey not the voice of man, when man is partial in his demands. We have heard the voice of God saying, "Come ye out from among them, oh, my people, and be ye not partakers of their iniquity," and we have obeyed the voice of God's Spirit, in preference to man's voice. We feel the blessed Savior will be with us all the way; in fact, we know he will. That we are gaining strength in the faith of our God and Savior through criticism and separation from our brethren, yet we will do the will of our Father in heaven.

We are doing all we can for the spreading of the angel's message; have placed the Book of Mormon in one home, The Old Jerusalem Gospel in another. Sent tracts to various cities and towns, where we have acquaintances; also have distributed tracts in a goodly number of homes in this city, leaving all with the Lord for the gathering of the sheaves in the time of harvest. For Jesus said, My sheep hear my voice, and come and follow me. So we know that wherever we have spread the gospel, if they are his sheep, they will hear his voice.

We feel our weakness in striving to serve our Lord, but we trust him for all, and to him give all the glory at the end; and we feel that at the time of harvest and reaping we shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves; for God has never yet forsaken us, and he never will; and the peace of the blessed Savior is with us, for he abideth with those who do his will.

Pray for us, that we may be found ever faithful in performing the work he has set us apart to do.

Your brother and sister,

MR. AND MRS. O. L. ROCKHOLD.

1151 EAST FIFTY-FIFTH STREET.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK, December 5, 1912.

Dear Herald: It is many a day (about 365) since we applied for space in your columns. Our intentions have been good, but our time limited since the little one came to bless our home. However, we do manage to glance over and read in part the HERALD, for it seems we could scarcely get along without it. It is a wonderment to us when we find Saints who do not take or read the church papers, how they do without such a source of help.

Our New York district fall conference in Buffalo, October 12 and 13, was a good one and well attended. The Saints entertained us loyally, the large hall which they hired, which also included a banquet hall, accommodated us for meals as well as services. Brother Harry French and bride were with us on Saturday, and before they were hustled off in Brother Wilkinson's machine to catch the Cleveland boat about nine o'clock, Brother Harry gave us a good practical talk.

A Sunday school session was held early Sunday morning, followed by prayer service, after which we listened to a very good discourse by Brother R. Etzenhouser. The last named brother has been advised and urged by doctor and missionary in charge to "let up," and he does the best he can at it, but it is difficult after so many years in the harness. Our district president, A. E. Stone, occupied in the afternoon, and Brother Greene in the evening. We were unable to hear either of these brethren, we regret to say.

Two weeks later, October 27, Brother Greene was with us for a rally day, which preceded a two-week series of meetings, ending November 10 with advertised special services. From here Brother Greene went to Buffalo for two weeks. The series in both cities we feel safe in saying was the means of an uplift among the Saints. The people of these regions do not many of them appear to be hungering or thirsting after truth. We have put out a first issue (one thousand copies) of a paper called The Harbinger of Peace, to be published each month, including subjects for Sunday night lectures during the month. Brother Greene has credit for helping and encouraging us to carry out the long-contemplated plan.

In August we were favored with a visit from Sister Lucie Sears on her way home from the West, having been on Quarterly business. Her trunk arrived, but for days we looked for her, about concluding she had been "kidnapped," when she arrived. The Kirtland reunion had held her, and we did not blame her when she told us of the splendid spiritual time they enjoyed. About this time came my sister, Ada Lewis, for a visit, and to those who know us and know of our devotion to one another before our separation, I have no need to say her visit was enjoyed. Being so far as we are from all my relatives, especially the immediate family, it is truly enjoyable to have the privilege of seeing them as often as possible. We are finding no fault with the new Saints and friends in our new home; in fact we feel we have the love and confidence of nearly all of them; but there is a strong tie that binds us who have lived and labored long together. We surely had a treat in being enabled to attend the Eastern reunion this summer. Our morning prayer meetings were excellent. The good Spirit was there in power and we were made to rejoice in the blessings of this the latter day. Our early morning "semi-institute sessions at 8 o'clock had some most interesting features, not the least being the daily Camp Gleaner, edited by Brother H. O. Smith. Some called him a "knocker," but Brother Smith says he never "knocks" unless he has something to knock. We believe the criticisms were conducive to good. The preaching we considered very good. The grounds are being fixed up; lots are being sold, on which some are planning to build cottages. It is certainly a splendid spot for the camp of the Saints. The salt water bathing was enjoyed by a host every day but Sundays. On the very night we raised funds for a new combination storehouse and commissary, the large old barn in which we had heretofore stored goods in the town burned down, causing considerable excitement in town and camp. Brother Wallace Robinson and family occupied a cottage on the edge of town, toward the camp; seeing the fire and thinking the town was going, at least their cottage and adjoining ones, they appeared at the fire as if prepared to board a train for other parts if necessary, but they stayed. We did enjoy Sister Robinson's selections much, and Brother Robinson's talks also. Many pleasant memories linger of the times enjoyed there, not forgetting the little, rosy-checked girl who slyly passed us a second piece of Sister Webster's delicious pies, admitting that that was the first time she had knowingly done such a thing. Many opportunities she had had for doing it, no doubt, for we were not alone in our praise of the pie.

We are gradually getting quite a number of Easterners in these parts. The Joy-Spinnett bakery business in Buffalo is booming. Brother Dan Joy has his hands full attending to business and the presidency of the branch. We understand the Buffalo Saints are to hold a bazaar the latter part of this week to swell their building fund.

Brother Charles Brown and wife, formerly of Providence, are locating in Ransomville, a few miles from here, to carry on a bakery business. We were pleased to have them at our services and to dinner with us week ago last Sunday, together with Sister Perry, with whom they are at present stopping.

In October we had a short visit from our sister both in the flesh and in the church, Genesee Lewis Enos, with her husband and little girl—and their stay was all too brief.

On November 3 a Miss Gracia Peet, of Rochester, was baptized here, she being for years a firm friend of Brother Arthur Dammon, formerly of New Bedford, Massachusetts. According to their own story, their engagement took place here on the chapel steps, as they were about leaving us early on Monday morning. Her mother, sister, and sister's friend were also here to witness her baptism. On Thanksgiving Day at her home in Rochester, we understand Brother Greene tied the knot that made them one, thus making two young married couples that are Saints in that city, the other parties being Brother A. F. Price, once of Independence, not long since married in Buffalo.

On November 17, with Sister Perry came a Miss Austin, of Welland, Ontario, for baptism, Brother T. J. Robbins accompanying them, she having heard the gospel story years ago from Sister Perry, and recently had her interest revived to the extent of being baptized. A noble soul has been added to the kingdom.

About two weeks ago our Religio session was given over to a debate between Brother Will Landes, a priest of our branch, and Mr. Durward Evans, chemist at the O. C. L. plant, a graduate of Cornell University. It was resolved, That the Protestant churches are justified in not accepting the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, on the grounds that the Bible is sufficient, and that said books supply no deficiency. Mr. Evans affirming; Brother Landes denying. Two judges were appointed (besides the chairman, Brother Mesle), one an atheist, the other an agnostic. Brother Landes was given the most points. Both did well, and those present had a good opportunity to learn much of our work through Brother Landes' able effort.

On a recent Sunday morning, a young man, a stranger to all, walked into church during the Sunday school period, and took a seat in class. Who he might be was a speculation in our minds. When he agreed that a temple had been built at the command of God, we were about sure he was a Saint, and glad we were to learn he was, is, and ever plans to be a Saint, and a good one—none other than Brother Arthur W., son of Brother H. O. Smith. We can congratulate Brother H. O. on such a son. He tarried with us and saw Niagara till the next afternoon, when he left for Saint Louis.

Our Ladies' Aid held a bazaar two days before Thanksgiving, from which we realized over thirty dollars, there being a food sale in connection with it the second day. The debt on our chapel is being steadily decreased, and the Ladies' Aid is responsible to a goodly degree.

To our good old eastern friends gone west, like the Sheehy-Leekas, Bonds, Bullards, Woods, McPhersons, and others, we extend greetings; as well as to our eastern friends not yet gone west, and western friends not gone east.

Brother Edward Fox is passing through Buffalo to-night, on his return home from a western trip to Chicago and Independence, but we received the word too late to conveniently get to the train to see him, which we regret.

Yours in gospel bonds,

DECEMBER 9, 1912.

MARY LEWIS MESLE.

CARSON, IOWA, December 11, 1912.

Editors Herald: I just received a letter from J. A. Hansen, which I believe will be of interest to all Latter Day Saints. Brother H. N. Pierce and I were holding meetings in Carson, Iowa, when I received this letter. Brother Hansen is bishop's agent of the Pottawattamie District, and as he wanted to know how we were getting along, wrote this fine letter. He is truly a good worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

I was home, at Cameron, Missouri, last month for a while, and while there united in marriage Mr. Floyd Cowan and Sister Maud Stade. Both are good, honorable people, and may God bless them all through life.

I also preached the funeral sermon of Sister Dobbs on Thanksgiving Day. She was seventy-five years of age, and a good, faithful Latter Day Saint.

This is a fine field in which to labor. There are many good workers, also many that are not so energetic. I am expecting to go home shortly to help care for loved ones and look after business affairs.

May God ever bless all his people, is my earnest prayer.

Respectfully yours,

N. V. SHELDON.

"WESTON, IOWA, December 9, 1912.

"ELDER N. V. SHELDON,

"Carson, Iowa.

"Dear Brother: In the days of the reign of William, whose surname is Taft, the servants of Christ went about preaching the gospel of Christ everywhere, and in the last year of his reign, and the eleventh month, one Nelson, whose surname is Sheldon, and one Harry, who is also called Pierce, went to the city of Carson, which is by the river of Nishnabotna, and there began to preach with a warning voice, crying, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. And it came to pass that these men did speak with much boldness, inasmuch that many were astonished at the doctrine, because they spoke as men having authority. But few had courage to obey, and as these servants labored amongst that people they lodged with one Marion, whose surname was Elswick, a servant of Christ, and whose household is known because of their many good works, they having often brought treasures to the storehouse of God. Here these servants remained many days, strengthening the believers and encouraging them to continue to serve God. Others of the believers contributed to their necessities, and time would fail me to tell of the Schencks, of the Whiteheads, of the Tanners, and the Graybills, and all the faithful ones who are doing much to encourage the servants of Christ by their godly walk and conversation.

"And it came to pass that as these servants tarried amongst that people, one John, who is also a servant of Christ, desired to learn of the success of his brethren, and for that reason sent an epistle to his fellow laborers in the Lord, saying, Salute the brethren and sisters, and may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.

"Yesterday being the Sabbath of the Lord, Peter spoke to the Saints which are at Hazel Dell, and Joshua, the patriarch, sojourned among the Saints at Boomer, where they always appreciated his counsel. I, John, whose surname is Hansen, went to the city of Council Bluffs and tried to impart encouragement to the Saints there, and dined with George, surnamed Baty. All of the household are well and my companion sends regards. If you find it convenient, come and spend the Christmas with us. Lunch with us.

"Yours in bonds,
"J. A. HANSEN."

WINDSOR, MISSOURI, November 23, 1912.

Editors Herald: There are many people in this part of Missouri who have very peculiar ideas concerning the true Latter Day Saints. While working near Windsor I chanced to run across many misinformed people. While on a visit to my uncle, Frank Caselman, who lives two miles northeast of Windsor, he said he had lived there over two years and there had not been a Latter Day Saint elder call or preach in that locality that he knew of. He could not see why they did not call or come, as he thought there could be much good done near there. He is an old standby Latter Day Saint and has two maimed children living near him. Living with him are Sam Caselman and family, Eva Roulk and husband and family. Should any preacher in the mission happen to call upon any of these they will be welcome.

HENRY DRAZEY.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, December 10, 1912.

Editors Herald: The inclosed letter has been handed to me for publication. Mrs. Newton lived with me for about twelve months. After leaving my home she went to live with a blind lady at Blackpool, a watering place on the Lancashire coast.

During her stay at this busy seaside resort she accepted an invitation to attend the Sunday evening service at a fashionable Roman Catholic church. When the priest entered the pulpit to address the congregation he made remarks about the Latter Day Saints which Mrs. Newton knew to be erroneous. Without the slightest hesitation she calmly arose before a large assembly and corrected him. She told him that the things which he stated were not true and that if he desired she would supply the address of a gentleman who would be pleased to forward correct information to him. The priest said he would see Mrs. Newton at the close of the service. He did not do so, however. When she left the church a number of people showed unmistakably that they approved of her action.

I am sorry to say that Mrs. Newton is now confined to her room, having lost the use of her legs. She would like to walk again, in order that she may obey the command to be baptized. Sister Armstrong and I visit her weekly, to talk and pray with her. If the members of the "Sisters' Prayer Union" should see this letter, will they remember our dear friend, please? She is a bright, well-read, God-fearing woman, and is nearly seventy years of age.

With sincere gospel love to yourselves and the readers of the HERALD, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,
W. R. ARMSTRONG.

Dear Herald: Though I am writing to you, I am not a member, not having been baptized. I can not help that now, but I feel that I am a member because I believe the latter day work is of God, and I have all faith in the work, and every day I pray for more faith and a better understanding.

It is two years last May since I went to live with Mr. Armstrong as housekeeper. I was with him a year and I look back to that year as the happiest in my life. I met with so many good people that I began to feel better myself. We had Mr. Gomer Griffiths with us a week, then on his second visit he stayed with us three weeks. I had many pleasant talks with him, always for my good. I always did all I could to make him feel at home, and I am sure he did so.

Then we had old Mr. Newton with us for two nights. That, I think, was his last visit to Manchester. He was a fine old man, and he, too, talked to me much, or I may say, lectured me more than a little. I can truly say that Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Griffiths, and Mr. Newton, between them, made me a Latter Day Saint. I feel that I have much to be thankful for.

I read the HERALD with much interest, and think one can not but believe the work is the work of God.

Wishing all readers a happy and peaceful Christmas,

Yours very truly,
MANCHESTER, ENGLAND. L. NEWTON.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 26, 1912.

Editors Herald: Please give me space in the HERALD to bid good-bye to the Saints in the Southeastern Illinois District, for the present at least, and to ask my correspondents to address me at McKenzie, Alabama, until further notice.

I am still in the faith, and still desire to labor for the Master. Wishing all a happy New Year, I am as ever,

Yours in gospel bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

EXLINE, IOWA.

Dear Herald: I wish to tell you of the goodness of our kind Father to his erring children, and those who love and serve him; also those who know not God. It looks like I have some very grave burdens to bear over being in debt, and some will say I am dishonest because I can not meet my obligations as soon as they think I ought to. I know it is not true, and my kind Father in heaven knows it is not true for others to tell that.

Dear Saints, I need your prayers, that I may safely pass over the dark and stormy ways of life, and be safely led in paths of light and usefulness. I ask a deep interest in your prayers for my family, that they may all come into the church, as we all know this is the church to which his Holy Spirit comes, and we have the promise that it will come to us if we do his will.

Your brother in Christ,
IRA MULLIN.

GLADSTONE, ILLINOIS, December 16, 1912.

Editors Herald: As there remain but a few more days of this year, 1912, I send a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard. We would be glad if some of the elders would come and hold a series of meetings here. The weather is fine and the people are about through husking corn. I think this might be a good time to instruct the people in the way of life and immortality. We will provide a home for any who come, and a house to preach in. I am very lonely since the departure of my beloved wife and daughter. My health is very poor. My daughter keeps house for me and the two little grandchildren.

With kind regards to the officials and laity of the church throughout the world,

Yours for the truth,
J. L. RUST.

ARMOUR, SOUTH DAKOTA, December 22, 1912.

Dear Herald: I am very thankful for the HERALD. Mr. Gurley comes Sundays and asks for the papers and seems very much interested. He also looked through some Autumn Leaves.

Two years ago two young elders from the Utah Church were here, but the mayor would not let them speak on the street.

Your sister,

Mrs. H. D. KNIGHT.

Why I Am a Latter Day Saint To-day.

I wish a little space to speak a few words by way of testimony, as to why I have remained a Latter Day Saint. I have hundreds of testimonies; yea, thousands, which have for ever established my faith as to the truthfulness of the work which Joseph Smith was instrumental in bringing forth and offering to all mankind, for their acceptation or rejection. As for me, I accepted the work that he offered, and asked the Lord for light from heaven. I fully realized that all was to be gained or all to be lost in this great and marvelous work, and for that cause I have wholly depended on light from above. I may fall by the way and go down, but if I do I can say that I know this work is true.

Joseph Smith was a prophet sent of God to establish his church in these the last days. Heaven has honored me and trusted me with the privilege to see Joseph Smith in a vision, and to hear him preach the gospel and to prophesy, and I saw his prophecy fulfilled. There is no man or doctrine that can shake these words.

The Book of Mormon is true, because the heavens have declared it to me. It makes no difference what the world says, they may say yes or no, but that is no testimony to me or to you, no matter who you may be. If heaven has not declared it to you, you don't know. It has pleased the Lord to show me many wonderful things pertaining to this great work; it has pleased the heavens for my sake to show me the resurrection of the dead and permit me to talk with those who have risen from the dead, and hear the wonderful testimonies which they bore. I myself was once in a vision separated from the body, and traveled in the paths of the spirits. I went up high in the heavens, and back and forth, to and from this old earth, administering the gospel of Jesus Christ; this was the happiest time of my life. May God help us all to come up higher is my prayer.

Last night, after I had written this, I retired to rest and had the following dream, which I wish to write. I dreamed of being in company with a Baptist preacher. He was a good man and seemed to be honest. I accompanied him to the train, where he was wont to go. We talked along the way. He said he was very needy, and I desired to give him twenty-five cents; but for some cause I did not. Finally we arrived at the place where we had started for. There were several standing around. The preacher had nothing to say, but I was talking to the crowd. They asked me who the man was. I told them he was a Baptist preacher and a good man, but he did not believe as I did, and I left the crowd. I was talking too, and went up the steps into a store and there was a big, red-eyed man, who said, "What are you?" referring to my belief. I told him I was a member of the church known among men as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and when I told him this he began to talk. I never heard the like before. His main text was Joseph Smith. He accused me of everything imaginable. Once or twice I got to speak a word, but that made him worse. Finally he got a club and said he would do me up, and it seemed I had no way to escape, but determined to stand by what I had said; I would do my best. As he made at me with blind eyes, I made down at him and laid him flat; but he came again with his big club, and again I made down at him in earnest, and put him out of business. He did not get up any more, for he was dead. "Poor fellow," I said, "but I could not help it; I must stand by Joseph Smith and defend the truth." It had rained a hard rain and the night was dark, but I had a lighted lantern, and it gave a good light and I wanted to go home, but the Saints objected, and I said I should stay till the sun was up, and so I did.

May the Lord bless us all with light and strength to defend this great latter day work. May we all come higher and higher each day. May the Lord bless us all is my prayer.

G. N. COX.

PARIS, TEXAS, December 12, 1912.

Indian Mission Suggestions.

Discoveries made over the bumpy road of experience, may, if written out, smooth some of the road for the next man, that he may conserve his energies for greater achievements than have been made before.

Our experience with Indian mission work, commencing as we did, with little knowledge of how to reach this of all people, the most peculiar race, has led over roads that at times were stormy, stony, and steep. To know how to do a thing is to have grace and ease in the doing. Not to know how involves that doer in lunging and plunging; strained strength and awkwardness. In the effort to open up Indian work we have waded through our full share of awkwardness and may still be wading to some extent, but by the experience have gained a few points.

There is a great field opening to the church in this Lamanite work.

It may be said of this as of the call for laborers in the early preaching of the restoration, "Whosoever hath desired to reap is called to the work, and let him thrust in his sickle and reap while the day lasts." And faith, hope, charity, and plenty of patience will fit him for the work.

The word of God is the divine means for the salvation of souls, but the various peculiarities of men have much to do with determining in what particular garb the word shall be most effective.

The word of God in the charming harmony of music and song has attracted many souls that would have remained untouched had the word been offered in any other form. The word, in logic, appeals most forcefully to the bent of the logician. To another nature, untouched by logic, and partially indifferent to spiritual glory in music, a simple exhibition of love will charm the heart, capture the soul, and correctly interpret the word. To still another, a figure appealing to the eye as beautiful may be the charm which leads to an interpretation of the word.

A combination of the qualities of harmony, logic, a heart to respond to love, and an appreciation of the beautiful is a splendid endowment. But in most of us some one of these traits or qualities predominate above the others. Who, then, shall despise his fellow if said fellow seem deficient in some quality which another deems most important? Shall one highly endowed with musical genius say of those more aptly responding to love, or again to logic: "There is no refinement in such and such a person, the dolt is soft"? Or, "Mr. So and So has no sense; he would rather debate than sing"?

If, then, God has made the Indian with an eye for bright tints and colored figures, shall we call this trait all base, and an attraction to the merely gaudy?

Though the item may seem small to some of us, who shall say that the gaudy to us, and the gorgeous to him, may not be wisely and effectually used to interpret the word of God to him?

True, steel flies quickly to a magnet, and is none the less good steel for the ready run. If gay colors be the Indian's magnet, his other qualities are none the less steel, and they who would deride him in this might play the part of a feather; not moved by such a magnetic draft, but yielding to a slighter draft of air.

We recommend the use of the "Two Way" chart, which was designed by Brother J. T. Curtis, of Independence, Missouri, as one of the most attractive and effectual methods we have found in presenting the gospel to the Indians. The chart is done in colors, neat figures, and with a clear and pointed design. It is a sermon within itself, and will help to get a hearing with the Indians where many other methods fail. Our local ministry who live near to Indian families or tribes should get one of these charts and make an opening. They will listen to an explanation with interest, and will also buy the charts and take great delight in preaching your sermon over and over among themselves.

We are informed that Brother Curtis has now designed and prepared a new and more elaborate chart. This is a move in the right direction, and we should see to it that this pictorial interpretation of the word of God is put into circulation in every Lamanite camp in the United States. It will get results when presented in love, prayer, and humility.

We are still baptizing here, both Cheyennes and Otoes, and the outlook is for a great work to develop.

Last Saturday one Indian man had listened carefully to our explanation of the straight and narrow way, as pictured in red on the chart, and after the sermon was over and we had explained about the Book of Mormon history he said in broken English, made eloquent with emotion, "Well, Yates, when you git gone I will cry about that." Then, with tears no longer suppressed, that big, strong Indian wept while he said: "Red road is best way; I like it to walk on that red road."

At another home, after our sermon, the man asked if it was necessary to wait till we had gathered a big crowd in order to be baptized. We cited him to the case of Philip and the eunuch, adding that if he believed with all his heart that it was not necessary for anyone to be present except we two, and he promptly corrected me by saying, "Oh, yes; the Good Man above must be with us." With our assent to this he said, "I am ready." We then knelt in prayer together and with an Indian blanket attire, and very little else, took the wooded path to the water, where, after breaking the ice away in that December water, the unflinching red man was baptized with no other witnesses in attendance, except as he had said, "The Good Man."

Now we are asking the Bishop to-day for tracts and incidentals for this department of the work. Let those who wish to see this work spread send such contributions as they can spare for this fund, to the Bishop, and thus may we labor together and accomplish the things which God requires of us.

I close with an earnest desire for such humility and grace as to be worthy of the favor of the Lord, and the confidence of his people.

JAMES E. YATES.

Extracts from Letters.

Brother J. B. Barrett, laboring in the Hawaiian Islands, writes, under date of October 21, 1912: "We came back to Honolulu Saturday, for a few days' rest. We have had a three-week missionary trip around the island. We visited Ikeoe, Kou Halewawai, Aiea, Pearl City, Waipahu, Eua Mill, Barbers Point, Waiianai, Makua, Wahiawa, Wailua, Haleia, Waimea, Kohuku; then we took the train to Honolulu. We distributed tracts at all these places, and held meeting when we had the opportunity. At some of the places we could not get a place to preach, so we went from house to house and talked with the people. Sometimes we were invited into the house and had a nice talk on the gospel, and at other times we were not so well received. We tried to hold meeting at Aiea, but the lamps were out of order, and by the time we got them fixed it was too late for meeting, so we lost out.

Brother McConley preached at Pearl City in a native's house. This man was quite a friend of Brother Waller, but does not belong to the church; his wife's brother does, however. On Monday evening I preached in the little church at Eua Mill, to about thirty white people; they seemed pleased with what we told them, but they supposed we were just the same as the Utah Mormons. But after meeting they were glad they came, and invited us to come again and preach for them. There was a very learned man there who was formerly a preacher in the Seventh Day Adventist Church. We gave him a tract on the Book of Mormon, by R. C. Evans. He marked it up and gave it back to us. We looked over his criticisms, answered them, and gave it back to him, with another tract, The Book of Mormon Verified, by A. B. Phillips. When he came through the city two weeks later he ordered a copy of the Book of Mormon. You see the work is spreading and doing some good. Our trip resulted in the sale of seven Books of Mormon, 1,088 tracts given away, 102 individual or fireside sermons, or they might be called talks.

At Wahiewa a young man who helped us to find a place to stay, also got us to preach to the young men under him, as he is foreman at the construction camp. He went home and took down sick with very severe cramps in his stomach. He vomited very much and was delirious, so much so that he did not know what he was doing, and it took four persons to keep him from leaving his bed and crawling out the window. When we came home he was a very sick man indeed, and his folks were holding him in the bed. They had sent for the doctor, but it would be almost half an hour before he could get there. We told them what the Bible says about the sick, and asked them how they felt about it. They told us to administer to him, which we did. There was no oil, so we used water to anoint, Brother McConley anointing, I confirming. God heard our prayer, and in five minutes the man was sleeping nicely. When the doctor got there he could hardly wake the man. He could not understand what had been the matter with the man. He gave him a pill and something to ease the pain if he should have any more, and went home. There were no Saints there except Brother McConley and myself. There was a Utah Mormon there, but he is disgusted with Brighamism. He wrote to his folks a few years ago (they live in Switzerland) and told them if they wanted to remain firm in the faith for them not to come to Utah, for if they did they would lose all faith in the church. The people could not understand how it was the young man got relief from what was done for him. In the morning he said his wife told him what we had done. He thanked us, paid for our breakfast, then went to work. We left many friends for the work there. The Utah elders don't like our elders to call on their members, for when they do the Utah elders have to work hard to keep them in line. I hope that some day this polygamy business will be wiped out of existence. The gospel of Jesus Christ, which was restored through Joseph Smith, can then go forth with greater power. I suppose winter will soon be here, but we will not see any of it, as it is warm here all the time. We had a nice rain last night, and one Saturday night, also. Our rainy season sets in soon now, and I know everyone will be glad, as there has not been very much rain for a long time."

In a letter from Hilo, Hawaii, dated November 25, 1912, he further writes: "While Myron is taking a short nap, I will write you a few lines. I am well and so is Mary, but we are a long distance apart. Mary is at Honolulu and I am at Hilo, Hawaii, an island one hundred and ninety-two miles away. There are many wonderful and beautiful things on this island which we want to see before we go back to Honolulu. The largest active volcano in the world is here, about thirty miles away, so Myron and I are going to go and see it one of these days. We are preaching on the streets of Hilo every night that it does not rain too hard. One has to carry an umbrella all the time here, but still it is a very nice climate. We only have one member in Hilo that we know of, and we just found her yesterday. She saw our notice in the paper and came to the meeting and told us who she was. We were very glad to find a member here. We are going to try and build up a branch here. Pray for our success. November 23, I had the following vision: I was lying on my side with my face toward the east. I was not asleep, but had my eyes closed, when all at once I saw an opening in front of me, and through this I could see a stone platform on the side of a rocky cliff. On this platform stood Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the Martyrs. These did not appear very plainly, but I seemed to know they were there. The scene then changed, and I saw Joseph's sons. I saw Alexander very distinctly, and the others not so plainly, on the same platform; then I wondered if I were there with them, so I looked more closely and saw Brother McConley standing to one side and about one foot in front of me on the same platform. We were standing erect, our clothes were of a grayish color, and neat and clean. We were more erect and a little more portly than we now are. Our faces had a shining luster and we were smiling. We had books in our hands, and they shone with brightness as the leaves were made to flutter by the gentle breeze that was blowing. The scene kept changing, like a moving picture film. Then I saw a large room just back of the place where we were then standing, filled with people. All the seats were full and all looked happy; most of them had books, and some of them shone as brightly as the large electric street lights in Denver, as the leaves were moved by the wind that was blowing upon them. Some of the people's faces also shone in the same manner; some very bright, others not so bright. Some of them got up and spoke for a few minutes, and then sat down again. This continued for some time. I could see a flash of light as the scenes changed, like the pictures do at the moving picture shows. The second scene changed, and I saw a large stone building, covered with green moss. The shape was like the stone church at Independence, without any side projections. I could not see the building very distinctly, because it was enveloped in a sort of a mist. Just at this moment Myron moved and I opened my eyes and the scene was gone. But it was a beautiful sight, and I felt the power of God at the time. I also prayed in my heart at the time I was witnessing these things. Truly God is no respecter of persons and I hope you will remember me in your prayers that I may be able to overcome all the temptations that are put in my pathway. There is much work to be done over here, and only a few to do it; only two traveling missionaries in all these islands. It costs lots of money to labor over here."

---

News from Missions

Alabama.

No doubt a few words from the Southeastern Mission would be of interest. Elders F. M. Slover, Swen Swenson, and myself have been together for some ten days. During this ten days there was a warm, friendly discussion between F. M. Slover and George H. Cramer, of Kentucky, who claimed to be representing the Church of Christ.

This discussion came about by Elder Slover preaching in Georgiana, Alabama. While there preaching he was challenged by Reverend Dan L. Watson. Brother Slover was not hasty about the matter, but after careful and prayerful consideration wrote me to go and investigate the matter, and if I thought wisdom to have it, then to have D. L. Watson sign up propositions and rules. I, with Brother J. R. Harper, president of district, went down and after investigating the matter, thought it wisdom to have the debate, and asked Reverend Watson to sign up, which he did, and we then published an account of same in Butler County Georgiana News. Brother Harper and myself returned to McKenzie, Alabama. I sat down, wrote to Brother Slover who was at Pensacola, Florida, holding meetings, and told him what we had done, and for him to get his scrapping clothes on and come ahead. Brother Slover, after learning everything was all right, came in on time, prepared for the fight. He had made arrangements for the debate, if held, to begin December 9, at 7 o'clock p. m. A few days previous to the debate, we learned that they had sent to Kentucky and got one of their biggest guns, who also claimed to be a Greek scholar. We met, according to previous arrangements, at the large city hall, of Georgiana, Alabama. D. L. Watson acted as George H. Cramer's moderator, while the writer acted as moderator for F. M. Slover. The moderators had nothing to do, but keep the time, and listen to the arguments brought forth by each man. The propositions as discussed are as follows:

First. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in harmony with the church of Christ described in the New Testament Scriptures, in faith, organization, and doctrine. F. M. Slover, affirmed; George H. Cramer, denied.

Second. The Church of Christ, of which I, George H. Cramer, am a member, is in harmony with the church of Christ described in the New Testament Scriptures, in faith, organization, and doctrine. George H. Cramer, affirmed; F. M. Slover, denied.

George H. Cramer was a large man, and had a loud, strong voice. Had he been alone, and no one there to have answered his argument, he could have almost convinced both Jew and Gentile that he was preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ. He claimed that he had held about forty-five debates, but this was his first one with the Reorganized people. When he would stand to speak, and got in possession of what he believed to be the Spirit of the Master, his voice would ring both long and loud. Anyone sitting by could almost hear the window panes quiver at the sound of his voice. Had he been on the right side, he would have been a wonderful defender of the cause of Christ. He was a fair man in debate; he threw no dirt or slang; it seemed that all he had in view was to prove his side to be right. We as Latter Day Saints could look upon him with a feeling of sadness, to think that as talented a man as he was, was as Paul of old before his conversion, found fighting the faith that Jude tells us to earnestly contend for. Elder Cramer fought water baptism from start to finish, and in his closing speech, as it seemed that he knew his argument had gone to the ground, referring to the position of his opponent, said, "You must be dipped or be damned." Elder Cramer labored hard, but with all his hard and faithful labors, and loud and eloquent speech, when F. M. Slover brought up the words of Jesus Christ against him, the poor man saw his defeat; Slover using the words of Jesus, Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away. Mr. Cramer said that he cast out devils by taking them by the collar and leading them to the door and putting them out. Slover asked him how that compared with the words of Jesus; "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." His position on Revelation 14: 6, that the angel referred to was Paul, he dropped when shown that Paul had been dead a number of years before John ever saw the angel. Elder Slover told Elder Cramer that if he would obey the gospel he would be an able defender of the truth.

This was the cleanest debate I ever attended. There was a large crowd out Sunday afternoon, the debate closing at four o'clock p. m. I am pleased to state that everything went off peacefully and nicely. Elder Cramer desired Slover to show him a sign. F. M. referred him to Matthew 16: 4, "A wicked and adulterous generation seek after a sign, and no sign shall be given unto it," but stated if he would have faith in God, repent of his sins, be baptized for remission of his sins, accept the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, then he would be entitled to a sign, as Jesus had said, "These signs shall follow them that believe," and that he would know of the doctrine for himself.

In the closing speech Elder Slover asked the audience if they ever heard of the "not" preacher; calling their attention to the conversation between the Devil and Eve, as the Devil said to Eve, "Ye shall not surely die." Elder Slover showed Elder Cramer how he was in harmony with Mr. "not" preacher, but how badly out of harmony with Christ and the apostles. Elder Slover read Mark 16 as follows: Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is not baptized shall be saved. These signs shall not follow them that believe; always using the "not" to show how he harmonized with Mr. "not" preacher.

Trust that this debate may be the cause of many accepting the gospel. There have already been over one hundred baptisms performed in this district; and the prospects are that many others will accept before long. I have enjoyed being among the people in the South. I have learned to love them, and my few months that I have spent here have passed away almost like a dream, as I have been busy most all the time. But I will soon leave the sunny South, and go into a cooler country, trusting that all things may work out for good to those who love the Lord.

Your brother in the conflict for Christ,
LLOYD C. MOORE.

CREAL SPRINGS, ILLINOIS, R. F. D. 2.

Florida.

I will write a few words, as I feel led to do so. I came from Deer Range, Alabama, the 18th of October, leaving a good interest there, having baptized one young man. Came to the Florida reunion, held at Dixonville, Alabama. Thirteen were baptized as the results from the reunion, which was a grand success. Brother Dubose and I spent five days in Sellersville. Good attendance; blessed two children. Sold Book of Mormon. We left there the 5th, Brother Dubose going to Jay, Florida, wife and I to Botts, Florida. We spent ten days there; had good success; left the people rejoicing in the work. Some four or five who were users of tobacco and snuff quit their use, and asked me to pray for them. This weed is used carelessly among the people of this country. It is surprising to me to see how people will use such poison as that is for the stomach, when God said it was for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. (Doctrine and Covenants 86.) But I am glad to note that our people are learning better sense than to cheat the poor dumb brutes out of what God has made for them, and are letting their lights shine so that others can see their good work. Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good work and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 5: 16. And how can our lights shine when they are fogged with tobacco and snuff? God wants his people to be a pure people. Can you be pure and use such stuff as that?

I left there the 20th for Harold, Florida. I spent two days and nights with Brother J. H. Johnston, who is a priest. He is a devout worker, and is doing lots of good where he goes. I reached Harold the 24th, I spent nine days there, preached twelve sermons, baptized eight, organized one Sunday school with nineteen charter members, blessed seven children, preached one funeral sermon, left many more near the kingdom. I hope to return soon.

The work is growing fast in this part of the world. The field is truly white to harvest, but the laborers are so few we can not reach all the calls for preaching.

I am a young missionary in the great battle for the gospel and I love it with all my heart. I ask an interest in all the prayers of the Saints that I may hold out faithful.

A. G. MILLER.

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA, December 7, 1912.

Tennessee.

The debate between J. D. Taut and myself began November 26 and continued for four days; two propositions, involving the church we represent and Mr. Taut's so-called "Church of Christ," or the nonprogressive wing of the Campbellites, were discussed.

Our opponent is heralded, or heralds himself, as one who "stands without a peer"; but although he is a reputed scholar and college instructor, he seemed to realize that he was facing a difficult proposition and began with abuse and dirt-throwing, right at the start; and as we hemmed in with Bible argument day after day, he became personally abusive and angry. Yet he was about the easiest man to meet that I ever met in discussion.

The brethren and Saints left the debate satisfied and rejoicing. Brother J. R. McClain was my moderator, and he and J. A. Roberts and W. S. Shupe rendered valuable aid. I am also indebted to Brethren E. E. Long and F. A. Russell for help furnished in the way of charts and notes. I also thank the many Saints who promised to remember me in their prayers. Those prayers seemed to strengthen me while in the conflict. The very assurance that prayers were being offered for me was a great comfort and consolation. We are strengthened and confirmed in the faith.

We were made glad that we are representing a system that could be defended against vile, unprincipled opposition, without resorting to the low tactics of our opponent. To God be all the praise. At the close we felt like singing, "Thank the Lord for the plan he has given."

Two adults were baptized just after the close of the debate. Mrs. Lena McFall, and another sister whose name I fail to recall.

We are now at Paris for a few days, but on the 6th we go to Donaldson, Trigg County, Kentucky, to hold some meetings.

Yours in the gospel,

H. E. MOLER.

PARIS, TENNESSEE, December 4, 1912.

Missouri.

CONDITIONS OF ZION AS I VIEW THEM.

There seems to be a desire among the Saints everywhere to move to Zion, which is all right. I believe God is moving upon the Saints to gather to Zion, but I think many of the Saints fail to consider the conditions under which they should gather together.

In Doctrine and Covenants 46 we are told it shall come to pass among the wicked that every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor must needs flee to Zion for safety, and there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven, and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another. And it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from all nations, and shall come to Zion singing with songs of everlasting joy. Please take notice, it is the righteous that God is going to gather; not the wicked ones. None but the righteous Saints will be able to stay in Zion and receive their inheritances.

Many Saints come here thinking this is the best place to make money, and it seems they labor altogether for money, forgetting the Lord has said in the Book of Mormon, page 148, verse 109, authorized edition, that the laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion; for if they labor for money they shall perish. As I understand it, when we come to Zion we must labor to build up Zion with all our mind and strength, and use our money as well. We must observe the celestial law if we receive a celestial glory or kingdom. There seems to be a different opinion as to where the land of Zion is, or how much land is included in the land of Zion. This can be settled by turning to Doctrine and Covenants 57. Here the Lord says: "Hearken, oh ye elders of my church saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints; wherefore this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion . . . the place now called Independence, is the center place." So just as much land as was at that time, July, 1831, called Missouri, is the land of Zion; no more and no less if we are to be governed by the books. The temple will be built just as the Lord has said in section 83, that this generation shall not pass away till the temple will be built and the glory of the Lord shall rest upon it or shall fill it. Why will the Saints doubt this promise? Other places will be appointed after this land of Zion is full, but not till then will there be a necessity for the appointing of other lands. When these are appointed they will be called stakes. Question: Do the two stakes appointed cover any more land or territory than was included in the State of Missouri at the time the church received the revelation found in section 98?

Let us be careful that we move as the Lord directs. There are two powers working here in Zion, just as there have always been; the evil power, enticing people to do wrong; the other power, which is the power of God, enticing people to do good. The Saints are no exception to the influence of these powers, and it is plain to see the two powers at work. Satan is here in Zion, with great power given him, because he has but a short time in which to operate. The time is drawing near when he is to be bound, and the Lord is suffering him to try the Saints. We are to be a tried people; then why should we not be willing to suffer trials, as the people of God? We have his promise that he will never suffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear. Say, would it not be wise for the Saints in Zion to stop and find out what power is enticing them before they act? Why not be sure we are right in doing what we contemplate doing before we do it? I am sure many of the Saints here in Zion make mistakes by not prayerfully considering their ways. I see as never before the need of the Saints studying carefully the written word of God and making themselves fully acquainted with what is written. We are told men of ourselves will raise up, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. We are now passing through trying times. Do not believe everything you hear, but search the Scriptures to see if what they say it true.

I find many of the Saints in Zion who have become chronic grumblers and do not seem to see anything good in Zion, but they have gone so far in the field of doubt that they say they do not believe God is now claiming this church as his. Some of the ministry have just about concluded that the Book of Covenants is a farce; so you see the need of watching as well as praying. Take heed that no man deceive you is still good admonition. Don't forget this instruction, Saints. The church needs Saints in Zion, with faith in the promises of God; it needs men and women who are willing to enter into the work of the Master with faith and courage, believing God is true to his promises and that when he commands it is our duty to obey his commands. Paul says to mark them who cause division among us, contrary to the law. Could we not profit by such instruction as that here in Zion? Surely we can, for there are some causing division among us now, contrary to the law we have received to govern the church.

Another difficulty I see here in Zion is that we are here from all parts of the world, and our environments have not been the same. We gather here with all our imperfections; our ways are so different that as a rule we are liable to say those who have ways like ours are good Saints and are in the faith, but of those whose ways are different from ours we quickly pass sentence and say they are as nothing, and are weak in the faith. Many Saints here in Zion become discouraged because others of the church turn a cold shoulder to them as soon as it is discovered their ways are not the same as those who would judge.

There is also a spirit working among our people here which impels them to try to excel everyone else in fine clothing, and in gaining a reputation as being up-to-date in everything. This spirit is drawing the true spiritual life from many of the Saints. Many of the Saints have been over anxious to receive spiritual manifestations, and thus have given the Adversary power over them, and have caused trouble among the branches. The needs of placing high priests to preside over large districts and branches would be wise for us to observe, if we expect to overcome the evil influence that is at work among the church, as well as the world.

There is a growing desire among the Saints to criticize each other, which is not dangerous if we are careful to do so with the intent to profit ourselves or profit the one whom we are criticizing. It is best to never criticize with the intent to confuse our opponent and cause others to think we are wise and the other foolish.

The pleasures of the world are fast seizing us, and inserting their fangs among the Saints. This ought not to be, notwithstanding the many things brought to bear against the church here in Zion. There are numbers of the Saints moving straight forward in the work, getting ready to dwell in the presence of God when the time comes, so I believe I can say the work is losing nothing here, but is slowly gaining, and many of the Saints are making progress in building up the kingdom of God.

Trusting this weak effort may help some one to take new courage and fight manfully till Christ comes, I remain,

C. L. SNOW.

KNOBNOSTER, MISSOURI, December 3, 1912.

Hawaii.

We write to let the Saints know something of the progress of the Master's cause in this mission.

At the present time we are in Hilo, the metropolis and seat of government of the island of Hawaii. It is about two hundred miles from Honolulu, and it has a population of about five thousand, the greater part Orientals. Sisters Barrett and McConley remain in Honolulu, where Elder Waller and the local officers are conducting the work.

During September it was thought advisable by those in charge that we should make a trip around the island of Oahu, and on September 30 we left Honolulu. Our equipment consisted of a small grip containing a change of clothes, and another containing our books and a supply of tracts in English, Hawaiian, Chinese, and Japanese; and our mode of travel was what the natives call "hele wawae"—in United States we say walking.

It is about one hundred miles to go by direct line around the island, but when you go to each house along the way, through rice fields and taro patches, the distance is much greater. We visited eight large sugar plantations, one of which is owned by the Utah Church; passed through districts where thousands of acres of pineapples are growing; also through a sisal plantation, where they grow the plant whose fiber is made into the well-known sisal rope. Thousands of people are making a living, carrying on these vast industries, while the favored few are becoming immensely rich thereby.

It was strange country to us, and most of the people speak a foreign tongue, but we felt the guiding hand of our Father on the entire trip, and had many unique experiences which space forbids relating.

The Chinese and Japanese seemed glad to get the tracts, and if the work was followed up it would doubtless bring results.

The Hawaiians were the most attentive to our message, and among those who could not understand English, we were able to make a large part of it plain in broken Hawaiian. But so many have been deceived by the Utah people that it makes work among them hard. As to the white people, very few are religious. We met a few very nice white people, but as a class they have forgotten the God of heaven.

We had the use of the Protestant Church on the Ewa plantation, where we had a nice crowd, and were invited back again. Also one Japanese church and one hall were opened to us; but most of the work was fireside talks.

At Wahiawa we held a meeting among the young men working in constructing the new fort, and had an audience of about seventy-five in one of the bunk rooms. This meeting was held at the suggestion and by the help of Mr. R. James, one of the foremen. When we came home from our meeting, Mr. James was having severe cramps and it took several people to hold him on the bed and keep him from jumping out of the window. He had been kind to us, furnishing us shelter the night before, and we felt that he was entitled to the Father's aid. We administered the ordinance of the laying on of hands, and he at once went to sleep. The instance caused considerable comment among the friends and relatives present.

On our second day out, we were invited to eat about 10.30 a. m., but we thought it a little early. Walking in a tropical sun and carrying a heavy bag of books is appetizing work, as we found out, for we got nothing to eat until 2 o'clock, and then we had to buy it. After that when our necessities were provided we were not as particular as to time and place. We crossed over the Waianae Mountains on a lonely trail, stopping a few minutes on the ridge where we were much refreshed by a season of prayer.

We baptized none, but made many friends and found out where places for meetings are available for future work. Our record shows 1,335 tracts distributed from house to house; six sermons preached; 130 fireside talks; 5 English Books of Mormon sold; 11 Hawaiian Books of Mormon sold, and 4 loaned. Also loaned a Voice of Warning and Three Bibles Compared and secured a subscription to the HERALD and Autumn Leaves. Among the tracts were many on "Succession in the Presidency" and "Polygamy," which we put in the Utah Mormon homes, and we hope it will be a long while before their elders can explain away the truths in them.

Having completed our tour of Oahu, we left Honolulu for here on the steamship Kilauea November 16, leaving there at 4 p. m., arriving here about 7 the next morning. Brother Barrett enjoyed the trip (he says) but Elder McConley confesses that he did not, for the sea was very rough.

Brother Greene did some work here when in the islands, but it was never followed up and there is just one member here now. We have almost completed a house to house canvass and are holding cottage meetings almost every night. We have sold 10 Books of Mormon (8 English and 2 Hawaiian), and have several more loaned out. Prospects seem good and we hope to do some baptizing before we leave Hilo.

Praying that the work everywhere may show a substantial growth for the year,

M. A. MCCONLEY.
J. B. BARRETT.

HILO, HAWAII, December 8, 1912.

Washington.

It has been a long time since I wrote to your valuable columns, but my silence from your pages does not mean that my interest has waned. I have thought that what news I might tell would not be as interesting as some others.

We have just closed a very interesting and spiritual conference of the Spokane District, held at this place. The conference was full of interest and spirituality. Brethren William Johnson from the Seattle District, and T. C. Kelley and Daniel Macgregor were present. Brother Macgregor gave valuable service in the Sunday school convention, and preached two sermons of the conference. His zeal is contagious.

Our membership of the Spokane District is only 439, and the Spokane Branch claims about three hundred; but the Saints are making a noble effort, with very few exceptions.

Several young men of the district are making marked progress and will be heard of as making their mark in the church a little later on.

A little depression on the financial line hinders the work a little, but our constant prayer is that our Lord will work upon the hearts of the Saints until they will be willing to make a sacrifice equal to that made by the missionary. Who will do it? Brethren, we are all called upon to labor together for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all! Whether we work in the ministry or on the farm, our sacrifice should be equal, in order that our rewards may be the same.

Our numbers in the Spokane District have increased slowly this year, but what we have gained will be valuable to the church.

Oh, that the lives of his children would always reflect the principles of righteousness, that they may see with spiritual vision the wonders of his law.

May the blessings of heaven be given to Israel of the latter days, until we all see eye to eye! OSCAR CASE.

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON, December 16, 1912.

Michigan.

As I have not written you since June, I will send you a few lines. My last letter was from Coleman where I had stopped to attend a two-day meeting. I stayed there a day or two, then journeyed homeward, arriving there June 13, having spent seven months in western Michigan on my first missionary trip. My folks were overjoyed to see me happy as of old, before my awful trial came.

I visited with my people a few days, then went on to Port Huron, where I attended the most spiritua<sup>l</sup> reunion I was ever at. Here on June 23 I was ordained an elder, under the hands of F. A. Smith. Thus I feel the weight of added responsibility.

From Port Huron, in company with my father, I visited friends in Canada for a few days, then went home again for a few days, then back to my field in western Michigan.

Since my return to my field I have preached in Cadillac and vicinity, where I aroused a good interest. One man, Christopher Schryer, and his wife, two noble people, had been members of the Disciple Church, but prompted by curiosity, or something else, they came to hear and became deeply interested, as did also a lady named Russ. I preached in their neighborhood three weeks, at the end of which time I baptized Mrs. Russ, but Mr. and Mrs. Schryer desired to investigate further. However, I was called back there, and on December 1 I baptized and confirmed them members of the church. When I closed my meetings in Cadillac I went to Traverse City to attend the reunion. Here I got a real taste of missionary experience, as Brother F. A. Smith sent me down to Belding, in the southern district, to attend a two-day meeting. On my return to my field, I went to Suttons Bay, but met with a genuine freeze-out, so went to Bendon and labored until our two-day meeting there. I also attended the two-day meeting at Joyfield and the conference at Freesoil, then went to South Boardman where I "dug taters" to get myself an overcoat. The three boy missionaries, R. D. Davis, Clyde F. Ellis, and myself, all demonstrated our farmer talents by digging in.

On October 31, I had the happy privilege of tying the fatal knot for W. V. Holmes, of Joy, Illinois, and Marjorie B. Hutchinson, of Cadillac, Michigan, at the beautiful home of the bride's parents. This wedding was the culmination of a Graceland love affair. Do not know if Professor Gunsolley is to blame for it or not, but if so, he did a good job. Think he had better start a bureau, if he has not already done so. The happy couple have taken up housekeeping in Joy, Illinois, and by letter from them I learn that they are very happy.

From there I went to Flint, where I attended the Eastern Michigan conference, and had a most enjoyable time meeting oldtime friends and Saints, including my father. From Flint I went to Bay City to visit Elder O. J. Hawn who was very sick; so sick that I was not permitted to see him, and sad and disappointed I turned away.

After stopping at different places I landed in Freesoil, where I met with varied experiences, some extremely happy and some extremely sad. I began preaching in our beautiful church here on November 14. Crowds began to come and I enjoyed the most wonderful liberty of my experience. Three have been baptized by Brother John E. Bennett, and others are deeply interested. The Saints here are preparing a Christmas program, and I have written an original dialogue for the occasion which the Saints claim is a great success, as the gospel is the theme. So much for the bright side; now comes the dark one. Only this morning I met with the most painful accident of my life. While sitting in the office of Bennett & Stephens Company, holding a gospel conversation with Brother J. E. Bennett, I leaned back in my chair and losing my balance I grabbed the door of a large safe standing near, thinking to steady myself, but instead it closed on my fingers and I fell with my weight against it. Brother Bennett came to my assistance and opened the door, (which he claimed weighed two hundred pounds); we found that the index finger of my left hand was nearly severed just above the first joint, while the large finger was crushed and bruised, so it took three stitches to hold it together. Two stitches were taken in the index finger in which the bone was broken. I know my finger will only be spared by the mercy of Providence and I earnestly hope the Saints will remember me in this my hour of sore trial.

In a letter in the last HERALD a brother speaks of me of having passed through severe trials, and I wish to say that while such has been the case, I have never doubted the justice and mercy of God, for by the experiences of the past I have learned that he doeth all things well and never causes his child a needless tear. He is too wise to err, and too loving to be unkind, and though I am suffering intensely as I dictate these lines, I realize that this may work out in me a measure of good that nothing else could have done, and if it be to the glory of our heavenly Father, I will not murmur or complain, feeling that all will yet be well. Assuring you that my faith in the work is as firm as Gibraltar, and again asking an interest in the prayers of God's people, I will sign myself,

R. D. WEAVER.

FRESOIL, MICHIGAN, December 17, 1912.

Miscellaneous Department

Convention Minutes.

INDEPENDENCE STAKE RELIGIO CONVENTION AND INSTITUTE.

The Religio convention-institute, held at Holden, Missouri, November 23 and 24 is said by all in attendance to be the very best convention ever held in the stake; not only from an intellectual, but from a spiritual standpoint. The motto of the convention was, "What to do; how to do it;" and if any delegate or visitor went away from the convention without a pretty thorough knowledge of all the workings of the various departments of the Religio, it was his own fault! One of the most prominent and satisfactory features of the convention were the prayer services Saturday at 10 a. m. and Sunday at 8 a. m. The convention opened with prayer for divine guidance, supplemented by some rousing testimonies of what the Religio had done, for those who testified, and what it would do for all who took advantage of the grand opportunities for development offered by this divinely approved organization. Nearly everyone present took part in these meetings, and the earnest, fervent prayers for the presence of God's Spirit were almost immediately answered, and it remained throughout all the sessions to enlighten, cheer, and comfort. The purely business part of the sessions Saturday morning, afternoon, and evening were marked by complete harmony; not a ripple of discord anywhere. The principal item of business was the report of the executive committee on the eligibility of officers who use narcotics or intoxicating liquors. This committee recommended that the principles of referendum and recall be put into operation on this question; that it be referred to the locals for action and report to next convention, the decision of a majority to govern at that time. The resignation of B. J. Scott, as treasurer, due to his leaving the stake was accepted, and M. A. Etzenhouser was chosen to fill the vacancy. Delegates were elected to General Convention. At the 11 a. m. session, short talks from delegates, called upon by the president, outlined various general conditions in the various locals represented. During the intermission between the two Saturday morning sessions a "get acquainted" meeting was held, each person present being requested by President Bushnell to ask as many others as they could at least three questions on any subject they wished. The result was that there were no longer any strangers at the convention. The institute work began with the report of President Bushnell, at 2.30 p. m. Four new locals were organized in the last six months, and two were reorganized. He reports increased interest and improvement in nearly all locals in the stake. Following this report Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser talked on president's duties, program work, and duties of executive committees. In her usual clear and forceful manner she illustrated the subjects by comparing a local with a business corporation, the president being general business manager and the officers and chairmen of committees constituting the board of directors. The heads of the various departments were urged to make regular reports to the manager, but if they failed it was the president's duty, as ex officio member of all committees, to find out why. How could a business be conducted successfully without knowing the work done, or left undone, in each department? Therefore, businesslike way. The analogy was a very apt one, and was set forth in all its details, the lookout committeemen being compared to traveling salesmen, and the social committeemen to house salesmen, and the good literature committee to the advertising department. Questions were asked and answered. Miss Mary E. Weise, superintendent Independence Sanitarium Training School, then followed with a splendid talk on common sense in the sick room, giving some excellent advice and instruction along hygienic, aseptic, and antiseptic lines, especially recommending in all cases of sickness the services of three very eminent physicians, Doctor Fresh Air, Doctor Cleanness, and Doctor Pure Food. Several pertinent questions were answered. At 6.30 p. m. J. A. Gardner, as treasurer of the General Society, made an appeal for the Translation Fund, after which his report as vice president of the stake was given; then followed a talk by him on duties of social committees. He emphasized very clearly and forcibly the necessity of cooperation between leaders and followers, and gave greatest credit to those who were active, loyal followers. The effort was a very good one, and was well received. Mrs. Louise Palfrey Sheldon, Religio member of the stake library board, gave an excellent talk on object of programs in Quarterlies, giving illustrations of how the young might be attracted to the weightier things of the gospel through the interest created by well-executed programs. Then came the report of the stake secretary, Miss Carlotta Hartnell, followed with a talk by her on duties of secretaries and lookout committees, which resulted in bringing out such expressions as these: "Such talks as that makes me want to do all I can for the Religio," and, "After hearing these good things I feel better qualified to do my work." What better results could be desired by any speaker than to arouse people to activity in a good cause? After the good prayer meeting at 8 o'clock Sunday morning the Sunday school followed at the regular hour, 9.30 a. m. At 11 a. m. Mrs. Sheldon gave a most interesting and instructive talk on library work and duties of local boards. Her advice on library building, using the three books as the foundation; reference works as the skeleton of superstructure; and ethics, philosophy, and fiction as the finishings and furnishings, was exceptionally good. Bishop R. Bullard made a statement in regard to the stake reference library, its new location, and invited all to utilize it as much as possible. At 2 p. m. Mrs. Arthur Allen, home class superintendent, made a strong plea for more support in her department. Without proper home training people would not be very good church members. As the home must supply the Sunday school, Religio, and church with their members, let us commence by teaching the gospel in the homes, the recruiting stations. Following this a good literature program was given, consisting of the report of the stake gospel literature bureau; two excellent papers on the subject of good literature, one by President Joseph Smith, read by Mrs. Sheldon, and the other by President Fred M. Smith, read by Miss Weise; and a talk on good literature and duties of good literature committees by J. F. Rudd, superintendent stake gospel literature bureau. Creating the desire for reading good books and methods of distributing tracts and other gospel literature were the themes. Several instances of actual results produced by good literature committeemen were related for the purpose of illustrating how others might work. A number of questions were asked and answered. Charles I. Warren, in charge of the social purity work in the stake, gave a comprehensive outline of the work he and his associates were doing, laying particular stress upon the necessity for knowledge on this important question. Forewarned is forearmed, and without an active interest being taken by the parents in instructing our young boys and girls, they can not be fortified to meet them when they are forced to. Brother Warren is thoroughly enthused on the subject, and is doing an excellent work. In the evening C. C. Babb, in charge of temperance work in the stake, gave one of his good, characteristic temperance lectures to a large audience, many outsiders being present. He does not confine himself simply to temperance in narcotics and intoxicants, but includes temperance in dress, talk, and action. His slogan is, "Total abstinence from everything injurious, and moderation in all good things." The musical part of the program deserves special mention. It was in charge of Professor Charles B. Eaton, who was very ably assisted by Corinne Haynes, Carlotta Hartnell, Harold Bullard, B. D. Ament, Maude Moier, and Flossie Hiles. The music throughout was of an exceptionally high order, spiritual and inspiring. A very remarkable thing occurred during the singing of the last hymn, "God be with you till we meet again." Miss Moier was at the piano, and when she got through, and once while she was playing, she looked around to see who was accompanying her on a stringed instrument, but to her great astonishment she learned that no visible being had done so. She was very positive, however, that another instrument had been playing with her. The next convention will be held at Pertle Springs, near Warrensburg, at which a special effort will be made to introduce the work among the public-school teachers at the state normal, located at this place.—Press Committee.

Conference Notices.

Eastern Oklahoma district conference will convene on January 25 and 26, 1913, at Wilburton, Oklahoma. The Sunday school and Religio will convene on the 24th, the Sunday school in the forenoon and the Religio in the afternoon. We hope for a good representation, and would urge all to attend that can. J. W. A. Bailey, president.

Convention Notices.

Convention of Religio and Sunday schools of the Far West District will convene at the First Saint Joseph Branch, January 18, 19, 1913. Delegates for the General Convention will be elected, therefore a large attendance is desired, so that Far West District may be well represented. Send in your list of delegates at your earliest opportunity. Come and let us make this convention one of the most interesting and instructive ever held in this district. Bring in your suggestions for the good of the Religio and Sunday school, and let us strive to live closer to our motto, "Onward and Upward." R. L. Henry, secretary, Far West District Religio Society, 2844 Olive Street, Saint Joseph, Missouri.

The Presidency.

NOTICE OF RELEASE.

Notice is hereby given of the release of Elder C. J. Peters, at his own request, from mission appointment for the balance of the conference year.

FREDERICK M. SMITH,
Secretary Presidency.
J. F. CURTIS,
PETER ANDERSON,
Missionaries in Charge.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 24, 1912.

Elders Please Notice.

We desire to organize a quorum of elders during the conference to be held at Plano, Illinois, January 11 and 12, 1913, and would like to have all the elders who can, come, from Northeastern Illinois District, Kewanee District, Northern and Southern Wisconsin Districts, and all those living in the part of Nauvoo District in Illinois, and as many of those in the Eastern Iowa District as may desire, present with us at the organization. Visiting elders from other districts will be welcome.

PRIESTS, TEACHERS, AND DEACONS.

If there are enough of these officers present we will try and effect an organization of a quorum of each of these orders of the Aaronic priesthood, for the Northeastern Illinois District. Visiting priests, teachers, and deacons will be welcome at the organization of the order to which they belong.

Brethren, come to the conference and assist in these organizations.

FREDERICK A. SMITH,
Minister in Charge.

Old Students and Alumni of Graceland College.

We want the names and addresses of every student who has ever been registered at Graceland College. The present student body have decided to publish a students' paper, to be known as the Graceland Messenger.

We not only intend to publish information regarding every department of the college, but wish to carry on a bureau of information, giving the whereabouts, vocation, etc., of our old students.

To accomplish this, we want every old student to write us a letter, telling all about his present and past conditions. These letters should reach us not later than the first of January, 1913, as our first issue will be out about the 10th.

The subscription price of this paper will be twenty-five cents from now to June 1, 1913. Owing to the number of cuts and views that will be used, the first copy will be very valuable, and anyone desiring every issue should send in the subscription price at the very earliest date possible.

Address all communications to, Graceland Messenger, Lamoni, Iowa.
R. W. JOHNSON, Manager.

Ontario Elders Notice.

An historical event took place at the London district conference, held at London, Ontario, on October 12, 1912, when the first quorum of elders ever organized in Canada was effected.

By direction of the last General Conference of the church, all the quorums of elders were disorganized, and were to be

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 The Divine Rule of Evidence - - - - 1
 Love as a Basis of Government - - - - 2
 Notes and Comments - - - - 3
 HYMNS AND POEMS - - - - 4
 ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Capital Punishment, by Nina Brooks - - - 4
 Leaves from Life, by Addie Gray - - - 6
 OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 Women, Merchants and War - - - - 10
 MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - - 11
 LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - 11
 F. E. McCullough—Mrs. Etta Smith—Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Rockhold—Mary Lewis Mesle—N. V. Sheldon—Henry Drazey—W. R. Armstrong—L. Newton—Isaac M. Smith—Ira Mullin—J. L. Rust—Mrs. H. D. McKnight—G. N. Cox—James E. Yates—Extracts from Letters. - - - 17
 NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - 17
 Lloyd C. Moore—A. G. Miller—H. E. Moler—C. L. Snow—M. A. McConley—J. B. Barrett—Oscar Case—R. D. Weaver. - - - - 17
 MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - 21

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

reorganized under their direction at times and places appointed for said purpose.

The Canadian quorum was organized by Apostle F. A. Smith, assisted by Bishop R. C. Evans, and is to be known as the Ontario, Canada, Quorum of Elders. The election of officers followed and John C. Dent, of Bothwell, Ontario, was elected president; John L. Berger, of Saint Thomas, Ontario, and Charles Hannah, of Hamilton, Ontario, as counselors, Frank Gray, of Toronto, Ontario, secretary and treasurer.

All elders residing in Ontario are eligible for membership and requested to forward at once their birth, baptism, and ordinations, together with twenty-five cents (yearly) to the secretary, Frank Gray, 48 Euclid Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, at once for enrollment. The quorum has decided to report annually to the quorum secretary, term ending December 31, and recommended the use of the elders' diary as published by the Ensign Office for said purpose, which can be secured from the secretary for ten cents.

Brethren, we pray that you will assist us in our efforts to become fully organized, and that will only be when we have every elder enlisted on the quorum records. Our desire is to show by our reports to the general church that Canada's eldership have discharged their duty to the best of their ability in the office and calling that has been placed upon them, by the one who has said through his servants that every man must stand before the judgment seat of Christ and be judged according to his works.

Kindly send in your names and items at once, so that we can get working as soon as possible.

Yours in the gospel work,

FRANK GRAY.

Died.

DROWN.—Thomas A., son of Brother and Sister Alma and Mima Drown, aged 3 years, 2 months; died at Kansas City, Missouri, December 12, 1912. Funeral sermon at their residence, by J. C. Foss, assisted by the undertaker, C. D. Carson. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

NELSON.—Cora Edith Nelson was born at Guilford, Missouri, November 23, 1896; baptized by Archie McCord, January 7, 1906; died at Guilford, Missouri, November 29, 1912, at the home of her parents. Father, mother, three brothers, and four sisters survive. Her life was truly an exemplary one. She possessed a quiet and gentle spirit and endured patiently her sickness of almost a year—consumption. Funeral held at the South Methodist Church, in Guilford; sermon by C. E. Willey; prayer by W. B. Torrance. Interment in a nearby cemetery.

PHILLIPS.—Isaac Phillips was born in Glamorganshire, Wales, May 8, 1834; died at his home in Chariton, Iowa, October 16, 1912. He came to Des Moines, Iowa, in 1859, moving to Beacon, Iowa, in 1882, and in 1903 to Chariton, Iowa. He married Miss Elizabeth Davis in 1858; she died in 1871. To this union nine children were born. The surviving children are Mrs. Isabel Burk, and I. J. Phillips, of Hitecan, Iowa, Mrs. Rose D. Evans and B. Frank Phillips, of Lucas, Iowa, and John D. Phillips, of Norwoodsville, Iowa. In 1874 he was married to Mrs. Ann Barrett, who survives him. He was an honorable citizen, loved and respected by all.

He was a devout Christian, having been a member of the church for thirty-one years, and an elder at the time of his death.

SEATON.—Mrs. Tenny Seaton was born April 23, 1851; died October 14, 1912. She was married to William J. Seaton in 1865. To them were born several children, all but two having preceded her in death; a daughter, Mrs. Oda Winn, a son, Elvin Seaton, ten grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. She was baptized near Paris, Tennessee, August 22, 1881, by John Thomas. She lived a faithful life, ministering to the needs of the elders and Saints. Sermon by W. L. McClain, of Paris, in the churchyard, the house being too small. She will be lovingly remembered by the many elders who have so often shared her hospitality.

WARE.—Brother B. F. Ware died in Kansas City, Missouri, December 13, 1912, of pneumonia, at the home of his son, Oscar. He was born November 1, 1852; in July, 1883, he married Elizabeth Johnson; to them were born two children, Oscar and Anna, both of whom were with him and cared for him during his sickness. He united with the church and was baptized by D. F. Winn, March 6, 1889. He always bore his testimony and spoke of the beautiful gospel as it is restored again in our day. Funeral at the home of his son. Sermon by F. C. Warnyk, assisted by C. L. Monroe. Interment in the Mount Grove Cemetery at Independence.

LAUGHLIN.—At his home near Oskaloosa, Iowa, Garrett G. Laughlin died on December 15, 1912, at the age of 42 years, 10 months, 1 day, after about two years of suffering. He married Bessie Richeson, January 1, 1901; two children were born to them, who, with his companion, are left lonely and sad. He was a member of the church since his fourteenth year and assisted to build up God's work. He was a true husband, and his example in suffering was very commendable. His death was peaceful.

Our loss is great, to him comes gain;
 His sufferings here were so severe,
 We feel 'tis better thus for him,
 Although to us his life was dear.

Funeral at the Methodist church in Oskaloosa, in charge of J. F. Mintun. The large attendance showed the great respect his neighbors had for him.

STOFF.—Elmer Stoff was born March 13, 1884; died November 19, 1912, at the home of his mother, in Omaha; was baptized August 22, 1897, by W. A. Smith; confirmed by W. A. Smith and F. A. Smith, at Omaha. He is survived by a son three years old, mother, one sister, and four brothers. While he was for a number of years a sufferer from diabetes he was cheerful and patient, having faith in God and the gospel. He many times called the elders and many times received relief. The good name he left is surely a good thing and will be added to his reward. On November 21 the funeral was held at the home of his mother, and his remains were laid to rest in the Papillion Cemetery beside those of his wife, who preceded him in death about one year. A short sermon at the house by J. M. Baker; opening and closing prayer at the home by J. W. Wight.

The only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

No Alum
No Lime Phosphates

A VERY FINE FARM

160 acres 2 miles from corporate limits of Lamoni. Good house of 6 rooms. System of water works furnishing hot and cold water, fine orchard and grove. Fine large barn nearly new. Double corn crib, new hog house, a good one. Cattle shed with self feeder attached. Entire farm fenced hog tight with woven wire and hedge or cedar posts. Beautiful location with buildings facing the south. Price $115 per acre.

G. W. Blair, Sec.
LAMONI LAND AND LOAN CO.
Lamoni, Iowa.

160 acres choice new land, conveniently located to the best markets of the world, 40 miles out of Winnipeg, one day's ride of the Twin Cities, and great lakes, soil that can't be beat, and a property that the best land experts of the country estimated will be worth from $50 to $100 per acre. Price $25 per acre; $2,400, payable in ten equal payments of $240 each. Six per cent interest, no taxes till paid for. Prefer house and lot for equity in good branch. First payment June 24, 1913, would not sell if there was any way for missionaries to make payments.

WARD L. CHRISTY,
Minneapolis, Minn.
1111 17th Ave. N. 52-2t

LISTEN.

If you are a blacksmith helper and can shoe horses, and want to catch on to the plow smith trade, with chance of second fire, beginning in March, with the best of wages for the entire season of 1913, come, stop with me this winter and practice up. Lots of room, good fire, plenty to eat. Again, you must be a follower of the Lord.

W. M. YOUNG,
Pipestone, Manitoba, Canada.
Lock Box 2. 52-tf

German Edition of the Book of Mormon (Das Buch Mormon.) Order No. 88a. Cloth, $1.00.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS & C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

OUR CHRISTMAS BOOK No. 1. This is a new book just off the press—contains dialogues, songs, recitations, etc. Written especially for our people.

Order No. 188a. Paper, 25c.

Order all your books through the Herald Publishing House. It is just as easy for you to do so and it helps us materially.

California in the Winter Time

Why not? It's the Land of Out-o'-doors! It's the best place on earth to go to escape the winter; a grand place for the weary to rest and for the weak to be refreshed!

If your neighbor has been there, ask him. He knows. And it doesn't cost a great deal to spend a month there, either. Ask him about that, also. And it doesn't cost much nowadays to get there. Ask me. Burlington Personally Conducted Tours have greatly increased the pleasure of going and at the same time decreased the cost to the minimum.

Wouldn't you like to be away from business, away from household responsibilities, away from care and worry? Wouldn't you enjoy health! rest! change! rejuvenation? Come in and get your copy of our California folder, and then after you decide just what point you want to visit, I'll gladly help you plan all the details of the trip so that you can get every possible benefit out of it.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 8, 1913

NUMBER 2

Editorial

THE DEATH OF JOHN R. HALDEMAN.

It is with great regret that we announce to the readers of the HERALD and members of the church generally that on Saturday evening last, Elder John R. Haldeman, one of the leading authorities of the Church of Christ (Hedrickite), at Independence, Missouri, was met by the pale reaper while crossing a neighbor's yard in pursuit of some boys who had annoyed him by throwing a freshly drawn fence post upon his front porch.

It is not for us to say what the spirit of the man may have been in which Mr. Haldeman followed these annoying youngsters; but it must be that he was suffering from the hidden germs of disease which would bring to pass the cessation of life from what is called heart failure.

We have known Mr. Haldeman for a number of years, in connection with Elders Richard Hill (deceased) and George P. Frisbie, and others who have been prominent in the Temple Lot affair. We have found him quite an able man, though we thought him intensely occupied in following his own bent of thought in regard to religious subjects which divided him, with his comrades, from the Reorganization.

Mr. Haldeman had been before the community as an active business man, engaged in the printing business for over twenty-five years, and was only now in the midst of apparently middle age, and active in his chosen occupation. It was through his influence that The Evening and the Morning Star has in a way been revived. He was not permitted apparently to finish the object with which he began a year ago last spring.

Mr. Haldeman will be buried from the Temple Lot service, to be held there to-day, December 24, by the church of which he was a member; and in the afternoon at Mount Washington, under the auspices of the society of which he was a member.

Further particulars will be furnished as soon as we are at liberty to obtain them.

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON VARIOUS TOPICS.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE AND JOSEPH SMITH ON THE CONSTITUTION.

At a dinner given by the Pennsylvania Society, December 14, in commemoration of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the framing of the Constitution of the United States, James Bryce, retiring ambassador from Great Britain, as guest of honor, made a speech in which he said, in part:

The Constitution was the work of an extraordinary group of men, such as has seldom been seen living at the same time in any country and such as had never been brought together in any other country to undertake the immensely difficult task of framing a fundamental instrument of government for a nation. The Nation was then a small one and it is one of the most striking tributes to the genius and foresight of the men that the frame of government which they designed for three million people should have proved fitting to serve the needs of 93,000,000.

What I have to say of the Constitution must refer chiefly to the past, because its provision seems to be now not so far removed from the field of political controversy as they have been since 1865. Fortunately, there is plenty to be said without trespassing on the controversial field from which my official position debars me.

The whole of your history since 1789 is a record of the services which the Constitution has rendered to you. It formed anew, or at least strengthened and developed, for the sentiment was fortunately brought by your ancestors from England, the habit, or deference to the law and respect for its forms, with a sense of the value of directing everything by strictly legal methods, which is one of the finest attributes of a free people. It taught you to recognize that a free government must be founded upon the sense of right, upon the respect of every man and every community for the rights of every other man and community to the exclusion of all violence. It impressed upon every person the sense that the will of the whole people, duly ascertained and acting through the prescribed forms, must prevail. The doctrine of popular sovereignty is a fine and wholesome principle when it is exercised in the duly prescribed and duly observed forms, just as that doctrine may be the source of turmoil and injury to a people which rush heedlessly to carry out its arbitrary will at the impulse of sudden passion.

Both the Federal Constitution itself, and all those state constitutions which have been enacted upon similar lines, have had the effect of steadying the machinery of government, of slowing down impulses, of securing respect for the rights of every man and every section of the people. Such services will seem to you much more wonderful if it were not that you are so familiar with them. Look at other popular governments and see how much they suffered from the want of similar safeguards, if you wish fully to realize what your constitutions, federal and state, have done for you.

Every government in which popular sovereignty is recognized needs to be in some way or the other steadied.

With you, where class counts for so much less than it does in Europe and where traditions have not had so much power, there have been many moments when things would have gone badly had it not been for the respect you have all formed for the Constitution. In particular, you have shown the world how it is possible to reconcile national unity with the existence of local self-government in larger and smaller communities, over the immense spaces of a continent, a problem which a century and a half ago everyone would have thought insoluble. Thus has the Constitution of the United States become by the example of its working and the halo of fame which now surrounds it one of the vital forces of the world. Let us honor the memory of the illustrious men who rendered this incomparable and enduring service, not only to you, but to all mankind.

It should be borne in mind that this statement does not come from an American citizen, who might be carried away by national pride, but from a distinguished British diplomat and a recognized authority on subjects of political economy, well known as author of the work called, The American Commonwealth.

Seventy-nine years ago Joseph Smith said that the Lord told him: "Therefore, it is not right that one man should be in bondage to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 10.

How well this accords with the statement of ambassador Bryce, who says that such a group of men seldom existed in all the history of the world and never before came together, for the purpose of drafting a constitution to serve for the government of a great nation.

UTAH WOMEN REBEL.

Time was when J. M. Grant, one of the Presidency of the Utah Mormon Church, said: "If they could break asunder the cable of the church of Christ, there is scarcely a mother in Israel but would do it this day."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 50.

And another of the Presidency, Heber C. Kimball, said: "It is the duty of a woman to be obedient to her husband, and unless she is, I would not give a damn for all her queenly right and authority."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 82.

Evidently times have changed in Utah, if we are to trust press reports. For they indicate that while in the recent election the husbands went to the polls "like dumb driven cattle," and voted in accordance with the will of the priesthood, the women were doing their own thinking and proposed to vote according to the dictates of their own consciences.

We quote from an editorial in Collier's Weekly, December 21:

From the Mormon women of Utah has come an act of independent thinking under stress which seems to promise good. For many years it has been the practice of certain politicians to circulate suggestions through the "Relief Society," the chief organization of the Mormon women, that the Mormon leaders would like the women "to vote for Brother Smoot," or for some of Brother Smoot's associates in the dominating political machine. This year, when the usual resolution to work for Senator Smoot was introduced, it was promptly tabled. Women anxious to please the Mormon hierarchy fought for a day, under the leadership of Susan Young Gates, to take the resolution from the table, and finally succeeded, only to see it go to a disastrous defeat. Of the General Board, only six members out of thirty present voted for the resolution. Women from all parts of the State insisted that their local membership consisted of women who were Democrats, Bull Moosers, and Socialists, and that the resolution would prove offensive to all save the Standpat Republicans. The private reports carried to Senator Smoot from the women's organization must have been disconcerting to him. So far no consequential group of Mormon men has shown the independence in political matters exhibited in this instance by the women. Their lonesome majority for Taft indicates the success of the church leaders in herding them together under the old slogan of "Sustain the Authorities." For fifty years that has been the dominating political policy of a majority of the Mormons, and in this instance it brings them into conspicuous prominence as the only religious group in the country voting as a solid body under organization leadership. If the women can forge ahead in the direction of breaking up this unfortunate policy they will perform a service of vast benefit to their church. This Utah incident is an example of something deep and powerful that is going on among the women of America. We know no subject of thoughtful speculation more entertaining than the probable consequences of its fruition.

CLEARNESS OF STATEMENT RECOMMENDED.

The following paragraph, quoted from an exchange, contains a valuable thought tersely stated. Preachers and writers may well consider it carefully. The elders, in particular, should give it thought. It is their mission to take the gospel to an obtuse and dying world. They should make every effort that they can to make their message clear. They should study carefully the best methods of expression. Their statements from the pulpit should be clear, pointed, and easily understood. They are teachers, and must adapt themselves to the understanding of their hearers. It is better for them to be concise and clear in statement than to be flowery and ornate. The quotation follows:

Writers and speakers, who happen to be clear thinkers, practice scientific management for the special benefit of the consumer. With them it is not to economize on raw material, for they usually have an inexhaustible supply. It certainly is not to increase their output, although they are usually paid by the word. It is solely to make it easier and clearer for the reader and listener. Of course, all workers in words have not adopted scientific management. There are yet writers who consider language an end in itself, and spend their time in arranging intricate and astounding combinations. If they undertake to describe a field they proceed to lay around it a rail fence of words, phrases, and metaphors until, by the time they get the stake and riders up, you have forgotten the field and are tired of the fence. There are occasions that will still call out oratorical gentlemen who fondly love their own mellifluous voice as it caroms among unscalable peaks of glittering metaphor and rolls down deep, dim abysses of meaningless emotions; but, on the whole, people are caring less and less for meaningless phrases, however cunningly arranged. They want the substance of thought. They pass by the writer or speaker whose intricate phrases are but a drop curtain to hide what does not go on in his head, but they give more and more attention to the man who really thinks and uses language to transmit his thought.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

A PROTEST FROM THE LONDON BRANCH, CANADA.

It will be remembered that the HERALD for October 30 contained an article entitled, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" found in the Canadian Mirror Department. Those familiar with local conditions thought that they saw in the article an attempt to bring into the HERALD personal feelings, and issues of a local nature. This is always a mistake, and when we are conscious that such an effort is being made we always attempt to frustrate it. Local difficulties should be settled where they originate, by the machinery of the church designed to do that work; and should not by any means be brought into the church papers, where they can not be settled, but may be aggravated.

We have since received a letter from Elder Fligg, president of the London, Ontario, Branch, dated November 11, which letter was signed by the members of the branch staff of officers: William Fligg, president; Elder Henley, priest; James Weingarden, assistant priest; William Hardy, teacher; and Walter Parker, deacon. This letter was a protest against the article in question, and set forth the statement that no such erroneous teachings have been heard in the branch, from the ministry, touching tithing, Zion, etc., as were mentioned in the article.

Later we were in receipt of a resolution adopted by the semiannual business meeting of the London Branch, which comes to us with the signature of the branch president and clerk, and is dated December 2.

This resolution takes issue with the article in question and sets forth the charge that it is not a correct representation of local conditions in the branch and district, and is an unwarranted and unfair attack on the ministry of Ontario, and of the London Branch in particular; also resents the implied indorsement of the article found in the same issue.

Having published the article in question, we have felt it but just to insert this statement in defense of the London Saints. So that if they have suffered in the good opinion of any as a result of said article, their refutation of it may be made known. And there the matter must end, so far as the HERALD is concerned. There is abundant provision in the organic structure of the church for the settlement of local difficulties, if the law is only observed.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Please note the following from Brother Charles Fry: "I have been requested by Brother F. M. Smith, of the Presidency, to prepare the articles, 'Dealing with the erring,' published in the HERALD, recently, for publication in tract form. I shall be glad to receive criticisms or suggestions relative to said articles. Address in care of Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri."

Under date of December 19, Brother F. M. Cooper writes as follows: "Have to prepare a paper for the Ministerial Association of Dekalb County, Illinois, on the Book of Mormon. Their meeting is on January 13, 1913. Through the courtesy of the association I read a paper at their last meeting, on, 'Mormonism as seen from a Latter Day Saint angle,' Mormonism being the subject discussed by the ministers on that occasion. It was a splendid meeting, and every courtesy was accorded my son and me. Some of their papers were certainly false and misleading, but time was given us to answer them. It was a discussion without acrimony or personalities.

"Received a letter from the chairman of their program committee the other day, asking me to prepare a paper on the Book of Mormon as seen from our standpoint. Will do my best for our side, as it would seem too bad to let such opportunities pass by without utilizing them in the interest of the truth."

Some evil men have to keep going all the time; they can not stand solitude with their own consciences.

If a man constantly aspires, is he not elevated? Did ever a man try heroism, magnanimity, truth, sincerity, and find that there was no advantage in them? that it was a vain endeavor?—Thoreau.

We are more speedily and fatally corrupted by domestic examples of vice, and particularly when they are impressed on our minds as from authority.—Horace.

Our course, gentlemen, is onward, straight onward, and forward. Let us not turn to the right hand nor to the left. Our path is marked out for us, clear, plain, bright, distinctly defined, like the milky way across the heavens.—Daniel Webster.

Original Articles

LATTER DAY SAINTISM AS SEEN FROM A LATTER DAY SAINT VIEWPOINT.

What is called Protestantism bases the necessity for its existence upon the assumption that there was an apostasy from original Christianity after the days of the apostles. Their aim could have been no other than to reestablish true Christianity through the medium of a reformation. In this we give to the reformers the highest possible motive. Every effort at reform, from Luther until now, is an admission that the work of the reestablishment of primitive Christianity had not been accomplished by any effort before made; for why should men attempt reform on that which had already been reformed?

We, as Latter Day Saints, claim a restoration of original Christianity through the medium of special and direct divine intervention. This restitution involved the original form of the Christian church as set forth in the New Testament; the restoration of all the doctrines of said church, and the administration of the Holy Spirit as existing in the days of the apostles. Nothing short of the establishment of these primitive conditions would constitute a restoration of original Christianity. It must be like the original to be identical with it.

We hold that Latter Day Saintism represents the primitive church, as it existed in the apostolic age, in organization, doctrinal belief and practice, with all of the spiritual promises of the gospel and their fulfillment.

We affirm that the ethics of the restored gospel, as represented by the church, are identical with apostolic belief and practice, and that salvation is now offered mankind upon the same terms as announced by the apostles themselves. In asserting the restoration of the church through the medium of divine revelation we recognize the fundamental truth that a divine movement is subject to divine authorization and command. A divine movement in this, or any other world, must start by direction of the divine mind; must be based on the act of God. The process is seen in both Testaments—God speaks to man and man obeys if the will of God is conserved. True religion, to-day, is a divine theocracy that affirms God's active relationship to the church to be the same now as it was in the apostolic age. We deny the truthfulness of the assertion that it was the will of God to speak to the church in the first Christian age by direct official revelation and then to remain silent in all subsequent ages of the church's history. Such condition can only be explained upon the hypothesis of the church's degeneracy, apostasy, and overthrow. Divine revelation vouchsafed to the church is the one essential principle that demonstrates that it is something more than human: subtract this heavenly principle—divine revelation—from the church and we have only the human element left in the administration of the gospel in its entirety.

After the days of the apostles, when the voice of revelation was no longer heard in the Christian church, and God was eliminated from its polity, then came the long, dark night of apostasy, degeneracy, and war, in which the earth was drenched in the blood of the professed followers of the cross; a scene unparalleled in pagan history, according to Gibbon's Rome. While we recognize the element of divinity in what the great reformers accomplished in the interest of mankind, in so far as they were led by the Holy Spirit, yet the truth remains that their work was but the morning star to a greater work—the rising of the glorious Sun of Gospel Restoration, in which the primitive Christian faith would shine out in human experience in its pristine power and beauty. Both Testaments teach a restoration of the gospel by divine intervention, and not a reformation of an apostate, degenerate church.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Our claims for the Book of Mormon are based upon two divine principles—angelic administration and the work of the Holy Spirit. Who but an infidel or atheist will deny either of these spiritual principles embodied in the administrative economy of God? The administration of angels is an element in human history that represents both power and beauty, according to the Bible; and the administration of the Holy Spirit, under the gospel covenant, lifts the work of the blessed Lord high in the realm of divinity, spiritual power, and utility. Men bore witness that they saw an angel that showed them the gold plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated by Joseph Smith. They reaffirmed their testimony through life, and also in death. No persons now living, or that have lived, have been able to impeach the testimony of those men as witnesses to the divinity of the Book of Mormon. It is the sane, calm statement of honest, God-fearing men, who stood by their testimony in life and in death. Millions of people would believe the testimony of those men if it were found in the Bible. Why not believe their statements outside the Bible, if the principles involved are in harmony with Bible teaching and existence? Is the fact of angelic administration to be relegated to the past, reserved for the future, but denied in the present?

Slander, falsehood, misrepresentation, and calumny, the Devil's own weapons to fight the truth, have been employed against those witnesses to the uttermost, but in vain. Their testimony stands as a beacon light to the people of the world to-day in support of the divinity of the Book of Mormon. The falsehood that was current for about three quarters of a century, that the Book of Mormon was plagiarized from Solomon Spalding's Romance, is now exploded, as in finding of that old document at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, in 1894, and comparing it with the Book of Mormon, they show about as much resemblance to each other as do Gulliver's Travels and the revelation of Saint John while on the Island of Patmos. Most of the leading encyclopedias of the day have purged themselves from this old, antiquated falsehood of the Spalding Romance origin of the Book of Mormon. Ancient American tradition and archæology confirm every great fact in the Book of Mormon, both civil and religious. These same facts were unknown to Joseph at the time that he translated the Book of Mormon. The moral teaching of the Book of Mormon is equal to the ethics of the Bible, while its denunciation of polygamy, and its kindred evils, is more clear and pronounced than anything found in the Bible. "For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none," is the social rule that it inculcates in its moral code. The Book of Mormon condemns all polygamous practices of the past, and threatens the extirpation of a nation of people if they dare practice it in the future. The Book of Mormon is a witness for Jesus Christ and affirms the universality of his mission in that it shows that the gospel was preached in the New World as well as in the Old World. The supernatural power displayed in the coming forth and translation of the Book of Mormon was equal to any of the prodigies recorded of the olden time.

HISTORY.

The hypercritical writers arrayed against the Latter Day Saints are legion, but they fatally contradict each other on many points of their pretended narration of facts. Unbiased historians recognize that the Saints were a better people than were their persecutors.

Judge Edmonds, who was well acquainted with the community of Latter Day Saints at Nauvoo, is quoted as saying: "I can say for the Mormon population, so far as I know them, that I never knew so industrious, frugal, and virtuous set of people as they were."—Historical Library of Illinois, number 11, 1906.

"But when the testimony of both sides is carefully weighed, it must be admitted that the Mormons in Missouri and Illinois, were, as a class, a more moral, honest, temperate, hard-working, self-denying, and thrifty people, than the Gentiles by whom they were surrounded."—Bancroft's History of Utah, p. 164.

"Account for it as we may, they (the Mormons) were, in many important respects morally, socially, and industrially, far in advance of their neighbors."—International Cyclopedia, vol. 10, pp. 215, 216.

It was a lawless mob that drove the Saints from their homes in Missouri; it was a mob that drove them from the State of Illinois across the Mississippi River; it was a mob that assassinated Joseph and Hyrum Smith. In one State the mob was headed by the governor of that State; in the other State the governor, for want of patriotism and moral courage, permitted this mob to override the laws of the State, while, at the same time, he pronounced the leader of the mob, who was a professed Christian minister, "a semibarbarian."

The doctrine of a gathering, or segregation, of the people of God, is not only taught in the Scriptures, but finds its basis in the laws of sociological development under gospel environment. Enoch and his city of perfected saints represents our ideal in the great finality of possible attainment.

LOYALTY TO THE STATE.

The organic laws of the Church of the Latter Day Saints demand that we obey the laws of our country; and our sacred books teach us that the men who framed the American Constitution were inspired of God to do that work. "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."—Doctrine and Covenants, p. 144.

GOD THE INFINITE FATHER.

We believe that God is infinite in knowledge, power, wisdom, and purpose; that he is unchangeable in his moral and spiritual nature; that what he declares to be wrong in one age will be wrong in all ages; that a moral truth believed and obeyed by the humblest person living represents more divinity and heavenly authority than does a moral or spiritual error taught by nations, or kings, and ten thousand professed revelations from God can never change a moral wrong into a moral right. All true revelation will accord with all past revelation. Utah Mormonism, as it is called, represents an apostasy from the faith of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as taught from its inception down to the death of Joseph Smith. Polygamy; Adam-God worship; the doctrine of sealing; the Endowment House, with its secrets; disobedience to the laws of the country, with other errors, are alien to the faith of all true Latter Day Saints. Joseph Smith, who presides over the church in succession to the original Church of Latter Day Saints, is noted all over the land as a powerful opponent to the evils taught and practiced by the Utah Mormons, and that he, through a long life of faithful service, has ever stood for every known virtue that stands for the progress, enlightenment, and elevation of mankind.

SUMMARY.

We, as Latter Day Saints, believe in the work of the Holy Spirit in the church of God, through the gifts of the gospel, as manifested in the ancient church in the days of the apostles. We believe in the revealments of the Holy Spirit in the church of Christ in the calling of men to divine, official service, and for the blessing and enlightenment of the people of God. Modern so-called Christianity denies that any official revelation has been vouchsafed to the church since the days of Saint John. The Latter Day Saints have a definite system of belief and practice, the same as was taught by the apostles themselves, while the modern Christian world are divided and subdivided, and the only possible basis of unity upon which they can stand is a denial of the essentiality of all of the positive doctrines of the Christian system. We believe in the justice of God; that all mankind will be judged and rewarded according to the deeds and opportunities of life, and that the moralist and philanthropist will be compensated for the good they shall have done. So-called orthodoxy teaches that the moralist and philanthropist will be punished with the torments of an endless hell if they fail to accept Jesus Christ in this short earth life.

We believe and teach that God's love for his creature, man, is endless, and that the freedom of the human will to act upon its own volition will remain intact in man in all worlds and conditions of being; that man's free moral agency, by which he may change his course of conduct, or his belief, is given him of God, and that our infinite Father will never take that right away. Modern orthodoxy teaches that the condemned sinner will never be released from the suffering of an endless hell, regardless of his will or purpose.

We believe and teach the doctrine of probation after death; modern Christianity teaches that physical death determines human destiny, that Jesus Christ loves the poor sinner in this world to the uttermost, and that by the exercise of faith in Christ this sinner can go from his deathbed to a home everlasting in heaven, even at the end of a very wicked life; but if this same sinner should die without the opportunity of exercising faith in Christ at death because his fatal malady had destroyed his reason, he will wake up in hell with this loving Christ transformed into a being possessed of endless hate and vengeance, and the only relationship that can ever exist between the Christ and this lost soul is that of an infinite demon instead of the loving Savior of men. Latter Day Saints hold this orthodox dogma to be a slander upon the character of God and his Son, Jesus Christ, for this changes, at once, the character of God from that of a loving Father to that of an infinite devil. The origin of this wicked and corrupt teaching was in the age of apostasy and darkness, where servile fear was the motive power in human reform.

We believe that all good people are not in the church, and that all bad people are not outside the church; that if the man outside the church lives a better life (other things being equal) than the man in the church, he will be entitled to a better reward because of having been the better man. We admit that a good person in any church, or out of any church, represents a better type of Christian life than a professed Latter Day Saint who fails to practice in his own life the precepts of true religion.

The wondrous gospel of God, restored to the world in this last dispensation, teaches the unity of man in Jesus Christ: it breathes the breath of eternal life in both the living and the dead, and sees in all mankind the possibilities of heavenly attainment. Our religion recognizes the moral good being accomplished by all churches and ethical societies; we appreciate all Christian truth that is being taught, and bid all "Godspeed" in teaching it, but we can not compromise with that which we believe is not true—the deficiencies and errors that are taught in the name of Christianity.

F. M. COOPER.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The foregoing paper was read by Brother Cooper at a meeting of a ministers' association at which the theme announced to be discussed was Mormonism. Brother Cooper was recognized as a representative of the Reorganized Church and was requested to treat the subject indicated by the title.

• • • • •

FAITH.

"But without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."—Paul.

The same writer tells us also that faith is the evidence of things not seen; also that through faith the worlds were framed.

Before the worlds were made, God had the evidence that they could be, and acting upon that evidence they were brought into existence by his word of command. To have faith that God is, then, is to be supplied with evidence of his existence.

How is it possible for a sane man to open his eyes and look, without beholding literal and substantial evidence that a supreme intelligence hath wrought his designs, and executed the same in us and all around us? It takes a determined rebellion in the mind to reject such evidence. It is not, therefore, unjust that "the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow."

By the splendid works which have been accomplished among the righteous through the ages, by faith, we observe that faith is an important item to be kept in stock. It is indispensable to those who would please God or finally obtain practical knowledge concerning him. In fact, all our best interests in this present time and our chances for eternal life in the kingdom of God depend upon our faith.

"This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17: 3.

It is just as impossible for man to obtain that knowledge of God which will entitle him to eternal life, without having first exercised faith as it is in the ordinary course of Nature for a gigantic oak to stretch its majestic arms to the breeze without first being a slender sprout. It is well occasionally to take an inventory of our faith and determine the amount of our supply. Faith, like some commodities, is susceptible to shrinkage, and without proper attention (especially if kept in cold storage) may be found upon examination to be greatly reduced, and sometimes infected with some kind of destructive microbe or weevil, called doubts, which is a very complicated infection, caused primarily by inertia.

True faith is a living thing, and may grow and increase, as well as shrivel and die. Like all living things, it must be properly fed to get the best results, and if not fed will die. "Oh, for a faith that will not shrink!" Faith that has been nourished until it grows from the tender age of belief to the sturdy brawn of knowledge, will not shrink.

When Jesus said to certain fishermen: Drop your nets and come, follow me, and I will mak you fishers of men, they believed in him, and had sufficient faith to go. After a while Jesus wished to impress the fact of the limitless power of faith upon their minds, and told them that if a man had faith as much as a grain of mustard seed he could say to that sycamore tree, "Be thou plucked up by the roots and cast into the sea," and it would be done. And they said: "Lord increase our faith."

Jesus did not proceed to load the disciples down with faith at their mere request to "increase our faith"; but he did let them into the secret of how to increase the same, in the following manner. He said: "What man having a servant would, before the master had eaten, say to the servant, sit at meat and be filled? But would the master not rather have said, Come, serve me and after thou hast done all that it is thy duty to do, then thou shalt sit at meat and be filled."

Christ is the Master; we are the servants. The increase of our faith is in our own hands, and when we first serve, having done all that is our duty to do, then we shall be served. Lord, increase our faith; and when the necessity shall arise to remove the sycamore tree, or the mountain, or to command the waters of a Red Sea to stand in a wall, either literally, or comparatively, having the "evidence" of the necessity and the "substance" of the thing hoped for well in mind, verily by the power of God it shall be done.

JAMES E. YATES.

o * o * o

REGENERATION.

REGENERATION TO PRECEDE ZIONIC CONDITIONS.

"We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain."—2 Corinthians 6:1.

Meditation and deliberation are factors in life, and by them the writer has in the last decade passed through several stages of evolution. If we may be permitted to indulge in personality, not for the sake of becoming prominent, but merely to illustrate the thought before us, we desire to state that our conception of a Christian life, was that of formality, i. e., our safety along spiritual lines, our assurance of a perfect life, rested merely in the observance of outward ordinances. Our hope of immortality rested solely in our baptismal certificate. But am pleased to confess that years of study and observance have enabled us to get a broader view, a more complete conception of the realities of life, and if we may be permitted to convey to the mental vision of others, that which we now see in the conception we have of life and immortality, we shall certainly feel repaid for the effort.

While we are no less a believer in the ordinances of the gospel than we were in the beginning of our gospel life, we lay less stress upon them and more stress upon the vital realities. Life to us now means regeneration.

Webster defines it thus: "Regenerate, v. t., To generate anew; to bring into a better state,—n., Born anew; changed to a spiritual state." "Regeneration, n. Act of regenerating; that change by which love to God is implanted in the heart." Regeneration then implies a growth, a change, a new life; by it we understand that the old man of sin, and degeneracy, is changed into a new creature, born into a new life, and become a partaker of higher and nobler ideals.

Peter says: "Born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God." Regeneration then expresses a change, a transition from a state of carnality, selfishness, and ignorance, into a state of virtue, benevolence, and knowledge; in other words, the evolving of the creature into a perfect condition morally, intellectually, and socially; the implanting of the Christ life and Christ love within the heart and mind, so as to produce the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, meekness, and brotherly kindness.

Our error in times past was in mistaking the beginning for the end, the cause for the effect, and the little beginning for the complete life. Peter again says: "And besides this," (Besides what? Obtaining like precious faith with him) "giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness love." This is rather a tabulating of the Christian graces that must be acquired before one becomes a possessor of the complete life. This suggests to us a properly poised life, developed in all its faculties for good,—this signifies holiness, or wholeness, not a fragmentary life, but a life complete. That all this is required in the building of character, and assuring of eternal life, as well as a harmonious life here and now, was understood by the apostle when he said:

"And he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins."

In other words, if you do not grow into the likeness of him who has called you out of darkness into his marvelous light, you are yet without life; you have not seen the Christ; you have only vaguely beheld the man Jesus; you have supposed that gain was godliness, and as a result thereof you have laid a snare and fallen into it yourself; you have placed yourself in the condition of those whom the Master said should have taken from them even that which they had. Let us examine it:

"Unto him that receiveth it shall be given, and he shall have in abundance, but to him that continueth not to receive, from him will be taken even that which he hath."

That is to say, you have received at the time of your repentance and baptism a remission of sins, you through that act are born anew, and by the imposition of hands you receive of the spirit of life. You have now "obtained like precious faith" with Peter; but have you added to that faith the necessary virtues until you have become perfect in love? If not, you are not continuing to receive; and what is the logic of this? Simply this; if you fail to develop in Christian life even that which you received in the beginning will be taken away from you, and you will be in the condition of those of whom Peter spoke: "Twice dead, plucked up by the roots." So the latter end will be worse than the first. But if we continue to receive, and add daily to our life the attributes of the Matchless One, we will daily receive more strength, and thereby evolve into a perfect man; a complete life; we will become one with the infinite, for the Christ declares: "If any man will open unto me, I will come in unto him, and sup with him, and he with me."

Our minds, then, must be open and susceptible to truth; our hearts must be open and receptive of love; our characters must be fashioned daily after the image of God, if we ever expect to attain unto that perfect condition, even the redemption of our souls.

We may talk Zion and Zionie conditions until doomsday, but unless our lives have been regenerated, and we have become pure in heart, Zion will never obtain for us, worlds without end.

We might amass wealth, and we might gain numerical strength, we might build a city and erect a temple, yet without regenerating the lives of men it would not be Zion. We may preach Zionie conditions and portray the beauties of the kingdom of God, but until we can apply the truth to our everyday life and live the spirit of the law, do right because it is Christlike to do so, and preach Zion in practice as well as precept, our work will be a failure. The first thing is the purifying of the heart, for he that purifies his own heart is the world's greatest benefactor. It is the pure in heart that shall see God; so our only salvation is to "practice virtue and holiness, without which no man shall see God."

"If any man will open unto me,"—the measure of our success or of our achievement then rests in our willingness to receive the Christ, i. e., to permit his Spirit to enter into the hidden recesses of our hearts, so as to bring us into a condition of atonement with the divine, so that when we speak we will speak like him, and when we act we will act like him, and thus be able to reflect his very image in our countenances.

If we thus open our lives to him, the promise is: "I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me." By opening our hearts to him, he will enter them by his Spirit, and we will have a new heart. That heart being the monitor of life, it will generate new life within us, and by its operations we will be able to slough off the imperfect particles of our natures, and by his grace put on the real life "which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Christ."

"I will sup with him, and he with me." In other words, you shall partake of the same life-giving bread that I partake of; you shall drink of the waters of life freely with me; "Because I live you shall live also," for I will make my constant abode with the man that will open his life to me, and receive of the power by which it is quickened.

Wherever there are two or three living in this condition of at-one-ment with God, there is Zion, the pure in heart; and when the heart is purified the land of Zion, the home of the pure in heart, will be redeemed, for Isaiah has long since declared: "Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness."

Salvation, then, Zion and Zionie conditions, are contingent on our regeneration. Great possibilities lie before us, peace and contentment, or sorrow and dismay, will come to us according to our choosing. Having begun, let us continue to receive, for "we beseech of you that ye receive not the grace of God in vain."

J. E. VANDERWOOD.

Of General Interest

"JEWISH VOTE," "MORMON VOTE."

By nominating Oscar Straus for the governorship, the Roosevelt state convention in New York broke the grip of Republican and Democratic forces upon the conventions of those parties and forced the nomination by both candidates unfettered. Mr. Straus was not a candidate before this convention; his name was sprung unexpectedly. His nomination followed because the convention at once recognized his eminent fitness for the honor and his exceptional availability for the nomination. We do not believe that his ability to land "the Jewish vote" for the Roosevelt ticket was considered for a moment by his nominators.

Later, when the practical politicians on the Bull Moose side got their innings, it was considered—and exploited. Jewish voters in New York were urged to vote for Mr. Straus as a coreligionist. To offset that appeal, Jewish supporters of Mr. Sulzer urged their fellows to vote for Mr. Sulzer as "the consistent and zealous friend of the Jews." Doctor Steven S. Wise, in a powerful address on the eve of election, condemned both efforts to segregate the Jewish vote. "In the present contest for the office of governor of New York," he said, "that man should be elected who gives the surest promise by reason of his public record and his private character of faithful, disinterested and consecrated service. If a man be entitled to the support of his fellow citizens that support ought to go to him from Jews and Christians alike. I can not conceive of any man being entitled to the support of Jewish voters at the polls save in the measure in which he is deserving of the support of all his fellow citizens, irrespective of creed."

The eminent rabbi's counsel seems to have been heeded, as it deserved to be. The Jewish voters of New York voted as American citizens, not as Jews. No candidate received their solid vote. It was divided along political lines and by personal preferences. Mr. Straus was defeated. We dare say that he would have preferred defeat to election by the "solid Jewish vote"; for he is as broad in his views and in his citizenship as is the distinguished rabbi quoted above:

The example of the Jewish voters in New York shines by contrast with that of the Mormons in Utah. That State was conceded to Mr. Taft months before the election—for no other reason than that the head of the Mormon Church, it was understood upon excellent authority, had given his voice for the President's reelection. Partly because of the common belief that the Mormon hierarchy controls and delivers Utah's vote, that church and the State itself enjoy a somewhat sinister reputation the country over. The "solid Mormon support" probably hurt President Taft's candidacy more than it helped—though it was apparently "delivered" according to schedule and placed Utah's electoral vote in his column. We think that patriotic Americans and wise leaders of all parties ought to vigorously and unfailingly combat the tendency illustrated by these two widely separated States. The emphatic rebuke administered to it in New York deserves to be recorded as a very creditable feature of a very creditable election.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

• * * * •

The Seamen.

Everybody knows about the heroism of Captain Smith of the Titanic and pictures of the officers have been published. But there is one chap whose name nobody knows, and who gets precious little attention, but whose devotion and pluck and self-sacrifice are beyond praise.

What about the common seaman who lowered the boats that were to save the passengers, but stayed behind himself and went down with the ship?

The officer who leads a forlorn hope, the fire chief who takes desperate chances in a burning building, the captain who stays by the ship, all are buoyed up to a certain extent by the knowledge that the world will know and applaud their heroism. But the common soldier, the humble employee, the seaman who scrubs the deck, have no such hope. As Kipling wrote of the marines who drew up in drill formation on the deck of the sinking Birkenhead:

To take your chance in the thick of a rush, with firing all about,
Is nothing so bad when you've cover to 'and, an' leave an' likin' to shout;
But to stand an' be still to the Birken'ead drill is a damn tough bullet to chew,
An' they done it, the Jollies—'Er Majesty's Jollies—soldier an' sailor, too!

It is one of the wonders of the world that the inconspicuous man can so commonly be depended on for the great qualities in time of crisis. The night before Cold Harbor in the Wilderness the soldiers pinned their names on their coats so that their bodies might be identified next day. And then they went calmly to slaughter—calmly at thirteen dollars a month.

Last winter out in Kansas and in other regions of deep snow, the trainmen took it as their personal responsibility to keep traffic moving. To do this they endured privation and bitter cold and danger. For days at a stretch they bucked the snow, only to see their work undone almost as soon as it was completed. Yet, undiscouraged, they plunged into the fight again. All the reward they got was the consciousness of having done a man's part in meeting life.

So on the Titanic's night of doom the common sailors, men of small pay and meager opportunities, showed the same great qualities of courage that have distinguished the world's heroes of all ages. They gave up their lives in the line of duty. They saved others by going to death themselves.

Such a record is a revelation of the possibilities of the race, for it shows the stuff that the people, the real people, are made of.—Kansas City Star, April 18, 1912.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCOES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

February Reading.

PREPARATION FOR PARENTHOOD.—CONTINUED.

PHYSICALLY.

Let us proceed upon the hypothesis that the two subjects—male and female, boy and girl, lover and sweetheart, are before us ready for the marriage vow—the threshold to parenthood. What shall have been their education and training in this respect preceding this important moment?

First, we should encourage physical well-being. Each should have been born of parents who were physically perfect, but in many cases this has not been their good fortune. Unless there are gross physical or mental mutilations we are very sure to accomplish good results by instituting properly graded physical or mental training. It is wonderful what can be accomplished with the puny and dull children during their developing years under the supervision of competent trainers. And, it is imperative that physical training be established early in life. The child should not be coerced nor embittered, but rather taught the beauties of a strong, agile, and graceful body, instilling the desire to become more nearly perfect physically day by day. What is more beautiful to behold than a perfectly developed human body? Famous sculptors and artists of the past, present, and future have tried and will try their skill at the reproduction of its graceful lines which cover the interesting, restless, latent strength and speed. The training should, as suggested, be properly graded and, in addition, it should be constant even into old age. Competitive performances may be allowed, although it is generally conceded that this is unwise because of certain dangers that may result in permanent injury. Let me emphasize one point that is all important. There is not the least danger in proper exercise if carried on day by day throughout life—the danger comes in the neglect of it after the body has been trained to expect it.

PUBERTY.

Now, upon arriving at the age of puberty we have another, or rather the other, important factor to consider—that of the developing sexual organs, sense, and desires. The child may or may not have been inquisitive before this time. Right here I would advise every father to be himself a confidant of his son—every mother should be a confidante of her daughter, so that when a question arises within the child's fertile mind the parent may feel reasonably safe that the child will know whom to ask. Then, when the question comes, be prepared for it—and tell the truth in comprehensible language, so the child may know. The child, from that moment, can be told everything rightly and receive further knowledge as the occasion requires. Yes, tell the truth; tell it plainly. Why? Because there is no other subject outside of the preservation of life itself, that is of such vital importance as this knowledge in its truthful form. Any neglect or false statement regarding things sexual may bring disaster not only to the child but to the future generations.

ADOLESCENCE.

Up until this moment we have spoken of the subject as a child; or subjects, as children. For, indeed, they were. Now comes the period of adolescence. What a wonderful period—what marked changes! Right here the test of the worth of previous training and knowledge is begun. Physically perfect the child enters this period in confidence.

Obviously, we must divide our attentions and training into the two distinct channels in which the two subjects now present themselves—the male, the young man—the female, the young woman. Training the young man to bring out every point perfectly, to develop a manly man, is one proposition; while training a young woman into every finished feminine grace is quite another. Up until this moment we have trained them together as children—now they are different and the training must differ.

THE YOUNG MAN.

The young man should be acquainted with the entire sexual mechanism, in order that he may better interpret and apply the instructions. That his best physical being depends upon this knowledge goes without saying. He is not yet a man—he is only preparing for manhood. Keeping from him the important physiological facts now will retard and even injure his attempts at physical perfection. It may be well to say right here that we are not striving to make an athletic monstrosity out of our subject, but merely a normal, well-balanced man. Thus we eliminate any possible criticism along this line. A well-balanced man is impossible save as he knows and understands himself perfectly in all manly points. If a young man understands the truth he may be depended upon in the moral aspect. The laws of nature, government, and society will be a pleasure to him instead of a shackle whose strength and limitations he will otherwise be continually trying. He will understand why the laws came into being and will uphold them. Prostitution and other immoral practices will not tempt him because he understands and cherishes the principles of his coming fatherhood. As a consequence of this and with his knowledge of sanitation and hygiene there will be less gonorrhoea, syphilis, and kindred affections.

The few years of young manhood are full to the brim. This period is rapid in its successive changes. Physically he is apt, quick, ambitious, rather awkward and imitative. Just what he should be taught should be left entirely in the hands of competent instructors who know and understand young men—being equally as proficient in sexual knowledge as in physical.

THE YOUNG WOMAN.

Perhaps one of the greatest advances that have been made in recent years has been the one in regard to the physical training of our present day young woman. Instead of allowing her to get through her adolescent period as best she can in ignorance, shiftlessness, and various humorings, she is being taught the advantages of physical training and sexual knowledge. However, false modesty still is in evidence, and it must be overcome in order that the young woman may better understand her very complicated nature. Physically she should be trained much as is the young man, and many of the suggestions for the young man, just given, will as surely apply to her. Yet through all there must be woven that fine thread of feminine grace which so much enhances the charms of womanhood—teach her to adorn her body with the natural attributes of strength, speed, agility, and suppleness, which only can make her truly beautiful. Teach her the truth about the sexual mechanism. Teach her the beauties of physical and sexual well-being, that when motherhood comes she will have so trained her body that there will not be the strain and shock so often noted. There will be fewer breakdowns physically after the child is born; and should more children follow, she will be all the more able to withstand the successive confinements.

The young woman should know the importance of sanitation and hygiene, and should practice it. In addition she should learn the care of children thoroughly, so that her offspring will not be the unfortunate subjects of her ignorance. Teach her every detail.

MENTALLY.

From the beginning we find that to a great extent the mentality is prone to reflect the physical status, but we have assumed that our subjects are approximately near physical perfection. If such is the case, the mental poise should be nearly normal. And right here let me make it plain that knowledge of things sexual will not deteriorate the mind of the child or of the young man or young woman—it has the opposite effect, because they are not left in the dark.

The mentality is largely physical, at least the relationship between things purely physical and things purely mental is very close—consequently while teaching the body we must include the mental training and exercise. The brain must be trained and exercised in proportion with the physical training. To neglect one in favor of the other means at least a reflection that mayhap will end in a reversal. If the young man or young woman desires that his or her offspring shall be mentally strong and capable, they must keep their own brains in proper condition. Do not mistake this mental training for intellectual attainment, as that is quite another matter and will be taken up shortly.

So far as the mental exercises are concerned it is entirely proper that a sufficient amount be given, so that the subject will be kept out of mischief-breeding, dull moments. The exercises should be of sufficient variety to keep the attention of the subject at all times.

INTELLECTUALLY.

Now, when the matter of intellectual attainment presents itself we have a normal brain, a receptive brain as a wonderfully fertile soil upon which we may lavish the wealth of knowledge and wisdom. What a great power for good is a healthy, working brain, whose intellectual sphere knows no bounds. How the child-mind will delight to revel within the confines of such a mother's or father's intellectuality with its granary of the world's work, interests, possibilities, and projections. How much more, then, is possible intellectually when each prospective parent shall have thus equipped himself.

FINANCIALLY.

The financial side of parenthood is usually one of the important questions which can not be overlooked. We may have all the endowments from a physical, mental, moral, and intellectual standpoint, but financial reasons cause a pause. It is unfair, in view of having prepared to give all these advantages to the offspring, that the prospective parents proceed and, to use a slang phrase, take a chance. True, some of our greatest men and women were born in poverty and lived thus for years—but it is a great handicap. The poorest mother does not realize what her cradle may hold. The question is, rather, What would have been the final goal of these same individuals had there been sufficient financial backing? Then, too, we often see how wealth has ruined a promising individual.

Very often we find individuals having been born with all the attributes which we call desirable, who have become discouraged and fallen because of lack of finances.

I would urge that every couple contemplating marriage should, at least, have sufficient income to support themselves and enough in reserve to care for the ordinary emergencies of life. Finally, it is to be urged that parents will provide an ample financial inheritance as capital for the use of each child.

JOSEPH MATHER.

Requests for Prayer.

Prayers are requested for the little daughter of Sam and Sister Maud Smith, if it is the Lord's will her mind may grow and she become strong. She has been afflicted since infancy. Can't walk or talk, and is three years old.

Your sister in one true faith,

IRIS WILLIAMS.

Dear Herald: I ask the prayers of the Saints in my behalf. Will the Latter Day Saints, especially of the Moorhead Branch, fast and pray on January 12, that I may be healed of my sickness, that I may do a good work for our Savior. I have failed many times in the past, and I would like a chance to do better.

Love to all the Saints,

BOW, WASH. Dec. 27.

MRS. ETTIE HILSINGER.

Editors Herald: I wish to make a request of the Prayer Union, that they remember me in their prayers, as the doctor says I must be operated on in about three weeks. I feel that the Lord is able to baffle the skill of doctors, and I hope he will intervene so the operation will not be necessary.

MRS. D. E. DUNSHEE.

HONOR, MICHIGAN, December 31, 1912.

A queer thing, death, and yet not one half so wonderful as birth. Where is the child, a year before its birth? You can't tell me, any more than I can tell you where my friend is, after he is dead. We accept the fact that the child's life is somewhere before birth; how much easier than that belief it is to have faith that death is not the end of all! and how much more logical—for two steps of the arithmetical progression of life lie plain before us and all we need do is to supply the inevitable third. We know that life goes on before birth, and we see it here on earth; and to believe in its existence after it passes out of our sight once more should surely be easiest of all.—James Whitcomb Riley.

Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly; and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand.—Daniel 12: 10.

Letter Department

PORTLAND, MAINE, December 16, 1912.

Dear Herald: I take this way to let my brethren and sisters in Christ know that I am still trusting in Him who has power to save. Although at times I feel discouraged and ready to give up, I dare not give-up for to do so is certain defeat, and in this warfare there is no quarter.

If Elder S. O. Foss sees this he may know that I am still in the place where he left me.

A few days ago I saw a letter in one of our church papers from a sister in this place, by the name of Haskell. If she sees this, will she kindly send me her address, and if there are others here I would also like to hear from them. There is a family of Saints at South Portland by the name of Summerfield, living on Pillsbury Street. Sister Summerfield is anxious to get enough Saints together, so that we might have some meetings, providing we can get a preacher. There is one lady nearly ready for baptism; the elders from Utah are trying to get her, but thanks to Sister Summerfield she is still free from them. If Apostle U. W. Greene sees this, will he please take notice.

Still in the conflict for truth and righteousness.

428 FORE STREET.

W. S. POWERS.

GLASGOW, MONTANA, December 12, 1912.

Dear Herald: My thoughts often go back to the loved ones I have left behind, and my heart aches to be with the old friends at Lamoni. I came here believing it was best for me and for my welfare. The Lord is with me and I feel cheered by his Holy Spirit. We can commune in prayer and pray for each other; still I miss the good sermons I used to listen to in the Lord's house at Lamoni. I have a homestead three miles from Tampaco. There is plenty of timber for posts and fencing and fuel within two miles of my farm. I am well pleased with my new home here, and when I feel that God led me here and will not leave me nor forsake me, I feel grateful to him. I enjoy reading my Book of Mormon, as it seems to be a comforter to me, for I realize I am again isolated from the privileges of mingling with the Saints who have helped me to bear my burdens. I love my people, our gospel, and our God. We shall all meet again on that great judgment morning, and how sad it will be if for ever we are parted, and shut out of heaven for not loving God.

Remember me in your prayers, for I can feel your spiritual influence, even though I am far away. May God, our heavenly Father, watch over his flock and keep us all true to our church and blessed Savior, is the desire of an isolated sister.

MRS. LILY B. STEARNS.

MARION, MICHIGAN, December 3, 1912.

Editors Herald: We are trying to hold up the banner here in Marion. We were blessed with the presence of our district president, J. S. Brackenburg, who in his kind and unassuming manner did us much good. We regret to see him leave so soon. He had a good interest. Then came James Davis, our vice president; his smiles looked good to us, not having had a good visit with him since he was sent to Canada. The Spirit of the Lord gave the evidence of success in their labors.

Brother Davis remained a few days, holding good interest; one being baptized, a bright, young woman, the prospect for a good, lively Saint.

The writer was called to a near-by town to preach a funeral sermon. Had the pleasure of having Brother Davis along, making it much more pleasant to speak the words of comfort to the broken-hearted. God be praised for the beautiful principle of the resurrection.

I will relate some experiences we had some time ago. The writer was called to administer to a little boy and girl. The boy fell and broke his arm at the wrist; the doctor had pronounced it broken. The writer administered to the boy. I talked with his mother on Thanksgiving Day. She stated that the arm was doing well. The doctor examined it afterwards and said it did not need setting; it was doing nicely. The little girl was very sick; after the administration she ate some dinner. Her mother said after dinner the little one went out and played with the other children. Thank God for his abundant mercy. We could relate other manifestations of God's love, but this will suffice for this time.

The work has moved along nicely; they have been coming in by ones, twos, and six at one time. More will soon obey. May the Spirit of the Lord work more and more.

Brother and Sister Klavorn, of Grand Rapids, made a flying visit to this place. Brother Harry attended our prayer meeting Sunday morning; his testimony contained the spirit of comfort and encouragement, which endeared him to us.

In the afternoon we met at the depot, had a little chat, were suddenly disturbed by the rumbling of Nahum's chariot. The hearty handshake and good-byes signified it was a sacrifice to part. Oh, what a glorious time that will be, when all the faithful are gathered.

We had a good, spiritual Thanksgiving Day. Our morning meeting was fine, after which several of the Saints, and some we expect soon will be Saints, came to the home of the writer, had dinner and a good visit. We wended our way back to our meeting place, and the writer spoke to a small but interested gathering.

The Woman's Auxiliary is worthy of commendation in this place; they are doing a good work. The Sunday school and Religio are contributing their part to make the work a success.

Many are the blessings brought to us, dear Saints, from the fruits of your pens. Many hearts are made glad, that are hungering and thirsting for light. May God's blessing rest upon his people, and those who try to comfort and let their light shine through the church papers. We truly rejoice the angel has brought the message back to earth, and we have the privilege of enjoying its gifts and blessings.

A. M. BOOMER.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, December 18, 1912.

Dear Brother: Since sending you the notice concerning the notebook which I am getting out, and when I commenced the manual work thereon, I found that it would be necessary to increase the proposed size.

As I am issuing them, the sheets are 4¼ by 7¼. I found that if I made them as small as I thought at first, that we could not get the number of sheets that would be required to contain the matter in the cover of the I. P. notebook. Incidentally I will say that the price has not been enlarged.

772 EAST FOURTH SOUTH.

A. M. CHASE.

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA, December, 1912.

Dear Herald Readers: A few days ago I was lying on the sand at Coronado Beach, gazing far out over the sea. A ship was passing. Looking to the southwest the Coronado Islands were all aglow with the sunset. The old crater across the border in Mexico, once alive, now dead, was sleeping lazily in the arms of surrounding mountains. There were other mountains far away, where a comfortable but rough board house had been built in a narrow valley, leading down to the sea. It was another sunset. In the gathering shad-owns a barefoot boy was driving the herd to the corral. When down the winding road came a spring wagon, drawn by two ponies, driven by a gentleman about forty-five years of age. A lady sat by his side. The driver drew rein at the door of this rough California house, while all gathered around to welcome them. The herd had been driven in, the gate shut, and the barefoot boy, astride a mustang, was galloping down the mountain road, stopping at every house. When he came back, the horse was tied to his rack. Then boxes were carried into the house and placed so boards could be arranged across from one to the other. Bed quilts, neatly folded, covering the boards, made comfortable seats, and soon people began to arrive. This was the beginning of the Laguna Branch. The place was the home of Elder H. L. Hemenway; the occupants of the wagon were Brother and Sister Burton; the time, about thirty-five years ago. The branch was organized with about eleven members, consisting of two families. Meetings were held in a one-room house owned by a Spanish fisherman, which was vacant at the time. Ofttimes the Saints would assemble on the beach for baptism, Elder Hemenway officiating. Those were great days for us children. The barefoot boy lived and learned. Elder Burton came home from a wagon trip. He had been away preaching and found his house had been broken into; sacks of potatoes, cabbage, and corn were strewn around on the floor; products of Brother Hemenway's farm.

Thus, like a dream, comes back the long ago. To-day the brethren are away. Oh, that we could hear them speak again; but the sound will never come back, the sound of a voice that is still.

There comes a time in the life of a boy when he must go out in the world for himself. The barefoot boy was no exception. He went out from that home with no experience of the cities. The Laguna hills had been his world. Here are some of the things he passed through while searching for employment. While tramping along the railroad one afternoon, about four o'clock he overtook a man. Together they passed the night, and next morning the man was arrested. He was a murderer, having killed his wife with an ax. He was arrested with the bloodstains still on his clothes. Later I became property man for a theater company; later I spent seven summers with a circus under canvas as road man.

In all these different vocations my companions were of the rougher element. Their amusements became mine, and step by step, I was going down. Oh, the dark shadow of those days. At night, when alone, I could hear the father's prayers for his boy; in the morning the curses of drunken companions. One morning while in jail I asked that my Bible be sent to me. That day I spent with God. A few weeks later I was camped at Plano, Illinois. I hunted up the little stone church and stole quietly into a seat near the door. A very old elder was occupying the stand. I have forgotten his name. At the close of the service he came down the aisle; I tried to get out, but he got hold of my hand, and when I turned and looked up into that fatherly face and felt that friendly handshake, tears came to my eyes. Listen, boys, to what he said: "Young man, you are not living the life God wants you to live. He has other work for you." I had married and had two children; had printed a book and was following the county fairs selling the same. While on a goods box, crying my books amid the moving throng of many a fair ground, those words have come to me: "You are not living as God wants you to live."

At last I gave up the business, sold my home in Illinois, and turned my face toward the setting sun. Once more I sought out the old Laguna hills, and there became interested in church work. During a conference held at Huntington Beach, the Eighth Quorum of Priests was organized and I became its secretary and treasurer. I became interested in business in Santa Ana; helped to organize the branch in that place, was its first pastor, having been ordained an elder under the hands of T. W. Williams. While presiding officer, we arranged for a corner lot and soon had a church of our own; we worked together, hence the result. Brother Frank Burton is now in charge.

Since coming to San Diego we have been blessed. We found here a little band of Saints organized into a mission, with Brother Rulin in charge, about fourteen in number. Now we have over forty. They were then holding meetings in a private house; now we have a nice hall on a ground floor, with a seating capacity of about one hundred. We have started prayer meeting and have good attendance. The 1915 fair is bringing people here from different parts of the East. Among them are a few Saints; we hope more will come.

Tent work has started in this district. We expect the tent to arrive in San Diego about the 20th of July. We hope all those who hear will think. Meditation is the instrument by which we draw forth the sweetness of the truth of God. The river that enriches the fields has its source in the lonely hills, so the great thoughts that come to us, enriching our lives, sometimes come when God is near and men far away. Meditate upon the words of truth; be occupied with them, and the gospel light will flood you. I feel we can not despair; as the morning light drives away the darkness, so the gospel light will dispel the dreariness of life's journey, like winter when it feels the thrilling influence of spring. There is no doubt about the issue. Flowers are coming; trees will be robed in fresh green; so is man in his mission; springing up everywhere from his labor should be flowers of love; kind words and deeds, the fragrance of which would be carried into the homes and hearts of others. Some will strive to shape their lives to correspond, while others will still follow after the things of sin. Lying upon the counters of my grocery store can always be seen the HERALD and Ensign, where the people who are waiting can read. They are a great comfort to us; through them we keep in touch with the general working of the church, and could not afford to be without them. They ought to be in the homes of all the Saints.

I would that all who read the angel message might come and stand under the tree of life and live on the fruit that falls from its branches; then our lives would expand and grow, and become more like the pattern. Across the years that come and go we tread the path that leads to victory.

My address is San Diego, California, Challas Valley Grocery, Thirty-third and M streets. L. HEMENWAY.

EMPIRE, ———, November 11, 1912.

Editors Herald: I work on the United States Life Saving Service, at the Coos Bay Station. I also try to save souls, but find it hard to do much talking; however, I can teach by example and use precept when there is an opening.

We have had two serious wrecks since I have been here. The North Star No. 1 was the first, in which five souls were drowned. The Osprey, a schooner, was wrecked November 1, and five souls were lost in the briny deep. Not a person was saved from either of the boats. The principal cause of the wrecks is whisky. The giant Pacific is trying to teach men that they can not drink whisky and navigate the wonderful ocean.

We have been blessed with wonderful blessings since we have been here, and can recognize the hand of the Lord all the time. We have no church privileges, but this only gives us a strong desire to labor to redeem Zion. I expect to pay a monthly subscription to the Order of Enoch as long as I can. I can see the serious need of preaching Zion after the rebellion in Mexico. Our country will be in the same condition sometime not far in the future. The problem of national government is too great for mortal brains to solve, and the lower class, such as labor and receive protection from the Government, will surely bring war sometime in the near future. We must be prepared to meet the great revolution which is sure to come. Jesus said, in Matthew 24, that the time is near at hand when there would be the greatest tribulation that ever had been or would be. What a happy thought we have when we know the Lord will protect us in time of tribulation.

I have succeeded in getting one of my neighbors to stop using tobacco, intoxicating liquors, tea, and coffee. He has nervous trouble and I can see a great improvement in him.

Yours truly,

W. H. POWELL.

APPLEDORE, ONTARIO, December 24, 1912.

Editors Herald: Just a line to wish all the HERALD readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. My love is still for the gospel, I am not very strong in body, but my thoughts are for the advancement of God's work. I do not expect to be here many years, but I hope to be numbered with the pure and good.

Your sister,

MRS. GEORGE GREEN.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 14, 1912.

ELDER E. A. SMITH, San Bernardino, California.

Dear Brother: I read your editorial in SAINTS' HERALD of December 11, on "An experiment, and what came of it," with interest. In justice to Doctor Iliff I wish to say that Brother James McKiernan and I heard him give a lecture on Mormonism at Burlington, Iowa, about three or four years ago, in which he made a very clear and satisfactory distinction between the Reorganized Church and the Mormon Church in Utah. He commended the elders of the Reorganized Church for the stand they took in regard to the Utah problem, and spoke in favorable terms of the membership.

In gospel bonds,

CHARLES FRY.

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA, December 26, 1912.

Dear Herald: I feel that it is my duty to write to the HERALD. I have been a member of the church for about twenty years and am not weary yet, though I am blind and can not see. I have been blind about two months. I am now at Pensacola, under the care of a doctor, but he doesn't seem to do much good. I am putting my trust in God. I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may once more see the light in this world. If any elder sees this letter who is near Pensacola, I wish they would come and administer to me. I have a large family. My prayers are for all.

Your sister in the one faith,

R. F. D. 1, Box 13.

SALLIE BOOKER.

FALLBROOK, CALIFORNIA.

Editors Herald: If there are any Saints in or near the Ozark Mountains we would like to hear from them. We are looking Zionward, and from descriptions we have received, think probable we could find something to suit us in that region.

We would like to correspond with Saints living there.

Your brother,

H. B. ROOT.

Good Literature Work in the Northwest.

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—The following personal letter is published, not because of any commendation of individuals which it may contain, but with the thought that it may point the way to others who would be glad to engage in a work similar to the one mentioned—as Thomas Lawson says, it may "lantern-light" the way. The books mentioned in this letter, The Marvelous Work and A Wonder, and the Two-Story Book, may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, very cheaply. Write for catalogue and price list.)

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., December 18, 1912.

Dear Brother Smith: As we are using a number of the Two-Story Book in our work here in trying to reach the people, I wish to tell you of our appreciation of "The minister who was different," as a missionary among the people. The Mormon elders have canvassed the city pretty thoroughly with their literature, and we felt that the only way we could counteract their influence and get the truth before the people was to make a house to house canvass of the city with our literature and explain the difference.

A brother provided us with sufficient copies of the Marvelous Work to keep us busy. These we take out first and lend them for a couple of weeks, explaining that we are a different organization altogether from the Mormons. In two weeks we collect the books and wherever we find one willing to take more of our literature we give them some other book. We procured a few of the Two-Story Book and have loaned and reloaned them where the people were willing to accept, and we find they are appreciated. Many are willing to read our doctrine in story form who will not give their attention to it in its heavier forms. I wish the church would provide more books which treat our doctrine in plainness and simplicity, as it is worked out in the lives of people.

Your manner of treating this matter is, to my mind, very attractive. You seem to understand human nature so thoroughly, and your characters are such as we meet in the common walks of life, and their conduct such as actually is seen in hundreds of cases; and it appeals to the honest-hearted as about the right thing, while your ready wit makes it spicy.

I am perhaps not altogether a disinterested party in thus writing to you, for I have been wondering if you could possibly crowd into (or out of) your busy life another book that could be used in reaching the outside world with our doctrine.

It seems to me we have far too few of such. There seems to be a necessity of following up the interest when once it is started, and our supply of books seems quite limited, or else very high priced for free distribution.

Dan is in Spokane, Washington, preaching this week.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I am,

Your sister,

MAGGIE MACGREGOR.

We are all approaching that dread tribunal. However diversified our paths, they all converge toward that common center. The young, with their elastic tread, are striding to the judgment; the old, with their tottering limbs, are creeping to the judgment; the rich, in their splendid equipages, are driving to the judgment; the poor, in rags and barefooted, are walking to the judgment. The Christian, making God's statutes his song, is a pilgrim to the judgment; the sinner, treading upon the mercy of Jesus, and trampling upon his blood, is hastening to the judgment. "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ."—Richard Fuller.

News from Missions

Arkansas.

The great conflict between Joseph H. Blue, of the Church of Christ, and Brother J. T. Riley, came to a close on the 7th inst., at 4 p. m., with the very best of feeling. It almost reminded one of an old-time camp meeting, when they began to shake hands and say, "May God bless you." I think the majority of the people were feeling good, and I am satisfied that some of them have learned something, and also that they have a better opinion of our faith than they did before the debate.

The debate was held at Dierks, Arkansas, in the Christian church, where the Christians have quite a following. We have no members there, but I feel that if there can be some preaching there next summer when we can build an arbor, some good can be done.

There were two men heard to say that they had ten dollars each to give to put up a Latter Day Saint church in Dierks. One of them is a doctor, whose wife is a member of the Christian Church.

We made our stop with Mr. Charles Jackson while there. His wife is a member of the Christian Church. There were some differences between the moderators on some points of order, which they tried to run over us, but I informed them that Brother Riley was an Indian, and I was an Irishman, and that they could not force us to do anything. I am satisfied we converted them to that point before the close of the debate. The point of order raised was whether Brother Riley should be forced to answer questions put to him by Mr. Blue. Mr. Blue's moderator took the position that he should. I took the position that he should not. I further asserted that no rules of order would allow a man to make an assertion, make his argument on it, and then force his opponent to answer it; that in so doing he would take up his opponent's time in answering questions and allow him no time to produce affirmative argument. They called for a vote, and when they did that I arose and asked all Latter Day Saints and all fair-minded people not to vote. When the vote was taken every Campbellite (I presume) voted. The moderator informed us that unless those questions were answered the debate would come to a deadlock. I informed them that if they wanted to beg the question by locking the debate, they were at liberty to do so; that there would be no questions answered except as Brother Riley saw fit. They took us at our word and proceeded with the debate. Riley and this Smith came in for their part of abuse, as well as Old Joe. He did most everything that a man could think of to make Brother Riley angry or to throw him off, but when J. T. set a stake he stood by it and drove it so deep that Mr. Blue was not able to raise it. I have never before listened to a man who used more slang and abuse than did Mr. Blue. If he called Brother Riley a liar once, I am satisfied he did fifty times, and probably a hundred times, either directly or indirectly. But his abusive manner did not take, only with a few of his brethren. Finally he came out in his last speech and said, "I can't scare him; I can't bluff him; I can't do anything with him." That was one time he told the truth.

The church propositions were the questions under discussion. Braden was used extensively on the negative side of our proposition. When their propositions came up and those disciplines were brought out, then the fire flew. They were a great surprise to many of his own members. Of course they were bitterly denied, but he had to back up to and hitch on to Campbell and take him right along with him.

I will not attempt to give the argument, as it was that which is generally used on those propositions. Suffice it to say: Now the battle's over, and we wear the crown.

Anyone wishing to write me from Arkansas may address me at my home address, 121 South Fuller Street, Independence, Missouri..

W. R. SMITH.

GRANNIS, ARKANSAS, December 12, 1912.

Maine.

Nearly eight months have elapsed since I bade loved ones the parting good-bye and started for my eastern mission field, to labor among strange faces. To one going to a new field of labor there is a certain degree of anxiety as to the success attending, how you will like the people, and the people like you, etc. But really, all such anxiety fades away before the happy realization that wherever we find a true Latter Day Saint we find them a brother and sister indeed, enjoying the same sweet and happy anticipation. With the lapse of years I am more and more made to realize that wherever we may go on the Lord's errand, success will invariably follow those who put forth an honest and earnest effort, and with pleasure will the Savior's promise be realized, "The laborer is worthy of his hire." And I know of no place in all my eighteen years of missionary work where this promise is more in evidence than in the Western Maine District. They vie with each other in trying to make the missionary's stay among them pleasant. About the middle of May I left my pleasant home, just across the road from the Saints' Temple at Kirtland, the sight of which is an inspiration to devotion. Stopped a few days with the Saints at Buffalo and by invitation preached to them instead of their usual Wednesday night prayer meeting, the good Spirit attending.

In company with Brother Alma Booker, we visited the mighty waterfall of America. A sight I have all my life longed to see. As I stood and gazed upon the rushing and turbulent waters, seemingly each drop trying to beat the other in their mad rush to the great falls from the upper rapids, I thought of society, as she is rushing, tumbling, and bounding in the great whirlpool of frenzied fancy to the great falls of eternity, only to be hushed in the awful sentence of the judgment.

At Boston I joined Brother Greene, and on the same evening took the steamer Belfast for Rockland; from there to Stonington to attend the conference and get acquainted with those with whom I am to associate, the duration, of course, to be with the appointing powers. Had a pleasant conference, the writer preaching his initial sermon on Saturday night. One was baptized by Brother Henry Eaton.

Immediately after conference I began a series of sermons, and as the interest seemed to justify, continued for five weeks. Have never been any place where the Saints gave the preacher better support and encouragement by their presence. Nearly all attended, and some attended every night.

This is the place where Brother Daniel Macgregor worked up such a great revival two years ago; but as it was in the days of the Savior, "many turned back and followed him no more." Brother Daniel is greatly loved by the Saints. By vote of the branch I returned after a few weeks' absence, and preached several weeks more. The good sisters wishing to express a deeper appreciation for my service, gave a supper and gave the proceeds to the preacher,—about thirty dollars. The most he ever got in one lump.

From Stonington I went to Mountainville, held three weeks' meetings, at the end of which Brother Moody Eaton, branch president, baptized four. Here we celebrated the Fourth with singing and speaking, resulting in raising about thirty-five dollars which they used to beautify their chapel; one of which they may well be proud. The "new preacher" enjoyed himself with the brush, broom, and bucket, in doing his part.

From here I went to Vinal Haven. Joined Brother J. C. Farnfield in a series of meetings. Three were baptized and much prejudice was removed. There being such a strong demand for my return, I did so in October; preached for one month, baptizing a Mr. and Mrs. Beveridge; very excellent people who have received the spirit of the work and are doing all they can to tell the good news to their neighbors. Brethren Begg and Raymonds are standing nobly for the work there. We look for a branch to be organized there soon. Much of the success is due to the free and faithful service of Sister Gertrude Thompson, who presided at the organ and assisted in the singing.

On the 25th and 26th of August I attended the conference at Little Deer Isle. Had an excellent time. Brethren Topping and Keck, from Ohio, were spending their vacation along the coast and we were glad to see them. It's good to see a friend from your home when thousands of miles away. I baptized an aged brother at this conference. I followed with a three-week meeting, during which Brother John Billings baptized two good sisters. As the interest seemed to demand, I returned there a little later, held some meetings, and baptized two more who promise to be a help to the work.

Brother John Billings is in charge of the work here and has fought long and hard for the cause in these parts at a time when eternal grit was the price of a Saint. Now, in his old days, he happily recounts those bygone days of activity. We admire the young for what they are doing, and love the old for what they have done.

In the fore part of August I spent a week at Onset, Massachusetts, in saintly reunion. I have enjoyed many good reunions, but this eclipsed them all. Being free from other burdens usually upon me at other reunions, I was free to enter into the social and spiritual features of this gathering. I have heard much of the Massachusetts reunions and I found them up to their reputation. The prayer meetings were a continual feasting and the brethren enjoyed the best of liberty in dispensing the word. The writer preached three times. Not least among the pleasant things was our association with Brother John Garver, whose earnest and self-sacrificing spirit commends him to the Saints.

Brother Wallace Robinson and family had a cottage near by and we did justice to the good things they set before us. They seemed to be well paid for coming clear from Oklahoma.

As to who attended this gathering, we will let the jolly Doctor Sinclair tell it after his own peculiar ability. We found a congenial companion in the doctor. We also had a nice visit with him and family in Boston, after the reunion.

Five were baptized, many more nearly persuaded, numbers renewing their covenant, and all left rejoicing.

I believe reunions have come to stay, having passed the experimental stage. They are the most effective force for spiritual revival for both young and old, and from all parts of the land come reports of great good being done by them;—a foreshadowing of the Zion. Oh, how we long for the real!

On the 16th and 17th of November I attended the conference at Mountainville. On Sunday the house was filled with happy Saints. I believe the writer established a record at this conference. He preached the three sermons on Sunday. I baptized Brother Silvey Carter's wife and blessed their baby. I followed this conference with a two-week meeting. Good attendance and interest all through. The Saints here got it into their heads that the preacher was worthy of a little lump of material appreciation, hence gave a social, raised sixteen dollars, and gave it him, and with the six dollars on the previous conference Sunday, it makes home, sweet home, a thousand miles away, look nearer. While the material aid is not to be despised by the preacher, still the thought of thus showing their appreciation of my work among them is of greater joy than anything material. However, the one is simply the material evidence of the other. There are whisperings of other such incidents before I take my departure.

I had a very pleasant experience with a very learned gentleman, who was traveling in the interest of one of our leading educational institutions, on the boat a few weeks ago. From the discussion of the political situation, we drifted onto religion. I found him very broadminded, and of liberal views. I gave him our views as a church from a philosophical, governmental, and ethical standpoint. He seemed to be amazed with the beauty of it. As we were nearing the landing at Stonington he wanted to know if I were going to preach there Sunday. On being informed I would, he said he would attend, which he did, and seemed much interested. He invited me to his hotel the next day. I went and spent the afternoon. As I was going away the next day, and he wanted to know more about it, I invited him to spend the afternoon with Brother George Knowlton. He did, and Brother George, in his pleasant and earnest way, gave him the gospel from a doctrinal viewpoint, and he went away delighted. He is a very learned professor. While he may never take hold of the work, God only knows, yet he is in a position to do us great good, and he assured me he would take pleasure in doing so whenever he had opportunity. Thus little by little, here and there, we are sowing the good seed. Others may reap in years to come. It is wonderful how our minds are illumined to make plain the great mysteries of godliness when such occasions require. May God bless all such efforts to his glory.

I am here holding interesting meetings. Some excellent people ready for baptism. Calls from near-by places to come and preach. Will commence to-morrow night at one on them, two miles from here. Years ago there was a branch near here, and such noble men as Brethren Banta, Landers, T. W. Smith, Josiah Ellis, all gone to the other shore, are household words among the old Saints. They seem to be starving for the word. Why they have not been looked up before I am unable to say. Like in all other fields I have labored, I find there are plenty of chances to preach if we will only get after them. But to sit down and wait till some one sends for us, or the minister in charge directs us, will not prove us worthy to send out.

Another year has about rolled to its end, on the fleet wings of time. A time that almost impels one to take a recast and see what we have done to make the world a little better. Have we made the required sacrifice, or have we lived off the sacrifices of others? Wasted opportunities are about the only cause for regret, but let us regret unto repentance.

As the Christian world will soon be aglare with the blazing festivities of the birth of Him who came to bless the world, I know of no better way for us to show our appreciation for him than to make some sacrifice to help him perform that great task. I shall find exceedingly more pleasure preaching the gospel on that day in some lonely schoolhouse to eager listeners to the words of life, than to dine with the wealthy in palaces of gold. The most fitting way to celebrate that day is to do something to spread that gospel for which he died; and to this end may we dedicate our lives anew in the coming year.

F. J. EBELING.

SARGENTVILLE, MAINE, December 10, 1912.

Western Oklahoma.

Since last writing I have preached at Helena and Freedom. We had a good meeting at Helena; quite an interest manifested and some investigating. The nonprogressive Campbellites are strong there; we had some opposition from them while there, and since leaving we have learned through Brother Brewster they have procured the services of one of their men who has been lecturing against present day revelation. But it is hard to get intelligent people to believe an unchangeable God requires us to live and thrive by reading the "bill of fare," while our forefathers had the real food, without proof. We preached twelve sermons while at Freedom, holding forth in the same school district (41) where Brother A. M. Chase used to live; also Brother F. C. Keck had a good interest there in the spring.

We had the pleasure of leading seven precious souls through the waters of regeneration at the close of the meeting, and one more young lady gave her name for baptism, but her mother being of another persuasion, objected. We hope the Lord will soften the hearts of her parents ere long, that the young sister may have the desires of her heart granted.

There are twenty-five members at this place now, and at the confirmation meeting we had a very spiritual prayer meeting, also a short business session, in which we organized a Sunday school. Also the Saints arranged to have their weekly prayer meetings and voted unanimously to petition the authorities for the organization of a branch, which will be attended to before very long. We left the Saints rejoicing, and determined to press forward, and several others investigating and near the kingdom.

The writer came from Freedom to Calumet, where we had the pleasure of attending the Christmas entertainment under the auspices of Brethren Case and Christensen. There were about two hundred Lamanites present, and the brethren had a nice tree prepared and a treat for all, and many nice presents. The work is progressing among this people. Quite a number have obeyed the gospel and others said last night they expected to join, but wanted to wait till the water was warmer.

I am young in the missionary work and desire an interest in the prayers of God's people that the Lord will give me strength to continue in his work, and a greater degree of liberty and light than I have hitherto enjoyed.

In gospel bonds,

CALUMET, OKLAHOMA.

J. EVERETTE HUGHES.

Oklahoma.

Merry Christmas to all. This is a happy and eventful day—with us; not only because it is Christmas—celebrating the birth of our Lord, but we also celebrate the opening of our new home. I have been very busy for two months or more building a house for a home. With the exception of our humble log house on the farm in Dewey County, this is the first house in which we live which we can call our own. This labor has kept me from the mission field for a while, but with the house work about done now, I hope to be more free in the future to labor for the Master's cause. We needed a home, and there was no better avenue open than here. This may not be Zion's City, nor any part of its border stakes, but we believe the kind hand of Providence has blessed us in locating here, and we hope to see the Lord's work prosper by our coming.

There are a few faithful Saints here who are laboring to forward the latter day message. We have been cared for at the home of our kind and generous sister, Minnie Page, who was baptized last summer at the Ripley reunion.

This is the same sister (of my wife) who attended the General Conference at Independence in 1910. It was her desire to be baptized then, but sickness prevented. Her treatment and experience at the Sanitarium proved a blessing in more ways than one. Sister Minnie has not fully recovered from her affliction, and we kindly request the prayers of the Saints that God will restore her to perfect health.

I would be glad to hear from the Saints in Central Oklahoma District. I will soon be ready to answer calls for preaching.

Yours in the faith restored,

OKLAHOMA CITY, Route 9.

R. M. MALONEY.

Missouri.

By request of Brother Ammon White, I assisted in the evangelistic services at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, beginning Sunday, November 10, and continuing over the following Sunday. As I had promised to meet with the Saint Louis Branch Sunday, November 17, I left Independence on Saturday afternoon. I felt keenly the responsibility of the week; work to be done at Independence, and as it was the first effort (if I remember correctly), put forth by the brethren of the evangelical order in holding a revival service there. I was much pleased with the reception given and the interest manifest; the order of the meetings was, prayer meeting from 2.30 p. m. to 4 p. m.; song service 7 to 7.30 p. m.; preaching 7.45 p. m. Had two sessions for boys and girls from 4.15 to 5 p. m. Brother Ammon, in the first session, gave a good talk from a chart that was entertaining and instructive, and the young folks enjoyed the session. The second session I talked to them.

The order of the meetings was arranged by Brother White and met with my approval. We were very pleased to have the assistance of our esteemed and aged brother and collaborer, Henry Kemp; in the first prayer and testimony meeting, Sunday at 2 p. m., this aged brother spoke very encouragingly of the undertaking of his brethren in charge of the services, and he said it would be a blessing. To me it was, and I believe to others. I appreciate the good, comfortable quarters I had with Brother and Sister Ammon White, and the short but pleasant visits with several of the brothers and sisters.

I left the city of Saints for Saint Louis cheered and strengthened and with a heart of gratitude to Him who made it possible for one so weak as myself to be numbered with his servants and Saints in the marvelous work and a wonder, and to receive his recognition and approval. May we continue to be worthy of the same. I am safe in saying that there are a large number of Saints in Independence that are striving to be Saints indeed.

I met with the Saint Louis Branch; preached Sunday morning and evening, the 17th; also preached for five nights the same week; had good liberty and interest. This branch is fortunate in having a large number of faithful and intelligent workers, with Brother Russell Archibald as their president, who has the confidence and support of the members and ministry, which he justly deserves. Brother J. W. Rush-ton was on hand Sunday, the 24th; preached morning and evening and continued over the following Sunday, and Monday, December 2, gave a profitable talk to men only. His efforts during the meetings were highly spoken of. The Ladies' Mite Society did a good work during the two weeks meetings by serving a lunch, which was very much appreciated by those that worked in the city until 6 p. m. and lived out too far to go home and return in time for services. This was a wise provision and attributed much to the success of the meetings. Many thanks for the valuable assistance. There are also some excellent singers in the branch, whose faithful attendance at all the services did much to assist, by the soul-reviving songs of the choir, of which Brother Edward Bell is chorister, and Sister Waldron organist.

While laboring in Saint Louis we made our home with Brother and Sister Thomas McKevit, 1240 Graham Street, which is in the Cheltenham Branch, five miles from the Saint Louis church. Elder Henry Roberts is in charge of that branch. He is a safe leader, but has one fault, more confidence in others than in himself, which sometimes is a mistake. Brother McKevit is priest; they have a membership of about fifty and have a neat little house of their own to worship in. The young, active ministers of the city, found in the Oak Hill and Saint Louis branches, also in Landsdowne Branch, will find a welcome by the Cheltenham Saints, if they will give them a helping hand. Call Brother Roberts by phone, and make your appointment so that due notice can be given.

The twenty-third of November being my sixty-fifth birthday, the knowledge of the same was spread among the Saints of Cheltenham Branch, and to my surprise there came several, in ones and twos, to spend the evening at the home of Brother and Sister McKevit. I was pleased to see them call; did not occur to me that a surprise was in store, and that I was the cause of the gathering, until there came quite a number in one body with well-filled baskets; truly, it was a complete surprise, as doubtless many present noticed, for usually when we expect to entertain company, especially in large numbers, we put on our best; but here I had no collar on, shirt was not newly laundered, shoes needed polishing, and my hair had finger marks in it. It was Saturday evening, and I was just contemplating taking a bath when they started to come.

Prior to partaking of the good things spread on the large table, where twelve could be comfortably seated at one time (and there were three sittings, thirty-six in all), Sister McKevit, in behalf of the Sisters' Aid Society, in a few chosen words, presented me with five dollars, which was acknowledged by me in feeble words, but with grateful heart. There are circumstances and scenes in life that seem like a dream, and this was one; but this surprise was the real thing, being away from home, where loved ones during the day would often speak about it being pa's birthday, and some reminded me of such by cards; so I appreciated this the more. I was very grateful that I was among friends. We had a time long to be remembered.

I would have liked to have remained during the meetings held by Brother Rushton, but duty called me to Nebo, Illinois, where I spoke eight times in the Saints' church, which is located six miles south of Nebo, in the country; the road is rough and hilly; they farm three sides of the land, which is very productive. I was surprised to see the good rich corn on the side hills and on top of the same. Thanksgiving Day brought about one hundred Saints and friends together at the church; I spoke at 11 a. m., after which the contents of well-filled baskets and boxes were spread on a long table, where all, with thankful hearts, partook of the rich, well-prepared dinner. The afternoon was enjoyed in listening to short talks from some of the brethren and friends; three Baptist ministers took part. Having been together all day, it was thought advisable not to have preaching that night, as all had to go home and do their chores.

Brother W. A. Guthrie is the presiding elder of Nebo, and he is always ready to defend the work and is competent. He is spoken of very highly by the business men of Nebo and has the respect and confidence of his brethren; he is willingly supported by the priest, teacher, and deacon, whose names I can not just call to mind; the majority of the Saints are strong in the faith, and I believe will renew their diligence in the work. I found them a kind, affectionate band of Saints, and they did not forget that the patriarch had to have means to travel, as well as the stenographer, which is so often overlooked in different branches.

From Nebo we went to Saint Charles, which is comparatively a new branch of fifty members. Brother D. L. Lehman, elder in charge, assisted by Brethren Law and DeCoster, priests; Brother Sampson, teacher; and Brother Martin, deacon. Brother Eastman, elder, has rendered valuable service; I preached four times and gave several blessings here, as well as in Nebo. On my way to Saint Charles I called at Alton and preached twice. There is, in my opinion, good prospect for the work at all of these places. Brethren Sawley and Dowker, missionaries, have done some really good work in the Saint Louis District, and are well spoken of by the Saints, which is always good news to me.

The Saint Louis conference convened at the Stone Church Saturday, 14th, at 6 p. m. A large delegation was present, and the business was done without a jar, including the election of district officers for the coming year. Brother R. Archibald was elected president; Brethren Elliot and Baracough, high priests, vice presidents; C. Remington, secretary; Brother Reeves, district treasurer; S. A. Burgess, historian; Brother Russell Archibald, bishop's agent. Sunday, preaching at 11 a. m., by writer. There were four ladies baptized by Brother Elliot, one of whom I know was convinced during the meetings. At 2.30 was prayer and testimony meeting, and the confirmation of those baptized; at 7.45 preaching by Brother Dowker. This was one of the largest conferences in the history of the Saint Louis District. It was certainly gratifying to hear the reports of the local brethren from various parts of the district; so many new openings and all report much interest. May the unity, love, and push continue. The prospect for the work is very encouraging; may wisdom and understanding and discernment continue.

I intend after the holidays to visit some of the branches in Independence Stake; would like to hear from those in charge if they think it advisable for me to do some labor. Wishing all the compliments of the season, I remain,

Your brother,

WM. LEWIS.

CAMERON, MISSOURI, Seventh and Harris, December 21.

London, England.

At this week end I thought I would write a few lines, and let your readers know what we are doing here in this mission. We have nothing great to report, therefore none to boast of. Like all other missions, we find that the opposer is just as busy here as elsewhere, yet there may be some things here to meet that are peculiar to itself, that are not found in other missions.

Perhaps for the last year or more the people in this country have been aroused by the cry of the White Slave Traffic, and an effort was made to apply this evil to the emigration of young girls to Utah by the Mormons. How much truth there is in a great many statements made for and against I am not able to say; but if true, the Utah Mormons have not been dealt with any too severely; but if untrue, then comes the statement of the Savior to our minds, "With what judgment ye judge ye shall be judged." They have been untrue, and falsified the revelations given to the church, and the teachings of that servant whom God hath chosen, and lied to establish polygamy, and now they are receiving their compensation, and the end is not yet.

We are sorry to say that the Reorganization has not escaped a part of the odium that has come to the latter day work by reason of the evils of the Utah people. How to offset this odium and show our church up in its true light, was, and is yet, a question of importance to us. It could not be done by sitting with the idle and letting the cyclone take the just and the unjust. True, we are small and without influence, but something had to be done. The majority of the leading minds in the mission set to work for a defense, and taking advantage of every opportunity that would open in our favor, some started park and street preaching amidst the storm of unfair opposition. The elders were on the alert everywhere, and our cause was ably defended in the majority of places, such as Wigan, Leeds, Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Gloucester, London, and other places, it all had its effect. I believe that Wigan, Leeds, and London are the places where the greatest outward opposition was manifested. I only know personally of London. We had the hardest things to contend with that I had ever met. I never anticipated I would ever have to meet such bold, unfair, slanderous opposition; it comes from people claiming to be Christians, organized into a band calling themselves "The Christian Evidence Society of London." This society is composed of members out of all the different Protestant churches in the city. Their chief work is to defend Protestantism on the streets and in the public parks, against Roman Catholicism, infidelity, atheism, anarchism, and Mormonism. This society in a sense represents all the Protestants in the United Kingdom, and of course they are powerful, and their influence is a mighty force. They thought they would do with us just as they pleased, in interrupting, and saying all manner of things they could think of, and calling all kinds of names, and it seems to me they have by heart every evil thing that was ever said against Joseph Smith and the church, from its incipency. They did everything they could but pull us off the stand, but in spite of all they did we held our own fearlessly, to their astonishment, but in all this tumult we made friends. Many questions were asked by people in good faith, and our cause is better understood by thousands than it was before we started public park preaching over one year ago. We expect to continue on the same line during the winter when opportunity and weather permit.

The "Christian Evidence Society of London" and the "Anti-Mormon League" have united their efforts against us, and although their outward appearance is against the Utah Mormons, the real foundation of their purpose is to uproot every phase of Latter Day Saintism; their motto in spirit is, Out with the Joe Smith religion, root and branch; but they find we are harder to meet than the Utah Church; therefore they take a special interest in us. We have been told in public, by our park opponents, of information they get from the Utah Mormons against us, that is false, but they use it, and we have no way to defend ourselves, except to raise our voice in public.

The Utah Mormons are very quiet. I have never seen them once preaching in the streets or parks since I came here. They work in different ways than we do. They make more converts, but what are the majority of them, but people that would rather have polygamy in their lives than not? We have met some of them, and they put up a defense in its favor; it is only reasonable that they should, as it is taught in the law of their church, therefore they are converted to the doctrine of polygamy, as well as to other principles of the Utah Mormon Church.

Our church work has not lost anything by the "Anti-Mormon" movement, where our elders were able to show the difference between us and the Utah people, and a great many of the common people are with us, but the would-be leaders (ministers) are as a rule against us. Although handicapped in many ways, we expect to fight on and on, amidst the busy turmoils of the every busy London, and the densely populated cities of the British Isles.

We are very much encouraged in the success of our late London district conference, and gathering, and the Spirit manifested, and also at the increased gathering at our London Hall. We have Bible reading and study on Wednesday nights, prayer meeting on Thursday nights, besides the Sunday services. From outside indications we have reason to believe that the clouds are scattering. RODERICK MAY.

DECEMBER 17, 1912.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—District conference convened with the West Plains Branch in the Valley View Methodist Episcopal church, near Chapin, Missouri, on Saturday, November 23, 1912, at 10 a. m., with District President G. F. Cunningham in the chair; J. T. Davis, submissionary, associate chairman; G. A. Davis, chorister, and Benjamin Pearson, secretary. Five branches reported: Thayer 36, gain 1; Grove Springs 48, gain 1; Beaver 89, gain 4; Springfield 201; Woodside 48. Branches not reporting: West Plains, Logan Creek, Piedmont, Ava, Naylor, and Macomb. Ministry reporting: Elders: J. T. Davis, G. F. Cunningham, G. A. Davis, A. G. Fletcher, G. Edwards, J. W. Quinly, G. W. Anderson, Benjamin Pearson, W. H. Kelley, T. J. Simpson, A. M. D. McGuire, and G. W. Bootman. A petition from Saints near Niangua was read and on motion referred to the submissionary and district president. A petition from the Thayer Branch to restore license to Riley F. Cunningham was referred to submissionary and W. H. Kelley. Place of next conference will be Springfield, sometime in March, date to be set later by submissionary and district president. At our priesthood meetings the all-prevailing subject was the law of tithing. It was discussed in all its phases and much light gained thereon. The social service was a spiritual feast. Preaching during conference by W. H. Kelley and James T. Davis. A vote of thanks was tendered to the Saints and friends for their hospitality to visiting Saints. Also a vote of thanks for the use of building, and the choir service. This deserves especial mention, as it (the church building) was offered to us without a request, a kindness and consideration seldom shown. It reflects credit on the daily lives of the Saints near Chapin; also that the people there are not all prejudiced. Adjourned to meet as per previous motion. Benjamin Pearson, secretary.

MINNESOTA.—Conference convened with the Bemidji Branch November 16 and 17, L. A. Gould and L. Houghton in charge; B. S. Lambkin secretary pro tem. Four branches reported: Audubon, Minneapolis, Bemidji, Union. Ministers reporting: P. W. Martin, G. G. Buell, L. A. Gould, D. A. Whiting, Charles Lundeen, Thomas Spargo, Fred Green, B. S. Lambkin, Ward L. Christy, Henry C. Smith, L. Whiting, L. Houghton. The following delegates to General Conference were chosen, and those attending conference were authorized to cast a majority and minority vote in case of division: L. A. Gould, Brother and Sister B. S. Lambkin, L. Houghton, Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy, Birch Whiting, Alonzo Whiting, George Day, Charles Lundeen, M. O. Erickson, S. E. Sloan, Brother and Sister Lester Whiting, P. W. Martin, Matthew Jopson, D. A. Whiting, Lucy Williams, Hallie M. Gould, F. E. Anderson. Moved and carried that the next district conference be held at Clitherall the last Saturday and Sunday in May, 1913. Hallie M. Gould.

SPOKANE.—District conference convened in Spokane chapel December 14, 1912. O. Case, T. C. Kelley, and William Johnson were chosen to preside. Ministerial reports were read from O. Case, T. C. Kelley, Frank Holmes, G. W. Wilcox, U. L. Gunter, D. H. Crane, George Johnson, Fred Williams, J. E. Turnbow, W. W. Fordham, W. F. Yates, P. W. Wright. The following statistical reports were read: Spokane 309, Sagle 51, Roslyn 37, Columbia River 27, Ellensburg 15; total 439. The tent committee was continued and the district president and vice president were added and given power to collect funds and buy a district tent. The bishop's agent reported receipts, $861.07; expenditures, $794.50; leaving balance of $66.57. The district treasurer showed receipts, $35.74; paid out $41.50; balance due treasury $5.76. The auditing committee reported accounts correct. The following members were elected delegates to General Conference of 1913: T. C. Kelley, T. J. Martin, Emma Bell, S. N. Coleman, N. Coleman, Ada Kellum, J. E. Turnbow, W. W. Fordham, George Johnston, Angelina Clark, Lou Gilmore, D. Macgregor, L. C. Duncan, William Johnson. On motion the Columbia River Branch was disorganized, and the names transferred to the Spokane Branch record. The sacrament meeting was well attended; a marked degree of the Spirit present, giving encouragement to the Saints in prophecy. C. L. Potter was ordained to the office of elder. The preaching was excellent. T. C. Kelley and D. Macgregor occupied. Adjourned to meet in Spokane June, 1913. W. W. Fordham, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

SPOKANE.—Spokane district Sunday school association convened in Saints' church Friday, December 3, at 2.30 p. m. Elder Daniel Macgregor was with us, and gave interesting and instructive talks on the lines of Sunday school work. The evening session was talks on the different duties of the officers of Sunday schools, and the principal speakers were Elder Macgregor, Elder Case, and Carl Potter. The officers elected are: Superintendent W. W. Fordham, assistant superintendent, Vernon L. Gunter; secretary, Mary M. Buchanan; treasurer, Pearl Gilmore; librarian, Oscar Case, superintendent of home department, Emma Bell. Delegates chosen to General Convention as follows: Emma Bell, Oliver Turnbull, George Johnston, James Winegar, T. C. Kelley, H. Jenkins, John Turnbow, William Johnson, Dana H. Crum, Oscar Case, W. W. Fordham, Alice Nice, Laura Duncan, Clara Clark, Maud Gilmore, H. P. Hansen, A. G. Crum, Sister George, Fred Williams, John Graves. Mary M. Buchanan, district secretary.

Conference Notices.

The thirty-fifth assembly of the Central Illinois District will convene at Taylorville, Illinois, on the first Saturday and Sunday in February. Walter Daykin, district secretary.

Idaho district conference will meet at Heyburn, Idaho, Saturday, January 18, 1913. Annual election of district officers will take place and delegates to General Conference will be elected. Branch clerks and all those holding the priesthood please be prompt in sending in reports. Mrs. T. R. Jackson, district clerk, general delivery, Boise, Idaho.

Eastern Oklahoma district conference will convene at Wilburton, Oklahoma, January 18 and 19, 1913. We would like a report from each branch. Branch presidents report to J. W. A. Bailey, Warrensburg, Missouri, and branch clerks report to district clerk. Mrs. Nettie Bowers, Box 204, Wilburton, Oklahoma.

Conference of the Nauvoo District will convene at Burlington, Iowa, February 1, at 10 a. m. Let all of the local priesthood either bring report of labors done during the year, or mail them to W. H. Thomas. Let as many of the Saints attend as can do so. This is the conference that elects delegates to General Conference. W. H. Thomas, district secretary; C. E. Harpe, district president.

Massachusetts district conference will convene with the Fall River Branch, February 1, 2, 1913, at 2.30 p. m. All the elders (not general church missionaries) and presidents of branches, and quorums of priests, teachers, and deacons, are supposed to report their labors; also the Sunday school and Religio district associations. The clerks of the different branches should have their reports in the secretary's hands at least ten days before conference. The special business will be the election of officers, and delegates to General Conference. Address all communications to the district clerk, W. A. Sinclair, M. D., 166 Pearl Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts.

Seattle and British Columbia district conference will convene with the Seattle Branch the second Saturday in February, 1913. Sunday school and Religio conventions will convene on Friday of same week, at 10 a. m., and 2.30 p. m., respectively. Branch clerks will receive blanks upon which to make their reports in ample time, for six months ending January 31. It is hoped that all the ministry located and laboring within the district will mail reports direct to the undersigned not later than February 1. Also, all that possibly can will be in attendance. Fred'k W. Holman, district secretary, 4233 Bagley Avenue, Seattle, Washington.

Northern Wisconsin district conference will convene at Porcupine, Wisconsin, with the Frankfort Branch, February 15 and 16, 1913. Please send your branch and official reports in early. Address A. L. Whiteaker, Arkansasaw, Wisconsin, care S. Livingston. There will be teams to meet you at Durand on Friday, the 14th. All come. A. L. Whiteaker, district president; Leroy Colbert, clerk.

Convention Notices.

District Sunday school convention of the Central Illinois District will be held at Taylorville, Illinois, on Saturday, February 1, 1913. Walter Daykin, district secretary.

Idaho district Sunday school association will convene at Heyburn, Idaho, January 17, 1913. Mrs. Wilma Jarrett, district clerk, general delivery, Boise, Idaho.

The Northeastern Illinois Religio convention convenes Friday, p. m., January 10, 1913, at Plano, Illinois. The election of officers will be one of the main features of the meeting. Blanche Fairbanks, district secretary, 1528 South Turner Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Des Moines district Sunday school and Religio associations will meet in convention at Runnells, Iowa, Friday, 8.30 a. m., January 31, 1913. Pearl Shannon, secretary, Sarah Rodgers, secretary.

Northern Wisconsin Sunday School Association will follow the conference at Porcupine, Wisconsin, on February 15 and 16. We want a report of all schools in the district; send them in early. Address Leroy Colbert, district superintendent, care S. Livingston, Arkansasaw, Wisconsin.

The Presidency.

NOTICES OF TRANSFER.

Notice is hereby given of the transfer of Lloyd C. Moore from the Southeastern Mission to Southeastern Illinois and the transfer of Isaac M. Smith from Southeastern Illinois to the Southeastern Mission. This transfer is made by consent of the First Presidency and missionaries in charge of the respective fields.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, Secretary First Presidency.

J. F. CURTIS, Missionary in Charge.

R. C. RUSSELL, Missionary in Charge.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 15, 1912.

By proper consultation and agreement between the ministers in charge concerned and the Presidency, Priest J. W. Dubose has been transferred from Alabama to Northeastern Missouri District. The Saints concerned will please take notice.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, Secretary First Presidency.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 28, 1912.

Those concerned will please take note of the following transfers, which have been made by concurrence of the First Presidency and missionaries in charge of the respective fields:

John Davis, from Idaho District to Far West District, effective January 1, 1913.

R. E. Bozarth, from Colorado District to Clinton District, effective after January 1, 1913.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, Secretary First Presidency.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 31, 1912.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT.

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Elder Emsley Curtis to labor in Southern Missouri and Oklahoma for the balance of the conference year.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, Secretary First Presidency.

J. F. CURTIS, Missionary in Charge.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 31, 1912.

Notice.

To the Members of the High Priests' Quorum; Greeting: The time to mail to each of you a blank for your annual report to the quorum for the year ending February 28, 1913, is near at hand; and I herewith request that if you have changed your address since the publication of our 1912 Annual, you shall immediately on reading this drop me a card with your present post office address, and to those who are absent from home on a mission, or other business, that you will please instruct your homekeeper to forward the blank to you; and still further, should any fail to receive their

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 The Death of John R. Haldeman - - - 25
 Editorial Comment on Various Topics - - - 25
 Notes and Comments - - - 27

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Latter Day Saintism as Seen from a Latter Day
 Saint Viewpoint, by F. M. Cooper - - - 28
 Faith, by James E. Yates - - - 30
 Regeneration, by J. E. Vanderwood - - - 31

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 "Jewish Vote"; "Mormon Vote" - - - 33
 The Seamen - - - 38

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - 34
 Joseph Mather.—Requests for Prayer. - - -

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - 36
 W. S. Powers—Mrs. Lily B. Stearns—A. M.
 Boomer—A. M. Chase—L. Hemenway—W. H.
 Powell—Mrs. George Green—Charles Fry—Sallie Booker—H. B. Root—Maggie MacGregor.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - 39
 W. R. Smith—F. J. Ebeling—J. Everette Hughes
 —R. M. Maloney—William Lewis—Roderick May.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - 43

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald," All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

blank on or before March 1, 1913, write me at once and I will mail you another. Please to make out your report and mail it so that it will be sure to reach me not later than March 10. Am hoping to receive a report from every member this spring, and on time, so that I will be able to file my report to the General Conference at the session following our first meeting. Brethren, please be prompt, and thus assist your humble servant, ROB'T M. ELVIN, Secretary.
 LAMONI, IOWA, January 2, 1913.

George and Curtis R., and one daughter, Mrs. Edith Lewis, survive him. He was ordained a priest February 26, 1899, by I. N. Roberts and J. W. Davis, and was faithful in his calling till his strength failed him. With his companion he moved to Independence, March 1, 1911, being held in high esteem by all. Funeral at the Saints' church December 17, Brethren Garrett, George Jenkins, and G. E. Harrington conducting the service. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Addresses.

- R. M. Maloney, Route 9, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.
- F. Simmonds, secretary of Western Wales District, 6 Morgans Terrace, Pontrhydyfen, Nr. Port Talbot, Glamorgan-shire, South Wales, Great Britain.
- Elder Frank Gray, 48 Euclid Avenue, Toronto, Canada.

Deacons of Pittsburg District.

To the Deacons of the Pittsburg District;
 Dear Brethren: That you may the more efficiently perform the duties of your office, you will please attend the district conference to be held in Wheeling, West Virginia, February 22 and 23, 1913, where we contemplate organizing a deacons' quorum. If you can not possibly attend, please forward to my home address, 135 Selkirk Street, Chatham, Ontario, at your earliest convenience, your full name and address.
 Respectfully,
 R. C. RUSSELL, Minister in general charge of Mission 4.

Notice to Sixteenth Quorum of Deacons.

We desire your presence at Saint Joseph, Missouri, First Branch, Sunday afternoon, January 19, 1913, during Sunday school convention, as we would like to meet with a full quorum if possible.
 CHAS. A. MORTON, President.

Correction.

Sister Blanche I. Andrews, of 3233 S Street, Lincoln, Nebraska, asks us to call attention of HERALD readers to the fact that this is the correct address, not "3233 South Street, Lincoln, Nebraska," as published in the Convention Notices column two weeks since.

Died.

WEILER.—At Independence, Missouri, December 15, 1912, Brother Christian Weiler. He was born January 6, 1836, at Kentringen, Baden, Germany, and was baptized at Elmira, Kansas, May 22, 1884, by A. H. Parsons; married to Miss Amanda Reed, at Courtlandt, New York, who died there March 2, 1874. Five children were born to them, one son dying at five years, and one daughter August 5, 1905, at Vineland, Kansas. February 25, 1876, he was married to Miss Fallie Rounseville, at Courtlandt, who with two sons, ORR.—Sister Margaret Young, was born in Scotland, October 11, 1832. She was married to John H. Orr July 19, 1852, at Dalkieth, Scotland, by Elder Brewington. They came to America in 1856 and later to Utah. Becoming disgusted with conditions there they came to Ottumwa, Iowa, in 1880, where they united with the Reorganized Church. She was baptized and confirmed by William Waterman, August 13, 1893, and has been a faithful Saint but a great sufferer. Her husband died in 1906. There survive her three daughters, two sons, and a foster son, twenty-five grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, two brothers, and three sisters. She died December 14, at 10 p. m., 1912. Funeral was from the Saints' chapel in Ottumwa. Edward Giles assisting; James McKiernan preached the sermon, December 18, at 10 a. m. Burial in Kirkville cemetery.

WHEELER.—Thomas F. Wheeler, born at Memphis, Tennessee, November 27, 1847; died at Independence, Missouri, December 14, 1912. He was married May 4, 1876, to Nancy A. Hill, by whom there were born to him James T. Wheeler, born September 4, 1877, died July 4, 1878; William B. Wheeler, born January 20, 1879, died April 2, 1896; and John Robert Wheeler, born November 7, 1880, died March 31, 1886. He was baptized October 24, 1886, by James G. Scott, ordained a priest, September 11, 1887. Surviving him are his wife, three brothers, and two sisters. He lived a true, devoted life to the cause of Christ. He was loved by all who knew him. Was prepared to rest in the paradise of God. Funeral preached at the Stone Church by George Jenkins.

DETRAY.—At Independence, Missouri, December 25, 1912, Brother Albert C. DeTray. He had been ill for some weeks, but his demise was hastened by a fall. He was born at Texas, Ohio, November 7, 1845. Married Miss Adeline Gould, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, September 28, 1876; five children were born to them, one dying at an early age, the wife and mother also departing this life in Independence, March 3, 1912. Children are George E., Mrs. E. S. Losey, Ray, and Frank DeTray, all living in Independence and vicinity. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Charlotte DeTray, of Grand Rapids, ninety years old, and by a brother, Willard, also of Grand Rapids. He was a deacon, was faithful to the end, and has entered into a well-earned rest. Funeral December 27, Brother W. H. Garrett conducting the service. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

GILBERT.—Surrounded by loving friends and loved flowers, there was laid to rest this afternoon in Olivewood Cemetery the body of Mrs. Hannah Brown Gilbert. Mrs. Gilbert was born eighty-two years ago in New Jersey. A few years later her family moved to Henderson Grove, near Galesburg, Illinois, where she lived until her marriage in 1848 to Isaac V. Gilbert. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert lived on their farm adjacent to Galesburg for the following thirty-three years. Here were born to them six children, three of whom passed away in childhood years. In 1889 the Gilberts came to Riverside. They were one of the several Galesburg families who settled in Riverside in those early years. Mr. Gilbert purchased a home on Jurupa Avenue, where they lived until his death, eight years ago. He will be remembered by the older River-siders as one always very active in civic and religious affairs. He was the first president of the First National Bank, and elder, Sunday school superintendent, and so forth of the Arlington Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Gilbert's part in all this was that most important one of the ideal wife and mother. Their unchanging happiness together was ever the source of pleasant comment among their friends. Her whole life and her whole strength were given in devotion to and service of her family. Mrs. Gilbert lived in her Riverside home until the death, six years ago, of her daughter, Mrs. Sadie E. Perrine. She has made her home since with her daughters, Mrs. Mary I. Chandler of Redlands and Mrs. Mattie G. Haight of Dinuba. Besides these two daughters she is survived by a brother, Jacob Brown of Galesburg, two grandchildren, C. O. Perrine of Riverside, Mrs. Martha D. Hammond of Los Angeles, and three great-grandchildren.

MILLER.—Albert E. Miller, son of Luther E. and Louverna S. Miller, was born October 14, 1898, at Mount Sterling, Illinois; baptized October 13, 1906, at Lamoni, Iowa, by Elder H. A. Stebbins; died December 14, 1912, at Mount Sterling, Illinois. Funeral services from the home Sunday, December 22, in care of George P. Lambert, of Ferris, Illinois.

Novels are sweets. All people with healthy literary appetites love them—almost all women; a vast number of clear, hard-headed men, judges, bishops, chancellors, mathematicians, notorious novel readers, as well as young boys and sweet girls, and their kind, tender mothers.—William Makepeace Thackeray.

"I hear it called

'The machine with the human brain.'

I call it

'The Machine with the Super-human Brain.'

Thus spoke the auditor. He was speaking of the

Remington

Adding and Subtracting

Typewriter

(Wahl Adding Mechanism)

This machine does something that only the brain, directing the hand, has hitherto been able to do—that is, write and add (or subtract) on the same page.

But this is not all. It does such work more easily, more rapidly, and more accurately than the human brain has ever performed similar labor.

Thus the machine is human in what it does and super-human in the way it does it.

Illustrated booklet sent on request

Remington Typewriter Company

(Incorporated)

208 Fifth Street, DES MOINES, IOWA

THE MORMON GIRL. Just off the press and now being bound. Will be ready for mailing in a few weeks. A splendid story—nothing better for a holiday present. Order No. 247½. Cloth, $1.25.

THE HOLMAN HOME BIBLE.

Printed from large, clear Pica Type with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for every-day use in the home, containing all the advantages of a family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with record for births, marriages and deaths. The exact size of the Bible when closed is 6 1-8x9 inches. The chapter headings are printed on the upper outside corner of each page which makes this Bible practically self-indexed.

No. 2014. Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, gold titles, silk head bands, and purple silk marker. Our special price.....$2.25

Postage 24 cents.

Send all orders to
HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Lamoni, Iowa

Herald Publishing House

$100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

These Bonds will be ready to issue on the 1st of April, 1912.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further
Particulars

Royal Baking Powder Absolutely Pure

The Woman Makes the Home

She makes it best who, looking after the culinary department, turns her back resolutely upon unhealthful, or even suspicious, food accessories. She is economical; she knows that true economy does not consist in the use of inferior meat, flour, or baking powder. She is an earnest advocate of home made, home baked food, and has proved the truth of the statements of the experts that the best cooking in the world today is done with Royal Baking Powder.

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,
Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni,
Iowa.

Wanted.—All-around shoe man to mend shoes. Plenty of work, room, and everything furnished. Write quick to Clarence E. Tremain, Newbloomfield, Missouri. 2-1t

Owner will sacrifice for cash deal at one thousand dollars down, most desirable and superior suburban home of five acres one mile from Independence, Missouri, on state highway. Address Owner, Route 2 Box 42, Independence Mo. 2-4t

OUR NEW CATALOGUE will be ready to mail in a few days. Write for one so as to have it handy at all times. It is free.

German Edition of the Book of Mormon (Das Buch Mormon.) Order No. 88a. Cloth, $1.00.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS & C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the

Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co., 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

OUR CHRISTMAS BOOK No. 1. This is a new book just off the press—contains dialogues, songs, recitations, etc. Written especially for our people.

Order No. 188a. Paper, 25c.

Order all your books through the Herald Publishing House. It is just as easy for you to do so and it helps us materially.

California in the Winter Time

Why not? It's the Land of Out-o'-doors! It's the best place on earth to go to escape the winter; a grand place for the weary to rest and for the weak to be refreshed!

If your neighbor has been there, ask him. He knows. And it doesn't cost a great deal to spend a month there, either. Ask him about that, also. And it doesn't cost much nowadays to get there. Ask me. Burlington Personally Conducted Tours have greatly increased the pleasure of going and at the same time decreased the cost to the minimum.

Wouldn't you like to be away from business, away from household responsibilities, away from care and worry? Wouldn't you enjoy health! rest! change! rejuvenation? Come in and get your copy of our California folder, and then after you decide just what point you want to visit, I'll gladly help you plan all the details of the trip so that you can get every possible benefit out of it.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 15, 1913

NUMBER 3

Editorial

FALSE RUMORS CORRECTED.

Elsewhere in the HERALD columns will be found a letter from Bishop Roderick May, who is in charge of the work in England representing the Reorganized Church. From this letter it appears that one of the elders of the Utah Church in the presence of Rudger Clawson, who is one of the twelve apostles of the Utah Mormon Church, stated that Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized Church, had met Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the Utah Mormon Church, in his office, presumably the president's office in Salt Lake City, for the purpose of discussing the propriety or probability of amalgamating the two bodies.

In reference to this statement, thus publicly made at Birmingham, England, I wish it distinctly understood that at no time, neither in Pres. Joseph Fielding Smith's office in Salt Lake City, nor anywhere else did I, Joseph Smith, President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, have any meeting or conversation with Joseph Fielding Smith in reference to uniting the two bodies; or upon any other topic of common interest or possible common interest, existing between the two bodies. The fact is that Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has not met Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the Utah (Mormon) Church, at any time or place for consultation upon matters concerning the interests of the two bodies, nor upon any other topic.

The elder who made this statement or who is reported to have made it, made it without warrant, and it may be classified as one more in the great pyramid of lies behind which that array of wickedness has taken refuge for so, these many years.

For this statement in regard to the so-called prophecy said to have been made by Joseph Smith the Martyr in public there is no accredited authority that we have ever known. The nearest that has ever been discovered by us (and we have conversed with a great many who lived in the Prophet's day) is that upon a certain parade day, at what was then called Zarahemla, near the town of Montrose, Iowa, opposite Nauvoo, some of the brethren were meeting at lunch time in the shade of a schoolhouse and discussing pending events, Joseph Smith was reported to have stated that if the church did not change in its methods and quit its wickedness they would be driven from the State of Illinois into the wilderness, "where," he said, "they would grow up and become a great people."

These prophecy mongers, when they make this statement, forget to put in the real essence of the prophecy, which is the behavior of the people. We have no authentic evidence to point to that such a statement was ever made or intended to be made as a prophecy; and if it were, it goes to the credit of the Prophet, and not to the credit of the people of whom it was said.

JOSEPH SMITH,

President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

AUTHOR OF UNSIGNED EDITORIALS.

A brother has lately called our attention to a letter published in the HERALD in which the writer discusses a reference to the political situation of the United States, as incidentally referred to in an unsigned editorial in the HERALD just prior to the election, November 5. The writer of this letter states that the author's name not being attached to the article, he does not know who is responsible for it.

In order that others may not make a similar mistake, it would be well to notice that as a rule the editors writing for the paper which they represent do not sign their names, and this is true in regard to the HERALD. Unless for personal reasons of different character it is necessary to make the article official or personal, the editor-in-chief does not sign his name, and articles appearing in the editorial column of the HERALD may be taken for granted as having been dictated or written by the chief of staff, Joseph Smith. The article to which this brother's letter referred, was written by the editor of the HERALD.

ELLEN SCOTT

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

During the holidays, the bishopric of Lamoni Stake issued a little four-page leaflet which was distributed among the membership of the stake, with the season's greetings. From this little leaflet we quote:

"To the Saints of the Lamoni Stake: The Lamoni Stake Bishopric wishes you the compliments of the season and joins with you in the feeling of gratitude to our heavenly Father for the splendor and prosperity of the season just closing.

"We feel specially grateful to God and his people that a knowledge of the rules under which we live the gospel life are becoming more widely known and better understood; for, as the beauties of the gospel privileges and requirements become better known and sensed, the people will advance or fall back, according to the depth the spirit of the gospel has taken root. In other words, we believe the letter and the spirit of the law go hand in hand, just as the portions of the law which we call temporal and spiritual go together; and when they fail to do so, the cause must suffer. We repeat, we are glad we have a knowledge that these rules are better understood by the people than they were a year ago.

"This letter is written on December 20, 1912, and up to this time we have received $5,448.72 in tithes and offerings since January 1, 1912. There has never been a time this present year when the treasury was entirely empty, though in the most busy times of harvest and plenty the funds were frequently very low. Since the first of the year we have expended for the support of ministers and their families $4,731; and for aid to Saints $751.06; we have helped twenty-six of those who had present need to the amount of $1,534.73; and have added to our office equipment by expending $55.50; our office expense amounting to $356.15.

"During the year we have received $723.50 in pledges and cash, said money to be used for the purpose of starting some industrial enterprise, with the idea of conveying the same to the society to be organized under section 128 of Doctrine and Covenants. Such fund is now open; you can subscribe to it in any amount and at any time you see fit. We do not know just how we will invest it; that depends upon opportunities offered, but we are going to try to be very conservative, and carefully watch and diligently work and pray that it shall be a success when we do move out in this line. Do not be fearful, however, that we will not do anything at all; we will try to keep ourselves ready for the proper opportunity, and we will report our action to you.

"Numbers of the Saints are keeping up their inventories in a faithful, conscientious, and businesslike manner. The army of regular and systematic tithe payers is therefore growing. Join the army, if you have not already done so, and attend to the Lord's business in your most businesslike manner, and in compliance with his law. To settle your account at least yearly is not only best for the church, but it is best for you. The Lord has so instructed us, and the habit of obedience to his commandments is a pearl greatly to be desired. Pick the most convenient time of year to make your settlement with the Lord, and when it is chosen observe it closely.

"The accounts in our office will be closed January 1, and if you want to get in this year you have only a few days left. We would welcome you to our office and spend some time in giving you what aid you need to get your account in the shape you want it. We will also gladly talk over with you any matters you may want to canvass which to any extent hinder your compliance with the law of God, or are not made clear to your minds in this circular."

---

NEWSPAPER DISCUSSION.—Brother O. R. Miller writes us that he has had a newspaper discussion with one W. G. Roberts in regard to the destiny of man, the articles appearing in the Burlington Gazette.

---

NAUVOO EXPOSITOR.—A sister sends us a clipping from the Rock Island (Illinois) Argus which is a quoted article from the New York Christian Advocate written by Reverend O. W. Fifer, of Des Moines, Iowa, dealing with the Nauvoo Expositor. Not long ago we referred to this article and Brother Heman C. Smith, Church Historian, wrote a reply to it, and it was published in HERALD of October 2, 1912.

---

The following news item which is going the rounds of the press will be read by our people with interest:

"CHICAGO, December 30.—The Jewish Courier, of Chicago, announced yesterday morning the receipt of a confidential cablegram from London, announcing that American and English Jewish bankers have underwritten a loan of $100,000,000 to Turkey in return for concessions in Palestine.

"The paper says this information means one of the greatest events in the history of the race, and that it will give the Jewish people an opportunity to return to their own land; cease being 'homeless people,' and hasten the day when Jews from all over the world will start a 'back to Palestine' movement."

---

We must not think so much of what the many will say of us. We must think of what the one man, who understands right and wrong, and of what Truth herself will say of us.—Plato.

Original Articles

WHY I AM WHAT I AM.

How many times I have wished that my friends and neighbors, and all who have been wondering why I left the church of which I was a member, and joined that despised church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which is everywhere spoken evil of, could be gathered together, and that I might give them a "reason for the hope that is in me." So to-night, in my imagination, I have them all before me, and I am a minister, and this is my first sermon; and as I may never preach another, I think I will give a reason for that hope while I have an opportunity. So I beg your attention while I try to make it plain to you why I am what I am. Like other ministers, I must take a text as a sort of nucleus for my thoughts to cluster around.

Whenever my mind runs on the goodness of God, in leading me out of the wilderness of error and up to the sun-lighted heights of truth, this word of Paul always seems to express my feelings better than any other: "By the grace of God I am what I am," and I say them over again and again, realizing their truth in my case as well as in his.

The word grace means favor, and was it not a wonderful favor that God showed me, when in his providence and loving thought for me, he brought the gospel to my attention? And it was a continuation of his favor when time after time he witnessed to my slow heart of the truth. How the Good Shepherd did keep calling after me, his wandering sheep; and with what persistent love he sought me and called me to follow him!

I was wandering, sad and weary,
When the Savior came unto me;
For the ways of sin were dreary,
And the world has ceased to woo me;
And I thought I heard him say,
As he came along his way,
"O, timid soul, stay near me,
My sheep should never fear me,
For I am the Shepherd true."

At first I would not hearken,
But put off till the morrow;
Then life began to darken,
And my soul grew sick with sorrow.
Still I thought I heard him say,
As he came along his way:
"O, timid soul, come near me;
My sheep should never fear me,
For I am the Shepherd true."

I had always desired to serve God, had confessed Christ while quite young, and felt a degree of satisfaction that I had done what was my duty to do. I became identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, but only on probation, and before I was taken into full connection, my mind was rather unsettled on the question of baptism. After reading and pondering over the word, I became dissatisfied with the teachings of the Methodists on that question. Other doctrines did not trouble me, as I thought as so many do, that it made no difference what doctrine one held, just so he was sincere. But the teachings of the New Testament were so plain on the subject of baptism, that I became anxious to follow Christ in that ordinance. To me then, there was no more in the thought than this: I must be baptized because Christ was. No meaning attached to the ceremony, it was only an empty form. As the Christian Church (not the Disciple) was the nearest, and as I liked their liberality, I joined that body of believers, and was immersed by a man, who even then was denying in private conversation much that he preached in the pulpit. The next year he openly declared himself to be a "freethinker" and an unbeliever in all he had preached, and left the church a rank infidel. This, of course, had the tendency to make me dissatisfied with my baptism, though not yet with the church.

When I was first baptized I felt, as I said, a degree of satisfaction because I had followed Christ in baptism, but I never felt the assurance I desired, that I was a child of God. I knew nothing of the law of adoption in the household of faith, or of the way into the kingdom of God. I can truly say that I knew almost nothing of the gospel of the kingdom; like thousands of others, I thought I knew, but was mistaken. I had been taught that to believe in Christ was all that was necessary; that sop of Satan that has put so many honest souls to sleep; which he is always ready to feed to the sin-sick soul, quieting their fears, lest in their anxiety they persist in their search until they find the only infallible remedy for sin, the remedy prescribed by the great Physician himself, the gospel of the Son of God, which is "the power of God unto salvation, unto every one that believeth;" the "gospel of the kingdom," as Christ himself termed it.

After moving from my home in Pennsylvania to Virginia, I was not connected with any church for a number of years. There being no Christian Church near me, I worshiped with the Baptists, or the Methodists, or the Presbyterians, as I had about as soon go to one as to another, and found in all some things I could not harmonize with my understanding of God's word. I read all kinds of religious works, books, or papers, and found some truth in all, even to the Catholic. And I must confess that I found much error in all. Still I did not realize that my dissatisfaction was the way the Good Shepherd had of winning me from the wilderness, and wooing me into his fold. I truly wanted to find that perfect law of the Lord that converts the soul, but in all these many churches there seemed always to be something lacking; I knew not what. I soon found that they were all "broken cisterns that can hold no water," which men had hewn out for themselves. Sometimes in their "times of refreshing" they would fill up. And though this seemed to quench their thirst for a time, yet the effect was not lasting, and soon the poor souls were either as thirsty as before, or, as was often the case, would not believe that there was such a thing as a fountain of living water. And even such water as did find its way into these broken cisterns, was brackish and bitter, only surface water, befouled with the rubbish and debris that had collected there, and was not the pure, sweet, soul-refreshing water of light that I was thirsting for. Yet Christ had promised that they that hungered and thirsted after righteousness should be filled, and that the water he gave to drink should be in them a well of water springing up unto everlasting life. I had not found that fountain, and knew not the way thither.

I believed in Christ; and as the word said that "he that believeth on the Son hath the witness in himself," I searched my heart for that witness. But there was no witness there, and finally I came to the conclusion that all the witness one could have was the knowledge that he believed. I knew that I believed in Christ, and that was my witness, as I then thought belief the only essential. I had not then learned the difference between believing in Christ, and believing on Christ. And so I rested my soul on that fact that I believed, and was filled with a sort of self-complacency that I mistook for the peace of God.

But I read in the word, "Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." I became dissatisfied again, for my peace was easily disturbed. Every new wind of doctrine would blow me this way or that; as I had no anchorage. Although I clung to the cable, the word of God, yet I was tossed to and fro, at the mercy of wind and wave. When I would compare the different doctrines that about that time seemed to force their claims upon me there was always something wrong. I could find none that seemed to correspond with the pattern. And I found too, that often they seemed to lack foundation. I wanted to find a foundation with rock bottom. I dared not trust myself to any more houses on the sand.

But God even then was teaching me; I was learning that all these man-made systems of religion, were but "broken cisterns" at the best, and contained not the water I desired. I found, too, that God had said: "My people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the Fountain of living waters, and have hewn out for themselves broken cisterns that can hold no water." "All that depart from me shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters." So in order to find these "living waters," I must find God, and whither should I go? My heart's cry was: "Lord show me the way." It was then these words were true of me:

At last I paused to listen,
His voice would not deceive me;
I saw his kind eyes glisten,
So anxious to relieve me.
And I'm sure I heard him say,
As he came along his way;
"O, timid soul come near me,
My sheep should never fear me,
For I am the Shepherd true."

At a revival service at the Methodist Episcopal Church, I with many others knelt at the altar to re-consecrate myself to God, as the congregation was singing,

"I will follow Jesus, Anywhere he leads me I will follow on."

it was impressed on my mind that if I covenanted to follow Jesus, that I would be led into such paths as I never would choose, even in a way that I would not want to go. But my heart responded: "Anywhere he leads me, I will follow on." Then the leading of the Lord became more manifest.

About that time I received a letter from a friend in Mississippi with whom I had been corresponding a long time. She was an earnest, zealous worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Her letters were always edifying and uplifting, although, like myself, she had never been fully satisfied with what she found in the "broken cisterns." We had often written of our spiritual hopes and fears, but now, for some time there had been a break in the correspondence. Just at this time, when I felt that I must follow Christ, no matter where he led me, the letter came, telling me she was about to be baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and, of course, I was shocked and grieved beyond measure. Yes; I even was ashamed to think that I had been corresponding with a woman who had no more self-respect than to join the "Mormons," and I decided to drop her then and there; but finally I decided that I had a duty to perform before I dropped her entirely. I must open her eyes, if possible, to the awful thing she was about to do, as I then supposed. So, with the beam in my own eye, I began. I wrote to her, telling her that they were Mormons, and begging her not to have anything to do with them, etc.

She soon wrote again, explaining the faith, and sending me tracts, leaflets, papers, etc. At first I would not read them; I would glance over the Ensign, if very hungry for something to read and could not possibly find anything else. I could see nothing wrong, so I began to read carefully, to see if there was not something wrong, but even with such a big beam as that in my eye I could not do it. Instead I saw clearer than ever. Truths that had seemed dim and obscure shone with a new and clear light. It was as if I were searching for diamonds in a spot where I was sure they could not be found, and suddenly saw their gleam. New truths, or truths that I had never seen before, leaped into view, until the word of God began to scintillate as if studded with brightest jewels, and so it was; pearls of purity, gems of truth, gold tried in the fire, all were there, and they were mine, mine, mine! If I would obey the law of adoption, I should be an heir to all these precious things of the kingdom.

I found my Bible read much differently on some subjects than I had supposed; and I remember on one occasion, turning to the title-page, to see if it were really the 'King James' Version that I was reading. It was a little, old-fashioned, leather bound pocket Bible that had been given me, in memory of an old lady whom I had nursed in her last sickness, and as I had not had it long, and as she had come to the South from one of the far Western States, I thought it quite likely that she might have gotten hold of a "Latter Day Saint Bible"; as I had been told that they had changed the Bible to make it read as they taught; but lo! It was the King James Bible, and I had no loophole of escape in that direction, unless I denied the word of God.

Finally the leaven of truth began working. Then began such a struggle as I hope never to pass through again. It was as if I was being contended for by two parties, each determined to win; and so it was, the Spirit of truth on one hand, and the powers of darkness on the other. For six months or more the battle raged. I could hardly sleep; I was in a constant turmoil. I could only cry out, "Lord, lead me. Do not let me be deceived." I would look at my children and weep, and ask myself if I could go this way, and be cut off from all my friends, and even have my children turn against me. The Spirit of truth would always have a word for me; sometimes it was, "Follow me," and sometimes, "He that loveth father or mother, wife or children more than me, is not worthy of me!" "He that taketh not up his cross, and followeth not after me, is not worthy of me." The opposing power would hold up the cross, and magnify it before me, and make it appear more and more repulsive, until its shadow even was more than I could bear. Oh, it looked so heavy, was studded with such sharp thorns, was so black with shame and disgrace; could I find courage to take it up? Then, in contrast, with subtle cunning, this arch deceiver would show me the pleasures of this world; pure, innocent pleasures, too, of themselves; for he knew he could not tempt me with any other. The love of my friends, the respect and good will of my neighbors, the pleasant associations of the church, (as in my unrest I had joined the Presbyterian Church,) how pleasant these all appeared, and how hideous and repulsive the cross, and dismal and dark and thorny the way, beset by all manner of dangers, and leading me—where? I could not be sure.

One night, after my usual prayer for guidance, in which I had said that if God would show me by some sign that this work was true, I would accept it and obey the gospel, suddenly as I lay with closed eyes, a light appeared before me, not clear and bright, but as the sun appears through a smoked glass, and yet its rays shot all through me, and filled me and thrilled me from head to foot. The room seemed filled with a clear light, and I felt as if lifted up and floating on a sea of light. The light seemed to permeate through my whole being, and clearly and distinctly to my inner consciousness came these words; "Follow the Light." I opened my eyes and looked about the room; everything seemed natural. But I still felt that same flood of light. No other word expresses it. I was in it, was floating in it, and it filled me through and through, and such a joy came to my soul as I thought, "This is the sign from the Lord that you asked for, and means you are looking in the right direction."

For three days this wonderful experience stayed with me, just a foretaste of what was to be enjoyed should I obey the gospel, and during those days I sang over and over again that blessed hymn, "How firm a foundation, ye Saints of the Lord." That was a sweet experience, when

He took me on his shoulder,
And tenderly he kissed me;
He bade my love be bolder,
And said how he had missed me.
And I know I heard him say,
As we went along his way,
"Oh, timid soul keep near me;
My sheep should never fear me,
For I am the Shepherd true."

Yet the cross was still heavy, as I was not in that ecstatic state always. As if the Good Shepherd bade me to walk by myself, though never alone after this. Still sharp was the struggle before I could come out boldly. I was a "slow-heart" indeed.

Prior to this time, the sister whom I mentioned put a note in the HERALD, requesting the Saints to write to me, and to send me literature. Not knowing this, I was greatly surprised to receive a letter from a brother of whom I had never even heard. I said, "This is strange that this brother should write, and explain away some of the doubts that were in my mind. Should I get three more letters inside of two months from persons who are strangers to me and they should all tell the same thing, I should believe God was in the work truly." Several weeks passed, and I received no more letters, although I longed for them, and yet dreaded to receive them, for I felt if I did I would be compelled to admit the work was of God. About six days before the close of the two months, I received another letter, from another source, telling the same story. I said, "I will hardly get any more in the few remaining days." It is hardly likely anyone else would be moved to write, but if God wanted me to accept this work, he could move others to do so; and should he do this I felt that I would be in honor bound to confess the work was of God, and if I received no more, I was determined to stop all investigation, and turn my thoughts into other channels.

But God knew just when to send them. He was still showing his grace or favor to his child, "slow-heart" though she was. The next day's mail brought me three, and the next brought me three, and the third day also brought three, and I received others still, until I received nineteen in all, and all telling me the same story. I was satisfied again for a while, and felt as if I could face a world with this doctrine. I remarked to some of my friends: "If I had written to twenty-five ministers of the orthodox churches, asking what I must do to be saved, I would have received as many different answers; but these all tell the same story, and they all seem to know." These all gave forth the same sound, and it was no uncertain sound either.

Again, doubts assailed me, and I would say, "Oh, if I could only know," not seeing then that the promise to know was conditioned on the willingness to do: "If any man will do my will, he shall know of the doctrine," and as soon as I willed in my heart to do his will, no matter what the cost, then he gave me that blessed experience which proved to my mind that here, and here alone, was the true light, undimmed by having been hidden with the rubbish of manmade creeds and dogmas.

Then the Spirit began to move me to tell others the story of the restored gospel. Like the woman of Samaria at the well, I must tell others to come and see if this was not indeed the Christ; and like Andrew who went and found his brother, and said: "We have found the Messiah," so I felt an earnest desire to tell my relatives and friends; but not yet was I bold enough. About this time I received a letter from my brother, a minister in the Christian Church. He was then living in Maine, and he wrote of an effort to hold revival meetings, but said: "Not much could be done, as the Latter Day Saint elders had been there preaching their pernicious doctrine, and somehow that always seemed to be the result, wherever they went. It was almost impossible for other churches to make any converts, after their doctrine had been preached. It seemed to be death to all spiritual life." Then I felt the spirit of my mission upon me, and seizing my pen, wrote without a fear or a care of the loss of his love and esteem: the first words of defense of the gospel I ever wrote:

"Dear Brother,—You say the doctrines of the Latter Day Saints are poisonous, and the death of all spiritual life. If so, I find the Bible is full of the same kind of poison; but instead of being the 'death of all spiritual life' I find it gives spiritual life, and if it is poison, it is the sweetest poison I ever tasted."

Anxiously I awaited his reply, which did not come till fully six months afterward. It was filled with regrets that I should have drunk so deeply, and he trusted to my good common sense to help me to see through the errors, etc.; and he said the Latter Day Saints use the Scriptures as children would a flower garden; just selecting a flower here and there, to weave into a bouquet to suit their own fancy." I replied that I found that all the so-called orthodox churches did the same thing, each having his own particular bouquet, and it appeared to me that the Latter Day Saints used the whole flower garden. Well, he stopped writing, and I suppose he thinks with pity of his poor, deluded sister.

As by the grace of God I began to have courage to speak and write, God began to bear witness more and more, and in various ways. I remember once I was very anxious to learn about some particular point of doctrine, and I began to look over my few Ensigns, for at first I did not save them, but used them as I would any old newspapers. But I could not find what I wanted, and it seemed I must know; I could not rest until I did, and how could I find out? Almost as if a voice spoke to me, came the thought, Go look in that pile of old story papers on a high shelf (where I had stored them away). I could not resist the impulse, although I was sure I would not find any of the Ensigns there, as they had been there a long time. But nevertheless, I searched the pile over, and there, at the bottom, was an Ensign, one of the first I had received, but had never more than glanced at. And what filled me with astonishment and confirmed me more and more in the assurance that this was indeed the way of truth, there was a sermon on that very subject, and the doubt that had been clouding my mind on that score melted away to trouble me no more.

I might multiply instances where I was sure the hand of God overruled to show me the truth. I will relate one more. I said that in my unrest I had joined the Presbyterian Church; and I went to work earnestly to do all I could in Sunday school and other church work. I taught a class of young ladies for one year, but by that time I was so satisfied that the doctrines of that church would not stand the test of "the law and the testimony," and as they were about to reorganize the Sunday school for another year, and had let me know that they wished me to continue with my class, I felt that to be consistent I must let my pastor know of my change in religious views; so I wrote him a letter, telling him of the faith that I was assured was of God, and that I found many things in their Sunday school lesson books that I could not conscientiously teach, and I must be true to my conviction, let come what would. We exchanged two or three letters; in his of course he tried to convince me of my error and he made such strange and false statements about the origin of the church and the character of Joseph Smith and of those associated with him in the early days of the work, even getting their names wrong, that I saw he was not as well versed in the knowledge of the work as he professed. But he said he had proofs to show that this church was only a branch of the Utah abomination, and would bring them to me, and he was sure he could soon convince me of my mistake, and promised to come and see me soon. The next sermon I heard him preach was from the text: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, serve him; if Baal, serve him," and he preached a powerful sermon about the danger of indecision, which helped me to a decision, as well as did his closing remarks, that some people had been deceived with the idea that God was sending prophets into the world to-day. This was false; and he warned his hearers against such pernicious teaching, saying that God had given all he ever would in this Bible; the door of revelation was closed; we need no prophets now; we need no apostles now, etc.

Time went on. I was still allowed to keep my class, as there chanced to be no one else to take it. One day one of his deacons, my nearest neighbor, said to me, "I saw Elder S. yesterday, and he says he is coming to see you the next time he comes."

I said, "All right; I will be glad to see him."

"Oh, he is going to draw you over the coals. He says he don't want more than a few minutes to tear the Latter Day Saints' doctrine all to pieces."

"Well, if he can do that, all right," I said.

So the next Sunday the minister came home with this deacon, and he waited till fifteen minutes to four before he came to see me, although he expected to leave there at four o'clock to go to a five o'clock meeting. He asked a few commonplace questions, about our health, and how the crops were, etc., made a few remarks about the fine weather, and the murder of an ex-Senator near us a few days before, then he took out his Testament and asked permission to read a chapter, which of course I granted, feeling sure that he would try to prove by it that my views were all wrong. But it was a chapter dear to all Latter Day Saints, the fourteenth of John. Then he knelt and prayed with us, and never, either in his prayer or any other way, alluded to our church or doctrines. As soon as he rose to his feet he grabbed his hat and said, "I must be going," scarcely taking time to say good-bye. He started out in the wrong direction, which I discovered, and set him right; then I found he had left his umbrella, which he thought he could not venture out in the hot sun without; so I called him back for his umbrella, while the joy bells were ringing glad chimes in my heart, because the battle I had dreaded with this college bred, and experienced minister of many years service, was over; and I had done nothing. The Lord had fought the battle for me, for I had prayed earnestly over the matter the whole week. I knew not what proofs he might be able to bring, that I might not be able to meet. He acted confused all the time he was there, and then to know that it was his intention to show my error, and to not open his mouth on the subject, but read the very portion of scripture that taught that for which I was contending, was to my mind a clear indication of his being unable to tear the doctrine all to pieces.

I remarked the next morning to this deacon's wife, who came over early to ask me what Brother S. said about our faith, "He never said 'Boo,' never mentioned it at all. A strange way this for a shepherd to do who sees one of his sheep going astray." She was surprised, and said he kept saying, "I must go over and see Sister Corson, but I hate too." He never troubled me after that.

I would make this article too long to tell one tenth part of the ways by which the Lord led me, but at last I could wait no longer. I must be baptized, but no elder was near. After removing to Richmond, and the hand of God was in that move too, as I could plainly see, I wrote for Elder J. L. Goodrich, who was missionary in charge of this district then, and he came on and baptized me. Was I satisfied then? Yes; my joy was as full as it could be, and it seemed too sweet to last; but to quote from that favorite hymn of mine again, let me say:

I thought his love would weaken,
As more and more he knew me;
But it burneth like a beacon,
And its light and heat go through me.
And I ever hear him say
As we go along his way;
"O, timid soul, stay near me,
My sheep should never fear me,
For I am the Shepherd true."

Nearly eleven years have gone by since that time, and the gospel "beacon" burns brighter than ever. I am just as anxious to see the work progress in this part of the vineyard as ever, though circumstances have kept me from doing much, only to see that the "beacon" is not put out by the opposing powers. I sincerely pray that this explanation of "Why I am what I am" may be blessed to many souls. I am ever striving to be "instant in season and out of season"; to always be willing and ready to "give a reason for the hope that is in me," and surely it is the most reasonable hope that ever was held out to a sin-sick soul as the hope of eternal life, since it is the gospel that "comes not in word only, but in power and in much assurance, and the Holy Ghost." Since it is by God's grace that we are what we are.

Let us do then, dearest brothers,
 What will best and longest please us,
 Follow not the ways of others,
 Let us follow only Jesus,
 And we will always hear him say,
 As we go along his way;
 "O, timid soul, keep near me;
 My sheep should never fear me,
 For I am the Shepherd true."

Alice R. Corson.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, 902 Thirty-fifth Street.

* * * * *

SALVATION AFTER DEATH.

"And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Have you ever thought seriously over, or read prayerfully these words of the Savior? Are you not longing for the truth and justice of God? Do you not long to know that some day God will reward every man for his good deeds, as well as for his bad? Or has your mind been darkened with the doctrine of eternal damnation in hell for all that go there?

How many of us are there who have not a friend, or a father or mother, or a brother or sister, or even a dear child, who, according to this doctrine, has gone down the broad road for ever, and to endless torment in hell? And after eternity has rolled on for a thousand years, they will look up into the face of a loving and merciful God, and say, "Oh, God, how long?" and he will say to them, "Time has just begun."

Reader, does not this make tears come in your eyes? Are you not willing, if it be possible, that something be done? Have not the elders said to you, "Weep not, for the lion of the tribe of Judah has prevailed to open the book and to loose the seals"?

So, let us go hand in hand, back to the text and read:

He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.—Matthew 16: 15-18.

Was this church prevailed against, dear reader, the church that he established here? We answer, yes, it was persecuted from city to city, and in every synagogue. We are told that the blood of the Saints ran in the streets of Jerusalem, and Saul, with authority from the chief priest, went from place to place, binding men and women, and all who called on the name of Christ, until finally the church was banished from sight. But, reader, who did this? The gates of hell? No. The same old dragon that was cast down from heaven to the earth. Wherefore the angels said, "Woe, woe, be to the inhabitants of the earth; for the Devil has come down among you with great wrath." He it was that prevailed against the church.

What, then, is this—the gates of hell? Turn with me to the sixteenth chapter of Luke, and there find the Savior speaking to his disciples concerning the rich man and Lazarus, and he says there is a great gulf fixed between heaven and hell, and it prevailed against any passing through, from either way. Here he makes plain the gates of hell; but remember, reader, those conditions existed under the law of Moses, and not under the law of life, the gospel. The old covenant law of Moses was taken out of the way that the new covenant might be established, the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. If this was the condition that existed under the law of Moses, were there to be better conditions under the law of Christ? Surely, then, we should be glad to hear it. All right; but while we search from place to place to hear words of the Savior, first in Jerusalem, and then at Nazareth, and then at Bethlehem, and other places, let us keep in mind the text, "And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Then again we hear him saying:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father has life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. . . . Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice.—John 5: 25-28.

And let us go back into the days before Christ was born, and hear the old Prophet Isaiah speaking:

The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord has anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.—Isaiah 61: 1.

Reader, is not this joy? Do not our hearts feel glad because we have such a Savior? Who can not say amen? But let us not lose sight of the text, of the gates of hell, and also the church. Let us realize, too, that those men of whom Christ made this church went about preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ, which Paul says is the power of God unto salvation, inasmuch as the Apostle Peter tells us this:

For Christ hath also once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached [the gospel] unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah while the ark was a preparing.—1 Peter 3: 18-20.

And again:

For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.—1 Peter 4: 6.

Reader, is not this going to bring joy? Let us all say, "Glory, glory, hallelujah, amen!" as the angels did when the lion of Judah, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the earth, prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof. Glory to his name in the highest! Do you suppose that Abraham rejoiced to see one of his sons have an opportunity to hear the gospel and live?

And again, John says:

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God: and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and earth and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; . . . and death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.—Revelation 20: 12-14.

Now, reader, who is all this resurrection and judgment for? We answer, It is for those brought up from death and hell. Christ told his disciples on one occasion that if one be cast into hell he should not come out till he had paid the uttermost farthing. They come out in the last resurrection and are judged and rewarded for all the good they have done, no matter how little it may be. But who are those whose names are not found written in the book of life, who shall go away into everlasting punishment? These are those to whom the Savior said, "All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto man except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost." And that sin he says shall not be forgiven in this world nor in the world to come; therefore their names are for ever erased from the book of life, and they go away into the lake of fire. (Hebrews 6: 23.)

My prayer is that you will read these few words with honesty and sincerity, and that you may be freed from the false doctrine of the Devil himself, if you have believed any such.

G. N. COX.

PARIS, TEXAS.

---

If I wanted to become a tramp, I would seek information and advice from the most successful tramp I could find. If I wanted to become a failure, I would seek advice from men who have never succeeded. If I wanted to succeed in all things, I would look about me for those who were succeeding and get into their surroundings.—Joseph Marshall Wade.

Of General Interest

FROM D'AUBIGNE'S HISTORY OF THE REFORMATION.

Dear Herald: It is some time since I have written anything for your pages. There is little of interest occurring in these parts. Our branch is very small, but we try to keep up with our duty, distributing literature and whenever an opportunity offers, talking on gospel themes, to those who will listen.

Notwithstanding my long term of fellowship in the Catholic Church, I was entirely ignorant of many practices in it, particularly regarding the manner of punishment for those who offended, or differed in religious views; in other words, "heretics." Of late I have obtained many authoritative books regarding such subjects, and thinking that many of your readers may be as uninformed as I was, I feel impressed to copy one portion for those who might like to know what has been done in the past, and is still done where the church has absolute control. The following is from D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation.

Your sister,

MARIE JULIE T. ADAMSON.

LOWER LAKE, CALIFORNIA.

The following account by an eyewitness of the scenes witnessed at the destruction of the Inquisition, will give the reader some idea of the fiendish cruelty practiced by the Inquisition on its helpless victims in those dark days:

SCENES AT THE DESTRUCTION OF THE INQUISITION AT MADRID, SPAIN, IN 1809.

In 1809 Colonel Lehmanowsky was attached to that part of Napoleon's army stationed at Madrid; and while in that city the colonel used to express his opinion freely among the people respecting the Jesuits and priests of the Inquisition. It had been decreed by the French emperor that the Inquisition and monasteries should be suppressed, but the decree was not executed.

Months passed away and the prisons of the Inquisition had not been opened. One night about twelve o'clock, as the colonel was walking along one of the streets of Madrid, two armed men sprang upon him from an alley and made a furious attack. He instantly drew his sword, put himself in a posture of defense, and while struggling with them he saw at a distance the lights of the patrols—French soldiers, mounted, who carried lanterns, and rode through the streets of the city at all hours of the night, to preserve order. He called to them in French and, as they hastened to his assistance, the assailants took to their heels and escaped but not, however, before he saw by their dress, that they belonged to the Guards of the Inquisition. He went immediately to Marshal Soult, then governor of Madrid, told him what had taken place, and reminded him of the decree to suppress the Inquisition. Marshal Soult replied that he might go and destroy it. The colonel having told that his regiment—the Ninth Polish Lancers—was not sufficient for such a service without the aid of two additional regiments, the troops required were granted: one of the regiments was the Seventeenth, under command of Colonel de Lile, subsequently pastor of an evangelical church in Marseilles.

The troops marched to fulfill their destined object, the Inquisition being about five miles from the city. It was surrounded by a wall of great strength and was defended by a company of soldiers. When they arrived at the walls the colonel addresses one of the sentinels and summons one of the Jesuit fathers to surrender to the Imperial Army and open the gates of the Inquisition. The sentinel who was standing on the wall appeared to enter into conversation for a moment with some one within, at the close of which he presented his musket and shot one of the colonel's men. This was a signal of attack, and he ordered his troops to fire upon those who appeared upon the walls.

It was soon obvious that it was an unequal warfare. The walls of the Inquisition were covered with the soldiers of the holy office; there was also a breastwork upon the walls, behind which they partially hid themselves as they discharged their muskets. The French troops were in the open plain and exposed to a destructive fire. They had no cannon, nor could they scale the walls, and the gates successfully resisted all attempts at forcing them. The colonel could not retire and send for cannon to break through the walls without giving them time to lay a train for blowing up the French troops. We saw, therefore, that it was necessary to change the mode of attack, and directed some trees should be cut down and trimmed to be used as battering rams. Two of these were taken up by detachments of men, as numerous as could work to advantage, and brought to bear upon the walls with all the power that they could exert; while the troops kept up a fire to protect them from that poured upon them from the walls. Presently the walls began to tremble, a breach was made, and the Imperial troops rushed into the Inquisition. Here they met with an incident to which nothing but Jesuitical effrontery is equal. The inquisitor-general, followed by the father-confessor in their priestly robes, all came out of their rooms as the French were making their way into the Inquisition, and with long faces and their arms crossed upon their hearts, their fingers resting upon their shoulders, as though they had been deaf to all the noise of the attack and defense, and had but learned what was going on, they addressed themselves in the language of seeming rebuke to their own soldiers, and asked, "Why do you fight our friends, the French?"

Their intention was, doubtless, to make their assailants think that the resistance was wholly unauthorized by them; and if they could have succeeded in making a temporary impression in their favor, they would have had an opportunity in the confusion of the moment to escape. But this artifice was too shallow, and did not succeed. Colonel Lehmanowsky caused them to be placed under guard, and all the soldiers of the Inquisition to be secured as prisoners.

He then proceeded to examine all the rooms of the stately edifice. He passed from room to room and found all perfectly in order. The apartments were richly furnished, with altars, crucifixes, and wax candles in abundance, but no evidence could be discovered of iniquity being practiced there: there were none of those peculiar features which might have been expected in an Inquisition. Splendid paintings adorned the walls. There was a rich and extensive library. Beauty and splendor appeared everywhere, and the most perfect order on which the eyes ever rested. The architecture, the proportions were perfect. The ceiling and floors of wood were scoured and highly polished. The marble floors were arranged with a strict regard to order. There was everything to please the eye and gratify a cultivated taste: but where were those horrid instruments of torture which were reported to be there, and where were those dungeons in which human beings were said to be buried alive? The search seemed to be in vain. The holy fathers assured the colonel that they had been belied and that he had seen all. The commanding officer began to think that this Inquisition was different from others of which he had heard, and was inclined to give up the search. But Colonel de Lile was of a different mind. Addressing the colonel he said, "Colonel, you are commander to-day, and as you say, so it must be, but if you will be advised by me, let this marble floor be examined. Let water be brought and be poured upon it, and we will watch and see if there are any places through which it passes more freely than others." "Do as you please, colonel," replied the commander, and ordered water to be brought accordingly. The slabs of marble were large and beautifully polished. When the water had been poured over the floor, much to the dissatisfaction of the inquisitors, a careful examination was made of every seam in the floor to see if the water passed through. Presently Colonel de Lile exclaimed that he had found it. By the side of one of these marble slabs the water passed through fast, as though there was an opening beneath.

All hands were now at work for further discovery; the officers with their swords and the soldiers with their bayonets, cleared out the seam and endeavored to raise the slab; others with the butt ends of their muskets struck the slab with all their might in order to break it; while the priests remonstrated against the desecration of their holy and beautiful house. While thus engaged, a soldier who was striking with the butt of his musket struck a spring and the marble slab flew up. The faces of the inquisitors instantly grew pale as Belshazzar when the handwriting appeared upon the wall, and they shook with fear from head to foot. Beneath the marble slab, now partly up, there was a staircase.

The commander stepped to the altar, and took from a candlestick one of the lighted candles, four feet in length, that he might explore the room below. One of the inquisitors endeavored to prevent him; and laying his hand gently on his arm, with a very demure and sanctified look, he said, "My son, you must not take those lights with your bloody hands, they are holy." "Never mind," said the commander, "I will take a holy thing to shed light on iniquity." Colonel Lehmanowsky then took the light and proceeded down the staircase. When he and his companion in arms reached the foot of the stairs, they entered a large, square room, which was called the Judgment Hall. In the center of it was a large block, and a chain fastened to it. On this they had been accustomed to place the accused chained to his seat. On one side of the room was an elevated seat, called the Throne of Judgment, which the inquisitor-general occupied, and on either side were seats less elevated for the holy fathers when engaged in the solemn business of the Holy Inquisition. From this room the party proceeded to the right and obtained access to small cells extending the whole length of the edifice, and here they were presented with the most distressing sights. These cells were places of solitary confinement, where the wretched objects of inquisitorial hate were confined year after year, till death released them from their sufferings; and there their bodies were suffered to remain until their bodies were entirely decayed, and the rooms had become fit for others to occupy. To prevent this being offensive to those who occupied the Inquisition, there were flues or tubes extending to the open air sufficiently capacious to carry off the odors. In these cells were the remains of some who had paid the debt of nature, of whom nothing remained but their bones still chained to the floor of their dungeons.

In other cells were found living sufferers of both sexes and of every age, in a state of complete nudity, and all in chains. Here were old men and aged women who had been shut up many years. Here, too, were the middle-aged and the young man, and the maiden of fourteen years old. The soldiers immediately went to work to release these captives from their chains, and took from their knapsacks their overcoats and other clothing which they gave to cover their nakedness. They were exceedingly anxious to bring them out to the light of day, but Colonel Lehmanowsky, aware of the danger, had food given them, and then brought them gradually to the light as they were able to bear it. The military party then proceeded to explore yet another room on their left. Here they found the instruments of torture of every kind which the ingenuity of men or devils could invent. The first instrument noticed was a machine by which the victim was confined, and then beginning with the fingers all the joints in the hands, arms and body were broken and drawn one after another until the sufferer died. The second was a box in which the head and neck of the victim were so closely confined by a screw that he could not move in any way. Over the box was a vessel, from which one drop of water fell upon the head of the victim every second, each succeeding drop falling in exactly the same place; by which in a few moments the circulation was suspended and the sufferer had to endure the most excruciating agony. The third was an infernal machine, laid horizontally, to which the victim was bound, the machine then being placed between two beams in which were rows of knives so fixed that by turning with a crank, the flesh of the sufferer was all torn from his limbs in small pieces. The fourth surpassed the others in fiendish ingenuity. Its exterior was a large doll richly dressed, and having the appearance of a beautiful woman with her arms extended ready to embrace her victim. A semicircle was drawn around her, and the person who passed over this fatal mark touched a spring which caused the diabolical engine to open; its arms immediately clasped him and a thousand knives cut him in as many pieces while in the deadly embrace.

The sight of these engines of infernal cruelty kindled the fire of indignation in the bosoms of the soldiers. They declared that every inquisitor should be put to the torture. Their rage was ungovernable. Colonel Lehmanowsky did not oppose them; they might have turned their arms against him if he had attempted to arrest their work. They then began punishing the holy fathers. The first was put to death in the machine for breaking joints. The torture of the inquisitor that suffered death by the dropping of water on his head was most excruciating; the poor wretch cried out in agony to be taken from the fatal machine. Next the inquisitor-general was brought before the infernal engine called "The Virgin." He was ordered to embrace her and begged hard to be excused. "No," said the soldiers, "you have caused others to kiss her, and now you must do it." They interlocked their bayonets so as to form large forks and with them pushed him over the deadly circle. The beautiful image, prepared for the embrace, instantly clasped him in its arms and cut him into innumerable pieces. The French commander having witnessed the tortures of four of this barbarous Inquisition, sickened at the awful scene, and left the soldiers to wreak their vengeance on the other guilty inmates of that prison house of hell.

In the meantime the news had spread to Madrid that the prisons of the Inquisition had been broken open, and multitudes hastened to the fatal spot. Oh, what a meeting was there! It was like a resurrection. About one hundred and fifty, who had been buried for many years, were now restored to life. There were fathers who found their long-lost daughters, wives were restored to their husbands, sisters to their brothers, and parents to their children; and there were few who could recognize no friend among the multitude. The scene was such as no tongue can describe.

When the multitude had retired Colonel Lehmanowsky caused the library, paintings, furniture, and other articles of value to be removed, and having sent to the city for a wagon load of powder, he deposited a large quantity in the vaults beneath the building and placed a slow match in connection with it. All having withdrawn to a distance, in a few moments the walls and turrets of the massive building rose majestically in the air, impelled by a tremendous explosion, and then fell back to the earth, an immense heap of ruins. The Inquisition was no more.

It is to be regretted that in the papal countries, in the northern part of the Continent, similar cruelties are still inflicted. The odious name of Inquisition is indeed dropped; but there are dungeons and tortures and the like instruments are used to inflict suffering and death; while the multitudes of unhappy victims for conscience' sake are dying daily, wasted away by a cruel and lingering death.

o * o * o

CAMEL OF AGES AGONE FOUND AT CITY'S EDGE.

One of the most remarkable discoveries in the history of paleontology in America was made at La Brea tar pits on the western edge of the city several days ago by Professor R. C. Stoner, of the University of California, who for several months has been excavating strange biological fossils of the Quaternary period with a large crew of assistants.

The startling find was the skull and more than two thirds of the skeleton of a camel of the Pleistocene age. There is no record of any kind available to show that this animal ever existed in America in past ages, and so remarkable was the find that Stoner at once secured two of the greatest experts in the country to pass an opinion on it.

"We have been getting to a considerable depth in our excavations," said Stoner at the Hollenbeck last night. "New fossils have been numerous, but we have been able to classify them with others right along, and there has been no great comment, on account of their belonging to known species. About two weeks ago, one of the men came across a long-nosed, narrow-headed skull, very different from anything we had uncovered.

"It was in excellent state of preservation and after securing a cast of it and studying thoroughly all of its characteristics, we came to the conclusion that it was a camel. Later we uncovered the vertebræ of the animal from the shoulder blade down to the pelvis. The rear leg bones are also complete. Only the lower portion of the front legs has been found, while the neck bone remains to be discovered. There was sufficient of it to make a very careful analysis and I decided it must be a camel."

In order to authorize his views, Professor Stoner called in Professor J. C. Merriam, head of the department of paleontology at the university, and Charles Hart Merriam, for many years head of the biological survey for the Government, but now retired. Both of these scientists agreed that the animal belongs to the camel family, only that it is far larger than the camel of to-day.

"We all have been a trifle nonplussed at the finding of the skeleton of this animal in La Brea fields, since there are no records to show that the camel at any time in ancient periods roamed the forests and plains of America," said Professor Stoner. "This will undoubtedly create much comment from the scientific world, which has almost come to the conclusion that the fierce saber-toothed tiger, the rangy wolf, the huge bison and a few species of very common Pleistocene animals were all to be located in the now-famous deposits near Los Angeles."

The skeleton will be sent to Berkeley as soon as it is recovered. The work of assembling the various parts is already under way. When completed the camel will occupy a place of distinction in the museum on account of its oddity.—Los Angeles Times, December 12, 1912.

• * * * •

THE FIRST CLEW TO THE BLOND ESKIMOS.

In his article in Harper's for January, V. Stefanson, the explorer, tells dramatically of his meeting with the strange people of the North who gave him the first clew to the now famous blond Eskimos.

"A broad but three-months' untraveled trail led north from this village site at Cape Bexley across the ice toward Victoria Island. My intentions were to continue east along the mainland into Coronation Gulf, but I decided, nevertheless, to stop here long enough to make an attempt to find the people at whose village we had camped. We would leave most of our gear on shore, with Pannigabluk to take care of it, while the two men and myself took the trail across the ice. This was according to Eskimo etiquette—on approach to the country of strange or distrusted people noncombatants are left behind, and only the able men of the party advance to a cautious parley. In this case the Mackenzie River man, Tannaumirk, was frightened enough to let his pride go by the board and to ask that he, too, might stay on shore at the camp. I told him he might, and Natkusiak and I prepared to start alone with a light sled, but at the last moment Tannaumirk decided he preferred to go with us, as the Nagyuktogmiut were likely in our absence to discover our camp, to surprise it by night, and to kill him while he slept. It would be safer, he thought, to go with us. Pannigabluk was much the coolest of the three Eskimos; if she was afraid to be left alone on shore she did not show it; she merely said that she might get lonesome if we were gone more than three or four days. We left her cheerfully engaged in the mending of our worn footgear, and at 2.30 p. m., May 13, 1910, we took the old but nevertheless plain trail northward into the rough sea ice.

"We made about six miles per hour, and inside of two hours we arrived at another deserted village, about a month more recent than the one found at Cape Bexley. We were, therefore, on the trail, not of a traveling party, but of a migratory community.

"If you are following such a trail and come to a village about four months old, you will expect to find the people who made it not more than forty miles off.

"In the present case our task was simplified by the fact, that the group we were following had not moved straight ahead north, but had made their fourth camp west of the second. Standing on the roofs of the houses of the second camp, we could see three seal-hunters a few miles to the west, each sitting on his block of snow by a seal-hole waiting for the animal to rise.

"The seal-hunters and their camp were up the wind, and our dogs scented them. As we bore swiftly down upon the nearest of the sealers the dogs showed enthusiasm and anticipation as keen as mine, keener by a great deal than did my Eskimos. As the hunter was separated from each of his fellow huntsmen by a full half mile, I thought he would probably be frightened if all of us were to rush up to him at the top speed of our dogs. We therefore stopped our sled several hundred yards away. Tannaumirk had become braver, now, for the lone stranger did not look formidable, sitting stooped forward as he was on his block of snow beside the seal-hole; he accordingly volunteered to act as our ambassador, saying that the Mackenzie dialect (his own) was probably nearer the stranger's tongue than Natkusiak's. This seemed likely, so I told him to go ahead.

"After what may have been anything from five to fifteen minutes of talking and expostulation by Tannaumirk, the man finally began to listen and then to answer. The dialects proved to differ about as much as Norwegian does from Swedish, or Spanish from Portuguese. After Tannaumirk had made him understand the assurance that we were of good intent and character, and had showed by lifting his own coat that he had no knife, the sealer approached him cautiously and felt of him, partly (as he told us later) to assure himself that he was not a spirit, and partly to see if there were not a knife hidden somewhere under his clothes. After a careful examination and some further parley he told Tannaumirk to tell us that they two would proceed home to the village, and Natkusiak and I might follow as far behind as we were now; when they got to the village we were to remain outside it till the people could be informed that we were visitors with friendly intentions.

"When we approached the village every man, woman, and child was outdoors waiting for us excitedly, for they could tell from afar that we were no ordinary visitors. The man whom we had first approached—who that day acquired a local prominence which still distinguishes him above his fellows—explained to an eagerly silent crowd that we were friends from a distance who had come without evil intent, and immediately the whole crowd (about forty) came running toward us. As each came up he would say: 'I am So-and-so. I am well disposed. I have no knife. Who are you?' After being told our names in return, and being assured that we were friendly, and that our knives were packed away in the sled and not hidden under our clothing, each would express his satisfaction and stand aside for the next to present himself. Sometimes a man would present his wife, or a woman her husband, according to which came up first. The women were in more hurry to be presented than were the men, for they must, they said, go right back to their houses to cook us something to eat.

"These simple, well-bred, and hospitable people were the savages whom we had come so far to see. That evening they saw for the first time the lighting of a sulphur match; the next day I showed them the greater marvels of my rifle; it was a day later still that they first understood that I was one of the white men of whom they had heard from other tribes, under the name kablanat.

"I asked them: 'Couldn't you tell by my blue eyes and the color of my beard?'

"'But we didn't know,' they answered, 'what sort of complexions the kablanat have. Besides, our next neighbors north have eyes and beards like yours.' That was how they first told us of the people whose discovery has brought up such important biological and historical problems, the people who have since become known to newspaper readers as the 'Blond Eskimos.'"

* * * *

ANCIENT CITY IS UNCOVERED.

NEW YORK, December 19.—Practically the entire ancient Inca city of Machu Piccu was uncovered by the Yale Peruvian expedition, according to its leader, Professor Hiram Bingham, who, with other members, returned to-day from Colon.

Professor Bingham said that the exploration was conducted chiefly at Machu Piccu, which was discovered on the previous expedition. The city stands on a plateau, surrounded by precipices two thousand feet in height.

One hundred burial caves and ruins of baths, houses, and palaces were laid bare.

Professor Bingham added that the jungle soon will cover them again, unless steps are taken by the Peruvian Government to keep them open.

"On this trip," said Professor Bingham, "we had a good deal of trouble with the Peruvian Government. On the two expeditions I previously had made into Peru I had no trouble at all, but the Ministry had changed, and those in power at present were not at all friendly to American exploration."—Saint Louis Republic.

Letter Department

LONDON, ENGLAND, December 18, 1912.

President Joseph Smith, Dear Brother: While at Birmingham a short time ago, I attended on a Sunday afternoon a meeting at a Brighamite conference, at which I heard some very remarkable statements made by some of their elders. President Rudger Clawson was there, also the presidents of all their English mission districts. One or two statements in particular I wish to refer to you. It was stated in public that Joseph Smith prophesied that the church should go to the Rocky Mountains, etc. In private conversation with one of the elders at the close of the meeting, he said that you, and President Joseph F. Smith, had met together in his office at Salt Lake City, to consider the amalgamation of the two churches. He first said that he was present, but afterwards said that he was not, but that another elder that was present told about it. He tried to go on to state what had been said and done, but I told him that I could not accept any second hand statements from him or from anyone else where the special interest of their church was involved, as there had been so much said by them that was not in accordance with the written word, and the proper test of good evidence.

I am glad to report a very successful conference of the London District of late; also that the attendance at the London Mission Hall is increasing, which is very encouraging.

I hope you are well, and that all is well with you. We are struggling on here as best we can, although handicapped in many ways, but we are trusting for better conditions and are trying to do our part to bring them about.

My special object in going to Birmingham, as referred to, was to attend a very extensively advertised Anti-Mormon League meeting at the city hall, for the Midlands of England, to which the Lord Mayor was invited as chairman. Also the Lord Bishop, and all the clergy of Birmingham. The Lord Mayor could not attend, by reason of a previous appointment, and our London friend, Mr. Farncombe, the commissioner of the paper known as The People was invited as chairman in absence of the Lord Mayor of Birmingham. I was informed by the brethren at Birmingham of the meeting, and also who was to be the chairman. The speaker for the evening was the Reverend Mr. D. H. Bartlett, of Liverpool, pastor of one of the principal Church of England congregations in that city. This gentleman is one of the greatest opponents of Mormonism in England, and is really the Goliath of the whole opposition.

On being made aware of this meeting, I wrote to Mr. Farncombe (however, there was a letter due to him,) and without intimating to him that I knew anything about the lecture, I referred at length to the persecution against the church, and Joseph Smith, and that they had nothing detrimental that could be truthfully said against him or the work he established; nothing new had ever come to light, than what had been said about him years ago; was made up by men that did not have very much respect for the truth, and that all the books and pamphlets that are now published against Joseph Smith, and the church, are simply plagiarism with a vengeance. My letter to him was received the Saturday before the Monday night of the lecture.

As I went into the hall on the evening of the lecture I met Mr. Farncombe and had quite a conversation with him. He said he had received my letter and was much pleased with it. As we were talking, the Reverend D. H. Bartlett appeared.

Neither of us had met him before, but had had some correspondence with him, with reference to a book he had published against the church and Joseph Smith, and of course he knew me when I was introduced to him. (I will state here that this reverend divine has written one of the most unfair and unjust criticisms against our work, that I consider has ever been published. It is not a large book, and is put on the market at a low price. It has been very detrimental to our work in England. I called his attention to some very unfair things that are found in his book; therefore our correspondence. I noticed that Mr. Farncombe wanted to get the Reverend Mr. Bartlett to one side and have a talk with him, so I withdrew. They talked so long that the opening was fifteen minutes behind time. I was satisfied, in my own mind, what they were talking about, and I knew when the lecture was given, that it was not what was intended, and I consider it was a very tame affair. He quoted from the Millennial Star and The Seer, and many other books, some of the most disgusting and abominable things that the Mormon elders had said in their darkest days, but never once referred to Joseph Smith nor the rise of the church, nor the Reorganization.

I was sitting behind them on the stand, and when he got through I asked him the following question: "Is it not a fact that all the books that the reverend gentleman has been quoting from to-night, were the production of the Utah Mormons, and were all written and published by the Utah Mormon Church after the death of Joseph Smith, the founder of the Latter Day Saints' Church?" After reexamining his books the answer came through the chairman, "Yes." With this answer there came quite a demonstration, or clapping of hands, from the immense crowd present. At the close of the meeting the chairman, Mr. Farncombe, in his remarks stated that the people of the Reorganized Church were the best, and purest, and cleanest people that he had ever met, and that they were doing a good work, and he commended them to the society of all good people in this land. When he had finished this statement there came another great demonstration of applause from the house. Instead of that meeting being detrimental to us, it was one of the best things that had ever happened in England.

During that same week, Mr. Farncombe sent me a letter and said that he wanted to see me at his office in London. There he told me that the Reverend Mr. Bartlett, of Liverpool, had sent a letter to the secretary of the Anti-Mormon League, with an urgent request that the Birmingham Anti-Mormon League expel all members of the Reorganized Church from the League. He considered the Reverend Mr. Bartlett a very unfair gentleman, and he also told about the conversation he had with him before the lecture. This Reverend Mr. Bartlett, with other leading spirits of a kind, were the cause of him being discharged by the "London People Company" for favoring us in the articles published by The People. The London People Company has reconsidered the matter, and has implicit confidence in him, and has restored him to his former position.

In spite of all the opposition detrimental to everything that is known as Latter Day Saintism, we are trying to wedge ourselves into the advantage of our side of the proposition, with a persistency that seems to awaken a new thought in the minds of a great many people.

Wishing you a merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year, RODERICK MAY.

DES MOINES, IOWA, December 11, 1912.

Dear Editor Herald: I write a few lines that it may encourage some sleepy Saint. I saw such a beautiful vision that I felt impressed to write it.

I wakened in the night and lay awake for some time, thinking of different things. The thought came to me, Why don't you meditate on the beauty of the latter day gospel, as you once did? Why have you become so slothful? And I began to pray to God that I might wake up and put on the whole armor of the Lord; and that I might have the same sweet meditations that I have enjoyed before. As I fell asleep I had a dream, which brought me much comfort.

Oh, if we could only wake up and put on the armor of the Lord and be ready to meet him when he comes.

Pray for me, that I may overcome my trials.

MRS. M. E. SMITH.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, December 23, 1912.

Dear Herald: We enjoy your weekly visits to us, telling us of the work and of the interest being taken in the spreading of the gospel, and your many letters of encouragement from time to time. It seems sometimes, as though our heavenly Father was handing to his present disciples the manna to feed, and the Spirit to heal, the hungry and the wounded ones. We surely acknowledge, and desire to let our thanks go out to him, who does all things well, for the provision that is being made, daily. We seem to see his guidings and his leadings in our behalf and feel to rejoice more and more as the days go by.

We are now living in Los Angeles, and certainly enjoy the spirit of the meetings and Sunday school. Brother T. W. Williams is our Sunday-school teacher, and Brother Sheehy our speaker last Sunday morning and evening. As yet we are but little acquainted, but feel to love the Saints with all the power given us. We hope this little letter will suffice to let our friends know where we are and that we stand united with them in the one great aim, that of demonstrating to the dear inquiring ones the way of life more perfectly.

We were indeed sad to hear of the death of Brother G. H. Hilliard, but trust our all to God's care and feel to murmur not.

We would be pleased to get a letter from Brother Henry Kemp, as he seems a real father to us. My own father in the flesh passed on some years ago. We know not how soon God may have need of us. Oh, that we may be ready and always found with an eye single to God's glory.

I would like to have a letter from Uncle I. N. White, but knowing of his frailty of body and the work intrusted to him, we console ourselves with the remembrance of the fact there will be a meeting bye and bye. Remembrance to all.

My present address is 2033 West Sixteenth Street, Los Angeles, California. Your sister, MRS. W. G. VANDERPOOL.

MURRAYVILLE, BRITISH COLUMBIA, December 23, 1912.

Editors Herald: As the old year is passing out and the new year is unfolding its arms to bring us within its grasp, I am made to stop and wonder if I have really accomplished anything in the past year that has been of any help to anyone. Have I really served my Maker to the best of my ability, as I promised I would at the water's edge?

Sometimes I feel that I have come far short of doing the things which God has intended I should do, but I still feel thankful for the desire which I have to ever live an upright life.

I have not the privilege of associating with the Saints as I would like to have, so do not receive the strength and encouragement of their association, but can truly say that the church publications are a great benefit to me, especially the letters in the HERALD. I have felt to rejoice while reading of the advancement of the gospel in different places, and especially at the little town of Bay Port, Michigan, it being my own home town; for I know the trials and discouragement ments the small band of faithful Saints have had to contend with. In the past year quite a number has been added to the church at that place, and to me it is another evidence of the truthfulness of the gospel, for God had promised them through his servants that if they were faithful many would be added to the church in that place.

As we are about to enter into another year, many of us no doubt have already laid plans for our future; but let us not forget that Satan is ever on the alert, and while our new plans and new resolutions are for our advancement, Satan will also be busy forming new ways and new devices to overthrow us, and no doubt many of us will be made to realize the truthfulness of the words of the apostle of old where he said: "When I would do good, evil is ever present." But let us take up our work bravely, and fight it manfully, and see if we can not in the coming year accomplish more than we have in the past.

I have a greater desire than ever to walk a more humble life, and with the assisting grace of God I mean to put forth a greater effort to run my race with patience.

Although my work may be small compared with others, I realize it is far too great to be left undone. Hoping that these few lines may be the help to others that theirs have been to me,

Your sister in gospel bonds,

KATIE DUTCHER MCNAMARA.

BOICOURT, KANSAS, January 7, 1913.

I held forth eight days in December, with good success, large crowds, and I fully believe good can be done here in this part of the country. There are plenty of openings for preaching, and telling the angel message.

I wish to tell of the goodness of God to me while standing in defense of this great work. I have been blessed with great power in teaching those who have not heard the message of truth. I have a great burden to bear over being in debt. Some may think or say I am dishonest because I can not meet my obligations as soon as they think I ought. I know it is not true; my Father in heaven knows it is not true.

Dear Saints, I need your prayers that I may be given strength and courage and faith to pass the dark and stormy days of life, and be able to teach the pure gospel of Christ and show the true way.

I am now billed to hold forth ten days in Trading Post in January, the latter part. We all know that this is his church to which his Holy Spirit comes, and we have the promise that it will come to us if we do his will. It is surely his will that we should do our duties before complying with our own desires. God's will, not ours, be done. I know it is my duty to preach the word and I do earnestly pray that God will bless me in trying to perform my whole duty. May this great work find lodging in all the honest hearts, that they may be gathered in and adopted in the kingdom of God and become true servants, and not lukewarm.

Your brother,

W. R. RUSH.

A Trip to London.

For many years, in fact ever since I was a boy at school, I had wished to pay a visit to London. London, with its wealth of historical romance, surrounding it like a huge mantle. Every English schoolboy, as he reads the history of the great men of long ago who traversed this city, and of their great deeds enacted in the precincts of London town, feels the desire burning in his breast to visit the places made famous by those men of renown. And at last, I was about to have my desire realized.

We, that is, Brother W. H. Greenwood, the president of the British Isles Mission, Brother W. R. Armstrong, the church historian for this mission, and the writer, set out for London on Saturday, October 12, by the 8.30 morning train from Manchester Central. We were met at Saint Pancras Station, London, at 1.45 p. m., by Bishop R. May, who conducted us through a London fog to the underground railway, where we booked to Mile End. An amusing incident occurred as we were about to leave the train. In response to a sign from the bishop we rose from our seats, and Brother May requested permission to pass by a workman who stood by the door. "That's right" he remarked, "make a bit of room for more dust."

We proceeded on our way along Mile End Road to Coborn Road, and presently we entered the mission house, where we were welcomed by our worthy bishop's wife, Sister May. We brightened ourselves up a little, and presently sat down to tea, prepared for us by our sister, after which, being desirous of visiting as many places as we could, we started off to the center of the city, accompanied by Brother May, who acted as our guide.

We proceeded underground as before, and on arriving at one station where we had to change, what was our dismay on looking round the platform, to perceive that we were minus our mission president, who had been unable to alight, owing to the people who were gathered around the door. However, we awaited his return, and then continued our journey to Westminster.

The first sight that met our view on coming out of the station, was the famous "Big Ben" of the Parliament Houses. We were pleased to note that the fog had lifted, and we were thus able to look about us. We made an effort to enter the House of Parliament, but were unsuccessful. However, we gazed on it for a while, exclaiming on the beautiful architecture of its doorways, windows, and walls.

Bishop May next guided us into the precincts of another famous old pile, "Westminster Abbey." What thoughts crowded our minds as we entered! What strange incidents have happened beneath its high roof! Almost the first thing that we came to was the place where our kings and queens were crowned. Passing through the aisle on our right, we came to the spacious hall whose floor was covered with the graves of such world famous men as Livingstone, Cutram, Stanley, etc. From here we returned to view the famous Poet's Corner, and gazed upon the last resting places of David Garrick, Shakespeare, Irving, Charles Dickens, and other famous poets and actors.

Our next visit was to the New Catholic Cathedral at Westminster. It did not strike us from the outside as being beautiful; in fact, we expressed the opinion that it was absolutely void of any beauty, the great high tower of brick only serving to make its ugliness more apparent. As we entered, Brother May pointed out to us that it was as yet unfinished, as we could see by the bare brick and mortar all around. Our attention was attracted to a huge crucifix, which was suspended from the ceiling away over the altar steps. Our guide informed us that this same crucifix caused a great deal of comment in London when it was first placed there. The bishop directed our steps to an altar on our right, which he said was the richest corner in the whole building. It was a really marvelous piece of workmanship, being all inlaid with pure gold and precious stones. This piece of work alone must have cost a tremendous sum of money. We observed, however, that the foundation of this altar was giving way, surely a type of the fact that the foundation of the church itself (spiritually) was unsafe.

From here we made our way to Saint James' Park, passing by Buckingham Palace, immediately in front of which stood the splendid monument erected to the memory of Queen Victoria. On again by the Mall, with its ceaseless stream of motor traffic, past the Admiralty offices on our right, where we observed the Marconi wireless attachment overhead, through the archway in front of us, which brought us out in Trafalgar Square with Nelson's Column standing in the center, surrounded by the figures of the British Lion. Away across the square stood the Art Gallery, to the right of which our guide pointed out The Strand. We turned here to the left and proceeded by way of Picadilly Circus, to Oxford Circus, where we boarded a motor bus, and returned home, passing on our way, the Old Bailey, Saint Paul's, the Mansion House, Bank of England, Royal Exchange, and so, home.

Upon our arrival here we found Brother Meredith, of Birmingham, awaiting us, and we were also introduced to two young ladies who are interested in the work. After partaking of supper and spending an enjoyable evening together, we were glad to retire to the rooms allotted us by our worthy host and hostess.

Next day being Sunday, we prepared to spend a day in the worship of God. We had a good meeting in the mission house, Sunday morning, and in the afternoon the writer accompanied Brother W. H. Greenwood to Enfield, a few miles outside London, where, through the energetic efforts of Brother Judd, the branch president, they have opened in a new mission hall, which they are purchasing at a cost of £480, (about $2,400), having been given twenty years in which to pay for it. This happened to be the day of the opening, and Brother Greenwood addressed them in the afternoon, while they were gathered together in the capacity of Sunday school. In the evening Brother May, along with Brethren Armstrong and Meredith, and a few Saints and friends from London, came and joined us at Enfield. We enjoyed a glorious spiritual feast, having short addresses from Brethren Greenwood, May, Armstrong, and Meredith, with a few remarks also from Brother Judd. The singing was beautiful, being encouraged by the able performance of a string band, and reed organ. We arrived home, at the mission house, at 10 p. m. Brother Armstrong had to leave us to catch the midnight train for home. We were sorry to lose his company, as we had enjoyed ourselves so much together. So ended another day. Monday morning arrived, and the writer intended leaving at midday, but was persuaded to stay until Wednesday midday. Brother Meredith kindly gave tickets to us for the Olympia Machinery Exhibition, so after breakfast we set out to view a little more of London and finish up at the exhibition, where we were to meet Brother Meredith, who meanwhile had to attend to a matter concerning his business.

Brother May again took us in hand, and we took the underground to South Kensington, where we visited the Kensington Museum; from there to the Victoria and Albert Museum, this latter place reminding one of a story in The Arabian Nights, with its beautiful marble pillars and wonderfully decorated balconies. Leaving here we made our way down the famous Rotten Row, viewed the Albert Hall, in front of which stands, what may be considered as the finest monument in the land, the Albert Memorial, erected by Queen Victoria in memory of her beloved husband. At each corner of its base were groups, representing Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, and round the feet of the monument itself were carved in relief, figures of many of the greatest men the world has produced; artists, poets, actors, musicians, politicians, etc., each figure in itself truly a work of art. To crown all, stood the massive figure of the Prince Consort arrayed in his robes; the whole combined making a sight not easy to be forgotten.

Now we adjourned to have lunch, after which we visited the renowned Brompton Oratory. We noticed here that in every recess was an altar, each of which could be used separately for service. We also noticed that there were candles for sale, from one penny to sixpence each, and by the side of the candles, immediately in front of the altar, was placed a stand with upright points, and if you wished to say a prayer for some dead relative, you purchased a candle, kindled it and placed it on one of the points. That constituted your prayer for the dead, either long or short, according to the price you paid for the candle.

It was now time for us to make our way to the exhibition, so we trained to Earl's Court, where we had to change. On our right here we saw a moving staircase which we boarded, and without any effort on our part we were taken aloft and landed on the platform above, where we caught our train for the Olympia. Arriving here we met Brother Meredith, who it seems had been aboard the same train we had alighted from. After spending a pleasant three hours in the exhibition, where we viewed many of the latest of man's wonderful inventions, we bade adieu to Brother Meredith, who was returning home to Birmingham, and finally we returned to the Mission House.

On Tuesday morning, as we did not wish to make the bishop more delayed in his work, the mission president and I decided that we would spend the day alone. Brother May instructed us from the map, how to find our way about, and also kindly loaned us the same. Brother Greenwood proved himself an expert in reading the map, for he took the writer direct to each place, as though it was not his first time in London, as well as mine. We made our way along Mile End Road, through the notorious Whitechapel, and by and by we came to London Bridge, and here we had our first view of the Thames. Gazing from the bridge into the water, we could not help but remark that if it were possible for either bridge or river to speak, what tragic tales of crime, remorse, and despair they would unfold. Leaving here we wended our way to the Thames Embankment, and here I noticed that underground passages had been made to enable people to cross the road, so congested does the traffic sometimes become. However, the traffic was not so bad while we were here, and we did not use the passage. One of the things that drew our attention along the Embankment, was the number of pavement artists, who squat here. We saw one of them commence a picture which at first looked like a huge daub, but which eventually turned out to be a picture of boats on the river, and a glimpse of the rising sun. Passing along we came to the relic of ancient Egypt, the Cleopatra's Needle, which, as the inscription informs us, took a whole lot of trouble to bring across to this country.

Almost opposite to this stood what I think must be London's finest hotel, the Hotel Cecil. Can one wonder at the hard thoughts that enter the minds of those poor souls who frequent the benches on the embankment, as they gaze, first on their own wretched condition, and then on the splendor and extravagance, both of this building and the people who frequent it? It makes us long for the time when Christ will come and remedy all these discrepancies.

But we must get on. Passing along over Westminster Bridge, by Parliament Houses, where we tried in vain to meet some member from whom we could obtain a permit to enter the house, we turned into Whitehall. Here we refreshed ourselves, and were just in time to see the relief of the guard. We passed by Downing Street, where dwells the Premier, and again along by the world famed Scotland Yard. I was surprised to find that this was situated in such an out of the way place as a side street.

Now we turned our steps in the direction of the British Museum. To try and tell you all that we saw there would be just as impossible as it was for us to see all there was to be seen. Marvelous indeed were the many things we beheld; the beautiful Bibles, many centuries old, some of them written by hand in pure gold. What appealed to the writer, was the wonderful amount of manuscripts that had been written by men of renown. Imagine our feelings as we gazed on letters written by W. E. Gladstone, King Charles I, The Pretender, George I, Peel, Disraeli, and General Gordon, where he (Gordon) makes an appeal to his country for help, "And," he says, "if help is not forthcoming by the stipulated time, I will not be answerable for the consequences." To have viewed all of the manuscripts even, would have taken us many hours, so we had to move on. Among other things we saw, were relics of the Stone Age, Iron Age, etc. One little room we came to was guarded by a police officer and a commissionaire. We saw the reason why when we entered, for every case was filled with golden ornaments, priceless bracelets, and miniatures. It was grand to see miniatures of only about two or three inches diameter, with a representation of such things as the Crucifixion and every figure, spear, and crosses and swords were cut out in relief; truly a veritable triumph of patience. The value of this room alone must have been very many thousands of pounds. In another room we saw great statues of Rameses I, whom we are given to understand was the ruler who oppressed the Israelites in Egypt. Mummies, huge stones that were placed over the graves of the Egyptians, stone scrolls, and many other wonderful things that had been found in the land of mystery.

As time was going, we now left the museum, and took train to the Tower, but unfortunately, darkness had come upon us, and the Tower was closed; so we had to be content with just what we could see by the aid of the street lamp. Our thoughts were busy here, and we thought of the murder of the princes, and many other crimes that had been committed within these ancient walls, by those who did not draw back from doing any vile deed, in order to further their own ends. So another day of my stay in London had passed.

Wednesday morning arrived, but as I, had to catch the 12.15 train home, we had no time to see more of London. So we passed the time pleasantly in the mission house, and eventually the writer, accompanied by Brother W. H. Greenwood, made the journey to Saint Pancras station, where I boarded the train, waving good-bye to our brother, as the train steamed out; and thus ended my first trip to London. It was indeed the most pleasant and most instructive holiday I have ever spent in my life, and the fact that it was spent in company with the Saints, made the pleasure more appreciable. Well might the poet say:

"You may sing of the value of youth and of age;
And select for your comrades, the noble and sage;
But the friends that most cheer me on life's rugged road
Are the friends of my Master, the children of God."

Yours in gospel bonds,

ABEL HALL.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, 48 Corelli Street.

Kirtland.

When I first looked upon thee, oh thou lovely little village of Kirtland, a peace entered my heart, a great calm pervaded my soul. I felt that I walked on holy ground; my soul did magnify the Lord; day after day did I feel that I walked very near him. Many times, in going about my work, I have felt the influence of heavenly companions; yea, the very air which fanned my cheek seemed charged with spirits divine. I can not tell, oh beautiful little village, why I love you so; perhaps it is because I saw my lambs at play upon your little village green. It seems but yesterday, and I see myself, with buoyant step, meandering here and there, stopping to admire you in your ever changing beauty. Yes, dear Kirtland, this is one of your chief attractions.

It would be difficult to tell which of your costumes is the most beautiful. There is spring, with her sweet breath, reminding one of a newborn infant, in all her pink and white. There is summer, with her fruit and flowers, her sunshine and her shade. There is autumn, with promises fulfilled, fields ripe with golden grain, trees laden with fruit, vines with grapes; your forests changed from green to many variant colors, making you look like an enchanted world where fairies dwell. Even old winter, with his pure white robe, has a charm.

Then, dear Kirtland, I have often connected thy past with the present. How could anyone overlook thy past, as they gaze upon that grand, solitary structure, a silent witness, even the temple of the Lord, built by his instruction, a monument of the integrity of a people who once inhabited thee, O Zion, and whose footprints have become almost obliterated? Other generations now inhabit thee; other children play upon thy pretty lawns; other Saints worship in thy temple; thy houses are more modern. There have been many changes, but you are still very dear to me, for you were the love of my youth; and while I can not often walk thy streets, nor wander through thy fields as of yore, my thoughts often go back to the happy days spent with dear Saints and friends, who, like myself, have been scattered and are gone. Yet my prayer is that the guiding hand of the heavenly Father will ever be over you, dear Kirtland; that Satan's power may be stayed, and your children dwell together in love and harmony, and that you may ever be a pleasant place in which to dwell; even Zion indeed, is the desire of my heart, and the prayer of an old resident and sister.

MARGARET A. RICHNER.

MENTOR, OHIO, R. F. D. 3.

The Lamanite Christmas Tree.

The hearty response from the Saints all over the country made the Christmas tree a grand success. The meeting was held three miles north and one mile west of Calumet, Oklahoma, two hundred Indians were present, and the unanimous verdict was, this was the best tree ever held for their people. We had the tree in the district tent, and the audience sat in another tent the same size, the two being joined together, for the occasion. The tree was laden with presents, and there was a treat for everyone. The Indians put on many nice presents; some of them being beautiful shawls, blankets, dresses, dolls, and toys. We had the tree in the center of the tent, and in front of the tree we had a beautiful motto: "Peace on earth, good will to men." The tree was decorated nicely. I never saw a crowd more orderly and appreciative, anywhere in my life.

I wish to thank those who sent presents, for they were very much appreciated. I wish to answer the criticism offered by one or two as to the wisdom of this course of procedure. We are among a childlike people, who have been robbed and mistreated by the white people, until they are suspicious of everyone until they become acquainted with them thoroughly. I have been two and a half years working among them before I have taught them and gained their confidence to the point where I thought they were ready for the gospel. We have held meetings for them all this time, about once in a month, or once in two months. They have had very little use for the white man's religion until they heard this. They all believe in dreams, visions, angelic ministrations, and the healing of the sick. They say they have more religion than the Protestant churches, and they think the preachers are after their money, and give them nothing in return. They are delighted in the Book of Mormon and the promises of the Lord to them as a people; this is a great light which has arisen on the horizon of this benighted people, and one can not refrain from indulging the thought that God is waking them up after the long night of sleep, spoken of by their prophets in the Book of Mormon; also the Bible. For we now have enough for three Lamanite branches soon to be organized, and hundreds of them are thinking seriously of coming into the church.

At the close of our Christmas meeting with them two more were baptized, and many names given for baptism as soon as the weather gets warm. There is a general awakening among these dusky tribesmen of the house of Manasseh, and we feel that the Sleeping Giant of America is waking up. The Saints have prayed for the redemption of Zion, and wondered how "the armies of the Lord are to become very great." But I wish to say the Lord has foreshadowed this very work that we feel we have now begun, and these people are of one mind and purpose, and the turning of the tide with them to the true fold does not only mean a few branches, but thousands of them in a few years, of the five hundred thousand Indians in the United States, and a part of the eight millions in Mexico and the others in South America.

These people are in poverty part of the time because of the fact they can not compete with the shrewd money grafters who are watching them whenever they get money from the Government. I will cite an instance or two to illustrate: A few days ago, here in this town, one of them was about to lose his team by mortgage and came to me for fifty dollars. He only wanted it for two weeks, but I could not let him have it, as I had not the money to spare. He borrowed it and agreed to pay the man thirty-nine dollars for the use of it for two weeks. That same Indian sold a quarter section of land for six thousand dollars, and by the time the lawyers got through fixing the papers and getting the money for him he got just five hundred dollars.

This people have from three quarters to two and three sections of the best land in the country to the family. Only a few of them can sell their land until 1917, and I hope we can get them educated by that time so they will realize the worth of the inheritance they have and see the real Zion condition for them as well as us. I feel to say to the Saints, The Lord has some things in reserve; when the time comes for them to be used, he can move upon the hearts of the people and bring to pass the strange work he has planned.

I feel the Saints need not regret the little sacrifice we are called to make for this grand work. Our first and great duty is to build up the kingdom of God.

We hope soon to get enough money to get us a motor cycle, so we can visit these people in their homes, away from the railroad. The prospect is great for a splendid work among them. The Lamanite mission is now a live issue. We have a few of them now ordained and they are at work with their might to spread this grand work among them. Brethren Christensen, Sanders, and I ordained one chief and three medicine men, blessed eight children, and administered to a number of sick folks.

Asking the earnest prayers of the Saints, I am your brother,

HUBERT CASE.

KINGFISHER, OKLAHOMA, January 2, 1913.

"Yes, do you send me a book . . . not a bargain book bought from a haberdasher, but a beautiful book, a book to caress—peculiar, distinctive, individual; a book that hath first caught your eye and then pleased your fancy; written by an author with a tender whim, all right out of his heart. We will read it together in the gloaming, and when the gathering dusk doth blur the page, we'll sit with hearts too full for speech and think it over."—Dorothy Wordsworth to Coleridge.

News from Missions

Nebraska.

I have been home a few days, spending holidays with my home folks. I start for my field of labor to-morrow.

As I think of the future, a feeling of anxiety rushes in upon me as to what the harvest will be. I am glad to say that the Lord has truly blessed me this conference year in ministering the word and ordinances of the gospel. While western Nebraska is a comparatively new field, I have baptized twenty-six here this conference year. The Lord has blessed and healed the sick, to the joy and comforting of the Saints.

I am glad to note that there is a forward movement with many of the Saints in this mission. They are awakening to righteousness while others are lagging. It is the laggard and careless among the Saints that are hindering the work. They stand in the way of those who are striving to enter the kingdom. "They neither go in themselves nor suffer those who are striving to enter to go in." They are stumbling-blocks in the way of others. Some of them are hypocrites. The good book says: "The hypocrite's hope shall perish." It is astonishing to think there are Latter Day Saints who visit the saloon and pool hall and partake or engage in the crimes of those places. Brethren who frequent those places, how do you feel in the assembly of the Saints, partaking of the sacrament with them? Are ye not of the world? What will you do with the injunction, "Keep himself unspotted from the world." It is my candid opinion that those who do such things, if they can not or will not repent, would be better off out of the church, so they would not be stumbling-blocks in the way of others. My dear brethren and sisters, let's try and make a better moral record this year than we did last year. Let's "shun the very appearance of evil." "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" "They which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Let us "awake to righteousness and sin not." For the Lord hath said, "Walk uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits."—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 3.

And "Thou shalt not steal; . . . Thou shalt not lie."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 7. "All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death." (Revelation 21: 8.) See also Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 11: 16: "For whoso doeth them shall perish; for none of these iniquities come of the Lord." "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."—Galatians 5: 22, 23. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."—Romans 8: 9.

Now, my dear brethren and sisters, it is plain from quotations cited that we can not practice iniquity and be the children of God. Therefore we must live righteous lives in order to enjoy the blessings of God here and have a well-grounded hope that we shall be accepted of our Father in the great day of accounts.

"Be wise in the days of your probation; strip yourselves of all uncleanness; ask not that ye may consume it on your lusts, but ask with firmness unshaken, that ye will yield to no temptation, but that ye will serve the true and living God." We must not serve the god Dollar, or any other idol.

I know the inclination to strive to get gain and hoard up wealth is very strong, but Latter Day Saints must not forget their God in the great rush for the things of this world. The man who does not think more of his God than he does of the dollar is to my thinking not very far removed from Babylon.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 False Rumors Corrected - - - - 49
 Author of Unsigned Editorials - - - - 49
 Notes and Comments - - - - 50

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Why I Am What I Am, by Alice R. Corson - - - - 51
 Salvation After Death, by G. N. Cox - - - - 56

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 From D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation - - - - 57
 Camel of Ages Agone Found at City's Edge - - - - 59
 The First Clew to the Blond Eskimos - - - - 60
 Ancient City Uncovered - - - - 61

LETTER DEPARTMENT
 Roderick May—Mrs. M. E. Smith—Mrs. W. G. Vanderpool—Katie Dutcher McNamara—W. R. Rush—Abel Hall—Margaret A. Richner—Hubert Case. - - - - 61

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - 66
 C. W. Prettyman—J. C. Crabb.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - 68

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - 67
 Alma M. Coombs.

HYMNS AND POEMS - - - - 68

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 60 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

I do not mean by this that we should be idle, but industrious in gathering all the means we can honorably for the carrying forward of the work of the Lord.

Now that the Lord may bless his people and his work so that the children of Zion may be made to rejoice in the blessings of Israel's God, is my prayer.

In gospel bonds,
 C. W. PRETTYMAN.

Alberta.

This finds us in the midst of fine winter weather, which has prevailed so far. Our conference convened here on December 28 and 29, preceded by Sunday school and Religio conventions. There were many more in attendance than the Saints here expected; and as a consequence, all felt to rejoice in the uplifting gospel of Jesus Christ.

There was an effort made to start a paper in the interest of northwestern Canada; but it failed of support.

I made the inquiry, Had the HERALD failed to publish articles sent to the editors from Canada, in the Canada department? The answer was, Yes; in some cases. I answered back, It was so in the States; if I understood it.

My notion is, and I find it to be the case, as a rule; that articles published in the church papers, should be and are of general interest; and not local.

I see nothing in HERALD of December 25, in the Canadian news from Canada. Now, if it be for the lack of space that no such news occur, let me suggest that such articles as were published in that number be cut down to reasonable space. It is true, as said by the Master, the poor we always have among us; and I thought it a matter so well understood among the Saints, that they should be supported, that lengthy articles on the subject were out of place. However, I am not running the HERALD, but am interested in its success.

We now have a splendid hall, in which we hold our meetings. Sunday school 10.30 a. m.; preaching 11.30 a. m., (except first Sunday in each month, when this hour is given to prayer and testimony); preaching 7.30 p. m. And we meet Sunday next, 6.30 p. m., and will likely organize a Religio, to meet at that hour every Sunday; or, at some private house on Friday evenings. So far as I know, the Saints here feel encouraged and hopeful.

In the faith,
 J. C. CRABB.

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, CANADA, January 2, 1913.

A blessed companion is a book,—a book that fitly chosen is a life-long friend.—Douglas Jerrold.

News from Branches

Fall River, Massachusetts.

"Behold, a stranger at the door;
 He gently knocks, has knocked before."

Fall River greets you as a stranger, as one who has been on a long vacation.

Many things have transpired since news from this busy little burg last appeared in your columns. I shall not attempt to chronicle all that has occurred, but simply tell of a few things that have occurred recently.

On Christmas Eve a group of young singers assembled at the church and at the hour of twelve began their journey to the homes of the different Saints to sing Christmas carols. During the afternoon of Christmas Day an entertainment for the benefit of the children was held in the basement of the church. There was a Christmas tree loaded with good things for old and young. Prizes were given to the children who had been regular in attendance during the year. Yes; and Santa Claus, also, was with us. The poor fellow seems to be getting older every year.

Arthur B. Phillips came over from Providence last Sunday to pay us a visit, while our pastor, H. O. Smith, visited the Providence Saints.

Next Monday evening will be held the semiannual election of officers for the church.

Last Monday evening the Sunday school held its election of officers. Horatio W. Howlett was elected superintendent, and William Roberts was chosen to be his assistant.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, and desirous of seeing the day when all prophecies shall have been fulfilled, we remain,
 ALMA M. COOMBS,
 For Fall River Saints.

But a man goes down to the shore of the sea of eternity and goes away upon its breast. He goes on and on, away from us, until at last he's just a black speck on the horizon. And then he disappears altogether. No message, no sign, no voice of any sort comes back to us to tell us where he has gone. All that mirth and song and courage and cheerfulness that distinguished him and that made us love him so, are gone from us for ever. Yesterday he was with us, and to-day we look for him in vain.—James Whitcomb Riley.

Hymns and Poems Selected and Original

Guests at Yule.

Noell Noell

Thus sounds each Christmas bell
Across the winter snow.
But what are the little footprints all
That mark the path from the churchyard wall?
They are those of the children waked to-night
From sleep by the Christmas bells and light;
Ring sweetly, chimes! Soft, soft, my rhymes!
Their beds are under the snow.

Noell Noell

Carols each Christmas bell.
What are the wraiths of mist
That gather anear the window-pane
Where the winter frost all day has lain?
They are soulless elves, who fain would peer
Within, and laugh at our Christmas cheer:
Ring fleetly, chimes! Swift, swift, my rhymes!
They are made of the mocking mist.

Noell Noell

Cease, cease, each Christmas bell!
Under the holly bough,
Where the happy children throng and shout,
What shadow seems to flit about?

Is it the mother, then, who died
Ere the greens were sere last Christmas-tide?
Hush, falling chimes! Cease, cease, my rhymes!
The guests are gathered now.
—Edmund Clarence Stedman.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.—District met with the Menefee Branch, September 21, 1912, at 10 a. m., Peter Anderson and F. T. Mussell in charge; William C. Chapman and W. B. Richards secretaries. Higbee, Bevier, and Menefee branches reported. Ministerial reports were read. Elders: D. E. Tucker, F. T. Mussell, W. B. Richards, W. C. Chapman, R. R. Jones, and F. O. DeLong. Priests: Daniel Edmunds, Ivor Surridge, and W. F. Ramsey. Teachers: Charles Edmunds, S. Smith, and B. S. Tanner. Bishop's agent, W. B. Richards, reported. Report was audited and found correct. The time and place of holding next conference was left in the hands of district officers. F. T. Mussell was elected district president for the next year; W. B. Richards, vice president, W. C. Chapman, secretary and treasurer. Preaching by Peter Anderson and F. T. Mussell. Adjourned to call of district president. William C. Chapman, district secretary.

WESTERN WALES.—District convened with the Aberaman Branch, November 30. Business session called at 7.30 p. m., by district president, John G. Jenkins. By vote, W. H. Greenwood, president of the British Isles Mission, was asked to take the chair. H. Snook was elected usher, F. Simmonds chorister. W. H. Greenwood then addressed the conference, which was much appreciated. The following branches reported: Skewen, Perth, Aberaman, Pontyeates. Reports were accepted, excepting a part of Skewen Branch report, which was referred back to branch. Elders reporting: John G.

A New Edition of the Doctrine and Covenants

By order of General Conference a committee was appointed to correct all typographical errors, also Section 22 of the Doctrine and Covenants. This has been done and the book is now ready. It contains a valuable addition in the form of a new concordance. All the revelations up to date are included. You will need this edition.

Order

No. 94, cloth.....$ .65
No. 95, full leather..... 1.00
No. 96, imitation morocco, gilt edges.. 1.50
No. 97, full morocco, flexible..... 2.50

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

A New Book of Sermons

The Gospel Messenger

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH

Everyone that knows Elder Roth—and many that do not—know that he is a very successful missionary and an excellent preacher. This book of his sermons—thirty-five of them—covers so wide a range of subjects and does it so thoroughly that you need it for your own information, and to lend to your investigating neighbor.

Elder Roth is always a preacher for the people; uses enough scripture to make his utterances authoritative, tells where to find it, yet doesn't tire the reader with too much monotony. Quotations and citations have been verified.

The autobiography of the author is a valuable feature of the book.

Through the generosity of Elder Roth we are enabled to offer this well-printed, nicely arranged, and well-bound book at the nominal sum of 75c. Order No. 248a.

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

Jenkins, Thomas J. Picton, Henry Ellis, Edward Williams, David Thomas, John Thomas. Priests: John Pughsley, William Crouch, Frank Simmonds. A letter was read from Brother H. Ellis, tendering his resignation as trustee of the Llanelly Saints' chapel. Motion prevailed that the resignation be accepted, but it be deferred till the brother had been further consulted in the matter. The following resolution was forwarded to conference: "That existing rules governing the Western Wales District be rescinded in their entirety, and that a committee be appointed to draft new rules for immediate use, or as occasion requires, for our future guidance; proposed new rules to be approved by the mission president." This was signed by H. Ellis and F. Jones, and dated August 29, 1912. Proposed and seconded that we reject the resolution, and that we adhere to the present rules governing the district. Carried unanimously. Question arose as to the paying of the ground rent for the Llanelly chapel. When it was proposed and seconded that we write to Bishop May, asking him to take over the responsibility of paying the same. When put to vote, the motion was lost. It was reported by one of the brethren that an application had been made by a band to acquire the use of the Llanelly chapel for band practice. Motion prevailed that a committee be appointed to consider the advisability of subletting the chapel, with power to act, in the matter, by the consent of this conference. Motion prevailed that the mission president appoint the committee. The following were appointed: John G. Jenkins, district president; F. Simmonds, district secretary; Thomas Phillips. Motion prevailed that we sustain, in our faith and prayers, the missionaries and local officers, also R. May as bishop of the mission. At the Sunday morning service Brother Greenwood gave a much appreciated talk, followed by addresses by T. Gould, J. E. Evans, John Pughsley, and F. Simmonds. At the afternoon meeting there were addresses in Welsh and English, sacrament was administered, and the gifts of the gospel manifested. At the evening meeting the speaker was W. H. Greenwood. A vote of thanks was tendered the Saints of Aberaman for use of room, and also for their kindness in catering to the Saints at conference. The conference adjourned to meet at the latter end of February, 1913, with a view to combining the conference with the Eastern District, time and place to be left to the discretion of the district president. John G. Jenkins, district president; Frank Simmonds, district secretary.

Conference Notices.

Pottawattamie district conference will convene at Council Bluffs February 1. We are to elect officers, and appoint delegates to the General Conference of 1913. Please send all reports and other papers to the undersigned, at least one week before the conference. J. Charles Jensen, secretary.

Conference of the Fremont, Iowa, District will convene with the Shenandoah Branch Saturday, February 22, 1913, at 11 a. m. The Sunday school and Religio joint convention will hold its first session the evening of the 21st and conclude its work at 10.45 Saturday morning. It will be remembered that this is the conference at which delegates to the General Conference and Conventions will be chosen. We hope to see a full representation from all branches and schools. T. A. Hougas, district president.

Ohio district conference will convene on February 15, 16, 1913, with the Middletown Branch, and we hope there will be a good representation from all over the district. Come and bring the good Spirit with you. The conference will begin on Saturday at 10.30 a. m. J. W. Metcalf, district president.

Quarterly conference of the Western District of Oklahoma will convene February 1 and 2, Saturday and Sunday, 1913, at Clinton, Oklahoma. We trust as many of the Saints as possible will attend, and especially the branch officers, that we may have their several reports. Hubert Case, missionary in charge; Doctor T. P. Powell, district president.

Quarterly conference of the Gallands Grove District will convene February 8, 1913, at Dow City, Iowa. Gomer T. Griffiths expects to be present, and will deliver illustrated lectures on his tour through the Holy Land. We hope to have reports from every branch in the district. All reports should be sent to district secretary not later than February 1. Mrs. C. J. Hunt, district secretary, Deloit, Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa, district conference will assemble at Runnells, Iowa, February 1, 2, 1913. By resolution passed at our last district conference, all future conferences are to be held as mass conventions. All members of the church in the district who may attend having equal voice and vote in conference sessions. E. O. Clark, district secretary, 2500 Logan Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

Conference of the Northeastern Kansas District will meet with the Atchison Branch at 10 a. m., February 22, 1913. Branch clerks and ministry will please send reports promptly to Mrs. Emma Hedrick, Fanning, Kansas. Mrs. E. S. McNichols, 712 Commercial Street, Atchison, Kansas, has been appointed district chorister and it is desired that branch choristers get in communication with her, that there may be unison of action in choral work of the district. This will be a very important conference, as there is much to be acted upon, looking to the betterment of the work in the district. Let each branch send a representative delegation, bringing much of the good Spirit with them. Frank G. Hedrick, district president, Fanning, Kansas.

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

- If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,
Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni,
Iowa.

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right.

Cloth No. 248 .....75

How Are You Going to Spend the Winter?

Why not go to California? It's the Land of Out-o'-doors! It's the best place on earth to go to escape the winter; a grand place for the weary to rest and for the weak to be refreshed!

If your neighbor has been there, ask him. He knows. And it doesn't cost a great deal to spend a month there, either. Ask him about that, also. And it doesn't cost much nowadays to get there. Ask me. Burlington Personally Conducted Tours have greatly increased the pleasure of going and at the same time decreased the cost to the minimum.

Wouldn't you like to be away from business, away from household responsibilities, away from care and worry? Wouldn't you enjoy health! rest! change! rejuvenation?

Then come in and get your copy of our California folder. It contains a lot of very interesting information about the state and tells all about the trip. After you have decided just what point you want to visit, I'll gladly help you plan all the details of the trip so that you can get every possible benefit out of it.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

Convention Notices.

Seattle and British Columbia district Religio will hold its semiannual convention at the church, corner of Kilbourne Street and First Avenue Northwest, Seattle, Washington, commencing in the morning at 10 o'clock, on February 7, 1913. This is election of officers, therefore we urge all Religions to attend, and be there promptly at the opening hour. Will the Vancouver, British Columbia, local secretary please send name and address to the undersigned? Leonard S. Rhodes, district secretary, Box 71, Centralia, Washington.

Correction.

Please make the following correction through the HERALD: In the Junior Quarterly for January, February, March, Lesson 4, paragraph 2, instead of, "We read in the Bible that everything God made was very good; therefore we can believe that he made the Devil," read, "therefore we can not believe he made the Devil."

This is a mistake of the compositors in leaving out the word not.

MAGGIE MACGREGOR.

Editor Junior Quarterly.

Marriage.

GRIGSBY—FLEMING.—At the home of Gideon and Mary Hawley, in Woodbine, their daughter, Chloe Carolyn, was united in marriage Thursday evening, December 26, 1912, to Mr. Paul Simpson Fleming, by Elder Charles Derry. The bride was the leader of the choir in the Woodbine Branch. We shall miss her beautiful and well-trained voice, and also her society, but trust that it will gladden the heart and home of her companion, and may both do their part to make their home as near like heaven as homes on this earth can be.

Died.

JOHNSON.—Sister Alice Rowan Johnson, of Riverside, California, died December 24, 1912. Sister Johnson was born in San Bernardino, California, November 23, 1867. Graduated from the state normal school in 1887, and taught in the public schools of San Bernardino and Riverside counties for several years with credit. She united with the church September 3, 1902, being baptized by Elder A. E. Jones. She lived a consistent life and held the esteem of a large circle of friends. Though afflicted for a number of years, was uncomplaining and admired for her patience and good cheer. Her husband, Frank H. Johnson, two sons, two daughters, and one brother, Byron T. Bowman, mourn their loss. Funeral service was held in Methodist Episcopal church in Riverside, California. Reverend Edwards, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, had charge of the service, Priest G. H. Wixom and Elder A. E. Jones were called from San Bernardino, and both took part in the services.

MUIR.—Thomas Muir was born March 16, 1842, at Burford, Ontario; married Matilda Howey, 1862; to them fourteen children were born, seven boys and seven girls, of whom eleven survive. Those surviving are Albert, John, and Harold E. C., of Valley Center, Frank, of Dallas, Texas, Joseph and William, of Port Huron, and George, of Algona, Michigan, Mrs. R. J. McLane, Jeddo, and Mrs. H. Campbell, of Lexington, Michigan, Misses Jennie and Blanche, Valley Center. In 1872 Brother Muir united with the Reorganized Church and remained a staunch, faithful member. Died December 26, 1912. He was taken with paralytic stroke two years ago; second stroke about one year ago; third stroke December 23, resulting in death. Funeral and sermon held at Valley Center, in charge of Elder William M. Grice.

DELL.—Infant daughter of Brother and Sister Charles L. Dell, of Independence, Missouri, Ruth Hellean, was born November 1, 1912, and died January 6, 1913. A little bud, a tender plant, passed on before its parents to wait for them on the other side. Sermon by Elder Rannie.

MARTIN.—Alfonso T. Martin, of Independence, Missouri, was born at Grand Round, Oregon, February 7, 1863; baptized eleven years ago, by Jacob Smith, at Santa Cruz, California; died December 27, 1912. He leaves a noble, saintly wife, six boys, and three girls. He has gone to dwell with the two little ones that departed this life in their infancy. Funeral service in charge of President H. W. Goold; sermon by Elder J. C. Foss; interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

What builds the Nation's pillars high
And its foundations strong?
What makes it mighty to defy
The foes that round it throng?

Not gold but only men can make
A people great and strong;
Men who, for truth and honor's sake,
Stand fast and suffer long.

Brave men who work while others sleep,
Who dare while others fly—
They build a Nation's pillars deep
And lift them to the sky.—Emerson.

A New Book

has just been issued, entitled

Doctrines and Dogmas of Utah Mormonism

By Elder J. D. Stead

THERE ARE REASONS for publishing this book.

(1) The only way to render a JUST judgment is to know the FACTS.

(2) To get the FACTS don't go to the enemies of the Utah church. This is not fair nor just; go to the authorized publications of this church, and let them tell you what they believe.

(3) You can not get access to these publications for the reason that many of them are out of print and hard to find.

(4) The author of this new book has spent years as a missionary among the Mormons, and has patiently and carefully culled extracts from these old publications, thus giving you

A Whole Library of Information in One Book

The greatest care has been taken to make this book reliable.

The quotations in it are all testified to as being correct, and finally the proof readers testify that to the best of their belief the quotations are all correct. We have had this done so that you would feel secure in using the many evidences therein contained. Order No. 1a, price.....$1.50

Herald Publishing House

Lamoni, Iowa

Arabian Proverbs.

The man that knows not and knows not that he knows not is stupid. Experience may educate him.

The man that knows not and knows that he knows not is appreciative. Help him.

The man that knows and knows not that he knows is asleep. Arouse him.

The man that knows not and thinketh that he knows is a fool. Shun him.

The man that knows and knows that he knows is wise. Follow him.

And books, we know,

Are a substantial world, both pure and good.
Round these, with tendrils strong as flesh and blood,
Our pastime and our happiness will grow.

—Wordsworth.

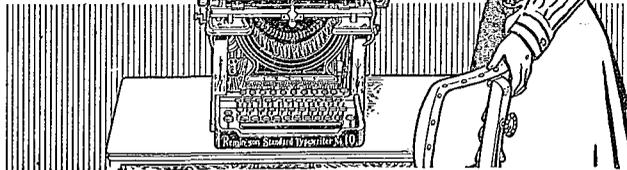

Who is it that, when years are gone by, we remember with the purest gratitude and pleasure? Not the learned or clever. But those who have had the force of character to prefer the future to the present, the good of others to their own pleasure.—Dean Stanley.

Men in great places are thrice servants,—servants of the sovereign or state, servants of fame, and servants of business.—Francis Bacon.

Give me a nook
And a brook
And a book
And the noise
Of a distant
City to make me
Enjoy my riches.
—Old Greek Proverb.

“Recognized Leader Among Typewriters”

Consider all that is meant by these words

Leadership means superiority of product—a superiority which produces leadership and is proved by leadership. It means more than this. It means everything associated with the word FIRST.

The Remington Typewriter is first in history, first in prestige, first in quality, first in recent improvements, first in size and completeness of organization, first in distribution, and first in service to the customer.

The word FIRST in every department of leadership applies only to the

Remington

Remington Typewriter Company
(Incorporated)

208 Fifth Street, DES MOINES, IOWA

Owner will sacrifice for cash deal at one thousand dollars down, most desirable and superior suburban home of five acres one mile from Independence, Missouri, on state highway. Address Owner, Route 2 Box 42, Independence Mo. 2-4t

THE HOLMAN HOME BIBLE.

Printed from large, clear Pica Type with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for every-day use in the home, containing all the advantages of a family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with record for births, marriages and deaths. The exact size of the Bible when closed is 6 1-8x9 inches. The chapter headings are printed on the upper outside corner of each page which makes this Bible practically self-indexed.

No. 2014. Bound in French Seal Leather, round corners, red under gold edges, gold titles, silk head bands, and purple silk marker. Our special price.....$2.25

Postage 24 cents.

Send all orders to
HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Lamoni, Iowa

Herald Publishing House

$100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

These Bonds will be ready to issue on the 1st of April, 1912.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further Particulars

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 22, 1913

NUMBER 4

Editorial

GETTING A NEW START IN LIFE.

Frequently we hear men say: "I wish that I could take a new start in life. Knowing what I know, if I could start all over again I would do better."

One beautiful thing about the gospel of Jesus Christ is that it gives men that very chance. The first proposition of the gospel message to men is this: "Now is your opportunity to start live over again. You must be born again. You must become a new creature."

A great many men and women are conscious of secret sin. The world may not know about it; but they know about it. One can see unhappiness in the eyes of men and women on the street. The knowledge of their past is like a millstone about their necks. Conscience torments them.

To all such Jesus comes with the message that they may be freed from these sins. Evil habits can be broken up. The past may be blotted out. A new start in life is promised.

But how shall this new start be made? It is obvious that if there is one thing that a man needs under such circumstances, more than another, it is a friend,—a friend who is willing and able to help him get started right. Jesus is such a friend. He fills the first great requirement; and in his gospel is found the plan of action, as well as the promise and the power of regeneration, freedom, and salvation.

A FRIEND ON SHIPBOARD.

We were much impressed some weeks ago while reading an article in the Outlook, entitled, "A friend on deck," by Professor Edward A. Steiner. We were first attracted to the article because of having met Mr. Steiner in Lamoni some years ago when he lectured there on "The emigrant."

Professor Steiner has crossed the Atlantic many times, incognito, taking passage as a steerage passenger, and sharing all the hardships of the poorest emigrants from southern Europe, the "Dagos," as we call them, and the Turks, and others. He did this in order to study the emigrant and the problems of the emigrant at first hand, as they are actually to be encountered in the steerage, and not from the remote viewpoint of first-class passengers.

On the occasion of his last visit, however, he traveled as the guest of the steamship company. Of course, owing to his position and influence, he was given marked attention and honor by the officials. This fact was not lost upon the steerage passengers, with whom he freely mingled, and among whom he went with the deliberate intention to help them individually. They were eager and willing to make friends with a man of recognized influence, yet not in the service of the company.

In this way he talked with more than six hundred of the eleven hundred steerage passengers, and was able to assist most of them with advice and information about the new country,—what railroads to take to reach their final destination, labor conditions, laws, customs, etc. And when the ship landed he was on hand to help those who were bewildered and in great need of a friend.

He found one thing worthy of comment. Many of these passengers thought that in order to get into the new country it would be necessary for them to deceive the government officials. They thought that it would be dangerous to tell the truth,—that they must lie a little. If a man were a Jew he thought it safer to swear that he was a Turk. If a young woman had a position waiting her with a well-to-do uncle, she thought it wise to tell the officials that she knew no one in the new land. In many cases the very stories that they had fixed up to get them in would be calculated to defeat their purpose, and cause their deportation, as in the case of one Jew who declared that he was a Turk. When asked how many wives he had, he thought a moment, and answered seven. Being assured that seven wives were six too many in the United States, he fell back upon the truth, and admitted that he was a Jew, with one wife only. Thus does ignorance, coupled with dishonesty, tend to defeat itself. Mr. Steiner advised them all to tell the exact truth, and convinced them that such would be the safest course.

This little experience confirmed him in the thought that the Nation should provide some one, not in the service of the steamship companies, to cross the ocean with each boatload of foreigners, to be a friend to them, and help them make the journey, meet the problems of the great adventure, and get their "new start in life." And he concludes that in order to do this work successfully, the one undertaking it must be a religious enthusiast, who will work for the good of man, and not for the salary, one who will be "a friend to man."

JESUS AMONG THE STEERAGE PASSENGERS.

In this way, this is a miniature representation of the work that Jesus did. He came right down to this sin-blighted earth and traveled in the steerage. He got down among the meanest and lowest. He offered himself as a friend to every man who would accept him and heed his counsel and advice. He is an influential friend; one who can help. And he finds us much as Mr. Steiner found those ignorant foreigners,—afraid of the truth. Men feel that in order to get through life they must evade the truth. They must lie a little. They make "lies their refuge."

But Jesus says: "Do not be afraid of the truth. It is your salvation. You shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." He is our friend on shipboard. He does not work for a salary; but because he loves man,—he is a friend to man. We speak of him in the present tense, because he is still at work in this way, helping every man who desires to make a new start in life and who is willing to start right.

THE TRUTH, THE WHOLE TRUTH.

There is a great deal of misunderstanding in the world as to the conditions on which men may obtain the friendship of Jesus and secure his help in making this new start.

The clergy sometimes tell anxious and inquiring men, who are conscious of their sins, and wish to get release, "Believe in Jesus and you will be all right." There they stop.

A witness who goes into court swears, or at least affirms, "I will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." It might be well to swear the clergy. For this answer, while it is the truth, is not the whole truth. What is it to believe in Jesus? Those who keep his commandments are the ones who really believe him.

There is more to this matter. Jesus himself says: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16: 16. Of course repentance is included, and enduring to the end, all essential to final salvation.

But this is the way of the new start in life,—by way of the waters of baptism, and through allegiance to the one who said: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me."

This was the proposition that Jesus made to Nicodemus: "Ye must be born again. . . . Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3.

This was the proposition that he made to Paul, through Ananias: "And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."—Acts 22: 16.

This is the way in which the "new start" is to be made. Here is the friend; here is his plan of action. The message comes to those who hesitate: "And now why tarriest thou?"

THOSE WHO HAVE FALLEN BY THE WAY.

Those who have been properly baptized, and have made their start, and later have done wrong, of which they are conscious, are on a different footing. We do not call to mind any provision in the law for their rebaptism; but still there is a way open for them.

They have an advocate with the Father. Jesus may be grieved over their errors and wrong conduct, but he is still their Friend. He has not abandoned them this side of the unpardonable sin. Repentance and confession are still open to them. If the wrong concerns themselves and God alone, they may confess to him and make restitution. If it is between them and a brother, they may make confession to the brother, and obtain reconciliation. If it involves the church, they may confess to the church and obtain forgiveness.

Then, having made restitution, so far as is possible, they can go on, resolved to do better, and not repeat the offense. Thus Jesus deals very kindly with human weakness. He offers to men a chance to start all over and conform to the divine will. In such a life there is found peace, satisfaction, happiness. No other life is worth living.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

A SPIRIT APPEAL.

By permission of Brother Joseph Luff we publish the following poem, sung by him at the prayer service at Independence, Missouri, Sunday afternoon, January 5. We commend this poem to the reading of our subscribers, for the reason that it breathes the spirit of appeal, strongly and spiritually accentuated, and in language so simple that none need mistake it.

It should be received in a similar spirit to that in which it is given—a willingness upon the part of the reader to come up to the high standard of personal worthiness of citizenship in the holy hill of Zion, which city is to finally become the residence of the good and perfect, who have wrought rightously and successfully. We also insert it the more cheerfully as it is in rather striking contrast to some of the ostentatious presentations that are sometimes had in the enthusiasm of religious fervor at our prayer service. It appeals to us in a chastening spirit by which the heart is to be made softer and our desires more noble. It commends itself to the hearts of our readers.

Tune:—"Shall we Gather Home to Zion."

Gather where I have appointed;
 Fed and nourished by my hand;
 Chosen, planted, and anointed,
 Blessed people! favored land!
 What to you shall mean this token?
 What the fruitage of my grace?
 My word kept! will yours be broken,
 And my covenant efface?
 Or will you make of this my Zion,
 Whence my glory forth may shine?
 All my promises rely on,
 And henceforth be only mine?

Henceforth, till the consummation
 Of my purpose, who with me
 Will in glad cooperation
 Work till they my glory see?
 Will ye bide when peace hath taken
 From the earth its lasting flight?
 Will ye stand, nor e'er be shaken
 'Mid the gloom of lingering night?
 Will you—good for ill returning—
 Enemies befriend and bless—
 True discipleship discerning,
 And the seal of righteousness?

Who, though death or dire disaster
 Threaten every hope, shall cling
 To my counsel firmer, faster,
 Whatso'er that trust may bring?
 Will you pain esteem as pleasure,
 And each sacrifice as gain,
 If thereby ye may the measure
 Of your Master's stature gain?
 By these tokens faith hath voicing;
 Love hath exhibition clear;
 These in heaven shall cause rejoicing
 And proclaim my Zion here.

Wist ye not when praying often
 That my will on earth be done,
 Grace must first your spirits soften
 And in service make you one?
 One in sweet self-abnegation;
 One in fellowship of love,
 Without marks of wealth or station
 Save those mirrored from above?
 One with me, in which blest union
 God and angels will combine—
 Zion's light, by such communion
 Will in glorious luster shine.

The art of using moderate abilities to advantage wins praise, and often acquires more reputation than real brilliancy.—La Rochefoucauld.

IMPORTANT TO PARENTS.

The new Junior Quarterly for January, February, and March presents lessons for your children on the following subjects:

The Beginning, The Creation of Man, The First Home, Satan, The First Sin, God's Plan to Save Men, Baptism of Adam, The First Children, God's Ministers, Enoch, Noah and the Flood, The Rainbow. The lesson committee considers that children aged nine, ten, and eleven should study these and such-like themes. For the first two years, the lessons are taken from the Old Testament "with references to the Book of Mormon, as they historically occur in the prophecy of Joseph, the scattering from Babel, and at the time of the captivity." The third year's lessons are taken from the New Testament.

Therefore, the above-mentioned twelve subjects will not occur again for three years, after which the pupils now in the grade below will take them up and follow the same course as outlined. Do you want your boy or girl of junior age to pass on and miss these important subjects,—lessons that they need at this stage of their development—do you?

Does your school take the Junior Quarterly? If not, why not? And what are you going to do about it? If the school is remiss in duty, why not order it sent direct to your home address? They are only four cents each per quarter, or twelve cents per year in advance, sent postpaid to any address. A sample copy free for the asking. Get your name on our regular mailing list.

Order from Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa.

Thousands of men breathe, move and live; pass off the stage of life and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in the world; and none were blessed by them; none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke, could be recalled, and so they perished—their light went out in darkness and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, oh man immortal? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No, your name, your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as bright on the earth as the stars of heaven.—Thomas Chalmers.

Original Articles

TRACTING; METHODS, VALUE, AND RESULTS.

(No. 1, "Methods and tactics" series.)

This is the first number of our "Methods and tactics" series for 1913. Two writers contribute to this number. The article by Brother Miller was written especially for the series; the one by Brother Rudd is reprinted from a report appearing in Autumn Leaves. The subject treated upon is one of importance. Brother Miller mentions one prospective convert who neglected to read the tracts, saying that she preferred a "love story." Sister Daniel MacGregor has taken advantage of this tendency and is using the "Two-Story Book" in her tracting work. This book contains two love stories, through which the old gospel love story runs like a golden thread. Perhaps this book will get in where others fail. The next number in this series will be, "Getting into the newspapers," by Elder W. E. LaRue. We are exceedingly well pleased with the way in which our special series for 1913 opens up. Already we have in hand many very excellent articles. The writers seem to have felt considerable spiritual power and insight in the preparation of these articles. The articles on "Methods and tactics," and the ones on "Duties of officers" will make a profitable course of reading for the year.—EDITORS.

1. TRACTING, METHODS, VALUE.

To-day, the "efficiency expert" is forcing his way in many lines of human endeavor. The commercial world is trying to find out how to obtain maximum results with minimum expenditure of power, time, and money. As I understand it, the editors want me to write about efficiency, as applied to "tracting." The writer makes no claim to being an expert along this line; but I have tried to be observant, and have some opinions.

We are committed to tracting by the following revelation:

It is the duty of the church to provide tracts in the Scandinavian, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese languages, and others, as the missions may require; these tracts to be written by those in the ministry and those of the brothers who are not of the ministry who have a talent for writing, and to be submitted to the presidency before being published. They should be short, clearly stated, and a sufficient number should be printed to furnish the traveling ministry with the quantities desirable for them to distribute.—Doctrine and Covenants 125.

Tracts in the English language having been published by the church for many years: a revelation commanding this to be done was not a necessity, but I should think, what applies to the foreign tracts would be applicable equally to the English ones. An item in the revelation should be noticed. They should be "short, clearly stated." Then for doing missionary work with "paper," select "short, clearly-stated" tracts, is the divine advice.

Here are some of the methods used:

1. Distributing from house to house, in cities and villages, by slipping under the door, or handing to a person who has been summoned.

2. Nailed to a post or building in some conspicuous place, to be torn off by the public.

3. Placed in a suitable rack at the entrance of place of meeting.

4. In railroad stations.

5. On railroad trains.

6. Using the mails.

I believe the above will about cover the methods generally employed in tracting.

Number 1. House to house distribution, I believe, is considered one of the most efficient methods of distribution. About five years ago I made my maiden effort at preaching on the street, (and for several evenings not-wished-to-be-remembered) at the street, in a town of about one thousand inhabitants in eastern Ohio. To supplement my street efforts I distributed tracts, and this is the method I used. I selected what I considered to be three of the best tracts the HERALD and Ensign published. To keep them from being soiled I obtained paper, cut the right size, and pasted this on-as a cover, which could be readily torn off and another supplied. On this cover I rubber-stamped the following: This tract will be called for in one week and will be substituted by others. A minister will gladly call, explaining our faith more fully, by addressing ——." In three weeks I distributed the three varieties of material. As I gathered up the last lot, I inquired at every home if the tracts had been read and what they thought of them. In that town of about three hundred families, two persons had read a "little" of one of the tracts; one woman had read all of them! There were a variety of excuses given for not having read them. One young lady frankly said, "would rather read a love story." A practical mechanic, analyzing that three-week effort of mine, would say there was a whole lot of "lost motion" there; and that is what I thought, and I left the place.

In analyzing the situation, this is how I viewed it. My little tracts had to compete with the daily paper, the weekly magazine, the monthly publications, and a host of books and periodicals found in the average home to-day, all of these written by the world's best talent, and illustrated artistically, and the comic-section-way, and the magazines, etc., won. No wonder the Lord says our tracts should be short!

I was a printer for fifteen years; when I first worked at the trade, we did a large amount of printing which was to be tacked on fences, telegraph poles, and distributed on streets. Before I quit the business of such kinds of printing were very seldom turned out of the office. Business men discovered the lack of results from such profligate advertising. To attract attention to-day, outdoor advertising must be vociferous; the message must be megaphoned. Even the theaters, to attract attention, must deliver their message on a larger scale than before, and to-day we see the large, expensive, lithographic poster glaring from the billboards.

Number 2 method I believe to be a waste of money. In one branch, where they met in a hall, a double sign, standing on the sidewalk, announcing the services, had a box on the top for tracts, with the invitation to take one. Many tracts, mostly the Epitome, were disposed of in this way, but how much good was accomplished there was no means of finding out.

Number 3 is a good plan; but in our small branches a stranger is generally recognized, and a better way would be to have such a rack there, and one of the officers take out a tract and hand it to the visitor.

Number 4. You very seldom use this method now; at least I have not noticed it in my travels, and think it is about abandoned.

Number 5. So is this plan likewise being confined to the shades of oblivion.

The last method opens quite a field of tract distribution. Mercantile concerns pay large sums for mailing lists of prospective customers, and spend an infinite amount of time and patience developing such lists. The object being to avoid waste, the list is culled from time to time so the advertising matter goes only to those who may be prospective customers. In one branch of the church in a large city, fifty dollars was spent in mailing "Latter Day Saints; Who are they" to the school-teachers and educators, including the ministers. This was more of an educational effort than a proselyting one.

I believe the personal element must enter largely in successful tract work. The members can supplement the work of the ministry by mailing tracts to their friends as they write to them, urging them to read such matter. To further introduce the personal element in such methods, would suggest that when a tract is selected, before it is mailed, it be read, and good points, here and there, marked by pen or pencil. "Pastor Russell," of the Millennial Dawn sect, is considered an excellent advertiser. Some of his sermons are printed on good paper, about six by nine inches, and on the margins, here and there, in red ink, points are emphasized, sometimes by an index finger, a heavy line, or, "What do you think of this point?" etc., and sometimes all of these together! Of course, one will naturally notice such emphasis, but it can be made even more effective if the individuality of the sender is impressed upon it by the above suggestion.

The revelation quoted suggests the thought that the ministers should do some tracting. We probably lose many opportunities for doing effectual work. No matter how hard we try to make our message plain, there will always be some points not clear in the mind of the listener, and sometimes an erroneous impression is conveyed. If our preaching is supplemented by proper tract distribution, our effort has been intelligently reinforced, as the recipient of the tract has shown sufficient interest to make the effort to come out, and if a tract is handed him, the probabilities are he will read it, and can do so repeatedly.

The tract has its peculiar mission; but from observation I am forced to the conclusion that owing to the abundance of reading matter now being circulated, and of which the average home is the depository, the field of the gospel tract is becoming narrower; and if intelligence is not used, time, means, and effort will be wasted; but we should not be so cautious as to be heedless of the injunction, "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand."

"He that is warned let him warn his neighbor."

C. EDWARD MILLER.

2. TRACTING; PRACTICAL RESULTS.

Results are the best evidence. There is no argument that can meet them. They at once put an end to all controversy. Let me give you a few of the results that have been reported to me.

A good literature committee woman of Kansas City, Kansas, without any previous experience, very diffident and fearful, started the distribution of gospel literature. She did not know just how to go about it, so in her simplicity she told God that if he wanted her to do this work, to manifest himself in some way that she might know it was his will.

The Spirit rested upon her and told her to go and the Lord would be with her, so she gathered up her tracts, papers, and books, and started. Not knowing where to go, she walked aimlessly down the street until suddenly a voice spoke to her and told her to go into the next house. She went in, left her literature, and again started down the street. She had been received so cordially at the first place that she thought she would try the next house, but the Spirit told her not to go in there. Thus she continued her work all that day, being directed by the Spirit just what houses to enter and what ones not to, everywhere being received most cordially and with seeming interest in the gospel.

The next trip she made the Spirit was still with her, directing where and where not to go, but in one case when she was told not to go into a house she went anyway and a woman slammed the door in her face. After that she was satisfied that God knew best, and as a result of her work thirty-four were baptized, a branch was organized, and a church has been built.

Can you produce any evidence from God against the good literature work?

In another case a good literature worker was talking to a very stanch Methodist lady, answering various questions that were asked, the answers being satisfactory until the question of baptism was raised. She said, "Why, I have been baptized." The answer was, "No, you mean you have been sprinkled; that is not baptism." "But our church," she said, "teaches that one form of baptism is as good as another." Our worker said, "The Bible teaches that immersion is the only accepted method. Now, who are you going to believe, God, or the Methodists?"

About three months afterwards this woman came to one of our prayer meetings and related the above conversation and said that when this last question was asked, some power rested upon her and thrilled her whole being, and that she had been trying to convince herself ever since that it was nothing more than personal magnetism; but she had not been able to do so, and wanted them to pray for her. The following Saturday she was baptized.

Another of our workers left some tracts at the home of a very devout Baptist family, consisting of a man and his wife and three grown daughters. The woman received the tracts very kindly and promised to read them, but when her husband came home that evening he said: "No, no; you must not have anything to do with those people; they are Mormons. We can not allow anything of that kind in our family."

Our worker heard about this and said, "I must go and tell those people that we are not Mormons, at least, and as much more as they will receive." After praying over the matter she went in the evening so she would find the man at home. He met her at the door and she told him that we were not Mormons and explained the difference, and he invited her in.

After talking with him about fifteen minutes the Spirit told her that he and all of his family would come into the church; but upon leaving he told her that he had been a Baptist for fifteen years and if he lived to be fifty years older he would still be a Baptist. But man proposes and God disposes. In three weeks he and all his family were baptized and are now active workers in the church.

These are but a few of the results and I am using them not only to show that God is approving the work of the good literature committees, but to inspire you to greater effort. Just think of the wonderful work that is yet to be accomplished in warning our neighbors, and how few there are really qualified and willing to do it; but unless we do, we are told that their blood shall be upon our heads. What a grave responsibility it is to be a Latter Day Saint! Yet, what a great joy is promised if we save but one soul.

J. F. RUDD.

• * * * •

Here the free spirit of mankind, at length,
Throws its last fetters off; and who shall place
A limit to the giant's unchained strength,
Or curb his swiftness in the forward race?
—William Cullen Bryant.

FUNDAMENTALS OF THE ORDER OF ENOCH.

The fundamental principles of the United Order of Enoch are so just and true, that, when rightly understood they appeal to all who have an interest in their fellow men. Its aim is to help the worthy in a moral, social, financial, and educational way, and to get homes; which is sure to give strength for development along religious lines. In this article it will be the effort of the writer to make plain what those principles are.

When a society has high ideals, and a lofty purpose in view, it should invite to its ranks men and women who are willing and capable of rendering "service" to the worthy ones of society who need it, and have the encouragement of philanthropic and sympathizing friends. The Order of Enoch, like all other societies, should be judged by its principles, and not by those members who fail to be faithful to the covenant they have made.

ITS PRINCIPLES.

First: Faith. Faith in God; faith in his work; faith in his love to his children; faith in his power to do with human instruments what he has commanded us to do; faith in each other, and faith in those whom God has called, or we have selected as leaders in the work we are trying to do.

Second: Love. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." Love can only express itself by doing something. John said we should love in "deed and in truth." A live tree will have leaves on it; a human being will show that it is alive by doing something, and what is done will show the kind of life or power individuals possess. A person filled with hate will do hateful things, and one filled with love will do good continually, and take pleasure in it.

Third: Honesty. To be honest is one of the essentials of true success. Without it we must fail. A person who is dishonest in his business transactions with his neighbors, dishonest to God, who will not do an honest day's labor, who, in any way in the various relations of life is dishonest, is unworthy to be associated with good men and women in any good work.

Fourth: Industry. All persons, unless physically or mentally unable to labor, should be industrious, and labor according to their strength. None should quit labor because of wealth. With old age the amount of labor performed should decrease. To live from the labor of others, except under the conditions named above, is dishonest and dishonorable, and all such are parasites and should have no part or lot among the Lord's people.

Fifth: Economy. Success in all walks of life will be affected by the manner in which we use our time and money; if economically and wisely used, the greatest degree of success will be realized. If we are wasteful and extravagant, we will be disappointed because of our intellectual attainments being below our anticipations, and in our accumulation of wealth, we will have such a small measure of success that we will be deprived of many of the reasonable comforts of life, unless we are so dishonest that we fail to pay for what we buy, and in old age will face poverty and be dependent on others for a livelihood. Unfavorable industrial and agricultural conditions often make the burden of life hard to bear, and when extravagance and wastefulness are added, we wear a yoke so galling that there is no hope of rising above prospective poverty, and it is only by the ability of such to beat their creditors that they can keep up the appearance of financial success. If we closely observe conditions in the world and in the church, we will discover that one of the heaviest burdens that the wage-earner bears, especially those who have steady employment and good wages, is wastefulness and extravagance. Economy is a strange word to them. It is an obsolete one.

Sixth: Order and System. Men who do not put their tools away when through using them, or re-hang the gate when broken off, or put in a window light when broken out; who leave the yard in a littered and disorderly condition; and women who have a home of disorder and confusion, who have Friday for washday, and finish ironing on Saturday night, and finish the week's work on Sunday morning, and hurry the children to Sunday school with an unprepared lesson, are depriving the family of the sweet associations of a well-ordered home, and sowing the seed that will bring a harvest of sorrow and bitter disappointment to the children.

Seventh: Equality. There is so much inequality in the world and among our own people that the Lord has spoken against it and given us a law by which it can be removed. "Let every man deal honestly, and be alike among this people, and receive alike, that ye may be one, even as I have commanded you." (Doctrine and Covenants 51: 2.) The best definition of equality, so far as it applies to our people, is given by the Lord himself as follows: "And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, [of the Order of Enoch. E. R.] for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God" (Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4).

There are two very important principles to be found in those paragraphs. First, equality. What does it mean? We can no more determine equality by measuring it with money than we can measure water with a sieve or vegetables with a yard stick; true equality consists in supplying our just needs and wants. Two persons have each five dollars; one needs a pair of shoes and the other needs a suit of clothes; the former one can supply his needs, the latter can not. They both have the same amount of money, but it will not buy what each one needs. There are two children in a family. They both desire to become musicians, the boy a violinist, the girl a pianist. The boy can get a violin for twenty-five dollars. It will cost the girl three hundred dollars for a piano. If they both obtain their just needs, so that they can develop their talent, they are equal. Second, all things common is best defined by the Lord himself, when he said, speaking to the Order of Enoch about what its members should do with what they gained by improving upon their talents, or stewardship, "To be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church." (Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4, latter part of the verse.) Whatever has come into the possession of the church or Order of Enoch, in lands, money, or merchandise, in the storehouse, is the common property of all, and all have equal claim on it according to their just needs and wants. Official or social position, or the amount of wealth a person may have contributed, gives him no special claim on the property; it belongs to all; it is the common property of all.

The seven principles just considered must be a part of our everyday life. Without them we can not render a faithful service to our fellow men, and thereby be in the service of God. To the extent we lack those principles we are out of harmony with Jesus, for they were all found in his daily life.

ELIMINATIONS.

That we might be qualified to render "service" to the church, and the Order of Enoch, there are some things that we must eliminate from our lives. Covetousness: To desire what belongs to some one else is one of the meanings of the word covet. It is one of the great sins that our heavenly Father condemns. We not only want what belongs to others, but we withhold from the Lord what belongs to him, that he has blessed us with.

Selfishness. A selfish person always thinks of himself. If a man, his wife and children must consider his wants first; he is so busy with the daily paper, or a novel, that he can not take care of the baby while his wife goes out in the yard to cut kindling wood with a dull ax, and carry coal with which to cook the supper. If a woman, she is so anxious to be up-to-date in modern dress that, if she has not the money, it is bought on credit, and her husband can bear the humiliation of being dunned for payment long after the time promised for its payment. Sacrifice for the good of others is not thought of, no money to help the Lord's work, no thought that the poor and the missionaries' families have need of the comforts of life that they might have sunshine in their homes and enjoy the blessings that our heavenly Father desires should be common to all. Paul said that a covetous person could not inherit the kingdom of God (1 Corinthians 6: 10), and a person can not be covetous and not be selfish.

Jealousy. Jealousy is surely a green-eyed monster. It separates friends; it destroys the happiness of home; it looks with suspicion on the success of others; it prevents successful cooperation in all things that make for good among brothers of the same faith and men of the same craft or occupation; it hinders the Lord's work and takes from life sweetness and sunshine.

Grouchiness. The name, grouch, may not be in the dictionary, but most people know what it means. The grouch is a busy person when measured by the amount of talking done. His time is mostly spent in finding fault with others. He rates his ability very high; those who know him rate it very low. Anything that other people do could be improved on, or it would be better not done at all. Wherever he is found, in the home, Sunday school, church, or any other society, he destroys their happiness and hinders or prevents all the good they are trying to do. No person can please him; he can not please himself. Some people get tired of their occupation; he does not; he sticks to it. It is an occupation without a salary, but he will not quit, perhaps he proves the old adage true, that the "good die young."

The church and Order of Enoch, and all helps in the church will realize their full measure of success when the first seven principles become the common routine of everyday life, and the last four cancerous growths have been removed. If they are not, they will surely pollute the individual and destroy his spiritual life.

The spirit of the world is, What can I get? The spirit of the church and the Order of Enoch is, What can I do to serve? and whoever comes below that standard is not filling the measure of his calling as a follower of the lowly Nazarene, who went about doing good. The purpose of the Order of Enoch is to help all worthy and needy persons in the church. The order has a higher ideal and aim than any other benevolent society in the world. Its members can not receive help unless they need it. Their special duty is to help others. Men or women who are dishonest, and will contract debts and not pay them, who are lazy and will not work, who waste their income and squander their wealth, are not worthy to receive from those who have been industrious and frugal,—their first work should be a reformation in character, a putting off "of the old man and his sins."

The benevolent work of the order will meet every emergency in life, from the cradle to the grave. There is not a misfortune to which a man is heir but what it can reach. Its helping hand is at the young mother's bedside, "when she feels for the first time her first born's breath." It stands by the bedside of the gray-haired sire and sees that he is not laid in the potter's field or in a pauper's grave, and brings comfort and succor to the widow who goes back to her lonely home to await the summons that will take her to the one that she had loved from youth to old age.

METHODS.

Of two methods of work by the order, I will write; and in doing so, I do not wish to convey the thought that that is the only way it will seek to accomplish its benevolent work. The reader must bear in mind that the order can not carry out, only in a partial manner, its full purposes, until such time when the church shall allot inheritances and assign stewardships according to the law of the Lord. Until that time our work shall be largely of a preparatory nature, getting ready for the greater work that shall be required at our hands when the work of Zion shall be more fully developed. We will consider first a cooperative, or collective stewardship, and shall only try to give the spirit of it, the fundamental principles that underly it,—the details will be worked out in a way suitable to the different conditions under which the different stewardships may be had. The order will maintain a storehouse, where the products of the farm, mill, and factory will be stored. Whether produced by our own, or purchased from others, it will be the common property of all.

EXAMPLES.

We will presume that the order builds a sash, door, and planing mill, and it takes thirty operatives to do the work. Each employee will be assigned by the foreman to that class of work which he is best qualified to do. They will all receive according to their "just needs and wants." There will be no distinction made between the superintendent, foreman, mechanic, and common laborer. The man with a small family will receive less than the one with a large family; the unmarried one less than either one of them. At the beginning of the year or some other time agreed upon, there will be an agreement between the individual and the order as to what his "needs and wants" will be for the coming year, to be supplied from the storehouse and in money, by the week or any other division of time agreed upon. We labor for the necessities of life, and it matters not whether we get them direct or purchase them with money; all the merchandise we get from the storehouse will correspondingly reduce the amount of money we will need to buy elsewhere.

We will consider the case of the unmarried young man. In the world at large he might earn fifty dollars per month; and if he was careful of his habits of life, he would save twenty-five per month and deposit it in a savings bank, and in five years, with accumulated interest, he would have more than fifteen hundred dollars, provided the banker did not gamble with it on the board of trade and lose it all; or a panic come along and the bank close up and his savings all go. If these things did not happen, and he got married, he would have money enough to start life in a comfortable home.

In the order he would accomplish the same thing in another and better way. The young man would draw in money or merchandise from the storehouse to the amount of twenty-five dollars per month (the reader will please bear in mind I am only giving these figures for the purpose of illustration, and am not making a definite statement as to amounts the order will pay; they could be more, they might be less). When the time came to prepare for his married life, he would report to the order, and plans would be prepared for a home, and on a lot he owned, or one furnished by the order, it would be erected. The principal thing with the young man and his prospective bride is that they have a comfortable, convenient home. They will not want to boast of a home that cost two thousand dollars, with less comforts in it than one that cost fifteen hundred dollars.

The mill has the lumber, cement, and sand, and they will do all the mill work; the storehouse contains hardware, paint, electric light fixtures, and it will have most, if not all, that is needed to furnish a home. What does it matter to the happy husband and wife if they do not see a dollar? They have what their hearts craved. Their just needs and wants have been supplied. The church, the order, and themselves, are a trinity that have worked together for their good, and all have been benefited by the united effort.

Many of our young people to-day, if they were under such restraining influences as the order and the church would have over them, would not start out in their married life without a home, and their furniture purchased at an installment house, and they to be harassed with debt the rest of their lives. The future will bring to them, as in most homes, children, which mean expense and added cost to live, and in various other ways their "needs and wants" will increase, all of which will be met by the order by increasing the monthly allowance, and paying any special demands made on them. Sickness and accidents are sure to come in such work, and instead of going in debt at the grocery store and other places, to burden him for a year or more, his "just needs and wants" will be met by the order. When he returns to work, it will not be with a heavy heart to meet his fellow workmen, who will sympathize with him in his misfortune, but whose burdens are so great they can not help him; but it will be with the happy smile of his brethren, who know there is no hungry wolf at his door,—the love of the brethren drove the wolf away; they have learned the lesson that "we all are brethren." Old age will come by and by, "the old man" will not be discharged to go to the county poor farm to end his days;—his work will be made lighter. There are younger and stronger men there who can lift the heavy burdens. The time comes that he must lay his tools by. His hands are too feeble to toil now. Will his allowance stop now? Ah, no! He has something better than an old age pension from a corporation. The doors of the order's storehouse are open to him, and with the dear old companion of his youth he spends his last days in contentment and happiness, amid his children and grandchildren, and the brethren whom he loves because the gospel has made them of "one heart and one mind," and none are poor, none are rich; all have equal claim and all share of God's blessings.

AN INDIVIDUAL STEWARDSHIP.

We will consider an individual stewardship; that of a mechanic. We will suppose he is a blacksmith: that is his stewardship; it is his business. At the end of the year, after meeting all his obligations, he has an increase of five hundred dollars. He has been able to reduce the cost of his living and the expense of his business, because he has obtained most, if not all, of his supplies from the storehouse. He would owe the church fifty dollars tithing. (See Articles of Association, page 5, B), and the four hundred and fifty dollars he would pay into the treasury of the order. By his honesty and faithfulness he builds up a trade so large he can no longer do the work himself. He notifies the order of this condition of his business and wishes to enlarge it, and asks the order for one thousand dollars to enlarge his stewardship (see articles of association, page 5, A), which is supplied in cash and from the storehouse. By this enlargement he can give another brother work, which will increase his profits; which will increase the amount of tithing he can pay the church; also increase the amount of surplus to be paid into the treasury of the order. This could continue indefinitely, and whenever the number of men was increased, the profits to the church and the order would increase. When the brother gets too old to longer work at his trade, he makes such disposition of the property as may be just and fair, as agreed upon by himself and the order, and retires from the field of labor and receives from the order that which will properly supply his just wants and needs for the remainder of his life.

FARMER.

A farmer's stewardship will be of mutual benefit to himself and the consumer. All the products of the farm that could not be utilized at the storehouse, he could sell elsewhere. He would receive proper credit at the storehouse for what was taken there, and anything that he needed that was in the storehouse he would receive according to his needs and wants. Nothing would be wasted on the farm. All the fruit, vegetables, and poultry supplies that the farmer did not need for his own use, would be taken to the storehouse, regardless of the market price. It is not so now. It occurs every year that fruit and vegetables are rotting in the fields and orchards within ten miles of market, and prices so high to the consumer that he can not supply his just needs. It will be a great blessing to all, and of special good to the church, the missionary's family, and the poor and needy. It will greatly help the church; it can pay the greater part of its allowances by orders on the storehouse, and have its money to prosecute other important work.

We realize that many will say that we can not get men to work under such conditions; that they will go where they can get the best wages for the present, regardless of what the future may bring, believing that the dollar in their possession is more valuable than the prospective future one. To believe that is to deny God's wisdom and power to do with human instruments what he has commanded to be done. The history of the past shows that they have done it, and we have living epistles before our eyes every day that men are doing it now. The men in the service of the church are doing it now: if there is any variation from that rule, it is in isolated cases and does not abrogate the rule. If the President and Prophet of the church can place himself on a financial level with the humblest missionary in the field, so can the superintendent of a mill or factory come to the same plane with his less skilled and less qualified brother, working under his direction. If an apostle can stand on the same financial platform with the minister in charge under him, so can a foreman do likewise with the men whom he directs.

I will give a few cases of which I have the information at hand, which are no doubt samples of many in the service of the church. One brother gave up an occupation that was paying him more than a hundred dollars a month. His family receives less than forty dollars per month. A missionary in the field whose family received about thirty dollars per month refused to go back to his trade at a salary of seven dollars per day. Another, receiving two hundred and fifty dollars per month, gave it up and entered the service of the church at a hundred dollars per month. It is safe to say that the majority of the men in the service of the church receive for themselves and family about half, or less, than they could receive at secular employment in the business world. If this army of men, women, and children, can place themselves at the service of the church on the basis of their "just needs and wants," so can all others in the church do likewise; they can and will do it when they have attained to that spiritual condition that will bring them under the law of Christ as pointed out in the first seven rules in this article, and the elimination of the evil in our lives as pointed out in the last four.

CONCLUSION.

Dear reader, are you interested in the spiritual, moral, and temporal welfare of the entire church? Do you want to help make Zion "The pure in heart"? Do you want to help in a cause that seeks to bless our fellow beings and bring comfort to the weary and heavy laden? Do you want to help bring good cheer to the widow and orphan? Do you want to help make the last days of the aged ones free from the dread of poverty? Do you want to help make happy homes? Do you want to be in the ranks of those whose aim is "mankind to bless"? If you do, then give to the Order of Enoch your moral and financial support. If you honestly differ from us and can not work with us, and you believe you have a better way, then give us the charity of your silence, and without seeking to tear ours down by misrepresentation, go on in your work, and let God decide between us as he did with Elijah and the prophets of Baal. We tried to organize it as God would have us, and those present realized that his Spirit, according to promise, was present to help in their work. It has received the approval of the proper court and state officers of Missouri, and its contracts and obligations are enforceable in the courts, like those of any other corporation within the State.

EDWARD RANNIE.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

---

He who seeks only for applause from without has all his happiness in another's keeping.—Oliver Goldsmith.

---

It is what a man has to contend with rather than what he has to depend on that settles the question of his manhood.—H. Clay Trumbull.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 630 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

[The thoughtful will surely find food for reflection in the following communication from Eleanor.—EDITOR.]

To the Prayer Union.

Dear Sisters: I have felt impressed for some time that momentous events are near, affecting both the church and the restoration of ancient Israel to their land given to their fathers; that our mission at Jerusalem is being established there to be to them as a city of refuge when they turn to seek the Lord with their whole heart, a refuge from the many false religions that infest the ancient city. Also that there is great danger for all Christians, including our missionaries, when the Turks and other Mohammedans, driven from power in Europe, take revenge on the Christians in Asia. It is then, I believe, that God will fulfill his promise to make bare his arm in the defense of his Saints. So I have thought we might set apart Thursday, January 30, as a day for fasting and prayer in behalf of our mission at Jerusalem. For scripture reading, Isaiah 52: 1-10. Also from Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 6: 1.

ELEANOR.

Only be Patient.

At the beginning of a New Year, it is, as one says, as if the good Lord gave each of his people a present of a beautiful case with three hundred and sixty-five letters in so many drawers, one to be opened every morning, with a special message for the day. But we would fain be always looking forward, and opening them when we choose. Perhaps our birthday is in April, and it is now only January,—we should like to get on a little faster, as the time draws near. Or, we are looking for some important event to happen in September—we are expecting to leave the country, or enter upon some new work, and we should very much like to see what the letter for that day says! But God says—No, be patient—take each day as it comes. Begin every day with receiving God's message for the day. Fulfill each day's duty faithfully, "as to the Lord"; and leave the rest of the year and of your life with him.—Reverend G. S. Bones.

He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves and sharpens our skill. Our antagonist is our helper.—Edmund Burke.

Letter Department

WILBURTON, OKLAHOMA, January 2, 1913.

Editors Herald: As another year has passed and gone, with all its sorrows and pleasures, I thought I would write a letter for the HERALD, which God has permitted to see another year to send the gospel news to many homes. I am satisfied the editors have not been free from their trials, which are common to all men, but the struggling tides of life that seem in aimless, wayward course to tend,

"Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its appointed end."

Yes, friends, we have passed another milepost on life's road, and that means we are one year nearer the end. While last year was passing away, it brought the end to many, which has created a sadness in the hearts of husbands, wives, mothers, fathers, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters, and friends, that time will never efface. Yes, time destroys nations and kingdoms, and sets up still other kingdoms. Dear Saints, let me say that time will soon bring the joyful event when the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdom of our Lord, Jesus Christ, and he shall reign a thousand bright years, and then God will wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there will be no more death, neither sorrow; no more sad good-byes. This is why ages have been rolling upon the swift wings of time, with its forgotten pages of history, to bring man to this glorious condition, which the star of hope has pointed out to man in all the ages of the world.

Saints, of all people who ought to be happy, we ought to be the happiest. We are about to reach that glorious condition that God's people have looked and hoped for for thousands of years.

I read a statement in Hebrews 11:24, 25: "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season." Indeed, he knew his Redeemer lived, and I am thankful that God has not withheld this knowledge from his children in these last days.

I have just returned from a trip from southeastern Oklahoma, where I held some meetings. I preached a few days in Fort Towson. This is the home of the Wilson Brothers. They are Indians, and worth about a million dollars. When I saw them passing to and from their business I thought of that scripture where it says they shall be nursed of the Gentiles. This Fort Towson is the place to which the United States Government moved the Choctaws eighty-two years ago, when their lands were bought in Mississippi. They were then poor, unlearned people, almost savage, wandering, as it were, in the forest; but now some of them own their millions, and many of them occupy high positions in life. When I was laboring in the Creek Nation, several years ago, I was baptizing two Indians. Another Indian came up out of the woods, walked up to me and said: "Indians be baptized heap before long." This Indian was of the Sac and Fox tribe, and those who knew him said he was never known to speak English before. I believe God is remembering ancient Israel, and the time is coming soon when thousands of them will come, singing songs of everlasting joy to the gospel.

May this year be noted with great progress for the gospel and the power of God's Spirit among his Saints, to build up Zion and to prepare the church for the coming of our Savior. Let us hope and work and we will soon realize what God's people have hoped for in all ages.

A happy New Year to all.

E. A. ERWIN.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 6, 1913.

Dear Herald: I just drop a few lines to keep a promise to many of the dear Saints in Michigan, made when we left there for the land of Zion. The doctor told my companion it would be better for her to leave Michigan; that a change of climate was the only help for her, and she was very anxious to come, thinking she might improve in health. But she was disappointed, as she had three weeks of awful suffering after we arrived here, and on the 23d of December fell asleep, her suffering ended, which was a source of comfort to us. But while we were looking for the end so long, we miss her very much, but believe our loss is her gain, as she was anxious to go and prayed to be released from her suffering. For about four hours she did not seem to suffer much, then passed away, quietly, without a struggle, like going to sleep.

It will be forty-two years to-morrow since we started life's struggles together, and I must say she bore her part well and faithfully. She always wished to be buried in Zion. The trip here was a hard one for her.

We visited our son, David, in Chicago, about three weeks, also William H., at Danville, Illinois, four weeks, and she was very sick at both places. I am very thankful to the dear Saints who were so kind and ready to help in the hour of trial. Please remember me in your prayers.

Your humble brother in Christ,

1208 WEST LEXINGTON STREET.

WM. DOWKER.

MILLET, ALBERTA, CANADA, January 5, 1913.

Editors Herald: If you will kindly permit me space in your valuable paper, I will try to state my experience in my search for the truth.

At the time of which I write, I was living in a backwoods country, in the County of North Bruce, province of Ontario; and although I had not much book learning, I was somewhat acquainted with the New Testament, and had some reverence for the religion that was embraced by the people of that part. At this time there was a revival on and as I had the idea that the Spirit of God was the spirit of wisdom, I therefore watched for some manifestation of the same. As these people were not loud, but fervent in their worship, I did not discern anything wrong from that standpoint, but when it came to their doctrine of eternal damnation, I could not believe that; so I began my search for the truth.

I made up my mind to search the New Testament for the doctrine of Christ, and decided to embrace the same, wherever found, be it even in the Catholic Church. I studied with a will to learn doctrine, and came to the conclusion that the mode of baptism was immersion, and that God was a God of miracles and revelation, and that the people who had the gospel would claim that the signs followed them; also that Christ's church was not on earth so far as I knew, but came to the conclusion to try to prove all things, hold fast that which was good. Therefore I decided to debate the idea I had with my mother. I asked mother what she thought of present-day revelation, and she replied that we had the Bible, and if I did all that it taught I would be pretty good.

I gave assent to this, but it did not answer my question. I said: "Show me something that will be of light, such as the queen when she was in doubt whether she should give her consent for an army to go up to battle, or something that would be equivalent to what was given David when he asked, 'Shall we go up or shall we forbear?' and the word came, 'Thou shalt go up or thou shalt forbear.'"

Then I asked her why the signs were not following the believers, and she said they were given to confirm the church, but I thought the reason was the people were not believing enough.

The first sermon I heard was preached by Elder McIntosh, on the organization of the church of Jesus Christ, and I was so pleased with it that I wanted to hear more; so after a while I obeyed the truth, and have had many experiences that have proven to me that it is the gospel, and that God is a God of miracles and of revelation.

Hoping this may encourage some pilgrim wayfarer, who is striving to walk in the narrow way.

I remain your brother in the one faith,

JOHN SLOCUM.

BAY MINETTE, ALABAMA, January 6, 1913.

Dear Herald: I have often been encouraged by reading the good letters in your valuable paper. I have been in this work almost twenty years, and it grows brighter and more glorious to me each day. There have come to me many blessings through the gospel.

When I first came into the church I had had sore eyes nearly all my life; at times could hardly see my way. One night in a dream, Brother M. M. Turpen administered to me. It seemed very real. In a few days my eyes were well, and the affliction has never returned, for which I am very thankful. Not only this, but many other blessings I have received at different times.

My patriarchal blessing, which I received in October, 1912, under the hands of Patriarch Ammon White, has brought much comfort and joy to my heart. Such grand blessings the good Master has in store for all those who love and serve him!

With a New Year just in, I feel a stronger determination than ever before to do all I can for the good of this grand latter day work. Am trying to live each day as best I can, and feel sure if we all do that, we will come out victorious in the end. Though I have many hindrances, I am determined, with God's help, to love and serve him.

I have had the care of rearing a family of four children. They are all grown and married now, except one, and are all members of the true church of Christ.

Trusting that we all may so live that he will count us worthy to be called his children, at his coming, is my prayer.

Your sister,

MRS. M. F. WARR.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

Editors Herald: It is Christmas Eve. The little children have long since completed their preparations and retired to rest, their minds filled with the vision of the coming day. "To-morrow" is the vision of childhood; "yesterday" the dream of age. It is now a quarter of a century since, as a lad, I entered the ministry. Practically all of that time has been given to expounding the gospel in various States and Territories. Necessarily during that time I have, in common with my fellow ministry formed many endearing ties in gospel work. Ever and anon am I reminded of this on receiving some endearing note from some unexpected quarter. As I contemplate how meager has been my contribution to the cause of truth, I am impressed with the overshadowing contribution of which Christmas is or should be a commemoration.

The story of the Nativity is wondrous sweet and full of pathos. It is a pity it should, in the slightest way, be robbed of its power and simplicity, by the sordid practices of a none too Christian age.

The principle of gift giving is in no sense distinctly Christian. Modern Christianity is more nearly pagan than Christian giving is in this; "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." Notice! "God so loved the world"—the wicked, sinning, ungrateful world, men and women who had continuously spurned his overtures of kindness, who had repeatedly killed the prophets whom he had sent among them—God so loves this world that he gave his only begotten Son, knowing when he gave him that the great mass would reject him, but he gave him in spite of this ingratitude. He did not give thinking to receive aught in return. The act was wholly unselfish. Unselfish giving is distinctly Christian. Modern Christianity is more nearly pagan than Christian. We have forgotten, in a large degree, early Christian ideals.

It is but pertinent to recall that the first Christian church was a cow shed and the first Christian altar a manger. Jesus could have been born in a palatial home, surrounded with every comfort, but such trappings would not have been in keeping with his mission. He said in substance: "Let me be one with those whom I would succor; let me live their life, endure their privations, experience their trials, and bear their afflictions. I want no favors. That which the poor can not enjoy I do not want." With one fell stroke he eliminated caste and station from the real brotherhood.

Churches have risen and churches have fallen; men have come and men have gone, but the Christ spirit still persists. If there is one thing more than another which looms high in the life and teachings of Jesus, it is his appeal for a common brotherhood. Jesus loved most those who needed most. He came to give out, not to take in; to impart rather than to receive. Oh, that we were really born again; that we were one with Christ in suffering, in giving self for the world—the sick and sorrowing world—without regard to class, creed, or color.

The truth is as dear to me as ever, and although my tongue and pen have been silent for reasons which to me are wholly justifiable, I have not let go the plow, nor am I looking back, longing for the fleshpots. I love the fellowship of Saints and treasure above price the confidence and support of the many, many noble, unselfish souls whom I have learned to love in gospel work.

May hope and cheer gladden the hearts of God's children everywhere.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

R. E. Grant's Lectures.

A series of lectures against the Latter Day Saints was delivered by Mr. Grant in the Christian church at Lagonda, Missouri, some time ago. The bills posted and circulated in the neighborhood announcing the lectures read: "Come, let us reason together. Since the Latter Day Saints as a church deny to all others the authority to be, or to act as ministers of God's word or as administrators of the ordinances of his church and gospel, Elder R. E. Grant, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, will deliver a series of lectures in the Christian church, Lagonda, beginning August 20, on such topics as Joseph Smith; Revelations from Doctrine and Covenants; Authority and Source of Power, etc. Elder Grant is a courteous, yet fearless speaker of national reputation. All are invited to hear him."

Members of the Christian Church at that place had invited Mr. Grant to come and prove to them and to our people that other churches had authority to administer the gospel ordinances, as well as the Latter Day Saints, so it was said, but in his talk Mr. Grant admitted that they had solicited him to come and "speak on the doctrines of the Latter Day Saints." The bills stating that "since the Latter Day Saints as a church deny to all others the authority," etc., it seems fair to presume that Mr. Grant took the stand in defense of the authority of all other churches to "act as ministers of God's word."

We are doubtful, however, that either Mr. Grant or the Christian Church would try to maintain that claim, but would most likely agree with us that the line must be drawn somewhere. For instance, while the Christian Church preaches baptism for the remission of sins, the Baptist Church preaches baptism because of remission of sins, the great majority of denominations preach and practice sprinkling of infants for baptism; to say nothing about the great difference of apprehension, construction, and application of the word of the Lord for the numerous churches in other respects. Did God authorize all of this? Did he authorize the establishment of the Catholic Church, its teachings and practices.

If the members of the Christian Church now admit that he did, they have changed materially since the days of the founders of their church. Alexander Campbell, for instance, calls the churches an "adulterous brood." (Christian System, page 189.) Barton W. Stone speaks of the present state of Christianity as "Babylon," the "wilderness," and says, "Sectarianism, which is only another name for heresy, sprung out of the apostasy, and the parties named themselves according to their own fancy."—Ibid., p. 259.

But what, may we ask, of the name and authority of this Christian Church? have they not also named their church according to their own fancy? The name of their church is not scriptural, as to the name of God's people. Alexander Campbell affirms, "They were called disciples, saints, believers, etc., but never once addressed under the name Christians."—Millennial Harbinger, vol. 2, p. 394.

Again, "The moment any man proves to me that Paul and Barnabas by divine oracle called the disciples Christians, no matter where they did first or last, I yield to that name as the exclusive name of the followers of Christ. I will wear no other; and I will contend for one name as for one faith, one Lord, and one baptism, although Paul forgot it in his letter to the Ephesians."—Ibid., vol. 4, p. 366.

And again, "It is, however, but an earthly name—there are no Christians in heaven, no Jews in heaven, no divine names in heaven, but there are saints in heaven, holy brethren, and other designations of great age and of unquestionable divine authority. Abraham and Moses, though no Christians, were saints."—Ibid., p. 378.

Unquestionably Mr. Campbell was right as to the name of God's people being saints, etc., but what of the authority of the church which he and others founded, now known as "The Christian Church"? When the dissenters from the Baptist Church, under the leadership of Alexander Campbell, and the dissenters from the Presbyterian Church, under Barton W. Stone, united to form a new party, or church, very naturally the question of authority came up for discussion. The leaders, as we have seen, looked upon all other denominations as "Babylon," the "wilderness," hence no authority could have been received from this source. They seemed to recognize this fact, and so the question of authority must be settled in some other way. Mr. Stone tells us how it was done. Says he, "It was finally concluded among us, that if we had authority to preach, we had authority to baptize. The work then commenced. The preachers baptized one another, and crowds came and were baptized.

But the question is not hereby settled, for we have not yet learned whether or not they have authority to preach. The whole matter rests on the little word "if." If they have authority to preach, they have authority to baptize; but if they do not have authority to preach, they do not have authority to baptize. Now which is it? Do they, or do they not? Mr. Grant and the Christian Church insist that we must admit that all have authority to minister in the gospel ordinances, but this is unreasonable, in view of the fact that even that church has not yet settled the question as to its own authority. Why should we admit as a fact that which they merely take for granted, and that, too, without the slightest proof?

Mr. Grant's invitation to "Come and let us reason together" could not apply to our people, as the doors of the Christian church at Lagonda have been barred against the Latter Day Saints; they were only permitted to silently listen to what he had to say; no chance to answer, and he even evaded a question asked by one of our missionaries.

"The members of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints are good people, good citizens, they are our brethren," Mr. Grant avers; and, indirectly, he admits that we preach more truth than anybody else, hence the Bible is not the weapon to use against us; but, like Clark Braden, D. H. Bays, and numerous others in their day, R. E. Grant is now the champion, the only one who can successfully combat the Latter Day Saints. If he was a sectarian preacher, all the elders of the church would be after him for a debate, but as it is, they are afraid of him because he uses their own books against them. Such was Mr. Grant's position at Lagonda. But we are at a loss to know why a people of that character should be downed, and why Mr. Grant, who religiously is nobody, represents nobody, and has nothing to defend, should go about in the country with a chip on his shoulder, daring the elders of the church to knock it off.

But Mr. Grant is not at all consistent, for in his lectures and tracts he makes insinuations and accusations that are anything but flattering to our people. In "An appeal to all Latter Day Saints," dated Grand Rapids, Michigan, December 1, 1911, he starts out thus: "Latter Day Saints, are you aware that the judgments of God are fast coming upon you? You have changed the commandments of God and made them of none effect. Repent, repent of this your wickedness before God, in any longer teaching to the people the doctrine and commandments of men, or God in his wrath will smite you. How can you hope for salvation in teaching for doctrine the commandments of men? You were by God intrusted with his sacred truths, and you have betrayed that trust, and have altered and changed the truth. But one thing now remains for you to do; repent of this your wickedness and go back to the truth as written in the word of God, and do it speedily, or you will be made to suffer the wrath of God. What I say unto one, I say unto all."

This quotation does not sound much like we are brethren, good people, and good citizens; but it has the appearance of having been dictated by a spirit of revenge. Besides, the reader can not avoid discovering in it a most glaring inconsistency. Mr. Grant admits that the Latter Day Saints were by God intrusted with his sacred truths, which truths, as appears from this same "appeal," were the Book of Mormon and the early revelations to the church. This being true, it is admitted that the Book of Mormon is of God, and that Joseph Smith was of God appointed a translator and revelator. Now these sacred truths all the other churches bitterly oppose, and decry them as base deception, concocted by the Devil. In this they most assuredly fight against God; but still Mr. Grant is willing to come to Lagonda and lecture in the Christian church in order to prove to the people of that vicinity that all the churches are authorized to act as ministers of God's word, or as administrators of the ordinances of his church and gospel! Possibly he may be too blind to see these inconsistencies, but the people can not fail to see them, and seeing them, what must they necessarily think of Mr. Grant?

In another tract Mr. Grant takes the position that "the Reorganized Church in its pretensions and doctrines is rotten to the core." However, his opposition is aimed principally at the leaders of the church. They are deceivers, dishonest, and are keeping secrets from the church which, if made known, would cause all the elders to leave. This awful secret, it appears, is the so-called Book of Commandments, in which was printed some of the early revelations to the church, and these revelations appear later in the Doctrine and Covenants in a somewhat changed form. Relative to this matter Mr. Grant takes the position of David Whitmer, and he can readily make people who know nothing about it and who are prejudiced against the latter day work, believe that the leaders are guilty of some terrible wickedness. But he dare not tell the people the whole truth about David Whitmer and the Book of Commandments, for if he did, they would soon see through his trickery, and this "skeleton in the closet" that he is packing around would soon disappear. The story about the Book of Commandments and of changed revelations is no secret whatever to the church and the elders, as Mr. Grant tries to make his hearers believe, for it has been ventilated through the church papers several times, has been before them in the Church History for a number of years, and was effectually and satisfactorily disposed of by the church as early as 1835.

Briefly stated, the story is this: In 1831 the church decided to have the revelations, then received, printed in book form. W. W. Phelps, Oliver Cowdery, and John Whitmer were appointed to "review and prepare such revelations as shall be deemed proper to publish for the press, and print them as soon as possible at Independence, Missouri," and an edition of three thousand was ordered. Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer were appointed to carry the revelations to Missouri. Some work was done on the book during the summer of 1833. A number of revelations were received during the period between the two dates mentioned, of which the Presidency wrote to the printing committee: "We have received some revelations within a short time back which you will obtain in due time." The intention evidently was to have them inserted in the book, so that when printed it would contain all the revelations to the church, at least up to July, 1833. In a letter dated Kirtland, Ohio, July, 1833, the Presidency orders a box of the book sent to Kirtland, when ready, of course.

Just eighteen days later the mob, four to five hundred strong, gathered in Independence and destroyed press, book work, and everything. Of this an eyewitness says: "There lay the printing office, a heap of ruins; Elder Phelps's furniture strewn over the garden as common plunder; the revelations, book-work, papers and press in the hands of the mob as the booty of highway robbers." The Saints were forced to leave; some of them picked up sheets of the scattered publications, and in that way copies of the revelations were preserved. Of those the last revelation bears date of September, 1831. Had the book been finished, it is reasonable to believe that it would have contained all the revelations up to July, 1833, but it was not finished, and consequently was never received nor indorsed by the church. Finally, it should be remembered that the documents sent to Independence to be printed were only copies. The originals remained in Kirtland, Ohio.

In his tract, "THE BOOK OF COMMANDMENTS; IT WAS PRINTED AND FINISHED," Mr. Grant, in order to prove that the book was finished and indorsed by Joseph Smith and the church, quotes the following from a letter written by the Presidency to W. W. Phelps and dated June 25, 1833: "The following errors we have found in the commandments, as printed: Fortieth chapter, tenth verse, third line, instead of corruptible, put corrupted. Fourteenth verse of the same chapter, fifth line, instead of respecter to persons, put respecter of persons. Twenty-first verse, second line of the same chapter, instead of respecter to, put respecter of. Forty-fourth chapter, twelfth verse, last line, instead of hands put heads."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 300.

This evidently is an assumption, and does not represent the facts in the case. The Presidency do not mention having a copy of the book. They were not liable to proof read and give directions concerning a book that was already finished and ready for shipment. Similar errors to those pointed out above are found in the earlier revelations, as they appear in the unfinished Book of Commandments, and it does not seem reasonable that those errors should have escaped the notice of the Presidency, and that they should have commenced their correction with section 40, and not with the preface, in which at least one such mistake is found. The term, "the commandments, as printed," evidently refers to parts of the revelations as printed in the Evening and Morning Star. That periodical was started in 1832, and in making mention of it, Joseph Smith says that it contained some of the revelations. No acknowledgment is made of their having received a copy of the Book of Commandments for correction, but Joseph Smith did receive and review the Star. The unfinished book ends with part of a sentence of part of a revelation, given September, 1831. The letter of the Presidency, in which the above errors are mentioned, is dated June 25, 1833. Between September, 1831, and June 25, 1833, upward of thirty revelations were received, which evidently were to be printed in the Book of Commandments, for the Presidency informed the printers in the letter of June 25, 1833, that those revelations would be forwarded to them in due time.

In consideration of these facts it must appear that it was not a copy of the Book of Commandments that the Presidency had received and were reviewing and comparing with the original manuscript, as claimed by Mr. Grant, but that part of the revelations published in the Evening and Morning Star, and that the book was neither finished nor received and indorsed by the Presidency and the church.

In 1835 the church again decided to print the revelations in a book. This time the work was finished and accepted by all the quorums and the general assembly of the church. In this book, the Doctrine and Covenants, some of the revelations printed in Independence appear in a somewhat changed form. From this fact David Whitmer, R. E. Grant, and company, have taken occasion to accuse the leaders of gross wickedness in "changing the word of God." But the change is very reasonably accounted for by the very men who, in both instances, were engaged in the printing of the revelations. Concerning the revelations published by him in both The Evening and Morning Star and the Book of Commandments, W. W. Phelps says: "There are many typographical errors in both volumes, and especially in the last, which we shall endeavor carefully to correct, as well as principle, if we discover any. It is also proper for us to say, that in the first fourteen numbers, in the revelations, are many errors, typographical, and others, occasioned by transcribing manuscript; but as we shall have access to originals, we shall endeavor to make proper corrections."—Evening and Morning Star, vol. 2, p. 384. (Church History, vol. 1, p. 580.)

Oliver Cowdery says: "On the revelations we merely say, that we were not a little surprised to find the previous print so different from the original. We have given them a careful comparison, assisted by individuals whose known integrity and ability is unexcusable. Thus saying we cast no reflections upon those who were intrusted with the responsibility of publishing them in Missouri, as our own labors were included in that important service to the church, and it was our unceasing endeavor to have them correspond with the copy furnished us. We believe they are now correct. If not in every word, at least in principle."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 580.

Again: "As there were some errors which had got into them by transcribing, we have since obtained the original copy and made the necessary corrections."—Ibid., vol. 1, p. 581.

In the Messenger and Advocate for March, 1836, John Whitmer also testifies to the correctness of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants as containing the revealed will of heaven. (Ibid., vol. 1, p. 582.)

Even David Whitmer, Mr. Grant's chief witness, must have given the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants his sanction and support, for his quorum indorsed the book and he remained a member of, and president in, the quorum until expelled from the church for cause, April 13, 1838.

Thus the matter is made reasonably clear: the mistakes were made in transcribing. The transcriptions were sent to Independence by Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer to be printed, the originals remaining in Kirtland. The printers endeavored to have the printed matter correspond with the copy furnished them. How far they succeeded in this we do not know, but when their work was compared with the originals they were not a little surprised to find it so different. This information is all found in the very history quoted by Mr. Grant, and it certainly seems foolish for him to assume the position he does in contradicting the very men who did the work in both instances, and who have fully and clearly explained where the mistakes occurred and, after a comparison with the originals, testified to the correctness of the revelations as printed in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Two reprints of this defective and incomplete Book of Commandments have been issued; one by Mr. C. A. Wicks, of Lamoni, Iowa, and one by the Salt Lake Tribune, Utah. In some very important points they disagree. Which one is right? But, incomplete as they are, they nevertheless amply prove the correctness of the revelations as printed in the Doctrine and Covenants, as a few examples will show.

In his "Appeal to all Latter Day Saints," Mr. Grant repeatedly quotes the following, relative to Joseph Smith: "And he has a gift to translate the book, and I have commanded him that he shall pretend to no other gift, for I will grant him no other gift." In the corrected edition it reads: "And you have a gift to translate the plates, and this is the first gift that I bestowed upon you, and I have commanded that you should pretend to no other gift until my purpose is fulfilled in this; for I will grant unto you no other gift until it is finished." The difference is readily seen. While the first positively declares that no other gift should be bestowed upon Joseph Smith than that of translator, the other intimates that the Lord would bestow other gifts upon him, when the purpose in that one had been fulfilled. This revelation was received in March, 1829.

In June, 1829, Joseph Smith received a revelation for Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, to the effect that they were to become the three special witnesses to the Book of Mormon. Their testimony obtained in accordance with this revelation is recorded in that book and is positive evidence that these men acknowledged in Joseph Smith another gift, that of revelator. As further evidence of this fact, we may state that, as early as September, 1830, David Whitmer's course had been such as to bring him into a state of doubt and darkness of mind, and he appeals to Joseph Smith for a revelation from the Lord regarding his condition. In answer to this the following was received:

"Behold I say unto you, David, that you have feared man and have not relied on me for strength, as you ought; but your mind has been on the things of the earth more than on the things of me, your Maker, and the ministry whereunto you have been called; and you have not given heed unto my Spirit, and to those who were set over you, but have been persuaded by those whom I have not commanded; wherefore you are left to inquire for yourself, at my hand, and ponder upon the things which you have received."—Book of Commandments, section 31.

This verbatim, as found also in the Doctrine and Covenants. The ministry whereunto David Whitmer was called, and to which he was ordained by Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery shortly after the organization of the church, in 1830, is shown by section 15 of the Book of Commandments to have been the same calling with which the Apostle Paul was called; thus acknowledging in Joseph Smith still another gift, even that of a minister for Christ, with authority to ordain others to the same ministry. Thus the Book of Commandments itself proves that quotation to be faulty, and the Doctrine and Covenants to be correct.

Mr. Grant seriously objects to the idea of a restoration of the church and the conferring of divine authority, or priesthood, to a minister in the ordinances of the gospel, and claims that God purposed to work a reformation only; and still he quotes from the Book of Commandments as the word of the Lord: "If the people of this generation harden not their hearts, . . . I will establish my church, like unto the church which was taught by my disciples in the days of old." Now, if an institution were to be established like unto the church in the days of old, such a church did not at that time exist, and that in itself would be a restoration, consequently the reformation was to be wrought among the people by means of a restoration of the gospel and church as they existed in former days. To this idea a parallel can be found in the Bible. In lieu of the gospel offered to, but rejected by them when they came out of Egypt, and because of transgression, Israel was subjected to the "Mosaic economy," which consisted only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, until the time of reformation."—Hebrews 9: 12. It must be admitted that this time of reformation came with the introduction of the gospel and the ministry of John, Christ, and others, but the reformation could not be effected by an indorsement of the authority and doctrine of the Jewish sects. They had departed from God and taught for doctrine the commandments of men. To effect any reformation among them, a restoration was necessary, and a restoration came. A similar condition now obtains. The Christian sects no more represent the church and doctrine of Christ than did the Jewish sects, and if a reformation is wrought among them at all, it must be by the means of a restoration. As the Jewish sects were in the wilderness, and the voice of God through a divinely appointed ministry was required to call them out (Isaiah 40: 3; John 1: 6, 23), in like manner is modern Christendom in the wilderness, and a similarly appointed ministry is necessary to call out the honest, truth-loving people among them, and reestablish the church of God as it was in former days. (Ezekiel 20: 35-38; Revelation 12: 5; 18: 4.) Numerous reformations have been undertaken by men during the last few centuries, and it is admitted that good has come to mankind through them, but it was not in their power to reestablish the kingdom of heaven among men. God alone could do that. Passages pointing to such restoration are numerous in the Scriptures, and the time for their fulfillment is by Peter called "the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 21. The coming forth of the Book of Mormon was the very beginning of this restoration, and that record also abounds in testimonies concerning the wonderful work of God in the latter days. Even the Book of Commandments, relied on so strongly by Mr. Grant, affirms that God would do a wonderful work upon the earth. While the Book of Mormon was being translated, and men who were interested in the matter came to the young prophet and translator for counsel relative to their duty and God's will concerning them, the Lord graciously heard and answered his pleadings for them, and among other things they were told that a great and marvelous work was to come forth among the children of men—to keep his commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion, "establish my Zion." (Book of Commandments 5: 1-3; 10: 1-3; 11: 1-4; 12: 1-4.) These statements are found verbatim in the Doctrine and Covenants, but I cite the other book to show the reader that even that work, relied upon as the best weapon against the church, really supports the church in its contention that a restoration was to take place; the Zion of the Lord be established, through and with which he might commence and consummate his glorious reign on the earth.

The claim to have authority and to be the true church, Mr. Grant says, is wrong. If so, such claims were ever wrong. God's people of Bible times were mistaken, and for Mr. Grant to arise in defense of all the sectarian churches as having authority and to be the churches of Christ is, to say the least, very inconsistent.

"The word of God, not priesthood, is authority," says Mr. Grant. If priesthood, or the right to act in the name of God, is not authority, what is it? Sometimes the word of God may convey authority, but it is not authority in the general sense in which Mr. Grant wishes to apply it. For instance, there is nothing in the Bible which authorizes Mr. Grant to preach, baptize, lay on hands, or administer the sacrament. With as much consistency we might claim that the constitution of Michigan authorized him to act as governor of that State, or that the Constitution of the United States authorized him, or any other man who so desired, to act as president of this Nation. God has reserved the right to select and appoint his own ministry. This has been understood by his people in all ages. The word of God to one generation, while in part pointing to the work of future generations or dispensations, was never taken as authority by another. For instance, the revelations of God to Adam did not suffice for Noah, nor did Moses do his work by reason of what was written concerning former dispensations. John, Christ, and the apostles appealed to Moses and the prophets in support of their work, but did not, and could not, have performed that work without first receiving a direct commission from God. Without such authority they would have failed, and without such authority we would fail to-day; our work would be merely human, like all other churches.

Mr. Grant has much to say about seers. A seer, he maintains, must have the Urim and Thummim, otherwise he is not a seer, and his revelations are spurious. He assumes that Christ and all the prophets had the Urim and Thummim. Of this there is not the slightest proof. The records give an account of only two sets of the Urim and Thummim. The oldest account is in the Book of Mormon, where the Urim and Thummim were given to the brother of Jared on the mount. Their purpose was to aid seers in the interpreting or translating of language. At the command of God the brother of Jared sealed them up, till needed. There is no evidence that the Jaredite and Nephite prophets generally had the Urim and Thummim, but when the Jaredite history had been found, and the Lord deemed it expedient to make that history known to the Nephites, the interpreters, as they were then called, were found in the possession of King Mosiah. Where or how he obtained them is not stated, but we are informed that they were prepared for the purpose of translating records. (See pages 722, 723, 233, Book of Mormon.)

The other set is mentioned first in Exodus 28: 30, where Moses is commanded to put them in the breastplate used by the Aaronic high priest, "when he goeth in before the Lord." Moses evidently received those stones direct from the Lord, as no mention is made of them before. He put them in the breastplate of judgment, to be used by the high priest only, as before stated, when he went in to ask counsel of the Lord. The reader may find instances of this kind in Numbers 27: 21; Judges 1: 1; 20: 18; 1 Samuel 23: 9; 28: 6; 30: 7, 8; but 1 Samuel 28: 6 plainly proves that the Lord, in revealing his will, did not confine himself to just one means, for when Saul was in trouble, and wanted counsel, it is said that "the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets." That all of these means were employed by the Lord in making his will known to man, needs no further proof, but to say that all revelations are false unless they came through the Urim and Thummim is the grossest kind of an insult to the intelligence of the bible student.

As further proof of the fact that God frequently spoke through the prophets without the Urim and Thummim, we may state that these instruments disappeared, together with the other sacred things contained in the ark of the covenant, prior to the Babylonian captivity, and, so far as known, were never restored; still there were prophets, and they spoke in the name of the Lord. Among those best known to us we may mention Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Haggai, and Zechariah. By reference to Ezra 2: 63, and Nehemiah 7: 65, we learn that when the captives returned from Babylon, the Urim and Thummim had not been restored.

"Samuel," says Mr. Grant, "must have had the Urim and Thummim, for he said to Saul: 'I am the seer.'"—1 Samuel 9: 19. This is an assumption merely. But if he did, there would be nothing strange or out of the ordinary in that, for Samuel was a Levite and a holy man with whom the Lord, through Moses, declared that the Urim and Thummim should be. (Deuteronomy 33: 8.) A seer is only another name for a prophet. Hence in 1 Samuel 9: 9 it is said: "He that is now called a prophet was beforetime called a seer." These then are synonymous terms, according to the Bible. But we should distinguish between the gift of a prophet, or seer, and the Urim and Thummim. Without such gift a man would not be a seer, or prophet, though he might possess the Urim and Thummim, but with that gift he would be, without the Urim and Thummim; for holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. (2 Peter 1: 21.) The prophet's gift, then, is one of the gifts of the Holy Ghost by which, and the aid of the Urim and Thummim, unknown languages have been translated. To this end the Urim and Thummim were prepared, according to the Book of Mormon, and when such work is to be done, these instruments are delivered to one who has the gift of a prophet or seer. That it would be futile to try to use the Urim and Thummim without the gift of a seer, is clearly demonstrated by Oliver Cowdery's attempt to translate the ancient records. (Book of Commandments 8: 3.)

We thus see that the possession of the Urim and Thummim alone does not constitute a seer. Nor have the Urim and Thummim always been employed in the translation of unknown tongues; as, for instance, where the gift of tongues is exercised, the interpretation is given direct, sometimes through the one who speaks in tongues, and sometimes through another who has the gift of interpretation. The claim of Mr. Grant that the Book of Mormon was written by means of the Urim and Thummim, is true only in the sense that it was translated into English by those means. He can find but very little, if any part of it, given originally through these means; nor can he find but a very small portion of the Bible thus given; hence his contention, that all God's revelations must come through the Urim and Thummim, is utterly groundless.

Mr. Grant ridiculed the idea that we had no history till in 1898. To this we only need say, that we have been making history ever since the commencement of the Reorganization, and that history has been made known to the membership and others as fast as our publications could convey it to them. Sometimes it is a good thing to "make haste to go slow" about making history. For his own sake, I think Mr. Grant should try that.

Joseph Smith changed the Book of Mormon as to baptism, because the Doctrine and Covenants says, "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ," whereas the Book of Mormon says, "Having authority given me of Jesus Christ"; so says Mr. Grant. Here he could render us good service by telling us the difference, but he does not do that, simply does a little quibbling.

The ordination of the present president of the church, in 1860, is criticized because William Marks, a high priest, participated in the ordination. Joseph Smith, of Independence, Missouri, was ordained to that position by Z. H. Gurley, Samuel Powers, W. W. Blair, apostles, and William Marks, high priest. One account of the ordination mentions Z. H. Gurley first; another William Marks. This matters but little; all took part in the ordination, which was perfectly legal, according to the revelations of God. This Mr. Grant evidently understands, as he was a representative of the church for several years. But to make this matter clear, let us refer briefly to certain facts concerning the rise of both organizations. By virtue of the Aaronic priesthood and a commandment from God, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery ordained each other elders April 6, 1830, and afterward ordained others to the same office. The eldership is an appendage to the Melchisedec priesthood. By virtue of this authority and a commandment from God they ordained high priests in 1831, Joseph being ordained to this office by Lyman Wight. In 1832 Joseph Smith was ordained president of the high priesthood and the church by Sidney Rigdon, a high priest, and in 1835 three high priests, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, according to a previous commandment from God (see Book of Commandments, chapter 15), selected and ordained the Twelve. It is worthy of note, that David Whitmer, Mr. Grant's chief witness against the church, was one of the parties in all of these ordinations save one, either as participant or recipient.

In a similar manner the Reorganization was effected. The faithful elders, seventies, and high priests, who had obtained their authority in the first organization and retained the same through faithfulness to their gospel covenant, were commanded of the Lord to begin a reorganization of the scattered Saints, a committee of three being appointed to select and ordain seven apostles, who then took charge and further completed the organization, and in 1860 the present President of the church was ordained by that authority. This was in perfect harmony with the rise of the first organization and the law, which provides that the high priest and the elder "have a right to officiate in all these offices of the church when there are no higher authorities present."—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 7.

The assertion of David Whitmer and R. E. Grant, that Oliver Cowdery ordained Joseph Smith prophet, seer, and revelator on April 6, 1830, is without foundation. On that day they were ordained elders, and were apostles in the sense of being sent and authorized to organize the church and ordain all the needed officers. The gifts of prophet and seer and revelator had already been bestowed upon, and exercised by Joseph Smith, hence no such ordination was needed. The history merely states that "there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, and elder of the church through the will of God the Father and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ," etc.—Doctrine and Covenants 19:1. Also Book of Commandments 22:1.

Of a similar nature are Mr. Grant's claims that Joseph Smith introduced polygamy and that he is responsible for all the evils of Utahism; and that the present President of the church was ordained as a result of a revelation to J. J. Strang. The last is a fable only, and deserves no reply; but the first is a malicious accusation for which there is not the slightest excuse. Ever since 1852 the members of the Reorganized Church have challenged those who accuse Joseph Smith of teaching and practicing polygamy to prove it, but so far they have all failed; no real proof has been forthcoming. The courts of the land have sustained the contention of the Reorganization. No children were born to him, except by his wife Emma. Even those women of Utah, who were prevailed upon to say that they were his wives, have simply made a miserable spectacle of themselves. Judge Philips, of Kansas City, saw this and in his decision in the Temple Lot Case, characterizes them as "sports in nest hiding." The Brighamites themselves defended Joseph Smith against that accusation up to 1852. In one of his sermons Brigham Young makes the positive declaration that Joseph Smith was a good man and did not violate the law. This practically exonerates him from the charge of polygamy, as he could not practice that in any of the States where he lived, without transgressing the law. I have in my possession a copy of a tract printed and circulated by the Brighamites in Scandinavia as late as 1852, in which it is stated that "one of the most common lies circulated about Joseph Smith was that he lived in polygamy." The Reorganized Church and its President have thus thrown the burden of proof upon those who claimed to know, and this has so far been the result. Not guilty has been the verdict after every fair investigation. Still Mr. Grant and associates in the crusade against the work insist that we must believe the evil reports of the enemies of Joseph Smith, and he even goes so far as to state that "if Joseph Smith's son only would say that his father gave the revelation on polygamy and changed the Book of Commandments then he would be an honest man!"

The Reorganized Church and its President have thus taken the only rational course in this matter. For us to say what Joseph did or did not do secretly, when we do not know, would be to falsify, and why should we do that? We have been content to let those who thought they knew tell their story, and we would hear and examine their testimony. We have done so, and found the charge of polygamy against Joseph Smith not sustained. This has confirmed us in the belief that he did not practice that evil. We are still willing to hear what people may have to say about it, and still willing to confess that we do not know. But we do know that when Joseph Smith was brought face to face with the law, the verdict was always "not guilty," notwithstanding the judges, juries, and witnesses generally were his bitter enemies; and we have reason to believe that had the people dealt fairly and legally with him in 1844, instead of killing him, the result would have been the same as it had always been before.

The following from Mr. Grant is certainly very bad logic: "If Joseph Smith gave the revelation on polygamy, the people of Utah are not to blame for practicing it." And he, too, seems to know it, for he repeatedly warns the people against making flesh their arm. We have acted on this principle all the time, and do blame the people of Utah for practicing polygamy, even if Joseph Smith had taught it, because it is plainly written in God's law to the church, that a man should have one wife only, and that polygamy is abominable in his sight. No people can follow a man in iniquity and be blameless, especially when the law that should govern their conduct is so plain. But Mr. Grant says that the people of Utah should not be blamed for practicing polygamy. Why this awful inconsistency? Is it from the motive that Joseph Smith must be incriminated at any cost? It seems so.

"According to a Hedrickite tract," says Mr. Grant, "Joseph Smith was ordained king for ever," and he wants to know where Christ comes in. I think, Mr. Grant, that Christ comes in as "King of kings," according to the Bible, and that unless there were other kings, he could not come in as such at all. I think, however, that to appoint or ordain such kings now would be rather premature. Wait till Christ fulfills his promise to certain disciples about sitting upon thrones, etc. Being that the basis of this story is only a Hedrickite tract, we need not take it seriously. Besides, we should take care not to lean too heavily on an arm of flesh, you know.

"If the elders were not cowards they would leave the church, but they are afraid to sin against the Holy Ghost." That is rich! The assumption is, that the elders know the church and its doctrine to be wrong and would leave, but by doing so, fear that they would sin against the Holy Ghost. It seems to me that the opposite would be more reasonable. If the church was "rotten to the core," as averred by Mr. Grant, and the elders knew it, there would be more danger of sinning against the Holy Ghost by staying with it than by leaving it. Surely the elders are intelligent enough to see that and would act accordingly, if Mr. Grant's charges against the church were true; but they are not, nor are the elders cowards; on the contrary, they are among the bravest of men, which is proven by their constancy in meeting the prejudice, slander, and opposition of an unfriendly world in their defense of a cause which, according to their conviction, is of God.

Our tithing system came in for a share of criticism and, if I am correctly informed, Mr. Grant claimed that it applied only as part of the law of the land in Palestine. True, it was part of the law of Moses, so-called; but it was more than that, because it was applied both before and after the Mosaic economy. Abraham and Melchisedec observed that law; and Jacob vowed with God to give him a tenth of all wherewith he might be blessed. (Genesis 14: 20; 28: 22.) This gives that law a distinctly religious appearance. In Malachi 3: 8 the Lord reproves Israel for having robbed him in tithes and offerings, showing that the law was divine, and that to neglect it was to rob God. Christ gives that law his sanction (Matthew 23: 23), and Paul places considerable stress upon it in his Hebrew letter. It will thus be seen that tithing was not a mere taxation levied by civil officers, but a divine law, by which the cause of God was supported.

By a cunning and deceptive way of applying Isaiah 28: 13 and Hosea 8: 11, 12, Mr. Grant makes it appear that those passages refer to Joseph Smith and thereby proves that he would fall into sin and wickedness. That is one way of using the Bible, and undoubtedly some prejudiced persons were glad to accept Mr. Grant's explanation; but the careful, unbiased reader can hardly fail to see the deception, and that these passages refer to Ephraim as a people and their fall in former days. The kingdom of Israel (ten tribes) are sometimes designated Ephraim. The prophecy in Isaiah 28: 1-15 was delivered about 725 B. C. In the year 721 B. C. Ephraim fell and was carried away captive by the Assyrians. Hosea was a contemporary of Isaiah and prophesied between 810 and 725 B. C., and in his prophecy it is made clear that he speaks of the kingdom of Israel (ten tribes) under the name of Ephraim. A few citations will suffice to prove this. "When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to King Jareb; yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound."—5: 13.

"O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee? for your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away. Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets; I have slain them by the words of my mouth; and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth."—6: 4, 5. "When I would have healed Israel, then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the wickedness of Samaria; for they commit falsehood; and the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers spoileth without."—7: 1. "Ephraim, he has mixed himself among the people; Ephraim is a cake not turned."—Verse 8. "Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria."—Verse 11. "For they are gone to Assyria, a wild ass alone by himself; Ephraim hath hired lovers."—8: 9.

It would require an awful stretch of the imagination to make any such scriptures apply to Joseph Smith, and yet Mr. Grant seeks to do it, and says that Joseph Smith, jr., claimed to be Ephraim of these last days, to whom God wrote the great things of his law, etc. No doubt Joseph Smith was a descendant of the Ephraim, who in former days was scattered among the people, but he did not claim "to be Ephraim of these last days," etc. This dubious remark Mr. Grant must use in order to make connection—the Scriptures quoted clearly refer to Ephraim of former days, and there only do they apply. But if Mr. Grant had been desirous of telling his hearers something about Ephraim of these last days, he might have quoted Jacob's blessing upon them (Genesis 48: 20-27), Moses' confirmation of the same (Deuteronomy 33: 17), and Jeremiah 31: 1-9, where this prophet so beautifully portrays the restoration of the whole house of Israel and says (verse 9): "For I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first born." Vastly more could be cited, for the restoration and regeneration of Israel in the latter days, in which scattered Ephraim was to be the first born, in order to become the minister for God to his fellows and "push the people together," has been the burden of many inspired writers; and of such vast importance would be God's favor upon them at that time, according to Paul, that to the whole world it would be "like life from the dead."—Romans 11: 15.

We must not ignore Mr. Grant's reference to Hosea 8: 11, 12. It is true that elders of the church often have used verse 12 in their defense of the Book of Mormon; rightly or wrongly, I am not going to say, for the authenticity of the book is not proven or disproven by the use of that verse only; but it by no means follows that these two verses therefore consistently can be used in the fashion adopted by Mr. Grant. Those verses read: "Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin. I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing."

On this Mr. Grant comments as follows: "Now if the Ephraim spoken of here was Joseph Smith, jr., as he claimed, and the Book of Mormon was the great things of God's law written to him, then Joseph Smith, jr., was the same Ephraim who made many altars to sin," etc. Yes, "if" and "if"—there is the difficulty. Mr. Grant connects the two verses and asserts that Joseph Smith claimed to be the Ephraim spoken of here. Now the truth is that Joseph Smith, jr., made no such claim; it is so inconsistent that even Mr. Grant can not avoid seeing it, and so finds it necessary to confuse things in order to make his point. I believe it has been amply proven, that those chapters in Hosea refer to Ephraim, or the kingdom of Israel, in former days, the ruling element of which most likely was the tribe of Ephraim. They went into gross wickedness and, as a consequence, lost their nationality and went into captivity. This refers to Ephraim as a people; he was then as a cake not turned, i. e., not yet fit for use, indicating that when he had been turned a sufficient length of time and had certain experiences in his scattered condition among the nations, he would become useful. That God would use him for a certain work in the latter days is clearly indicated in the references already cited. David intimates that some day he would be the chosen of the Lord. (Psalm 78: 67.) Zechariah points out that he would become God's messenger to the people. (Zechariah 9: 13-16.) But to be a messenger he must have a message, and so it is written that the stick of Joseph, or that which is written for Joseph and the whole house of Israel, shall be in his hand. (Ezekiel 37: 16-20.) It is possible that Hosea spoke of this writing as "the great things of my law." It was to be counted a strange thing. By whom? Not by Ephraim, for he is converted thereto; it was written to or for him and is God's message in his hand to the world, but by the people in general. Is it not true that the Book of Mormon is being so considered by the people? But to make Ephraim, "turned" or converted and made useful in God's service in the latter days, responsible for the wicked deeds of Ephraim, not turned or converted; and moreover, to apply that which was written of Ephraim as a people in former days, to an individual in the last days, notwithstanding that individual may be a descendant of that people, is certainly unfair and unjust. This is what Mr. Grant does. Many of his hearers may possibly believe his presentations, but where the facts are made known to them, they can hardly help looking upon his methods with contempt.

Joseph Smith also fulfilled the prophecy in 2 Peter 2: 1-3, according to Mr. Grant. Surely this "courteous, yet fearless speaker of national reputation" seems hard up for something wherewith to blacken the character of Joseph Smith and make him appear as wicked as possible; but I fear that unless he relaxes a little, he may acquire the reputation of a discourteous speaker, a false accuser, and a blackguard. It is hardly necessary for me to point out to the reader that this and numerous other passages in the New Testament refer to the apostasy that took place after the departure of the apostles, for every intelligent and unbiased student of the Bible and history knows that; hence Joseph Smith did not, and could not, fulfill that scripture. Peter writes directly to the saints of his day and says that "there shall be false teachers (plural) among you, who shall bring in abominable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them." Nothing in the accredited teachings of Joseph can be shown to be abominable heresies and to deny the Lord. To do so, a man must resort to misrepresentation, falsehood, and slander.

But it seems that not only has Mr. Grant a rancorous ill will toward the dead Joseph Smith, but also toward his "ignorant" and "dishonest" son in Independence, Missouri, for he, too, comes in for a share of abuse in the lectures. Mr. Grant tells his audience about a visit to President Smith, some four or five years ago, on which occasion President Smith treated him with coolness and discourtesy. Of course, a statement like that goes a long ways with some people, but that Mr. Grant will use publicly a story half told shows that he is very hard up for something to say against President Smith, and thereby reveals a littleness which is contemptible. I do not care to further notice this story, only just to say that when the whole truth about that visit is known, it will not be at all flattering to Mr. Grant, and for his own sake he had better keep still about it. President Smith is a large-hearted gentleman, and if he errs at all in his treatment of sinners, it will be on the side of mercy. I believe he would be willing to answer any inquiry touching this tale of Mr. Grant's.

Mr. Grant boasted of having completely downed our work in Oklahoma. I wrote Brother Yates for information concerning this matter, and he wrote me in substance, that it was all bombast on the part of Mr. Grant. At Seiling, where the debate was held, the majority of the audience refused to vote in support of Mr. Grant's side, even after an urgent appeal by himself and the chairman. After this vote, at the close of the debate, Brother Yates arose and requested that all persons who were of the opinion that he (Yates) had met the issues as a gentleman, and had successfully maintained our cause, refrain from voting altogether, as he was not seeking that variety of honors. The audience responded to his request, and the large majority refused to vote at all. He further says: "During my last speech, while I was in the stand, one lady in the front handed me a dollar and said, 'I have been a member of this Christian Church, but never will be again.' Grant conceals these facts and proceeds to make a big noise about his vote." At Ripley, Grant refused to sign fair propositions for debate, but went to lecturing. Brother Yates says that he did not the slightest harm to the cause in either place, while he (Yates) has more friends in both places to-day than ever before. So much for Mr. Grant's downing of "Mormonism" in Oklahoma.

At Lagonda we are sure that Mr. Grant's lectures did no harm to the cause. They may have deepened the already existing prejudice on the part of some people, but the Saints are still alive to the work, and their good neighbors will evidently think more of them for their patient endurance under the unpleasant experiences consequent upon the lectures, and when the facts concerning our faith and church are better known; but I very much question that the people of the Christian Church there will ever invite Mr. Grant to lecture for them on that subject again.

I have endeavored to answer the principal objections to our work only, and that without malice or ill-will toward the lecturer or the people who engaged his services, trusting that the little stir made may result in a more thorough investigation of our cause and claims.

PETER ANDERSON.

Extract from Letter.

Patriarch F. G. Pitt writes: "The last few weeks we have been visiting New Castle, Bullahdelah, and Tuncurry, finishing up our work in these branches, and have been blessed in our labors. We return to Sydney this week to pack our trunks and prepare for our journey to New Zealand and South Sea Islands. All being well, we leave for New Zealand December 28, to spend at least a month there. We expect to be at Tahiti during their April conference. Hope to leave there for San Francisco on the steamer Tahiti, due in San Francisco May 15, and take steamer from there to Honolulu, where we hope to arrive some time during the summer months. We are both feeling well and happy in our work. Kindly publish our address, Papeete, Tahiti."

"From the Poet."

Beside his hut and shading oak,
Thus to himself the poet spoke,
"I have supped to-night with gods,
I will not go under a wooden roof:
As I walked along the hills
In the love which Nature fills,
The great stars did not shine aloof,
They hurried down from their steep abodes
And hemmed me in their glittering troop."
—Emerson.

Let our single purpose be—regardless of whom it may please or offend among men—to speak the truth of God in its simplicity and power, not to conceal danger or gild over crime or screen the wrongdoer.—William Lloyd Garrison.

News from Missions

Iowa.

It has been some time since anything from my pen has found its way into the columns of the HERALD, though I read the contents from week to week with pleasure.

We are just nicely entering in upon the new year. I suppose all of us are anxious to make the year 1913 more productive of good than the year just past, and if we can only learn the art of always keeping ourselves in harmony we will multiply our effectiveness immeasurably. I think of the words I read somewhere:

"'Tis easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows on like a song,
But the man worth while, is the man with a smile,
When everything goes dead wrong."

Let us be ready, during this year, to meet everybody with a smile, and exercise faith that we are going to produce results, and they are sure to come.

As a servant of God I am going to do what I can that the good seed may be sown in the hearts of honest men and women. We are at present engaged in a series of meetings at the above place, with good interest manifest, but owing to the weather being bad, our attendance is not large. Missouri Valley has a noble little band of Saints, but there is need of much work to be done here. They own a beautiful lot, upon which they want to build a church as soon as they can secure the funds necessary to begin the work. I am sure they will be successful ere long in getting the amount necessary to begin operations.

The Lord is surely good to those who love him. I want to relate an incident of the 7th inst., and of the wonderful blessing that came to the sister who received it. Sister Ellen Parker, of this place, fell backwards into an open cellarway, striking on her back at the foot of the stairs, nearly ten feet down. She was carried tenderly upstairs and placed upon her bed, and during the entire day was scarcely able to move, and the pain was severe. She was desirous of being administered to; so in the evening Brother A. R. Fry and myself administered to her. We felt the power of the Lord resting upon us all. A few moments after being administered to, she said she wanted to get up. She arose from her bed and walked, unaided, into the adjoining room and sat down. She passed a peaceful night, and the following day was about her work as usual, with little or no pain. Her neighbors are commenting on it, and say it certainly is remarkable.

The above is only one of the many thousands of blessings that come to God's people. May God help us all to appreciate the blessings and good things that come to us daily.

My home address is 2914 North Twenty-fifth Street, Omaha, Nebraska; mission address is 610 Center Street, Sioux City, Iowa.

J. L. PARKER.

MISSOURI VALLEY, IOWA, January 8, 1913.

Central Maine.

I think a few lines from Central Maine will not come amiss, as our experiences during the past year or two in these regions have not come short of being exciting.

My labors have been confined wholly to Corea and adjacent towns. The greatest work has been in Corea. While only a few have enrolled as new members, there has been enough to keep one busy.

For two years I labored at this place, and while I could not see why God directed my stay, I exercised much faith in knowing that something of a final nature was forthcoming. And it has only been during the past two months that I realized what it was.

Two years ago Brother J. A. Koehler and I visited Corea for the purpose of spreading the gospel. Fine audiences greeted us at the meetings, but we were obliged, after three or four nights, to stop proceedings, as a Baptist minister was scheduled to deliver three or four lectures on certain dates. We decided to stay and continue our work after the Baptist minister finished his preaching. We were somewhat surprised to hear him announce for continued services for ten or twelve days. The purpose of this was very evident. It meant a freeze-out for us. Brother Koehler decided to go home for a time, and I was prevailed upon to stay to watch proceedings.

To say the least I met with much opposition. The church doors were barred against us, and it was either by coaxing or by force that we were permitted to use the union chapel. In all of my experiences I never saw such acts of barbarism as were displayed by our opponents. Insults were frequently borne, our rights restricted; and at one time I was assaulted, and it was only by meeting the issue face to face that I was able to stop their contemptible work.

During the 1911 church corporation meeting our members and sympathizers were in the majority, so we succeeded in regaining some of our lost privileges. A compromise was agreed upon. We took Thursday and Saturday nights, and Sunday morning, and the Baptists Sunday and Wednesday nights, and Sunday afternoon.

Tranquility reigned supreme for a few months, until a man in ministerial garb came and stirred his flock to action. I don't wish to state the unbecoming things committed by some who professed to have the love of God in their hearts. Finally, as a fitting climax to their fiendish attitude, they transferred the union chapel to the Maine Baptist Mission Society. That meant that we were to be excluded from holding meetings in the union (?) chapel.

The Saints were feeling downcast at the sudden turn of events. I decided to see justice done and stayed until it was. The same night that the meeting was held, I called for a meeting of the Saints and their sympathizers, and we decided to erect a temporary tabernacle. Almost before the sun was again seen over the horizon, the men shouldered their axes, walked over a mile to the woods, where they cut down a sufficient number of trees. The town was thrown into commotion to see twenty or twenty-five men carrying trees to a certain spot. We then erected a frame for a tent twenty-five by thirty-five feet. Soon after jibs and mainsheets were sacrificed by the fishermen for a covering, and we were ready for business at night. A pulpit, organ, and seats were also obtained. Later a decoration of crepe paper and Japanese lanterns were added, and the whole made a most pleasing place of worship for summer.

Finally, after we got settled, a "Bill in Equity" and "Injunction" were drawn up, as we decided to fight the case through the courts. We had the signatures of thirty-eight of the original corporate owners, and about thirty of those who were recently made members. Some of the charges included "illegal proxy voting," "day of meeting not annual date," "non-compensation of Latter Day Saint members and those who sympathize with us."

The injunction was granted by Judge King, of the supreme court, so we were permitted to use the church as we had heretofore. If it were found that we were not entitled to the temporary injunction we would be obliged to pay all damages caused by issuing said injunction.

The first court session was held November 4, at Prospect Harbor, Maine. Practically the whole townspeople were in attendance, and many from other places near Corea. We were agreeably surprised to learn of Judge King's advice in the matter of a just settlement of the case. - He counseled the lawyers to make such arrangements as would determine the property rights of both disputants.

We readily agreed to take our portion in money, and as the Baptist Maine Missionary Society were making preparations incidental to receiving the church, we were perfectly willing to let them have it. The referees were agreed upon to determine the aforesaid matter, and the judge adjourned the court.

After returning to Corea preparation was made for the final legal battle. Arrangements were made to hold the hearing some time after the holidays. This gave me a chance to go home for Christmas. The Baptists, knowing that I had gone, arranged to have the hearing while I was away.

I was surprised to receive a telegram to come back immediately, as court would convene six days before Christmas. So, with grip in hand, I went immediately to the source of the trouble. The Baptists were angry to think we had defeated their purposes. They fully intended that I should not be present at that final sitting of court, knowing that I had studied the history of the Baptists and the Latter Day Saints in Corea from the start, and could offer our counsel much valuable evidence.

The time for the opening remarks by the lawyers found our people at hand to give their testimony. In justice to them, I will say that our people were consistent as witnesses. I can not say this of the defense, for on several occasions they were called to order by the judge.

A man who had refused our lawyer the corporation books, testified to the effect that his counsel advised him not to let our lawyer have the books. This was denied by their counsel, thus putting one of their best witnesses in a bad plight.

Another witness owned up that he had procured the signatures of thirty people outside of Corea (nonresidents of the town of Gouldsboro, and nonresidents of the State) for the purpose of controlling the vote of the corporation. It was very evident that fraud was used to steal the church.

Three sessions were necessary to get all of the evidence in. We were all tired when court adjourned, but we felt well to know that apparently we made a good impression on the referees.

Soon afterward I returned home to await the verdict of the referees. I was most agreeably surprised to hear that they had agreed upon twenty-one hundred dollars as the value of the church, and ten hundred and fifty dollars as the Latter Day Saints' portion. To say the least, I was very happy over the results. Just to think that they had awarded us that amount when the Baptists declared that sixty-eight dollars was our portion of the corporation property, is enough to make one feel a little jubilant. I suppose this means the erection of a Latter Day Saint chapel in Corea.

In conclusion, let me say that our members will prevent a lot of trouble and the expending of dollars, if they would have it clearly specified when giving money for union churches, that our ministers shall have equal opportunities with others. Our elders know too well how they have been refused the use of union churches after our members have contributed to the erection and maintenance of them.

May wisdom guide our footsteps along these lines, and the Lord bless us still more in our work of redemption, is the prayer of your humble servant.

H. ARTHUR KOEHLER.

SHAWMUT, P. O., NEW BEDFORD, MASSACHUSETTS, January 3, 1913.

---

A little library, growing larger every year, is an honorable part of a man's history. It is a man's duty to have books. A library is not a luxury but one of the necessities of life.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

NORTH DAKOTA.—District conference convened at Berlin, North Dakota, January 11, 1913, at 3.15 p. m., with William Sparling in the chair. By motion William Sparling and J. W. Wagener were chosen to preside over the conference. W. E. Shakespeare was chosen secretary pro tem. Reports from the following of the ministry were heard, Elders: William Sparling, J. E. Wildermuth, J. C. Page, E. E. Weddle, J. S. Wagener. Priests: W. E. Shakespeare, William Shockow, W. H. Hagood. Calvin J. Wagar, teacher. Branches reporting: Fargo, 38; gain, 2. By motion this report was referred back to branch. Milroy 35, loss 3; Minot, new branch, 30; this report was also referred back to branch. Bishop's agent report showed the following: On hand last report, $175.42; received since, $1,110.42; total, $1,285.84; paid out $730; balance on hand, $555.84. It was voted to refer this report to auditing committee of three to be appointed by the chair. Those so appointed were J. C. Page, Sister A. H. Freie, and Sister J. C. Page. By motion the Leeds Branch was declared disorganized, and books and records ordered sent to district secretary, also that letters of removal be issued to members of said branch to the proper branches until all are properly placed. By motion, the money held by the reunion committee was accepted and ordered placed in the district treasury. The bill of expense presented by J. C. Page for tracts used in the district was ordered paid. A motion was passed, favoring the organizing of a branch in the northeastern part of the State. The following delegates to General Conference were chosen: William Sparling, W. E. Shakespeare, J. C. Page, J. S. Wagener, George Young, J. E. Wildermuth, Sister John Young, Sister Lena Graham, Thomas Leach, Len Moffit, Sister Emilie McLeod. A motion favoring the holding of the joint reunion to be held in Fargo next summer so as to end with the last Sunday in June, was passed. Also that the next conference be held on the Tuesday of the reunion. The general order of meetings were as usual, the speakers being, William Sparling, W. E. Shakespeare, and J. C. Page. The Sunday school held its session at 9.45 a. m. In the afternoon a very spiritual prayer and sacrament meeting was enjoyed, in which the Spirit bore witness to the truthfulness of the work, to the encouragement of all present. W. E. Shakespeare, secretary pro tem.

Conference Notices.

There will be a special conference of the Chatham, Ontario, District held on some day of the convention at Wabash, on February 1 and 2, 1913, to settle place of the reunion of 1913, and other business pertaining thereto. Branches kindly see that your delegates are duly appointed thereto. David Snobelin, president of district; Anthony R. Hewitt, secretary of district.

Central Oklahoma district conference will convene at Holdenville, Oklahoma, February 14, 15, and 16, 1913. We would like to see the district well represented. The Sunday school and Religio conventions will be held at the same place, on the day previous to conference. J. Sheppard, district secretary.

The Little Sioux district conference will meet with the Moorhead Saints, February 1, 1913. Prayer service at 9 a. m.; business session at 10.30. James D. Stuart, district clerk, Magnolia, Iowa.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Nebraska District will convene at Omaha, Nebraska, February 8, 1913; business session commencing at 10 a. m. Prayer meeting at 9. All should attend who possibly can, as this is the most important conference of the year, it being the time for the election of officers. Anna Hicks, district secretary, 2805 North Twenty-fifth Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Conference of the Mobile District will convene with the Bluff Creek Branch, near Vanclave, Mississippi, March 1, 1913, at 10 a. m. The priesthood and branches are requested to report promptly. A. E. Warr, district secretary.

Alabama District will meet in conference with the Pleasant Hill Branch, near McKenzie, Alabama, February 14 and 15, 1913. All branches are expected to send their reports, and all are invited to come. Let all bring the good Spirit. J. R. Harper, district president.

Southwestern Oregon district conference will convene at Myrtle Point, Oregon, February 8, 9, 1913. Send branch reports to the secretary, Mrs. Maud McCracken, Myrtle Point, Oregon. A. A. Baker, district president.

Convention Notices.

Southwestern Oregon Sunday school association convention will meet at Myrtle Point, Oregon, February 7, 1913, at 10 a. m. Schools will send reports to Mrs. Pearl Goodman, Myrtle Point, Oregon, the district secretary. A. A. Baker, district superintendent.

Gallands Grove district Sunday school and Religio associations will convene at Dow City, Iowa, February 6, at 7.30 p. m. Two stereopticon lectures on Palestine will be delivered by G. T. Griffiths. Also business transacted by both organizations. Come and get into the spirit of the work. Floy Holcomb, secretary.

Little Sioux District Religio convention convenes at Moorhead, Iowa, Thursday evening, January 30, 1913. Mrs. Perry Mann, district secretary.

Religio and Sunday school convention of the Northern Nebraska District will convene at Omaha, Nebraska, February 7, 1913. All members are urgently requested to be present, as election of officers for the ensuing year will take place, also delegates to the General Convention. Alice Cary Schwartz, district Religio secretary.

Pottawattamie District Sunday school association will convene in Council Bluffs, Friday, January 31, at 10 a. m., for prayer service, followed by business sessions. Local secretaries please send reports and credentials to district secretary, Floy M. Wind, 738 Washington Avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Pottawattamie district Religio convention will convene at Council Bluffs, Iowa, January 31, 1913, at 2 p. m. Remember it is election of officers. Jennie Larson, 209 Turley Avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa, district secretary.

Joint convention of the district Sunday school association and Religio for the Southern Wisconsin District will convene at Madison, Wisconsin, February 15, 1913. As large a representation of the district as can be had is desired. B. C. Flint, district superintendent.

The Mobile Sunday school and Religio convention will meet with the Bluff Creek Branch, February 28, 1913. Prayer meeting at 9 a. m., followed by institute work, business session, and election of officers. A. E. Warr, district superintendent.

The Sunday school association and Zion's Religio-Literary Society of Chatham, Ontario, District will meet in convention at Wabash, Ontario, February 1 and 2, 1913. The first session will be held at 2 p. m., Saturday devoted to Sunday school work. The Wabash Saints will meet the morning trains on the P. M. R., north and south, at Dresden, and the morning C. P. R. trains east and west, at North Thamesville. Those coming to the convention on any other trains or by any other route will please notify the Wabash Saints in good time. Anthony R. Hewitt, secretary Religio; G. Orlo Coburn, secretary Sunday school.

Sunday school convention of the Little Sioux, Iowa, District will be held at Moorhead, Iowa, Friday morning, January 31. Joint session of Sunday school and Religio Thursday evening. William Stewart, secretary.

The Bishopric.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT IN AND FOR THE STATE AND COUNTRY OF SWEDEN.

Saints and friends of the work of Christ, under the name and denomination of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints: Please take notice that upon the recommendation of the missionary in charge, Brother H. N. Hansen, of Copenhagen, Denmark, and other Saints and friends in Sweden, Sister Hannah Lawrence, of Warmland, Bjorneborg, Sweden, has been appointed agent of the Presiding Bishopric of the said Reorganized Church, to act in and for the state and country of Sweden, according to the rules and regulations governing said society.

The said Sister Hannah Lawrence is hereby authorized to receive and receipt for funds in behalf of said church and to use the same in aiding and sustaining, by incidental expenses and otherwise, ministers of Christ of said Reorganized Church in their work in the country of Sweden, and also to administer to the poor and needy and help those who need help as may be necessary from time to time in carrying on the financial work as agent in said country. And to report the same to the Presiding Bishopric of the said Reorganized Church from time to time as requested, and annually on the 31st of December of each year.

We take pleasure in recommending Sister Lawrence to the Saints and friends of the cause of our blessed Lord in said

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

Getting a New Start in Life - - - - - 73

A Spirit Appeal - - - - - 74

Important to Parents - - - - - 75

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

Tracting; Methods, Value, and Results, by C. Edward Miller and J. F. Rudd. - - - - - 76

Fundamentals of the Order of Enoch, by Edward Rannie - - - - - 78

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - - - 83

Eleanor. - - - - -

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - - 83

E. A. Erwin—William Dowker—John Slocum—Mrs. M. R. Warr—T. W. Williams—Peter Anderson—Extract from Letter. - - - - -

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - - 92

J. L. Parker—H. Arthur Koehler. - - - - -

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - - 94

REPORT OF GRACELAND COLLEGE FROM JULY 1, 1911, TO JULY 1, 1912 - - - - - 97

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

territory, and trust that all who are striving for good, and interested in the Lord's work may be ready to help and assist her, in order to accomplish the work that will be to the glorifying of the name of our heavenly Father, and to such as do this, may his peace and blessing attend, helping them to overcome. In behalf of the Bishopric, I am,

Very respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 15, 1913.

Church Secretary.

DELEGATE CREDENTIALS TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Delegate credential blanks, provided for by action of General Conference, have been sent to presidents or secretaries of the various stakes, districts, or branches not in districts. Such officers are requested to forward credentials of delegates appointed to represent their organizations at the General Conference of 1913, to the Church Secretary, as soon as possible, that the report of the committee on credentials may be made up and printed before the opening of the conference, as provided for by the session of 1911. Credentials of delegates appointed at fall or winter conferences should be forwarded without delay, and of those yet to be appointed, immediately after appointment. All credentials should be in hand as early in the month of March as possible.

One certificate for each delegation, with number of members in district or branch, and names of its delegates, signed by the president and secretary of body appointing, with name of such organization and place and date of conference or business meeting, is sufficient; separate, individual credentials to delegates are not necessary. Please insert "Total membership" in all cases; also report if delegates are authorized to cast majority and minority vote.

Any failing to receive blanks will be supplied on application to the undersigned.

The rules governing "representation" and the "restrictions of delegate voting" provide as follows:

"Each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. Scattered members in districts, including those enrolled as members of other districts, may be included in the enumeration of membership.

"The delegates present at conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference.

"Provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation (the full delegation not being present), they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

"No one delegate shall be entitled to cast, as representative in the same conference, more than twenty votes.

"Each regularly organized branch of the church not included in an organized district, shall be entitled to one delegate, who shall have the same privilege as delegates of districts. But when the membership of such branch exceeds twenty-five it shall be entitled to one delegate for each twenty-five members."

For further information concerning representation, choice, and instruction of delegates, etc., see Rules of Order, chapter 17.

R. S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, January 11, 1913.

Notice.

Branch presidents of the Eastern Michigan District please take notice. I sincerely request a quarterly report from each branch president of the district. Please report January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1. Write to the Herald Office for branch presidents' report blanks, and please don't forget to report to William M. Grice, district president, Crosswell, Michigan, Route 5.

Program of the Order of Evangelists.

This program is to be rendered at the sessions of the Order of Evangelists, during the April Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, in the year 1913.

First Session, April 7, 7.30 p. m.

1. "The character and purpose of patriarchal blessings;" C. E. Butterworth, Dow City, Iowa.

Second Session.

2. "The promises and purpose of patriarchal blessings; are they conditional? If so, Should the conditions be expressed?" Ammon White, Independence, Missouri.

Third Session.

3. "In the giving of patriarchal blessings, what comparative degree of inspiration may we reasonably expect?" Arthur Leverton, Clearville, Ontario.

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT,
CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH,
Authorized Committee.

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH, Secretary.

Eastern Saints.

By vote of those present at the New Bedford Sunday school convention, it was voted to postpone the drawing for reunion lots till the conference convening at Fall River, February 1, 1913. I desire to call the attention of Saints interested in the reunion grounds to this drawing, and ask you to make application to me at 7 Miner Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts, as soon as possible, if you desire to participate in this first drawing. To those not desiring to take part in this first drawing, you may make application any time thereafter to me.

M. C. FISHER.

Graceland College.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION OF GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Trustees, to be held on the 10th day of April, A. D., 1913, in the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, the following amendment to the Articles of Incorporation of Graceland College will be presented and considered for adoption:

Strike out all of Article VIII, and in lieu thereof insert the following:

"The Board of Trustees shall meet annually on the twenty-fifth day of April, or if said day be Sunday or a holiday, then on the next succeeding day, and perform the duties and work devolving upon such officers as herein set forth; namely, —the election of officers and standing committees; the selection and employment of professors, teachers, and other employees of the college; arranging for and adopting a course of study for the said institution; and performing any and all other duties necessary for the good of the same; provided, however, that the said board may hold such other regular meetings as may be deemed advisable by them, and may at any such regular meeting consider and act on any matter above set forth. And provided further, that professors and teachers may be selected for the ensuing year at any time after January 1, and provided further that professors or teachers may be elected at any time for a term of years not exceeding five, by a unanimous vote of the whole Board of Trustees."

A. CARMICHAEL, Chairman.

S. A. BURGESS, Secretary.

LAMONI, DECATUR COUNTY, IOWA, December 26, 1912.

Died.

GARNER.—William Wallace Garner was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, April 5, 1848. He died January 6, 1913, at his home in Artesia, California. The funeral was from the McDonald Undertaking Parlors in San Bernardino, California, A. E. Jones in charge, sermon by Elder Elbert A. Smith. He was laid to rest in the Mountain View Cemetery. His wife is left to mourn. He was a member of the church for over forty years, and held the office of priest. He was a son of John Garner, one of the old pioneers in California, and one of the old pioneers in church work, and a brother of Sylvester Garner, of Los Angeles, California.

CRANDALL.—Lewis F. Crandall, of Langley, Washington, died January 1, 1913, at his home. Born July 7, 1845, in Oneida County, New York. He married Caroline Welda; to them were born five children, three of them having preceded him in death. His first wife died in 1886; in 1888 he married Annis I. Amedon; to them were born seven children, two of them dying in infancy, the other five living at home. He was baptized June 20, 1909. He leaves a wife and children to mourn. Funeral held at the Friends' church; sermon by William Johnson. Deceased was a member of the Masonic Lodge. Some of the Masons came over from Sedre and held a ceremony at the grave.

GUNSOLLEY.—Albert P. Gunsolley, son of Benjamin Gunsolley, was born in Joe Daviess County, Illinois, October 21, 1846; died at his home in Decatur, Nebraska, January 5, 1913. He united with the church in 1905. Funeral services were held in the Saints' church, with Edgar Butts in charge; sermon by Joseph Lane. He leaves to mourn, wife, three brothers, and many relatives and friends. He was a faithful Saint and an earnest worker. The remains were laid to rest in the Decatur Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just.

Lincoln Features in the "Century."

The February Century will contain three Lincoln features of much interest. One will be an explanation of Lincoln's secret promise to cooperate with McClellan to save the Union in the event of McClellan's election. A facsimile of the manuscript which is owned by Mrs. John Hay, will illustrate the article. John Langdon Kaine has written of "Lincoln as a boy knew him," giving several anecdotes, both serious and humorous. The third feature will be "A new story of Lincoln's assassination," a hitherto unpublished record of an eyewitness, by Jesse W. Weik.

FOR SALE—A clean, up-to-date stock of general merchandise, about $8,000. L. D. S. church, about 100 members. Good trade. Reason for selling, other business. Substantial reduction for cash. Would consider trade on good, clear real estate to about one third of invoice. 4-1t* Box 91, Mapleton, Kansas.

FOR SALE

Well improved 10 1/4 acres in suburbs of Holden, Missouri, large L. D. S. church. For particulars address with stamp inclosed. J. W. Roberts, Box 332, Holden, Missouri. 4-1t

BOOK OF MORMON. Danish edition. (Mormon's Bog) just received. Order 1/4 leather edition, $1.00. Order leather, board, $1.25. Order leather, limp, $1.50. Order leather, flexible, $2.50.

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1 1/2 story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,

Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni, Iowa.

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right.

Cloth No. 243 .....75

Why Don't You Get a Free Farm in Wyoming?

The new homestead law makes it easy to own a farm now. It offers just the opportunity the farm renter, the farm hand and many others who want to establish themselves upon farms of their own, have been looking for. You can now secure title to an irrigated government farm or a Mondell 320 acres free homestead in three years and at the same time be away from the farm five months each year. Will you be one of those who will take advantage of Uncle Sam's generosity and become the owner of a farm along the new lines of the Burlington Route in Wyoming?

This matter is worth thinking about. In fact, if interested, I would be glad to have you write me about it. And when you write, be sure to remind me to send your copy of the folder describing these lands.

I will run a personally-conducted homeseekers' excursion to points in Wyoming on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. It won't cost much to go out and inspect these farms and it might mean a lot to you. As you have something to gain and nothing to lose; why not arrange to do this?

D. CLEM DEEVER, Immigration Agent
1004 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebr.

Report of the Graceland College Receipts from Endowments and Offerings for the Year Beginning July 1, 1911, and Ending July 1, 1912.

Table with columns for Endowments, Offerings, and various donor names and amounts. Includes sub-sections for July 5, July 6, July 14, July 17, July 18, July 19, July 20, July 24, July 25, July 31, August 5, August 12, August 13, August 15, August 16, August 17, August 18, August 19, August 20, August 21, August 22, August 23, August 25, August 26, August 30, August 31, September 6, September 10, September 14, September 15, September 16, September 19, September 20, September 23, September 25, September 27, September 28, October 2, October 3, October 4, October 5, October 9.

B. L. Mason . . . . . 3 44
 Bartlesville, Oklahoma, Saints . . . . . 1 10
 J. G. Norton and
 Argie Begg . . . . . 3 00
 Hamilton, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 4 60
 E. W. Weaver and wife . . . . . 1 00
 Mrs. F. F. Schrunk . . . . . 10 00
 Mrs. J. B. Wilder-
 muth . . . . . 5 00
 Parrish, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 2 50
 Grand Rapids, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 1 15
 Cockburn Island,
 Ontario . . . . . 1 50
 Lansing, Michigan,
 Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Alton, Illinois, S. S.
 Dahinda, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Steubenville, Ohio,
 Branch . . . . . 1 50
 Audubon, Minnesota, Branch . . . . . 2 05
 Mallaard, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 1 80

October 10.
 Spickards, Missouri,
 S. S. . . . . . 5 00
 Hiteman, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 6 20
 Richill, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 1 10
 Oliveleaf, Indianapolis, Indiana, S. S.
 Plano, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 4 45
 Ward, Iowa, Branch
 Carson, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 4 50
 Glenwood, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 2 76
 First Chicago
 Branch and Hope of Israel S. S. . . . . 5 30
 Mr. and Mrs. W. H.
 McElroy . . . . . 50

October 11.
 Brother and Sister
 M. W. Harshorn
 Detroit, Michigan,
 Religio . . . . . 5 00
 Louisville S. S. and
 Branch . . . . . 5 00
 New Albany, Indiana S. S. and
 Branch . . . . . 4 72
 Coldwater, Michigan,
 S. S. . . . . . 3 80
 South Boardman,
 Michigan, Branch
 Janesville, Wisconsin, Branch . . . . . 5 00
 Disley, Saskatchewan, Branch . . . . . 3 25
 R. W. Johnson . . . . . 2 00

October 12.
 Alice Strickland . . . . . 5 00

October 13.
 Linden City, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 2 30
 Miss Julia A.
 Thomas . . . . . 2 00
 L. E. Bills . . . . . 1 20
 Warrensburg, Missouri, Branch . . . . . 2 30
 Moorhead, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 15 00
 Bellair, Michigan,
 Branch . . . . . 1 20
 Seattle, Washington,
 Branch . . . . . 7 00
 Columbus, Nebraska,
 Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Massachusetts District Religio . . . . . 5 00
 Charles City, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 58
 Bozeman, Montana,
 Branch and S. S.
 Boyne City, Michigan Branch . . . . . 1 17
 Salem, Iowa, Branch
 Sagle, Idaho, Branch
 Sparta, Michigan
 Branch . . . . . 3 25
 James Kemp . . . . . 1 00
 A. E. Pitton . . . . . 2 00
 Orville James . . . . . 10 00
 Taberville, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 4 75
 Nevada, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 1 75
 Warren McElwain . . . . . 10 00

October 16.
 Mrs. J. W. Layton . . . . . 5 00 50

October 17.
 Gooderham, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 50
 Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, Branch . . . . . 4 25
 Millersburg, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 1 50
 Blenheim, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 2 25
 Haverhill, Massachusetts, Branch . . . . . 1 25
 Wheeler, Iowa
 Branch . . . . . 4 00
 Coal Hill Branch,
 Minnesota Prairie
 Branch and S. S.
 Bedison, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 3 25
 Manitowanning, Ontario, Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Leon, Iowa, Branch
 Oland, Missouri, S.
 S. . . . . . 2 81

October 18.
 Lamon, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 90 82
 East Fremont, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 1 55
 C. J. Lester . . . . . 2 00
 Lower Lake, California, Branch . . . . . 2 20
 Wheeling, West Virginia, Branch . . . . . 5 00
 Applegate, Michigan,
 Branch . . . . . 3 55
 Gulliver, Michigan,
 S. S. . . . . . 50

October 19.
 Ravenna, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 25
 Longwood, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 5 00
 Mitchell, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 30
 Bevier, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 7 00
 George L. Benson.
 Beaverton, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Redickville, Ontario
 A. P. Hendrickson
 Gallen, Michigan,
 S. S. . . . . . 1 10
 Indian River, Maine,
 Branch . . . . . 6 05
 Nebraska City, Nebraska, Branch . . . . . 4 67

October 20.
 Fall River, Massachusetts . . . . . 2 37
 Sauld Saint Marie,
 Michigan, Branch
 Collinwood Lake,
 North Dakota, S.
 S. . . . . . 1 50
 Logan, Iowa, Branch,
 Selling, Oklahoma,
 S. S. . . . . . 7 20
 Malby, North Dakota, S. S. . . . . . 1 25

October 22.
 Erie Beach, Ontario
 G. M. Jamison . . . . . 1 60
 Leeds Branch and
 S. S., England . . . . . 1 58
 E. A. Webbe . . . . . 5 00
 Jonesport, Maine,
 Branch . . . . . 15 30
 The Plains Branch
 Kasson, Michigan . . . . . 1 00
 Saint Joseph, Missouri Branch and
 S. S. (First) . . . . . 80
 Port Haron, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 10 03
 Sunnyvale, Saskatchewan, Branch . . . . . 2 07
 Cedar Valley, Ontario, Branch . . . . . 3 40
 Bon Accord, Alberta
 Keokuk, Iowa . . . . . 1 00
 Leucedale, Mississippi, Branch . . . . . 3 00
 Sister David Kier . . . . . 4 25
 Winnebago, Nebraska, Branch . . . . . 1 00
 Portland, Oregon,
 Branch . . . . . 3 50
 Davis City, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 77
 Saint Louis, Missouri, Branch . . . . . 10 00

October 24.
 W. N. Robinson . . . . . 5 00
 W. N. Robinson, jr. . . . . 5 00
 Lucile Robinson . . . . . 5 00
 Louise Robinson . . . . . 5 00
 Deere Isle, Maine,
 Branch . . . . . 1 00
 Burlington, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 4 25
 Chelsea, Kansas
 City, Kansas,
 Branch . . . . . 1 60
 Henderson, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 6 55
 Little Sioux, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 4 00
 Inman, Nebraska,
 Branch . . . . . 85

October 25.
 Aurora, Illinois,
 S. S. . . . . . 43
 Hamburg, Iowa, S.
 S. . . . . . 2 00
 B. G. Horne . . . . . 1 00
 Sister I. C. Herring
 Guilford, Missouri,
 Branch . . . . . 1 00
 5 00

October 26.
 George Shippy . . . . . 7 00
 George Fowler . . . . . 7 00
 A. R. Fowler . . . . . 6 30

October 27.
 Taylorville, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 4 00
 Chilliwack, British
 Columbia, Branch
 Omaha, Nebraska,
 Branch . . . . . 5 50
 Omaha, Nebraska,
 S. S. . . . . . 5 26
 Omaha, Nebraska,
 Branch . . . . . 3 00
 Niagara Falls, Ontario, Branch . . . . . 1 70
 Mary Clark . . . . . 5 00
 Mrs. J. V. Clark . . . . . 10 00
 F. Clifton . . . . . 5 00
 B. G. Field . . . . . 5 00
 George Ward . . . . . 5 00
 T. Crowley . . . . . 5 00
 S. Clark . . . . . 5 00
 T. Dodd . . . . . 10 00
 W. H. Ludford . . . . . 5 00
 Buchanan, Michigan,
 Branch . . . . . 3 50

October 30.
 Evergreen, Montana,
 S. S. . . . . . 4 25
 Port Elgin, Ontario,
 Religio . . . . . 3 00
 Port Elgin, Ontario,
 S. S. . . . . . 5 00
 Port Elgin, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 4 25
 Roslyn, Washington,
 Branch . . . . . 4 00
 Chilliwack, British
 Columbia, Branch
 Unity, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 2 00
 Lone Star, Alaska,
 Branch . . . . . 4 75
 Vancouver, British
 Columbia, S. S. and Saints . . . . . 50
 Spokane, Washington, Branch . . . . . 10 00

November 1.
 New Port, California, Branch . . . . . 11 30
 David Burch and wife . . . . . 5 52
 Second Branch,
 Saint Joseph, Missouri . . . . . 5 00
 Second Sunday School, Saint Joseph, Missouri . . . . . 2 26
 Alma O. George . . . . . 1 53
 Lucy Lockard . . . . . 5 00
 Mrs. Anna Dancer . . . . . 25 00
 Brandon, Oregon,
 Branch . . . . . 3 50
 Grindstone, Michigan, Branch . . . . . 5 00
 Proton, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 40

November 3.
 B. L. Hayer . . . . . 5 00
 Minneapolis, Minnesota, Branch . . . . . 3 00
 Chatham, Ontario,
 Branch and S. S.
 Hope of Israel S. S.
 Sister R. Kilgore . . . . . 6 32
 50
 1 00

San Jose, California,
 Branch . . . . . 10 50
 Rock Creek, Illinois,
 Branch . . . . . 12 00
 Thurman, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 3 60

November 7.
 Lamon, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 15 00
 W. J. Mather . . . . . 5 00
 Fred Green . . . . . 2 50
 San Francisco, S. S.
 Condon, Oregon,
 Branch . . . . . 5 00
 Carrie Neef . . . . . 10 00
 C. O. Leeka . . . . . 50

November 9.
 Eben Miller . . . . . 5 00
 Webb City, Missouri
 Higbee, Missouri . . . . . 2 25
 Olive Branch, Ontario . . . . . 3 50
 Logan, Iowa, Branch
 Magnolia, Iowa,
 Religio . . . . . 5 35
 Magnolia, Iowa,
 S. S. . . . . . 96
 Magnolia, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 1 55
 Magnolia, Iowa,
 Branch . . . . . 4 17
 Elizabeth Caffall . . . . . 2 00
 Alma M. Fyrando . . . . . 1 00
 Will Sacrey . . . . . 1 00
 Ellice, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 00
 Jasper Jennings . . . . . 5 00
 Joseph Bryant . . . . . 5 00
 F. M. Adams . . . . . 5 00
 E. E. Wertz . . . . . 4 00

November 14.
 Joy, Illinois, Branch
 Boston S. S. . . . . . 5 00
 John B. Cato . . . . . 5 23
 J. W. Dimmock . . . . . 10 00
 Bertie Wood . . . . . 1 00
 Mrs. and Mrs. L.
 Johnson . . . . . 50
 Zion's Star S. S.,
 Saint Joseph . . . . . 1 00
 J. J. Jenkins . . . . . 4 85
 Emma Woolsey . . . . . 10 00

November 15.
 H. A. Scott . . . . . 5 00

November 16.
 R. Miller . . . . . 5 00
 Saint Thomas, Ontario, S. S. . . . . . 64
 Hazel Dell, Branch,
 Weston, Iowa . . . . . 2 65
 Waterford, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 25

November 17.
 Charles Hannah . . . . . 5 00
 Mrs. T. B. Wolf . . . . . 1 00
 W. C. Griffin . . . . . 5 00
 R. D. Fairclough,
 Norwood, Massachusetts . . . . . 5 00
 Milroy, North Dakota, Branch . . . . . 5 00

November 20.
 Mrs. Flora Scott . . . . . 5 00

November 21.
 W. E. Nelson . . . . . 5 00
 Anna Salyards . . . . . 2 50
 Albert Sackfield . . . . . 5 00
 M. N. Perkin . . . . . 2 50
 Mrs. D. H. Lewis . . . . . 2 50
 San Francisco, California, Branch . . . . . 4 20
 F. Newcomb . . . . . 1 00
 Mrs. Julia Brogden . . . . . 25
 B. L. McKim . . . . . 50
 C. W. Winey . . . . . 50
 George Juergens . . . . . 1 00
 Arthur Juergens . . . . . 75
 Herald Salisbury . . . . . 1 00
 Esther Salisbury . . . . . 25
 Marjenda Ballantyne and family . . . . . 2 00
 Gallands Grove
 Branch . . . . . 8 75
 Deloit Willing
 Workers . . . . . 10 00

November 22.
 Martha Young . . . . . 1 00
 George Reeves . . . . . 10 00
 Cameron, Ontario,
 Branch . . . . . 1 00

November 24.
 Frances C. Booker . . . . . 1 2b
 F. O. Benedict . . . . . 5 00
 C. D. Constance . . . . . 50

November 27.
James and Fred Wilkinson 5 00
Star of Bethlehem S. S., Lamoni, Ia. 24 19
A. Carmichael 5 00
Pearl Jamison 5 00

November 28.
Middletown, Ohio, Saints 1 00
Signa Lundquist 5 00
Stephen Wentworth 10 00
Davenport, Iowa, S. S. 1 00

November 28.
Mrs. Rosa Nell 10 00
J. Lawrence McPherson 2 50

November 29.
Gerrit Juergens 10 00
Farmington, Iowa, Branch 1 25
Homer Shupe 50

December 1.
John Zimmermann 110 00
Ralph Harder 5 00
J. L. Wheeler 10 00

December 4.
Mrs. C. J. Peters 1 00

December 5.
London, Ontario, Branch 3 00
London, Ontario, S. S. 2 00
Ogden, Utah, Branch 3 38

December 6.
D. Hougas and wife 20 00

December 7.
Mrs. Elizabeth Blair 1 00
F. T. Scott 1 00
John Buchanan 2 00

December 8.
C. F. Scarciff 5 75
Toronto Branch 5 37
P. Crump 5 00
Ernest Oliver 10 00
George Griffin 5 00
Humber Bay S. S. 2 00
Humber Bay Religious 2 00
Frank Clifton 5 00
George Dodd 5 00

December 12.
Orville Midgorden 1 00
Edith Gray 10

December 14.
James Allen 2 55
Mrs. William Crick 10 00
Allen Hill 5 00
Oscar Anderson and wife 10 00
Annie Hill 5 00

December 16.
Kenneth Hyatt 50
Blair Fillemore 25
Mrs. Blair Fillemore 25
James Hyatt 50
Oscar Johnson 25
Fred Joy 25
General Sunday School Association 200 00

December 19.
Jay Fields 50
Geelong Branch, Australia 3 74
E. L. Kelley 10 00
C. W. Blair and wife 5 00
C. B. Blair 5 00
J. W. Bean and wife 5 00
Glen E. Holmes 5 00
Emma Lewis 5 00
Mondamin, Iowa, Branch 2 25

December 20.
Stevenson, Ontario, Branch 2 22
John Agenstein 5 00
J. P. Frazier 5 00
W. A. Grenawalt 5 00
J. R. Grenawalt 5 00
Pleasant View Branch 1 50

December 20.
Ruby Faunce 5 00
Mrs. A. Badham 5 00
Cadillac, Michigan, Branch 91

Arch D. Angus 5 00
Charles Crabb 5 00
Oaksdale, S. S. 2 09

December 23.
N. Thornton 5 00
Sarah A. Mills 5 00
Walter W. Head 5 00
James Comstock 5 00
Mrs. W. A. Hopkins 5 00
E. E. Gilbert 5 00
M. M. Ballanger 2 50
C. E. Ballantyne 2 50
Mrs. E. B. Edson 50 00
Vina McHarness 1 00
James Dawson 5 00

December 27.
Mrs. Marin Dunsdon 5 00
Wilbur C. Hewitt 2 50
John M. Lang 10 00
Vina Denio 1 25
E. A. Melisch and wife 10 00
Honolulu S. S. 5 00
Honolulu Z. R.-L. S. 5 00
H. O. Smith 5 00
T. A. and Julia Brogden 5 00
Ida M. Sperry 5 00
R. Miller 5 00
Mrs. J. Armstrong 50
Independence, Mo., Z. R.-L. S. 10 00
Imogene Redfield 5 00
James Wilson 5 00
Sam Andrews 2 50
Benjamin Frank 2 50
Ellen Worrall 5 00
D. H. Baggerly 1 00
Arthur Epperly 5 00
Elias Hinderks 2 50
M. A. Etzenhouser 5 00
C. A. Clark 5 00
N. W. Birt 5 00
Post Oak, Missouri, Branch 1 80
W. Bullard 5 00
Elder H. V. Brown 10 00
Jay Leeka 5 00
Mrs. Pearl Van Eaton 5 00
Mrs. A. B. Crane 50
Carrie N. Lewis 5 00
Jacob Lawrence 2 50
Jashana Dobson 10 00

December 28.
Alice Strickland 5 00
Ruth M. Spalding 20 00
Mrs. C. C. Hoague 5 00
T. S. and Addie Brown 10 00
Edgerton, Alberta, S. S. 5 00
E. A. Blakeslee 5 00
William I. Murray 1 00
Charles France 5 00
Joseph Buckley 5 00
Mrs. Charles Dawson 2 50
S. B. Kibler 5 00
J. M. Robinson 5 00
R. L. Bigger 5 00
Agatha Jones 5 00
A. H. Rudd 5 00
Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Elvin 2 50
Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Masterson 2 50
C. C. Randall 5 00
J. C. Virgin 10 00
H. A. Palmer 1 00
E. L. Henson 2 50
Gertrude and Jeanette McCollum 5 00
Harvey Drake 10 00

January 2.
J. P. Christensen 5 00
L. B. Moore 5 00
W. H. Williams 5 00
Mrs. M. J. Head 50
P. W. Martin 5 00
Ralph T. Peck 25
N. L. Mortimore 5 00
Miss Nina Barber 5 00
Mrs. Julia Busel 2 50
Mrs. C. M. Brown 5 00
Mrs. H. L. Logan 2 50
Arthur M. Davis 2 50
R. Etzenhouser 10 00
L. R. Weidman 5 00
W. W. Newcomb 2 50
Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Anderson 5 00
H. M. Curtis 5 00
Miss Grace Leland 2 50
R. B. Anderson 5 00
A. B. McCord 2 50
Mrs. W. E. Summerfield 50
S. J. Calderwood 5 00
Jay Field 5 00
Ray Field 5 00

Charles E. Douglas, Jr. 5 00
O. L. Bradford 1 25
Grace Kelley 1 25
Mrs. Ella D. Whitehead 5 00
Elnor R. Lewis 5 00
E. R. Steinbaugh 2 50
Ambrose Francis 5 00
Mrs. Nellie J. Kennedy 5 00
Mrs. W. B. Muller 2 50
Lorena Leeka 5 00
Sadie Leeka 5 00
C. A. Roell and wife 3 50
Rachel Leeka 10 00
Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Hartshorn 5 00
Sarah A. Vaughan 2 00
Jessie Hart 2 50
C. F. Adams 5 00
Fanning, Kansas, Branch 6 00
John Quandt 5 00

January 3.
Mrs. W. R. Dennis 1 00
Leila Shaver 2 00
Lansdowne, East Saint Louis, Illinois, Branch 5 00
Mrs. Urania Evans 5 00
D. and L. Cato 5 00
O. L. James 5 00
C. A. and Elizabeth Parkin 5 00
Frank Christofferson 10 00
H. S. Gamet 5 00
Hattie M. Gould 2 50
Frank M. Conner 5 00
Ethel I. Skank 5 00
Mrs. Elizabeth Pickles 5 00
Ammon McIntyre 5 00
Stratford, Ontario, Branch 4 55
H. W. Howlett 5 00
W. G. Plain 50
Wabash, Ontario, Branch 6 75
Mrs. E. L. Braman 2 50

January 3.
Hamilton, Ontario Branch 10 00
Houston Glenn 5 00
Mrs. Mary Glenn 1 00
O. B. Murdock 5 00
J. R. Dawson 5 00
Hubert Case 5 00
Ethel Richardson 5 00
William Bradbury 5 00
A. Z. Rudd 5 00
D. B. Teeters 5 00
Homer Shupe 5 00
Sr. J. C. Anthony 5 00
Sr. L. S. Gilbert 5 00
Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Everett 5 00
Exchange 15
Annie Leather 5 00
Mrs. William Pitt 5 00
Mrs. M. B. Nicholson 5 00
Gracia Nicholson 5 00
Elizabeth Blair 5 00
J. L. Butterworth 5 00
Roy S. Budd 5 00
Richard Budd and wife 2 50
Frederick Ode 5 00
Mrs. J. L. W. Jasperson 5 00
J. E. Kilsey 5 00
J. C. McClelland 1 25
Mrs. S. S. Duntley 5 00
J. E. Hovenga 5 00
Peter Kaufman 5 00

January 4.
Mrs. Belle M. Itoyce 5 00
Mrs. J. D. Wickes 1 00
W. G. Badham 10 50
E. B. Leeka 10 00
Eli Hayer 5 00
Emily Paulallion 5 00
A. H. Nieman 1 00
Mrs. L. Herzog 5 00
Samuel A. Martin 5 00
Mrs. Emily McLeod 5 00
Burney Galbraith 5 00
S. G. Carrow 2 50
J. A. Becker and wife 5 00
Sr. Catherine Frederick 7 00
Temple Branch, Kirtland, Ohio 1 08
Temple S. S. 1 39
C. Malcor 5 00
W. T. Ferguson 5 00
Ladies' Aid Society, Moorhead, Iowa 5 00

January 5.
Olive Branch, Gering, Nebraska, Zion's Religio, Saint Joseph, Missouri 5 00
Charles S. Warren 2 50

January 8.
T. J. Burch 5 00
Orlande Colbert 10 00
William Truog 10 00
G. L. Harrington 10 00
Charles E. Ralson 10 00
Lillie Nesser 60
Lloyd Winans 5 00
F. J. Ebeling 10 00

January 9.
W. M. Aylor 10 00
R. B. Murdock and family 2 15
Jesse Hobson 5 00
Boyd Johnson 5 00
Plymouth, Massachusetts, Branch 1 15
Matthew W. Diston 2 50
Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kemp 5 00
O. H. Storey 5 00

January 9.
H. C. Powell 5 00
Zilla Moore 5 00
E. P. Schmidt 5 00
Samuel Stroth and wife 1 25
Juliette Unsader 5 00
F. A. Schwears 5 00
Schwears Brothers 10 00
Herbert Eaton 5 00
Edna M. Melisch 5 00
Maude Trumble 2 50
G. W. Stowell 2 50
J. A. Jack 5 00
Ribstone S. S. 5 00
Thomas McKivet 2 50
J. S. Andes 2 50
B. D. Andes 2 50
S. H. Simmons 1 00
Far West S. S. 2 50
Dania Swensen 2 50
W. H. Adams 2 50
D. S. Parks 2 50
M. J. Stubbs 2 50
C. B. Hartshorn 5 00
H. B. Hamann 2 50
May Crayne 5 00
Harvey Sandy 5 00
Massachusetts District Religious Association 5 00
E. J. Eppert 2 50
Agnes A. Beardsley 5 00

January 10.
A. B. Richard 5 00
T. W. Chaburn 2 50
Elma Neal 5 00
Hood River, Oregon, Branch 2 50
R. A. Drake 5 00
San Francisco, California, S. S. 3 10
Clinton Williams 5 00
W. H. Worden 2 50
F. B. Blair 5 00
W. Spaulding 10 00
Ellen Graham 5 00
W. Madison Leeka 5 00
C. M. and Tina Saters 5 00
Thomas Scott 10 00
William McIntosh 5 00
May Belle Jackson 5 00
Amy Parr 5 00
Eugene A. Davis 5 00
O. B. Sade 2 50
Nathan Carmichael 5 00

January 11.
T. C. Ovlatt 10 00
Frank Case 5 00
Nephi Yocum 2 50
W. B. Wakeland 5 00
Archie Brethaupt 5 00
Thomas Lerch 10 00
Eunice Dobson 5 00
R. B. Wright 5 00

January 12.
William Schade 5 00
E. R. Davis 2 50
Star Corless 2 50
C. B. Bergersen 10 00
M. L. and B. L. Hendrickson 10 00
W. B. Nichols 5 00
D. S. Paigrove 5 00

January 13.
C. E. Thayer 2 50
Margaret C. Wood 5 00
Jessie B. Smith 2 50

Ora Butterworth... 5 00
 J. B. and Mary
 Prettymann ..... 10 00
 John Heap ..... 5 00
 John Siddall ..... 5 00
 Attleboro, Massachusetts, S. S. .... 2 50
 Attleboro, Massachusetts, Z. R.-L. S. 2 50
 Mrs. J. H. Royce .. 1 10
 January 15.
 J. P. Wash ..... 5 00
 Rustis, Nebraska,
 S. S. .... 5 00
 F. C. Mesle and wife ..... 5 00
 Ethel Swall ..... 5 00
 Gravelford, Oregon,
 Branch ..... 1 25
 Martin L. Swall ..... 1 00
 J. D. Hewitt ..... 5 00
 Saskatchewan District,
 Canada ..... 50 00
 Mrs. M. E. Lawn .. 5 00
 S. H. Ridley ..... 5 00
 S. Penfold ..... 5 00
 Mary Livingston .. 5 00
 Mrs. M. H. Ponda .. 2 50
 R. C. Davis ..... 2 50
 Ray E. Wyman ..... 5 00
 Lester Whiting ... 2 50
 Mrs. L. M. Condit .. 5 00
 W. E. Williamson .. 10 00
 January 16.
 Mason Harder ..... 5 00
 January 17.
 Tillie and Addie
 Uphoff ..... 5 00
 John Carson ..... 5 00
 Z. J. Lewis ..... 5 00
 Nora B. Mitchell .. 1 00
 John Nell ..... 10 00
 January 18.
 F. A. Drager ..... 5 00
 Mr. and Mrs. F. J.
 Martin ..... 2 50
 Mrs. D. Horatio .. 2 50
 Lewis ..... 2 50
 S. E. Livingston .. 6 00
 A. H. Anderson ..... 10 00
 Mary E. Steel ..... 5 00
 Anna DeJong ..... 5 00
 William H. Shaub .. 5 00
 Robert E. Hughes .. 5 00
 January 19.
 Ephraim Squire .. 5 00
 T. J. Elliot ..... 2 50
 Allen Benjamin .. 1 00
 Boston Religio .. 5 00
 Mary L. Boyce ..... 2 50
 W. J. Mather ..... 5 00
 Jennie Huntoon .. 5 00
 January 20.
 N. J. Peters ..... 5 00
 Des Moines District
 S. S. Association .. 5 00
 Herbert Swall ..... 5 00
 Jessie J. Ward ..... 5 00
 Mollie Pierson ... 2 50
 Mrs. S. W. Nelson .. 10 00
 January 22.
 A. Carmichael ... 5 00
 Bertha A. Greer .. 10 00
 Harold Baughman .. 2 50
 H. O. Fishburn ... 2 50
 Grant Premoe ..... 4 00
 Mrs. John Ross ... 2 50
 George A. Congdon .. 5 00
 William McGowan .. 5 00
 J. E. Matthews ... 5 00
 January 24.
 Gallen, Michigan, S. S. 5 00
 Mrs. Anna Jenkins .. 5 00
 January 25.
 J. E. Meredith ... 1 80
 William P. Gard ... 5 00
 W. R. McGuire ... 5 00
 Williamsdale Branch
 H. S. Pankey ..... 5 00
 Vada Johnson ..... 5 00
 George Goodman .. 5 00
 A. L. Keen ..... 5 00
 Traverse City, Michigan, S. S. .... 60
 R. A. Brohlar ..... 5 00
 William McMurdo .. 5 00
 January 29.
 W. R. Cowlishaw .. 2 50
 James Gaut ..... 2 50
 M. J. Klmer ..... 5 00
 Austin Dobson ..... 5 00
 J. M. Thomas ..... 2 50
 A. S. Lewis ..... 5 00
 H. C. Burgess ..... 2 50
 Saskatchewan District
 S. S. Association .. 15 00

January 30.
 E. E. Long ..... 5 00
 F. B. VanFleet ... 5 00
 Robert Broadway .. 10 00
 February 1.
 Mr. S. R. Gover ... 2 50
 John A. Davis ..... 1 00
 February 2.
 Eben Miller ..... 5 00
 February 3.
 John F. Moore ..... 5 00
 Mrs. G. Tate ..... 2 50
 Lucile Robinson .. 5 00
 Wallace Robinson .. 5 00
 Louisa I. Robinson .. 5 00
 W. N. Robinson, Jr 5 00
 Gertrude B. Howland 5 00
 Mrs. Dora Howland 5 00
 A. E. Dempsey ..... 5 00
 Mrs. J. F. Spinnet .. 2 50
 February 5.
 Joseph E. Betts ... 2 50
 Stonington, Maine,
 Branch ..... 2 01
 Mrs. S. A. Whistler .. 5 00
 February 7.
 Mr. and Mrs. D. A.
 Holcomb ..... 5 00
 Leichhardt, Branch,
 Ontario ..... 7 95
 Laura Pierson ..... 5 00
 February 8.
 Rising Hope S. S.,
 Omaha ..... 5 00
 H. A. Sprague ..... 5 00
 Samuel Gaskel .... 10 00
 February 9.
 G. C. Gruver and family ..... 5 00
 February 12.
 Evergreen, Iowa,
 Branch ..... 2 80
 G. M. Morey ..... 1 50
 M. M. Turpen ..... 1 00
 Martha Vandall .. 25
 C. E. Morey ..... 50
 Sidney Morey ..... 60
 George Hubert ..... 2 00
 George and Abbie
 Horton ..... 2 50
 Earl P. Audit ..... 5 00
 Edith A. Bradford .. 5 00
 Doctor John Gilbert 5 00
 G. C. Thompson ... 2 50
 February 12.
 Detroit, Michigan,
 Religio ..... 5 00
 February 13.
 J. P. Spinnet ..... 2 50
 George H. Gates ... 5 00
 W. H. Smart ..... 1 00
 February 14.
 C. E. Wight ..... 5 00
 February 15.
 N. Wilson ..... 10 00
 Richard Jacques ... 50
 February 16.
 Twin City, Branch,
 Illinois ..... 2 11
 Trowbridge, Ontario,
 Branch ..... 1 00
 J. S. McDonald ..... 10 00
 Alma O. George ..... 5 00
 Benjamin Chapman .. 2 00
 February 17.
 Taylorville, Illinois,
 S. S. and Religio 10 00
 Ella Harris ..... 5 00
 February 19.
 Waylands, Australia,
 Branch ..... 3 96
 Joplin, Missouri,
 Branch ..... 10 00
 February 22.
 F. M. Weld ..... 10 00
 Mrs. C. J. Peters ... 1 00
 February 23.
 H. A. Scott ..... 5 00
 Nina Harvey ..... 10 00
 C. W. Dillon ..... 5 00
 F. M. McDowell ... 5 00
 Mrs. Oldfather ... 2 00
 February 28.
 Conneautville, Pennsylvania, Branch ..... 1 10
 R. E. Murdock ..... 2 50
 February 29.
 Carry E. Fuller ... 2 50

March 1.
 B. W. Taylor ..... 5 00
 Hattie V. Parks ... 2 00
 Webb City, Missouri, S. S. .... 5 00
 Hannah A. Britton .. 5 00
 March 5.
 H. A. Carter ..... 5 00
 Hugh McNutt ..... 5 00
 Lena McNutt ..... 5 00
 March 8.
 G. E. Carter ..... 2 50
 Peter Bailey ..... 5 00
 Mrs. A. M. Stivers .. 25 00
 March 11.
 Samuel and W. E.
 Shakespeare ..... 5 00
 March 12.
 Marietta Hall Boys
 (Graceland College) 5 50
 Jennie Benjamin .. 10 00
 March 14.
 William P. Meade .. 10 00
 Hattie V. Parks ... 1 00
 March 18.
 Iris Williams ..... 1 00
 Elma Neal ..... 5 00
 Mrs. Fred Adams .. 5 00
 Mrs. Rabie ..... 5 00
 Gerlie Howland .. 5 00
 S. J. Calderwood .. 5 00
 Ethel Dantley ..... 5 00
 Albert Knowlton .. 5 00
 H. C. Powell ..... 5 00
 Peter Kaufman ..... 5 00
 Nellie Fuller ..... 5 00
 Vade Johnson ..... 5 00
 Mrs. A. C. McFadden 5 00
 Sarah Butts ..... 50
 Ruth Voltz ..... 5 00
 R. J. Wilde ..... 40 00
 Donation of Settee .. 1 75
 Henry Huston ..... 1 75
 March 20.
 Carbon Hill, Ohio,
 Saints ..... 2 00
 Arch D. Angus ..... 5 00
 F. Wiley ..... 1 00
 Howard Reynolds .. 5 00
 March 21.
 Holdenville, S. S. .. 4 50
 Oklahoma ..... 2 70
 Eleanor Whiting ... 2 70
 Mrs. Jennie Diggle .. 50
 Mrs. M. Crawford .. 50
 Mrs. S. E. Sloan ... 2 00
 Mrs. C. A. Minor ... 5 00
 William Sparling .. 5 00
 Wallaceburg, Ontario, S. S. .... 1 91
 Mount Medford, Saskatchewan ..... 4 45
 Mrs. E. V. Olner ... 1 00
 John E. Headwood .. 1 00
 Springerton, Illinois,
 S. S. .... 1 11
 Newport, California,
 S. S. .... 2 81
 A. B. Klarr ..... 1 00
 John Carlile ..... 50
 Katie Waine ..... 05
 Lizzie Sparks ..... 10
 Machias, Maine, .. 3 00
 Vassner, Ontario, .. 1 15
 Scammon, Kansas, .. 2 87
 S. S. .... 1 00
 A. D. Rottatali ... 1 00
 Woodbine, Iowa, .. 2 50
 Sacramento, California,
 Branch ..... 4 50
 Sacramento, California,
 Z. R. L. S. .... 4 30
 W. H. York, et al., .. 6 10
 Sacramento, California,
 S. S. .... 1 16
 Pleasant Hill, Kansas
 City, Missouri ... 4 85
 Angola, Kansas,
 Branch ..... 75
 J. M. Kennedy ..... 50
 Florence Barnwell .. 1 00
 F. M. Miller ..... 25
 D. W. Carpenter ... 40
 Myrtle Nell ..... 18 00
 March 26.
 M. D. Lewis ..... 50
 E. D. Fultz ..... 1 20
 John Ellason ..... 1 00
 W. Day ..... 1 00
 W. Maddock ..... 1 00
 Sarah Worburton .. 1 00
 Noah Bowman ..... 5 00
 John Quandt ..... 50
 Mrs. J. E. Evans ... 5 50
 Nelle Alldredge ... 5 00

Jean Corless ..... 2 50
 J. F. Spinnet ..... 2 50
 March 27.
 Lottie B. Rose ..... 2 50
 Mary E. Rodgers ... 5 00
 Zion's Star S. S. ... 5 00
 Mrs. Katie Reek ... 5 00
 G. Edgar Ward .... 10 00
 April 1-4.
 Mrs. A. McFadden .. 5 00
 George B. McColey .. 5 00
 D. Brewster ..... 10 00
 C. W. Winey ..... 5 00
 Thomas N. Franklin 5 00
 Chas. F. Grabske .. 5 00
 Gerrit Juergens ... 10 00
 Martin Ahlstrom ... 2 50
 Hattie V. Parks ... 1 00
 Stella E. Thomas .. 5 00
 April 11.
 Mrs. Abbie Horton .. 1 00
 William Brothers ... 5 00
 D. H. Blair ..... 10 00
 George Ward ..... 5 00
 B. H. Field ..... 5 00
 Phillip Crump ..... 5 00
 Frank Gray ..... 5 00
 Sam. Clark ..... 5 00
 B. D. Field ..... 5 00
 Mabel Melisch ..... 5 00
 R. E. Hansen ..... 5 00
 Beardstown, Illinois,
 Branch ..... 1 75
 W. J. Conner ..... 5 00
 R. C. Kellek ..... 10 00
 A. R. Hewie ..... 2 50
 Stewart Lamont ... 5 00
 Mrs. A. Elise and Mrs.
 J. Hauley ..... 3 00
 E. E. Hartsough ... 5 00
 Mrs. M. J. Head .. 50
 J. L. Brien ..... 5 00
 April 15.
 New Bedford, Massachusetts, Branch, .. 4 13
 Walter Head ..... 5 00
 April 19.
 E. S. Whaley ..... 5 00
 John H. Kelton ..... 5 00
 April 23.
 J. W. Steak ..... 2 50
 April 24.
 A. Friend ..... 1 00
 J. A. Gunsolley ... 1 00
 April 27.
 S. W. Tomlinson .. 5 00
 Class of Willing
 Workers ..... 5 00
 Beatrice Ferrell .. 2 50
 Mrs. Alice Strickland 5 00
 Rebecca Weld ..... 1 00
 George H. Derry ... 5 00
 May 3.
 Ellis Short ..... 5 00
 Mrs. Ellis Short ... 5 00
 John Bricken ..... 5 00
 May 6.
 E. H. Fisher ..... 10 00
 May 7.
 James Allen ..... 5 55
 May 9.
 John Quandt ..... 5 00
 May 10.
 Luella Benedict ... 5 00
 May 11.
 Mrs. Harriet H. Robinson ..... 5 00
 Agda Meyers ..... 1 94
 May 16.
 W. G. Bronson ..... 2 50
 R. T. Cooper ..... 5 00
 W. G. Plain ..... 50
 May 22.
 Mattie S. Ball ..... 5 00
 May 23.
 Mrs. C. Cameron ... 50
 R. W. Johnson ..... 1 77
 May 28.
 J. F. Andrews ..... 5 00
 June 3.
 Jay L. Field ..... 5 00
 Joseph Bates ..... 10 00
 A. Black ..... 5 00
 June 4.
 Benjamin H. Frank 2 50
 June 7.
 Lena McNutt Fisher 5 00

June 10.
H. Rhodes and C. N. Romning	5 00
Mary A. Fesler	1 00
June 12.
Lansing, Michigan, Branch	1 00
Mrs. Anna Jenkins	5 00
Des Moines District Association	5 00
Ruth Fisher	02
June 25.
Ella Davis	5 00
Julia A. Baker	5 00
June 28.
Ethel I. Skank	5 00
Joseph Buckley	5 00
J. P. Wash	5 00
Ida M. Speery	5 00
Roy S. Budd	5 00
Emma B. Lewis	5 00
M. W. Hartshorn	5 00
J. A. Streeter	5 00
Richard Birde	5 00
J. C. Virgin	10 00
Mary Glenn	1 00
Houston Glenn	5 00
Total	$4,159 40
Received through Bishop E. L. Kelley.	$1,744 99
From July 6, 1911, to March 30, 1912.
Mrs. I. I. Redfield, Missouri	10 00
Christian Weiler and wife	2 50
James M. Gray	10 00
George M. Wyman	2 50
G. E. Lucinda, Michigan	10 00
Melvina Heavener, Illinois	5 00
Mrs. Belle Hardings, Kansas	2 00
Mrs. J. M. Dayton, Illinois	5 00
Mrs. S. M. Rodgers, Illinois	10 00
Catherine Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
Second Independence Branch collection	4 24
Malvern Hill Branch collection	3 10
Anna Bean, Missouri	1 00
Knobnoster Branch collection	10 10
A. E. Davis, Kansas	5 00
Fargo Saints, N. Dak.	5 00
Margaret J. Duffield, Oklahoma	1 00
Mrs. William Holmes, sr., New York	1 00
Alonso R. Hubbell, Ohio	1 00
A sister, Illinois	2 00
D. S. Linnell, Mass.	1 00
Broad River, Conn.	2 00
Fourth Kansas City Branch	1 25
W. H. Garrett, Missouri	1 00
Mrs. I. N. White, Mo.	1 00
Mrs. W. P. Bozarth, Kansas	1 00
Madison, Wisconsin, Branch	2 14
Cherokee, Iowa, Branch	4 45
Onaway, Michigan, Branch	3 50
Council Bluffs, Branch	4 00
Runnells, Iowa, Branch	2 75
Salt Lake City Branch	9 30
Mrs. H. A. Burton, New York	2 00
L. Stover, Washington agent	3 48
Milwaukee S. S., Wisconsin	1 20
Oakland Branch, California	14 00
Oakland S. S., Oakland	3 20
Alherton, Michigan, Branch	5 14
Third Saint Joseph Branch	2 54
Zion's Hope	04
Saint Joseph Religio Central Church, Kansas City	1 42
St. J. L. Schall, Colorado	20 74
Sr. L. H. Davis, Colorado	1 00

Second Kansas City Branch	5 00
Lees Summit Branch	2 41
Sharon, Pennsylvania, Branch	1 45
Chetek S. S. Wisconsin	3 86
Freesoll, Michigan, Branch	6 36
Ogden Utah, Branch	4 40
Thurman S. S., Iowa	6 59
Kewanee, Illinois, Branch	1 85
Warton, Ontario, Branch	1 20
Buffalo Branch, New York	1 05
Cheltenham Branch	2 55
Coalville, Iowa, Branch and S. S.	1 90
Independence Branch	125 32
Valley Branch, Mich.	2 00
McGregor, Michigan, Branch	1 60
McGregor, Michigan, S. S.	1 25
McGregor, Michigan, Religio	1 25
Stella E. Thoman, Missouri	2 50
John Cairns, Kansas	2 50
Wm. Meuzier, Kansas	4 50
James Ballie, Kansas	25
North Star Branch and S. S., Iowa	10 00
Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
J. H. Sills, Oklahoma	2 70
Millett S. S., Alberta	2 35
Buffalo Branch, New York	2 10
Deer Isle Branch, Maine	2 00
Elijah Hinds, Iowa	2 50
Arlington Branch, Iowa	1 50
Fulton Branch, Iowa	2 50
Laing Branch, Mich.	1 50
Sarah M. Sullivan, Maine	2 00
Whurton Branch, Oklahoma	1 57
Los Angeles Branch, California	20 00
Los Angeles S. S.	10 00
Los Angeles Religio	5 00
Cash Branch, Michigan	5 46
Jane Gault, Nevada	15 00
Mrs. E. S. Tainter, Maine	10 00
Mt. Zion S. S. Indep.	15 88
Sr. J. A. Satterfield, Nebraska	5 00
C. Weller and wife, Missouri	2 50
Ella Bahrd, Missouri	4 00
J. Wood Lea, California	2 50
G. J. Waller, Hawaii Territory	18 40
Mrs. Margaret Robertson, Missouri	1 00
West City S. S., Kan.	50
A. L. Yingling, Missouri	2 00
G. B. Erickson, Missouri	2 00
W. J. Brien, Kentucky	1 00
Brooklyn Branch	3 20
Philadelphia Branch	5 92
R. Archibald, Agent, Missouri	5 06
Stella E. Thoman, Missouri	5 00
Franklin Wiley, Mo.	25
Volney Gladden and wife, Michigan	1 00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Maryland	1 00
San Bernardino, S. S., California	3 50
Lizzie Rabel, Cal.	2 50
G. H. Wixon and F. Hogden, on con.	5 00
John B. Nelson, Minnesota	1 00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
Sr. J. D. Paris, British Columbia	5 00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
Mrs. C. J. Newton, California	25 00
S. D. Condit, Idaho	10 00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, West Virginia	1 00
Total	$ 60 00 $538 87
Total by Treas.	$4,159 40 $1,744 99
Grand Total	$4,219 40 $2,278 86

SUMMARY OF REPORT OF JULY 1, 1912.

To the Board of Trustees of Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa. Brethren: In the summary herewith submitted, the first two columns give the items of assets and liabilities in the inventory of July 1, 1911.

The next two columns give the business of the year as shown by our ledger.

The fifth and sixth columns are arbitrary entries. The following items omitted from inventory last year and included this year:

Campus and angles, suggested by auditors	$ 755.78
Lots 4 and 5, Block 12, Park Addition	100.00
Bills receivable	25.00
Farm furniture	105.70
Studio furniture	10.06
	$996.54

The following items of liabilities were omitted from the last inventory:

Scholarships	$ 225.00
--------------	-----------

We have also allowed an increase valuation to the following items:

Equipment because of new typewriters received	$ 100.00
LIBRARY. Professor Fitzpatrick secured donations of $1,000 during the year. A reappraisal thereof shows on increase of	398.25
MUSEUM. Has been entirely rearranged and classified with neat printed cards; an added value of	500.00
	$ 998.25

The entries to the following accounts in the credit column are for depreciation:

College building, Marietta Hall, Farm buildings, Commercial equipment, Farm telephone line, Laboratory and furniture, Manual training equipment, Patrons Hall furniture, Sewerage system, Patrons Hall, Heating plant, College furniture, Farm machinery, Herbarium and furniture, Marietta Hall furniture, Museum furniture, Poultry houses, Studio furniture.

All other items listed in columns 5 and 6 are for interest earned and rent charged to the proper accounts.

In columns 7 and 8, the radiation in the buildings is charged off against the building affected and taken out of the heating plant and real estate account. The College building already had considerable radiation, but not sufficient. It has now more than the two halls together.

The young orchard and berry patch were listed last year in growing crops and so carried in Farm Current Account. It is now transferred to Real Estate, Graceland Addition, as the improvement is made thereon.

Students' Ledger is closed into Accounts Receivable. College furniture is now charged in special department where used, as is library furniture, museum furniture, and the like. Also some furniture has been transferred to Patrons Hall from Marietta Hall. These items will be so carried in the future.

The remaining items in these two columns are for closing advertisements, expense and piano rent. Also 20 per cent of Patrons heat and light and one third of room rent are charged against the hotel, since it used about that proportion of the building.

In columns 9 and 10 the entries should be reasonably plain as Profit and Loss on the accounts indicated. Columns 11 and 12 give the new inventory. In each instance the sum of columns 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9, less the sum of columns 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10, will give column 11, or if the credit items exceed the debit items, then the sum of columns 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10, less the sum of columns 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9, will give column 12. It will be noted that some accounts are closed through the transfer column and some are closed in profit and loss. Corrections of previous inventory.

	Dr.	Cr.
	$ 225.00	$ 996.54
	Depreciation and Appreciation.
		998.25
	1,688.29	Profit for year
		1,421.19
	$1,913.29	$3,415.98
		1,913.29
	Net gain	$1,502.69

Respectfully submitted,
S. A. Burgess.

Inventory, July 1, 1912

Inventory, July 1, 1911

	Debit Assets	Credit Liabilities	Debit Expenditures	Credit Receipts	Apprec. Rent Omitted Item	Debit Rent Omitted Item	Credit Depreciation Earned	Transfers to Closed Accounts		Profit	Loss	Assets	Liabilities
								Debit	Credit
REAL ESTATE.
Campus and Angles, 15 1-9 a. . . . .	$ 3,022.00		$ 518.12	$ 20.00		$ 755.78	$ 337.64	$ 1,010.00	$ 3,777.78			$ 3,777.78
College Building, 1 1/2 % . . . . .	25,000.00		201.15				219.98	1,140.00	26,110.48			26,110.48
Patroness Hall, 2 % . . . . .	9,638.11		56.05				34.73	320.00	10,779.28			10,779.28
Marietta Hall, 2 % . . . . .	3,360.00		48.00				120.00	100.00	2,682.03			2,682.03
Heating Plant, 5 % in 3 buildings . . . . .	9,311.00		1,135.92				125.00		2,250.05			2,250.05
Recreating Lots (34) $2,500. . . . .	6,000.00		580.00						3,420.95			3,420.95
Farmland, 4, 5, blk. 12 (Park Add.) . . . . .	397.97			102.00		100.00			6,400.00			6,400.00
Water line . . . . .	426.50						64.15		295.97			295.97
Severance system, 10 % . . . . .	507.54						56.39		577.35			577.35
Poultry houses, 10 % . . . . .			114.95				27.00		451.15			451.15
Farm Tel. Line . . . . .									87.95			87.95
PERSONALTY.
Accounts payable . . . . .	634.10	$ 3,021.79		$ 814.79				1,035.12					$ 3,836.58
Accounts receivable . . . . .		246.04		246.04								1,423.18
Bills payable . . . . .	733.12	15,901.73		8,987.55		25.00						733.12
Bills receivable . . . . .	75.15			319.53								152.00
Bookstore . . . . .	1,836.65		842.90				96.23		695.35			695.35
College furniture (genl.) . . . . .			95.43					840.50		61.66			50.89
Chapel Piano Fund . . . . .	1,552.13			50.89					842.80
Cash . . . . .	829.00		25,244.52		100.00	100.00	126.85	139.50	1,041.65			1,041.65
Comm'l equipment . . . . .	344.35		100.00				46.90		304.25			304.25
Farm machinery . . . . .	70.00						46.90		173.70			173.70
Farm furniture . . . . .	1,458.00		757.61		320.00	320.00	2.50		1,415.50			1,415.50
Farm, Current account (country, etc.) . . . . .	300.00			115.77			2.50		322.50			322.50
Furniture and fixtures . . . . .	321.86		141.00				1,266.58		843.79			843.79
Insurance . . . . .		284.20		7.50		7.50							697.81
Interest . . . . .		$ 8,853.73		70.30									3,321.63
E. L. Kaley . . . . .	155.00						20.40		183.60			183.60
Laboratory and furniture . . . . .	3,528.00		54.75				30.00		4,184.00			4,184.00
Library and furniture . . . . .	450.00		19.60				37.17		500.00			500.00
Lemoni Coliseum Stock . . . . .	947.47		24.20				22.00		1,200.00			1,200.00
Marietta Hall and furniture . . . . .	500.00						22.00		171.40			171.40
Manning and equipment . . . . .	500.00						19.04		1,542.22			1,542.22
Manum and furniture . . . . .		30.00		190.00		10.06							206.00
Scholarships . . . . .	138.75		239.00				169.21
Studio equipment . . . . .	1,522.78		61.63
Patroness and hotel furniture . . . . .		626.05	186.50						911.40		84.12	76.50	489.55
Room rent coupons . . . . .			385.94
Fuel at Heating Plant . . . . .			6,170.83
Hotel . . . . .				6,922.31
CLOSED ACCOUNTS.
Advertising . . . . .			382.49						362.49
College expense . . . . .			3,355.27		1,429.08				4,646.13
Heating Plant . . . . .				1,266.91
Current account . . . . .			1,206.91		160.00
Piano rent . . . . .			59.10
Students Ledger . . . . .			7,936.74						92.32
Sundries . . . . .				11.39					1,055.12
COLLEGE DEPARTMENTS.
Academic Department . . . . .			3,959.50						1,948.93			3,938.40
Commercial Department . . . . .			1,291.33						1,350.61			3,347.44
Manual Training and shop . . . . .			650.91						393.39			775.54
Oratory Department . . . . .			650.91						246.68			233.56
Piano Department . . . . .			1,589.70						246.68			233.56
Vocal Department . . . . .			1,481.61						143.75			170.93
INCIDENTAL DEPARTMENTS.
Laundry . . . . .			142.75						46.90			3.85
Marietta heat account . . . . .			118.09						50.00			4.09
Marietta light account . . . . .			100.88						23.35			12.09
Patroness heat account . . . . .			246.05						111.92			26.73
Patroness light account . . . . .			150.43						15.70			13.44
Patroness room rent account . . . . .			658.33						248.93			230.12
Real estate . . . . .			951.98									318.02
Current account . . . . .				4,219.40			2,586.58					4,219.40
Endowments . . . . .				2,275.86								2,275.86
Offerings . . . . .				40.75
Present worth . . . . .			44,807.56				1,994.79					1,428.39
Totals . . . . .	$ 71,557.08	$ 71,557.08	$ 72,185.49	$ 72,185.49	$ 7,711.24	$ 7,711.24	$ 7,711.24	$ 9,732.40	$ 9,732.40	$ 7,268.63	$ 7,268.63	$ 78,638.38	$ 78,638.38
												46,310.25	$ 78,638.38

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE BEST CLUBS SUGGESTED

Review of Reviews with any one of the following for the price of the Review of Reviews alone: Everybody's, Cosmopolitan, McClure's, Woman's Home Companion, American, Harper's Bazaar, Sunset, Etude, Delineator, Good House-keeping, Housekeeper, Pictorial Review or Technical World. } Our Price $3.00

Review of Reviews Woman's Home Companion McClure's Magazine	} $4.15	Review of Reviews Woman's Home Companion Cosmopolitan Magazine	} $4.15	Review of Reviews McClure's Magazine or Everybody's Delineator	} $4.05
Review of Reviews Delineator Cosmopolitan Magazine	} 4.05	Review of Reviews Everybody's Magazine or McClure's American Magazine	} 4.05	Review of Reviews American Woman's Home Companion or Everybody's Mag. or McClure's	} 4.15
Review of Reviews Christian Herald St. Nicholas (new)	} 4.90	Review of Reviews Lippincott's Magazine American Boy	} 4.35	Review of Reviews Independent	} 4.25
Review of Reviews Youth's Companion Harper's Bazar	} 4.75	Review of Reviews Sunset Cosmopolitan or Good Housekeeping	} 4.05	Review of Reviews Scribner's Harper's Weekly or Harper's Magazine	} 8.25
Review of Reviews World's Work	} 3.60	Review of Reviews Century	} 5.75	Review of Reviews Pearson's Youth's Companion	} 4.75
Review of Reviews Popular Electricity American Boy	} 3.75	Review of Reviews Forest and Stream	} 4.10	Review of Reviews Musician Little Folks (new)	} 3.75
Review of Reviews American Magazine Pictorial Review	} 3.75	Review of Reviews Boy's Magazine Delineator	} 3.75	Review of Reviews Etude Woman's Home Companion	} 4.15
Review of Reviews Country Life	} 5.25	Review of Reviews Little Folks (new) Modern Priscilla	} 3.45	Review of Reviews Farm Journal (5 years) Woman's Home Companion	} 3.85
Review of Reviews Atlantic Monthly	} 5.60	Review of Reviews Outing Garden Magazine	} 5.40	Review of Reviews Christian Herald Delineator	} 4.05
Review of Reviews Current Literature McClure's	} 5.40			Review of Reviews Everybody's St. Nicholas (new)	} 4.90

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE AGENCY

Herald Publishing House $100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

These Bonds will be ready to issue on the 1st of April, 1912.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further Particulars

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, JANUARY 29, 1913

NUMBER 5

Editorial

A NEEDED CORRECTION.

Since the death of Elder Zenos H. Gurley, who died at his home at Canton, Missouri, some little time ago, we have heard a statement and have received inquiries as to whether the statement is true. The statement to which we refer is that Elder Gurley had come to one of the conferences of the Reorganization and had made application to be received and his name placed on the church record again; but that the church required that he should be received by baptism, which Elder Gurley declined, and consequently the church refused to receive him. It is due to the family of Elder Gurley that this statement should be corrected.

At the April conference of the church held at Independence, Missouri, the spring before Elder Gurley received his appointment as deputy warden to the Iowa penitentiary at Anamosa, Elder Gurley put in an appearance for two or three days and it was whispered about that he had come with the intention of seeking to reunite with the church. Courtesy was extended to Elder Gurley and he made one of the morning speakers at one of the gatherings at which he acquitted himself in a pleasant, manly way.

The Senior Editor of the HERALD presided at this conference and held one or two conversations with Elder Gurley, which conversations, however, were not upon the subject of his application as reported to have been made. These reports are erroneous, for neither to the Secretary of the church nor to the President of the conference was any application to be received into fellowship in the church presented, either verbally or in writing. Mrs. Evelyn Gurley-Kane, with whom the Senior Editor is well acquainted, stated that her father had united with the Christian Church, and it so appears in his obituary. Mrs. Evelyn Gurley-Kane also stated that she had become a member of the Episcopal Church. Nothing was stated as to any other church connections being held by others of the family, but it is fair to presume that the family does not care to have this report spread that he had applied for membership into the Reorganized Church and had been refused; and it certainly is not to the credit of the church to continue to make such a statement of his desire for admission when there is nothing of an authentic character upon which such a report can justly be made. Hence we make this correction.

What design Elder Gurley may have had in coming to the conference at the time referred to it is not within the province of the Editor of the HERALD to state, as he knows nothing directly with reference to it. It is certain, however, that the appointment that he made to meet one or two or more of the brethren at the conference on the morrow after the day he appeared on the conference floor was not filled. When he was inquired after it was learned that he had taken train for Anamosa, the statement also conveying the news that he had received a telegram announcing that he had been appointed deputy warden, and that he should appear immediately at Anamosa.

We trust that the brethren will not continue to circulate this improper statement any further. We make this correction with due respect to what we may conclude would be the wishes and sentiments of the family of Elder Gurley.

JOHN WESLEY AND JOSEPH SMITH.

JOHN WESLEY A VICTIM OF THE VERY OBJECTIONS THAT ARE SO FREQUENTLY URGED AGAINST JOSEPH SMITH.

During a recent argument with a good Methodist minister, we advanced the idea that the very arguments that are used against Joseph Smith were used against practically all other church builders in their day and generation, and are still as valid as they are when brought against Joseph Smith. This man being a Methodist minister (and by the way it was a Methodist minister who first declared that Joseph Smith's work was of the Devil), our mind naturally reverted to John Wesley and his experiences.

It is usually urged that Joseph Smith came from ignorant and superstitious parents. Emphasis is laid upon their superstition, because they claimed to receive certain supernatural manifestations, and believed in visions and inspired dreams. Early in his career Joseph Smith cast a devil out of one of his converts, and certain persons claimed to have seen the evil spirit at the time. No end of sport was made of this incident, and is still made of it. This alleged superstition and credulity of the Smith family is supposed to discredit Joseph Smith's whole work.

JOHN WESLEY'S FATHER'S FAMILY TORMENTED BY AN EVIL SPIRIT; THEY CATCH A GLIMPSE OF IT, AND IT RESEMBLES A BADGER.

In The Life of John Wesley, by Southey, there is an account of some very remarkable supernatural disturbances that occurred in the family of John Wesley's father. We quote entire a letter from the father of Mr. Wesley; with heading by John Wesley:

MY FATHER'S JOURNAL, OR DIARY, TRANSCRIBED BY MY BROTHER JACK, AUGUST 27, 1726, AND FROM HIM BY ME, FEBRUARY 7, 1730-1.

An account of Noises and Disturbances in my House, at Epworth, Lincolnshire, in December and January, 1716.

From the 1st of December, my children and servants heard many strange noises, groans, knockings, etc., in every story, and most of the rooms of my house. But I heard nothing of it myself, they would not tell me for some time, because according to the vulgar opinion, if it bodied any ill to me, I could not hear it. When it increased, and the family could not easily conceal it, they told me of it.

My daughters, Susannah and Ann, were below stairs in the dining-room, and heard first at the doors, then over their heads, and the night after a knocking under their feet, though nobody was in the chambers or below them. The like they and my servants heard in both the kitchens, at the door against the partition, and over them. The maid servant heard groans as of a dying man. My daughter Emilia coming downstairs to draw up the clock, and lock the doors at ten at night, as usual, heard under the staircase a sound among some bottles there, as if they had been all dashed to pieces; but when she looked, all was safe.

Something, like the steps of a man, was heard going up and down stairs, at all hours of the night, and vast rumblings below stairs, and in the garrets. My man, who lay in the garret, heard some one come slaring through the garret to his chamber, rattling by his side, as if against his shoes, though he had none there; at other times walking up and down stairs, when all the house were in bed, and gobbling like a turkey-cock. Noises were heard in the nursery, and all the other chambers; knocking first at the feet of the bed and behind it; and a sound like that of dancing in a matted chamber, next the nursery, when the door was locked, and nobody in it.

My wife would have persuaded them it was rats within doors, and some unlucky people knocking without; till at last we heard several loud knocks in our own chamber, on my side of the bed; but till, I think, the 21st at night I heard nothing of it. That night I was waked a little before one, by nine distinct very loud knocks, which seemed to be in the next room to ours, with a sort of a pause at every third stroke. I thought it might be somebody without the house, and having got a stout mastiff, hoped he would soon rid me of it.

The next night I heard six knocks, but not so loud as the former. I know not whether it was in the morning after Sunday, the 23d, when about seven my daughter Emily called her mother into the nursery, and told her she might now hear the noises there. She went in, and heard it at the bedsteads, then under the bed, then at the head of it. She knocked, and it answered her. She looked under the bed, and thought something ran from thence, but could not well tell of what shape, but thought it most like a badger.

The next night but one, we were awaked about one by the noises, which were so violent, it was in vain to think of sleep while they continued. I rose, and my wife would rise with me. We went into every chamber, and downstairs; and generally as we went into one room, we heard it in that behind us, though all the family had been in bed several hours. When we were going downstairs, and at the bottom of them, we heard, as Emily had done before, a clashing among the bottles, as if they had been broke all to pieces, and another sound distinct from it, as if a peck of money had been thrown down before us. The same, three of my daughters heard at another time.

We went through the hall into the kitchen, when our mastiff came whining to us, as he did always after the first night of its coming; for then he barked violently at it, but was silent afterwards, and seemed more afraid than any of the children. We still heard it rattle and thunder in every room above or behind us, locked as well as open, except my study, where as yet it never came. After two, we went to bed, and were pretty quiet the rest of the night.

Wednesday night, December 26, after or a little before ten, my daughter Emilia heard the signal of its beginning to play, with which she was perfectly acquainted; it was like the strong winding up of a jack. She called us, and I went into the nursery, where it used to be most violent. The rest of the children were asleep. It began with knocking in the kitchen underneath, then seemed to be at the bed's feet, then under the bed, at last at the head of it. I went downstairs, and knocked with my stick against the joists of the kitchen. It answered me as often and as loud as I knocked: But then I knocked as I usually do at my door, 1-2 3 4 5 6-7, but this puzzled it, and it did not answer, or not in the same method; though the children heard it do the same twice or thrice after.

I went upstairs, and found it still knocking hard, though with some respite, sometimes under the bed, sometimes at the bed's head. I observed my children that they were frightened in their sleep, and trembled very much till it waked them. I stayed there alone, bid them go to sleep, and sat at the bed's feet by them, when the noise began again. I asked it what it was, and why it disturbed innocent children, and did not come to me in my study, if it had anything to say to me. Soon after it gave one knock on the outside of the house. All the rest were within, and knocked off for that night.

I went out of doors, sometimes alone, at others with company, and walked round the house, but could see or hear nothing. Several nights the latch of our lodging chamber would be lifted up very often, when all were in bed. One night, when the noise was great in the kitchen, and on a deal partition, and the door in the yard, the latch whereof was often lifted up, my daughter Emilia went and held it fast on the inside, but it was still lifted up, and the door pushed violently against her, though nothing was to be seen on the outside.

When we were at prayers, and came to the prayers for King George and the Prince, it would make a great noise over our heads constantly, whence some of the family called it a Jacobite. I have been thrice pushed by an invisible power, once against the corner of my desk in the study, a second time against the door of the matted chamber, a third time against the right side of the frame of my study door, as I was going in.

I followed the noise into almost every room in the house, both by day and by night, with lights and without, and have sat alone for some time, and when I heard the noise, spoke to it to tell me what it was, but never heard any articulate voice, and only once or twice two or three feeble squeaks, a little louder than the chirping of a bird, but not like the noise of rats, which I have often heard.

I had designed on Friday, December the 28th, to make a visit to a friend, Mr. Downs, at Normandy, and stay some days with him, but the noises were so boisterous on Thursday night, that I did not care to leave my family. So I went to Mr. Hoole, of Haxey, and desired his company on Friday night. He came; and it began after ten, a little later than ordinary. The younger children were gone to bed, the rest of the family and Mr. Hoole were together in the matted chamber. I sent the servants down to fetch in some fuel, went with them, and stayed in the kitchen till they came in. When they were gone, I heard loud noises against the doors and partition, and at length the usual signal, though somewhat after the time. I had never heard it before, but knew it by the description my daughter had given me. It was much like the turning about of a windmill when the wind changes. When the servants returned, I went up to the company, who had heard the other noises below, but not the signal. We heard all the knocking as usual, from one chamber to another, but at its going off, like the rubbing of a beast against the wall; but from that time till January the 25th, we were quiet.

Having received a letter from Samuel the day before relating to it, I read what I had written of it to my family; and this day at morning prayer, the family heard the usual knocks at the prayer for the King. At night they were more distinct, both in the prayer for the King and that for the Prince; and one very loud knock at the amen was heard by my wife, and most of my children, at the inside of my bed. I heard nothing myself. After nine, Robert Brown, sitting alone by the fire in the back kitchen, something came out of the copper-hole like a rabbit, but less, and turned round five times very swiftly. Its ears lay flat upon its neck, and its little scut stood straight up. He ran after it with the tongs in his hands, but when he could find nothing, he was frightened, and went to the maid in the parlor.

On Friday, the 25th, having prayers at church, I shortened, as usual, those in the family at morning, omitting the confession, absolution, and prayers for the King and Prince. I observed, when this is done, there is no knocking. I therefore used them one morning for a trial; at the name of King George, it began to knock, and did the same when I prayed for the Prince. Two knocks I heard, but took no notice after prayers, till after all who were in the room, ten persons besides me, spoke of it, and said they heard it. No noise at all the rest of the prayers.

Sunday, January 27.—Two soft strokes at the morning prayers for King George, above stairs.—Pp. 600, 602.

John Wesley himself confirms this account in an article that was published in the Arminian Magazine, and is reproduced on page 608 of the history from which we quote. The same work contains letters from his mother and from his sisters confirming this strange story. His sister, Emily Wesley, writes:

Tell my brother the sprite was with us last night, and heard by many of our family, especially by our maid and myself. She sat up with drink, and it came at just one o'clock, and opened the dining room door. After some time it shut again. She saw as well as heard it both shut and open; then it began to knock as usual. But I dare write no more, lest I should hear it.—Life of John Wesley, p. 600.

SITTING UP WITH DRINK TO WATCH FOR EVIL SPIRITS.

Here is a remarkable state of affairs. The family of John Wesley sitting up of nights to watch for evil spirits. They hear wonderful noises and see strange things. John Wesley's father holds converse with the evil spirit and challenges it to leave the nursery and come into his study like a man. He is pushed about by it. They catch a glimpse of it under the bed, and it looks like a badger; again it appeared in the form of a rabbit; they heard it squeak like a bird; they actually blew a horn to scare the thing away as is stated in one of the letters; but that only made it worse.

Now if this were recorded in the history of the worthy parents of Joseph Smith, what a hoot of derision would go from our religious neighbors, and none would exceed some of the followers of the good John Wesley in their ridicule.

But we know of nothing so ridiculous in the history of Joseph Smith as the picture that might be painted of the family of John Wesley parading about the house in their night dresses, and blowing a horn to scare an evil spirit that looked to them like a badger.

JOHN WESLEY'S NEIGHBORS TOLD LIES ABOUT HIM.

The stock in trade of many of the opponents of Joseph Smith's work includes a collection of stories told about him by his early neighbors. These are taken, many of them, from an old book gotten up by two men, one of whom had been excommunicated from the church for the crime of adultery, and who sought his revenge in that way. Such a spirit in such a man discredits the whole work, but that is not considered by those who use it. They think Joseph Smith bad, but take up with a man who was so much worse that Joseph would not tolerate him in the church.

Joseph Smith's parents are charged with peddling cakes and beer; he is said to have been lazy, untruthful, intemperate, immoral, and so on, indefinitely.

Now, it is a fact that just such stories were told about nearly every man who has been the central figure in any great religious contention. And they came from the good old neighbors, too, who knew all about it. Jesus himself was no exception. His old neighbors called him a glutton and a winebibber.

John Wesley came in for his share. Of him it is written:

The strangest suspicions and calumnies were circulated; and men will believe any calumnies, however preposterously absurd, against those of whom they are disposed to think ill. He had hanged himself, and been cut down just in time;—he had been fined for selling gin;—he was not the real John Wesley, for everybody knew that Mr. Wesley was dead. Some said he was a Quaker, others an Anabaptist; a more sapient censor pronounced him a Presbyterian-papist. It was commonly reported that he was a Papist, if not a Jesuit; that he kept popish priests in his house;—nay, it was beyond dispute that he received large remittances from Spain, in order to make a party among the poor, and when the Spaniards landed, he was to join them with 20,000 men. Sometimes it was reported that he was in prison upon a charge of high treason! and there were people who confidently affirmed that they had seen him with the Pretender in France. Reports to this effect were so prevalent, that when, in the beginning of the year 1744, a proclamation was issued requiring all Papists to leave London, he thought it prudent to remain a week there, that he might cut off all occasion of reproach; and this did not prevent the Surrey magistrates from summoning him, and making him take the oath of allegiance, and sign the declaration against popery.—Life of John Wesley, pp. 271, 272.

Yet these aspersions tended to aggravate the increasing obloquy under which the Wesleys and their followers were now laboring. "Every Sunday," says Charles, "damnation is denounced against all who hear us, for we are Papists, Jesuits, seducers, and bringers-in of the Pretender. The clergy murmur aloud at the number of communicants, and threaten to repel them." He was himself repelled at Bristol, with circumstances of innocent violence. "Wives and children," he says, "are beaten and turned out of doors, and the prosecutors are the complainers: it is always the lamb that troubles the water!"—Ibid., p. 273.

A FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE?

It is charged that Joseph Smith was many times arrested, and that he was charged with serious offenses; that he was persecuted and driven from place to place, all of which is supposed to indicate that there was something wrong with him.

Our enemies shake their heads very sagely, and say, "Where there is so much smoke there must be a little fire. Something wrong with Joseph Smith and the Saints or they would not have had so much trouble in Missouri, Illinois, and Ohio."

We have noted in the foregoing quotation how Wesley was charged with treason. In England he was arrested on such a charge.

During his sojourn in America, as a missionary, a grand jury of fifty persons returned a true bill against him, in which serious charges were made.

"The indictment contained ten counts, of which the first was for speaking and writing to Mrs. Williamson against her husband's consent."—Life of John Wesley, by Southey, p. 69.

This was the lady to whom Wesley had made love before her marriage. She turned from him and married Williamson. Here we find Wesley subsequently charged with speaking and writing to her against her husband's will, and it was freely rumored in the community that his relations with her were evil.

Wesley did not stay to face his trial to the end. Under cover of darkness he fled from the community and took passage back to England. (See Life of Wesley, p. 72.)

Can anything more damaging be brought against Joseph Smith than this apparent flight from justice?

How well this could be used by our opponents had it occurred in the life of Joseph Smith.

The truth is that Wesley did not flee from justice, but from injustice.

The jury was a packed jury, the witnesses were hired to bear false witness. So he took the only way open to him to secure freedom. Joseph Smith had a similar experience in a State whose chief executive had ordered all Latter Day Saints exterminated.

In England Wesley and the Methodists were both prosecuted and persecuted. Read the following:

Mobs were collected by the sound of horn, windows were demolished, houses broken open, goods destroyed or stolen, men, women, and children beaten, pelted, and dragged in the kennels, and even pregnant women outraged to the imminent danger of their lives, and the disgrace of humanity. The mob said they would make a law, and that all the Methodists should set their hands to it; and they nearly murdered those who would not sign a paper of recantation.—Life of John Wesley, p. 275.

OUR OBJECT.

We do not mention these things to discredit John Wesley, for we admire him, and his good character is quite well established by this time. But they must convince the fair-minded that such stories as are used by the opponents of Joseph Smith would be equally damaging to the reputation of John Wesley, or any other religious leader, if they were credited. These stories were the result of religious prejudice and bigotry. John Wesley's old neighbors (some of them) lied about him; Joseph Smith's old neighbors (some of them) lied about him. The testimony in one case is as good as in the other, and as true.

There is this difference, however: Our opponents go to books written by the enemies of Joseph Smith, where the very worst that could be conceived is presented against him by men who were blinded by hate and prejudice; we have gone to a book that was written by one favorable to Wesley. So that our position is made the clearer. Books written by the enemies of Wesley contained much that was a great deal worse than anything that we have quoted.

JOHN WESLEY ON DIVINE HEALING.

Much sport has been made of Joseph Smith because he believed in divine healing. He has been ridiculed and called an impostor because of his position in that matter. The following concerning Wesley will be read with interest in this connection:

He related cures wrought by his faith and his prayers, which he considered, and represented, as positively miraculous. By thinking strongly on a text of scripture which promised that these signs should follow those that believe, and by calling on Christ to increase his faith and confirm the word of his grace, he shook off instantaneously, he says, a fever which had hung upon him for some days, and was in a moment freed from all pain, and restored to his former strength. He visited a believer at night who was not expected to live till the morning: the man was speechless and senseless, and his pulse gone. "A few of us," says Wesley, "immediately joined in prayers. I relate the naked fact. Before we had done, his senses and his speech returned. Now, he that will account for this by natural causes has my free leave. But I choose to say, this is the power of God." So, too, when his, own teeth ached, he prayed, and the pain left him. And this faith was so strong, that it sufficed sometimes to cure not only himself, but his horse also. "My horse," he says, "was so exceedingly lame, that I was afraid I must have lain by. We could not discern what it was that was amiss, and yet he could scarce set his foot to the ground. By riding thus seven miles I was thoroughly tired, and my head ached more than it had done for some months. What I here aver is the naked fact: let every man account for it as he sees good. I then thought, 'Can not God heal either man or beast, by any means, or without any?' Immediately my weariness and headache ceased, and my horse's lameness in the same instant. Nor did he halt any more either that day or the next. A very odd accident this also."—Life of John Wesley, pp. 271, 272.

It appears from this that John Wesley was more a Latter Day Saint than he was a Methodist. At least he was more in harmony with our position on the question of miracles. For his followers have constantly met our claim, ever since 1830, with the argument that the day of miracles is past, signs used to follow the believer but do not now, the science of medicine is so perfect now that we do not need these gifts of healing, and so on. And they have often challenged us to produce a miracle, for their edification, when here was one faithfully recorded in the diary of John Wesley, a man of strict honesty, a man of great faith, and one of the chief founders of Methodism.

But Wesley paid the penalty. This historian goes on to say: "Even those persons who might have judged favorably of Wesley's intentions, could not but consider representations like these as discreditable to his judgment. But those who were less charitable impeached his veracity, and loudly accused him of hypocrisy and imposture."

There you have it. The more charitable of his neighbors thought him a dunce; the less-charitable thought him an impostor. The persecutions of which we have read followed as a natural result. History repeats itself. Joseph Smith came to the world with a message of faith. He believed in God. The miraculous signs of old followed his ministry.

Many at once concluded that such claims were "very discreditable to his judgment," while the less charitable "impeached his veracity, and loudly accused him of hypocrisy and imposture."

Had we time to push the investigation, no doubt we would discover that every one of the great reformers suffered from attacks upon his character similar in kind, though perhaps not so intensely bitter, as those made upon Joseph Smith. The greater the light the more severe the attack, in most cases. Luther, Wesley, Fox, Williams, all suffered from the tongue of slander.

But those men are not judged or condemned to-day by those old stories that had birth in religious bigotry. Why should Joseph Smith be condemned on such evidence? Let him be judged, as other men are judged, by what he was and what he did, not by what bigoted enemies said that he was and did.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BROTHER E. E. LONG.—A recent issue of the Calgary, Alberta, News-Telegram contains a column interview with Brother Elmer E. Long, in which the brother sets out the mission of the Reorganized Church, and extends a cordial invitation to the Calgary citizens to meet him at his services at the board of trade rooms in that city.

Hymns and Poems

Selected and Original

A Hymn.

We love the venerable house
Our fathers built to God—
In heaven are kept their grateful vows;
Their dust endears the sod.

Here holy thoughts a light have shed
From many a radiant face,
And prayers of humble virtue made
The perfume of the place.

And anxious hearts have pondered here
The mystery of life,
And prayed the eternal Light to clear
Their doubts and aid their strife.

From humble tenements around
Came up the pensive train,
And in the church a blessing found
That filled their homes again;

For faith and peace and mighty love
That from the godhead flow,
Showed them the life of heaven above
Springs from the life below.

They live with God; their homes are dust;
Yet here their children pray,
And in this fleeting lifetime trust
To find the narrow way.

On him who by the altar stands,
On him thy blessing fall,
Speak through his lips thy pure commands,
Thou heart that lovest all.—Emerson.

Original Articles

GETTING INTO THE NEWSPAPERS.

No. 2. "Methods and Tactics" Series.

The author of this article has had considerable practical experience as city pastor, in Philadelphia, Kansas City, and Greater New York, as well as member of the General Conference Press Committee during several sessions of the General Conference, and as a natural result his comments and suggestions are timely and valuable. The subject dealt with is an important one. We have suffered in the past from a hostile, badly informed, or indifferent press. Now we are beginning to use the power of the press to our own advantage. As an illustration of the wisdom of taking advantage of "news features" connected with our church work, we may mention that of late years, at each General Conference, a number of energetic workers have reported conference proceedings for the leading dailies of Omaha, Des Moines, and other cities that are too far away to send a special reporter, and yet not too far away to care for the news values of such a gathering. In this way much valuable publicity has been obtained, and we have been reported correctly as regards doctrine and history. Instead of begging for a hearing, these individuals have actually been paid for such work. Many General Conference visitors could get into their local papers if they would take the trouble to send home a carefully written and brief report of specially interesting features of the conference. When the writer was pastor of the church in Burlington, Iowa, he made it a point to do this each year. The next number in this series will be "New openings; their value, general suggestions," etc., by Elder Daniel Macgregor.—EDITOR.

I have been requested by the editors of the HERALD to contribute an article dealing with the above-mentioned subject. It is generally recognized that the public press, speaking of it in a general way, is a most powerful factor in disseminating knowledge and information.

That a great change has come in the attitude of the press toward our particular religious movement in the past few years is evident, and I am disposed to believe from past experience, that newspaper men, as a rule, are committed to the policy of impartial and fair dealing with all. That our church has been openly denounced and exposed to ridicule and scorn by the press, is largely due to the prevailing opinions which are generally had among the people respecting all that goes under what is referred to as "Mormonism."

Some newspaper men who have taken the particular pains to inform themselves on the subject of our church and its past history, have as a consequence been able to give more accurate information in whatever they have written concerning it. Those who have not done so, will no doubt continue to make their utterances harmonize with public sentiment as they may understand it.

However, all recognize the value of advertising, and the proprietors of newspapers have learned that they must guard against giving it free of charge, and for that reason many well-written articles are rejected, though the writer of them may never be told why his communication has been considered "unavailable."

The newspaper editor does not perform the function of a hopper into which the public may pour without discretion whatever it would like to see in print. On the other hand, he is the man who must pass upon the great mass of matter that is at his disposal and use his judgment as to what and how much of that which he has on hand he will publish. He is very often limited as to space for the matter which he has, and for that reason must often decline to publish what has been contributed, or perhaps can only give a very brief mention of the same.

These things, together with a further knowledge of journalism, will be profitable to consider by all persons who have tried in vain for recognition at the hands of some representative of the press.

If your effort is treated with scorn, if it only merits a slight mention, if it finds its way to the wastebasket, you should not be discouraged, nor allow the least feeling of hatred or revenge to possess you. We are the representatives of a very unpopular cause, as the world at large views it. The press will move with caution and upon the basis of credible information whenever it utters ideas against public sentiment and common understanding. Therefore, to use the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again,"—this will be the proper policy to pursue, rather than to surmise that all newspaper men are unjust and prejudiced and low-lived, simply because they do not print what you want them to. So much for generalizing upon the subject. Now let us consider some of the details.

First. A newspaper, true to its name, will always give preference to news. Time and again I have had articles rejected for the reason that what was offered was not in connection with some event that would give it a news value.

A good method to follow, in a general way, for the minister who is settled in a city, is to visit the offices of all the newspapers and introduce himself. They will appreciate it if he will give them a written statement of whatever he would like to have them know, such as the church location, his residence, his previous location, and any literature he may have to give them; this, together with his photograph, will be gratefully received and placed on file, and usually whenever anything comes up that affects him or his cause, he will be consulted concerning it, and the result may be that he may "get into the newspapers" at some time when he least expects it.

A case in point. While I was located in Philadelphia the press was filled with the tragic account of what was called the "Pulitzer Murder,"—it was alleged that a person by that name had been killed by one William Hooper Young, a Mormon, and that he had committed this crime under the influence of the "Blood Atonement" doctrine of the Mormons. This brought out considerable mention of this peculiar and wicked theory and also concerning the "Danites." Accordingly, as the representative of the church in Philadelphia, I was called upon to offer an explanation of our views upon this question, which gave me a chance, unsolicited, to get into the newspapers, and this largely because I was known at the newspaper offices.

All the newspapers will be pleased to be informed of the visits and ministrations of any principal church officer who may come to visit a local church. In giving notice of this, full particulars should be given, together with the photograph of the person or persons mentioned. Only last winter when President Frederick M. Smith visited Brooklyn, I sent a brief account of his coming here, together with a statement covering some points of our faith, and his photograph, with the result that it was published, and an article that has a photograph cut for an illustration always attracts the attention of the reader.

Whenever a series of evangelistic services is contemplated, it is well to give the news to the papers. Give full and complete particulars,—the newspapers are careful, or mean to be, about details. Whatever may be printed by a local church, copies of the same should always be sent to all the newspapers.

A case in point. In conducting our Daily Vacation Bible School in Brooklyn, we employ the method of printing a card about six by nine inches in size, printed on both sides, with a picture of a vacation school on one side and announcement of the time of opening and full particulars concerning the school. We sent copies of this to all the newspapers in the city, with the result that on the morning of the opening of our school two reporters and a photographer came to see what we were doing, and the next day there appeared in The Brooklyn Daily Eagle an article correct in every particular, with three large pictures covering two thirds of a page. Needless to say that all the children of the school were eager to see copies of this paper, and their parents to get one to keep for themselves. Many of the workers in these schools in New York offered us congratulations on getting such a liberal notice of the work, and included with these we might mention the national director and the city superintendent of schools, who were exceedingly pleased over the matter.

This is surely worth while, and the direct result of the method as stated above. When a church is to be dedicated, if you want to get into the papers, you should not wait until the very day to notify the press. Send them notice at least a week in advance of the event, and give all the information you can as to details and particulars, and if you are careful as to this you may reasonably expect that the mention made of the occasion will be accurate and complete. If advance copies of the sermon to be preached upon the occasion can be furnished the press, you can reasonably expect that they will use it, if it is something worth while. Then again, if the paper has notice of a coming event it may appeal to the editor in such a way that he will provide space for it, whereas if it is given in on short notice he may have to exclude other matter to give it space, and unless it is of unusual importance he will not do it.

A case in point: Several years ago, while laboring in Maine, we were arranging for the dedication of a church. As I had been engaged to preach the dedicatory sermon, I wrote a synopsis of the same and sent it to one of the leading papers in the State, together with photographs of the President of the church, the minister in general charge, and of myself. Much to the surprise of the Saints and friends in that vicinity, they were able to read a full and accurate account of the services the day following.

The article covered the principal part of a whole page, and was illustrated by cuts made from the photographs sent. Part of this article, with two of the pictures, was reproduced in a Boston paper. All this was accomplished by using the method suggested. Is it worth while? If it is worth while getting into the newspapers at all, it is proper to follow methods that succeed and that newspapers are accustomed to.

Anniversary celebrations, conferences, and all notable gatherings should be duly announced to the press previous to the time they are to be held. If the custom of doing this is followed up carefully, the result is that the papers will grow to appreciate your efforts, and after a time, when you become thus acquainted, it will be perfectly easy to get into the newspapers, providing you have some news, or something worth while; and provided further that due care is taken in the manner of presenting it. Personal appearance and conduct will also have something to do in influencing those who may know you in this relation.

Matter prepared for the press should always be written on one side of the paper, with considerable margin, and at least double space between lines.

I have previously expressed myself to the effect that the church should have a general publication committee, who would be authorized in anticipation of notable events to furnish the press with information accurate and authentic, rather than information gathered from fragmentary reports from individuals uninformed, and from rumors. At seasonable times efforts should be made to get into the leading magazines, which can be done to advantage by a proper committee, rather than by leaving it to whoever may take a notion to make such effort. There are other lines upon which such a committee could work to good advantage. Magazines, like newspapers, are particular in their desire to print matter that is of public interest, and the time and circumstances have much to do with the availability of the matter presented.

One of the greatest achievements, along this line, for our church, was accomplished in the acceptance and publication of an article from the pen of President Joseph Smith, on "Polygamy in the United States; Has it political significance," in The North American Review, for March, 1903.

This article appeared at the critical stage of the proceedings of Congress over the matter of seating Mr. Reed Smoot, Mormon apostle, and senator elect from Utah. The whole country was aroused over this matter, and hence this article was a most fortunate thing for our church at the time.

I herewith present a letter sent me by President Smith relating to this article:

JANUARY, 27, 1903.

ELDER W. E. LARUE, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Dear Brother: I have just sent article on "Polygamy in the United States; Has it political significance?" to Mr. D. A. Munro, Assistant Editor North American Review, New York, per your arrangement.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH SMITH.

I may here add that I had been watching the trend of events in connection with the seating of Mr. Smoot, as it was increasing in interest and claiming public attention, and using this for a basis I suggested to the editors of this magazine that I believed that it was due the public that some authentic information from the standpoint of the Reorganized Church should be offered. In my correspondence with them I suggested the title of the article and suggested to them that I believed I could prevail upon President Smith to write the same upon their request. I know that it attracted considerable attention at the time, for it was mentioned by some of the leading newspapers, and the value of all publications is in the fact that they become matters of record and may be found in years to come stored away in the numerous libraries.

As the fact of there being two Joseph Smiths, the only difference in their names, that of "Fielding," the middle name of the President of the Mormon Church of Utah, each of them being President of a Church of Latter Day Saints, has ever been confusing to the public, I took occasion to make this the basis of an article, entitled, "The two Joseph Smiths," which was published in the Human Life Magazine for June, 1907. This paper makes a specialty of giving attention to celebrities, and for this reason, though my article was not in connection with any news item, it was available for use in that paper, as I thought it might be.

I may here add that it is usually a waste of time and effort to try to get any newspaper to make a correction of any statement which may have been made inadvertently or otherwise. It is well on the part of the church for some one to write the editor and clearly point out the error every time it may be noticed, but it will rarely, if ever, be acknowledged in print in the same paper in which it occurred. Therefore, do not ask it or expect it, but always act upon the idea that the publisher is honest and just and fair in what he has said, though he may be mistaken or differ from you in judgment.

WILLIAM E. LARUE.

* * * * *

WOULD THE WORLD BE BETTER OFF WITHOUT TOBACCO?

How quickly the tobacco user resents anything that he thinks interferes with his enjoyment; but of all people who disregard the comfort of others, the tobacco user takes the lead. Give a man who smokes a cigar, pipe, or cigarette, and he does not care whether anyone else likes it or not. He will walk up and down a public place, puffing out his clouds of smoke regardless of the delicate woman, or the man who does not use the weed, and to whom it is very obnoxious. He does not care whether he makes anyone else sick, or causes them discomfort or not; he is enjoying himself and that is all he cares about, until I have been led to remark many times that you never, or seldom, find a gentleman in the ranks of tobacco users. According to a recent definition given in the Youth's Companion, a gentleman is one who regards the comfort of others before his own; and if that be correct, no man would smoke in the presence of others until he has first obtained their consent.

But let anyone object for a moment against another using the weed in his presence, and he is at once greeted with black looks and insults. Some years ago I was subjected to quite a good deal of annoyance by an individual coming into a room that had been set apart for my use as a study, and taking out a pipe, filled it, and sat there smoking, filling the room with what were noxious fumes for me. I would immediately get up and open the doors and windows, although it was zero weather, and let in the fresh, pure air from without, and I would let the windows remain open as long as he smoked. He complained to his wife about it one day at the table as we were partaking of our evening meal, and said he did not know what was the matter with me. I turned to him and said: "Suppose that I should come to the table while you were eating and, bringing a handful of dirt or filth, drop it into your food or drink; what would you think of me?" He replied, "I would think that you were doing something that you had no business to do." I replied, "That is just what I think about you. God has given me this pure, sweet air to breathe, and you have no more right to pollute it with tobacco smoke than I have to befoul the food and drink of which you are partaking." From that time on he did his smoking before he came to my room to talk to me, and we could both enjoy ourselves.

It is getting so that one can not walk the streets, get into the street cars, eat at a restaurant, or visit any of the public places, and in some places not even the church, without having his nostrils assailed with the noxious fumes of tobacco in some form. I am aware that, perhaps, the nonsmoker is in the minority; but that does not prove that he has no rights. And the smoker has no right to call him "Pestiferous Pease," or by any other name, if he objects to men smoking in his presence. It would be a good idea if the railroads, and other public conveyances and places, would put up in a conspicuous place, and in good big letters, the sign that I heard was once displayed in a railway station in one of the Western States. It read: "GENTLEMEN WILL NOT, OTHERS MUST NOT SMOKE IN THIS ROOM."

Some of the false statements follow:

That nicotine is absorbed during the act of smoking is proved by the nausea it produces in the novice. That the human system easily becomes immune to this action of the nicotine and that the latter becomes harmless is a matter of daily observation.

I do not find any fault with the first sentence quoted, but the other is absolutely false. It is true that the nausea first experienced in smoking does not continue, but that the nicotine ceases to harm is not true. Here are a few statements made by reputable physicians:

Nicotine alters the structure of the heart by causing a change of its muscle fibers into fat, leading to weakness, fainting and sudden death.—E. Chenery, M. D., Boston, Massachusetts.

Regarding the glandular activity, it may be said that nicotine stimulates secretions in general, as is illustrated by the influence upon the mucous glands of the mouth and general alimentary tract. This over-stimulation of the mucous area would naturally lead to the development of catarrhal affections, and it would show that this drug was contra-indicated in all forms of tendency to catarrhal diseases.—Professor J. W. Seaver, Yale University.

It is true that anemia is a constant accompaniment of chronic nicotine poisoning, but this is due to the disastrous results of the poison upon the digestive system, which does not prepare abundant nutriment for the blood current, and the anemia should therefore be referred to starvation rather than to corpuscular degeneration.—Professor J. W. Seaver again.

I might multiply quotations along this line, but do not care to do so. What this paper says of nicotine poison is true of other poisons. One can take almost any poison into his system by degrees, and the system will become immune to its deadly effects, and in some instances if the poison is taken from the individual suddenly it will prove as fatal as an overdose would in the beginning, but no one would argue for a moment that the constant partaking of the poison is not injurious, just simply because it does not produce death after the system has become accustomed to it.

One of the most glaring of all the misstatements in the article is that there has never been known a death to occur from the use of tobacco. Hundreds of cases are recorded every day in which tobacco is the indirect cause of death. I read a statement in a life of President McKinley in which it was declared that it was not the assassin's bullet that killed the President, but it was the weakened condition of his heart caused by smoking. And in the recent attempt on Ex-President Roosevelt's life at Milwaukee, the doctors declared that it was his abstinence from such things that enabled him to recover. I append a few statements from reputable sources.

The idea that tobacco prevents disease is an error. A tobacco user's chances of recovery from malignant disease is lessened fifty per cent.—Doctor O. M. Stone, of Boston.

Very few tobacco users recover from yellow fever. I once lost half my crew with it in Havana. Every man who died, used tobacco, and every man who lived, did not use it.—Captain G. B. Pettingill, who for many years commanded a vessel trading with Cuba and South America, and sailing out of Boston, Massachusetts.

It is scarcely possible to cure a syphilitic sore, or unite a fractured bone in a devoted smoker.—Doctor Harris, of the New York City Dispensary, where more diseases are treated than in any other place in America.

No smoker can be a well man.—The London Lancet, the paper from which the article in the New York Sun quotes.

During the prevalence of cholera, I have had repeated opportunities of observing that individuals addicted to the use of tobacco are more disposed to attacks of that disease, and generally in its most malignant and fatal form.—Doctor John Lizars.

Some years ago, after lecturing on this question, a gentleman came to me and said that he had been very badly mangled at one time, and had lost his arm in consequence of the accident, but his other limbs, I believe, were saved. "But," he said, "the doctors told me that had I been addicted to tobacco in any form, or had I used intoxicants, I could not have recovered." All of the above quotations are taken from a booklet on tobacco written by Winfield S. Hall, Ph. D., M. D., professor of physiology in the Northern University Medical School. I append two more from the same source to show that tobacco does harm the system, as well as leaving it in a poor state to resist and overcome disease.

It is now many years since my attention was called to the insidious, but positively destructive effects of tobacco on the human system. I have seen a great deal of its influence upon those who use it and work in it. Cigar and snuff manufacturers have come under my care in hospitals and in private practice; and such persons can not recover soon and in a healthy manner from injury or fever. They are more apt to die in epidemics, and more prone to apoplexy and paralysis.—Doctor Willard Parker, of New York City.

One of the commonest effects of indulgence in tobacco is a chronic inflammation of the throat and upper respiratory passages leading to hoarseness and excessive secretion of the mucous glands. This is explained by the constant application to the throat of an irritating alkali vapor and is probably not due to the specific action of the nicotine. A similar irritated condition of the tongue is met with, . . . and it is sometimes stated that the constant irritation thus produced renders the tongue and lip more liable to cancerous disease. Dyspepsia, want of appetite and constant loss of flesh may also be explained by the local irritation produced by the nicotine swallowed in the saliva.—Arthur R. Cushing, M. A., M. D., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

All of these statements go to show that tobacco is an indirect cause of death, and probably in many instances the direct cause, and it seems astonishing that anyone would try to dispute it. Another astonishing thing in the article from the Sun is that the writer should make a comparison between this deadly drug and food. Do we have to inure our systems to the use of food of any description? Does the first taste of food make us deathly sick? The fact that we do have to compel our systems to get used to tobacco, and that nature rebels against its use, is sufficient evidence that there is nothing about tobacco that is necessary to man, but we have to force a desire for it. We never want it when our system is in a normal condition; it is only by a continued use of it that our system cries out for it. The fact that men die of indigestion caused by overeating is not an argument in favor of tobacco. We talk about temperance in the use of tobacco and alcoholic drinks, but there is no such thing as being temperate in these things. Prohibition is the only thing that will aptly apply.

One writer, however, refers to a statement made by a noted neurologist "that if alcohol was suddenly withdrawn from the human race that the race's efficiency would be imperiled." He argues that this is not true of alcoholic drinks, but it would aptly apply to tobacco. Let us see if it would.

I have never been a user of tobacco, so will have to depend on what others tell me of its effects upon them. This man Hall, from whom we have quoted, describes his own sensations as follows:

I have always studied my own physical and mental conditions and began to observe the effect of tobacco upon me. I noticed from day to day that during the smoking of the cigar there was a perceptible change of mental attitude toward my work and toward things in general. I would begin a cigar with mind all alert, ambitious to get at some work that needed to be done. After a half hour of watching the smoke curl up toward the ceiling I was conscious of a falling off of mental activity, and unless the work were imperative I usually ended up by taking a half hour stroll down Michigan Avenue to be entertained by a glimpse of its equipages and its people. I was conscious of a sort of "don't care" mental attitude toward things in general. I have never for a moment doubted that my change in mental attitude was to be attributed solely to effects of the nicotine. I believe, in the light of subsequent observation, that it is just this effect of the tobacco which makes it especially pleasing to people. If I failed to have my after dinner cigar I missed it so much that I woke up to the fact that I was slowly but surely forming a "drug habit," and through my medical studies I knew that a drug habit, whether for morphine, cocaine, alcohol or other narcotic or stimulant, is harmful to the system in direct proportion to its use, and I knew that without exception all of these drugs enslave a person by gradually undermining his will power; the more one takes the less he is able to stop. When I realized the situation I stopped. During the fifteen years which have elapsed since then I have probably smoked fifteen cigars. Each cigar produces again the feelings which caused me to discard its habitual use.

Surely this is partaking in moderation, and yet this man says that even this moderate use of the cigar lowered his efficiency, and William A. McKeever, writing in Pearson's Magazine for March, 1909, supports the doctor's contention. He says:

The ordinary cigarette smoking student often has a peculiar experience in his effort to prepare his lessons; about as follows: He goes to his room in the evening with the full intention of studying, and opens his textbook, but a certain feeling of nervous uneasiness soon leads his hands automatically to roll and light a cigarette. He indulges the habit a few minutes when, presto, the lesson task which awhile ago looked serious and urgent, now appears trivial and unnecessary, and he accordingly neglects it. He is now affable and companionable, but the high moral judgments have lost their value to him, and he is most ready to yield to the evil suggestions of others. The partial brain paralysis resulting from the smoking makes the victim regard with indifference the most sacred promise he has ever made to anyone and he is likely to violate it upon the slightest provocation.

It seems from the testimony of this man, that not only is the mental efficiency lowered, but the moral perceptions are blunted, and one is left much more susceptible to evil influences than before. Of the physical efficiency of those who use tobacco, Doctor Hall himself says:

Every schoolboy knows that when athletes are in training for a contest they are obliged to abstain absolutely from all forms of tobacco. Is this done on theoretical or on moral grounds? Not at all. It is done because experience of many decades demonstrates that when men use tobacco they can not do as well as they can when free from its effects. Under the influence of tobacco the young man is less alert, less steady, and has less endurance. No man, when entering a contest, will knowingly and willingly handicap himself.

In addition to this, Doctor Seaver, from whom I have quoted before, says:

Whenever it is desired to secure the highest possible working ability of the organism, as in athletic contests, where the maximum of effort is demanded, all motor-depressant influences are removed as far as possible, tobacco being one of the first substances forbidden.

If it be true, then, that those who have desired to get the very highest efficiency physically and mentally have been obliged to cut out the tobacco in all its forms, it would be equally true that all men would be more efficient if they would cut it out, and hence if all the tobacco in the world were suddenly destroy the race's efficiency would be advanced.

A writer in the New York Sun makes the plea that in this day of strenuous endeavor, and overwork, a man needs the stimulating effect of tobacco to steady his nerves and keep him up; but Doctor N. S. Davis, A. M., M. D., LL. D., professor of practice of medicine, Northwestern University, Chicago, says that this is not true. Doctor Hall quotes from this aged and (judging from the string of capitals following his name and the position he occupies) most learned man in such matters, and he says:

It is claimed that the "natural need" to be supplied by these agents in adults is psychic or mental, and consists of the restless mental malaise, or sense of exhaustion, that longs for something either stimulating or soothing. We freely admit that such a mental condition often exists, not as a natural or "psychological want," but as the result of the overwork, mental or physical, and the anxieties and disappointments incident to ordinary affairs of life. But we deny the claim that the mental condition described can be remedied by anesthetics or narcotics. The mental longing caused by overwork is simply for rest, fresh air, and wholesome food. Furnish these and the longing is removed and the man ready for work. But alcohol and tobacco, instead of furnishing what the longing demands, simply diminish the sensibility of the nerve cells of the brain, the material seat of man's consciousness, and thereby render him temporarily incapable of knowing how weary he is. When this temporary effect is passed, instead of being refreshed and ready for work, he is more tired and mentally duller than before, and more ready to ask for another drink or smoke. The same is true of all the so-called psychic or mental longings or cravings. They are in no proper sense natural or physiological conditions, but unnatural or artificial ones, created by causes, the removal of which constitutes the only legitimate or effectual remedy.

While the resort to the use of alcoholic drinks or other narcotics only lessens, or suspends temporarily, the individual's consciousness of their existence, and leaves the causes to act in full force, with the natural vital resistance impaired by the alcoholic remedy used; yet, as each drink or smoke lessens his consciousness of physical or mental suffering, he calls for more until he finds himself using not only three drinks or three cigars a day, but three times that number if he can get them, and his psychic cravings, instead of having been removed, are now his tyrannical master, and he the ruined slave. And this illustrates the actual difference between an agent that meets and satisfies any true natural "physiological or psychic need" in the human system, and one that by its anesthetic effect only suspends his consciousness of the need. The first always satisfies the need by using about the same quantity and at the same intervals, from youth to old age. The last suspends consciousness of the need by dulling the nerve sensibility, and thereby creates an insidious demand for increasing doses, and more frequent repetition. We are satisfied with about the same quantity of milk, bread, meat and water three times a day, after using them fifty years, as we were at the beginning. But can we find five in a hundred of all those who have used any kind of alcoholic liquors or tobacco fifty, or even twenty, years who still remain satisfied with three cigars or pipefuls per day? They are agents that neither furnish food nor material to repair the living tissues of the body, or evolve any natural known force, nor actually satisfy any recognized physiological psychic need that can be named. On the contrary, they impair or pervert every natural function, both of body and mind, in direct proportion to the quantity used, without any possibility of maintaining a line of distinction between harmless moderate use and injurious excess or abuse. Consequently, total abstinence from their use in all conditions of health is the only rule of safety, dictated by the facts of science and the actual experience of past centuries.

This certainly is one of the clearest statements that can be made, and it has the judgment of one who has practiced in all kinds of diseases to which the human flesh is heir, and is backed up by real, sound, common sense. Even the plea for the moderate use of the "weed" is exploded by this clear statement of the results of taking into our system stimulants. To use these things moderately after once beginning would require an almost superhuman effort, and as the writer of the article we are calling in question admits that an excessive use is injurious, it is obvious to all that the observation made by this learned doctor in the last sentence of the quotation is the only safe course for humanity to follow. That is, total abstinence.

The question sprung by the writer referred to, namely, If tobacco were suddenly taken from the earth, would the efficiency of the race of mankind be impaired? may be answered in the negative for still more cogent reasons than those already given, strong as they are. It will be conceded, undoubtedly, that the future efficiency of the race will depend upon the generation now growing to manhood. It will also be conceded that the effect of tobacco upon the growing boy is bad in the extreme. I can not believe that the writer of the article in question would so far stultify himself as to make any other claim than this. This being true, even although the men of the Nation or race might use it with impunity, the absence of tobacco from the world would not imperil the future of the race, but would, unless a substitute for the deadening effect of this drug be found, place the race in a much more efficient condition. For, it is perfectly obvious that if the man uses tobacco the boy will, and you can not make the boy believe that it is going to injure him if he sees his father using it. I append a few quotations to show the bad effect the "weed" has upon the boy, although it is hardly necessary to do so, as it is such a universally conceded fact that it needs but to be stated.

An English physician says: "A boy who early smokes is rarely known to make a man of much energy of character, and he generally lacks physical and muscular, as well as mental energy. I would particularly warn boys who want to rise in the world to shun tobacco as a deadly poison.—Doctor W. S. Hall.

In over twenty years of experience as a teacher I can not recall a single boy who maintained a high average in his classes and used tobacco, and further, that some who were very bright and stood well in their classes lost their standing when they acquired the tobacco habit.—Jonathan K. Taylor, Baltimore, Maryland, formerly Principal Taylor Academy, Wilmington, Delaware.

There are few cigarette smokers in the high school. Smokers usually fail to go through the grammar school. Few ever graduate who smoke before they enter the high school. As a rule the smoker is dull and unable to concentrate his attention upon his work. It is difficult to arouse him to any degree of enthusiasm. So long as men indulge in smoking it will be hard to persuade the boys that they should shun it, and so long as boys continue to learn the habit there will be men to perpetuate it.—James E. Armstrong, Englewood High School and President of Board of Trustees of University of Illinois.

But why present proof of which there is no question? But the strongest proof of the general effect of tobacco upon a race or class of men that I have seen is taken from the New York Medical Journal, and is as follows:

When the Europeans first visited New Zealand they found the natives the most finely developed and powerful men among the islands of the Pacific. Since the introduction of tobacco, for which these men developed a passionate liking, they have, from this source alone, become decimated in numbers, and so reduced in stature and physical well-being as to be an altogether inferior type of men.

As I said in the beginning, I have never used tobacco, and have to depend upon others for my knowledge of its effects, and hence will, in conclusion, give the experience of a member of Congress as published in a recent (September 28, 1912,) number of the Saturday Evening Post. Of course he used tobacco to excess, but most all of them do. He describes the results of leaving it off. I will not enter into the details of his use of it, and how he was advised by his doctor to quit it and so forth, but will let him tell how much more efficient he became when he ceased the use of it. I only quote a little of the concluding paragraphs of his article.

After I had ceased to bother about tobacco, and was conquering the yearning for the habit, a friend of mine at the other end of the Capitol offered me a cigar. When I told him I no longer smoked he asked me why I had given it up. I explained that I thought it was doing me no good, if not real harm; that I had quit because I thought it the sensible course to take; and that I was really benefited by my self-denial.

"No doubt you are right," said the Senator, with a trace of condescension in his tone, "but, for my part, I'd rather die ten years sooner and enjoy life while I live."

That's the only thing that annoys me about tobacco users now, they seem to think that I quit merely to get a new lease on life! Stuff and nonsense! If it meant that and nothing more I would take up smoking again.

It isn't a matter of longevity. It's really living while you live. Insomnia isn't fun; stomach trouble isn't fun; nervousness isn't fun. Good legs, sound wind, sound heart—you would not buy a horse without them. There's joy in a beautiful spring morning, with the sun shining and the birds singing—provided you don't wake up with your mouth tasting like the kitchen sink.

I wake clear-headed and with the energy to kick the foot-board off the bed. My food is more palatable, though we haven't changed cooks. I don't have to rely on a cigar to lift me up to concert pitch. My judgment, like my head, is clearer. Before I quit smoking I was postponing the consideration of problems. Now I have decision. I tackle things when they come up and settle them. I have at least three hours more a day in which to accomplish something worth while. I have filched ten years from the scythe of Old Father Time—not ten years tacked onto the end of my life, but a decade inserted in the middle, where it counts most.

My wife has more expensive bonnets, and my neckties are of better quality, but I am not saving money by swearing off. What I spent on tobacco goes for something else. However, the coin is not invested in the stale odor that clings to the parlor curtain. And no habit has got me.

H. O. SMITH.

Of General Interest

AMERICA'S GIFT TO EUROPE.

America has furnished to Europe proof of the fact that proper institutions, founded on equality and the principle of representation, are capable of maintaining governments, able to secure the rights of persons, property, and reputation. America has proved that it is practicable to elevate the mass of mankind—that portion which in Europe is called the laboring or lower class—to raise them to self-respect, to make them competent to act a part in the great right and great duty of self-government; and she has proved that this may be done by education and the diffusion of knowledge. She holds out an example, a thousand times more encouraging than ever was presented before, to those nine tenths of the human race who are born without hereditary fortune or hereditary rank.

America has furnished to the world the character of Washington, and if our American institutions had done nothing else, that alone would have entitled them to the respect of mankind. Washington! "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen"—Washington is all our own! The enthusiastic veneration and regard in which the people of the United States hold him prove them to be worthy of such a countryman, while his reputation abroad reflects the highest honor on his country.

I would cheerfully put the question to-day to the intelligence of Europe and the world, What character of the century, upon the whole, stands out, in the relief of history, most pure, most respectable, most sublime? And I doubt not that, by a suffrage approaching to unanimity, the answer would be, Washington.—Daniel Webster.

* * * * *

THE INDIAN'S RELIGION.

Brother, our seats were once large and yours were small. You have now become a great people, and we have scarcely a place left to spread our blankets. You have got our country, but are not satisfied; you want to force your religion upon us.

Brother, continue to listen. You say that you are sent to instruct us how to worship the Great Spirit agreeably to his mind; and, if we do not take hold of the religion which you white people teach, we shall be unhappy hereafter. You say that you are right and we are lost. How do we know this to be true? We understand that your religion is written in a book. If it was intended for us, as well as you, why has not the Great Spirit given to us, and not only to us, but why did he not give to our forefathers the knowledge of that book, with the means of understanding it rightly? We only know what you tell us about it. How shall we know when to believe, being so often deceived by the white people?

Brother, you say there is but one way to worship and serve the Great Spirit. If there is but one religion, why do you white people differ so much about it? Why not all agreed, as you can all read the book?

Brother, we do not understand these things. We are told that your religion was given to your forefathers and has been handed down from father to son. We also have a religion, which was given to our forefathers and has been handed down to us, their children. We worship in that way. It teaches us to be thankful for all the favors we receive, to love each other and be united. We never quarrel about religion.

Brother, the Great Spirit has made us all, but he has made a great difference between his white and red children. He has given us different complexions and different customs. To you he has given the arts. To these he has not opened our eyes. We know these things to be true. Since he has made so great a difference between us in other things, why may we not conclude that he has given us a different religion, according to our understanding? The Great Spirit does right. He knows what is best for his children; we are satisfied.

Brother, we do not wish to destroy your religion. We only want to enjoy our own.

Brother, we are told that you have been preaching to the white people in this place. These people are our neighbors. We are acquainted with them. We will wait a little while and see what effect your preaching has upon them. If we find it does them good, makes them honest and less disposed to cheat Indians, we will then consider again of what you have said.

Brother, you have now heard our answer to your talk and this is all we have to say at present.—Red Jacket's reply to Mr. Cram, who was sent to found a mission among the Senecas.

Plan wisely to-day. Build carefully to-day. Live nobly to-day. For to-day is "a broken-off bit of eternity."

If it is a bad thing to be a drunkard, is it a good thing to license men to make drunkards?—Charles Scanlan.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stabbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Arise, for the Day Is Passing.

Arise, for the day is passing,
While you lie dreaming on;
Your brothers are cased in armor,
And forth to the fight are gone;
Your place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has a part to play;
The past and the future are nothing
In the face of the stern to-day.

Arise from your dreams of the future—
Of gaining a hard-fought field,
Of storming the airy fortress,
Or bidding the giant yield.
Your life may have deeds of glory,
Of honor, God grant it may;
But your arm will never be stronger,
Or needed as now, to-day.

Arise, if the past detain you,
Her sunshine and storms forget,
No chains so unworthy to hold you
As those of a vain regret.
Sad or bright, she is lifeless ever,
Cast her phantom arms away,
Nor look back, save to learn the lesson,
Of a noble strife to-day.

Arise, for the hour is passing,
The sound that you dimly hear,
Is your enemy marching to battle;
Rise, rise, for the foe is near.
Stay not to brighten your weapons,
Or the hour will strike at last,
And from dreams of a coming battle,
You will wake and find it past.

—Adelaide Anne Proctor.

Requests for Prayer.

I am writing to ask you to remember us in prayer that we may grow in grace and health. Husband is some better, but I am not. I received several kind letters from dear sisters; God bless each kind heart. I get very lonely, as I stay alone all day. I have no one to cheer me, so I sit by the window and watch for the mail man, when able to sit up! Some days a little girl comes in and wheels me to bed. I find the days long and lonely when I do not get a letter. Please, dear sisters, write often, and any cheer will be passed on, as there is an old lady here who can not even lie down; sits all the time in a chair. I would like to interest some one in her. She can not even feed herself. No one knows what such a life means but a shut-in. God will bless and brighten the lives of all who cheer a lonely heart, no matter how low that one has fallen. Christ came to call sinners; may we all be found.

SISTER ROY COWLES.

LEOMINSTER, MASSACHUSETTS, 343 Lancaster Street.

I wish to ask the Saints to remember my father, J. J. Leabo, of Shedd, Oregon, in their prayers. He has been afflicted about twenty-four years with kidney troubles which have baffled the physicians. It is also his desire that the Saints pray for him. I will also ask that you will remember our baby, suffering from eczema.

MRS. ELLA PRICE.

CENTRALIA, WASHINGTON, January 15.

Letter Department

BAY MINETTE, ALABAMA, January 15, 1913.

Dear Herald: I think we have a nice little branch here. All we need is better attendance. I am glad to report an extra number at Sunday school in the first of a new year, and hope it will still increase. We have Sunday school at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, preaching every first and Third Sunday, prayer meeting Wednesday night, and Religio Friday night. I enjoy them all, and find the Religio a great help, for I have learned a good many things from it. I scarcely knew anything about the organizing of the church, and of Joseph Smith. I have read the Church History through, and believe I could tell you he was. I think Religio is a society each branch needs, especially for the young.

I am teacher of an interesting little class at Sunday school. Brother Jason Booker is our superintendent. I had my blessing given last summer by Brother Ammon White, and his preaching was enjoyed by all. Also Brother Slover, whom we can not turn down.

I like to read the HERALD and the other church papers. I am sixteen years of age. I would like to see our friends we left in Missouri. I hated to leave them, the State also, but the thoughts of seeing our old friends in Dixie again would seem to keep ahead.

I ask you to pray for me, that I may keep in the narrow path.

MISS MISSOURI BOOKER.

CLIMAX SPRINGS, MISSOURI, January 18, 1913.

Dear Herald: I have a stock of warehouse hardware to dispose of, invoicing about two thousand dollars; against which there is a mortgage of five hundred dollars. I am not able to handle this property myself, and offered to donate the same to the church. I sent the invoice to Bishop Kelley. He said he did not know that they would take hold of it as yet, and if I could dispose of it to do so.

I would like to see the church or some brother make a little on this stock. If some brother with means will take hold of this, assume the mortgage, and sell the goods, paying the mortgage with the first five hundred dollars they receive from the goods, and give the church half of the balance as they sell the goods, they will be doing themselves and the church a favor.

Yours truly,

S. DRAZEY.

CARBON CLIFF, ILLINOIS.

Saints' Herald: We love to read the church papers and the letters of the brothers and sisters of different parts of God's vineyard. We had the privilege of meeting with the Saints in Cherokee, Iowa. It so happened that wife and I were visiting my wife's sister, Sister Hays, and it also happened to be at the time of their conference. What a glorious time we had with the Saints of the most high God. We were in the Good Spirit all the while. After conference adjourned and the Saints went their way home, we remained two weeks and the sweet spirit the Saints brought with them remained with us and we received strength to continue in the work of our Lord Jesus Christ. We met quite a number of the priesthood, among them Brethren Butterworth, Wight, N. V. Sheldon, Bishop Hunt, and others.

While writing Brother Hunt's name it brings to my remembrance that he requested me to write how I was led to quit the use of tobacco. I had been an habitual user of tobacco for more than fifty years. I had tried to quit, but never succeeded until I became a Latter Day Saint. Now the elders who brought the good message to me did not tell me tobacco was not good for man, for I could not have endured any message that would have deprived me of such a pleasant, filthy habit, for a minute. After being baptized I began to read God's laws, and I soon found that tobacco was not good for man, neither was it pleasing to God. Then came the greatest struggle of my life. The Spirit bore evidence to me that I ought to quit, but I could put up many good pleas in favor of the use of tobacco. The fight came on in earnest. Whenever I was alone the Spirit would come upon me and testify to my heart that I ought to quit; then I would put up one of my excuses, such as I have tried many times, and I could not quit. The struggle continued day after day, and week after week, without any compromise, until the day of days came. Oh, how the Spirit worked with me and I put up my usual pleas. One I remember more than all the others: "My teeth will ache; I can't quit if I would." Then the Spirit spoke unto me, almost audibly, so sweet, so loving, yet so powerful and tender it was, and said to me, "I will take care of your teeth." I bowed my head, as I had always done before, and I felt guilty, as though I were guilty of some crime. And then the Spirit rested upon me with mighty power and said, "You can be temperate." I was leaning on my hoe. I had been hoeing weeds, and I hung my head while the personage waited for an answer. I raised my head and answered, "Yes; I can be a little more temperate." Then the Spirit said, "To-morrow."

I was left alone, wondering what it all meant, and what I would do. I had no more thought until I arose the next morning, and as soon as my feet rested on the carpet my first desire was tobacco; and as I had done all my life, so I did now, and I had the tobacco to my lips. Then came that same voice and said, "You are to be temperate." I answered, "Yes; I can wait till after breakfast." Then after breakfast the same want came upon me, and the same voice spoke again. I answered that I could wait till I had need of it badly. I went to work and forgot time until I had the tobacco to my lips, when the same voice came to me again,—about nine o'clock. I reasoned that one chew would not do till noon; better wait awhile and make one chew do till noon. Time went by till half past eleven, and then the tobacco came to my lips again. The Spirit again said, "There is no use wasting tobacco; wait till afternoon."

Then came one of the great struggles of my life. The tobacco was to my lips again, when the voice spoke in this wise: "You have not used any till noon, why not quit altogether?" I could not make answer then, but I put the tobacco in my pocket. You see I was brought to a standstill: I either had to quit using the tobacco, or deny the power of the Spirit, and I realized then for the first time that it was my last hope, and if I let it go by the door would be closed and I would be left with my filthy habit.

Thanks be to God, I did not turn back to my wallow like the sow, nor like the filthy: let him be filthy still. It has been more than eight years since this took place, and I have not put tobacco to my lips since, but I kept the tobacco in my pocket three months or more. I yielded myself to obedience, and the desire departed and the Spirit stayed, and there was peace and joy and gladness in my soul. Thanks be to God for all his blessings.

With love to all the dear Saints and a God bless you to all, I remain,
THOMAS GAINNEY.

NEBO, ILLINOIS, January 11, 1913.

Editors Herald: Not many baptisms of late here, but many occurrences significant to the observing Latter Day Saint that God moves in many ways his wonders to perform, and is indeed in this work. Some here are trying to move with the procession of the faithful in the faith; others have stopped, and unless new life is infused, spiritual death will be inevitable. However, I sincerely hope for the complete victory of all latter day Israel, for the spiritual death of a Saint is indeed the saddest of all deaths.

On November 12, 13, 14, 15, at the opera house of Nebo, with the knowledge and consent of the missionary in charge of the Central Illinois District, I engaged one H. L. Derr in discussion on the propositions, "The church which Jesus organized did not continue through the Dark Ages." This was discussed for two nights. The second one was, "Can a child of God so apostatize as to be finally lost?" This was discussed for one night. The third was, "Is water baptism essential to one's salvation?"

The statement of the propositions will readily show which side the Latter Day Saint elder was on. This was the fifth time to flail theological differences with Elder Derr. Derr is seemingly honest, but not a strong debater. This was the same place where we had a tilt with W. J. Moore two years ago.

In opening the discussion, in defining the terms of the first proposition, I laid special stress on the term organized. According to Webster, it is defined: "To furnish with organs; to endow with capacity for the functions of life; to arrange; to get together in working order." Jesus furnished the organs. Jesus endowed the organs with functions of life. Jesus arranged these endowed organs and brought them into such organic contact as to accomplish his work so long as harmonious recognition of them and their teachings continued. Then the assumption by different writers of Baptist notoriety were cited as saying that one of the "leading organs endowed with capacity of life ended on Patmos." If the Baptist scholars were right, then the church which Jesus organized did not continue through the Dark Ages, for one of its organic-vitals and its life functions lay somewhere, dismembered, on the sands of Patmos. In the main, the same line as usual was followed, which was very feebly met, if met at all.

These propositions, as you will note, admit of the usual tirade against the church, and the majority of the people were on our side, including most of the prominent men of Nebo. The debate was well attended; however, some of the Baptists would not come. We were accredited by the majority as the victors; in fact I have never heard of one of the Baptists disputing the fact of their defeat.

Since then we were visited by Brother William Lewis and daughter Ruth, but the stay seemed short. We enjoyed their visit and the timely counsel of Brother Lewis, which was certainly appreciated, and not a single exception heard. With many other things, was repeatedly heard: "Brother Lewis is certainly a man of God."

We have been looking, but so far in vain, for one or more of the appointees of this Saint Louis District, to hold some meetings. On January 14, in response to an invitation of the county president of the Calhoun County Anti-Saloon League, I will try to occupy as one of the speakers at their annual county convention. Several of note are expected to be present, so I hope that some word or some influence may go out that will beget for our work more assuring possibilities in this county. I am sorry to learn of Brother Sawley's trouble, which came at a time just as he was arranging to come to our place. He writes me he is confined in the Sanitarium at Independence, Missouri. May he be blessed of the Lord.

Ever hopeful of Zion's triumph,
W. A. GUTHRIE.

ANTHONY, FLORIDA, November 30, 1912.

Dear Herald: I feel lonely down here, away from any Saints except my own family. I will write so the Saints will know where we are. We bade adieu to the Saints at Hagerman, Idaho, on the sixteenth of this month, and landed here on the twenty-first, finding children well and glad to see me. My daughter had been here two years; my youngest son, Emery, came down last July. Some things about this country are grand. The orange groves and other fruits, such as the grape fruit, are just lovely. We went out yesterday to see an orange grove where they were packing. It is a lovely sight. I saw bananas on the trees, but the land here is not very rich and has to be fertilized, but down where the grove is it is fine land. Out here there are only a few places that are good. My son-in-law has a good place, but much of the land is poor.

It is said to be a very healthful climate. I am feeling fine and everyone looks well. There are no Saints about that I know of; there are some branches in Florida, but we will have to stay here long enough for the people to learn the difference between the two churches. The people do not seem to know of any but the Utah Church. When we have been here long enough to get acquainted with the people, then we can talk, and I would like to have some tracts to distribute among the people when opportunity comes.

This is Sunday morning, and I feel very hungry to go to Sunday school, as I was superintendent of the Hagerman Sunday school about six years. You can understand how I feel, but if there is something for me to do here I am willing to sacrifice to be here. My heart is in this latter day work and I want to do something to help carry it on. I feel I am nothing outside of the gospel. Many testimonies have I received of the divinity of the calling of the Prophet Joseph. What a blessing it is to have the assurance of God's work on earth in this the latter day when the preparation is going on and the world at large not seeming to understand that the Bridegroom will soon come, and the call soon will be made, Go ye out to meet him. So, dear Saints, let us be watching for him, having oil in our vessels and our lamps trimmed and burning.

May the Lord ever bless and watch over all his children and bring back the wayward ones to a knowledge of the truth, is the prayer of

Your humble sister in the one faith,
FLORENCE MCKNIGHT.

GOOSE CREEK, NEVADA, January 14, 1913.

Dear Herald: I hope to receive spiritual strength, and believe the HERALD will be to me a teacher. I compare all teaching with the word of God, and I have never found anything in this work contrary to his word. I came into this church through the revelation of the Spirit ten years ago, and was baptized by Elder U. W. Greene, and confirmed at the water's edge. It has been revealed since that the faith and doctrine were right, and would stand at the day of judgment.

Pray for me that I may grow in knowledge, and in the truths of the gospel. Our branch here is not prospering; pray that God may send workers into the vineyard, that our branch may be built up. I know God hears and answers prayer.

Believe me to be a true Latter Day Saint,
ALICE SCOTT.

EAST PHARSALIA, NEW YORK, January 14, 1913.

Dear Herald: We are striving as Saints to see the accomplishment of the work in this place. The work has been hindered here on account of prejudice, but I believe it is giving away to a certain extent. We observed Christmas by having a short program. In the past we have invited our friends and neighbors, and perhaps one or two would venture. This year we were so busy getting ready for one or two that about twenty came. We were glad to see them come without an invitation. We hope the next missionary who comes will be able to see as many out to preaching services as the Saints saw Christmas night.

It is my prayer that God will so work upon the hearts and minds of the people here, as well as elsewhere, and so soften their hearts that when one chances to come to them, that they will be ready to come and receive the glad message. It makes me feel sad to see, or even think of people's rejecting this good work, but it makes me shudder to see those who have accepted turn away from what they know to be the truth and go into by and forbidden paths. May God help them in some way to see their mistakes and make good for their wrongdoing.

I hope I may be remembered by all who chance to read this, as I am one who needs God's help and strength to keep me in the narrow way.
MRS. FLOYD RATHBUN.

Anniversary Letter.

As usual, I will write to our church paper on my birthday. Thirty-three years ago to-day I was born again. Seventy years ago on the eighth day of last September I made my advent into this world; but thirty-three years ago to-day I was born into the kingdom of God. Thirty-two years ago on December 16, 1912, I was ordained an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and ever since that memorable day have I endeavored to discharge my duty as a representative of my Master.

There were some hard and steep hills placed before me to climb; but to this day the good Lord has stood by me in every difficulty. The very first difficulty I had to meet was only three days after I was baptized, when my father turned me away from home, and forbade me ever entering his premises again; disinheriting me; and erased my name from the family record. But the Lord had shown me before that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was the only true church, or I do not know whether I could have endured all that persecution, and especially when my good old mother was supposed to be dying, and sent for me to come to see her; but father said, "No, John can not come into the house till he renounces Mormonism." And he was a preacher in the United Brethren Church. That was hard for me to endure; but God stood by me, and gave me power to overcome it all.

Oh, I am so thankful that he stood by me in all those trials. I had seen his power made manifest even before I had been baptized, at the Dow City conference in 1879, when Brother and Sister D. C. White's child, who was almost dead, was instantly healed.

And since I have been in the missionary field have I seen the wonderful power of our God made manifest. A little boy at Mount Pleasant, who had a crooked, deformed foot, when Brother McDonald of Lamoni and I administered to him the bones were all straightened out and he was healed. Sister Weeks's girl, at Marshalltown, Iowa, took very sick; the doctor said she had appendicitis, and that she could live only a very short time unless she was operated upon, as she had not slept for several nights, nor had she eaten anything, and for several days she was in terrible agony continually. Just at that time I happened into Marshalltown, and administered to her at about 4 p. m., and as soon as supper was ready she got up, dressed herself, and ate a hearty supper with the rest of the family; then went to bed and slept all night; arose in the morning well, ate a hearty breakfast, and stayed up all day, for she was entirely well.

Also Sister Sally Russell, who is so widely known in the church, the mother of our missionary, F. A. Russell, of Colorado Springs, Colorado; when she lived in Grinnell, Iowa, was taken sick with what the doctor called gall stones. She got so bad that the children called in the neighbors, and they all said that she was dying. They called for the doctor. He gave them no hope. They sent for the writer, who lived about six blocks away, and as quick as possible I shoved myself through the crowd and anointed her head with oil and asked the God of Israel to heal her. When I closed my prayer, I thought she was dead, for she lay so quiet, but I noticed then that she had fallen to sleep; after about ten or fifteen minutes she awakened, and remarked, "Well, I believe I have been sleeping; I am well now." Some of the women present said, "How quick the doctor's medicine took effect on her." Yes, our God healed her, and to this day I have not heard that she ever had a relapse.

Many, many more cases of the same kind might be noted, and what is more comforting than all the rest is that God never changes; and that when he has made a promise, he has always fulfilled it when the time came. Not one of his promises has ever failed; therefore I love to serve him. He has stood by me in time of danger, when my life was threatened. When I was surrounded by a mob he protected me, and I received no harm. Therefore, I am still willing to do all I can to serve him. But as the Master has said, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." My spirit is just as willing to-day as it was thirty years ago; but the flesh can not endure the hardships it could then.

I have been in the field most all the time this conference year. After conference I preached some at Saint Joseph Second Branch, where three noble persons were baptized. Then by invitation of the Knobnoster Saints, I went there, preached over three Sundays. I was well cared for there by those good Saints. There is a good branch of many good Saints there. Then by invitation I stopped off at Holden and gave them two sermons. I also received a warm welcome there; I have been acquainted with many of the Holden Saints for a long time, as we belonged to the same branch in Iowa, and of course our joy in meeting each other again was mutual.

From there I came to Independence; enjoyed a short visit with many of my oldtime friends, including our genial Bishop E. L. Kelley. Then by request, (for I make it a point to never preach anywhere without the consent or request of those in charge,) I called at Mount Washington, where the boy preacher, Brother Baker, was holding tent meetings, and just then his wife took sick, and he requested me to continue the tent meetings. So, by the request of the branch president, I preached there over two Sundays. Six were baptized there by the branch president during the meetings. There I also found our energetic young couple, Brother and Sister Jellings, from Oelwein, Iowa; also Brother and Sister Stobaugh, and Brother and Sister C. Hand, all from old Iowa. So the writer was at home again.

Then to the Stewartsville reunion, which was a splendid meeting. The roads and weather were fine, with one little exception, when the power of the prince of the air interfered, and a terrific rain- and windstorm came over the camp. Sails were soon lowered; the missionaries rushed for their large sleeping tent; things began to get pretty lively, and the captain called out, "Every one to a rope and hold down." There was no waiting for second orders. And by the way, Sister Ruth happened in the tent at the time, helping her father pack up, preparing to take the train, and she, brave soldier, grabbed a rope and hung right to it till the stakes began to give way on the north, and rip, rip, rip went the tent into pieces; then everyone had to look out for himself; by this time it was quite dark; yes, pitch dark. When the tent went to pieces Ruth disappeared also. Out into the dark she plunged, oh, hold! what caused that jar? It might be a small earthquake; who knows? Well, Ruth told us next day it was only her running against a large tree which caused the jar, and no harm done. To say the least about it, the elders' sleeping tent was just about put out of commission. The next day all felt bright and happy again.

I held a series of meetings in the Oak Grove Branch. They are alive in that branch. They received a good live family from Iowa to help them there. Brother Ford and family, all good workers and splendid singers, with a good organist among them. Then by request I went to Kingston Branch and held forth there over two Sundays with good interest. That branch is composed of a lot of good old Saints, doing all they can to move the work on.

My next meeting was in the Cameron Branch; had splendid interest, with a large attendance all the time, and the best order, I was told, that has been maintained there for a long time. Most of the Saints are trying to do their duty. May God help all to see what is required of them as Saints of God.

And now, in conclusion, I am in the midst of a series of meetings in Stewartsville. The weather is not so good now as it was sometime ago. But the meetings are well attended so far. Crowds increasing; many good Saints here; and we hope good results may accrue. I forgot to say that I also had a fine meeting in the Delano Branch. That is my home branch now.

I am pleased to read so many encouraging letters from all over the land; and especially how God is blessing the laborers among the Indians. May God bless the seed sown among them, that a large harvest of the Lamanites may be gathered into his kingdom.

I remain a laborer for Christ to save souls.

J. S. ROTH.

WEATHERBY, MISSOURI, January 18, 1913.

Robinson and Burt Debate.

The contest going on in Sparta for some time past, finally developed, and concluded in a splendid debate between the Disciple Church and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The church proposition had been signed for some time, waiting for the Disciple man to get ready and be prepared to meet his challenged enemy. While we speak in praise of the debate, we want to be understood that we cherish the good spirit which was brought into the contest and prevailed unto the close.

We sincerely believe that the merits of the Robinson and Burt debate, of Sparta, will exalt this way as a desirable one to awaken interest in our work, and to get it before the people of the world.

Among those who presided we would not fail to mention Elder George Burt, president of Central Michigan District, our moderator, who did credit to the occasion by enforcing the law governing; that had much to do with the splendid results. As the debate advanced the interest deepened and the meetings grew in attendance.

We deem it not necessary to mention the points under discussion, but we would like the privilege and deem it a duty as well, to speak in much praise of Elder Ernest Burt, of Beaverton, Michigan, who fought bravely and successfully under the power of the Spirit of the Master, from the start to the finish. It was acknowledged that we seldom saw and felt the power of God more than when Elder Burt made his closing defense. The audience was spellbound. The evil powers were aroused; the heaven is working as never before, while the Saints are looking hopefully forward.

If the Disciple man could have proven that he survived the apostolic age, he might have saved a deacon, and himself as an elder. But he did not even retain or save their much-cherished name, Christian, for the two-edged sword was fatal under the power of the Spirit.

According to all reports we have won a decided victory in favor of the latter day work. Elder George Burt returned home the 13th. Elder Ernest Burt is to continue his meetings here in this place.

Hopefully yours,

F. T. FIELD.

SPARTA, MICHIGAN, January 14, 1913.

From Utah.

Not having troubled your grand and newsy columns since July last, I hope this may not find its way to the wastebasket. Leaving the city of Salt Lake July 16, I arrived in Midvale, where I was made to feel at home with Brother James Wardle and his noble family of singers. There I was laid up with a bad cold, but was kindly and tenderly cared for, as if at home. May God reward them fourfold. While there I broke the bread of life, also at Sandy. On the 29th, while preaching on the street at 7.30 p. m., and quoting from the Utah Doctrine and Covenants, a Brighamite, half drunk, shouted at the top of his voice: "You are a ——— liar," which was repeated. He got so hot under the collar that it took two men to hold him, to keep him from getting up into the buggy in which I was standing. I said in reply that if what I said was a lie, I got it from their own book. But the mill continued to grind, while the man with the star stood by, seemingly to protect the lawbreaker; at least he showed no signs of keeping order, which he must have been sworn to do. But I remembered who I was and where I was.

My next stop was at Pleasant Grove, where I called on Elder J. C. Jensen and family, who made me welcome; thence to Provo, where I labored some in connection with Elder M. F. Gowell and Brother Charles Chase in street work. We have a church and branch there. Elder T. J. Pollard is in charge. Brother and Sister Gowell are doing good there in a house to house fireside work, as well as being a great help to the branch and lone missionary.

My next stop was at Nephi, where I was made welcome at the home of Sister Martha Coleman and her daughter, Annie; thence south to Deseret, where Elder J. M. Stubbart joined me in missionary work; he is surely an agreeable and wise colaborer. I had good company, but what about him? We put in a few days at Deseret, Oasis, and Hinkley, thence south, into a water canal and out to Milford, where we were made welcome by Mr. and Sister Arthur Wood, (Sister Wood was formerly a Lamoni girl) and Hugh J. Barton. From there we moved on to Greenville, where we were kindly cared for by Mr. P. Jack Barton and the few Saints there; thence to Beaver, where live our aged Brother Edward Davis and wife. From there we returned to Deseret, where I reluctantly left my collaborator to look after his business affairs while I moved on to Provo to trouble the waters.

September 28 found me in Salt Lake City to attend the district conference. Conference over, I remained in the city a few days and assisted Elder A. M. Chase in street work, and to compile a missionary notebook (between meetings). I find Elder Chase and his most noble family to be true, earnest gospel workers all along the line. From the city I went north to Ogden and Plain City; at the former lives Brother Wells Chase and his noble family whose home seems to be a missionary's home, and other good Saints. At the latter is the home of Brother and Sister Coy, (another wide-awake gospel worker) also Brother and Sister Hudson. Thence to Malad, Idaho, where the waters were again troubled. Here we have a church and branch, a noble band of Saints, with Elder Elias E. Richards in charge. From there I returned to Ogden, where we also have a church and branch, and found that Elder J. E. Vanderwood and family had located there, which will prove to be a great help to all concerned. I next moved on south, by way of Midvale, Sandy, Provo, Nephi, and Manti. At the latter is the home of Elder S. P. Rasmussen and wife; found him in poor health. My next stop was Gunnison, where I got the use of the Presbyterian church, through the kindness of Reverend Hamilton; thence south to Salina and Elsinore, where I spent the holidays with Elder Hans Lorensen and family, who made me feel at home. I also stopped off at Richfield, the home of Brother J. Jensen and Melvin N. Ross, where the lone missionary was made welcome. The Hansen, Swensen, and Young-Stewart debate is still fresh in the minds of the Richfieldites. Here I had the use of the Methodist Episcopal church, through the kindness of the trustees and the Reverend Ira S. Haverfield, who even did the janitor work, furnishing heat and lights free. May God reward such broad-minded and whole-souled men,—but what of the narrow, contracted, self-righteous beings who tore my meeting notices from the public bulletin boards and other places in Richfield, as well as at other points? Think of the school board and superintendent of schools in Salt Lake City compelling two little girls to salute the United States Flag or be expelled from school, when at the same time Joseph F. Smith and many others in Utah are allowed to trample said flag under foot and drag it in the dust, comparatively, by living in polygamy, in open violation of the laws of God and the land, according to their own confession!

I have no objections, however, to the saluting of the Flag, but, changing the subject a little, I hope that none of our people, in any part of the world, will become so narrow-minded as to close our churches or homes against the Brighamites or any other people, white or black. Take them in, give them your best bed and eatables, treat them with kindness, go and hear them preach, and if they can break down our church structure with a soap bubble, let her fall; the sooner the better.

On December 9 I called on Brother and Sister Ether Blanchard, of Springville, Utah, and with them lives Sister Margaret Goff, Sister Blanchard's mother, who was born December 25, 1808, having now passed her one hundred and fourth year. Springville is also the home of Brother and Sister J. D. Humphrey.

I must say that all along the line the Saints in Utah have been very kind to me; the Sisters' Aid Society made me a present of a good warm overcoat (in Salt Lake City), and on the evening of October 10 the Saints of that branch had quite a feast at the home of Brother and Sister Chase, in honor of your humble servant's sixty-second birthday. May God ever bless them for their loving-kindness, which shall ever be remembered.

In gospel bonds,

J. C. CHRESTENSEN.

ELSINORE, UTAH, January 7, 1913.

News from Missions

North Dakota.

Since leaving home, the fifteenth day of last May, I have passed through a variety of experiences, sometimes pleasant and sometimes not so pleasant. I have spent a part of the time in the city where the rush after the "almighty dollar" seems to be the first thought in the minds of the people, and part out in the open country of this great State of North Dakota, where people live and enjoy life in sod houses or dugouts, or whatever they can afford, trying to do something for the Master's cause. Sometimes it would seem that the Adversary of all righteousness was doing all that he could to cause me to feel that I had missed my calling.

Whatever the pleasant or the discouraging experiences of the past few months have been to me, I feel that those of the past few days have more than paid for all the unpleasant ones. I refer to the conference we have been permitted to attend at Berlin. And now I believe, as never before, I can say

"My times are in Thy hand,
Whatever they may be,
Pleasing or painful, dark or bright,
As best may seem to Thee."

So, feeling that others who were not permitted to be in attendance at the conference would like to hear about the good time we had there, I now feel like writing a little.

On Friday, January 10, in company with Brother J. E. Wildermuth and Brother Thomas Leitch, we left Fargo and arrived at Berlin shortly after noon, where we were met by the Berlin and LaMoure Saints, Brother and Sister Page and Brother J. S. Wagener having joined us at LaMoure. The good sisters of Berlin and LaMoure had planned an entertainment for Friday evening and,—well, we don't believe in deceiving people, but the advertising of "a free entertainment and lecture" served very well the purpose of getting the people out to hear not only a good entertainment, but a good, "short" lecture, from Brother J. E. Wildermuth, and also the other meetings of the conference. So whatever may have been the object of the sisters, we believe their efforts worked for good, and are deserving of praise.

To say that the conventions and conference were good would fail in expression. It was a spiritual feast; one long to be remembered by all present. On Sunday during the prayer and sacrament service, the Lord was pleased to reveal himself through the "gifts" of the gospel by one prophecy, one tongue and interpretation, and singing in tongues. This was indeed uplifting, and all are now rejoicing in the service of the Master, and we can but wish that all the Saints of North Dakota could have been there to have enjoyed the same great blessing.

During the conference two precious souls were led into the waters of baptism while the thermometer registered between twenty and thirty below zero, Brother Wildermuth officiating, and were confirmed at the meeting on Sunday. We were glad that they were permitted to witness the power of the gospel so soon after obeying, and we feel safe in saying that if they continue faithful in striving to acquaint themselves with the work and its requirements, that they will make useful citizens of the "kingdom of God." They are Brother and Sister Slater.

So, trusting that we all may be able to live in that way and manner that we shall ever be in the condition before God that we may merit the "greater" blessing which he has to bestow upon us, I will close by saying that I am still in the faith.

W. E. SHAKESPEARE.

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA, January 16, 1913.

Texas.

I will drop a few lines from this place, so the Saints may know we are still in the last great battle, fighting for life and salvation. We are the only soldiers here, but we are trying to hold the fort. Day after day we have held up the white flag of peace, and our long and continued prayers have been that others might see the engravings stamped thereon, even the flag which we bear, and cross over the waters by faith and repentance and join us. There are some honest-hearted people here, whom we long to see in the kingdom of God. Remember us, dear Saints, when you pray, that God may add to the church those here who are worthy. We have battled here alone for a long time. We have borne many sneers, and many who were our friends are now our enemies. During the last ten years we have left here several times, but for some cause come right back, and thus the battle begins. Surely the Lord has some people here who are to be gathered out.

Elder E. A. Erwin was here in August, and baptized three or four children, and preached several good sermons. Several came out to hear, and said they were well pleased, but on the other hand Satan was preaching in the brush and hindered some. As soon as Brother Erwin was gone he stepped to the front and thought to do a great work in the person of Reverend Crane, of the Baptists. He thought to do great works in the way of healing the sick, and he told the people that God had set at naught the elders as recorded in the fifth chapter of James, and other places in the Bible, and had called and inspired skillful men to make and manufacture drugs to cure the people. The people swallowed it down like young birds, of course. When he was through I thought probably I might help him some, so I went after him. When I turned him loose there were but two on the ground to tell the tale. The news went out that Crane was defeated, and he hasn't flown so high since. The glory be to God.

Again we had Brother Erwin with us for several days, when he returned home to spend Christmas. He preached us five good sermons, and on the Sunday before his departure, he administered the Lord's supper. I feel sure that some are near the kingdom. We had a good audience each time, at my house, to hear Brother Erwin. He is a fine preacher, and makes friends everywhere he goes. May the Lord bless his work here, that the honest in heart may be gathered out.

We would be glad at any time to greet the elders who come this way. We would meet them any time.

G. N. Cox.

PARIS, TEXAS, R. F. D. 1, December 25, 1912.

Australia.

The gospel work in this field is slowly onward though there is nothing startling in our progress or experiences.

We are losing, at the end of this year, all our American missionaries save one or two, and will therefore be quite shorthanded, which will put extra strain upon the forces left and call for greater efforts on the part of local elders, priests, and other officers.

Our development along this line seems slow, no doubt owing to the strenuous competition of modern life and the lack of time and also facilities for obtaining the needful tuition and experiences to develop the ministerial ability. We are hopeful that young men of talent now in sight may ere long bud and blossom into such shape that they may fill these gaps caused in our ranks without such frequent additions from the home land, which though acceptable are luxurious from a financial standpoint.

The great problem of reaching the masses confronts us here as it does the church in all the world.

The great cities remain practically untouched and uninfluenced by either our preaching or literature, and we long for conditions to change or for power to rise superior to the obstacles, in order that they may be reached. Our methods do not seem calculated to draw the attention of the notable ones of earth.

Much might be done in the way of putting our literature in libraries, etc., but how such a movement is to be financed is the question. Preaching on the streets is now practically prohibited in every important municipality of Melbourne. So also is tract distribution in public places. Sometime ago the Mormons were summoned and fined for spreading tracts outside a picture theater in this city which had staged a play "In the grip of the Mormons."

There does not seem to be a great deal of open opposition to our work in these States; but we have to contend with that more deadly foe, passive resistance, including a disinclination to investigate religious claims. The people seem satisfied with what religion they have, or that religion and churches are a parasitic growth which might be abolished without injury to the Nation. The Bible is being relegated to obscurity by the masses, as a book of religious authority. It is not to the majority the end of controversy, but merely as an "old fiddle" upon which any tune may be played. Apparently nothing short of a revival of the miraculous power of the gospel will arouse the people from the apathy which has settled upon them.

In our sunny clime the love of open air exercise and relaxation denudes the church, and Sunday is becoming a day of excursion and picnic to the hills or seaside. At these places dangers to old and young of the most insidious and spiritually enervating character exist in almost undisputed sway.

The world is evidently fast drifting from its moorings spiritually; the tempest is increasing in force and the anchors seem clogged by accumulated rubbish which prevents their holding on through the storm. More than ever we feel the need of a good spiritual anchor and a sound cable.

We, as a church, are affected by our environment, and as the world grows more indifferent and pleasure-loving we will, if not on our guard, be turned with the tide and lose power.

Trusting that God will empower us with a rich endowment of his Spirit, to enable us to stand firm for the right, I am as ever your brother in gospel bonds,

J. H. N. JONES.

RICHMOND, VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA, 5 L. Docker Street, November 8, 1912.

History teaches us that of those men who have overturned the liberties of republics, the greatest number have begun their career by claiming to be great friends of the people; commencing demagogues and ending tyrants.—Alexander Hamilton.

To give a book is to enrich the receiver permanently; to put into his or her possession something which leaves a residuum of pleasure long after the particular day on which it was received has been forgotten.—Hamilton W. Mabie.

News from Branches

Saint Louis, Missouri.

District conference convened December 14 and 15. A very large attendance enjoyed a most spiritual time. Patriarch Lewis delivered the discourse in the morning and Brother Dowker occupied the evening hour. With a Sunday school, priesthood, and prayer session, a busy and profitable day was spent.

Four have been added to the church by baptism since last report, and two wedding ceremonies were performed; Brother Archibald pronouncing the words which united Brother John Davis and Sister Anna Themming and Brother Charles Mottashed and Miss Ruth I. Brown. The double ceremony being performed the evening of December 31, 1912.

Brother G. S. Trowbridge was ordained to the office of elder at our last district conference. Brother T. J. Elliot, now being pastor of the Cheltenham Branch, is not with us in the Saint Louis Branch as much as he has been in the past, but while we miss him, we realize our loss is gain to others.

Among those who delivered the word of God during the past month were Brethren Archibald, Reeves, and E. C. Bell. It being Brother Bell's initial discourse, we were pleased at the privilege to hear him. His effort received many compliments, God blessing and strengthening him.

The district Sunday school and Religio will hold a joint convention January 25 and 26. A fine program is arranged and a good attendance is anticipated. The local work of both auxiliaries is progressing nicely.

We are pleased to learn that Sister Peat, who was remembered at our sacrament service, is gradually improving, and we trust will soon be fully restored to health and strength.

Brother D. W. DeJong who has been attending to business for his employer in the East for nine months, is again with us, and we trust to stay. Also Brother Joseph Swift, who for about the same length of time was in Pleasanton, Iowa.

Your sister in Christ,

ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

2739 GREER AVENUE.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

SASKATCHEWAN.—District conference convened in I. O. O. F. hall in Edmonton, December 28 and 29, 1912. Conference opened with prayer service with district president in charge, associated with Brethren Long, Cornish, and Crabb. Voice and vote were given to all visiting members, and president given power to appoint all committees. One of the main points of discussion was the matter of dividing the district. It was finally decided to send a petition to General Conference, convening in April, at Lamoni, to have Saskatchewan District divided; the dividing line to be the boundary line between Alberta and Saskatchewan. J. C. Crabb was appointed paid delegate to General Conference. The following also were named as delegates: G. T. Griffiths, J. W. White, T. J. Jordan, E. E. Long, Fred Gregory, J. R. Beckley, Sister J. R. Beckley, R. Anderson, J. J. Cornish, J. W. Peterson, Sister T. J. Jordan, J. A. Beckman, Sister J. A. Beckman. Next district conference is to be held at Ribstone, date to be set by district president and missionary in charge. The preaching services were excellent, and the following Brethren treated us to spiritual feasts: E. E. Long, J. A. Beckman, J. C. Crabb, J. J. Cornish. Prayer service was held Sunday morning and the Spirit was felt by many present. The Saints in Edmonton gave us a very pleasant time, showing us their nice city, which is a city of which to be proud, and the visiting Saints left feeling that they had a very enjoyable time. M. Smith, R. T. Brown, press committee.

Conference Notices.

Conference of the Northeastern Missouri District will be held at Bevier, Missouri, February 15 and 16, 1913. Send all reports to William C. Chapman, Higbee, Missouri. William C. Chapman, district secretary.

Texas Central District will convene with the Cookes Point Branch on February 15, at 10 a. m. Let all officers send in their reports to C. M. Mitchel, district secretary. Let all attend and bring the Spirit of God with them that we may have a profitable meeting. All who come by rail will be met at Colwell and Stone City. S. R. Hay, district president.

Spring River District will meet for conference February 14, 15, 16, at Joplin, Missouri. Mollie Davis, secretary, 115 West Jefferson Avenue, Pittsburg, Kansas.

District conference of the Central Nebraska District will convene with the Meadow Grove Branch, February 22, 23, 1913. Branch clerks and all ministry reporting to said conference please take notice. Have your reports to me in due time, that the work may be properly done and in harmony with the law. F. S. Gatenby, district secretary, Orchard, Nebraska.

Annual conference of the Pittsburg District will be held at Wheeling, West Virginia, Forty-second and Jacob Streets, on February 22, 23, convening at 10 o'clock a. m. The nature of the meetings will be as usual. L. F. P. Curry, district secretary.

Conference of the Winnipeg District and conventions of the Religio and Sunday school districts, will convene with the Winnipeg Branch, February 13, 14, 15, and 16 in the Saints' church on Kensington Street, Saint James. Half fare may be secured from the 8th to 12th. Tickets good for returning after conference. Elder G. T. Griffiths will be in attendance, also other good speakers. All visiting Saints will be met at trains and cared for during conference if notice is sent ahead to Nelson Wilson, 169 Langside Street, Winnipeg. All who can are earnestly requested to attend this conference and make it a profitable one. Nelson Wilson, district president; W. S. Carter, district secretary.

Convention Notices.

Northern California district Sunday school association will convene at Chico, California, February 28, 1913, at 2 p. m. Election of officers will be one feature of the convention. Local secretaries please report as early as possible, using the new report blanks, also send in your credentials at least one week before convention. Home department workers please report, however small your work may seem,—every effort will count. Mrs. Lizzie Day, district secretary, 4663 Eighteenth Street, San Francisco, California.

Southern California District semiannual convention will convene in San Bernardino on Friday, February 28, 1913, continuing over Saturday and Sunday, March 1, 2. The conference session will be at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. The Sunday school will be Friday afternoon, and Religio Friday morning. All are invited to come, and it is hoped we can have a good attendance. R. T. Cooper, district secretary.

Sunday school convention of the Nauvoo District will meet at Burlington, Iowa, January 31, at 10 a. m. There will be a joint prayer service with the Religio at 9.30 a. m. Secretary, Sister John H. Laubscher, 1336 Garnet Street, Burlington, Iowa.

Sunday schools of the Central Nebraska district Sunday school association, please take notice that on February 21, 1913, the semiannual convention will convene at Meadow Grove at 10 a. m. sharp. Please remember the hour and be prompt; also Sunday-school secretaries please have reports in to my address in due time. We desire to see every school in the district represented. F. S. Gatenby, district secretary, Orchard, Nebraska, R. R. 2.

The Presidency.

NOTICE OF RELEASE.

Elder J. A. Roberts at his request has been released from missionary appointment for the balance of the conference year, the First Presidency and minister in charge concurring in the release.

FREDERICK M. SMITH,
Secretary First Presidency.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 22, 1913.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 A Needed Correction - - - - - 105
 John Wesley and Joseph Smith - - - - - 105
 Notes and Comments - - - - - 109
 HYMNS AND POEMS - - - - - 109
 ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Getting into the Newspapers, by William E. LaRue - - - - - 110
 Would the World Be Better off without Tobacco, by H. O. Smith - - - - - 112
 OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 America's Gift to Europe - - - - - 116
 The Indian's Religion - - - - - 116
 MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - - - 117
 LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - - 118
 Missouri Booker—S. Drazey—Thomas Gainey—W. A. Guthrie—Florence McKnight—Alice Scott—Mrs. Floyd Rathbun—J. S. Roth—F. T. Field—J. C. Chrestensen.
 NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - - 122
 W. E. Shakespeare—G. N. Cox—J. H. N. Jones.
 NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - - 124
 Elizabeth Patterson.
 MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - - 124

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.
 The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamont, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamont, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

There is no courage, but in innocence,
 No hesitancy, but in an honest cause.—Southern.

Correction.

We shall feel obliged if you will correct the following errors and omission, which have crept into the British Isles Mission conference minutes. They appear in issue of November 20, 1912, and are as follows: Elder John Schofield instead of James Schofield, Birmingham; Priest Thomas Adams instead of James Adams, Belfast; Patriarch Joseph R. Greenwood instead of James R. Greenwood, Stafford; Western Wales should appear among the districts.

W. R. ARMSTRONG,
Mission Secretary.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND, 47 East Grove, C upon M.

Canadian Saints Take Notice.

The London District Library Board is organized for 1913, with the following officers: Bert Richardson, president; Lewis Burnard, secretary; James Winegarden, treasurer; and distributor of tracts; Lewis Burnard, book custodian. If there are any members outside of organized branches who can and will distribute tracts, kindly write to the tract distributor.

We have the leading church books in our circulating library: Memoirs of W. W. Blair, Book of Mormon, Autobiography of R. C. Evans, Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff, Voice of Warning, Book of Mormon Talks, American Archaeology, Joseph Smith and His Progenitors, etc. All branches, Sunday schools, and Religios of London District will remember the motions of last London conference as to sending of collections of each quarter to London District Library Board. Please send all collections to Lewis Burnard, 12 Caroline Street, London, Ontario.

LEWIS BURNARD, Secretary.

Second Quorum of Seventy.

Will all members of the quorum who have changed their permanent address during the past year, send us their present address, so we may send blanks for reporting? We need the present address of J. L. Goodrich and D. E. Tucker.

H. E. MOLER, Secretary.

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, Box 144.

Pastoral.

To the Branch Presidents and clerks of the Northern California District, and the officers and members; Greeting: We began the new year under advanced ideas, with the only thought of greater proficiency. One of the main foundation principles is promptness, accompanied by care and system, observing every detail. Accepting the presidency of a branch means a virtual covenant to attend faithfully to all the church discipline requires of such an officer. A complete system of reporting has been inaugurated which asks for a report from each branch president to the district president, and from him to the First Presidency; also the minister in charge. Also the semiannual statistical reports to the district conference. We expect to mail our reports promptly on the first days of January, March, July, and October. We are urged by the First Presidency to give a full report, and to do this we must hear from each of the fourteen branches in the district. Answer all the questions and give such other information as is necessary to an understanding of real conditions. Spiritual advancement is the chief aim, and to reach this each officer of the branch must learn and do his duty or give way to some other. The law makes the priest a visiting officer. Do your priests visit the membership? If not, why not? Let us begin the new year under well-filled sails; pressing our way to higher grounds. I will mail blanks to each branch president on the 20th of the month, giving ample time for complete returns by the first. We ask each one upon receiving the blank to at once fill out and return to my address. Promptness is essential to good service as president. Statistical reports should be sent to our district secretary, Elder J. A. Lawn, Hollister, San Benito County, California; also individual reports of the priesthood. We ask the secretaries of the branches to send us full list of all bearing the priesthood, and their addresses, so far as possible; also name and address of the president and secretary. Remember our next district conference convenes in Chico, Butte County, California, March 1, with conventions on February 28. Let as many as possible attend, as this is the first conference held at this point. If there be opportunities for a series of meetings, or preaching in any new opening, we should be pleased to hear of it. We have competent missionaries in the district anxious for such openings. Let us borrow the motto of the Religio, "Onward and upward," and make it our shibboleth.

Yours for advancement,
 J. M. TERRY, President.

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, 1202 Fourteenth Street.

To the Eldership of the Pacific Slope Mission, including California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and British Columbia; Greeting: This is to notify the eldership of the above-named mission that at the reunion of the Northern California District, held at Irvington, California, October 31 to September 9, 1912, the Pacific Slope Mission Quorum of Elders was organized, and the following named elders were enrolled as charter members of the quorum: Edward Ingham, Charles W. Hawkins, Clarence W. Earl, Richard Ferris, A. J. Dameron, J. A. Anthony, Eugene Holt, John A. Saxe, C. W. Deuel, W. H. York, H. D. Simpson, H. A. Hintz, Mahlon Cannon, John A. Lawn, J. S. Holmes, E. J. Clark, E. S. Chase, Joseph Flory, I. W. Willie, Ira J. Phelps, Guy L. W. Brokaw, Jasper H. Lawn, A. M. Starkey, M. A. Trotter, J. M. Range, Oscar Ensley, George Daley, James H. Lawn, Ebenezer Burton, Jacob Smith, Benjamin Bean, C. E. Ball, Henry Burgess.
 Elder Charles W. Hawkins was chosen president of the quorum, and John A. Saxe and Edward Ingham, first and second counselors, respectively. Elder H. A. Hintz was chosen secretary.

It was agreed by the presidency of the quorum to hold the next quorum meeting at the time of the spring conference of the Northern California District, to be held at Chico, California, March 1, 1913. This will be the first meeting of the quorum since its organization, and we wish as large an attendance of the quorum membership as possible, as we wish to get more thoroughly organized, and form definite plans for future quorum work.

We understand that it is the design and intention of quorum work, to bring the eldership closer together; that there may be unity of thought, and action as they go forth to teach God's word; that we may get wisdom, even by learning, and by study of all good books; that we may be workmen approved of God, that need not be ashamed.

We want the name of every worthy elder of this mission enrolled in the quorum and to the end that this may be speedily accomplished, we ask that presidents of districts and branches, will see to it, that all the elders, under their several jurisdictions, that are in good standing, send in their names for enrollment. The elders sending in their names, should have them approved, either by a branch president, district president, or missionary in charge. Send all names, with addresses, to C. W. Hawkins, 615 Spencer Avenue, San Jose, California; (pronounced San Hozay); who after enrolling them himself, will forward them to the secretary for enrollment. Every elder thus enrolled, is requested to send in a report, or report in person, to the quorum at its first meeting in each year: of which meeting, notice will be given in due time.

Now brethren let us be up and doing, and not be idle nor slothful. We have been called of God to the holy priesthood; let us therefore seek first to build up the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and he will add all things needful for our temporal wants.

Your colaborers in the gospel,
C. W. HAWKINS, President of Quorum.
JOHN A. SAXE, First Counselor.
EDWARD INGHAM, Second Counselor.

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA, December 14, 1912.

Died.

JOY.—Mrs. Rebecca Dricko Joy was born at Addison, Maine, November 16, 1840; died at North Haven, January 11, 1913. She was married to the late David Joy in 1857. To this union were born five children, who now mourn her death. She united with the church, when a young girl and remained all her life a faithful Saint, a loving mother, and friend to all. Funeral at her home in Addison; sermon and services conducted by Elder J. F. Sheehy.

DREYER.—Ethel Leona Dreyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred V. Dreyer, 443 Greenbush, Street, Milwaukee, born January 7, 1909; died January 16, 1913, aged 4 years, 9 days. Death due to complications from scarlet fever. Sermon by Jasper O. Dutton. Interment at Union cemetery.

LANCE.—At Liberty Home, Lamoni, Iowa, January 6, 1913, Sister Susan C. Lance, born at Ashville, Buncombe County, North Carolina, October 22, 1827; baptized and confirmed April 14, 1884, at Almaosa, Conejos County, Colorado, by Elder James Caffall. She was the daughter of William and Nancy Prayter, married when about twenty-two years of age, was a widow; nothing is known of her other kindred. Passed away at the advanced age of 84 years, 2 months, and 17 days, funeral service at the home, in charge of Elder John Smith, and sermon from Alma 19:4, by Elder Robert M. Elvin. Interment in Rose Hill.

NEFF.—Benjamin Hammett Neff, at Webb City, Missouri, December 20, 1912. Born in Saint Louis County, Missouri, August 23, 1884, aged 28 years, 3 months, 27 days; baptized November 10, 1912, by Elder O. P. Sutherland. Funeral sermon by Elder J. A. Davis, Pittsburg, Kansas, being member of church only forty days.

CALKINS.—Seth E. Calkins, at Carterville, Missouri, December 29, 1912. Born January 3, 1854, at Girard, Erie County, Pennsylvania; baptized August 5, 1894, at Joplin, Jasper County, Missouri, by Joseph Luff. A member of Webb City branch since 1904. Funeral sermon by F. L. Freeman.

RICHARDSON.—Agnes Pearl Richardson was born May 9, 1892, at Wilson, Alpena County, Michigan, and on January 3, 1913, after months of intense suffering from a complication of diseases, culminating in tuberculosis, she entered into her rest. Besides husband and baby son, she leaves father and mother, Brother and Sister James H. Blackmore, of Wilson; three sisters, Mrs. Richard Stewart, of Greenbush, Michigan; Misses Ina and Alice Blackmore, and one brother, Bennie, of Wilson, besides hosts of sorrowing relatives and friends. Sister Pearl was baptized at Spratt, Michigan, on August 19, 1906, by O. J. Hawn. Through all her suffering, her faith in her Savior did not waver, and her last words to her father, a short time before she died, were: "I'm all right now, papa. I'm all right." Funeral sermon at her home in Lachine, on January 5, by J. A. Carpenter; burial in Greely Cemetery. On December 24, 1912, just ten days previous to her demise,

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,
Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni,
Iowa.

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

Why Don't You Get a Free Farm in Wyoming?

The new homestead law makes it easy to own a farm now. It offers just the opportunity the farm renter, the farm hand and many others who want to establish themselves upon farms of their own, have been looking for. You can now secure title to an irrigated government farm or a Mondell 320 acres free homestead in three years and at the same time be away from the farm five months each year. Will you be one of those who will take advantage of Uncle Sam's generosity and become the owner of a farm along the new lines of the Burlington Route in Wyoming?

This matter is worth thinking about. In fact, if interested, I would be glad to have you write me about it. And when you write, be sure to remind me to send your copy of the folder describing these lands.

I will run a personally-conducted homeseekers' excursion to points in Wyoming on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. It won't cost much to go out and inspect these farms and it might mean a lot to you. As you have something to gain and nothing to lose; why not arrange to do this?

D. CLEM DEEVER, Immigration Agent
1004 Farnam Street, Omaha, Nebr.

her eldest sister, aged 29, Sister Edith Connell, of Alpena, passed on to the other side, leaving husband and three little ones, besides many other sorrowing relatives and friends to mourn for her, but they sorrow not as those without hope. Truly "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Sister Connell's funeral was held from her home in Alpena, on December 26, 1912, S. W. Russ officiating.

GUNSOLLEY.—At Decatur, Nebraska, January 5, 1913, Brother Albert P. Gunsolley died. He was born October 21, 1846, at Lucky Hollow, Joe Daviess County, Illinois. Death was due to a paralytic stroke two years ago, followed by diabetes. He was baptized at Decatur, Nebraska, September 28, 1902, by Oscar Case, confirmed by James Caffall and Oscar Case. Married Sarah E. Huff, at Glenwood, Iowa. Surviving him are wife, three brothers, Thomas, Joshua, and Joseph; and two foster daughters, Eva and Rosa. He was ordained a teacher September 16, 1906, by Herbert S. Lytle and Henry L. Kinning. He was faithful to the end and has entered a well-earned rest. Funeral held in the Saints' church by Joseph Lane, of Pisgah, Iowa; assisted by J. E. Butts of Decatur, Nebraska. Interment in the Decatur Cemetery.

The days when the wandering minstrel sang his song and told his story by the yuletide board in the manor hall, and master and men, mistress and maids wept and laughed together, is gone for ever. The sage, the story teller, the singer of songs no longer stops on his gypsy way to make us merry and strengthen the bond of brotherhood with tears. But into our homes there comes a guest, as gay, as sad, as full of human sympathy and human fire as ever sat by a blazing hearth and strummed his battered harp. The story writer touches the source of human emotion in the swarming life about him, and sends into a million homes his message of laughter and of tears.—Collier's Weekly.

Be thou chaste as ice, as pure as snow—thou shalt not escape calumny.—Shakespeare.

As for the dispute about society and solitude, any comparison is impertinent. It is an idling down on the plain at the base of the mountain instead of climbing steadily to its top. Of course you will be glad of all the society you can get to go up with? Will you go to glory with me? is the burden of the song. It is not that we love to be alone, but that we love to soar, and when we do soar the company grows thinner and thinner till there is none at all. It is either the tribune on the plain, a sermon on the mount, or a very private ecstasy still higher up. Use all the society that will abet you.—Thoreau.

Horace's Ode to a Fawn.

Wooer of young Nymphs who fly thee
Lightly o'er my sunlit lawn,
Trip, and, go, nor injured by thee
Be my weaning herds, O Fawn.

If the kid his doomed head bows, and Brimms with wine the loving cup,
When the year is full, and thousand
Scents from altars hoar go up.

Each flock in the rich grass gambols
When the month comes which is thine;
And the happy village rambles
Fieldward with the idle kine.

Lambs play on, the wolf their neighbor;
Wild woods deck thee with their spoil;
And with glee the sons of labor
Stamp upon their foe the soil.

—Translation of C. E. Calverley.

If a man be endued with a generous mind, this is the best kind of nobility.—Plato.

A New Edition of the Doctrine and Covenants

By order of General Conference a committee was appointed to correct all typographical errors, also Section 22 of the Doctrine and Covenants. This has been done and the book is now ready. It contains a valuable addition in the form of a new concordance. All the revelations up to date are included. You will need this edition.

Order

- No. 94, cloth.....$ .65
- No. 95, full leather..... 1.00
- No. 96, imitation morocco, gilt edges.. 1.50
- No. 97, full morocco, flexible..... 2.50

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

A New Book of Sermons

The Gospel Messenger

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH

Everyone that knows Elder Roth—and many that do not—know that he is a very successful missionary and an excellent preacher. This book of his sermons—thirty-five of them—covers so wide a range of subjects and does it so thoroughly that you need it for your own information, and to lend to your investigating neighbor.

Elder Roth is always a preacher for the people; uses enough scripture to make his utterances authoritative, tells where to find it, yet doesn't tire the reader with too much monotony. Quotations and citations have been verified.

The autobiography of the author is a valuable feature of the book.

Through the generosity of Elder Roth we are enabled to offer this well-printed, nicely arranged, and well-bound book at the nominal sum of 75c. Order No. 248a.

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

Herald Publishing House

$100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

These Bonds will be ready to issue on the 1st of April, 1912.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further Particulars

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 5, 1913

NUMBER 6

Editorial

IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE.

I do not know whether this is scripture, strictly speaking, but it ought to be if it is not, to use the language of an elder who once criticized the editor's quotation; "If there is anything sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child." Our reason for quoting this and calling attention to it is this.

For the last three months the Senior Editor has been in the passive condition of helping others to realize how extremely blessed it is to give; for he has been the constant recipient of mementos—things good to see, things good to receive and make use of—a few of which he proposes to name in this article.

The argument is this: If it is more blessed to give than to receive, and the Senior Editor with a great many others has been the means of giving this kind of pleasure and blessedness to those who had a desire to give and make cheerful, an acknowledgment now and then would not only comfort those who gave, but would in a sense discharge an obligation to those who were kindly interested in blessing others.

It has already been mentioned in the columns of the HERALD that a reception was awarded the Chief Editor as Editor and as President of the Church, at his birthday anniversary, and it needs only to be referred to as one in counting our blessings o'er and o'er. Following this the Christmas season brought almost numberless cards and letters of sympathy, condolence, and comfort from all over the world. Many of these were accompanied with articles of more or less value intrinsically, but mainly valuable because of the spirit in which they were sent.

Among these the Editor takes pleasure in mentioning having received at the hands of the British Isles Saints a magnificent staff or "walking stick," of the Malacca type, excellently mounted with a silver band, bearing the inscription of presentation from the British Isles Saints, with the date of its sending.

It was received on the last day of the year and had been mentioned in a letter written by Brother Rodrick May as having been sent. The letter and staff were received the same day. Why mention this? One reason for it, so far as we are concerned, is this; that the committee who had been appointed to make selection of a staff followed the sentiment and philosophy of the Nation and secured what they called a solid, well-appointed staff, for absolute and everyday service, strong and serviceable, rather than simply as a parade staff. The staff, like the monuments of British law and British buildings, is characterized by its solidity, its adaptation to the object for which it was intended to serve, to abide while other and flimsier things will go down in the warfare. We greet the British Isles Saints in their expression of fervent regard and love, and notice that it is not confined to one-district, but includes the whole staff of workers, elders and Saints, together.

Later mementos have reached us from Brother and Sister Rees Jenkins. An old-fashioned stamp for sealing with a mother-of-pearl handle for the Editor, and to his companion a string of beads such as are worn in the Holy Land by the natives thereof. They were sent from Jerusalem and were brought to the Editor's house by two lads, one the son of Brother H. W. Goold, the presiding elder of the South Side Independence Branch, and the son of Sister Carr, a sister of Brother Goold, who came from Jerusalem after the death of her husband some little time since.

We take pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of these with other mementos of sentiment and esteem which have been received by us during the last three months, and extend the honors east and west, north and south, accepting the sentiments of esteem expressed by them, and greeting them with the same loyalty as coworkers as we have enjoyed in the times that have passed. We are not ashamed of our association, and we are thankful to God that so far the history of our life has been such that we can answer cheerfully to these expressions of regard sent by others. Surely no one can find fault with us for being passive recipients and helping others to enjoy the greater blessing of giving.

A WORTHY WORKMAN DEPARTED.

The news from the field is not always pleasant and encouraging. We have the lights and the shadows, the joys and the sorrows, the pleasures and the labor; all coming from the same field.

January 23 a phone message greeted the Senior Editor, announcing the death of Elder W. S. Pender, one of the workers in the field. A few years ago a conference call was made for some young elders to undertake the study of the Spanish language, with a view to work in Mexico and among the Latins of the South. To this request, so far as the field was concerned, W. S. Pender and W. H. Mannering responded. Brother Pender was the older of the two in the field, and we had met him in 1905 at Vancouver and Westminster, British Columbia, where he and his wife were earnestly engaged in the work, and had been coadjutors with others there.

Brother Pender was in failing health then, but with a devotion seldom equaled, and excelled by none, he offered himself in connection with Brother Mannering for the southern field, accepting the appointment with a view to the study of the Spanish language, with which understanding these missions were given. It so happened that the mission of these brethren fell in the period of the serious revolt in Mexico against the Diaz government, which resulted in the installation of General Madero as president of the Mexican republic, and there has been nothing but a political intrigue and a reign of insurgency ever since.

Brother Pender's health kept failing him, though he succeeded in securing to an extent a knowledge of the Spanish language. Neither of these families had children, and Brother Pender's labors had brought him into middle life. Brother Mannering and his wife are left to prosecute his intended purpose to study the Spanish language, as we sincerely hope. No more sincere and devoted workers have been or are in the field than Brother and Sister Pender, and so far as we understood, their strength was nobly seconded by Brother Mannering and his wife. They were at Torreon and were shut in when that city was besieged and bombarded, and they were compelled to change their location once during the siege, as the thin walls of the buildings of the almost tropical climate were not calculated to repel the explosive shells nor the insurgent rifle bullets, which sometimes went through the frail casements.

They escaped harm and really achieved some degree of success, but the experience as a whole has shown us clearly that the gospel can not be successfully propagated in an area of country swept by internecine warfare. Wherever Brother Pender's name is mentioned, let this devoted fact of his life and his associate, Brother Mannering, in endeavoring to obtain knowledge of the Spanish language, urge some others of our younger men to obtain the same mastery of the language would be our sincere hope.

THE FUNCTION OF JUDGING.

Jesus is reported to have said: "Judge not, that ye be not judged."—Matthew 7: 1, King James Version.

What is meant by this commandment? Did Jesus mean that we must not form an opinion of men and measures? That we must belong to the "know nothings"? Evidently not, for his word makes it obligatory upon us to judge of many things, including individuals and their character and conduct. He says we are to be "wise servants," yet as "harmless as doves."

We are obliged, in self-defense, and in defense of those intrusted to our care, to form an opinion of those whom we admit to our homes. There are men who are not fit to be given shelter for a single night under the same roof that shields growing children. It is not safe to admit them to the home. They make it their business secretly to corrupt the morals of the young, and are as dangerous as a rattlesnake. To overlook evidence that a man has such a character, and in the absence of repentance and reformation, admit him to the home circle, would be blind folly. True, we are to work for the reformation and reclamation of those who are lost. But this work must be done along lines commended by common sense and the law.

Evil has a potent, corrupting influence. It can be resisted only by active, intelligent righteousness. And the young and inexperienced have not yet developed that stanch character that "resists all evil." They must be protected by more mature judgment.

If a rotten apple and a sound apple are placed side by side in a dark cellar, the sound apple does not regenerate the rotten one. To the contrary, the rotten one corrupts the other.

An active, developed, corrupt character has more power than an undeveloped, inactive, good character. So parents and teachers and others who may have oversight of young people are often obliged to form an opinion of men and women, and it is to the interest of those under their protection that this judgment shall be astute and correct.

In business we are obliged to judge men, as to their honesty and merit. And even charity that is bestowed without discrimination is now mostly regarded as a curse rather than a blessing. It encourages pauperism rather than diminishes it. While in the church we are constantly required to judge, if to consider men's conduct, character, and record, and form an opinion of them, is to judge.

SUSTAINING CHURCH OFFICERS.

Every time we are called upon to pass upon the question of sustaining church officers at the General Conference, or stake or district conference, we must, in a sense, and a very broad sense, too, judge as to their worthiness to occupy,—considering their ability, morals, activity, sincerity, etc. When we think of it, this mental scrutiny under which a man must pass in his church work, being inspected from all possible angles, by thousands of different, intelligent entities, who broodingly watch him and form conclusions, has a sobering influence, and can have a beneficent result only when the majority have learned to judge wisely, along righteous lines, thus reaching correct conclusions.

So long as common consent obtains in the church, public officers are safe only when the majority of the members are capable of sound, righteous, impartial judgment. And it is equally true that the members and the church in general are safe only on the same condition. In a religious democracy, such as the church is, to an extent, every member, within certain lines, must be a judge, and the safety and growth of all require that he shall be a just judge.

ELECTING BRANCH OFFICERS.

Certain matters God himself has intrusted to the judgment of men. Such, for instance, as the choice of branch officers, or officers for the local church. He has designated certain men, many of them, for the priesthood. But when we come to select one of these to occupy as an officer of a branch in any capacity it rests with us to make the selection, judging as to ability and merit. In some branches individuals have attempted to settle the matter by private revelation, claiming by dream, vision, tongue, or prophecy to indicate the one to be chosen. That is not God's way. In most instances such attempts have resulted disastrously. The matter is not to be settled by a "thus saith the Lord," coming from whomsoever may choose to attempt to settle it in that way. These officers are as a rule to be elected. Under certain conditions members may be guided in their choice by advice of those by law placed in authority, or by action of appointing authorities, as in large branches where pastors are supplied by conference appointment; yet the matter of final selection and election ordinarily rests with the people, under normal conditions. At such time of selection, judgment and discrimination must be exercised. The worthy and able must be recognized; also the incapacitated and the unworthy.

JESUS A GOOD JUDGE OF MEN.

Jesus himself was a very good judge of men. No man need "tell him what was in man." In a matter of choosing twelve men, he secured eleven truly remarkable men, as their history shows, and he was not at all deceived by the twelfth, who proved recreant to his high calling. He understood the Pharisees, and knew just how to meet the sophistry of the lawyers. He could tell the character of Nathaniel at a glance. He knew just when to say, "Go thy way and sin no more." He could detect the character of the "leaven of the Pharisees," and did not hesitate to warn against it.

THE INSPIRED VERSION.

As is so often the case, the Inspired Version of the Bible comes to our rescue, and gives us a correct understanding of what Jesus really said in the text that we have quoted. Properly rendered it reads:

"Judge not unrighteously, that ye be not judged; but judge righteous judgment."

What is unrighteous judgment? It is harsh, uncharitable, unkind, suspicious judgment, that takes stock in the slanderous tales that circulate in nearly every community.

What is righteous judgment? It is kind, charitable, intelligent judgment, based on facts. It is that kind of judgment that we would wish to have other men exercise toward us—golden-rule judgment.

IT IS OUR DUTY TO FORGIVE ALL MEN.

In cases where injury is done to us in any way, we can hardly ignore the facts in the case. We can scarcely avoid forming some estimate of the character of the persons involved. But this does not mean that we are to hold the incident against them, and cherish hard and revengeful feelings. The world always says: "Get even." But God has a different plan. He says:

I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men; and ye ought to say in your hearts, Let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds.—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 2.

Even when the injury is of such nature that it must be adjusted by the officers of the church, perhaps involving a church trial, the preferring of charges, and all that follows, we as individuals are to forgive the one who has injured us. The church executes the law; but we, individually, must forgive.

There are absolutely no circumstances under which we are justified in holding hatred or malice toward our brethren. Absolutely none!

Jesus himself set the example. He lived his own philosophy.

They slandered, persecuted, and misrepresented him, so that he suffered all that a sensitive man could suffer from such treatment. Then they took and scourged him, adding physical agony to mental suffering. They insulted him in every vile way, and finally hung him upon the cross. Had he broken forth then in maledictions upon them it would have been human. But that would have ended the work of Jesus. But he did nothing of the kind. He held to his divine philosophy of forgiveness, and prayed, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

On a certain occasion, when Jesus was journeying toward Jerusalem to be offered up, he sought lodging in a village of the Samaritans. But the Samaritans hated the Jews so that they would not keep him over night, simply because he was heading toward Jerusalem. This so incensed the disciples that they said: "Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them?" That was humanity asserting itself. They would have revenge.

But Jesus said: "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." Our mission is to save,—to reconcile. It is not to take vengeance and destroy. Vengeance belongs to God, to seek it is not our function.

INDIVIDUALLY WE MUST NOT JUDGE TRANSGRESSORS OF THE LAW.

You will notice that in the cases indicated we judge men as to their merit or ability to occupy in places of trust, or to receive our confidence and friendship, or as to their need of charity or financial help, or something of a kindred nature.

But there are limits and bounds to our right to judge. In all those cases where men commit offenses against church law, whether of an individual or general nature, or are accused of committing such offenses, judgment does not belong to the individual. In all such cases judgment as to guilt or innocence rests with the courts that are appointed to attend to such work. They have the authority; we have not. They can judge; we can not.

WHERE THE COURTS ARE IGNORED.

We have in mind the case of one branch where one of the branch officers was charged with a grave offense. Did the members await the verdict of the court? No, they proceeded to try the case, each for himself. About half of them decided that he was guilty, and the other half decided that he was innocent; for some heard one side and some heard the other; while few indeed heard both sides. That is the function of a court; a court hears both sides. So they fell to quarrelling, and split the branch in two so that it was very nearly destroyed. That will be the result, to a greater or lesser extent, every time when the members attempt to judge in such cases.

God has appointed courts to judge; the church sustains these courts for that purpose. This is based on common sense. It is impossible to get the members of a branch or district all together to sit and hear all the evidence from both sides and judge the case on its merits. It is not practicable, even if they had the authority. So courts are established to give these matters attention, and the branch or district, or the church at large, delegates authority to them to hear the case and bring in a verdict. The members are to suspend judgment and wait for the verdict and be guided by it as to their final action; for the matter of "binding on earth," or the reverse, comes back finally to the church.

VERDICT OF COURTS MUST BE ACCEPTED, SUBJECT TO APPEAL.

So we have this apparent anomaly that the verdict of an elders' court is one thing on which the vote must be affirmative. This we say appears to be an anomaly; but in fact it is based on sound reasons, and is no exception to the rule of common consent.

In a certain branch the verdict of an elders' court was brought in. Certain members of the branch insisted that a negative vote should prevail. The person on trial had been found guilty and they were determined to defeat the findings of the court. He was their personal friend; and they did not subscribe to the teachings of the Master: "If thy hand or foot offend thee, cut it off and cast it from thee; for it is better to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. . . . And a man's hand is his friend, and his foot, also."—Matthew 18: 7, 9, I. T.

They insisted that all things must be done by "common consent." The facts are that the entire church, in General Conference assembled, by common consent has decided that the findings of an elders' court must be accepted, subject of course to appeal to a higher court, and must be respected until reversed by a higher court.

That being the case, to take the negative vote on the findings would be but an idle form, since the branch is bound to accept the findings, subject to appeal by interested persons, and so the authorities have frequently ruled that the negative vote should not be taken on the findings of the court; though if a penalty is recommended the matter should be divided, and a negative vote may be taken on the question of penalty.

Upon presentation to the branch, or other body, of the findings of any court authorized to try any cause of action, it is the duty of such branch, or body, to sustain the findings of the court until such time as the parties to the action shall appeal, if they desire to do so, to a higher court and the action shall be reversed. . . . The branch, or other body, upon the presentation of the findings of an elders' court should at once sustain the findings, always with the permission to any party in interest to seek his redress before the higher court by appeal.—Court Procedure, adopted by General Conference of 1908.

The clause herein that relates to the action of the church on receiving the report of a court shall be construed to mean that the findings of the court shall be affirmed; but should said court recommend a penalty, the vote to affirm the findings, and the vote to adopt the recommendations, should be taken separately, and that upon the penalty shall be taken on both the affirmative and the negative sides . . . the verdict of the elders' court should be sustained when presented, and any party aggrieved, or dissatisfied with the findings, must for redress appeal to the proper courts, authorized under the law, to hear and pass upon such findings.—Rules of Order and Debate, p. 94.

While pleading for common consent to obtain, these persons were in fact seeking to oppose their will, or at most the will of one little branch, to the common consent of the whole church.

If an individual is found guilty, it is his privilege to appeal to a higher court. But the members of the branch, even though they may feel friendly toward him as an individual, must accept the verdict of the court and abide by it until it is reversed by a higher court. For the court has been authorized to hear the case. Members of the branch could intelligently reject the findings only after having heard all the evidence and the pleas on both sides; and this they can not do, and for that very reason have referred the matter to the court, and are consequently, as a matter of fact, disqualified from reaching a reverse decision. But if they distrust the decision, appeal is open.

While in the case of a verdict of "not guilty," when the branch is the one bringing action against an individual, for the same reasons before stated the branch must accept the verdict. Only in this case appeal can be taken by the branch only on condition that fraud or collusion shall be charged against the court.

In all cases where the court, upon proper inquiry, finds the accused not guilty, or that there is no just cause for action, the decision is to be final except where fraud and collusion are duly charged in the trial on complaint before a higher court, when such court may upon satisfactory proofs being offered, examine into the case anew, and issue such order as shall accord with the facts, and no member against whom charge has been made, so examined and decided as herein provided, shall otherwise be liable to further action upon such charge and offense.—Rules of Order and Debate, p. 99.

The branch can not repudiate the action of its own agent, so long as that agent retains integrity. The branch can not question the judgment of its own agent on a matter which the branch is incompetent to judge. But if it is evident that fraud, collusion, or partiality has entered in to defeat justice, then the way is open to enter a higher tribunal, prove this fraud or collusion, and secure an adjustment and proper hearing.

CONCLUSION.

We have endeavored to bring out three leading points:

First. We are not forbidden to judge in some matters; indeed we are forced to reach conclusions regarding men and measures; the safety of the body and of individuals depends upon the ability of the majority of the people to reach just and intelligent conclusions; this judgment is to be righteous in all things.

Second. Though we may be conscious of wrong done to us individually, and may correctly estimate that wrong, we are required to forgive all men; we must not, under any conceivable circumstances, hold hardness against our brethren, even when they are in error.

Third. Our right of judgment is to be exercised within bounds limited by law and reason; in cases of alleged violation of law, requiring action, the legally appointed courts are to judge; in such cases individuals must suspend judgment and await the verdict of the court, and act in accord with it; such findings must be accepted, subject to appeal as governed by law; action in harmony with this rule will bring good results, defiance of it will bring anarchy and discord.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

MRS. GEORGE W. COLEMAN.—The Fall River (Massachusetts) Evening News, of January 22, contains an account of a lecture in that city on Tuesday evening, January 21, by Mrs. George W. Coleman, of Boston, president of the Massachusetts Council for Patriotic Service. Her subject was, "The dangers of Mormonism." She dealt largely with stories of how Mormon elders seek to get women converts, and with polygamous conditions in Utah. In the same issue of the News appeared a communication from Brother H. O. Smith, who is pastor of the Fall River Branch. He called attention to church differences, and a resumé of our church history, and closed with a statement of our position and a strong plea for a constitutional amendment forbidding the practice of polygamy.

BROTHER WILLIAM H. KELLEY.—Word comes from the brother that he is improving and "pulling along towards normal again."

We are in receipt of a letter from Elder Hubert Case, written from Woodard, Oklahoma, January 20. He incloses three interesting photos. One shows a group of Indian converts; another pictures Brethren Case and Christensen in camp; the third shows four Indian elders, all ordained and at work preaching the restored gospel. These are: Reuben Taylor, Leonard Tyler, Chief Three Fingers, and Phillip Cook. Brother Case had just organized a branch with thirty-three members. He has written a tract addressed to the Indians that will appear in the HERALD shortly, and later in tract form.

Hymns and Poems

Selected and Original

In Memory of W. C. Nirk.

I am dreaming to-night of the days that are past;
Of the days that are gone, and dead;
My heart is aching, my tears falling fast;
On sorrow I pillow my head.

Oh, beautiful days when dear grandpa was here!
Oh, loved one now gone from our sight!
Oh, draw us, dear Savior, by thy mercy near,
And comfort our hearts to-night.

I see thee, dear brother, as oft we did meet
To study the Savior's word,
I hear thy dear voice with its accents sweet,
The sweetest that ever I heard.

Asleep, asleep, in a slumber deep,
At rest with the ransomed and blest!
From thy labors on earth, thou hast gone to reap
At the goal of thy soul's long quest.

RHODES, IOWA.

PEARL ANWAY.

Waiting.

Lord, I, a weak and weary Saint,
Come humbly to thy feet;
My cross is heavy and I faint;
Oh, help me, I entreat.

The journey's long, and rough the ground
My weary feet have trod;
Few earthly oases I've found,
In traveling home to God.

Extend thine arms of love divine,
And take me to thy breast,
To feel, dear Lord, that I am thine,
Will bring sweet peace and rest.

But that blest power which did me save,
And oft my spirit thrills,
Still lights my path and makes me brave
To bear a thousand ills.

Soon comes the rest beyond compare,
In mansions built above,
To dwell with God for ever there,
O'ershadowed by his love.

ONSET, MASSACHUSETTS.

JAMES L. EDWARDS.

Original Articles

THE SECOND OFFENSE.

THE STATEMENTS OF THE LAW.—WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out; but he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive; but if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 7, middle portion of the paragraph.

What is meant by "the second offense," is made plain by the statements of the law just quoted. When one has been properly tried before a legally constituted church tribunal, and found guilty, it is case number one, and the first offense; and when the same party, tried in like manner, but at a later date, is found guilty of repeating the crime, it is case number two, and the second offense.

The point at issue, which is an important one, and one upon which there is some difference of opinion, is this: After the party has been found guilty of the second offense, can he properly come back into the church by repentance and baptism? Some believe that he can, while others believe that he can not.

It must be conceded, I think, that the language of the law is quite plain and specific; but we get into trouble when we try to go beyond what is expressed in the law, and especially when we move in opposition to what is already revealed.

Concerning the one who is found guilty of the first offense, the Lord specifically says: "And he that committeth adultery and repenteth not, shall be cast out"; but it does not say, "he shall not be forgiven." "But he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive."

Here we are plainly told when (that is, under what conditions,) we shall forgive, and when we shall not forgive. When the second offense has been committed, repentance ceases, and forgiveness is at an end. To extend forgiveness after this, is to do it without any warrant found in the law, and in opposition to the law. But, of course, we need to understand what forgiveness means, and what it does not mean, as herein used.

Now, after confessing his guilt and making a solemn promise before God and the church that he will do it no more, he repeats this terrible crime with its terrible consequences! Now what does the Lord say concerning him? "He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out." Not one word about repentance, and forgiveness is positively forbidden. The Lord finds no place for his repentance. Shall we try to fine one? In the first offense, the Lord

Doctor B. O. Flower, president of the National League for Medical Freedom, and Irving Fisher, professor of political economy at Yale, will take sides in the February Century on the subject of the Owen Bill, which calls for a National Department of Health—a measure that is attacked by Christian Scientists and others who declare that it is aimed at their liberties.

tells us, plainly, under what conditions we may forgive, but in the second offense, where it is much more needed, if the opposite view be a correct one, he does not so much as intimate that he can come back at all!

This revelation from which we have quoted contains a record of the law which was and is to govern the church till Jesus comes to rule and reign over his people. (See Doctrine and Covenants 41: 1, 2; 42: 1; 85: 5.) In this law, all the sins found in the catalogue are mentioned and condemned, in specific or general terms. Two of them, the second offense of adultery, and killing, are unpardonable. And all those of mature years, who are intelligent readers of history, both sacred and profane, need not be told that these two sins have always been closely associated. The first frequently leads to the second.

But let us notice what the Lord says of them. Of the first, as we have already seen, he says, "He shall not be forgiven"; and of the second, "Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come." (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 6, 7.)

And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 21.

A few pertinent and significant questions will throw light on the subject. Those who accept the opposite view of this question must believe, with us, that the guilty one is "cast out" in an unrepentant and unforgiven condition, or that, although he has truly repented, the Lord will not accept his repentance.

First. Why does the Lord command that he (the guilty one) "shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out"?

Second. In case he can and does repent, before he is cast out, why is it that the Lord will not accept his repentance, then, but at a later date, he will accept it?

Third. If it be said, He can not truly and sincerely repent, because he must pay the penalty of being cast out, then, we ask, How long will the penalty attach? Upon what seems to be a fair claim of repentance, can he come back into the church the next day, or week, or month? If so, what has been gained, either for the church or the transgressor, by casting him out?

Fourth. Why did the Lord give such particular instructions as to what we must do with the guilty one, and then, while he is yet in our hands and may ask for admission into the church at any time, leave us without one word of instruction?

All this seems to indicate, very plainly, that the design of God is to leave the guilty party right where the expressed terms of the law leave him; that is, unforgiven and outside of the pales of the church. There is, without doubt, good and sufficient reason why it should be so, else it would not have been so ordered.

OBJECTIONS CONSIDERED.

First. It is claimed that our position is in conflict with the teaching of the gospel, which requires us to forgive all men, and that without limitation or conditions.

If this be true, why not forgive him before he is cast out, and especially so when he puts forth the claim of repentance? But the law says, without any reference to confession and repentance. "He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out."

Second. "That means," says the objector, "that we are not to forgive him at that time, but afterwards we may."

Parenthetical words, phrases, and sentences are sometimes useful and permissible, and sometimes they are not. When used to throw additional light upon what is already indicated, they serve a good purpose; but when used to add to and change what is already indicated, they are neither useful nor permissible.

Forgiveness, permit us to say, is of two kinds. First, personal or individual forgiveness, without any reference to the administration of the law. This kind requires us to forgive all men, without any regard to the conditions imposed on the wrongdoer, or to limitations of time. But we will let the Doctrine and Covenants explain itself.

My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, [italics mine] and for this evil they were afflicted, and sorely chastened; wherefore I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another, for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespass, standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin. I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men; and ye ought to say in your hearts, Let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds. And he that repenteth not of his sins, and confesseth them not, then ye shall bring him before the church, and do with him as the scriptures saith unto you, either by commandment, or by revelation. And this ye shall do that God might be glorified, not because ye forgive not, having not compassion, but that ye may be justified in the eyes of the law, that ye may not offend him who is your Lawgiver.—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 2, latter part of the paragraph.

This divine instruction places the matter before us in excellent shape, and leads us right up to the second kind of forgiveness; namely, what we will term legal forgiveness. We must have compassion on the erring ones, and in our hearts forgive them, but at the same time, if they will not confess and repent, they must be delivered up to the church to be dealt with according to the law of the church.

Why? "That God might be glorified"; that we "may be justified in the eyes of the law"; "that" we "may not offend him who is" our "Lawgiver." Strong reasons these, and they ought to satisfy all who claim to have faith in God.

As ministers and members of the church of God, we are required to be compassionate and forgive all from the heart; but as administrators of the law, we can only forgive in accordance with the terms of the law. Where God says, in the law of the church, "forgive," we must forgive, not only from the heart, but in a legal sense; and where God says, "He shall not be forgiven," we must not forgive him; that is, in a legal sense, and as administrators of the law.

It is easily seen that the forgiveness spoken of in Doctrine and Covenants 42:7, is of a legal character, and in nowise conflicts with that forgiveness of the heart which is required of all the Saints, always, everywhere, and under all conditions.

Third. "But," says the objector, "when we deal with members of the church for other transgressions, we receive them back, under proper conditions, although there is no special provision of law to justify this practice. Why not, then, receive back anyone who has been found guilty of the second offense of adultery?"

The answer is easy. The cases are not parallel. If the objector can find one or more places where we have been instructed, when dealing with the members of the church for these "other transgressions," not to forgive, but cast them out, then, clearly, the same law will apply as in the second offense of adultery. This law applies to parallel cases, but not to dissimilar ones.

Fourth. We are told that there is no gospel in our position. The gospel says, "Come," and we say, "He shall not come."

This is begging the question. If the law, given of God, prohibits their coming back, then it is not we, but God, who says, "They shall not come." If the law does not prohibit them from coming back into the church, let it be shown.

In Doctrine and Covenants 42:20, we read: "But if ye shall find that any persons have left their companions for the sake of adultery, and they themselves are the offenders, and their companions are living, they shall be cast out from among you."

Is there any invitation to "come" in this statement? Is there any gospel in it?

In paragraph 21 we are instructed to deliver up to the laws of the land any persons found guilty of killing; and we are bidden to remember that for such persons there is "no forgiveness." If capital punishment is in vogue where they are delivered up, they are very liable to be executed for their crime. Is there any invitation to "come" in this instruction? It is not harsh for us to ask those who use these objections, to tell us if there is any gospel in this word of the Lord to us. We do it in all kindness, that these objections may be legitimately removed.

Paragraph 20, referred to above, not only instructs the church to cast out those who leave their companions for the sake of adultery, when they themselves are the offenders, but it also says the following: "And again I say unto you, that ye shall be watchful and careful [italics mine], with all inquiry, that ye receive none such among you if they are married, and if they are not married, they shall repent of all their sins, or ye shall not receive them."

Notice, please, that in the cases herein cited, not one word is said about the condition of repentance, except concerning those who are guilty of fornication and are not married. These may come into the church, if they repent. So it is very plain, we think, that we may get ourselves into a condition where we can not repent, because there is found no place for repentance.

Fifth. Another objection which has been made to do duty is fairly stated in this way, and is founded upon the teaching of Christ: "There is but one sin for which there is no forgiveness, and that is the sin against the Holy Ghost."

We kindly remind those who use this objection that until the sin against the Holy Ghost is properly defined, and it is proved that the second offense of adultery is no part of that sin, the objection is without force. This has not been done, nor is there any probability that it will be done.

The sin against the Holy Ghost, as we understand it, is the "sin unto death," of which John says, "I do not say he shall pray for it." (1 John 5:16.) It is a denial of Christ and his gospel, in word, or in act, or both. We may as effectually deny Christ and the righteousness of God revealed in the gospel, by deeds of unrighteousness, as by word only. Surely no one will deny this.

It is true, according to Matthew 12:31, 32; Mark 3:28-30; Luke 12:10; that Jesus taught that speaking against the Holy Ghost is unpardonable sin; but he did not claim this to be the only sin that is unpardonable. Had he done so, there would be a direct conflict between Christ in the New Testament and Christ in the Doctrine and Covenants; for, as we have seen, the latter book says, "And he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come"; and of the one guilty of the second offense of adultery, it says, "He shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out."

The New Testament record shows that Jesus was answering the Pharisees who claimed that he had an "unclean spirit," and that he cast out devils "by Beelzebub the prince of devils." (Mark 3:30; Matthew 12:24.) Jesus shows that in setting up that illogical, unscriptural, and false claim, they were sinning against the Holy Ghost.

In Doctrine and Covenants 76: 4, we have a more complete description of the sin against the Holy Ghost, in its entirety. It is defined as follows: "To deny the truth and defy my power"; to deny "the Holy Spirit, after having received it"; to deny "the only begotten Son of the Father."

There are few, if any, sins found in the catalogues of sin and crime, which will more quickly and effectually move its adherents away from God, and Christ, and the gospel, than the crime of adultery, especially if one has become so steeped in the abomination as to be found guilty of what is known to the church as the "second offense."

Every sin for which there is no forgiveness, is a sin against the Holy Ghost, and all of them, put together, constitute the sin against the Holy Ghost, in its entirety.

What God does, or authorizes to be done, is always the best that can be done for all concerned, under existing conditions. It is, therefore, a most excellent and important thing to "have faith in God." God does not forget the poor, unfortunate transgressor, nor does he forget the needed protection and purity of his church.

Speaking for myself (and I believe for a large class of intelligent and God-fearing men and women), I am more and more confirmed in the belief, that God has directed that these poor unfortunates, steeped in crime of the most debasing character, should be left just where we should be willing to leave them, namely, outside of the church of God, unrepentant and unforgiven. J. R. LAMBERT.

* * * * *

NEW OPENINGS; THEIR VALUE; GENERAL SUGGESTIONS.

No. 3, "Methods and Tactics" Series.

The importance of making new openings must not be overlooked by the church. The tendency is to follow the beaten track. The line of least resistance is most pleasant. But to yield to this easy-going policy is fatal. The "missionary spirit" that sends men out into untried fields after the lost sheep is the spirit that keeps the church alive. There are those who are called and qualified to feed the sheep; there are others whose calling is to push out into the wilderness and find the sheep. The pioneer and the pastor each has his work. Neither must neglect his calling. In most cases the ministers in charge in their reports to the last General Conference reported a gratifying number of new openings made by themselves and the force under them. It is to be hoped that the number will increase this year. We can not hope to meet with the great success that crowned the work during its infancy, for the "dark and cloudy day" left a record that we must meet, and left difficulties for the Reorganization that the church in its infancy never dreamed of. But the greater the difficulty the greater the effort that we should put forth. With God's help we can do all that is required of us, for he asks nothing impossible of any man. And he has told us to move out into new fields and lift up the warning voice. When we do this, we can afford to leave the results with him. It rests with us to do this and do it in the manner best calculated to bring success. Others of the active missionary force will be heard on this important subject during the year.—EDITOR:

The great burden, as yet unaccomplished, time and time again imposed upon the church, is the fulfilling of the commandment, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." That task, relentless and inexorable, has been scarcely commenced, in so far as the Reorganization is concerned.

The moment that missionary work ceases to be the outstanding occupation of the church, sterility sets in, barrenness results, and it is only a question of time when her vitalizing generative powers are paralyzed. No longer will she be able to bear spiritual children after the family of God, and as in former times, she hastens to the wilderness of degeneracy and formality.

The effecting of new openings, always an accompaniment of missionary work, stands in the same relationship to the church as the underwriting of new business to the insurance society. Without it the church goes down. An everflowing stream of converts must be enlisted to insure permanency and stability. Growth to the child is but an evidence of health, of life. Stagnation is a symbol of disease, a precursor of death; and it is absolutely essential to our young and rising church that it continually add to its proportions through the increase of its membership. To foster this development new openings are a necessity.

It is utterly impossible for the church to maintain a spiritual existence unless engaged as the Master has directed. The promise of his presence is only on condition that she "Go into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature, . . . and lo, I am with you," etc.

When a nation ceases to advance it begins to recede. Britain's greatness was acquired through a policy of push, and the broad expanse of the United States was only attained by the careful and concerted action of the Nation, taking advantage of every possible opening.

On the other hand, the national inertia of Spain and Turkey in the sixteenth century bred the leprosy of indolence, and they have been rotting away ever since.

The church has invariably been successful in the prosecution of missionary work, but in the pursuit of every other ambition she has just as often been foiled and defeated. In the exploitation of temporal things she has proved to be a pigmy, but in the administration of the spiritual, she is an intellectual giant. For her, there is no foe too fierce, no enemy too numerous, and no logic so strong but what she can defeat and demolish. They why not specialize with the talents at our command, making conquest of the rich fields of opportunity ready to enlist when they behold the strength of our position?

The field worked by the church in earlier years was one eminently missionary in its character. The preaching of the word at home and abroad, in the new fields ever widening before them, thrillingly engaged their attention, and oh, what wonderful results. Behold a ministry called from obscurity, and destitute of educational skill, yet attended by a power engaging and irresistible. Nothing could stand before them. It mattered not when bigotry scoffed and scandal sneered, the gospel must be preached, and that was their mission.

Within a few years following the organization of the church, it was preached throughout all parts of the United States and the Canadas. Astonishing success attended their efforts. On every hand congregations were raised up, and all testifying to the divinity of the work, for the Lord worked with them, confirming the word with signs following. In 1837 missionaries were sent to England, where a ready response awaited them. Within a few months thousands were baptized, and on into other lands pressed those missionary stalwarts. Scotland and Wales were warned, and later we find them in the nations of continental Europe; so mightily grew the word of God, and prevailed.

In this magnificent charge of truth against error, it must not be supposed that opposition sat silent. Everywhere the hue and cry were raised, "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also." But the severity of the conflict served but to contrast more clearly right and wrong. Error was uncovered and its nakedness laid bare, while truth, adorned with inspirational splendor, flashed with sudden and resistless force against her bulky antagonist, enfeebled with age and clumsy with creeds. And so it was,

"The pure testimony poured forth in the Spirit
Cut like a keen, two-edged sword,
And hypocrites now are most sorely tormented
Because they're condemned by the word."

Resultant of such a vigorous policy of pushing the work into new fields, extraordinary success followed, a success unparalleled in the history of any other religious movement. Some two hundred thousand were baptized within the short space of fourteen years.

As a Reorganization it was a noble inheritance that we entered upon in 1852, when to us was committed all the serviceable properties of the former organization.

True, those properties were not of a financial or temporal character, rather a spiritual, but just as real, and more necessary. We were inspired by its experiences, assisted by its examples, enriched by its revelations, enthused by its achievements, and warned by its waywardness. Since then, we have been further enriched with an accumulation of evidence from the researches of students, the discoveries of archaeologists, and from the confessions of our opponents, yet, notwithstanding all this legacy of learning, the shuddering confession must be made, that we haven't yet begun to occupy the fields of missionary service so successfully cultivated by our forefathers.

With the advent of 1912 the Reorganization celebrates her diamond jubilee. It was just sixty years ago that she launched upon the sea of missionary toil. We appreciate the progress that has been made, we rejoice in it, but as we survey the limited area of our operations we can not hide our faces to the fact that her success as a proselyter has not begun to compare with the triumphant achievements of the church of 1830. And this comparison becomes a contrast more painful, when we remember that the church of early times was but an infant in length of days in comparison with the church of 1852. Born amid the persecutions of Palmyra, cradled among the bulrushes of sectarian hate, it lived and waxed strong in spirit and in body, ever growing and developing until betrayed by Judases within and smitten by murderers without, it ended its youthful labors in the graveyard of Nauvoo, but fourteen summers old. Verily the church in its infancy was stronger than the church in its maturity.

And what does all this mean? Can it be that we are failing in our mission? That we are burdening ourselves with temporalities, forgetting that the particular calling of the church lies in the missionary field?

The policy of many of our eminent officers, as pursued at present, leads to the supposition that the days of missionary hardship are over; that the making of new openings is a thing of the past. Their time seems to be wholly taken up with preaching to the Saints, unwilling to depart from our own fireside. But this is wrong, as witness the recent revelation to the church, almost reproving in its construction:

The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the twelve and the seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 7.

The twelve and seventy administering as those prosecuting the work of preaching with the warning voice, baptizing, organizing and setting in order, then pushing their ministry into other fields until the world is warned. It is the will of God that they do this.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 8.

The blessing to be received by all who conform to the above counsel is surely worthy of our consideration. "They shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past." Again:

Yea, verily, thus saith the Spirit, If they will now enter upon this work, leaving the burden of care in organized districts, or conferences to the standing ministry, under the presidency of the church; observing the law already given to ordain and set high priests or elders to preside in large branches and in districts, and also evangelical ministers, then will those officers set in the church be useful and he who gave the law be honored; the differences between the quorums be healed, confidence be restored and good will and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 8.

Perhaps there is no proposition so engaging to our people as that of redeeming the land of Zion and occupying therein as a free and united people. But how and when is this to be accomplished? The Lord has told us, "Firstly let mine army become very great."—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 9.

In our present condition, impoverished financially, shattered numerically, and scattered organically, we may be gallant, but we are certainly not "very great."

The land of Zion must be purchased, which will require a purchasing power. And our only hope of ever acquiring this power lies in our converting "the forces of the Gentiles." This can only be effected through the means at our disposal, by making new openings. It is the only point of contact between Israelite and Gentile, and the only legitimate place of meeting between the church and the world. It is the market where we may dispose of our gospel wares, and in exchange receive the riches of the Gentiles; thus Zion will be redeemed.

The question of what subject we should preach on, in a new opening, is but secondary in importance. A hungry man is little concerned over any such discussion as, "Shall we use a knife or a fork?" Give him his "grub" and he'll find a way to transport it to his stomach. The main thing is to get connected up with the people, then turn on the power. Ours is a gospel of power more than a gospel of words, and it is for this that the world is starving.

The qualification essential to our ministry is not so much that they become ministers of verbal niceties; rather that they become ministers of the Spirit; leaving mediums through whom God can communicate his will.

It matters not how heavy the subject, nor how much in derision it may be held by the audience, a man of God has but to open his mouth and there shall roll forth that which shall illuminate the subject and electrify the audience. It is this "magnetic something" that the minister needs more than anything else. It is the Spirit of God. Under its influence the representative of Jesus Christ speaks with authority, an authority that controls, at times compels.

It was the preaching of Enoch, backed up by the power of God, that caused the fear of God to come on all nations, and that attested its truthfulness more than did anything else. "He spake the word of the Lord, and the earth trembled, and the mountains fled, even according to his command; and the rivers of water were turned out of their course, and the roar of the lions was heard out of the wilderness, and all nations feared greatly, so powerful was the word of Enoch, and so great was the power of language which God had forgiven him."—Doctrine and Covenants 36: 2.

So far as presenting the Book of Mormon in a new opening is concerned, it is all right if the Spirit so lead. The man of God appointed for the occasion should know whether that is the subject or not. If he doesn't, then the best thing for him to do is to go home and stay there until his soul is attuned to the reception of divine leadings.—"Neither take ye thought beforehand what ye shall say, but treasure up in your minds continually the words of life, and it shall be given you in the very hour that portion that shall be meted unto every man."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 14.

There is nothing radical in opening up a place with a sermon on the Book of Mormon. It may not be customary, but what of that? Custom is but a companion of tradition; the coward's creed, and a manacle of the mind. It was the new and unheard-of tactics of Napoleon, that won for him all his battles, while his custom-cultured antagonists were put to shame.

The Book of Mormon contains a message from God, revealing the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Is not that what the people need? "Oh! but it is that startling sensation created by mentioning the Book of Mormon that I don't like," says the objector. Yes! but that is a point in its favor. If it were a matter commonplace the people would treat it so and "custom"-like, pass it by.

But it was ever thus. Never was there messenger sent of God but who had a startling message to deliver. We have but to mention an Adam, an Enoch, a Noah, an Abraham, a Joseph, a Moses, an Elijah, a John the Baptist, and the Quorum of Twelve. Each and all had an unusual story to tell. Nothing like it before or since. As a matter of fact, the Lord never did accommodate his message to the social stupor of the age.

The preaching of the Book of Mormon is a necessity. It is the one great demonstration of the divinity in our work. Containing the plainness and fullness of the everlasting gospel, as no other publication does, we can not get along without it. The introduction of the Bible produced the reformation, but it takes a presentation of the Book of Mormon together with the Bible to accomplish the restoration.

"Oh, yes;" says one, "I know it's a necessity, but shouldn't it be kept back till the people learn other things?"

What "other things" more important than those contained in the Book of Mormon should the people learn first? The Book of Mormon is the backbone of our institution, the trunk line of our system. It is God's great message to man in these latter days. What? keep back such a message out of preference to something less important?

The fact that the Book of Mormon was translated and published before the church was organized is evidence that the Lord did not consider it a hindrance to the formation of that church; rather a necessity. It was the first stone laid in the foundation of the restoration, never a sermon being preached until after its introduction by the angel of the Lord. Who, then, in their efforts to establish the church in places new, will presume to reverse this divine system of proselyting by withholding the Book of Mormon until the last?

The Book of Mormon is the ensign of the Lord set up in these last days that "all inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth" may see it. It is indeed that gospel of Revelation 14: 6, as no other record is, and must be preached unto "every nation, kindred, tongue, and people." And shall we, the soldiers of the great King, waging an eternal war against sin and sectarianism, with its multitudinous disorders, keep that ensign in the rear? Never! Let it be carried to the front, where, situated between the enemy and us, it may point out the battle line, rallying the faithful to the fight.

DANIEL MACGREGOR.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The next number of this series will appear in our next issue and is entitled, "How we evangelized our city." The writer is Elder J. W. Peterson, and he deals with experiences in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

* * * * *

IS CAPITAL PUNISHMENT LAWFUL?

Is capital punishment or punishment by death for the crime of first degree murder, as defined by the laws of our country, justifiable? Are the governments of this world ready to abolish their laws of capital punishment? We desire to present a few scriptural references voicing the attitude of the great Lawgiver on this question at different times and to different peoples.

Immediately after the flood God spoke to Noah, saying, "And whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for a man shall not shed the blood of man. For a commandment I give, that every man's brother shall preserve the life of man, for in mine own image have I made man."—Genesis 9: 12, 13, Inspired Translation.

God repeated this pronouncement to Moses on Mount Sinai: "He that smiteth a man so that he die, shall be surely put to death."—Exodus 21: 12. "He that killeth a man, he shall be put to death."—Leviticus 24: 21. "The murderer shall be put to death by the mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to cause him to die. Moreover, ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death; but he shall be surely put to death."—Numbers 35: 30, 31. "But if any man hate his neighbor, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities; then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him into the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die. Thine eye shall not pity him; but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee."—Deuteronomy 19:11-13.

God also provided safeguards in the conviction for murder, as we read, "At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death."—Deuteronomy 17: 6.

In Book of Mormon times, in the reign of righteous rulers, when their laws were declared to be just, we read: "Neither durst they rob, nor murder; for he that murdered was punished unto death."—Alma 1: 27. Again, "But if he murdered he was punished unto death."—Alma 16: 11.

In this last dispensation the Lord said, "And again I say, Thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 7. Again, "And is shall come to pass that if any person among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 21.

Capital punishment, we believe, was the universal law of the land when this revelation was given.

By becoming citizens of the Government, we relinquish our personal right of redress or vengeance, and society becomes the arbiter of our grievances. The law of the land and not our personal notion decides what shall be meted out as a recompense for crime. The object of the law is largely the safety of society, and not so much that one person may get even or be avenged upon another; thus taking the principle of retaliation or vengeance (to a great extent) out of the question. Thereby approaching the principle voiced in the declarations, "Resist not evil," Vengeance is mine." Indeed we may hope for a separated society of the righteous, where prisons and the gallows may not be so much in demand. We believe that to all kingdoms there is a law given, and that to all laws there are also certain bounds; that there are telestial laws, applicable to telestial conditions; and terrestrial laws, applicable to terrestrial conditions; and celestial laws, applicable to celestial conditions; that celestial laws can not be applied to a people who will not live up to celestial conditions. God has evidently given men here laws applicable to their times and conditions. May we not wait till he shall repeal them, or till we come into conditions where different laws obtain?

D. H. SCHMIDT.

STEWARTSVILLE, MISSOURI.

Of General Interest

FROM THE JAWS OF DEATH.

EMERY FERGUSON OF BLUE SPRINGS RECOVERS AFTER REMARKABLE CASE OF SURGERY AT SANITARIUM.

During the week, Emery Ferguson will leave the Independence Sanitarium for his home. He was brought here with apparently but a few hours to live. A horse had kicked him and injured him so seriously that the spleen was removed and one gallon of blood found loose in the abdominal cavity. Physicians know of but three cases of similar nature.

Mr. Ferguson was received into the Independence Sanitarium on December 17, last. The day before he had been kicked by a horse. Doctor Rowe, of Blue Springs, brought the patient to the Sanitarium, where an operation was performed by Doctor E. D. Twyman, assisted by Doctor Rowe and Doctor Messenger.

There were no external evidences as to the nature of the injury, but when the incision was made, it was obvious there was an alarming hemorrhage from the enlarged spleen, which had been crushed by the force of the kick. Nothing could be done in attempting to save the man's life but to remove the spleen; repair work being impossible because of the nature of the injury.

The gravity of the operation will be appreciated by noting the dimensions of the incision, which was "T" shaped, the vertical incision extending from the pelvic bone to the ribs, and the lateral incision extending eight inches to the lumbar region.

The loss of blood was excessive, there being one gallon free in the abdominal cavity. It was necessary to prepare a combination possessing the chemical constituents of the blood to be injected before and immediately after the operation in order to prevent collapse.

The doctors had seen three similar cases, two of whom died because adequate hospital equipment was not at hand.

The immense value to the community of a well-equipped and up-to-date hospital is not only shown by this case but by many others. The Independence Sanitarium is equipped to give every scientific care and many lives have already been saved because this institution is here. While the Sanitarium was built by the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints and is under the church control, it is thrown open with all its equipment and service to the physicians of the city and they get the benefit. The people understand and appreciate how great is the value of such an institution.—Jackson Examiner, January 24, 1913.

♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

WHAT BECAME OF THE CLIFF DWELLERS?

At last it appears that two of the most puzzling riddles of the Southwest have been solved. The first is, What became of the Cliff Dwellers? The second is, Whence came the Pueblo Indians?

Some ethnologists have insisted that the Pueblos are the direct descendants of the Cliff Dwellers, inheriting their language, religion, culture, and industries, and differing from their ancestors only in the location of their homes. Others have been just as confident that the Cliff Dwellers are an extinct people; that they have vanished utterly from the face of the earth, leaving not a human trace behind, with the exception of their deserted homes, a few bones and desiccated mummies, some pottery and trinkets. Neither of these extreme views, it now appears, is correct. The truth is found in a middle ground. The Cliff Dwellers, as a racial type, are extinct, and their language forgotten; but a strain of their blood remains in the modern Pueblos. And the Pueblos, it is reasonably certain, are a composite race formed by the amalgamation of the ancient Cliff Dwellers with stronger nomadic tribes which conquered them, intermarried with them, and then, to a large extent, assimilated their culture.

This opinion was advanced and strongly supported with indirect evidence by Doctor Edgar L. Hewett several years ago. It has lately received confirmation that appears to remove it from the domain of conjecture into the realm of fact.

For years past Doctor Hewett has from time to time conducted excavations among the numberless prehistoric ruins west of Santa Fe. By measurement of the skulls found in the course of these excavations he has proven that the Cliff Dwellers were a dolicocephalic (long-headed) race. The Pueblo Indians are predominantly brachycephalic (short-headed) with a noticeable percentage (from fifteen to twenty-five per cent) of the other type. The difference between the two types is fundamental and proves conclusively that the Pueblos differ widely from the ancient people of the cliffs. Nevertheless the similarity of their architecture, their industries, their culture, and their religion unmistakably indicates that the Pueblos are the inheritors of the institutions of the vanished race. Some of the existing communities even possess traditions to the effect that their ancestors dwelt in the cliff homes. All these circumstances lead to the conjecture that at some remote period in the past the people of the cliffs have been conquered by a more warlike people; and that the modern Pueblos represent the amalgamation of the victors and the vanquished.

This view has recently received strong confirmation by the discovery that what is known as the Tewa or Tanoan dialect of the Pueblos (spoken by the inhabitants of twelve of the existing villages, including Taos, Santa Clara, San Juan and Isleta) is strikingly similar to the language spoken by the Kiowas of the Great Plains. Throughout historic times the two tribes have been separated by a thousand miles of trackless desert. The evidence of a common origin is beyond question. The conclusion is irresistible that long before Coronado made his historic journey and exploration through the Southwest, a mighty war party of the Kiowas crossed the Great Plains and entered the wonderful region of cliffs and canyons and flat-topped mesas just west of the Rio Grande, which we call Pajarito Park. Here they found the people whom we call the "Cliff Dwellers," although it is probable that the cliff dwellings had been deserted for centuries, and that the entire population lived in the great communal houses on the mesas. A fight was inevitable—doubtless many fights; but in the end the nomads of the plains vanquished the peaceful agricultural tribe whose territories they had invaded.

But this was a goodly land in which the conquerors found themselves—a land in which commodious and easily defended homes were ready for occupancy, thanks to the industry of the conquered people; a land that yielded abundant crops of corn, beans and squash—else so great a population could not have existed. So the conquerors decided to stay. Just what happened we can only guess. Being savages, it is likely that the victors killed all the men and the old and ugly women, and married the comely squaws. Possibly the men who ceased to fight were spared, but that intermarriage took place the Pueblos of to-day are living witnesses. That the ancient cliff-dwelling stock narrowly escaped annihilation is proven by the predominance of the Kiowan skull in the modern Pueblo communities. Nowhere does the percentage of long-headed people (the Cliff Dweller type) rise higher than twenty-five per cent.

This, in brief, is what the latest scientific research teaches us in regard to the Cliff Dwellers of the Pajarito Park region, and the Pueblos of what has been called the Tanoan stock. The newly-established Museum of New Mexico, under the direction of Doctor Hewett, is carrying on extensive excavations in that interesting region and will no doubt add greatly to existing knowledge. The field for research is a vast one, the abandoned homes in the cliffs being numbered literally by the tens of thousands. Here is a territory more than five hundred square miles in extent, covered with hundreds of feet of volcanic tufa, ejected from the cones of the Jemez Mountains. Through this the intermittent streams and torrents, making their way from the mountains to the Rio Grande, cut deep canyons, with almost vertical walls. By the action of the winds and waters, recesses were worn in the cliffs. The earliest type of cliff dwellings found in the region (and structurally the most primitive homes of men yet discovered in America) were made by simply enlarging these natural cavities. Next came the homes formed by excavating wholly artificial caves; the building of front walls of masonry; the building of front and side walls of masonry, with the rear wall formed by the cliff; and finally the climax of aboriginal architecture in great communal houses on the mesa tops, in the terraced pyramidal form seen in its perfection in the existing Pueblo communal dwellings at Taos.

It is evident that the evolution of culture represented by the growth of architecture from the rude holes in the rocks to the great communal dwellings on the mesas must have required many centuries—perhaps thousands of years. Archæologically, then, the Pajarito Park region is unsurpassed in interest in the world, on account of the light that scientific investigation of the numberless ruins have shed upon the numerous vexed questions connected with the beginning and growth of culture.

The Pajarito Park cliff and mesa ruins are the most numerous and extensive found in the Southwest; but other prehistoric remains known as cliff ruins are scattered widely throughout that region. It is probable that the numerous primitive tribes that occupied these met with a fate similar to that of the ancient Pajaritans—conquest by and amalgamation with more warlike nomadic tribes.

The most spectacular prehistoric ruins in the Southwest, and the most remarkable cliff ruins in the world, are located in the newly created Mesa Verde National Park in southwestern Colorado. The two largest ruins, known as the "Cliff Palace" and the "Spruce Tree House," have been excavated and repaired by Doctor J. W. Fewkes, of the Smithsonian Institution. His investigations seem to indicate that the ancient inhabitants of the Mesa Verde too were conquered and assimilated.

Doctor Fewkes has labored off and on for years among the Hopis of northern Arizona. From the beginning of his investigation of the Cliff Palace and the Spruce Tree House, he was struck by the similarity of the architecture, the arrangement of the "kivas" (or places of worship and council), the household utensils and articles of adornment and of ceremonial use, to those employed at the present day among the Hopis. Even the most superficial investigation indicates unmistakably a close relationship between the Hopis and the vanished tribe.

The Hopis speak a Shoshonean dialect; but mingled with it are numerous archaic terms and forms found in no other Indian tongue. This, no doubt, represents all that remains of the otherwise forgotten language of the people of the Mesa Verde. The Hopis are the smallest in stature of existing tribes found within the borders of the United States—another heritage from the Cliff Dwellers—for skeletons that have been exhumed prove that these were a diminutive people.

It seems plain, then, that the prehistoric tribe of the Mesa Verde was conquered by a people of Shoshonean stock; and that by subsequent intermarriage the identity of both tribes was lost. It is possible, or rather probable, that the Hopis more nearly approximate the conquered Cliff Dwellers than the conquering nomads. It is certain that they are the nearest approximation to an ancient cliff-dwelling tribe that now survives.—Christian Herald, January 22, 1913.

Don't suppose that people are hostile to you. You will rarely find anyone designedly doing you ill. You may feel often as if the whole world is obstructing you, more or less; but you will find that to be because the world is traveling in a different way from you and rushing on in its own path. Each man has only an extremely good will to himself—which he has a right to have—and is moving on towards his object. If you find many people who are hard and indifferent to you in a world that you consider to be inhospitable and cruel—as often, indeed, happens to a tender-hearted, stirring young creature—you will also find there are noble hearts who will look kindly on you, and their help will be precious to you beyond price. You will get good and evil as you go on, and have the success that has been appointed to you.—Thomas Carlyle.

My experience through life has convinced me that, while moderation and temperance in all things are commendable and beneficial, abstinence from spirituous liquors is the best safeguard to morals and health.—General Robert E. Lee, to the students of Washington College, Virginia.

It isn't necessary to dilute religion with sociology to make it acceptable to the modern American. If he takes it at all, he will take it straight just as well.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Service of Margaret.

"What a beautiful afternoon!" exclaimed Margaret Wilson, as she tripped lightly down the steps. "Just delightful for shopping! There's the ribbon for Aunt Kate, and the lace for Evelyn, the trimming for mother, and the dress for myself. I must hurry, or I'll not get through the list."

She was rushing along when a stifled sob aroused her from her reverie. She looked around quickly, and there was little Tommy Jones, leaning against the fence, crying piteously.

"What's the matter, Tommy?" she stopped to ask.

"I'm lost," he sobbed.

"Lost!" laughed Margaret. "Well, come along, Tommy, and I'll take you home."

Tommy's home was two blocks out of her way, but he was so grateful, and his smiling face, when he recognized his own gate, fully paid Margaret for her trouble and loss of time.

She hurried on again, and had just made up the two blocks, when she met poor old Uncle Billy Thompson, whose face brightened up as he saw her coming.

"Why, Uncle Billy," said Margaret, anxiously, noting how wearily he crept along, "you look all tired out. I fear you have taken too long a walk this time."

"Yes," sighed the old man, "I'm all done out. Seems if I ain't much strength lately, I'm most afraid I can't get home," said he, looking appealingly at the girl.

"Just take my arm, Uncle Billy, and I'll help you home all right."

When she got Uncle Billy home, she rushed on again to make up time. Just as she turned the corner, she saw two boys fighting. This was a little out of her line, but she finally persuaded them to go home, and, as they lived in opposite directions, the fight was put off for a time, at least.

A little further on lived a crippled girl, who on shiny days was a member of Margaret's Sabbath school class, and when she reached the house of the poor little shut-in, her kind heart got the best of her, and she went in for a minute, "just a minute," she said to herself. The girl was so overjoyed to see Margaret that the minute was a long one, and, once on the street again, she thought to herself, "Now I must go right along and not stop another time for anybody."

Her mind was busy with her shopping again, when she heard some one calling in the weak and trembling tones of old age.

"Margaret, my dear, can't you come in a moment? I have a letter from my poor boy Jimmy in Californy, and my eyes are so poor I can't see to read it."

Margaret ran up the steps. "Yes, indeed, Aunt Rachel, I'll be glad to read it for you," forgetting her resolution.

The letter from Jimmy cheered Aunt Rachel wonderfully, and, as Margaret finished reading, the old lady exclaimed, "You must have been sent by Providence, Margaret, for I was so anxious to hear from Jimmy. My heart fairly leaped with joy when I saw it was really you coming along the street. I hope you weren't in a hurry."

"No," gasped Margaret, "I'm never in too much of a hurry to stop to read Jimmy's letters to you, Aunt Rachel."

Out on the street again, Margaret fairly flew, until she collided with a very substantial object going in the opposite direction. This object proved to be Mrs. Wilson's washer-woman.

"Why, Mrs. Finnigan," exclaimed Margaret, "what's the trouble?"

"Och, Margaret, honey, Mikey's took awful sick, and I'm going to the drug store for some medicine. I hed to lave 'im alone, poor b'y."

Margaret hesitated, but only for an instant. "I'll go and get the medicine, Mrs. Finnigan, and you run back to Micky."

When she arrived at the house with the medicine Mrs. Finnigan asked her to run in and tell her next-door neighbor that Mikey was sick, and "would she plaze come over for a spell?"

As soon as she reached the sidewalk again Margaret screwed up courage enough to consult her watch.

"I'll take this car," she thought, "and perhaps I can make it in time to do part of my shopping, at least."

"Wud ye be koind enough to tell me whaur State Street is, leddy?" asked a frightened looking woman standing on the corner.

Margaret stopped and relieved the woman's anxiety by giving her careful directions as to State Street. The woman thanked her and started off, and Margaret looked up to see her car gliding by.

"It's too late, anyway," she soliloquized, looking down the street at the disappearing car. "Where has the afternoon gone?"

She sighed as she turned reluctantly towards home. The family were eating supper when she came in, empty-handed, from her supposed shopping excursion.

"Well, Margaret, where's the new dress?" asked her father, teasingly.

"Humph!" exclaimed her young brother, "it takes a girl a whole afternoon to buy one dress. Whew!"

Margaret smiled rather doubtfully as she sat down in her place at the table.

"I'll have to confess that I simply wasted the whole beautiful afternoon. I don't understand exactly how I did it, but I know that I didn't get down street at all, and I hurried every minute, too."

Her mother laughed. "What were you doing?"

"Well, I stopped too many times on the way, I think, but really what became of the afternoon I can't tell."

They listened while she rehearsed her experience of the afternoon. As it all seemed rather trivial and commonplace to her, she wondered at the deep interest which her father and mother manifested in her story. As she finished her father said, earnestly: "My dear daughter, I do not call the afternoon wasted, by any means. It seems to me it was very well spent."

"Although you failed to carry out your own plans, Margaret," said her mother, softly, "you have surely filled the afternoon with loving service to those who needed your help and sympathy. Let us not call it wasted time."

"I had not thought of it in that way," admitted Margaret.

"You may not have realized it, Margaret," said her father, looking into her sweet face, "but you have been serving the Master himself, for he said, 'Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these, you have done it unto me.'"—Evangelical Messenger.

Requests for Prayer.

Sister John McRae, Fairbank, Iowa, desires prayers in her behalf, having been afflicted in her eyes. At present she is unable to read the church papers and this is a great deprivation. She is 81 years of age and quite well except as to her eyes.

Brother James E. Bishop, Steubenville, Ohio, writes that there is considerable sickness in the branch there, and asks prayers for those afflicted.

I wish to ask the Saints and friends to pray for my wife, as she has been very ill during this conference year. I have had to leave my field of labor three times during the year 1912. Medical aid can do nothing, so petition the throne of grace that God may spare her a few years if it is according to his mind and will. GEORGE EDWARDS.

WEIR CITY, KANSAS.

Letter Department

LITTLE MOODY, SASKATCHEWAN, January 6, 1913.

Editors Herald: I have made up my mind that it was my duty to write and see if we could have an elder call on us and have some meetings in this community. There are a number of the members of the church who have spoken to me about it, and some others. We believe this work should be carried on, and we trust there will be a good man come in here and stay with us. We live in the Willow Bunch District, on section one, township five, range twenty-nine.

Your brother and sister,
JAMES AND CORA LOUCKS.

WEST JONESPORT, MAINE, January 20, 1913.

Dear Herald: May I be permitted to take a small portion of space in your valuable columns to say a few words in behalf of one that is very dear to me? and I know he loves me with a tender love.

I can say, so far as I am individually concerned, that he has been faithful unto his conditional promises, but sorry to say, there are many things promised that I haven't received; but that doesn't prove him untrue, but it proves my unfaithfulness. I would to God that we all would examine ourselves and see where we stand, for I fully believe there are many, oh, yes; many blessings that we are deprived of on account of our own foolish thoughts, ideas, and ways. Oh, brethren, let us not conform ourselves to this world, but transform ourselves by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove that good, acceptable, and perfect will of God, and as we remember it says there came a voice from that excellent glory and said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, Hear ye him; and when we realize that matchless character of Jesus, who performed miracles, and the sentimental words of truth he uttered, his consecrated life, the witness of the open heaven, his resurrection and ascension, surely they prove that he was the Christ; and to my mind he is worthy of our consideration.

I want to believe on him to such an extent that my faith will permit me to live a life as pure as the lilies of the field, and then I will know that I am doing that good, acceptable, and perfect will of God. Now, in conclusion, let me say I have accepted the last warning voice, and as I am finite in wisdom, in judgment, and not fully acquainted with God's ways, and by conforming to my own ways may hinder my entrance in through the bright portals into the haven of rest, and taking everything into consideration I am more willing than ever before to consecrate, commit, and commend my life into the hands of One that doeth all things well.

Your brother in Christ,
MERTON L. CROWLEY.

LAMOURE, NORTH DAKOTA, January 25, 1913.

Dear Herald: Having just arisen from a perusal of the HERALD I feel a desire to express a few words of approval for the benefits derived, the "Good news from a far country," spicily and varied as it is, combined with sound scriptural logic, is calculated to strengthen both old and young. We have nothing big to report from the northern land, but as I associated with my younger brethren of the ministry in our recent district conference, I was made to rejoice at the marked improvement discernible, both in the dispatch of business and the quality of the addresses given. And I feel that when we older ones are called to lay down the armor, others younger and stronger, and in many respects better-equipped, will carry forward the work.

Having the additional aid of Brother Shakespeare of the mission, and Brethren Wagener and Leitch of the local, it would seem as though we might make somewhat of a record this winter. At least I for one feel encouraged, when I reflect on the winters I traveled alone.

This is a new opening, and we are meeting with the usual cold indifference on the part of the world, but our efforts are warmly seconded by a few noble Saints, not only in supplying our temporal wants abundantly, but in fervent prayer and fasting for our success. Two were baptized a week ago, and one yesterday, in spite of 20 below zero weather, and other names given in anticipation of the advent of spring.

Minot Branch, recently organized, and another prospective one at Calvin, mark an era in solidifying the district. We trust all branch officers will strive earnestly to qualify themselves by study and prayer, and that the Saints will supplement their efforts in every way, and especially by honoring their calling in administration! Much unnecessary expense and loss have come as a result of calling a missionary when local elders were available. And the same applies to funeral sermons and marriages, to a large extent, though there are exceptional cases where the above would not apply.

Brother Wagener and myself have already visited three of the branches so far this winter, and propose visiting all the remainder between now and spring. Frankness compels me to state there is much room for improvement in various ways. The crying need still is, as in the years of the past, for live, energetic officers. And the words of our esteemed First President apply with increasing force, "Let me know your branch president and I will tell you what kind of a branch you have." Dear brethren, let us remember our high and holy calling, and act as those who will have to give an account. Be a father and wise counselor to all, kind and loving to the erring, especially tender to the lambs of the fold, and count our time well spent if we can but rescue one fallen one; and rejoice with them in the kingdom of God.

Your brother in the gospel covenant,
WM. SPARLING.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Dear Brother: We have been having a siege of grip here for the last month, and this with these cases of old age, have kept us busy and anxious. The 8th of January we preached the funeral sermon for a Mrs. Hunter, of this place. She was not a member of the Reorganization, but of the Christ Scientist Church, but at her wish we visited her and administered to her several times. She seemed to draw comfort and help from the ordinance at each administration, but the Master saw fit to call to the other side. She left one son and a husband to mourn.

We are looking for Brother Daniel Macgregor to pay us a visit here the latter part of the week, as he wrote us to that effect from Centralia, Washington. We shall be glad to see him and have him with us for a season.

Sincerely yours,
A. M. CHASE.

MILROY, NORTH DAKOTA, January 26, 1913.

Editors Herald: I wrote a letter to Zion's Ensign, stating I would like to have a Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, but was too poor to buy them, as my wages were small and it took all of them to support my family. Some good Saints sent me the books, and not long after I received some other books from another person. I send this to the HERALD so no more books will be sent to me.

I have received these books with gratitude and pleasure, and thank the senders for their kindness. I appreciate the gifts. I am trying to do the best I can towards keeping the commandments of the Lord. I have learned a great deal of God's work from the Book of Mormon, as it is so much plainer for me to understand than the Bible, and makes the Bible easier to understand. I am trying to get the people to read our tracts which some brother sent me. I have had only one person read one of them, which was on the subject of the kingdom of God.

I read the Ensign every week, as my sister lives close to us and I get it after she is through reading it. I love to read its pages and the sermons it contains.

May God bless all the true in heart. I ask the prayers of the Saints of God.

Ever your brother in Christ,
JOHN EULITT.

Extract from Letter.

Sister Geneva Whitman, Fall City, Washington: "If there is any elder traveling this way, please call, as there is no branch nearer than Seattle."

Father to Mother.

This is our child, dear—flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone;
Here is the end of our youth, and now we begin to atone.
Now we do feel what their love was—those who have reared us and taught;
Now do we know of the treasures that neither are sold nor bought.
Here is the joy of the race—joy that must grow out of pain;
Here is the last of ourself—now we are links in the chain.
Body of yours and mine no more is the measure of grief—
All that he suffers is ours—and increased while we cry for relief;
Yea, for our boy, our beloved, we'll yearn through the beckoning years—
Toil for him, laugh with him, struggle and pour out the fountain of tears!—Robert Bridges.

News from Missions

Minnesota.

We are experiencing the usual cold weather of Minnesota for this time of the year; thermometer registering from zero to thirty and forty degrees below, though we are not having as much snow and wind as usual.

This leaves the writer about eleven miles east of the city of Frazee, in the township of Evergreen, engaged in mission work. Have held meetings most of the past week, with fair attendance and interest. We expect to continue the remainder of this week.

C. H. Kind and family are kindly providing a home for me while remaining in the vicinity. They are not members of our faith, but are some of earth's honorable, kindly ones, who are willing to give consideration to all that is honorable and just. This is the former home of Brother F. D. Omans, who labored in mission work for some time in Minnesota.

We are endeavoring to keep the gospel ensign floating in the breeze in Minnesota. We think it a rather hard field in some regards, but are endeavoring to do what we can, and think some success is being made in the Master's service. We regret the loss of some of our numbers the past year. Some deaths and some removals are to be noted. Brother W. C. Griffin and family, who have been among our earnest workers, moved the past fall to near Westminster Junction, British Columbia, Canada. We were sorry to lose them from the band of helpers.

Our semiannual conference was held in November, near Bemidji, in the land of pine trees, with the earnest little branch of Saints in that vicinity. The attendance was not large, but those present enjoyed the event.

The writer, after a weary day's journey, when stepping off the train into the cold, dark atmosphere of the November evening, was pleased to find himself surrounded by Brethren L. A. Gould, W. L. Christy, and B. S. Lambkin. The latter two, having arrived a little time previous, were waiting to take Leon's missionary wagon to his home, and then on the next morning, a few miles, to the little church. We all enjoyed the little journey through the tall, green pines in the crisp morning air.

At the conference we were glad to meet Brother Birch Whiting and family, who had just returned from near Saskatoon, Canada, where they have been making their abode the past few years. Brother Birch is quite well known in this district, having formerly labored as a missionary in this State. I hope the Saints in Minnesota will not forget our joint reunion, to be held in June, at Fargo, North Dakota, with the North Dakota Saints. We ought to have a pleasant and profitable time, and hope the Saints may labor to make it such. We expect to invite the Saints of South Dakota, as many as can to join with us, and hope many of them can do so.

In gospel bonds,

L. HOUGHTON.

Sydney, Australia.

We are closing up our work in Australia. Next week we leave for New Zealand and the South Sea Islands. The work here is moving along nicely and in some ways I feel to regret leaving.

I had the pleasure of baptizing three more good people last Sunday. The gentleman had only heard one sermon. He is an officer in the British Navy. Bishop Lewis has lately baptized several at New Castle, and others are near the kingdom. So the good work goes on and we are made to rejoice.

We would very much like to be present at General Conference, as we had expected, but we expect to meet with the Saints on the islands at their conference at that time, where perhaps we can do more good and where our labors are more needed than they are at General Conference.

We are both feeling well and happy in our work,
In gospel bonds,

DECEMBER 24, 1912.

F. G. PITT.

Texas.

Reading of the success attending the efforts of the servants of the Lord throughout the country, as recorded in the HERALD, is refreshing to my soul, and causes my heart to leap with joy. To behold the awakening among the Indians, the children of Laman, causes me to rejoice. Oh, ye red men, who a few years ago were roaming the wilds in a scattered condition, how true are the words of the Lord concerning thee, that thou shouldst blossom as the rose.

With pleasure I see the work of the Lord hasten on, and know that none can stay it. Blessed be the Lord. With pleasure, and undaunted, I move on in the glorious warfare, meeting the opposing forces against the truth. What is warfare without opposition? While I would that all would heed the voice of the Lord and obey his gospel, yet, oh sad thought, many resist the Savior, and thus shall bring upon themselves that destruction and judgment that is awaiting the wicked at the closing drama of life. Therefore, if they will fight the truth I shall rejoice in the defense of it.

There is much joy in knowing the reality of the gospel. What glad times await the Saints when Zion shall be redeemed. God help us to assist in the hastening of that day when sorrow and misery shall be no more.

A word in regard to the work in this Southwestern Texas District. Since my appointment in April and my arrival in my field of labor, I have endeavored, in my weak way, and with the assistance of Jehovah, to disseminate the words of eternal truth, and with pleasure I see that it is not in vain, for some are near the kingdom of heaven, and up to the present I have baptized nineteen, and others have taken hold of the work through the administration of others.

We had a splendid time during the reunion and conference last August, when Brethren J. F. Curtis and Ammon White were with us. It was held in my home town, San Antonio. It has been some time ago, but the sweetness of that memory lingers. The brethren mentioned, apostle and patriarch, were a source of much help to the Saints, and the Spirit was very much in evidence, some of the gifts being manifested.

Brother W. E. Peak has been edifying the Saints in San Antonio with his instructive sermons, but he can not be in our district long, as he is going to start back north soon.

I am at present holding meetings here in Ingram, in a Christian church, granted me through the kindness of the doctor here. There is some interest manifested. I will leave here soon to answer numerous calls where they are awaiting me, south of San Antonio. I am at present in the hills northwest of there.

I trust through the kindness of Providence to attend the April conference in Lamoni, Iowa.

My address is 3501 South Flores Street, San Antonio, Texas.

In the conflict for truth,

GUY R. KUYKENDALL.

Leicester Branch, England.

We are still keeping the truth before the people, with some success. Our hearts were made glad when four precious souls were led through the waters of baptism. Our branch now numbers forty-five, but we are left weak by the number of members who are out of town, whom we seldom see. We meet in a neat and clean room, but seldom get strangers out to hear the work. We had our esteemed mission president,

W. H. Greenwood, with us for a week. We were all glad to see him, and were benefited by his timely advice. We wish to see some efforts made to open up the work in other places near by, where the gospel has not reached as yet. We hope to see some help among these lines.

May God bless the work and the workers, is my humble prayer,

WM. ECCLESTONE.

149 WOLVERTON ROAD.

News from Branches

Scranton, Pennsylvania.

As the year 1912 has passed into history, we can not help but reflect upon the happenings and upon the many and varied experiences encountered by the Saints at Scranton. Feeling as we do, that the year 1912 was indeed one of marked importance to us in the work of the Lord; bearing in mind also that the hopes and longings of many of the Saints were in a measure realized, it is with renewed energy and vigor, with the opening of the new year, that we look forward to still greater success, and efforts on our part for the accomplishment of better work than that of the year just past.

On the 9th inst. the following were installed as our officers for the ensuing term: viz, T. U. Thomas, branch president; George Morris, branch priest; R. J. Hawkins, associate priest; David James, branch teacher; E. Walter Lewis, associate teacher; William J. Lewis, branch deacon; G. Morris, secretary; E. W. Lewis, librarian; Lot Bishop, historian; Margaret S. Lewis, stenographer; George Morris, chorister; Margaret Lewis, organist; and as the branch expressed a desire that occasionally Scranton should be heard from in the church papers, the writer was chosen as correspondent; for, as in times past, it has been proven that what seems to be everybody's business turns out to be nobody's.

The Saints here are very busy of late, doing whatever they can in order to accumulate means for the purpose of paying for our newly erected church building. One of the many things that occupied our time was a supper held on Friday, December 20, which brought a realization of something like $150. Another notable feature of interest has been our rally day, held on the first Sunday of the year. It surely was a success, from many standpoints, and all those who took part in the day's exercises felt repaid for the effort put forth. A broad invitation was extended to all the scattered Saints to join us in the services, and as a consequence many were brought together and were kindly entertained and cared for by the immediate Saints of the branch.

Our Religio and Sunday school is truly progressing in numbers and interest, as is also the branch choir, under the leadership of Brother George Morris. The choir is just now putting its time and energy into a "Cantata" which they expect to render at the new church in the near future.

Our pastor, Brother T. U. Thomas, has proved of much assistance to us in this the musical line, as well as the spiritual lines. The Sunday school has done what it could also by helping us eradicate our church lot debt through a collecting system which they adopted for the younger children. In this way the children alone brought in a sum of seventy-three dollars after clearing expenses. The leader in this movement was our superintendent, Brother Lot Bishop; he is just "delighted" in Sunday school work. The Religio saw that it was a splendid opportunity to assist also, and the ladies organized themselves into a Religio sewing circle. The fruits of their labors were viewed with pleasure in a bazaar which they conducted, the proceeds of which were handed to the building fund.

We are looking anxiously forward, a few weeks hence, when we shall be privileged to meet in our own church building on the corner of Luzerne and Twelfth Streets. We are also trusting that the grace of God shall sustain and enable us to so work harmoniously together until our small but pretty edifice shall be made free from debt and dedicated to the Lord of lords and King of kings.

To some who may desire to help us financially, in our plans, I should like to advise that Sister Alice Morris, of 37 Archibald Street, is the treasurer of the building fund.

May the gospel wend its way and grow and prosper everywhere.

CORRESPONDENT.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Cleveland Saints are helping build up the kingdom of the Most High. We have not done much just lately, but have hope. We have had our business meeting, and have made another start. We now have a mason for president, and the deacon is a stonemason; so watch us build.

Reports of committee showed that we had great success with a bazaar, but report of building committee was a failure; chairman resigned. One blamed the weather, another asked for a more competent building committee; so you see we are not yet the expert builders we want to be, or a frost would not delay our plans. Many other branches may be in this same condition, so we will advise you how we progress. We believe the trouble was principally with the binding material, and not enough counsel, because we all know that if we comply with the plans and specifications of the Master mind, he will accept our work as it is finished. We are apt not to repair our roof because we can not while it is raining, and when it doesn't rain the roof doesn't leak.

We have great expectations for this section to progress in the future. Brother Baldwin is holding special meetings this week, and we expect to spread out into different parts of the city with extra meetings. We are forming a choir. Let us not forget that our business is to build, build, build. Let us all do our individual duty and cooperate with each other to do the Lord's will, rejoicing together that the glory is his, and we may become proficient and capable of helping build a temple.

THE CORRESPONDENT.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.—Semiannual conference convened August 3, 1912, with the Clearwater Branch, at Clearwater, Nebraska, at 10 a. m. Minister in charge of Nebraska, J. R. Sutton, to be associated with the district president, was chosen to preside over the conference. The district secretary was chosen secretary of the conference, with privilege of choosing assistant; Sister Lyle Butler was so chosen. Verna Rutledge was chosen organist, Levi Gamet chorister. Statistical reports from Inman, Clearwater, Round Park, Meadow Grove, and Bonesteel read and approved. Bishop's agent's report read and committee appointed to audit. J. W. Smith, J. H. Jackson, and T. S. Rutledge, the committee, reported balance due church last report, $113.80; received in cash, $273.75; disbursements, $393.29; balance due agent, $15.74. Tent committee reported: Receipts, $56.41; disbursements, $56.41; cost of tent, $60.76; balance due committee, $4.35; Levi Gamet and W. E. Kester, committee. On motion the presidency provided for the services of the conference. The preaching was of a high order, by J. R. Sutton, Levi Gamet, J. W. Smith, and J. W. Wight, the latter coming at the close of the conference. Ministry reporting: Elders: J. R. Sutton, Levi Gamet, J. W. Smith, J. H. Jackson, W. E. Kester. Priests: Charles E. Derry, C. N. Hutchins. On motion conference adjourned to meet with the Meadow Grove Branch some time in February, 1913, time to be set by the district president. F. S. Gatenby, district secretary, Orchard, Nebraska.

IDAHO.—District conference convened at Heyburn, Idaho, January 18, 1913, at 11 a. m., with vice president, New Madden, in the chair. Organization was effected by choosing New Madden and T. B. Jackson to preside, Sister Jackson, secretary, Sister Lottie Condit chorister, and Sister Handy organist. All district officers reported. Branch officers as follows reported: W. T. Ferguson, John Ross, I. C. McConnell, Adolphus Hendrickson, T. B. Jackson, William Glauner. New Madden reported 17 baptized and 18 confirmed. Statistical reports of branches: Weiser 47, gain 9; Hagerman 68, gain 16; Boise 59, gain 2; Teton 44, gain 14. Articles 2, 7, and 12 of the district by-laws were amended to permit conferences to be held in the spring and fall, actual time to be decided by the district officers. By motion it was decided to submit articles 4, 6, and 11 of the by-laws to the next conference for modification. Elders Alvin Knisley and John Davis, were elected delegates to the General Conference. Election of district officers resulted as follows: New Madden, president; William Glauner, vice president; Mrs. T. B. Jackson, clerk; E. A. Fletcher, treasurer; W. T. Ferguson, librarian. By motion the presidency was empowered to appoint a committee to arrange for a reunion in early summer. T. B. Jackson was ordained to the office of elder. At the close of the conference the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Resolved, That this conference extend a vote of thanks to the resident Saints, and friends, who have so royally provided for the comfort of all attending the conference." Adjourned to meet at call of the presidency. Mrs. T. B. Jackson, clerk, general delivery, Boise, Idaho.

Convention Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—Convention of the district Sunday school association convened at Plano, Illinois, January 10, 1913, at 2:30 p. m. The general routine business was transacted. Delegates to General Convention were chosen as follows: Melvina Heavener, Henry Williams, Abe L. Rogers, Mildred Rogers, Earl Rogers, J. A. Bronson, H. Anderson, Sister H. Anderson, F. M. Cooper, Sister F. M. Cooper, Eva L. Wright, J. O. Dutton, Marion Wright, Lester Wildermuth, Elias Hayer, Sister Elias Hayer, J. A. Daer, John L. Cooper, David E. Dowker, Sister William Bell, Grace E. Johnson, Margaret Wickes, Harvey Drake, Eli Wildermuth, La June Howard, James F. Keir, Lottie Keir, Bessie Eggleston, Sadie Selle, Clara Southwick, May Daer, B. W. Taylor, Sister Philemon Pement. The above-named delegates were instructed to cast a majority and minority vote in case of division. Officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: Sister F. M. Cooper, superintendent; C. B. Hartshorn, assistant superintendent; Sister La June Howard, secretary and treasurer; J. A. Daer, home department superintendent; J. A. Bronson, member of library board. Adjourned to meet at call of district officers. La June Howard, secretary.

NORTH DAKOTA.—Convention of the North Dakota district Sunday school association was held at Berlin, North Dakota, January 11, 1913, at 10 a. m., in charge of James C. Page, assistant superintendent, Sister Emilie McLeod was chosen secretary pro tem. Reports of the officers were read. The resignation of the district secretary, Sister Ella Graham was accepted, she leaving the State, and Sister Emilie McLeod, of LaMoure, was elected in her place. The following were elected delegates to the General Convention: James C. Page, W. H. Shakespeare, William Sparling, George Young, Sister John Young, and Len Moffit. Those present were empowered to cast the full vote of the district; and in case of division to cast majority and minority vote. On Friday night an excellent program was given by the Sunday school workers of Berlin and LaMoure; adjourned subject to the call of the officers. Emilie McLeod, secretary.

Conference Notices.

You are hereby informed of the coming stake conference to be held at Independence First Church, March 8, 9, 1913, commencing at 10 a. m. We desire as large a representation as is possible, in view of the fact that important business will be transacted, as well as the selection of delegates to the General Conference to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, in April. In the matter of the priesthood reporting, we shall expect those belonging to quorums to report directly to their secretary, who will report to the stake secretary. Those not belonging to any quorum will report to the stake secretary direct. Both individual and secretaries' reports must be in his hands at least ten days before conference. G. E. Harrington, president; L. H. Haas, secretary.

Far West district conference will convene with the Second Saint Joseph Branch, in their chapel on corner of Ohio and Prior Avenues, on February 22, at 10 a. m. The district secretary asks that all branches send in their reports in time so that the conference can devote the limited time to other important business, such as the election of delegates to the Lamoni conference in April, etc. We also ask that the branch presidents send in their semiannual reports. Please be prompt. B. J. Dice, president; Charles P. Faul, secretary, Stewartsville, Missouri.

The annual conference of Kirtland District will be held at New Philadelphia, Ohio, March 1 and 2, 1913. Martin Ahlstrom, district secretary.

Conference of the Nodaway District will convene at 10 a. m., February 22, 1913, at the union church, near Bedison, with the Bedison Branch. All committees, priesthood, branches, etc., are urged to send in their reports prior to the convening of the conference, according to the resolution of last conference. The local priesthood are to report to the president of their respective branches, and the president report a summary to the conference. Come with the good Spirit with you, and let us have a good time. W. B. Torrance, district secretary.

There will be a conference of the Lamoni Stake held at Lamoni, Iowa, March 1 and 2, 1913. Saturday, March 1, prayer service at 9 a. m. Business session at 10 a. m. Delegates will be appointed for the next General Conference. The minister in charge, J. W. Wight, will organize stake quorums of teachers and deacons. All teachers and deacons not already enrolled in the quorums of the Lamoni Branch, are requested to be present and take part in the organization, and those who can not be present please send their names, with items of ordination. All branch reports should be sent to the stake secretary before conference if possible. John Smith, stake president; C. I. Carpenter, stake secretary.

Utah district conference will convene February 22, 1913, at 772 East Fourth Street, Salt Lake City, Utah. The convention of the auxiliaries will meet Friday, the 21st, at 2 p. m. We shall look for a full delegation from all parts of the district, as matters of great importance will be brought before this body for consideration. Please forward all reports, petitions, and communications that pertain to the conference to me at 772 East Fourth South Street, Salt Lake City, Utah. J. C. Chrestensen, district president.

Convention Notices.

The semiannual convention of the Southern California district Sunday school association will meet at San Bernardino, February 28, 1913, at 1:30 p. m. The chief matters of business will be the election of officers for the present year, and the election of delegates to the General Convention. All who possibly can are urged to attend. Olive M. Clapp, district secretary.

The Clinton district Sunday school association will meet in convention February 21, 1913, 10 a. m. at Rich Hill, Missouri. District officers are to be elected and delegates to the General Convention. Religio convention will meet at same place and date, in the afternoon. Zora Lowe, secretary, Eldorado Springs, Missouri, R. F. D. No. 1.

Convention of the Northeastern Missouri District will convene at Bevier, Missouri, February 14, 1913. A cordial invitation is extended to all. W. B. Richards, district superintendent; Willie Mae Brooke, secretary.

The annual conventions of the Kirtland district Sunday school and Religio associations will be held at New Philadelphia, Ohio, February 28, 1913. Religio business meeting 10:30 a. m.; Sunday school business meeting 1:30 p. m.; Joint round table at close of business session. Please send reports and delegate credentials to C. B. Keck, secretary, 12010 Wade Park Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Zion's Religio-Literary Society of the Northern California District will meet in convention at Chico, February 28, 1913, at 10 a. m., at Saints' chapel. Local secretaries please take notice that your reports and credentials are properly signed before sending them in. A joint entertainment of the Sunday school and Religio will be held Friday evening. Pauline O. Napier, district secretary, 910 1/2 Twenty-second Street.

The joint convention of the Sunday school association and Religio society of the Lamoni Stake will be held February 28, beginning with prayer service at 8:30 a. m., in the Saints' church at Lamoni, Iowa. Business session at 9:30 a. m.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 It Is More Blessed to Give Than to Receive - 129
 A Worthy Workman Departed - 130
 The Function of Judging - 130
 Notes and Comments - 133
 HYMNS AND POEMS - 134
 ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 The Second Offense, by J. R. Lambert - 134
 New Openings; Their Value; General Suggestions,
 Daniel Macgregor - 137
 Is Capital Punishment Lawful, by D. H. Schmidt - 140
 OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 From the Jaws of Death - 141
 What Became of the Cliff Dwellers - 141
 MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - 143
 LETTER DEPARTMENT - 144
 James and Cora Loucks—Merton L. Crowley—
 William Sparling—A. M. Chase—John Eulitt—
 Extracts from Letters.
 NEWS FROM MISSIONS - 146
 L. Houghton—F. G. Pitt—Guy R. Kuykendall—
 William Ecclestone.
 NEWS FROM BRANCHES - 147
 MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - 147

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Nothing can be so perfect while we possess it as it will seem when remembered.—O. W. Holmes.

This is the regular annual business convention, at which officers for the ensuing year and delegates to the General Conventions are to be elected. All Sunday schools and local Religions should elect delegates to this convention and send credentials to Sister Flora Scott, Lamoni, Iowa, who will act as chairman of joint credentials committee. This is an important convention and the stake should be well represented. A. L. Keen, superintendent Sunday School; C. I. Carpenter, president Zion's Religio-Literary Society.

Convention of Southern Ohio district Sunday association will convene in Saints' church, Middletown, Ohio, Friday, February 14, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m. All reports to be forwarded to D. R. Winn. Elect delegates; have your school represented. We also wish to perfect a Zion's Religio-Literary Society district association. Send your delegates instructed to express your wishes. D. R. Winn, secretary, 82 East Northwood Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

Superintendents' Addresses Wanted.

If your Sunday school is not in an organized district, or if not connected with a district association, please forward the name and address of the superintendent to the undersigned at once. D. J. KRAHL, General Secretary.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, 724 South Chrysler Street. 2-t

Final Call---Christmas Offering, 1912.

All Christmas Offerings for 1912 should be forwarded to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Independence, Missouri, so as to reach him by February 4, or they will not be published in the Blue Hope for this year.

Died.

OLIVER.—Henry Ferguson Oliver, son of William and Laura Oliver, was born July 23, 1910, blessed in October, 1910, by A. H. D. Edwards; died December 20, 1912, aged 2 years, 5 months. Funeral service at the home of the parents, sermon by A. H. D. Edwards. Of such is the kingdom of God.

PETTIT.—Albert Jefferson, son of W. J. and Nancy Pettit. He was born near Persia, Iowa, September 17, 1893; baptized July 10, 1910; died of pneumonia, January 16, 1913, at the home of his parents, near Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada. Funeral at Floral Methodist Church, in charge of J. L. Mortimer; sermon by J. A. Beckman; interred in Floral Cemetery.

"Far from this world of sin and strife,
 He has gone to everlasting life.
 Full of glory, hope, and joy,
 The Lord has called our darling boy.
 He's safe within his Father's home,
 Where many mansions be,
 Oh, pray that such a rest may come,
 Dear hearts, to you and me."

COX.—In Salt Lake City, January 17, 1913, John S. Cox. Brother Cox was born in England, July 27, 1845, and came to this State in July, 1883. Brother Cox has been a member of the Reorganization for years. He leaves, beside his children and grandchildren, an aged wife to mourn. He has been sick about six months, but only took his bed about Christmas. Funeral in charge of A. M. Chase; interment in city cemetery. He died in hope of the "better resurrection."

SMITH.—Sister Mary Ann Smith, of Humeston, Iowa, died January 21, 1913. She was born at Crownspoint, Indiana, April 23, 1842. She married M. V. B. Smith December 30, 1859, at Lowell, Indiana. Funeral was held in her home; also at the Saints' church at Davis City, Iowa; M. M. Turpen in charge.

ETZENHOUSER.—In Salt Lake City, January 5, 1913, Julia Jeffs Etzenhouser. Sister Etzenhouser was born in Missouri, January 14, 1845. In her youth she married Abraham Jeffs, Quorum of Twelve.

The Quorum of Twelve decided during its last session, to meet on March 15, 1913, in Lamoni, Iowa. Nothing having occurred that would suggest a change, the quorum will be expected to meet promptly on that date. Those who well can should attend and share in the work and responsibilities required of the quorum. All matters intended for consideration by the quorum may be sent to its president or secretary, at Lamoni, Iowa. May as well meet at two o'clock p. m. at the Herald Office.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY, President.
 F. A. SMITH, Secretary.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, January 20, 1913.

Order of Evangelists.

In our published program as it appeared in the issue of the HERALD for January 22, is a mistake. Paper number 1 is assigned to C. E. Butterworth instead of Charles Derry. I myself am wholly responsible for the blunder, and beg pardon of all concerned.

J. R. LAMBERT, Acting President.

LAMONI, IOWA, January 27, 1913.

Notice.

On account of Sister Jenkin's ill health I will remain close home the remainder of the conference year. The missionaries will take notice and address me at Independence, Missouri, 1129 South Noland Street. The Saints will kindly write me of the needs of the work in their community.

GEO. JENKINS.

and raised a large family to him. Brother Jeff's died in this city, and in 1911 she married Brother Etzenhouser, of Independence, Missouri. Brother Etzenhouser died within a year, and since then she has made her home with her children in this city. She was sick for several months, gradually declining until the date given above, when she passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Kennison. Funeral was in charge of A. M. Chase. As some of the family are in the Mormon Church, by their wish, Bishop Iverson, of the second ward, was one of the speakers. Interment was in the city cemetery.

CHRISTY.—Mary A. Porter, born in Ohio, March 1, 1834. Married Robert Christy, at Moline, Illinois, August 24, 1856, later moving to Akron, Iowa. To them were born two sons and three daughters, all surviving except a daughter, Nellie Chamberlain. Her husband died January 8, 1906. She lived a Christian life, uniting with the Methodists, later with the Reorganized Church, in which she has been a member for over fifty years. She made her home with her daughter, Mrs. G. H. Wooton, of Akron, where she died December 28, 1912. Two brothers, one sister, children, and friends mourn. Funeral at home, in charge of Reverend Stuart, of Akron, sermon by J. L. Parker, of Sioux City. Interment in the Akron Cemetery.

PRESCOTT.—Sister Anna Prescott was born at O'Fallon, Illinois, September 20, 1883; died at Roslyn, Washington, Deember 18, 1912, being 29 years and 2 months of age. Deceased leaves husband, three children, father, mother, one brother and three sisters, and a host of other relatives. She was a member of the church from childhood. Elder William Johnson preached the sermon, the Pythian Sisters and Rebekahs having charge.

CRANDALL.—Brother Lewis F. Crandall was born in Oneida County, New York, July, 1845; died at Langley, Washington, January 1, 1913, being 67 years and 5 months of age. Brother Crandall was a consistent member of the church, being a man of few words, and one in whom could be placed the utmost confidence. The attendance at the funeral attested his social standing in the community. There are left to mourn, wife, three sons; and three daughters. Buried by the Order of Masons; sermon by Elder William Johnson.

DAVIS.—Sister Nettie B. Hartman-Davis was born June 15, 1860, at Mount Pleasant, Iowa; died at Seattle, Washington, January 1, 1913, being 52 years and 6 months of age; was married to Zenos F. Davis March 10, 1890. She was baptized by Elder Willard Smith May 1, 1892, retaining membership until death. Sister Davis was a patient sufferer, taken with that dreaded disease, cancer. There are left to mourn husband, brother and sister, John and Emma Hartman, of Redfield, Iowa. Ladies' auxiliary of Brotherhood of Firemen having charge; sermon by Elder William Johnson.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, Independence, Mo. 6-tf

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant. No. 216, cloth . . . . .75c

A GERMAN EDITION of a Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Just issued. Order No. 230b. Paper, 25c.

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary, Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni, Iowa.

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children. Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

PARSONS' TEXT BOOK. Revised and enlarged—contains a vast amount of collated facts to substantiate the latter day message. It saves you hours of weary research. Order No. 232, cloth. . . . .75

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right. Cloth No. 243 . . . . .75

BOOK OF MORMON. Danish edition. (Mormon's Bog) just received. Order ¼ leather edition, $1.00. Order leather, board, $1.25. Order leather, limp, $1.50. Order leather, flexible, $2.50.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success. No. 248a, cloth . . . . .75

Which Side of the Fence Are You On?

During the past few years, the industrial progress and growth of this country has been nothing short of marvelous. The increase in the population of our large cities has been tremendous. As a consequence, the consuming or non-producing population is increasing much faster than the producing population. This condition has upset the economic ratio of supply to demand, especially in the case of agricultural food products—meat, milk and butter, and prices have gone to an almost unheard of level.

The consumer pays the bills. The producer reaps the benefit. He has the advantage.

If you are a consumer, why don't you turn producer? Instead of letting the high cost of living prove a hardship, why don't you turn it into a real opportunity?

If you don't get a good start on the road toward independenceville, now, while the going is good, you can't blame anybody but yourself. Your Uncle Sam will give you a farm. The rest is up to you.

It won't cost you anything to post up. Let me send you a copy of our Free Government Lands folder. It contains a lot of information that is interesting and valuable, some of which may surprise you.

D. CLEM DEAVER, Immigration Agent
Room 341 Q Bldg., Omaha,

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE BEST CLUBS SUGGESTED

Review of Reviews with any one of the following for the price of the Review of Reviews alone: Everybody's, Cosmopolitan, McClure's, Woman's Home Companion, American, Harper's Bazaar, Sunset, Etude, Delineator, Good Housekeeping, Housekeeper, Pictorial Review or Technical World. Our Price $3.00

Review of Reviews Woman's Home Companion McClure's Magazine	$4.15	Review of Reviews Woman's Home Companion Cosmopolitan Magazine	$4.15	Review of Reviews McClure's Magazine or Everybody's Delineator	$4.05
Review of Reviews Delineator Cosmopolitan Magazine	4.05	Review of Reviews Everybody's Magazine or McClure's American Magazine	4.05	Review of Reviews American Woman's Home Companion or Everybody's Mag. or McClure's	4.15
Review of Reviews Christian Herald St. Nicholas (new)	4.90	Review of Reviews Lippincott's Magazine American Boy	4.35	Review of Reviews Independent	4.25
Review of Reviews Youth's Companion Harper's Bazar	4.75	Review of Reviews Sunset Cosmopolitan or Good Housekeeping	4.05	Review of Reviews Scribner's Harper's Weekly or Harper's Magazine	8.25
Review of Reviews World's Work	3.60	Review of Reviews Century	5.75	Review of Reviews Pearson's Youth's Companion	4.75
Review of Reviews Popular Electricity American Boy	3.75	Review of Reviews Forest and Stream	4.10	Review of Reviews Musician Little Folks (new)	3.75
Review of Reviews American Magazine Pictorial Review	3.75	Review of Reviews Boy's Magazine Delineator	3.75	Review of Reviews Etude Woman's Home Companion	4.15
Review of Reviews Country Life	5.25	Review of Reviews Little Folks (new) Modern Priscilla	3.45	Review of Reviews Farm Journal (5 years) Woman's Home Companion	3.85
Review of Reviews Atlantic Monthly	5.60	Review of Reviews Outing Garden Magazine	5.40	Review of Reviews Christian Herald Delineator	4.05
Review of Reviews Current Literature McClure's	5.40			Review of Reviews Everybody's St. Nicholas (new)	4.90

ADDRESS ALL ORDERS TO

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE AGENCY

Herald Publishing House $100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further Particulars

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 12, 1913

NUMBER 7

Editorial

DUTIES OF BRANCH OFFICERS.

I. THE BRANCH PRESIDENT.

The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder. . . . Feed the flock of God which is among you, . . . not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.—1 Peter 5: 1-4.

Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.—Acts 20: 28.

The Twelve and Seventy are traveling ministers and preachers of the gospel, to persuade men to obey the truth; the high priests and elders holding the same priesthood are the standing ministers of the church, having the watchcare of the membership and nurturing and sustaining them, under the direction and instruction of the Presidency and the Twelve.—Doctrine and Covenants 120: 3.

THE HAND OF THE CHURCH.

If the general organization of the church, with its First Presidency, apostles, seventies, high priests, bishops, and other officers, is admirable, the organization of the local church or branch is no less admirable.

We may count the presiding offices of the branch on the thumb and fingers of one hand—the presiding elder, priest, teacher, deacon, and clerk—five offices, in a properly and fully organized branch, occupied by at least five active men. (Rules of Order, pp. 100, 101.)

If one of the members of the physical hand is missing, or out of place, or inactive, it is hard to get a grasp on material objects. If all the members are there, each in its place, all active, the hand can grasp things perfectly. In the branch, if some of these officers are missing, or out of place, or inefficient, the branch can not get a good grasp on the spiritual situation. But if all are there, each in his place, all active and efficient, the branch can grasp and hold the spiritual work that may be in hand.

It is very painful to have even one finger out of place. And it is sometimes very painful when a branch officer is out of his place. So the Lord has said that every man should learn his place and stand in it. Every officer should learn his duty and do it.

THE BRANCH PRESIDENT TO PRESIDE.

It may seem to be a truism to say that the branch president is to preside. But we mean that he is to preside in fact, and not in theory only. He is to be the head, not the figurehead.

All lines of activity and authority in the branch should be gathered up and center in the hands of the branch president,—though we do not mean that he should be an autocrat.

The admirable features of local church organization appear when we reflect that under him are men who administer different departments of local church work. There are the priests, assisting him in all his duties, and moving among the Saints in house to house visiting, strengthening, exhorting, and preaching. There are the teachers, watching over the morals of the people, that iniquity may not abound; admonishing, exhorting, and if need be assisting to prune the vineyard of the Lord. Then there are the deacons, assisting the teachers, and looking after the comfort of the congregation when assembled in the church building, as well as administering the financial affairs of the branch. There also is the clerk, whose work it is to keep the records of the church.

The branch president presides over these men as truly as he presides over the membership. He is their chief, and they report to him. Yet he is not to be a despot. He should be a leader, not a driver. He should hold these men to him in the work by the power of love and sympathy and good fellowship.

He should consult with them frequently, not only in private conversation with them individually, but also in the priesthood meetings, where the officers of the branch may meet and talk over all important affairs of the branch. Thus he secures their fellowship, and the aid of their counsel. Thus he is able to use the initiative of all the officers under him, and secure the benefit of their thoughts and ideas. Thus all may work together harmoniously, with concerted and precise action.

Yet, after all, he is at the head. He must have

24 MAR 22 JULY 13
ADDITIONAL SUPPLY

his own policies. He must have the courage and firmness to carry them out. He must shape the course of his own administration. He must learn to listen to men, get all the good he can from their advice, make up his mind carefully, reach a decision, and then stand by it. A vacillating leader is always unsuccessful.

We have been asked: "Should the presiding elder appoint speakers and those who are to have charge of prayer meetings, or should he leave all such matters to the vote of the priesthood meeting and abide their decision?" It occurs to us that the answer is found in the following:

The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 9.

It always has been given to the elders of my church, from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit.—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 1.

In this article, we are supposing, all the way through, that the branch president is an elder or high priest. In those branches where the president is a priest, teacher, or deacon, these functions devolve upon him, so far as the limitations of his priesthood permit him to perform them.

AS A PASTOR.

The branch president is to be a pastor to the people under his charge. That is a high and exacting calling. Jesus instructed Peter to feed his sheep, and to feed the lambs, also. Peter passed the instruction on to the elders in the scriptural reading quoted at the head of this article.

This feeding may be done in part from the pulpit. It is greatly to the advantage of the branch president if he be a good preacher. We may scoff at those who are always clamoring for a "good speaker." But the fact remains, that whatever a man does, it is a fine thing for him to do it well. If the branch president is a good speaker (yes, and has the reputation of being a good speaker), it but adds to his power; it enlarges the area of his influence for good.

But by the term "good speaker" we do not mean a mere entertainer. We mean one who can do more than entertain. One who can both hold interest and give something worthy of that interest. One who can instruct and build up. One who can break the bread of life to those under his ministry.

The work of the pastor, however, is not confined to the pulpit. He must visit the Saints in their homes, and get close to them as individuals. He is with them in times of sickness, and in times of poverty, and in times of death. He strengthens and sustains them at such times by his faith, advice, and works. And at such times he gets closer to them than he ever can while preaching from the pulpit.

TO GUARD THE FLOCK.

He is to guard the flock against all influences that would destroy it. If evil spirits or false gifts manifest themselves in the congregation, it is his right and duty to detect them and proclaim against them. And when this is done, let not the Saints make the mistake of supporting the side represented by the evil spirit, or the spurious gifts in opposition to the pastor.

He is to guard the flock against false teaching and false doctrine that might tend to corrupt and destroy. And he is to guard it against evil and designing men that, like wolves, might creep in to devour.

In all this work he should be diligent and watchful. And remember that the good Shepherd gives his life for the flock. Not that he may be required to die for them in every case. The man who spends his life in service has given his life for the flock. Jesus, the great Shepherd, both lived and died for his followers. He will always stand by his under shepherds when they are in line of duty.

ALL OTHER FUNCTIONS.

The branch president is to perform all other functions belonging to the Melchisedec priesthood as occasion may require, such as baptizing, administering to the sick, ordaining officers, laying on hands for the conferring of the Holy Ghost, administering the sacrament, and all those high and holy duties that belong to his office and calling.

QUALIFICATIONS.

It will be seen by all this that the presiding elder will require the gift of wisdom. He will need intelligence. He should cultivate tact. He must be prayerful and of great faith. He should have the spirit of discernment. He should be punctual, always beginning and closing services on time. He should be a man of tender heart. He should be a leader. Everywhere to-day the church needs leadership. Happy the branch where it is present. Unfortunate the branch where it is lacking.

This list of qualifications, with others that may occur to our readers, might tend to discourage some who feel their weakness. But remember that God has promised to give unto every man according to his need. The Spirit helpeth our infirmities.

BRANCH OFFICERS SHOULD BE SUSTAINED.

Having elected branch officers, the people should sustain them. It is unfair to any man to place him in office and then not rally to his support. The minority must always stand ready to sustain the choice of the majority; because under present conditions that is the only rule under which we can proceed. It is not the man that I want, or the man that you want, but the man that the majority wants that should be elected; and that man should receive our prayers and our support, and should be sustained by all.

If we honor these officers, God will honor them. That does not mean that if we dishonor them he will dishonor them; but it does mean that if we do not honor them he can not work through them to bless us, because we will not receive their ministrations. This will apply to the presiding elder and to all other branch officers.

We should not feel resentful if the deacon calls us to order when we are whispering or disturbing the meeting. He can not do otherwise and do his duty. We should not resent the ministrations of the teacher as an intrusion upon our private affairs, or repel the visits of the priest. They are doing their work as required by the law. They can not do otherwise, and do their duty. And likewise with the presiding elder. Members should honor all these men in their offices and cooperate with them and help to make their work pleasant and fruitful, that all together the flock may receive the blessings that wait upon an orderly, united, and devoted ministry.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTE.—Our next number in the series will be devoted to "Duties of the Priest."

JOSEPH SMITH AS TRANSLATOR.

Some little time ago Bishop F. S. Spaulding, of Utah, issued a booklet attacking the claim that Joseph Smith was an inspired translator. The appearance of this book has been the signal for a number of newspaper articles and numberless sermons by clergymen, all based on the claims made in this attack that the founder of the church was an impostor.

The Christian Herald is the latest to take up this matter, and several copies have been sent us, with requests for an answer. These articles are headed, "The 'Sacred Books' of the Mormons," and "A Mormon 'Sacred Book' on Trial" (an editorial), and will be found in the issue of January 29. This was forecasted in a way by an editorial item in their previous issue (22d) which we give herewith:

THE PROPHET JOSEPH SMITH'S INSPIRATION.

Seventy years have passed since Joseph Smith, "prophet, seer and revelator," founded the Mormon religion and announced to the world the "divine gift" of the Mormon Scriptures. One of the prophet's books, The Pearl of Great Price, which contains a number of hieroglyphic illustrations, held in great reverence by his followers, has recently come under the special scrutiny of several eminent Egyptologists in England, Germany, and the United States, with the surprising result that, according to an article in the New York Times of December 29, 1912, they agree in the main that the hieroglyphics in the Mormon prophet's book are neither more nor less than copies from Egyptian originals, and that the translations he has given are largely a work of the imagination. All the facts developed during this remarkable inquiry are now being arranged. While it is true that ours is a land where many vagaries of so-called religious belief are tolerated, it will be strange indeed, in the event of the promised evidence being conclusive, if all of Joseph Smith's revelations, including the golden plates, should not be repudiated. Of course, the Mormon leaders pronounce the so-called "discoveries" inconclusive, and ask their people to withhold judgment. One of the surprising things about the case is that, in view of the great progress in Egyptian research during the last twenty-five years, the origin of the mysterious Mormon hieroglyphics was not discovered earlier.—Christian Herald, January 22, 1913.

The Deseret News recently published answers to Bishop Spaulding's book and several editorials regarding his claims.

The HERALD editors have been observing the trend of events, and will likely offer to HERALD readers before long something by way of article or editorial in regard to Bishop Spaulding and his array of scientists.

---

"JOURNAL OF HISTORY."

Back numbers of the Journal of History are in such great demand and the stock on hand is becoming so limited, the management is forced to advance the price on bound volumes to $2 per volume, and on the unbound numbers to $1 per volume, four numbers. All persons interested in having a file of this important magazine will please take note of this change of price.

---

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

DEFENDS JOSEPH SMITH.—Brother O. R. Miller, pastor at Burlington, Iowa, received attention in a late issue of the Burlington Gazette under the caption, "He defends Joseph Smith." A week later this paper gave an outline of the brother's Sunday sermon, which was a history of the Reorganized Church. Brother Miller is to be congratulated on his success in getting publicity for the work in that city.

---

Carlyle said of Robert Burns that there was no truer gentleman in Europe than the plowman poet. It was because he loved everything—the mouse and the daisy, and all the things, great and small, that God had made. So with this simple passport he could mingle with any society, and enter courts and palaces from his little cottage on the banks of the Ayr. You know the meaning of the word gentleman. It means a gentle man—a man who does things gently with love. And that is the whole art and mystery of it. The gentle man can not in the nature of things do an ungentle, an ungentlemanly thing. The ungentle soul, the inconsiderate, unsympathetic nature can not do anything else.—Henry Drummond.

Original Articles

THE CHURCH THE INDIANS HAVE LONG LOOKED FOR.

THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

(This article is to be published in tract form for use among the Indians.)

This church has the history and traditions of the Indian people, written by their ancestors, many hundreds of years ago.

The following are a few of the points showing their identity, that they are of Israel: The cross; the story of the Christ, his birth, his crucifixion, and his visit to this continent; the story of the flood; the crossing of the Red Sea, and their deliverance from Egyptian bondage; the ark of the covenant; Noah's ark; the creation; also the crossing of the ocean to this land. This record also describes all the great ruins in the land of America; such as the temples, ruined cities, roads, viaducts, and mounds. Tells of their practice of circumcision, baptism, anointing of the body; and the sacred book once among them, long since lost to their view.

Scientific writers confirm the facts set forth in their traditions, also in their history, the Book of Mormon.

The Saints now have all these facts in their history to present to them. The history tells of their coming across the ocean to the land of America, and agrees with the Bible's prophecies, pointing to the same event. All these scientists have written their findings since the Book of Mormon was published to the world in 1830.

This book tells of their travels, wars, victories, achievements, and decline. Their experience here in America is a repetition of Israel's history, in coming into favor with God, then departing from him, and being rejected and going into darkness.

The unique Bible story of this people we wish to tell you. Read Genesis 48: 16-19.

This reading locates them "in the midst of the earth" from Palestine, which lands them in America. It also shows they were to become a great people, a multitude. Then reading the first verse of the next chapter we learn "what shall befall them in the latter days." Verses 22-28. Tells that Joseph was to have a greater blessing than his progenitors (which was the land of Palestine). This blessing was "to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills," from the land of Palestine, bringing us again to the land of America, the home of Joseph's posterity, and the Indian people are those people.

This reading also shows "his (Joseph's) branches," or posterity, were to go over the sea or wall.

The Bible prophecies are very plain, if we will follow them, in pointing out the travels of this strange people, the Israel of the Lord; his favored, chosen people. Please read the line of prophecies telling where Joseph's posterity were to go, and where they were to be in the latter days.

We now ask you to read a more complete account of this in Deuteronomy 33: 13-16, where Moses, "the man of God," "blesses these sons of Jacob"; and in Joseph's blessing we read, "And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fullness thereof, for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren."

So, you see, he here described the land of America, with all its rich minerals, fruits, wonderful fertility, etc.

Isaiah 16: 8 and Jeremiah 48: 32 shows this people went over the sea. And Jeremiah 49: 30-33 and Isaiah 37: 31, 32 give the time when they were to leave the land of Palestine, viz, just before the Babylonish captivity, and gives God's warning to them to "go in secret," and "go far away," to a goodly land that "dwelt alone," "without gates or bars," and where there were animals, just as that colony found here in America when they landed here 600 years B. C. Here was the happy hunting ground for the Indians for all these centuries, "without care," etc. This is Joseph's land; the home of his posterity.

Next we read the prophecies telling that they were to have a record. Ezekiel 37: 16-22: "Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions."

In those days they wrote on parchments and rolled them on sticks. That was done for Judah, and they were put in a book; that is, the Bible. The same was done for Joseph and kept for him, and was finally written on golden plates and buried in the ground, to come forth in the latter days, as we find the prophecy of it in Isaiah 29: 4, 10, 11. Here we find "their record" was to be "put in the ground," and to come forth in the latter day in the form of a book. This was literally fulfilled in 420 A. D. when they buried their record, then it came forth in 1827, and was published to the world in 1830. It is now read and believed by hundreds of thousands of people, and among them are the descendants of Joseph in this goodly land. This grand record will help anyone to understand the Bible, because it fulfills so many of the Bible prophecies, and teaches the same plan of salvation, the same God, the same Christ, etc. So no reasonable person could object to it, especially since science proves it true.

The Bible shows that in the latter days, the gospel was to be preached to all the tribes of Israel and Judah; and that the Lord will gather and bless them, preparing them to meet the coming King, Jesus Christ, when he is to "sit upon the throne of his father David" and "rule over the nations of the earth," and "of his kingdom there is to be no end."

God promised also he would restore the land of Palestine to its fruitful state by letting the former and latter rains fall on their land. This was done in 1852. The land is now fruitful, and the Israel of God are gathering home, according to his promise to them. When this was done the Lord promised these Indian people he would greatly bless them and bring them to the true knowledge of their fathers and the true knowledge of their Redeemer. So we come to you people with this grand message and offer you the chance to come into his favor, and enjoy the Spirit of the Lord, as did your fathers, when Christ visited them here in America; also as the Jews did in Palestine soon after he was crucified.

We read in the Book of Mormon, pages 631-650, where Christ made his appearance to the people here in America, and gave your ancestors his laws, and his Spirit, as your traditions tell. Science confirms the same, and your history tells all about it. The Bible says he would visit them, read John 10:16 where he said, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." You see they were to hear his voice. They did "hear his voice," etc. When were they to be one fold and have one shepherd? (Read Ezekiel 37: 20-25.) Here is when the two records, of Judah and Joseph, are to be joined in one, and one king is to be king over them all.

Next we come to the question of the true church of God upon earth, which is his "habitation through the Spirit," among his people. This is what the Indian people are longing for, and we have it for you. Listen to the message which some of your chiefs and leading men have already obeyed, and are now beginning to enjoy the Spirit of the Lord; and we call upon all Israel to come to the "standard," "the ensign" which the God of heaven has raised in the latter days for all his people. Read Isaiah 11: 10-12; 18: 1-3; Joel 2: 15-30.

Here is a brief description of the church of Christ, as it was among the people in New Testament times; also among your ancestors, and that we now bring to you; it is the kingdom of God; organized with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, bishops, deacons, etc. Read Ephesians 4: 11 and 1 Corinthians 12: 28, where we read that God set these officers in the church as it pleased him. And in the second chapter of Ephesians and verses 20-22, we find that they were "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom the whole building, fitly framed together, groweth into an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."

So, brethren, we call you to come to this church, which is his habitation through the Spirit, and you shall find the "rest to your souls" you have been longing for so long. This is God's order of things. Why not, then, all the Indians come into the one true fold?

In this church we have the same organization they had in the Bible times; the same gifts of the Spirit; with all the signs following the believer; now, as then, as we read in Mark 16: 16-18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe," etc. Are there any believers in the world? Then the signs should follow, for Christ said "they shall follow."

Read also 1 Corinthians 12: 1-10 where we find nine spiritual gifts spoken of that were in the church, viz, wisdom, knowledge, faith, miracles, gifts of healing, prophecy, discerning of spirits, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues. How does it come the Saints have the complete gospel of the Son of God? We answer, Because we believe in God, that he has fulfilled the following prophecy: Revelation 14: 6, 7: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment has come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

This has been literally fulfilled in the coming of the angel, bringing to earth the power of God, restoring the authority (the priesthood) to minister in all the ordinances of his gospel, as in olden times. That is the reason the elders of this church lay on hands to confirm the newly baptized converts, and to confer upon them the Holy Ghost, as was practiced in the New Testament times, as in Acts 8: 14-17; also Acts 19: 1-6; and 9: 17; to confirm them members of the church.

Also to ordain men to the ministry; bless little children; and for the healing of the sick, as was practiced in Bible times. Read James 5: 14; Acts 6: 6, and Matthew 19: 13, and many other places teaching the same things.

Now, brethren, if these parts of the Scriptures are not true, what assurance have you that any of it is true? These are the ones that are some of the tests that the Master gave, and we believe and practice these things, and believe in all the rest that he has been given for the salvation of the souls of men. And this is the reason the angel came to the earth, to put us back "in the old paths"; that Israel might be gathered, and the world be warned, that a people might be prepared to meet the Savior when he comes to make up his jewels, and to reign with his people. I am sure you want to be ready; then "come in at the door," John 10:1; "enter the true fold"; and get the benefits of the education afforded to those who receive the Spirit as the abiding Comforter. These things were to remain in the church "till we all come in the unity of the faith"; this is God's perfect plan. Read Ephesians 4:12, etc.

The Indian people believe in the visitation of angels, dreams, visions, the healing of the sick, and the manifestations of the Spirit; then our message will appeal to you.

Read a few of the promises made by your ancestors, to your people; consider what we have to say in our appeal; then decide the all-important question, What must I do to become a child of the kingdom and a member of the true church?

"Then shall the fullness of the gospel of the Messiah come unto the Gentiles, and from the Gentiles unto the remnant of our seed; and at that day, shall the remnant of our seed know that they are of the house of Israel, and that they are the covenant people of the Lord; and then shall they know and come to the knowledge of their forefathers, and also to the knowledge of the gospel of their Redeemer, which was ministered unto the fathers by him."—Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 4:16-18.

"For after the book of which I have spoken shall come forth, and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord; there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed. And then shall the remnant of our seed know concerning us, how that we came out from Jerusalem, and that they are descendants of the Jews. And the gospel of Jesus Christ shall be declared among them; wherefore, they shall be restored unto the knowledge of their fathers, and also to the knowledge of Jesus Christ, which was had among their fathers. And then shall they rejoice; for they shall know that it is a blessing from the hand of God."—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 12:80-83.

Again we read that the Lord says he "will prolong their days, until they come to the true knowledge of their forefathers, and concerning the restoration of our brethren the Lamanites to the knowledge of the truth; that in the latter times, the promise of the Lord has been extended to our brethren, the Lamanites; and notwithstanding the many afflictions they shall have, and notwithstanding they shall be driven to and fro upon the earth, and be hated and smitten and scattered abroad, having no place for refuge, the Lord shall be merciful unto them; and this is according to the prophecy that they shall be brought to the true knowledge, which is the knowledge of their Redeemer, and their great and true Shepherd, and be numbered among his sheep."

These are a few of the many promises made to you good people, and we are ready as ministers of the meek and lowly One to call the attention of you people to the importance of these things, held sacred by you in your traditions. And we now say unto you, Hear the voice of the GOOD SHEPHERD, "COME TO THE TRUE FOLD" AND "LIVE FOR EVER."

HUBERT CASE.

• • • • •

SHAKE OFF THE DUST.

We are glad to be able to inform the Saints we have made commendable advancement in the work in hand relative to the United Order of Enoch during the year 1912. We have now reduced the debt upon the land to about one half the purchase price, and feel we can breathe more freely; and the "prospect pleases," for we feel assured our hopes will soon be realized, viz, freedom from debt and interest, and the work so long ago ordered of the Lord taking an onward stride.

"Beautiful for situation" is the plot of land purchased for the Saints to build their homes upon, and where we expect to build shops and factories when we have freed the land from incumbrance. Let the Saints near and far cheerfully respond to the needs so pressing upon us and purchase the remaining lots, or liberally support the effort being made to successfully carry on the work.

Brother Edward Rannie has done a splendid work for the order, in his field of labor, advocating its principles and purpose among those with whom he mingles. We are now in receipt of an order for three lots and a prospective fourth from him, which work could be duplicated by many of our missionaries if they would inform themselves of the splendid work to be performed by the order when financially upon its feet. We are making a desperate effort to meet every claim against the land within six months. Let every Saint get busy, and with the same determination join hands with us, and the work will be accomplished.

We have written to presidents of branches personal letters covering most of the States—the majority of which have not even thought the matter worth a two-cent stamp for a reply, and yet they are preaching and advocating the redemption of Zion, gathering, etc., and when a practical demonstration of our faith is called for, they are apparently as silent as the tomb.

What is our cause in this matter, is yours, wherever you may live, for the command is to all; for the benefits are for all those who have made "covenant with the Lord by sacrifice," and if the provisions for the reception of the Saints in Zion are not made, there must of necessity be confusion and disappointment come to those who move into the center stake or the regions round about.

"The United Order of Enoch" has been organized for the purpose of making preparations for the gathering together and sustaining the children of God. The land has been purchased that there may be homes provided for those who gather, and for the purposes of God in granting inheritances and stewardships to the worthy among us; the rich among us, or such as have a surplus, are to cast it into the treasury, as provided in sections 77 and 101 in Doctrine and Covenants. Zion can not be built up under any other law than that given—no other impulses than those of love and sacrifice can be put into operation to successfully bring about God's purposes; then why delay the carrying out of what is demanded of us and which can be easily accomplished if we all decide to do what is required of us?

The duty to help this movement is resting upon every Saint, and we should require no further appeal to get busy, and with the force of help representing our missionary equipment, if they will take up this important matter and work at it, we will soon be prepared to sing the doxology, and our work then will be begun.

I have just made inquiry at the office of the First Presidency and find there are five hundred and twenty-eight branches of the church in the United States. If each branch president would collect an average of fifty cents per member and forward that amount to M. H. Siegfried, treasurer, we will build a church on the plot as soon as there are sufficient Saints there to demand its use, and dedicate it free from debt. Won't you do this for the Master's sake? Let us with Israel of old say, "All thou has commanded of us will we do."

R. BULLARD.

* * * * *

HOW WE EVANGELIZED OUR CITY.

No. 4.—"Methods and Tactics" Series.

In this article Elder Peterson tells of his experience in city work in Winnipeg. The article contains many practical points, just such as we wish to bring out in our special series, and also is calculated to arouse enthusiasm. City work calls for enthusiasm,—for enthusiasm coupled with organization and intelligent methods.—EDITORS.

I have been requested to write up my ideas of getting our work before the people in the city, and how we succeeded. As to the success, I can not write fully, although we are succeeding admirably so far as we have gone, and have full faith and confidence in the remainder.

Missionary work in the city differs widely from work in the country. Not that the preaching should be different, nor that it requires a different type of man, but the manner of reaching the people requires more effort and enticement. Besides, this is becoming more and more an age of reading and seeing, than of hearing. The newspaper and the picture show appeal more to the sense of the age than the preacher or the lecturer.

Formerly, when there were no telephones in the country, and towns were far apart, people used to go to church to see and converse with their neighbors. Where the crowd went most others followed; but such is not the case now in the country, and much less so in the cities. There are so many attractions in a city that we can not expect to compete with them, nevertheless there are ways of reaching some. In Canada we have a better opportunity than in the States, for here all theaters and picture shows, together with all places of amusement, are closed on Sunday.

Two words tell our whole story: "Organize," and "Advertise."

A good organizer for city work is better than a great preacher. One who can get everybody to work is better than one who attempts to do all the work himself. Evil is easier worked out than thought out of the human heart. Getting everyone to work will sooner increase their spirituality than will preaching to them. Righteousness, on the other hand, is easier worked into one's heart than preached in; hence, a good organizer is better for the Saints than a good preacher. However, a good organizer need not necessarily be a poor preacher.

The first thing necessary to evangelize a city is to get the Saints to work together enthusiastically. If no more than this is accomplished, that means a great deal. If the Saints are not enthusiastic in the best thing on earth, they can not expect others to be so. A missionary in the city, as elsewhere, must be void of jealousy and selfishness. His highest aim should be to develop others. A missionary is a failure if he does not do that. He should not be calling and ordaining everyone who will allow him to lay hands on him, but develop all in spirituality and experience, so that God will want them as his trusted servants. Never mind the calling and ordaining, that will come in time; indeed, that is more the work of the Twelve, anyway. One does not need an ordination to work and secure eternal life. Efficiency is worth more than an ordination to any man.

Order is the foundation of all societies, and said to be the first law of heaven. I should feel that I had failed in my mission if I failed to develop presiding ability in every place where I had been. Frequent parliamentary practices would aid much in this particular.

Several committees will be necessary to aid in city work. A business meeting should be readily called by a branch official if the missionary works in harmony with him. It is perfectly right that he should be respected, with all others, in the divine office which they hold. Disrespecting their office is to disrespect God.

In this city we have, first of all, a finance committee, for nothing can be done without finance and plenty of it. In this committee the Sunday school and the Religio should be represented, so that they may be helps in deed, and not in name only. They should arrange ways of securing cheerful giving, and not the drum, drum, style that makes everyone weary until they either pay up or quit, and generally the latter,—an entertainment, a supper, or a lecture, or any legitimate and instructive way. The Sisters' Aid might "aid" indeed.

A tract committee is our next best asset. This committee can either order tracts, or write them and have them printed. We write our own here, for several reasons. First, it takes so long to get them over the border and through the custom house, that our patience is sometimes very much strained when we get them, and even then our church tracts are not always suited to the locality, and many of them are too long for this present hustling age. We purchased the latest "Rotospeed" and do our own printing. A "Rotospeed" will print one hundred and sixty copies of a typewritten page per minute, and prints about five thousand copies at only the cost of the stencil and the paper. Our machine cost us thirty-five dollars here, but they are ten dollars less in the States. It will last for years.

Care should be used in getting out the tracts. Nine out of every ten persons do not attend our church because they think we are in some way connected with the Utah Mormons. That thought should be thoroughly removed the very first tract. Here is our first one:

"DO YOU KNOW.

"That it will not injure any man's religion to correctly understand that of others, unless his own be of that kind that will not bear comparison?

"That the only way to correctly understand the religion of others is from their own pulpit or press?

"That information gained from biased sources is only biased knowledge?

"That persons with biased knowledge often persecute the innocent?

"That public opinion is not always God's opinion?

"That reputation is one thing and character another?

"That no society should be judged by its members nor by their reputation, but by its doctrine?

"That public opinion and biased history one time reported Henry VIII having married his own illegitimate daughter; Calvin as being a murderer; and Wesley as having sold gin?

"That the same lying spirit attacked Joseph Smith and still continues the fusillade?

"That there are a hundred and twelve points of difference between the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?

"That a similarity of name does not prove a similarity of doctrine?

"That the Reorganized Church never accepted Brigham Young as a leader, nor the evil doctrines he tried to add to the original Latter Day Saint faith?

"That the Reorganized Church never accepted the Christianity which he taught?

"That there are more differences between these two churches than between the Catholics and the Baptists, claiming succession from the same origin?

"If you do not know all the above to be true, then attend the services of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ at 241 Kensington Street, Saint James, and prove these statements true to your complete satisfaction.

"Take a Deer Lodge car west on Portage Avenue, and get off at Kensington.

"Preaching each Sunday at 11 a. m. Special services at 7 p. m.

"Write to J. W. Peterson, 171 Langside Street, for literature or phone Sherbrooke 257.

"You will find the doctrine of this church truly orthodox, and intensely Christian in every point."

This tract is not copyrighted. If anyone wishes to use any thought in it,—why, it was written for that purpose. Furthermore, anyone having friends or acquaintances in or around Winnipeg, we would be glad if you would cut it out and send it to them. Do not be afraid of your HERALD. Put it to some further use than lying around in the garret. We expect to leave one of these at the door of every house in town and then start in with others. It is not a good plan to call people to the door and hand them the tract. Very often they are angry at being called away from their work, and would not accept it if offered to them. The tracts cost less than ten cents a hundred and you can afford to put them everywhere. If only two out of a hundred read it, that is five cents each. Is not a man's soul worth more than five cents? Just here is a good place to impress on the "cheerful givers" that we should not think how little we can give to save others, but how much.

We propose to get out a special tract for the officials and public men of the city and mail it to them. Care is needed, of course, for most of these men don't care a rap for religion, but are alert for some information, and especially if it is something that has been suppressed. We can furnish them very interesting reading along that line. Then, too, the teachers always have a lesson in history on the Mormon question sometimes during the year. A few days before that lesson we propose to help them to explain the lesson in harmony with facts, and to make the matter sure we shall give one of the tracts to the scholars as they come from school the day before the lesson.

There are large societies here of other churches. We expect to get out a gentlemanly tract, calling their attention to our belief on some matters they are looking for, and hand them out as they are on their way home from their church. Then there are picture shows and theaters and our committee will see to it that they are supplied with a tract suitable for such minds. Not one to offend, but to attract their attention.

This calls for another committee, a distributing committee. This is a very important one. The work should be done very systematically and without offense. Every person who can walk a block should be asked to distribute tracts. No one should be exempt. Older ones should set an example to the younger ones, and the children should be encouraged to work to save others. The Sunday-school teacher can impress this matter on the children and enthrust them with a desire to deliver tracts.

We shall see that we are properly represented on the telephone book and the city directory.

Summer schools or any other good work can be properly seen to at the proper time.

We have inaugurated a system of cottage meetings at the homes of the Saints and friends in various parts of the city, and propose to develop our young talent here and at the Sunday morning meeting, so that when the missionary leaves the work can go right on without him. This only gives the missionary one or two sermons a week, but all the good is not done in preaching. A good director is not one that does all the work himself. By this plan we are succeeding by degrees in getting everybody busy and happy. A number of outsiders are coming into the church. A very worthy young man was baptized recently; another one or two have given their names, and the work has just begun.

We propose to run a lecture bureau, an advertising bureau, and a mail order business, in charge of various committees, in this way, and we think, if no more, Winnipeg will find out that we are in town.

I spent some of my early days in a printing office, and I learned that "subscriptions" was the weak point in a newspaper man. We are working a plan now to furnish so many subscribers to the papers in town to either print the Sunday evening sermon or some other matter once a week. Arrangements are not yet completed, but look favorable. They have promised to print an article or two free. If we can not get in any other way, we can pay for it, if the finance committee will get busy enough, and get before the public in that way, whether they wish it or not. They can not refuse our advertisement without quitting the business or standing a lawsuit.

We would be glad to hear the experience of others.

Very kindly,

J. W. PETERSON.

• * * * •

THE BAPTISM OF CHILDREN.

While I was at my work one day in the summer of 1885, a young girl, (then nearly nine years old) came to me and said that she and some other young folks desired to be baptized that day, and that I should baptize them. I asked her some questions and then said that, as the days were hot, we would wait until about sunset, and if they would come along then we would go to Brother Joseph Smith's pond for the baptism. That was then the only water we had to baptize in.

Now I had fully believed the commandment as to the need of the preparation and baptism of children when they came to be eight years old, and I had baptized a large number at Plano, Lamoni, and elsewhere, but I had received no special witness or impression about the matter; nor had I asked for any. But this time, without any premeditation or even a thought of questioning, there involuntarily arose to my lips the words, "Is it right to baptize so many children?" And immediately, as I spoke them aloud, before I had the least chance to meditate any reply, or even think anything whatever, instantly I heard a voice which said, "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand, for thou canst not tell which shall prosper, this or that." I spoke out at once, "That is so, Lord; for as many baptized in maturity go back from the right way as those baptized in childhood."

From that day I was fully satisfied. Yet I saw more clearly how great a responsibility rested upon parents to prepare their children, or else take the consequence of failure to do so.

Why this experience came to me I do not know, unless because I needed more emphatic and decided comprehension of the value of this commandment. I have related the incident many times, and now I feel that I ought to write an article on it.

I will add that after I heard the foregoing words spoken, I remembered that similar words were somewhere in the Scriptures. I searched, and found them in Ecclesiastes 11: 6, but the reading was a little different from what I received. Following is the article which was written previous to my writing the foregoing, which I decided to give as an introduction.

The subject of the baptism of children is one of greater importance and of a more serious nature than many Saints seem to have realized, especially many parents. For in the past nearly all fathers and mothers appear to have let the conversion and obedience of their children be accomplished or not, just as chanced or happened to be, without any special efforts on their part toward their conversion. And some have spoken so lightly of the divinely appointed order about their children, and have so little valued their own responsibility in the matter, that the obedience of the younger ones has either been greatly hindered or altogether prevented in this life, even the way of salvation in Christ for those beloved souls being closed by the very ones whom God has made responsible for their guidance, and for whose course in life they will be largely accountable at the bar of God, even before him who gave them this great charge.

Looking upon this carelessness and this apparent indifference on the part of fathers and mothers, it is surprising that such do not see the solemn urgency of that course which is clearly the order and will of our heavenly Father, even that all children whose parents are members of the church of Christ should have their minds and hearts prepared for this important event and its eternal consequences; namely, their baptism by water and the Holy Spirit. They need to be fully instructed that the great object of life here is for the purpose of being made ready both for the future years they will have on earth and for the eternal future beyond. Therefore is the Lord's commandment given that children ought to be baptized as soon after they are eight years old as can be done, following the proviso that they shall be fully instructed by the parents, and thus be made ready to receive the saving benefits and the divine blessings which follow the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands. The revelation on this particular point is found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 68, paragraph 4, where it is declared by the word of the Lord that it is obligatory upon parents, lest sorrow and condemnation come upon them for failing to carry out the instruction there given. The failure to do so is called a "sin," and therefore it is important that they should teach their children, even.

To understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ, the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands when eight years old. . . . And their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of hands; and they shall also teach their children to pray and to walk uprightly before the Lord.—Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4.

And therein it reads that whoso fails to do this, "the sin be upon the heads of the parents."

But some have claimed that, as the complete reading of this commandment specifies that it pertains to the people "in Zion" and those "in any of her stakes that are organized," therefore the enjoined duty pertains to no others; that it does not include parents and children who are not living in the central spot, or in those portions of territory embraced within stake lines; that therefore the parents who dwell in branches which are situated in districts merely, also scattered Saints, even all those who are not included in stake boundaries, are therefore not included in and subject to this injunction, therefore are entirely excused and excusable for disregarding it as obligatory.

But, while I willingly admit that greater advantages are intended for and ought to exist in Zion and in the stakes, whenever and wherever they are organized, and that for this reason the Lord holds to a greater accountability the parents who dwell at the center and in the stakes, yet my argument is that grave dangers attend parental carelessness or indifference to the force and meaning of the most vital part of the aforesaid commandment, no matter in what portion of the world the families dwell. If they have not the actual benefits which ought to be enjoyed by those living in Zion or in her stakes, where also their obligations would be increased, or if they are excused by the Lord from certain penalties because outside of stakes they are encompassed by the contaminating influences of open wickedness, which hinders proper or thorough growth in Christian righteousness, yet there the parental responsibility for the children is the more increased, and the reward beyond this life (as well as their joy here) will be greater if they bring their sons and daughters safely through the evils which encompass them, and are able to say in truth at the judgment bar of God, "We hearkened to thy word and have diligently instructed and guided the souls thou gavest into our charge, and now we bring them back to thee, that we may all dwell together in thy kingdom."

Surely the fathers and mothers who sincerely love God and the Lord Jesus Christ; those who so devoutly love the gospel of salvation that they seek daily to live up to its requirements, those who know and feel the revealing and quickening power of God, and who enjoy the happiness which comes from that knowledge, will not slacken their diligence, but rather will increase it. And such will not desire to be excused from the joyful duty and the gladsome pleasure that are found in leading and guiding the intelligent young souls that have been placed in their care during their few years on earth.

Whenever parents have learned enough about the "plan of salvation" and of the purposes of God which will give eternal happiness to mankind; and when, having so learned, they are intelligently able to obey the gospel themselves, then also they are capable of teaching the same truths to others, especially to their own offspring, they who so readily trust in their parents, those who are so easily taught, those who so quickly learn not only foolish and evil things, but also good things, even great and eternal truths, if those whom God has provided as their guardians in this world will do their heaven-ordained duty toward them.

A further objection has been made that children at eight years old or thereabouts, are not capable of understanding such important doctrines as faith, repentance, baptism, etc.; therefore that it is unwise to influence them to profess such faith and to be baptized. "Let us wait until they are older," has been said. Yet who knows more about this than God does? And who is he that has promised and pledged himself to accept such prepared children? Is it not the Lord himself? Who, then, shall say that it is foolish or unreasonable, or that we can not expect children to be fitted for baptism and church membership at eight years of age?

Now let us examine certain conditions which parents have been commanded to observe. Is it not plainly apparent that they ought to fully instruct, and no doubt prayerfully instruct, their children before they are offered for baptism? Does it not read that those who do not teach their children "to understand" are to be judged? It reads that "they shall teach their children to pray and to walk uprightly before the Lord." Are there any fathers and mothers, or other people who sincerely pray to God and yet do not always try "to walk uprightly," and to draw near to him, no matter whether they are aged, middle-aged, or young? Is not this the duty of every member of Christ's church? Also that every such member who has children shall teach them to do likewise? Surely all such will consider it to be their highest duty, their greatest privilege, to teach and so lead their children in the path of truth and honor. If the people of Zion are to be "the pure in heart" then those who are now striving to be pure in heart will also earnestly desire and seek that their sons and daughters shall likewise be among that class, whether in heaven or upon the redeemed earth.

As for the capacity of a child's mind, it is certain that many parents have been astonished and grieved by suddenly finding that their children have learned deep things in the ways of folly and sin before they had an idea that it was possible for any children to do so, especially that their children might do so. And we read that in the world of evil many very young boys and girls have learned proficiency as thieves and pickpockets, and to be adepts in remarkable lines of wickedness, such as seemed incredible before it was proven.

On the other hand, how many examples there have been of great ability in good ways, and of manly young boys who have become breadwinners and noble helpers to their parents; and young girls who have occupied faithfully and devotedly as "little mothers" to the younger children, and many of both sexes who have shown wisdom, honesty, and virtue that has surpassed those of a multitude of adults. Many such have proven steady, thoughtful, attentive, obliging, unselfish, and devoted to duty, while yet in the years of boyhood and girlhood. Their number may be few compared with the number who are thoughtless, heedless, selfish, and untrustworthy, but the difference in their birthright and training is seen as it is also with full-grown men and women. And it demonstrates what can be done with children and by children at a very early age; both the good results and the bad ones.

Therefore shall we not freely admit that the Lord knows what is best, especially as he is the one and the only one who can make eternal laws, and the only one who can give the eternal reward? It is written in the Doctrine and Covenants that John the Baptist was baptized "while he was yet in his childhood," and we suppose that the law of the Lord was at that time known to the parents of John, and by them was observed as is now commanded again.

I feel very certain that where the youth of the Lord's church are kept from filling their minds and memories with foolish, worthless, and evil reading, and where by parental affection and judicious training the children have learned to love better things, even such books as are of an intellectual and elevating character, that such young people are now prepared and are being more and more made ready for still further mental, moral, and spiritual advancement all along the way of life here and for the greater opportunity in the millennium, after the first resurrection.

Those children who have learned to lovingly obey their wise parents in these things are also likely to become lovingly obedient to the commands of their heavenly Father, when they are old enough to do so. They also learn the lessons of helpfulness, faithfulness, and trustworthiness, also of obliging and courteous manners toward their parents and toward all others they meet, especially the aged and the unfortunate.

Proper training not alone prepares them for the baptism of water but, still more important, it prepares them for the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and enables them to manifest the fruits of the Spirit in their daily lives of loving service to others, and of devotion to God and his cause. I have seen such young people, enough such examples to prove what can be done. Yet, considering the manners, customs, and conditions in the world to-day, in which Saints too are involved, it is not very strange that not more children of this class are found. However, the preparation is going on for that millennial "day of a thousand years," when the children will be so well born in body and disposition, when they will inherit such righteous traits of character, that the Lord foretells of his people that "their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation."—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 10. With this a certainty, then the Lord should be taken at his word when he says that even now he will accept them in his church, whenever they are instructed and guided in their duty and are baptized as he has commanded.

Consequently there can be no doubt that if parents will thoroughly put themselves to the work of teaching and guiding their children, as also to governing their own spirits and controlling their own dispositions, and having daily prayer in their homes, that then, in such Zionite atmosphere, their children, even in our day, will grow up, if not "without sin," at least with noble traits and with prevailing tendencies towards righteousness in heart and fitness for the kingdom of God. And when parents teach and direct their children in the way they should go, they will themselves love to walk in that way, will partake of the benefits of their own teaching, and will grow into a greater faith, into a more loving trust in God, and into a more resolute diligence to do all the duties that they teach their children to do.

Yes, it is certain that children can be prepared at the age of eight years, to make a worthy beginning, and from that to go onward and upward in the path, even as they shall gain strength, and as the Lord shall guide their hearts and minds by the Holy Spirit which he has promised and which he will give them, especially in answer to earnest daily prayer.

Another good fact: It has often been the case that the memory that they have been baptized has had a restraining influence upon the actions of young people, and the chastising by their consciences has kept many from going in the ways of error and folly, perhaps into degradation and ruin; and such have turned back in time to save their souls from defilement and eternal loss; whereas if they had not obeyed the gospel some would have said, "Well, I have made no covenant with God; I am not a member of the church, and am under no obligations to it," and so have given themselves up to the will of others and to their own love of pleasure, or of vice, whichever the condition might be.

And whenever children have been baptized under favorable circumstances, after proper teaching and example, I believe that few such young people have succeeded in getting away from the reproving thought, "I am accountable to God for my conduct." Conscience will work in reproving and correcting until he who has really been "born of God" will not "continue in sin," even if he does enter therein for a time. These restraining powers have kept many from dangerous extremes, and the Holy Spirit's pleadings, added to the accusations by conscience, have caused remorse and reformation when those who were unbaptized have gone on to entire ruin.

Undoubtedly the parents who fully realize their own responsibility for their children's future, both here and hereafter, will continue to increase in a wise carefulness about their example in speech and conduct. They will also make greater efforts to be prayerful, faithful, studious, and watchful over themselves lest they fall behind their own children in moral and spiritual duties. There have been instances where the innocent darlings have caused the parents to be ashamed at their own lack of steadfast devotion, because children have shown their more complete faith in God, their greater trust in his promises, and their full confidence in the divine word to man.

Yet, further, I will refer to the fact that Roman Catholic authorities in their long training of children have claimed that if a child is diligently taught in certain lines up to eight years old that no one will be able afterward to overcome that teaching and substitute another in its place.

Also scientific men have written that the brain of a normally healthy child at the age of eight years is in construction as fully fitted to understand as is the brain of an adult. All he lacks is information, instruction, and experience to take his place among the grown-up people.

H. A. STEBBINS.

* * * * *

THE GOODLY INHERITANCE.

As a free-winged fowl glides without let or hindrance into its open domain of forest, field, and fen, so some men inherit wealth. What great possibilities stand open to one possessed of such an elaborate heritage! Might, power, and affluence of the kingdom of this world withhold nothing of their store from the hand which proffers gold; but all do not inherit and many can not acquire wealth.

Another splendid inheritance which endows its possessors with might and power is superior intellectual powers in some one or more particular branches of thought.

Intellectuality, though beyond measure as a gift from God, is not his best behest to man. The law of life which governs variety of being and capacity, forbids that we with perfect unity partake of intellectuality in this present world.

The greatest and most valuable heritage in the end, from creature to creature, must be one which is accessible to all the children of men from God the Father.

A strong, robust body, and health like a bubbling spring, is a heritage incomparable, yet some must endure weakened and distorted bodies, not from any wrongdoing of their own, but as an inheritance, or as the result of some merciless accident, or unconquerable disease. One may be well favored in wealth, intellectual endowments and health, and still be woe-fully wanting in the one thing needed for ultimate and complete happiness—the one thing bequeathed to the children of men of which all may partake freely—the one and only thing which will make it possible to supply all other deficiencies.

Those who lack in this world's wealth need no reminder that they are handicapped in many things.

Most of us have enough intelligence to know that our own intellectual supply is very limited and greatly defective. The weary days of the afflicted are a constant emphasis of their need of health, but some who are well supplied with these three points, yet foreigners to the greatest inheritance, are not aware of their own incompleteness and are in jeopardy of the loss of all. Ir.

“THE BOURNE WHENCE NO TRAVELER RETURNS,” whither we all constantly draw nearer, moneybags are useless. Mere intellectuality, unless supplemented by the preservative element from Jehovah's most elaborate dowry, must wane; and every whit of our physical validity must go to pay the price of entrance into that august “bourne whence no traveler returns.”

What then is the great inheritance, free to all, by which other values may be made secure? Let the Lord answer:

To open their eyes and turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.”—Acts 26: 18.

And how is this inheritance to be obtained? “Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord.”—Zechariah 3: 6.

With or without affluence and attainments of this world, the superb inheritance may be ours. One key opens the door to that supernal domain: with that key, rich or poor, prince or peasant, may enter; without it men and angels must ever remain aliens. That key is the Spirit of God, and is obtained without money and without price, so far as possibility of buying is concerned; but not without labor and sacrifice. But the nature of the labor and the extent of the sacrifice is such that none who “will” are deprived. “Whosoever will” includes all who are so minded,—not all who desire to enjoy the matchless glory of a celestial inheritance.

For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. . . . and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.—Romans 8.

And the Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; and the Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit; and every one that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit cometh unto God, even the Father.—Doctrine and Covenants 88: 7.

But some do not hearken, and will not be led, and Paul says of them: “Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his.”

MIGHT AND POWER.

Napoleon gained might and power, yet how far from the true inheritance! Many moneyed men make their might and power felt, yet how lacking they are. Intellectual orators of the rostrum, and statesmen wielding might and power have been veritable knaves in personal characters, and despots in public rule. Brilliant and scholarly preachers have held vast audiences spellbound by might and power, the while secret villainy hatched hellish enactments for diversion behind the scenes between sermons. An arena bull, or a Bob Fitzsimmons, or a Jack Johnson, can exert might and power, not only in the immediate pugilistic ring, but in the riff-raff underworld of a thousand cities set agog for the latest knockout news.

A society lady, plumed for the theater, or feathered and founced to make a stunning appearance in the front church pew, may exert might and power by being the talk of the town, but that unnoticed sister in the rear, plain of face and fashion may be the most acceptable to God.

A scholarly Darwin can exert might and power in leading multitudes to consent to the idea that their most venerable ancestor was an ape, while in a quiet chamber an ordinary, homely-faced mother, without knowledge of books or philosophy, but adorned with the Spirit of God teaches her son a simple truth about God and the creation, that will unite with other truth and live and expand when Darwinism and all the other isms will contribute their ashes to enrich the plant they tried to smother and crush.

Oh, that we could make these words of the Lord indelible! “Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord.”

A PARABLE.

Two men sought a goodly inheritance. One man clambered to the lofty peaks of the mountains for glittering gold. The gold was there, but the rocks produced no living thing. The other man planted in a fertile field, tilled diligently, and trusted to heaven to distill the dew into living fruits, and to extract from nature's fertility the golden corn.

The first man obtained his gold, and but for the planter would have famished, for the planter had obtained the bread of life; but the second man was the wiser of the two, for having secured the bread of life, he had sufficient in store to sustain him while he also went to gather gold as was needed to embellish his home and heritage.

APPLICATION.

Two classes of men now seek the goodly inheritance, but in the mart of eternity there can be no exchange of wares. The first-mentioned class seek the worldly mountains for valued metals and glittering gems,—and obtain; but there is no life-giving element in them and there is to be no exchange for supplies from the planter's garner!

The second class, ("and the first shall be last, and the last first") seek first the kingdom of heaven, (the bread of life) and all things else shall be added. "He that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Ephesians 6: 8.

Let us then above all other things seek to be worthy habitations for the indwelling of the "hidden man of the heart; in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."—1 Peter 3: 4.

And the righteous poor shall come into their inheritance when the saints inherit the earth. (Daniel 7: 27.)

Those who must endure weak and suffering bodies in this world, but who by the Spirit of Christ have been adopted into the royal family shall come into their inheritance at the first resurrection from the dead, when our bodies shall be "fashioned like unto his most glorious body." (Philippians 3: 21.)

And we who at present must deplore our limitations in compass of thought and focus of intellect, may, if we sow to the Spirit, attain unto the perfect inheritance, when with all saints we shall be able to comprehend the breadth, length, depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ which now passeth knowledge, when we shall be "filled with all the fullness of God." (Ephesians 3: 19.)

Let us all hold fast the key of the goodly inheritance.

JAMES E. YATES.

There is always work,
And tools to work withal, for those who will.—James Russell Lowell.

Make for yourself a quiet, unassuming, cultivated, but comfortable domestic atmosphere. Marriage, where there is true love on both sides and a right choice, is the greatest happiness on earth; there is no other state to equal it. I asked a physician the other day—an admirable fellow—how old he was and why he had never married. He said he had never met the occasion or the woman, and I answered that perhaps he had never really looked for her. By all means, I would say, marry, but marry carefully and rightly. It solves many problems both for the man and the woman; and how are women to develop their best faculties and virtues if you leave them to dwindle into spinsterhood?—George Meredith.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 630 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Two Verdicts.

She was a woman worn and thin,
Whom the world condemned for a single sin;
They cast her out on the king's highway,
And passed her by as they went to pray.

He was a man, and more to blame,
But the world spared him a breath of shame.
Beneath his feet he saw her lie,
But raised his head and passed her by.

They were the people who went to pray
At the temple of God on a holy day.
They scorned the woman, forgave the man;
It was ever thus since the world began.

Time passed on and the woman died,
On the cross of shame she was crucified;
But the world was stern and would not yield,
And they buried her in the Potter's Field.

The man died, too, and they buried him
In a casket of cloth with a silver rim,
And said as they turned from his grave away,
"We have buried an honest man to-day."

Two mortals knocked at heaven's gate,
Stood face to face to inquire their fate.
He carried a passport with earthly sign,
But she a pardon from Love Divine.

Oh! ye who judge 'twixt virtue and vice,
Which, think you, entered to Paradise?
Not he whom the world had said would win,
For the woman alone was ushered in.

—The Ram's Horn.

Dean Sumner Appeals for Modern Magdalen.

"The problem of the fallen man is of more vital interest to the city of Chicago than is the question of the fallen woman."

With this statement as his keynote, Dean Walter T. Sumner addressed a large audience in the Chicago Opera House yesterday at noon on "Chicago and her Magdalen."

"In all of our discussions of the modern Magdalen," said Dean Sumner, "we fail to answer one great question. What of the man? This is a man problem, not a woman problem."

"In the web of our society of to-day the unfortunate woman who has been tempted and has fallen is lost. She has not even an opportunity to plead for herself. The man, who is at least equally guilty, is set free. Without accounting, he is permitted to hold his position in society."

"Where is the justice in such a state of affairs as this? Why should there be a different standard of morality and common decency for men and for women?"

"It is not the professionally immoral woman, hardened in her life, that we should reform; it is the amateur, trapped by the libertine without religion, honor, or decency, whom we must protect. There are in this downtown district certain influences at work which are dragging down the young womanhood of our city. If you do not believe it, look at those shop girls who are working for starvation wages, and then look at their clothes. Do their wages pay for all this finery? Where does the money come from? This is a common problem in arithmetic."

"These girls represent an irresponsible type. They start right, but they soon become underclothed, underfed, and bloodless. Their hands are empty; their life is nothing but the daily grind. At home they are tired, lonely and unloved. They are hungry for friends and amusements. It is then that they meet the advances of men who seek them for their lawful prey; men who are not even sportsmanlike enough to give them a fair chance. They fall."

"These are the women I plead for. For their sakes I plead for an honest wage; a half holiday on Saturday, that they may rest their tired bodies and minds; and the protection of men who have sisters and daughters—for these poor girls are somebody's daughters, somebody's sisters. Let us be more charitable toward our women, and more exacting with our men."—Selected.

Letter Department

KNOBNOTER, MISSOURI, December 28, 1912.

Dear Editors: I have just read Brother Edward Rannie's article on "Our responsibility to the poor," and I hope to be allowed space to criticize one statement he uses; where he uses the word trash in referring to a certain class of poor, he says they belong to that class we had in the South before the war: common white trash. To this I take exception. Why confine the poor white trash to the South? Did the West, the East, and the North have no trash? I have found as many trash from the North as I ever met in the South. There was white trash in the South before the war, and is yet, but I am sure the North has white trash, and some black trash as well. Booker T. Washington has never married a white woman, and not all the colored people of the South are trash by any means.

Some people seem to think the people of the South are hardly human. Letters in the church papers a few years ago reflected on the South in no uncertain way, and elders have hurt their influence in the South by referring to it as not being civilized.

What difference does it make where we are born, whether in the South or the North? We are all to treat each other as brethren. I hardly think there will be any Mason and Dixon line in heaven. God says he is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he who fears him and works righteousness is accepted of him. For one I will be glad when the people of the North and the people in the South know each other better. Solomon said he looked upon the rich and he looked upon the poor and God made them both; so I have looked upon the people of the South and the people of the North, and God has made both of one blood to dwell upon the face of the earth.

I am a Johnny Boy and I like the Gray, and have no ill will towards the Blue, but please do not refer to the poor white trash of the South any more.

Yours for fair play,

C. L. SNOW.

PALMYRA, NEBRASKA, January 29, 1913.

Editors Herald: Your letter and proof sheets of Brother C. L. Snow's letter was received to-day, and I will reply as follows: I deeply regret that the term, common white trash, as used by me in my article, "Our responsibility to the poor," was understood by Brother Snow different to what I intended it should be, but such is the misfortune of human speech. We have a certain number of homely expressions which are in common use, of which the following are samples: "He is not worth a continental"; "He is a hobo"; "He is shanty Irish"; and "He is a squaw man"; all of which are used to convey the thought that the persons to whom they are applied are shiftless, careless, or lazy persons. I supposed that the expression common white trash meant the same thing, and in that sense I used it, wishing to convey the thought that we had some poor in the church who were in that condition, because they were careless, shiftless, and lazy, and that it was one of our duties to seek to bring about a reformation in their lives.

I deplore the thought of doing or saying anything that will fan the flame of sectional hate, and I am sure that my many friends in the church will bear me out in the thought that in public and private all my expressions have been free from such wrong. I believe, and so teach, that the cause of that terrible war was the result of divergent teaching on political, social, and religious lines, and that on both sides all had just grounds to believe that they were equally honorable and conscientious in what they were doing. Neither side had any monopoly on courage, endurance, and bravery.

I believe I have gone farther on that question than most men; I never use the name rebel or Johnny Reb; I have taught my children not to use it; it is not used in our home. They are to me the "Confederates," or the "men who wore the gray." I can reach my hand across the bloody chasm into "Dixie Land," to my brother, and say, "Peace, be still," "Peace, sweet peace, the gift of God's best love."

I hope this will make my motive clear to all.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

EDWARD RANNIE.

WELLSTON, OHIO, January 20, 1913.

Editor Herald: The late Charles Dana, editor of the New York Sun (which he said shone for all), once defined to a green reporter what news was. He said, "If you see a dog biting a man, that isn't news; but if you see a man biting a dog, that's news, and bring it in." I just picked up the Cincinnati Enquirer, and observed this heading, "A train collides with a steamboat." That's a specimen of "news." Mr. Editor, I am going to try and send you some of the same article, along the line of what may be termed "vociferous advertising," growing out of the following conditions.

Apostle R. C. Russell made a new opening near this town, preaching in a schoolhouse, which finally was closed against him; but a policy of sticktoitiveness was adopted, so he sent for Elder N. L. Booker and wife, and the district tent was procured, services being held during the summer. From this effort, thirty-three were baptized, seventeen children blessed, a Sunday school and Religio organized, each with a membership of about seventy-five. From the beginning of this effort peculiar difficulties had to be overcome. Brother Russell said, "A fort the Devil doesn't think worth while defending, isn't worth bombarding."

After the tent season closed, Brother Russell decided trying getting a suitable place in the town (about 15,000 population). The Lubin Theater was rented, is no longer used for show purposes, the writer was wired to bring his Book of Mormon lecturing outfit and electric apparatus, arriving here on January 7. A fine and variegated variety of difficulties arose, but were eventually overcome. Here is where wisdom is shown in having two men travel together, when possible: one can encourage the other. These services were started with the Book of Mormon lectures as our very first effort.

The first night there were a number of children out, but not many adults; but the attendance increased nightly, the children helping to advertise us. When the fifth lecture was given the building was packed, over fifty standing in the aisles. After the five lectures were closed, and we started regular preaching, the attendance fell off; so here is where some advertising had to be done.

An article appeared in the local daily paper, written by the Baptist preacher, stating he would preach a sermon on the evils of "deathbed repentance." Brother Russell saw his opportunity; so he wrote an article in which he asked the preacher the following questions: "1. If you are now giving God's truth, wherein you claim deathbed repentance a humbug and a farce, where to-day are the spirits of the loved ones who died under the teachings of the churches that deathbed repentance was not a humbug and a farce, but a soul-cheering reality? 2. Under what rule of scripture can you prove the thief went from the cross to paradise? 3. What were you teaching on this subject before the day you gave your four common-sense reasons why it is all a farce to wait till death to repent?"

The preacher answered that all of the churches have taught false doctrine. Brother Russell came back at him with the statement, Then if the Baptist had discovered two false doctrines taught by his church, how many more will he probably discover by honest investigation? Can it be the church of Christ and teach false doctrine? An able argument was made, placing the Baptist in an embarrassing position. He has not answered Brother Russell. Some of his own congregation said he was no match for Brother Russell. Deathbed repentance and "hell" were now being discussed around town, so we procured large sheets of white paper, brush and paint, and our two large show windows, and two small windows, or entrance to auditorium, had the following:

What and where is HELL? Who go there, and how long do they remain? Sunday evening at 7.

Some new views on old questions. To-night, come in.

This is the place where the preacher is not afraid to be quizzed. Try him.

Then we made two lantern slides, one of these was made of glaring red celluloid, (same material as moving picture films are made of) and the same matter was written on it we had in the widow. The two moving picture theaters near us consented to run them on between change of films, so thousands saw our advertisement. Result, had to turn people away, as place was filled and many standing in the aisles! Monday we placed the following in our windows:

What and where is HEAVEN? Who go there? Hear some old ideas exploded! 7 by "Big Joe."

Subject to-night, HEAVEN. Where is it? What is it? Who go there? New light on an old subject. 7 by "Big Joe."

It rained all day and all evening, and rained hard, but the place was almost filled, some of the leading business men of the town being present. The "Big Joe" refers to the large new town clock, in a tower near the center of business section, and so-called by the people.

Tuesday morning we placed the following in the windows:

Why was this theater almost filled last evening? (pouring down rain). Sunday evening packed to its limit. Why? Ask those who come to the preaching. Be here inside when "Big Joe" says 7 outside.

In the other large window we placed a large family Bible, opened at 1 Corinthians 12:27 and Ephesians 4:11; long red ribbons run from high up on the window, down to the verses referred to, to attract people from across the street. Above the Bible, stuck to the window, in large letters we have this:

Here is the Bible church; Christ's church; which one in town is DTC? Are any of them ITC? Hear what the preacher says at 7.

In the other window, is this:

That Bible in the other window is open at verses describing the only form of church Christ ever built, to preach salvation. Have you such a church as that Bible describes in this town?

These various signs had arrows pointing to the Bible referred to, and on the sign referring to rain, had two umbrellas pictured, and the rain coming down in torrents.

We are arranging my stereopticon to throw our advertising from our building at night, across the street near a prominent corner. Smoked glass slides, written on with a sharp instrument, makes the lettering stand out clear and white, surrounded with black. Of course such advertising is only possible where an arc light is used in the lantern.

Have strips of cardboard 2 inches wide, 28 inches long, will lay these out and paint a church building on them as a whole. Then will letter each strip with one of the offices of the church, the gifts and blessings, and place in the window. Shall leave it there for a couple of days, then take away all but pastors and deacons and ask, Does that look like the New Testament church?

We are planning to get the school children in a contest finding out how many times Christian is mentioned in New Testament as the name of God's people, and how many times Saints is used in that way.

C. EDWARD MILLER.

COCKBURN ISLAND, ONTARIO.

Dear Herald: Our superintendent, Brother Robb, of Cockburn Island Sunday School, requested me to write you that we have some last year's Quarterlies and Sunday-school papers, and if any of the Saints would like them we would gladly send them some if they would write us.

SISTER H. G. MITCHELL, Secretary.

SWEET LAKE, LOUISIANA, January 30, 1913.

Saints' Herald: Brother J. T. Riley is with us now and is preaching at my house of nights. This is a thinly settled country, and of course our crowds are small. It does our hearts good to hear the grand old gospel preached in its fullness. We wish all the world could hear it, but they seem to be satisfied with what they have.

I know the Bishop is behind with his financial account, and I want to do all I can for the work. I am a poor man and can not help much, but we all can do something. So to all the Saints, everywhere, let us send to the Bishop fifty cents each by the first of March. All who can not send the fifty cents might send twenty-five. We all know that we can raise that much and not miss it. We sometimes think our little mites will not do much good, and withhold them; but let us all send as nearly as possible the amounts suggested to the Bishop, and I am sure he will be very glad to receive it.

Let us as brothers and sisters do our best to help the good work along. May God bless us all is my prayer.

W. A. HELMS.

COOKES POINT, TEXAS, February 2, 1913.

Editors Saints' Herald: It has been a long time since I saw anything in the HERALD from this place. Our branch of the church seems to be at a standstill. It seems that we are not progressing very much. As a rule I preach at the branch once a month, and usually have fair turnouts and interest. We keep up Sunday school work; I am superintendent of it. Not long since Brethren W. M. Aylor and W. E. Peak preached for us, some over a week, with fair interest and attendance.

The district conference is to meet with our branch, on the 15th, inst. We hope for a profitable time. There were two Utah elders in our community last week. I met them at my son-in-law's house, John Sherill's, where I had a tilt with them upon our differences. After they had exhausted their ammunition I continued to shoot them while they sat and received the missiles; I shot them through and through. After hearing what they did from me, the speaker offered his testimony as to the truth of their claims, and said that he would die for or by it. I told them that their testimony could be wrong, as a man's testimony was as he had been taught. They said that I was the first preacher of Reorganized Church, they had met with. They told me that they were going to make a house to house canvass of our county, talk, and distribute their literature. They did not say anything about preaching at our branch. I suppose they thought I would follow them with a falk, which I might, and again I might not; it would have depended upon what they preached. The missionaries told me some time since, that they had about three thousand members in Texas. It seems to me, that if our missionaries would push out, and open up more new territory, they would convert more people than they do by going from one branch to another.

E. W. NUNLEY.

GOODLAND, KANSAS, February 4, 1913.

Dear Herald: I thought a letter from this part of the vineyard, might be of interest to some of your readers. There are only a few Saints close to us, so we seldom get to hear a sermon. We have a live home class Sunday school though, which is a great help to isolated Saints.

Several efforts have been made here to get people interested in the gospel, but have not been very successful.

Goodland is a city of about two thousand five hundred population, and is a railroad town, where the pleasure of the world is the principal thought of the people.

The Methodists have had a successful revival lasting six weeks and got one hundred and fifty converts, and now the Christians are holding one.

It seems to me that much good could be done if a couple of energetic elders could come with a tent and hold meetings during the summer.

I saw a letter in the Ensign from a brother in Texas, asking the Saints to describe a good location to him. By the way, if we could get some Saints interested in this country, so that we could have church privileges, it seems to me that right here would be the place to live. Practically all the land here is good and level. Water is pure and plentiful. Instead of paying so much rent, or buying high-priced land in the East, why not investigate this country where land is cheap and rent low? Land can be bought for from ten to fifteen dollars per acre, according to distance from town, etc.

I have no land for sale, but would like to see people move here and think they would help themselves and us. For further information write to me.

We are striving to live up to the light we have received, and hope to remain faithful and true to the covenant we have made.

I remain in bonds,

ERWIN TRACHSEL.

CLEAR SPRINGS BRANCH, MICHIGAN.

Saints' Herald: We are all striving to keep in unity of the faith and heed the Masters' counsel. This is a small young branch and it pleases us much to see God's words concerning us partially fulfilled, for a short time ago we had the pleasure of seeing three precious souls led to the watery grave. In his love and mercy he counsels us from time to time. Ah, dear are the words of the Master. Not long ago we had the grand opportunity of hearing a gift of tongues through God's servant, Brother John LaLone. Many are the ways in which God bestows his beneficent love and kindness upon us.

A short time ago one brother and sister left us for an indefinite time. Much we missed them from their accustomed places. The sister, while absent, had an operation performed, but as God's watchful eye is upon all, so it was upon her, and she now is restored to us again, better prepared for the Master's use.

There are about three families of us here, but God has said that inasmuch as we were faithful, he would not let the branch go down. We are striving in our weak way to achieve success and desire your prayers to uphold and assist us.

God, in his mercy and infinite love,
Kindly looks down upon us from above;
Tenderly watches the sheep of the fold,
Ready to guide, and direct, we are told.

Laura Dimick.

WEST SCRANTON, PENNSYLVANIA, January 31, 1913.

Dear Herald: I wish to acknowledge, as much as weak words will acknowledge, the good received through the columns of your valuable paper. The HERALD is ever a welcome visitor to our home, it is (as the great Master expressed it) as a city set on a hill which can not be hid, and is a faithful representative of the church which has come forth as fair as the sun, clear as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners. It is a monitor to instruct us to discriminate among the mighty forces which are upheaving and disintegrating society, and to discover the cause is not altogether political, neither industrial, but is resultant from the fact that the people have chosen darkness rather than light, as the Book of Mormon states. The Gentiles shall become as salt that hath lost its savor. I believe that through the efforts of the periodicals and the servants of God, that the champions of superstition and falsehood are uneasy, and in many instances silenced, and the people are constrained to see that their representations of Latter Day Saintism and Latter Day Saints is not true, and can not abide the light.

In the month of July Elders A. D. Angus and T. U. Thomas, of Sharon, commenced tent work in Scranton, and made a sustained effort for nearly three months. Brother R. J. Lentell stepped in at Brother Angus's departure for Philadelphia, and continued with Brother Thomas until it was over. The two first named brethren also conducted a summer vacation school, having an enrollment of nearly two hundred. We pronounce it an unqualified success, making many friends for the cause, and causing astonishment among the people at the generosity and devotion of the sisters of the branch, who worked unremittingly, and all the staff worked with a cheerfulness that did our hearts good, and we hope we shall retain the effects of the impetus received until it rolls around again. Several instances could be mentioned of the deep interest of both parents and children in the school and the work done; several souls were added to our number, so we feel doubly strengthened for another effort in the future.

We have been very much pleased to hear of the effort put forth by Brother Albert N. Hoxie and others to promote cultivation of the musical talent in the church. I came into this church thirteen years ago, and I am forced to the conclusion that the church as a whole has not given the attention it should along these and other lines. The convert is baptized into the church, and he and she are lucky mortals if they happen to have unlimited capacity for preaching, for then only shall they be fed. The Lord has conferred the priesthood upon us to preach and teach and expound and exhort, and to visit the homes of the members, to strengthen, to encourage, to obtain and disseminate knowledge of governments, laws, countries, and general knowledge, and also to cultivate the knowledge of music and song, and every other way we can develop the minds of the young people of the church, to aid them to appreciate the beautiful, the pure things, the god-like things, and to fit them for the great Master's service, and I think our eldership has been jealous of its preaching prerogative to the exclusion of other vital considerations, which has resulted in the neglect of many souls who have drifted back into the world and have been attracted by the more perfect organizations for young people which exist among all the churches.

I sincerely hope that Brother Hoxie and his associates will be given unstinted support, and that the movement will spread, and stir every branch to a permanent effort along this line, and the future shall see our General Conference featured by a rendition of oratorios by the Independence or Lamoni choirs, and also that the handmaidens of the gospel shall be a source of strength to the elders in all the world. This is not written in the spirit of carping criticism, but with the love of the gospel burning in my bosom, and with a desire that we may offer the best we can to God, in which I fear we often fail, and that prestige and glory may be added to the kingdom of God upon the earth.

Your brother in the gospel of Jesus Christ,
32 ARCHIBALD STREET. GEORGE MORRIS.

WARD, IOWA, January 29, 1913.

Dear Herald: We are trying to keep the gospel before the people, but without much results as far as outside people are concerned, but the most of the Saints are doing fairly well. We have had some able preaching, but so far as the world is concerned it has had little effect, but the Saints have been built up greatly.

I expect to leave here for my home in Mapleton, Kansas, where we have a farm and my family and one of my sons are now. My youngest son and I are working in the mines here, but we would like to get work closer home. We hear there are Saints at Anna, Kansas, also at Pittsburg, Kansas. If any of the Saints will be so kind as to write me and give me a description of the work we would be very thankful to them, as we want to get closer home. I am a local elder and have done considerable work around mining camps.

Work here is only half time and a poor turn when they do run, so we will have to leave here if work does not pick up soon. We would be pleased to hear from any of the Saints at any time.

Your brother in the one faith,
G. W. HULL.

Are Newspapers Reliable?

I am sending copies of two letters that are self-explanatory. For some years now my mind has been occupied with a desire to secure evidence as to the contemporaneousness of man and horse on the American Continent in prehistoric times. If any one has in their possession such evidence, not newspaper clippings, but evidence, I will be glad to secure a copy of such for publication. These letters will show the utter unreliability of our undertaking to establish our claim by newspaper clippings, and the sooner we stop the folly the better for our reputation as to reliable evidence!

LAMONI, IOWA, January 13, 1913.

PROFESSOR RICHARD S. LULL,

My Dear Sir: In a clipping from the Chicago Record-Herald, a press dispatch purporting to be sent from Silverton, Texas, date not given, you are reported as heading a party of explorers, and that in the excavations made you discovered fossils of the equine species.

But the closing paragraph of the dispatch is the one that I am seeking your verification upon, as I am very much interested in the thought of man and horse having been contemporaneous in prehistoric times upon the American Continent. Here is the paragraph:

"There are good reasons for believing, according to Professor Lull, that these giant horses, which had a height of thirty to forty feet, were often domesticated by the people of that day and time, and were the chief means of them getting about from place to place."

Does this paragraph represent your belief, and will you kindly give me reasons for such belief?

Thanking you in anticipation, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

J. W. WIGHT.

To this Professor Lull replied as follows:

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT, January 20, 1913.

MR. J. W. WIGHT,

Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Dear Sir: The clipping from the Chicago Record-Herald was sent me by one of the regular clipping agencies, and you can imagine my feeling upon getting it, because it was entirely unauthorized and expresses no opinion which I have ever held. The secret of the matter is, I believe, that several years ago a man in Plainview, Texas, unearthed the bones of the giant mammoth, Elephas imperator. Thinking that they were horse bones and comparing the thigh bone, for instance, with that of a horse, he came to the conclusion that they represented an animal at least one hundred hands high. Of course the slightest inspection of the bones proved them conclusively to be elephantine and I thought effectually put that idea to sleep, and it was denied in certain of the local papers, but then after I returned, this Silverton letter was sent out. I expressed no such belief as that brought forth in the paragraph. We did find fossil horses, but their maximum size was apparently only fourteen hands, and there is absolutely no evidence of their ever having been domesticated or even contemporaneous with prehistoric man in America. I trust you will do what you can to deny this statement as published in the Record-Herald.

Very truly yours,

RICHARD S. LULL,

Professor of Vertebrate Paleontology, Yale University.

Trusting that this letter may help to put a quietus on our overambitious desire for evidence and quietly await the development of true evidence, if such exists, I remain,

J. W. WIGHT.

Bishop Evans in the Princess.

Just a few lines to fling happiness into the heart of every Latter Day Saint. This is the ninth winter that we have been conducting meetings in the Toronto theaters. Some have prophesied year by year that the drawing powers of the bishop would dwindle, but this year we have not had a night but that many have been turned away. The rule has been, Hundreds turned away. Two nights only have we had any empty seats, and they were in the third gallery, where, rather than climb the stairs, many people will go home. To-night is the record breaker of the season. One hour before the time every seat was occupied and a constant stream of people were coming, only to be turned away. Several people with whom we have conversed to-night estimate that more than three thousand were turned from our doors. It is said that five hundred people stood packed together behind the speaker and his choir. There they stood for over two hours, unable to get out if they wanted to.

The bishop was in splendid form, and some say he excelled all previous efforts, notwithstanding he had attended three meetings, addressing each of them during the day, this making his fourth meeting.

Thousands are listening and reading his sermons and the good fruitage of these meetings is apparent everywhere. To-night, in the hundreds of Latter Day Saint homes in this city, there is rejoicing because of the immense throng that came to hear the angel's message, a packed ground floor, first and second galleries, and crowded stage, hundreds standing packed like sardines, was an inspiring sight. Wish every Latter Day Saint could have seen it.

Your brother,

A. F. MCLEAN.

TORONTO, February 2, 1913.

News from Missions

Oklahoma.

The conference of the Western Oklahoma District was held at Clinton, Oklahoma, February 2, 1913. Only a small attendance. A good meeting was had, nevertheless. Usual business and election of delegates to the General Conference was attended to. The four Lamanite elders were elected delegates and will be there. They are also coming to counsel with the church in regard to their race. They will no doubt take back with them a message of present salvation to their oppressed brethren.

Brethren Case, Aylor, Sister Inez Moldrup, and the writer went out to the Lamanite camp Monday, and held a very profitable meeting with them. Four gave their names for baptism. The following day at twelve o'clock another meeting was held with them, at which seven more gave their names. They are intensely interested. The "good news," as they call it, has spread like an electric wave over the entire Cheyenne tribe of three thousand members. We have been preaching to them along doctrinal lines, persuading them that this is the true church of Christ, occasionally dropping a word touching the promises to them. So yesterday they told us that the thing they wanted to hear at this time was more about the promises to them. They also, without any solicitation on our part, wanted to know if the church could not keep them in the affairs of life, shielding them from the plunderers. I told them the church had just that provision in temporal law, the Order of Enoch, etc.

I marvel at the effectiveness of the organization of the kingdom for providing salvation now and hereafter, and it is especially adapted to this remnant. It shall be my endeavor to plant within this people a hope of a portion in Zion. And I am gratified to see how eagerly they reach for it.

We received a letter from one camp stating: "You have gone so far with this work now that we can't drop it, we want you to hold regular meetings so we can learn more of this religion."

Lest this demand exceed the supply, we must have the assistance of the Saints in equipping us with some necessary paraphernalia. I am doing some good with my lantern, showing them ruins of their ancient cities, etc. There are other things that we may ask you to help us on in time.

My home address is 1813 West Walnut Street, Independence, Missouri.

ALVA CHRISTENSEN.

CLINTON, OKLAHOMA, February 6, 1913.

Michigan.

I take this method of letting the Saints know that I have recovered from my late illness and am again endeavoring to tell the sweet angel message. I have felt that the last conference year was a good one in my experience. I have baptized seventy-three. Opened up a new place, and baptized fifty-four precious souls; organized a branch with a full set of officers, and I am glad to say God is blessing them with the gifts of the gospel.

We are now starting a little series of meetings here in Bay City, in a mission hall on the east side. We received forty-seven dollars by way of donation to begin the work. We are hopeful of good results from the evidence we have received from our heavenly Father. We will do all we can to revive the work here. Pray for me that I may yet do much good in the good work. I thank you all for kind words of sympathy and assistance. Wife and family are all well at present, for which we are thankful.

I remain your brother in Christ,

O. J. HAWN.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN, 706 North Linn Street.

News from Branches

Los Angeles, California.

It appeared to us that not having occupied your columns for some time, it would be well to remember our appointment and let our voices be heard. We presume that we are like many other correspondents in that we do not think that the local news is of sufficient interest to warrant printing, though we read with pleasure and profit what others have to offer.

The past year has been a busy one, and much good work has been done in a local way, preaching services held at Long Beach, Hermosa Beach, and Watts, beside the regular appointments in Los Angeles.

Our business meeting of January 1 resulted in the selection of the following officers for the new year: Frederick Adam, branch president; A. H. Knowlton, priest; W. B. Haskins, teacher; Nels Paulson, deacon.

Brother F. M. Sheehy, the missionary in charge, has been with us recently and we have been helped by the many words of cheer and counsel given by him.

Our city seems to be the mecca for Eastern people at this time of the year, desirous, we presume, of avoiding the extremely cold weather there, and quite often some of the Saints and friends are among the visitors. Those recently here were Brother and Sister Hanson, of Holden, Missouri; Sister Vanderpool, of Atchison County, Missouri; Sister Leeka, Sister

Benedict, and Brother Seward, of Iowa, and Brother and Sister Crick of Independence.

Brethren Elbert Smith, Paul Hanson, Evan Davis, and our late Brother Keeler have occupied during the last year in the interest of the general church.

Brethren Adam, Williams, Cooper, Schade, Kauffman, and A. H. Knowlton of the local force have been endeavoring to magnify their office and calling by dispensing the word to the edification and strengthening of the Saints.

During the latter part of the year it became necessary to provide more room for church use and through the combined efforts of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Sunday school, Religio, and church a fine addition about twenty by thirty feet was made.

We rejoice to see the good work done by the Saints generally, and hope from now on, as a church we may more fully sense our duties and obligations so that much greater progress may be made and we become so educated that we may be worthy the name we bear.

MADGE P. KNOWLTON.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

DES MOINES.—District conference met at Runnells, Iowa, February 1 and 2, 1913, and was presided over by the district president and assistant minister in charge. The sessions were all harmonious and peaceful; the Spirit of the Lord being present throughout. Statistical reports were read from branches as follows: Des Moines, 434, gain 41; Fraser, 40; Rhodes, 69, gain 2; Boone, 112, gain 18; Des Moines Valley, 118, loss 7; Oskaloosa, 59, gain 2; Packard, Concord, and Clear Creek branches not reporting. Ministerial reports were read from Patriarch C. E. Butterworth, Seventies: J. F. Mintun, S. M. Reiste, High Priest, M. M. Turpen. Elders: O. Salisbury, J. E. Laughlin, Fred Wells, C. Malcor, C. B. Brown, Henry Pratt, E. O. Clark. Priests: Frank Walters, W. T. Maitland, Thomas Lewis, C. M. Richeson, Charles Nirk, Henry Castings, John Park. Teachers: William McBirmie, George Longdon, Frank Miller. Deacons: Fred Chandler, Joseph Young. Total number of sermons reported, 493, though not all the reports contained number of sermons preached; and 47 baptisms. The following resolutions were passed: "Resolved, That hereafter no one shall be ordained in this district to the office of teacher or deacon without the knowledge and consent of the district president or district conference." "Resolved, That hereafter no one shall be ordained to the office of elder or priest in this district, without the knowledge and consent of the missionary in charge, or his assistant, and the district president, or by the district conference." Adjourned to meet in Des Moines, in June, at call of district presidency. E. O. Clark, secretary, 2500 Logan Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

SHEFFIELD.—The twenty-first annual conference of the Sheffield District was held at Clay Cross, England, January 11 and 12, 1913. Business commenced on the 11th at 8 p. m. with Charles Cousins, president of the district, in charge. Officers for the conference were elected as follows: President, W. H. Greenwood, missionary in charge of the British Isles Mission, with Bishop May and Charles Cousins as associates. Chorister and organist: G. H. Holmes. Usher: William S. Holmes. Resolved, That all visiting Saints have voice and vote in this conference. All officers' reports were read and approved. Treasurer's report was referred to an auditing committee. Statistical reports of branches were read and accepted, except Sutton-in-Ashfield report, which was referred back to the secretary and president of the branch for correction. Election of officers then took place and resulted in all previous year's officers being reelected, Charles Cousins, president; John Holmes, vice president; Joseph Holmes, secretary; E. Simon Holmes, jr., treasurer; standing committee. J. T. Burnett, G. H. Holmes, G. V. Willis. Resolved, That Charles Cousins, John Holmes, J. T. Burnett, and Simon Holmes, sr., be committee to ascertain the amount likely to be subscribed towards a small printing plant and business generally in regard to establishing a church paper in England, for the Sheffield District. Resolved, That we leave the holding of the next conference in the hands of the district presidency.

There was a meeting of the Seventh Quorum of Elders on Sunday morning at 9, in charge of the president, J. E. Meredith. Morning preaching service at 10.30, W. H. Greenwood in charge. Nearly all the ministry present took a portion of the time, which proved a fair success. Fellowship service at 2.30; many and varied were the remarks made by the Saints. The session lasted for nearly two and a half hours and a goodly portion of the Spirit was present, manifesting itself in a revelation of the assembly. At close of the conference the report of the auditors was brought in and accepted. Resolved, That we sustain general and local authorities of the church. Resolved, That we adjourn to meet at the call of the district presidency. Joseph Holmes, clerk.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—District conference convened at Plano, Illinois, January 11, 1913, with District President Jasper O. Dutton in the chair. Missionary in charge, F. A. Smith, and J. O. Dutton and J. A. Bronson were chosen to preside over the conference. Ministry reporting: J. O. Dutton, J. A. Bronson, C. H. Burr, P. Pement, P. G. Fairbanks. Branch presidents: H. W. P. Keir, R. N. Burwell, Earl Rogers, James Keir. Statistical reports were read from the following branches: Central Chicago, Belvidere, Piper City, Wilmington, West Pullman, Mission, First Chicago, Plano. No report from DeKalb or Sandwich. District treasurer reported balance on hand last report, $5.59; receipts, $23.17; expenditures, $20.32; balance on hand, $8.44. Bishop's agent reported balance on hand last report, $400.73; received since, $1,857.32; paid out, $1,237.75; balance on hand, $1,020.32. Schedule read showing amount of tithing paid by various branches during the year 1912: Belvidere, $1,555.68, number paying tithing, 8; First Chicago, $652.05, number paying, 30; Mission, $558.50, number paying, 16; Sandwich, $421.38, number paying, 4; scattered members, $222.62, number paying, 8; Central Chicago, $244.78, number paying, 11; Piper City, $175.06, number paying, 8; DeKalb, $90.75, number paying, 4; West Pullman, $57.50, number paying, 2; Plano, $41.68, number paying, 8; Wilmington, $30, number paying, 3; total receipts, $4,150, total number paying, 102. The following members were elected as delegates to General Conference: J. O. Dutton, L. O. Wildermuth, J. A. Bronson, LaJone Howard, F. M. Cooper, Sister F. M. Cooper, F. A. Smith, F. E. Bone, Sister F. E. Bone, C. H. Burr, Sister Fred Wright, Marion Wright, Jennie Leland, J. A. Daer, Grace Johnson, Earl Rogers, Fred Johnson, Sister Fred Johnson, A. H. Anderson, Sister A. H. Anderson, Melvina Heavener, B. W. Taylor, Clara Southwick, Sister W. I. Cochran, Joseph Blakely, Sadie Selle, Bessie Egglestone, J. B. Wildermuth, E. M. Wildermuth, Abe Rogers, Sister Abe Rogers, R. N. Burwell. Mission Branch was chosen as the place for the next conference; the time was left to the district president and missionary in charge. A motion prevailed that we petition General Conference to establish a mail order house as suggested by the Eastern Michigan District. W. E. Williamson, district secretary.

Convention Minutes.

MINNESOTA.—Convention held at Bemidji Branch, November 16, 1912. Called to order by L. Houghton at 3.30 p. m. By motion L. Houghton was chosen to preside; D. A. Whiting, secretary pro tem. Having no reports at hand, the president requested oral reports from those representing different schools. B. S. Lambkin, of the Minneapolis school, reported the school there to be in a good, prosperous condition, with some advancement along general lines; George Day spoke of the work of the Bemidji school, reporting the work to be in fair condition, and the workers determined to do their duty in trying to advance the cause; L. Houghton spoke very highly of the Frazee school, reporting the work to be in good shape, with a goodly number of nonmembers in attendance; also reported the school at Clitherall to be in fair condition, with good efforts being made on the part of teachers and officers to improve and maintain the work. By motion the following were selected to act as delegates to the General Convention in April, 1913: L. Houghton, B. S. Lambkin, Ward L. Christy, Birch Whiting, Sister Pen Martin. Moved and carried that the next convention be held at Clitherall, Minnesota, the last Saturday in May, 1913. Moved that the delegates present at General Convention be authorized to cast the majority and minority vote, in case of division. Motion prevailed. Adjourned. Alta Kimber, secretary, Dilworth, Minnesota.

DES MOINES.—District Sunday school association met in convention at Runnells, Iowa, January 31, 1913. Eleven schools in district, all reporting. Delegates present from Des Moines and Runnells. Election of officers resulted as follows: Orman Salisbury, superintendent; Hattie Clark, assistant superintendent; Pearl Shannon, secretary; Ollie Laughlin, treasurer; James E. Laughlin, librarian; Pearl Shannon, home department superintendent. Delegates to the General Convention are J. F. Mintun, Pearl Brennan, Ralph Brennan, Hattie Clark, S. M. Rieste, M. M. Turpen, O. Salisbury, W. T. Maitland, Carrie E. Maitland, Milo Burnett, Henry Castings, Ollie Laughlin, Mae Huffacre, John Park, Mrs. John Park, John Thornton, J. R. Epperson, Mrs. J. R. Epperson, Orpha Emslie, Emma Allen, Clement Malcor, Mrs. C. F. Malcor, Thomas Lewis, Mrs. T. Lewis, C. F. Hayer, Mrs. C. F. Hayer, Frank L'hommedien, Mrs. F. L'hommedien, Wardell Christy, C. E. Butterworth, Guy Mintun, Pearl Shannon, Zoe Carpenter, Mrs. Charles White, Forma Park, and Jasper Parmenter. A very pleasant convention was enjoyed. Pearl Shannon, secretary.

LITTLE SIOUX.—Convention of Little Sioux District convened at Moorhead, Iowa, January 31, 1913, district officers in charge. Ten schools were represented, and reports show an enrollment of 920, a loss of 11, since last year. Fifty-five delegates were elected to General Convention. Graded lessons, circulating library, and home class work were interestingly discussed. Election of officers resulted in sustaining old officers, except secretary. Annie Stuart, secretary pro tem.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—District Sunday school association held its convention in Council Bluffs, Iowa, January 31, 1913. Prayer service at 10 a. m.; business session at 11.15. The same officers were sustained for a year. Delegates elected to General Conventions as follows: Mrs. Hattie Hall, Estella Harding, Floy M. Wind, J. C. Jensen, J. C. Adams, Mrs. Ella Adams, Mrs. Silas Ward, Mrs. Jeffries, Jennie Larson, Laura Larson, Mrs. Allie Avery, May Klopping, J. B. Lapworth, Mrs. Lizzie Lapworth, Peter Larson, Mrs. Nellie Hanson, Josephine Scott, Mrs. J. P. Christensen, Scona Currie, H. W. Pierce, Mrs. H. W. Pierce, Lehi Jacobsen, Mrs. Zephia Jacobsen, J. A. Hansen, Mrs. J. A. Hansen, Alta Elswick, Nels Johnson, A. A. Gaylord. Religio and Sunday school associations gave a musical and literary program at the evening session. Floy M. Wind, secretary, 738 Washington Avenue, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Conference Notices.

Conference of the Eastern Colorado District will meet with the Saints in Denver, in the chapel at the corner of Logan Avenue and Speer Boulevard, March 1, 1913, at 10 a. m. Attention is called to the following sections incorporated in the by-laws of the Eastern Colorado District: "Section 4. All ministers laboring under district appointment, and branch presidents, are to report their labors as ministers in writing to the conferences, forwarding same to the secretary one week prior to the convening of the conferences. Section 5. Any minister residing in the district failing to report his labors without explanation shall be suspended until satisfactory reasons shall be tendered in writing to the presidency or the conference. E. J. Williams, 1210 South High Street, Denver, Colorado, Secretary Eastern Colorado District.

Clinton, Missouri, district conference will convene at Rich Hill, Missouri, February 22 and 23. Please have all reports in to district secretary not later than February 19. John W. Noyes, district secretary.

Conference of the Northwestern Kansas District will meet March 15, 1913, at Osborne, Kansas. Let all branches meet and send complete reports. Let us try to advance the work of the district by doing. Send all reports in care of J. B. Ansley, Osborne, Kansas. John A. Teeters, district president.

District conference of the Portland District will meet at the Saints' church, two blocks north of Glisan Street, on East Seventy-sixth Street, February 22, at 10 a. m. Come expecting a good time and help to make it so. Marcus H. Cook, district president, box 298, Vancouver, Washington.

Montana district conference will convene at Bozeman, March 1 and 2. All branches please send reports. Maggie J. Reese, district secretary, Bozeman, Montana.

Convention Notices.

Montana district Sunday school convention will meet at Bozeman, February 28, at 10 a. m. At 7.30 a program will be given. Maggie J. Reese, secretary.

The Presidency.

NOTICE OF TRANSFER.

Elder J. W. Metcalf has been transferred from the Ohio District to the Northeastern Kansas District for the remainder of the conference year, the First Presidency and missionaries in charge of the fields concerned concurring in the transfer. Those concerned please take notice.

FREDERICK M. SMITH, Secretary First Presidency.
INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 6, 1913.

Quorum Meetings.

There will be a meeting of the Twelfth Quorum of Priests of the Pittsburg and West Virginia districts during the district conference at Wheeling, West Virginia, February 22 and 23. Your attendance is desired.

J. A. JAQUES, President.

The Quorum of Elders of the Far West District will meet with the Second Saint Joseph Branch in district conference on February 22 and 23. All of the elders in the Far West, Nodaway, Northeastern Missouri, and the Northeastern Kansas districts are enrolled as members of the Far West Quorum of Elders.

The subject for consideration will be a continuation of the subject at the last meeting: "Should the sacrament be given to those not confirmed in the church?"

W. S. HOBSON, Secretary and Treasurer.

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, 111 South Twelfth Street.

To the Priests of Spring River District: Our next meeting will be held February 15, at 10 a. m., at the home of A. V. Karlstrom, 2427 May Street, Joplin, Missouri, one block from church. As our worthy president, Sidney Gray, has been called to higher responsibilities, his resignation will be accepted and one will be chosen to officiate in his stead.

A. V. KARLSTROM, Quorum Secretary.

The First Quorum of Elders of the Southeastern Mission will meet at the Pleasant Hill Branch, near McKenzie, Alabama, February 14, 1913, at 10 a. m. We would like to have reports from all members, and hope as many as can, will be present. Those not able to attend please send report to W. A. West, Berrydale, Florida.

W. A. WEST, President.

C. J. CLARK, Secretary.

The Bishopric.

Elders who have made due financial report to date for the year 1912:

Arthur Allen, William Anderson, Peter Anderson, Joseph Arber, William Aylor.

J. W. A. Bailey, J. H. Baker, J. W. Baker, Richard Baldwin, J. B. Barrett, James Baty, sr., J. A. Becker, M. H. Bond, Alma Booker, N. L. Booker, C. E. Bozarth, R. E. Bozarth, F. S. Brackenbury, Henry Braun, Jot A. Bronson, W. A. Brooner, Samuel Brown, L. Burdick, A. E. Burr, C. H. Burr, E. A. Burt, G. W. Burt, R. Bullard, C. E. Butterworth.

Charles J. Cady, Duncan Campbell, J. A. Carpenter, Hubert Case, Oscar Case, D. R. Chambers, J. C. Christensen, A. H. Christensen, W. L. Christy, S. D. Condit, M. H. Cook, F. M. Cooper, J. C. Crabb, C. E. Crumley, J. D. Curtis, J. F. Curtis.

H. J. Davison, E. A. Davis, James Davis, John Davis, J. T. Davis, R. D. Davis, William Davis, Charles Derry, C. W. Deuel, S. E. Dickson, J. A. Dowker, D. E. Dowker, William Dowker, J. W. Dubose, J. O. Dutton.

F. J. Ebeling, George Edwards, A. R. Ellis, Clyde F. Ellis, W. D. Ellis, R. M. Elvin, E. A. Erwin, R. Etzenhouser, R. C. Evans.

J. C. Farnfield, F. B. Farr, R. W. Farrell, Otto Fetting, S. H. Fields, Lyman W. Fike, T. E. Fitzwater, P. A. Flinn, B. C. Flint, J. C. Foss, S. O. Foss.

Levi Gamet, W. H. Garrett, E. J. Goodenough, J. C. Goodman, V. M. Goodrich, M. F. Gowell, J. F. Garver, August Gratz, U. W. Greene, Fred Gregory, William Grice, G. T. Griffiths, W. H. Greenwood.

W. E. Haden, Jacob Halb, H. N. Hansen, J. H. Hansen, John Harp, C. E. Harpe, G. E. Harrington, O. J. Hawn, Eli Hayer, E. L. Henson, Amos T. Higdon, L. E. Hills, L. G. Holloway, T. A. Hougas, L. Houghton, J. E. Hughes, E. B. Hull, C. J. Hunt.

George Jenkins, Rees Jenkins, C. C. Joehnk, Oscar Johnson, J. Jordison.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 Duties of Branch Officers - - - - - 153
 Joseph Smith as a Translator - - - - - 155
Journal of History - - - - - 155
 Notes and Comments - - - - - 155

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 The Church the Indians have Long Looked for,
 by Hubert Case - - - - - 156
 Shake off the Dust, by R. Bullard - - - - - 158
 How We Evangelized Our City, by J. W. Peterson - - - - - 159
 The Baptism of Children, by H. A. Stebbins - - - - - 161
 The Goodly Inheritance, by James E. Yates - - - - - 164

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - - - 166

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - - 167

C. L. Snow—Edward Rannie—C. Edward Miller
 —Sister H. G. Mitchell—W. A. Helms—E. W.
 Nunley—Erwin Trachsel—Laura Dimick—
 George Morris—G. W. Hull—J. W. Wight—
 A. F. McLean.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - - 171
 Alva Christensen—O. J. Hawm.

NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - - 171
 Madge P. Knowlton.

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - - 172

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.
 The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

There may be many good qualities in a miser, but his greed for money obscures them all.

F. C. Keck, J. E. Kelley, W. H. Kelley, James Kemp, Alvin Knisley, H. A. Koehler, J. A. Koehler, G. R. Kuykendall.
 J. R. Lambert, B. S. Lambkin, W. E. LaRue, A. J. Layland, G. W. Legrott, J. R. Lentell, A. Leverton, William Lewis, E. E. Long, R. C. Longhurst.
 Daniel Macgregor, New Madden, R. M. Maloney, W. H. Mannering, J. Charles May, J. R. McClain, Myron A. McConley, James McConnaughy, L. M. McFadden, James McKiernan, B. L. McKim, J. W. McKnight, J. E. Meredith, J. W. Metcalf, A. G. Miller, C. Ed Miller, O. R. Miller, J. F. Mintun, H. E. Moler, James Moler, L. C. Moore, E. E. Moorman, E. B. Morgan, J. W. Morgan, Fred Moser, Peter Muceus.
 William Newton, J. M. Nunley.
 O. W. Okerlind.
 James C. Page, C. A. Parkin, J. L. Parker, J. W. Paxton, W. E. Peak, W. S. Pender, Samuel T. Pendleton, C. J. Peters, J. F. Petre, W. S. Peterson, A. B. Phillips, W. P. Pickering, H. N. Pierce, F. G. Pitt, P. T. Plumb, Parley Premo, C. W. Prettyman, F. O. Pritchett, A. B. Purfurst, J. Pycock.
 Lee Quick.
 Edward Rannie, Earl Redfield, Thomas Reese, S. M. Reiste, B. F. Renfro, W. B. Richards, J. T. Riley, I. N. Roberts, J. A. Roberts, G. W. Robley, J. S. Roth, J. W. Rushton, F. A. Russell, R. C. Russell.
 O. E. Sade, R. S. Salyards, H. W. Savage, F. L. Sawley, James Schofield, B. J. Scott, Columbus Scott, S. W. L. Scott, R. O. Self, W. M. Self, W. E. Shakespeare, J. F. Sheehy, N. V. Sheldon, John Shields, G. M. Shippy, O. D. Shirk, M. H. Siegfried, A. C. Silvers, Jesse W. Simmons, S. W. Simmons, Luther Simpson, J. D. Shower, W. S. Shupe, F. M. Slover, R. F. Slye, W. H. Smart, Edgar H. Smith, Elbert A. Smith, David Smith, F. A. Smith, F. M. Smith, H. O. Smith, Hale W. Smith, Heman C. Smith, I. M. Smith, John Smith, J. W. Smith, S. S. Smith, W. A. Smith, W. J. Smith, W. R. Smith, C. L. Snow, Henry Sparling, William Sparling, J. D. Stead, H. A. Stebbins, Grant St. John, A. E. Stone, T. O. Strand, J. M. Stubbart, J. R. Sutton, C. A. Swenson, Swen Swenson.
 J. A. Tanner, John W. Taylor, Thomas Taylor, J. A. Teeters, J. M. Terry, O. B. Thomas, T. U. Thomas, George W. Thorburn, G. C. Tomlinson, S. W. Tomlinson, D. E. Tucker, Warren E. Turner, M. M. Turpen, Samuel Twombly, J. E. Vanderwood.
 R. T. Walters, R. D. Weaver, G. R. Wells, A. L. Whiteaker, Ammon White, I. N. White, Alonzo Whiting, J. W. Wight, E. M. Wildermuth, J. B. Wildermuth, J. E. Wildermuth, Lester Wildermuth, C. E. Willey, Henry Williams, H. E. Winegar, L. G. Wood.
 J. E. Yates. E. L. KELLEY.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 4, 1913.

Died.

JENNINGS.—Mona Leon Jennings, daughter of Brother Joseph E. and Sister Laura R. Jennings, was born January 28, 1912; died January 28, 1913. Blessed by J. C. Foss. A little bud, a tender plant has been gathered with the little ones on the other side, thus to wait the coming of its parents. Funeral conducted by George Jenkins; interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

TROOK.—Mrs. Estella Trook, nee Austin, was born May 3, 1878, at Union, Cass County, Nebraska. The immediate cause of death was the accidental explosion of coal oil in her home at Lincoln, Nebraska, on the morning of January 28, 1913, in which she was fatally burned, and passed from this life on the morning of January 29, 1913, at 2.30 a. m. She leaves to mourn a husband and six children, besides many relatives and friends. She was a woman of lovable disposition, a devoted mother; a true companion indeed, and a firm believer in Christ. Funeral sermon by J. R. Sutton, at Union, Nebraska; interment at same place on Wednesday, January 30, 1913.

MILLIKEN.—George W. D. Milliken, at Colchester, Illinois, January 16, 1913, aged 64 years, 10 months, and 12 days. He was a grandson of Lucy Smith Salisbury, sister of Joseph Smith the Seer; was born at Nauvoo, and lived in Colchester since 1856; He was a member of the Reorganized Church. Funeral on Sunday, 19th, at the Methodist Episcopal church, sermon by Elder Solomon Salisbury, assisted by Reverends Paul Garvin and Abraham Newland. A lengthy notice of his life, ancestry, and funeral appeared in a late issue of the Colchester Independent.

BAKER.—Sister Lou Baker, of Shinnston, West Virginia, at Saint Mary's Hospital, Clarksburg, West Virginia, where she was operated on for gall stones. The case was of long standing and there was little chance of recovery. She was among the first to join the church at Cabin Run, being baptized by Brother L. R. Devore, first missionary to that section. She was a faithful Saint, and beloved by all. Funeral was held at the home of her daughter, Lucy Griffith, at Shinnston, in charge of Brother James C. McConnaughy; sermon by Brother D. L. Shinn.

MERRILL.—The tried and purified spirit of Sister Clara Phoebe Merrill took its flight January 29, 1913, from the same house and room in Santa Cruz, California, where it first saw the light 35 years, 7 months, 3 days ago, in which she was married and bore two children, one of which, little Norma, preceded her to the paradise of rest. Madalene, a darling daughter of three years, remains. She also leaves a bereaved mother, Sister Moses, and three brothers. The solemn services were held at the home, at which Miss J. R. Lanscott, and Mrs. J. R. Williams, of the Congregational church choir, sang very beautifully. The flower display was among the most beautiful. Clara was beloved in life and respected and lamented in death. Sermon by Elder J. M. Terry, of Oakland, California, January 31, 1913.

ESGAR.—At Bozeman, Montana, on January 18, 1913, Sister C. C. Esgar. She was born March 12, 1877, was married in 1897. She is survived by husband, Charles C. Esgar; a daughter, Chloe, aged 14; a son, Charles C., jr., aged 2; father and mother, two brothers and three sisters. Funeral on January 19, in charge of L. E. Hills. Interment in Bozeman cemetery.

HAWKS.—Abraham S. Hawks was born in Decatur, Illinois, April 27, 1826; died at Plano, Illinois, January 27, 1913, aged 86 years and 9 months. Brother Hawks was a veteran soldier, having served in the Twenty-first Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, from June 19, 1862, till the close of the war. Brother and Sister Hawks united with the church in Plano, Illinois, in the year 1881, and both held their membership while they lived. Two sons, Lee Hawks and Jesse Hawks, grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends, remain to cherish his memory and mourn his death. His remains were laid to rest in the Plano cemetery; sermon by Charles H. Burr.

PRITCHARD.—John Pritchard, born May 15, 1840, in Merthyr Tydfil, Wales; died of heart failure January 20, 1913, at home, 120 South Church Avenue, Bozeman, Montana; came to Montana in 1864, where he worked in the Alder Gulch gold mine at ten dollars a day, earning money enough in a short time to send to Wales for his mother, who came in 1865. Miss Martha Evans, who came with him mother, became his wife. Seven daughters survive: Mrs. G. W. Shull, of Lewiston, Montana; Mrs. Frank Sparlin, of Salesville, Montana; Mrs. Albert Melton, of Bozeman; Mrs. A. F. Murray, of Reese Creek; Mrs. Orville Ramsey, of Indiana; Miss Rose and Miss Emma Pritchard, who lived with their father in Bozeman. He joined the Reorganized Church in 1869 and was at that time healed of a serious illness which the skill of man could do nothing for, and his wife, seeing this manifestation, was baptized the following day. They came to a ranch at Reese Creek in 1870. Mrs. Pritchard dying about five years ago, he moved to Bozeman, where he lived with his daughters. He lived a Christian life, and has gone to his reward. Sermon in Saints' church at Reese Creek, Montana, by L. E. Hills.

SHERMAN.—Robert LaRue, son of Brother and Sister D. W. Sherman, was born November 23, 1911, died February 1, 1913, after an illness of an unknown disease of about three weeks. He was blessed January 7, 1912, by A. G. Miller. He leaves father, mother, two sisters, two brothers, and many relatives to mourn.

Our loss is great; to him comes gain;
His sufferings here were so severe,
We feel 'tis better thus for him,
Although to us his life was dear.

Funeral was held at the new church at Escatawpa; sermon by A. G. Miller. Remains laid to rest in the Ferrill Cemetery.

GUYER.—Joseph Jacob Guyer was born June 25, 1846, at Weston, Missouri; died January 23, 1913, at Soldiers' Home, Leavenworth, Kansas, from a wound received a short time previously. He was baptized at Pleasant Grove, Missouri, April 6, 1850, by William Summerfield, and confirmed the same day. He leaves three children, one son and two daughters, one brother, and a host of other relatives. Services held in the Saints' church at Edgerton Junction; G. W. Mauzey in charge, sermon by B. J. Dice, of Stewartsville, Missouri.

PENDER.—Elder Will S. Pender, at Muscatine, Iowa, January 19, 1913. Born near Muscatine, Iowa, December 23, 1861. When three years old he moved to Columbus, Kansas and was baptized at the age of fourteen. He was an active missionary for twenty-four years; first as an elder then a seventy. His field extended from British Columbia on the north to Mexico, where he served one year and three months during the rebellion, being in the battle at Torreon. This was the last of his active service, for the unsettled condition in that country prevented him from returning to his appointment, and his failing health soon confined him to his home. He was married to Sister Fannie Gurwell in October, 1900. Since which time she traveled with and was his brave assistant in the work. He leaves to mourn, his wife, mother, three brothers and three sisters, as well as all who met and learned to love him because of his integrity and loving work in the gospel. Funeral held at the Saints' church at Fanning, Kansas, sermon by Bishop Bullard; interment in Fanning cemetery.

The Increasing Hope of Church Unity.

Under our present conditions of life in this country the political significance of religious dissent has mostly disappeared, says an editorial in the February Century. It flames up out of the old ashes whenever Protestants suspect Roman Catholics of intending to use political power for ecclesiastical purposes, but with this exception the field is clear for the frank discussion of religious disagreements. The gain is great. The whole matter of church unity is set forward by our present ability to debate our differences on their own merits.

Under the stress of the political motive in the antagonism to the existence of difference, a method was employed which was psychologically futile. The attempt was made to change men's minds by violence. Under the conditions, no other procedure seemed possible. In the presence of great peril, the divisions in religion were dealt with like divisions in an army in time of war. They were put down with a strong hand. But the effect of every attempt to coerce men against their conscience, or even against their prejudice, is to array against the aggressor not only the increased opposition of the dissenter, but also the sympathy of many who were previously indifferent.

We are happily unable to prejudice our case by the agreement of compulsion. The old notion of uniformity is perceived to be in contradiction to the everlasting facts in human nature. Not only tolerance, but difference is coming to be accepted as a Christian virtue. This is a momentous change. It recalls church unity from the region of remote ideals, and makes it a practical possibility.

It is by reason of the disappearance of political and psychological hindrances that the anniversary of the ejection of the Non-conformists finds two promising proposals made for the amending of the ills which it represents. One is the Federation of Churches, the other is the Conference on Faith and Order. The federation is not only effecting a union of the religious forces for social betterment, but is bringing the separated churches into a clearer personal understanding; the church leaders know one another better than they did. Thus it is making preparations for the conference, in which at last, we hope, the whole matter of division will be advanced toward settlement.

A New Book of Sermons

The Gospel Messenger

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH

Everyone that knows Elder Roth—and many that do not—know that he is a very successful missionary and an excellent preacher. This book of his sermons—thirty-five of them—covers so wide a range of subjects and does it so thoroughly that you need it for your own information, and to lend to your investigating neighbor.

Elder Roth is always a preacher for the people; uses enough scripture to make his utterances authoritative, tells where to find it, yet doesn't tire the reader with too much monotony. Quotations and citations have been verified.

The autobiography of the author is a valuable feature of the book.

Through the generosity of Elder Roth we are enabled to offer this well-printed, nicely arranged, and well-bound book at the nominal sum of 75c. Order No. 248a.

Herald Publishing House, Lamon, Iowa

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

The only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

NO ALUM, NO LIME PHOSPHATE

A NEW 1913 BOOK

Entitled, "Revelations in Our Times." - A vast collection of over 100 tongues, prophecies, visions, dreams, and songs in the Spirit, from the Martyr's time to January, 1913. Cloth, $1.00. Sent post-paid anywhere by remitting to Alvin Knisley, Independence, Missouri. 7-1t

COMPENDIUM OF FAITH is a work for the student. It is a collection of texts taken from the standard church works on a great many subjects. Also a splendid brief history of the Apostasy.

Order No.

- .141 cloth.....75c
- 141½ leather.....$1.00
- 174 flexible.....$1.50

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND., Independence, Mo. 6-tf

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant.

No. 216, cloth.....75c

A GERMAN EDITION of a Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Just issued. Order No. 230b. Paper, 25c.

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,

Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni, Iowa.

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 6-tf

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children. Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

PARSONS' TEXT BOOK. Revised and enlarged—contains a vast amount of collated facts to substantiate the latter day message. It saves you hours of weary research. Order No. 232, cloth.....75

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right. Cloth No. 243.....75

BOOK OF MORMON. Danish edition. (Mormon's Bog) just received.

Order ¼ leather edition, $1.00.

Order leather, board, $1.25.

Order leather, limp, $1.50.

Order leather, flexible, $2.50.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success.

No. 248a, cloth.....75

"I Wish I Were In Dixie"

Why don't you go south this winter—to Florida, to New Orleans, to the famous Gulf Coast of Cuba? Why don't you respond to that yearly temptation to visit the beautiful South-land when the South is at its best?

Special Winter Tourist Rates via the Burlington to All Principal Points

Make the train ride an important part of the trip. Go the way of most comforts, most delightful service, most attractive features—go via the Burlington.

Let me help you plan your trip—outline its possibilities, the cost, the stop-overs you could make, points of interest you should see and everything else you want to know, so that you will get the greatest possible enjoyment out of it. Come in and let's talk it over.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 19, 1913

NUMBER 8

Editorial

GOOD NEWS FROM TORONTO AND HOLDEN.

We are informed that Sundays, January 26 and February 2, the Princess Theater of Toronto, Ontario, was filled to overflowing, and on the latter date numbers were turned away. Also efforts in near-by places show an increase of fervor and attention. So that the brethren abroad may understand that an effort is still being made by the Toronto Branch as a body to spread the gospel this notice is given.

In connection with this it is recited by one of the writers from Canada that a gentleman, a business man of Toronto, made in effect the following statement to one of the young brethren of that place:

"For some time I have been troubled over my standing before God. I have been a member of the Methodist Church for years, and yet I have not been satisfied, and last night while praying I asked the Lord if I was in the right church. If not, to direct me to his accredited church. In a moment I saw an angel standing beside me. He informed me that the Methodist Church was not his church, but that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was his church, and that Joseph Smith was the prophet and president of the church; and as he spoke thus I saw a man standing beside me that I would recognize if I ever saw him, and I was told that that man was Mr. Smith.

"I was instructed to go to 35 Huron Street, and to secure two books. The angel informed me that one was called 'The sermons of Bishop R. C. Evans,' and the other 'Faulty creeds,' and that the man who preached in the Princess Theater was God's representative in this city, and that he was preaching the fullness of the gospel."

As a result the business man went to the house of Bishop R. C. Evans, at 35 Huron Street. Brother R. C. Evans not being at home, he related his story to Brother Evans's son William. When the part of the story was reached in which he spoke of Joseph Smith, the president of the church, young Brother Evans told the gentleman to cast his eyes around the room and see if he could find the picture of the man he saw. Notwithstanding that there were, in groups and otherwise, pictures of one hundred and five different members of the ministry hanging on the walls of the room, this man picked out the picture of Joseph Smith and said that that was the picture of the man whom he had seen. He stated that he had never seen Brother Evans or President Smith, nor had he heard of Brother Evans's book of sermons or Faulty Creeds.

We learn also that a reverend gentleman is to attack the church on the 13th inst., at Mitchell, who has great information concerning Joseph Smith and his forbears with which he proposes to enlighten the people. The Mitchell Branch has secured the services of Brother R. C. Evans, to be present and to turn aside the reverend gentleman's wrath and instruct him more thoroughly: for if the statement is correct, he needs it as badly as ever that man whom Priscilla and Aquilla took to time and gave better information.

Brother Archie McLean, president of the Toronto Branch, was told that numbers had been going and coming to and from the rotunda of the Princess Theater, unable to get in on Sunday, the second inst.

By letter from Brother William Lewis we learn that a series of meetings by Elder J. F. Curtis and himself at Holden, Missouri, resulted in the baptism of thirteen. Certainly a very encouraging record, considering the records that have been made heretofore at Holden.

A VETERAN AT REST.

Brother Lewis Gaulter passed away on Friday, February 14. He was in his ninety-sixth year, and was Lamoni's oldest citizen. Brother Gaulter was born in France and at nine years of age shipped as a cabin boy. He followed the seas for twenty years. The last vessel on which he sailed was never heard from after sailing from New Orleans, he being prevented by circumstances from going with it.

The brother, after farming many years, did some missionary work for the Reorganization. He was a member of the old church. Obituary will appear later.

DUTIES OF BRANCH OFFICERS.

II. THE PRIEST.

The priest's duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties: and he may also ordain other priests, teachers, and deacons; and he is to take the lead of meetings when there is no elder present, but when there is an elder present he is only to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties. In all these duties the priest is to assist the elder if occasion requires.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10.

Under the law the priest is associated rather closely with the presiding elder; while the deacon is associated more in his line of work with the teacher. The deacon is to assist the teacher; the priest is to assist the elder. The line seems to be drawn rather distinctly at this point between two classes of work; and if, as suggested in a forthcoming article, a teacher or a deacon shall visit in conjunction with a priest, he should do so acting in his own capacity, and not as an assistant to the priest in his work.

Certain lines are laid down over which branch officers may not go; for instance, in the statement that teachers and deacons may not baptize or administer the sacrament; and yet the law allows a good deal of latitude, evidently for the benefit of those branches that are not fully officered or do not have entirely competent men in all offices. And there are such branches. So the Lord has wisely ordained that the deacon may swing into line and help the teacher; the priest may assist the elder; and those of a higher office may step down and officiate in any lesser office; in the absence of the elder the priest may preside; when the elder and priest are both absent, the teacher may take the lead; and if all these are absent, the deacon presides. The work must be done, and is not to be hindered by ironclad rules. So branch organization is of necessity somewhat mobile.

THE PRIEST MAY PREACH, TEACH, EXHORT, ETC.

The priest is to preach, teach, expound, and exhort, according to the law found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

And the Book of Mormon says that the disciples of the church on this continent, when ordaining priests, said: "In the name of Jesus Christ I ordain you a priest . . . to preach repentance and remission of sins through Jesus Christ, by the endurance of faith on his name to the end."—Book of Moroni 3: 2.

Very important instruction as to the character of their preaching is found in the following:

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of the church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5.

With others, the priests share the duty to conserve the gospel of Jesus Christ, teaching those things that are written in the standard books, and resisting any effort to abandon any part of the gospel, or to introduce any foreign elements, contrary to the written word.

MAY BAPTIZE, ADMINISTER SACRAMENT, AND SOLEMNIZE MARRIAGES.

The priest may baptize (see Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10). He may administer the sacrament, as stated in the same section. Also the Book of Mormon has the following: "The manner of their elders and priests administering the flesh and blood of Christ unto the church . . ."—Book of Moroni 4: 1.

And the church law concerning marriage says that "the solemnization should be performed by a presiding high priest, high priest, bishop, elder, or priest," etc. (See Doctrine and Covenants 111: 1.)

While teachers and deacons may not lay on hands under any circumstances, the privilege is extended to the priests to the extent of ordaining other priests, teachers, or deacons: "He may also ordain other priests, teachers, and deacons."—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10.

A PRIEST MAY PRESIDE.

A priest may preside over a branch in his own right when so elected by the people (Doctrine and Covenants 120: 2.) In case he is elected as branch priest he may preside during the absence of the presiding elder: "He is to take the lead of meetings when there is no elder present."—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10.

April 17, 1902, the church adopted the following resolution:

In answer to [the] question from Runnells, Iowa, Branch: Where there is no elder in a branch, and several priests, can one priest be sustained or chosen as president of the branch, another as priest of the branch, or would the two be of equal authority?

That [upon] such action of the branch, the priest so chosen would be the priest of the branch and preside, and the second priest so chosen would be his assistant priest.—General Conference Resolution, number 521.

RIGHT OF PRESIDENCY IN THE LESSER PRIESTHOOD.

We may profitably devote a little space to the question of the right of presidency in the lesser priesthood. That men of the lesser priesthood may preside is shown by the following:

A branch may be presided over by a high priest, and elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, chosen and sustained by the vote of the branch.—Doctrine and Covenants 120: 2.

And he [the elder] is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

He [the priest] is to take the lead of meetings when there is no elder present, but when there is an elder present he is only to preach, teach, expound, exhort, etc.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10.

The words, "when there is an elder present," are interpreted to refer to an elder regularly elected to preside over the branch. When present he naturally occupies in his place, and the priests in their places. But when he is absent the priest or priests may preside, even though there should be other elders present, perhaps resident in the branch, but not holding official position in the branch.

Some hold the idea that a priest, teacher, or deacon regularly elected has no right to preside during the absence of the presiding elder, if there are other elders present. Such an idea is not in harmony with the position taken by the church, and in some places would work endless confusion. The position has been defined as follows:

The branch officers are the officers who shall preside over and have charge of these meetings; and none other shall preside, except by vote of those present at any meeting, or by courtesy of the officer present whose right it is to preside.—Rules of Order, p. 100.

The officers of the church recognized by these meetings as having a right to preside, are: A presiding elder who has been regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a priest, or priests, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a teacher, or teachers, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a deacon, or deacons, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a secretary or clerk of the branch, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch.—Rules of Order, p. 101, par. 161.

The succeeding paragraph, elsewhere quoted in this series of articles, explains the line of succession in this regard. In the absence of the presiding elder, whatever other elders or priests may be present, the right to preside passes to the regularly elected priest or priests of the branch. In the absence of the presiding elder and the regularly elected priests, the right passes to the regularly elected teacher or teachers, and so on to the deacons. The right to preside where there are two or more officers of one grade present (as two priests) goes to the one senior in office in the branch.

There are in some branches resident elders and even high priests who for one reason or another are not elected or chosen by the people to occupy as branch officers. Such should not interfere with the right of the regularly elected officers, of whatever grade in the priesthood, in the discharge of their duties, or with their right to preside when elected to act as branch president, or on those special occasions when the branch president may be absent.

THE PRIEST A VISITING OFFICER.

The priest is to visit the house of each member (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10). He goes not as an inquisitor, but rather "exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties."

This is one of the most important duties falling to the lot of the priest,—to move among the members, from house to house, meeting them in the privacy of their home life, strengthening them with wise counsel, exhorting them to attend to all their duties, and in all this representing the interest of the church in their welfare. For the priests go into these homes representing God and the church.

This is their duty, and the members should honor them in it and cooperate with them, not resenting their visits as an intrusion, for they are not an intrusion, but welcoming them as a wise and legitimate part of the gospel economy. God knows the weakness of human nature, and he has so ordered the organization of the church that there are these officers whose duty it is to visit the members, exercising a kindly watchcare, and extending a helping hand.

The priests in these visits should use good judgment and be guided by the Spirit; so there are no rigid rules that can be laid down to govern them. God himself has not attempted to do that. They must be actuated by the spirit of love, and go about their work because they desire to do good. They should avoid that spirit of formality that moves men to do things merely to fulfill the text of the law. They should endeavor to get close to the Saints and in sympathy with them, and in this way they will accomplish great good and obtain a goodly reward for themselves.

It will be observed that while the teacher is to "see that all the members do their duty" (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11), the priest is to exhort them to attend to their duties, especially those duties that are termed family duties. It is the work of the priest to exhort and persuade and advise and admonish; but he may not discipline. The teacher also persuades and exhorts, and failing to secure desired results he may set in motion those processes that will result in the disciplining of those who do not obey the divine law and put away all iniquity, hardness, backbiting, and evil of every nature.

PRIESTS MAY TRAVEL.

The law provides that when practicable and desirable the priest may travel and preach:

And, behold, the high priests should travel, and also the elders, and also the lesser priests.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 22.

Therefore, take with you those who are ordained unto the lesser priesthood, and send them before you to make appointments, and to prepare the way, and to fill appointments that you yourselves are not able to fill. Behold, this is the way that mine apostles, in ancient days, built up the church unto me.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 20.

Those who do not travel, but are chosen to officiate in branches, in their calling as priests, will find a splendid field to occupy in the discharge of duties outlined in the law,—especially in their work as visiting officers.

Most of the priests are laboring men, and many of them find it difficult to take the time to make visits. But it is said that difficulties are made to overcome. The quarterly report from one branch shows one hundred and sixteen visits for the quarter, made by three priests. These are working men and men of family, and have little or no time for visiting, except evenings and Sunday afternoons. Their record for one quarter shows what may be done.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTE.—Our next number will take up the "Duties of the teacher."

THE CONSTITUTION.

The following is an editorial taken from the Kansas City Journal of February 5, last, concerning the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which we believe every elder should not only be willing to read, but to take note of, as it contains valuable information.

There are many interesting facts in connection with the amendments which have been made to the Constitution of the United States, the latest of which is the income tax. Perhaps the most striking feature of the whole matter is that until the income tax was ratified, only three of the sixteen amendments have been enacted by the ratification of States since 1865, and these three related in one form or another to the changed conditions brought about by the Civil War and the settlement of the slavery question.

Twelve of the sixteen amendments became law before 1805, and most of them were in the nature of incidental extensions of provisions implied in the fundamental purposes of the Constitution itself—loose ends caught up after the United States became a nation in fact. Ten of the first thirteen were ratified in 1791, two years after they were proposed. The eleventh became law in 1798 and the twelfth in 1804. It was sixty-one years before another amendment was adopted, and there have been but four in the last ninety-nine years—a century, for all practical purposes. In view of the fact that the first twelve of the amendments were rather precautions and the correction of palpable but incidental omissions by the constitutional convention, it is immensely significant that the fathers of the Republic should have formulated a constitution which was not really amended until three quarters of a century had elapsed and a great civil war had both shown and corrected a radical defect in the Nation's life. Slavery was an accepted condition until the war. The preceding amendments were not radical or fundamental in their nature, not serious faults of the framing of the Constitution.

For sixty-one years, therefore, from the ratification of the twelfth amendment in 1804 to the thirteenth in 1865, there was no radical alteration in the wonderful instrument which so richly deserves the encomium of being the greatest document that ever emanated from the brain of man. It is significant also that even in times of greater or less popular unrest the ratification of the last of the "war" amendments ushered in an era of cessation from even the suggestion of constitution tinkering, which lasted from 1870, when the immortal guaranty of the negro's rights of citizenship was made, until 1913, a period of forty-three years. Unfortunately the future does not hold out the same promise of contentment, for the demagogues and restless "reformers" will undoubtedly keep agitating further changes in the organic law of the country.

Of the first ten amendments, proposed in the first year of Washington's first administration and ratified two years later, the following is a digest:

First, guaranteeing freedom of worship, speech and of the press; second, providing for state militia; third, prohibiting quartering of soldiers in private houses against consent of owner in time of peace, and in time of war except according to law; fourth, forbidding unreasonable search and seizure; fifth, forbidding trial for capital or infamous crime without indictment, forbidding double jeopardy and deprivation of life, liberty or property without due process of law; sixth, providing speedy and public trial by impartial jury, accused to be confronted by witnesses against him; seventh, providing trial by jury in cases involving over twenty dollars; eighth, forbidding excessive bail, fine or cruel or unusual punishment; ninth, declaring rights enumerated do not deny or disparage those retained by the people; tenth, asserting powers not delegated to United States by Constitution or prohibited by it to States are reserved to the States or to the people.

The eleventh amendment, ratified in 1798, provides that the judicial power of the United States does not extend to any suit begun against one of the States by the citizen of another State or of a foreign country.

The twelfth amendment, ratified in 1804, specifies the procedure in the election of president, the system having been radically changed.

From 1804 until 1865 there were no amendments. The thirteenth, ratified in 1865, forever wiped the stain of slavery from the Nation by forbidding involuntary servitude save as punishment, etc., in due process of law.

The fourteenth amendment, ratified in 1868, forbade the States to abridge the rights of citizens, provided for the oath of allegiance to the Constitution and in other particulars re-adjusted conditions growing out of the war.

The fifteenth amendment, ratified in 1870, was the crowning act of the Nation's conscience, when it provided that no State shall deny or abridge the right of a citizen of the United States on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude—an amendment which has been repeatedly and insolently violated under various guises of "law," all without any effective rebuke on the part of the supreme authority under our system of government.

The sixteenth amendment, ratified last week, provides for a tax on incomes exceeding $5,000 a year.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

BOOK ON MORMONISM.—We call attention to a review of another book on Mormonism which appears in this issue. It is called, The Latter Day Saints, and while professing to deal with the whole church movement, it gives the Reorganized Church but meager mention.

FALL RIVER NEWS.—The district conference at Fall River, Massachusetts, received attention in the Evening News, of that city, in its issue of February 3. Conference was held over the preceding Sunday. Our fight on polygamy was outlined and the resolution of April 17, 1902, was given in full. Where Saints are living up to their opportunities their light is seen, and recognition by the press becomes an easy thing to acquire.

POCATELLO, IDAHO.—The Pocatello Tribune of February 5 announces Brother J. E. Vanderwood's arrival in that city and a brief account of the Reorganized Church. The Pocatello Chronicle of February 8 contains a column communication from the brother in which he makes an able argument for our position. The publicity habit properly used is a good one.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE.—The reception committee appointed by the Lamoni Branch for service during General Conference make an announcement in another department of the HERALD. It is their intention to keep the Saints informed as to conditions and they desire that all who intend coming to conference give them due and timely notice as to their wants and necessities.

RETURNS IN MARCH.—We are pleased to announce that Sister Elbert A. Smith is greatly improved in health by her stay in California and that according to present plans the Associate Editor and family will leave California on March 20 for Lamoni, where they will remain.

Original Articles

THE "ROTA PLAN" IN GREAT BRITAIN.

INTRODUCTION.

The preaching rota plan, of which we are writing, it is only just to say is not in operation throughout the British Isles Mission. In fact, the said plan is confined within the limits of the Manchester District. We can not, therefore, speak of it in the sense of a mission plan, although there is no reason why a plan on very similar lines should not be in operation throughout Great Britain.

We must, however, in justice to other districts, say that in some parts of the mission, districts have plans of their own on a smaller scale, that is, providing for their ministerial appointments—arranging for from three to six months at a time, but strictly speaking, we may therefore say that the preaching rota plan (as you understand it, Mr. Editor), belongs exclusively to the Manchester District. Therefore, if there be credit due for the formation of such system and organization, it must in justice be given to the pioneers of the Manchester District, for they were alone responsible for the inception of the idea, or system.

ITS HISTORY.

It is about forty years since the work of the Reorganized Church was first introduced into the city of Manchester. The Reorganization of the work was carried into effect by the late Bishop Thomas Taylor and Elder John Seville, through whose ministry the first branch of the Reorganized Church had its birth in this great city; his counselor, the late High Priest Joseph Dewsnup, sr., together with many other worthies of those days, among whom were found Elders J. Arrowsmith, J. Miller, T. Hughes, William Armstrong, Robert Baty, H. Greenwood, James Baty, sr., J. Newstead, and many others who have long ago gone to their rest, so that to-day there are very few of the pioneers left to cheer us. There was also a branch of the Reorganized Church at Farnworth, some nine miles away from the city, so that a district was soon organized, but the growth of the work was very slow for some years. Then there was another branch organized in the town of Wigan, some eighteen miles away. This was largely due to the removal of some of the Saints from the Farnworth Branch. Then the idea of missions came along. The idea was welcomed and missions were appointed in several of the townships close to the city; namely, Bolton, Gorton, Bradford (m-c), Miles Platting, Salford. With these missions appointed the demand for laborers came as a natural consequence.

The branches and missions were very limited in the number of ministers that were capable of presenting the word and administering in the ordinances of the gospel. They therefore appealed to the authorities of the district for assistance along these lines. The district at this period was none too strong, I can assure you, and men of ability were very few; but the demand was there and had to be met. These demands increased with time, hence grew the need for some plan or system by which these growing demands should be supplied from time to time. I well remember the first effort that was made in the district to do something worthy of the cause. So the brethren arranged for three months' discourses to be given in a large hall in Manchester.

It was a great task for the brethren, and they were very glad when their responsibility was at an end; however, the few brethren available got through with success of varying degree. Then the idea of assistant elders was begotten. These were appointed by the district. They acted much in the same way and after the order of counselors to the president of the branch. By way of illustration, I give you a copy of my letter of appointment for the half-year ending March 31, 1895.

MANCHESTER DISTRICT,

REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

ELDER WM. HENRY GREENWOOD,

October 1, 1894.

Dear Brother: You are hereby appointed to labor and assist Elder Henry Greenwood in the Beswick, Bradford Mission, for the half year ending March 31, 1895.

You are also planned to preach at the Sunday evening service at Manchester Branch, December 23, 1894.

Ever praying that your ministration may be approved of God and his servants, I remain,

Your brother in gospel bonds,

JOSEPH DEWSNUP, SR.

President of Manchester District.

The above copy of our letters of appointment, together with preaching appointments, will give you a good idea of our order of arrangement. The same principle was carried through in the branches, too, for a time. This arrangement was carried out, together with a few selected names from among the elders, who were given preaching appointments according to their several abilities, some more, some less—and let me assure you that many of us did not feel equal to these tasks at that time. Well, the appointments were made after this order; it was therefore in this way that the first idea of the rota plan was conceived, from which has evolved the present preaching rota plan as we know it to-day.

Thus you will see that the origin of this plan was the outcome of the demands made upon the district. But the first conception or embryonic condition of whole mission that has in operation for the whole year such a plan, though other districts of late years have adopted a similar system, but they are not printed as ours are, and furthermore, they are not yet perfected in point of organization, as is the plan now under consideration. But we have faith to believe that the plan as shown in this article will come into general use in the districts throughout the mission. The only point lacking is organization.

And now, before I proceed further, let me add another word in justice; and that is to state that we are indebted to, and owe our present condition in organization, very largely to the splendid generalship of our late Brother High Priest Joseph Dewsnup, sr., associated with High Priest Henry Greenwood, and our Evangelical Minister James Baty, sr., all of the Manchester District. These brethren formed the presidency of the said district for nearly twenty years without a break; therefore, to them belongs the credit of at least laying the foundation of the work herein mentioned. The district has a membership of upwards of five hundred members, and may be reported truthfully to-day as the "health-

Preaching Rota Plan for the Year Ending April, 1913.

"No man is fitted to do for others who fails to do for himself."—(Selected).

Branches and Missions	May 12	26	June 9	22	July 14	28	Aug. 11	25	Sept. 8	22	Oct. 13	27	Nov. 10	24	Dec. 8	22	Jan. 22	26	Feb. 9	23	Mar. 9	23	Apr. 14	28
South Manchester	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
North Manchester	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Northeast Manchester	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
East Manchester	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13
Farnworth	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14
Wigan	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1
Stockport	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2
Warrington	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3
Eccles	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4
Denton	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	1	2	3	4	5

Rota Plan Ministers.

ELDERS.

- 1. W. H. Greenwood
- 2. H. Greenwood
- 3. W. R. Armstrong

- 4. S. F. Mather
- 5. G. Towers
- 6. N. J. Weate

- 7. J. Waugh
- 8. J. Schofield
- 9. E. Maloney

- 10. F. Nadin
- 11. F. Bruton

PRIESTS.

- 12. A. Hall
- 13. T. Adams
- 14. G. Gaydon

If you can not fulfill your appointment, write the Branch President.

the system was only of very short duration, for we could not withstand the principle of evolution; but with the growth of the work, demands were made for the enlargement of our ideas. Men were raised up as the Lord had promised, so that our system of working had to be revised; it could not be select any longer. The brethren had grown in mind and in understanding and ability, by study; therefore, in order to supply the demand, it became necessary that the plan should be rotary; that is, instead of men being selected as before, they should now be placed in order, numbered, and sent out, without selection, in rotation; hence you have the history of the Manchester District Preaching Rota Plan, as it is known to-day. And in justice to the Manchester District, let me say that it is the only district in the spot" of the British Isles Mission in spiritual growth and development, and all things being equal, I know of no other part of the church that has greater possibilities before it.

ITS PURPOSE.

The main object or purpose of the rota plan was to supply each branch or mission with a representative speaker every alternate Sunday evening, and thus assist the branches to minister and discharge their responsibility with a greater amount of confidence than they would otherwise have done; and furthermore, that each branch should have and enjoy an interchange of thought, and we thought, especially at that time, that it was a splendid idea for all concerned, both for teaching and also for the receiving of instruction that would assist us in the discharge of our personal responsibility with greater faith and confidence. Another reason why this method was adopted was this: When we had only one branch in Manchester, it was a common thing to see six or eight of the brethren upon the platform at each service, simply looking at each other. This affected members of both orders of priesthood. So you will readily see that the idea of planned appointments served the useful purpose of finding work for idle hands to do.

Another purpose, and this was indeed one of the most important in many ways, as you will observe, was this: that the visiting elder to the branch was often enabled to assist in the ordinance of laying on of hands, the blessing of little children, or in the administration for the healing of the sick, or in the service of confirmation, and at times even for ordination. So that the president of the branch is very often relieved in mind by the presence of his brother elder.

A final thought upon the purpose for which the plan was designed; and this point is a most important one to all who essay to take part in this work. The point is this: The necessity for organization; that is, to bring about some system that would enable every man to organize the faculties of his mind. This idea should be given to every young minister of the gospel. We found in our experience that for the elders and priests to realize the importance of the duty thus placed upon them, they must be taught to marshal their forces. This means that they must study. This means much thought, time, and labor; that is, if we wish to discharge our responsibility with success and credit to the work we represent; for we need to present our evidences of the truth to the world in the most interesting and convincing way possible. But before we can do this we need preparation, so that we may appear before the world as sober, intelligent gentlemen, in manner, and also in general deportment. Our conduct in the pulpit, too, should be beyond all question. Ministers of the gospel, of all men in the world, should be the most mannerly, possessing the very best language they can acquire; let the language be ever so plain or simple or homely; but above all things, let it be pure and clean, free from all dross. For this purpose, not seeking to soar above the people, but coming right down to them, we may by the force and power of the simplicity of thought, uplift them by teaching them correctly the principles of truth, and the righteousness of action.

ITS USEFULNESS.

The usefulness of the rota plan is clearly proven by the good it has already accomplished. I can assure you the ministry and the membership would feel lost without their district plan. The use of the plan is by no means confined to the ministry. The Saints take a personal interest in the plan, and look forward with a great interest to the visits of the brethren. They seem to have such confidence in the working of the rota plan that they often invite their friends to come and hear the minister preach.

Another point of great interest and usefulness to both Saints and ministry is the fact that the constitution of the entire district is clearly seen at a glance. First, organization, officers, etc., and the names of the brethren who held offices, together with their addresses. The inner pages show the several branches and missions that compose our district, together with their names and locations. The name of the presiding elder and the secretary of the branch in each case is also given; together with the address of their residence and also that of the chapel or meeting room, so that every Saint may, if he wishes, know all there is to be known regarding the location of the several branches in the district.

THE MINISTRY.

You will notice that the ministry is divided under two headings: namely; ministry to labor as circumstances permit; and the preaching rota plan ministry. The reasons for this division are various. In the first case, the circumstances that may govern, say the presiding elder of any branch, you can quite readily understand that it might make it very unwise for him to leave his post in the branch. Then again, the branch priest is in very much the same position. We generally leave the matter to these brethren to decide; some may prefer the plan; others have quite enough with their branch duties. When the presidents of the branches desire a change, it is the custom of the branch presidents to arrange for an interchange of appointment with the several branches in the district. This arrangement is mutual and therefore is not shown upon the preaching plan card.

There are also those of the ministry who are not at liberty on Sunday for reasons; such as employment, for instance, may hinder, and others may be scattered; that is, too far away from the branches to meet with the Saints; others are, or may be, aged and thus unable to travel; and some have no desire to so labor; some are affected one way and some in another. So we include all these names in the above list, so that when they happen to be in attendance at the branch services, they may be called upon to speak.

PREACHING ROTA PLAN MINISTRY.

The names and numbers are thus shown of those who can fulfill appointments: you will notice in the plan is given the names of the several branches with the numbers opposite of the brethren who will visit them for the next twelve months, and also the date upon which that particular visit will take place.

When brethren foresee that they can not keep up their appointments, they are instructed what to do (see notice at the bottom of the rota plan). Several of the brethren in this district also hold general church appointments, too, for the first time this year. Thus I think we may say that we have a very successful rota plan, proven and tried by the test of many years of experience. A plan by which the talents and labors of our ministry have been arranged for with profit to themselves, and good to both the cause and people.

HOW THE PLAN IS SUSTAINED.

The rota plan is sustained by a fund known as the district fund: to this fund we expect our branches to contribute a collection once each quarter. Then the brethren who can afford subscribe to this fund. Some pay their own expenses; that is, they do not charge their railway fares to this fund. But the rule of the district is that the expenses of the brethren be defrayed from the fund mentioned. Thus it is carried on from year to year, and up to date very successfully.

CONCLUSION.

Now, in conclusion, and in fairness, I ought to state that the Manchester District is most fortunate in the location of its branches; and I should say that it is one of the most compact districts in the church so far as my knowledge goes; that is, geographically speaking, of course. For instance; we have nine branches and a mission in our district, and taking Manchester as the center, the most distant branch is only eighteen miles away, while we have four branches in the city of Manchester, and three other branches within six miles of the city; one nine miles away, and another one sixteen miles. So you will see what I mean by the above statement. We can get out to the most distant branches by train with ease, on Sundays, the train service being good, and therefore everything in our favor.

I have just given you a plain account, stating things as I have understood them, and just as you would find them should you visit us at any time. If the information can be of any service or use to anyone anywhere they are welcome. Should any desire a copy of the plan, I will supply them as far as they will go. I have only a few copies on hand.

Let me wish you every success in all your methods of doing good. I pray also that our heavenly Father will bless us with wisdom to use the intelligence he has given us in all our organizations, and even if they be few, we may see to it that they are as perfect as it is possible, so that they may prove a blessing to all mankind, whether it be by rota plan or any other system or method.

W. H. GREENWOOD.

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.

• * * * •

ANOTHER LEAF FROM LIFE.

In the life of each there are peculiarities, perhaps hereditary, but not understood sufficiently to know the history of those progenitors who transmit such tendencies or traits. There has come into my possession certain information of my progenitors which indicates that they were in possession of some degree of the light that portrayed the coming forth of the work of God in these latter days, and gave evidence of its true nature.

My grandmother on my mother's side, Mary Follett, was a distant relative of King Follet who died in Nauvoo, and whose funeral sermon Joseph Smith preached a short time before his death. She was born a few miles from Palmyra, New York, in 1815, and was acquainted with Joseph Smith in her girlhood days. She informed me several times that she was acquainted with the fact that Joseph Smith was a poor scholar, they being associated in their school life when he was about seventeen or eighteen years of age.

Her husband, Emery Willard Lamb, was born in 1811, a few miles from Fayette, New York, where the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized in 1830, and he, as well as grandmother, was conversant with the circumstances transpiring in that part of the country along religious lines. They were married in 1833 and moved into Lyons Township, Wayne County, New York, a short distance from where the Hill Cumorah is, and there my mother was born.

Grandfather was acquainted with the rise of the church, and some of the conditions that led up to it, and becoming convinced of its truthfulness and the claims made for the Book of Mormon, he became a devoted member. His family started for Nauvoo from Ohio in 1844, but stopped in Indiana for a time, and there heard of the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. In 1852 he and family started for Salt Lake City, Utah, not knowing that some of the leaders of the church who went there had departed from the faith of the church as taught by the Bible and Book of Mormon, and as was taught by Joseph Smith till the day of his death. While they were living near Kanessville, now Council Bluffs, in the summer of 1852, they became apprised for the first time that polygamy was being practiced by some of the members of the church living near there, and in the fall and winter of that year the doctrine was first publicly advocated by those who claimed to be representatives of the church then in Utah. As a result of this information the family went no further west, but during the next year moved into Harrison County, Iowa, where they lived for several years.

My grandmother's father, Jonathan Follet, lived in Ontario County, New York, and he and a Mr. Alpheus Gifford were for some time previous to the announcement by Joseph Smith of the angel's message, deeply interested in and concerned about their souls' welfare and the religious situation of the times, there being great religious revivals, especially among the Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians. Because of this religious upheaval these men with many others were compelled to consider the important question, "Which church is the true one?"

While these men were engaged in trying to solve the question to them so vital, Mr. Gifford was blessed with a dream which very much impressed him. He dreamed that he was within a large and very beautiful building in which there were many tiers of seats arranged with one tier above another and back of each other; that there were many people in the building and occupying the seats; that he was sitting on one of the seats in a tier considerably elevated, but not the highest. In the morning, after having this dream, he went at once to the home of my great-grandfather, Jonathan Follett, to relate to him the dream, and he interpreted the dream to mean; The building represented the true church of Christ soon to arise; the tiers of seats in the building represented the offices in the church, from the lowest to the highest; and that he, Gifford, sitting in one of the seats represented that he would live to see it, would enter and occupy some office in the church. The interpreter of the dream died before 1830, but Mr. Gifford lived to enter the church, and become an elder therein, and to do much in spreading the gospel by preaching, and convinced many of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Some of those he was the means of leading to the truth became apostles and did a good work.

My mother wrote both in prose and poetry. One of her earliest compositions was written when she was eighteen years of age, or the day before that birthday. Because of the subject and some of its contents, I here make a record of it:

"RELIGION.

"Religion is the best property that we can possess. It can be purchased without money, and I should think we could have it without very much trouble. When we enjoy religion we have the sweetest pleasures and solidest comforts than we have all the days of our life without it. With religion we can bear disappointments with long patience and exercise patience in all things, when without it we would be very impatient. We are commanded to love God with all our heart, mind, and strength, and if we do this we do no more than is our duty to do. I am heartily ashamed for my part that I appear so heedless about my soul's salvation and the salvation of those around me; for there are deaths in every direction from me, yet I am spared. So I think it is high time for us to bestir ourselves, and turn to God before it is too late and before he shall say to us, 'Depart from me ye workers of iniquity, for I never knew you.' But when we obey his holy commands we shall be happy through life, and when death comes we can say, 'Welcome messenger, we are ready and well prepared,' and after death we can have eternal life at the right hand of God."

The brightest memory of the life of my mother, and that which remained with me when in the world and of the world was that of the great patience with which she was possessed, and although her life was a tried one, yet she never murmured, even when she was undergoing the excruciating pain resulting from a cancer, and would be compelled to wring her hands on account of the pain, at the same time she would sing with me the songs of Zion, and murmur not.

One of her last poems, if not her last, was written at the beginning of her last illness, and associated with a letter to my father was given to my eldest sister, Maria Jane Knight, to be handed to my father after her death. The letter has not been preserved that I know of, but the poem has been, and I copy it for publication:

THE DYING WIFE.

You'll think of me sometimes, beloved,
When I am gone from sight;
When you can see me nevermore
You'll not forget me quite.
You'll miss, sometimes at twilight hour,
My low and loving tone;
Your heart will sometimes feel a pang,
When beating all alone.

You'll think of days for ever gone,
And grief may wring a tear
From eyes that have but seldom wept,
But I shall not be here.
You'll come and go, and yet that smile,
That once your fond eyes met,
Will faded be—for ever fled,
But, oh, do not forget!

When cold and lifeless is the form,
That's nestled on thy breast;
When chill and marble-like the lips,
That once thine own have pressed;—
Oh! sometimes think of me and come
Unto the quiet spot
Where I shall slumber lone and still,
But oh! not quite forgot.

You'll think of me when sitting 'side
My lone and vacant chair;
And sometimes love to gaze upon
This golden lock of hair.

You'll fondly love another one,
 And call her thine, but yet
 Your lost young bride, your first beloved,
 Oh, do not quite forget!

And she, thy chosen one, may bring
 A heart of love to thee;
 But not more loving true than mine,—
 I know it can not be.
 But mine must throbless, pulseless be,
 Its warm out-gushing, still,
 But you will sometimes think of me
 Who is so pale and chill.

Oh! sometimes fancy that my arms,
 In warmth are round thee twined;
 And that my cheek, once warm and fair,
 Is fondly pressed to thine.
 When I am gone, for ever gone,
 I'd be remembered yet:
 Oh! think of me sometimes, beloved,
 And never quite forget."

In this are two prophecies, one that father would live to read this production, and the other that he would "love another one," both of which were fulfilled; but I am sure that he never quite forgot my mother, and the smile with which she greeted him, when at times the conditions existing would have caused others to have met their companions with a scorn.

Truly the works of the righteous do follow them, and they leave their influence upon the lives of others.

J. F. MINTUN.

Of General Interest

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

The Latter Day Saints; a Study of the Mormons. By Ruth Kauffman and Reginald Wright Kauffman. (Williams and Norgate.)

"The Mormon Church," declare the authors of The Latter Day Saints, "is a capitalist. . . . So far as we know it is the only church that has ever been an established church in the Republic."

The Latter Day Saints is a study of the Mormons written by Americans for English readers. The particular interest of such a book finds its reason in the tremendous number of British converts to Mormonism, the tides of emigration that swept from Liverpool, from Ireland, and from other parts of Great Britain, to swell the population of the "new Zion" on the shores of Salt Lake. But The Latter Day Saints has its interest for American readers as well, and the authors of the book have tried, not to duplicate, but to combine, the studies already published in America. According to their preface, Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman have sought to cover in its entirety a field of which other writers have touched only certain parts. Their purpose is to give an account of the history of the Mormon Church, of its faith, its marriage system, its political influence, and its economics; where David Utter has written of theology, Burton J. Hendrick of polygamy, Frank J. Cannon, Murray Schick, and Alfred Henry Lewis of politics, economics, and finance, they treat not one phase of Mormon life, but the whole "Mormon question." And yet, as a matter of fact, Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman have come very near to concentration; they study the Mormon Church from the point of view of its business enterprise; they analyze it as a trust. An established church in a land of "nonestablished" sects, its establishment has shown itself to be in reality a financial combination; it is, as Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman phrase it, "a capitalist."

The tracing of Mormon history in the light of economic conditions as steps in an economic development can not fail of interest. Joseph Smith, the first prophet of Mormonism, was the ignorant, almost illiterate son of neurotic and somewhat unscrupulous parents. Despised by his fellow townsmen, it was natural that he should turn to craft; nurtured on "visions," it was natural that he should dream of "revelations." The ease with which "a vision from on high" sufficed to persuade Joseph's followers to build him a house and care for his maternal interests was sufficient temptation to autocracy; the persecution visited upon the early Mormons, the killing of Joseph Smith and his brother, the struggles of the early "Saints" in the wilderness served to build up in the church leaders of foresight, thrift, and business cunning, and in the "Saints" and converts ambition and esprit de corps. Polygamy itself was an economic institution; it swelled the church's membership and it secured to the church cheap labor.

The failures of the "Saints" in New York, Illinois, and Missouri; the acknowledgment of polygamy that led to the arrest and killing of Joseph Smith and other "apostles" in 1844, were followed by the beginning of prosperity under Brigham Young in Utah. The first prophet had been a crafty enough dreamer, and he had established a church. But his successor was an astute business man. He brought immigrants from practically all over Europe and led them across the desert to the Salt Lake tableland; he turned the desert into flourishing farm land, and as the prosperity of the church increased he opened manufacturers that, with the later mines, have made the fortune of Utah many times over; he cemented the church's hierarchy, and to his people he was a ruler whose powers were absolutely divine. With its tithes and its lands and its "cooperative" mercantile schemes the Church of the Latter Day Saints was one of the richest "concerns" in the country when the Mormon "persecution" began and the Edmonds Law finally made polygamy a criminal offense and enabled the Government to confiscate the church property.

To the earlier persecutions the "Saints" had replied with defiance, rebellion, and massacre. To the confiscation of their lands they meekly agreed. It was a triumph of business craft that made possible the church's recovery of her fortunes in the name of her leader. Of the income that is variously estimated as anywhere from $2,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year, the "prophet" was made "trustee in trust."

To the threat of disenfranchisement in 1890 the Mormon Church responded with so humble a submission that the United States Government was completely subdued in its opposition, and the "Saints'" plea for statehood was granted. In 1890 the president, Wilford Woodruff, announced to his "Saints" that polygamy must stop; the Constitution of the State of Utah declares polygamy illegal. The tableland of Salt Lake was made a State in 1895, and polygamy was immediately revived; polygamy flourishes to-day, Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman tell us, in Utah.

But the riches of the Mormon Church, its policies of business combination, had made of it by this time "a capitalist." Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman assure their British readers that the alliance of the Mormon Church with the "Sugar Trust" is a matter of common knowledge in the United States—for the raising of sugar beets has been one of the great industries of Utah. Joseph Fielding Smith, the present leader, or president, of the church, and nephew of the first "prophet," while a violent reactionary in matters of religion, is an up-to-date business man, who has served on the board of the Union Pacific Railroad, and been more or less instrumental in railroad combinations. The church, Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman aver, "is said to draw a hundred per cent dividend from money invested in the Rubber Trust, to have an interest in a great financial institution in New York, and to be in greater or less degree a partner with the trusts that control the wool, beef, tin, oil, tobacco, iron, and farming implement industries." And it is as a trust, as a tremendous capitalistic combination, that the Kauffmans regard and write of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

The so-called "menace" of the Mormon Church does not greatly trouble the authors of The Latter Day Saints. Polygamy, they say, is passing—not because it is illegal, but because it has become somewhat unfashionable and very uneconomic. The actual faith of the Mormons has become a matter of small import. Its supposed "treasonable" teachings are a matter of form and—whatever substance they may have had in the early days of Salt Lake City—are without significance now. The Mormon Church is a part of the present stage of our economic development; with the passing of that stage, Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman declare, it, too, will pass. It is large, it is rich, it is proselytizing, but its "menace" is the menace of any "capitalist."

The authors of The Latter Day Saints are Socialists. And whether or not their readers agree with them, a study of Mormonism from the standpoint of Socialist belief is absorbingly interesting. Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman quote authorities for all their statements. Their pages bristle with quotation marks, and their notes are full of authors' names. The Latter Day Saints lays no claim to be a volume of original research; but it approaches its subject from an unusual point of view.—New York Times, January 12, 1913.

* * * * *

ONE HUNDRED YEARS' PEACE WITH AMERICA; THE CELEBRATIONS OF 1914.

The celebration of a century of unbroken peace between the British peoples, which will be complete on Christmas Eve, 1914, is bringing into line an imposing array of the distinguished men and women of America and Great Britain.

Notable speeches were made and some very notable messages were read at the meeting promoted by the celebration committee for the opening of preparations on this side of the Atlantic in the Mansion House yesterday. Perhaps the most impressive of all the messages in the circumstances was the following stirring and pathetic letter which the late Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador in London, had written from Dorchester House twelve days before:

I am finding once more this week that there is never a convenient moment for being ill. But nothing has troubled me so much since the breakdown three or four weeks ago that followed my overwork in the autumn and early winter as to learn now that the physician will not consent to my attending the public meeting at the Mansion House to help inaugurate your movement for celebrating the hundredth anniversary of peace between our two countries.

I especially wish to be present because I regard this as an event of enormous importance, and think that failure to give it such a celebration as should challenge the attention of the whole world would be a crime. You may possibly have noticed that at our last Fourth of July celebration by the American Society in London I took the opportunity to bring the matter forward as prominently as I could.

If I dared to promise to be present at the Lord Mayor's meeting I would, and if by the time it comes I can escape so far from the thralldom of the physicians I surely shall be. Meantime I hope the work is in as forward and promising a state in my country as here. I am sure the centenary could not have come at a moment more helpful for the peace of the world.

After Earl Grey had read this letter, the audience rose in silent tribute to the memory of the dead ambassador.

ENGLISH-SPEAKING ENTENTE.

The Lord Mayor (Sir David Burnett) presided, and the gathering was of a widely representative character. Here are some selections from the extraordinarily strong list of messages:

Mr. Roosevelt: "My heartiest congratulations to those assembled in the historic Mansion House, and my earnest wishes for success in the effort to secure adequate celebration of the centenary of peace between the great English-speaking Empire of Britain on the one hand and the great English-speaking Republic of America on the other."

The Prime Minister: "I much regret that the pressure of public business makes it impossible for me to attend the inaugural meeting of the British committee to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of peace between the English-speaking nations. That peace, which has stood the strain of changing governments and varying circumstances, is an example to the world of the possibility of harmonious and sympathetic interaction between nations equally proud and equally independent, thus constituting a state of things for good scarcely less important for the Old World than the New. The objects which the committee are met to promote have, I need hardly say, the cordial support both of myself personally and of his Majesty's Government."

Other messages came from Sir Edward Grey, who could not fulfill his desire to be present because of the important peace negotiations which claimed his attention elsewhere; Mr. Sidney Buxton, who regarded it as a happy omen that those peace negotiations were being conducted at a time when preparations for such a celebration were being made; Mr. L. Harcourt, who wrote that there could be no better testimony of their feelings of sorrow for the death of Mr. Whitelaw Reid than an immediate response to the committee's appeal; Lord Shaw, who hoped that the enthusiasm "should not be allowed to evaporate as a mere celebration, but should be conserved and made practically and permanently effectual"; the Archbishop of York, Cardinal Bourne, Mr. Herbert Samuel, Earl Curzon, Earl of Plymouth, Lord Weardale, Earl Brassey, Mr. Frederick Harrison, Sir G. O. Trevelyan, Mr. John Galsworthy, Mr. Jerome K. Jerome, Mr. I. Zangwill, Mr. Walter Crane, Sir Donald Macalister (principal of Glasgow University), Sir Alfred Hopkinson (vice-chancellor, Victoria University, Manchester), Doctor J. Estlin Carpenter (Manchester College, Oxford), Doctor J. H. Moulton (Didsbury College, Manchester), Dean of Manchester, Archdeacon Sinclair, Principal Adeney (chairman of the Congregational Union), Doctor Townsend (ex-president of the Free Church Council), Sir Charles W. Macara, Mr. George Cadbury, Mr. Joseph Rowntree, Mr. Will Crooks, Mr. Keir Hardie, and other prominent public men.

ALL WORLD CELEBRATION.

"It is proposed," said the Lord Mayor, "to celebrate the centenary of peace in an imperial, imposing, and impressive manner, worthy of the great occasion, in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, and all English-speaking lands. I am sure the proposal will have the support of the whole Empire, and I think rich and poor alike should be afforded an opportunity of participating in that great event." (Applause.)

Earl Grey, who is president of the British committee, remarked that the victories of peace were nobler than the victories of war. On December 24, 1914, a century of unbroken peace between the British and the American peoples would be completed. Committees composed of representative leading men had been formed in the United States, in Canada, and here in the United Kingdom for the purpose of organizing a simultaneous celebration of the centennial.

It would obviously be premature to attempt to give any final or definite shape to the methods of the celebration two years hence.

"Although," he proceeded, "the boundaries of Canada march with those of the United States for near 4,000 miles, not a sentinel, not a cannon, not a fort exists on either side of this long, this almost invisible frontier, to mark the existence of any mutual suspicion between two great friendly peoples who have no other idea but that of living side by side in permanent amity and peace." (Applause.)

The committees would endeavor to bring home to the respective peoples the exceptional character of the advantages they had so long enjoyed. One suggestion already submitted for the celebration was that monuments should be erected in Canada.

ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.

Another suggestion was that a monument should be erected to George Washington in Westminster Abbey, "not," said Earl Grey, "in memory of his part in a rebellion which perhaps may be regarded by future historians as the first foundation of eventual Anglo-Saxon and Celtic consolidation, but as a testimony to our ungrudging and generous recognition of the influence for good exerted on successive generations of the British as well as the American people by the example of his splendid qualities. We think it is only right that we should make use of the opportunity provided by the approaching centennial to do his memory honor on British soil." (Hear, hear.)

It further seemed good to the British committee that steps should be taken to purchase Sulgrave Manor in Northamptonshire, the ancestral home of the Washington family. It was proposed that Sulgrave Manor should be purchased and so maintained that a visit to it would be an agreeable pilgrimage to the steadily increasing number of American visitors to England. An option upon the property had been secured, and it was estimated that from £25,000 to £30,000 would be required.

A third proposal was that of an organized endeavor, on both sides of the Atlantic, and in all our overseas dominions, to promote by well-considered educational methods the growth of those feelings of mutual respect, affection and good will, as well as of mutual knowledge, which already distinguished the peoples of British and American descent in all portions of the world. Lectureships at the principal universities, peace centennial prizes for essays on Anglo-American relations, and new school readers would all be included in this scheme.

Substantial contributions had already been made towards the £50,000 to £60,000 which these three purposes were expected to require.

"It is possible that before Christmas Eve, 1914, arrives," said Earl Grey, "Anglo-American sentiment may require that some monument symbolical of the unity of purpose that binds together the English-speaking peoples of the world shall be erected on the best available site in London.

FRIENDSHIP WITH AMERICA.

Continuing, his lordship said: "My experience both in Canada and in the United States has taught me to know our American friends too well not to have implicit confidence in their sense of national honor and fairness and in their desire to settle each question as it arises with the same regard for the rights of others that we claim to accord to such rights ourselves.

"I have not the faintest doubt that long before the time arrives for our peace celebrations the sun of friendship and good will that has warmed us for one hundred years will be shining in fullest splendor with no wreath of mist to dim the glory of his beams." (Applause.)

Lord Emmott, under-secretary for the colonies, promised the full support of the colonial office, and Mr. Emile Braun, burgomaster of Ghent (where the peace treaty between England and America was signed), expressed the honor that town felt in being associated with the celebration.

"I am charged to tell you," said the burgomaster, speaking in French, "that it is disposed to participate in the celebration by assisting the organizing committee in the restoration of the room where the treaty was signed in 1814 to its original state—(applause)—and also by offering on January 5 in the same room in our town hall in which took place on January 5, 1814, the banquet offered by the principal notabilities of the town to the English and American peace delegates, a fete which shall be as far as possible a repetition of that function held a hundred years ago." (Applause.)

The lord mayor thanked the burgomaster for his invitation.—Daily News and Leader, London, December 19, 1912.

* * * * *

LEARN HOW TO READ A BOOK.

The great pessimist, Schopenhauer, said: "The surest way of having no thoughts of our own is to take up a book every time we have nothing to do"—but there is no pessimism about that—it is sound sense. It is the thinking that pays, not the reading. We are worse off for our reading if we do nothing but read. Some people don't understand that. They forget that the only use for reading is to get people to thinking.

The best way to read a book, if it is worth reading, is to read a few sentences or half a page, and then, shutting it up, gaze out on vacancy and ruminate on what has been read, and, gathering a thought here and there, stick them in the crevices of life, where you can get them when you want them, as the squirrels hide the nuts in the sod. The truth we find in a book we want to make a part of our own life, but we can not do it without thinking about it. If you want to taste the sugar in your coffee, you have got to stir it.

We would estimate that nine tenths of the reading of this country is done without thinking. The most of it goes by with a little emotion, that displaces thinking and puts in its place a yell, a rah-rah, a continued applause, or a vain and exciting controversy. We would better think, or at least put on our thinking cap. There is hope even in that. But don't read unless you reflect.—Columbus (Ohio) State Journal.

* * * * *

MONGOLIAN BIRTHMARKS.

Recently, Wigglesworth has noted that the Navajo Indian babe invariably has a "blue spot" at the base of the spine. A blue spot in this location was first mentioned by Bealz, who found it in Chinese, Japanese, Malays, and Koreans. Fink saw such patches in the Burmese, and Castor, in a discussion of Fink's work, corroborates his statements. The pigmented patches vary in size from a quarter dollar to a hand's breadth, and superficially they resemble closely the bruises received from a fall. They may disappear within the first few years of life, but may be present in later years. Fink found them in 94.7 per cent of Malay children. In some cases when the mother was of Mongolian type the spots were present with certain other Mongolian characteristics, such as the third eyelid. Consiglio has found such blue patches on about two per cent of children in northern Italy and believes them to be attributes inherited from ancient Mongolian ancestors. Wigglesworth states that the Navajo Indians are supposed to have migrated from Asia, and by language tests ethnologists have been able to trace them as far as Alaska. The value of the spots as a mark of identification is not determined. Bruch, who studied the occurrence of the mark in Tunis, Africa, found it quite common among the children there, but only in brunette types. He states also that the blue spot has been noted in Europeans, but very rarely. Other observers also assert that the spot is not peculiar to Mongolian races. Apes and monkeys are said to have it constantly and throughout life. Possibly the blue spot might be found in negro babies if examined soon enough after birth before the skin becomes too dark, as suggested by Bruch. Evidently, says the Journal of the American Medical Association, further and more extended observations are necessary in order to determine definitely whether the spot is to be given any special significance.—Selected.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

March Reading.

MOTHERS.

I have not used all, but such parts of this beautiful poem of Ella Wheeler Wilcox as serves the subject of this paper. She has God admitting his need of woman as a helper in his work of creation, and calls her his "lesser self," and says her work was to extend through "all time" and "make his work what he would have it be." In his disappointment that her work has not kept pace with the world's progress she begs him to "speak again" because she has not understood. I make no apology for using so much as I have of it, feeling that it expresses, better than I could, the subject of "motherhood."

"When God had planned the universe, he thought
Of all the marvels therein to be wrought,
And to his aid fair motherhood he brought.

"Wherefore, I leave the rounding of my plan
To motherhood; and that which I began
Let woman finish in perfecting man.

"Come forth, O God; though great thy thought and good
In shaping woman for true motherhood;
Lord, speak again; she has not understood.

"It is not all in motherhood to know
Creation's pleasure and deliverance's woe;
Who plants the seed should help the shoot to grow.

"And motherhood is not alone to breed
The human race; it is to know and heed
Its holier purpose and its highest need."

My object in this paper is not to mark out mothers' duties on any special line, but to ask that we try to come together on a common plane, and try to reach a perfect understanding of our work as helpers with God. If we can go down in the depths with him in a strong desire to learn the work required of us, he will be with us; we shall find, all along the way, from the beginning to his final purpose, all the law necessary to perfect home government; love, order, obedience, honesty, fellowship and simplicity. He will teach us how to be such mothers as he can use. We shall find, also, that organization is not all that is necessary, but in meeting difficulties alone we find our greatest strength.

PREPARATION.

If we could impress our young girls with the requirements of wifehood and motherhood, causing them to look upon marriage as a sacred institution through which God designed to perfect the race, the dominant thought of each being to carry out the purpose of her creation, and make herself the best type of womanhood,—the responsibilities need not depress her, but would only show the need of preparation. Marriage is the founding of a new

HOME.

As two young people stand alone for the first time as husband and wife in their new home, as he folds her in his arms and she looks into his face and sees only that which speaks of love, and they realize they have started in a new life, with the one purpose in each heart to build a home, and as they talk of their responsibilities love covers every unseemly spot, makes the rough places smooth, and the task before them does not look so very hard; but as two, with separate individualities to grow into unity, they know there is a work for each to do. They know that their social environment is what modifies heredity and develops human character; that the wife makes the atmosphere of the home; that together they must set up the standard which will rise no higher than their ideas of what a home should be. Together they can bow and make this request: "Lord, bless the home of thy servants, that it may continue for ever."

MOTHER.

"Thou cam'st not to thy place by accident;
It was the very place God meant for thee."

Before God created man he prepared a home for him; so have our young husband and wife been busy. The wife feels that the greater responsibilities rest with her. Knowing that her strong traits of character are stamped upon her child, she is anxious to make herself all that she desires her child should be, and with a heart full of love because of the work she is called to do, give to her child a birthright of health, happiness, and purity.

As her babe is laid in her arms, she can feel that God says to her, "Take this child and nurse it for me," and together they can say, "Lord give us wisdom to administer to its needs now and for all time to come." As she thinks of the great change in the surroundings of her child, she feels that the first consideration is quiet, care, and gentle handling, and will hold back the too great attention given by relatives and friends to the sensitive little one. In her weakness she is forced to rest, and she is filled with thoughts of her new responsibilities, and looks upon the tiny type of perfect manhood and feels that he has come to her with all his faculties, but that all he may become is not his at birth, but needs development, and that God must arrange in her mind the lesson she must teach her child to fit him to be that kind of an instrument which God needs to help in his work. God only fashioned his body and organized the laws to regulate his improvement. She must try to make him feel that he has great possibilities; that neither God nor man is responsible, for that which he may become is his own work; that there is no limit to his moral or intellectual growth; that much depends upon his individuality in the making of his character. Let him know that it is within his power to work out any special gift he may have, for the gifts God bestows hold the secret of their office.

Is it not by divine intuition that she is shown the God-given power of her child? and it does not seem strange to her, as she knows it is created in God's likeness, who has given to every creation its own agency, that all that God has given he will not take away; for he has promised that through obedience all may become his sons, equal with Christ, and under the same divine influence she will see the work she has to do. She will know that true mother love is not divorced from good sense, and that to be her child's best mother, she must be his greatest helper; that obeying the laws of home government is to give him the greatest safety and happiness; that to be a partaker in the home he must be a helper. That she must keep her child very near to her; make him feel that she is a sharer with him in all his pleasures, a sympathizer in all his troubles; that though a helper, she must encourage self-help; that strength comes to him by his own persevering efforts to overcome the difficulties that come to him; that to earn money is as honorable as to spend it; that he must keep his heart pure, that his body may be a fit temple for God's Spirit; that there is no sex in sin; that duty is the work of never-ending usefulness."

So, if we can reason together, and come to a perfect understanding of our work as God has given it, to qualify us as his instruments to "help fashion an immortal soul," there will be little need of so many special rules that can not have general significance, for, as each person has his own individuality, so each home has its own individuality, born of the circumstances that control it, and as God, who has the power to see the end from the beginning, knows the need of each member, to fit them for his service, let us be found with our family at home, faithfully serving him.

MRS. C. J. CLARK.

Notice to Locals of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Please send your annual assessments per capita to the General Treasurer, Mrs. Letha M. Tilton, Lamoni, Iowa.

A good book is the precious life-blood of a master-spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond a life.—Milton.

Letter Department

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, February 6, 1913.

Dear Herald: I am very thankful to our heavenly Father for the gift of the HERALD, sent by some loving hand. I know not who it is, but I would like to thank that one, too, if I knew who it was that has been so thoughtful of me. It is the only church publication that I get, and I truly appreciate it.

I am trying to keep the HERALD a busy messenger to all those by whom I am surrounded, who have their names on the church record, and whose live interest in church work, and their own souls are covered with the debris of tottering babylon, and whose companions are of the world. Yes, in my weakness I am trying to hold up the true light as on a candlestick to all who come within its radius. May God be my strength in weakness, and my light in darkness, till all who are "in the house" rejoice and walk in the truth. May God's blessing be upon all the church, both the weak and the strong, and the honest in heart who are in the world, and may he cause the struggling nations to glorify his name. His kingdom come and his will be done among men on earth as in heaven.

Even so, come, Lord Jesus, come quickly, amen.

Always in gospel bonds,

5806 DOVER STREET.

MRS. B. B. SMITH.

HARDY, NEBRASKA, February 4, 1913.

Dear Herald: It is now over a year since we left Eldorado Springs, Missouri. We have not suffered for the want of temporal things, but we long for church privileges. We take the church papers, read and reread them.

Sometimes in dreams I get to attend good meetings. On the night of January 30 I was listening to Brother William Mannerling preach. It seemed there was a gulf between the world and the church; Brother Willie bridged the gulf with the gospel, supported the bridge with the officers of the church; stood still for a moment and then said that the meanest thing the Saints could do was to appear perfectly satisfied while the officers were doing nothing, as that relieved the officers of an anxiety to do and the Saints of what should be done.

When I awoke I thought that point was good for the church. Wife and I keep up family prayers.

With love to all the Saints, and a God bless you to all,

I remain,

G. W. BEEBE, SR.

SCAMMON, KANSAS, February 10, 1913.

Dear Herald: The Scammon Branch is still alive, and striving to come up higher. We desire to be worthy of the name we bear. We have our trials and troubles, the same as all other branches, and we realize we have not come to perfection yet.

We miss our dearly beloved Brother R. E. Martin. To know him was to love him. He has gone over on the other side, where all is bright. We hope that we can all live as faithful to the post of duty as he did, and be able to meet him, with the rest of our loved ones, when our life's work is ended.

I desire special prayers for my dear grandpa, Brother W. S. Taylor, who will be eighty years old next June. He is lying very low, and his affliction is puzzling the doctor waiting on him. It is no puzzle to the Latter Day Saints. His life is spared because we know that our greatest physician is God. I believe it depends much upon the well ones when their faith is so severely tried, to exercise that faith once delivered to the saints, that they may be willing that the Master's will may be done; for he is able to give us words of comfort if it is his will to take them; and we know he will do it, too. He has done it in the past and he is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.

I have received a great blessing since last writing to the HERALD. At that time I could scarcely hear any common conversation. Now I can hear any common conversation. I have great confidence in the physician God has placed in the church in these last days, and I wish every Saint had just as much as I have, for I think they would receive far greater blessings many times if they would accept all God has placed in his church.

Your sister in the one faith,

CLARA M. MERCER.

TUNIS, TEXAS.

Editors Herald: If it wasn't for the church literature we would be very lonely, as husband and I are the only Latter Day Saints here. We go to Cookes Point when it is possible for us to do so.

In November Brethren Aylor and Peak held a week's series of meetings at the Cookes Point Branch, and we went both Sundays, and Brother Peak gave us a fine sermon the first Sunday. It was our first time to hear him. It was food to our souls. The next Sunday Brother Aylor preached for us. It made us feel like we were at home to hear him. We once lived at Davidson, Oklahoma, where Brother Aylor spoke the funeral dirge for Campbellism, one A. W. Young being his opponent. It made us glad to hear him.

We are getting our business adjusted so we can send in our tithing, and pay some to the Order of Enoch, and make other offerings. We hope to send it in soon. I desire the prayers of God's people, that I may be of use to Him in this great work.

Your sister in the gospel,

MRS. J. T. SKINNER.

PAONIA, COLORADO, February 2, 1913.

Dear Herald: I like to read the HERALD. There are only a few of us Saints, only four families. But two families have Sunday school. We have been discouraged since Brother Walling left us. We sent in a Christmas Offering.

I was baptized two years ago by Brother Petre. I am ten years old.

My sister is in Los Angeles, California. I have my mother, father, brother, and two sisters, one sister being dead.

MISS LILLIAN POTORFF.

WRAY, COLORADO, February 11, 1913.

Editors Herald: I have just read Brother Macgregor's excellent article on "New openings," inspiring new aspirations in that feature of our work, as missionaries. He gave one quotation from the Doctrine and Covenants, section 122, paragraph 8, that prompts me to enter a complaint that I have been contemplating for some time.

"Boiling down," as recently urged by the Ensign, I leave the reader to turn to the book for the passage, also one found in section 17, paragraph 16, containing the word of the Lord, concerning the duty of ordaining, (where there is no branch,) as well as "organizing," as written in the former text.

The complaint is, that by district conference legislation, missionaries are not allowed to ordain or organize, but by the direction of conference, or missionary in charge. Knowing this, I presented to the March conference of 1912, a petition in behalf of fifteen members, living from twenty-three to forty miles from any branch, asking for organization, necessitating the ordination of one or more, where excellent material, as well as the intimation of the Spirit were not wanting; without any interrogations, the request was by motion quickly referred to the missionary in charge and district president. March 1 next, a year will have passed, one session of conference been held, another near, in which no further attention has been paid to the matter. Missionaries have been there since, but could do no more than to preach the gospel, baptize and confirm two, and leave them without organization. If the missionary in charge and district president can not go there, is there any law against their authorizing those who can to do that work, providing the Spirit so directs, and points out those to be ordained, naming the office as well?

Under the present rule, two of the headings in the blanks for reporting are superfluous.

Respectfully submitted,

O. B. THOMAS.

CASEVILLE, MICHIGAN, February 5, 1913.

Dear Herald: We are still alive in the work, and trying to serve God, our Master. We just closed a series of meetings. Brother Otto Fetting and Brother Goheen were with us over a week. We got the Maccabees Hall in Caseville, and though none were baptized, I believe some good was done. It is my prayer that God will so work upon the hearts and minds of the people here, that when the chance comes again, they will be ready to receive the glad message. It makes me sad to think of people rejecting this grand, good work.

We are a small band of Saints; but we are going to build a church. It will be three and one half miles from our home, but we will only be too glad to go that distance to be with God's children. If any of the Saints that read this would like to help us with our church, we would receive any aid with thankful hearts, and any such could be sent to Brother George L. Horton, Caseville, Michigan, Route 1.

It was with sad hearts that we had to part with our beloved Brethren Fetting and Goheen, but as the message has to be brought to others too, we wish them Godspeed. May God bless them in their work. If any of God's servants come this way, come to our home; you are always welcome. We are only half a mile from the railroad crossing.

Pray for me and mine, dear Saints, for we need God's help and strength to keep us faithful.

Your sister in Christ,

LOUISA HORTON.

BISBEE, ARIZONA, January 27, 1913.

Pres. E. A. Smith, Dear Brother: We have enjoyed some good meetings of late. At the January business meeting of the branch, Brother Thomas Davis, who with his brother David, is opening up a mine just over the line in Sonora, Mexico, offered his resignation as branch president, and Brother Luther Simpson was elected to succeed him. Brother David Evans, who has been named in prophecy for the office of priest, seemed to be the unanimous choice for that office, but not being ready to accept of ordination the office stands vacant. Brother Goldie and John Farley were sustained as teacher and deacon, and with the departure of Brother Simpson and family last week for the East, they are left to care for the branch.

Brother T. J. Sheppard, from Tucumcary, New Mexico, was a welcome visitor last Tuesday, and we have used him to advantage, as he has preached four excellent sermons for us. Our little chapel was well filled last night, a number of outsiders being present.

Brother James Kelley, who moved into the rooms vacated by Brother Simpson, was the speaker at 3 p. m. yesterday, and his effort was greatly appreciated.

Our Wednesday night prayer meeting, like many that have preceded it, was a spiritual feast. The word of prophecy, given through Brother David Davis, gave great encouragement to the Saints, and made known to Mr. John Roberts, who has been a regular attendant of our meetings for a year past, that he should be a chosen vessel to carry the gospel to his own country, Wales. The Saints have had much to encourage them of late through the manifestations of the Spirit, and we trust an awakening time is at hand.

Last Monday night the Saints and friends to the number of near forty suddenly crowded in upon Brother Simpson and family and took charge of their home until about eleven o'clock p. m. The following paper handed him next morning gives an idea of the doings. It was started to go with presentation speech, but was too late in starting, and results were added next morning.

In bonds,
S. D. CONDIT.

We come, Brother Simpson, and Sister as well,
In this hour of your leaving, our feelings to tell;
We are sad at this parting, as you surely must know,
For your coming has helped us to heavenward grow.
Your stay we've enjoyed and your staying we'd crave,
But since you are going we will loneliness brave,
And enjoy an hour of jolly good time,
For in joy and gladness we discover no crime.

As a token of Bisbeeites' love and good will,
We hand you this Bible, your pocket to fill;
When traveling only its place should be there,
Its contents well stored just under your hair.
A blessing to others, as well as to you,
We trust it may be, your life long all through,
The accompanying gifts we trust also may prove
To you and your family mementoes of love.

That the accompanying friends, who with the gifts came,
Be remembered by you, we offer each name;
There were Farleys and Farleys, and Austins quite true;
There were Davises, Davises, and Dave Evans, too;
Yes, Roberts and Enochs we must not forget,
They're loved by us though they're not members as yet.
There were Goldies and Gimblett, and Mrs. Frazee,
And Rehwalds and Condit, they number just three,
William Duthrige and Waters, she among our young friends

While William our Sunday school superintends.

This merry good crowd a fine evening did spend,
But, like most of good things, there must come an end.
There were singing and speaking, and laughing galore;
There were singing and stories, and laughing still more;
There was drinking, and eating of sandwich and pie,
The cake was devoured by less than the fry,
But take it in all, a good time was had,
And the parting so soon seemed really too bad.

"A parting blessing" was sung at the close,
And benediction by Simpson as bowed we arose.
And now we extend a loving farewell,
To meet in the future, we hope, but can't tell.

LAMONI, IOWA, February 10, 1913.

Editors Herald: Please give me space in your valuable columns to say that I enjoy reading the many good articles and letters in the church papers. I am strengthened and encouraged thereby.

I feel to thank God for the gospel; it is growing brighter and brighter day by day. As we see the signs spoken of are coming to pass, we know that the time is nigh at hand when God will gather his Saints together.

When I arrived in Lamoni, January 6, I opened the Hymnal to have my evening devotion. The first my eyes beheld were these words: "Shall we gather home to Zion;" and I have been reading in HERALD for January 22, the poem of my dearly beloved father in the gospel, Brother Joseph Luff, "Gather where I have appointed; fed and nourished by my hand," and I truly thanked my heavenly Father for his goodness and loving kindness to his people, in giving instruction and warning for their best good.

May we live so that when trials and sorrows are o'er we may receive eternal life, is my prayer.

JOHN WAHLSTROM.

News from Missions

Iowa.

I am still rejoicing in the glorious gospel and have felt blessed in my labor this year. We have just closed a four-week series of meetings at Woodbine last night, and we had good attendance and good interest. We also had the blessed privilege of leading seventeen persons down into the water and baptizing them into the church and kingdom of God; and others are interested. That makes thirty-eight we have baptized this year.

We have some good workers in the Woodbine Branch. Brother S. B. Kibler is president; Brother Bert Gamet, priest; Brethren Fred Oviatt and James Athey, teachers. These brethren are all noble men and are respected by all who know them.

During the meetings Brother Kibler sold twenty-five church books and gave four away; also many tracts.

Brother Griffiths expects to be with us the 12th. The interest is good in this district. Many calls for preaching, and our prayer is that God will bless all his people.

WOODBINE, IOWA.

W. A. SMITH.

Hawaii.

Your valued paper reaches us here at the crossroads of the Pacific regularly, the year round, and the editorials and articles on different subjects found in its pages furnish the spiritual food so essential to the growth of God's children and are greatly appreciated by the HERALD's readers. The news, too, that it brings of the progress of the work in different parts, and of the blessings enjoyed by the members in many of the branches of the church encourages not a little those who are interested in the upbuilding and extension of God's kingdom on the earth.

Here in Honolulu our progress is not as rapid as could be desired, but it is a source of comfort and satisfaction to those interested in this great latter day work to receive from time to time the assurance of the Master's watchcare over his children, as is evidenced by his Spirit's presence at our church meetings.

The missionaries, Elders McConley and Barrett, have been absent for some weeks at Hilo, on the Island of Hawaii, where they have succeeded in arousing interest among a number of people, two of whom have already been baptized, while others are getting ready to enter the fold.

Yesterday, Sunday, the writer had the pleasure of baptizing and confirming fourteen young people, (five boys and nine girls) eleven of whom were Japanese, and the other three Hawaiians. The Japanese (five boys and six girls) have all been brought into the church through the medium of the Sunday school and they are all members of our Kalihi Japanese Sunday school. It is to be hoped that through these young people some of the parents may be led to take an interest in our work and that some of the boys may so develop as to make it possible for our church to use them later on as missionaries to their own people.

Elders McConley and Barrett return to Honolulu on Saturday next, February 1, and the writer expects to leave for San Francisco on February 8, and hopes during his visit on the coast to have the privilege of meeting with the Saints of the San Francisco and Oakland branches.

Yours sincerely, in gospel bonds,
G. J. WALLER.

HONOLULU, TERRITORY OF HAWAII, January 27, 1913.

Saskatchewan.

Just a few lines to let you know that the snow and ice have not bound us down yet, although we have had a few very cold days, once being forty-four degrees below zero; but altogether it has been a fine winter.

Only two years ago there was not a Saint in this section of Saskatchewan, where there now is a branch of over forty members, most of whom are from Michigan, with the exception of some who located on homesteads in and near our settlement, who were convinced of the angel's message and joined our ranks.

We hold Sunday school and preaching service every Sunday in Brother Boe's house, as we have not the means to build a church yet, but hope to ere long. Prayer meeting is held from house to house on Wednesday afternoons in winter months, and young people's prayer meeting once a month. We also meet in Religio every Friday eve at the home of Brother William Cornish, and have some interesting programs; and we are trying to cultivate the gift of music and song by meeting twice a week for that purpose.

We are all striving to make our calling and election sure, knowing that the harvest time is almost here, and realizing that we must be up and doing while the day lasts, for the evil one is lurking around trying our faith, and seeking whom he may devour. As a few outsiders attend our meetings, we hope to live in that way and manner that they will be caused to see the light of this gospel and glorify the God we adore. Ever praying for the advancement of the gospel,

I am your brother,

JAMES CORNISH.

SENLAC, SASKATCHEWAN, February 1, 1913.

Washington.

Perhaps some of the Saints would be glad to hear from this part of the field.

Most of the time this winter I have been laboring with Brother P. W. Premo, my uncle, and with him have preached at Saratoga and Granite Falls, both of which are new openings; and though we did not baptize any there, we believe some good has been done, especially if we are permitted to continue the work.

We have also visited other places, such as Everett, Langley, and Seattle.

In this place, Bremerton, we are holding forth in the Norwegian Baptist church, with small attendance. There was one baptized here last Sunday, and others are investigating. I hope to see many honest-hearted people gathered into the kingdom in this western country, and that each one may receive strength to endure to the end. But we must be faithful and toil while it is day, and

When the toils of life are over
And we can not labor more—

When the mists of evening gather,

Closing 'round our storm tossed shore;

There's a promise sure and precious
Which the Savior gives to me,
That has filled my soul with gladness
And from fear has set me free.

In the resurrection morning,
When the Savior claims his own
From the grave, he'll bring our bodies
And we'll dwell with him at home;
If the word which he has given
In our life and works are found,
And the fruits of his sweet Spirit
In our hearts and words abound.

Then a thousand years with Jesus
On the earth in peace we'll reign;
And with joy and peace unceasing,
We will join our friends again.
There will be no more temptation,
For the tempter will be bound—
Glory be to God for ever—
From the heart and tongue resound.

My home address is Box 440, Burlington, Washington.

In gospel bonds,

P. T. PLUMB.

BREMERTON, WASHINGTON, February 4, 1913.

News from Branches

Fall River, Massachusetts.

Fall River had the honor of entertaining the Saints of the Massachusetts District at the semiannual conference of its members. Many expressed the opinion that it was the biggest conference ever held by the Saints of this district. There were Saints from Cape Cod, Boston, Brockton, Haverhill, New Bedford, Providence, Rhode Island, and Philadelphia, and in fact from all parts of the district, and even from other districts. There was an average attendance of over three hundred people. Those who came in late to the meetings had to either stand or wait in the lower auditorium. The prayer meeting-Sunday was one to be long remembered. The Spirit was present and manifested itself in many ways. There were the gifts of tongues, prophecy, relating to visions, and the singing of songs that comforted the soul.

Walter W. Smith addressed us in the afternoon. He spoke on the subject: "How we may increase the attendance at our churches." Anyone who has heard Walter speak may rest assured that the topic was well covered, and the audience always attentive. One statement that appealed to your correspondent was that we might be able to quote scripture to substantiate any of our claims, and yet we might live a life that would displease the Lord. He said that this poor, discouraged world needed love far more than it needed scripture. We could, perhaps, get along without the Bible, but never could get along without the love of man for man, brother for brother, parent for child, and above all the love of our heavenly Father for us.

Several young men were ordained to fill positions of trust in the house of the Lord. Thomas McGuire of the local branch was ordained to the office of priest. May the Lord grant to these men great knowledge, but better still, wisdom in the performance of their duties. May he help them to realize that a pure life is one of the best means of instruction.

One thought that comes to me while sitting here writing is this: If we could only carry with us and retain for ever the enthusiasm that we have at conferences and reunions, how soon the petty things in life would cease to bother us and how rapidly the work of God would progress.

In parting, let me extend the best wishes of the Fall River Saints to their brothers and sisters, wherever located, and pray with them for the quick consummation of God's decrees.

Your brother,
ALMA M. COOMBS.

Denver, Colorado.

The regular business session of the Denver Branch was held December 1, 1912. Rumor had it that we were to have a missionary sent here to preside over the branch. With some difficulty we were able to decide who should be president. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, E. F. Shupe; priest, Thomas Nerrin; teacher, E. J. Williams; deacon, William Cowan. Brother Homer Shupe was sustained as secretary. Just two days later our missionary, Elder E. J. Scott, of Independence, put in an appearance, and two weeks later Brother E. F. Shupe resigned as president and Elder Scott was chosen to fill the vacancy.

The work is moving along nicely, and an increase in attendance is noticed, also an increase in spirituality, there being an attendance of over eighty at the last sacrament meeting. This meeting was a feast to our souls, the gift of tongues and interpretation being made manifest.

Meetings are being held in different parts of the city, which are very interesting, and some are seeking the light.

On January 13, George E. Bowen and Elsie L. Durfee became members of the church, being baptized by Elder B. J. Scott.

Monday evening, February 3, our business meeting was held and delegates were chosen for our district conference, which will convene in the Denver chapel, March 1, 1913. The Sunday school convention will be held February 28, and the Religio will convene Thursday, February 27. A very pleasing program is being planned. A good attendance is hoped for at all meetings.

EDNA U. WALLING, Reporter.

368 PEARL STREET, February 7, 1913.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL ILLINOIS.—The thirty-fifth assembly of the Central Illinois District convened in conference at Taylorville, Illinois, February 1, 1913, with District President Frank Izatt in the chair and Walter Daykin secretary. Statistical reports of the following branches read: Taylorville 154, Pana 61, Beardstown 95. Officers reporting: Seventy: J. W. Paxton. Elders: Frank Izatt, Abraham Jones, Charles Davis. Priests: R. L. Fulk, Edward Reynolds, Robert Holvey, William Shotton, George L. Hartsell. Teachers: Walter Daykin, J. L. Johnson, Robert Reynolds. Deacons: Harry Jones, Charles Longden. Bishop's agent's report showed a balance on hand of $96.21, and the district treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $10.50. The delegates to General Conference are John Beaver, Harry Jones, J. W. Paxton, S. J. Bartlett, Robert Reynolds, R. L. Fulk. The program for the conference was: Preaching 7:30 Saturday night, by Martin Bolt; priesthood meeting at 8; Sunday school at 9:30, in charge of district officers; preaching at 11, by R. L. Fulk; social service at 2:30, during which the sacrament was administered. Just previous to this service Floyd Johnson was baptized by J. W. Paxton. Preaching at 7 by J. W. Paxton. Next conference will be held at Beardstown, Illinois, on the second Saturday and Sunday in June. Walter Daykin, secretary.

TORONTO.—The fourth annual conference of the Toronto, Ontario, District was held at Warton, October 5 and 6, 1912. D. B. Perkins, district president; F. A. Smith, and R. C.

Evans, presided over the sessions. Mrs. Floralice Miller and J. T. Thompson acted as secretaries. Officers' reports showed that the work is advancing throughout the district; the gain in membership during the year was 156. A branch had been organized at New Liskeard, in New Ontario. The auditors found all financial reports correct. The election of officers was as follows: President, D. B. Perkins; vice presidents, N. E. Leader and John H. Taylor; secretary, Floralice Miller; member of library commission, E. Rowett. The bishopric and financial agent were sustained. The delegates to General Conference are: R. C. Evans, F. A. Smith, J. T. Thompson, G. C. Tomlinson, George Goodman, D. B. Perkins, James Pycock, W. E. Ellis, Joseph Osborne, William Place, M. L. Snell, J. H. Taylor, Fred Long, J. T. Whitehead, E. Rowett, N. E. Leader, Robert Harrison, Grant Saint John. Delegates were authorized to cast majority and minority vote in case of division. All preaching services and the Sunday morning prayer services were held in the town hall. The speakers were: R. C. Evans, F. A. Smith, J. Pycock, J. T. Thompson. Large audiences listened to all the sermons, the largest attendance being in the afternoon, when Bishop Evans was the speaker. The conference was largely attended, and the Spirit of love prevailed. The Warton Branch, assisted by the near-by branches, cared for all who attended the conference with a hospitality that can not be excelled. Floralice Miller, secretary.

SASKATCHEWAN.—District conference convened at Edmonton, Alberta, in prayer service at 9 a. m., December 28, 1912, in the Odd Fellows' Hall; Elders Beckman and Anderson in charge. Conference formally opened at 10, with district president in the chair. Moved that district president, with Elders Long, Cornish, and Crabb, preside over the conference. Temporary organization effected as follows: M. Smith, secretary pro tem, assisted by Brother Brown; organist, Brother Brown; chorister, Brother Davidson; usher, Brother Clark, with power to choose assistants. Moved the president appoint press committee. Moved that president appoint all other committees. Motion prevailed that the president appoint the time and character of meetings, also speakers. Voice and vote were extended to all visiting members. Statistical reports were read as follows: Arland 37; Disley 37, gain 1; Sunnyvale 30, gain 4; Minnesota 70, gain 12; Zion's Hill 36, gain 7; Edgerton 10; Iowa 56, gain 9; Ribstone 67, gain 11; Millet 41. Bishop's agent's report was read, also that of the district treasurer; these reports were referred to an auditing committee. Itemized report of the bishop's agent was read, and it was moved that the report be handed to the auditing committee without further reading. Report of labor done by the bishop's agent read and approved. Invitations for the next conference were received from the following branches: Michigan, Minnesota, Edmonton, Millet, and Ribstone. The vote resulted in favor of Ribstone, Alberta. Ministerial report of J. C. Crabb read and approved. Delegates to the General Conference elected as follows: G. T. Griffiths, J. W. Wight, J. C. Crabb, R. Anderson, T. J. Jordan, J. J. Cornish, E. E. Long, J. W. Peterson, Fred Gregory, Sister Jordan, J. R. Beckley, Sister J. R. Beckley, J. A. Beckman, Sister J. A. Beckman. Those present are empowered to cast majority and minority vote in case of division. Auditing committee reported. On motion report was accepted and the committee discharged. The date of the next conference was left in the hands of the district presidency and missionary in charge. Motion prevailed that we send two delegates and pay their expenses to the General Conference, and those delegates be J. J. Cornish and J. C. Crabb. A motion prevailed that we as a district petition the General Conference to divide the Saskatchewan District as soon as practicable, into two districts, said boundary line to be the meridian between Alberta and Saskatchewan. Financial bill of the district president read, showing the district in debt to T. J. Jordan for $24 for printing quarterly report forms. It was ordered paid. A motion was presented in favor of publishing a paper in the Saskatchewan District as soon as practicable, but was voted down. Prayer and sacrament service Sunday morning; preaching at 9 by J. A. Beckman; at 2:30 by J. C. Crabb; at 7:30 by J. J. Cornish. A motion prevailed that the treasurer be instructed to tax each branch in the district to defray the expenses of the delegates to General Conference. Vote of thanks extended to the Saints of Edmonton for their kindness. Grace Beckman, district secretary.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.—Conference convened with Farmington Branch, November 23, 1912, at 10:45 a. m. with district president, J. R. McClain, in the chair; he was chosen to preside over the conference, to be assisted by H. E. Moler and J. A. Roberts. S. E. Dickson was chosen secretary of the conference. Officers reporting: Elders: J. R. McClain, H. E. Moler, J. A. Roberts, W. S. Shupe, W. L. McClain, and S. E. Dickson. Priests: V. S. Gower, J. F. Overcast. Teachers: J. K. Powers, Albert Snow, John Cook. Deacon: Frank Roberts. Branches reported as follows: Foundry Hill 174, Liberty Hill 74, High Hill 110, Farmington 152. Bishop's agent reported as follows: Received since last report, $271.75; paid out $288.14. The report was audited and found correct. Adjourned to meet with the High Hill Branch March 1, 1913, at 10.45 a. m. S. E. Dickson, district secretary.

LITTLE SIOUX.—District conference convened at Moorhead, Iowa, February 1, at 11 a. m. Presidents Sidney Pitt and Joseph Lane presided, assisted by W. A. Smith. James D. Stuart chosen clerk, and C. M. Wilder, chorister. President Pitt had labored in the district as much as possible, had visited all branches but Moorhead and Mondamin, found some trouble, but nothing but what charity and Christian forbearance would make right. President Lane had labored mostly in his home branch, Pisgah, but had occupied at schoolhouses and had visited and preached at Little Sioux and Mondamin and visited at Moorhead. Had been well received and blessed in his labors. W. A. Smith had been unable to fill all the demands for preaching; found that in the district that much labor had been performed by the local ministry and its good effects were showing. Had baptized twenty-four since last reporting and had enjoyed much of the Spirit. Delos Lytle was recommended to the conference for ordination to the office of elder. J. L. Parker, Sidney Pitt, sr., and J. W. Lane bore testimony that evidence had come to them that the call was from the Lord and Brother Lytle stated he had also had testimony and was willing to accept if the conference willed. At the Sunday morning prayer service the brother was ordained under the hands of Brethren Sidney Pitt, sr., and W. A. Smith. The bishop's agent, A. M. Fyrand, made report covering one year, ending December 31. Balance due church, $201.40; received in tithes and offerings, $3,546.08; total cash $3,747.48; paid to elders' families and for aid, $1,715.20; remitted to Bishop Kelley, $2,000; balance on hand, $32.28. This report was audited and found correct. Supplemental report from January 1 to 29 was also made showing cash on hand, $32.28; received in tithes and offerings, $574.92; paid to elders' families and for aid, $77; remitted to Bishop Kelley, $300; balance on hand, $197.92. The spiritual conditions existing in the branches of the district were reported and all were making progress with little trouble existing that it was thought that these troubles would right themselves. Statistical reports from eleven of the twelve branches in the district and counting the missing report as at last reporting, showed a membership of 2,009, a decrease of 13 during the quarter. This does not include 49 scattered members. Of these about 700 are absent from the branches in which they belong. This membership includes one patriarch, one high counselor, 3 high priests, 2 seventy, 44 elders, 30 priests, 33 teachers, and 20 deacons; a gain of 3 by baptism, 8 by letter, and 4 by certificate and vote; total gain 15; lost 20 by letter and 8 by death; a total loss of 28, and net loss of 13; three marriages reported and 2 ordinations. Branch ministerial reports were received only in part and from but 8 branches. In these branches but 19 of the ministry reported. These showed 187 sermons, 295 times assisting, 1,160 times attended, 1 baptism, 2 confirmations, 1 ordination, 7 children blessed, 96 sick administered to, 65 official visits, 2 marriages solemnized and 21 priesthood meetings attended. Magnolia, Pisgah, and Sioux City branches each invited the next session of conference. Pisgah had a majority of votes cast and was made the unanimous choice. June 7 and 8 was set as time. 80 delegates were chosen to represent the district at the annual conference, and instructed to cast majority and minority vote if necessary. W. W. Baker, W. A. Smith, Sidney Pitt, senior, and W. R. Adams were the speakers of the Saturday evening and Sunday sessions. The funeral services of Sister Elizabeth Hildreth took place at the church and occupied the time of the afternoon service. James D. Stuart, district clerk.

Convention Minutes.

FAR WEST.—The Sunday school and Religio convention of the district convened at Saint Joseph, Missouri, January 18 and 19, 1913. On Saturday the 18th, at 8.45, a prayer meeting was held, in charge of Brother Warden of Stewartsville, and Brother Morton. From 10 to 12 the business session of the Sunday school was held, and the following officers were elected: T. H. Simmons, of Cameron, superintendent; Charles Morton, assistant superintendent; R. L. Henry, secretary; G. W. Mauzey, treasurer; Emma Lewis, home department superintendent; E. E. McCormick, district librarian. At 2 the business session of the Religio was held, and officers elected as follows: J. S. Andes, president; J. Hovenga, vice president; P. H. Pugsley, secretary; R. L. Henry, treasurer; Mrs. E. E. McCormick, home department superintendent; Emma Lewis, librarian. At 4 a joint session of the Sunday school and Religio was held, and action as to where the next meeting should be held was left in the hands of a committee. Saturday evening Brother Davis, of Stewartsville, addressed the convention, followed by a program of literary and musical numbers. Sunday services were: Sunday school, in charge of the local officers; morning, afternoon, and evening, talks by Brethren D. J. Krahl, Hale W. Smith, and S. A. Burgess. The sessions were well attended and much benefit derived. A peaceful spirit of love and good feeling was felt at all the meetings and we feel much encouraged at the progress of the work. R. L. Henry, secretary of Sunday school; P. H. Pugsley, secretary of Religio.

Conference Notices.

The conference of the Kentucky and Tennessee District will convene with the High Hill Branch, March 1, 1913, at 10.45 a. m. Please send all reports to the district secretary not later than February 26. Branch presidents please take notice. Local priesthood who can not attend please send reports. Delegates to the General Conference will be appointed at this conference. All come who can, and bring the good Spirit with you. S. E. Dickson, district secretary.

The New York and Philadelphia District will meet in conference, March 1, 1913, at 3 p. m., at Scranton, Pennsylvania, in the new church, corner Twelfth and Luzrene streets. John Potts, secretary.

Florida district conference will convene with the Alafloa Branch, at Alafloa church, Dixonville, Alabama, Saturday, March 1, 1913, at 10 a. m. Will branch officers please see to it that their branches have statistical reports on hand, properly approved by the branches and each signed by secretary and president. We hope to have present some of the missionary force, district president, and a goodly number of the local priesthood. E. N. McCall, secretary.

Convention Notices.

The Florida district Sunday school association will meet in convention at Alafloa church, near Dixonville, Alabama, Friday at 2.30 p. m., February 28, 1913. Send all reports to Sister C. J. Clark, Dixonville, Alabama. Sidney McCall, assistant superintendent.

The Portland district Sunday school convention will convene at Montavilla, Oregon, February 21, 1913, at 2 p. m. N. T. Chapman, district superintendent.

The Pittsburg district Sunday school association will convene at 4200 Jacob Street, Wheeling, West Virginia, on February 21, at 2.30 p. m. eastern time. Also meeting at 7.30 p. m. Institute work will receive considerable attention. All are urged to be present and ready for work. Samuel A. Martin, district secretary.

The semiannual convention of the Zion's Religio-Literary Society of the Eastern Colorado District will convene in the Latter Day Saint chapel, Denver, Colorado, February 27 and 28. Literary and musical program Thursday evening. Prayer meeting Friday morning, followed by business session. It is expected that all the locals of the district will be represented. Come and join your efforts in making the sessions a success. Walter W. Weller, district president, Hillrose, Colorado; Blanche Sampson, district secretary, 547 Clarkson Street, Denver, Colorado.

Reunion Notice.

The Eastern and Central Michigan districts will unite in holding a reunion June 13-22, at Port Huron, Michigan. Please remember the date, and place, and make your plans to attend. Due notice will be given as to price of meals, tents, etc. Arthur Allen, president.

CONTENTS

THE SAINTS' HERALD

EDITORIAL:
 Good News from Toronto and Holden - - - 177
 A Veteran at Rest - - - 177
 Duties of Branch Officers—The Priest - - - 178
 The Constitution - - - 180
 Notes and Comments - - - 180

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 The "Rota Plan" in Great Britain, by W. H. Greenwood - - - 181
 Another Leaf from Life, by J. F. Mintun - - - 184

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 The Latter Day Saints - - - 186
 One Hundred Years' Peace with America; the Celebrations of 1914 - - - 187
 Learn How to Read a Book - - - 189
 Mongolian Birthmarks - - - 189

MOTHER'S HOME COLUMN
 Mrs. C. J. Clark, - - - 190

LETTER DEPARTMENT
 Mrs. B. B. Smith—G. W. Beebe, sr.—Clara M. Mercer—Mrs. J. T. Skinner—Miss Lillian Potorff—O. B. Thomas—Louisa Horton—S. D. Condit—John Wahlstrom. - - - 191

NEWS FROM MISSIONS
 W. A. Smith—G. J. Waller—James Cornish—P. T. Plumb. - - - 193

NEWS FROM BRANCHES
 Alma M. Coombs—Edna U. Walling. - - - 194

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - 195

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.
 The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Why should we ever go abroad, even across the way, to ask a neighbor's advice? There is a nearer neighbor within, who is incessantly telling us how we should behave. But we wait for the neighbor without to tell us of some false, easier way.—Thoreau.

The Presidency.

NOTICE OF TRANSFER.

To Those Concerned: Elder Roy F. Slye is by agreement of the undersigned transferred from Mission Number 2 to Mission Number 1, to labor in the Nauvoo District until the coming General Conference.

J. F. CURTIS,
 J. W. WIGHT,
 G. T. GRIFFITHS,
Ministers in Charge.
 FREDERICK M. SMITH,
For the Presidency.

MISSIONARY APPOINTMENT.

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of Elder Jesse Hardin to labor in Kirtland District for the balance of the conference year, the Presidency and minister in charge concurring in the appointment.

FREDERICK M. SMITH,
Secretary First Presidency.
 R. C. RUSSELL,
Minister in Charge.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 12, 1913.

Local Reporting.

To All the Local Priesthood of Mission Number 1; Greeting: Do not read this notice unless you are willing to send me your annual report—March 1, 1912, to March 1, 1913. I will be pleased to get your reports by March 1, if possible.
 LAMONI, IOWA. J. W. WIGHT.

Quorum Notices.

The Second Quorum of Priests (Lamoni Stake) will please take notice that the convention and conference of Lamoni Stake will be held at Lamoni, February 28 to March 2, 1913. There will also be a meeting of the Quorum to elect officers. Report blanks were sent to all the first of the year. I have not heard from all, so those who have not sent in reports will please send them at once to the secretary, as the constitution says that where you fail to report for two years, you will be dropped from the quorum.

JAMES J. JOHNSON, Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, Route 3.

To the Quorum of High Priests; Greeting: Dear brethren, another conference year is fast drawing to a close, and it will be necessary to send in our annual report to the quorum.

The rule of the quorum is, that reports should be in the hands of the secretary, Robert M. Elvin, Lamoni, Iowa, on or before March 10. He is very particular to try to help you to report on time by sending blanks late enough so you can fill them out immediately upon receipt of the same and mail to him so they will reach him by the date mentioned.

Please use figures in reporting. Do not say "preached many times," or "Presided many times," etc., for the secretary can not compute the term "many times" and give definite figures to the General Conference in our quorum report.

We want our quorum work correctly represented, and if you neglect to report on time this can not be done.
 Please do not fail to report by March 10.

Yours for better work,

JOSEPH A. TANNER, President.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, February 12, 1913.

General Conference Reception Committee.

The undersigned have been appointed to act as a reception committee to arrange for the entertainment of delegates and visitors who may be in attendance at the General Conference.

If you expect to come and desire the services of the committee, write us early so we may know how many and who we will have to prepare for.

Assignments will be made in the order in which the applications are received, so do not wait till the last minute before you write.

At a recent meeting of the branch the price of board and lodging was fixed at $4.00 per week.

Send all applications to the secretary, and let us know just who places are wanted for. Don't say, "My friend and I." We need to know who your friend is,—whether man, or woman, or child.

Will you be here in time for the conventions?

Will you remain till conference closes?

Kindly observe these points when writing us and we will be better able to please you.

C. F. GOODE, Chairman.
 C. I. CARPENTER, Secretary.
 J. F. GARVER.
 L. G. HOLLOWAY.
 ISAAC CARLILE.
 W. B. PAUL.
 JOHN DAVIS.
 O. E. GREEN.
 A. O. WHITE.

Southeastern Missouri.

The elders and branch presidents of the district please report your labors to the district president so I can report to the First Presidency. Send in the reports by March 1.

J. T. CUNNINGHAM, District President.

THAYER, MISSOURI, R. F. D. 2, box 104.

Correction.

In your issue of October 30, page 1061, under conference minutes, the list should have read as follows: John McKenzie, Sister John McKenzie, R. C. Evans, Sister R. C. Evans, John Shields, Sister John Shields, William Davis, Sister William Davis, G. C. Tomlinson, Sister G. C. Tomlinson, George Henley, Sister George Henley, R. C. Longhurst, Sister R. C. Longhurst, William Fligg, Sister William Fligg, J. L. Burger, Sister J. L. Burger, Brother J. Judkins.

P. H. PHILIPPIN.

LONDON, ONTARIO, 92 Chesley Avenue.

Died.

ROBLETT.—Isaiah David Roblett, son of Elmer and Sarah A. Roblett, was born January 26, 1866; baptized August 11, 1879, at Nauvoo, Illinois by Mark H. Forscutt; died February 3, 1913, at Saint Joseph Hospital, Saint Joseph, Missouri. Funeral at Stewartsville, Missouri, February 4; sermon by A. W. Head, interment at Pleasant Grove Cemetery.

GARRISON.—At Lamoni, Iowa, February 3, 1913, James Garrison, at the age of 75 years, 10 months, and 21 days. Born in Washington County, Indiana, March 14, 1837. With his fathers' family settled in Worth County, Missouri, in 1865, went to Colorado in 1860, and at the outbreak of the Civil War enlisted in the Second Colorado Cavalry, and was discharged at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1865. He was twice married, and twice left a widower, survived by six children, funeral in charge of the John R. Andrews Post of the G. A. R. Sermon from 2 Timothy 2: 3, by Robert M. Elvin, interment in the Patrick Cemetery.

LASLEY.—At Des Moines, Iowa, February 6, 1913, of peritonitis, Miss Audie Lasley, aged 25 years, 3 months, and 3 days. Her death was the taking of the last child of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Lasley, a severe blow from which it is hard to recover. They have been friendly to the church for years but have not united with it. May the Lord comfort them and give light that will lead them to him. Funeral service was held in Lamoni church, the sermon by Brother H. A. Stebbins, with Brother R. S. Salyards in charge and Brother John Smith assisting.

BUTLER.—On January 27, 1913, Mrs. Mary E. Butler. She was born at Clarksville, Texas, October 30, 1852. She was united in marriage to Mr. J. H. Butler, August 29, 1872, and two children blessed this union, Mrs. Doctor Dalby and Mrs. T. L. Manning, both of Wilburton. In 1879, Mrs. Butler united with the Reorganized Church. She leaves husband two daughters, four brothers, nine grandchildren, one great-grandchild, and a host of friends. Funeral services January 28 at the Saints' church, Elder H. R. Harder in charge; sermon by Elder Lee Quick, of Mapleton, Kansas. Interment in the city cemetery.

METCALF.—Mr. Enos B. Metcalf died at Kirtland, Ohio, February 7, 1913. Mr. Metcalf was born in Kirtland, June 1, 1823, being in his ninetieth year at the time of his death. He had spent his entire life in this place, was well known by many of the people of the church. Mr. Metcalf had never identified himself with any religious body. He was an honest, industrious, and upright man, and may well be numbered among the honorable men of the earth. He enjoyed the respect and confidence of all who knew him. Interment in the cemetery at Kirtland. Funeral services conducted, and addressed by Elder L. W. Powell.

ORTON.—Mrs. Lenora Springer Orton was born at Sempronius, Cayuga, New York, September 2, 1835; died at the home of her daughter, near Boscobel, Crawford County, Wisconsin. She was united in marriage to James C. Orton in the year 1857, who preceded her in death. To this union were born six children, four of whom mourn her death. She united with the church over twenty years ago and remained a faithful Saint, a loving mother, and friend to all. Funeral was held at the Buckwheat Ridge Church, near Lancaster, Wisconsin; sermon by August E. Gratz, assisted by George R. Burton.

WHITING.—W. W. Whiting, of Independence, Missouri, born April 6, 1838, in Charlottesville, Ontario, Canada; died January 8, 1913; March 28, 1862, he married Miss Hannah Laughery, Coal Valley, Illinois. To them were born ten children, seven still living: William, Lake City; Arthur, Aurelia; Mrs. Louisa Toyne, Lanesboro; Marvin and Asa, of Aurelia, all of Iowa; Zenos, of Independence, Missouri; and Dolpha of Ralston, Kansas, all grown and in attendance at the funeral. He united with the church December 6, 1872, at Deloit, Iowa, under the administration of Brother Ira A. Colf, confirmed by Brethren John Rounds and John A. Wedlock. He was ordained an elder September 14, 1878, at Gallands Grove, Iowa, under the hands of Elder Charles Derry. For about thirty years he labored as a missionary. He and his family lived in Iowa for about forty years. Then he went with his wife to Dakota, residing in Bonesteel, and later removing to Independence in 1906. In Dakota he acted as bishop's agent for the South Dakota District for two years. He was active as a minister while he was able, and after moving to Independence, Missouri, did what he could in gospel lines as well as business. Brother Whiting was an earnest, faithful worker in whatever he undertook, and his labors in the church work were no exception to his work in other matters. His widow and children were present at the funeral services conducted from the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, Brethren George E. Harrington, W. A. Smith, M. H. Bond, W. H. Garret, and E. L. Kelley taking part in the services. A good man passed over to his reward.

The wretch condemned with life to part
Still, still on hope relies;
And every pang that rends the heart
Bids expectation rise.

Hope, like the gleaming taper's light,
Adorns and cheers our way;
And still, as darker grows the night,
Emits a brighter ray.—Oliver Goldsmith.

Pride is one of the seven deadly sins; but it can not be the pride of a mother in her children, for that is a compound of two cardinal virtues—faith and hope.—Charles Dickens.

A New Book of Sermons

The Gospel Messenger

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH

Everyone that knows Elder Roth—and many that do not—know that he is a very successful missionary and an excellent preacher. This book of his sermons—thirty-five of them—covers so wide a range of subjects and does it so thoroughly that you need it for your own information, and to lend to your investigating neighbor.

Elder Roth is always a preacher for the people; uses enough scripture to make his utterances authoritative, tells where to find it, yet doesn't tire the reader with too much monotony. Quotations and citations have been verified.

The autobiography of the author is a valuable feature of the book.

Through the generosity of Elder Roth we are enabled to offer this well-printed, nicely arranged, and well-bound book at the nominal sum of 75c. Order No. 248a.

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

Herald Publishing House $100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further
Particulars

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

Economizes Butter, Flour,
Eggs; makes the food more appetizing and wholesome

The only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,500.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good lively business. Address, 8-tf
VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, 6-tf
Independence, Mo.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant.
No. 216, cloth . . . . .75c

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children. Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

(Mormon's Bog) just received.
Order ¼ leather edition, $1.00.
Order leather, board, $1.25.
Order leather, limp, $1.50.
Order leather, flexible, $2.50.

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right.
Cloth No. 243 . . . . .75c

Desirable Residences in Lamoni.

House of 8 rooms, cellar, 2 wells and cistern; one block from Brick Church, large lot, barn, plenty of fruit. Price $2,500.

2 story brick house of 9 rooms, well and cistern, small barn, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from center of town. $2,600.

One story cottage, 7 rooms and bath, large basement, barn, chicken house, plenty of fruit. 2 blocks from Brick Church, 4 blocks from town. $2,800.

1½ story nearly new, 7 rooms and bath, good basement, nicely located near church and school. $2,800.

If interested in any of the above write to us and we will furnish full particulars with photograph of property.

G. W. Blair, Secretary,
Lamoni Land and Loan Co., Lamoni, Iowa.

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

Low Fares to Pacific Coast

Very low excursion rates will be in effect from March 15th to April 15th to points in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming and the Canadian Northwest.

Go When Rates are Low

The Burlington offers special tourist car accommodations. Personally conducted excursions. The scenery along the Burlington Route is an important part of the trip. Courteous Burlington employees assure you the utmost attention.

Get Particulars Now

Plan your trip now. Come in and let me help you. Let me tell you about these low Burlington tourist rates and give you booklet describing the various points and any other information you wish—FREE.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, FEBRUARY 26, 1913

NUMBER 9

Editorial

DUTIES OF BRANCH OFFICERS.

III. THE TEACHER.

The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with, and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty, and he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest, and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the deacons, if occasion requires; but neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands; they are, however, to warn, expound, exhort, and teach, and invite all to come unto Christ.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ.—Ephesians 4: 11, 12.

PEACEMAKERS.

The writer lived for a number of years between two neighbors who did not belong to the church. At first the neighbors were very intimate friends; but presently they quarreled over some insignificant matter, and after that they did not speak to each other, though they did not hesitate to speak about each other in very bitter language.

No civil officer took notice of this incident, for organized society has no officer whose duty it is to engage in the ministry of reconciliation. Had they proceeded to blows and created a disturbance of the peace in that way, society would have taken notice and perhaps imposed a fine or a jail sentence to protect other members of society from such disturbance. But as it was, no official notice was taken of the matter by organized society. Within the church, however, there are officers who must take notice of such incidents when they occur between church members. For hate is a foreign element in the church and must be eliminated. Not so in the world, for the world is not founded on a basis of love. But the church must eliminate hate or it will die. Jesus says, that if we are not one we are not his. Paul charges us to take heed that we do not backbite one another, lest we be devoured of one another.

Within the branches the teachers are the ones specifically designated to act as mediators and peacemakers, by virtue of the charge that they are to see that there is no "hardness with each other," nor "backbiting, nor evil speaking."

Jesus said, "Blessed are the peacemakers," so this is indeed a blessed position to occupy, and calls for consecrated men of a high order of spirituality, and possessed of great tact and good judgment. It is true that all members should be peacemakers, and by calling and disposition conservators of the peace, but when the church as an organized society takes official notice of those quarrels and misunderstandings that sometimes occur between members, the teacher is the one through whom the church acts (when a teacher is available who is not in any way involved, or disqualified). In another sense the teacher is a peacemaker between the church and those members who are in transgression, for in a sense the man who is in transgression of the church law is at war with the church and with God, and in all such cases occurring in the branch there is work for the teacher to do in his official capacity.

As a last resort, he may prefer charges against those who are in transgression, after having performed faithful labor with them in an effort to secure reformation.

In those cases where difficulty occurs between members, the rule adopted by the church is in harmony with Matthew 18, but is more specific, and when practicable involves the presence of the teacher as a mediator and witness. It is provided that the one offended shall first meet the one offending, privately, and seek reconciliation. In the event of a failure to secure reconciliation, at the second attempt "he shall take with him some teacher of the church, or if such teacher be not obtainable, or be an interested party, a deacon if obtainable, otherwise a member, and shall try a second time to secure an adjustment of the difficulty existing, but shall not state the matter of grievance to such officer or member except in the presence of the party offended. (See Book of Rules, p. 96, par. 158.)

A WATCHMAN ON THE TOWER.

The law says that the teacher's duty is "to watch over the church always" and to "see that there is no iniquity in the church." This accords with the further statement, "The deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 22.

The statement that the teacher is to "watch over the church always, and be with, and strengthen them," indicates that it is the duty of the teacher to be present with the church at all services, whenever it is possible for him to do so, and to scrutinize the congregation and exercise a watchcare over it; noting individuals as well as the general assembly, that he may judge of their spirituality and know when to exercise himself in his calling in specific cases. He should be there, on duty, as an example to others, and instantly ready to help and strengthen in every legitimate way, by precept, by example, by exhortation, by prayer, by word of encouragement and brotherly cheer, by rebuke when necessary.

He can not know when hardness, evil-speaking, backbiting, lying, iniquity, indifference to duty, exist in the church unless he is alert and at his post.

In addition to his watchcare over the morals of the members he is charged to see that they do not neglect to attend services. This he may do by exhortation in public or in private, and by moral suasion, as it goes without saying that force can not be employed to make people attend church. They must be persuaded, and persuasion does not mean scolding. People must be attracted, or impelled from a sense of duty understood as a result of correct teaching.

A VISITING OFFICER.

While the teacher is not specifically named as a visiting officer, the nature of his duties seems to make him of necessity a visiting officer. He can not ascertain the condition of those members who absent themselves from the church, and may need his especial care, unless he visits them. He can not get a general understanding of the spiritual condition of the people unless he moves among them.

For be it understood that the teacher is not merely an "undertaker" who is to act only when the priests have reported the presence of a spiritual corpse in the branch. Nor is he a meat ax surgeon, whose only work is to cut off and expel. He should be a conservative force in the branch. His first duty is to reconcile; to save. He may be obliged to take the initial steps that will lead up to expulsion, in some cases, but this is done as a last resort, after efforts to save have failed. His labor is performed, not to make a case that will stand in the courts, so that the erring one may be expelled, but with the whole-hearted desire to save the individual. If he fails in this, of course his labor stands as a witness against the offender, when the matter comes to the courts; but that was not the primary purpose of the labor.

No one can be a successful teacher who does not love humanity. This work requires the spirit of the Master, who came not to destroy men, but to save them.

In this work, as we have said, the teacher will find it necessary to visit the members in their homes. He may visit with the priest under certain circumstances, as when a branch has but one priest and one teacher, and it is unwise for one to visit a family alone, but under such circumstances he goes as a teacher, and acts in his own capacity as a teacher, and not as an assistant to the priest. Or where a deacon is available he may take the deacon with him; as it is said that the deacon may assist the teacher in all of his duties, when necessary.

On this point of visiting we wish to quote a paragraph from an address by Elder Joseph Lambert (delivered in Lamoni, March 22, 1904, and published in the HERALD,) as it is to the point:

I gather that the teacher is a visiting officer from a consideration of the character of his work as a teacher. It seems to me that this work can not be properly and fully performed without more or less visiting among the members of the branch. And while I do not regard him as a visiting officer in the same sense as I do the priest, yet I think it is impractical for him to accomplish the work that is imposed upon him in the law, without visiting among the members of the church. . . . I remember a little branch to which I belonged when I was a teacher; sometimes I would notice that certain persons failed to partake of the sacrament. And I thought it my duty to find out why they did not partake. I took their names at once, when they did not partake, and on the first good opportunity (I did not wait long, either), I approached them and told them in as good a way as I knew how, and as kindly as I could, that I noticed that they did not partake of the sacrament on Sunday; then they would tell me why. . . . So I believe that the teacher should be on the alert; and that he is required to do a great deal of visiting in order to honor the law which defines his duties as an officer in the church. . . . I ministered in this office for more than three years, and I asked a good many questions within that time. And I can not call to mind now that I ever offended anybody by asking questions. It was my rule to ask them if they observed family services and worship. When one question is asked, if it is done intelligently and kindly, as a rule, they will tell you more than you asked.

THE TEACHER MAY PREACH.

The teacher may preach, in a local way, as the following will show:

Resolved, That in our judgment teachers and deacons are authorized by the law to labor as preachers within the branches to which they belong, when they are presidents thereof, or with the advice and consent of the presiding officer.—General Conference Resolution, number 449.

After they had prayed unto the Father in the name of Christ, they laid their hands upon them, and said, In the name of Jesus Christ I ordain you to be a priest; (or if he be a teacher;) I ordain you a teacher, to preach repentance and remission of sins through Jesus Christ, by the endurance of faith on his name to the end. Amen.—Book of Moroni 3: 2.

High priests should travel, and also the elders, and also the lesser priests; but the deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 22.

THEY ARE TO WARN, EXPOUND, EXHORT AND TEACH.

Neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands; they are, however, to warn, expound, exhort, and teach, and invite all to come unto Christ.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

The elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5.

This function of exhorting, warning, expounding, and invitation may be exercised either in private or in public, as wisdom, the circumstances, and the ability of the teacher may direct. Our observation has led us to believe that the field of public instruction from the pulpit is pretty well occupied by the general ministry, while the field of private instruction, teaching, heart to heart exhortation, fireside preaching, is not so well occupied. Not every good public speaker is a good conversationalist. The teacher who is a good conversationalist, spiritually minded, and well posted, will find a broad and fertile field for him to occupy as a teacher of the law in the homes of the people who are under his charge as a branch officer. It is perhaps a fact that the teachers as a class have not yet fully occupied to the extent of their opportunities along this line.

THE TEACHER MAY PRESIDE.

A teacher may be elected to preside over a branch, in which case, of course, he presides in his own right as head of the branch:

A branch may be presided over by a high priest, an elder, priest, teacher or deacon, chosen and sustained by the vote of the branch.—Doctrine and Covenants 120: 2.

A further reading of the paragraph discovers the wisdom of electing high priests or elders where such are available and are considered fully qualified to act, and are so situated that they can act; but that which we have quoted shows that a teacher may under certain conditions be chosen to preside over a branch.

If chosen to act as a teacher, he may at times be required to preside, owing to the absence of the presiding elder and priest or priests of the branch:

He is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

In the absence of the presiding elder of the branch the priest or priests of the branch or either of them shall have the right to preside, whatever other elders or priests may be present in such meetings; in the absence of the presiding elder and priest or priests, the teacher or teachers, or either of them shall have the right to preside; in the absence of the presiding elder, the priest or priests, and the teacher or teachers, the deacon or deacons, or either of them shall have the right to preside; the priority of right of associated priests, teachers, and deacons to be determined by seniority of office in the branch should question arise in regard to presidency; the right to act for the branch as its officers having been previously determined by the vote of the branch.—Rules of Order and Debate, p. 101.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTE.—Our next number will be devoted to "Duties of the deacon."

A CORRECTION.

An error crept into Brother J. W. Peterson's article in issue of February 12. On page 160, second column, in the sixteenth and seventeenth lines appears this statement: "The Reorganized Church never accepted the Christianity which he taught." This should have read as follows: "The Reorganized Church never accepted the reputed evil doctrines of Joseph Smith but the Christianity he taught."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

RESOLUTIONS ON POLYGAMY.

We invite attention to a letter in this issue from Brother A. B. Phillips concerning a resolution passed by the Massachusetts District conference. He suggests the advisability of other districts doing the same. Read his letter and a copy of the resolution as quoted from the Providence Evening Bulletin.

Pay more attention to the children. They are the strength and hope of to-morrow's church.

Hymns and Poems

Selected and Original

Work.

Let me do my work from day to day;
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In roaring market-place or tranquil room,
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray;
"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can be done in the right way."

Then I shall see it, not too great, nor small,
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours,
And cheerful turn when the long shadows fall
At eventide, to play and love and rest
Because I know for me my work is best.
—Henry Van Dyke.

Original Articles

NEW OPENINGS.

"Methods and Tactics" Series, No. 6.

The primary object of missionary effort is to get the gospel before those who have never heard it; and our success as harbingers of the angel's message is dependent upon the energy put forth to reach the greatest number of hearers.

The commission, both ancient and modern, was, and is, to all the world, those who were sick (Mark 16: 15; Luke 5: 31; Doctrine and Covenants 83: 10); and per consequence, "new openings" was the constant regime of the field workers when in the line of duty, aside from the responsibility to regulate local conditions when necessary.

The most successful laborers, in the opinion of the writer, are the men who diligently seek to plant the truth in new places. The admonition has been repeated that the field is white unto the harvest, while the laborers are few; and when we consider the magnitude of the restoration intent, as committed to us, and compare the number of workers with the multitude who sit in darkness, we stand aghast! At the present rate of increase, numerically and spiritually, how long will it take the Lord's "army" to become "very great"?

The value of new openings can not be estimated in dollars and cents, nor can we ever appreciate the worth of time in the Lord's vineyard until we can realize the full import of the interrogatory, "What will a man give in exchange for his soul?"

Latter Day Saints are preeminently a missionary people, and to neglect the work of reaching out is to invite disaster, as our growth is very largely dependent upon the spoils of conquest. The Lord has informed us that the work of restoration in its completeness can not be accomplished until his army becomes "very great" (Doctrine and Covenants 102: 9). To accomplish the work designed, his soldiery must be constantly on the firing line, pushing the work aggressively into new fields, that all available material may be gathered from among the nations to increase the ranks of those already in the conflict.

Moreover, the Lord says to us: "Behold, I send you out to reprove the world of all their unrighteous deeds, and to teach them of a judgment which is to come."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 15; and the command is to "search diligently and spare not." What a wonderful responsibility is placed upon the man who engages to labor in the harvest of souls! Little wonder the Apostle Paul should say, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." A very great many of the most devoted men and women in the church are those who have been brought in contact with the work at the front, hence the value of new openings is simply inestimable.

Right here let me suggest that, to my mind, a new opening implies more than simply going into a new place and preaching a sermon or two and then hastening on to some other point to repeat the operation. Properly speaking, a new opening consists in planting the truth so firmly that we may return and in due time reap results. It may require considerable time and a large store of patience to effect an opening, while under certain conditions we are not required to make the second effort. (Doctrine and Covenants 83: 16.) The amount of time and energy must be contingent upon the reception of the message. When the missionary has been favorably received, he should stick to it until he has visible signs of success; until his labors bear fruit in the conversion of souls. Too often we read of the missionary preaching a few sermons in a new place, and about the time an interest has been created, he goes to some other point, leaving the work begun to be "followed up" by some one else, which oftentimes results in irretrievable loss, because the other fellow fails to happen along at the psychological moment, and when he does appear the interest has died, or he is "not the man for the place." The best policy is to "follow it up" while the interest is good. Better cancel some other dates than sacrifice a good hearing for an uncertainty. A gadabout may be a good traveler, but he will be a poor missionary, and his record will be barren of desirable results.

In making new openings should we present the Book of Mormon first? The Book of Mormon should be a potent factor in our gospel itinerary; but whether it should be presented first must depend upon the circumstances attending. Localities, like individual temperaments, differ widely, so that no hard and fast rules can be made to govern.

The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 9.

It always has been given to the elders of my church, from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Ghost.—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 1.

Neither take ye thought beforehand what ye shall say, but treasure up continually the words of eternal life, and it shall be given you in the very hour that portion that shall be meted unto every man.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 14.

The principle contained in the foregoing references is the only authentic rule governing the missionary in the preaching of the word; and if it is faithfully adhered to, there can be but one result—success.

If the Spirit suggested the Book of Mormon as the subject to be presented first, I would present it as unhesitatingly as I would the resurrection or the signs of the times. The avowed object of its coming forth is to convince Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ. There is no more important feature of the latter day work than the Book of Mormon, with its wealth of gospel plainness. The whole church was brought under condemnation because they "treated lightly" the things which they had received, including the Book of Mormon, and they were commanded to "repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments." (Doctrine and Covenants 83: 8.) In Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5 they were especially instructed to teach the "principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in which is the fullness of my gospel"; and the "principles" of the gospel are the primary lessons for new openings. In order to impress them more forcibly, at times it may be necessary to refer to the Book of Mormon; hence it is eminently proper to present it first, if conditions are favorable, and the Spirit dictates. Much prejudice might be allayed by a clear, lucid explanation of what the book really is, at the outset of an effort in a new place, and the way prepared for the introduction of the principles of the gospel in plainness. On the whole, there is very little danger in teaching the truth in any of its phases when indicated by the Spirit and taught in humility, with an eye single to the glory of God, and the salvation of men. The possession of the "Comforter" is the first prerequisite and should be sought diligently, for it is written: "If ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 5.

In the early days of the restoration the Book of Mormon was the burden of their cry, and it seems to have been about the first thing presented wherever they went. However, conditions have changed since then. At that time there was a general awakening in religious sentiment, and anything new was received with more or less interest, from a sense of curiosity, if nothing more. People would journey for miles, by team and on horseback, to hear some new movement expounded, and converts were numerous. But the introduction of polygamy and kindred evils had such a blighting effect that the waves occasioned by the shock continue to ripple, and so-called "Mormonism" has become a stench to all people,—a "stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense,"—and usually in making a new opening we have to remove the rubbish of error and prejudice ere we can begin to plant the seed of gospel truth, making a greater degree of prudence necessary on the part of the preacher.

Should we deny polygamy before we are accused of it? It is nearly always a better plan to work on the defensive. Present the message affirmatively, and answer objections when they arise. There are times in every missionary's experience when he is able to anticipate the minds of his hearers and answer general objections in the course of his remarks much more effectively than to make a special effort before there is a demand for it. Men, in the church and out of it, have made themselves ridiculous exposing polygamy when the people would prefer to hear what we believe. We should seek to avoid mistakes that may ruin our chances of a successful campaign in the harvest of souls. We should keep constantly in mind the fact that it is God's work we are representing, and if there is a doubt in our mind as to the advisability of referring to things that are generally obnoxious, as polygamy is, we can do no better than to seek earnestly for the guidance of the Spirit. Wisdom is paramount to all other gifts, and no man can make a successful missionary without it. "Be ye wise servants" is good instruction still.

Our message has been brought into disrepute by an unwise reference to Utah Mormonism and polygamy; a too vigorous denial sometimes creates a suspicion of guilt which may be difficult to remove. Preach the gospel in its purity and rub off the dirt when some one attempts to besmirch you, and you will make friends by so doing. The "under dog" usually has the sympathy of some one, which, may from the nucleus of a crowd of admirers.

Are we pushing the work of making new openings as vigorously as possible? From the limited observation of the writer, there is but one answer to the above question: No. The admonition to "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad, so far and so widely as you may" (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8) was a gentle reminder that the work of making new openings was not being pushed as "vigorously as possible" at that time, and it gives us unrestricted liberty to carry out the provisions of the divine will, as expressed in Doctrine and Covenants 83: 13-16 and 115: 1.

Too much attention is given to local affairs by the missionary arm of the church, and the local authorities are generally too busy with secular pursuits to render the necessary services to which they have been called and set apart.

The following paragraphs are of vast importance:

The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 7.

Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 44.

Who can be so bold as to say that the will of the Master, as expressed in the above, is being carried out "as vigorously as possible"? To attend the various reunions and district conferences and enjoy a good time is all very nice, but it involves a neglect of duty that may cause us sorrow and regret in the day of final accounts.

The first duty of the Twelve and Seventy, and such other officers as can go as missionaries, is to push out and lift up the warning voice, leaving the organized territory to the administration of those whose duty it is to care for such (Doctrine and Covenants 122: 8), and devote their time and attention to the work of conquest. I am well aware of the fact that to push boldly out among the people of the world involves an unpleasant task, but it is God's plan for reproving the world, and we can never lay claim to pushing the work as "vigorously as possible" until we adopt and follow it as per instructions. It is quite true that certain conditions in the world have changed, but God's plan for the successful culmination of his purposes has not changed and we are under obligations to follow the "pattern." (Doctrine and Covenants 115: 1.) Too much of our work today is "one eternal round"—from branch to branch, whereas we should leave the branches and seek new territory for organization. Now notice!

It is the will of God that they do this; yea, verily, thus saith the Spirit, If they will now enter upon this work, leaving the burden of care in organized districts, or conferences to the standing ministry, under the presidency of the church; observing the law already given to ordain and set high priests or elders to preside in large branches and districts, and also evangelical ministers, then will those officers set in the church be useful and he who gave the law be honored; the differences between the quorums be healed, confidence be restored and good will and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 8.

How gentle and sublime the instruction contained in the foregoing, and what confidence and zeal it should inspire in the hearts of all concerned! How many are willing not only to say but to do: "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord," and, in the manner prescribed, push the work of making new openings as vigorously as possible?

E. E. LONG.

• * * * *

EQUALITY.

BY J. W. GILBERT.

(In three parts; part 1.)

This word, as applied to conditions and acts of men, must be taken in a restricted sense, as all can not be equal in every way, in mental ability, or in physical strength. All have not a like aptitude in mathematics, or music, or art, or literature, or science, or philosophy. Our capabilities for activity in these various fields of operation are very different, ranging all the way from mediocrity to towering genius. A mediocre in one line may be a genius in another. We are not born equal in our mental endowments, and can not be equal in our mental attainments. So also of the physical. Hence the paraphernalia necessary to equip us for activity in the direction of our several abilities must necessarily be vastly different in its character and quantity, and we can not, therefore, "receive alike" in this sense.

The moral and spiritual endowments necessarily vary greatly in different individuals, and hence we can not be equal in our needs and in our activities in this sphere.

It is obviously plain that the physical strength and capabilities also differ widely, even as much as two or three hundred per cent of difference, in many instances. It can not be expected, then, that we are to be equal in our work, or in the results turned out, in quality, quantity, or kind. Nor can it be necessary for us all to "receive alike" of the accouterments for our work. We must look for the virtues of equality to be displayed in some condition or sphere common to all.

In what sense, then, are we equal, or "to be equal"? In what way were we born equal? In what sense should we "receive alike"? Is there any common ground on which we can all stand equal? Let us see.

All are commanded: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father who is in heaven is perfect." It is not expected of us to be as absolutely perfect as God. But like as God is perfect in his sphere, so we should be perfect in our spheres. Human perfection can only be reached through the active employment and use of every faculty, power, and capability in the human make-up. Otherwise it will depreciate and atrophy. We can not say of a machine that it is perfect in its sphere unless every wheel, shaft, cog, or part operates in its proper place, time, speed, and purpose, in its relation to the combined whole. So, with the human mechanism.

Each organ, limb, muscle, faculty, power of soul and mind, must be used in its own proper function, to bring the whole being to perfection. In order to do this there are certain needs that must be supplied; such as air, light, heat, water, and food for the nourishment of the physical man. There are the needs in the realm of mentality to enable the individual to develop toward perfection in that department of his nature, such as music, art, literature, with the varying degrees governed by taste, and the individual ideals of each personality. Then come the social, moral, and spiritual phases of human nature; all to be developed to perfection by activity and use in their respective spheres, and having the "needs and wants" peculiar thereto supplied to make it possible.

Since perfection, then, can not be reached except by and through the proper use and operation of every faculty and capability in its properly balanced relation to every other faculty or capability, it is of paramount importance that each individual should receive sufficient of these natural needs and wants to thoroughly furnish and equip for a career that will provide opportunity for a balanced use and development of every power and capability, else there will be loss.

One person's most prominent bent may be music; that of another, astronomy, or mathematics, or science, or stock raising, or manufacturing, or teaching, or gardening, or accounting, or building. There are some forty-five different divisions of the brain, in varying degrees in different persons, giving rise to a great complexity and variety of capabilities and longings and aspirations and impulses; every legitimate one of which must be heeded and nurtured to its full fruition, being used and cultivated in its time and place in order to realize that rounding out of character that makes for human perfection.

Viewing human nature in this light it becomes obvious that with all these varying capabilities, aspirations, and tastes, it would be ludicrous to deal out to each person an absolutely equal amount of food, of the same kind and quality, an equal amount of the same kind of books, or of clothing of the same color, texture, and size, or of the same kind and amount of musical instruments, or of the same size and style of house to live in. For if such should be attempted by the bishop in dealing out equality, there would be a howl go up from the camp of Israel that would be heard from "Dan to Beersheba," and justly, too, for, think of the consternation of a three-hundred-pounder trying to wear the same sized suit as a ninety-pound man! Or of the four-footer dragging the tail of a coat for an average man, and all but hidden by his boots! One person of a small appetite would eat to his fill, and have food left over from his portion, while the stalwart athlete would eat all of his portion and be hungry for more. Some would not care for musical instruments and art, while others whose bent would be pronounced on music and art, would have such fine sensibilities and talents that a trip to Europe for study would be within the legitimate range of their needs and wants, and as justly so, in the proper time, as for others to have access to acres, horses, and carriages.

Thus we see that in working out our salvation and coming to perfection we will require a greatly diverging variety of equipment, and fields of operation differing widely in character, if we would foster and bring out the potential beauties of the multifarious variations of our several individualities.

At this juncture I want to quote some remarks of the dean of the college of engineering of the University of Cincinnati, Mr. Herman Schneider, which,

I think, are very pertinent to show the danger of not cultivating all of our powers and faculties:

The situation sifts down to this: Energizing work is decreasing; enervating work is increasing. In spite of the warnings of history, we are rapidly dividing mankind into a staff of mental workers and an army of purely physical workers. The physical workers are becoming more and more automatic, with the result that their minds are becoming more and more lethargic. The work itself is not character-building; on the contrary, it is repressive. When self-expression comes, it is hardly energizing mentally. The real menace lies in the fact that in a self-governing industrial community the minds of the majority are in danger of becoming atrophied, or at least of becoming trifling or superficial because of the lack of continuous exercise in conjunction with the earning of a livelihood.

The kind of citizenship that a republic needs can not be built on sixty hours per week of automatic work.

We are what our work makes us.

He then goes on to show how, by introducing a diversion, the efficiency was increased in certain factories where the work was the same monotonous grind from day to day. Failing yet to find any common ground on which we can all "be equal," and "be alike," and "receive alike," we inquire further:

What is the basic source from which all these temporal needs and wants must be supplied? Obviously, it is the earth with all its bounteous resources. For it furnishes us with air to breathe, water to drink, fuel to keep us warm, forests for lumber and fuel, fisheries for meat, plants of the field for food and raiment, and land to cultivate and for a place to dwell. Inasmuch as the earth is the only place we can get these necessities, we having been born here and can't get away, we all have an inalienable right to have access to these natural treasures from which to obtain that which will meet our innate needs and wants. Coupled with and inseparable from an innate need is the inalienable right to that which nature has supplied to meet that need. It is as inherently so as that inertia and gravitation are properties of matter. Picture the Almighty creating a man with an innate need for which He does not give him the right to supply! The right inheres in the need by virtue of the inexorable law of the universe. The right is also coextensive with the needs, which needs cover the whole range of human necessities.

Now here is the point: Here is the common ground on which we all stand equal and are born equal: Every human being has an inalienable right and equal with that of every other human being to delve with his energies into nature's storehouse (either singly, or in cooperation with others of his kind), to wrest from nature a supply to meet his every known want. And here is about the only point on which each is equal with every other, where it is inborn and common to all—equal in their right to have all their needs supplied from nature by their own activities.

The right to enough food to satisfy hunger, though it be three or four times as much as that needed by another. If two receive a pound of food each, and one is filled by that amount while the other is still hungry, they have not received equally or alike, for they can not be equal while one is hungry and the other filled. They receive alike only when they both receive enough to meet their needs, be it much or little, physical, spiritual, or æsthetic in character.

Men can only be equal, then, one with another, when all have the full and free use and possession of all that is necessary to enable them to exercise every faculty and operate in every part of their natures, to develop toward perfection, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Equality, therefore, in receiving, obtains when we all receive all we need, or in like proportion, when the supply is not enough to meet the full need of all.

But life does not consist in receiving only; so equality deals in doing, as well. That all should use their powers and capabilities to wrest their needs from nature's grasp is as inherently mandatory, as the right to receive is inalienable. The very presence of a faculty, or the possession of a hand is equal to a command to use the same. The use makes for perfection and life; the disuse for decay, atrophy, and death.

Naturally, men of varying endowments mentally, physically, and spiritually, will, doing their best, turn out varying results in their work. It is hardly possible for the results to be equal in any way whatever; hence it should not be expected that one man should or could do as much as every other man unless he is as well endowed as every other man. But since it is just as easy for one man to do his best as it is for another to do his best, it is no more of a task or hardship for one than another, and a true state of society requires it whenever it is necessary to run the machinery of production at full capacity; and when at less than full capacity, then proportionately less than the utmost efforts would be the rule for all.

This is equality in doing. Even if A, doing his best, can turn out four or five times as much work in a given time as B can, doing his best, and do it as easily as B can his, why should he not do it? "To whom little is given, little is required; and to whom much is given, of him will men ask the more." If one man, doing his best, can dig five rods of ditch in a day, and another can dig ten and not half try, the one digging five does the greater amount of work. The widow casting in her mite, which was all she had, gave more than the rich who cast in many times more than she did, but relatively only an iota, from their abundance.

It may be urged that the man who is so incomparably less able to accomplish an average result in a given line than others, should seek to enlist his services in a field where he is better adapted to labor. Truly said; for in the right condition of society this disparity in results will disappear by reason of opportunity being given to every man to choose the kind of work to which he is best adapted and can therefore serve society the most advantageously. But in our present state of society, circumstances compel many a good inventor to serve as a drawer of water, and many a potential statesman to serve as a hewer of stone, and thus society is robbed of their best services.

The idea that skill should receive a greater reward than common labor is peculiar to the ethics of the present state of civilization, and will pass; for it is not based on temporal equality. No one has yet shown that the ditch-digger is less important than the architect, and few architects would exchange places with him at twice the architect's salary. How many railroad superintendents would take the place of the street cleaner, if they were out of a job and could still draw a railroad superintendent's salary? Prate as men will about the dignity of common labor, they will choose the clerical at less pay. Again, no railroad superintendent would have a job if it were not for the track layers, and the spike drivers, and the section men, and the brakemen.

The concrete output of the labor of two men may be equal in quantity and quality, but their service is not equal unless their facility is equal. Their facility being different, the output from a true and efficient service would also be different, yet equal service would be rendered because it is in proportion to their facility and ability. So if A's output is four times more than B's in a given time, both working with individually normal facility or ability, their service is equal, full, and complete, and should be accepted in exchange for the full and complete needs of each, be they what, and in such amounts, as they may. This is equality in doing and receiving: Complete service for complete needs? This is the principle that must redeem Zion.

(To be continued.)

o * o * o

THINKING ABOUT ZION.

Zion is a part of the gospel. It is "good news" that comes to the hearts of men. The ancient prophets spoke of it. The poets sang of it, and when the angel of restoration spoke in these latter days, among the first messages was one about the establishment of Zion. The writer of this paper is going to write about it, not with the thought that he has anything new to say, but perhaps he may tell the story in another way that might cause the reader to think more seriously about it than heretofore. To help us in the analysis of the subject, we will divide it into three parts.

First. The people that are to ultimately make up Zion are the "pure in heart." (Doctrine and Covenants 94:5.) Church membership alone will not entitle them to that privilege. The Lord said the rebellious would "be plucked out," and "the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion" (Doctrine and Covenants 64:7), and in this the Lord was true to his promise, for it is a matter of history that the Saints were driven out in 1833, and the Lord told in a subsequent revelation why he permitted this to be done: "I, the Lord, have suffered the affliction to come upon them, wherewith they have been afflicted in consequence of their transgressions."—Doctrine and Covenants 98:1. "There were jarrings, and contentions, and envyings, and strifes, and lustful and covetous desires among them: therefore by these things they polluted their inheritances."—Doctrine and Covenants 98:3. Six months after the Saints were driven out, the Lord spoke again and said, "They have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh Saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise, I can not receive her unto myself."—Doctrine and Covenants 102:2.

From these quotations, we learn what kind of people are to abide in Zion. It is those who are willing to keep the Lord's commandments and live according to his holy law. The separation will take place in a quiet and orderly way,—some will go away for business and social reasons, many of the Saints will become dissatisfied because they will not want to keep God's holy law, and they will feel out of place among those that are doing so, and will move out. The church has no control over its members, as to where they shall live. It can not compel any to move out of Zion. It can only invite them to move in. It has no right or power to control the actions of non-members. Who shall finally inhabit the land of Zion, is a matter solely and exclusively in the hands of the Lord.

Second. The government of Zion will be the law of Christ, the law of righteousness, the golden rule. The only power we can use to control the membership is moral suasion. We can expel them for the transgression of the moral law and then our relationship ceases with them. All our work in the building up of Zion must be done under the civil law. There is nothing in it to prevent us from accomplishing all the Lord designs of us prior to his coming. A late revelation (Doctrine and Covenants 128:7) instructs us as follows: "The Lord has said that this condition of obedience to law must continue until he comes whose right it is to come and assumes to reign over his people." This is instruction in regard to building up Zion and the "regions round about."

Third. The obtaining of land and occupying it according to the Lord's holy law is another very important part of the building up of Zion. The Lord speaks of two places in reference to the land, one is Zion, having reference more particularly to that country in the immediate vicinity of Independence; and in the "regions round about," which seems to have reference to the great Central West. In a sermon by the president of the church, it was expressed in this way: "But I give it as my understanding that any person who is within twenty-four hours' ride (referring to Independence, E. R.), the quickest way he can get there, I don't care whether it is by ox team, whether it be horse team, whether it is by bicycle, . . . if he can get there within twenty-four hours, I am of the opinion that he is within the confines of the 'regions round about.'" The quickest way would be by railroad, the slowest by ox team. It is quite safe to limit it to the Central West, and if we become very numerous, the Lord can extend the boundaries of the territory to be occupied.

We will make no special reference now to the locating of the Saints in Zion in the early days, but will consider what the Lord has said to the Reorganization. The desire of the Saints to gather was very strong in the formative period of the Reorganization, and to put the Saints' minds at rest concerning the matter, the Lord spoke to the church in 1873 (Doctrine and Covenants 117:11), and said, "Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me." It was not yet expedient or wise to gather into Independence and the immediate vicinity. The feelings of bitterness that existed in the early days had not yet entirely died out. It was the Lord's intention for his people to gather into communities in the great Central West, buy homes and build up branches and be contented. If we are to form conclusions from the facts it would seem that the Saints scattered instead of gathering, for many who had homes sold them and scattered to the regions round about, and many went beyond those regions that were designated as the gathering place, and as a result where once were flourishing branches, many of them have now disappeared. The Lord must have intended that the gathering to the regions round about was preliminary, and to aid the closer gathering into the stakes.

To carry out the gathering systematically, the Lord informed the church in 1831 that some of the Saints were appointed by the Holy Spirit to go up to Zion, and some were privileged to go, and that they should take with them a certificate from three elders, or from the bishop (Doctrine and Covenants 72: 5). In 1909, the same principle was reiterated in Doctrine and Covenants 128: 4; also in 1894 in Doctrine and Covenants 123: 12. The organization of the two stakes gave a new impetus to the gathering, and in Doctrine and Covenants 128: 1, the Lord approves of this desire and gives further direction how to proceed by colonization, and then cautions the Saints to consult the bishopric and elders about moving. We have in a large measure ignored much of the counsel of the Lord given on this matter. Perhaps the ministry has in some measure been to blame in not making the matter sufficiently plain. Some have advised the Saints to move, others have told them to remain where they were. While all the eldership should assist in this important work, the Lord has placed the greater responsibility on the bishopric. (See Doctrine and Covenants 129: 8.) Without any thought of reflecting on the honesty, integrity, and good motives of the Saints, I will venture the opinion that we have not clearly seen our duties in these matters. If what we have done was just as the Lord intended us to do, the good results would have been more apparent in the "regions round about." In many of the districts the branches have disappeared and only a very small percentage have gone into the stakes. It was from the strong branches and districts that Saints were to move to build up the stakes, but not in such numbers and under such conditions as to entirely break them up. Our heavenly Father's plan is surely a better one than that.

We will now consider the matter of purchasing land in the stakes and in the regions round about. It is useless to give consideration to any other thought than to purchase it with money, as the product of honest labor and sacrifice, any other hope or anticipation will mean disappointment and sorrow, and misery and want and heartaches. The prices are high compared with what they have been in the past, but that is not a barrier of sufficient size to prevent their purchase. If it were so, the Lord would have advised us, but on the contrary, he has directed us to form colonies for the purpose of forming settlements in the regions round about. (Doctrine and Covenants 128.) We can divide our people into three classes for the purpose of showing how the purchase of land can be made.

First: Those who have abundance and can spare some to help in the work.

Second: Those who are in a condition, such as mechanics, laborers, and merchants, to purchase a home under conditions that are favorable to do so.

Third: Those who for various causes are not able, and must have help.

We will consider the conditions in and around Independence, where the price of land is high and where industrial and agricultural conditions can be considered. If the purchase can be made there, it can be done elsewhere. The price of land in Kansas City and in Independence and the surrounding country is no higher than in and near other cities of similar commercial importance, and there are very few cities in the Central West that do not contain Saints who own their homes. Is there any just reason that can be given why an honest, industrious Latter Day Saint can not earn as much money and pay the same prices for property as their Gentile neighbors? and if he avoids the waste, as a result of extravagance, and of conforming to the pleasures and vanities of the world which God forbids, he ought to be able to do much better. People living in a city, engaged in industrial or commercial pursuits, do not need more than an ordinary sized city or town lot, and in Kansas City and Independence they can be purchased at prices ranging from $150 to $1,000, depending on location and the amount of modern improvements in the neighborhood. God's plan is cooperation, which is plainly taught in the revelations, which makes it easier and reduces the cost.

The United Order of Enoch purchased eighty acres in the south part of Independence, and after reserving some for public purposes, there are lots for two hundred and fifty homes that can be purchased at $150, $200, $225, and $275 per lot, on a payment of $25 down and $7.50 per month. What better opportunity could a man ask to secure a home? No honest and honorable man that can labor wants some one else to pay for a home for him. Those who can not purchase a home because of causes that are just, it is our duty to help, and God will not accept our selfishness and covetousness as proper excuses if we fail in our duty. The opportunities will increase and extend to other communities as the work is better understood and Zion develops.

The same principle will govern in the purchase of farm land. A tract of land large enough to make homes for several families can be purchased. Some of our Saints can pay cash; others will need help. The price of land will not prevent the purchase of it, and the Order of Enoch will ultimately be strong enough to purchase in larger tracts, and opportunities will be given to pay for farms on easy payments. The price of land is usually governed by the importance of the markets for its products. The higher the price of land is, the better the markets; so that under normal conditions, the high priced land can be paid for as easily as the low priced land, provided it can be had on favorable terms of payment, which, no doubt, the Order of Enoch will give.

The same business care and good judgment must be used in this as in all other kinds of business. It would be folly to raise corn on land worth three hundred dollars per acre. It must be used for something that will bring greater returns. I know a brother who has had experience and success in raising strawberries. The amount sold has varied from three hundred to eight hundred dollars per acre. I visited a fruit growing section of Nebraska last year, where one man sold sixteen hundred dollars worth of raspberries from eight acres. I formed the acquaintance of a young man recently who has a faithful Latter Day Saint wife, and in four years he paid eight thousand dollars for an eighty-acre farm. It was the product of their own energy. Some of it was earned by renting adjoining land. Another brother who has made a financial success at farming, said he would rather purchase land in a community where it was worth a hundred dollars per acre, than where it was thirty dollars, because, under favorable conditions, he could pay for it just as easy and it would be worth more when it was paid for.

One great and special cause of failure in locating on farms is that many do so who have no knowledge of how to farm. A mechanic will serve four years before he is a journeyman; a lawyer, or physician, will spend several years in preparation before he can practice his profession, and so it is in all callings of life, and great care should be exercised in putting valuable farm property in the hands of inexperienced men. Sometimes we are met with the statement that the land in Jackson County is worth millions of dollars. That is not a hindering cause. If there would be only fifty thousand Saints in the country, we would only need homes for that many, we would not need the whole county. There are now about three hundred thousand people in Jackson County, and could not the same number of honest, industrious Latter Day Saints do as well as those that are in there now? Is it not possible that many of the people in that county may yet be converted to the gospel? Surely the little handful that we are now are not going to carry to completion the great latter day work. And will not that principle extend to the regions round about? We will only need land, homes, and business in proportion to our numbers, and surely we ought to be able to provide homes and means of employment for our own people. To say we can not is to admit that we are inferior to our neighbors, for surely, if they can provide for themselves, and then help us, they must be our superiors.

We are not blind to many of the difficulties that are in our pathway, but is not life's great battle a continual struggle to surmount difficulties? and should we not face them with heroic faith in the God of our temporal and spiritual salvation? With the development of Zionic principles among us, our opportunities to labor in industrial pursuits will become better, the conditions under which we will labor will be more humane, and this will increase our power to do good, and the same rule will apply in agricultural communities. The conditions will be made easier when we live more in harmony with God's divine law.

I see no difficulties that are insurmountable in the purchase of the land. They do not appear to be any larger than what seems to be the common lot of the human race. The Gentile population are buying city, town, and county property, in the same region of country in which he commanded us to purchase, and making themselves good homes and building up in a successful manner, industrial, commercial, and agricultural communities, and are we willing to confess that we can not do as well?

We must not overlook the most important matter in the consideration of this great question, and that is that God will bless his faithful people. He has said, "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise."—Doctrine and Covenants 81:3. To old Israel, he told the conditions of blessing which apply to us now: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Malachi 3:10.

On conditions of obedience the Lord promised to rebuke the devourer for their sakes; he would not destroy the fruits of their ground. Will we not be entitled to the same blessings if we are faithful to our duty? Our heavenly Father has ever been ready to bless his humble, faithful children, and he will do so again in the redemption of Zion. His promise is that he will assist us.

EDWARD RANNIE.

Of General Interest

THE LARGER LIFE.

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, AT CALVARY METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, NEW YORK, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 21, 1912, AND ON SEVERAL OTHER OCCASIONS.

The one thought which I desire to impress upon your minds this morning is set forth in the subject, as announced, "The larger life." I did not come to speak to you as a minister: my work is along other lines. I will not attempt to put my work in the same class with the work of the minister, nor to assert that it approaches the minister's work in importance. Our work is to a great extent determined by environment. Our lives are not largely of our own choosing. The freedom that we have to decide in what part of the vineyard we will work, is not an unlimited freedom. But though my time is devoted to work which I think important, though less important than the work of the minister, I can not withhold from the minister such assistance as I may be able to render in the form of testimony. I know of no moral principle that is binding upon the minister that is not binding upon the layman; and I am so much opposed to the idea of monopoly that I am not willing that the ministers shall monopolize the joy that comes from service in the Christian life. And so this morning I desire to turn your attention for a few moments to what I believe to be a growing understanding of Christ's work.

Christ was a master in addition. He came not to subtract, but to add. We are told that he came "to bring life and immortality to light." Had the people been in darkness? Yes, there was a dispute when he came as to the answer that should be made to the searching question asked by Job: "If a man die shall he live again?" Christ answered the question: he came to bring immortality to light. But he came also to bring life to light, for the world had had but a poor conception of life. Man's vision, even of his existence here in this world, had been but a limited vision. Sometimes the Christian has placed too much emphasis, relatively, upon the future and not enough on the present. People used to read the Bible to find out what it said of heaven; now they read it more to find what light it throws upon the pathway of to-day, for they have learned that where Christ spoke once of the world to come he spoke ten times of man's present relation to his fellow men. People used to search the Scriptures, and then retire from society and in seclusion seek to prepare themselves for future bliss; now they are coming to understand that to walk in the footsteps of the "Man of Galilee" they must go about doing good.

But we not only have the testimony of Paul that Christ came to shed a new and brighter light upon life, as well as upon immortality, but we have Christ's own words—the highest possible authority—that he came "that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

If we were in the midst of a great agricultural community where everybody lived by farming—where the surface of the earth was cultivated and made to bring forth all that was necessary to meet man's physical needs; and some one should come, a stranger, and tell us that we were but scratching the surface, unconscious of hidden wealth; tell us that down a few feet in the ground we could find a vein of coal that would furnish us the heat for steam, and that we could convert it into light and motive power, we would be grateful to him for making known to us the larger wealth that we possessed, but possessed in ignorance. And, possibly, if we did not become too busy mining the coal and too absorbed in the enjoyment of the new wealth that it would bring, we might erect a monument to him, when he was dead, to show that we appreciated the service he had rendered.

And if, after we had for a while enjoyed the addition that this stranger had made to our possessions, another came and said, "You have discovered only two elements of your wealth; there is a third. Go down just a little farther and you will find a mine of gold, a mine from which everyone of you can draw enough of the precious metal to purchase everywhere and always whatever else you need for your welfare"; would we not feel grateful to the second stranger who thus multiplied our wealth still more? I know of no better way of illustrating what Christ came to do. He threw a brighter light upon existence and revealed to us a larger life.

Man first learned of his physical possessions; he was absorbed in the pleasures that came through the body. But long before Christ appeared man had learned that the mind possessed a wealth greater than the body's store. Before the beginning of the Christian era man had learned that the delights of the mind are of a higher order and more permanent than the joys that the body can bring. But Christ came to tell us that there was yet an unexplored field; that there was yet a depth which man had not found; he came to reveal to man the larger, broader, deeper, higher joys of spiritual life. And Christ, when he revealed these new possessions, did not withdraw that which man had learned to know before. When Christ said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," he did not add that we must take this as a substitute for all other things. He did not ask us to compare that which he would give with that which we had before and calculate the difference in value. He said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you."

Is there any excuse for not leading the larger life? Is there any excuse that any man can give for not being willing to make use of all his powers? Shall we allow the materialist to speak of being "more liberal" than we are, when he refuses to consider the most important element in life? I resent the charge of narrowness that the atheist brings against the Christian. The Christian is in a position to enjoy every good thing that an atheist can enjoy, and, in addition, those larger, better things that an atheist can not enjoy. I hope the time is not far distant when the egotism of those who think they are stronger than Christians in mental power, will vanish and when they will no longer assume a superiority over those who allow Christ to lead them into the larger way.

What is there that Christ would take from us that has value in it? Does he deny us the food that we need? No; the Christian is at liberty to eat; aye, not only at liberty, but it is his duty to eat enough to lift his body to the maximum of efficiency. If his passion is service, how can he render the largest service unless the instrument of service is in good order? All that Christ would deny to us in the form of food is excessive food, food that instead of helping, harms; the kind of food that burns the stomach out and makes man old while he is yet young. If Christians find that instead of looking for something to eat they are traveling from one watering place to another trying to improve their digestion, they can not blame Christ. It may be because they pay too much attention to the body and not enough to the soul. Christ requires no physical concessions that are not for our good. There is not a good habit that Christ does not allow. He only prohibits those habits that decrease our strength, and reduce our capacity for work—habits that waste our bodies and make them unfit to be temples for the indwelling of his Spirit.

So, in the intellectual world, what is there in the range of science, or history, or poetry, or art, that Christ forbids us to enjoy? All that he asks is that we shall remember that all these things are means to an end. Where will you find more learning than in the Christian world? Where will you find higher art than in the Christian world? Where will you find sweeter poetry than in the Christian world? All that Christ asks is that we shall train the mind for usefulness—that we shall not glory in our minds merely because we enjoy intellectual pursuits, but because a larger mind can do a larger work—because a more extended vision can be of greater assistance to those who rely upon the educated to see in advance coming dangers and warn against them. All these things are but the means we use for the development of that which is highest in the life and best in man.

Christ does not restrain our activities along any line of legitimate work. On the contrary, he furnishes a higher incentive and a larger purpose. In domestic life, in business life, and in political life—everywhere, the Christian is free to satisfy every worthy ambition, every noble impulse. The only injunction laid upon him is that God shall come first and all other things afterward. But this one injunction does not fetter effort; it simply directs one's energies. It is the compass by which we steer if we would sail the sea of life in safety.

There are no happier homes than the homes of Christendom, and the happiest homes in Christendom are those in which God is enthroned, and in which his will is the supreme law of the household.

Nowhere is business more successfully conducted than in the Christian nations; nowhere does it rest upon a more substantial basis. And in the Christian nations no business men build more surely than those who daily live as in his presence.

Materialism can not deal successfully even with the material things of life. A spiritual viewpoint is necessary if one would see clearly; no one is far-sighted who does not see farther than the eye can reach. Faith is a spiritual extension of the vision, and no one can afford to be without it. Faith also is necessary if one would resist the temptations which, if yielded to, drag men down. In order to successfully withstand the insidious allurements that beset life's way we must understand that wrongdoing automatically recoils upon the wrongdoer; that God is not mocked, and that no human effort can prevent a harvest according to the sowing. One is sure to fall if his only restraint is the fear of being detected by others. There are too many chances for escape from the vigilance of others to make the fear of being caught a sufficient barrier to wrongdoing. No outer guardian can take the place of the inner monitor—the voice that bids the "wicked flee when no man pursueth."

Nowhere does Christ enlarge one's conception of life more than in the conduct of public affairs. Those who exercise authority have special need to give weight to the things that affect the heart. Only when one knows the heart can he judge men, and only when his heart is knit to the hearts of his fellows can he enter into the spirit of brotherhood. A condescending service is not sufficient; man is not fit to serve unless he recognizes that he is serving those who are attached to him by undissoluble ties, and only when he understands Christ's measure of greatness does his ambition become helpful to others as well as to himself. In no other walk in life is it more necessary for one to be guided by conscience than in public affairs, for nowhere else is one watched more constantly or subjected to more continuous criticism. The fear of exposure operates nowhere else more powerfully. In the bearing of great responsibilities he is strongest who has trained himself to measure up to the responsibilities imposed upon him by his Creator, for this being the greatest of responsibilities, responsibilities less weighty are more easily discharged.

Christ is not only a guide and a friend in all the work that man undertakes, but his name can be invoked for the correction of every abuse, and the eradication of every evil, in private and in public life.

There is no nation in which the reviving, regenerating influence of Christ's words and life is not sorely needed—no nation where we can not quote with propriety the lines,

"I know of a land that is sunk in shame
Of hearts that faint and tire,
But I know of a name, a name, a name,
That can set that land on fire."

We spend a great deal of our time taking care of our bodies, and yet it is the body that is subject to sickness—it is the center of disease; it is the thing that causes us most of our trouble. Not only do its pains bring us grief, but its passions and the temptations that come through them darken our lives. And, yet, how we sometimes worship the body! How we pamper it and how we try to adorn it. Christ did not object to man's making every proper use of the body, but he warned us not to spend all our time taking care of it. He pointed to the birds and beasts about us—how God cares for them. He reminded us that even the flowers are more beautiful than man arrayed in all his glory. He constantly tried to turn our thoughts from the things that engross our attention if we think only of physical life. He tried to direct our thoughts toward the higher and more exalted things. Compare, if you will, the spiritual joys with those that are either physical or intellectual. Look back over your lives and count the happy days. Are they the days when your bodily wants were satisfied or the days when your minds were exulting? No, the happy days were the days that you recall because they marked and measured some unselfish contribution to the welfare of others. These are the things that bring us joy. "It is more blessed to give than to receive"; nobody disputes it who ever tried it. It is only those who have not tried who do not know it to be true.

And, besides, he brought the peace that comes with trust, the consolation that comes with a belief in immortality and the moral courage that comes with faith. Christ, I repeat, came to enlarge our lives, to give us more than we could have without him, and the things that he brought were better than the things we had. But not only did he increase the quantity of life and raise the quality of it, but he gave us the permanent things—the things that endure beyond the grave.

As man grows older he yearns to attach himself to that which is eternal. Monuments are reared to the dead that the living may know something of the life that has passed away, and generally these monuments vary in value and in beauty according to the size of the estate that the man left—not in proportion to the good he did or the service he rendered to society, but in proportion to the money that he collected from society. Sometimes we find a monument reared by grateful hands to one whom the world called great; but how many of our ninety millions of people will be known an hundred years after their death by any monument that marks their resting place? How quickly does the world forget us! The sea, closing over its victims, does not hide them much sooner than does the grave on the land. No, our physical presence on earth is not long remembered after we die.

Man can project himself a little farther into the future by the action of his brain. He may help people in an intellectual way, and they, conscious of the assistance they have received, may remember him for a while, for a generation. Or he may live in literature and leave upon the written page something that will inspire those who come after him. But, if you read the countless number of books that are to be found in our great and growing libraries, you will realize how much has been said that might, without loss, have been left unsaid, and how little out of all the books you would reproduce if you are making a collection of things that people must know.

We exaggerate the influence of a mind over minds. We put too much of an estimate on the brain and not enough of an estimate upon the heart. We say that it is wonderful that man's mind has been able to discover a means by which one can stand by the side of a telegraph instrument and through an invisible current that runs along the wire speak to people ten thousand miles away. Is that wonderful? The achievements of the heart are more wonderful. The heart that is full of love for its fellows; the heart that burns to do some great good; the heart that puts into operation some movement for the uplifting of the human race, will speak to hearts that will beat ten thousand years after all our hearts are still. Man's greatest power is exerted when he touches the heart and through it reaches the endless generations of the future.

The heart is the great thing. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Out of the heart are the issues of life." Christ came to make known to men the riches of the human heart, to show us how the heart, the center of love, is also the center of life. He simply gave us love as the rule of life, and then left us to apply it. No other teacher was ever so free from the discussion of details as he. He did not give minute directions as to how we should act in each particular case. He gave us one great rule, the new commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." It was not necessary to give anything more. If we live up to that rule we raise our lives to the plane he pointed out.

In that one commandment Christ presents a condensation of the ten. He sets forth both our duty to God and our duty to our fellow men. In earlier years Christians did not always give sufficient consideration to the second part of the commandment; to-day there are many who give too little consideration to the first part of the commandment; Christ gave to each part its appropriate place. Love of God comes first—without it man can not understand his relations to his brother. The love of his neighbor comes second, but it is indispensable, for it is only through love toward his fellow man that man's love of God can be made manifest. The permanence of these new riches, the abiding quality of this newly discovered wealth—forget this not.

Our bodies will decay no matter whether we take pride in them or not; the seed of death is in them. I have now lived, more than half a century. I used to think that a man was old at fifty; I have changed my views on that subject. I am satisfied that I was entirely mistaken. I have moved old age forward several years. It is still beyond me, and yet I know that the time is coming when I will not be as strong as I am now. I know that my bones will ache after while and my joints become stiff. And I know, too, that those about me will recognize that I can not do what I used to do. Even now, my good wife is cautioning me that pneumonia is more fatal as people get along in years. I know what is coming. I know that year after year with increasing emphasis she will say, "Do not do this, and do not do that; you can not stand it." I know that if I live long enough I will find my flesh wasting away. I will find my nerves less steady, and will realize more and more that I am not an exception to the rule—that I must soon pass through the experience that lies at the end of every life. It is pleasant for me to believe in a resurrection. I have no more doubt that I shall live again than I have that I live to-day. I have no more doubt that I shall in another world meet those whom I have loved than I have that I have known them here. I do not know just what kind of a body I am going to have—and I do not care. I have had seven already, according to the scientists. The scientists say that the body changes every seven years—if that is true, I now have my eighth. I had a baby's body, and then a boy's; then I had a young man's body, and then I changed again and again and again. I do not know what kind of a body God is going to give me in the next world, but I can trust him, and I waste no time speculating. He can give me any of the bodies I have had if he wants to, and I will do the best I can to use it; but I know that he will give me the kind of a body I need. There is an invisible something in a grain of wheat that can discard the body that we see, and from earth and air build a new body, so much like the old one that we can not tell the one from the other, and I know that if that invisible something in that grain of wheat can pass unimpaired through thousands of resurrections, my spirit can clothe itself with a body suited to its new existence when this frame of mine shall crumble into dust.

But I find nowhere in the Bible that Christ speaks of the physical perfections of this world being carried into the next. Neither do I know how much of my mind I can take with me or how much of the knowledge I have acquired. I worked pretty hard in school. My mother taught me until I was ten, and then I went to the public schools until I was fifteen; then they sent me off to an academy for two years, then to a college for four, and afterward to a law school for two, and then they said I was through; and so I commenced to study in the school of life—and I have been studying ever since. I have learned something of science, a good deal of history, a little of poetry—and lots of politics. I do not know what I can carry beyond. I do not know how much of the story of the stars I will need over there. I do not know how much that I have learned of the growth of the rocks will be useful to me there. I do not know whether the new songs will make me forget the ones I have learned here. I do not know much about the future. I am quite sure that there is a great deal that I have spent much time on that I will not need there. I have a large accumulation of information on issues and men that I expect to leave; I am sure I shall not need it over there. I do not know how much of that which is intellectual in me will survive the tomb—and I do not care. I have such faith in the wisdom and love of the God, who made both the heaven and the earth, and am so well satisfied that he made earth more wisely than we could, that I am willing to leave him entire freedom in arranging heaven for me. It is enough for me to know that in our "Father's house are many mansions," and that he has gone to prepare a place for us. That is all I care to know. He did not tell us that we were going to carry any of our intellectual assets into the next world, but he does say that we are going to carry our moral worth—that we have on his authority. You remember where he gave an illustration of the judgment day; and said, "And, then, shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." That is the only permanent thing that is promised. That is the only promise that I have read of anything that we could acquire here being carried with us. He does not say that those who have brought their bodies to a high state of perfection will glitter as the stars over there; he does not say that those who have ornamented themselves here with the richest apparel; that those who have expended their money in making themselves pleasing to the eye—he does not say that these will carry their attractions into the next world. He does not say that those who have devoted themselves to intellectual pursuits, who have studied deep into the mysteries of the earth and the sky, who have dedicated their lives to the search for knowledge—he does not say that the learned shall blaze forth as the planets; but he says that the righteous shall shine as the sun.

If Christ comes to give and to take nothing away; if he comes to add and not to subtract; if he comes to reveal; if he comes to make us know how much richer we are than we thought; if he comes to give us, aye, and to multiply in us, the value of all we had before; if he comes to teach us how our bodies can be made stronger and better fitted for our work, and how our minds can be trained so as to enlarge our capacity for service; and if he comes to show us that the glories of the world into which the soul can lead us are above and beyond the riches of the body and the mind—if he does all this, is there any excuse for not accepting him? If he can add to the quantity of our lives and raise the quality of our lives and then give permanence to that which is best in us, is there any reason why anyone should reject him?

This is the thought I came to present. Christ said, "I am the Way"—the only Way, "the Truth"—the highest Truth "and the Life"—the real Life. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added unto you." That is his promise, and if we accept it; if we conform our lives to it, he gives us the blessed assurance that, when the body has dropped back to the dust, and when the light of the brain has gone out, our virtues will remain—that "The righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."—The Commoner, June 7, 1912.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

A Plain Little Woman.

Just a plain little woman, with plain little ways,
Who "tidies" the parlor with sweeping and dusting;
Whose nights are for resting between two tired days,
Whose faith is abiding, heaven-seeking, God-trusting;
A tired little woman, who puts lads to bed,
And lassies, and tucks them all in with caressing;
Who breathes a sweet prayer over each little head,
And devoutly knows God and the worth of his blessing.

A worn little woman, yet wearing a smile
That resists the attacks of all time upon beauty;
Who is, oh, such a distance from fashion and style,
But always so close upon patience and duty;
Whose days are a struggle of making ends meet,
Whose brow is deep lined with the real cost of living;
Whose soul has been tried fifty years and found sweet,
Who knows naught of getting, but knows all of giving.

A good little woman, who somehow has learned
The lesson of faith that withstands every trial,
Whose wifehood and motherhood nobly have earned
The crown of her glory with thorns of denial;
A real little woman, who gives to the world
Her children, reared up in the ways of right living;
Whose brow is all laureled, whose heart is all pearly
With year in and year out of loving and giving.

A glad little woman for just a dim ray
Of light in this world with its wonder and splendor;
Who is never too tired at the close of her day
To be watchful with love that is wistful and tender;
Who knits and who patches and over her thread
And needle and yarn in the nighttime is bending,
When all of her world and its treasures in bed,
Whose rest ne'er begins and whose tasks never ending.

A plain little woman with plain little ways,
Whose life is, God knows, such a dull little story;
Who mothers a brood all her tired little days—
What measure of treasure shall be hers in glory!
Who knows her as I do, and treasures the smile
That resists the attacks of all time upon beauty;
Whose ways were so far cast from fashion and style,
But, oh, who walked close beside patience and duty?
—J. W. Foley, in New York Times.

A True Incident.

Little Paul was six years old when the following took place. We were seated in the Saints' church at Pittsburg, Kansas. It was the beginning of the evening service, and Paul was sitting up in the front seat with a lot of other little fellows near his age. He got up from his seat and came back to me softly and whispered:

"Mamma, Johnny Ross says there is no Santa Claus. Isn't there?"

Johnny was a whole year older and of course much wiser. He was seven. I replied, "No, son, there is no Santa Claus."

He said nothing more, but went slowly back to his seat. I did not know then how his little heart was aching. I had always regarded the story of Saint Nicholas, while only a myth, to be perfectly harmless, and had let him believe in the dear old imaginary saint. After church he said nothing on the way home, but carried a very pathetic little face.

When we arrived home he said: "Mamma, if there is no Santa Claus, there is no God; and, mamma, I never thought you would tell a story."

I tried to explain it away, but his confidence in me was completely shaken. I said: "Why, son, of course there is a God. You know I have always told you."

"Yes, but mamma, you always taught me there was a Santa Claus, too," he replied.

He could not be induced to say his prayers that night, nor for many succeeding nights. I felt sick at heart. I had always had the confidence of my children, and had always kept my word with them, and I now felt that I had committed a very grievous error. Paul's belief in God seemed to be entirely gone.

Weeks after I was ironing one day and he was sitting meditating. He said: "Mamma, there is no one to pray to." Again I felt condemned, and I began to realize how serious this had become. My other children had never seemed to care when they learned who Santa was; but to Paul's sensitive nature it was far different.

The case seemed to amuse his aunts and other relatives very much. That little Paul had turned atheist seemed funny to them.

This experience taught me a lesson I shall never forget, and days, weeks, and even months went by before his confidence in his mother and his God was fully restored.

I was relating this to one of the priesthood and he asked me if I would not write it, and I told him I would. If the incident above related will benefit parents in regard to teaching only the truth, I shall feel amply repaid for contributing. This happened two years ago, and a brother asked Paul yesterday if he believed in God and he said, "Yes, sir." To-morrow evening the children are to have a Christmas entertainment at the church. Paul is to speak about Jesus, and little Ray Redfern is to sing a song and lots of little folks are to recite. He and little May Gilbert and other little folks are going to be baptized some day, too.

Let us not deceive the children. "Our creed, all truth; our field, the world."

MAGGIE E. CLARK.

PITTSBURG, KANSAS, December 23, 1912.

Requests for Prayer.

J. B. Judd, Linesville, Pennsylvania, asks for the prayers of the Saints that his seven-year-old son be healed of inflammatory rheumatism if it be the Lord's will.

Sister Mary L. Douglass, of California, asks prayers for Brother J. M. Terry who is much afflicted.

Letter Department

ALLIANCE, OHIO, February 12, 1913.

Editor Herald: As I am sending in my renewal for the HERALD, I thought it but fair to you that I should express my appreciation for the good things we are permitted to read and enjoy, which are found in your columns. There are but three Saints in this place. My son, who has but lately come from Michigan; Mary Mason, a good faithful saint; and myself.

The nearest branch is at Canton, presided over by Brother J. K. Bowers, priest. I attend nearly every Sunday. We have meeting and Sunday school in the morning, and Religio in the evening, with an average attendance of about fifteen. While they are few in number, they are striving to make their presence felt. I receive the HERALD and Ensign, and can truly say that the good things they bring to us are refreshing and encouraging. I am trying to let my light shine, and in that work I call on the HERALD and Ensign to help, giving them to those with whom I get into conversation. I hope to so live that in the end I may be classed with the overcomers.

Your brother,

ROBT. A. SMITH.

CLYDE, MISSOURI, February 13, 1913.

Dear Editors: There is no better friend comes to my home than the HERALD. It seems as though it gets better all the time. May God bless the editors. When I read the blessed articles from the brethren in the field, many of whom I know, it brings forth tears of joy, and the Spirit fills my whole soul with peace.

I have never been able to preach the gospel, but I have been engaged in local work, as priest, for nearly thirty years. I never feel better than when I do my duty.

I subscribed for the HERALD thirty-four years ago. At that time I could not read one line of it, but I had come to this country for the gospel's sake and desired to be in touch with it. Brother H. N. Hansen was instrumental in bringing my wife and myself into the fold. We went to church many times over hilly and rough roads in a lumber wagon, but that was not all. We could not understand what was going on. It did not take long before we could understand and realize that we were in good company.

God has blessed us more than we are worthy of. We have a good home. The Lord gave me a noble companion and good children. We have seven children and all are interested in the work. I named my oldest boy Alexander, after A. H. Smith, and desire that he might be a man of God, as he was. I have lived to see him stand in the pulpit and declare the wonderful work.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

ANDREW JENSEN.

DORCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS, 131 Centre Street,

February 12, 1913.

Editors Herald: I inclose clipping from Providence Evening Bulletin of February 6, 1913, the leading paper of that city. The entire resolution passed by the Massachusetts district conference is not inserted, but our position and activities are clearly noted. I believe other districts, if their conferences would pass similar resolutions, and bring them to the attention of the local press, could get similar publicity. I presented the matter in person to the editor and had no difficulty in securing its insertion.

Why do you not bring this idea to the attention of the various districts by an editorial suggesting something of the kind? Now is our opportunity along this line, if ever.

Sincerely yours,

A. B. PHILLIPS.

[The clipping follows.—EDITOR.]

"RHODE ISLANDERS ASK CONGRESS TO PROHIBIT POLYGAMY.—AMENDMENT TO NATIONAL CONSTITUTION IS PROPOSED BY REORGANIZED CHURCH OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.—GENERAL ASSEMBLY MAY AID.

"A resolution favoring the enactment of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the practice of polygamy in Utah and other sections, has been sent to the United States Senators and Representatives from this State, as the result of action taken in Fall River Saturday by a general conference of the Massachusetts District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

"The movement to exterminate alleged unlawful practices of polygamists is expected to be given further impetus in this State in the near future when a resolution will probably be introduced in the General Assembly, seeking this State's indorsement of the proposed amendment to the country's Constitution.

"According to those active in the interests of the Reorganized Church, about twenty States have given their indorsement to the campaign. As the sanction of only two-thirds of the States is necessary for an amendment to the Constitution, those who are working for the change assert their confidence that it will soon be brought about.

"The Massachusetts district conference includes the Bay State and eastern Connecticut, in addition to the Rhode Island, and the Senators and Representatives from those States will also receive a copy of the resolution adopted at Saturday's conference.

"The campaign against Mormonist polygamy was begun by the Reorganized Church June 12, 1852, and resolutions have been persistently adopted ever since by the church. The resolution adopted Saturday is in support of all previous resolutions and especially of the one dated April 17, 1902, reading as follows:

"Whereas, It is currently reported that polygamy is still practiced in Utah and adjacent States and Territories in defiance of the laws of God and the laws of the land; and

"Whereas, the laws enacted by state legislation seem to be inadequate to prevent or prohibit the practice of polygamy without the intervention of Federal enactment; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in conference assembled, favor the enactment of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the practice of polygamy in all the States and Territories under the jurisdiction of the Republic."

SWEET LAKE, LOUISIANA, February 4, 1913.

Dear Herald: I love to read the good letters and other interesting articles. They are a great comfort to me for we seldom have the pleasure of hearing it preached. Brother J. T. Riley has been with us, he preached about seven sermons and we enjoyed them very much. We find Brother Riley a worthy man, and when he left us I was sorry. I was administered to three times while he was here, but God did not see fit to heal me. I felt some better for a while. I feel as though I am still fit for the blessing that I so long have prayed for. Brother Riley seemed to be troubled about my suffering; I hope he was soon comforted.

I ask to be remembered in the prayers of all. I suppose God is giving me all I deserve, but of course I prefer to be well, but I can not have my way.

I just read a good piece in the Ensign of Elder W. H. Deam's. I would like more on the same subject. I do not profess to know all by a long ways, but I do know right from wrong, for I have had experiences in both the sweet and the bitter. I used to feel very bad about taking the bitter, but for the last fifteen months I take it like it was sweet. I used to return some bitter doses, but I would not do so again for anything.

I hope for a better future. Maybe the road will turn after a while, and I will travel the road of health. I hope that I may be able to help in this work sometime in the near future. Sometimes I get very weary, from being shut up so long and being such trouble to my children. We have nothing much to hire help with. The Lord knows all things; he sees our condition.

JOSIE HELMS.

How We Dealt with Knox, Indiana.

We entered the city of Knox, January 14, and immediately began a series of lectures, using Bible prophecy, archæology, ethnology, etc., continuing for twenty-two services, under the auspices of the local Religio. The first step was the printing of five hundred handbills, and their distribution. The Religions dealt with this through their committees. This society makes a fine advance guard. Here at Knox their zeal is commendable. A simple suggestion, and all are in arms to carry it out. The handbills read:

"Lectures! Now in progress at Saints' chapel. Elder _____ of _____ will discuss nightly the following subject: 'Does the Bible prophecy, and American archæology and ethnology, support the contention of the Latter Day Saints with reference to the Book of Mormon?'"

Four little girls constituted the distributing committee. The lectures were fairly attended by nonmembers; the Saints were persistent in attendance. Bue we wished to reach another element. Again the Religio came to the rescue. A social center program was suggested; the president placed the program in our hands. We went out among the orthodox and the nonorthodox, and secured talent; the program was to be literary and musical. No trouble to get them to go on for a musical or literary number. We prevailed on them to come to the Saints chapel, to rehearse. The first seam in the ice developed; soon the block would give way and clear the stream. We submitted program to the city papers, including titles, names, and dates: Sunday, February 2, at 2.30 p. m., no other appointments in the way, the Saints' chapel was crowded from pulpit platform to doors, and many were standing. The Religio paid five dollars for the use of a piano for the occasion. The introductory remarks dealt with the importance of "Social center programs." First, to furnish an attractive point for the young and others, an educational treat instead of association with saloon, and other questionable elements. Second, to break down the lines which divide, and hold us apart, and which destroy sociability, remembering that Christianity is somewhat blank without fellowship and social intercourse. Third, that the auxiliaries of the different churches may take up the good work, and form a "circling circle," making the "social centers" a continuous and fixed weekly attraction and joy. That by cooperation along these lines, a strong pull, a long pull, and all pulling together, effort can accomplish that which can not be attained singly and alone. Fourth, to improve the literary and musical taste of the community.

We conquered. The good Spirit moved the thing. Lines faded away. The Methodist Epworth League and Christian Endeavor Societies were represented in the gathering and charmed with the program. The program was responded to with energy and vim that would do credit to professionals. The fact that it was rendered February 2 is no evidence that it was a "ground hog" affair.

The next week the city papers told all, far and near, that the "Social Center Program" rendered at the Saints' chapel, under auspices of Zion's Religio-Literary Society, was a success in every particular; that every member received strong encores, and expressed the hope that an association would be organized at no distant day to carry the "circling circle" to a finish.

Our point was gained. Many will now help the Saints who were dead to them before, and many will attend Saints' chapel who never have been permitted to attend before. All this by meeting on common ground—agreeing with our adversary quickly. Why not? Can not the Religio afford to take the initiative in the good work of crossing the line and eliminating the frost-crystals, kindling the warming and glowing flame of sociability? Why, we remarked to the audience that if our heavenly Father would treat us as we treated each other, he never would visit us. He never would come to see us. The social center is yet the talk of the town.

We resumed work here, in our ministry, last Saturday evening, and at 3.30 p. m. Sunday we repaired to Yellow River and buried two young men in the waters of regeneration. Their ages were sixteen and seventeen years. They are courageous brethren. More are close to the "doorpost of wisdom," and can read them as saying in their hearts: "Al-most persuaded."

The Saints at this place have had an uphill march all the way, and fighting a cold, clammy element of opposition, such as vexed the soul of righteous Lot day by day. They have remained true to the standard, however. The Sunday school is doing fine work, as also the Religio, and they are rejoicing, at least in anticipation, that a brighter day soon will dawn for them. So mote it be.

Hopefully,

FEBRUARY 18, 1913.

S. W. L. SCOTT.

Extract from Letters.

Brother W.-H.*Greenwood, 23 Cicero Street, Moston, Manchester, England, writes that "the outlook for the work in the British Isles Mission for the coming conference year is bright and encouraging."

Brother E. B. Hull, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: "A special evangelistic service is being held at the First Church, Elders H. O. Smith and W. E. LaRue being the principal speakers. Much interest is manifested; the church is well filled every night."

News from Missions

Copenhagen, Denmark.

As your readers have not recently been burdened with news from this corner of the Lord's great vineyard, I will send you a few lines lest it might be feared that we are either dead or asleep, or have forgotten the many of the household of faith, whom we are confident are interested in the work in these lands.

I would be pleased to report great progress and large gathering, but that is not my privilege. The work in Scandinavia moves only slowly, and it meets with so many hindrances and obstacles that it requires a goodly degree of faith and much perseverance to continue the conflict; yet having the assurance that our cause is good and acknowledged of God, we must not think of surrendering or of giving up the battle.

I read with much interest the communication from Brother R. May in a late HERALD, from which I learn that the prejudice that our brethren in the British Isles have to contend with is akin to what we meet with in the Scandinavian countries, as well as in all other places where Brighamism has flourished for any length of time.

When it is known that this city has been the headquarters of the Utah people for their mission in Scandinavia for more than sixty years, and that Denmark has furnished more converts to that institution, in proportion to population, than any other country in the world, it can only be expected that the blighting influence of that apostasy must be felt here. It makes it difficult to get decent and respectable people to listen long enough to be informed that the church presided over by Joseph Smith from 1830 to 1844 was in doctrine and practice in direct opposition to the abominations of Utah, and that they are condemned in plainer and stronger terms in the Book of Mormon than by any statement found in the Bible.

Much of my effort has been directed to show up the Utah apostasy, and in contradistinction thereto to point out the purity of the doctrines of the original church, and also of the Reorganization as the true and legal succession, and in that line have had fair success in getting a hearing.

With a knowledge of both the past and present of Brighamism, one could become quite popular and gain many friends, in these countries, by just exposing their wicked and corrupt doctrine and practices, but when we endeavor to stand by the good and the truth pertaining to the latter day work we become unpopular at once, and the masses want to hear no more.

We are handicapped and at a disadvantage every way, with but very little opportunity to correct any false and slanderous report that is published against us. Recently, one of the leading newspapers of the city contained a long article from a Reverend Harold Jensen Kent, a Danish Lutheran minister in Salt Lake City, Utah, in which he endeavors to enlighten the readers in regard to Mormonism. Like many other writers upon the subject, he was not content to tell of what he himself knew and had learned by actual experience, but he sent out as information that the Prophet Joseph Smith was a wicked and corrupt man, and licentious in the extreme; and that during the last two years of his life he had married twenty-three young women. This is read by many thousands of people, while our best and most energetic efforts to correct the slander will reach comparatively few.

This reverend gentleman, of course, has his information from the Utah Mormons, whose testimony he perhaps would question upon other matters, but when they testify that Joseph Smith introduced and practiced the abomination, it is accepted as a sweet morsel, worthy of a write up to be sent broadcast even unto other lands. I wish Brother Chase, or some of the brethren in Salt Lake City, would call on the gentleman; perhaps a little information would enable him to see that he does not know it all, as yet.

Conditions looked a little more favorable in this city last summer, but evil influences have disturbed our prospects to quite an extent. We hope, however, that this may be overcome and that those who endure the trial shall be made stronger thereby. Our meetings of late have been a little better attended, and we hope under the blessings of the Almighty that truth may yet be firmly planted here.

Brethren P. Muceus and T. O. Strand are in Christiania, Norway; O. W. Okerlind and O. Johnson are laboring in Stockholm and vicinity, Sweden; J. H. Hanson at Goteborg, Sweden, and C. A. Swenson at Helsingborg, also in Sweden. The brethren are all doing what they can to advance the cause, but with a little help to enable them to hire halls for preaching they could accomplish more than they are, and would enjoy their work better.

The conference year will soon be at a close, and we will be asking, What has the harvest been? Whoever can look back and say truthfully, "I have done what I could" need have no regrets, whether his sheaves be few or many. The All-Seeing Eye alone can judge as to our faithfulness or otherwise, and not until the great day of accounts will the records be fully known.

Our thoughts are turning homeward, and Sister Hansen, especially, thinks she can not stand it in this foreign land much longer. We hope to be able to reach home in March, and if all is well, to meet with the Saints at General Conference.

In hope of victory,

JANUARY 31, 1913.

H. N. HANSEN.

Iowa.

The work of God is moving on towards perfection and in a healthy way. In the way of spiritual advancement and financial support to the church, advancement can be seen in several ways.

The last conventions and conference were the most spiritual and peaceful that it has been my privilege of attending in many years. Whatever of a divisive spirit was present, it was not shown in the proceedings of the assemblies. Officers were elected for the Sunday school association and the Zion's Religio-Literary Society of the district.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths has been in the district a short time, and will make us another visit ere he goes to the quorum meetings of the Twelve, which convene March 15. His visit has done much good in setting in order and sustaining the work of the local and general officials who have been laboring here for some time, and those who are now in charge. It has to a large extent removed all uncertainty, and cause for lack of confidence in those whom God has by law placed in the church to direct the work and advise with the Saints to maintain peace and unity. His lectures on his mission in Palestine were much enjoyed, but did not result in the good that his instruction did on the law and usages of the church.

In the Des Moines Branch there has been a spiritual awakening, and two have been called to priesthood duties of late, one being ordained, Brother Joseph G. Carpenter, to the office of priest, and at this ordination the power of God was manifest in a very marked manner, approving the calling. The auxiliary societies of this branch are moving in a satisfactory manner to the accomplishment of greater things for the good of the young.

The work at Perry is moving towards the gathering in of others, some being interested, and request for services, which will be supplied soon. Many calls for preaching, more than can be filled by the few that we now have to do service.

Brother Reiste was at Runnells when last heard from, and some interest attended his efforts. Brother Turpen was called home on the account of death of a relative. On the account of my companion's condition she can not be left alone, and I have been confined to the city most of the time since the winter set in. I find much more than one can do within the limits of the city of Des Moines, with what I can do with the pen in various parts of the mission. The work done is not what would be called public services, but in a private way and impersonal visitations. I find that in this way oftentimes the most good is done. Some parties called up by phone on yesterday, wishing a personal interview in regard to the general subject of "Mormonism," or of the Latter Day Saints, and wished to know our position and the special differences between us and the church in Utah. This is a healthy omen.

J. F. MINTUN.

DES MOINES, February 19, 1913.

News from Branches

Oakland, California.

The little church in Oakland had a good attendance Sunday morning and evening. Both sermons were good, and both men were under the weather, but they got up and preached. Brother Lincoln had a bad cold. He managed with God's help to pull through.

You may be surprised to learn that William H. Kelley was at his post Sunday night with the gospel story. He looks fine, and with God's help he managed to pull through. He is not very strong, but we hope that both men will be better in the future.

Your brother in Christ,

HARRY TUPPER.

Another New Church for Philadelphia.

Ground was broken for the Second Philadelphia Church on Sunday, February 16, at 4 p. m. The exercises were in charge of District President A. D. Angus and his associates. Special hymns were sung and music by the orchestra from the Saints' church. H. O. Smith, of Fall River, Massachusetts, offered the invocation; W. E. LaRue, of Brooklyn, New York, delivered an appropriate address, followed by the breaking of ground by Bishop John Zimmermann; W. W. Smith made the dedicatory prayer and E. B. Hull pronounced the benediction.

This new church is the result of an effort made by the Philadelphia Saints beginning in February, 1911. At this time two members of the branch, O. T. Christy and Ethan Wilson visited the Beacon Light Mission located in the north-eastern section of the city. This mission was owned and run by two ladies. They not having a regular preacher invited our people to speak for them. William Anderson and W. W. Smith willingly responded, preaching for them from time to time until May 21, 1911, when the branch assumed entire control by renting the building and soon after buying the furniture. U. W. Greene, missionary in charge, desiring to help the Philadelphia Saints in this special effort, sent E. B. Hull to Philadelphia to labor in this mission. Regular services were inaugurated, thousands of tracts and pamphlets were scattered throughout the locality, and a Sunday school was established, which now has an enrollment of 150, with an average attendance of over one hundred. Preaching and prayer services are well attended; a children's service is held every Sunday evening at 6.30; this service has been a success; about seventy-five attend each session. The children are taught facts by object lessons, good habit talks, Bible stories, etc.

On December 23, 1912, the Saints agreed to buy ground and build a church to house the mission, for their present quarters are entirely too small to accommodate those desiring to attend the services.

A suitable piece of ground (size 72 feet wide by 53 feet deep), was secured on E Street, above Indiana Avenue, facing one of the city parks. The new building will be constructed of granite and brick, the main room being 40 feet wide by 52 feet deep. Outside of the basement and upper room will be a tower which includes the main entrance to building, with heating plant underneath. The toilet rooms and coal pocket are also outside of the main rooms. The entire structure, including the ground, will cost about $20,000. It is expected that the basement will be finished some time in April; the upper story will be finished when the crowds attending the services warrant the full completion of the building. Present indications are that the Beacon Light Chapel will grow and be a factor for good in the neighborhood, gathering in the honest in heart and spreading the tidings of great joy to all people who are hungering and thirsting for God's truth.

E. B. HULL.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

EASTERN IOWA.—Those who were elected delegates to represent the Eastern Iowa District at the next General Conference are the following: John Heide, Sister Mira Heide, Warren Turner, Sister Martha Roush, James McKiernan, J. B. Wildermuth, Sister Dora Wildermuth, F. B. Farr, C. G. Dykes, Sister Effie Dykes, William Stoll, Sister Cora Hart, Wesley Richards. Mrs. Melvina Gray, district secretary.

GALLANDS GROVE.—District conference of Gallands Grove District (Iowa) convened at Dow City, Iowa, February 7, 1913, at 9.30 a. m. Gomer Griffiths gave an interesting and instructive talk from a chart on parliamentary law. At 10.45 a. m. first-business session convened with Presidents C. J. Hunt and J. L. Butterworth in charge. Gomer Griffiths and C. Scott, with presidency of district, were chosen to preside; Sister C. J. Hunt was chosen secretary. The presiding officers were authorized to appoint ushers and determine time and order of services. Branch reports were read from Deloit, Salem, Harlan, Gallands Grove, Cherokee, Dow City, and Mallard. No reports from Auburn, Lanesboro, and Coalville. Membership of district, 1,021. Ministerial reports were read from Elders W. A. Smith, C. Smith, C. J. Hunt, J. L. Butterworth, A. R. Crippen, A. Jackson, Frederick Hansen, George Hoisington. Priests: J. T. Spence, C. W. Winay. Teachers: Samuel Dixon, W. W. Reeder. Patriarch C. E. Butterworth, A. H. Rudd and E. R. Butterworth, auditing committee, reported Bishop Hunt's books correct, with balance on hand of $223.78. Reports were read from secretary of Sunday school and Religio association; also report from Floy Holcomb, field worker in the interest of the Woman's Auxiliary. Financial report of district secretary was read and accepted, and a collection of $2.92 taken to defray expense of secretary. Mallard was chosen as place for holding next conference; the date being left with district officers. They announced it would be held June 14 and 15. Delegates to General Conference were chosen as follows: James Spence, C. E. Butterworth, W. A. Smith, James Pearsall and wife, J. L. Butterworth, James Bullard, C. W. Winey, C. J. Hunt, Frederick Hansen, Burton L. McKim, C. Scott, Mrs. C. J. Hunt, M. W. Hartshorn, Charles Carmichael, John Jordison, W. C. Jordison, Nellie Hall, J. W. Bullard, Pearl Bullard, Samuel Dixon, Alfred Jackson, A. H. Rudd and wife. Delegates authorized to cast majority and minority vote. The recommendation and request of the Deloit Branch, that Carl W. Winey be ordained to office of elder, was granted. The presidency of the conference were authorized to appoint committee to draft resolutions of condolence in behalf of the bereaved family of W. W. Whiting, who labored long and faithfully in the Gallands Grove District. The committee appointed were C. E. Butterworth, F. R. Schaffer, C. Scott. Bishop Hunt's report was read as follows: On hand at last report, $214.45; received $1,005.30; expended $1,137.72; on hand, $82.03; Sanitarium fund received and paid Bishop Kelley, $1.50; Children's Home fund received and paid Bishop Roberts, $3.00; Graceland College fund received and paid J. A. Gunsolley, $27.90; received for United Order of Enoch, $10.00; paid Bishop $5; Lamanite mission fund received $2.25; paid Bishop Kelley $1. Scandinavian mission fund received and forwarded to Bishop Kelley, $10.50. The last hour of the session was given to round table talk in charge of Gomer Griffiths. Sunday morning was observed as a time of fasting and prayer in behalf of Romanan Wight. The prayer service was spiritual, two prophecies and one tongue being given. Preaching by W. A. Smith, G. T. Griffiths, C. Scott. At the prayer service Carl W. Winey was ordained to office of elder under the hands of Gomer Griffiths and C. Scott. The conference was pleasant and peaceful throughout, and profitable instruction and kindly counsel given by Brother Griffiths were much appreciated by all. Mrs. C. J. Hunt, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

GALLANDS GROVE.—Religio association convened at Dow City, Iowa, February 7, at 10.45 a. m. The general routine of business was transacted. Delegates appointed to General Convention were: C. E. Butterworth, J. W. Bullard, Pearl Bullard, Nellie Hall, Edith Bullard, C. J. Hunt, Etta Hunt, L. O. Myers, A. H. Rudd, May Rudd, Earl Hoisington, Carl E. Anderson, John Jordison, W. C. Jordison, C. L. Carmichael, Samuel Dixon, T. N. Franklin, Zenas Sheldon, A. R. Crippen, Myrtle Myers, W. W. Reeder, with instructions to cast minority and majority vote in case of division. Officers elected were: President, Lace O. Myers; vice president, Earl Hoisington; secretary, Floy Holcomb; member of library board, Raymond Butterworth; home department superintendent, Grace Baughman; treasurer, Fred F. Jackson. Sunday school association met at 2.30 p. m., for business. Delegates, in addition to those appointed to represent the Religio are: Abbie Winey, Burton McKim, Ora Butterworth, J. L. Butterworth, Vernon Spence, Ada Bunnell. Following officers were installed: Superintendent, C. J. Hunt; assistant superintendent, Carl E. Anderson; secretary, Floy Holcomb; treasurer, Vinnie Hatch; home department superintendent, Nellie Hall. During convention a joint Religio and Sunday school prayer service was held. Also two interesting stereopticon lectures on Palestine were given by Elder G. T. Griffiths. Adjourned to meet at the call of the executive committee. Floy Holcomb.

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.—Joint convention of the district Sunday school and Religio for the Southern District of Wisconsin convened at Madison, Wisconsin, February 15, 1913, with Superintendent and President B. C. Flint in charge. Little business outside of the election of officers was transacted. Eight schools and two locals reported. The work in the district seems to be advancing. Officers chosen for the ensuing year: Sunday school: Superintendent, Ezra Dutton; assistant superintendent, George Burton; secretary, Charles Hoague, jr.; treasurer, Sister Ida Sperry; librarian, Roy Farber; home department superintendent, Sylvia Dennis. Religio: President, Roy Farber; vice president, H. J. Archambault; secretary, Sister Sylvia Dennis; treasurer, Ezra Dutton; home department superintendent, Julia Dutton; superintendent gospel literature, C. C. Hoague, jr. Adjourned subject to the call of superintendent of Sunday school and president of Religio. C. C. Hoague, secretary Sunday school; Sylvia Dennis, secretary Religio.

Conference Notices.

Southern Missouri district conference will convene with the Springfield Branch, at the church, Dale and Kellet, on Saturday, March 22, at 10 a. m., continuing over Sunday, the 23d. All branch and ministry reports should be sent to the undersigned; also branch officers should send or bring their branch assessments of $1 to each conference to help defray the district expenses, which are now in arrears. We hope to see a good representation of the district present, as important matter is to be presented to this conference. Bring the Spirit of the work with you and be on time. Benjamin Pearson, secretary, Tigris, Missouri.

Convention Notices.

Annual convention of the Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service will convene at New Philadelphia, Ohio, during the district conference, which will be held March 1 and 2. We trust each local will be represented. Come prepared to help on this much-needed work. A collection for the benefit of the district fund will be taken up. Mrs. F. J. Ebeling, district secretary, Willoughby, Ohio.

Quorum Notices.

To the First Quorum of Teachers of the Southeastern Mission: You are requested by the president of the quorum to report by March 10 to me all labors done since October 25, 1912. Please be prompt in sending in these reports.

W. H. DRAKE, Secretary.

MCKENZIE, ALABAMA.

Notice to the Elders of Independence Stake not now in Quorums: You are requested to meet in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church Saturday evening, March 8, at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing the First Kansas City Quorum of Elders.

G. E. HARRINGTON, Stake President.

NOTICE TO THE FIRST SEVENTY.

I have this day sent blanks for reporting to the quorum, which I trust you will not mislay, and that your reports will be made out and mailed to me soon after the first of next month. In the remarks please give me information whether you are occupying as branch or district president, or as bishop's agent, or counselor to a bishop, or whether you occupy any official position with the Sunday school, Religio, or social purity societies.

The first meeting this year will be April 4, unless a later notice appears between now and March 15. Watch for special notices.

If any fail to receive the blank for reporting by March 1, notify me by card and I will send you another. I have sent them to the latest addresses that you have given to me.

The officers will send out a special notice between now and March 20 relative to some of the important measures that we must consider this year.

Respectfully,

J. F. MINTUN,

Secretary of First Seventy.

DES MOINES, IOWA, 1205 Filmore Street.

General Conference at Lamoni.

Do you expect to attend? If so, read the reception committee's notice in last week's issue and write to the secretary at once, so we may know who we will have to prepare for. This is important if you wish us to find a place for you.

C. I. CARPENTER, Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, February 21, 1913.

Address.

Elder W. H. Greenwood, 23 Cicero Street, Moston, Manchester, England.

Gospel Literature Superintendents.

The time for reporting is at hand, and all district superintendents and good literature committees outside of districts should make a full report of work done for the period ending December 31, 1912. We have sent report blanks to all whose names and addresses we have. Those that have received blanks and those that have not, should report at the earliest possible date in order that I may make proper report to the General Convention in April. Please do not delay this matter. Report whether you have done anything or not.

HARVEY SANDY, General Superintendent.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, 1007 Vine Street.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Duties of Branch Officers.—The Teacher	201
A Correction	203
Notes and Comments	203
HYMNS AND POEMS	203
ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
New Openings, by E. E. Long	204
Equality, Part 1, by J. W. Gilbert	206
Thinking about Zion, by Edward Rannie	208
OF GENERAL INTEREST:
The Larger Life	211
MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN	216
Maggie E. Clark	217
LETTER DEPARTMENT
Robert A. Smith—Andrew Jensen—A. B. Phillips—Josie Helms—S. W. L. Scott—Extracts from Letters.	219
NEWS FROM MISSIONS
H. N. Hansen—J. F. Mintun.	220
NEWS FROM BRANCHES
Harry Tupper—E. B. Hull.	220
MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.

Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.

When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.

If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.

All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.

All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.

Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.

For advertising rates apply to the business department. Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter. Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Resolutions of Condolence.

To the conference of the Gallands Grove District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints: We your committee appointed to draft a resolution of condolence on the death of Elder W. W. Whiting, who died recently at Independence, Missouri, beg leave to report as follows:

"Elder W. W. Whiting was baptized into Christ at Deloit, Iowa, many years ago, and was an active minister in the Gallands Grove District for years. He served as president of the Gallands Grove District for a considerable length of time, and was a successful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

"Elder Whiting was a loyal husband, a loving father, a true Christian, a worthy neighbor, and a good citizen; therefore be it

"Resolved, That in this matter we bow in humble reverence to the divine mandate, and hereby extend to his wife and children and other relatives, our condolence, and commend them to the love, sympathy, care, and directing power of almighty God, in whom they trust.

"Most respectfully submitted,

"CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

"F. R. SCHAFER.

"COLUMBUS SCOTT."

Sunday, February 9, 1913, at the close of the afternoon session, the above preamble and resolution was adopted by the unanimous vote of the conference, with the request that a copy be sent to the family, and that it be published in the HERALD and Ensign.

In gospel bonds,
C. J. HUNT, President.
MRS. C. J. HUNT, Secretary.

Died.

MCDONALD.—Brother Wendell O. McDonald, after a lingering illness died at Sacramento, California, February 11, 1913, at the age of 18 years and 5 months. He leaves a mother, Sister Florence N. McDonald; two sisters, Sister C. W. Samuelson and Sister Benjamin Bean; also two brothers, I. J. and A. V. McDonald, to mourn their loss. Funeral from Saints' chapel February 12, sermon by T. J. Lawn.

DAVIS.—Emma Jane Davis, was born at Cornwall, England, December 14, 1874; baptized June 19, 1882, London England. Her former husband, Elder R. B. Howlett, preceded her some three years ago. Of this union there remain seven children, three sons and four daughters. Elder H. B., of Fall River; William, of Boston; Timothy, of Detroit; Annie, of Sact; Blanch, of Cleveland; Emma and Bessie, of London. Her husband feels keenly her sudden demise. Of her it can be said, A mother in Israel has left us, true to the faith, to rest from her labors, to await the resurrection morn. Funeral service at the house and sermon in the church in charge of Elder William Fligg.

LAUGHLIN.—Garrett G. Laughlin died Sunday, December 15, 1912, at home near Oskaloosa, Iowa, from cancer, at the age of 42 years, 10 months, and 1 day. He was married to Miss Bessie Richeson, by whom he was father of two children, both of whom with their mother are living to comfort each other. He leaves a mother, one brother, James E. Laughlin, and Mrs. Adda Davis, a sister. He was baptized when about fourteen years of age, and has since lived a devoted life, using influence and means to build up God's kingdom. Funeral services in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Oskaloosa, by Elder J. F. Mintun. He was held in great respect, as shown by the numbers present and the help rendered when the house was burned where his body lay the night before the funeral. Buried in the cemetery at Oskaloosa.

PROCK.—William A. Prock died December 7 at his home in Des Moines, Iowa, of Bright's disease, at the age of 52 years, 8 months, and 21 days. He was the husband of Sister Julia Anway Prock. Although a friend of the faith, and sought the Lord for help through the ordinance when sick, through which he had received blessings, yet he delayed to obey. Funeral near the home, after which he was taken to a near-by cemetery for burial.

ANNIS.—Sister Adaline A. Annis died at the residence of her daughter, Lucy C. Doss, Perry, Iowa, as a result of heart trouble, at the age of 83 years and 23 days. Her husband and three children had preceded her, leaving one of the immediate family to mourn her departure. She was baptized about eighteen years ago, and in every way that she could she sought by her life and means to advance the interests of the church. She was greatly loved by all who knew her. Funeral services at the home by Elder J. F. Mintun.

WILLIAMS.—Joseph Hyrum, the infant son of Brother and Sister Joseph Williams, of Des Moines, Iowa, died January 26, 1913. Cause of death unknown. He was 1 month and 12 days of age, and had been sick about five days. Funeral service at the home, after which he was taken to Runnells, Iowa, and there another service was held at the church by James E. Laughlin. Service at the home was conducted by J. F. Mintun.

FETTER.—Sister Anna C. Fetter, wife of William C. Fetter, of Des Moines, Iowa, died January 25, 1913, of typhoid fever, after a brief illness of about two weeks. She leaves husband and five children of the immediate family, one son having preceded her in death. She was baptized by Elder E. C. Brand in 1904, and was an exceptionally devoted sister. Though limited in ability her whole desire was to do more. Funeral services at the Saints' chapel in Des Moines, conducted by Elder J. F. Mintun, after which she was taken to McDivitt's Grove Methodist Episcopal Church, where a short service was held at the request of some of her old neighbors. Burial at that place.

HALL.—Brother John Hall died Thursday, February 6, 1913, at his home in Boone, Iowa. He was born June 2, 1850, near Tipton, Indiana, coming with his parents to Iowa when he was about two years of age. He had been an engineer on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad for about thirty-three years. He was married to Miss Lydia Scovel, who survives him, August 24, 1868. He was baptized September 25, 1898, at Woodbine, Iowa, by President Joseph Smith. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss. Thus has passed another noble soul to the great beyond. The railroad company showed its appreciation by running a special train from Boone to Dunlap, Iowa, where he was buried. Services at his home on February 9, by Elder J. F. Mintun.

GAULTER.—At Lamoni, Iowa, February 14, 1913, of cancer, Elder Lewis Gaulter, aged 95 years, 3 months, 16 days. He was born in La Rochelle, France, October 28, 1817. His parents desiring that he should grow up in America, bound him out to a friend, the captain of a trading ship, who lived at Bath, Maine, in 1827, when the boy was not yet ten years old. He was on the sea in the summer, but each winter attended school at Bath. At eighteen he became a full seaman, and later, for many years, was first mate of the ship. They did business between American ports and the ports of England, Wales, France, and the West Indies. In 1843-44 their ship, the Swanton, took two loads of Latter Day Saints from Liverpool to New Orleans, on their way to Nauvoo, before there were railroads to take people overland. On the second trip he became so convinced by the sermons preached on shipboard and by seeing the results of their faith, that he was baptized after their arrival in New Orleans, in February, 1844. In July, 1845, he gave up his sea life and went to Nauvoo to be with the church. There in December, 1845, he married Miss Harriet Morgan. Their union is now broken by death after sixty-seven years of companionship. Notwithstanding the evils they saw and felt, they knew the gospel was true, so in 1850 went to Utah. There they had trying experiences, among them being the entire destruction of the crops by grasshoppers in 1853, when the famine distressed everybody. Cattle died of starvation and some had to eat the flesh from the bones in order to live. Others came through with less suffering, though old wheat sold as high as five dollars a bushel, and few could afford bread of any kind. In 1864 they moved to Malad, Idaho, and in 1866 believed the message of the Reorganized Church and united with it. In 1870 they went to Gallatin County, Montana. There he labored in ministry work, and as agent for Bishop I. L. Rogers in collecting and disbursing church money. In 1882 the family came to Lamoni and remained. Their four sons and seven daughters all reached maturity, but later there died Sister Sarah Witter, Sister Lizzie Sorenson, Sister Julia Moore, Phebe (unmarried), and Loren. The six living are Lewis, William, Alexander, Mrs. Harriet McManus, Sister Emma Cochran, and Sister Louise Stafford. All but the latter (who lives in Oklahoma) were present at their father's death. Brother Gaulter made a good record for honesty and integrity; a heritage of much value to his posterity. Sister Gaulter is past 85 years but she bears up nobly under the trial. Brother A. S. Cochran had charge of the funeral services; Brother H. A. Stebbins preached the sermon, and Brother R. M. Elvin offered prayer at the grave.

SCOTT.—Mariam Ellen Baggerly was born December 29, 1829, in Wood Township, Clark County, Indiana; died December 7, 1912, aged 82 years, 11 months, and 7 days. She was married to John A. Scott, at the age of nineteen. To this union were born six children: Columbus, now of Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. Lizzie Fisher, Centralia, Washington; America I. Thompson, Alexander, Kansas; Mrs. Lucetta Sinclair, Coldwater, Michigan; S. W. Leonard, also of Coldwater, and Cynthia O., who died August, 1892. Her husband died November 11, 1884. She was baptized into the church, together with her husband and two elder daughters, by President William W. Blair early in June, 1870, in Floyd County, Indiana. She remained faithful to the gospel covenant to the end. Both her husband and self lived to see all their children with them in the church. Her husband, John A. Scott, had been an ardent advocate of the gospel as restored in 1829, from the time of their marriage till his death, although they had been members of the Christian Church till 1870, when they were baptized into the Reorganized Church. She removed to Michigan and settled at the city of Coldwater, in May, 1890, where she died, after an illness of several months from bronchitis. Funeral December 10, 1912, interment at Quincy, Michigan. Sermon by Elder Samuel Stroh, of Coldwater, Michigan. Her dying words were: "Let me go; my soul is weary of the chain that binds it here."

POWELL.—Jane Morgan was born in Pooldee, Monmouthshire, England, September 3, 1840. Her parents died when she was but a small child; when seven years of age she came to this country with her two brothers and two sisters, and was tenderly cared for by an uncle and aunt of whom she always spoke in the highest terms. On January 15, 1859, she was united in marriage with William Powell, in Ohio. To this union twelve children were born, seven of whom are living. The husband died some thirteen years ago. She was a member of the Reorganized Church, having been baptized at Malad, Idaho, October 15, 1866; died February 16, 1913, at her home near Ravenwood, Missouri. Sermon by Elder E. S. Fannon; interment in Sweet Home Cemetery.

Did You Ever Spend a Winter in the South?

Did you ever visit the many delightful resorts along the Gulf Coast?

Did you ever go motoring along Florida's beaches?

Did you ever go touring through scenic Cuba?

Have you ever enjoyed the many delights of a trip through Southern Texas?

Have you ever traveled through Old Mexico where the cold northern winter is turned to balmy summer?

Why Not Go This Winter?

There are special winter tourist rates to all principal points. The cost is low. The climate is positively ideal. The resorts are numerous. The hotels are good. The opportunities for all forms of outdoor sports are almost without limit. And the trip will bring the most pleasure, if you go via the Burlington.

Come in and let's talk it over. If I haven't detailed information about the attractions of the particular place you wish to visit, I can and will get them for you in a hurry.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent

C. E. & Q. R. R.

Order all your books through the Herald Publishing House. It is just as easy for you to do so and it helps us materially.

WHAT IS MAN, by Elder J. R. Lambert. This topic is an absorbing one and especially so when handled in such a forceful and logical manner as it is in this book. You can't afford not to be acquainted with its contents.

BOOK OF MORMON. Danish edition.

(Mormon's Bog) just received.

Order ¼ leather edition, $1.00.

Order leather, board, $1.25.

Order leather, limp, $1.50.

Order leather, flexible, $2.50.

COMPENDIUM OF FAITH is a work for the student. It is a collection of texts taken from the standard church works on a great many subjects. Also a splendid brief history of the Apostasy.

Order No.

141 cloth.....75c

141 ½ leather.....$1.00

174 flexible.....$1.50

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68 $\frac{3}{4}$  Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67 $\frac{3}{4}$  Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,500.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good family business. Address, 8-tf VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, 6-tf Independence, Mo.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant.

No. 216, cloth . . . . .75c

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right.

Cloth No. 243 . . . . .75

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children. Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success. No. 248a, cloth . . . . .75

THE OLD JERUSALEM GOSPEL. This book by Elder Joseph Luff has become one of our best and widest known and read book. There is a reason for this. Get the book and read it and you will not need to have anyone tell you why. Order No. 248, cloth . . . . .75

A GERMAN EDITION of a Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Just issued. Order No. 280b. Paper, 25c.

JOSEPH SMITH DEFENDED, by Elder J. W. Peterson. A useful book for not only the investigator but also for the more mature student. It sweeps away many of the false ideas regarding the prophet. Order No. 241, cloth . . . . .50

German Edition of the Book of Morimon (Das Buch Mormon.) Order No. 88a. Cloth, $1.00.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 5, 1913

NUMBER 10

Editorial

DUTIES OF BRANCH OFFICERS.

IV.—THE DEACON.

FROM THE BIBLE.

In Philippians 1: 1 Paul mentions the deacons who were in the church at Philippi. This, with other references, shows that they held an official position in the New Testament church.

In the third chapter of 1 Timothy some of the qualifications of a deacon are stated:

The deacons must be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless. . . . Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

From this it would appear that while the deacons need not be long-faced, gloomy hypochondriacs, they should be sober-minded and of firmly established character,—not giddy, or light-minded, or clownish. They should not be greedy, for they are to carry the bag of the local church, and so should not be beset by greed, which might lead to theft, or by stinginess, which might interfere with a generous distribution of aid to the needy.

They are not to be double-tongued, for the deacon (as a standing officer in the church, exercising a certain watchcare, and keeping order in the congregation, as well as visiting those in need, and assisting the teacher in handling cases of difficulty between members, or between members and the branch) will see things in the course of his ministry that will furnish rare material for gossip. He is to be discreet and keep his mouth closed about such things excepting when the right time comes for him to speak.

Men are to be proved before they are elevated to the office of deacon. But having been found blameless they may occupy therein when called. This is a provision that as a rule holds good regarding other offices as well. The church has a right to scrutinize the records of men to ascertain fitness and worthiness before they are set apart to special offices.

It has been argued by some that single men can not be deacons, because Paul says: "Let the deacons be the husband of one wife." But such interpretation is not justified by Paul's language. It is evident that he meant that a deacon should be husband of not more than one wife. The menace of polygamy was recognized even in that day. We are sustained in this thought by the fact that God has frequently called men to be deacons who were not married; and they have approved themselves in the office. Given a little time, most of them can qualify so far as the other specifications are concerned. The Utah believers in polygamy would probably render this text: "A deacon should be the husband of at least one wife—more preferred." But Paul would not trust a polygamist, even in the office of deacon, much less as president of the church.

Those who use the office of deacon well "purchase a good degree and great boldness in the faith." Some have thought of this office slightingly. But when we stop to think seriously, it must be evident to us that any office in which men are permitted to help God is a high and honorable calling, and it is a privilege to work therein.

FROM THE BOOK OF COVENANTS.

In the Book of Covenants we are told that deacons are standing ministers: "But the deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 22.

Their duties are more specifically stated thus:

The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with, and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty, and he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest, and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the deacons, if occasion requires.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

ASSISTING THE TEACHER.

From the above reading it is apparent that all of the duties of the teacher may devolve upon the deacon as an assistant, when occasion may require. So that on that contingency it becomes his duty to watch over the church; to be with the church at all times, and strengthen it in all ways within his power. He is to be no idle spectator. He is to see that there is no iniquity, backbiting, or evil speaking in the church; to see that the people meet together often, and that the members do their duty; and in the absence of other branch officers take the lead of the meetings. Some of these duties, bear in mind, devolve on him only on condition that it is necessary for him to assist the teacher, and of course under the direction of the teacher.

Personally we are inclined to give a liberal interpretation to this term, "assisting the teacher." We are inclined to think that when necessary the teacher may send the deacon to perform labor by himself, or with another deacon, and without the immediate presence of the teacher—that the deacon is not bound to be merely a silent witness accompanying the teacher in the settlement of a case. Conditions might arise owing to which the teacher would be confined to his home, or in some way prevented from attending to necessary labor. But he could send the deacon, if qualified, to attend to the work. That would be assisting the teacher. The deacon becomes the agent in the matter; and that which a man does by a properly appointed agent he does himself, in a legal sense.

Is this view we are sustained by a very able address delivered by Elder Joseph Lambert, which was published in the HERALD some years ago. We quote:

He [the teacher] frequently sends the deacon. I have known of cases where the teacher would say, Now here is a case of this kind (and he describes it). You go there and do what you can. I am busy here in this part. You go and do all you can and report back to me. That deacon is assisting the teacher, though they do not go together.

Thus the deacon as an assistant to the teacher may become a visiting officer, assisting in promoting spirituality among the Saints, or in effecting settlement of difficulties.

HE MAY PRESIDE.

But the deacon has certain duties of his own, which are performed in his own right, and not as an assistant to the teacher. For instance, under certain conditions he may act as branch president, for it is written: "A branch may be presided over by a high priest, an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, chosen and sustained by the vote of the branch."—Doctrine and Covenants 120: 2.

Again, as before noticed, in the absence of other higher officers of the branch, in cases where the deacon is acting merely as deacon of the branch, he may take the lead of meetings. Under these conditions, and when chosen as president of a quorum of deacons, the deacon becomes a presiding officer in his own right.

HE MAY PREACH.

The deacon may preach in a local way. The church in General Conference has so decided:

Resolved, That in our judgment teachers and deacons are authorized by the law to labor as preachers within the branches to which they belong, when they are presidents thereof, or with the advice and consent of the chief presiding officer.—General Conference Resolution number 449, adopted April 9, 1898.

This is in harmony with a further provision of section 17, not previously noted in this article, which says that teachers and deacons are "to warn, expound, exhort, and teach, and invite all to come to Christ."—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 11.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH ON THE DUTIES OF THE DEACON.

In addition to the duties outlined in the Doctrine and Covenants the church has specified other duties that are additional or subsidiary to those already named. In 1871 President Joseph Smith, who by virtue of his position has the right to interpret and define such matters, prepared an article on the duties of the deacon. It was published in the SAINTS' HERALD, and in the General Conference of 1900, the church, on the recommendation of the First Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, adopted an abbreviated form of this article setting forth the duties of the deacon in specific terms. So that this interpretation has become law, so far as conference resolution can make law, governing the duties and rights of the deacon:

We have elsewhere written that every branch must have a place of meeting. This place of meeting, if a public building, hall, meetinghouse, or church, must be in the actual possession of the association of church members worshipping there, at least during its occupancy while worshipping; and if the property is owned by the church, some one must have constructive possession at all times. What particular officer of the church has precedence of right in this constructive possession? The right to carry the keys; open the doors; conduct visitors, either those belonging or not belonging to the church; to see that the floors, doors, windows, pulpit or stand, seats, table or stand, lamps and other fixtures are clean and in good order; to open the doors at the hour of gathering for preaching, fellowship, prayer, or business meetings; to see that the lamps or candles are trimmed, lighted, and burning, in time for evening meetings; to see that the members coming in find seats; to keep watch over the Saints during meetings, repressing loud talking, whispering and laughing, reproving the thoughtless, and rebuking the giddy; putting a prompt stop to rude, indecent, and boisterous acts, by which the propriety, solemnity, and peace of the meetings may be disturbed; to exercise kind and diligent supervision over the health and comfort of the Saints while in meeting, by securing a proper ventilation of the room; to light and keep burning the fires by which the room is kept warm; to have charge of the treasury; to receive, disburse, and account for the contributions of the Saints, intended for necessary and incidental expenses of the association of members; to keep, preserve from damage, and account for all personal effects of the association; to visit the poor, ascertain their needs, and report the same to the church; and in fact, to perform any and all of those necessary duties by which the welfare of the Saints is secured through a careful administration of the outward ordinances, a faithful employment of the talents entrusted to that man. It follows then of a necessity that the right, the duty of the performing these acts,—these unwritten but essential things of the law, devolve upon the office of deacon.—General Conference Resolution number 471.

TO CARRY THE KEYS AND OPEN THE DOORS.

From this statement of duties and rights we note the following:

First. The deacon has constructive possession of the church building, and it is his "right to carry the keys; open the doors; conduct visitors, either those belonging or not belonging to the church."

This does not mean necessarily that the pastor or other branch officials shall not have a key to the church, as a matter of privilege and convenience, so that they may go in for secret prayer or contemplation, or for other purposes. But keys represent authority. And primarily, according to this church ruling, it is the right of the deacon to carry the key and open the door. It is his duty to do so.

We have visited branches where, when the hour of service arrived, the congregation was found seated or standing on the sidewalk or lawn, unable to get into the church building. This should never happen. A secular business conducted in such a way would soon go down. Only by a miracle of divine grace could a spiritual concern survive long, using such methods. The doors should be opened in ample time for all church services, including Sunday school and Religio meetings, so that those worthy members who set a good example by coming early may get in. Some responsible person, such as a janitor, may do this, with the permission or by authority of the deacon; but in that event the deacon should see that it is attended to in a prompt and proper manner, for the church by this action has designated him as the custodian of the keys:

A query has been presented to us regarding the duty or right of the deacon to open the doors for Religio and Sunday-school meetings. In our opinion these organizations may properly elect some one to act as janitor and attend to the duty of opening the doors, and this person may do so with the consent and permission of the deacon. But if the matter is not properly thus arranged, or the person thus selected does not attend to the matter of opening on time, the deacon may, and should see that the matter is attended to, so that people may not be turned from the doors of the church at the hours regularly appointed for such meetings, which, to say the least, are held under the fostering care of the branch organization.

TO KEEP THINGS CLEAN AND IN ORDER.

Second. It is his duty to see that all fixtures about the church building, such as tables, seats, and stand, are clean and in good condition.

The house of the Lord should be clean, as well as the persons of those who assemble there. To observe the Lord's supper and other holy rites and ordinances in a dirty or untidy room, is not in harmony with the divine will. Church buildings should be made clean and attractive, both within and without. The ornamentations and furnishings may be plain and humble, as is consistent with the standing of those who are mostly poor people, but these all should be clean and harmonious. Good taste costs little and pays well.

There is one branch, we are told, where fifty or sixty years ago, the men sat on one side of the room and the women on the other, so that the sisters might not drabble their dresses in the tobacco spit with which the floor was polluted. Happily, that day is past—for ever, we hope. The church member who uses tobacco now is very much in the minority. None such are supported on the missionary list with the knowledge of the appointing authorities. Our churches are not so defiled now. Still there is room for improvement along certain lines in certain places.

Yet we must have a care and not arrive at too great a degree of fastidiousness, like those housewives who make everyone miserable lest a stray fly or a speck of dust shall enter the door. Church property is for use—legitimate use and wear and tear of all kinds entailed by service.

Third. The deacon is to see that lamps or candles are trimmed and burning for evening services—or where other more modern methods of lighting are used, to see that everything is in order so that the people may not sit in darkness.

TO OVERSEE HEATING AND VENTILATION,—A POINT OF FRICTION.

Fourth. He is to exercise "kind and diligent supervision over the comfort of the Saints while in meeting," by attending to the ventilation, and to fires during cold weather. Here is a point of friction. It is difficult to please all in the matter of ventilation and heating. One man's fresh air seems to be another man's pneumonia. And the members sometimes offend in this matter by themselves opening and closing windows or stirring the fire or closing the damper while the deacon is present. They even do this at times when services are in progress, thus annoying the speaker; and their bungling and inexperienced efforts make the disturbance twofold.

It would be better if such persons would communicate with the deacon in some way, making known their wishes. This may be done, during meeting, by note, or in some unobtrusive way. Or if the assembly is large and the deacon hard to come at, one may rise and address those in charge and call for fresh air or for the shutting off of draft, and the matter may be referred to the deacon. Bear in mind that your wish may be repugnant to the majority of the assembly. The deacon must judge of this and govern things according to his judgment of the greatest good to the greatest number. He can not pass on your wish unless you make it known to him before you proceed to put it into action yourself.

Some one must arbitrate in these matters.

That one is the deacon.

Here is room for the exercise of judgment. Deacons may well study methods of ventilation. Some of them seem to think that so long as air is cold it need not be fresh. They reason, Why build a fire and then open the window? Churches are notorious offenders in these matters. The assembly breathes the air over and over again. The meeting closes—the windows also close. The poisoned air is canned up for use at the next service. The preacher must work and sweat to keep people awake when there is not oxygen enough in the room to feed the flame of life and intelligence. A lamp smokes and goes out when oxygen is consumed; human brains cloud up and burn low under similar conditions. Emerging from such an atmosphere in midwinter the cold air stabs the lungs and a severe cold is the result. On the other hand there is the danger of untempered drafts upon the heads of those who are not robust. The deacon has a problem, in most cases, worthy of his wits in his efforts to secure fresh air without direct draft. A little thought and observation will help in such matters.

TO ACT AS TREASURER.

Fifth. He is to "have charge of the treasury," to receive, disburse, and give account of church funds. This indicates that he should be the treasurer of the branch. In most branches where there are two or more resident deacons, it is probable that one may be selected who is competent to keep the records of such matters and handle them properly, though it is a fact that not every man can keep accounts, and not every man can solicit money successfully. A condition might arise where a deacon might not be competent to perform such work, though competent to attend to other duties, and might prefer that some other person be elected as treasurer, or he might be given an assistant who could attend to that part of his work. But by this ruling of the church, the right to care for the branch treasury primarily belongs to the office of deacon, and all other things being equal, he should be thus recognized by the branch.

Sixth. He is to "visit the poor, ascertain their needs, and report the same to the church." The language of this statement suggests the propriety of referring such cases to the church for action, excepting when immediate relief is demanded.

TO KEEP ORDER; A TRYING CHARGE.

Seventh. He is to "keep watch over the Saints during meeting, repressing loud talking, whispering, and laughing, reproving the thoughtless, and rebuking the giddy; putting a prompt stop to rude, indecent, and boisterous acts, by which the propriety, solemnity, and peace of the meetings may be disturbed."

This may become in some instances a disagreeable duty—but it remains a duty. There is no position in the church that does not carry with it some features that might be termed disagreeable. If one is seeking repose, and wishes to continue irresponsible, he should not enter any grade of the priesthood. Enemies are sometimes made by the deacon while discharging the duty of maintaining order. But he must do this duty, firmly, yet with all the tact and kindness at his command. Most acts of the kind mentioned are thoughtless, and should be dealt with in a kindly way, and when possible, by private admonition.

Where there is evidence of a vicious and willful intention to disturb the meeting by drunken or malicious persons, the deacon may use drastic methods to bring such disturbance "to an immediate stop." If necessary he may summon civil officers and secure an arrest. The law safeguards the right of every religious body to hold its meeting undisturbed by malicious intruders.

Thoughtless persons who have disturbed the meeting should not become offended when the deacon admonishes them to desist. He is but doing his duty as imposed upon him by the church. He is acting within his authority. He can not consistently do otherwise. Surely no fair-minded Latter Day Saint will hold resentment against him for so doing. It is to his credit rather than otherwise. Yet people do become offended. But under those conditions the deacon must quietly go on about his duty, not retaliating with railing accusations. He must round up his shoulders and do his duty and abide the results, as must all church officials of whatever rank. A man is sometimes placed where he must choose between inclination and duty, or perhaps between his friends and his duty. At such times he can only maintain his self-respect by doing his duty. On that condition only can he keep the respect of his fellows and the confidence of God.

We have submitted to two of our brethren who are attorneys at law, the question of the right of a deacon to use force in quelling a disturbance of a religious service, and his right to expel such an offender from the church building. On this point Brother I. A. Smith submits the following opinion:

A person who disturbs a religious meeting is a trespasser and it is the right and duty of any person present to assist in putting a stop to the disturbance, just as it is the duty of any person who sees another attempting any misdemeanor or felony to prevent such act. A fortiori a deacon or any agent of the body holding the meeting would have the right to quell any riot or disturbance, even to the point of expelling a person from the place of the meeting.

The foregoing is the common law; statutory law does little more than affirm the common law by making such a disturbance of any meeting, religious, political, or otherwise, a misdemeanor and providing a penalty for the same.

On the same subject, Brother S. A. Burgess gives the following opinion, and at the close adds a timely word of caution to any deacon who may be inclined to be hot tempered and hasty:

In Missouri I have found only one case, and that one was to the effect that it was not a correct statement of law, that in the case of a disturbance, a private individual must prove that he had been affirmatively engaged in suppressing. We may go further and say that that would hardly be the law any place, as one need not prove that he was actively engaged in suppressing. So far as the status is concerned outside of the ordinary conservators of the peace and police officers, section 4602 R. S. Missouri, 1909, provides that in case of injury to dwelling house, farm, fence, gate, fruit or ornamental trees, plants, vines, or other property, the trespasser may be arrested by the owner or person in possession of premises without warrant and taken to the nearest justice of the peace.

The question is not, however, so much of finding cases in every State, as of finding what is the common law, and the law everywhere so far as defined in English speaking countries. The burden will rest on the other side to prove exceptions. The question may be considered under two headings: The Powers and Rights of Private Persons, and The Rights of One Elected to Preserve Order in a Public Assembly, Religious or Otherwise. There is no need from your question of defining the powers of peace officers.

Now there are very few cases defining the powers of those elected to preserve order in an assembly; but those few cases are all one way, and the reason of the law from the power of private persons is all in the same direction.

Arrest: 5 Enc. L. & P. Page 460. After discussing the powers of peace officers to arrest without a warrant for felony or breach of peace committed in his presence, the discussion continues, "Persons appointed by a religious society to keep order may arrest without warrant, one who is illegally engaged in his presence in selling intoxicating liquors near a house of worship."—123 Kentucky 827.

Page 482: Private persons in whose presence an act of treason or felony is committed, not only have the authority and right to arrest the offender without warrant, but must, if possible in fact, do so.

Page 483: A private person may arrest another for commission of affray or breach of peace in his presence, without warrant.

(Cases are cited in Alabama, Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, New York, Vermont, and a number of cases from England. There must be a clear and distinct breach of peace before a private person is justified in arresting.)

"The church wardens are justified in removing from the church building a dismissed parish clerk when they have reasonable grounds for believing he would interrupt the divine services." 10 M. and W. 105 (England).

When breach of peace is occurring, a private person not only has authority to interfere to suppress, but is bound to do so. 118 G. H. 60. (Also cases from Pennsylvania, and England; but 19 Missouri 239 says the defendant need not prove affirmatively that he interfered to suppress. Also in cases of other misdemeanor besides an affray or breach of peace.) The arrest can not be made after the breach of peace is over.

The offense of disturbing a religious meeting, which is made criminal under statutes, as well as at common law, may be committed even though the services have not commenced, when it disturbs those who have assembled for divine worship. Also it may be committed after the services have adjourned, but before the worshipers have scattered to their respective homes. It has been held that singing practice or business meeting is not a religious service. But most of our statutes are broad enough to cover public gatherings.

34 Cyc. 1135: "By virtue of office the trustee or other officers are entitled to the possession of all the church property and use of property must be sanctioned by them, and they have the right to remove any person from the building who has not a superior right and may use force to remove any person who is disturbing a meeting of the society in violation of its rules. (Indiana, New York, and Canada cases.) They have no power to close the building against the congregation. The presiding officers can not expel a person present who is conducting himself peaceably and who claims the right to be present and has an apparent right."

Quite a number of these acts are set forth as disturbance of a meeting, but it may be of interest to you to learn, that a deep bass voice singing out of key and finishing after everyone else gets through, when it is a conscientious effort to do his duty by way of congregational singing, is not such a disturbance as the law of the land will deal with, but is rather turned over to the tender mercies of the ecclesiastical court.

9 A. & E. Encl. 675-676: "Persons intrusted with order of meetings or assemblies may preserve order and use such force as is necessary to remove persons, who are disturbing it. (5 C. & P. 576—Indiana, New York, and Pennsylvania, and English cases.)

A priest in the Catholic Church may preserve order and rebuke all violators. The disturbance need not be willful to justify removal of persons causing. Will vs. Lee, 34 New York 141.

Persons acting under authorized agents of a church whose duty it is to preserve order therein, may remove disturber of congregation or assembly, and awaiting commencement of services.

12 U. C. C. P. 191: A private person may use force to arrest in case of a breach of peace in his presence. In the case of a felony he may use force even to the taking of life to affect arrest or prevent felony.

Summing up briefly by actual practice of law, the officers having charge of the church building have authority to remove unruly persons; especially may this be done at the direction of the presiding officer. He may remove drunken persons, or those having no right on the premises, whether a session is in session, or about to be, or not.

Having charge of the property, he may remove trespassers or any other persons not having a right superior or equal to his. This does not give him the right to shut out members of the congregation. In the case of a necessity, we will go further and say that he may call on others in the congregation to assist him in removing an unruly person and if ad-visible he may arrest and call on others to assist him in arresting for a breach of peace committed in his presence. One case you will note permits him to arrest a person selling liquors in the vicinity of the church building, or for any other affray or breach of peace committed in his presence, so you can see if circumstances warrant it, he might even call on others in the vicinity to assist and not only remove a person from the building, but also conduct them to the nearest magistrate or jail.

On the other hand, the pastor of the church or the deacon is not excusable himself in disturbing a meeting; which he may be disturbing even though he has it in charge, and you can readily see that wisdom should be used in attempting to remove persons from the building. Some full-blooded, hot-headed, stubborn man in the office might very easily get himself into the wrong end of the case in attempting to exercise his authority with too free a hand; but where need arises he may act without fear.

A query has been presented as to the right of a deacon to interfere in Religio or Sunday-school meetings where disorder occurs. We know of one instance where a deacon required the officers of a Religio society to keep better order than had theretofore obtained. It must be borne in mind that these societies are auxiliaries. Their general associations are auxiliary to the general church organization, and the latter would have the right to regulate or set in order to curb or restrain the former if it were deemed necessary for the good of the work in general. The same position will hold good regarding the local organization and the local church.

These societies have officers and it is their duty and right to keep order within their own ranks and to conduct their own affairs. But if they do not keep order, and it becomes evident that as a result the good standing of the church is menaced, the local church or branch may take notice of the situation and act. If the officers of the society do not keep order after having been admonished to do so, it is our opinion that the branch president may very properly place an officer in their meetings with instructions to see that order is kept. The deacon would be the logical officer to attend to this work. But note very particularly, he should not step in and interfere without consulting with the branch president, as in such a delicate situation he would need the counsel and moral support of his superior officer. Fortunately, such cases are rare, and probably in nearly all instances a word of friendly advice from the branch officers to the officers of the auxiliary will be sufficient.

There may be other duties that we have overlooked, but such as we call to mind, that are clearly stated in the church law, we have commented on as we understand them.

In all these things the deacon, as well as the other officers of the branch, must operate under the direction of the branch president, and in full accord with him, as in the branch, as we have before stated, all lines of activity, and authority, are gathered up and center in the hands of the one who stands at the head of the branch, the regularly elected presiding officer.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

NOTE.—These editorials will be followed by some very interesting articles by various authors, on duties of branch and general church officers, including a symposium on "The Pastor," by well-known and experienced pastors. The series of four editorials just closed will probably be republished in pamphlet form.

---

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

"MORMONISM" IN MOVING PICTURES.—The moving picture is the latest method of treating the vexed subject of "Mormonism." "One hundred years of Mormonism," is the title of a picture play now running in Los Angeles. The Associate Editor attended this play recently and was privileged to watch his venerated grandfather grow from an infant in arms to years of manhood. More about this new method of treating an old subject will appear in the near future.

---

Original Articles

HOW TO CONDUCT THE PRAYER SERVICE.

No. 7. "Methods and Tactics" series.

The prayer meeting is recognized as one of the principal meetings of the church. It has been considered by some of most importance,—the meeting where the people come together as one common family, to touch elbows in expressions of praise and petitions for pardon and strength, their sentiments arising in mighty unison to the God and Father of all. It is well that we give thought to a meeting so far-reaching in its effects among the Saints.

We do not approach this consideration with the idea that we shall be able to cover all the phases of our common worship. We do not understand such to have been the thought of those requesting this writing. The Lord has said: "The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God." Hence, any hard and fast rules would be impracticable, as well as presumptuous. Each service must be left to be conducted according to the conditions peculiar to the occasion, and in the light of the Good Spirit. However, a few suggestions are not only permitted, but, if wisely made, ought to be of profit.

Inasmuch as the service should be under the guidance of inspiration, it is at once apparent that the one who is responsible for the directing of the meeting should himself be possessed of the Spirit of God. The one in charge may so lead as to direct the people to the enjoyment of the presence of God, or he may order the service in a way to bring heaviness and darkness of mind; in extreme cases he may bring about or permit conditions where the evil power has opportunity for expression. The first essential, then, is that the officer in charge of a meeting be possessed of the spirit of light and wisdom.

A basic principle which should never be lost sight of is, that the Saints assemble under equal privilege. No member possesses rights above another. Charity should be exercised toward those more stumbling in their manner of testimony. So long as the rights of others are not infringed upon, each should be left free to exercise his privilege.

The good of the body is the end sought. The one in charge, then, should avoid ordering the meeting after his personal liking. Tastes differ. What is of little edification to the president may be highly beneficial to others. By a close watch over the meeting, under the light of the Spirit, the one presiding may readily discern that which is to the edification of the membership.

To illustrate: The writer attended a meeting the past summer in which a missionary, under the missionary spirit, related some experiences had in a foreign field. The Saints were moved to tears; a spirit of devotion and sacrifice came over the meeting. Many sat ready to express joy in the Master's service and to pledge anew allegiance to the cause that sent such men abroad. The brother in charge arose abruptly after the missionary had resumed his seat, and said, in effect: "This is no place for lengthy autobiography. If there be those who have a brief testimony, we shall be glad to hear from them." It is needless to add that the spirit called into the meeting by the testimony of the brother was driven out at once.

Care should be exercised, then, lest the personal opinions or tastes of the one in charge subvert the meeting according to his own ideal; or lest in his anxiety for the general good he overlook the very presence and end for which he has labored.

The prayer meeting is not the place for preaching, or for the work of the visiting officers. If the Saints need instruction as to their personal duties, such instruction should be given in the meeting or place therefor. The presiding officer should not be the one to bring such disposition into a meeting. When brought by others, and likely to create discouragement or resentment, a wise suggestion may lead away from that which, if continued, would result in a meeting of little profit.

The time of prayer and testimony should be a time of fellowship and good cheer. While the Saints are permitted to express their trials and to speak of their burdens, the purpose of such provision is that the sympathy and support of others may be enlisted. Under trial there is comfort in the fact that "whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it"—all are in sympathy with it; and encouragement in the thought that, borne up before the Father by the united prayer of the Saints, one may finally triumph. Care should be taken that expressions of weakness and trial bring not into the meeting a feeling of heaviness or despair. The president should himself never bring a spirit of depression. By wise counsel or direction when such spirit has found place, he can in the majority of instances, indicate the "silver lining," thus administering to the burdened and the weak comfort and cheer—the strength of Christian fellowship.

Activity is the life of the meeting. However, a dilatory people are not likely to be induced to active service by chiding or undue urging. Misguided zeal may result in an unprofitable meeting and in serious damage to individuals. Wisdom should direct in the effort to persuade to activity, that the end sought, not the opposite, be reached.

For instance: The writer knows a man, a deacon, of great devotion; a young man of willing heart, of contrite spirit, of clean life—though backward in his modesty, yet a youth of promise. An officer in charge of a prayer meeting of the branch attended by the young brother in his opening remarks said: "If I didn't expect to occupy in the meeting I wouldn't come here." At the expiration of his term the young man declined to serve the branch longer as deacon. It has required the continued efforts of the branch and stake officers to induce him to again take up his work. He has not yet occupied in the prayer meeting. He has never done so. He needs now to overcome both his former timidity and the hurt of his tender feelings. The one in charge ought to be the last to bring such discouragement into a meeting.

The Lord is careful of our feelings. He has commanded that the instruments remain silent "when the Saints assemble for prayer and testimony." When he who orders for the peace and triumph of all, guards against the touching of those "tender and sad" by barring out instruments which on other occasions are to be used with profit, it behooves his Saints to be careful lest they carry into these same meetings that which might be permitted elsewhere, but which here would touch or sadden the already tender or troubled heart. The one in charge should be especially watchful lest he in an unguarded moment do or say that which might cause distress; he should be ever on the alert to note the misdirected zeal or thoughtlessness of others, and to move in wisdom that their breach of decorum have no ill effect.

It becomes necessary at times to indicate a change of order, such as a return to prayer, a leaving of prayer and a giving over to testimony, or more or less singing; to caution against lengthy or unwise testimony; to urge activity; to warn against the possibility of evil presence; to declare against foul expression. In all these and in every other duty the president should remember that his direction, warning, and declaration in their timeliness and nature, if effectual must be in accordance with or indited "by the Holy Ghost."

We revert, then, to the thought first set out. The essential qualification of the man who would preside is that he be possessed of the Spirit. Thus is he able to exercise in that leading which steers the body clear of unwise participation, or of the effects thereof. This being done, there is little likelihood of evil influence or expression. Satan is seldom able to operate unless the occasion be opportune. By wise and spiritual counsel the flock may be shielded from all that would destroy; by the same kind of counsel the Saints may be directed to their profit and edification.

This discussion is necessarily brief and only suggestive. Each presiding officer must be left to study the individual and collective needs of his flock. By persistent effort and continuous prayer he may receive in his life the Spirit as an abiding comforter; and in his activities as a minister that especial portion needful in the premises. Such man under the wisdom of his calling, other things being equal, is able to lead his charge to victory. When called upon to lead in broader circles, his experience will serve him; the additional wisdom attending a larger field will enable him to direct advantageously to all.

JOHN F. GARVER.

• * * * *

TWELVE REASONS WHY I BELIEVE THE BOOK OF MORMON.—PART 1.

AN ARGUMENT IN TWO PARTS, BY CHARLES FRY.

What It Purports to Be.

The Book of Mormon purports to be a historical and doctrinal record of two nations which in ancient times inhabited the Continent of America; written mainly by holy men, preserved in the earth through centuries of barbarism, brought to light and translated by the power of God to aid in the salvation of souls in the last days.

Belief is Not Without Consistent Reasons.

Proportionately but few people have acknowledged these claims; the masses, often without any investigation, rejecting them as being unworthy of credence. All sorts of false and evil reports have been circulated regarding the book, which are too often accepted without investigation, so that popular opinion has decreed that the work is corrupt and unworthy the belief of good people. In like manner, those who believe in the book have been looked upon as being deceived and corrupted by it, having no sound or consistent reason for such belief.

In common with thousands of others, the writer believes that the book contains a true history; that it contains a revelation of God's will, and that it was brought forth and translated under the direction of the divine head; that the character of the book is good and its influence upon the reader is elevating. To him this belief is not without consistent reasons, and in the following pages are set forth briefly a few of those reasons, that those who have not known of the book and come to read this little tract, may know why he and others of like faith hold such belief.

1. IT HAS A PURE STANDARD OF ETHICS.

It is said by our Lord that "a corrupt tree can not bring forth good fruit" (Matthew 7: 18); and again he said: "How can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth

ELDER CHARLES FRY.

speaketh. A good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things: and an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things." —Matthew 12: 34, 35.

This rule given by Christ applies to the Book of Mormon. If the book be found to be good, it can be safely stated that its source was also good; and if it is found to be evil, then its source must have been evil. It will not be sufficient to find that it contains some good, but it must be entirely good, without advocating a single erroneous or immoral principle, in order to come up to its claim that it was given by inspiration of God. Satan invariably uses a large proportion of truth, mingled with a small amount of error, in order to deceive, but "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights." (James 1: 17.) God's gifts are both good and perfect, and the Book of Mormon must come up to this rigid requirement if it is to support its own claim of divinity.

Virtues Commended.

In examining the Book of Mormon upon this point, it is found to teach practically every moral principle required for the welfare of the individual or for society. It teaches meekness, humbleness, patience, long-suffering, temperance, diligence, peacefulness, purity, virtue, neatness, and comeliness. Socially, it teaches love for all, especially the poor and unfortunate, and requires that one's labor in life be with a view of serving his fellow men; it teaches mercy for the erring; liberality to the needy; a regard for and a care of the sick and afflicted; honesty and justice in all one's dealings; that parents teach their children, and that the education of children should be provided for. It teaches that men, as citizens, should work for the preservation of the liberties of the people; that they should acquiesce in the will of the majority, and should support the government in enforcing the law. Religiously, it supports prayerfulness, thankfulness, watchfulness, faith, hope, and charity and good works.

Vice Condemned.

It forbids men to lie, deceive, rob, steal, plunder, be angry, murder, use vengeance, be boastful, commit adultery, take the name of God in vain, use strong drink, oppress the poor, or shut their eyes to their needs. It condemns pride, envy, strife, malice, persecution, love of money, love of costly apparel, covetousness, idleness, evil associations, evil thoughts, lasciviousness, filthiness, sensuality, carnality, stubbornness, sacrilege, idolatry, hypocrisy, reviling, whoredom. It is strongly against unbelief, infidelity, priestcrafts, secret combinations, inequality, the costly adorning of churches to the neglect of the poor and needy, war—except for self-preservation—slavery, office-seeking, using illegal means for obtaining office, showing favor to wealthy criminals by judges and other public officials, divorce save for one scriptural cause, and polygamy.

The men whose histories are recorded in the book were approved and commended when they followed the virtues, but disapproved and condemned when they followed the vices. Even cities and nations are judged by this standard in the book, and civic righteousness brought peace and prosperity, while civic corruption brought trouble and disaster. There are no teachings in it but which if observed will make better husbands and wives, fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, neighbors, citizens, and better children of God; and hence, so far as morals are concerned, it is altogether worthy of acceptance, belief, and obedience.

2. IT PRESENTS CHRIST AS THE REDEEMER OF THE WHOLE WORLD.

Contrary to the assertions of some and the belief of many, the Book of Mormon has Christ for its central figure and represents him in the fullness of his attributes. The first chapter of the book tells that the prophet, Lehi, 600 B. C., saw in vision the coming of the Son of God to the earth, with twelve apostles, and the things he saw and heard "manifested plainly the coming of a Messiah and also the redemption of the world." Nephi, another prophet, was commanded to bear record that Christ "is the Son of God." Again he says, "And I, Nephi, have written these things unto my people that perhaps I might persuade them that they would remember their Redeemer." "If the day shall come that they will reject the Holy One of Israel, the true Messiah, their Redeemer and their God, behold the judgments of him that rest upon them." "Wherefore, redemption cometh in and through the Holy Messiah, for he is full of grace and truth." Lehi, while instructing his sons said, "And now, my sons, I would that ye should look to the great Mediator and hearken unto his great commandments; and be faithful unto his words and choose eternal life according to the will of his Holy Spirit, and not choose eternal death according to the will of the flesh and the evil which is therein."

After this manner do the various writers hold Jesus Christ as the Savior and Redeemer of the world. He is held as the Creator of the world, in connection with the Father as the Author of light and life, the great Teacher of mankind as an example; loving, compassionate and impartial.

The book tells that after his resurrection he appeared in the flesh to his children in America, who were a branch of Israel, and instructed them in the way of life and salvation, giving to them the gospel as he gave it to his people at Jerusalem and ordaining ministers to preach it and administer in its ordinances. The last writer, upon the closing page of the book says: "And again I would exhort you that ye would come unto Christ, and lay hold upon every good gift, and touch not the evil gift nor the unclean thing. . . . Yea, come unto Christ and be perfected in him, and deny yourselves of all ungodliness."

The Christ of the Book of Mormon is not a different one from the Christ of the Bible. He is the Jesus of Nazareth who was born of the Virgin Mary and who was crucified and rose again for the saving of the whole world. It presents him in his true character—as he is in the Bible, a perfect ideal, a living example worthy of the acceptance of all men and of their best efforts to come up to his standard as taught there.

3. ITS DOCTRINE IS IN FULL HARMONY WITH THE DOCTRINE OF THE BIBLE.

Some of Its Principles.

It teaches faith in God the Father, and in his Son, Jesus Christ, and in the operation of the Holy Spirit. It teaches repentance from all sin and baptism by immersion for the remission of sin by a minister authorized of God, as necessary steps to bring men into acceptance with God. It promises the baptism of the Holy Ghost to those who obey. The ordinance of laying on of hands is taught for the giving of the Holy Ghost, healing the sick, and ordination to the ministry. The second coming of Christ to reign on the earth for a thousand years, the resurrection of the righteous at his coming to live with him; resurrection of the wicked at the end of the thousand years, the judgment of all men and the giving of reward or punishment according to their works are strongly held. It teaches the gathering of Israel from their dispersion and their conversion to Christ in the last days. In other matters besides these, there is a perfect harmony existing between this book and the Bible, and one who believes the latter, can not consistently reject the principles of the former.

Hence from a doctrinal viewpoint it is worthy of acceptance.

4. ITS HISTORY IS IN HARMONY WITH THE HISTORY AND PROPHECIES OF THE BIBLE.

A Nation from Babel.

The book gives the history of a nation which had its beginning in a colony which came from Babel at the time of the confusion of tongues. The Bible says of the people at Babel, "So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth." (Genesis 11:8.) This being true, a part of those people must have come to America, which the Book of Mormon affirms.

A Nation of Israelites.

The book tells of a second colony of Israelites which came from Jerusalem about 600 B. C., and grew to be a great nation. The Bible says: that Israel would "spread abroad to the west and to the east, and to the north, and to the south." (Genesis 28:14.) "And the Lord shall scatter thee [Israel] among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other." (Deuteronomy 28:64.) "My sheep [Israel—see verse two] wandered through all the mountains and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them." (Ezekiel 34:6.)

The book says that the founder of this nation was of the lineage of Joseph who was sold into Egypt. The Bible says that "Joseph is a fruitful bough by a well whose branches run over the wall" and that his promised inheritance should reach "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills." (Genesis 49:22, 26.) The history of one confirms the prophecy of the other.

The Book of Mormon says that the time in which the colony of Israelites left Jerusalem (600 B. C.) was a time of great wickedness among the Jews, and that the Lord sent many prophets, including Lehi, who became the head of the colony, warning the people of their impending destruction, and commanding them to repent. The condition of these times (which was in the reign of Zedekiah, king of Judah), is confirmed by the Bible. Read 2 Chronicles 36:11-21. "Moreover all the chief of the priests and the people transgressed very much after all the abomination of the heathen; and polluted the house of the Lord which he had hallowed in Jerusalem. And the Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his messengers, rising up betimes and sending; because he had compassion on his people and on his dwelling place: but they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people till there was no remedy." (Verses 14-16.)

This nation of Israelites in America, though having been greatly enlightened, ultimately turned against God and forgot him and the true worship, and have continued until the present time in heathendom. This is in harmony with the Bible, which says that Israel "forgettest the Lord thy Maker" (Isaiah 51:13), and "My people have forgotten me, days without number" (Jeremiah 2:32) and they "stumble in their ways from the ancient path," etc. The remnant of Israel known as the Jews have not entirely forgotten their God, they have never turned to idolatry, and hence these prophecies of the Bible must refer to some other part of Israel. The Book of Mormon proves their fulfillment.

Again, this book says that Christ after his resurrection appeared to his people in America and taught them the gospel. Jesus said, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matthew 15:24). "And other sheep I have which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice: and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." (John 10:16.) Other sheep of Israel besides those belonging to the fold at Jerusalem were to hear Christ's voice, and he was to go after them to bring them to him. The Book of Mormon proves this true.

These are but a few of the historical features of the book, that are found to accord with the Bible; all the way through, even in details, the same harmony exists and adds another proof of its divinity.

5. THE CIVILIZATION OF THE NATIONS WHOSE HISTORY IT IS, HAS BEEN CONFIRMED BY RECENT ARCHÆOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES THROUGHOUT AMERICA.

To give all the proofs of this statement would require a volume and we can but mention a few things and leave the proof to the researches of the reader.

What the Book of Mormon and Explorers Both Tell Us.

The Book of Mormon became public before very much was known of the ancient ruins of America. It tells its own story in its own way and it is self-evident to the reader of the book that whatever references it makes to the character and civilization of the ancient people were not based on any of the discoveries or theories of modern explorers.

While our knowledge of the past as learned from the ruined cities and other remains and from the traditions of the native tribes must be very vague and limited, and present many difficult problems, yet there are some things that can be, and are, established beyond all reasonable doubt. The nature and extent of the ancient remains tell unquestionably of an advanced civilization, confirming the Book of Mormon.

Scientists tell us that there are evidences of the two distinct and successive civilizations on this continent; the Book of Mormon, years before, told us of two successive civilizations. This book and scientists both tell us that the first nation attained its strength in Central America and extended into North America. Both tell us that the second occupied in South America and extended northward building upon the ruins of its predecessors. Both tell us of a people who lived in the mountains, in secret and almost inaccessible places, in a state of enmity with their neighbors, called by one Gadianton Robbers, and by the other Cliff Dwellers. Both give us evidences that Christ and Christianity were known to the Americans. Both tell us of a state of semicivilization which followed the decline of the last nation. Both tell us of people who were idolatrous and who offered human sacrifices. Both tell us that the civilization of the nations was indigenous—developed upon this land. In many other minor things scientific researches agree with the Book of Mormon.

The Book of Mormon Spoke First.

When we reflect, that practically all the things were told first by the Book of Mormon, the evidences are strong in favor of that book and certainly warrant a belief in it. Should the reader desire to investigate this part of the subject for himself, we would refer him to a useful little book entitled, The Divinity of the Book of Mormon Proven by Archæology, also Report of the Comité on American Archæology, both on sale at the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and at the Ensign Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Also such works as Baldwin's Ancient America, Short's North Americans of Antiquity, and similar ones found at most book stores.

6. EVERY PART IS IN PERFECT HARMONY WITH THE WHOLE.

A lie will not bear comparison with the truth. A lie of many parts will seldom, or never, if thoroughly investigated, bear comparison of its several parts. The Book of Mormon, with its history, and geography, its doctrine and ethics, its chronologies and prophecies, and its philology and ethnology, is the most complex book known, as regards the number and variety of its parts, with possibly an exception of the Bible, yet throughout the book a beautiful harmony exists.

It would be impossible for a work so large as this book is to stand a searching investigation if it were a fraud, as many think it to be, for its inevitable discrepancies would be so apparent that none would be deceived.

In Its Chronology.

The chronology of the Book of Mormon is intricately woven through its chapters from the beginning to the end, and extends over a period of more than a thousand years, dates being given for most of the principal events. There are no inconsistencies in this chronology. If the Book of Mormon was anything else than what it purports to be, we must believe that its author has accomplished what no other author of fiction has ever before attempted, viz, the weaving into a work of no small proportions a system of chronology, and that without any serious discrepancy. If fraud was designed in the bringing forth of the book, it would have been unnecessary to go so extensively into the matter of dates, as they are seldom necessary in fiction, and their use would but make easy an exposure of the fraud.

In Its Geography.

Likewise it has a geography of its own. It follows the history of two nations (briefly) in their travels and settlements throughout the entire Continent of America. The geography, like the chronology, is an incidental part, but in its account of the form and relative positions of various parts of the land, of mountains, valleys, rivers, seas, lakes, plains, and isthmuses, and of the character of the different parts of the land as to climate, fertility, products, etc., we find a complete harmony. So far as these places are identified we also find the geography to agree with the geography of the present time.

As has been stated in regard to chronology, the writer of a fraudulent work would not risk exposure by embodying so much that would tend to expose the fraud. The facts that the Book of Mormon gives so particularly so many details, and that through them all a perfect harmony exists, are certainly strong points in favor of its truthfulness.

In Its Teachings of Religion.

The book deals with the history of a people who lived for six hundred year under the law of Moses, afterward changing to the law of the gospel as taught by Christ. It also records some of the religious history of a previous nation which had its origin at Babel. In all these teachings there is a wonderful harmony throughout, and which is also found in every feature of the book.

7. THE TIME AND MANNER OF ITS COMING FORTH WAS IN FULFILLMENT OF BIBLE PROPHECIES.

A young man—Joseph Smith—was directed of the Lord to a record written upon metallic plates which lay in a carefully formed box of stone in a hill in the western part of New York, which he was directed in 1827 to take and translate by the means which the Lord had provided.

Some of the strange characters were transcribed and sent to a professor of languages in New York who admitted they were genuine, but confessed his inability to read the book. It was while making the translation that, by angelic hands, the authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel was given to this young man and his associate, Oliver Cowdery, by which they were authorized to baptize men and women unto Christ according to the Scriptures. On April 6, 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ was organized, and afterward built up according to instructions given of God.

(b) What the Bible Says About It.

Because of brevity we can not give the quotations in full, but refer the reader to the passages for careful reading.

We notice Isaiah 29: 9-24. This describes a class of people who are spiritually drunk and spiritually asleep, at a time when the prophets and seers are covered, or removed (verse 10). Then follows an account of a "book that is sealed." The book is delivered to an unlearned man and he is asked to read it but he says, "I am not learned." The words of the book are delivered to a learned man, and he is asked to read them, but he says, "I can not; for it is sealed." Then the Lord says that because the people worship with their mouths and not with their hearts, and that the precepts of men have taken the place of the truth, he will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder, for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, etc. (Verse 14.) "Is it not yet a very little while and Lebanon [or Palestine] shall be turned into a fruitful field and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?" (Verse 17.) "In that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness." (Verse 18.) "Therefore thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." (Verse 22.) "They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine." (Verse 24.)

The leading points in this prophecy agree with the history of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. We note the following:

At the time the book came forth there were no prophets among the people, and a condition of spiritual sleep prevailed.

A sealed book was given to an unlearned man. It was a sealed book (in a dead language).

The words of the book were given to a learned man. The learned man could not read the book.

The Lord began a marvelous work in which the book was to play a part.

He did not choose the wise men to do it—"The wisdom of their wise men shall perish."

It was not long after this work began that Palestine was restored to fertility—since 1852.

The unlearned man read (translated) the book.

Through the means of this book, doctrine is again taught instead of the precepts of men.

Blessings have come upon Jacob (Israel), and favors and equal rights are granted them in nearly all countries.

Another prophecy on this subject is found in Psalm 85; verse 11 says: "Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven." This was to be at a time when the Lord would speak peace unto his people (verse 8). When the Lord is to give "that which is good," and when "our land shall yield her increase" (verse 12). Verse 13 says, "Righteousness shall go before him; and shall set us in the way of his steps."

The Apostle Paul says that the righteousness of God is revealed in the gospel. (Romans 1: 16, 17.) The righteousness that is to come down from heaven, and that is to go before him and set the people in the way of his steps, must certainly then be the gospel. If God speaks to his people, that which he speaks must be a revelation. A careful reading of this will show that these events are to take place in the last days, at a time when peace and favor are to come to scattered Israel.

We call attention here to Revelation 14:6: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwelt upon the earth and to every nation, kindred, and tongue and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." This shows that the gospel was to be brought from heaven by an angel, and at the hour of God's judgment, the time of the end or last days.

The events associated with the Book of Mormon in modern times confirm the following points in the above prophecies: (a) That truth should spring out of the earth. (b) That righteousness (in the gospel) was at the same time to come down from heaven. (c) That it was to come by an angel of God. (d) That it should be at a time when God would speak, (give revelation). (e) When the land of Israel shall again be fertile. (f) At the time of God's judgment. (g) That these revealments should set the people right before God.

These with a number of prophecies of the Bible have had, or are having, their fulfillment in the latter day work. It will be impossible in this short statement to consider to any extent all the Bible evidences, but we refer the reader to a valuable work on this subject entitled The Book of Mormon Vindicated, which may be obtained of the publishing houses already named.

(Concluded in next issue.)

• * * * •

EQUALITY.

(In three parts.—Part 2.)

BY J. W. GILBERT.

Entire service for entire needs, is the ideal provided for in the Order of Enoch. But in the outset of the establishment of the new civilization, which is ultimately to be so complex and efficient, it is evident that there will not be the opportunity for so complete a service, nor the ability to supply so completely the needs of the people as may be expected later, when the magnitude and variety of its institutions will be such that it can furnish opportunity for labor in every line of endeavor, and be able to supply every known human necessity.

Now, until that stage is reached, will be the trying time, which will consist largely in the difficulty of administering to the needs, and dispensing the opportunities, which are meanwhile insufficient to meet the demand to completeness, and yet do it so that all may have their proportionate share of the incomplete supply.

Until all can have as fine a home as the heart can justly desire, all should be content to have one-proportionately less in cost, grandeur, and style than the heart desires. For people can not be equal while some live in miserable hovels and others in mansions. We should only indulge in finer homes, carriages, wearing apparel, or greater pleasures, when the standard for every individual can be raised by reason of a better and more abundant supply. Spiritual blessings, or any other kind of permanent blessings, can not come to us so long as we have one standard for the ministry and the poor, and another standard for the sagacious business man. There should be no other basis than the "ministerial basis" of living if we are all to minister according to our gifts and callings in this great work; but that basis should be raised just as soon as it can be raised for all alike, and not till then. Otherwise we are not equal, and the "abundance of the spiritual blessings shall be withheld." (Doctrine and Covenants 70:3.)

The order in which our needs and wants take precedence in importance is governed by the length of time we can endure them, and the amount of suffering entailed. The first in order is air to breathe, because we would die in a few minutes without it. Food is less important, because we can live longer without it than without air. In seasons of intense cold, clothing and shelter are also more important than food, as we could live longer without food than without clothing and shelter. Music, the very important, is less essential than food, clothing, or shelter. Automobiles are fine, and serve a good purpose, but vastly less essential than the others. Palaces are grand and delightful, but not so needful as plain, comfortable homes. Things that minister to the esthetic taste are soul-cheering and refining, but not so essential to life as are the physical necessities.

So, in a community or civilization composed of beings bearing the relation and kinship of brotherhood to each other, there arises, inherent in the social fabric, the altruistic principle of live and let live. It does not admit of one member advancing in the enjoyment of supplied needs any farther than the full social product will provide for every other member. Else they are not brethren, but like beasts of the jungle. For no man can, by any possible stretch of logic, have a right to more of the good things of earth than he needs, while there are those who have less than they need and are yet willing to work. These good things are here for the very ones who need; not to pile up for those who do not need.

For, behold, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man, for food, and for raiment, and that he might have in abundance; but it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another; wherefore the world lieth in sin."—Doctrine and Covenants 49:3.

What did the Lord mean when he gave this, if he did not mean what he said? And it is so plain that there is no doubt as to what he said.

Now, when does a man possess that which is above another? When the whole social product is only enough to supply every member with just a plain house to live in, and an ordinary suit of clothes, and only plain food—when there is only this much per capita, then if by some contrivance some sagacious fellow lays a scheme by which he can get enough to enable him to live in a palace, and wear broadcloth and silks, and scoot over the country joy-riding in automobiles, he possesses “that which is above another.”

Where does his excess come from? It comes out of the social product, and results in lowering the possessions of the other by just the amount he has in excess of the per capita portion. Either all of the others have a little less than enough, or else a few are reduced to living in hovels, wearing overalls, and going hungry. Then multiply these sagacious fellows, and they become a social menace, and a greater and even greater number must live in hovels and go without the needs of the first order—the plain, physical necessities. The altruistic principle does not admit of one member enjoying supplied needs of a less important order than can be enjoyed by all; for as soon as one passes over into the possession of things that are less necessitous than can be enjoyed by every other member, so soon he possesses “that which is above another,” and for this cause “the world lieth in sin.”

As we have seen, there is a margin of difference in the amounts that different persons should receive to meet their wants, and still receive alike; and also a margin of difference in their capacity for doing, and yet render service alike. Their margin is marked by the difference in the amount of food necessary for one man's meal in excess of that necessary for another's, or vice versa; by the difference in the amount of clothing needed for different sizes of men; by the difference in the size of their families; by the difference in the product of their labor, each doing his best. These differences are legitimate, and are admissible by the altruistic principle inhering in brotherhood and the law of equality; but twice as much, or three times as much, or a hundred, or a thousand, or many thousand times as much beyond this legitimate margin, as is seen in the world of brothers to-day, is simply bordering on social criminality.

We see, now, why God gave such a scathing denunciation of those who disregard this law, in the following words:

Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor and the needy, he shall with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.

The day of “every man for himself” is past. The day when each had his own farm and herds, raised his own wool, wove it into cloth for himself, raised his own wheat and crushed it by hand for his own cake, tanned hides taken from his own beasts, from which he made shoes with his own hand for himself and family. The day is past when each family was a complete commonwealth within itself, and independent of everyone else. There was room once for each family to do so, but now society is so dense that there has to be a division of labor; one raising the wheat, another the sheep and wool; another grinding the wheat into flour, another weaving the wool into cloth; others making the cloth into garments, while others spend their entire time making nothing but shoes. Thus society is driven to cooperation, which at present is only practiced in a crude way. We've got to mix up in our affairs. We've got to take others into our reckoning. We've got to organize for cooperation. We've got to pass from family production into social production. We are just now in the throes of transition, as a woman travailing in birth just before the new creature comes forth. Our society to-day has in it the seeds of decay of the old and the germ of life of the new.

As soon as the division of labors was attempted, the man who raised only wheat had to find some way to exchange some of his product with the man who made shoes, and some with the man who made clothing, and so on. So they fell to bartering in kind, which was fine, so long as they gave in exchange for one man's full product, approximately the full product of another. But they soon got to using something for a medium of exchange, and then discovered the possibility of buying one man's product and selling it to another at a higher added price than the cost of handling and transportation. Then profit-taking was born, and concentration of wealth began, because the traffickers took even larger and larger amounts over and above what would pay them for carrying these goods from one producer to another. This over and above amount is profit, the principle of which is wrong, BECAUSE IT IS NOT EARNED though the practice may have to continue till the new order is established. It is not earned because one man's reasonable efforts in trafficking are not worth any more than another's reasonable efforts in production. The pay for a man's reasonable efforts in any line should be the amount that will meet his reasonable needs. Else God's words about men receiving according to their wants and needs are meaningless. If one man should receive more for his services than what is needful for himself and family, the question then would be, How much more should he receive? If it be said, He should receive a hundred dollars a year, or a thousand, or ten thousand a year more than he needs for himself and dependent ones, we ask, For what purpose or reason should he receive it? He does not need it for any purpose that comes within the range of human necessities; so what purpose can it serve him but to ruin him and his by surfeiting and idleness? But if by any process of reasoning it can be made to appear that he should receive more than is needful for his support, where can the limit be set?

There are no natural bounds for a limit after passing the bounds set by nature in the natural needs and wants. There is no more reason why a man should not have a million more than he needs than that he should have a hundred more than he needs. And if there is no reason that he should not have a million, there is no reason that he should not have two million, or a billion, or one hundred billion, and on up till he gains all the wealth in the world, and thus reduces all the inhabitants to serfs, slaves to pay him tribute for a place and a chance to live. Thus we see how the concentration of wealth was brought about by an unrighteous principle, and how it impoverishes those from whom it was concentrated, and how it enriches (in dollars, but damns in practice) those to whom it is concentrated. Thus misery and suffering are spread broadcast, and the "world lieth in sin," because "it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another." This is true, fundamentally and inherently; not merely because God said so, but rather he said so because it is, in the very nature of things true, and so is one of his inexorable laws. Because it is only natural, that if one man filches it all, just because he can (and can if the rest let him), there will not be enough for the rest, whose rights to be supplied are just as insistent and important as his, and are in every way as a whole equal with his.

Profit is that contrivance by which one man comes into possession of more than his pro rata of the total social product. Profit is not possible so long as one man's product during a given time is exchanged for that of another during a like period of time. Time is an important factor in the unit of this measure, because it marks the recurrence of human needs. For the individual needs during a given time are balanced against the individual product, during the same length of time, under like circumstances. Just so soon as one man exchanges his product for a day for that produced by another in two, three, or a hundred days, just so soon inequality and trouble begin. The one finds, if he works as he did before his sagacious transaction, his wealth piles up beyond his needs; and the other finds he must work longer and harder to supply his usual need, or else do with less than the amount he enjoyed before he fell into the clutches of the sharp trader.

Without the device of profit-taking, there can be no great shifting of products from one to another, no concentration of wealth in a few hands, to such a degree as will menace society. Even in the world to-day that knows so little of the fine shades of the law of equality, they are coming to see that profit is an unearned quantity, and defined in a recent number of Current Literature as that portion of a business man's receipts over and above operating expenses, plus an amount for himself that he could command as wages if he were doing that same work for some one else. That is the world's definition of profit.

So far, so good. Now if they could just learn that a man should not receive more than his needs for his service, and that profit is unearned because it is over and above the price of service, and therefore a wrong principle, things in the field of economics would begin to adjust themselves, like water seeking its level.

But men want to increase the margin between themselves and poverty, and so imbued are they to-day with the idea that profit-taking is the best way to get increase, that it is almost impossible for them to see that it is the very worst way to get increase of goods, and that the only real increase is in making or growing something useful to mankind, and thus with a mistaken idea they search the world for more chances for speculation.

Without profit, speculation is impossible. Speculation is just another name for profit. The principle is the same, that of getting something for nothing.

However, some try to excuse speculation on the ground that its gain is the reward for risk. But risk is not a useful commodity, but a danger to society, and can only be assumed in the most economical way by the public, and overcome by cooperation. The truth of this is attested in thunder tones by the history of the wrecks of lives and fortunes in the illegitimate field of speculation. Speculation must be pursued in connection with some commodity, or else it falls flat. It must be in something that people want, or, better still, something that they must have to live, or else they would not buy, and hence no speculation be possible. So, when a commodity is bought for speculation, it is held for a higher price, creating a fictitious demand by keeping it out of the natural channel of supply until the need is felt so strongly by those who need that commodity that they are forced to pay the higher price, which is the profit, the reward for speculation; a filched price, not for service rendered, but is obtained not by a highwayman's revolver menacing your life, but by intensifying and aggravating a want that menaces your life.

Is it so bad as that? Is it the very same principle involved in highway robbery? It surely looks that way. The only difference being the modus operandi. Then it must be wrong. It surely has the appearance of evil! Ah, here it is:

The spirit of speculation, the exhibition of greed for gain is unseemly in the Saints and officers of the church, and should be avoided. It has the appearance of evil. Heed should be paid to the admonition of those who from time to time preach and write upon the gathering to remove the principle of selfishness from the hearts of the Saints, and especially from those upon whom rests the burden of the church and its ministrations abroad.—Doctrine and Covenants 127: 7.

Just like a gentle father to his children, the Lord used as mild terms as he well could in reference to the awful thing he had under consideration.

Then the only proper way to get increase is to render service, and make something useful to humanity in answering the recurring needs; to minister to the comforts and blessings of life; to raise or grow things that are good for food and raiment, to please the eye, to gladden the heart—to make two blades of grass grow where grew only one.

(To be concluded.)

Of General Interest

DREAMS.

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—A series of selected articles on dreams. Three are presented herewith; the fourth will appear later.)

DREAMS ARE WISHES IN DISGUISE.

Steadily, of late years, expert opinion has been swinging away from the opinion that visions of the night are meaningless phantasmagoria, worthy of attention only from the uncultivated and superstitious. In fact, scientific interest in dreams begins to recall the good old days when Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, after "seein' things at night," called together "the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans" of his realm, to make known the interpretation thereof, and, by way of stimulating their psychological insight, promised to cut off all their heads if they missed.

The one man who has carried furthest this topographical survey of dreamland is Sigmund Freud, extraordinary professor of nervous pathology at the University of Vienna, and probably to-day the most discussed man in his field in the entire scientific world.

AN APPARENTLY FOOLISH DREAM.

But to come to particulars. Ernest Jones, M. D., of the University of Toronto, a disciple of Freud's, encountered the following: A woman of 37, with a husband but no children, dreams that she is sitting in a grandstand, as if waiting to watch some spectacle. A military band approaches, playing a gay, martial air. Behind it comes a funeral train, with the casket resting on a draped gun carriage. The dead man appears to be a certain Mr. X, a somewhat unimportant person, still alive, whom the dreamer knows in real life only slightly.

Behind the dead man followed his brother and three sisters, all dressed in gay clothing and exhibiting anything but the grief proper to the occasion. The brother, in addition, dances about "like a savage," waving his arms and exhibiting extravagant joy, while a yucca tree with a number of young blossoms on it grows out of his back.

The dream is utterly absurd, just such an absurdity as occurs to any of us any night in the week. But no dream, the Freudians hold, is ever devoid of meaning, if only one can get hold of it at the right end. Most dreams, they maintain, reveal the deepest secrets of the heart.

The woman, therefore, is cross-examined concerning the various single elements of her fantasy. The yucca tree, for example—what does she know about yucca trees? That proves to be simple enough. She has traveled in the West and seen the marriage ceremonies of the Indians, in which the yucca always plays a part not very different from that of the orange blossom with us. The natives carry yucca trees in procession, dancing like Mr. X's brother in the dream, while the blossoms of the tree symbolize offspring. Apparently, then, the dream has something to do with marriage and children.

THE SCIENTIFIC INTERPRETATION.

Next it transpires that the dreamer herself bitterly regrets having had no children of her own. For this she blames her husband, whose life has been by no means exemplary, and whose addiction to alcohol has ruined both his health and his career, and completely alienated his wife's affection.

Mr. X, too, though but an indifferent acquaintance, turns out to have certain curious resemblances to the dreamer's delinquent husband. Like him, he has a brother and three sisters. Like him, also, he started life with high promise, and fell by the wayside for lack of moral stamina. In short, the two men are so far alike that the thought of either would naturally suggest the other, to one who knew both.

But Mr. X is a civilian, who would not be having a military funeral; the husband is an officer of volunteers, who might. Moreover, though Mr. X really has a wife, she keeps conspicuously out of the dream.

The dream funeral, then, is really that of the dreamer's unloved husband in the guise of Mr. X, who resembles him; while the gay music and the gay clothes symbolize the emotions of the would-be widow. As for the exuberant brother of Mr. X, he is, in real life, a former lover of the dreamer, whom she threw over in a fit of pique, that both have regretted ever since.

So at last the latent meaning of the dream comes out. If her husband should die, nobody would be sorry—least of all herself and Mr. X's brother. The ridiculous dream sums up a whole life tragedy—a tragedy, moreover, some aspects of which the dreamer would never willingly reveal to any human soul.

A DREAM A PROTECTIVE DEVICE.

But why, demands the bewildered skeptic, at this point, if an unhappy wife wants to dream that her lot of a husband is dead, that she is married again and is bringing up the children of a decent man, why doesn't she go ahead and dream it like a sensible woman, instead of trying to conceal a natural desire under a ridiculous symbolism? Because, replies the Freudian, her conscience will not let her. She will not admit, even to herself, that she wants to marry the other man; still less that she wishes that her husband were dead, so that she might. When the idea enters her mind, she puts it down forthwith—down into the unexplored region of the subconscious, and prays that it may never come up again.

Even in her sleep her conscience remains so far awake as to keep any such wicked idea out of her mind. But the "censor," to use the Freudian terminology, is easily deceived—most of us have observed that fact concerning our own consciences, even when wide-awake. So the dream which disguises itself as gay clothes and music, hides the redundant husband under the form of Mr. X, makes yucca blossoms of his children, and marches past the inspector undetected.

A dream, therefore, according to Freud, is a protective device for putting ourselves to sleep. An ardent desire rankles deep down in our mind and keeps us awake. Our conscience refuses to let us act it out, or talk it off our minds, or even think it off. So we get the idea past the censor as a symbolic dream, and slumber in peace.

Every dream, then, in the Freudian formula, is the more or less disguised fulfillment of a suppressed wish.—Edwin Tenney Brewster, in McClure's Magazine.

IN OUR DREAMS WE GO BACK TO CHILDHOOD EXPERIENCES.

Dreams often take us back to the experiences of early childhood. . . . They sometimes bring up long-forgotten incidents, faces, emotions, with surprising vividness. In dreams, as Dryden says:

Sometimes forgotten things long cast behind
Rush forward in the brain and come to mind.
The nurse's legends are for truth received,
And the man dreams but what the boy believed.

Day dreams also often take us back to childhood. Drowning persons are said to see their whole lives, including events in early life long lost from conscious remembrance, in the twinkling of an eye; perhaps this vision is somehow related—the projection of an instinctive, sudden, strong desire to live. Indeed, the latent content of every dream probably goes back for some of its elements, for a part at least of the desires which actuate it, to the experiences of childhood. These experiences have perhaps been forgotten; the early desires have for some reason been repressed. They reappear, however, in dreams, in which we live back into childhood again.

The dream usually seizes upon some experience of the preceding day—trivial because such incidents will be free of associations—and makes this a starting point, or point of crystallization, to which the old experiences may attach themselves. . . .

Just as the dream materials are largely derived from childhood, so in dreams we act and feel as children; we escape into an irresponsible world of play which has its only counterpart in childhood. In recounting our dreams we laugh at our strange actions in them, as we should laugh at the actions of children. In general the dream experiences, as compared with those of waking, have a kind of freshness and vigorous youthfulness about them, as if they stood nearer to life's source.—From Poetry and Dreams, by F. C. Prescott, published by Richard G. Badger.

ANOTHER THEORY OF DREAMS.

As an actual sound, heard by the sleeper, frequently becomes part of his dream, usually ending it, there is a theory that the sound is also the cause of the dream. For example, the ringing of a bell, according to the theory, causes the mind to recede, in point of time, and construct a piece of imagery, or a series of images, coming to a climax and ending abruptly at the ringing of the actual bell. This is difficult to believe, and there is no proof of its truth. There is evidence that dreams occur in much shorter time than seems to the dreamer; yet to say that the ringing of a bell could be both the origin and the final shock of the spectral drama is equal to saying that the play upon the imagination is instantaneous.

In a more logical, though less sensational theory, the dream could be understood as originating without reference to facts or disturbances in the external world. After a series of scenes in the sleeper's mind, a bell rings near him. He receives the impression and associates it with more or less relevancy to the situation at that stage of the dream. It may be that he is dreaming of a man walking along the road. The man on the road goes hither and thither and takes part in episodes that as yet have no bearing upon any fact in the external world. Upon the ringing of a housebell near the sleeper, he dreams that the dream man rings a dream bell. Thereupon the sleeper awakes. While this is fairly good evidence that the bell diverted the course of the dream from what it might have been, the proof is lacking that that bell is responsible for the complete fantasy.

There is another theory that the mind dreams continuously during sleep and that only at certain intervals is there an effect upon the memory. While this may or may not be true, there is every reason to believe that the sleeper had been dreaming for sometime before associating with his dream a sound from reality near him.—From Harper's Weekly.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Result of Prayer.

Dear Sisters: It was with a prayer of thankfulness that I read the letter addressed to the Prayer Union in the HERALD of January 22, 1913, requesting that January 30 be set apart as a day of fasting and prayer in behalf of our mission work in Jerusalem. It seemed to me that every sister, whose heart and soul was in this latter day work, would be glad to respond. May the subjects continue to be printed, is my prayer. I am going to tell you why.

Several years ago my youngest boy commenced to associate with bad company. His evenings were often spent at the pool table or in the saloon. The saloon keeper had once been a member of our church, but his name had been taken from the record. After using every effort to persuade him differently, I decided to take it to Him who has promised to help bear our burdens. Having read the requests, from time to time, sent in to the Prayer Union, I decided to write to the president of the Daughters of Zion that he be remembered. I looked forward to his future that if there was not a change there could be nothing but a wreck of his whole life. The result was, before two weeks had passed I overheard him say he was going to quit his wild life. I could see the effect that prayer had had with him.

While pleading in fasting and prayer, the following dream was given me. The saloon keeper and his associates were shown me. They were beckoning my boy to come with them. I would raise my hand at him to come with me. He would take a few steps with them, and then seemed to be coming with me. I watched them some time when I saw the saloon keeper break away from his associates and was coming with me, and my boy soon followed.

I have lived to see a part of this dream fulfilled. Why can I not hope for the rest? The saloon keeper was taken with a severe sickness, near unto death. My husband received a letter from him saying he had made a covenant with the Lord if he would spare his life he would be rebaptized. As soon as he was able he and his wife were baptized, and he was a faithful member until his death. My boy now has a good position and provides well for his wife and three little ones, and their names are on the cradle roll and his evenings are now spent in his own home.

I wish to state right here that when I received an answer from my letter written to the Daughters of Zion, I was very much surprised to learn they were not associated with the Prayer Union. She stated she was not opposed to them, but had so many other duties, however, she would send my requests to the Union. I wondered if it were possible that that organization was not connected with the Prayer Union, and oh, such a broad field opened up before me. I seemed to see the need of these organizations of women, that they should permeate the whole sisterhood of the church, and when the time came that the sisters felt the need of uniting together all the different societies of the church under the head of the Woman's Auxiliary, I could not but feel that the presentation given me at that time were from a higher source than man. When we see the work opening up among the red men of the forest, the Indian nation, and many of them coming into the fold, we realize the prayers of the ancient prophets are beginning to be fulfilled, and that, too, in our day. May it soon begin among the Jews, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Your sister in the one faith,

ELEANOR WHITING.

CLITHERALL, MINNESOTA, January 29, 1913.

"Seeing Him Who is Invisible."

A man can suffer and endure much if only he has the right company. God is present with his people when they need him most, and that presence is seen by the eye of faith.

When, therefore, Moses endured as seeing him who is invisible he was not an exception among God's people, but only one who saw more clearly and therefore endured more meekly than most of his brethren among the saints. "Lo, I am with you always" is the constant promise that sustains all who trust in God.

This felt and seen presence of God gives to the believer the presence of the highest moral standard. Men under trial have a strong and natural tendency to let down the standard and modify their testimony in order to avoid difficulty. What will sustain men under trial and make them firm in the maintenance of the right? It is seeing him who is invisible, who is absolutely right, just and holy. How could one deny God while he is seeing God? How could one deny his truth while He is standing by and listening?

The sight of God by faith brings the companionship of the deepest sympathy. Christ is not an indifferent spectator of the trials of his people. He has been tried and tempted as ourselves, and his heart has never been hardened by sin. He enters into the troubles of his people and suffers with them. Oftentimes suffering opens the eyes of faith, so that we see him in trial as we could not see him in prosperity, and the sight of his suffering strengthens us to bear all that He lays on us.

The sight of God by faith steadies us with the consciousness of his almighty strength. If we are weak, we have one present with us who is able to do all things.

The spiritual sight of God strengthens us when we are in the right, with the approval of the only just Judge. The countenance of our friends in what we do is the greatest of comfort, especially when we are sorely tried to reach a decision and have in our conclusion the condemnation of many whom we would fain please. To have the approval of God means that the light of his countenance is lifted upon us, even though others frown their disapproval. To have God with us is to have the victory, for his will will win; it is to have the approval of conscience and the assurance of vindication. Our judgment will at length come forth as the noonday.—Selected.

Notice.

It has been arranged, nothing preventing, to hold the business session of the Woman's Auxiliary on Tuesday morning, April 8, beginning at nine o'clock.

It is hoped that the sisters will make an especial effort to be present. We believe the work of this auxiliary is of sufficient importance to demand the attention of every sister in the church.

The evening session of the auxiliary has been appointed for Thursday evening, April 10.

ADVISORY BOARD,
Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service.

Requests for Prayer.

Sister Mary J. Williams, formerly of Plano, Illinois, now of Minneapolis, Minnesota, is ill with cancer, and requests the prayers of her brothers and sisters in the church.

Letter Department

GRINNELL, IOWA, February 14, 1913.

Editor Saints' Herald: I recently heard Senator Frank Cannon lecture at this place. He opened his discourse with these words: "What are you going to do about it, anyway?" Such, he said, was the exact language of Joseph F. Smith before the Senate Committee at Washington, District of Columbia, in defiance of that body of representatives of the people.

Senator Cannon went on to say that they were getting stronger instead of weaker; that they now controlled five States and were conspicuous in eleven, and if we did not do something with them they would with us; that they would soon put us on the defense. He said that Senator Smoot was found guilty of polygamy and treason, and what they wanted was to establish Mohammedan harems. Mr. Cannon read the purported revelation to the Utah Church. It read something as follows: If a man has a wife and she consents he may marry again, for he committeth no sin, for I have made her chaste; and again, if any man having ten wives and any one of the wives do not consent to his taking another, let her be destroyed, for I the Lord Jesus Christ have spoken it.

Senator Cannon read this from a book, but what the name of the book was I did not find out.

E. K. LESTER.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The book from which Senator Cannon read was very likely the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as compiled and used by the Utah Church. The revelation read by Mr. Cannon is accepted by them and is a law unto that church. That it was of divine origin or given to Joseph Smith, jr., has always been denied by the Reorganized Church.

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, February 13, 1913.

Dear Herald: One of the great pleasures I take in reading the HERALD is in reading the letters from the faithful brothers and sisters in different parts of the world; and at times when things look dark and discouraging, these letters seem to give new life and encouragement to go on with the rest in this great work.

I have been a reader of the HERALD for some time, and I am sure that the letters sent to it from faithful Saints do more good than they can realize.

I have lived in Seattle for the past six years, and I look back on the little branch of Saints at South Boardman, Michigan, once my home, and can see where the early training and examples received there have printed a lasting picture on my mind which has helped me through some of the temptations of a large city; and it seems good to read of the success of some of my young brothers there, with whom I spent my earlier boyhood.

We haven't a great many young people in our branch here, but what few we have are trying to exercise their talents for the advancement of the truth. It has been given in prophecy that there is a great work to be accomplished here, and though things have seemed discouraging at times in the past, yet we "trust the day is breaking, joyful times are near at hand."

We are just at the close of our district conference held here February 8 and 9. The young Saints gave an interesting entertainment on the Friday evening preceding, which seemed to be enjoyed by all. And during the conference we had the time of rejoicing such as is usually realized when the Saints meet together in unity and love.

We had a good attendance of Saints from all over the district, and the spirit of brotherly love that seemed to prevail with all, has left a sweet influence that makes it seem so good to be a Saint; and it seems pleasant to think of that great gathering of the faithful where there will be no parting. Pray for us, that we may be among the faithful.

Your brother in Christ,

EVAN E. INSLEE.

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, February 21, 1913.

Brother Editor: I think the various articles appearing in the HERALD are of much value. I am pleased to see the onward steps taken by our church organ. I have been a constant reader since February, 1865, one year before I was baptized, Sunday, February 16, 1866. I was born of the water on that date and had to cut the ice. After forty-seven years of experience in the good work, I am grateful that my faith is unshaken in the divinity of the same.

Your brother and colaborer,

WM. LEWIS.

MOUNTAINVILLE, MAINE, February 17, 1913.

Editor's Herald: As I pause a moment amid the mad rush and bustle of everyday life and cares, and reflect upon the goodness, love and mercies of our heavenly Father, in bestowing the blessings upon us, which we are constantly, almost unconsciously, receiving; while our minds oftentimes are upon other interests and works than his, I wonder at his love to the children of men, and his long-suffering towards us, who are so quick to forget and wander from him. And yet this is but a deplorable characteristic of the human race, from the days of Adam down to the present time. After all that the Father and the Son Jesus Christ, in their unbounded love and mercies have done for all, and especially for those of the household of faith, and are still doing, and with assurance of the future, yet how quick, how prone to wander in the paths of sin and forgetfulness of the great love and tender mercies of the God of our salvation, and the Author and Finisher of our faith.

Oh, that our minds might be opened, and our intellects expanded to that degree that we might the more appreciate, to say the least, the offerings of love of our heavenly Parent, and the sacrifices of his dear Son in our behalf. "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" As in the days when these words of inquiry regarding their souls' salvation, fell from the lips of that eager, questioning audience, let us answer in the words of Peter, Repent. If of the household of faith already, still let us repent, if we are failing in any degree and way of doing our whole duty to ourselves, our church, our families, our God. "Let us put on the whole armor of faith, and having done all, to stand." Let us, in other words, not fail to remember and do the word of wisdom; attend to all family duties and worship; pay our tithing as the Lord has commanded, and has and is providing for its accomplishment in and through us; attend services regularly, if possible, in his sacred house; and to pray in public as well as in secret, and to so let our lights shine out into a sin-darkened and sin-cursed world by our testimonies, both verbal and by right living, that others may see our good works and be led thereby to glorify our Father above. I sincerely believe that if with a glad heart and a cheerful countenance we do these things, together with a proper observance of all else given, examining ourselves (not our fellow men) to see if we be in the faith, we shall just as surely rise above the evil environments that surround us, as the water rises above its natural lines when dammed about and its current impeded. God is ever willing to help, but only those who are first willing to try to assist themselves. Prayers are answered when we, in a measure, strive by our own works to answer them ourselves.

So, dear Saints, let us earnestly strive to work out our own salvation; to study all good books, and especially those of our church; to watch and pray and make it apply to our own selves and not our neighbors; for, if we properly watch ourselves, we shall have no time left in which to watch for faults of others.

Saints, the time is short; eternity, just beyond, is long. Shall we then live and build for time or eternity? Which?

Ever praying for the success of the work, and the final triumph, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,

WALLACE A. SMALL.

Order of Enoch Lots.

One of the finest opportunities I know of, and which should not fail to interest all prospective gatherers to Zion, is the opportunity now open to secure one or more of those splendid lots held by the Order of Enoch.

It is such a proposition as I would recommend to my friends, and which will not fail to please as well as profit.

It is not a speculation, get-rich-quick scheme, such as are pestering every city and hamlet, but one which offers to the homeseeker a place in Zion.

The location of the lots is just on the edge of the city of Independence, within a few blocks of a car line. Everything bids fair for the car line to extend through the Order of Enoch property in the near future, which will but enhance the value and convenience of this already valuable property.

The price and terms of any of these lots is within the reach of all. The lowest priced lot being $125, and the highest $275, according to location. Twenty-five dollars down, and ten dollars per month thereafter are the terms.

The soil is a rich, black loam, lying well, and will, to all appearances, grow anything. It is exceptionally well adapted for fruit growing.

The lots are not small, but large, the average size being 50 by 138.

I might just say that while the lots are astonishingly cheap in comparison with other lots around the city, and of much greater beauty, owing to their commanding view of Kansas City and the Temple Lot, yet they offer no bonanza to the real estate man. No lot can be bought with a view to reselling at an increased price. Any person purchasing and afterwards desirous of selling, may do so, but an option of purchase must first be made to the Order of Enoch, and at the original purchase price. This will keep out the land shark and unscrupulous investor.

To my mind no better proposition has ever been offered the people of the Reorganized Church contemplating locating in Zion.

There is much that might be said concerning this property, but I forbear; will just add, however, that fifteen cents return car fare now exists between these lots and Kansas City, a city of two hundred thousand people, and it is but a question of time when this will be lowered to ten cents.

Personally I am not financially or selfishly interested in this property, nor do I write as a member of the Order of Enoch. I am writing merely as one who has been over the ground, and as one interested in the welfare of my brethren.

By all means get in on this, Saints, and get in early; they are going fast, and it is very questionable whether the order or anyone else will ever be able to offer real estate at such a low figure. I have just secured me two lots, and although I may not locate in Zion for some time, the lots will keep, and will always be a comfortable thing to look forward to.

Anyone desiring further information will please correspond with the bishopric at Independence.

In bonds,

D. MACGREGOR.

News from Missions

Utah.

Our work in this part is slowly developing, and we see a marked development here in Ogden, in attendance and interest, and it is very gratifying to see the work take on a new aspect here, and we are hopeful of the outcome, for with our numerical gain there seems to be also a spiritual development, and we trust also an intellectual advancement.

The good people here remember the needs of the "preacher" and his family, and we are assured there are better things approaching for the work in this city.

On the 4th inst. we took train for Pocatello, Idaho, having received a telephone message the day previous, requesting us to go there. On reaching the station we found Sister J. M. Daniels and one of her sons at the depot to meet us, and we were led by her to the Baptist church, where there were nightly revival services being held, and at the close of the meeting we were introduced to the revival evangelist, a Mr. Minaker, a very nice appearing man, and an excellent speaker. After a few pleasant words were exchanged Sister Daniels invited him to come to her house the following day and spend the afternoon with us; this he consented to do. The next morning we called on the newspaper editors and succeeded in getting very favorable representation in both the Tribune and Chronicle, respectively.

At the appointed time the evangelist arrived, and a very enjoyable afternoon was passed; peace and brotherly love characterized the interview, and all present were no doubt benefited. During our conversation we were permitted to give him a very clear idea of our work, its ethics and system; also a brief history of its rise and present condition and positions; also made clear the fact that Joseph Smith was not the author of polygamy and kindred evils, quoting to him Doctrine and Covenants 42:5 and 49:3 on the subject of marriage, also section 111, drawing out as we went along the purity of their teaching. We also gave him a brief outline of the Book of Mormon, how it came to bear the name, and also its historical and doctrinal claims, and how emphatically it condemned the practice of polygamy. We then showed him the difference between the God we worship and the one believed in by our Mormon friends of Utah. That the former was perfect, unchangeable, omnipotent, etc., while the latter was simply an exalted man, changeable and hence imperfect.

At the conclusion of our interview he expressed appreciation for the information received, and said, "I see by your conversation that your faith is built on Jesus Christ, and not Joseph Smith." We told him yes, our salvation depended on Christ, and that Joseph Smith, like others who had lived, was simply a witness for Christ. He said, "I'll tell the pastor you are all right, Brother Vanderwood," as he left the house, and that evening we attended the revival service again and met the pastor, and when he heard the name he grasped our hand very warmly and said, "Glad to meet you, brother, I read your piece in the paper to-night, and it is sound doctrine. Anything that is for the uplift of the people is good. God bless you, brother."

We held a few meetings at the home of Mr. Daniels. We call him brother, though he has not yet obeyed the form of doctrine, and on Sunday attended the Baptist Sunday school, and the superintendent came and asked us to offer prayer, which we did, and at the conclusion of the school the pastor said, "Come up on the stand, Brother Vanderwood, and offer prayer for us this morning," which we did and seemingly we had won the friendship of all. And the pastor told us his pulpit was open to us at any time in the future when it was not occupied by them.

On Saturday we supplied the Chronicle with a second article, by the solicitation of the editor, and we feel as if our visit to that city was timely. While there we were cared for at the hospitable home of Brother and Sister J. M. Daniels, and we also visited our aged Brother and Sister B. Crowshaw, and our energetic "soda water man," Brother George Chaffee and family, blessing their little daughter of about a month; also found a Sister Price, and Lockear, whom we used to know when a boy of six years, and the latter was baptized the same time I was, and by the same man.

On our return we stopped off at Oxford and visited our worthy Brother and Sister Jesse Hobson, and their family; also Brother and Sister John Baker, of the same place. From there we went to the city of Logan, Utah, where we visited the wife and family of our esteemed brother missionary, S. D. Condit; also her aged mother, who for years has been a stay to the work there. At the latter place we also visited our baby sister, who is attending school there.

Reached home again on the 13th inst., and found the Saints awake to their duties. We hope to yet be able to report better things for this part. May the good Lord hasten the day is our prayer.

Our attendance and interest at the church services here in Ogden are better now than for a long time, and we are optimistic, and look for a final triumph for the right on the part of the branch here. J. E. VANDERWOOD.

OGDEN, UTAH, 504 Canyon Road.

Salt Lake City, Utah.

Our district conference has just passed, and we are still in the harness. Of the general missionary force, there were with us on that occasion, Elders J. C. Chrestensen, J. E. Vanderwood, M. F. Gowell, and the writer, also Priest Charles S. Chase. Brother J. M. Stubbart was called from the field, just a week prior to the conference, by the sickness of his sister in Nebraska. By the way, the date of the conference was February 22, 23, with the auxiliaries the 21st.

There were some encouraging features in the progress of our work here during the past year, and we look for an advance along the line. Encouraging reports came from Ogden, where Brother Vanderwood and family are located.

Our sick are generally improving. Sister Salome Albertson, who has been very sick with spinal meningitis, contracted from a patient whom she was nursing, is convalescing nicely.

Weather conditions are good for the season, and we hope for better things in the future. As of old, "We are saved by hope."

Our "Elders' notebook," or "Loose leaf filler," is ready for mailing, and lest there be some who may not have noticed former announcements, will say that it is a collection of the pertinent excerpts from standard Mormon works, which we have collated in our eight years' work here. And we have issued only a very limited number, putting them out from the multigraph machine, ready for insertion in the I. P., or similar loose leaf notebooks. The size is 3 1-4 by 7 1-4 inches, and there are 118 pages, exclusive of the index. Price 50 cents for the "Filler," or $1.60 for filler and good leather cover.

I am sending you, under separate cover a copy of this work, and should the Herald Office see fit to issue this as a booklet, so that it may be supplied at a less cost in the field, as a tract or pamphlet, I think it would be a good thing for the cause, and you have our permission so to do. The edition we have put out in this form is limited to about a hundred copies.

Trusting that this may find you and all Lamoni and the Saints generally enjoying in goodly measure the blessings of the Master, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

A. M. CHASE.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, 712 East Fourth South.

Florida.

At present writing I am out in the country, eight miles from Pensacola, trying to tell the story of the gospel, the glad tidings of a risen Savior, and his love, as proclaimed by the angels to the shepherds of Galilee. I landed in this southern mission, at McKenzie, Alabama, January 4, 1913, and began work that same evening; and, since then, I have been laboring, as directed by the associate minister in charge, at the following places: McKenzie and Dixonville, Alabama; and Berrydale, Botts, and Pensacola, Florida. My preaching has been mostly to the Saints, and, as a rule, I have been blessed in my efforts. In fact, I don't think I was ever blessed more in presenting the word, taking my work as a whole, than I have been since coming to this mission; and for this I feel truly grateful to my heavenly Father.

At Berrydale, Florida, I had the pleasure of meeting the associate minister in charge, Brother F. M. Slover, and spending a few days with him. I was doing the preaching at Jacob's Chapel, Wayne County, Illinois, some twenty-six or twenty-seven years ago, when Brother Slover joined the church, and have been watching his development, spiritually and intellectually, ever since; hence it was quite a pleasure to be associated with him in the ministry, so far from where we were born and reared; after so many years have passed. We are neither one as young as we were then, but still have the gospel of Christ, and are glad to be permitted to labor in its interest.

My interest in the work was never greater, nor was my love for it ever stronger; and I am sure I never had a stronger desire to live the Christ life than I now have. And, as the years go by, the necessity for Christ in the soul becomes more and more indelibly impressed upon every fiber of my being; and I can the more fully realize, too, the fact that "Christ in you" is the only "hope of glory." But when I compare my life with that of the lowly Nazarene, I find myself lacking in so many essential graces that I am compelled to confess that the hope of my soul is far from being fully realized. And yet I feel determined, by the help of the Master, to continue the fight until the victory is won and the wished for goal is reached.

The work in this mission has certainly been well cared for, by those in charge and those who have labored under them, and is in fairly good condition. Room for improvement, of course, but that is the case everywhere. There is good talent all through the mission, so far as I have been, and much of it is being developed, too, for the Master's use. My address is McKenzie, Alabama.

Still in the conflict for Zion's redemption,

ISAAC M. SMITH.

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA, February 19, 1913.

News from Branches

Omaha, Nebraska.

The Omaha Saints are looking forward with pleasant anticipations to the visit of Brother G. T. Griffiths. He will lecture on Palestine on Friday and Saturday nights of this week, and preach for us on Sunday, March 2.

Brother J. M. Baker is with us at present, and we have enjoyed his good sermons very much. We are glad to have the missionaries pay us visits and talk for us, and hope that those passing through Omaha will not fail to call on us.

The Omaha Branch has been experiencing some very good services lately. During the past few months there has been a steady increase in interest and attendance. Our prayer services are very spiritual and well attended. The work seems to be prospering here, indeed, and the interest at the services is not the only indication of it, but the Spirit of the gospel is being put into operation, and greater efforts are being made to be of practical service.

At Christmas time the Sunday school and Religio combined with the church in collecting provisions and money for the poor, and a number of homes were made happy as a result.

There have been a number of sick among us, and many are still afflicted. General sympathy for them has been felt by the Saints here, and they are visiting and endeavoring to comfort and assist them. Some of the sick have received much help through administration.

The Northern Nebraska district conference was held here two weeks ago, preceded by the Sunday school and Religio district conventions.

The branch has purchased the beautiful lot next the church, which will be used to good advantage, especially by the summer school. The lot is shaded by large maple trees and will be a fine place for the school work and play grounds; also for summer entertainments.

The choir is doing good work. The Saints' choir in Council Bluffs is working with the Omaha choir on a cantata which will be given near Easter Sunday.

The Sunday school and Religio are working well and their officers are constantly alive to the interests of the societies. The programs of the Religio are always good, with very seldom less than four or five numbers. There have been some very interesting debates on the programs. The Zion's League, which has interested some who are not members of the church, is studying the Church History and increasing sociability among the young people. They are also assisting by various means to eliminate the debt of the branch.

The Ladies' Aid is helping, too. Their meetings, in our convenient basement, show that they are busy and alive to their work. They are turning out a number of quilts and other articles.

We are greatly encouraged in Omaha. There are many opportunities here for work and we have many young people here to help and we believe that splendid times are ahead of us, for the disposition of all seems to be to work, and we feel confident in proclaiming our slogan, "Watch the Omaha Branch grow."

CORRESPONDENT.

FEBRUARY 22.

Saint Louis, Missouri.

We feel grateful to our heavenly Father for the privilege of again hearing his blessed word delivered through his servant and apostle, Brother J. W. Rushton. Having completed a two-week series of meetings in Lansdowne, Illinois, Brother Rushton kindly favored Saint Louis with four discourses, which were full of enlightenment and strength, and we feel that the instruction will not soon be forgotten.

Our local officers are zealously working to build up the work, and we feel assured that their efforts will not be in vain. Besides the discourses delivered by Brother Rushton, edifying and instructive sermons were preached by Brethren S. A. Burgess, R. Archibald, and G. S. Trowbridge.

The regular priesthood meetings were held February 2 and 16. The Religio and Sunday school work is doing nicely.

The evening of February 21 the Mite Society had charge of the Religio program, and to say it was enjoyed is expressing it mildly. It might be termed to have been a double anniversary social as it was given in honor of the birth of the father of our country and the thirty-seventh anniversary of the Mite Society's organization. Our sisters are to be commended for the good work they have accomplished and we sincerely wish them success in their future work.

At our regular sacrament service the first Sunday of February, Brother Sawley, one of the missionary force of the Saint Louis District, was remembered in our prayers. We regret his affliction very much and trust he will soon be restored to health and strength.

Quite a number of children have been on the sick list, but we are pleased to report they are all better again.

Our sympathy is with Sister James and family in the death of Brother James, who passed from this earth life a few weeks ago. Brother S. A. Burgess officiated at the funeral services.

A goodly number of Brother Rushton's friends extended their best birthday wishes and congratulations to him at the home of Brother and Sister S. R. Burgess, the evening of February 12. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

Our district conference will convene March 15 and 16, at Saint Charles, Missouri. A good attendance is desired.

Your sister in Christ,

2739 GREER AVENUE.

ELIZABETH PATTERSON.

Good Cheer at Meals.

Good cheer should not be reserved for the banquet board alone. Every family's mealtime should have an element of sacred happiness in it. Eating with moderation, giving food its proper value by taking it slowly, enjoying the freedom of conversation which belongs to the privacy of the home should make this hour a special time when the best of personal experiences are brought forth for mutual edification. The mealtime should be the hour when care and pessimism should be left at the outer door, parents and children, relatives and friends meeting in happy communion.—Ruskin.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 Duties of the Branch Officers.—The Deacon - 225
 Notes and Comments - 230

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 How to Conduct the Prayer Service, by John F. Garver - 230
 Twelve Reasons Why I Believe the Book of Mormon, Part 1, by Charles Fry - 232
 Equality, Part 2, by J. W. Gilbert - 237

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 Dreams - 240

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN
 Eleanor Whiting - 242

LETTER DEPARTMENT
 E. K. Lester—Evan E. Inslee—William Lewis—Wallace Small—D. Macgregor. - 243

NEWS FROM MISSIONS
 J. E. Vanderwood—A. M. Chase—Isaac M. Smith. - 244

NEWS FROM BRANCHES
 Elizabeth Patterson. - 246

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - 247

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald," All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Notices.

The Saint Louis district conference will convene at Saint Charles, Missouri, March 15 and 16, 1913. Business meeting March 15, at 6 p. m. General routine business and election of delegates to General Conference. Those attending conference will be met at the Saint Charles bridge by committee, and escorted to place of meeting. Provide basket lunch as per the last two conferences. R. Archibald, district president, C. J. Remington, district secretary.

Quorum Notices.

Elder's Quorum of Western Iowa and Nebraska: Please send me your report at once. Report from time of organization, August 28, 1912, to March 1, 1913. Our blank form for reporting is not out yet, but mail me a report of your labors. W. R. ADAMS, Secretary, Logan, Iowa.

EIGHTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Owing to the large number of transfers which have occurred the past year, now reducing our quorum to a mere handful, we have deemed it wise not to send out report blanks, but to consider the quorum disorganized.

We have had no other officers than the undersigned for the past three years, and we are assured that those not enrolled in new quorum will soon be so transferred.

It is with regret that we find this step necessary and sever our association. Trusting, however, that it may prove for the good of the work of the whole, and for each one of us in particular, we heartily welcome this development.

Respectfully submitted,
 S. A. BURGESS, Secretary.

SAINT LOUIS, MISSOURI, February 21, 1913.

SEVENTIES.

To the Council of Presidents of Seventy: You adjourned at Independence, Missouri, April 1912, to meet March 27, 1913, at 7.30 p. m., at Lamoni, Iowa.

C. SCOTT, Senior President.

Northern Wisconsin.

To the Scattered and Isolated Saints in Northern Wisconsin; Greeting: We earnestly invite you to join our Sunday school ranks, in home study. The new graded lessons are so instructive everyone will enjoy them. Please let me hear from you, so I can help you with Quarterlies and to enroll with us and receive the benefit. Send me your name soon, so you can begin study.

MRS. RILLIE MOORE,
District Home Department Superintendent.

NECEDAH, WISCONSIN.

Error.

In HERALD of February 19 appeared an obituary of Isaiah David Roblett. The name should have been Isaiah David Rollett.

Died.

RINKENBAUGH.—Near Richmond, Missouri, February 23, 1913, Sister Annie Pearl Rinkenbaugh. She was born December 28, 1882, near Moberly, Missouri; united in marriage to Edward Rinkenbaugh January 10, 1899. Three children blessed this union; two boys preceded her in early childhood, and one daughter, Sister Ruby, aged nine years, remains with the father. She joined the Reorganized Church February 24, 1901, baptized by Elder Swen Swenson, and has lived as becometh a Saint. She was loved by all within the church, as well as those without. She stated that she was ready to go to her reward, hence we lose a sister from our midst that we could ill afford to lose, but with the Apostle Paul, she could say that it would be her gain. Funeral services at the home, in charge of L. F. Ferguson; sermon by J. W. Metcalf.

SHERMAN.—At Independence Missouri, Mildred M., daughter of Brother Roy and Sister Ester Sherman, aged 2 weeks and 4 days, died February 19, 1913. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery. Funeral service by Elder J. C. Foss, assisted by Welton Wood.

WHOLFORD.—Sister Sarah Elizabeth Wholford was born in Stephenson County, Illinois, January 15, 1838; died February 20, 1913, at her home near Barnard, Missouri. She, with her parents, moved to northwestern Missouri in 1856. The same fall she was married to Jonathan Wholford; to this union were born six children; five of whom, with their father, mourn the loss of a mother and friend. She united with the church May 24, 1893, Elder D. M. Rudd officiating, confirmed by Elders C. Williams and M. P. Madison to her covenant. She was faithful. Funeral from the home to a large number of sympathizing friends; sermon by Elder Arch E. McCord, Elder R. K. Ross assisting. Interment in Barnard Cemetery.

Ages-Old Perplexity.

Strange it is that the goddess who have sprung
 From evil doers, should fare prosperously,
 While good men, born of noble stock, should be
 By adverse fortune vexed. It was ill done
 For the gods thus to order lives of men.
 What ought to be is this, that godly souls
 Should from the gods gain some clear recompense
 And the unjust pay some clear penalty;
 So none would prosper who are base of soul.
 —Sophocles.

We are haunted by an ideal life and it is because we have within us the beginning and the possibility of it.—Phillips Brooks.

HOT BISCUIT,

*hot cakes, made with
ROYAL Baking Powder
are delicious, healthful and easily made.*

Did You Ever Spend a Winter in the South?

Did you ever visit the many delightful resorts along the Gulf Coast?
Did you ever go motoring along Florida's beaches?
Did you ever go touring through scenic Cuba?
Have you ever enjoyed the many delights of a trip through Southern Texas?
Have you ever traveled through Old Mexico where the cold northern winter is turned to balmy summer?

Why Not Go This Winter?

There are special winter tourist rates to all principal points. The cost is low. The climate is positively ideal. The resorts are numerous. The hotels are good. The opportunities for all forms of outdoor sports are almost without limit. And the trip will bring the most pleasure, if you go via the Burlington. Come in and let's talk it over. If I haven't detailed information about the attractions of the particular place you wish to visit, I can and will get them for you in a hurry.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success.
No. 248a, cloth ..... 75c

THE OLD JERUSALEM GOSPEL. This book by Elder Joseph Luff has become one of our best and widest known and read book. There is a reason for this. Get the book and read it and you will not need to have anyone tell you why.
Order No. 248, cloth ..... 75c

A GERMAN EDITION of a Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Just issued. Order No. 280b. Paper, 25c.

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,750.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good lively business. Address, 8-tf
VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, Independence, Mo. 6-tf

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant.
No. 216, cloth ..... 75c

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.
For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

WITH THE CHURCH IN AN EARLY DAY, is a book in which the trying times of the latter day apostasy are vividly pictured. A story that elevates the reader and makes him strong for the right.
Cloth No. 243 ..... 75c

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children.
Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

JOSEPH SMITH DEFENDED, by Elder J. W. Peterson. A useful book for not only the investigator but also for the more mature student. It sweeps away many of the false ideas regarding the prophet.
Order No. 241, cloth ..... 50c

German Edition of the Book of Mormon (Das Buch Mormon.) Order No. 88a. Cloth, $1.00.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 12, 1913

NUMBER 11

Editorial

A SHORT-LIVED REPUBLIC.

We have for some time thought of writing a short article in reference to the overthrow of the Diaz regime of government in Mexico and the installation of Madero. A year ago last October a revolution which had been running for some months culminated in the success of an aspirant to the office of president, Francisco I. Madero. It seemed at the time to be a successful settlement, the election of a man sufficiently able to make proper selection of assistants and to carry on an administration of a republic successfully; but on yesterday there came what indicates that the Republic of Mexico, under the regime of President Madero, was short-lived.

He had been requested by his friends and members of his cabinet to resign, but he refused to do so, but under the directions of General Huerta he was arrested and has been held as a prisoner, while General Huerta has been made president of the provisional government until an election can be held for the purpose of securing a permanent president.

The fact is that for some days there has been such a revolt going on in the city itself as to remind one of Mexican history, of the advent of Cortez many years ago into the city, and also the fact that General Winfield Scott, of the United States Army, marched into the city of Mexico in 1846 with a band of ragged soldiers numbering six thousand, in the suppression of hostilities arising from the struggle between Mexico and Texas, when the Lone Star State was being brought into existence. Those who are familiar with the history and the city could write an interesting story of the peculiar conditions which have prevailed in Mexico for the past three quarters of a century at least. It would almost seem doubtful whether there is a sufficient amount of patriotism left in the city and country for the harassed and troubled people to secure a ruler under whose rule the country may remain at peace and thrive.

A few words spoken by General Blanquet just prior to the arrest of Madero are significant and sound almost like a wail, though it is a striking and intelligent truth:

"This inhuman battle must end. The time has come when some drastic means must be taken to stop a conflict in which father is killing son, and brother is fighting against brother; when noncombatants are sharing the fate of war—and all this because of the caprice of one man."

We give the language as published in the press dispatches, and commend the reading of it to thoughtful readers who have been studying the Mexican problem in sympathy with the people.

It is less than two weeks from date (February 20) that the administration of the affairs of the Government of the United States will pass from the Republicans into the hands of the Democratic Party and the incoming Woodrow Wilson. It seems a pity that there should be such a field for activity of real statesmanship with which the incoming administration is confronted. Mr. Taft was not a warrior and yet he was commander in chief of the United States Army. Governor Woodrow Wilson is not a warrior and yet when he takes up the duties of the office of president he becomes the commander in chief of the United States forces. It is to be hoped that the Mexicans themselves, following the line of thought suggested by General Blanquet in the words we have quoted, will, in a few days, create a better condition of affairs and modify the situation.

It would seem there is active revolt the whole length of Mexico. This condition of things on the southeast of us and the territory of war going on in the southern part of the Eastern Continent are at least auguries of strange changes in government which must soon take place. Let us hope that the Lord, having governed the world while we who represent the church movement, have been sojourning upon it, will continue to rule well after the few prominent stirrers of strife for selfish personal ambition have passed off the stage of activity, and saner, sober men have been called to administer the public affairs. It is a situation which demands careful, prayerful watching and waiting.

A FRIEND GONE TO HIS REST.

DEATH OF JUDGE GEORGE EDMUNDS.

Judge George Edmunds died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. J. Scofield, in Chicago, at 9.30 p. m. Monday, February 17, 1913, aged 90 years, 10 months, and 7 days.

The body was brought to this city this morning and taken to the home of Judge C. J. Scofield, where the funeral will be held this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Judge Scofield officiating. The interment will be at Carthage cemetery in charge of the Masons.

The body was accompanied to this city by Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Scofield, Mrs. A. N. Cherrill, Sidney Cherrill, and L. G. Hand of Chicago; Doctor Royden Tull, of Rockford, and Mrs. Fred Miller of Dallas City.—Carthage Republican.

We place the foregoing obituary before the readers of the HERALD, for the reason that the man of whom it was written was within the knowledge of the editor of the HERALD, not only an able man in the profession in which he served, but he was a friend to the people. He made no profession of religion, but when we first met him in the city of Nauvoo, to which place he came from New York State, he was a rising attorney and made himself friends of the people among whom he had chosen to cast his lot. He was among those whom we called "new citizens," who moved in after the driving out of the inhabitants had occurred; and by reason of an association with the courts as a lawyer, he was selected as an associate with Almon W. Babbitt and J. D. Heywood in assisting to settle the affairs of the church, looking after the properties of both the body politic and individuals.

We met him under circumstances which brought out the qualities of the man, and we feel safe in saying that he merits the just commendation of those who were then living in Hancock County, and during the further years of Mr. Edmunds's life which were passed in the county and in the active participation of business and political affairs of the county.

He became a friend to the family of the Martyr and it was by virtue of his efforts before the courts that the widow of the Prophet Joseph Smith and her family secured the rights of property of which they had been deprived by those who were more fond of filthy lucre than they were of the rights of individuals. We do not care to recall many of the scenes which transpired in which Mr. Edmunds took part with the citizens and especially with the family of the Martyr. Suffice it to say that in cases of necessity he faithfully represented the trust placed in him, and it was through his efforts that proper settlement of the affairs of Joseph Smith the Martyr was successfully made after his death, in favor of his widow, his receipts for so doing being far too inadequate for the services rendered. In speaking of it in subsequent years Judge Edmunds simply said he did what he believed to be his duty, and it was sufficient for him to do that; that he thwarted the designs of men who calculated to do an injury to the family.

He was a fearless man and presented his opinions fearlessly whenever and wherever it was necessary that he should do so. We stood near him one day in Main Street of Nauvoo, near the office of the justice of the peace when a man came up whom he had beaten in the courts in suit, angry, and threatened to kill him, and put his hand in his pocket as if to draw a weapon. Mr. Edmunds straightened himself to his full height, and he was fully six feet tall, and looking the angry man in the face told him that he was a coward, and that he would hurt no one, and he apparently bared his breast or drew his vest apart, and challenged him to keep his threat. It lasted for only a moment or two, when the man, either ashamed or rebuked by the fearless manner in which Mr. Edmunds met his assault, took his departure.

We were sufficiently near him to see all that took place and hear all that was said. After it was over, we having business with Mr. Edmunds, asked him the question, if he was not in fear of the man, and he replied that he was a cowardly man and he really did not think he had courage to shoot anybody.

Visiting Hancock County somewhere about 1890, we visited Carthage, the county seat of Hancock County, where Mr. Edmunds resided and found him in his law office connected with W. C. Hooker, actively engaged in the affairs of jurisprudence of the county and other affairs that might be intrusted to him as a lawyer. We knew that he had been engaged in business in which he had sunk quite a respectable sum of money and asked him how it happened. He looked up and laughed, and said: "You find me just where you first met me. I am at work as a lawyer because of necessity." We expressed thought that he was too old. At this he said it made no difference, he felt well. He continued in active pursuit of his legal profession from that time until failing health compelled him to desist.

The last time we met Mr. Edmunds was in 1908, when we visited him at his residence in Carthage. He was then in his eighty-fifth year and had been passing through quite a severe sick spell, but was slowly improving.

Mr. Edmunds was engaged with the Presidency of the church as a legal adviser in drafting the constitution and by-laws of the church previous to its incorporation. He was also a counselor with others in conducting the Temple Lot Suit, and his name in such connection may be remembered by the readers of the HERALD.

Mr. Edmunds always held the officers of the Reorganized Church in high regard and was always a friend to the family of the editor in chief. We take pleasure in recording our conviction that the legal fraternity of the State of Illinois loses a man of brilliant acumen and steadfast principles of honesty and uprightness, and the people whom he served have lost a friend. It may be said of him: "He has done what he could, and goes down to his rest like a shock of corn, fully ripened for the harvest."

MAGAZINE NUMBER OF THE HERALD.

DEVOTED TO THE WORK OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE MARTYR.

On April 2 the HERALD will issue a magazine number of extraordinary interest. We give below a list of special articles, subject to change, providing lack of space shall crowd any of them out.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT:

1. "The line of attack and defense; religious ideas introduced by Joseph Smith." This is a review of methods of attack upon our work, and our line of defense, and a statement of eight important religious ideas advocated by Joseph Smith. Illustrated with interesting views, including one of the forest where the first vision occurred, another of the room where the second vision was received, and numerous others of interest.
2. "Autograph letters of Joseph Smith to his wife Emma." Facsimiles of two intensely interesting letters. The first written from Carthage Jail just a few hours before his death, probably the last words that he penned. The other written in chains from the jail in Richmond in 1838. These letters wrench the heart, while they give a true insight into the life of this man.
3. "Character sketches of Joseph Smith." Taken from readings by leading phrenologists, and from writings of personal friends and from observers not members of the church. Illustrated.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

4. "The Tragedy at Carthage," By W. E. LaRue. Extract reprinted from our "Historical Series." Illustrated.
5. "Among our poets." Poems by some of our well-known writers of verse, including, "The tomb of the martyrs," by Eleanor Waldorf Kearney.
6. "Joseph Smith; his reaffirmation of the eternal verities," by Charles E. Crumley. Illustrated.
7. "Joseph Smith; his attitude toward property, its distribution and uses," by Bishop Joseph Roberts. Illustrated.
8. "Joseph Smith; his prophecies," by F. M. Cooper. Illustrated.

9. "Joseph Smith; his influence on modern religious thought," by Mark H. Siegfried. Illustrated.

The cover design is in colors. On the second page of the cover is reproduced a song composed by David H. Smith, with music by Audentia Anderson, "The unknown grave," referring to the fact that for many years the location of the tomb of the Martyrs was known only to the immediate family.

This will be one of the most interesting magazine numbers that we have ever published. Extra copies will be on sale during conference, or can be ordered by mail from the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, for 5 cents each, 50 cents per dozen.

EVIL EFFECTS OF ADULATION.

A SEVENTEENTH CENTURY TRUTH, TAKEN FROM "MASTERPIECES OF THE WORLD'S LITERATURE," WRITTEN BY JEAN BAPTISTE MASSILLON,
WHO LIVED FROM 1663 TO 1742.

"It is adulation that makes of a good prince, a prince born for the ruin of his people; that turns sovereignty into oppression; and that, by lauding the weakness of kings, renders even their virtues contemptible. Yes, sire, whoever flatters his masters betrays them: the perfidy that deceives them is as criminal as that which dethrones them: truth is the homage due to them: there is little difference between the treachery of the flatterer and that of the rebel: one holds no longer to honor and duty when he holds no longer to truth, which alone honors man, and is the foundation of all duties. The same infamy which punishes safety should appeal to the laws that have omitted to number it among the great great crimes to which they award punishment, for it is as criminal to make an attempt on the good faith of princes as on their sacred persons, to be wanting in respect to truth as to be wanting in fidelity, since the enemy who would destroy us is still less to be feared than the flatterer who seeks only to please us."

CANADIAN ITEMS.

We are by letter informed that some of the brethren have made a purchase of land on the shore of Lake Erie, lying south from the city of Toronto, at a place called Low Banks, which is to be fitted up to be used for reunion grounds. They have had no suitable ground directly under their jurisdiction, but this purchase will guarantee them a good place for meeting. Adjacent to the field purchased is one that may be used for outdoor recreation during the sessions of the reunions that are held there.

The grounds are so purchased, as we understand it, that those desiring to erect cottages for occupation may do so without cost of the purchase of the land. It is an excellent scheme and worthy of good success. We wish the brethren ample success and an opportunity to use their well-acquired purchase.

The meeting at the Princess Theater at Toronto, Ontario, on the 9th inst. was not so large as on the second, for reasons not stated, evidently unfavorable weather.

We also learn that a Reverend Doctor Charlton, according to notice given, visited Mitchell, Ontario, and gave the Saints or those that turned out to hear him, a roasting lecture, full of astonishing revelations of Joseph Smith, his character, doctrines, etc. The Saints sent for Brother R. C. Evans, who found time to go up and present himself, ready to meet the reverend gentleman, and in the absence of opportunity for discussion which was not granted, Brother Evans proceeded to put up a good defense, and to show the community the character of the information that the reverend gentleman boasted of possessing. It evidently must have reminded the Saints of the years that are gone when they had to meet discussion almost everywhere they went. It is sufficient for us to say that the effort of Brother Evans was well received and understood to be quite successful.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Church Secretary requests that all delegate credentials to General Conference be mailed to him promptly on appointment, that the report of the committee on credentials be made up and published before the opening date, as provided by conference action. Credentials should not be held to be forwarded by the hands of delegates.

The press generally is noting the slow progress of the churches of America during 1912. According to the annual return of the Government statistician, H. K. Carroll, the membership of the various churches as a whole show a much smaller gain than they did in 1911. On account of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, in which several millions of dollars was reported to be spent, the increase in church membership was confidently expected to show greater increase than before. Some say the increase would appear were it not for the counteracting influence of evolution and the higher criticism. Others declare the people have gone amusement-mad, and have deserted the church for the halls of fun and pleasure. However, the fact remains, and there's a cause. Daniel in his prophecy says, "the wise shall understand," while the wicked shall do wickedly, in "the time of the end." Paul seems to point to this case in his letter to Timothy, in which it appears that "in the last days" religious people shall have "a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof." These same would be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." (2 Timothy 3: 1-5.)

Original Articles

TWELVE REASONS WHY I BELIEVE THE BOOK OF MORMON.--PART 2.

AN ARGUMENT IN TWO PARTS, BY CHARLES FRY.

8. IT IS SUPPORTED BY COMPETENT WITNESSES.

Human testimony must be given reasonable consideration. In the civil courts, the testimony of two or more unimpeached witnesses is sufficient to condemn or deliver one charged with crime. It is possible sometimes for a witness to testify falsely and escape detection, but it is hardly possible for a number of men entering into a conspiracy to testify falsely and escape detection upon investigation. The Book of Mormon has a number of witnesses, and if their testimony is untrue the only conclusion possible is that they conspire to perpetrate a fraud which, if thoroughly investigated, could not escape exposure.

One Witness.

The Book of Mormon has at least twelve witnesses. First, Joseph Smith, to whom it was first revealed. His whole life was a testimony of its truthfulness, and he sacrificed that life in its prime, in confirmation of that testimony. His testimony was that the book was a true record, and that the power to translate it was a gift from God. He never varied nor contradicted that testimony.

Three Witnesses.

Second, Three witnesses; Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris. These men did not depend upon humanity for their knowledge, but they testified "that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brought and laid before our eyes, that we beheld and saw the plates, and the engravings thereon," "and we also know that they have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice hath declared it unto us, wherefore we know of a surety that the work is true." (Read their full testimony in the Book of Mormon.) There is no uncertainty or hidden doubt in this testimony, but a plain, positive statement of fact as they knew it. These men lived long enough to see difficulties and disruption in the church, and some of them became estranged from Joseph Smith and the church, but each one repeatedly affirmed the former testimony until the time of his death. Strong pressure was brought to bear upon them to induce them to deny their testimony, but in vain.

Eight Witnesses.

Third, eight witnesses. These men were shown the plates with the engravings, not by the power of God, but by Joseph Smith, and they handled and examined them—so they testified. (Their full testimony may also be found in the Book of Mormon.)

These twelve men bore witness to the divinity of the Book of Mormon; if that witness was false, they had formed a conspiracy that could not have escaped exposure in the distressing times that followed. But no exposure came. They became divided in other matters, but stood together in that testimony. Some of them for nearly sixty years continued to affirm it; not one denied it. If they had testified falsely, and had not cared to renounce it because of the reflection on their characters, they certainly would have kept silent about it in after years; but not so. As many as history gives us knowledge of, were very positive in reaffirming their testimony, even on their deathbeds. Can such a number of witnesses be "turned down," or such testimony be rejected as of no consequence? We think not. Their testimony must be impeached, or we must stand condemned if we reject it.

9. IT FILLS AN URGENT NECESSITY FOR SUCH A BOOK.

A Second Witness with the Bible.

The Bible has been given for the instruction and guidance of the world in the way of salvation. It teaches the religion of Jesus Christ and sets forth the organization of his church. It clearly teaches one faith, one way, one church. But has the world understood? Have men held to the one faith? Have they preserved their integrity of the one church? A score of creeds, and a hundred churches answer "NO." Then why all this difference, confusion, and division? The answer can only be that men have not understood; or, if having understood, they are unwilling to do according to that which is written. Is there not a need then that God should speak again and make plain his will? The Book of Mormon comes as a revelation from God, teaching the same doctrine as the Bible, calling mankind to a belief in the simple truths of the gospel and a perfect obedience to its ordinances. If men have not understood before, they are now without excuse, for this book has made clear and confirmed the truths of the Bible. It is a second witness, coming from another nation and bearing the same testimony of God and his truth. From a religious standpoint the need of such a book is evident.

Aside from doctrine and matters of organization, there are many prophecies and promises in the Bible that can not be fully understood from the Bible alone. Prophecies relating to the scattering and gathering of Israel, and many other subjects, are enlarged upon and made more clear by the Book of Mormon.

Of Importance to the Heathen.

Again, this is a missionary age, and efforts are being made to carry a knowledge of Christ into every land and to every people. Proportionately, but few of the heathen have accepted him. The Book of Mormon makes a second witness for Christ, and used with the Bible, will have far greater weight in converting the heathen than either one alone. This is one of the main purposes the Lord had in giving the book (see preface), and though the book has not been used very much in this way in the past, the need exists, and the future is before it in which to supply that need.

Gives Information of America's Past.

America has a great past. This is told by the many remains found upon the land in all parts: the mounds of endless variety upon the plains; the artificial caves and cliff dwellings among the mountains; the ancient copper mines of the lake regions, and the ruined cities of Mexico, Central and South America. The walls of temples and other buildings, the ruined archways, images, and tablets are marked with the ancient writing. Men of learning have labored long to decipher these writings and unfold the mystery of America's past, but in vain. We know great nations lived here, but we do not know who they were or whence they came. We know they had a high degree of civilization, but we do not know what form government they had, or what their laws were. We do not know the extent of their arts and sciences, their manufactures and commerce, their religion, or their social development. All these things and many more are almost entire mysteries, and the world would now give fortunes to learn them.

But the Book of Mormon tells this story. It tells of the great nations who lived here, where they came from, how they developed into greatness, and the cause of their decline. It tells of their education, laws, governments, commerce, and religion. It unfolds America's past; it supplies this great need.

Why the World Does Not Accept It.

Its claims for divinity, however, are the cause of its prompt rejection by the world at large. But why object to that feature of the book? We know the people have been taught that God would not reveal himself any more to mankind, but the Bible warrants no such teaching. It is only by the providential act of God that we could ever know these mysteries of America's past. All efforts of humanity to find out have resulted in no true knowledge; they are vain, and to all present appearances, must for ever remain so; and if men are to ever know America's past, it can only be by the revelation of God. The Book of Mormon was written by men of God and preserved by them, by his command, until the destruction of the righteous part of the nation, when the last writer was commanded to bury it in the earth. The only way it could be restored to men was by a revelation from God, showing some one its resting place, and after possession of the record was gained, it would be of no value as a record (because no one could read it—the language being unknown) except God should miraculously provide for its translation. There is a great need for “divinity” then in learning America’s past, and the book of Mormon not only supplies the need of knowledge; but claims the divine part as well to have come in the only way that was possible and consistent under the circumstances. The religious feature of the book, or its claims for divinity, do not stand in the way of our acceptance of it.

10. MANY OF ITS PROPHECIES HAVE BEEN FULFILLED.

Prophecy a Sure Test.

A prophetic work provides its own judgment. So long as its prophecies are being fulfilled it may stand, but so soon as its prophecy fails it must go down—condemned. No man apart from the inspiration of God can give a series of prophecies that time will fulfill. The fulfillment of Bible prophecies is the strongest evidence we have to-day of its inspiration, though all of them are not yet fulfilled. The Book of Mormon is a prophetic book, and so far as time has permitted, its prophecies have been fulfilled; some remain for the future. Its critics have never pointed out one prophecy in it that has failed. A few that have had fulfillment since the publication of the book in 1830 may be referred to briefly.

America to be Delivered from Other Nations by the Power of God.

On page 24 there is a prophecy that the people of this land (in the last days) should be delivered by the power of God out of the hands of all their enemies. This has been true before and since 1830. One after another the American colonies have risen up against their mother countries, and notwithstanding their weakness and the strength of other nations who held rule over them, their bondage has been broken and they have become free. These same mother nations have held their colonies in other parts of the world, and have conquered and ruled smaller nations, but not in America. The decree of God went out thousands of years ago that the people (Gentiles) of this land should be free from other nations. It is true that foreign nations hold a few sections of the land yet, but time may change even this; besides, these colonies mostly have “home rule.”

A Land of Liberty—No Kings.

Another prophecy on page 76 says that “this land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles: and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles—for he that raiseth up a king unto me shall perish.” This has had a continual fulfillment until the present. The prophecy implies, however, that some might attempt to establish themselves as kings; but if so, it says they shall perish. During the Civil War in the United States, Maximilian sought to establish his throne in Mexico, but he had scarcely begun to rule as a king when he was taken by the armies of his own country and executed.

America to Be Protected from All Other Nations.

This prophecy also says, “I will fortify this land against all other nations,” and on page 50 it says, “The Lord God will raise up a mighty nation among the Gentiles, yea, even upon the face of this land” (America). These two have been, and are being fulfilled. The United States has grown to be a mighty nation, and is still growing. By the principle known as the “Monroe doctrine,” first stated in the message of President Monroe in 1823, but enlarged upon from time to time, this Nation now occupies the position of a mighty sentinel over the whole Continent of America. This Nation forbids the acquisition of land in any part of America, either by purchase or conquest, by any foreign nation. Nations have looked with greedy eyes upon the rich lands of America, but knowing that the taking of one foot would bring them into conflict with the United States, because of its declared policy, they have been restrained. So America is protected, and the Book of Mormon prophecy has been and is being fulfilled.

The True Church to Be in All Parts of the World, Though Small in Number.

The Book of Mormon on page 28 speaks of the establishment of the church of God, and states that its number will be few because of wickedness, nevertheless the church would be upon all the face of the earth, and the dominions of the Saints would be small because of the great wickedness in the world. Following the publication of the Book of Mormon, and in the same year, the Church of Jesus Christ was organized by divine command, and a ministry commissioned to preach the gospel. The church has been spreading slowly against the great opposition, until now it occupies in many parts of the world, though its members are few, according to the prophecy. The future is still before it to spread into every part.

We might refer to many other prophecies of similar character, which the years of fulfillment that have followed have proven true. This, then, is one of the strong proofs of the divinity of the book, and so far as “the eternal years of God” have passed judgment upon it, we are placed under the obligation of believing it.

11. IT PROVES THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD OVER THE WHOLE WORLD.

A Bible Doctrine.

The Bible presents God to us as the God of the whole earth, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."—Psalm 24: 1. "From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth."—Psalm 33: 14. "He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek after the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him."—Acts 17: 25-27.

Historical Proof Not in Bible.

These statements are very clear, and Christian people believe them because they are in the Bible; but the fact that they are in the Bible does not give us the proof of their fulfillment. The Bible does not give us historical proof of other nations than the one in Canaan, having their places appointed of God. It gives us no historical proof of other nations seeking after God and finding him, except individual Gentiles who came to God through the preaching of the apostles, and these would not be the fulfillment of the prophecy.

Book of Mormon Gives Proof.

The Book of Mormon tells us of at least two nations upon whom the Lord looked, besides Israel in Canaan; it tells that God appointed their habitation, that they sought after the Lord and found him. It gives historical proof that God is no respecter of persons, and that other nations received light and salvation from him. In its teachings it also confirms the Bible testimony of the character of God, and of his regard for all men of every nation who will serve him. "He denieth none that come to him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen, and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile."—Page 99.

In this as in all other attributes, it truly represents God, and establishes his universal Fatherhood.

12. THE HOLY SPIRIT CONFIRMS ITS DIVINITY.

Without this, my reasons for believing the Book of Mormon would not be complete. Divine truth in the willing believer is attended with the confirming testimony of the Spirit of God. Jesus said to his disciples: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth."—John 16: 13. "The Spirit of truth whom the world can not receive."—John 14: 17.

The work of this "Spirit of truth" is to confirm the truth; and how often has it been, that in reading the Book of Mormon there has come the peaceful assurance, confirming our belief in it. Nor are we alone in this testimony. Hundreds of true Latter Day Saints have borne testimony to the same thing.

God Promises to Confirm.

The last prophet who wrote in the book, in writing a farewell statement to the remnants of his people in the last days (the Indians), says: "And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye ask with a sincere heart with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you by the power of the Holy Ghost; and by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things."—Page 544. As God is no respecter of persons, the promise stands true to all. Those who may not be able to search out the evidences and satisfy themselves thereby, but truly desire to know with a sincere heart, may go direct to God. The Book of Mormon promises a reply; it says, "He will manifest the truth of it unto you by the power of the Holy Ghost." The Bible says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James 1: 5. So God can, and will, answer for his own work, if men will go to him with sincere purpose of heart. Many who have so done have testified that God has been true to his word and has manifested unto them the truth of the book.

CONCLUSION.

Other reasons might be given, but these are sufficient. My faith in the Book of Mormon has grown strong through a study of its pages. There was a time when I did not believe it, but it was because I did not know what it was. I was still skeptical in regard to it when I entered the church, and the testimony of my brethren was not sufficient to convince me. It was only through reading and study when the real character of the book unfolded to my mind, that my prejudice faded away like snow under the summer sun. My testimony may not convince you, dear reader, but if it arouses your interest and causes you to investigate and search until you receive the same satisfaction that I have received, in an unre-served belief of the book, my highest purpose in writing will be fulfilled. In this short paper I have not been able to give much more than a mere statement of things, as to supply all the proofs would require no small volume. We invite a careful reading of the book, to see if these things are not so.

The Evidences Sufficient.

To me these evidences are convincing. The divinity of the Bible itself rests on no stronger, nor more numerous evidences than what we have stated of the Book of Mormon. Internal and external evidences, testimonies of believers and unbelievers, of friends and foes, of man and of God, of the relics of ancient times, and of the Holy Scriptures, all unite in confirming the truthfulness and sacredness of that volume. If true, can anyone afford to disbelieve or reject it, for in doing so will he not reject the God who gave it, and the Christ it teaches? Will anyone be justified in the day of judgment, in rejecting it without having investigated and found out for himself? We have been taught to "reject that which is evil, and cleave unto that which is good," and no one can do that without a proper investigation.

The fact that the book is "everywhere spoken evil against," or that it has been brought under reproach by some of its professed but false followers, is no evidence against it, for all good things that have ever come to the world from God, have passed through like conditions.

May the Lord help every true soul to see the full light of the gospel, and enter into the true fold of God, that he may be saved in his kingdom!

• * * * •

EQUALITY.

(In three parts.—Part 3.)

BY J. W. GILBERT.

Some may object at first thought to the principle that men should receive only what they need for what they can do, on the ground that no one has a greater right to the worker's overplus of product than the worker himself, which is true when qualified with the fact that in an organized order of society which assumes the responsibility of providing an opportunity for all, and of caring for the helpless and infirm and disabled, this overplus of product of each one who can produce, is required by the altruistic principle, to provide for those who can not produce by reason of being physically or mentally incapacitated. A society that will not thus provide for its helpless ones, is only an aggregation of brutes, and until it learns better, should make no claim to being much above the brute.

When this overplus reaches the enormous proportions that it necessarily must when the waste attending competitive methods is eliminated, and the astonishingly economic saving through cooperative methods is established, together with the great gain through labor-saving machinery then the standard of living can be raised, and the hours of labor cut down, giving all better homes, better clothing and food, and leisure for recreation, and time to pursue the higher things of life which are also needed to round out life to perfection.

The revelations of God to the church on temporal affairs provide for a storehouse in which this overplus may be kept, "both in money and in meat," to minister to any who may need, being the best and safest insurance that could be devised; for every man, in the organization provided for, stands back of every other man with the whole of his efforts above his living. It will serve the society as the very best medium through which an exchange in kind can be made, thus eliminating all phases of middlemen with their profits. Not, however, solely because they take profit, for some do not make more than a living, which is legitimate for services rendered; but because it is too wasteful a way of serving out supplies to the people.

To illustrate the waste: Smith makes shoes. Jones makes clothing. They live a long way apart. Thompson sees an opportunity to buy shoes of Smith and take across country and sell to Jones, and also to buy clothing of Jones and take back to sell to Smith. Now, suppose Thompson makes no profit, and charges only enough more than what he pays for these goods to support himself and family while engaged in the work, (which service is the function of retailers, and legitimate to the extent of a living out of the business).

After a time another man comes on the scene needing employment, and also decides to engage in the work of buying shoes of Smith and clothing of Jones and trafficking back and forth. If he gets his share of the trade, it will reduce Thompson's volume of business and he will not have enough to live on, neither can the newcomer make a decent living. They would be cutting each other's throats in a business sense. So they raise the price on their goods in order to live. This results in Smith having to pay more for the clothing he must have, and Jones more for the shoes he needs.

Then imagine two or three more men engaging in the same kind of traffic without a commensurately greater number of patrons in the community, and you have some idea of the waste of the present haphazard, unorganized system of exchange in every town and city in our land to-day, where there are hundreds and thousands more engaged than the business will bear. This is one of the causes of the high price of living.

Trafficking for profit adds nothing to the aggregate wealth product of a community, and does not enrich anyone by actual increase, but by shifting the ownership from one man to another. The only real increase to society is in producing something that will minister to the needs of humanity.

Society to-day is unorganized on the economic field. The furnishing of the world's supply is haphazard, undirected, every fellow for himself, and interest, rent, profit, and speculation gobble up the hindmost.

The Lord recognized the danger of this condition and said:

For it must needs be that he [Edward Partridge] receive directions how to organize this people, for it must needs be that they are organized according to my laws, if otherwise, they will be cut off; wherefore let my servant Edward Partridge, . . . appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs.—Doctrine and Covenants 51: 1.

Again:

For verily I say unto you, The time has come, [this was in 1832] and is now at hand; and, behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, . . . for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven, that you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things.—Doctrine and Covenants 77: 1.

This shows the necessity for organization in temporal affairs, and what it is for; and we will suffer till we get our eyes open to that truth. There can be nothing but economic anarchy and waste without organized, directed effort.

Through organization only can a community function in serving itself with supplies, and regulating and conserving its efforts to the best advantage in producing and distributing those supplies.

Social economy should be a function of government. To provide opportunity for every citizen to obtain his necessities in the easiest, quickest way, should be the first duty of organized society. But as yet this most important function of true government is neglected and left to be regulated as best it may be by the incentive of profit-getting, and speculation.

Things to meet our gravest needs are only produced for profit. And if there is no profit in the manufacture of an article, it is not made, no matter how important a place it may fill in the field of usefulness. The factory is closed, and the useful laborers are thrown out of employment, though it may be, as has been the case, that those very laborers who are thrown out of work because there was not profit enough on what they made, were suffering for the need of the very commodities they were producing. And we are confronted continually with the anomalous situation of having things that ought to be done, and plenty of idle men willing and anxious to do them, but which can not be done because society is not organized for production, and hence these two valuable factors of production can not be brought together because the only incentive for activity and enterprise is profit or gain,—and that does not, from the dollar viewpoint, justify the undertaking. It is a very ludicrous plight indeed, and little becoming a world of reasoning intelligences.

The production of things for use and not for profit is the principle that must be followed in the new order of society, and will obviate a world of trouble. And in the exchange through the storehouse of the commodities of production the rule and principle will be, the products of my reasonable efforts for the products of your reasonable efforts.

Let us see how beautifully the exchange can be effected. But note this, first, that colonization and industrial association are provided for in a late revelation (Doctrine and Covenants 128:1 and 6), so that there may be an organized direction and cooperative effort in the production of the commodities of life, both those coming from the soil, and those made in shops and factories. Thus our members may find employment in turning out their own necessities. And instead of continually handling money over to help the poor, leaving them in the same destitute condition as soon as it is used up, the poor will be given an opportunity to help themselves by operating some machine, or tilling the soil; the result of which labor will be an increase in the useful things of life instead of a depletion.

Some will produce fruits, vegetables, and grains on the farms and in the orchards, gardens, and vineyards. Some will engage in raising poultry; some in conducting dairies, apiaries, etc.; while others will work in the industrial establishments, making clothing, carpets, furniture, stoves, implements, shoes and a thousand other things that must be had to make life worth living.

All these workmen are to be stewards, and, according to the law, each is to have what he needs out of his products, and the rest is to be cast into the "storehouse to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.

And again, let the bishop appoint a storehouse unto his church, and let all things, both in money and in meat, which is more than is needful for the want of this people, be kept in the hands of the bishop.—Doctrine and Covenants 51: 4.

A steward who is a poultry fancier will work to the best of his ability; and, after retaining what he needs of his products, will put the rest into the storehouse. A steward who is a gardener will raise all he can, and use all he needs of what he will raise, for himself and family, and put the rest into the storehouse. Likewise those on the farms, in the dairies, and other lines, will use that part of their own products which they may need for themselves and dependent ones, and put the rest into the storehouse. Then the men who spend their time making furniture will keep what they need for themselves, and put the rest into the storehouse. So also those who spend their time making stoves, carpets, shoes, etc., will put all that is above their needs into the storehouse.

Now, it will be seen that those who spend their time making clothing, or furniture, or any other one thing, (as it must needs be in an organized cooperative division of labor,) will not have time to raise and make their own necessities in other lines, and the gardeners will find themselves in need of some of the shoemakers' shoes and the furniture makers' furniture, and the clothing makers' clothing; and so on down the list. And vice versa, the other workers will want some of the gardeners' garden truck. And so, when any one of them shall need some article that is produced by any of the others, he will need only go to the keeper of the storehouse and say, "I have need of this to help me in my stewardship" (Doctrine and Covenants 101: 12), and "the treasurer shall give unto him the sum which he requires, [in money or in meat] to help him in his stewardship, until he be found a transgressor." Thus the exchange of commodities can be effected, through the storehouse, without computing a single article in dollars and cents, as between the members of the organization; and that, too, without having tacked onto each article a string of profits reaching all the way from the producer to the consumer; thus obviating the ever rising price of living. For in this way an even exchange can be effected, in that all in the order render service according to their ability, and have their needs supplied according to their natural wants. In becoming members they covenant to do all they can in reason, for all they need in reason. That is the wage scale, and will never change. This permits the overplus to accumulate in the storehouse, from which all have an equal right to draw according to their needs and wants. It can also be sold to those on the outside for money, at the regular market price.

All those who produce more than they need will put the overplus into the storehouse without money and without price, and will receive what they need without money and without price. Putting a price on an article is where so much evil creeps in in our present system; for it is so utterly impossible to compute the exact cost, and the results of not knowing the exact cost are so dangerous in their ramifications, that the practice should be abandoned in our new order, where the exchange can be effected so justly and equitably without it.

A bushel of potatoes will only contribute a certain amount of nourishment to the physical man, and is just the same when the price is three dollars per bushel as when it is twenty cents per bushel. Through the storehouse exchange, values will adjust themselves automatically among the members of the order, and that, too, accurately, and without the infinitely difficult task of mental computation.

The members of this new society will all know just where to go to get anything they want, and thus obviate the awful waste of advertising.

The work of distribution of supplies from the storehouse will be systematized, and the territory to be served will be districted so that the delivery wagons will not be darting hither and thither, crossing and recrossing each others' paths, wasting time, energy, and horseflesh, like a lot of unguided, undirected, benighted, hard-worked and weary creatures.

When all the workers shall be engaged in cooperatively producing and distributing useful things, with the assistance of the modern labor-saving machinery, reaping all the economies that will naturally come from an organized, cooperative effort, eliminating the awful waste peculiar to the present system, the good things of life will pile up and accumulate at a rate that would not now be considered possible. Even at the present time, and with our wasteful ways of doing things, were the workers of this country to receive all they produce, and not have to feed a hoard of nonproducers, they would only need to work one day in six. For, according to Mr. C. D. Wright, of the Labor Bureau, the average product of wealth per annum to each worker in the United States is $2,600. The average wage to each worker is $443. This shows that the workers get only about one sixth of what they produce. The rest goes to make millionaires and ruins their children by idleness and surfeiting.

It is plainly seen how rapid will be the increase of worldly goods in a society that conserves the good things for the workers who produce them, and where everyone works at something useful, as is provided for in the Lord's plan. The prosperity of the plan will simply be amazing; so much so that the people of the world will wonder in profound amazement, when they see the strides made for economic progress along altruistic lines, and principles of equality and brotherhood. Because of the effectual working of these principles

Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments.—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.

And the people from afar will behold Zion's beauty and power, and will say "the inhabitants of Zion are terrible." And they will want to come up to learn of her ways, for they have always thought and been taught that to get gain and profit was the only incentive for which men would enlist their energies. But in Zion the great incentive will be peace and contentment, where the fear of want is unknown, where there is no rent to pay, where every man owns his own home, is secure in his employment, and is insured against want, sickness, and misfortune by the whole surplus of society. Where free hospitals, and the most efficient physicians and nurses will stand ready to administer to the sick and get them well and back to their posts of duty and work as soon as possible. Where it can not be to the interest of anyone for sickness to exist, but to the interest of all to get them well. Where everyone can have the cheering, not harrowing thought, that when too old to work there will be ample and honorable provision to make the declining years of life a joy instead of a nightmare. Where young men and maidens may love and woo and mate at nature's mature and proper behest, and not have to be driven by the wolf of want and poverty to forego and forget the sweet and gentle emotions of the heart in the maelstrom of turmoils and struggles for existence, which at present results in many men becoming cynical celibates, and thousands of women selling their virtue for bread.

Oh God, speed the day of Zion, when life and its comforts for all will be the incentive of every man's labor.

• * * * •

REVIVALS.

No. 8. "Methods and Tactics" Series.

Are they profitable and legitimate? The nature of revival services as contemplated in the law. Suggestions as to holding interest, attracting attention, etc.

The word revival is given in Webster's Dictionary as meaning "A reviving; return to life; a religious awakening."

When we speak of revivals in the church, "a religious awakening," or an awakening of the Saints to duty and diligence in the service of the Lord, would evidently be what we would have in view.

The question, Are they profitable and legitimate? should be our first consideration. An old axiom says, "You should never commence anything without considering what the end would be." Peter says, "Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls."—1 Peter 1: 9. Now, anything that would have a tendency to stimulate our faith in the work of God should be both profitable and legitimate; hence the object of revival services is to stimulate to greater activity the power we individually possess, of bringing to pass much righteousness; for although we have our personal agency, yet this agency is affected by influences with which we come in contact, hence: "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord." Now, as we understand "the law of the Lord" to be the gospel, any influence that would lead us to delight in this law more and more must be profitable, and legitimate to us.

We are not dependent on our reasoning alone as to the profit and legality of revivals. David foreseeing the return of the Jews to Palestine, their deliverance from servitude to other nations; the forgiveness of their iniquity, and the covering of their sin; then, thinking apparently of the long period to intervene before this could be accomplished and realized,—because of Israel going to wander so far from God's way, as a preventive on the part of Israel of their thus going astray, he says, "Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?"—Psalm 85: 6. Here David saw that a revival in Israel would be profitable, or he would not have asked God to be the author of this revival. Then he speaks of the value of a personal revival to himself, saying, "Though I walk in the midst of trouble thou wilt revive me."—Psalm 138: 7. David is not alone in his understanding of the profit of revivals. Hosea says, "Come, let us return unto the Lord: for he hath torn and will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. After two days he will revive us: in the third day he will raise us up and we shall live in his sight."—Hosea 6: 1, 2. Also we have a third witness. Habakkuk says, "O Lord, I have heard thy speech and I was afraid: Oh Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years; in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy."—Habakkuk 3: 2.

Now, lest any should say that because these men were in trouble, the revival they were asking for was not really a legitimate petition on their part, we call your attention to what the Lord himself says on the matter.

For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

Not only does the Lord tell us that while he is so "lofty," yet he will condescend to revive the spirit of the humble, and revive the heart of the contrite ones, but he tells us the reason why:

For I will not contend for ever, neither will I be always wroth: for the Spirit should fail before me and the souls which I have made.—Isaiah 57: 15, 16.

Since we find God's servants asking for a revival, and God promising a revival to those who are in a proper condition to receive, we must conclude that it is both profitable and legitimate for branches of his church to hold revival services.

THE NATURE OF REVIVAL SERVICES AS CONTEMPLATED IN THE LAW.

So far as the writer is informed, he does not call to mind direct citations in the law pointing specifically, by way of commandment, to the holding of special revival services, in the Covenants and Commandments to the church, except in section 125.

The patriarch is an evangelical minister. The duties of this office are to be an evangelical minister; to preach, teach, expound, exhort, to be a revivalist, and to visit branches and districts as wisdom may direct, invitation, request, or the Spirit of God determine and require; to comfort the Saints; to be a father to the church; to give counsel and advice to individuals who may seek for such.

Then, as the nature of the duty of our fathers in the flesh should be to give such "counsel and advice" as will be for our best interest in this life, and I remember that when a boy at home on the farm, if father said that a certain undertaking would be to our profit and advantage along business lines, my natural spirit felt revived in the ways of work and thought, and I went to perform duty with a fresh energy and determination to succeed, because I had confidence that the word of my parent was true, and that his wisdom as manifest in his counsel was superior to my own, therefore as the nature of my revival and aspiration in temporal duty, consisted in accepting the advice and counsel of my earthly parent, the nature of a spiritual revival will consist in our being willing to receive "counsel and advice" as given us by the "Father of Spirits" through his accredited representatives.

Nor are the evangelical ministers the only ones whose "counsel and advice" will have a reviving effect upon the Saints who will accept such, but the First Presidency, Twelve, seventies, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, are all included in the nature of revival effort. When Jesus (the first president in those days) was here, his "counsel and advice" had such a reviving effect upon Peter that he said, "I am willing to go with thee to prison and to death." When the Master made his third visit to his disciples after his resurrection he said to Apostle Peter, "Feed my sheep, feed my lambs."—John 21: 14-17. Evidently the sheep and lambs would be revived by accepting the "counsel and advice" of Peter.

Then Paul says to the elders who had assembled at Ephesus, whom he tells that the Holy Ghost had made them overseers of the flock of God, "Feed the church of God."—Acts 20: 28.

As the nature of food is to revive our physical beings so this "food" to the flock and church of God would be reviving to their spiritual natures. The Lord, through Hosea, is pleading with former day Israel in these words, "Oh Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity." Then, telling Israel how well it would be with them if they did return unto him, he says they shall "revive as the corn, and grow as the vine." But how? "I will be as the dew unto Israel. From me is thy fruit found. For the ways of the Lord are right and the just shall walk in them." (Hosea 14: 1, 6, 7, 8, 9.) We see the Lord's revival to Israel would be as the revival the corn and vine would receive from the dew. Those accustomed to growing corn know the revival produced during a week of dewy nights and sunny days.

The duty of the high priest being to preside over large branches and districts in the church, his work also partakes of the nature of revival effort; for the Saints are instructed by his counsel and cheered by his advice, and revived by both counsel and advice. The visits of the priests, teachers, and deacons, when performed in the spirit of love and with a desire to edify, have also a reviving effect upon the Saints. Consequently, the natural effect of special revival services would be to increase faith in God and his word: such faith will bring with it a desire to more fully honor God in the better keeping of his commandments: this being pleasing in his sight, the more pleasing we are to him, the better condition we will be in to receive his Holy Spirit more abundantly. This will create in us a greater love for God and his work, and will dispel from us selfishness and unbelief, bringing us nearer to that condition called charity, "which is everlasting love."

SUGGESTIONS AS TO HOLDING INTEREST, ATTRACTING ATTENTION, ETC.

We would suggest as our opinion, that those special effort revivals, in order to be interesting and attract attention, must be carried on in the spirit of love for God and our brethren. Our heavenly Father has said, "No one can assist in this work (we understand this means the work of the church in all its departments,) except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever are intrusted to his care."—Doctrine and Covenants 11: 4.

Then they to whom this work of special evangelistic revival services is intrusted, must be temperate in their work, and carry it on in the spirit of the aforementioned instructions.

First, love must be the propelling influence necessary for success. John has said, "He that loveth God will love his brother also." Then if love is necessary on the part of the revivalist, under the Lord, love will be necessary on the part of the persons assembled to assist in this revival, and calls for forgiveness on their part toward those who have grieved or offended them. For, can I pray effectually that God will bless, forgive, and help another, while I bear in my heart hatred or anger toward that individual? "Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 7.

Second, faith, that God will be honored and his children revived, must be had on the part of the laborer, and the branch or gathering of Saints undertaking such revival; in order that interest may be had, for we are more interested in ourselves when we are assured that there are others who care for our souls' welfare. Also, if we start properly and continue to conduct such revival effort, the blessing of the Holy Spirit will increase our interest.

Third, hope that our efforts will meet with success, will enable us to deport ourselves with that cheerful and happy spirit that will induce us to assemble with each other and will attract the attention of those who may be most in need of reviving. Our attendance suddenly drops from our branch, Sunday school, and Religio services, and this is sometimes due to the divided or careless feeling shown by the priesthood toward the members, and by members toward the priesthood in the branch, and this applies likewise to the officers and members of the auxiliaries. At times the lack of hope that they will receive benefit is the cause of some staying away from meetings.

Fourth, charity! Ah, if the officers could love the members and the members the officers with that "pure heart, fervently," as expressed by Peter to the Saints in his day, there would be a never failing well of interest, and the thirst to be there would only be satisfied by our attendance at every service when possible for us to be there. Then we would be so much interested in the welfare of each other that we would have neither time nor place for words of tattle and scandal, that gender not only strife and contention, but feelings of unbelief in God and his work. But we would instead be partaking of that spirit enjoyed by Enoch and his people when they walked with God and were of one heart and one mind, and there was no poor among them.

ISRAEL'S TRIAL AT HAND.

But what of the necessity for revival effort among our people? Within the past two or three months, or since the beginning of the war between Turkey and the Balkan States, the nations of the world (with few exceptions) have been stirred to war preparations, and perhaps none more so than the British Empire. In October last, the tocsin of alarm was sounded by that aged general, Lord Roberts; that man of experience with war, when he said, "Arm yourselves, quit yourselves like men; England's trial is at hand." So far has his counsel and advice with that of others been taken, that in December we have the parliament of Canada asked to vote thirty-five million dollars for the defense of the Empire. Shall it be said by our generation, that the children of this world are wiser than the children of light? Can it not be said to us as a people, and the warning be proper?

"Arm yourselves, quit you like men; latter day Israel's trial is at hand!" Do we not need to heed the instruction given us through the latter day seer, the Lord saying,

But firstly let my army become very great, and let it be sanctified before me, that it may become fair as the sun, and clear as the moon, and that her banners may be terrible unto all nations; that the kingdoms of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 9.

Dear Saints, we need to put on the whole armor of God.

JOHN SHIELDS.

* * * * *

PRIESTHOOD; WHAT IS IT?

The Oakland, California, Branch holds a monthly priesthood meeting, having a program prepared by the pastor beforehand. Elder Edward Ingham was assigned the subject, "Priesthood; what is it?" to which he rendered the following answer, which we submit for consideration.—J. M. Terry.

Briefly defined, priesthood is the power or authority of God committed unto men, under which they may acceptably administer the affairs of God's church or kingdom upon earth. When an individual legally acts in the name of another, he does so by his authority. Consequently, men legally acting in the name of God are acting under his authority.

The Apostle Paul in his second Corinthian epistle employs a term which probably conveys the most expressive idea of any to be found in the Scriptures of the powers and functions of the priesthood. He says:

Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.—2 Corinthians 5: 20.

The term ambassador denotes a public minister of the highest rank, accredited and sent by the head of a sovereign state to a foreign court or country, with power to represent the person of the sovereign by whom he is sent, to negotiate with a foreign government, and to watch over the interests of his own nation abroad. The power thus conferred is contained in the credentials or letters of credence of which the ambassador is the bearer, and in the instructions under the sign manual delivered to himself. The credentials consist in a sealed letter addressed by the sovereign in person whose representative he is, to the sovereign to whom he is sent, and they contain a general assurance that the sovereign by whom he is dispatched will approve and confirm whatever is done by the ambassador in his name.

A careful study of this definition in its different features or phases as applicable to the status of the priest should forcibly impress on our minds the truth of the statement made by the apostle in connection with the priesthood topic. "No man taketh this honor unto himself but he that is called of God."

Doctors Smith and Cheatham say: "We agree with the Jewish tradition, that Adam was the first priest." The inspired records clearly reveal that it is as old, at least, as the human race.

A law would be null and void without some authority to administer it. Hence priesthood was conferred upon men in the ages of the past to invest them with the necessary authority to administer the laws of the government of God in a manner acceptable to him.

The priesthood did not have its origin with any man or set of men. It is said to have neither descent, beginning of days, or end of life. It is an office always extant. It was not prepared for any particular man but the man for it.

The gospel which embodies the immutable laws of life, requires to-day, as of old, this unchangeable priesthood to administer it.

---

Of General Interest

DREAMS.

A SERIES OF SELECTED ARTICLES, SEEKING TO SOLVE THE MYSTERY OF SLEEP AND DREAMS.

From the New York Times of October 22, 1911:

Wu Ting-Fang declared that "Sleep is the joy of life"—a plain statement which recalls Sancho Panza's delicious and memorable apostrophe, "Blest be the man who first invented sleep."

Now, in spite of the undeniable fact that everyone has experienced sleep, and that most people find it to be "Nature's soft nurse, balm of hurt minds," and all the other fine things said of it by the poets, it is also true that as an "invention" some are at a loss to know how to use it, how to get the full benefit of this thing that is as "familiar as eating." And some people are in danger of losing the faculty of sleep altogether.

Thus it seems that sleep has its philosophy, its dangers as well as its blessings, and that to be a good sleeper is not quite so simple a matter as, at first glance, one might imagine. It is this philosophy of sleep, with its consequent practical rules and suggestions for those who find this "joy of life" a problem, that has inspired Bolton Hall to undertake an interesting inquiry, the results of which will be brought out in a book entitled The Gift of Sleep, by Moffat, Yard & Company.

As an aid to his own investigation Mr. Hall, through his publishers, sent out in the neighborhood of ten thousand "question sheets" to selected classes of persons, beginning with a thousand professors in schools and colleges, asking for data as to the amount of time spent in sleep, the tendency to dreams, the devices used to induce sleep, diet, physical condition, etc. Although many books, directly or indirectly, have been written on the subject, this is said to be the first instance in which, by means of these question sheets, scientifically complete tabulation and study of data on sleep has been made. As yet a sufficient number of answers have not been received "to warrant very definite statements in regard to sleep and dreams." From the replies which have come in, however, Mr. Hall derives the following interesting results:

"It appears that about one person in thirty regards himself as a poor sleeper, and only two others in thirty will say they sleep only fairly well. About three persons out of five report that they spend no time in wakefulness in bed; the remaining two persons spend from fifteen minutes to five or six hours each, the average among this group being one hour and ten minutes per person per night.

"Among professors in our leading universities the prevailing hour for retiring is between ten and eleven o'clock; four fifths of this group say they retire either at ten, half past ten, or eleven o'clock, but this class of people retire on the average about one half an hour later than persons of the other classes from whom we have received replies.

"The average duration of sleep is, roughly, seven and one half hours. One third of all replies gave eight hours as the length of sleep, and the professors are inclined to sleep a slightly longer period than those in the other occupations taken together.

"The age of the individuals seemed to have no effect on the averages of the daily amount of time spent in sleep. Persons under the age of forty differed in no marked degree from persons over forty either in length of sleep or frequency of dreaming. There is general agreement on the point that they get just enough sleep, and that vacations make only a slight increase. The data is not yet sufficient to justify a conclusion as to the average time of sleep at different ages.

"In reference to dreams, about fifteen per cent report that they do not dream, and about thirty per cent say they dream 'rarely,' 'seldom,' or 'occasionally.' We are disposed to question these returns on the ground that they give an impression that dreams are less frequent than they really are. The investigations of most experimenters who have made special studies of dreams seem rather to show that the number of our dream experiences grows as soon as we give our attention to them, just as, on a clear night, a hasty glance at the sky may reveal many stars, but a steady gaze reveals very many more.

"Our returns are interesting as to the character of the dreams. The favorite adjective used to describe dreams was 'rational.' A lesser number of persons said their dreams were 'pleasant,' less still that they were 'fantastic.' Three times as many persons describe their dreams as pleasant as those who describe them as generally unpleasant. Either Professor Freud's conclusion is correct, that we tend to forget unpleasant experiences more readily than pleasant ones, or else the dreams really afforded more pleasurable than they did disagreeable feelings. The most typical combination used to describe the nature of the individual's dream life was that it was 'rational and pleasant.' Less than one third of all the answerers confessed to having ever experienced nightmares.

"It should be observed that thus far we have encountered a group of replies from persons who, as a group, are remarkably healthy, normal, and fairly free from worry. Particularly, worry does not seem to be a vice of professors, as only eight per cent confess to it. About seventeen per cent of them say they need more physical exercise than they get, which is mostly walking. There is also a gratifying unanimity as to good appetite, simple diet, and absence of need for artificial means of inducing sleep."

In his own investigation Mr. Hall finds reason to dispute a number of the current ideas as to the amount of time which should be spent in sleep, taking the general position that we are inclined to devote too many hours of the twenty-four to sleep.

"It is a popular belief," he declares, "that Alfred the Great—who is also Alfred the Wise and Alfred the Good (being dead so long)—divided time into three equal parts, and taught that one part should be given to sleep. If he had said this, it would not follow that it is the last and wisest word on the best way to divide our time, but he did not say it. What he said was that one third of each day should be given to sleep, diet, and exercise: that is, that man should devote eight hours to sleeping, eating, and whatever form of exercise or recreation he desired.

"There is nothing to show that Alfred spent even six hours in sleep, although there is plenty of proof that he recognized the difference between rest and sleep, for he gave the second division of the day—eight hours—to study and to reflection, while the remaining eight hours were to be for business. In those days kings worked hard. Sir Henry Sumner Maine says that the list of places where King John held court shows that even he was as active as any commercial traveler nowadays. (Early Law and Custom, p. 183.)

"But the superstition that Alfred recommended eight hours for sleep will not down, and no amount of argument or proof will change the opinion of the average man on this point. 'Our forefathers slept eight hours,' they say; 'so should we.' We forget that probably the rushlight and the candle had much to do with the long hours of sleep in olden times. As artificial light has improved, sleeping time has been shortened.

"There is an old English quatrain which runs:

"Nature requires five
Custom gives seven,
Laziness takes nine
And wickedness eleven."

Nevertheless, Mr. Hall does not insist on any hard and fast rule as to the number of hours to be devoted to sleep. While contending that, on the average, we sleep too much, he argues that the requisite amount of time spent in sleep is bound to vary with the individual needs of different persons. He cites this instance, which will surely astonish the mothers of very young infants:

"Even babies differ in their need of sleep. I know one healthy, happy, beautiful baby who has never slept the average sixteen hours that babies are supposed to need. This child is now between 3 and 4 years of age, and has never gone to sleep before 9 or 9.30 o'clock at night. Her parents had the common idea of long hours of sleep for infants, and the child had a hard struggle for a while to convince them that she had no such need; such struggles are often called 'naughtiness.' She was regularly put to bed at 7 o'clock, and all the usual devices for enticing a baby to sleep were practiced. Sometimes she was left severely alone, sometimes she had gentle lullabies sung to her, but, whether alone or in company, this particular baby played and enjoyed herself until between 9 and 9.30 o'clock, when she quietly dropped to sleep. She awoke as early as the average baby awakes, happy and refreshed, and her parents finally learned that there is no sleeping rule that has no exceptions, whether applied to infants or adults."

It was inevitable that, in his researches as to the proper daily duration of a person's sleep. Mr. Hall should have investigated Thomas Edison's well-known theory and practice in the matter, as given in an interview appearing some time ago in The Sunday Times. Thus, Mr. Hall learned that Edison "can go days without sleep when engrossed in some invention, and he has been quoted as saying that people sleep too much, four hours daily being sufficient." To corroborate this, Mr. Hall wrote to Edison and tells us:

"In answer to my inquiry, Mr. Edison's secretary wrote: 'Mr. Edison directs me to write you that the statement is correct, that for thirty years he did not get four hours of sleep per day.' Evidently, experience taught him that an average of four hours per day, if taken rightly and at the right time, is enough for him. He keeps a couch in his workroom so as to sleep when he is sleepy. He does not need a clock to tell him when to go to bed, any more than you need a thermometer to tell you when to pull up the blankets.

"Edison is not alone in his views on sleep. He made extensive experiments with the two hundred workers in his own factory which convinced him and most of them that the majority slept much too long. The hands seem to have entered willingly into the trials; perhaps their personal regard for him influenced their conclusions. Napoleon Bonaparte and Frederick of Prussia were both satisfied with four hours of sleep, (it is said, however, that in later life Napoleon carried this too far, and was sometimes stupid for lack of sleep,) while Bishop Taylor was of the opinion that three hours was sufficient for any man's needs, and Richard Baxter who wrote 'The Saints' Rest,' thought four hours the proper measure.

"Paul Leicester Ford, who was never a strong person, once told me that he found four hours sleep enough for all purposes. He did not wish to be understood as saying that four hours rest was enough, but four hours sleep. He was one of the few who understood the difference between sleep and rest. He frequently rested, his favorite practice being to lie back in a big armchair with a book and forget the surrounding conditions. The book created a different set of sensations, which, combined with the pause in physical activity, brought a sense of rest to the frail body. He frequently got his four hours of sleep curled up in the big chair, and was then able to go on with the work which in a few short years made him famous. The wife of the late George T. Angell of Boston testifies that for years he seldom slept four hours a night, having found that, for him, more was unnecessary; but, of course, it does not follow that no more is necessary for anyone.

"These are not unusual instances, but rather typical cases."

Believing thus that a small amount of sleep may be natural and beneficial for some persons, Mr. Hall is inclined to think that even an enforced wakefulness may not be an unmixed evil:

"Like sleep, a wakeful night may be a growing time. It affords the quiet, the time, the seclusion to think over the meanings of things, or even to speak the cause of the wakefulness itself. For that is the first thing to do if we find ourselves wakeful; if the cause be so obscure that we can not find it, then the best thing to do is to accept the fact.

"Either we do not need the sleep we are seeking—the reclining position being all the rest the body needs—or else we do need the wakefulness to teach us something that we can learn or will learn in no other way. It is a time when, free from the watchful eyes of those who love us, or those who do not love us, we need not fear to look at ourselves, our motives, our relations to our fellows.

"It may be only at such times that we can feel the closeness of the tie that binds all mankind, only in such a time that a life-giving sense of oneness can renew life and joy. Some persons are so acutely conscious of the surge around them during the day that it is difficult, if not impossible, for them to get any large view of it. They are so beset and bewildered by each little detail of life that they can not see any relation among things as a whole, can not 'see the wood for the trees.'

"Or it may be that a lack of poise, a false estimate of the relations of things, makes them find 'their own affairs' so interesting or exhausting that the observing mind gets no large or deep impressions to be added to the sum of the knowledge the inner self possesses.

"For either of these classes the wakeful night may prove more restful and helpful than hours of sleep. It may be made to bring a breadth of view that will lift one out of the narrow limits in which daily life is passed. It may do as much as this for any of us, and, if we reject the receptive mood and insist upon objecting to the wakefulness we may thereby deprive ourselves of some of the most illuminating experiences.

"Some one has said: 'Sleep, like drink, may drown our sorrows, yet it also drowns our joys. What could we not accomplish if we did not require sleep?'

"It may be comforting to think of this when we are lying awake, that at least we are wasting no time. The gift of wakefulness is often as desirable as is the gift of sleep, and if we welcome the one as what must be—with as much cheerfulness as the other—each will bring us equal blessings."

As a psychological experience, however, Mr. Hall finds in sleep a necessity for man's spiritual growth. He accepts the theory that the human mind is duplex, and finds that in sleep one half of one's mentality is wrapped in oblivion, while the other half has an opportunity, as it were, to stretch itself.

"The objective mind, which is active during waking hours, apparently rests during sleep; the subconscious mind is ever busy. Like the heart or the digestive organs, the subconscious mind carries on its consciousness which we call sleep. How this is done we do not know, any more than we know how the physical organs carry on their work while we are wrapped in slumber and unconscious of all about us. There are very few, though, who have not had some proof of the activity of the latent mind during sleep. That somehow this undermind does work in an uncanny way—that is to say, in an unknown way—is shown by the fact that most persons can wake up at any hour that they fix in their minds without being called and without the abominable alarm clock.

"It is a common enough thing to hear people say, 'I do not know how I knew that; I never remember hearing it; it just came to me.' Or, 'I tried and tried to think of that yesterday, and could not, but when I woke this morning it was the first thing that came to my mind.' Such incidents show that some process of which we are not objectively conscious is going on all the time; that no mental experience is destroyed or wholly dissipated. The common wish is 'to sleep over' any perplexing matter. After a good sleep our ideas are often better arranged than when we fell asleep.

"I have a friend who drops all her problems into her subconscious thought, refuses to be 'exercised in her mind' about them and leaves them for the latent mind to answer. So long as she views them from the objective, conscious point of view only, she finds herself worrying and losing sleep. The sleep-won mind, the 'all-knowing self,' as it were, is not touched by worry, perhaps because, in communion with the substance of all experience, it perceives that there are few 'problems' in life when she does not persist in regarding as a 'problem' each separate experience."

(To be continued.)

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 630 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Chrysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Polly's Religion.

Life to the Demmings took on a new meaning when Joe brought his wife home. None of the family had ever seen her. They knew she was one of the Anstruthers of Kentucky.

"There are Anstruthers in our church in that State," said Grace. "I hope Mary belongs to our membership."

"Oh, yes, certainly!" said Joe, eagerly. He was just starting to be married, and he was anxious that they should all love Polly in advance.

"Does she sing in the choir?" asked Isabella.

"I think not. But she has one of the sweetest voices—a low contralto. And you ought to hear her laugh, Belle. The merriest ring! Oh, she'll bring new life into this house."

The girls smiled. They were fond of Joe, and ready to welcome his wife.

"But I hope she is ready to take a leading part in the church," said Grace, after he had gone. "Joe will fill father's place, some day, and his description of her does not give me the idea of an energetic religious woman."

"We'll hope for the best," said Isabella. She was busy making an imitation stained glass window for the Sunday school room, and was anxious to finish it before Mary arrived.

"Uncle Ben must be kept in his own room when she comes, and Tom can be sent to the country for a month's visit," said Grace, her delicate face flushing painfully.

There were two skeletons in the Demming household. The squire's brother, Ben, who was a paralytic old soldier and a most cross-grained, profane old fellow, occupied one wing of the mansion. He had a man to nurse and read to him, for his oaths were intolerable to his nieces. Tom was their brother, younger than Joe. Tom Demming had disappeared for three years after he left college, and came back a haggard, dissipated loafer.

Nobody in Ball's Ferry knew just what he had done in that gap of time, but all were certain that he was under ban. The family treated him with gloomy patience. They had taken up their cross and borne it, but it was heavy, and he knew it. Tom was never seen by visitors, at the table, or in the parlor. At dusk he would skulk out to join some of his comrades at the village grogshops, and occasionally, but not often, was brought home brutally intoxicated.

Joe's wife disappointed them all. She was a plump, merry little girl, nothing more.

"A very pleasant little heathen!" sighed Grace, after two days had passed. "I named some of the best books of religious fiction, but she has never heard of them; and she did not know a single one of our foreign missionaries."

Good Mrs. Demming was uneasy at this, and that very evening turned the conversation on doctrinal subjects. Polly grew red.

"I'm afraid," she said, "I am not clear in my ideas concerning these different points. The truth is, after mother's death, I had charge of my four brothers, and I had so little time"—

"You will have more time, now," said Isabella. "I will mark out a course of doctrinal reading for you." But Mary made slow progress with her course of reading. As time passed and she settled down into her place in the family, she proved to be a very busy little woman. She had a positive talent for finding work; took her part of the family mending, tossed up dainty little desserts, helped Joe with his accounts. When Joe had gone to his office she took tremendous walks, advised Mother Demming about her fancy work, or copied the squire's papers for him.

"What a clerky hand you write!" said Grace, one day. "I often wish mine were not so delicate, when father worries over those papers. But as for mother's embroidery, women of her age ought to give up that useless work when their eyes are failing."

"It does not seem useless to me," said Polly, gently. "She thinks you all value it."

"Where can Mary go on those interminable walks?" said Isabella, one morning, to her father. "You should warn her about Black Lane. She might wander into it and bring home typhoid fever."

"You ought to report the lane as a nuisance, Father," said his wife. "It is a perfect sink of filth and vice."

"It is a disgrace to Ball's Ferry that such wretches can find harbor in it," added Isabella. "They ought to be driven beyond the borough limits!"

"Well, well, my dear! It doesn't do to be too energetic," said the squire. "They never had a chance."

He was aroused, however, to mention Black Lane at a meeting of the town burgesses that day.

"Something ought to be done, or we shall have typhus among us," said he.

"Something has been done," said Judge Paule. "I came through the lane this morning, and I hardly knew it. There has been a general draining and cleaning, the cabins are whitewashed, and the women, some of them, have actually washed their faces."

"What has happened?" asked the squire.

"I heard the sound of children's voices, singing in one of the cabins, and the men told me it was Miss Mary's class. Some good woman has been at work, I suspect."

"Miss Mary?"—the squire's face grew red, his eyes flashed, but he said nothing more.

Going home, he met Polly coming to meet him. He looked at her with the eye of a judge.

"Are you the good Samaritan? Have you been in Black Lane, my dear?"

She blushed, laughed and stammered—

"Oh, that was the most natural thing in the world, father. You know I was brought up among colored people; I know how to deal with them. It was only a ditch cut here and there, a few panes of glass and some bushels of lime. They are good, affectionate creatures and anxious to learn."

The matter was driven from the squire's mind before he reached the house, for he saw Tom skulking around the stable door. He had returned that day, and a dull weight of misery fell at the sight, on his father's heart. Tom did not enter the house until late in the evening, when the family were gathered about the table. He came into the room with a swagger, unshaven, his boots reeking of the stable.

"On purpose to mortify us," thought Grace, bitterly.

"I came to see Joe's fine lady wife," he said in a loud voice.

"Unless he's ashamed to introduce his scapegrace brother."

"Mary is not here," said Mother Demming. "Where is she, Grace?"

"In Uncle Ben's room. She reads the New York papers to him every day now. They play backgammon together, and they have one of those silly books of Artemus Ward. I heard him laughing, and probably swearing harder than ever, so he must be pleased. I wonder she can stand it."

"It is hard to understand her," said Isabella, dryly. "Mary is not as careful of her associations as she should be."

Tom had been listening eagerly.

"Enough said," he broke out, with a thump of his fist on the table. "If Joe's wife can take thought of that lonely old man up there, there's better stuff in her than I expected. I'll go up and make her acquaintance."

Several times afterwards Tom's voice was heard joining in the jokes and laughter that came out of Uncle Ben's room.

"Mary seems to have enchanted them both," said Grace.

"Tom is clean and shaved to-day, and looks like a human being," said Joe.

But even he was startled when Mary came down that evening for a walk, and nodding brightly to Tom, asked him to go with her.

"Finish your book, Joe; Tom will be my escort."

Tom followed her slouchingly to the gate. He stopped there. Shame, defiance, misery, looked out of his eyes.

"See here, Mrs. Demming, I reckon you don't know, or you wouldn't have asked me to go with you."

Polly's tender, steady eyes met his. "Yes, I know."

"D'ye know I'm a thief? I was in jail at Pittsburg for a year."

Polly drew her breath hard. A prayer to God for help went up from her heart in that second of time. She held out both hands.

"Yes, Joe told me. But that is all over now—all over. You have begun new again, Brother Tom. Come!"

She put her hand in his arm as they walked down the street.

He did not speak to her until they came back. Then he stopped her again at the gate.

"My sisters have never been seen with me in public since I came back. I'll never forget this of you, Mary, never!"

A month later, the squire said to his wife:

"Did you know Mary was going over his mathematics with Tom? Regularly coaching him. That little girl has the clearest head for figuring I ever knew. But what can she be doing it for?"

Mrs. Demming cleared her voice before she could speak.

"She has applied to some of her friends in Kentucky to give Tom a situation. Father, I think there may be a chance for the boy. He wants to begin his life over again among strangers."

"God help him," muttered the squire. He surprised Polly when he met her again, by taking her in his arms and kissing her, with tears in his eyes.

In the spring Tom went to Kentucky and began his new life. He has not broken down in it.

It was in the spring, too, that Uncle Ben began to fail. The old man was so fond of Polly that she gave up most of her time to him; so much of it, indeed, that Joe complained.

"Don't say a word, dear," she said; "he has such a little while to stay. Let me do what I can."

"I say, Polly, was that the Bible you were reading to him, to-day?"

"Yes; he asks for it often."

Joe began to whistle, and choked it down with a sigh. Uncle Ben had been such a godless reprobate in his youth that it had never occurred to any of the Demmings that there was any way to reach his soul. He lived until late in the summer. The Sunday before his death, he sent for Mr. Floyd and talked with him for a long time.

When the young minister came out of the dying man's room he was pale. He had been much moved.

"If sincere repentance can make any one of us worthy of heaven, he is worthy," he said. "It is Mary's work under God's blessing," he added.

The girls overheard the conversation. They sat gravely silent after the minister had gone.

"I do not understand Polly," said Grace, at last. "She never seemed to me to be a religious person."

"Perhaps," said the squire, "we have not clearly understood what religion is."—Selected.

Notices.

Will the locals please remember they are expected to report to the superintendents of their departments as early as possible?

MRS. VIDA E. SMITH,

Superintendent of Literary and Educational Department.

MRS. M. B. NICHOLSON,

Superintendent of Sewing and Aid Department.

It has been arranged, nothing preventing, to hold the business session of the Woman's Auxiliary on Tuesday morning, April 8, beginning at nine o'clock.

It is hoped that the sisters will make an especial effort to be present. We believe the work of this auxiliary is of sufficient importance to demand the attention of every sister in the church.

The evening session of the auxiliary has been appointed for Thursday evening, April 10.

ADVISORY BOARD,

Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service.

Letter Department

FOUNTAIN, MICHIGAN, March 1, 1913.

Dear Herald: My last told of the serious accident to me in Freesoil. I write now to say that my fingers are all healed nicely and I did not lose either of them. I feel deeply grateful. From Freesoil I went to the Elm Flat Schoolhouse and preached for some time. Baptized four noble people, all heads of families. Have a request to return there in the spring, when I expect to baptize others.

I am now preaching in the schoolhouse in Fountain. Have had large audiences, good attention and fine liberty. Tomorrow night will be my last here for awhile.

If Brother George M. Shippy sees this it will assure him of my love for and confidence in the great work he baptized me into, June 29, 1907.

In bonds,
R. D. WEAVER.

CHILLIWACK, BRITISH COLUMBIA, February 27, 1913.

Editor of Herald: I appeal to those brothers and sisters who have grown cold and indifferent to this great latter day work; to those who are caring more for the pleasures of the world, who are keeping behind, letting another person do the work. Do not lose your interest,—don't, for your soul's sakes, for the church's sake, and for Christ's, its author. Don't put him to open shame. Outsiders are watching us and if we can not find anything to interest us, can we expect them to?

It is easy enough to hang back, but is it so easy to climb up again, to recover the lost ground? "Oh, well, there is plenty of time," some say. Is there? When we are called to give an account of ourselves what excuse shall we have to offer him? None!

One young sister as a child was religiously inclined; but, living near the city and considerable distance from the place of worship, began attending the Baptist Sunday school and gradually drifted away. She was a great reader but was allowed to read only church literature which, for her immature mind contained such deep, incomprehensible thought, that it proved uninteresting. Still, other books were denied her, even threatened with burning if brought near the house. Her haughty, sensitive spirit revolted and from a gentle child became a bitter, scoffing one, throwing all religion aside, and simply refusing to have anything to do with it.

Several years passed by and yet, try as she would, it was impossible to get away from the thought, "What will become of me in the hereafter?"

One day, on receiving a letter from the Herald Publishing House which began as I suppose most such letters do, with "Dear Saint," she started and stared: "Am I a Saint? Am I worthy that name? I am afraid not." Bitter memories surged through her mind, and tossing the letter aside she tried to forget it.

At last she could stand it no longer. A decision must be made, and that soon. It was her soul at stake. Then followed the struggle; earnest prayers, tears and wrestlings with the contending passions. She conquered.

Soon after a missionary and his wife arrived and unconsciously infused many a thought which strengthened her. And now she is trying to be a true Latter Day Saint. Perfect? Oh, no; she still has failings and temptations yielded to. She is even stronger for her struggle.

Oh, ye indifferent, be careful! Heed the warning of your elders. Learn from the experiences of others and spare yourselves the bitterness, sorrow, and struggle. Remember your souls are in the balance. Eternity is before us and we have only one life to live.

MARJORIE TAIT.

[The writer of the above is only fifteen years old.—EDITOR.]

WHEELING, WEST VIRGINIA, March 1, 1913.

Editors Herald: I send this copy of hymn given at our recent conference. It has the approval of Elder R. C. Russell, who was in charge of the conference. It was sung by Brother E. H. Thomas, February 23, 1913, to the air: "Jesus, I my cross have taken."

While as saints of Christ assembled,
Serving me with one accord,
Satan came, and here he trembled,
Through the presence of the Lord.
Angels blest with Holy Spirit,
Swept his darkening power away.
By their presence you thus profit,
Hovering round you here to-day.

These are days of great disaster,
Hearts of great men throb with fear.
Evil forces growing faster—
Each proclaim the end is near.
Countless hosts are daily pleading
In my name for their relief.
Bleeding sore, they cry for healing,
From oppression, sin and grief.

This behooves you to be faithful,
Seek me through unfainting prayer.
Tithes and offerings, prove thee grateful—
Worthy of the angel's care.
Heed the law of consecration,
Selfish principles forsake.
Then I'll bless the ministrations
Of my servants for your sake.

I am well pleased with each servant,
Toiling in the harvest field.
Local helps should be more fervent.
I am still your strength and shield.
I will visit you in vision,
And in tongues my mind impart.
Heal your sick—be your physician,
When you learn to do your part.

With the young my Spirit's pleading;
Walk in paths unstained with sin.
Heed its promptings, cease its grieving,
Strive eternal life to win.
Consecrate your fleeting hours,
Sacred duties to attend.
Angel forces, heavenly powers,
Will sustain you to the end.

O. J. TARY.

To All Latter Day Saints.

A brief but interesting astronomical item is found in the Observer's Handbook for 1913, published by the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada. It is found on page 51, (center of page) and the dates are particularly noteworthy to Latter Day Saints. It reads exactly as follows:

"Biela's Comet . . . was discovered in 1772, and was observed again in 1805, 1826, 1832, and 1852; but since then it has not been seen! During its period of visibility in 1845 it was observed to separate into two parts, and on its return in 1852 these parts were much more widely separated."

Thus the Saints can see that the comet so strangely associated with both the birth and death of the Prophet Joseph Smith and his great life's work, became strangely broken up after his assassination, exactly as the church itself became broken up; and, (so far as can be ascertained) at just about the same identical period of time.

Astronomical investigation and research have now convinced me that (judging from the eccentricity of the orbit, and the radiant point) those seventy-five immense meteors which flew over the city of Toronto about nine o'clock last Sunday night (the 9th inst.) formed part of the head of that once brilliant but now disrupted comet. "Absit omen."

Can proof go further or be more overwhelmingly positive of the truth that "In the latter day there shall be signs in the sun, moon, and stars"? F. R. TUBB.

No Duty on Book of Mormon.

Please inform HERALD readers that if any time a customs office in Canada charges duty on the Book of Mormon ordered from Herald Publishing House, and if they will write to me at address given below, I will communicate with the Commissioner of Customs at Ottawa and have him notify any such port of entry that the Book of Mormon is entitled to free entry as per item Number 172 on the list.

The customs authorities are very prompt with me and very obliging to look after such matters as this. So if duty is charged at any port of entry, notify me and I will have it attended to. Yours sincerely,

STEWART LAMONT.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, 66 Lydician Avenue.

Extracts from Letters.

Brother David S. Seavey, Tenants Harbor, Maine: "I am the only Saint here. The Evil One is trying to destroy me. I know this work is true. Will the Saints pray for me, as I am not well?"

Brother Stephen Drazey writes that a Doctor Cooke, Climax Springs, Missouri, is interested in our literature and would read tracts, etc., sent to him.

News from Missions

Wheeling, West Virginia.

As the HERALD readers throughout the world scan your pages for the news of the onward progress of the Lord's work, fortunate indeed is he who can report victory for the truth and the forces of error put to flight. Perhaps it may be of equal importance to them to know that, while the victory has not yet been won, the "fight is still on," and the valiant defenders of the faith are still holding the fort with no thought of surrender.

While we can not report great progress in this locality, we can report the outlook as favorable. Workers we have (and should have more), who are untiring in their efforts. The fruits of their labors are being manifest, and while there is no immediate prospect of a large ingathering, there are evidences of improved conditions under which we may work.

The much mooted question of "Mormonism" has been very much in evidence among the various church organizations of late. The ladies' missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal Church arranged for three lectures by Mr. Hans P. Freece in this city about the first of the year. I went to hear the one at the Y. M. C. A. He said nothing about the Reorganized Church, nor the early church, neither did he mention Joseph Smith, except Joseph P. of Utah. He dealt with the evils of polygamy as taught and practiced in Utah.

After this lecture I suggested to a Methodist minister who lives near me, that I indorsed all this man said against polygamy, and would be willing to lecture on the same subject free to any congregation who cared to hear, and would not only deal with polygamy but would take up other phases of the Utah apostasy. As a result this minister arranged for me to address the brotherhood of his church on February 18.

I was treated very courteously, and was listened to attentively. I first made clear the faith of the church from 1830 to 1844, especially the law governing marriage. I used the court decisions in our favor, and read from the speech of Senator J. C. Burrows, chairman of the United States Senatorial Committee having the Smoot case under investigation, in which he complimented the Reorganized Church.

Having thus proven the fact that polygamy was no part of the original church, and that the Reorganized Church is the true and lawful successor thereto, I then took up the evils introduced in Utah, showing when and by whom they were introduced. I outlined the attitude of our church toward those evils, showing that not only now are we opposed to them, but have always been. I pointed out the fact that the Reorganized Church were the pioneers in advocating an amendment to the constitution making polygamy a federal crime.

The result was that quite a number expressed their pleasure to learn those things which they said they had never understood before. For whatever good was accomplished for the cause of truth, I feel to thank God and ascribe all praise to him.

I believe our people should be alert and make use of every opportunity, and even seek opportunities to get before the people our true, and much misunderstood attitude on those questions. Preaching the gospel is the most important work to be accomplished, but it is a very great help toward preaching the gospel, to have misunderstanding removed.

Our district conference held here on February 22 and 23 was one of the best ever held in the district, both in point of attendance and spirituality.

There have been a number of baptisms of late, and there are good prospects of others gradually yielding obedience in the near future.

May charity, wisdom and patience be manifest in all our works, so that no effort for good may be lost, but each contribute its share to the sum total required for the redemption of the pure in heart.

Sincerely, your coworker for Christ,

O. J. TARY.

Colorado.

The semiannual conference of the Eastern Colorado District met with the Saints of Denver in the Saints' chapel, corner Speer Boulevard and Logan Avenue, March 1 and 2. The conference was preceded by the Sunday school and Religio conventions. A very enjoyable time was had by all visiting Saints and was voiced by a number of strangers.

Saturday was taken up entirely by routine business. We are very sorry to report the resignation of Brother Charles E. Everett as bishop's agent for this district. His work has been most efficient and we are indeed sorry to lose his noble support. Business affairs which require his absence from home most of the time was the cause, however, we are very glad to report the recommendation of Brother B. J. Scott to the position and feel sure we have just as estimable a person for the position.

Saturday evening we listened to a fine discourse given by Brother N. A. Tabor, of Wray, Colorado, assisted by Brother Delbert Kemp of Conifer, Colorado. Sunday morning Sunday school was called at 9.45 in charge of Sister L. Fishburn, superintendent of the district. We are indeed glad to see such a lively interest taken by both the children and their parents in this branch of the gospel. At 11 we listened to an excellent sermon by Brother Thomas Twombly, assisted by Brother Nerron, of Denver.

Sunday afternoon was completely taken up by prayer and sacrament services and from the beginning the Spirit of God rested like a mantle over us and the peaceful influence was enjoyed by both Saints and outsiders. Several strangers were present and they expressed themselves of hearing the true gospel. One gentleman in particular voiced his opinion that he cared not what the world said, he was indeed glad to hear the true gospel of Christ. The Spirit was manifest by several prophecies, and also in tongue. One very beautiful song was sung by the Spirit. We are very sorry to say that no one took this song down in shorthand. We hope that the stenographers will not forget their notebooks and pencils next time. Many were sorry to have the meeting close.

At 6 p. m. Religio was held in charge of Brother Homer Shupe, president of the Denver local. Several literary pieces were very ably rendered by the Denver Religians, much to the delight of all the visitors. The conference closed with the last sermon being preached by Brother B. J. Scott, assisted by Brother E. J. Williams.

Meals were served by the ladies during the conference in the basement of the church. The next conference will be held at Wray, Colorado, beginning the first Saturday in September. We hope the Saints at Wray will also arrange to have a reunion at the same time.

The following resolution was passed by the conference and we hope that the senators and representatives of Colorado will favor us with their assistance in passing this law. The resolution favors the enactment of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to prohibit the practice of polygamy in Utah and other sections.

"Resolved, That the campaign against Mormonist polygamy was begun by the Reorganized Church, June 12, 1852, and resolutions have been persistently adopted ever since by the church. The resolution adopted Saturday is in support of all previous resolutions and especially of the one dated April 17, 1902, reading as follows:

"Whereas, it is currently reported that polygamy is still practiced in Utah and adjacent States and Territories in defiance of the laws of God and the laws of the land; and

"Whereas, the laws enacted by State legislation seem to be inadequate to prevent or prohibit the practice of polygamy without the intervention of Federal enactment; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in conference assembled, favor the enactment of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting the practice of polygamy in all the States and Territories under the jurisdiction of the Republic."

JOSEPHINE POPLE, Reporter.

TRINIDAD, COLORADO.

Texas.

It might interest some to know where we are and what we are doing. We have labored alone the past year in the southwestern part of Texas, with the exception of September, in company with Brother J. F. Curtis, and the past month Brother W. E. Peak has been with us. Found both men to be congenial collaborators.

Some of the Saints of the Central Texas District kindly invited us to their district conference. So on February 13, in company with Brother Peak, we left our home for Cookes Point. When we reached Hearne, where we expected to change for Stone City, we found the train had gone, so we laid over at Hearne. But our disappointment was for our good, for the next day at the depot we met with quite a number of Saints bound for Stone City: Brother and Sister Shuster, Brother S. A. Hay, Sister Georgie Belcher, Sister Pearl Nunley, and Brother Emery Nunley. We all went on our way rejoicing and were met at Stone City by several of the brethren.

Our conference, which convened on the 14th, was a good one. The attendance was not large, but the good spirit that prevailed throughout made us rejoice and feel that it was good to be a Saint in latter days.

The conference was in charge of Brother S. R. Hay, district president. Those of the ministry present were: Brother B. F. Renfroe, E. W. Nunley, W. E. Peak, and John Harp.

We left Cookes Point on the 18th for Hearne where we held a few meetings, with interest. On the 26th we came to this place, seven miles north of Franklin. This is the first time there has been any elders here. There are only two families living here, the Belcher families. Began preaching last evening with good interest. Will continue here a few days and then on to Dallas, Texas, and other points, en route for General Conference.

Your collaborators,

JOHN AND RUTH HARP.

FEBRUARY, 28, 1913.

Ontario.

I was called here by phone message to conduct the funeral of Sister James Latter and concluded to remain a few days. Since coming we have secured a church site and had the deed made out and forwarded for registration. This no doubt will be interesting news to R. C. Russell, because he was the first to bring the gospel message here and under the most trying conditions, gathered a fine lot of noble souls into the kingdom. All hold him in the highest respect.

I expect to leave here next week for Grand Valley. My health has not been good this winter and I have been unable to fill the many calls for preaching.

G. C. TOMLINSON.

RAVENNA, ONTARIO, CANADA, February 21, 1913.

News from Branches

San Antonio, Texas.

Perhaps some one may be interested in hearing from southwestern Texas. The Second San Antonio Branch is moving along about as usual. No accessions thereto for some time.

We are holding our regular services; that is, Sunday school at 10, preaching at 11, prayer meeting Wednesday evenings. Our district conference met February 15, and held over the 16th. Report will be made by our worthy secretary.

Our district president, Brother J. W. Morgan, preached for us in the forenoon, February 23, and the writer spoke at night.

The Holiness people held a meeting in the church a while back; the Baker brothers.

The officers of the branch are as follows: O. D. Johnson, president; J. Robert Wheeler, priest; H. H. Davenport, teacher; O. G. Davenport, clerk; J. E. Johnson, treasurer; Sister Armenia J. Davenport, organist.

I must not neglect to mention the good services (as preachers for us in the past) of Brethren W. H. Mannering, John Harp, O. D. Johnson, Carl F. Wheeler, A. Rodell Wheeler, T. J. Jett, F. Robert Wheeler, Gaud R. Kuykendall, H. H. Davenport, W. E. Peak, and priest Oregonio Menchaca.

Awaiting the triumph of this latter day work, in hope of the resurrection and eternal life. Your brother,

W. H. DAVENPORT.

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of our people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?—Abraham Lincoln.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

POTTAWATTAMIE.—District conference met on February 1 and 2, 1913, at Council Bluffs, and was called to order by President J. A. Hansen, who with his associates presided. Secretary presented a report on credentials which was accepted. Branch reports were read from Boomer, 63, loss 2 by removal; Carson, 43; Council Bluffs, 341, gain 5; Crescent, 151; Fontanelle, 35; Hazel Dell, 66, gain 1; North Star, 137; Wheeler, 42, loss 1. Ministry reporting: Joshua Carlile, 5 patriarchal blessings; N. V. Sheldon, R. W. McKenzie, J. P. Carlile, A. H. Davidson, M. F. Elswick, J. A. Hansen, J. C. Lapworth, C. B. Bardsley, J. D. Parish, S. Harding, P. T. Anderson, baptized 1. Priests: J. N. Campbell, C. C. Larsen, J. P. Christensen, baptized 3; D. E. Butler, G. E. Whitehead, H. N. Pierce, A. C. Riley, E. D. Blair. Teachers: Peter Olsen, J. C. Adams. A summary gave 5 patriarchal blessings, 224 sermons, assisted in 84 services, baptisms 4, confirmations 2, marriages 6, children blessed 7, sick administrations 87, official visits 58, enrolled in branches 878, scattered 79, total membership 957, including 1 patriarch, 2 high priests, 2 seventies, 12 elders, 23 priests, 12 teachers, 5 deacons. There have been 12 baptisms and 1 received by letter, 8 removals, 1 death; a net gain of 4 for the four months. The auditors having found the accounts of the bishop's agent for the year 1912 correct, his report for the last four months was read and accepted. Balance on hand September 20, $635.62; received since, $587.78; total, $1,223.40; paid Bishop Kelley, $400; to elders, 93.65; to elders' families, $321; to Sanitarium, $50; members' aid, $70; total disbursements, $934.65; balance on hand, $277.75. District treasurer reported balance on hand last report, $6.61; paid district secretary $2.34; balance on hand, $3.38; report approved and treasurer ordered to pay district secretary $1.10 for office expenses. Officers elected as follows: J. A. Hansen president, who chose as associates S. Harding and C. B. Bardsley; J. Charles Jensen, secretary; D. E. Butler, treasurer; Sister Sarah E. Dempsey, member library board; J. A. Hansen sustained as bishop's agent. Delegates to General Conference are J. A. Hansen, P. T. Anderson, S. Harding, J. Charles Jensen, A. J. Davidson, J. P. Carlile, Sarah Carlile, Joshua Carlile, Josephine Carlile, J. P. Christensen, Julia Christensen, J. A. Pratt, J. R. Lapworth, Lizzie Lapworth, Estella Harding, Hattie H. Hall, Adah Hall, Mary E. Sabry, J. C. Adams, Ella Adams, D. E. Butler, C. C. Larsen, Peter Larsen, Floy Wind, Leona Currie, Bertha Butler, Jane Harding, Mary Wind, C. B. Bardsley, Ida C. Harding, Nels Johnson, Edna Elswick, H. N. Pierce, G. J. Hansen, Nellie Hansen, A. A. Gaylord. Those present are authorized to cast a majority and minority vote. Sacrament service Sunday morning, preaching Saturday evening by J. P. Carlile, Sunday afternoon by Joshua Carlile. Conference adjourned to meet for prayer service at 9.30 Sunday morning, May 25, 1913, and business session Monday, the 26th. The conference was largely attended and proved one of the best held in the district for some time. J. Charles Jensen, secretary.

SOUTHWESTERN TEXAS.—Conference was held at Pipe Creek, in Bandera County, beginning on the evening of the 14th and lasting over the following Sunday. Although nothing unusual can be recorded of this conference, it was a quiet success. Beside attending to the routine work, six services were held, which were generally speaking, well attended. Among the elements contributing to the success of the conference might be mentioned the prevalence of fine weather and the presence of two of our missionaries. Brethren Glaud Kuykendall and W. H. Mannering, Carl F. Wheeler, secretary.

The Bishopric.

Additional elders who have made due financial report to this date, March 1, for the year 1912.

G. E. Burt, C. A. Butterworth, Charles Cousins, A. M. Chase, W. H. Chandler, Charles Chase, F. J. Chatburn, Charles Fry, P. M. Hanson, William Johnson, J. H. N. Jones, E. Keeler, J. H. Lake, George Lewis, W. A. McDowell, R. O. Mann, F. G. Pitt, F. M. Sheehy, T. J. Sheppard,

AGENT'S NOTICE.

To Saints and Friends, and All Who May Notice This Appeal; Greeting: As has been previously mentioned in the HERALD, I have been appointed as bishop's agent for Sweden. In order to be able to do anything for the work in a financial way, I am under the necessity of appealing for help, and therefore come to all who have the welfare of this far-away mission at heart. There are but few Saints in Sweden, and the most of them are poor, hence not able to fully sustain the work.

Our dear friends among the Saints in the States do not know very much about what a hard field this is for the missionaries. There are very few, if any, to give an encouraging word and helping hand. The brethren must live. Who will help? Should there be anyone read this who would feel the promptings of the Spirit to send us anything, we will be very thankful. Every good deed will be rewarded by our Father in heaven.

We hope and pray that God by his Holy Spirit will lead us and teach us our duty and help us to do what is required of us. The missionaries could do much more in the way of preaching the gospel if they could come and go from place to place, but when they have nothing to go with, no place to stop, and nothing to pay with, then they are nearly tied hand and foot. I am hoping there will be a new opening for this mission. May the work be more fully sustained. May our heavenly Father send his Holy Spirit abroad in the land and stir the people from their slumber, that they may awaken enough to begin to ask: What is this we hear?

I beg of the Saints an interest in their prayers for this far-away mission, and myself that God's Holy Spirit will guide and lead me to do my full duty.

I am your humble sister in Christ,

MRS. HANNAH LAWRENCE.

WARMEL, BJORNEBORG, SWEDEN, February 10, 1913.

Church Secretary.

RAILROAD RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Informal notice has been given that the Burlington Route has granted a rate of two cents per mile in each direction from points in the State of Missouri only, to Lamoni, Iowa, to the April General Conventions and General Conference.

Dates of sale on going trips limited to April 1 to 7 inclusive. Final return limit, April 21.

Tariffs giving particulars to agents will not be issued until about March 15 to 20. Probably it will be necessary to obtain certificates with going tickets to secure reduction on return trip. Make inquiry of agents for same; the undersigned will publish further items if received in time. Those coming from Missouri and those crossing the State in transit should take note of the reduction.

Trains number 111 and 112 on the Chariton Branch, running between Chariton, Iowa, and Saint Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, will run direct to Lamoni April 1 to 7 inclusive, also on other dates at the close of conference.

Parties traveling together from Chicago, Saint Louis, Kansas City, etc., should make arrangements with local agents for special car service.

R. S. SALYARDS,

Church Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, March 6, 1913.

Quorum Notices.

Dear Brethren: Will you please report soon? Use the same blank furnished by the Twelve. I do not have all the addresses of the quorum. We are desirous of securing a report of all the members.

R. W. FARRELL.

WINTER HILL, MASSACHUSETTS, 29 Jaques Street.

THE EVANGELISTS.

Brethren, I have sent report blanks to every member of the Order of Evangelists, and if any fail to receive said blank, and he will notify me at once, at Dow City, Crawford County, Iowa, I will forward one. Please remember that the Order of Evangelists has directed that all annual reports of its members be sent to their secretary, between March 1 and March 10 every year.

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH, Sec.

Died.

BUTLER.—Sister Mary Butler, January 27, 1913. Wife of J. H. Butler; mother of Mrs. D. M. Dalby, Mrs. Thomas Manning; and sister of Brothers Elam and J. D. Erwin. Baptized at Manchester, Texas, 1879. Restored gospel was paramount to everything else. About two years ago the writer visited her, knowing of her feeble health. Upon leaving she placed a package of money, mostly silver, in my hand saying: "Brother Short, I want to make this an offering to assist in

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 A Short-lived Republic - - - - - 249
 A Friend Gone to His Rest - - - - - 250
 Magazine Number of the HERALD - - - - - 251
 Evil Effects of Adulation - - - - - 251
 Canadian Items - - - - - 251
 Notes and Comments - - - - - 252

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Twelve Reasons Why I Believe the Book of Mormon.—Part 2, by Charles Fry - - - - - 252
 Equality, Part 3, by J. W. Gilbert - - - - - 256
 Revivals, by John Shields - - - - - 259
 Priesthood; What Is It, by Edward Ingham - - - - - 261
 OF GENERAL INTEREST - - - - - 262
 MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN - - - - - 265
 LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - - 267
 R. D. Weaver—Marjorie Tait—O. J. Tary—F. R.
 Tubb—Stewart Lamont—Extracts from Letters. - - - - - 268
 NEWS FROM MISSIONS' - - - - - 268
 O. J. Tary—Josephine Pople—John and Ruth Harp
 —B. C. Tomlinson. - - - - -
 NEWS FROM BRANCHES - - - - - 269
 MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - - 270

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us. The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion; make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

building the Lord's temple. These hands have earned and saved this by nickels and dimes. I am so glad I can give it. It is a wonderful privilege and to know that God permits man in this age to do so is a great comfort to me." Before passing she requested that all property be fully tithed, which was fully honored. A check for $520 has been received. Funeral sermon by Lee Quick.

LATTER.—Emily C. Latter, at Ravenna, Ontario, Canada, February 10, 1913. Born July 27, 1847, at New Market, Ontario; baptized May 27, 1903, by Elder R. C. Russell. She leaves a husband, James Latter, and three grown children: Sister Armstrong of Medford, Ontario, Sister Stoumburg, of Banks, Ontario, and William, at home. She was a firm believer in the restored gospel and her life was a consistent one so far as known to the writer. A large number of sorrowing friends met at the home to pay their last respects, in a blinding snowstorm. Attention was good and many favorable comments were made on the sermon by Elder G. C. Tomlinson.

KEOWN.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, February 25, 1913, Sister Emily, wife of David Keown, aged 62 years, 10 months, and 19 days. Her maiden name was Work. She and Brother Keown were married April 18, 1876. Of five children born, three survive: Charles, who lives in Chicago, and Grace and Esther at home with their bereaved father. She was baptized here in 1877, by J. P. Dillon and was a good Saint, wife, and mother. Her husband is one of the high council of Lamoni Stake. Funeral was in charge of Elder Heman C. Smith; sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

DUFFIELD.—Margaret J. Duffield, February 4, 1913, from heart failure. Her maiden name was Powell. Born August 27, 1849. Married David S. Duffield, January, 1872. Five children were born. Husband and three children survive: Joseph, of Windsor, Missouri; Minnie Dellar, of Rockville, Missouri; and Letha Chapman, of Hot Springs, Arkansas. Sister Duffield was baptized July 3, 1888, at Rich Hill, Missouri, by Emsley Curtis. She was faithful until death. Funeral from the home in charge of Elder I. A. Roberts and L. A. Lyon.

NEWFARTH.—Mr. Henry Newfarth was born in Ripley County, Indiana, September 27, 1835. He married Miss Sophia Grossman, March 18, 1865, and came to his home in Monroe County, Iowa, where he remained upon the same farm to the time of his death, February 24, 1913. His wife died twenty-two years ago. To this union there were born four children. The surviving ones are Mrs. Jennie Miller, Edward Newfarth, and Mrs. Anna Walker, in whose home he died near Hiteman, Iowa. He was confirmed in the Lutheran Church when fifteen years of age. Elder E. B. Morgan preached the sermon, assisted by Samuel Rowley.

PIEPERGERDES.—Lydia, wife of Mr. Henry C. Piepergerdes, was born in Burlington, Iowa, December 11, 1875; came to Stewartsville, 1878. Baptized when young by T. T. Hinderks; died February 23, 1913, aged 37 years, 2 months, 12 days. Leaves good and kind husband, four little boys, thirteen, nine, six, and four years of age, and a baby girl ten days old, an aged father, Brother John Daries, four sisters, and one brother. Notwithstanding snowdrifts, a large concourse of friends followed the beautiful casket. That and the vast collection of flowers was evidence of the high esteem in which she was held. A kind, affectionate wife and mother, a good Saint. Services in charge of A. W. Head; sermon by William Lewis.

CLAYTON.—Frances Elizabeth Kemmish was born in Harrison County, Iowa, April 7, 1871. Daughter of Brother and Sister David Kemmish. Died at her home, December 21, 1912, aged 41 years, 8 months, 15 days. Married Samuel Clayton, June 21, 1887. There were born fourteen children, eleven of whom, with their father mourn her untimely death; also a baby boy of two years; her father and mother, four sisters, and one brother. She united with no church but was kind and true, honorable and upright in all her ways. Sermon by Sidney Pitt, sr.

The March "Century."

The March Century contains many special features, both in text and illustration. Robert Hichens's travel series on the Balkan peninsula begins in that number, and is illustrated in color by Jules Guérin, who has done similar duty in previous travel series by Mr. Hichens written for The Century. Joseph Pennell's new series of lithographs also begins in the March number, with six views of the Capitol at Washington. Mr. Hichens's article also has two Pennell pictures.

Three of the March Century features are given timeliness by the approach of a Democratic President's inauguration—"The kind of a man Woodrow Wilson is," by W. G. McAdoo; Woodrow Wilson as a man of letters," by Professor Bliss Perry, and "Grover Cleveland and his cabinet at work," by Hilary A. Herbert, who was Secretary of the Navy in the last Democratic administration.

The After-the-War feature for March—the fifth in that noteworthy series—is an account of "The arbitration of the Alabama claims," written by Colonel William Conant Church, editor of The Army and Navy Journal. The article is profusely illustrated.

Miscellaneous features include: "Americans and the European point of view," by Maurice Francis Egan, Minister to Denmark—an article that may not make Americans more self-satisfied; "Toscanini at the baton—a sketch of the famous Metropolitan Opera House conductor, by Max Smith; James Davenport Whelpley's "Trade of China," in which he writes at length of the political conditions of that country and the relations of international trade thereto. Chinese republicanism, he says, is almost mythical at present.

Francis Hodgson Burnett's new serial, "T. Tembarom"—the New York reporter who inherited a $350,000-a-year estate in England—is continued, with synopsis of the opening chapters. Other fiction is by Lucy Furman, Hugh Johnson, Charles D. Stewart, and Horace Hazletine.

A Guérin painting is the frontispiece. An inset, also in color, is the reproduction of a portrait by William M. Chase (Century's American artist Series). Other illustrators include W. M. Berger, Reginald Birch, F. R. Gruger, E. M. Ashe, and Oliver Herford.

ROYAL Baking Powder

is the greatest of modern-time helps to perfect cake and biscuit making. Makes home baking pleasant and profitable. It renders the food more digestible and guarantees it safe from alum and all adulterants.

If You Are Going West

by all means find out about the special low one-way Colonist fares on sale daily, March 15 to April 15. You can save a neat sum of money by going at that time.

The Burlington is the through train route to the Northwest and the through car route to California.

Come in and get your copy of our Colonist folder, telling all about these fares and the service.

L. F. SILTZ, Agent
C. B. & Q. R. R.

"There's Comfort for You on the C. B. & Q."

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success.
No. 248a, cloth ..... 75c

THE OLD JERUSALEM GOSPEL. This book by Elder Joseph Luff has become one of our best and widest known and read book. There is a reason for this. Get the book and read it and you will not need to have anyone tell you why.
Order No. 248, cloth ..... 75c

JOSEPH SMITH DEFENDED, by Elder J. W. Peterson. A useful book for not only the investigator but also for the more mature student. It sweeps away many of the false ideas regarding the prophet.
Order No. 241, cloth ..... 50c

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,750.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good lively business. Address, 8-tf
VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, 6-tf
Independence, Mo.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER R. C. EVANS. This book was written by Elder R. C. Evans. It contains the history of Brother Evans and the marvelous manifestation of God working through his servant.
No. 216, cloth .. . . . . . 75c

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. . 5-tf

HIS FIRST VENTURE is the name of a new book just off the press. Another one of the Birth Offering Series. Put it into the hands of your children. Order No. 246a. Cloth, 50c.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 19, 1913

NUMBER 12

Editorial

"ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF MORMONISM"; AND ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS OF CATHOLICISM.

THE OLD SAN GABRIEL MISSION.

On February 13, in company with Brethren F. M. Sheehy, Paul M. Hanson, R. T. Cooper, and Fred Adam, the writer was privileged to visit the Old San Gabriel Mission, making the trip by auto to the little town of San Gabriel, some nine miles from the great city of Los Angeles.

This mission was founded in 1771, just one hundred years before the writer was born. It still stands in a fair state of preservation, and services are held there every Sunday by priests of the Catholic faith. On this particular day, however, the Spirit and the Bride seemed to have withdrawn the invitation, "Whosoever will may come, and partake freely," for we were taxed twenty-five cents each to enter.

The doors that swung open to admit us were of solid timbers, probably four inches in thickness, the original doors of the building, we were told. The walls are from five to eight feet in thickness, of rock and brick (not "dobes"); the work of dressing the rock, burning the brick, hewing the timbers, and constructing the walls, having been done by Indians, under the supervision of the padres.

We were shown two rooms of the original building, and a third room of later construction. The first of these was the sacristy, in which preparation was made for the sacrament, and where sacred vessels and vestments are kept. In this room were exhibited robes brought from Spain and worn by the priests in the years now long gone. In one corner of the room hung a mirror of peculiar appearance, brought from Spain in the early days of the mission.

This mirror, round in shape, reflected the entire interior of the room; and we were told by our guide that it was placed there so that the priest might watch the Indians, even when his back was turned. No doubt there was need of this, as they discovered to their cost at San Diego, as well as in other old missions where certain of the fathers paid for their missionary zeal with their lives.

The second room was a long, narrow, assembly room, in one end of which stands the altar, surmounted by candlesticks, and other accessories of the Catholic service, and presided over by images of patron saints.

The pulpit is a small circular structure at one side of the room, hung half way up the wall, like a swallow's nest, and reached by a little stairway. Two rows of seats accommodate the worshipers. Our guide was Italian, but might have been Irish, judging from his method of imparting information, as the following remark will show: "This is not the original seating. The seating has been replaced twice. With the original seating—why there were no seats—they all stood up."

The walls of this room are lined with ancient paintings of the apostles; paintings done in Spain in the eighteenth century. There are also pictures of patron saints.

We were shown an old baptismal font, of solid copper, said by the guide to have been hammered out of copper by Indian converts even before the founding of the mission. The church records declare that fifteen thousand, eight hundred converts have been baptized in (at) this font. We thought in our own minds that not one person had ever been baptized in this font. They have been sprinkled there, but they, in the nature of the case, could not be baptized as our Lord was baptized when he went down into Jordan. This old copper font is a mute testimony of change and apostasy in years gone by.

Of the Mission San Gabriel, in his book, California, its History and Romance, John S. McGroarty says:

"It came, in time, to be an establishment so great and so vast that it was often called 'The Queen of the Missions.' It gathered into its fold thousands of neophytes, its flocks and herds were thick in the deep, fertile valley and upon the hillsides. Its granaries were never empty. . . . Its Indian artisans became so skillful that they once built a ship which was launched in the harbor of San Pedro."

Of the missions as a whole, he writes: "Within the sheltering walls of those vast establishments there were as many as thirty thousand Christianized Indians at one time, leading not only wholesome Christian lives, but following, as well, all the occupations of artisans known to those days."

FLORA SCOTT

The leading character in the great drama of founding these missions was that great old man, Father Junipero Serra. He it was who left a life of ease and honor in sunny Spain and came to this wild land. He it was who joined the Franciscan Order, whose members pledge themselves to forsake all earthly riches, to go meanly clad, abstaining from meat and wine, never riding when they can walk, and devoting their lives to the service of the poorest and most wretched of humanity. He it was who when all declared that the California Indians were too ignorant, dirty, dishonest, and depraved to be worth saving, replied that those were the men who needed him most. And when the entire expedition was for turning back at San Diego, and the commander of the military arm of the expedition declared that they would sail for Mexico City on the next tide, replied that they all might go, but he would remain alone and die alone, if need be, in his effort to convert the Indian. The result was that they all remained, and founded a great chain of missions reaching up and down the coast from San Diego to San Francisco, a distance of six hundred miles. Father Junipero himself is said to have made the journey on foot the length of this chain of missions as many as twenty times, besides journeying on foot to Mexico City and back, over trackless deserts and among hostile Indians, a total distance of more than two thousand miles.

The spectacle of such a life of devotion and sacrifice can but spur us to nobler deeds in the cause that we love. We have known men and women who could not (would not) go to their church a distance of four or five blocks, if it were raining, or the sun shone too brightly. They should contemplate the spectacle of this feeble old man toiling over the desert sands under the burning sun—giving his life for the degraded Indian. We may say that such service was worthy of a better church than that which he served; but still we should learn a lesson from his devotion to his conscience and his sense of duty. According to his belief, he labored and gave himself to serve men; and his life shames the indifferent, while it enthuses the active and devout.

In process of time, the Mexican Government having become indebted to the many missions for supplies used in feeding and caring for garrisons of soldiers maintained at various points, with characteristic Mexican ideas of "honor" and expediency, concluded that it would be easier to appropriate the missions than to pay the debt. This they did, "secularizing" them, and driving the priests away, some of them to actually starve in the hills, while the missions and fields were sold at auction to private persons. The missions soon fell into ruins, and the Indians speedily reverted to their former low estate. This was not robbery of the priests, for a Franciscan never owns property; he does not even claim the clothes that he wears,—it was robbery of the Indians, whose physical toil had created the missions under the mental direction of Junipero and his associates and successors.

California should renew and preserve these old ruins, of which there are many, up and down the coast, at various points. They are among the most interesting historical buildings to be found the world over. Fortunately the old mission at San Francisco, named after the patron saint of the Franciscans, escaped the ruin of fire and earthquake during the great San Francisco earthquake, though other buildings in the immediate neighborhood were destroyed.

"ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF MORMONISM."

Reflecting on that which we had seen, we thought that a no less wonderful drama could be founded on the history of the church to which we yielded our allegiance. The same evening we witnessed such an attempt. In the city of Los Angeles we attended the moving picture play called "One Hundred Years of Mormonism,"—not going with any idea of enjoying it, but with a desire to observe and study this newest attempt to explain the phenomenon termed "Mormonism." We had supposed that this would be but a new form of old attacks, a new expose', seeking to visualize the evils supposed to be inherent in the system.

To our surprise we discovered that the production was arranged from a pro-Mormon viewpoint. In the oral prologue the lecturer gave a very accurate and favorable account of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and its history and teaching. We soon discovered that the fine hand of Utah was behind the production, and the objectionable features were of a different character from those that we had anticipated.

Joseph Smith was portrayed as a studious and industrious lad, devoted to the study of the Bible. His part was acted by a slow-moving young person, whose obvious attempt to appear dreamy and wrapped in religious abstraction at times gave him rather the appearance of dullness and heaviness. In the scene of the first vision the parts of the Father and the Son were taken by bearded individuals quite earthly in appearance. The angel of the second vision was more spiritual. The role of Emma Smith, wife of the Prophet, was assumed by one quite unlike her in appearance. No accurate pictures of old-time buildings and landmarks appeared.

Mob scenes in Missouri and Illinois were very realistically rendered, including the destruction of the church publishing house in Independence, the Haun's Mill Massacre, and the assassination at Carthage, and could not fail to arouse sympathy. It is said that the expense of staging and producing these scenes and taking the films amounted to fifty thousand dollars. But evidently those in charge did not go outside of California to stage the play; and eucalyptus trees growing on the streets of Nauvoo seemed out of place to the eastern eye.

Following the death of Joseph Smith, Brigham Young appeared on the scene and was hailed as the true successor. His part we were informed was taken by his grandson, a young man who is said to resemble him at that period of his life. The march westward was shown, across deserts, over mountain fastnesses, and through unbridged rivers. This feature should appeal to those who passed through those experiences, if they are privileged to witness this reproduction of past scenes. Brother Hanson, who sat by our side, informed us that his mother took part in this westward movement, going with the "hand cart" party. From descriptions that we have had from Brethren Thornton, Gibson, and others who repeatedly crossed the plains in those days, the pictures seemed to interpret the spirit of those times quite accurately, so far as we could judge.

Witnessing these scenes, even in pantomime, and reflecting on all that had occurred during those forced marches, we could see how the hardship, peril, and toil, and the resentment under persecution, may have tended to brutalize some of the dominant spirits, and may in a measure account for some of the things that were taught and practiced at a later time; while the free and loose conditions of camp life may have undermined the morals of others, and may account for other things of a deplorable nature.

The scene closed with pictures of the Salt Lake Temple and other buildings of Salt Lake, evidently reproduced from photographs. Thus Utah was held up as the repository of all that may be included under the term "Mormonism," as the interpreter and custodian of the work begun by Joseph Smith. How unfortunate this is our readers may readily perceive, knowing as they do the facts in the case, and realizing as they do that the work begun one hundred years ago finds its true interpretation in spirit and in letter in the Reorganization. So, altogether, while this production might have been much worse, had it been arranged from the usual anti-Mormon standpoint, with a desire to engender prejudice and stir up religious hatred and bigotry, it could have been made much better had it been arranged with a true knowledge of facts, with the life line of the church accurately traced to the present time.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

A CORRECTION.

In our issue for February 26, 1913, prayer was requested for Brother J. M. Terry, who was "much afflicted." Sister Mary L. Douglass, of Ukiah, California, writes that it was not Brother Terry, but his estimable wife, who is in need of our prayers. We regret that this error crept in, and trust that the sister may be relieved.

ASSIGNMENT OF MEETING PLACES FOR QUORUMS.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL, 1913.

First Presidency: Herald Building, Presidency's office.

Quorum of Twelve: Room over Grenawalt's store.

Order of Evangelists: Mite Society Building.

Bishops: Herald Building, Bishop's office.

High Priests: Methodist church.

First Quorum of Seventy: North students' room, basement of brick church.

Second Quorum of Seventy: South students' room, basement of brick church.

Third Quorum of Seventy: Room over Barrows' drug store.

Seven Presidents of Seventy: Room over Barrows' drug store.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

NEW TRACT.—The series of articles by the Associate Editor, on "Duties of branch officers" are now published in tract form, and can be had by ordering No. 29, from Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa. Price, 5 cents each; 50 cents per dozen.

General Church Chorister, A. N. Hoxie, jr., was in Lamoni recently rehearsing the local choir on music for General Conference. The platform is being enlarged and Brother Hoxie is looking forward to meeting a good conference choir ready to render some of the excellent selections which he has forwarded to various branches. Brother Hoxie has the ability, temperament, and enthusiasm necessary for his newly-appointed work. We were pleased to note that all his rehearsals begin with prayer.

The Evening Index, San Bernardino, California, for March 3, has the following account of the district conference recently held at that place:

"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints closed a very successful conference of the Southern California District Sunday evening. The church was crowded all day, practically every available seat being occupied by visiting delegates and resident members.

"At 8 o'clock Sunday morning a joint priesthood meeting of all of the priesthood of the district was held. Those present and taking part were: Nathaniel Carmichael, presiding elder, of Garden Grove; N. Paulson, William Schade, R. T. Cooper, Peter Kaufman, Paul M. Hanson, Arthur Ballard, of Los Angeles; George Wixom, J. Scott, W. Boren, F. Hogben, and J. Wixom, of San Bernardino; S. Penfold, H. C. Powell, of Garden Grove; A. Tarling, of Hermosa; H. Swain, of Ontario; John Inmann, R. M. Dungan, F. Burton, H. Pankey, of Santa Ana; E. A. Davis, of Pittsburg, Kansas; Elbert A. Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa.

"At the afternoon prayer service important ordinations were attended to under the ordinance of laying on of hands of the priesthood. Those were: George Wixom to the office of elder; W. Boren as president of the Eighth Quorum of Priests; William Schade of Los Angeles, and H. C. Powell of Garden Grove as first and second counselors to the president of the Eighth Quorum of Priests; and F. Hogben as counselor to the president of the Seventh Quorum of Deacons. These quorums are organized bodies of the different grades or orders of the priesthood in the district. The elders were also represented at the conference, as well as the traveling missionary force in the person of Evan A. Davis, of Kansas. The general organization of the church was represented by Elbert A. Smith of the First Presidency, a council of three men presiding over the entire church.

"Elder Evan A. Davis was the speaker at the morning hour, his theme being the millennial reign that is expected to follow the second advent of Jesus Christ upon earth. Elder Nathaniel Carmichael spoke in the evening on the subject of the visits of angels to earth, recounting such incidents of the past in biblical history, and arguing that as God is unchangeable and man's needs are the same, these visitations should and in fact do still occur when men are worthy to receive them."

---

There is nothing, no nothing, innocent or good, that dies and is forgotten. An infant—a prattling child dying in its cradle—will live again in better thoughts of those who loved it, and play its part through them, in the redeeming actions of the world, though its body be burnt to ashes and drowned in the deepest sea.—Charles Dickens.

---

Insincerity in a man's own heart must make all his enjoyments, all that concerns him, unreal; so that his whole life must seem like a merely dramatic representation. And this would be the case, even though he were surrounded by true-hearted relatives and friends.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Original Articles

REVIVAL SERVICES.

No. 9. "Methods and Tactics" Series.

According to the sacred books of the church, revival services are both legitimate and profitable, and many of them should be held by the Saints. They are necessary to the life, growth, and perfection of the Saints, and they may be made a means by which the outsider who is seeking the truth may be reached, converted, and saved. Jesus said, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." (Luke 5:32.) And Paul said: "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners: of whom I am chief." (1 Timothy 1:15.) At this time the whole Jewish nation was in a condition of apostasy and sin; "As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one; there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God."—Romans 3:10, 11.

Before these last statements were penned, Jesus knowing the true condition of the world, and those who claimed to be the people of God, sent his ministers out to first reclaim the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and later he sent them into all the world. However, the first effort of the Son of God, with the assistance of all his ministers and saints, was to revive and save those who were under covenant with God. One of the grandest and most successful revival meetings ever held occurred on the day of Pentecost, when there was a general awakening of both the disciples of John and Christ, and a grand union was formed between the two, and as a result three thousand souls were added to the disciples. A short time after this we read of the results of this grand revival work, as follows: "Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed: and the number of the men was about five thousand."

"And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost; and they spake the word of God with boldness."—Acts 4:4, 31.

"And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women."—Acts 5:14.

Of Barnabas it is written, "For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord."—Acts 11:24.

The people of God in the days of David sang this sentiment, in these words: "Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?"

Could we do better in this connection than to quote from the words of the Prophet Alma, in order to learn something with reference to the real work to be done in revival meetings? They are as follows: "Nevertheless the children of God were commanded that they should gather themselves together oft, and join in fasting and mighty prayer, in behalf of the welfare of the souls of those who knew not God."—Alma 4: 6, A. E.

Down in our days, the work of the restoration is largely a revival effort, and strikingly in harmony with the work done by Christ and his apostles. And in this work all ministers, from the elder up, should be governed by the following instruction, given of God: "The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 9. "Hearken, O ye people of my church, for verily I say unto you, that these things were spoken unto you for your profit and learning; but notwithstanding those things which are written, it always has been given to the elders of my church, from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit. . . ."—Doctrine and Covenants 46: 1.

Every meeting, to be fully successful, should be harmonious in every particular. There should be an understanding between the minister conducting a revival service and the chorister, that perfect harmony may prevail. Both should be assisted and blessed by the presence and help of the Spirit, and if they would confer together with reference to the topic to be considered, and the hymns used in such services, better results would obtain, if the writer is not mistaken. Indeed, perfect harmony should prevail among all who take part in such services. Is not this one of the reasons why the Lord has said the evangelist when "traveling and holding revival meetings" is to "labor in connection with branch and district officers"? To make revival meetings a success, there should be a special effort made by all to get so closely in touch with God as to be worthy to receive the Holy Spirit. It is the inspiration of all such meetings, and without its light, direction, inspiration, and assistance, such meetings would largely be a failure. Every Saint and officer attending and taking part should make a special effort to be pure and holy in the sight of God; for it is written: "And faith, hope, charity, and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualifyeth him for the work."—Doctrine and Covenants 3: 1. And, to the mind of the writer, if the work referred to in Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10, 11, was carefully taken up, and prosecuted in wisdom, and with diligence continued, the general results would be much better and more far-reaching, and we would be the better able to enforce our teaching by our example.

If all officers and members attending such services would do their best in soliciting the attendance of other Saints and friends by words of encouragement, deeds of love, and a godly example, and thus show themselves to be living, spiritual, working members of the Church of Jesus Christ, such meetings would become more attractive to all, and they would be much better attended. To make such meetings attractive and interesting, everyone should have something to do. True, they may all sing, and while the minister offers the opening prayer, each and all may offer a silent and heartfelt prayer for the success of the service; for great is the power of prayer. What is more attractive and interesting than the presence and manifestations of the Spirit? Was it not this that attracted so much attention on the day of Pentecost? Was it not the presence and manifestations of the Spirit that attracted so much attention among the Lamanites when King Lamoni, his wife, and so many others were converted? Is it not a fact that the Spirit manifested in preaching the word, and in prayer and testimony, revives the Saints, and touches the heart of and converts the sinner, and leads him to Christ, and inspires his obedience to the gospel? "The true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him. For unto such hath God promised his Spirit. And they who worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in truth."—John 4: 25, 26, I. T.

Every meeting of this kind should be preceded by at least fifteen minutes of good song service. Nothing is more attractive and entertaining than good music, and spiritual singing by the people of God. It is soul-cheering and reviving to listen to the children of Zion sing with the Spirit, and with the understanding. Such music and singing begets new life and inspiration; it awakens the sleeping from their lethargy; and it brings the Spirit, revives the drooping, fainting, and discouraged soul. It clothes with inspiration the preacher's tongue, and enables him to "preach the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven."

There are many ways in which to work in order to attract attention and create interest: Visiting from house to house and spending a few moments talking on religious topics with those who are cold or lukewarm; tell them how much their presence at church would encourage others; tell them how much good you find in the religion of Christ, and how we want everyone to work for the good of our revival meetings, at their homes, among their neighbors and friends, and at the services held at the church. The printed word may be circulated, or read to different ones with good results. This will help make our services and religion attractive, if it is done with care, and in wisdom. In thus working everyone should be "an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." That is why the Lord has said: "There is a great work to be done by mine elders, and that they may be fitted to do this work and the accomplishment thereof be not prevented, it is enjoined upon them that they not only be kind of heart and of a lowly spirit, that their wisdom may be the wisdom of the Lord and their strength the strength of the Spirit, but they shall lay aside lightness of speech and lightness of manner when standing to declare the word, and shall study to approve their ministrations to the people by candor in speech and courtesy in demeanor, that as ministers of the gospel they may win souls unto Christ. The elders and men of the church should be of cheerful heart and countenance among themselves and in their intercourse with their neighbors and men of the world, yet they must be without blame in word and deed. It is therefore not seemly that they indulge in loud and boisterous speech, or in the relating of coarse and vulgar stories, or those in which the names of their God and their Redeemer are blasphemed. Men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, be ye clean in your bodies and in your clothing; let your garments be of a sober character and free from excess of ornamentation. Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example."—Doctrine and Covenants 119:2, 3.

It occurs to the writer that the methods of conducting revival services may be varied with profit, and the tendency will be to increase attendance and interest, though I never give it as my opinion, and yet it seems to be in harmony with the word. When the Savior was here among men he sometimes sat down and taught the people. See Matthew 5:1; Luke 4:20. For good and sufficient reasons may not the minister of to-day follow his example, and sit down and then preach to or teach his audience? I have been informed that Apostle Josiah Ells, because of old age and ill health, followed his Master's example. So far as I know, no one found fault because he did so; yet it was an exception to the general rule.

The revival held on the day of Pentecost was not, strictly speaking, a preaching meeting only; neither was it a prayer meeting in the fullest sense of the word. It was commenced with fasting and prayers, then came the outpouring of the Spirit, which was followed by several short discourses delivered in unknown tongues, and a short discourse by the Apostle Peter. Read the account, and see if this is not true. May there not be other variations from the usual method of holding services, and still be in harmony with the Spirit, and the commandments and revelations of God? In conducting special revival services, if the Spirit so leads, might there not be some variations from the usual course pursued, and still be in harmony with the sacred books of the church? In holding revival services, if the Spirit so lead, why not open services with singing, a few earnest, heartfelt prayers, three or four short, spiritual testimonies, followed by a short, spiritual discourse? It might be a departure from the established rule, and yet be in harmony with the commandments and revelations of God, as the writer sees it.

The object in holding revival services is not to over enthuse the members of the church, or anyone else; but to stimulate spiritual life, and to increase activity in the service of God. It is to increase faith, more fully establish the truth in the hearts and minds of all, to brighten their hopes, bring them closer in touch with Christ, and nearer to God. This will make those reached more spiritual, live Christians, and industrious workers in the kingdom of God. It is one of the ways ordained of God for Zion to arise and put on her beautiful garments, that the world may look upon and admire her beauty, and be filled with her glory.

The only evangelists, or revivalists, that do not have full control of their revival services, so far as the writer knows, are those of our own church. In this matter, are the children of the world wiser than the children of light? Should it be so? To the writer it seems the Lord intended that the patriarch, or evangelical minister should have full charge of special revival services held for the benefit of the Saints, and that in conducting such services district and branch officers become his assistant ministers.

The last paragraph is presented as representing the views of the writer, though he may be mistaken. The writer has no desire for anything new unless it is right and proper, for the best good of all concerned, and in perfect harmony with the will and word of God. He has no desire for notoriety.

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

Secretary Order of Evangelists.

• * * * •

HORSE AND MAN LIVED CONTEMPORANEOUSLY ON THE NORTH AMERICAN CONTINENT IN PREHISTORIC TIMES.

In the HERALD of February 12, 1913, Apostle J. W. Wight requests evidence that man and horse were contemporaneous on the American Continent in prehistoric times. Substantially the same request was made through the HERALD some time ago.

I don't know just what Brother Wight would call evidence, but if what I quote at the close of this article is true, it certainly is evidence. Would suggest Brother Wight try to locate Professor Cope, and if this matter is not accurate, have the HERALD so inform its readers.

The Scientific American is not a newspaper, but, as its title suggests, deals with scientific matters, and I believe it would not accept such an article as I here produce, unless it had confidence in its author.

The writer of the article says: "This discovery was announced by Professor E. D. Cope, at the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, held in Washington the past month (August). A skull of a horse was exhibited to the members by Professor Cope, who pointed out the character of the teeth, and who stated it would be impossible for anyone to separate the fossil teeth from those of the quagga and zebra if the three were all thrown together. . . . That it was a horse, however, anyone could see."

A quagga is a species of the three wild horses or asses of which the zebra is a type.

Reverend Folk, in his monstrosity, The Mormon Monster, 1900, p. 175, says, "In another place it is stated of the Jaredites that they had 'all manner of cattle, oxen and cows, and of sheep and of swine, and of goats, and also many other kinds of animals which were useful for the food of man; and they had also horses and asses, and there were elephants and cureloms and cumoms.' What the latter beasts were it is impossible to determine, but scientific men are unanimously agreed that elephants never existed on this continent, and that horses, asses, oxen and swine were introduced by European settlers within the last three hundred years. Had they existed at the time alluded to by the Mormon writer, some vestiges of them would certainly ere this have been discovered."

Wonder what "scientific men are unanimously agreed" to-day that elephants never existed on this continent!

Reverend M. T. Lamb, in his "Golden Bible," edition of 1887, pp. 306, 307, makes the following criticism:

"HORSES, CATTLE, SHEEP AND GOATS.

"Equally decisive is the testimony against the Book of Mormon as to the existence of the above domestic animals. The Book of Mormon tells us:

"And it came to pass that we did find upon the land of promise as we journeyed in the wilderness, that there were beasts in the forest, of every kind, both the cow and the ox, and the ass and the horse, and the goat and the wild goat, and all manner of wild animals, which were for the use of man."

"On the contrary the authorities are plain and unequivocal."

Mr. Lamb quotes Squiers, as follows:

"No doubt the Indian population lived, as it still lives, on the scantiest fare, on the very minimum of food; but it had not then, as now, the ox, the hog, the goat and the sheep, nor yet many of the grains and fruits, which contributed most to the support of dense populations."

Mr. Bancroft, volume 5, page 32, speaking of the origin of the Americans, says: "There are, however, writers who find grave objections to an Asiatic origin, the principal of which are the absence of the horse, paucity and the poverty of the lactiferous animals, and the consequent absence of pastoral nations in the New World.

"The references to horses and oxen are perplexing and give the narrative an air of imposture or mistake, since both were brought to America first by the Spaniards."—J. T. Short, p. 150.

Reverend John W. Butler, in his able book on Sketches of Mexico, New York, Hunt & Eaton, p. 66, says: "The learned John Fiske in his recent valuable work, The Discovery of America, Boston, 1892, well says: 'It is extremely difficult for an impostor to concoct a narrative without making blunders that can easily be detected by a critical scholar. For example, the Book of Mormon, in the passage cited, in supremely blissful ignorance introduces oxen, sheep, and silk worms, as well as the knowledge of smelting iron, into pre-Columbian America.'"—Vol. 1, p. 179.

Yes, it certainly is difficult for an impostor to prevent errors from creeping into such a book as the Book of Mormon claims to be. And if that book was the work of an impostor, and an unlearned one at that, it would be full of just such errors as Fiske and Butler point out. Now I turn to Butler's own book as quoted above, and I find this written on page 87, just 21 pages after he said the Book of Mormon is a fraud because it says there were horses and oxen on this continent: "The fossils of mastodons, elephants, OXEN, zebras, horses and other animals frequently found are mute but powerful witnesses to the animal life of the continent in the remote past." Yes, and those decaying bones are mute and powerful witnesses that the Book of Mormon is a true history of old America, and the combined attacks of our enemies have not shaken the testimony of that book, but on the contrary, our very enemies are digging up "mute but powerful evidence."

R. B. Neal says Lamb's book is the product of a master mind, that he tears the Book of Mormon to doll's rags, and that it is one of the best war crafts there is in the fight against the book. Here is how Lamb tears the book to pieces:

"This book tells us of the existence upon this Western World of iron, steel, and brass, of wheat and barley, of oxen, sheep, goats, and horses . . . every one of which statements have been found to be wholly and entirely untrue."—P. 321. But what about those ox bones, and those horse bones? Butler says, "mute but powerful witnesses." Lamb is not only a "has been," but he is a "never wuzzer"! Here is the evidence, and, Brother Wight, it is not newspaper clipping, but from the Scientific American, which I believe is considered rather good authority on such a question.

In an article with the caption, "Evolution of the horse," Walter L. Beasley winds his matter up with,

"Prior to the discovery of the numerous fossil types of America, it was generally believed that the horse originated in Europe, especially as the Indian tribes first encountered by the white men on this continent had no horses. Modern paleontological research, however, such as now is being carried on by Professor Osborn and Professors Marsh and Cope in the past, has demonstrated that North America possesses a far more complete series of developmental stages, and points to the fact that the cradle of the modern horse lies probably not in Europe, but in the New World."—Scientific American, June 13, 1903, p. 451.

After an abundance of such evidence was produced to answer our critics, and they could not meet our evidence, they then claimed man and the horse were not contemporaneous. The parsons are just as positive now that man and the horse did not live on this continent at the same time, as they were positive there never was a horse here before Columbus's discovery sent him over. A lot of these kindly, dignified, ladylike gentlemen don't know very much; they are so intent listening for the higher call of the coin of the realm that they haven't time to do very much real investigating for themselves, so they buy Lamb's book to tear the Book of Mormon to doll rags!

I have before me a clipping which I cut from the Scientific American of July 13 or 23 (can't make out the date), 1903, with this heading, "Prehistoric man and the horse in America." I quote a part of the article, which is by Joseph F. James, Washington, District of Columbia. He evidently attended the meetings of the "American Association for the Advancement of Science" referred to above, and saw the skull. "The genealogy of the horse has been most admirably worked out in various publications, and the fact has long been established that the genus originated on the North American Continent. The question, however, as to whether prehistoric man in America had the horse as a contemporary has been a disputed point. This question may now be considered set at rest by the discovery of a skull of an extinct species of horse in strata with human implements. . . . The most curious thing about the skull was its condition. The frontal bone had been crushed in exactly as we see in the case of animals slaughtered for food. . . . Found in the same bed with the skull was a stone hammer that bore evident marks of having been fashioned by the hand of man.

"What inference was to be drawn from this? In the first place it has been suspected and considered probable that early man on this continent had been contemporaneous with a horse, though not the present living species, but no direct proof had hitherto been found.

". . . But here we had evidence in the association of a human implement and a horse's skull that man and horse had lived together; and the peculiar fracture of the skull of the latter leads to the belief that the animal had met its death at the hands of man.

"This fact opens up several questions. What became of the race of horses that once lived on the continent? Were they exterminated by savage man as civilized man has exterminated the bison? Did they once serve as beasts of burden, or were they used for food? Were they wild or domesticated? . . . That man lived previous to and of course during the ice age is now well established. That he lived at the same time with a species of horse is made known by the discovery of Professor Cope. His influence in the extermination of many of the large mammals at one time inhabiting North America is as yet undetermined."

Probably in a few years the parsons will say, "We admit now that the horse was once upon this continent, and that he lived contemporaneously with man, but we assert positively, without fear of successful contradiction, that he was not of the Percheron breed, with his tail bobbed and iron shoes on his feet!"

C. EDWARD MILLER.

Of General Interest

DREAMS.

A series of selected articles seeking to solve the mystery of sleep and dreams. From the New York Times.

(Continued from last week.)

Mr. Hall quotes Doctor Charles Brodie Patterson as declaring, in his work on The New Heaven and the New Earth, that "man will some day get along without sleep." "No one is yet able to do that," replies Mr. Hall. And since "we could lose all or nearly all our troubles if we got natural sleep," he finds that rightly to cultivate this gift is of prime importance in humanity's welfare. "Nothing makes us feel better than a good night's sleep," he concludes, and in order to attain this necessary rest he gives, as a result of his investigations, numberless experiences and rules by means of which one may put to flight the "grim ogre" of insomnia. This is the essentially practical part of his book and will be scanned with eagerness by those who are in danger of losing the gift of sleep.

"Monotony naturally fatigues consciousness and is often successfully used to produce sleep; the regular dropping of water, the sound of a brook, will put those to sleep whom it does not make nervous. Lullabies and slumber songs and dull lectures all come under the same head of devices to tire the consciousness.

"Narcotic drugs do not weary consciousness; they simply destroy it. They stupefy us instead of inducing sleep. Those who would wisely learn about this by experiments upon others rather than upon themselves will find it all in the article by Ringer and Sainsbury on 'Sedatives' in Tuke's Dictionary of Psychological Medicine. It is enough for us to be assured that narcotic sleep is less like real sleep than the hibernation of the animal is like repose.

"Henry Ward Beecher used to get up when he was sleepless and take a cold bath, a good device for a full-blooded, vigorous person, but a weak person would not 'react' and get warm again. For such a one it would be better to sponge off and restore the circulation by rubbing. Some physicians have prescribed with good success blood-warm baths, beginning at a temperature of about 98 and heated up to 110 or 115 Fahrenheit. When the moisture has been absorbed by wrapping one's self in a blanket, throw it off and get quickly into a warm bed. Mark Twain used to get to sleep by lying down on the bathroom floor after a bath.

"Some, when other means fail, find it effective to place a cold water bag at the back of the neck, or to rub the feet with a rough towel. With others a hot water bottle at the back of the neck works better. A warm foot bath helps some persons. At the sanitariums they sponge with warm water, rub with wet salt, gently sponge it off and dry the body—all of which helps the blood to the surface. It is always well to see that the bowels are emptied. Only trial and judgment will show whether any of these will effect a cure. They all aim at the same mark, to abstract the blood from the brain.

"That drinking milk produces sleep in some persons may probably be due to the lactic acid in the milk, which is a soporific like morphine. Perhaps its use is to help young animals to the long sleeps they need.

"Willard Moyer, in an entertaining essay, tells us that it is often advisable for the stomach to have sufficient work for the blood to do so as to call it from the brain. This does not mean that a meal that will overload the stomach is a cure for insomnia, but that something light, such as a cup of warm milk and a cracker, may often 'send one comfortably to sleep like a drowsy kitten or a well-fed baby.'

"A. Fleming, following Durham, the author of the Psychology of Sleep, showed that to deprive the brain of blood by pressing the carotid arteries for thirty seconds brought immediate and deep sleep, but it only continued while all pulsation of these arteries is stopped.

"It has been found by cruel experiments on young puppies that sleep is more necessary to them than food, as they die after being kept awake four or five days, but may live ten or fifteen days without food. They easily go to sleep when their heads are level with their bodies, and they will not go to sleep with their heads lower than their bodies; of course, the raised head drains some blood out of the brain.

"This is the reason that heat or extreme cold, both of which bring the blood to the surface and drain it away from the brain, will often produce sleep. That is why the cowboy likes to sleep with his feet to the fire. On the other hand, the demand on the heart of cold hands or feet for more blood to keep them warm may make the heart pump so strongly that it sends more blood to the brain and keeps one awake. So, also, joy, anger, or anxiety cause a flow of blood to the brain and hinder sleep.

"Becker and Schuller have treated insomnia by wrapping the entire body in wet sheets, and also by applying cold compresses to the head. This last device is used by students, with doubtful success, 'to keep the brain cool'; it is sometimes affected because it looks like working hard. Sometimes an ice cap, a double rubber cap filled with cold water, will bring sleep.

"The Russian nobles used to make servants scratch their heels for a long time, our ladies have their hair brushed, and A. H. Savage-Landor says that Korean mothers put their babies to sleep by scratching them gently on the stomach. I have tried this rubbing, rather than scratching, with great success. Spanish women rub the children's upper spine to put them to sleep. Light exercise before lying down is often a good expedient.

"Sometimes a pillow of heated hops or of balsam pine needles will induce sleep. To change the hour of going to bed occasionally, yielding to apparently untimely drowsiness, often helps, as it accustoms us to gain sleep at irregular times.

"To 'relax,' to let the muscles become perfectly loose, is an art, though it should be natural to one going to sleep. Mrs. Richard Hovey recommends shaking the fingers, letting them hang loose like a bunch of strings of beads, and extending the movement to the wrist, arms, feet, and legs. This is the best form of calisthenic exercise for sleeplessness. It aids us in getting limp so as to lie at ease."

The following, including "putting out of the mind all images pleasant or unpleasant, and restricting voluntary movements," is given as the method for curing sleeplessness by Doctor Binns. During the latter's long practice this method is said to have failed in only two instances:

"Turn on the right side, place the head comfortably on the pillow, let the head fall naturally, using the pillow only to support the neck, slightly close the lips—though this is not absolutely essential—take full inspiration through the nostrils, drawing in as much air as possible, then leave the lungs to their own action, neither hastening nor checking exhalation. Think of the breath as passing from the nostrils in one continuous stream, and, the very instant the person so conceives, consciousness and memory depart, the muscles relax, the breath comes regularly, he no longer wakes, but sleeps. It is all the effort of but a moment.

"Another method in common use is counting up to a hundred on an imaginary string of beads. Often one will have lost consciousness before the hundredth bead is reached, but sometimes they have to be counted over and over, and sometimes the plan fails altogether. The immediate reason for this is undoubtedly that we have not brought the mind to a single sensation, nor succeeded in cutting off the impressions that come through the senses.

"Everybody has at some time used some such device for inducing sleep to visit him. The practice of imagining sheep jumping over a gate and counting them as they go is but another way of bringing the mind to a single sensation, of deliberately securing monotony and shutting out all stimuli, as scientific men call the various causes that arouse sensation in us. Such simple devices are never harmful, and are so frequently followed by sleep that they continue from generation to generation. . . .

"Among the sleep-inducing instruments the newest is the 'vibrating coronet.' This coronet has three metal bands which encircle the head and two strips extending to the eyelids. By means of a spring these strips vibrate the eyelid gently and induce drowsiness. All the mechanical devices are constructed on the plan of inducing eye-weariness, whether by vibration or by fixity. Either effect is in accordance with the modern theories of sleep. Sleep may be induced by monotony also of sounds, by concentration either of the attention or the hearing on one point, or by more numerous impressions than the eye can comfortably receive; thus, when riding in a train, the succession of views will often induce sleepiness.

"The 'Alouette,' a collection of little mirrors attached to the ebony panels of a box, is so placed that a ray of light falls on the mirrors in such a way as to fatigue the eye of the beholder. Both this and the 'Fascinator,' a highly polished nickel ball attached to a flexible wire depending from a metal band similar to the 'Coronet,' work on the plan of concentrating the vision. In a similar way a lighthouse or a miniature flashlight, with its appearing and disappearing light, induces drowsiness, possibly hypnotic, through incessant change. It is needless to say that these devices might be injurious to the sight and certainly would not work where the cause of sleeplessness is eyestrain. That is a case for the oculist.

"But when it is impossible to obtain mechanical devices there are many simple schemes of inducing sleep. Any light work, mental or physical, is helpful. To start writing letters, particularly if one is not fond of letter-writing, will sometimes induce sleepiness very quickly.

"Sleepiness is sometimes due to lack of physical exercise, and, when that is so, no device is so effective as work—real physical effort. A great many persons take calisthenic exercises and go in for physical culture to develop muscles and also to regulate circulation so that sleep will come more readily. These are good makeshifts for persons who have no opportunity to work, but, where circumstances make actual labor possible, no substitute can satisfactorily take its place. Gardening, shoveling snow, sawing or chopping wood, all give a variety of motion and a zest of exertion superior to any gymnastics. Even a small amount of some such labor daily will often work a complete cure for insomnia.

"Everybody knows of some plan or device for inducing sleep, and all of them are more or less successful—sometimes. Indeed, this is so true that it leads to the belief that, after all, the expectation of sleep helps to bring it, and here suggestion and auto-suggestion come in.

"Of late, a number of persons have tried the starvation cure—fasting for several days. This is frequently successful with robust, hearty people, who may unconsciously be eating too much or eating too stimulating food. Many who feel unequal to a complete fast might cut down the amount of food as much as one half, with happy results. A vegetarian diet undoubtedly helps, too, although among the lower animals carnivora sleep more than herbivora. The success of vegetarianism, both in insomnia and other diseases, may well be due to the diminished temptation to overeat and the less concentrated diet.

"In any event, it is well for the sufferer from sleeplessness to study his own case and experiment with any or all the known devices, to see whether, by this means or that, he can lure sleep to his pillow again."

* * * * *

HOW THE BIG DAM AFFECTS NAUVOO.

In our last issue we stated that there was a report that the water power company was going to ask the city of Nauvoo to vacate some of the streets along the river. Mayor Laubersheimer informs us that there is nothing to the report—that the water power company expects to replace all the roads along the river where they will be overflowed—that is, if the property owners show the right disposition. They don't propose, however, to be held up. A river road will be beneficial to the owners of property abutting the road and they should be interested in having a road there. The water power company will build a road along the harbor at the north end of Main Street. The idea of opening the road north from George Rahn's residence has been dropped.—Nauvoo Independent.

Mothers' Home Column

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Advisory Board, of Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. B. C. Smith, president, 214 South Spring Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. F. M. Smith, vice president, 680 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. D. J. Krahl, secretary, 724 South Crysler Street, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, 1595 West Walnut, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa.

Departments.

Home and Child Welfare Department, Mrs. Mollie Davis, superintendent, Pittsburg, Kansas.

Literary and Educational Department, Mrs. Vida E. Smith, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

Eugenics Department, Mrs. Clara Curtis, superintendent, 2200 Indiana Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri.

Domestic Science Department, Miss Bertha L. Donaldson, superintendent, 700 North Emporia, Wichita, Kansas.

Young Women's Department, Mrs. J. A. Gardner, superintendent, 707 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri.

Sewing and Aid Societies, Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa.

April Reading.

THE FATHER.

Parenthood and parental love are such mighty factors in the preservation and development of the race that their importance can hardly be overestimated.

At birth the human being is the most helpless of all living creatures. Left to his own resources this tiny creature will perish in a few short hours. But parental love in most instances prevents such a sad denouement of the great adventure into a strange, new world. As a racial force, therefore, parental love is responsible for race preservation.

It is a startling thought suggested by Caleb Williams Saleeby, in his interesting book, Parenthood and Race Culture, that when we look back over the list of our ancestors, father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, back, back, year by year, century by century, into the dim past, we must reflect that if at a single link in all this long chain of ancestors, love had failed, you and I would not be here to-day. Biologically, this seems true, though the scriptural suggestions of preexistence might start another line of thought. But when we reflect thus we see through what straits and perils, over what a troubled and almost limitless sea our flame of life has come; and at every transition from one frail bark to another, parental love has fanned the dawning spark into new life and vigor.

In this great work fatherhood has had and still must have its share. From time immemorial it has fallen to the lot of the father by might and prowess, and of later years by his franchise, to protect the inner home circle that shelters his wife and babies against whatsoever enemies might come against it.

He has been and still should be the provider and protector. Thousands, unnumbered thousands, of fathers in the ages past have died in battle, giving their lives to protect their homes, their wives, and their children. It was Moroni who erected a standard and named it the "title of liberty," and called on the men of his nation to rally and fight: "In memory of our God, our religion, and freedom, and our peace, our wives, and our children."

Thousands of fathers still give their lives for their children, not necessarily in war, but in mines and factories, and on railroads where they are worn out, or die as a result of those industrial accidents and occupational diseases that levy such a frightful toll on the modern army of industry.

It is the work of the father to provide the home and protect it, this is the paternal right and duty. The mother is the breadmaker; the father is the breadwinner. By the sweat of his brow and the expenditure of his muscle and brain cells he produces or buys shelter, food, clothing, and education for his children. Modern commercial tendencies that force women and children into this struggle for these necessary things are wrong, and a menace to home institutions, and are among the forces that the fathers should resist by legislation, and in every legitimate way.

Further than this, the men of the church, in our opinion, should, as a matter of duty to their children, encourage and foster every effort put forth by the church to redeem Zion and establish conditions of equality and justice, wherein the rights of women and children, and the safety of the home, will be conserved and protected against modern commercial tendencies, such as we have indicated. The age-old war for the preservation of the home assumes new aspects, but requires no less courage and intelligence.

It includes not only opposition to the tendencies mentioned, that would put women and little children into mines and factories to do the man's work of bread winning, but also intelligent opposition to those twin foes, the saloon and the brothel. It is just as necessary for fathers to protect their children against these evils as it ever was in olden times for them to go out with spear or club to resist the approach of a lion or a tiger. Unfortunately, many fathers to-day consort with and give aid and comfort to these modern lions and tigers that stand ready to devour their sons and daughters.

Added to these duties of resisting evil, or negating wrong, which unfortunately are so necessary, there are other duties that are affirmative, or constructive. To aid and assist his sons and daughters to build right characters is the duty of the father, conjointly with the mother.

In this, within the home the father should be a positive force. In times past fathers carried their rule to an extreme, and dominated both wife and children. Reaction has set in. How far it will go we do not know. But a marked change in methods of discipline is noted, as regards children, with a breaking down of parental control, in some instances, at least. At the same time the wife and mother has come to a more dignified and important position in the home, which is right.

But these tendencies may well go to the other extreme. When a father abandons his rightful place as the masculine head of the family a mistake is made. And homes where this occurs are seldom successful.

There are other homes where the father still dominates by brute force, and is feared but not respected.

In still others, the children rule, and the parents are nonentities. Better a return to a degree of oldtime severity, than this last. A little, innocuous father, was heard to boast: "I never struck one of my children in my life," then he qualified it by adding, "excepting in self-defense."

In still other homes, the father seems to have abandoned all the functions of fatherhood, excepting the one of procreation. His interests are in the club, the saloon, the market, the street, and the ball ground. The home is merely a coffee house, with lodging for a part of each night. Discipline, moral training, education, all these things, if attended to at all, must be attended to by the mother. Such a man can hardly be called a father.

The true father occupies his own sphere in the home, exercises his proper portion of authority, and does his part as exemplar and teacher, as well as protector. In this work, he can not do better than to seek his ideals in the gospel of Jesus Christ. He may read whole libraries of books on eugenics and child training, and he will discover that every principle in them of any value is found in the gospel. It is right for him to read such books, within reason, and intelligently, rejecting the foolish fads contained in some of them, for he will get some good out of them; but still the groundwork of moral character is found in the gospel, as taught in the three standard books of the church: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—1 Corinthians 3: 11.

The responsibility of a father, from a Latter Day Saint standpoint, includes more than is set forth in any work that comes to us from any outside source, however admirable; while it includes all good that may be set forth in such works. It includes the duty of teaching his children religion as well as ethics—and by religion, we mean the true religion of Jesus Christ. The true religion of Jesus Christ includes sound doctrines, and also correct practices. Its object is to secure a correct relationship between the individual and his God, on the one hand; and between the individual and his fellows, on the other hand. And it should be the work of the father to help his children to understand what that means; and, so far as he can, help them to obtain that relationship.

Plenty of moralists and reformers are pleading for the brotherhood of man, but they seem to imagine that such can be obtained without a proper recognition of the fatherhood of God. Latter Day Saint fathers should not be content to see these two twin principles separated. Their full operation is found in the church, and never can be found elsewhere.

The duty of instructing sons and daughters is placed conjointly on father and mother. The father must do his part. There may be more than we have thought in that law found in Doctrine and Covenants (section 68) which says: "Inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance; faith in Christ the Son of the living God; and baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents."

Moral teaching is joined with doctrinal, wherein it is added: "And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord."

The normal, average father wishes his children to do well. He can do certain things that will increase the chances in favor of such a happy result of their upbringing. But he can not force them to do well. Very soon they pass beyond his control and become agents unto themselves, responsible for themselves; and if they then choose to go wrong, though his heart break, he can not prevent it.

But he can influence them profoundly, and arm them against the forces of evil, by assisting them to build correct characters. He can never place them where they will not be tempted; even though he take them to those centers of church culture and gathering where evil influences are minimized. Even in Lamoni or Independence, the boy or girl may come in contact with evil associates and be tempted in the most subtle and dangerous ways.

The father must realize that he alone is safe who has power to resist evil. It is his work to assist his children to obtain that power, that like the children in the fiery furnace, they may walk in the midst of these things yet not have the smell of flame upon their garments. Safety is found in soul culture. Strong moral fiber will resist evil, when coupled with this moral courage there is an intelligent understanding of evil, its methods of attack, and its results.

Ellen Wheeler Wilcox truly says:

"You may talk of reformations, of the economic plan

That shall stem the social evil in its course,

But the ancient sin of nations must be got at in the man,

If you want to cleanse a river, seek the source."

In all of his teachings the father should not fail to teach by example. He should be all that he wishes his children to be. He should be clean in person, dress, speech, and conduct; honest with God and with his fellow man. He should be a Latter Day Saint who is living his religion, in the home and out of it.

He should attempt to hold the fellowship as well as the respect of his children. Some fathers are respected—and feared. One father said: "I love my children, but I do not intend to let them find it out, or they would impose on me, and cease to respect me."

What a fatal misconception!

When children are little, the father should enter into their sports, and be one with them. He should assist them in their little plans, and try to understand them.

Recently we overheard two who were conversing. The little boy said: "Papa, I have just got my farm fenced and all fixed up, and now Guy [his playmate] has quit farming and gone to playing something else. What had I better do?"

The father considered this weighty problem, and answered in like spirit: "Well, perhaps you better run the farm for a while yet. I wouldn't want to quit a thing so soon after I started it. Would you?"

So the boy went back to his miniature farm. He may come to his father for advice in more important matters later on. As the children grow older, the father must still keep in touch with their development. Professor A. R. Taylor, in his book, The Study of the Child, says:

"Many a youth is alienated from his father because his father does not understand him. He has failed to note that the child is a child no longer, but that he is reaching up into manhood and is thinking and reasoning for himself; that he is on that account entitled to have his own views and preferences heard with reasonable consideration. Many a youth goes out into the world for the sympathy and fellowship that are denied him at home."

Gustavus Myer says that there are five hundred thousand tramps in the United States, the majority of whom are between sixteen and twenty years of age. It would be interesting to know how many of these boys took to the road because they had no father who understood them.

As surely as morning dawns to day, as surely as the river seeks the sea, so surely will dawning manhood and womanhood assert itself. Our children will grow up. We can not stop the sun as it mounts toward the zenith; we can not obstruct the river so that it will not go on; we can not stay the growth of children.

The father must learn when to relax the hold of his will and permit the new will to determine its own course; so that gradually the one will may emerge from the protecting dominance of the other, and the two still go on, father and son, or father and daughter, retaining fellowship, each of assistance to the other.

It will appear from all of this that in the home the father has work mapped out for him that is worthy of his careful and prayerful consideration. May all fathers who approach their task in that spirit receive divine direction!

Let us now revert for a moment to the relationship of the father to outside matters of the community and Nation. This generation should seek to conserve the interests of the next. In a way this is done, when we plant trees that shall bear fruit for our children. Yet at the same time, in great matters, for a little temporary advantage, this generation robs and exploits the next. We seem to hope that by some luck chance our particular children will escape the disastrous results of such a policy. Yet our children can not hope to escape their share of a community loss.

We destroy forests, denude great watersheds, wear out fertile fields, wastefully exhaust mines and oil deposits, for temporary enrichment, knowing well, if we stop to think, that such a course will mean hardship for coming generations. Is this the policy of fathers?

We permit thousands of little children to be worn out prematurely in mines and factories, knowing well that the next generation must bear the burden of racial deterioration, and sustain jails, poor houses, and asylums, that will be filled as a result. Is that the way of a father?

We permit the white slave traffic to go on, knowing that it demands yearly its supply of pure young girls, many of whom are betrayed, drugged, or dragged into such a life. Our girls may be among the conscripts. Our boys may be blighted in blood and bone by contact with this system, that as one writer says, by its profanation of the human form, temple of God's abode, secretes a terrible poison that blasts humanity. Should fathers countenance such a policy?

We permit the saloon to go on, greedy for its license money, yet conscious that it can not exist without its annual recruits of bright young boys who will be turned by its dreadful alchemy into bloated, bear-eyed, sodden, spewing drunkards.

It is the duty of every father to use his influence and cast his vote as best he may against these things. He should support those measures that to the best of his belief will conserve natural resources for the benefit of coming generations and vote for these movements and measures that will to the best of his belief control, minimize, and if possible destroy those immoral institutions that threaten the peace and happiness and lives of our children.

We, as fathers, must broaden our mental horizon. We must think for ourselves, and assist in the emancipation of man, to the extent of our ability. Right and truth should mean more to us than party. The traditions of the past must perish, if they stand in the way of an awakened conscience.

Thus should we work, in the home, in the church, and in the Nation, for the salvation of our children and ourselves. We have hope for the Nation; but we have faith for the church. Though men fail in all efforts toward reform, God's work will go on. Latter Day Saint fathers should keep step with the forward movements of the church.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Request for Prayer.

Sister Nellie Butcher, writing from Morton, Minnesota, appeals for prayer on behalf of her husband, who is "sorely afflicted," that he may be healed if it is the Lord's will.

Notice.

It has been arranged, nothing preventing, to hold the business session of the Woman's Auxiliary on Tuesday morning, April 8, beginning at nine o'clock.

It is hoped that the sisters will make an especial effort to be present. We believe the work of this auxiliary is of sufficient importance to demand the attention of every sister in the church.

The evening session of the auxiliary has been appointed for Thursday evening, April 10.

ADVISORY BOARD,

Woman's Auxiliary for Social Service.

Letter Department

LANCASTER, WISCONSIN, February 28, 1913.

Dear Brother: If Brother Cooper of Illinois reads this, I would like to thank him for the loyal manner of assisting me as he did in defense of the truth, by responding to the letter from my Adventist uncle, of Hazel, South Dakota.

The Lord's work at this place is moving onward, regardless of the prejudice and opposition from those who know not the way of "truth and life."

The Saints here number about twenty, as during the last year a number have moved in from the country. One sister was baptized last November and a young man has received knowledge of that which the Lord would have him do, and has asked for baptism.

Brother E. J. Goodenough has been with us the past two weeks, preaching in the homes of the Saints. The blessed Spirit of the Master has been with us through these meetings; and all who availed themselves of the opportunity to attend, received strength and encouragement to press farther into the kingdom and partake of the blessings more abundantly. The brother left for his home in Madison, Wisconsin, yesterday, and the Saints in Lancaster unite in singing: "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning."

Your sister in the restoration,

MRS. EFFIE DUNCAN.

FLINT, MICHIGAN, January 2, 1913.

Dear Herald: When I came to America I was a good Jewish religious fellow. I was told by the so-called Christians that Satan is a black fellow. After being here a few years, I began to believe there is no such a thing as Satan, because we don't see such a black man.

Now, I thank God for calling me back to his service and to a new covenant. He showed me Satan is not a black man, but a white man, and he sometimes calls himself a Christian. In this "Christian country" there are many people in restaurants, barber shops, hotels, theaters, etc., who are keeping young men from the service of God. Some of them will gamble the last penny from a man. Satan is at work in many of the "shows."

I heard a minister of a popular church quoting the words, "Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel and be jealous for my holy name, after they have borne their shame." He told his people that the Lord had promised to gather the Jews, but not before they had borne their shame, which was held up prominently. I would like to ask the minister, Has the Jew more to be ashamed of than the so-called Christian?

The verse he quoted has nothing to do with the gathering of the Jews. The gathering of the Jews could be done by man; for every government has a list of the number of Jews in that country, and where they are; any schoolboy could tell the Jewish population in all the world. It says, "bring again the captivity of Jacob," not Jews.

The gathering of Israel is a mighty work which no man can undertake. It can be done only by the gardener who planted the world,—he can pick out the plants referred to in the prophecy and he can bring them to his true church, which I esteem to be the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Lots of times I hear people in the church say, "We are Gentiles, adopted into Israel, through obedience to the gospel." Such may be the case with some, but not with all, Joseph Smith for instance,—called when a boy, as was Moses, to reorganize the church and make a refuge for the children who are scattered in darkness against the time when God would begin to gather them—and the time is at hand. The Lord is at work, and so is Satan. He keeps people busy so they don't see the mighty work of God of the latter days. He tells them, You have no time for that. He gets the men to plan to make lots of money, and the women to plan how to make themselves look nice.

As a witness for Christ, I believe with a perfect faith that the "latter day work" is the true work of Jesus Christ. Father, hurry and gather thy children, is my prayer for Jesus' sake, Amen.

M. NAWOK.

Order of Enoch Lots,--A Correction.

I have just received a communication from Bishop Bullard, of the Independence Stake, requesting me to say by way of a correction to a remark in my last, that it would be more convenient to the Order of Enoch if those interested in the lots would write direct to "the Stake Bishopric of Independence, Mark H. Siegfried being the treasurer."

Cheerfully submitting the correction, I remain,

Yours,

D. MACGREGOR.

They Are on the Map.

To-day will witness the inaugural ceremonies of President Wilson, but in interest to us, it has no comparison with what has just transpired within Latter Day Saint circles in Chico, California.

The district conference was held here and delegates were present from all parts of the district, some of them coming two hundred miles. The missionary force was represented by Charles E. Crumley, late from Oregon, J. D. Stead, H. J. Davison, J. M. Terry. We also had with us Bishop C. A. Parkin, of San Francisco; C. M. Hawkins, president of San Jose Branch; and F. M. Sheehy, missionary in charge.

Our church was dedicated on Sunday, March 2. Elder F. M. Sheehy preached the dedicatory sermon. The church was crowded, many not of our faith being present, from whom favorable comment was heard on the sermon, which was all that could be desired in depth of thought, in wisdom, and in presentation of our faith.

From all accounts this has been, one of the district's most pleasant gatherings, and we hope it will not be the last one for Chico. We are pleased to particularly mention the reception committee, Brethren R. J. Ferguson and Earl A. Opsal, who were untiring in looking after the comfort of the visiting delegates.

Elders J. D. Stead and H. J. Davison will hold some meetings during the week. Chico Saints are alive and on the map of the great latter day work, and we hope some day to see a large ingathering.

We especially invite the scattered members to settle here and help build up a great central branch, for the future Northern California District. Our natural resources are unexcelled; the schools the best in the State, and I would say to those contemplating a move, that no mistake can be made in coming to Chico.

H. A. HINTZ, President Chico Branch.

MARCH 4, 1913.

In the Regions Round About.

The past couple of months, following my sad trip home from the far West with the remains of my beloved companion, has afforded me an excellent opportunity to extend somewhat my information respecting the suburban points and regions round about Independence. I have preached at a number of new places, familiarized myself with new faces, and refreshed many golden memories of lovable ones I knew before. Surviving the din and shock of fate and death, which, after a number of exterior and remoter visitations within the last few years, this time came not only to my doorway, but crept to my very side, I retired to respectful silence for a season, thence renewed my warfare in the good fight of faith, in the conduct of which I have been blessed with power in preaching, with faith in praying, with individual promises of an encouraging future—a glimpse of the towered city ahead—and with some consolation as I beheld the gloomy chasm of unspeakable silence behind. How nice, how agreeable it is, in such a circumstance, under such a condition, to hear the gentle voice of the All-Father saying: "Your work is accepted," and, "You will yet do a work that will gladden your heart."

Our people far away have their minds set on this place of promise. I don't blame them, and I am always glad when fifteen hundred miles from here to find them sufficiently alive to the promises of the Lord and their spiritual interests to show such an inclination. They wonder about the price of land and the price of lots. They wonder if they could buy an acre here for what they get for an acre where they are. Town lots have been abundantly advertised in the church papers. So have farms, but by real estate agents instead of the church or church representatives; and, indeed, the members afar off are very scrupulous about trusting them or relying on their information. Eventually the Order of Enoch will advertise farms as well as lots. The lots are all right, beautifully situated (I saw them less than two weeks ago) for anyone who determines to live in town, but you can not raise much on a plot, 46 by 165. Unless you have enough to live without work, you are doomed to the sweatshop, where your day's labor is rewarded with two dollars and sold for ten dollars. But there is a better time before us, when our people will "enjoy the work of their own hands." (Isaiah 65.)

One place I visited was Bates City, twenty miles southwest of Independence. I was there long enough for two sermons, and to learn that land can be bought for one hundred dollars per acre only a couple of miles from town, and for one hundred and twenty-five dollars nearer town, the maximum price right against the town and the railroad being but one hundred and fifty dollars. And Brother William Wilcox there, who told me he would answer correspondence of Saints seeking location, said he can raise more than in Iowa where he came from. He was burning the coal he dug on his own farm, which he bought about four years ago—I think it was—for but sixty dollars per acre, and coal was purchasable in the neighborhood at the mouth of the mine for only two dollars or two and a half per ton. And last, but not least, our people, few but united, meet in their own little church in the little town.

More recently I have visited a point about fifty or sixty miles northwest of Kansas City, near Oskaloosa, in Kansas, where I have been writing this letter, having come hither for the purpose of a new opening, there being not a Latter Day Saint, nor yet an acquaintance on the ground. Here land can be bought for from forty to one hundred dollars per acre. There is plenty of timber for fuel and fruit is abundant. Eggs are fifteen cents and butter twenty-five and less just now. One or two hours' ride takes one to the scene of district or General Conference. About twelve or fifteen miles west of Leavenworth, or midway between Leavenworth and Oskaloosa, I am just told that land is sixty to eighty dollars per acre, close to the railway. It looks good enough out of the train window; so do the improvements.

These places are certainly "in the regions round about" and in some if not many cases better than crowding into the stinking city and squatting on a little patch of dirt in perpetual night between two houses. Come to Zion, but bring your brains with you.

Sometimes the question is raised as to how far our missionaries may go in the conduct of remunerative employment and activities which are not strictly missionary, or in line with their office. One brother, who was formerly a plasterer, that I know of, would take in a few dollars now and then with his trowel; another carries his tools and tunes an occasional piano; another, which I observed more recently, frames pictures most beautifully for one dollar and a half; another picked oranges for wages in California; another works a short time in the harvest or hay field; another takes up a homestead and after holding it three or four years gets three or four thousand for it; Apostle Paul made tents; and finally, and lastly, another brother gets out a book. Will you draw a line? If so, where? In respect to ministerial duty, ask yourself the question, which is the nearest in line therewith? And which ones, if any, carry their operators the farthest from their professional capacity, ministerial work. It may be that there is an opportunity for us to improve our consistency slightly touching these things.

FEBRUARY 4.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

Curtis--Carlin Debate.

Now that the battle is over and the smoke has cleared away; we find upon the battlefield, there many Baptists lay. Carlin's ammunition was only a little dirt; so not a single Saint is dead, nor one is even hurt. The battle was a hot one, shot was falling round like hail: the gatling gun of Curtis set fire to Baptist trail. Some cried, Our succession's gone; our cause is hurt to-day. Another shot hit that same spot, which sent them down to stay.

I think this is the verdict of the majority: That the Baptists have gone down. Our little Curtis gained from the start; there was at no point of the battle any cause for alarm. Although, to one not accustomed to hearing such falsehoods and denunciation made by our enemies and presented in the closing speech each night, it might have left a shadow in the mind as to whether Curtis could clear those accusations. But they were not left long in doubt the next night, for Brother Curtis is surely good on those points. He knows he "has the goods." He does not pass it up with a wave of the hand saying, "My opponent is off the subject"; but simply goes after it, in no mistaken terms, showing the falsity of those claims, and clinches it with argument in rebuttal.

Carlin did not seem very anxious to meet Brother Curtis's Bible arguments. He preferred mud slinging, at which he is quite an adept. He is no fool by any means, but is an artful dodger and twister. Brother Curtis cleared up the rubbish which Carlin threw in his way, and also set up his affirmative, which remained to the end.

In Carlin's affirmation, he started to show that Christ was in the Baptist Church, he wished all men to know. But this was false assertion; poor Carlin he fell down, for in the blessed Bible no Baptist Church is found. This was fully proven to the satisfaction of most all. Curtis sent them a thundering broadside into their theory of succession.

Carlin did not make any great attempt to patch it up. He thought he could be more effective by trying to show where Curtis misread statement and misstated facts. But in every instance Curtis would clear up the fog, and send another shot on succession. The shots got so hot that Carlin fled from the Baptist fort and took refuge among the Methodists and Presbyterians.

Carlin denied Baptist historians, Benedict and others. He also denied their Philadelphia confession of faith. He tried many tricks and dodges to get away. He accused Curtis of reading that it was published by the Baptist Publication Society. He took up "Curtis's Confession of faith," saying: "What do you think of this Mormon apostle; he is either ignorant or he willfully read what wasn't there." Brother Curtis came back and asked the chairman if the words were not there. He said they were; right on the front leaf. Poor Carlin was excited, and was standing trembling on one prop, and Curtis took that from him.

The arrangements for the debate were the most complete of any we ever had, to my knowledge. The large temporary building would seat from ten to twelve hundred, and it was full. Everything passed off nicely, with fairly good feeling. The disputants shook hands at the close.

Brother Curtis read twenty verses of rhyme composed by "the Englishman" which was a fitting climax and summary of the whole debate. It brought the house down in laughter. We have had five hundred of these verses printed, which will sell at five cents each while they last. Address the writer,

HENRY SPARLING.

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, R. 10.

News from Missions

Northeastern Illinois.

I am convinced that many times it is impossible to put one's real feelings on paper. I have been laboring constantly in Sandwich since January 21, and while our church there has not been very prosperous since the church building was burned some eleven years ago, we have a small membership of good Saints here.

The second week we got the use of the German Lutheran church and have held forth three weeks with an audience of from twenty-five to fifty-four. There are three or four who have decided to be baptized in the near future. There are quite a number who, in the cloudy years of the past, have become in a sense careless to their duties in the kingdom of God. Some of these are glad to renew their covenants and are making things move as in days gone by.

Others are not so ready, or at least it takes longer to get started; while a few, I fear, never will awake to the sense of their real duty. The world and "the deceitfulness of riches" has blinded their eyes to duty, and I am sorry to say a few have yielded themselves to sinfulness too grievous to mention here and the pruning hook of God's law must be applied.

Now, on the other hand there are numbers of good meaning people ready to hear the word at the preaching services and at their homes. The names of such men as W. W. Blair, I. L. Rogers, Joseph Smith, Alexander H. Smith, and many others we might mention are held in high esteem. Also many of later years and the eldership in general of Plano are highly regarded by the Saints and friends of Sandwich. The church lot is owned by the local branch and is gaining in value and some day if sold, will make a good payment on a church if bought, as we hope may be done in the future. Elders C. H. Burr, F. M. Cooper, and L. O. Wildermuth, of Plano, have all assisted in the effort at Sandwich and last Sunday night Elder J. A. Bronson of Belvidere joined me and preached the closing sermon of the series.

We go from here to Mission Branch to hold a series of meetings, if the weather will permit. Then returning, will hold forth another week at Sandwich.

These lines find Brother Bronson and the writer at the Mission Branch, and made welcome at the home of Brother W. E. Williamson. The weather is not very good. Last Thursday night this whole region was struck with a tremendous ice storm, such as is seldom experienced. The storm of rain that froze to everything was followed by a hard wind. Great damage was done to orchards, shade trees, and still greater to all telephone lines. Miles of poles in a stretch all down. It will take weeks to get any service again.

As president of the Northeastern Illinois District, I wish to say to such parts of the district as I have not yet visited that we will come your way as soon after General Conference as possible, if continued in this field. I had hoped to reach all the branches by the close of the conference year, but have not been able.

To the many friends and Saints of Wisconsin, will say that I have received your letters from time to time and have answered many. Should you have failed to receive a reply, please allow that we are busy and may have neglected some.

Hopefully trusting,

JASPER O. DUTTON.

SANDWICH, ILLINOIS, February 25, 1913.

On the Atlantic Coast.

I think that it has been sometime since anything has been seen from my pen in the pages of your valuable paper, but having recently passed through some very interesting experiences, I thought that, possibly, the readers of the HERALD would be interested in hearing about them.

Not long ago a certain Mrs. Coleman was announced to lecture on Mormonism, in the First Baptist Church of Fall River, Massachusetts. As I was then in charge of the work there, I went to the minister of that church and asked him to endeavor to get the lecturer to make a distinction between the church in Utah and the Reorganization. He did not seem to be inclined to do this, but suggested that I might be able to counteract anything that she might say that would be detrimental to us as a church, by preparing an article to be published in the papers simultaneously with the report of her lecture. He thought by doing this I would accomplish more good, and reach more people than by causing her to make a correction of the idea connecting us with the Utah people.

I awaited the event of the lecture to see what she would say, and while she made no distinction, in fact did not mention us in any way, I felt that the use of the name Latter-Day Saints, which she used instead of the name Mormon or Mormonism, part of the time, might cause the people who heard her to associate her lecture with us. So, early the next morning I prepared an article setting forth our views upon the subject of which she lectured, and took it to the three daily papers of the city, and they readily agreed to publish it, and did so. This article was read extensively throughout the city and did much to show the people where we stood, and the distinction between us and those who teach polygamy.

It will be remembered by some that last winter I was a member of the Ministerial Association of Fall River. This year, however, I felt I had been ignored to some extent by them, and I took occasion, on my visit to the minister to whom I have referred, to mention this fact. He assured me that there was no intention to treat me with discourtesy, and that they would gladly welcome me in their meetings. This caused me to attend their next meeting, and at this meeting their committee on programs came to me and asked me to write a paper, to be read at their next meeting, on the subject of our church, its doctrine and practice. I gladly complied with their request, and on the tenth of last month I read my paper before about twenty ministers of the city, and I can say that I never received a more cordial welcome than I did at this time by these men.

At the close of the reading the president of the association suggested that I would, without doubt, be willing to answer any question that the ministers would like to ask, and I assured him that I would, and about fifteen minutes were spent very profitably asking and answering questions. I was then given a rising vote of thanks, and at the adjournment a number of them came and shook hands with me, and thanked me personally for the information contained in my paper. Since leaving there I have heard from several sources that these ministers have made favorable mention of my paper upon various occasions.

This, with the papers opening their columns for correction of popular errors in regard to us, has done much to allay prejudice in the city, and many have acknowledged that their ideas of us and our work have been materially altered. And it has also resulted in getting into the hands of some of the ministers an article I wrote some years ago on the question of the connection of Joseph Smith with the introduction of polygamy, and I am in great hopes that much prejudice will be allayed by it also. I have placed this article in the hands of one of the ministers, and several others who heard him ask me for it expressed a desire to read it, and he promised to pass it around among them, so all could have the benefit of its perusal. I received a letter from this minister this morning saying that he had received it, but had not had time to read it, but would do so soon. So, I have left the heaven to work, and hope that the results will be good.

Another interesting event of my ministry was a recent trip to the city of Philadelphia. I went there in response to a call from Brother Walter W. Smith, who has charge of the work there. They were having special meetings of two weeks duration, and also it was the occasion of breaking ground for a new church that is to be erected there in the near future. In fact, I believe that they have already begun the basement, and hope to have it completed by the last of April. They will, for the present, content themselves with the completion of the basement, and wait for an increase of membership and means to erect the superstructure. The basement will be roofed over and the services which have hitherto been held in a small hall, near by, will be held in this basement. The hall has been used as a mission, but the attendance at this mission has become so large that the hall has become entirely too small to accommodate those who want to come, and hence the move for more commodious quarters.

I saw the architect's drawings of the new church, and it is going to be a beautiful structure, built of stone and brick, and will be a credit to the Saints and friends who contribute to its erection. The site of the church faces one of the public parks of the city, and it will be a feature of the place when finished.

The dedication and breaking of the ground took place on February 16, and was participated in by Brother Smith, pastor at Philadelphia; Brother Hull, who has charge of the mission where the church is being built, and to whose untiring energies the success of the mission is largely due; Brother W. E. LaRue, of Brooklyn, New York; Bishop Zimmermann, of Philadelphia, who wielded the pick and shovel in the ground breaking; myself, and others. The occasion attracted a large crowd, and it extensively advertised the fact that the Saints were going to build a new church, and the continued activities in building the church will doubtless keep the fact before the people to such an extent that when the time comes for its dedication all Philadelphia will know that the Saints have come to stay.

Brother Smith, the pastor of the church in Philadelphia, is well known to the Saints throughout the world; if not personally, by reputation, but one must visit the place and see the work he is doing to fully appreciate it. His work there has done much to convince the Philadelphians that the work has come to stay. He believes in publicity, and lets no opportunity pass unimproved to let the public know he and his people are there, and what they are doing. He has, furthermore, to some extent at least, solved the problem of service for the church. The old idea of Sunday religion, the idea that the church should not be used only on Sunday, and possibly for one night during the week for a prayer service, and that anything of a secular nature would pollute its walls and halls, has been exploded, and the church is thrown open every night in the week if necessary for the doing of good to man.

An institute has been organized, and a corps of workers are giving their services free for the purpose of giving the poor with which they are surrounded a chance to learn those things that will better fit them for the battle of life. The institute opened while I was there, and I think that the paper stated that over three hundred were enrolled. Many of these are not members of the church. In fact, few of them are now members, but they are naturally attracted to the church that not only concerns itself with their spiritual welfare, but tries to help in the more immediate and vital things of this life.

It is well for us all to ask ourselves the question if this is not the real mission of the church; To interest itself in all the phases of human needs. Can any edifice dedicated to the services of God be too holy to do good within its walls; or can we limit the doing of good within its walls to just one phase of service, and turn the key against every other? Brother Smith's methods have resulted in, I think I may safely say, hundreds being baptized into the church, and while the statement may be made to some at the judgment, "Ye sought me not because ye saw the miracle, but because ye ate of the loaves and were filled," yet we can not withhold our hand, for we "know not which will prosper, this or that."

The same policy followed out in the old church will be followed in the new, without doubt, and hundreds will be led to bless the day of its erection. It was good to see nearly four hundred eager listeners at the Sunday evening services, and it was good to feel the thrill of the Spirit of God as I endeavored to teach them the way of life. I had excellent liberty in delivering my message all the way through the services I held there, and if one is to judge of the approval of God upon one's work by the amount of his Spirit which he bestows, then we must say that God's approval is over the work in Philadelphia, and all we can say to others is, "Go thou and do likewise."

I returned here on the 19th, and took formal charge of the work in this city. What the outcome will be I can not say, but can safely, I think, predict that if a hearty cooperation is given me by the Saints here, that the end will bring joy and satisfaction. I leave for home on the tenth.

H. O. SMITH.

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND, 18 Franklin Street.

Indiana.

Since just prior to the holidays, the writer has been working in the southern part of the Southern Indiana District. We spent several days with the Derby Saints at the holiday season. We find some good, earnest Saints here, but they are hindered by reason of the lack of a place in which to meet. We talked church building to them, and hope they will soon go to with united effort to provide themselves with a house of worship. Brother David H. Baggerly, priest, is the president of the branch.

We made a call on the Louisville Branch, and found Brother George H. Ferguson presiding over them, all seeming to be moving along smoothly. Next we made a visit with the remnant of the New Albany Branch. They meet about four miles out, in the country, at the home of Brother William Tilden. Brother E. A. Jeagers, priest, is president, and he and Brother Tilden are keeping up the fight to hold up the banner, and "keep the campfires blazing."

Next we came to Byrneville and found a large group of Latter Day Saints, but holding no meetings and having no Sunday school. We held meetings with them for about two weeks, and organized a Sunday school, and left them feeling rather encouraged. Elder E. O. Byrn, the president, is absent; Brother C. N. Mayman, teacher, has active oversight.

We made an effort to get to Lanesville to make a new opening, but failed. Coming to Eckerty we met Brother Jacob Halb, and together we walked nine miles to West Fork, where we found that Brethren Fred Moser, jr., and Charles A. Nolan had preceded us. We divided, working two and two, occupying at West Fork, and Milar school-houses. Quite an interest at the latter place.

I occupied two nights at the Wiseman Schoolhouse. On Thursday, the 20th inst., I baptized Sister Sarah A. Eckerty. Brother Halb had gone on east, and Brethren Moser and Nolan had departed for their homes. I am now trying to hold a few meetings south of Winslow. Rainy weather is against us.

Brothers Moser and Nolan have worked together most of the time during the winter. They have done good work, and I find them both well spoken of by Saints and outsiders. Brother Moser leaves the field now. We are sorry to lose him at just the time it seems his work is most appreciated. Brother Nolan is ready to take the active field, if given an appointment. Both of these brethren are hustlers and willing to get out and hunt up openings.

I go to Littles on the 1st of March.

FEBRUARY 27, 1913.

H. E. MOLER.

Palestine.

Notwithstanding this land has been heard from quite frequently within the last two or three years, I am constrained to present to your readers a brief report of our experiences, and of what we have seen and heard since coming here.

Elder J. W. Davis and the writer started from Fremantle, West Australia, on board the steamer Zieten, January 4, 1913. After a very pleasant voyage of twenty-one days, broken only for a day at Colombo, in Ceylon, and a few hours at Aden and Suez, we reached Port Said, where we transferred to a smaller boat for the trip to Jaffa.

Arriving there very early on the morning of January 27, we visited the site of the house of Simon the Tanner, where Peter saw the vision of the sheet being let down from heaven, filled with all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things. We had pointed out to us the probable location of the ship when Jonah was cast overboard and swallowed by the whale; and visited the tomb of Tabitha, the young woman whom Peter raised from the dead. Ate some of the famous Jaffa oranges, and in the afternoon took train for Jerusalem.

The first part of our way was across the plain of Sharon, which presented a beautiful appearance, being nicely plowed and seeded to wheat or barley, which stood from one to six inches high, and had been planted with drills like we use in Nebraska. Millions of the brightest red flowers, called "anemone" (thought by some to be the roses of Sharon mentioned in scripture) bloomed on every hand. It was a most beautiful day; the sun shining in all his glory, and the sky being of the deepest blue right down to the line where it met the mountains of Judea. As we journeyed along our attention was called to such historic scenes as: the fields where Samson played the fox and firebrand trick; the Valley of Ajalon, where Joshua commanded the sun to stand still; Lydda, where Peter healed the man who was eight years afflicted; birthplace of Samson, etc.

We reached Jerusalem at sunset and immediately went out to the "Floyd house," where Brother and Sister Rees Jenkins made us royally welcome during our all too brief stay.

We were unfortunate in striking Jerusalem in the wet season, and it rained almost every day, making the streets present somewhat the appearance of a crowded pig pen after a big thaw of snow. The streets are so narrow that a man can stand in the middle and reach out with either hand and touch the walls. In these narrow passages streams of people are continually passing, and donkeys with pack loads of all kinds. The streets are not swept and filth of all kinds is allowed to accumulate until the sight and smell is enough to turn one sick. The usual overcoat of the men of the peasant class is made of a chaff bag; and the dress of the women is nearly as coarse, and so awfully dirty. You will sometimes see the women at the Pool of Siloam, or some other pool or fountain, washing clothes. The method is to wet the garment and lay it on one rock and pound it with another, and when the job is done it looks about as clean as mother's mop rag used to look after cleaning an unusually dirty floor.

We visited many historic spots in and around the city, but wherever the hand of man could alter, efface, or destroy, the scene was so changed as to make the heart sick. Almost every place that is supposed to have a gospel association, such as the birthplace of Christ, place of crucifixion, sepulcher, upper chamber, is covered by a church belonging to some of the Romans, Greeks, or Armenians. One is expected to pay tribute to these institutions for the privilege of entering. It made my blood boil sometimes.

If you wanted to behold the place where our Lord was born, you went down a dark flight of stairs and beheld a marble slab with a silver star in the middle, and candles burning before it. If you wished even to behold the walls of that sacred place, you saw curtains, with little round holes in them just large enough for a fanatical Roman Catholic to insert his lips and kiss the rock.

Yes, in this respect we found the city of Jerusalem very disappointing. On every hand could be seen the evidences that that city is "trodden down of the Gentiles." A man wearing the clothes of civilization is so beset with beggars that it is next to impossible for him to get through the streets.

Still, the curse is evidently lifting; for our guide, a very highly educated and up-to-date man, tells us that at least two thirds of the population of Jerusalem are Jews, and that the rich farming lands are being bought up by them very rapidly. From what we have seen in the plains of Sharon, Dothan, Esdraelon, and even on the rocky slopes of the Judean hills, we are more than ever convinced that this land is fast becoming a very "fruitful field."

From Jerusalem we went by carriage to the Dead Sea, and the Jordan, stopping on the return trip to view the excavations of the ancient city of Jericho. We saw on this trip which occupied a day and a half, many places worthy of mention, but space forbids.

Returning to Jerusalem we joined a party conducted by Mr. Nesaire, one of the best guides in Palestine for a trip north, and with them had a very pleasant and profitable trip of four days.

We passed much very rich farming land, covered with a heavy growth of wheat, barley, and other crops, and saw many historic places. We stopped at Sychar, where Jesus talked with the Samaritan woman at the well, and had a drink from the same well. But alas! it is in the cellar, under a Catholic church, and has candles burning upon it, and we were asked for backsheesh, when ready to depart.

We also saw at Nablous, which is ancient Shechem, the Samaritans at their service, and were shown their ancient Pentateuch, written on parchment and claiming to date back to the third generation after Moses.

We next stopped at the ancient city of Samaria, which now consists only of ruins; but such grand, such beautiful ruins, so eloquent of a past greatness and of a faded glory! As we looked upon those splendid columns, decapped and broken, and on mosaics of such careful workmanship, so faded and crumbling, we thought of the time when Israel's kings held their courts there; when her daughters decked themselves in their beautiful garments, and went out to dance, and when her sons girded themselves, and with battle ax and spear, went forth to fight. We thought of the exclamation of David when he learned of the death of Saul and Jonathan: "How are the mighty fallen!"

From here we passed on to the valley of Dothan, where Joseph was sold by his brothers, which is now a very productive field for grain and vegetables. After a few hours driving we came to the plains of Esdraelon. Here a beautiful panorama spread out before us. On our right hand rose the mountains of Gilboa, where Saul and Jonathan were slain, and on our left, in the distance, loomed Mount Carmel, where Elijah called fire from heaven and smote the prophets of Baal. Before us, at the foot of Mount Moreh, or "Little Hermon" as it is now called, nestled the ancient village of Shunem, where Elijah raised the widow's son from the dead. Away on the distant hilltops was Nazareth, which we reached a little after nightfall.

Spent the following day viewing the same outline of plain and mountain and distant sea that greeted the eye of our Lord when he as a boy played over the hills more than nineteen hundred years ago. Nazareth is a place that if once seen would linger in the memory even if it had no historic associations. How high and grand are its mountains; how deep and fertile its valleys; and how gloriously bright its sky and sunshine.

Yesterday we came to Tiberias, pausing by the way at Cana of Galilee. Spent the afternoon on the Sea of Galilee. Such placid water; such glorious sunshine, such green slopes and beflowered plains, and such majestic hills, and withal such ancient villages, cast a spell upon us that was like a beautiful dream from which one dreads the awakening.

But there is an end to all things earthly. As the twilight silvered the hilltops and tinted the waters, and all nature seemed sinking into deeper repose, we came slowly to the shore singing: "O Galilee, sweet Galilee."

E. F. ROBERTSON.

TIBERIAS, SYRIA, February 9, 1913.

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHWESTERN OREGON.—District conference convened at Myrtle Point, Oregon, February 8 and 9, 1913, with district president, A. A. Baker, in the chair. By motion the missionary in charge, Charles E. Crumley, was requested to preside, associated with the district president. Reports from ministry were read: Seventies; Charles E. Crumley, F. J. Chatburn. Elders: A. A. Baker, William Smith. Priest: F. W. Dyggart. Statistical reports from Bandan, Pleasant Hill, and Myrtle Point read, showing gains by baptism 4, letters from other branches 7, certificates of baptism 2, loss by removal 1, making the net gain for the district of 12. One marriage was solemnized. The bishop's agent's report was read and accepted. Officers elected for the ensuing year: President, F. J. Chatburn; vice president, William Smith; secretary, Mrs. Charles McCracken; library commissioner, F. W. Dyggart; bishop's agent, William Smith, whose address is Gravelford, Oregon. Preaching service each evening and Sunday at 11 a. m. Very good attendance and spiritual harmony. Prayer and social service at 2.30 Sunday. The following delegates were chosen to represent this district at General Conference, and in case of division to cast majority and minority vote: Charles E. Crumley, Sister L. M. Conover, F. J. Chatburn, Sister C. E. Crumley, F. M. Sheehy, A. A. Baker, S. J. Culver. Next conference will be held in connection with reunion; time and place to be left with missionary in charge and district presidency. Mrs. Charles McCracken, secretary, Myrtle Point, Oregon.

WESTERN OKLAHOMA.—Semiannual conference convened at Clinton, Oklahoma, February 2, 1913. Brother T. P. Powell was elected chairman with H. F. Durfey assistant. A. H. Christensen, secretary. The following branches reported: Seiling, Sunny Hill (near Calumet), and Alva, and the minutes of the meeting held at Freedom for the organization of that branch were accepted as a report. The following reports approved: A. H. Mooney, priest; Doctor T. P. Powell, district president; A. H. Christensen, elder; W. A. Connell, priest; A. W. Sanders, elder; Grant Moore, priest; J. W. Hughes, elder; E. L. Ballenger, teacher; H. F. Durfey, elder; Hubert Case, missionary in charge. As bishop's agent, Hubert Case read the financial report, which was referred to an auditing committee of three: A. W. Sanders, Inez Moldrup, and B. Winslow. Report found correct. Visiting members were permitted to occupy the floor and vote in all conferences of the district. The Alva Branch was disorganized and the records ordered to be turned over to the Freedom Branch. The district secretary was ordered to turn over the records of the disorganized Seiling Branch to the Seiling Branch, and the Seiling Branch secretary was authorized to transfer membership from old book to Seiling present branch. Delegates to General Conference as follows: Hubert Case and wife, Philip Cook, Reuben Taylor, A. H. Christensen, A. W. Sanders, A. V. Mooney and wife, Brother Renfro, Inez Moldrup, William Aylor, F. C. Keck, Everett Hughes, Etta Kent, Leonard Tyler, Chief Three Fingers, T. L. McGeorge and wife. This delegation was authorized, in case of division, to cast a majority and minority vote. Officers elected: T. P. Powell, president; H. F. Durfey, assistant president; Inez Moldrup, secretary.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—District conference convened at Springerton, Illinois, January 18 and 19, 1913, with assistant president Samuel Hoover, in the chair. Submissionary in charge, S. S. Smith, was chosen to preside. Secretary A. H. Burroughs was not present, and W. H. Presnell was chosen secretary pro tem. Brother George Ellis was chosen chorister, Sister Mary Lasater organist, with power to choose assistants. Thirty minutes were spent in prayer. Statistical reports were read from the following branches: Dry Fork 51, loss 2; Bungay 54; Poplar Creek 82, loss 1; Springerton 145; Parish 119; Brush Creek 40, gain 2; Kibbie 59; Tunnel Hill was not reported. Ministerial reports were read from: Seventies: S. S. Smith, Lloyd C. Moore. Elders: F. O. Pritchett, Samuel Hoover, George Ellis, William Clements, I. A. Morris, R. H. Henson. Priests: Ernest Roberson, W. E. Presnell. Teachers: Carroll M. Dillon. Deacons: W. W. Brown, James Ellis. Total sermons preached 199, 3 baptisms. R. H. Henson was chosen president; Samuel Hoover, assistant; W. E. Presnell, clerk; A. H. Burroughs, assistant; Sam Hoover, treasurer; F. M. Davis was sustained as bishop's agent. The following delegates were chosen to General Conference: Fred O. Pritchett, S. S. Smith, Sam Hoover, W. W. Brown, Lloyd C. Moore, R. H. Henson, W. E. Presnell, Early Marshall and wife, George Ellis, Hyrum Buck and wife, Milton Harris, William Clements. The delegates were given the power to cast majority and minority vote. Preaching by Fred O. Pritchett, Lloyd C. Moore, and S. S. Smith. Motion prevailed that each branch president, raise means to help pay delegates' expenses to General Conference. Moved that when we adjourn we do so to meet at the new church near Cisne, Illinois, on Saturday before the full moon in June. Carried. On Friday night before the conference convened the Saints and the young people of Springerton gave a fine entertainment, which was greatly enjoyed by all, the young people from the different Sunday schools taking part, which showed that a better feeling exists between the different churches in Springerton. At each preaching service the house was filled with people eager to hear the gospel, as it is preached in latter days. There was manifested a spirit of unity among the Saints. There were a goodly number of Saints present from the different branches. All were well cared for by the Saints living in Springerton. Adjourned. W. E. Presnell, clerk, Xenia, Illinois.

ALABAMA.—District conference met with the Pleasant Hill Branch, February 15, 1913, with President J. R. Harper and his assistant, W. S. McPherson, presiding. Secretary G. W. Miniard and his assistant, W. H. Drake, as secretaries. Officers reporting: Elders: J. R. Harper, W. S. McPherson, J. G. Vickrey, G. O. Sellers, J. J. Hawkins, A. A. Weaver, A. E. Warr, F. M. Slover. Priests: D. E. Sellers, A. G. Booker. Teachers: W. H. Drake, G. E. Wiggins. Deacons: H. H.

Wiggins, J. W. Baldwin. Branches reporting: Lone Star and Pleasant Hill. Bishop's agent reported: On hand at last report, $60.80; received, $283.85; paid out, $277; on hand, $67.65. Agent's books audited and a mistake of $30 found in favor of the church. Auditing committee's report received, and agent's report corrected to read as follows: On hand last report $60.80; received, $313.85; paid out, $277; on hand, $97.65. A letter was read from the secretary of the Florida District stating that there are members living in the Florida District whose names are on the Alabama District record and asking that they be transferred to the Florida District record. The secretary was authorized to make the change. The president was authorized to call a meeting at the next conference for the purpose of organizing a district Sunday school association. F. M. Slover, I. M. Smith, Swen Swenson, L. C. Moore, and J. W. Dubose, were elected as delegates to General Conference. A. E. Warr and F. M. Slover were the speakers. Adjourned to meet at the call of the presidency. G. W. Miniard, secretary, McKenzie, Alabama.

OHIO.—The Ohio district conference was held at Middletown, Ohio, February 15 and 16, 1913. The attendance was a little better than at any other previous conference, but hardly as good as could be desired. In the absence of the district president, the conference was presided over by R. C. Russell, J. A. Becker, and N. L. Booker. Routine business was attended to and delegates elected to General Conference. The bishop's report for the district: Former balance on hand and collections, $1,650.24; expenses, $1,364.85; leaving balance on hand, $285.39. The new district officers are A. W. Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio, president; Francis May, Middletown, Ohio, vice president; D. R. Winn, Columbus, Ohio, secretary-treasurer; Gard Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio, member of library board. A motion carried to have our conference semiannually after this, which will mean one each in the spring and fall. Time of next conference, also place left in the hands of the district president and minister in charge. D. R. Winn, district secretary, 82 East Norwood Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

CLINTON.—The Clinton, Missouri, district met in conference at Rich Hill, Missouri, February 22, 1913. James Moler and J. F. Curtis presided and provided for services of same. Delegates to General Conference as follows: James Moler, Lee Quick, W. E. Reynolds, W. S. Macrae, Emsley Curtis, R. T. Walters, Abner Lloyd, F. C. Keck, Everett Hughes, Frank Hull, William Blodgett, Ada Hughes, A. C. Dempsey, H. E. Winegar, Amos T. Higdon, C. W. Keck, W. H. Jordan, A. C. Silvers, James Houston, Zora Lowe, Estella Jones, Oliver D. Shirk, Joe Dellar, C. E. Blodgett, J. A. Marsteller, Blanche Warren, William Searfus, Mattie Searfus, W. F. Keeble, May Keeble, W. W. Budworth, Martha Curtis, W. M. Brown, Ella Brown, W. H. Lowe, S. C. Williams, Richard Warren, R. E. Bozarth, J. F. Curtis, W. W. Chrestenson, Pearl Dellar, May Marsteller. Motion carried that the attention of Church Historian be called to the fact that Joseph Smith is misrepresented in the history of Vernon County, published in 1911. Conference adjourned to meet at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, June 14, 1913. John W. Noyes, secretary, 1029 North Ash Street, Nevada, Missouri.

FAR WEST.—Conference met with the Second Saint Joseph Branch, February 22, 1913, B. J. Dice and D. E. Powell in the chair; Charles P. Faul, S. J. Hines, and A. A. Richardson secretaries. Summarized ministerial reports were read from the presidents of the branches as follows: First Saint Joseph Branch by V. M. Goodrich; Second Saint Joseph, by J. L. Bear, jr.; Third Saint Joseph by W. P. Pickering; Cameron, by N. V. Sheldon; Far West, by S. H. Simmons; DeKalb, by John Piepergerdes; Alma, by L. F. Ferguson; German Stewartsville, by Elias Hinderks; Stewartsville, by A. St. Lewis; Oak Dale by Coleman Snider; Pleasant Grove, by S. J. Hines; Swen Swenson and John Davis reported labor performed in the district. Recommendations were read from the First Saint Joseph Branch for the ordination of Roy Fifer to the office of elder; and from the Second Saint Joseph Branch for ordination of Paul Pugley to the office of priest. Moved that C. R. Bootman be ordained to the office of priest for the Third Saint Joseph Branch; and that Clarence Pickering be ordained to the office of priest. Recommendations adopted. These brethren were ordained on Sunday at 3 p. m. as follows: Clarence Pickering, priest, by I. N. Roberts and V. M. Goodrich; Paul Pugley, priest, by V. M. Goodrich and I. N. Roberts; Roy Fifer, elder, by J. S. Roth and John Davis; C. R. Bootman, priest, by John Davis and J. S. Roth. Charles P. Faul, bishop's agent, read his reports, together with bank book, etc. Committee appointed by chair to audit; N. V. Sheldon, John Davis, and F. B. Farr. This committee reported the books and report correct. Report was adopted. Delegates chosen for General Conference: J. L. Bear, Brother and Sister W. P. Pickering, B. J. Dice, L. F. Ferguson, Charles P. Paul, Brother and Sister Guy Carpenter, V. M. Goodrich, D. E. Powell, Ruby Jackson, Minerva Page, Elsie Craven, A. W. Head, Freida Ehler, Brother and Sister Blackman, Austin Dobson, Elmer Dobson, Brother and Sister F. B. Farr, Brother and Sister E. E. McCormick, Mable Brooks, Clarence Pickering, C. F. Householder, A. St. Lewis, W. W. Scott, W. M. Lewis, Ruth Lewis, Brother and Sister D. E. Wilke, Brother and Sister F. R. Gist, Sister S. M. Brooks, Brother and Sister P. I. Rodgers, Sister Cochran, T. H. Hinderks, Paul Pugley, Herbert Bell, Brother and Sister Robert Spillman, Brother and Sister Trimbball, Charles Harpe, Brother and Sister J. T. Lord, Mary Smith, Swen Swensen, C. H. Morton, Sister J. L. Bear, Mabel Knipschild, Ethel Knipschild, Sister W. W. Scott, Peter Anderson, Brother and Sister Bearnell, Sister Charles Morton, Hale W. Smith, E. L. Henson, August Johnson, Hannah Clark, W. H. Farr, Emma Lewis, Carrie Lewis, R. F. Hill, S. H. Simmons, Brother and Sister W. E. Hill. Moved and carried that the Norborne Branch be disorganized. Branch statistical reports as follows: Delano 91, gain 1; Alma 52, loss 4; Cameron 145, loss 3; First Saint Joseph 579, loss 2; Second Saint Joseph 141, loss 6; Third Saint Joseph 106, gain 2; Oak Dale 55, gain 1; Kingston 82, gain 2; Dekalb 53; Far West 39, loss 5; Edgerton Junction 50; Stewartsville 232, gain 1; German Stewartsville 81, loss 1; Pleasant Grove 78, loss 3. B. J. Dice, D. E. Powell, and Charles P. Paul were appointed to arrange two-day meetings and ministers in charge, which report will be published in the HERALD and Ensign. [See notice in this issue of the HERALD.] Preaching Saturday at 8 p. m. by Swen Swensen; at 11 a. m., Sunday, Charles Harpe and S. J. Hines; 7.30, by F. B. Farr; social service at 2. Preaching at First Saint Joseph Branch at 11 by F. B. Farr and Charles P. Paul; at 7.30 D. E. Powell; Third Saint Joseph Branch John and G. W. Mauzey at 11; N. V. Sheldon and D. E. Powell at Wyatt Park Mission at 11. Adjourned to meet with the Third Saint Joseph Branch June 14 and 15, 1913.

CENTRAL OKLAHOMA.—District conference met with the Holdenville Branch, February 14 to 16, 1913, with E. D. Bailey and R. M. Maloney chosen to preside; C. T. Sheppard secretary; local chorister and organist in charge of song service; local deacon to act as usher, with authority to choose his assistants. All visiting Saints were given voice and vote. The committee to investigate the matter concerning the ordination of Brethren Moore and Davis was discharged. Reports from Holdenville and Piedmont branches were read. Rock Creek, Teriton, Ripley, failed to report. Reports from the following elders: J. S. Meyer, C. T. Sheppard, J. E. Yates, W. M. Aylor, R. M. Maloney, E. D. Bailey. Priests: R. L. Herring. Teacher: B. R. Hixson. Deacon: E. T. Broughton. Moved that the secretary in reporting for publication the minutes of conferences to be held hereafter, shall also report the branches and officers failing to report. Carried. Moved that the conference petition General Conference to so change the district lines of the east side of the Central Oklahoma District that all of Tulsa County shall be in Central Oklahoma District. The following were elected as delegates to General Conference: Brother and Sister H. B. Gooch, E. D. Bailey, R. M. Maloney, W. M. Aylor, J. E. Yates, Brother and Sister Wallace Robinson, Ed. Dillon, Brother and Sister Peter Adamson, Minnie Page, T. L. McGeorge, Ed. Fitzwater, H. K. Rowland, Henry Baylos, J. H. Hinkle, T. N. Berry, Bert Dimond. Delegates authorized to cast majority and minority vote. The conference was enjoyed by all; the gentle influence of the Holy Spirit being present throughout. Adjourned to meet at call of the district officers. C. T. Sheppard, district secretary.

NODAWAY.—Conference met at the Union church, near Bedison, Missouri, at 7.45 p. m., February 22, 1913. On account of the funeral of Sister Sarah Wholford and the snow drifting all day, meeting was delayed until 7.45. District president T. A. Ivie presided, assisted by Peter Anderson. W. B. Torrance was chosen secretary; W. T. Ross chorister; Mae Jensen organist. Presidents of branches reporting were: T. A. Ivie of Guilford, and R. Lorensen of Bedison. Statistical reports showed: Bedison 70; Guilford 103, gain by baptism 5, by letter 3, loss by death 3; Sweet Home 44, loss by letter 2; Ross Grove 52, gain by baptism 2. District treasurer, W. B. Torrance, reported: Balance on hand last report 36 cents; received from T. A. Ivie, sale of chairs, $9.65; by collection, October 20, $7.40; total, $17.41; expended, to elders, $10.25; balance on hand, $7.16. Bishop's agent, W. B. Torrance, reported as follows: Balance on hand October 18, 1912, $186; received since, $232; total, $418; expended, $280; balance due church, $138. District historian, E. S. Fannon, reported verbally. The reports of the treasurer and bishop's agent were referred to the auditing committee. C. E. Willey reported. Two recommendations were presented: one from Guilford Branch, asking for the ordination of A. O. Beck to the office of deacon; which was by motion indorsed, and ordination took place Sunday morning. The other, from Bedison Branch, asked for the ordination of Harry Jensen to office of teacher. By motion this recommendation was laid on the table. The president of the district and his assistant were authorized to appoint the delegates to represent the Nodaway District at the General Conference. The following were appointed: Peter Anderson, R. K. Ross and wife, Alec Jensen, Harry Jensen, E. S. Fannon, W. B. Torrance, C. C. Nelson, Sister T. A. Ivie, J. W. Powell, Alma Hawley. T. A. Ivie was elected president of the district for the ensuing year. W. B. Torrance was elected secretary and treasurer; W. T. Ross music director; Alma Nelson member of the library board. The district president suggested the holding of two-day meetings in each branch during the summer. Moved and carried that it is the sense of this conference that we should like to see our worthy district president with each branch before our next conference. Moved and carried that this conference indorse the suggestion of the district president for the holding two-day meetings in each branch during the summer, and he be authorized to appoint the speakers. Peter Anderson and C. E. Willey did the preaching during the conference. At 9.30 Sunday morning a prayer service was held, in the interest of the work in the district and in behalf of Sisters Ella May Rowlett, Ellen Wyatt, and Jessie Parsons, all of whom were sorely afflicted. Report of auditing committee was read and showed reports and books of treasurer and bishop's agent correct. Conference adjourned to meet with the Sweet Home Branch at the call of the district president, in June. W. B. Torrance, district secretary.

INDEPENDENCE STAKE.—Conference met at Independence, Missouri, March 8, 1913. The stake presidency and missionary in charge were made the presidency of the conference; L. H. Haas and M. H. Siegfried were the secretaries. Reports were read from the stake presidency, Richard Bullard, personally as bishop, the secretary; the stake bishop's itemized financial report was read, together with the report of the auditors, and both were adopted, and the library board reported. Ministry reports were read from the First Quorum of Elders, First Quorum of Priests, Fourth Quorum of Priests, Seventh Quorum of Priests, First Quorum of Teachers, Fourth Quorum of Teachers, Sixth Quorum of Deacons, and from miscellaneous high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. Patriarch Ammon White reported. Statistical reports were read from the nineteen branches in the stake, showing a total membership of 5,308, the total number holding the priesthood being 528. Two hundred and twelve delegates were elected to General Conference with power to cast a full delegate vote, and in case of division, majority and minority. Two brethren, Alma K. Dillie and Barnard Thompson were recommended to the office of elder, the ordination of each was provided for. A matter was referred from the Independence Branch which came to them through the stake presidency, recommending a teacher who could devote his entire time to the work of his office and who would be at the command of the stake presidency for anywhere in the stake. A resolution providing for the election of a president of the Independence Branch, separate from the stake presidency, the intention of which was to give the Stake Presidency an opportunity for more pastoral work throughout the stake, was offered as a substitute, but both were tabled. The Second Quorum of Elders of Independence Stake was organized, with Seth S. Sandy as president, and L. A. Fowler, and C. A. Selbe as counselors, and J. I. Kaplinger secretary. The following resolution from the First Quorum of Teachers was referred to General Conference: "Resolved, That in cases of adultery where the guilty member has repented of same, and the matter is not publicly known, a written confession, duly signed and witnessed by two officers of the church, and filed with the president of the branch, or district, shall be sufficient to establish the first offense. Provided further, That if the said crime be a matter of public knowledge, that the guilty member shall make public confession of same, to be acted upon by the branch." The branches were authorized to suggest the proportionate number of names as delegates to the General Conference, to be elected by the stake conference. Conference authorized the changing of the name of the Bennington Heights Branch to the Third Kansas City at such time as the branch may desire. The secretary was made chairman of a standing credential committee, with power to choose assistants. The presidency recommended that the stake bishop's report be printed prior to the convening of conference. After some discussion the recommendation was lost. The General Conference of 1914 was invited to meet in Independence. Sunday services: 8 a. m. prayer service; 9:30 Sunday school; 11 preaching by J. A. Tanner; 2:30 prayer service; preaching at 7:45 by William Aylor. Seth S. Sandy, L. A. Fowler, C. A. Selbe and Barnard Thompson were ordained to the offices before named, Alma K. Dillie not being ordained until Monday evening, March 10. Conference adjourned to meet at Independence the second Saturday and Sunday in September, 1913. L. H. Haas, secretary.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.—District conference was held at San Bernardino, California, February 28, March 1 and 2. A general good time was had, with a goodly degree of the Spirit manifest in the feelings of all present and evidenced in the deliberations. Religio convention Friday forenoon. R. T. Cooper was reelected president; R. T. Knowlton, vice president; Bessie Bemis, secretary-treasurer; Peter Kaufman, home class superintendent; Madge P. Knowlton, librarian. Sunday school convention, Friday afternoon. George H. Wixom was reelected superintendent; Floss Balchan, vice president; Olive M. Clapp, secretary-treasurer; Bessie Bemis, home class superintendent; and Minnie Aldridge, librarian. District conference convened March 1 with a very good attendance, including Elbert A. Smith, Evan A. Davis and Paul M. Hanson. Reports from all members of the priesthood present show a wonderful possibility for effectual work the coming year if all the good desires are executed; and the reports of work done during the past six months show a great activity among the standing ministry, and a goodly degree of harmony among all the officers of the district and branch organizations; also a good deal of work on the part of the missionaries, especially Brother Davis, who has labored over practically all the district, and held meetings in the outskirts as well as in branches. Delegates to General Conference: Elbert A. Smith, F. M. Sheehy, Sister Elbert A. Smith, Evan A. Davis, Sister Clara C. Smith, Frederick Adam, Peter Kaufman, Charles M. Salter, Tina Salter. Abner Anthony was elected district chorister. Bishop's agent's report: Receipts, $5,472.38; disbursements, $3,668.92; balance, $1,803.56. Reunion committee report: Receipts, $920.45; disbursements, $904.99; paid on 1911 debt $15; cash on hand 46 cents. George H. Wixom was ordained to the office of elder; W. O. Boren, president of Eighth Quorum of Priests and William Schade and H. C. Powell his first and second counselors. Sacrament service at 2 p. m. Sunday. Preaching by Paul M. Hanson, Evan A. Davis, and Nathaniel Carmichael. Besides the regular services, a joint priesthood prayer meeting was held at 8 a. m., and there were three sessions of the Eighth Quorum of Priests. It is desired if possible that a quorum of elders might be organized. Frederick Hogben was ordained first counselor to the president of the Seventh Quorum of Deacons. R. T. Cooper, secretary, Los Angeles, California.

MOBILE.—District met in conference with the Bluff Creek Branch, March 1, 1913. Prayer service at 9 a. m. in charge of A. E. Warr and T. J. Booker. Business at 10, F. M. Slover and A. E. Warr presiding. Edna Cochran chosen clerk, A. G. Miller chorister, Sr. S. McMillan janitor with power to choose assistants. Branches reporting: Three Rivers 150; Theodore 138; and Bay Minette 346. Officials reporting: Elders: Oscar Tillman, R. M. King, W. L. Booker, G. T. Chute, A. G. Miller, F. M. Slover, A. E. Warr, G. W. Sherman and Frank Stiner. Priest: C. R. Mizell. Teacher: T. J. Booker. Deacon: M. D. Howell. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report, $72.32; collected, $323.69; paid out, $186.29; on hand, $209.72. Treasurer's report: Collected, $11.25; paid out, $9.50; on hand, $1.75. Both reports audited and found correct. G. T. Chute of the tent committee reported that he had collected sufficient from the Saints of Mobile, in addition to $25 on hand, to purchase a tent. Tent had been ordered by him and committee asked to be discharged. This report was referred back to Brother Chute and he was requested to report to next conference, stating why he purchased a tent for Mobile without authority. The secretary was requested to notify each member of tent committee of the resolution of the conference of Sept. 1912, which authorized them to confer with tent committee of the Alabama District with a view to purchasing a tent for use in both districts. Jason Booker was recommended to the conference by the Quorum of Teachers of the Southeastern Mission for ordination to the presidency of the quorum. The ordination was ordered and Brother Booker was ordained Sunday morning by F. M. Slover and A. E. Warr. Delegates chosen to General Conference: Swen Swenson, I. M. Smith, Lloyd C. Moore, F. M. Slover, A. E. Warr and wife, A. G. Miller and wife, and Edna Cochran. Those present were authorized to cast majority and minority vote. A vote of thanks was extended to the Bluff Creek Saints for their hospitality to visiting Saints and friends. Preaching during the conference by A. E. Warr and F. M. Slover. Conference adjourned Sunday afternoon to meet with the Bay Minette Branch June 14, 15, 1913. Edna J. Cochran, secretary, Vanleave Mississippi.

TEXAS CENTRAL.—Conference of the district met with the Cookes Point Branch on February 15 and 16, 1913, with S. R. Hay in the chair, and C. M. Mitchell, secretary. The president gave us a plain duty talk. Visiting Saints were given privilege of taking part in the proceedings of the conference. We had reports from Texas Central, Prairie View, and Cookes Point branches, with no changes since last report except in Texas Central, which had a gain of 8 by baptism. Those of the ministry reporting were: J. M. Nunley, D. B. Higginbotham, W. E. Peak, B. F. Renfro, S. R. Hay, J. M. Crawford. John Harp and wife of San Antonio, were with us, and we made good use of Sister Harp at the organ and Brother Harp in the pulpit. The speakers of the conference were John Harp, W. E. Peak, and B. F. Renfro. The following delegates were elected for General Conference: John Harp, Sister John Harp, W. E. Peak, B. F. Renfro, J. M. Nunley, W. M. Aylor, S. R. Hay, E. W. Nunley. They go properly instructed as to authority. A resolution was passed authorizing each Sunday school in the district to send delegates to the next district convention, for the purpose of organizing a Sunday school association. And Brother Sheldon Armstrong appointed to take up the matter with the different schools. C. M. Mitchell was recommended for ordination to the office of priest and J. W. Sherrill for teacher. Sunday morning an hour was given to prayer and testimony; in the afternoon sacrament administered. It seemed from the voice of those present, that we can say we had a good conference. Adjourned to meet with the Texas Central Branch in July. C. M. Mitchell, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

CLINTON.—The Sunday school association of the Clinton, Missouri, District met at Rich Hill, Missouri, February 21, 1913, 10 a. m. District officers elected as follows: Superintendent, Lucy Silvers; assistant superintendent, W. E. Reynolds; secretary, Zora Lowe; treasurer, Mabel Davidson; library board, Adrain Lowe; home class superintendent, Roy S. Budd. Delegates to General Convention: Mina Kearney, J. F. Curtis, Emsley Curtis, James Moler, H. E. Winegar, Martha Curtis, Ada Hughes, Everett Hughes, Roy S. Budd, Lee Quick, A. C. Silvers, R. T. Walters, Amos T. Higdon, Oliver D. Shirk, F. C. Keck, W. E. Reynolds, C. W. Keck, Mrs. J. E. Sayles, G. E. Raviell, James Houston, Frank Hull, Walter Chrestensen, W. S. Macrae, Lola Shwalter, C. E. Blodgett, Ella Brown, Ward Wellington, Carrie Nafus, Merle Quick, Goldie Quick, Rolla Duzan, R. E. Bozarth, Samuel Budd, W. C. Hidy, R. E. Stone, Ira W. Roberts, Rose Hayes, William Blodgett. Religio Society convened at 2 p. m., same date, electing the first twenty-four named above as delegates to represent the district at General Convention. Zora Lowe, district secretary.

MOBILE.—District Sunday school association and Zion's Religio-Literary Society met at Bluff Creek church February 28, 1913. Prayer meeting at 9 a. m. in charge of A. G. Miller and Jason Booker. Business session at 2:30 p. m., Brethren Warr and Miller presiding. Schools reporting for the third quarter 1912 were: Bay Minette, Theodore, Gulfport, Bluff Creek, and Indian Springs. Those reporting for the fourth quarter were: Theodore, Indian Springs, Gulfport, Bay Minette, Bluff Creek and Escatawpa. Reports of officers: Superintendent has been out of the district almost all the time since last convention, so has done nothing. Assistant superintendent has visited most all the schools in the district and has organized one new school. Secretary's annual report forwarded to General Secretary. Total membership of district is 350, including new schools organized. Expended for report blanks and postage, 35 cents. Treasurer reported nothing collected. Committee was appointed to collect money to pay secretary's expenses. The "Standard of Excellence" as outlined by the General Association was unanimously adopted. The delegate system of representation at district convention was also adopted. Delegates elected to General Convention were: Lloyd C. Moore, Swen Swenson, F. M. Slover, I. M. Smith, A. G. Miller and wife, A. E. Warr and wife, Callie Dixon and Edna Cochran. Delegates were authorized to cast majority and minority vote. All officers of the district were reelected for one year. Religio business now being taken up two reports were read from the Bay Minette local. No other locals reported. District president has organized one local (Escatawpa) since last convention. Delegates to represent Religio at General Convention were: I. M. Smith, Lloyd C. Moore, Swen Swenson and F. M. Slover. Those present to cast majority and minority vote. All district officers were reelected for one year. Convention adjourned to meet on Friday before next conference, and at the same place of conference, the hour to be decided by presiding officers. At the adjournment of the conference Sunday, the district superintendent announced that next convention would meet at Bay Minette, Alabama, June 13, 1913, at 9 a. m. Edna Cochran, clerk.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.—The annual convention of the Northern Wisconsin Sunday school district met at Porcupine, February 15, 1913, with district superintendent Leroy Colbert in chair. Report of district officers read. The following delegates to General Convention were elected and those present empowered to have full vote, and in case of division to cast minority and majority vote: A. L. Whiteaker, Ivy Fisher, Rillie Moore, J. O. Dutton, S. E. Livingston, R. D. Davis, F. A. Smith, Brother Dennis, Sister Dennis, Mary Lee, Leroy Colbert, M. O. Shedd, Leda Colbert, J. W. Hooker, W. A. McDowell, P. L. Richardson, William Livingston, Leah Lampman, Allie Gance, Libbie Livingston. Papers read: "The Sunday school of yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow," by Leroy Colbert; "Home department," by Rillie Moore; "Teacher training work," Ivy Fisher. Round table talk on "Profit of teachers' meetings," "Reports," "Rights to use surplus money in locals for other than Sunday school purposes," "Officers acting as teachers," etc. Motion carried that district bear the expenses of the librarian for postage, etc. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Superintendent, Leroy Colbert; assistant, R. D. Davis; secretary, Ivy Fisher; treasurer, J. A. McGinnis; home department superintendent, Rillie Moore; librarian, Mrs. George Hemstock. Adjourned to meet the day previous to the district conference held a year from now. Ivy Fisher, secretary.

EASTERN COLORADO.—Convention at Denver, Colorado, February 28, 1913, district superintendent Mrs. Louisa Fishburn, presiding. Eight schools reported. Home department work materially increased since last report, through efforts of Josephine Pople, Trinidad, Colorado, home department superintendent. Election of officers, election of delegates to the General Convention and some routine business occupied the time profitably and peacefully. Mrs. M. E. Everett, district secretary, 129 South Logan Street, Denver, Colorado.

Reunion Notices.

The Western Iowa and Eastern Nebraska Reunion Association, comprising the Pottawattamie, Gallands Grove, Iowa, and Northern Nebraska districts will hold their reunion in the Missouri Valley, Iowa, City Park, August 22 to 31, 1913. The committee have engaged a large tent and settees which will accommodate more than fifteen hundred people. A dining hall is to be conducted on the cooperative plan as nearly as possible, also a confectionery stand on the camp ground. Provisions are being made for interesting and instructive institute work to be conducted by able auxiliary workers. Good speakers, good music, good meetings from the first to the last. Missouri Valley has thirty-six daily passenger trains, and the beautiful park is only ten blocks from the depot. The names of S. Harding, J. L. Butterworth, and M. M. Bilyne have been added to the reunion committee.

J. M. BAKER, President.
J. A. HANSEN, Treasurer.
C. J. HUNT, Secretary.

Joint reunion of the Ohio, Pittsburg, Kirtland, and West Virginia districts will be held at Tuscora Park, New Philadelphia, Ohio, August 7 to 17. This park far surpasses any previous locations we have had for reunions. Details will be published later, or will be furnished by

C. EDWARD MILLER, Secretary.

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, R. F. D. 2.

Two-day Meetings.

FAR WEST.

To be held in the following branches, presided over by the following ministers on the dates as fixed by the committee appointed by conference of Far West District, February 22, 1913: Alma: April 19, 20; in charge of Samuel H. Simmons. Edgerton Junction: April 19, 20; in charge of Charles P. Faul and B. J. Dice. Delano: April 19, 20; in charge of D. E. Powell and C. F. Householder. Pleasant Grove: May 24, 25; in charge of G. W. Mauzey and Cove Archibald. Stewartsville: April 19, 20; in charge of G. W. Best and W. W. Scott. Oak Dale: April 26, 27; in charge of A. A. Richardson and Benjamin Constance. Kingston: May 17, 18; in charge of J. T. Ford and J. S. Andes. Second Saint Joseph: April 26, 27; in charge of I. N. Roberts and Jerome Middleton. DeKalb: April 26, 27; in charge of A. St. Lewis and Elias Hinderks. German Stewartsville: March 29, 30; in charge of N. V. Sheldon and Roy Fifer. Third Saint Joseph: May 3, 4; in charge of T. T. Hinderks and Paul Pugley. Wyatt Park Mission: May 10, 11; in charge of W. P. Pickering and D. C. Wilkie. Cameron: May 17, 18; in charge of V. M. Goodrich and T. H. Hinderks. Far West: May 24, 25; in charge of A. W. Head and S. J. Hines. Trenton: May 24, 25; in charge of D. E. Powell and Charles P. Faul. Spickard: May 24, 25; in charge of B. J. Dice. Boxford Mission: May 17, 18; in charge of C. F. Householder and Henry Johnson.

Any of the above ministers not able to go are expected to furnish a substitute.

B. J. DICE,
D. E. POWELL,
CHARLES P. FAUL,
Committee.

The Bishopric.

AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints of the Clinton, Missouri, District: Please take notice that I have changed my location. My address now is 1220 North Ash Street, Nevada, Missouri. I hope to hear from everyone in the district.

W. E. REYNOLDS, Bishop's Agent.

Church Secretary.

RAILROAD RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Referring to previous notice of rates of two cents per mile by the Burlington Railroad, from points in the State of Missouri only, to Lamoni, Iowa, to General Conference and Conventions; we are advised as follows, pending final issue of tariffs:

"The two-cent rate to the above meeting will be on return-trip tickets from points in Missouri. Those who get the benefit of the rate will have to buy their ticket from a Missouri point on the Burlington Road, as the rates do not apply outside the State of Missouri."

We understand from this that round-trip tickets—to Lamoni and return, must be purchased. Date of going tickets, April 1-7 inclusive; return limit until April 21. Make inquiry of agents for further advices.

Trains Nos. 111 and 112 on Chariton Branch, running between Chariton, Iowa, and Saint Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, will run direct to Lamoni April 1 to 7; also on other dates at close of conference.

R. S. SALYARDS, Church-Secretary.
LAMONI, IOWA, March 14, 1913.

In Memoriam---Bishop George H. Hilliard.

During the sessions of the Presiding Bishop's Court held at Independence, Missouri, extending from the third to the tenth of March, 1913, resolutions in memoriam of the late member of the court, and counselor, Brother George H. Hilliard, were spread upon the court records and copies directed placed in the hands of the widow and family of the deceased, and also furnished the church publications.

Whereas, in the wisdom and divine call of our heavenly Father, our associate and beloved brother in judicial and general gospel work, George H. Hilliard has been called to fields of usefulness and rest beyond this present scene of warfare and labor, and

Whereas, in every work and duty and ready sacrifice in his

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 "One Hundred Years of Mormonism"; and One Hundred and Fifty Years of Catholicism - 273
 A Correction - 275
 Assignment of Meeting Places for Quorums - 275
 Notes and Comments - 275

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Revival Services, by Charles Butterworth - 276
 Horse and Man Lived Contemporaneously on the North American Continent in Prehistoric Times, by C. Edward Miller - 278

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 Dreams - 280
 How the Big Dam Affects Nauvoo - 282
 283

MOTHERS' HOME COLUMN
 Elbert A. Smith. - 285

LETTER DEPARTMENT
 Mrs. Effie Duncan—M. Nawok—D. Macgregor—H. A. Hintz—Alvin Knisley—Henry Sparling. - 287

NEWS FROM MISSIONS
 Jasper O. Dutton—H. O. Smith—H. E. Moler—E. F. Robertson. - 287

MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - 290

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.
 The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filing of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

office and calling we ever found him faithful and ready in the performance of his work, with a spirit of true devotion to the Lord and the good of the body—the church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we enter upon our records this memento of the faithfulness of his life, the wisdom manifest in his work, and manly courage of his convictions and gospel hope ever found in his earnest labors in our twenty-one years of pleasant and harmonious association.

E. L. KELLEY,
 E. A. BLAKESLEE,

Members of the Presiding Bishopric.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 10, 1913.

Died.

WOODWARD.—Sarah Ann Woodward died February 14, 1913. Born in Canton, Illinois, July 27, 1848. Daughter of James and Rachel Scott, Canton, Illinois, deceased. Married Lewis Woodward, Chillicothe, Illinois, February 14, 1870. She died on the forty-third anniversary of her wedding. She was the mother of ten children, seven of whom survive. She also leaves her aged husband, one brother, and two sisters. She preferred to attend church with the Saints, of which church her sister, and some of her own children are devoted and useful members. She was a faithful and devoted wife, a true friend. Sermon by Sidney Pitt, sr., at the Saints' church at Pisgah. Interment at Little Sioux.

HILDRETH.—Elizabeth Barr was born May 20, 1842, in Ohio; second daughter of Samuel and Christiana Barr. About 1858 was married to Franklin Richards, who died September, 1864. On April 24, 1869, married Charles G. Hildreth, who died May 27, 1906. There remain to mourn, E. E. Richards, of Wray, Colorado; Mrs. Della Marshal of Milner, Idaho; Mrs. Cora B. Coht of Moorhead, Iowa; Merritt Hildreth, of Lacona, Iowa. In her girlhood she united with the Cutlerite faction; later with the Reorganization, and remained faithful to the end, January 31, 1913. Funeral at the Saints' church in Moorhead, in charge of W. A. Smith; sermon by Sidney Pitt, sr.

GRAYBILL.—Levi Graybill born March 12, 1818, Jackson County, Ohio. Died November 30, 1912, at the home of his daughter, Sister Sydney Pitt, sr., near Persia, Iowa, aged 94 years, 8 months, 18 days. Baptized November 17, 1833. Ordained an elder in 1836. June 21, 1841 he married Patience Smith, who died August 14, 1895. Three sons and two daughters, beside numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren remain to mourn. The sermon was by J. W. Wight. Interment at Wheeler's Grove. "If everyone for whom he did some loving service during his long and eventful life could bring a single rose and place it upon his bier he would this day be buried beneath a monument of flowers."

DOBSON.—Henry Dobson was born at Houghton Springs, England, April 12, 1846. Died March 2, 1913. Came to the United States at the age of eleven. December 25, 1876, married Miss Anna Swallow. Ten children were born, nine of whom survive him, who with the mother and many other relatives mourn. About fourteen years ago he heard the restored gospel, and obeyed it and lived a staunch and faithful member to the end. Served as presiding elder of the Oak Ridge Branch until his death. Funeral at Oak Ridge, March 5, 1913, conducted by J. B. Wildermuth, of Osterdock, Iowa. Interment at Oak Ridge Cemetery.

LEEDHAM.—Miss Maria Leedham, daughter of John and Sarah Leedham, was born February 28, 1817, at Glandford Brigg, county of Lincoln, England. She came to this country in 1818; to Iowa in 1844. She united with the Universalist Church about forty-five years ago and remained a member till death. For the last forty years she has lived with Mr. Asa Anderson (her nephew), near New London, Iowa. She died March 10, 1913, about 9.30 a. m. Funeral held in Saints' church, near New London, Iowa. Lawrence Willey, of New London, in charge. Sermon by O. R. Miller, of Burlington, Iowa.

EVANS.—Brother John Evans was born June 14, 1844, in Wales. United with the church September 18, 1881. Was baptized and confirmed by J. H. Hanson. Ordained a priest February 21, 1883, by J. H. Hanson. Died February 28, 1913, at the age of 68 years, 8 months, and 14 days. He leaves to mourn, his wife, three sons, and two daughters. Funeral in charge of S. Harding. Sermon by Joshua Carlile.

MASAT.—Carl Edwin, son of Mr. Frank and Sister Perla Moore Masat. Born July 9, 1912, at Cazenovia, Wisconsin and died February 23, 1913, after a short illness of inflammation of the bowels. Sermon at the house by A. J. Fisher. Interment in Cazenovia Cemetery. A dainty bud gone to bloom in God's garden.

BELL.—At Lamoni, Iowa, March 5, 1913, Sister Mary K. Bell, aged 88 years, 3 months and 1 day. Born near Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1824. Married Sheba Bell, in 1842. They obeyed the gospel in 1850, in Indiana. Moved to Minnesota 1858 and lived thirty years. Came to Lamoni, 1898. Brother Bell died in 1908. Both held to their hope in the gospel to the end. Their nine children all survive them, and six attended their mother's funeral. Sermon by H. A. Stebbins, assisted by A. S. Cochran.

GOFF.—Lyman C. Goff, born November 19, 1867, at Escatawpa, Mississippi. Baptized August 28, 1892, by M. M. Turpen. Ordained priest June 3, 1906 by J. R. McLain and Alma Booker. Died December 29, 1911 at the age of 44 years, 1 month and 10 days. Funeral sermon in Saints' church, Van-cleave, Mississippi, by F. M. Slover, March 2, 1913. He leaves a wife, four daughters, two sons, one sister and two brothers. He was a firm believer in the later day work.

Progress is the law of life; man is not as yet.—Robert Browning.

You can not dream yourself into a character. You must hammer and forge yourself one.—Froude.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

Makes delicious home-baked foods of maximum quality at minimum cost. Makes home baking pleasant and profitable

Big Opportunity to Profit on Increased Value of Government Irrigated Land

Time after time land in the great prosperous West has jumped from a nominal value to hundreds of dollars as acre when the first railroad tracks opened it up to the markets of the world. That is what is likely to happen in the Big Horn Basin of Wyoming.

Soil there, under proper irrigation has for years proven itself capable of making farmers rich with bountiful crops of fruit, alfalfa, grain, sugar beets, garden truck, etc. All it needed was an outlet to market. Now the Railroad is about to put a Line straight into the heart of this wealthy territory. Those who get in before the track is laid will reap the big profits.

You can now file on an 80-acre government irrigated homestead at no cost except the actual cost of the water right—and you are given twelve years to pay for that. Light payments the first five years. No taxes for three years. So you can get started with very little capital. The climate is mild and healthful; neighbors, towns, churches and schools nearby.

This is one of the best chances I ever saw in all my experience. Write and ask anything you may want to know about it, and I will send you full information, illustrated booklet, map, etc. My service is free. Send me a postal quick.

D. CLEM DEEVER, Immigration Agent
1004 Farnam St., Omaha, Nebraska

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,750.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good lively business. Address, 8-tf
VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND, 6-tf
Independence, Mo.

A Nice House In Lamoni.

Just the home for an old couple, a newly married couple, or college students. Has four rooms and bath, city water, also good well, electric lights, furnace, cement basement, and walks. Almost the closest house in town to the college. Three blocks from stores and post office. Seven blocks from church. Price reasonable. Reason for selling, going to Canada. J. W. Peterson, Lamoni, Iowa. 12-5t*

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in pasture. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address, Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success.

No. 243a, cloth ..... 75

THE OLD JERUSALEM GOSPEL. This book by Elder Joseph Luff has become one of our best and widest known and read book. There is a reason for this. Get the book and read it and you will not need to have anyone tell you why.

Order, No. 248, cloth ..... 75

JOSEPH SMITH DEFENDED, by Elder J. W. Peterson. A useful book for not only the investigator but also for the more mature student. It sweeps away many of the false ideas regarding the prophet.

Order No. 241, cloth..... 50

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, MARCH 26, 1913

NUMBER 13

Editorial

A CONTRAST IN EXPRESSION.

The writer of the three extracts which we give as a basis for the expression of some other extracts and thoughts connected therewith, was born in 1770 and died in 1831. He was a celebrated student, educated at the best of schools, and became a writer of considerable note. His name was George Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, whom scholars will recognize as contemporaneous with others on the philosophy of existence and death of man, what he is and how he became what he is, with his various conceptions of God.

We do not give these extracts on "The Trinity," the "Nature of Evil," and "The Fall" with the idea of asking the readers of the HERALD to accept the views stated, for to us there is a complexity of reasoning which leaves the impression on the mind that the writer was thinking in a circle.

To show what we mean we append to these quotations from the philosophy of Hegel, some extracts taken from the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. We begin these statements by the statement of faith.

THE DOCTRINE OF TRINITY.

God is thus recognized as Spirit only when known as the Triune. This new principle is the axis on which the History of the World turns. This is the goal and the starting point of History. "When the fullness of the time was come, God sent his Son," is the statement of the Bible. This means nothing else than that self-consciousness had reached the phases of development (momenta) whose resultant constitutes the Idea of Spirit, and had come to feel the necessity of comprehending those phases absolutely. This must now be more fully explained. We said of the Greeks, that the law for their Spirit was "Man, know thyself." The Greek Spirit was a consciousness of Spirit, but under a limited form, having the element of Nature as an essential ingredient. Spirit may have had the upper hand, but the unity of the superior and the subordinate was itself still Natural. Spirit appeared as specialized in the idiosyncrasies of the genius of the several Greek nationalities and of their divinities, and was represented by Art, in whose sphere the Sensuous is elevated only to the middle ground of beautiful form and shape, but not to pure Thought. The element of Subjectivity that was wanting in the Greeks we found among the Romans; but as it was merely formal and in itself indefinite, it took its material from passion and caprice;—even the most shameful degradations could be here connected with a divine dread (vide the declaration of Hispala respecting the Bachanalia, Livy 39: 13). This element of subjectivity is afterwards further realized as Personality of Individuals—a realization which is exactly adequate to the principle, and is equally abstract and formal. As such an ego (such a personality), I am infinite to myself, and my phenomenal existence consists in the property recognized as mine, and the recognition of my personality. This inner existence goes no further; all the applications of the principle merge in this. Individuals are thereby posited as atoms; but they are at the same time subject to the severe rule of the One, which, as monas monadum, is a power over private persons (the connection between the ruler and the ruled is not mediated by the claim of Divine or of Constitutional Right, or any general principle, but is direct and individual, the Emperor being the immediate lord of each subject in the Empire). That Private Right is therefore, ipso facto, a nullity, an ignoring of the personality; and the supposed condition of Right turns out to be an absolute destitution of it. This contradiction is the misery of the Roman World.

THE NATURE OF EVIL.

The higher condition in which the soul itself feels pain and longing—in which man is not only "drawn," but feels that the drawing is into himself (into his own inmost nature)—is still absent. What has been reflection on our part must arise in the mind of the subject of this discipline in the form of a consciousness that in himself he is miserable and null. Outward suffering must, as already said, be merged in a sorrow of the inner man. He must feel himself as the negation of himself; he must see that his misery is the misery of his nature—that he is in himself a divided and discordant being. This state of mind, this self-chastening, this pain occasioned by our individual nothingness,—the wretchedness of our (isolated) self, and the longing to transcend this condition of soul,—must be looked for elsewhere than in the properly Roman World. It is this which gives to the Jewish People their World-Historical importance and weight; for from this state of mind arose that higher phase in which Spirit came to absolute self-consciousness—passing from that alien form of being which is its discord and pain, and mirroring itself in its own essence. The state of feeling in question we find expressed most purely and beautifully in the psalms of David, and in the Prophets; the chief burden of whose utterances is the thirst of the soul after God; its profound sorrow for its transgressions, the desire for righteousness and holiness. Of this Spirit we have the mythical representation at the very beginning of the Jewish canonical books, in the account of the Fall. Man, created in the image of God, lost, it is said, his state of absolute contentment, by eating of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. Sin consists here only in Knowledge; this is the sinful element, and by it man is stated to have trifled away his Natural happiness. This is a deep truth, that evil lies in consciousness; for the brutes are neither evil nor good; the merely Nature is the "Fall"; which is no casual conception, but the separation of the ego, in its boundless freedom as arbitrary choice, from the pure essence of the Will,—i. e., from the Good. Knowledge as the disannulling of the unity of mere Nature is the "Fall;" which is no casual conception, but the eternal history of Spirit. For the state of innocence, the paradisaical condition is that of the brute. Paradise is a park, where only brutes, not men, can remain. For the brute is one with God only implicitly (not consciously). Only Man's Spirit (that is) has a self-cognizant existence. This existence for self, this consciousness, is at the same time separation from the Universal and Divine Spirit. If I hold in my abstract Freedom in contra-position to the Good, I adopt the standpoint of Evil.

PLATE SCOTT

THE FALL.

The Fall is therefore the eternal Mythos of Man; in fact, the very transition by which he becomes man. Persistence in this standpoint is, however, Evil, and the feeling of pain at such a condition, and the longing to transcend it, we find in David, when he says: "Lord, create for me a pure heart, a new steadfast Spirit." This feeling we observe even in the account of the Fall; though an announcement of reconciliation is not made there, but rather one of continuance in misery. Yet we have in this narrative the prediction of reconciliation in the sentence, "The Serpent's head shall be bruised;" but still more profoundly expressed where it is stated that when God saw that Adam had eaten of that tree, he said, "Behold, Adam is become as one of us, knowing Good and Evil." God confirms the words of the Serpent. Implicitly, and explicitly, then, we have the truth that man through Spirit—through cognition of the Universal and the Particular—comprehends God himself. But it is only God that declares this,—not man; the latter remains, on the contrary, in a state of internal discord. The joy of reconciliation is still distant from humanity; the absolute and final repose of his whole being is not yet discovered to man. It exists, in the first instance, only for God. As far as the present is concerned, the feeling of pain at his condition is regarded as a final award. The satisfaction which man enjoys at first, consists in the finite and temporal blessings conferred on the Chosen Family and the possession of the Land of Canaan. His repose is not found in God. Sacrifices are, it is true, offered to Him in the Temple, and atonement made by outward offerings and inward penitence. But that mundane satisfaction in the Chosen Family, and its possession of Canaan, was taken from the Jewish people in the chastisement inflicted by the Roman Empire. The Syrian kings did indeed oppress it, but it was left for the Romans to annul its individuality. The Temple of Zion is destroyed; the God-serving nation is taken away, and the nation is driven back to the standpoint of that primeval Mythos,—the standpoint of that painful feeling which humanity experiences when thrown upon itself. Opposed to the universal Fatum of the Roman World, we have here the consciousness of Evil and the direction of the mind Godwards. All that remains to be done is that their fundamental idea should be expanded to an objective universal sense, and be taken as the concrete existence of man—as the completion of his nature. Formerly the Land of Canaan, and themselves as the people of God, had been regarded by the Jews as that concrete and complete existence. But this basis of satisfaction is now lost, and thence arises the sense of misery and failure of hope in God, with whom that happy reality had been essentially connected. Here, then, misery is not the stupid immersion of a blind Fate, but a boundless energy of longing. Stoicism taught only that the Negative is not—that pain must not be recognized as a veritable existence: but Jewish feeling persists in acknowledging Reality and desires harmony and reconciliation within its sphere; for that feeling is based on the Oriental Unity of Nature,—i. e., the unity of Reality, of Subjectivity, with the substance of the One Essential Being. Through the loss of mere outward reality Spirit is driven back within itself; the side of reality is thus refined to Universality, through the reference of it to the One.—Masterpieces of the World's Literature, vol. 11, pp. 5860-5864.

"There are two personages who constitute the great, matchless, governing and supreme power over all things—by whom all things were created and made that are created and made, whether visible or invisable—whether in heaven, on earth, or in the earth, under the earth, or throughout the immensity of space. They are the Father and the Son—the Father being a personage of spirit, glory and power, possessing all perfection and fullness—the Son, who was in the bosom of the Father, a personage of the Father, possessing all the fullness of the Father, or the same fullness with the Father; being begotten of him, and ordained from before the foundation of the world to be a propitiation for the sins of all those who should believe on his name, and is called Son because of the flesh—and descended in suffering below that which man can suffer; or in other words, suffered greater sufferings, and was exposed to more powerful contradictions than any man can be. . . . And he being the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, and having overcome, received a fullness of the glory of the Father—possessing the same mind with the Father, which mind is the Holy Spirit, that bears record of the Father and the Son, and these three are one; or, in other words, these three constitute the great, matchless, governing and supreme power over all things."—Lectures on Faith, section 5.

"For this is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man."—Doctrine and Covenants 22: 23.

"And now, behold, if Adam had not transgressed, he would not have fallen; but he would have remained in the garden of Eden. And all things which were created, must have remained in the same state which they were, after they were created; and they must have remained for ever, and had no end. And they would have had no children; wherefore, they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin. But behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things. Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy. And the Messiah cometh in the fullness of time, that he may redeem the children of men from the fall. And because that they are redeemed from the fall, they have become free for ever, knowing good from evil; to act for themselves, and not to be acted upon, save it be by the punishment of the Lord, at the great and last day, according to the commandments which God hath given."—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 1: 111-118. (Authorized Version.)

Paul the apostle stated that when the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. In reading the quotations from Professor Hegel we learn little or nothing either of God or his attributes, but are lost in the idiosyncrasies of thought by which the professor tries to illumine the subject upon which he treats, but really confuses it to the understanding of the ordinary reader; whereas the preaching of the word, the foolishness of preaching, and revelation places within the reach of the understanding of the ordinary man that which gives him a fair understanding of God as given to him by his servants. We commend these contrasted thoughts to the readers of the HERALD.

RELIGION IN THE PRESENT TENSE.

And, now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father.—Doctrine and Covenants 76:3.

Not long ago we were talking with a Methodist minister. He questioned us about our belief in the Bible. We answered: "Yes, we believe in the Bible. Possibly we believe some parts of it that you do not believe."

He did not think that possible, so we referred him to the closing verses of the sixteenth chapter of Mark, where certain signs are enumerated; and it is said that they shall follow the believer. We asked him if he believed that.

"Yes," he answered, "I believe that they did follow. Jesus said that they would follow,—and they did follow."

"That," we replied, "is the difference between you and us. You say they did follow. We say they do follow. One religion is in the past tense; the other is religion in the present tense."

That line was drawn many years ago. Joseph Smith says that shortly after he had received his first vision, he innocently told a Methodist minister about it, and to his surprise it was treated with contempt, the minister "saying it was all of the Devil; that there was no such thing as visions or revelations in these days; that all such things had ceased with the apostles, and that there never would be any more of them."

So we see that in the very beginning of his ministry, when he came to the world with the message, "God is at work in the world," Joseph Smith was met by the clergy of the day with the reply, "God used to be at work in the world."

His was a religion in the present tense; theirs was a religion in the past tense.

People of every age recount the wonderful things that God did in a past age; they are very angry when a prophet comes telling them that God is doing something now.

Jeremiah told the children of Israel:

Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, the Lord liveth, that brought the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all lands whither he hath driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.—Jeremiah 16: 14, 15.

The Jews lived in the past; they still live in the past; but the Lord says that the time will come when they will no longer talk about the wonderful things that God did when he led them out of Egypt, but will begin to perceive the wonderful things that he is doing even now.

When Jesus came he found the Jews living in the past. They were always talking about the time when God led them out of Egypt; but they were blind to the things that he was doing for them right then. Paul truly said: "Blindness hath happened in part unto Israel." They could see the things that God had done ages before; but they were blind to the things that he was doing in their midst at that time.

They held their Passover feast regularly and religiously to commemorate the time when God caused the angel of death to pass over them and caused them to escape from Egypt; but when the Son of God came to observe the Passover with them they were absolutely unable to perceive that great fact. Their religion was distinctly of the past. When Stephen preached his great sermon to them (Acts 7) he diplomatically began with the past. As long as he confined himself to the things that God had done in the days of Abraham, Moses, and Solomon, they listened patiently; but as soon as he began to tell them what God was doing then, and what they were doing, they "gnashed on him with their teeth," and "cast him out of the city and stoned him."

Opposed to this past-tense religion is the very name of Jesus: "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."—Matthew 1: 23.

That is the idea, "God with us,"—not the God who used to be with some one else long ages ago, but "God with us."

The name of God, as given to Moses, as rendered in the English version, conveys a similar idea: "Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." (Exodus 3: 14.)

Scholars are divided as to the origin and original meaning of the word from which this is derived. The Jews regarded it with awe, and in reading the Old Testament never pronounced that word. Josephus said that it was not lawful for him to write it, so it does not appear in his work. It was the "Ineffable Name." But as it stands in our modern rendition, it conveys a vital thought,—not the God who lived in the days of Abraham, alone, not the God of Solomon, but the great "I AM."

Paul's religion was eminently present-tense religion. He wrote: "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man." The Jews, like our good

Methodist friend, rendered it, "The manifestations of the Spirit were given."

But while the Jews affirmed that these things used to be, Paul declared, "They are."

And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.—1 Corinthians 12: 6-11.

History repeats itself. Where Paul stood in 59 A. D., Joseph Smith stood in 1830 A. D.

The religious world said, "Men used to prophesy." Joseph Smith said, "Men prophesy now."

The world said, "Men used to speak in tongues." He affirmed, "Men speak in tongues now."

The world said, "The sick were healed." He replied, "The sick are healed."

If we were to go upon the street and there meet a little boy, and were to ask him, "What kind of a father have you?" And he should reply, "I have an excellent father. He used to give us children wonderful presents. He used to kiss us good-night every night. He used to give us (especially my older brothers) every care and consideration," the chances are that we would become suspicious. We would say, "Why all this talk about what your father used to do? Why not tell us what he is doing now?" There is something wrong in such a case. Either that boy's father is dead, or he has changed, or else the boy is so willful that he has cut himself off from his father's care.

We go out into the religious world, and many are saying: "Our heavenly father used to give his children wonderful blessings. Oh, the Pentecostal showers that our older brothers received long, long ago! Oh, the wonderful things that they enjoyed in the ages of the past!"

Why all this talk about that which used to be? Is God dead? No; for he is "from everlasting to everlasting." Has God changed? No; for he says, "I am God; I change not." That is a fundamental principle of his Godhood. Our hope rests on that thought. If he changes from day to day, we know not where nor how to find him, and our case is hopeless. But he is God, and he changes not. Have the people changed? John Wesley said that the reason the gifts had ceased, was not, as some supposed, because they were no longer needed, but because the whole world had "turned heathen." As to the truth of his statement the reader may judge. It is quite evident, however, that man, not God, has changed. Christians of this age, like the Jews in the days of Jesus, are looking at the past. Blindness "in part" has happened unto them. They can see the wonderful things that the apostles did, but they can not perceive the wonderful things that God is doing now.

We can see how necessary it was for prophets to come to this age with the message that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon bore: "And, now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him, that he lives; for we saw him."

Joseph Smith, as a boy, fifteen years old, was attracted toward religion by a great union revival service held in his neighborhood. Because of the conflicting doctrines and claims of the churches, he did not know what to do or which way to turn. In this perplexity he happened to read this language: "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James 1: 5.

It did not read: "Let him ask of God, who gave liberally." It read in the present tense, still reads that way, always will read that way,— "Let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally."

So he took this as it read, and went into the forest to supplicate God himself. The heavens were opened, visions and revelations followed, with all the train of remarkable events connected with the restoration of this great latter day work. Here was one, and soon there were many, who believed that God was still at work in the world. They thought in terms of the present. That is the peculiarity that marks this work as different from others. God is. He is still active in the world, not only in the church, and among individuals, but among the nations, working out his hidden purpose. ELBERT A. SMITH.

---

MAGAZINE NUMBER OF THE HERALD.

DEVOTED TO THE WORK OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE MARTYR.

Next week the HERALD will issue a magazine number of extraordinary interest. We give below a list of special articles, subject to change, providing lack of space shall crowd any of them out.

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT:

1. "The line of attack and defense; religious ideas introduced by Joseph Smith." This is a review of the methods of attack upon our work, and our line of defense, and a statement of eight important religious ideas advocated by Joseph Smith. Illustrated with interesting views, including one of the forest where the first vision occurred, another of the room where the second vision was received, and numerous others of interest.
2. "Autograph letters of Joseph Smith to his wife Emma." Facsimiles of two intensely interesting letters. The first written from Carthage Jail a few hours before his death, probably the last words that he penned. The other written in chains from the jail in Richmond in 1838. These letters wrench the heart, while they give a true insight into the life of this man.

3. "Character sketches of Joseph Smith." Taken from readings by leading phrenologists, and from writings of personal friends and from observers not members of the church. Illustrated.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:

4. "The Tragedy at Carthage." Extract reprinted from our "Historical Series." Illustrated.
5. "Among our poets." Poems by some of our well-known writers of verse, including, "The tomb of the martyrs," by Eleanor Waldorf Kearney.
6. "Joseph Smith; his reaffirmation of the eternal verities," by Charles E. Crumley. Illustrated.
7. "Joseph Smith; his attitude toward property, its distribution and uses," by Bishop Joseph Roberts. Illustrated.
8. "Joseph Smith; his prophecies," by F. M. Cooper. Illustrated.
9. "Joseph Smith; his influence on modern religious thought," by Mark H. Siegfried. Illustrated.

The cover design is in colors. On the second page of the cover is reproduced a song composed by David H. Smith, with music by Audentia Anderson, "The unknown grave," referring to the fact that for many years the location of the tomb of the Martyrs was known only to the immediate family.

This will be one of the most interesting magazine numbers that we have ever published. Extra copies will be on sale during conference, or can be ordered by mail from the Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, for 5 cents each, 50 cents per dozen.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

A question involving the proper procedure in disposing of church property held by a branch was sent to the editors, requesting answer through the HERALD. We promptly submitted the same to the Presiding Bishop, who has kindly supplied us with the following:

"First. Can property belonging to a branch be taken and sold without first making transaction known to the branch owning the same?

"Answer: Not properly, unless there are reasons existing that prevent any notice being given to the branch, or any action taken by the branch touching such sale.

"In the disposal of property belonging to a branch of the church it is not only proper but requisite that the branch, if in an organized state, have notice of the same and pass upon the matter before sale, and in case the branch has been disorganized it should be referred, if practical, to the district in which the branch is located and have action taken by the district.

"Second. In the matter of disposal of property held by the church or the trustee of the church for the use and benefit of any branch or association of the church, such branch or association should have notice and act upon the question of the sale of such property before the same is disposed of.

"In case of disorganization and removal of the members from the place so there is no branch existing, or not sufficient members to form a branch, then the members who reside there should be counseled with before disposal is made of the property."

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

President Joseph Smith has received from the committee, Brethren T. W. Williams, R. C. Evans, and S. A. Burgess, by the hand of the latter, the engrossed record of the vote of confidence adopted by rising vote of the General Conference, April 12, 1912. The committee having performed their labor and duly presented the document to President Joseph Smith at his home, at 1214 West Short Street, Independence, Missouri, he cheerfully acknowledges herewith the receipt of the record preserved in a suitable frame.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

ON THE WATCHTOWER.—We appreciate the vigilance of the watchmen on the towers, who keep their posts with sleepless eye, as evidenced by the many good newspaper defenses constantly received at this office. We appreciate the liberality of the press also.

The latest to arrive was a report of an address given by Mrs. F. E. Day, the wife of the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Saint Joseph, on the subject: "Our present national crisis from a woman's point of view," which appeared in the Saint Joseph Gazette, which also admitted an excellent reply from the pastor of the First Saint Joseph Branch of the Saints, Elder Vinton M. Goodrich.

The lecturer stated, "We combat ignorance," not only in foreign missions, but "at home, our worst enemy is ignorance." From a perusal of the report in the Gazette, one would think the lecturer was trying to combat ignorance with ignorance, for Brother Goodrich certainly proved that there was, in this instance, much ignorance "at home" on the subject of "Mormonism," especially as related to the work of Joseph Smith, and the Book of Mormon.

Of Joseph Smith, the lecturer exclaimed: "How he stands in contrast with John Wesley, John Knox, and John Calvin." To this Brother Goodrich replied:

"Yes, come on, we will compare. How shall we judge these men—by what they said and did, or by what people say of them? If you choose by what people say of them, I think you will find Wesley accused of every evil thing in the catalog, even to despoiling the character of virtuous women, for it is said he was charged with bastardy and fled the country between two days. So, if we judge these men by what gossip says, you would have nothing to boast of. Is it not a fact that reputation is one thing and character another? Character is what you are, what you do and say; reputation is what the people say of you.

"Then will you not agree with me that the only way to judge a man is by his character? What he does and what he says? All we ask is to take the acts and utterances of Joseph Smith; this is his real character. Take the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and the testimony of those who knew him best. Is not this the way we judge Christ? We take his words and acts and the testimony of those who knew him best; his friends, his followers, not his enemies. Why, then, should not we judge Joseph Smith by the same methods? Ah, echo answers, 'Why?'"

We can not give all the telling points in Elder Goodrich's article, but we assure the reader he is not a failure in combatting "ignorance at home."

A Fast Proclaimed.

In view of the convening of conference on April 6, next, it is believed that the day set for the convening of the session should be set apart and observed as a day of fasting and prayer; that the day may be devoted to supplicating the throne of grace for grace and strength to accomplish the work set for the church to do in its business sessions.

We advise, therefore, that the day be so observed, omitting the morning and midday meals, fasting until the evening repast. We advise that the church in its various branches observe this day, as well as those assembled at Lamoni for the purpose of engaging in the business of the conference. We believe that it will be conducive to good and that the Lord will be pleased to hear and answer the prayers that shall be offered where there is such a unity of purpose upon the part of the people constituting his church..

Assuming the authority vested in us as presiding officers, the Presidency proclaim such a fast day, recommending its observance in the usual form wherever it is considered by the branch authorities it should be observed.

Commending our cause to the Master who has all-supervising charge, we are

The servants of the church for Christ's sake,

JOSEPH SMITH.

For the Presidency.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, March 21, 1913.

Original Articles

GETTING THE GOSPEL BEFORE THE PEOPLE.

All true Latter Day Saints have partaken of that missionary spirit which is in keeping with the instruction of the Lord to the church, viz: "It becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor." This is the true spirit characteristic of the church in all ages of the world, its chief object, the welfare and good of others. He who has received the blessings and benefits of the gospel, immediately becomes desirous to acquaint others with the same good tidings. This is also in harmony with the command: "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

But it is often a grave question how to proceed to get the best results from the opportunities and means at our disposal; facing, as we do, continually, the bitter hatred and prejudice of those who (realizing that the teaching of the truth endangers their craft) resort to all manner of misrepresentation, and by an appeal to the superstitious ignorance of the people, stir up opposition against us.

How can we best use the means at our command to bring about the greatest good? Time is going by, and we should be diligent in making the best use of the opportunities we have, as God will surely hold us accountable for the manner in which we use the talents he has given to us.

As one way of doing practical and effective missionary work, the writer, for years, has had in mind the advisability and utility of building a floating chapel, that could be used to reach thousands of people in the many towns and cities situated along our navigable rivers in the central area of the United States.

This boat should be built large enough to provide a commodious auditorium equipped with chairs, or pews, organ, books, and all necessary missionary paraphernalia; a small cabin and staterooms for the missionaries. Two missionaries and their companions, all of whom should be singers, and one at least able to play the organ, would make a crew sufficient for the work.

By providing the floating chapel with steering apparatus, it could be floated on downward trips, and be moored at various towns with little or no expense. Think of the many cities and towns on the Ohio, Great Kanawha, Big Sandy, Green, Cumberland, Tennessee, Wabash, Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois, and other rivers that could be reached by a vessel of this kind, furnishing work for years to come!

In order to reach the heads of streams to begin the downward work, tugs or launches could be employed to take the vessel under tow. But with the present moderate cost of gasoline machinery, it might be possible and practicable to make the boat self-propelling.

Let such a boat be built at the head of some navigable stream, say at Pittsburg, and it could at once begin a long siege of missionary work on the Ohio River. Many, many towns along these rivers, above mentioned, have never had this gospel proclaimed to their inhabitants.

What think you of this suggestion, brethren; you who have the extension of this work at heart? The cost of construction would certainly not be much in excess of the cost of one of our churches in some of our small towns.

Have we not some brethren familiar with water craft and river navigation who can tell us something about the probable cost of construction?

H. E. MOLER.

Of General Interest

CONFESSIONS OF A QUACK.

[EDITOR'S NOTE.—The Kansas City Weekly Star recently published a series of articles under the foregoing caption.

Two of these papers have been handed to us and we find them sufficiently interesting and instructive to warrant their use in this department.]

ROPING THEM IN.

Only one or two of the quack doctors in Kansas City operate under their own names. In the majority of cases the name is fictitious and the business is owned by a person or company in Chicago or New York that has a string of such offices in the principal cities of this country.

One of the medical offices that operates under the name of a fictitious person is owned by a company which calls itself an investment company and has headquarters in a large office building in Chicago. This company uses the same picture of "The Old Reliable Doctor" in each of its offices in different cities, and the signs over the door, upon the windows and upon the booklets and stationery make it appear that "The Old Reliable Doctor" himself attends to all correspondence and is consulted about all cases. But the offices here, as elsewhere, are under the charge of a manager who is not a physician, but is a good advertiser. He hires at least one graduate physician in his office to keep within the law.

ALL FISH THAT COMES TO THEIR NET.

Three of the fake medical institutes in Kansas City thus are owned by companies in Chicago and have a resident manager who reports daily to the head office, not about cases, but about receipts, disbursements and profits.

All of these quack doctors and fake medical institutes will take any kind of a case from a sore thumb to malignant cancer. All is fish that comes to their net. They exist solely for the purpose of making money, and neither pity nor charity has a place in their management.

I have said in a former article that no attempt ever is made to cure diseases in any of the offices of quacks and fake medical institutes.

One unacquainted with the inner workings of the business naturally would doubt this, because it would seem that, as a mere matter of business policy, they would want to make cures for the value of the advertising those cures would give the office.

APPEAL TO SHAMEFUL AILMENTS.

But you must remember that the great majority of ailments treated by the quacks are of a kind that no man cares to admit he has or ever had. The theory of the quacks is that a cure would be worthless as an advertisement, and would end the possibility of dragging more money from that particular victim. Therefore the quacks bend every effort to find new victims and to rope in old ones for a new system of treatment.

For getting new victims the best medium is newspaper advertising. But in recent years nearly all the reputable newspapers have made ironclad rules to exclude this class of advertising from their columns. So the quacks have been forced to seek new ways to advertise.

Several of the quacks and fake medical institutes keep men in the field drumming up new business. I worked at this end of the business for one year for a fake medical institute in Kansas City. I had another doctor with me. Our custom was to go into a community and inquire for chronic cases thereabouts. In that way we would learn of all the bad cases of cancer, tuberculosis, rheumatism, epilepsy, and all other sorts of diseases. We called upon each, making a thorough examination. The nature of those examinations, the methods we used to frighten the victims and to convince them that we could make a complete cure I shall relate in a future chapter, in which I shall explain the work of the case taker.

THE LURE OF THE PAMPHLET.

In every instance we tried first to induce the victim to go to Kansas City for personal examination by the "great specialist." If this failed, either because of the expense or the condition of the victim, we then bent our efforts to induce the patient to sign a contract for treatment by mail, guaranteeing a cure in every case. If this failed we generally, as a last resort, induced the victim to fill out an examination blank and this was sent in to "the great specialist" or "the expert doctors," and then it devolved upon the office to rope in the victim by a system of correspondence.

Another method of getting new business is for the quacks to send men through the country to distribute booklets bearing the title:

"HONEST FACTS FOR HONEST MEN," or some other similar one. These books are distributed from house to house and so thoroughly is the work done that often not a house will be missed in a whole county:

These booklets are written and printed by the million by firms in Chicago and New York and are bought by the quacks in five or ten thousand lots. They are all alike, whether distributed from Kansas City of Cincinnati, except that the name of the particular quack distributing them is inserted in several places left open for that purpose in the printing forms.

The Government will not permit these books to be sent through the mails.

SOME NEWSPAPERS STILL SHAMELESS.

These books are so cleverly written that they are calculated to frighten almost any man if he will read one of them through.

One quack in Kansas City sends men to the railroad yards each morning to toss a half dozen of these books into every freight car leaving the city. In this way they are carried to all parts of the country, and there are just enough pictures in one of them to excite the curiosity of almost any person who gets one, so he will take it and read it.

But still the source most prolific of victims is the newspapers that yet admit the advertisements of the quacks to their columns. So long as there are newspapers that will do this it will be useless to try and stamp out the evil.

If a man is once so injudicious as to send his name to one of the quacks he is either induced to pay at once for treatment or he is hounded for months and even years by letters and circulars. These letters are called "stock letters" and "follow up" letters and they are numbered and the victim receives the whole series if he does not respond.

THE "STOCK LETTERS."

For instance, suppose a person answers the advertisement of the quack. He is then sent a question blank headed:

"Questions to be answered fully, honestly, plainly, and returned at once."

There are eighty-seven questions.

If the question blank is not returned the victim gets stock letter number 1, which warns him:

"We hope you will not neglect a matter of this kind as diseases are frequently insidious and rapidly change from merely functional disorders to serious organic diseases, affecting remote tissues or organs and always result in serious complications. Our experience has taught us that early treatment is of vital importance if successful results are to be obtained."

Suppose the question blank is returned and that it shows there is nothing serious the matter. Then the victim receives a personal letter from "The Good Old Doctor." If that does not bring the money, "Stock letter number 2" is sent.

I wish I could reproduce one of these in full, but I can not. It would not be fit for publication. However, here is an extract from one of them:

"I am convinced that you do not realize the dangerous ground upon which you stand. When a description of your symptoms reached me I recognized at once a complication that invariably has the same end in all cases that have come under my notice, unless speedily cured. There is just one course of treatment for your case, and I have never known a case that did not yield to that treatment. I can guarantee you a cure within three months, if you will take my treatment. But if you let your case run along, as you seem disposed to do, there can be only one end, insanity and then death."

THE MUSEUM OF ANATOMY RUSE.

A man in Chicago, who has grown very wealthy at it, uses the "Museum of Anatomy" for roping in victims. He has these museums in all the large cities where the authorities will permit them to operate. They have been prohibited in many cities. In Philadelphia they were suppressed recently by the police, who raided them and arrested not only the quack doctors, but the men who were there as spectators.

Everyone is familiar with the outward appearance of these fake museums. They are nearly all on the ground floor of a popular street. In the windows are wax figures of sword swallows, Chinese idols, and various representations of the human "inards" just sufficient to entice one inside. There other wax figures, too bold for a window display, are in cases around the room. There is never a price of admission and a man generally stands in the door to invite the public to enter.

I once had charge of one of these museums of anatomy in this city and can explain how they are operated. That the business is very profitable, in spite of the free admission, is proved by the fact that one of them paid $450 a month rent.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT THE MUSEUM.

Inside the museum the paid "steerers" of the quack lie in wait for victims. It is their business to get acquainted with persons who come in. A man is looking at a wax work in a glass case when the "steerer," who is always a polite, plausible fellow, comes up and strikes up a conversation which leads from one subject to another, but always ends this way:

"Did you ever meet the professor? No? Ah, a most charming person. A graduate of half dozen colleges; studied in Paris, London, Edinburg. Let me take you upstairs and introduce you. Won't cost you a cent."

Generally the bait is that upstairs, in the private office of the great professor, are some rare wax figures that can not be shown downstairs. Too public there.

In the museum I am telling about I was the professor, and when the victims reached me it was my duty to separate them from their money. I have known five thousand persons to visit our museum in one week.

THE TRAVELING QUACKS.

A class of quacks resort to lectures in tents in summer and in halls in winter, to drum up new victims. I was employed by one of these quacks who worked one city until his graft ran its course there. Then he would move on to another.

He was not a physician and so could not call himself one, but he hit upon the happy idea of dubbing himself "Marvelous" and "Wonderful" and "Phenomenal." In one city he would be "Marvelous Becker." In the next he was "Wonderful Becker" and in the next "Phenomenal Becker."

In one city in which I worked with him he called himself "Heaven-Bless-You Becker," and he plastered the bill boards with that name and took whole page advertisements in the papers headed with:

"Heaven-Bless-You Becker Is Here."

TOOK IN $3,000 A DAY.

That man was the most successful quack I have ever known. In Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, he took in $9,000 in three days. When he quit business there he had $85,000 in bank and he took $20,000 of it with him when he went to open an office in Chicago. We occupied two whole floors in a business building in the heart of the city and twenty-two persons were employed by him there. In addition he rented a large hall that seated two thousand persons and he gave a lecture there each night and sold remedies by the sound of a gong, thus:

The price of the leading remedy was $1, but for ten minutes only it would be sold for fifty cents, and when the gong rang at the end of the ten minutes the price went up again to $1.

Behind the stage he had a set of expert masseurs. He would call for a crippled person to come to the stage. One would come on crutches. He would be sent back to the masseurs, who rapidly stripped him and massaged his legs violently, while the doctor lectured from the stage. At the end of that time the man would walk on unassisted, the result of the massage. Heaven-Bless-You Becker would break the "patient's" crutches over his knee and throw them away.

"HEAVEN-BLESS-YOU BECKER'S" FINISH.

But in half an hour, after the effect of the massage and the excitement died out, the victim would be worse than before and the doctor would give him a new set of crutches.

The Post Office Department finally trapped "Heaven-Bless-You Becker" and put him out of business. One of Uncle Sam's detectives pretending to be a farmer, wrote in that he felt ill. Becker wrote back and asked him to prick his skin with a needle, let a drop of his blood fall upon a piece of white paper and mail it in.

The post office inspector mailed in a drop of chicken blood and Becker wrote back that he had tested the blood and found that the man was in the first stages of tuberculosis and would die within a year unless he accepted Becker's offer to cure him, the price being two hundred and fifty dollars. Thereupon Becker was arrested, convicted, and sentenced to jail and to pay a fine.

He was taking in one thousand dollars a day at the time of his arrest.

In my next article I will tell of the work of the "casetaker" and how ingeniously he separates a victim from his money.

* * * * *

IF SLEEP COULD BE ABOLISHED.

Already we are beginning to sigh over the time lost in sleep, and even boys at school break down because they are kept short of it. It is a remarkable fact that great men seem to require less sleep than is necessary to the common herd. They have in a measure got command of sleep; they can do with little, and can take that little at will. We all envy and would like to imitate them. The great manufacturers cheat Nature's decree by turning night into day. They work their men by double shifts. Their fires are not quenched by night.

Science has found means of inducing sleep. Any man can now be thrown into a trance so deep that he will be unconscious of the most excruciating pain which the torturer could devise. Would it be so much more wonderful if sleep, instead of being induced, could be banished—if some drug could be found which would do for the human frame what sleep does, and do it without unconsciousness or cessation of energy? The effect would be the prolongation of life by perhaps a third. It would be the greatest discovery that ever was made—a gift of twenty years—but what fearful chaos it would cause for the first year or so after the drug became cheap! It would be popular at once, not because sleep is not delightful, but because the men who could do without it would make so much money. The rich people who regulate their lives upon the theory that time is money would double their fortunes, and the poor, who are beginning to think that the power to work represents money, every hour having its equivalent in coin, would awake to the hope of double wages. Absence of sunlight would, of course, complicate agriculture and the outdoor trades, yet powerful electric lamps might light the path of the plow as successfully as they light the path of the motor car. Would it be possible to drive a straight furrow? We do not know.

On the other hand, it is not likely that a substitute for sleep would prove also a substitute for food. There is a sense in which the price of food would be doubled, because two dinners a day would become necessary. We can well imagine the outcry and the arguments which would complicate the servant question.—From the London Spectator.

Letter Department

LOWER LAKE, CALIFORNIA, February 25, 1913.

Dear Herald: On the 16th inst. I had a two-hour talk with the Catholic priest of this place, according to a previous invitation from a lady friend of mine (a Catholic), who informed me that Father — desired to have a talk with me. So I consented to meet him in her parlor, and to say all that I had to say in her presence. There we had a talk on church matters, convents, punishments, etc., of that church.

"If you have anything to say about the church, you must give only your personal experience. Hearsay or what you may have read, I shall cut out. Tell us why you left the church."

I replied that I had found upon investigation that the Catholic Church was wrong. Her organization, doctrine, and practice was not in accordance with the New Testament church that Jesus Christ set up.

He said that "It is as Christ left it, and came down in unbroken succession from Saint Peter, upon whom Christ founded it."

Then I said, "It should be called, Saint Peter's Church." He produced a Douay translation of the Scriptures to strengthen his assertion. I said, there is no proof that Saint Peter was ever in Rome, and I was sure that Christ would not found his church on a fallible man, etc. I said that Christ was the rock on which the church was founded.

He said, "Yes, but as in a building made of stone, there is always a larger and more solid stone for the others to rest on, so Peter's resting on Christ." When I referred to the little "stone cut out without hands," mentioned in Daniel, he said that it was a spiritual church, and meant the Catholic Church; that when all the other churches shall have passed away, their church would shine resplendent in heaven!

In speaking of "auricular confession," he took the Douay Bible and read, "Whose sins you shall forgive," etc., etc., and "Whose sins you shall retain," etc. Said that auricular confession was a very wise institution, for without it the confessor could not judge what sins to retain or forgive.

When I told him that God always had a prophet at the head of his church when he had a people on the earth, he replied that prophets were not needed now; they had been done away in the new dispensation; only needed in Moses' time.

I said that God had placed a prophet at the head of his church in these latter times—the last dispensation.

"I know all about John Smith."

I corrected him, but he still said, "John"; that he was a "fraud," a false prophet. I asked him if he would read about Joseph Smith, but he declined.

I told him that we enjoyed the gifts promised to the believers and that they were found in no other church. He said, "They are from the Devil." When I spoke of healings, he replied, that the Catholic Church had most wonderful healings. Then he turned to my friend who sat near. She said, "Yes, at Our Lady of Lourdes."

Then I told him about the doctor who was spoken to by the Spirit through Sister Bonner at Irvington in Elder D. S. Mills's time. He said that "the doctor had no business to have been present at such a meeting, and that when he died his time had come to die." (Published in Autumn Leaves, September, 1909.)

In speaking of the dreadful tortures and punishments inflicted by the Catholic Church upon "heretics" or disobedient subjects, also in convents and monasteries, and underground passages from one convent to another, he said it was "absolutely untrue!" Any subject who might become unhappy or was not treated right by his superior could have recourse to his "confessor," or bishop, and demand an investigation, and if the bishop or confessor did not do so, a confessor extraordinary may be demanded, who would see that an investigation would be made.

I said that their mode of baptism was not in accordance with the example given by our Savior, and that infants should not be baptized. He said that Christ was not immersed, but that he stood in the stream and water was dipped and poured upon his head. It was not necessary to have water deeper than that which would come up to his shoes. That it was a wise provision to baptize infants who might die before attaining the age of accountability. That it was not in accordance with the wisdom of God to make deep water necessary, for if people were journeying through mountainous and dry districts they would die without baptism because no water was deep enough.

I said that the magnificence and extravagance of the cardinals was unlike the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. He replied that their rich and costly garments were the gifts of friends who did it for the glory of God! That nothing was too good for God, etc.

All of this talk was friendly and courteous. The priest and my friend expressed themselves in the hope that I might yet "return to the true church," and that they "would pray to the Virgin Mary" for me.

I replied that it could never be, for I knew too much of the Catholic Church, during the twenty years that I had been a faithful member of it, but hoped that the light that came to me might yet be theirs. I told them that I had found the true church, and could not believe in any other. That we are not Protestants, for we never came out of the Catholic Church. That our church is the church of the New Testament organized by Christ—restored.

"Well, if your church came forth in 1830 there is a terrible gap,—several hundred years, between yours and the church Christ founded. We came down in unbroken succession."

I said, "Your line of succession, according to history, has had many gaps. Then I told him that the pagan, Emperor Constantine, really founded the Catholic Church, 570 A. D., after the true Christians were all put to death. God had taken the church,—the authority—into the "wilderness." That Constantine, in order to make Christianity popular, had incorporated into it many pagan rites and practices, and that he was unbaptized! He replied that Constantine had been baptized before his death.

He asked if we had any priests in our church. I said, "My husband is a priest." "Who ordained him?" "An elder." "Who ordained him?" "Another elder." He shook his head, and said: "I can trace my ordination to the fountain head, Christ."

While there may be nothing new to the members of the church, I thought this might be interesting to the readers of the HERALD and Ensign, which I hope the latter may copy, as I have not time to rewrite.

Yours for the upbuilding of the true church in these latter times.

I am, very truly,

Your sister in gospel bonds,

MARIE JULIE ADAMSON.

FRANKLIN, TEXAS, March 3, 1913.

Dear Saints: Brother and Sister John Harp have just left my house to-day. We had five preaching services, and the attendance was fine; attention good. All seemed interested and I think Brother Harp can do good work here.

There are only four members at this place, but there were about fifty people out last night. Some of them told me that if the elder would come back this summer to preach they would build an arbor for him.

My doors are open to the Lord's servants and I would divide the last crust with them. I live seven miles north of Franklin settlement, in a place known as Beck Prairie.

Your brother in the faith,

R. W. BELCHER.

YALE, MICHIGAN.

Dear Herald: We are still alive in the work. We have a small branch here, and are trying to serve the Lord. Elder William Grice is our elder. We sincerely hope God will help him do his duty in spreading this latter day work.

I was baptized two years ago and I have never regretted the step.

My prayers are that God will enlighten the minds of those who are not in the church. I request the prayers of the Saints that God will strengthen the little branch here, for the prayers of the righteous avail much.

Our branch is in Fremont. I thank God for the many blessings he has bestowed upon the Saints.

We like to read the HERALD very much, for it is a comforting visitor.

Brother Leverton gave me my blessing at Port Huron last reunion and it is a great comfort to me. I think every Latter Day Saint ought to have his blessing. It would be a comfort and help.

Your sister in Christ,

VIOLET ANDERSON.

GARDNERVILLE, NEVADA.

Dear Editor: A word from Nevada may not come amiss, as we appreciate the news from the other States. We are few in number at present and live far apart. We meet at Carson City on the first Sunday in the month. Some come a distance of fifty miles. May the Lord bless us and confirm us in the faith and may his Spirit renew hope and trust in his promises which Christ has made to all who will obey his commandments, both temporal and spiritual; they both go hand in hand.

There are few Saints indeed in Nevada. Many have gone to their rest. Nevada is a hard field to labor in. Religion is out of the question. There are many different kinds of nationality. The Utah Mormons are settling in the eastern part of the State and have bought large tracts of land that were owned by cattle men, composed of about a million acres. They already have several little towns established and their morals are superior to those of the average people. They have no criminals. Here in Gardnerville there are twelve saloons and only one hundred and fifty inhabitants; so it is all over the State—abominable to think of.

I am the first pioneer in Nevada; came in 1853. Last July, at Reno, Nevada, there was held an anniversary celebration of Nevada being a State fifty years. The pioneers had a grand parade. I was requested to sit in the first automobile and the people had to salute a Latter Day Saint,—something they never thought of. Well, I got the premium, a large silver cup.

For forty-four years I have testified of the restored gospel in my imperfect way. The Lord has seen me and my condition and soon I shall land, I hope, in that city prepared for those who are worthy. I can say, like the Psalmist, Thy testimonies, O Lord; how great they are.

Yours in the hope of the promises which are in the gospel of Jesus Christ,

D. R. JONES.

BAY MINETTE, ALABAMA, March 3, 1913.

Dear Herald: I appreciate the many good things I find on your pages each week. The correspondence column is a source of much pleasure and encouragement to me. I also enjoy reading the good sermons and articles.

We could have a very nice branch here if more of the members would attend the services with as much interest as they do places of amusement; but that little word if seems to make a great difference. We are looking forward for a brighter future for the work here.

Our faithful missionary in charge, Elder F. M. Slover, stops with us now and then and gives us the benefit of some of his excellent sermons. Brother Slover seems to be a tireless worker for the Master. Although he has not performed many baptisms in this branch, we believe other baptisms have been the result of seed sown by him.

Brother I. M. Smith was with us last week. All who have heard him preach know how we appreciated his efforts. While he was here five children, one young lady, and one man were buried in the waters of regeneration by Brother W. L. Booker, one of the local elders. So you see we are growing slowly but surely.

Another good indication of our growth is that more of the younger members are getting into office in the Sunday school and Religio. For a while only two of the younger members were officers. Now the chorister, organist, two teachers, and librarian are young people. The two teachers hold also the offices of chorister and organist. The organist, chorister, and librarian of the Sunday school, also hold the same offices in the Religio. We need wisdom and strength to properly perform our duties. So we ask an interest in your prayers that we may have divine guidance in all things, that we may better understand self and so live that we may not reflect any discredit on this grand latter day work.

I am glad that I can truthfully say I know this work is of God. I have felt the influence of his Holy Spirit and have received strength and encouragement through the ordinance of administration.

I am afflicted with partial deafness. Being young, this at times seems a cross indeed. So I ask all who may read this to pray for me, that if it is the Lord's will I may be entirely healed. I pray for strength to say, Thy will, dear Lord, not mine, be done. Would also like for you to pray for my father, who is afflicted with what the doctors call indigestion.

With a desire to move "onward and upward," I am,
A sister in the one faith,
MISS NORA WARR.

MAITLAND, MISSOURI, March 5, 1913.

Dear Readers of the Herald: I love to read the church papers, all of them. They certainly keep us in touch with what is transpiring in the church and kingdom of God.

I live in the Ross Grove Branch of the Nodaway District. Brother R. K. Ross is our worthy presiding elder, and he is a good man in a good place. Though he does not try to preach very much, he gives us some excellent talks in exhortation, which are encouraging to the hungry soul, and it helps us to keep in the line of duty.

We are only a few in number. There are quite a number living so far away that we do not get to see them very often, some never in the meetings. Many get weaned away and get cold and indifferent in the work. It certainly is a mystery to me why Saints grow cold in this work, with the testimony they have, and the grand blessings we receive from day to day; and the sweet influence of God's Holy Spirit to comfort us if we only live worthy of his divine approval.

There have been and are yet some in our branch who are sorely afflicted, and it is hard for some to understand why the little, innocent ones have to suffer the way they do. Yet we can realize it has been a blessing to many of us, if not all.

We have had some grand meetings during our afflictions. Brother C. E. Willey has been with us and we have received many fine sermons from him. Two entered the fold through the waters of baptism, and there are others near the kingdom. Some are fighting against the workings of the Holy Spirit, and in that way reject the blessings of God. May they soon see the errors of their ways and obey the true gospel. Brother Willey surely is a plain and positive speaker. One can not help being edified if he will only listen to what he says.

This is my first letter to the HERALD, though I have been in the church nearly twelve years, and have been almost a constant reader of it and nearly all the other church papers. I thought it was about time for me to try to give something in return for what I have been receiving these many years. I feel my weakness in trying to do anything in the Lord's work, so I am inclined to wait for others to take the lead. I would rather read or listen to others than myself, but I realize I have a work to do as well as they, and I hope to do it in a way to meet the approval of our heavenly Father.

May the work of the Lord prosper in every way, is my prayer.

Your brother,
W. S. BOND.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, March 14, 1913.

Editors Herald: I inclose a copy of a hymn given at our New Philadelphia, Ohio, conference, March 2, 1913, by the Spirit, through Elder E. H. Thomas, and I trust that the Saints will truly heed the admonition contained therein.

Tune: "Glorious things are sung of Zion."

Respectfully submitted,
R. C. RUSSELL.

Hark, ye Saints, unto your Savior;
Heed the counsel I impart.
Promise rich with heavenly favor
Now awaits the pure in heart.
I now hold in reservation
For my children in this place,
Blessing choice, with exaltation,
Healing, tongues, inspired grace.

I'd exhort all my children,
While in service in my name,
Quietude is ever needful,
Loud confusion I disdain.
Angels may withdraw their presence,
And the Spirit you may grieve,
Should you fail to show this reverence
As you enter, as you leave.

For my house is one of order,
Source of blessing, joy, and rest;
From this storehouse rich in garner,
Willing reapers are refreshed.
Here the holy angels gather,
Thoughts and deeds and prayers record.
Would you have your heavenly Father
Note a thoughtless deed or word?

Let my people be more prayerful,
Fast more frequent in my name;
With your children be more careful;
Some the gospel will proclaim.
Tithing, offerings, consecration,
Source of blessing, peace, and joy;
These are precepts of salvation
All my children should employ.

I have blessed each toiling reaper
Sent to gather in the sheaves;
Future toiling shall be sweeter,
Blessed with Spirit's grace and ease.
After you have gleaned the vineyard,
With your loved ones you shall rest
Where the power of sin and discord
Can not enter or molest.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN, March 18, 1913.

Editors Herald: We have always contended that Bay City was the county seat of Satan, and the traveling missionaries would hurry through the town for fear of him, I suppose. Even our district president thinks it is best to stay away. But there is one warrior in our ranks that Satan did not scare out of Bay City. Elder O. J. Hawn and the writer were moved upon by the Spirit to start a series of meetings on the east side of the river, and so rented a store building on one of the main streets of the city and advertised our meetings in press and by bill posters. We got into arguments with some of the various sects, and debated with some of them. We have been able to get the angel's message before the people. It took nearly two months to remove the prejudice from the minds of the people, but at last God came to our rescue, and we have led thirteen precious souls into the water, and there are more to follow. A Catholic lady who had been attending our meetings, came last evening and was baptized and confirmed at the midnight hour. We have some requests for baptism for Easter Sunday, and so we can see that God is marshaling his army for the rescue of the truth.

It was a sacrifice for the few Saints of Bay City to rent this store building at a cost of thirty-five dollars a month, but when we see the precious souls coming into the kingdom, it amply pays for all sacrifice made. The warrior spoken of, Elder O. J. Hawn, has been very sick, nigh unto death, but through the mercy of God he was raised up, and with what assistance the writer and the local officers could give, has carried on this series of meetings. Trusting we may be able to change Bay City from the county seat of Satan to a dwelling place for the people of God, we beg your prayers.

E. S. WHITE.

When Will Elias Come?

I make it a point to ask a few questions,—scriptural questions that have borne upon my mind for some time. I will give only the scripture references on the subject and let some one else more competent write on them.

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come and restore all things."—Matthew 17: 11. Now all things were not restored at that time; but he who came "in the Spirit and power of Elias" was John, whom Herod beheaded. Then the Elias that is to restore all things is spoken of in Isaiah 40: 3, 4, 5. Question: Am I to understand that Elias or John the Baptist conferring the Aaronic priesthood on Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery fulfilled this prophecy of Isaiah?

What I want to know is this: Do we, as a church, look for Elias to come in person and restore all things before the Lord comes to the throne of his glory? You know the Lord says all nations shall be gathered before him. (Matthew 25: 31, 32; also Acts 3: 20, 21; Revelation 7.) I understand Joseph the Martyr said: "This is Elias, if you will receive it." The gospel has been preached for a witness to all nations (or nearly so); when it is preached to all nations, then are we expecting Elias to come and restore all things, or not?

Now brethren, let us hear from some one more competent to write on these scriptural evidences.

J. L. RUST.

GLADSTONE, ILLINOIS, February 20, 1913.

New Branch at Perry, Iowa.

We know there are many Saints who wish to know how Perry is progressing gospelward. We wish to tell you that we now are an organized branch. The great event (to us) took place March 4, 1913; a day not to be forgotten.

Bother Hand from Des Moines is our president, and the proper man for the place. He is endowed with a meek and humble spirit; no foolishness about him. He has respect of every member of the church, from the oldest to the youngest, as well as business men of the town, for he too is in business. He was ordained by Brother Griffiths, assisted by Brother Reiste.

Brother Fred Settles, a noble young man of twenty-three years, has kept the people together up to this time, and has done all that could be asked. Our branch will not be hard to handle as there is not a single discord in it, and our new president will have the support of all.

Brother Reiste has held a two-week series of meetings and will stay another week. Each sermon is a masterpiece. Several outsiders attend each night. Some will be baptized on Sunday. There are four or five candidates. A young man from Kansas City, a man of many talents and the gift to use his talents, is convinced, and it is hoped he will not delay. He would be a valuable acquisition on account of his manliness, honor and influence among men, and is not backward in defending a principle which he believes to be right. We need such men. He was terribly hurt last fall; crushed by falling from a car. Brother Clark administered to him, and next day he sat up. He can not forget so great a blessing.

Brother Griffiths was with us two nights this week, giving lectures with his beautiful pictures of the Holy Land. Words can not express the benefit to us. The church was crowded both nights. We hope we may hear him again.

NELLIE M. MARTIN.

Extracts from Letters.

Sister O. R. Miller, Burlington, Iowa, March 17: "Some strangers have darkened the door of our little church, here, most every Sunday; but last night our hearts were made glad to see fifty strange faces. Many of them had never been in our church nor heard a sermon from our elders before. Sunday afternoon Brother Miller and I attended a lecture down town. Brother Miller announced the evening subject and extended an invitation. Many came gladly. May the work prosper is our earnest prayer."

Brother J. C. Crabb, Vanscoy, Saskatchewan, Canada, March 13: "I am on my way to General Conference and will start from here on the 25th. Left the Saints at Edmonton on the evening of the 10th. They gave me the most affectionate parting that I have ever experienced. May the good Lord continue to bless them, which I think he will. I regretted very much that I had to leave them, but the best of friends must part. May the HERALD long live to fill its divine mission."

Elder O. J. Hawn, writing from Bay City, Michigan, says: "Mission work is moving finely. Just closed a three-night debate with Elder Horne, of the Presbyterian Church. He is a gentleman, and it was a pleasure to debate church propositions with him. He asked for a vote to be called every night. With a full house, the vote stood: First night, four for him and three for us; second night, two for him and fifty-six for us; third night, two for him and seventy-six for us. Our work did not suffer. Several have sent in names for baptism. The Bay City Saints are much pleased with the effort."

News from Missions

Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

On the evening of the 10th inst. a large number of members and friends of the branch here gathered at the home of Brother Hanna, to bid our esteemed friend and brother, Elder J. C. Crabb, good-bye, and incidentally enjoy a pleasant social evening together, prior to his departure for Lamoni, to attend the sessions of conference.

Various members and friends were called upon by Brother Baldwin to speak, and in every instance responded most heartily, and gave evidence in no uncertain terms to the very high esteem in which they held Brother Crabb.

His untiring efforts, though now an old man in the service, were referred to repeatedly, and all tried to impress upon him that they were deeply appreciated, and that much good would come from the seed he has sown here.

When called upon for remarks, Brother Crabb made all feel that he had enjoyed his stay in Edmonton very much, had taken great pleasure in trying to preach the gospel as he believed was right, and expressed the desire to have those present consider the teachings of the Master as he had tried to explain them, to the end that all might be benefited, and attain a greater knowledge of the things spiritual, and always make preparation for the life which is to follow.

He was remembered with presents, and when it was time to start for the train, those who could went with him and assisted him in every way to get comfortably seated, and all wished him Godspeed, with the hope that he may be returned to continue the good work here which he has so ably begun.

MARCH 14, 1913.

WANTED.

A Cook for Children's Home. Apply to W. P. Robinson, Manager.

Report of Joseph Roberts, Treasurer of Children's Home, from May 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913.

RECEIPTS.
May.		June Receipts.
Minnie B. Nicholson, treasurer executive committee	$128.01	Pleasant Hill Sunday School, Gravel-ford, Oregon	1.80
W. P. Robinson, superintendent	41.05	Mrs. William Smith, Gravel-ford, Ore.	25
Lucy L. Ressegule, secretary executive committee	1.49	Mc Cato, Galt, Cal., keep of children	7.00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00	Mary B. Motter, Saint Joseph, Mis-souri, keep of Motter boy	5.00
Cynthia Cato, Bartlesville, Okla-homa, keep of Cato children	7.00	Mrs. C. A. Woodhead, Lark, Utah	3.50
Woman's Auxiliary of San Jose, Cali-fornia, by Mary B. Lawn	2.20	Atchison, Kansas, Sunday School, by Florence A. Lentz	3.55
J. C. Keck and wife, Sherwood, North Dakota	1.00	Mrs. T. J. Bell, Pawnee, Missouri	1.00
Mrs. Anna Griffiths, Ironton, Ohio	1.00	Webb City Sunday School, Webb City, Missouri	10.17
Michael Cleary, Ironton, Ohio	1.00	Keep of Bowman children	6.00
Mr. and Mrs. William Perritt, Thamesville, Ontario	5.00	Mrs. J. C. Proctor, Seattle, Wash.	4.00
Atchison, Kansas, Sunday school, by Florence A. Lentz	2.00	Collections made by Mrs. Rose Chase, Providence, Rhode Island	4.25
Mrs. Frances Prouty, Scotch Grove, Iowa	1.00	Vada Smith, Victoria, Illinois	5.00
A. Brother	36.50	Evergreen Branch, Lamoni, Iowa, by James J. Johnson	4.65
Charles H. Derry, Josie, Nebraska	1.00	Dahinda, Illinois, Branch, by Mrs. C. E. Leorance	1.45
Sister B. B. Burton, Colton, Cal.	5.00	Mrs. Jones	1.00
Sister Farling, Colton, California	50	Louise E. Nunn, Stephenville, Mont.	5.00
Mrs. M. B. Rutledge, Clearwater, Nebraska	1.40	Joseph Arber, Independence, Mo.	1.50
Susie B. Craven, Knife River, Minn.	1.00	Ira Larue, Millersburg, Illinois	1.00
Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Benson, Mini-doka, Idaho	5.00	Sale of post cards, by C. H. Barrows	3.75
Everett Mite Society, Everett, Wash.	5.00	Mrs. Mary Motter, Saint Joseph, Missouri, keep of Motter boy	2.50
Dorothy Brown, Las Animas, Colo.	2.60	Dennis Port, Massachusetts, Saints, by I. B. Ames	1.85
Sunday school class of Mrs. Ellen Davis, Beaver, Missouri	10.50	Sale of post cards by Mrs. T. J. Bell, Pawnee, Missouri	2.00
Portland Aid Society, Portland, Ore.	3.00	July Receipts.
Sister Bartmess, Portland, Oregon	4.00	Mc Cato, Galt, Cal., keep of Cato children	7.00
Dennis Port Saints, by I. B. Ames, Dennis Port, Mass.	1.15	Collections made by Carrie Holmes, Joy, Illinois	4.00
Cormorant Branch, Minnesota	.68	Sarah Dunwoody, Eagleville, Mo.	5.00
Keep of Bowman children	6.00	San Diego, Cal., Branch, by Mrs. Elizabeth Pickles	2.25
John Quandt, Reedsburg, Wisconsin	5.00	Birthday Offering collection, by Mrs. Elizabeth Pickles	.35
Mrs. Letha Tilton, treasurer Woman's Auxiliary	48.80	Woman's Auxiliary of First Saint Joseph Branch, by Mrs. J. W. Blackman	8.15
Mrs. Josephine Darling, Thorne, North Dakota	50	Miss H. Haight, San Antonio, Texas	4.25
Mrs. Lily B. Stearns, Cedar-creek, Missouri, keep for children	2.00	Woman's Auxiliary of First Saint Joseph Branch, by Mrs. J. W. Blackman	31.15
W. D. Jones, Higbee, Missouri, keep children	7.30	A. N. Exie, Philadelphia, Pa.	1.00
G. W. Hall, Cainesville, Missouri, keep of child	2.50	Mrs. Jacob Mader, Lamoni, Iowa	2.00
Collections made by Mrs. M. Eng-ler, Keokuk, Iowa:		Dahinda, Illinois, Branch	2.36
Sister Engler	1.00	Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, Kansas City, Missouri, keep of Hall child	2.00
Sister Grant	1.00	Falcon, Colorado, Sunday School, by Mrs. J. W. Hupp	4.25
Leland Grant	15	Middletown, Ohio, Saints, by Brother Jones	85
Alburta Grant	15	Baldwin, Iowa, Sunday School, by Mrs. Charles Haller	1.55
Ray Grant	20	Brother and Sister C. E. Butter-worth, Dow City, Iowa	50
Joy Grant	20	Sister N. H. Brogden, Deloit, Iowa	50
Beulah Enry	20	Sister R. E. Miller, Deloit, Iowa	5.00
Brother Robertson	25	Sister F. H. Brogden, Deloit, Iowa	2.00
Eddie Bogue	40	Sister Ellen Duckett, Lanesboro, Iowa	1.00
Sister Bogue	60	Sale of post cards	25
Georgia Bogue	20	Collections made by Vira McHar-ness, Lamoni, Iowa	1.60
Hazel Bogue	20	Collections made by Mrs. T. A. Hougas, Macedonja, Iowa	2.15
Sister Wheatly	15	Keep of Bowman children	2.00
Sister Engler	10	Mrs. C. C. Hoague, Janesville, Wis.	1.00
Sister Grant	20	John W. Bullock, Belleville, Illinois	1.00
Biglets Grove Sunday School, by Fred A. Fry, Logan, Iowa:		Ruth K. Dennis, Sandwich, Illinois	1.00
Edie Smith	6.32	Collections made by Florence A. Lentz, Atchison, Kansas	1.75
Intermediate class	80	Mrs. Ellen Barnes, Columbus, Wash.	5.00
Melvin and Grace Mathison	20	Mrs. W. F. Thorp, Columbus, Wash.	2.00
Hester Harper	10	Ladies' Aid of Centralia, Washing-ton, by E. A. Smith	5.00
Evelyn Halleton	15	Mc Cato, Galt, California, keep of Cato children	7.00
Collections made by Miss H. Haight, San Antonio, Texas:		Mrs. A. A. Dowers, Boyd, Oklahoma	1.00
D. S. Palmer	1.00	Portland Aid Society, by Addie Austin	3.00
Elma Neal	25	Collections made by Eliza Hancock, Lamoni, Iowa	1.95
J. V. Neal	25	Sale of post cards by Fred O. Wilkin-son, Ward, Iowa	3.00
Bennie Neal	25	Mrs. Robert McNeely, Ward, Iowa	50
Lucile Lassiter	10	Pleasant Hill, Oreg. Sunday School, by Mrs. Wm. Smith	1.70
Mrs. Haight	10	Mrs. R. Partridge, Benton Harbor, Michigan	5.00
Mary Barber	05	Sr. Bailey, Lamoni, Iowa	50
C. Riggs	60	C. H. Jones, Lone Rock, Mo.	50
R. P. Tankersley	60	W. R. Chandler, Davis City, Iowa	1.00
Angie Tankersley	60	J. T. Barnett, Blytheedale, Mo.	25
Emma Riggs	60	Sr. Sim Stanley, Andover, Mo.	50
R. H. Porrester	05	John E. Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa	50
W. H. Bix	05	R. Btzenhouser, Buffalo, N. Y., photo jubilee fund	12.00
W. A. Adams	05	Geo. Whitehead, E. Syracuse, N. Y.	1.00
W. Wolf	05	Collections taken by Lamoni Stake	24.75
J. W. Youngblood	05	Bishopric
Isaac Horn	05
Sister Smith	05
Sister Wolf	05
Sister Porrester	05
Sister Bix	05
Sister Youngblood	05
Mrs. W. G. Wallace	15
Mrs. Minnie Applewhite	10
Unknown Source	05
Collections from Mrs. T. A. Hougas, Macedonja, Iowa	1.80
Coleville Branch, by Sister Anna Sylvester, Coleville, Iowa	1.00
Baldwin, Iowa, Sunday School, by Mrs. Charles Haller	2.50
James McDiffit, Davis City, Iowa	30
Sister Adams, Davis City, Iowa	25
Mrs. Hattie Barnes, Rock Island, Illinois	1.00
Mrs. M. B. Nicholson, Lamoni, Iowa, collections from Lamoni Stake	8.60
Sister Bouton, Lamoni, Iowa	1.00
Ladies' Aid of Bly, Okla., by Mrs. T. G. Williams	24.50
Eliza Folk, Lamoni, Iowa	25
J. R. Smith, Lamoni, Iowa	5.00
Collections made by Sr. V. Renier, Apple-ton, Wisconsin
Sister Zerble	25
Sister Nelson	25
Sister Renier	25
Sister Bottner	25
Brother Mason	10
Cathy Neff	25
Labor performed by Home	3.00
A. E. Lasley, Portland, Oregon	2.50
San Francisco, Cal., Sunday School, by Mrs. J. A. Saxe	5.25
John Godfrey, Lamoni, Iowa	1.00
W. C. Newcomer, Lamoni, Iowa	5.00
Sale of post cards	75
Keep of Bowman children	4.00
Sale of milk	25
Dahinda, Ill., Branch, by Mrs. C. E. Leorance	89
Sisters of Newport Branch, Cal.	4.60
Joan Nichols and wife, Eagleville, Missouri	25.00
Martha A. Young, Lamoni, Iowa	5.00
Sale of post cards by Fred DeLong	2.50
Oscar Anderson and wife, Lamoni, Iowa	25.00
E. W. Dutton, Milton Junction, Wisconsin	5.00
Willing Workers, Deloit, Iowa, by Anna Winans	15.00
Mrs. Florence True, Deloit, Iowa	1.00
Ethel Skank, Hadersburg, Kans.	5.00
Council Bluffs Reunion, through Ladies' Aid	20.96
Mc Cato, Galt, Cal., keep of children	7.00
Sale of post cards by Mrs. Pearl Halleton	1.80
Richard Bird and wife, Pittsburg, Kansas	5.00
Chas. D. Myers, Franklin, Kans.	1.00
A. B. Collier, Pittsburg, Kans.	5.00
W. L. Connor, Fairland, Okla.	1.00
A. D. Farnes, Pittsburg, Kans.	1.00
Myrtle R. Holsworth, Pittsburg, Kansas	1.00
Lester Christenson, Joplin, Mo.	.01
Jesse Needles, Joplin, Mo.	.06
W. S. Taylor, Columbus, Kans.	1.00
Harvel Graves, Joplin, Mo.	.01
Sale of post cards by Callie B. Steb-bins, Lamoni, Iowa	55
Sunshine Band, Independence, Mo., by Flo Sterrett	15.00
Mrs. James Horr, Bronson, Iowa	50
Katie Moran, Omaha, Nebr.	1.00
C. P. Paul, Stewartsville, Mo.	5.00
T. N. Franklin, Harlan, Iowa	2.00
I. N. Roberts, Stewartsville, Mo.	1.00
George W. Rogers, Independence, Missouri	1.00
Amy Powell, Stewartsville, Mo.	1.00
Wm. Constance, Cameron, Mo.	1.00
James Seby, Osborne, Mo.	1.00
Mrs. W. E. Summerfield, Stewartsville, Missouri	1.00
Mary H. Hinderks, Stewartsville, Missouri	1.00
L. P. Ferguson, Hardin, Mo.	1.00
C. F. Householder, Stewartsville, Missouri	1.00
B. J. Dice, Stewartsville, Mo.	1.00
September Receipts.
Mrs. A. E. Ferguson, Hardin, Mo.	1.00
I. B. Ames, Dennisport, Mass.	1.00
The Scissors Guide, by C. H. Porter	3.00
Ad. Wheeler, Nebraska	3.00
Ladies' Aid, Nebraska City, Nebr., by Sister Briggs	50
Baldwin, Iowa, Sunday School, by Charles Haller	1.75
Mrs. M. G. Chapman, Waco, Nebr.	1.00
Sale of post cards by Edward Rannie, Lincoln, Nebraska	4.50
Sale of post cards by Mrs. David E. Smith, San Bernardino	3.28
Keep of Bowman children	4.00
Mar' Nedraug, Lamont, Iowa, by John S. McQueen	1.00
J. S. Roth, Weatherby, Mo.	25.00
Little Sioux District reunion by Ida Stuart	108.55
Sale of post cards by Heman C. Smith	4.45
Frederick Palmer, Council Bluffs, Iowa, keep of child	10.00
Woman's Auxiliary, by Letha Tilton, treasurer	200.00
Cathleen McKenzie, Flint, Mich.	10.00
Mrs. G. E. McKenzie, Flint, Mich.	15.00

Miranda W. Edwards, Missouri Valley, Iowa . . . . . 5.00
 Sale of wash sticks . . . . . 50
 Hifeman Saints . . . . . 6.30
 Sale of post cards . . . . . 60
 Frank Starkey, Hifeman, Iowa . . . . . 20
 Sale of post cards by E. W. Gilbert . . . . . 45
 Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, Kansas City, Mo., keep of Hall child . . . . . 5.00
 Mr. David Bonner, Kansas City, Mo., keep of child . . . . . 10.00
 Wm. Gaulter, Independence, Mo., keep of child . . . . . 50.00

October Receipts.

Myrtle C. Snively, Lamoni, Iowa . . . . . 1.00
 Annie B. Allen, Lamoni, Iowa . . . . . 25.00
 Social Purity Meeting, Kansas City, Mo., by E. W. Lloyd . . . . . 6.00
 Brother Blood, Lamoni, Iowa . . . . . 25
 Mr. and Mrs. Otis Gardner, Fremont, Nebraska . . . . . 5.00
 David Hall, Persia, Iowa . . . . . 25.00
 Soren Olson, Kempton, Ill. . . . . 10.00
 Sarah Dunwoody, Pawnee, Mo. . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. D. A. Emsley, Des Moines, Io. . . . . 1.00
 Kiriland reunion, by Mrs. F. J. Ebeling . . . . . 34.80
 Fannie Richardson Hubbard, Ohio, and Anna Strachen, Youngstown, Ohio . . . . . 1.00
 Holden Saints, by Ida A. Layton . . . . . 2.00
 Collections by Sister T. A. Hougas, Macedonia, Iowa . . . . . 2.00
 W. S. Bond, Maifland, Mo. . . . . 5.50
 A Sister, Decatur, Mich. . . . . 2.50
 Sophie Day, Castana, Iowa . . . . . 2.50
 Mrs. Mabel Young, Lansing, Mich. . . . . 1.05
 Melvina Heavener, Piper City, Ill. . . . . 5.00
 Sunday School, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 5.00
 Joseph Price, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 1.00
 Wm. Jones, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 1.00
 Thos. Jones, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 50
 George Hartsell, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 50
 Brother Ettinger, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 1.00
 Mary A. Richards, Taylorville, Ill. . . . . 1.00
 I. B. Ames, a friend, Dennis Port, Massachusetts . . . . . 2.00
 Broad River Branch, by Judson Cable . . . . . 1.25
 Judson Cable, Norwalk, Conn. . . . . 1.00
 S. S. and E. J. Reed, Elbbard, Ind. . . . . 1.00
 Sale of coal . . . . . 32.04
 Jane Ballantyne, Moorhead, Iowa . . . . . 1.00
 Fredk Palmer, keep of child . . . . . 10.00
 Collections made by Mrs. F. V. Farquar, Dabinda, Ill. . . . . 1.15
 Mrs. W. W. Housman, Ray, Ind. . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. Mary Babbett, Stewartsville, Mo. . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. M. Hayward, Treherne, Man., Canada . . . . . 2.00
 Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Langdon, Dickinson, N. Dak. . . . . 5.00
 Nauvoo District Sunday school association, by E. Bullard . . . . . 10.00
 J. A. Lawson, Nauvoo, Ill. . . . . 2.00

Herald Publishing House.

Walter Bannister, Vanessa, Ont., Canada . . . . . 5.00
 Joel H. Powers, North Deer Isle, Maine . . . . . 2.50
 Mrs. Wm. Sparling, Minot, N. Dak. . . . . 2.00
 Rachel Crompton, Middleboro, Mass. . . . . 50
 Mrs. C. Cameron, Philadelphia, Pa. . . . . 50
 Mrs. A. Veale, Patrolia, Ont., Canada . . . . . 2.50
 Ella Williams, Seymour, Iowa . . . . . 2.00
 F. L. Brown, Sylvan Grove, Kans. . . . . 2.04
 Sale of post cards by H. W. Smith . . . . . 50
 Providence, R. I., Religio Home Department . . . . . 6.80
 Mrs. Dollie Randall, Ionia, Mich. . . . . 1.00
 Aseneth Jones, Ritchey, Ill. . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. A. Kilpatrick, Shelbourne, Ont., Canada . . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. Walter Armstrong, Melford, Sask., Canada . . . . . 5.00
 Joel H. Powers, North Deer Isle, Me. . . . . 10.00
 Maude Wood, Arlington, Mass. . . . . 1.00
 Gertrude Wood, Arlington, Mass. . . . . 1.00
 Sadie Congdon, Arlington, Mass. . . . . 1.00
 Sale of coal . . . . . 3.60
 Jasper, Martha, Doris, and Willard Jennings, Lorenzo, Idaho . . . . . 5.00
 Mr. and Mrs. Lester Whiting, Henning, Minn . . . . . 5.00

Collections made by Mrs. H. Heiszler, Berlin, North Dakota.

A friend . . . . . 1.00
 W. C. Johnson . . . . . 1.00
 John Ulicht . . . . . 1.00
 A friend . . . . . 1.00
 P. P. Larson . . . . . 1.00
 J. M. Leppert . . . . . 50
 R. G. Dripps . . . . . 1.00
 J. B. Langlen . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. Evans . . . . . 15
 E. Kuehnel . . . . . 1.00
 Joseph Blatchford . . . . . 25
 E. H. Griffin . . . . . 1.00
 M. Lovett . . . . . 1.00
 G. Lovett . . . . . 1.00

Carrie Ray . . . . . 50
 Louie Larson . . . . . 25
 Ray Johnson . . . . . 50
 J. Frost . . . . . 25
 Friends . . . . . 31
 H. W. Remmeck . . . . . 1.00
 H. C. Anderson . . . . . 50
 A. E. Shoekman . . . . . 25
 J. Elmer Larson . . . . . 25
 John Southall . . . . . 50
 Henry Harkle . . . . . 50
 Henry Heiszler . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. H. Heiszler . . . . . 2.00
 James A. Johnson . . . . . 25
 Johnnie Pradet . . . . . 25
 E. J. Anderson . . . . . 25
 Julia A. Thomas, Rockland, Maine, by Anna Sylvester . . . . . 5.00
 Sisters and friends of Coalville, Io., by Anna Sylvester . . . . . 1.00
 Martha A. Young, Lamoni, Iowa . . . . . 5.00
 J. L. Hart and family, Coffeyville, Kansas . . . . . 1.00
 Elmer Hart and family, Coffeyville, Kansas . . . . . 1.00
 Jess Hart, Coffeyville, Kansas . . . . . 50
 Keep of Bowman children . . . . . 4.00
 Mrs. Grace Adams, Los Angeles, Cal. . . . . 12.50

Matilda Hartchen, Eagleville, Mo. . . . . 3.50
 John E. Farber, Independence, Mo. . . . . 3.00
 Joy, Ill., Branch, by Glen E. Holmes . . . . . 11.35
 Woman's Auxiliary of Crescent, Io., by Minnie Adams . . . . . 10.00
 Oelwein, Iowa, Branch, by John S. McQueen . . . . . 2.18
 John Pett, Dow City, Iowa, by C. J. Hunt . . . . . 10.00
 Grace Baughman, Dunlap, Iowa, by C. J. Hunt . . . . . 50
 Nelson and Abbie M. Van Fleet, Los Angeles, Cal . . . . . 5.00
 J. P. Carlile, Underwood, Iowa . . . . . 25.00
 G. A. Mortimer and wife, Redickville, Ontario, Canada . . . . . 5.00
 John A. McGuire, Eatontown, N. J. . . . . 10.00
 W. M. Leeka, Thurman, Iowa . . . . . 25.00
 Mrs. Robert Gibbs, Hiawatha, Kans. . . . . 5.00
 Mr. and Mrs. V. Asbinder, Brandon, Man., Canada . . . . . 5.00
 Ashland, Wisconsin, Sunday School, by Mrs. Millie Erwin . . . . . 5.75
 Dora, Oreg., Sunday School, by Mrs. Wm. Smith . . . . . 1.35
 John Jackson, Winnebago, Nebr. . . . . 1.00
 Dabinda, Ill., Branch, by Mrs. F. V. Farquar . . . . . 3.00
 A. Cline and wife, Melvin, Mich. . . . . 3.00
 Dennis Port, Mass., Branch, by I. B. Ames . . . . . 1.50
 Delano, Mo., Branch, by Ella Harris Royden Barnhardt, Humberstone, Ont., Canada . . . . . 3.40
 Collections made by Emma Volz, Minden City, Michigan . . . . . 1.00

Fred Volz . . . . . 1.00
 Elizabeth Volz . . . . . 50
 John Henry and wife . . . . . 1.00
 Jacob Volz and wife . . . . . 4.00
 Wm. Volz and wife . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. I. Putnam . . . . . 25
 T. Summers and wife . . . . . 25
 Joseph O'Brien and wife . . . . . 1.00
 Anna Volz . . . . . 25
 Emma Volz . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. D. Shaw . . . . . 25
 Charles Volz . . . . . 1.00
 A. Grensiter and wife . . . . . 25
 R. A. Satterfield, Omaha, Nebr. . . . . 7.50
 Bartlesville, Okla., Sunday school . . . . . 2.00
 Mrs. D. Shaw, by Frank W. Mills . . . . . 2.00
 Miss E. D. Beebe, Council Bluffs, Iowa . . . . . 35.00
 Mrs. M. J. Allen, Des Moines, Iowa . . . . . 1.00
 M. L. Everet, Des Moines, Iowa . . . . . 2.00
 Fred Chandler, Des Moines, Iowa . . . . . 1.00
 Portland Aid Society, by Mrs. Addie Austin . . . . . 3.00
 Los Angeles, Cal., Sunday School, by H. F. Backer . . . . . 25.00
 Mary A. Shaw, Alton, Kansas . . . . . 1.00
 Oelwein, Iowa, Sunday school, by L. H. Loveland . . . . . 5.00
 John Broeker, Cody, Wyoming . . . . . 5.00
 Holden Saints, by Ida A. Layton . . . . . 10.00
 Mrs. Cora Clayton, Maquoketa, Iowa . . . . . 1.00

Saints of Vera, Oklahoma:

W. W. Cheney . . . . . 1.00
 Sister Cowley . . . . . 50
 Brother Cowley . . . . . 1.00
 Sister Woodroff . . . . . 50
 Brother Ed. Brown . . . . . 1.00
 Sister Phillips . . . . . 1.00
 Brother Shoemaker . . . . . 1.00
 Sister Heindselman . . . . . 1.00
 S. E. Butts . . . . . 50

Collections made by Mrs. E. A. Smith, San Bernardino, California.

Mary Bemis . . . . . 25
 A sister . . . . . 75
 Ladies' Aid . . . . . 10.00

Sale of post cards by Mrs. David H. Smith, San Bernardino . . . . . 1.45
 Mrs. T. B. Wolfe, Oberlin, Kans. . . . . 1.00
 Me Cato, Tuolumne, Cal., keep of Cato children . . . . . 14.00
 New Westminster, British Columbia, Sunday school . . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. C. E. Carpenter, Lorain, O. . . . . 2.00
 Mrs. J. R. Dickson, Weyburn, Sask., Canada . . . . . 4.00
 Pawnee, Mo., Branch and Sunday School, by T. J. Bell . . . . . 27.05
 Mrs. James Kelley, Grand Valley, Penn. . . . . 2.00
 Mrs. Sarah Evans, Council Bluffs, Iowa . . . . . 1.00

Collections made by C. H. Porter, Wilber, Nebraska.

Zion's Religio . . . . . 3.00
 Oscar Savage . . . . . 1.00
 Jessie Wyckoff . . . . . 1.00
 Florence Brothlar . . . . . 1.00

Collections made by Mrs. F. J. Ebeling, Willoughby, Ohio.

Brother Isleib . . . . . 1.00
 J. D. Watson . . . . . 1.00
 Sarah E. Gill . . . . . 50
 Sister Wm. Liston . . . . . 50
 Mary Masters . . . . . 25
 Sister Wm. Mason . . . . . 25
 Sister Ola Stanton . . . . . 15
 Mary M. Lewis . . . . . 10
 Brother John Young . . . . . 1.00
 Brother Lambson . . . . . 25
 Cora Stone . . . . . 50
 Sister F. J. Ebeling . . . . . 40
 Brother I. Parks . . . . . 40
 Woman's Auxiliary, Cleveland, Ohio . . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. George G. Cruce, Shell Brook, Sask., Canada . . . . . 1.00

Sale of post cards by Althea Miller, South Boardman, Mich. . . . . 1.45
 Independence, Mo., Sunshine Band, by Flo. Sterrett . . . . . 10.00
 Mrs. Ann Lewis, Osborne, Mo. . . . . 5.00
 Collections by Sister Emma Hougas, Macedonia, Iowa . . . . . 1.00
 A brother and sister, Los Angeles, California . . . . . 1.00
 Anna B. Pitton, Trinidad, Colo. . . . . 1.00
 Mark Ballantyne, Soldier, Iowa . . . . . 1.00

November Receipts.

Ladies' Aid, of Porcupine, Wis., by Mrs. Fletcher Ganoe . . . . . 5.00
 Gertrude Ganoe, Arkansas, Wis. . . . . 25
 Mrs. Sarah Myers, Deloit, Iowa . . . . . 2.00
 A brother, Weatherby, Mo. . . . . 60.00
 Union Band Sunday school, by C. H. Porter, Wilber, Nebr. . . . . 8.00
 Woman's Auxiliary, Akron, Ohio, by Mrs. F. J. Ebeling . . . . . 13.00
 Ladies' Aid, New Philadelphia, Ohio, by Mrs. F. J. Ebeling . . . . . 5.00
 Mrs. Mary Hawkins, Stewartsville, Mo. . . . . 1.00
 Sadie Congdon, Marlboro, N. H. . . . . 1.00
 San Francisco, Cal., Religio by J. A. Saxe . . . . . 3.00
 California . . . . . 5.00
 A. E. Lasley, Portland, Oreg. . . . . 2.50
 Zion's Aid, of Los Angeles, Cal., by Mrs. Hermina Badham . . . . . 04.00
 Woman's Auxiliary of South Boardman, Mich., by Mrs. C. B. Doty . . . . . 12.00
 A sister, Centerville, Iowa . . . . . 50
 Minnesota Branch of Saskatchewan District, by Mrs. Emma L. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Lizzie Hemstock . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Emma L. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Rose Kissack . . . . . 25
 Thelma Anderson . . . . . 25
 Walter Kissack . . . . . 10
 Mildred Kissack . . . . . 10
 Mrs. Tressie Hedeon . . . . . 25
 Ernest M. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Robert E. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Abbie Whiting . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Minnie Hovey . . . . . 25
 W. J. Hovey . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Lewis E. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Mrs. A. B. Nunn . . . . . 75
 Ross Anderson and wife . . . . . 1.00
 John Nunn . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. R. B. Anderson . . . . . 50
 Lloyd Anderson . . . . . 50
 Mrs. Beatrice Huggett . . . . . 25
 Mr. and Mrs. Omer Nunn . . . . . 1.00
 Mrs. Victor Anderson . . . . . 50
 Zina Leach . . . . . 35
 Mrs. Nettie Ferrie . . . . . 50
 Vida Hemstock . . . . . 35
 Avis Hemstock . . . . . 25
 William Hemstock . . . . . 25

Sale of post cards by Alice E. Jones, Scammon, Kansas . . . . . 60
 Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Graham, Minot, North Dakota . . . . . 3.00
 Mr. and Mrs. J. Asbinder, Brandon, Man., Canada . . . . . 5.00
 Burlington, Iowa, Sunday School, by Edith Willey . . . . . 5.25

Harriett R. Wood, Marlboro, N. H.	1.00
Anna E. Wood, Marlboro, N. H.	1.00
Mrs. H. H. Cole, Madison, S. Dak.	1.00
Mrs. Sadie Hanson, Los Angeles, California	15.00
Adelbert, Kansas, Sunday School, by Florence A. Lentz	3.00
San Francisco, Cal., Sunday School by Mrs. J. A. Saxe	5.00
Annie E. Pitton, Trinidad, Colo.	1.00
Long Rock, Mo., Branch, by P. M. McPeck	4.50
P. M. McPeck, Blythedale, Mo.	5.00
Fredek Palmer, Council Bluffs, Iowa, keep of child	10.00
Moorhead, Iowa, Branch, collected by V. Coht and Vina Hoffman, sent through A. M. Fyrando.	Corn
J. C. Ballantyne and wife	1.20
Myrtle Ballantyne	.60
Clara Ballantyne	.05
F. D. Court and family	.05
Margaret Canon	.05
Laura Gunsolley	.05
Arlie Hoffman and wife	1.20
Joseph Hoffman and wife	.10
Mark Jensen	.60
Edta Jennings	.05
Anna Larson	.60
Nellie Larson	.60
Claud Mann	1.00
Delana McElwain	.05
Bertha McElwain	.15
May McElwain	.05
Frank Rich and wife	.20
May Rich	.05
Lenna Strand	.25
Wm. Wilson and wife	.05
Unknown source	.05
C. U. Hutchins, Meadow Grove, Nebraska	5.00
Disgah Branch, by Joseph Lane, through A. M. Fyrando:
Charles Vredenburg	25
Alma Hoyt	50
Baughman	1.00
John Lane	50
Hugh Hunt	1.00
Henry Johnson	1.00
John Dickey	25
Elizabeth Emerson	50
N. M. Perkins	25
Frank Runkles	1.00
May Vredenburg	50
Paul Varies	1.00
Charles Lane	1.00
J. W. Riley	50
J. W. Lane	50
Cora Hoyt	50
Pearl Van Eaton	75
A. J. Smith	1.00
David Vredenburg	4.00
Arthur Lane	1.00
Keep of Bowman children	4.00
Mondamin, Iowa, Saints, by May Gamet, through A. M. Fyrando.	11.00
R. T. Cooper, Los Angeles, Cal.	2.00
Underwood Branch, by Mrs. E. A. M. Fisher	12.25
Emma Volsky, Nebraska City, Nebr.	1.00
G. H. Wikom, San Bernardino, Cal., by F. Hogben	1.00
J. Baldwin, San Bernardino, Cal., by F. Hogben	1.00
J. H. Smith, San Bernardino, Cal., by F. Hogben	50
Mrs. Minnie Hayward, Treherne, Man., Canada	2.00
Anna B. Olson, Audubon, Minn.	1.00
Beutha Olson, Audubon, Minn.	1.00
Ois. Bosted, Audubon, Minn.	1.00
Levi Phelps and wife, Ihnea, Mich	5.00
Second Independence, Mo., Sunshine Band, by Okie Campbell	5.00
J. L. Merrick and family, Fordyce, Nebraska.	3.60
Z. M. Santee, Mystic, Iowa	1.00
Collections made by Joseph Arber, Millersburg, Ill.	7.00
Mrs. Jane Gault, Reno, Nev.	20.00
Delano, Mo., Branch, by Ella S. Harris	1.25
Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Danielson, Wray, Colorado	5.00
Zion's Religio-Literary Society, of Broekton, Mass.	5.00
Sarah Blausler, Troy, Kansas	4.00
Mrs. E. P. Schmidt, Willoughby, O. Baldwin, Iowa, Sunday School, by Mrs. Charles Haller	2.00
Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Chaborn, Thurman, Iowa	2.00
Persia, Iowa, Branch, by A. M. Fyrando	36.11
Joplin, Mo., Branch, by Dessee Pearson	5.00
Mrs. George Cruce, Merchants Grove Saskatchewan, Canada	1.00
Mc Cato, Columne, Cal., keep of Cato children	7.00
Opal Dowers, Boyd, Okla.	1.00
Ellen Weedmark, Kansas City, Mo.	1.00

Mrs. F. C. Donaldson, Hamden, O.	1.00
A brother and sister, Clitherrall, Minnesota	15.00
Greenville Sunday School, by Fred Cousins	1.40
Woman's Auxiliary of Crescent, Iowa, by Izetta Lapworth	35.00
Mrs. J. H. Post, Katy, Texas.	1.00
Mrs. Marion Chambers, Victor, Colo.	2.00
Kate Bullock, Portland, Ore.	5.00
Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Rockhold, Los Angeles, Cal.	1.00
Biglers Grove, Iowa, Branch, by A. M. Fyrando	50.00
Ladies' Aid, by Stella C. Aylor, San Diego, California	5.00
Mrs. W. S. Farrar and daughter, Lincoln, Nebraska	2.00
Mrs. Myrtle Williams, Cortez, Colo.	2.00
Sisters of Melby, N. Dak., by Mrs. George Moffet	4.00
Oyster supper at Orson, Iowa, Bro. and Sister Elmer Coffman, managers, through A. M. Fyrando.	13.70
Saints and friends of Little Sioux, Iowa, by A. M. Fyrando:
Abbie Peasley	50
Brother and Sister G. M. Scott	1.00
Mr. C. K. Hesse	50
Edta Setchell	25
C. L. Burton	25
Sr. C. L. Burton	25
Sister D. A. Hutchings	25
Sister Elsie Buitts	25
Sister Laura Bassett	25
Joseph Conyers	25
Mr. Cox	25
Brother and Sister Linn	25
Charles Crabb	1.00
Sister Beecham	25
Brother and Sister J. T. Worsencroft	50
Perca Worsencroft	25

December Receipts.
Woman's Auxiliary, by Letha M. Thorton, Ireal	06.76
T. W. Vickery, Steadham, Ala., by F. M. Slover	2.00
Woodbine, Iowa, Branch, by A. M. Fyrando:
Maud Schofield	1.00
Sister Gideon Hawley	1.00
Sister S. Gamet	50
Brother S. Gamet	2.00
Sister Lena Garner	50
H. D. Swain	50
Sister Jarvis	1.00
Alf. Holeton	25
A sister	05
Sister Samuel Wood	25
W. H. Redfield	1.00
Charles Hyde	25
Sister M. M. Putnam	.60
Hattie Orvate	1.00
J. Lathey and wife	50
H. S. Gamet	50
Sister H. P. Derry	25
S. B. Kibler, wife, and Gladys	1.85
Magnolia Branch, by A. M. Fyrando:
J. D. Stuart	1.00
Eliza Caffall	1.00
Mrs. E. J. McDowell	1.00
Mrs. Putnam	1.00
A friend	25
Mrs. Sarah Benson	25
Dr. Hanson	1.00
W. B. Fallon	50
Hattie Fallon	50
Mrs. Harrington	25
Robert Wilkett	50
J. W. Merchant	50
James Robinson	1.00
Belle Cress	25
Carrie Holten Coffman	1.00
Josephine Chambers	50
Andrew Johnson	25
A. M. Fyrando	1.00
Orson, Iowa, by Sister Elmer Coffman, through A. M. Fyrando:
Mary Peasley	50
Sister George Scott	50
Mrs. W. B. Lightwine	25
Brethren and friends of Joy, Ill., Branch	13.75
Sister Anderson, Seneca, Ill.	5.00
J. H. Howe, Antigo, Wisconsin	5.00
Collections made by Mrs. S. R. Wigton, Roseville, Ohio:
G. W. Robson	1.00
Mrs. W. E. Pemberton	1.00
Mrs. S. R. Wigton	1.00
Dahinda, Ill., Branch, by Mrs. Bessie Hopkins Farquer	1.35
Collections made by Will A. Boren, Bernardino, California:
Sister Mary Bemls	1.00
Sister Maud Harris	2.50
Sister Ella Harris	2.50
Sister S. B. Harris	2.00
Falcon, Colo., Sunday School, by Mrs. J. W. Hupp	2.72

Collections made by H. E. Merryman, Enterprise, Oregon:
H. E. Merryman	3.50
Mrs. H. E. Merryman	5.00
Angeline Merryman	10
Gertrude Wood, Andover, Mass.	1.00
Moorhead, Iowa, Branch donation and supper by A. M. Fyrando	25.00
Missouri Valley Branch supper, by A. M. Fyrando	11.00
Webb City, Mo., Sunday School, by Leila Fletcher	10.00
Mrs. Lucy Bowen, Providence, R. I.	2.00
Collections made by Mrs. T. A. Hougas, Macedonia, Iowa	2.00
Greenville Sunday School, by Fred Cousins	13.45
Iona King, Rinard, Ill.	-2.00
Nellie King, Rinard, Ill.	2.00
Persia, Iowa, Sunday School, by Joseph Seddon	2.00
Pleasant Lake Sunday School, by Mrs. Almira Sims, Shell Brook, Saskatchewan, Canada:
Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Schrank	1.00
Harry Parks	50
Mr. and Mrs. Orben Sims	50
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sims	1.00
Ruth Sims	1.50
Mr. and Mrs. George Cruce	2.00
St. Louis, Iowa, Branch, by A. M. Fyrando	6.50
Fredek Palmer, Council Bluffs, Iowa, keep of child	10.00
Ladies' Aid, of Bly, Okla., by Mrs. T. G. Williams	14.00
Mrs. Annie E. Pitton, Trinidad, Colorado	1.00
Mc Cato, Santa Cruz, Cal., keep of Cato children	7.00
Saint Louis Aite Society, by Mrs. Elanor L. Cooke	25.00
Mrs. Laura Savage, Wilhita, Cal.	3.00
Zion's Aid, of Los Angeles, Cal., by Mrs. W. B. Badham	3.00
Loan for one year without interest	400.00
Coalville Sunday School and Religio, by Mabel Hay	4.10
Mondamin Saints box supper, by May Gamet, through A. M. Fyrando	13.10
Keep of Bowman children	4.00
Wm. Wylie, Lamoni, Iowa	5.00
Brother and Sister M. J. Lade, Sumas, Washington	1.00
Mrs. John G. Hass, Elmore, Minn.	10.00
Mrs. Anna Perry, Indianapolis, Ind.	5.00
Mrs. Lula Gupitll, Newagen, Me.	2.00
Sarah J. Ross, Gilroy, California	10.00
Delano, Mo., Branch, by Ella Harris	1.35
Wm. L. Prouty, Scotch Grove, Iowa	1.00
Sister Emma Jensen, Trinidad, Colo.	1.00
Willing Workers, Deloit, Iowa, by Anna Winans	10.00
Brother and Sister A. H. Adams, Jasper, Minn.	10.00
Charles E. and M. E. Everett, Denver, Colorado	5.00
Mrs. Melissa L. Jordan, Deloit, Iowa, by C. J. Hunt	1.00
Mrs. Elizabeth Wallace, Rockwell City, Iowa, by C. J. Hunt	1.00
Logan, Iowa, Branch, by Sister Frank Hill and others, through A. M. Fyrando:
Mrs. Nancy Clulow	2.50
Mrs. Lizzie Clark	2.50
W. W. Baker	25
Fred Lampher	60
Anna Lampher	60
Fern Lampher	60
Mrs. W. Wood	05
W. R. Adams	05
Ruby Adams	05
Lovina Adams	05
Charles Kennedy	05
Esther Kennedy	05
Nellie Kennedy	05
Louise Kennedy	05
Nella Wood	05
Hazel Wood	05
Altheria Hough	10
Frank Hill	5.00
Trum F. Emmerson	1.00
Rose Adams	50
Frank Hough	05
Mrs. Hough	05
Scott Hough	05
Mrs. Hannah King	05
Mrs. Elmira Adams	10
Angela, Cal.	30
Mrs. George Derry	30
Mrs. Salter	05
May Benc	25
Ladies' Aid of Logan, Iowa.	5.00
Intermediate class of girls, Logan Sunday School	5.35
Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Rockhold, Los Angeles, Cal.	1.00
Raymond Rockhold, Los Angeles, Cal.	25
Fred Letty, Lancaster, Wis.	5.00

Mrs. Lily B. Stearns, Glasgow, Mont., keep of children	60.00
Minnie Hayward, Treherne, Man., Canada	2.00
Cora Clayton, Maquoketa, Iowa	1.00
Caroline Curtis, Maquoketa, Iowa	1.00
Mrs. J. F. Rose, Ceres, Cal.	2.70
Sale of wash sticks	1.75
Caroline Torrance, Maryville, Mo.	5.00
Hiteman, Iowa, Branch, by Mrs. Joseph T. Williams	5.60
Julia V. Neal, San Antonio, Texas	1.50
David Bennett, Kansas City, Kans., keep of child	10.00
Mrs. Houghton, Council Bluffs, Io.	10.00
A sister, Amboy, Ill.	5.00
Freight on box returned	.40
Primary class of Mission Sunday School, by Mildred Anderson	2.00
Sister Clara Kilgore, Pecatonica, Ill., by H. A. Stebbins	1.00
Sister Jennie Leland, Elgin, Ill., by H. A. Stebbins	1.00
Mrs. S. C. Yancey, Prineville, Oreg.	1.00
Jennie Bohlander and mother, by James F. Kler, Chicago	10.00
Sunday School at Elmira, Mich., by Mrs. Minnie Ogden	1.25
New Bedford, Mass., Sunday School, by Edna W. H. Koehler	3.00
Mrs. A. J. Daley, Lansing, Mich.	1.00
Corinth, Ont. Canada Branch, by Ella Barbridge	5.25
Bertha A. Greer, Lamoni, Iowa	13.85
J. A. Beckman and wife, Nutana, Sask., Canada	5.00
Emma L. Anderson, Nutana, Sask., Canada	1.00
Nelson and Predetta Wilson, Winnipeg, Man., Canada	20.00
Sunny Hill Woman's Auxiliary, by Mrs. W. A. Connell	1.50
Mrs. A. Cresley, Santee, Nebr.	3.20
Ladies' Aid of Logan, N. Dak., by Iola Horning	25.00
Blanche Adams, Lincoln, Nebr.	2.10
Eagle Grove, Iowa, Sunday School, by Mrs. C. S. Hayer	2.11
Maggie E. Dittmore	.25
Maren Jacobson, Lamoni, Iowa	.50
Pleasant Hill Sunday School and Saints of Coquille, Oregon, by Mrs. Wm. Smith:
Lola Mast, Coquille, Oregon	2.50
Sister Lebo, Coquille, Oregon	2.50
A. J. Mayre and family	2.00
William Smith	1.00
Agnes Smith	1.00
Lila Smith	.50
Eunice Smith	.50
Mabel Minard	.25
Monta Minard	.25
Minnie Minard	.25
Harvey Minard	.25
Maud Mast, Lee, Oregon	.25
Collections from Magnolia Saints, by A. M. Fyrand:
Mrs. James Maule	.50
Mrs. James Kay	.50
Cecil Hays for shoes for brother	2.25
Mrs. W. A. Page, San Francisco, Cal.	2.50
Harry M. and Josie Childress, Deloit, Iowa	1.00
Collections by J. E. Wildermuth, Fargo, North Dakota:
Josephine Darling, Thorne, N. Dak.	3.00
Sister Tobias Holm, Hamer, N. Dak.	2.50
Mrs. F. Bromann, Burlington, Iowa	1.00
Anamosa, Iowa, Branch, by A. J. Beam	3.00
A brother from Owen Sound, Ont., Canada	2.50
Jess Clark and family, Oran, Iowa	2.00
Sister A. Leverton Minden City, Mich.	1.00
Collections by Mrs. H. Heisler, Berlin, N. Dak.:
Paul Shockman	1.00
P. Dockery	1.00
Mr. Flegner	.50
George Young	1.00
Nick Shockman	.50
Collections by Herald Publishing House:
Fred'k Ode, Caldwell, Idaho	5.00
Ira Mullin, Exline, Iowa	.50
Peter Kaufman, Los Angeles, Cal.	5.00
Maud and Annie Graham, Pindlater, Sask., Canada	.50
W. Maddock, Manchester, England	1.00
Mrs. E. B. Holman, Dixfield, Maine	1.00
Elizabeth Pickles, San Diego, Cal.	2.50
Elizabeth Schnell, Los Angeles, Cal.	5.00
Oakland, Cal., Branch, by J. M. Terry	2.75
Albert E. Martin, Herschel, Sask., Canada	1.75
Sam B. Baker, Rosemead, Cal.	.50
Woman's Auxiliary, Rockville, Mo., by Edna Lukenbill	1.70
Mrs. M. C. Hannah, Montebello, Cal.	2.00

John S. Ledington, Park City, Utah	1.50
Augusta Raistron, Wiley, Colo.	2.00
W. L. McClain, Paris, Tenn.	.55
George Hail, Weston, Iowa	1.25
Mrs. W. R. Graham, Bethune, Sask., Canada	1.00
Mrs. S. A. Hoffman and sons, John and Henry, Mount Home, Idaho	10.00
Susie B. Cravens, Knife River, Minn.	1.25
Mrs. George Green, Appledore, Ont., Canada	.50
Ruby Thompson, Vesper, Kansas	5.00
San Diego, Cal., Branch, by Elizabeth Pickles	4.00
Mrs. Minnie Hayward, Treherne, Man., Canada	1.00
Estella Hayward, Winnipeg, Man., Canada	2.00
Martha Talbot, Lucas, Iowa	2.00
A sister, California	1.00
Sale of post cards, by Mrs. A. Carmichael	90
Christiana Johnson, by Grace Johnson, Chicago	1.00
Mrs. Charles Morey, Pleasanton, Io.	.40
Mrs. Jessie Moffett, Chariton, Iowa	1.00
Mrs. Ona Smith, Pawnee, Mo.	2.00
Samuel Bierlein, Andover, Mo.	25.00
Wm. Gaultier, Independence, Mo., keep of child	50.00
Oelwein, Iowa, Branch, by John S. McQueen	3.25
Second Saint Joseph, Missouri, Branch, by F. R. Gist:
Sister C. Spillman	40
Joseph Moore, Jr.	10
Alberta-Phillips	03
John Moore	03
Jerold Phillips	12
Henry Pickeral	09
Edna Gore	15
Mabel Adair	14
Clarence Bear	12
Russell Gist	11
Mary S. Gobon	01
Henry Spillman	48
Charles Moore	07
Willie Landers	16
George Ehlers	25
Archie Schesan	08
Marie Spillman	10
Edna Meeks	14
Mame Rapp	13
F. R. Gist	37
John L. Bear	40
Amber Gobon	08
Margaret Bear	11
A. A. Richardson	51
Evens Ehlers	11
Ines Moore	09
Letha Gobon	11
Lucile Epler	16
Sister Phillips	35
I. N. Gore	61
Raymond Gore	13
August Ehlers	50
W. F. Hutchins	55
Fredric Moore	02
Mary Moore	06
Mary Bear	01
Fred Rapp	56
Unknown source	05

OTHER CONTRIBUTIONS.

May.
Mrs. Josephine Darling, Thorne, North Dakota, one box goods; Mrs. W. H. Haviland and Mrs. J. D. Russell, Salix, Iowa, one box goods; Mrs. Elizabeth Pickles, San Diego, California, teaspoons; Mrs. Jennie Barrows, Lamoni, Iowa, waist; Miss Laura Bell, Lamoni, Iowa, canned fruit; Mrs. Bradfield, Lamoni, Iowa, clothing; Mrs. Knapp, clothing; Mrs. Anna Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa, one calf, one pair rubber boots; Mrs. A. Mills, clothing; Brother Eben Miller, couch, chairs, hammock, books, toys; Nathan Weedmark, beans; Sister Alva Yarnington, clothing; Sister Lewis Gaylord, clothing.
June.
Woman's Auxiliary, Davenport, Iowa, by Ruby Cummings one box goods; Caroline Torrance, Maryville, Missouri, goods; Mrs. John Haas, Lake Park, Minnesota, box of clothing; Mrs. Abbott, Lamoni, Iowa, six quarts canned fruit; dried fruit; Mrs. Nellie Elvin, two boys' waists; Eben Miller, stockings; Sister Einkle, two rugs; Mrs. Carille, stockings; Mrs. A. M. Turnbull, clothing; Mrs. Strickland, lettuce, greens; Mrs. Stedman, one pair low shoes; Clara and Lena Lambert, clothing.
July.
Mrs. H. O. Smith, Independence, Missouri, goods; Sister Allen, one pair shoes; Ruth Allen, dolls and toys; Nellie Anderson, clothing; Robert Allen, tricycle; Mrs. A. H. Mills, Independence, Missouri, clothing; Mrs. Benjamin Sharp, Engleville, Missouri, clothing.

August.
Ladies' Aid Society, Oakland, California, clothing; Marie Riggs, Kansas City, Missouri, clothing; Mrs. Wolfe, Oberlin, Kansas, dry goods; Mrs. M. L. Jones, Unity, Oregon, mittens; Mrs. Norm. Montgomery and Mrs. Frank Montgomery, Jr., Soldiers Grove Wisconsin, box goods; Mrs. Dann, quilt; Mr. A. J. McKim, corn and beans; Grandma Bell, forty quarts canned fruit, Hubbard, five bushels plums; B. D. Fleet, shoes and new goods; Mrs. Richie, four cans jelly; Mrs. Anna Dancer, grapes and plums; Mrs. Nicholson, plums; Mrs. Stedman, tomatoes; Lamoni friends, watermelons; Mrs. Prall, grape butter; College Mite Society, by J. P. Garver, quilt.

September.
D. L. Palsgrove, Clinton, Iowa, box of wash sticks; Brother Ellison, watermelons, plums, tomatoes; Grandma Bell, tomatoes, grapes, plums; A friend, tomatoes; Brother Ellison, plums, melons; Mr. A. J. McKim, load melons; Mrs. T. Creveling, washed plums; Jacob Hicks, melons; D. C. Bohm, plums; Mrs. J. C. Danielson, caps, coats, etc.; Mrs. Anna Dancer, stockings, clothing, etc.

October.
Ladies' Aid, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, by Miss Anna Smith, one box of clothing; Mrs. Lydia Phipps, outing flannel; Mrs. Will Loper, apples and turnips; Mrs. Mahel Knaster, two coats; Mrs. John DeLong, load of apples.

November.
Mrs. B. D. Briggs, Nebraska City, Nebraska, quilts, towels, and wash rags; Ladies' Aid, of Buffalo, New York, by Mrs. Noble Wilkinson, quilt; Oliver Hayer, apples; C. W. Dillon, shoes, clothing; Sunshine Band, of Second Independence, Branch, by Mrs. Ben Anderson, two quilts, six undershirts; Mr. Silsbee, shoes; B. D. Fleet, caps; Mrs. Heman Smith, coat; Alfred Lovell, coats, clothing; Mr. Burch, handkerchiefs; Mite Society, clothing; C. Constance, Cameron, Missouri, forty-five quarts canned fruit, beans, rice; Oakland, California, box clothing; Mary H. Glenn, DeWay, Indiana, quilt boxes.

December.
Ladies' Aid, of Oakland, California, box of clothing; T. H. Hinderks, Stewartville, Missouri, box clothing; R. B. Constance, for Cameron, Missouri, Saints, fruit; Little Sioux, Iowa, Branch, by Charles Crab, fruit, pickles, jelly etc.; Rachel Bradish and Catherine Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia, box; A. C. Dempsey, Nevada, Missouri, box of candy, cards, and boxes; Outweir Sunshine Band, by S. McQueen, one box goods; Mrs. Carrie Holmes, one pair shoes; Mrs. Lysinger, clothing; Mrs. Mary Anway, doll; Denio Grocery Company, candy and nuts; B. D. Fleet, candy; P. A. Silsbee and C. E. Blair, candy, nuts, and oranges; Mr. McDonald, candy; Mr. Silsbee, Christmas bells and toys; Doctor Bertha A. Greer, Christmas boxes and cards; C. Carpenter, play blocks; Utills Club, ten handkerchiefs, eight pair pillow cases; Mrs. W. C. Hardy, Mrs. Alice Roseborg, and Mrs. Ed Shalley, Nevada, Iowa, comforter; Carrie Alhbart, Whittemore, Iowa, one pair blankets; Mrs. Lucy Pierce and Mrs. Mae Ackery, Kingson, Missouri, underwear; Sophia T. Day, Castana, Iowa, coats and new goods; Ladies' Aid of Holdenville, Oklahoma, quilts and clothing; Mrs. Mary Wright, Maquoketa, Iowa, four quilts; Sister William Richards and Sister William Lamb, Kewanee, Illinois, two quilts; Mrs. Leo Shupe, Hermiston, Oregon, stockings; Sister Emily Beebe, Council Bluffs, Iowa, fourteen pair new shoes; Kirtland Saints, by Mrs. George, forty handkerchiefs; Mrs. Walter Harpster, Audubon, Minnesota, new clothing; Second Primary Class, Union Band Sunday School, by E. Ferguson, Wilber, Nebraska, dolls, bean bags, and Christmas books; Wilber, Nebraska, three quilts, clothing, dolls; Unknown, California friend, bag prunes; Unknown friend, peanuts.

EXPENDITURES.
May.
R. Bullard, expense	8.50
Oscar Anderson, secretary supplies	6.00
W. P. Robinson, home expense	260.00
Joseph Roberts, freight and postage	2.52
June.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	150.00
July.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	105.00
August.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	115.00
E. H. Needham, moving house	40.00
C. M. Desart, moving house	15.75

Herald Publishing House, part payment on electric range	25.00
E. H. Needham, work on foundations	10.00
September.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	250.00
Barney Nelson, digging well	50.00
Herald Publishing House, balance on electric range	24.79
Mrs. Adelaide Hansen, school supplies	15.00
October.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	450.00
France Lumber Company, coal and building material	249.89
J. Lamb, work	5.00
Herald Publishing House, receipts and application blanks	6.50
J. Lamb, work	7.00
Treasurer, freight	1.24
Treasurer, stamps	3.00
Richard Bullard, traveling expense	8.50
Mrs. S. M. Boyer, clothing for Ada Bell	5.25
S. B. Delong, for board, by Joseph Roberts	2.75
C. Tallman, work, by Joseph Roberts	4.50
Fred Cousins, 66 bushel oats, by Joseph Roberts	20.05
Oscar Anderson, telephone message	.70
Adelaide Hansen, school supplies	10.00
November.
C. B. Woodstock, school supplies	3.00
W. P. Robinson, home expense	350.00
France Lumber Company, coal acct	182.20
Perry Mason-Company, Boston, Massachusetts, for Youth's Companion	2.00
C. J. Lester, freight on box for Home	2.40
Treasurer, express	.60
December.
W. P. Robinson, home expense	450.00
Treasurer, stamps	3.00
Lamoni Stake Bishopric, on purchase of house	175.00
C. E. Foreman, for filling silo	7.50
Lamoni Stake Bishopric, thirty-eight sacks of potatoes	52.70
Bertha A. Greer, on doctor bill	13.85
Loan	100.00
Balance on hand	705.72

COLLECTED BY WOMAN'S AUXILIARY from May 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913.

Letha M. Tilton, treasurer
Sister Hulmes, former treasurer	$ 48.80
Sister F. J. Ebeling, Willoughby, Ohio	7.10
Hattie J. Clark, Des Moines, Iowa, five-cent collection	2.25
Ethel McWilliams, College View, Nebraska, five-cent collection	7.00
Sister Babbitt, Stewartville, Missouri	50
M. Hawkins, Stewartville, Missouri	50
Cass River Branch, by Della Bates, Shalbona, Michigan	1.10
Mrs. Katie L. Hale, Tryon, Nebraska	30
Blanche E. Cline, Tryon, Nebraska	35
Ira Stoddard, Tryon, Nebraska	50
Mrs. M. Johnson, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Nellie Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	25
Mrs. E. A. Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Belle Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Bluebell Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	15
Wallace Woods, Tryon, Nebraska	10
John Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	05
Frank Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	05
Will Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	10
Gift Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	02
Jane Powell, Ravenwood, Missouri	2.50
Vina Powell, Ravenwood, Missouri	2.50
Sister M. A. Trotter, Monterey, Cal.	2.00
Sister A. S. Milgate, Sacramento, Cal.	3.00
Sarah L. Weed, Independence, Missouri, collections	20.20
Miss Emma Mather, secretary, Saint Louis, Missouri, auxiliary	5.00
Mrs. L. E. Long, Logan, Ohio	2.00
Inez Moldrup, Selling, Oklahoma	2.00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Mrs. C. A. Beebe, Council Bluffs, Iowa	25.00
Seattle, Washington, Woman's Auxiliary
Ellery, by Mrs. W. M. Emsley	4.15
Mamie B. Burton, Olive, California, five-cent collections	6.55
Woman's Auxiliary, Wabash, Ontario, Canada	3.00
Maggie Badder, Wabash, Ontario, Canada	1.00
Mabel Badder, Wabash, Ontario, Canada	25
Eunice Ross, Wabash, Ontario, Canada	26
Sister Sharron, Wabash, Ontario, Canada	19
Sister A. E. Kelley	50
Charlotte Kelley	20
Nettie Jargerson	25
Bella Jargerson	25
Marion Jargerson	25
Mrs. M. A. Trotter	25
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Mrs. W. T. Ferguson, Weiser, Idaho	5.00

Mary Scott, Spy Hill, Sask., Can.	4.00
Mrs. M. A. Peterson, Omaha, Nebraska, five-cent collection	6.25
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Ellen Tuttle, Harriette, Michigan	1.00
Mrs. P. B. Anderson	10.00
Miss Hanna K. Anderson	2.00
Mrs. J. D. Ruselle, Solix, Iowa	1.00
Sarah L. Weed, for Independence
Local
Martha Bailey Proctor, Seattle, Wash	50.00
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.30
Minnie B. Nicholson, stake collection	1.00
Woman's Auxiliary	11.00
W. A. and Ida M. Stoddard, Tryon, Nebraska	30
W. F. and Nellie I. Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	15
Frank and Belle Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	30
Bluebell Godfrey, Tryon, Nebraska	15
Florence E. West, Tryon, Nebraska	50
Minerva Johnson, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Emma Payne, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Alice H. Stoddard, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Nellie M. Stoddard, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Pearl A. Stoddard, Tryon, Nebraska	20
Mrs. H. Brunson, W. Brooklyn, Ill.	1.00
Sarah L. Weed, Independence, Mo.	14.64
Irene Emsley, Seattle, Washington	2.25
Minnie B. Nicholson, Lamoni Stake collection	8.10
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Minnie B. Nicholson, Lamoni Stake collection	14.05
Lyle Kapnick, Traverse City, Michigan, Branch	12.95
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Minnie B. Nicholson, Lamoni Stake collection	5.00
Minnie B. Nicholson, Lamoni Stake collection	10.60
Rosa Watrous, Montana	5.00
Irene Emsley, Seattle, Washington	2.00
Nella Revelle, Clinton, Missouri, Woman's Auxiliary	1.00
Emma B. Lewis, Osborn, Missouri	12.95
Irene Emsley, Seattle, Washington, Woman's Auxiliary	2.00
Minnie B. Nicholson, Joy, Illinois, Woman's Auxiliary	5.10
Mrs. J. A. Alburts, Portsmouth, Iowa	5.00
Sarah L. Weed, Independence, Mo.	14.50
Mrs. J. C. Frederick, Parkersburg, West Virginia	1.00
Mrs. M. A. Trotter, Monterey, Cal	50
Sister Nettie Jorgenson, Monterey, California	1.00
Irene Emsley, Seattle, Washington, Thanks Offering	4.55
Emma B. Lewis, Stewartville, Missouri, Branch, five-cent collection	3.95
Jane A. Brinnett, Twining, Mich.	1.00
Belle Randall, Downers Grove, Ill.	1.00
Fannie Versure, Downers Grove, Ill.	1.00
Ella Pett, Gallands Grove, Aid Society	4.10
Mamie Burton, Santa Ana, California, Branch	2.30
Sister M. Thomas, Woman's Auxiliary, Bevier, Missouri	20.20
Sister W. E. Gittens, Appleton, Wisconsin, Woman's Auxiliary	2.50
Sister P. W. Hughes, Chatham, Ontario, Canada, Woman's Auxiliary	2.30
Jennie Anderson, Weston, Iowa, Woman's Auxiliary	26.00

CHILDREN'S HOME ACCOUNT.

Receipts and Expenditures from Presiding Bishop's Office, From January 10, 1912, to January 10, 1913.
Receipts.
On hand January 10, 1912 (due Children's Home)	$ 959.70
Volney Glidden and wife, Michigan	1.00
Ell Epperly	.60
Martha Epperly	.60
Arthur Epperly	.60
New Westminster Sunday School, British Columbia	5.00
Oakland Sunday School	8.00
Oakland Religio	5.64
Oakland Branch	8.90
Henry A. and Alice A. Palmer	.50
Sister E. D. Parish, British Columbia	5.00
Eliza Foots, Maine	2.50
D. J. Morgan, Missouri	2.00
Clyde Smith, Oklahoma	3.00
Genevieve Smith, Oklahoma	1.00
B. L. Hendrickson, Idaho	1.00
Hannah Brown, California	2.50
Marie Hills, Ontario	10.00
Belle Harding, Kansas	2.00
Woman's Auxiliary, Missouri, Saint Louis, Oak Hill	15.00
Mrs. Agnes Frew, Nebraska	1.00
Refund on Hargrove account (silo)	2.46

Ladies' Mite Society, Saskatchewan	5.00
Bluff Creek Sunday School, Miss.	1.05
S. A. Rogers, Missouri	20.00
Mrs. A. J. Corbett, Michigan	1.00
Mrs. A. E. Currie, Montana	1.00
D. J. Morgan, Missouri	1.00
Mrs. Alice Tucker, Chapman, Texas	3.00
Melvin Heavener, Illinois	10.00
Dean S. Linnell, Massachusetts	1.00
Mrs. M. J. Corbett, Oklahoma	1.00
Ros. Deards, Nebraska	25.90
Alice P. Dancer, Iowa	7.50
Iris Williams, Missouri	2.00
John E. Nelson, Minnesota	1.00
Alice P. Dancer, Iowa	50.00
J. T. Jones, sen., Ill.	25.00
A. E. Davis, Kansas	1.00
John Cairns, Kansas	1.00
J. W. Barnett, Mo.	1.00
Alice M. Joslyn, Mich.	1.00
R. A. Burlingame, R. I.	5.00
S. M. Long, Ala.	10
Lucy V. Long, Ala.	15
Bessie J. Long, Ala.	10
Katie A. Long, Ala.	15
John T. Long, Ala.	15
W. M. Long, Ala.	15
Tommie M. Long, Ala.	10
George H. Long, Ala.	15
Alice V. Long, Ala.	10
John Amison, Ala.	15
Maudie Amison, Ala.	10
Maggie Franklin, Ala.	15
Charles Malone, Neb.	1.00
Mrs. M. J. Corbett, Mich.	1.00
Mrs. C. F. Holmes, Oregon	10.00
Mrs. L. O'Dell, Ont.	5.00
F. Woods, Calif.	10.00
Emile McLeod, N. Dak.	6.00
Louise E. Nunn, Mont.	10.00
C. A. Minor, and wife, Wash.	10.00
Scranton Mite Society, Kans.	5.00
Philip and J. C. Jolley, Ind.	1.00
W. R. Standefer, Tex.	1.00
Mrs. Jonah Skinner, Okla.	1.00
Port Elgin Sunday School, Ont.	10.00
Ernest A. Coe, Wisconsin	1.00
Willie Blington, Wis.	5.00
Fletcher Gance, Wis.	5.00
John E. Nelson, Minn.	10.00
Louise E. Nunn, Mont.	20.00
Laura I. Cook, Md.	2.00
Ordesa Holman, Me.	10.00
Curtis Randall, Kansas	5.00
Burlington S. S., Wash.	2.00
Laklew S. S., Sask.	16.30
F. C. Harvey, Kansas	1.00
Mrs. S. B. Kreibel, Ohio	4.00
Mary Shannon, Ontario	2.00
Scranton Mite Society, Kansas	5.00
Mrs. A. J. Myers, Mo.	2.00

1913

Lois G. Johnson, N. S.	15.00
J. H. Jackson, Nebr.	1.00
Mrs. J. H. Jackson, Nebr.	1.00
Mrs. Gray, Nebr.	.25
J. H. Nier, Nebr.	1.00
Joanna Anthony, Pa.	5.00
Ellen Johnson, Ill.	5.00
Ellen Hayer, Mo.	1.00
Zion's Hope Sunday School, Mo.	15.83
Armstrong Sunday School, Kansas	19.77
Lillie Jennings, Cal.	1.00
Scranton Branch, Kansas	3.00
Mrs. Wm. Kell, Nebr.	3.00
Wade Park Sunday School, Ohio	7.00
Mrs. R. M. Bradish, W. Va.	50
Mrs. R. M. Bradish, W. Va.	60
C. O. Wiltrames, W. Va.	25
Mrs. R. M. Bradish, W. Va.	50
Mary R. Hifton, W. Va.	1.00
Louise E. Nunn, Mont.	10.00
Wm. H. Harrison, Pa.	1.00
North Philadelphia Woman's Exchange, Pa.	10.00
Philadelphia Sunday School, Primary Department	5.80
Woman's Auxiliary, Philadelphia	30.00
M. C. Fisher, agent, Mass. Dist.	14.70
Unknown	11.00
Total	$1,527.55
Expenditures.
France Lumber Company	$ 467.81
W. P. Robinson, manager	200.00
Lamoni Hardware Company	217.44
Herald Publishing House,
electric bill	510.69
George Bowler, work	2.50
W. H. Clum	2.25
State Savings Bank, interest	210.00
White-Smith Furniture Co.	11.75
Smith Teale Company	39.00
H. C. Hargrove, note and interest (silo)	101.03
Telegram	25
Total	$ 1,870.62
Total receipts for year	$ 1,527.55
Balance due church	$ 352.07

Assets.
2 horses .....	$ 380.00
10 head cattle .....	300.00
5 head hogs .....	100.00
9 dozen chickens .....	63.00
Work harness .....	40.00
Farm implements .....	150.00
Hay .....	125.00
Corn and ensilage .....	280.00
Lawn mower, swings, child's wagons and sleds .....	22.00
Provisions .....	300.00
Reserve clothing .....	100.00
House furnishings .....	1,200.00
Cash in hands of treasurer .....	705.72

Cash in hands of W. P. Robinson .....	60.03
Real estate, vacant lots .....	2,500.00
Home place .....	12,400.00
Bills receivable .....	100.00
	$18,805.75
Liabilities.
Bills payable .....	$ 400.00
Due on real estate:
(A. Banta, March 15, 1913) .....	1,100.00
(Ethel Banta, March 15, 1913) .....	1,900.00
Interest .....	210.00
Due church as per Presiding Bishop .....	352.07
Net worth .....	14,843.68
	$18,805.75

SUMMARY REPORT OF CASH RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES.
From May 1, 1912, to January 1, 1913.
Receipts.
Balance on hand May 1, 1912 .....	$ 170.55
Donations from all sources .....	4,800.89
Earnings .....	406.02
	$5,377.46
Expenditures.
Office supplies .....	$ 25.23
Bills receivable .....	100.00
Interest .....	210.00
Improvements .....	540.54
Running expense .....	2,678.30
To Presiding Bishop's acct. ....	1,060.62
Balance ($705.72 less amount due church $352.07) .....	353.65
	$5,377.46

Miscellaneous Department

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG.—Conference met at Wheeling, West Virginia, February 22 and 23. R. C. Russell, Leon G. Burdick, and O. J. Tary in charge. Statistical reports received from Wheeling, Steubenville, Glen Easton, Fairview, and Pittsburg branches. Reports received from the following: Elders: R. C. Russell, Leon G. Burdick, L. D. Ullom, Charles Fry, O. J. Tary, J. A. Becker. The Twelfth Quorum of Priests, Kirtland Quorum of Elders, as well as a number of committees and the auxiliary organizations also reported. By unanimous choice it was decided to reinstate the fall conference, the time and place being left to the minister in charge and the district presidency. The body expressed a desire to have the fall meeting devoted to educational work. General church officers, Bishop Becker and counselors, bishop's agent, L. D. Ullom, and auditing committee of the bishop's accounts were sustained. Elections resulted as follows: L. F. P. Curry, president; O. J. Tary, first vice president; A. H. D. Edwards, second vice president; John Raisbeck, secretary-treasurer; John Ashton, member of the library board. Delegates to General Conference: J. A. Becker, Harry French, Ebenezer Miller, Leon G. Burdick, R. C. Russell, J. C. McConaughy. Preaching by R. C. Russell, J. A. Becker, Leon Burdick. Gifts were manifested during the sacrament service. John Raisbeck, secretary.

PORTLAND.—District conference convened at Portland, Oregon, February 22, 1913. President M. H. Cook in chair, assisted by William Johnson, of Seattle. R. E. Chapman was chosen secretary, and W. H. Barker as assistant. Addie Austin was chosen chorister; Gertrude Jones as organist. George Pearson and Harry Howell were appointed ushers. District president gave an interesting talk concerning the business of the occasion, and the general condition of the district. The privilege of the floor was granted visiting Saints from other districts. The statistical reports of Condon, Portland, Vancouver, and Hood River branches were read, showing membership of 402 in the district. Seventeen baptisms since our last report. Ministers reporting: Elders: M. H. Cook, N. T. Chapman, George M. Shipley, H. W. Chapman, A. Whorlow, W. H. Barker, N. E. Austin. Priests: H. A. Jones, R. E. Chapman, G. M. Appleman, W. W. Witherbe. Teachers: W. H. Livingston, W. J. Chapman, W. N. Russell. Deacons: George Pearson, C. E. Williams, Harry Howell, Joseph Larson, J. M. Volgamore. Bishop's agent's report: Total receipts, $2,133.18; paid out, $1,718.35; balance on hand, $414.83. By vote the Portland and Seattle and British Columbia districts are to hold their next reunion at Vancouver, Washington, August 18 to 27, 1913. The Portland district conference will meet at Vancouver, Washington, August 16 and 17, 1913, prior to the reunion. N. T. Chapman was chosen president of the district; N. E. Austin, vice president; R. E. Chapman, secretary; W. H. Russell, member of library board. Sixteen delegates to General Conference were chosen, those present to cast full vote, and in case of division, a majority and minority vote. Services held during conference were as follows: Preaching Saturday evening by L. P. Cox, of Centralia, Washington; Sunday school 9.45 Sunday morning. Preaching at 11 by William Johnson, of Seattle, Washington. Preaching at 8 by M. H. Cook. Prayer service at 2.30 in charge of H. W. Chapman and John Hartnell. A goodly portion of the Spirit was enjoyed by all. At the close of the Sunday evening service the report of the auditing committee of the bishop's agent's books was read and accepted. A vote of thanks was extended to the Portland Saints for their kindness and hospitality. R. E. Chapman, secretary.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.—The regular semiannual conference of the Northern Wisconsin District was held with the Frankfort Branch, at Porcupine, Wisconsin, February 15 and 16, 1913. We reflect on it as one of the spiritual feasts which gives strength to all. Sunday was appointed as a day of fasting and prayer in behalf of the afflicted, namely, W. A. McDowell, John McGinnis, and Sister Ganoce. Sacrament service at 2 was very spiritual, lasting for nearly three hours. The bishop's agent's report showed $949.62 received, against $551.77 last year. A gain of 33 members in the district does not indicate that we are standing still when we consider that many of the aged ones are passing over the river. The untiring efforts of our district president, A. L. Whiteaker, and a goodly number of our Sunday school officers are deserving of credit. Greater prospects are before us than ever before. The reunion buildings are to be completed for the next reunion, conference so instructing the building committee; also to see that sufficient funds are raised to do so. Please send remittances to Leroy Colbert, secretary of committee. Receipt will be sent to you at once. The foundations are completed now, and most of the material is on the grounds. The auditorium is to be 40 by 60 feet, the dining hall 24 by 40. Remember, it takes money to do this, even though all of the work is to be donated. The following delegates were elected to represent the district at General Conference: A. L. Whiteaker, Ivy Fisher, Rillie Moore, J. O. Dutton, S. E. Livingston, R. D. Davis, F. A. Smith, Brother and Sister Dennis, Mary Lee, Leroy Colbert, Leda Colbert, M. O. Shedd, J. W. Hooker, Lester Wildermuth, W. A. McDowell, P. L. Richardson, and William Livingston. The number present shall cast a full vote of the district and in case of a division to cast majority and minority vote. The conference adjourned to meet the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion. Leroy Colbert, secretary.

NEW YORK-PHILADELPHIA.—District met in conference at Scranton, Pennsylvania, March 1 and 2, 1913. At this conference the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Archibald D. Angus; counselors to the president, Walter W. Smith and Ephraim Squires; secretary, Herman N. Schwartz; treasurer, John Zimmermann, sr.; representative on the library board, Anna Zimmermann. The present bishopric, consisting of John Zimmermann, sr., and counselors, Archibald D. Angus and Benjamin R. McGuire, was sustained. Delegates to General Conference were chosen. Notable among the events during the conference was the dedication of the newly built Scranton church and the ordination of John R. Lentell to the office of elder. The completion of the church meant the realization of a hope long cherished by the Scranton Saints that they would sometime have a dedicated house of worship where they might gather and render service to the Lord. Great indeed was the rejoicing and gratitude manifested, and many were the prayers and testimonies of his mercies. The work of the past year was reviewed and plans were made for that to come. The district now includes six branches, containing almost eight hundred baptized members, and from the cheering reports that were received, it is hoped that before long another branch will be opened and the membership largely increased.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.—Conference convened at Bevier, Missouri, February 15, 1913, Peter Anderson, D. E. Tucker, and F. T. Mussell presiding. William C. Chapman and W. B. Richards secretaries. Bevier, Higbee, and Menefee branches reported. Elders: D. E. Tucker, F. T. Mussell, W. B. Richards, F. Lofty, William C. Chapman, F. O. DeLong, C. W. Miller, William Kelso, R. R. Jones. Priests: W. T. Ramsey, D. Edmunds, Ivor Surridge, G. W. Frye, and J. W. Dubose. Teachers: C. A. Brown, B. S. Tanner, Charles Edmunds, and S. S. Smith. Deacons: T. E. Perry. Bishop's agent and district treasurer reported. Their reports were audited and found correct. John Fassnacht was ordained an elder by Peter Anderson, D. E. Tucker, and F. T. Mussell. Delegates to General Conference: D. E. Tucker, Peter Anderson, J. W. Dubose, Ella Davis, W. B. Richards, Frank Loft, F. T. Mussell, C. W. Miller, F. M. Burch, Ed. E. Thomas. Adjourned to meet at call of district officers. William C. Chapman, secretary.

FREMONT.—District convened with the Shenandoah Branch, February 22, 1913, with President T. A. Hougas in charge. R. E. Pratt was chosen secretary pro tem, with R. J. Dunsdon as assistant. Motion prevailed that the chairman appoint a nominating committee to select delegates to the General Conference. N. L. Mortimore, Mary E. Pace, John Kemp, Roy Dunsdon, J. W. Dunningan, C. M. Roberts, T. A. Hougas were appointed. Motion that the district presidency preside over the conference prevailed. Lorena Leeka was chosen chorister. R. E. Pratt, Mrs. T. A. Hougas and J. F. Redfield were appointed to audit the bishop's agent's books. Branches reporting were: Henderson, 84; Glenwood, 64; Tabor, 64; Hamburg, 64; Bartlett, 40; Thurman, 204; Shenandoah, 112; Riverton, 53. Ministry reporting were: Elders: C. M. Roberts, F. Becksted, John Huston, J. C. Moore, W. E. Haden. Priests: James Claiborn, J. E. Claiborn, C. W. Forney, J. R. Wight. Deacon: William Eyer. Bishop's agent's report was read and adopted: Balance due church, December 31, 1911, $434.02; receipts to December 31, 1912, $4,457.38; total, $4,891.40. Expenditures, $4,690.00; balance due church, $201.40. Auditing committee reported agent's books to be correct. A petition for next conference was read from the Henderson Branch, and by motion was accepted, but the time was left to the presidency. John Huston was granted an elder's license. A recommendation was read from Shenandoah Branch, asking that the name of R. E. Pratt be presented to conference for ordination to office of elder. Recommendation was accepted and ordination ordered provided for. Motion prevailed to defer the matter of ordination of J. E. Claiborn. Moved to extend thanks to W. E. Haden for past labors in the district and to petition the appointing powers to return said brother to the Fremont District. Carried unanimously. Delegates to General Conference: Lorena Leeka, Jay Leeka, W. M. Leeka, J. F. Redfield, Lucy Redfield, Elvira Kindig, Ella Stewart, W. E. Haden, Wayne Richardson, M. W. Gaylord and wife, Mrs. James Dunsdon, James Comstock and wife, N. L. Mortimore, F. P. Becksted, Ella Walling, Mrs. E. E. Barbour, Lela Claiborn, J. E. Claiborn, Mamie Pace, Roxanna Blessing, T. A. Hougas and wife, Mrs. M. E. Hougas, Ethel I. Skank, Mary A. Newton, C. W. Forney. Those in attendance were empowered to cast a full vote, and in case of division to cast a majority and minority vote. Preaching at 8 p. m. by C. M. Roberts. A collection was taken at this meeting to defray district expenses, amounting to $4.76. Sunday school Sunday morning at 9.45 in charge of local officers. At 11 preaching by N. L. Mortimore; at 2.30 prayer service; at this service R. E. Pratt was ordained an elder by T. A. Hougas, J. B. Cline, N. L. Mortimore, and C. M. Roberts; at 7.30 preaching by T. A. Hougas. Motion prevailed that R. E. Pratt be granted an elder's license. Minutes of this conference were read and corrected. Benediction by N. L. Mortimore. R. E. Pratt, secretary pro tem.

MONTANA.—District convened at Bozeman, March 1, 10 a. m., President A. J. Moore was chosen to preside. T. L. Reese assistant secretary pro tem. G. W. Thorburn chorister with privilege of choosing his assistant. Reports of following branches read: Fairview, Warm Springs, Deer Lodge, Bozeman and Culbertson. Spiritual reports of following branches: Fairview, Gallatin, Bozeman, and Warm Springs. Report of A. J. Moore read. Elders reporting: S. M. Andes, A. J. Moore, John E. Eliason, Thomas Reese, Robert Newby, L. E. Hills, D. R. Baldwin, J. P. Wyckoff. Priests: Joseph M. Higgins, William J. Murray, A. S. Peterson. Deacon: Joseph Beck. Teacher: Jacob Staffanson. A communication was read from minister in charge, J. W. Rushton. Bishop's agent's and district treasurer's reports read and both referred to auditing committee composed of T. C. Kelley, G. W. Thorburn, J. A. Amend. Committee reported as finding reports correct. The committee appointed at last conference to visit certain Saints at Coyote, reported, but as the Saints asked for further time in the matter, the committee was continued. The rules of the district were taken up. Rule 2 was amended to read as follows: "The conferences of district will convene as follows: The annual conference on the Saturday before the first Sunday in June; and the semiannual conference on the Saturday before the first Sunday in December." Bozeman was selected for next conference. Following delegates were chosen to General Conference. Brother and Sister G. W. Thorburn, T. C. Kelley, F. H. Esgar, T. C. Kelley spoke Saturday and Sunday evenings; G. W. Thorburn Sunday forenoon. On Sunday at 2.30 prayer and sacrament service. This was well attended; two were confirmed, four administered to, and one baby blessed. A vote of thanks was extended to Bozeman Saints for kindness and hospitality. Maggie J. Reese, secretary.

Convention Minutes.

MONTANA.—District Sunday school convention convened at Bozeman, February 28, 1913, at 10 a. m. Assistant superintendent, G. W. Thorburn, was in the chair and elected to preside, also to act as chorister. Sister L. E. Hills chosen organist. Reports of the following schools were read: Deer Lodge, Evergreen, Warm Springs, Bozeman, Nile, Hilldale, and Reese Creek. On motion the Nile school was received as member of the district association. Treasurer's report read and approved: Balance on hand, $76.11. Motion prevailed that the association return to Warm Springs ten dollars paid to the treasurer through misunderstanding. Report of J. E. Eliason, librarian, accepted. Motion carried that the association donate ten dollars to the normal work. The bill of superintendent, S. A. Davis, for $2.52 was allowed. The following officers were elected for the coming year. Superintendent, Lizzie Rasmussen; assistant superintendent, Maggie Reese; secretary, William J. Murray; treasurer, T. L. Reese; librarian, J. E. Eliason. The following were elected delegates to the General Convention: Brother and Sister G. W. Thorburn, T. C. Kelley, F. H. Esgar, Rosa Watrous. In the evening an interesting program was given by the Bozeman Sunday school. Convention adjourned to meet at Bozeman, May 30, 1913, at 10 a. m. Maggie J. Reese, secretary.

Quorum Notices.

FIRST SEVENTY.

It is now the 15th of March, and reports from the following persons have not reached me: A. M. Baker, J. J. Cornish, William Davis, Fred B. Farr, John H. Hanson, John Harp, L. E. Hills, R. M. Maloney, W. E. Peak, A. B. Phillips, C. H. Rich, George M. Shippy, F. C. Smith, James M. Smith, S. K. Sorenson, O. B. Thomas, C. E. Willey and James E. Yates. Blanks were sent out to each one February 18, and several did not receive theirs. It may be that some of the above have sent me their report and I have not received it. If such be the case, please let me know at once by sending a duplicate report, or letting me know, so that I can send another blank. If you have not received the blank sent please let me know by first mail. I expect that I will receive the reports of the foreign missionaries before the time of our convening, but should have all the other reports in sooner.

Those who are not coming to the conference will please remit to me their quorum dues. On account of preparing the history of the Seventy this year, our expenses will be more than usual, and every one should do his part.

J. F. MINTUN.

Secretary of First Seventy.

TO THE OFFICIALS OF THE ELDERS' QUORUMS.

I have to-day sent out requests for a list of the names of the elders composing the quorums of which John A. Gardner, W. H. Smart, and J. F. Keir are presidents, and of which C. V. Clark, W. S. Hodson, A. L. Sanford, Frank Gray, W. R. Adams are secretaries. If there are any other elders' quorums not included in these eight above mentioned, please to send me a list of the names of the elders composing the same by first mail, addressing me at Lamoni, Iowa, care of C. Scott. These lists are for the use of the Presidents of the Seventy, and as we meet the 27th inst., we can not get these too soon for our use.

J. F. MINTUN,

Secretary of Presidents of Seventy.

DES MOINES, IOWA, March 19, 1913.

SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

We have sent report blanks to such addresses of the members of the quorum as have been furnished us, but have failed to receive reports from the following: O. H. Bailey, A. C. Barmore, C. H. Burr, C. E. Crumley, John Davis, J. C.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
 A Contrast in Expression - - - - - 297
 Religion in the Present Tense - - - - - 299
 Magazine Number of the HERALD - - - - - 300
 Questions and Answers - - - - - 301
 Acknowledgment - - - - - 301
 Notes and Comments - - - - - 301

ORIGINAL ARTICLES:
 Getting the Gospel before the People, by
 H. E. Moler - - - - - 302

OF GENERAL INTEREST:
 Confessions of a Quack - - - - - 303
 If Sleep Could Be Abolished - - - - - 305

LETTER DEPARTMENT - - - - - 306
 Marie Julie Adamson—R. W. Belcher—Violet Anderson—D. R. Jones—Miss Nora Warr—W. S. Bond—R. C. Russell—E. S. White—J. L. Rust—Nellie M. Martin—Extracts from Letters.

NEWS FROM MISSIONS - - - - - 309
 REPORT OF JOSEPH ROBERTS, TREASURER OF CHILDREN'S HOME - - - - - 310
 MISCELLANEOUS DEPARTMENT - - - - - 315

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Joseph Smith, Editor; Elbert A. Smith, Associate Editor; Israel A. Smith, Managing Editor.
 Published every Wednesday. Subscription price $1.50 per year in advance.
 When payment is made, the date on the margin always shows the time to which you have paid, or the time when your subscription expires.
 If not changed within a month after payment is made notify us.
 The paper will not be sent to persons who are six months in arrears, unless special arrangements are made.
 All articles, letters for publication, notices, etc., and communications concerning the same, should be addressed to "Editors Herald." All business letters should be addressed to Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and all remittances should be made payable to the same.
 All errors in the filling of orders or rendering of accounts should be reported immediately as receipts for money received are sent within two days after reaching the office.
 Marriage, death, and birth notices: Marriages, $1 per 100 words or fraction thereof. Deaths, 100 words free; above that number, 50 cents per 100 words or fraction thereof. Births, 40 cents per 75 words or fraction thereof. To insure prompt insertion, make remittance with notice.
 For advertising rates apply to the business department.
 Entered at post office, Lamoni, Iowa, as second-class mail matter.
 Subscription received for Zion's Ensign, also orders for all Ensign publications.

Farnfield, J. L. Goodrich, Frederick Gregory, W. H. Greenwood, J. T. Hackett, O. J. Hawn, C. G. Lewis, Daniel Macgregor, J. W. Peterson, R. O. Self, T. J. Sheldon, S. W. Simmons, and J. M. Stubbart. We would like a report from all. If you have not received a blank please notify the undersigned at once. Address me at Holden, Missouri, box 144, till April 1. After that, at Lamoni, Iowa, care C. Scott.
 H. E. MOLER, Secretary.

10.30-10.40, from the General Secretary, D. J. Krahl, Independence, Missouri.
 10.40-10.50, from the General Treasurer, John Smith, Lamoni, Iowa.
 10.50-11.30, Primary Department conference; Mrs. G. T. Griffiths, Columbus, Ohio, in charge. Questioning, ten minutes.
 11.40-11.55, "Teaching intermediates; obstacles, and how overcome," Mrs. F. B. Farr, Cameron, Missouri. Questioning, five minutes.
 Adjournment.

Request for Prayer.

Sister Roy N. Smith, Box 216, Burlington, Wisconsin, writes: "Roy N. Smith of Burlington requests the prayers of the Saints in his behalf, that if it be God's will he may regain his health and strength."

APRIL 4, AFTERNOON SESSION.

2.00-2.15, song service.
 2.15-2.40, business.
 2.40-3.20, Normal Department. "Training for service," Mrs. D. H. Blair, Kansas City, Missouri.
 3.20-3.35, "Interest in the class," Albert Carmichael, Lamoni, Iowa.
 3.35-4.20, Home Department conference, Mrs. E. S. McNichols, Atchison, Kansas, in charge.
 Intermission exercise.
 4.30-4.50, librarians' conference. E. H. Fisher, Winter Hill, Massachusetts, in charge.
 Questioning, five minutes.
 Adjournment.

Delegates to General Conference.

Delegates from the east, going to General Conference by way of Chicago, will leave Chicago at 6 p. m., April 1, arriving at Lamoni at 6.40 on the morning of the 2d. Delegates from Ohio will leave Cleveland at 7.35, April 1, going over the Lake Shore Railroad. If ten or more will travel together, party rates can be secured. Delegates wishing to join the party either at Cleveland or Chicago will please notify the undersigned, so that arrangements can be made for accommodations.
 J. A. BECKER.

APRIL 4, EVENING SESSION.

7.15-7.30, song service.
 7.30-7.45, "The school in its relationship to the pastor," G. E. Harrington, Independence, Missouri.
 Questioning, five minutes.
 7.50-8.05, "The school in its relationship to the missionary," F. B. Farr, Cameron, Missouri.
 Questioning, five minutes.
 8.15-8.45, address to normal graduates, J. W. Rushton, Independence, Missouri.

WILLOUGHBY, OHIO, R. F. D. 2.

Notices.

The president of each branch in the Nauvoo District will please send to me your quarterly report April 1.
 CHARLES E. HARPE.

LAMONI, IOWA, March 21, 1913.

APRIL 5, FORENOON SESSION.

9.45-10.00, song service.
 10.00-10.30, business.
 10.30-11.00, superintendents' conference, Superintendent Daniel Macgregor, in charge.
 11.00-11.20, from the Superintendency.
 11.20-11.35, "Handwork in the elementary grades," Anna Zimmermann, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
 Questioning, five minutes.
 11.40-11.55, "Stories and story telling," Mrs. Daniel Macgregor, Saint Clair, Michigan.
 Questioning, five minutes.

Correction.

In Brother F. R. Tubb's letter in the HERALD of March 12 appears a reference to "seventy-five immense meteors which flew over the city of Toronto on Sunday night, the 9th instant." This should have read "fifteen immense meteors," etc. The mistake occurred in reading Brother Tubb's writing.

APRIL 5, AFTERNOON SESSION.

2.00-2.15, song service.
 2.15-4.00, grand round table.
 4.00-4.15, "The principles of teaching," Lucie H. Sears, New Bedford, Massachusetts.
 Intermission exercise.
 4.20-5.00, election of officers. Unfinished business.

Convention Program.

The following program, subject to modifications and additions, will be presented at the General Sunday School Convention, Lamoni, Iowa, April 4 and 5, 1913.

APRIL 4, FORENOON SESSION.

9.00-9.45, social service, John Smith, Lamoni, Iowa, in charge. Intermission, fifteen minutes.
 10.00-10.20, song service, Hale W. Smith, Independence, Missouri, musical director.
 10.20-10.30, organization.

APRIL 5, EVENING SESSION.

- 7.00-7.15, song service.
- 7.15-7.30, "The school and its mission," J. W. Wight, Lamoni, Iowa.
- 7.30-7.45, demonstration of graded work; the old and the new.
- 7.45-8.00, "Junior methods and equipment," G. R. Wells, Lamoni, Iowa.
- Questioning, five minutes.
- 8.05-8.20, "Facts gleaned from the field of a field worker," Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Independence, Missouri.
- Intermission exercise.
- 8.25-8.40, "School work among the Lamanites," J. E. Yates, Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Resolution of Sympathy.

The following resolutions of sympathy were drafted by the Doctrine and Covenants class, of which Brother Gaulter was a member, and were adopted by the Star of Bethlehem Sunday School, of Lamoni, Iowa, at its regular session on March 16, 1913:

- "Inasmuch as death has again invaded our midst, and removed from our class and school our worthy brother, Lewis Gaulter, aged ninety-five years,
- "We, therefore, feel to express our sorrow for the loss thus sustained, and extend to his aged companion and children our sincere sympathy in this their hour of sorrow and trial.
- "Brother Gaulter was a devoted follower of Christ, a lover of the children of God, a faithful father, and an exemplary member of society, a lover of the Sunday school and of little children,
- "Therefore, we feel that he has indeed merited the great reward offered to the faithful, namely, to come forth in the resurrection of the just."

Resolutions of Condolence.

Whereas, God, the supreme ruler of the universe, has seen fit in his wisdom and love, to remove from our Sunday school, one of our buds of promise, Waitressa E. Quinley, therefore be it,

Resolved, That the Latter Day Saint Sunday school of Joplin, Missouri, extend their deepest sympathies to the family in this their hour of bereavement; and further,

Resolved, That we each try to show them the silver lining behind the dark cloud; and point them to the path that will reunite them with their loved one by and by.

Died.

CARLILE.—Infant daughter of Earl H. and Ina Carlile, was born March 12 and died March 15. It appeared to be a bright child, and parents and grandparents were gladdened at its birth, but for only a short time were they privileged to have it with them, death being caused from heart trouble. The bereaved ones found it hard to give up the little one, but comfort is found in the statement "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Services were held in church at Underwood. Sermon by J. A. Hansen, assisted by J. P. Carlile. Interment in Underwood cemetery.

SHIPPY.—At Saint Joseph, Missouri, March 12, 1913, of pneumonia, Joseph Ralph, infant son of Brother and Sister Silas Shippy, aged 5 months, and 1 day. A beautiful boy; it was sad that he had to go. Yet three children remain to bless the parents, and it is well. They came to Lamoni and held funeral service at the home of the grandparents, Brother and Sister S. D. Shippy; John Smith in charge, and sermon by H. A. Stebbins.

DOWNEY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, March 13, 1913, of erysipelas, Sister Rebecca J., wife of Brother J. E. Downey, aged 53 years, 10 months, and 5 days. She left ten children and three step-children, to all of whom she was a devoted and loving mother. She obeyed the gospel in 1894, baptized by Joseph Snively. Before death she called her husband and children to her and exhorted them to continually seek the Lord for his help and guidance, that they may live in honesty, virtue, and uprightness. Funeral service in charge of John Smith; sermon by H. A. Stebbins.

A New Edition of the Doctrine and Covenants

By order of General Conference a committee was appointed to correct all typographical errors, also Section 22 of the Doctrine and Covenants. This has been done and the book is now ready. It contains a valuable addition in the form of a new concordance. All the revelations up to date are included. You will need this edition.

Order

No. 94, cloth.....$ .65
 No. 95, full leather..... 1.00
 No. 96, imitation morocco, gilt edges.. 1.50
 No. 97, full morocco, flexible..... 2.50

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

A New Book of Sermons

The Gospel Messenger

BY ELDER J. S. ROTH

Everyone that knows Elder Roth—and many that do not—know that he is a very successful missionary and an excellent preacher. This book of his sermons—thirty-five of them—covers so wide a range of subjects and does it so thoroughly that you need it for your own information, and to lend to your investigating neighbor.

Elder Roth is always a preacher for the people; uses enough scripture to make his utterances authoritative, tells where to find it, yet doesn't tire the reader with too much monotony. Quotations and citations have been verified.

The autobiography of the author is a valuable feature of the book.

Through the generosity of Elder Roth we are enabled to offer this well-printed, nicely arranged, and well-bound book at the nominal sum of 75c. Order No. 248a.

Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa

Herald Publishing House

$100 Gold Bonds

Bearing Interest at Five Per Cent

Dated April 1, 1912, Due October 1, 1917.

Redeemable after due notice is given by the Herald Publishing House.

These bonds are offered to the purchaser at par.

The interest coupons call for payment semiannually—on April 1 and October 1.

Both principal and interest payable at the State Savings Bank of Lamoni, Iowa.

These bonds are backed by the very best of security, consisting of assets of $120,000.00, and afford the purchaser a chance to invest with perfect assurance as to the soundness of the investment.

Note Some of the Facts About Our Bonds

(a) They are of small denomination, thus enabling those of very moderate means to become purchasers.

(b) We ask no premium—your interest is clear.

(c) We have issued only 200 bonds—$20,000 worth—all of which goes toward payment of our debt incurred in adding improvements since the fire, and in adding other improvements.

Better Investigate This Proposition

Write for Further
Particulars

Makes Home Baking Easy

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

The only baking powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

NO ALUM, NO LIME PHOSPHATE

FREE BOOKS

By Emanuel Swedenborg,
 "Heaven and Hell," 624 pages;
 "Divine Providence," 605 pages;
 "Four Leading Doctrines," 593 pages;
 "Divine Love and Wisdom," 598 pages.
 Sent to any address on receipt of postage, 6 cents per book or 24 cents for the set.

THE AMERICAN SWEDENBORG
 PRINTING AND PUBLISHING SOCIETY
 3 W. 29th St., New York City.

A N INVITATION

You are most cordially invited to visit the CHURCH STORE when you are in Lamoni attending General Conference.

The Supply Store

E. L. KELLEY, Trustee

C. E. BLAIR, Manager
 13-1t

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. A new book by J. S. Roth—containing a series of sermons in which the Old Jerusalem Gospel is set forth in an entertaining manner. Bro. Roth has been a successful missionary. By reading these sermons you will readily see wherein was his success.
 No. 248a, cloth ..... 75

THE OLD JERUSALEM GOSPEL. This book by Elder Joseph Luff has become one of our best and widest known and read book. There is a reason for this. Get the book and read it and you will not need to have anyone tell you why.
 Order No. 248, cloth ..... 75

FARMERS STATE BANK

Lamoni, Iowa

Capital $25,000.00

Surplus $8,750.00

(Under State Supervision)

Five per cent interest paid on time deposits. Your deposit solicited.

FOR SALE

Variety Store in Lamoni good lively business. Address, 8-tf
 VARIETY STORE, Lamoni, Iowa.

BARGAINS.

A large list of nice homes for sale and rent, also farm land, easy terms. (Write for particulars.) JOHN ZAHND., Independence, Mo. 6-tf

A Nice House In Lamoni.

Just the home for an old couple, a newly married couple, or college students. Has four rooms and bath, city water, also good well, electric lights, furnace, cement basement, and walks. Almost the closest house in town to the college. Three blocks from stores and post office. Seven blocks from church. Price reasonable. Reason for selling, going to Canada. J. W. Peterson, Lamoni, Iowa. 12-5t*

40 Cows—50 Hogs—500 Chickens

Don't this sound good to you? Would you not like to locate on 480 acres of government land in Wyoming where you could keep that much stock and poultry the year around?

I can tell you how and where you can file on a 320-acre homestead for only the filing fee, $22.00, and then, if you have the money, you can buy an additional 160 acres of pasture land from the government at $1.25 per acre.

This new homestead law gives you title in 3 years; allowing 5 months absence each year; thus, an actual residence of 21 months is sufficient NOW to make proof, instead of 60 months as heretofore.

BIG HORN BASIN where you have 12 years to pay for the water right.

If you prefer, I can locate you on a government irrigated homestead in the If this appeals to you, write me quickly for map and particulars which kind of an entry you are interested in. I am employed by the Burlington Route and my services to you are free.

D. CLEM DEEVER, Immigration Agent
 Room 357 Q Bldg., Omaha, Nebraska

HOME IN LAMONI

A 10 room house with basement and furnace, 2 good wells, and cistern with pump in kitchen. Thirteen acres of land; 10 in pasture and 3 in orchard and small fruit, barn, carriage house, 3 poultry houses and yards. This place is located in the best residence part of town, 5 blocks from church and only 8 blocks from center of town.

For price and terms address. Box 67, Lamoni Iowa. 5-tf

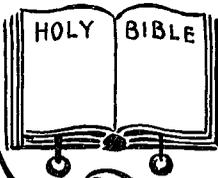

A GERMAN EDITION of a Marvelous Work and a Wonder. Just issued. Order No. 280b. Paper, 25c.

The Saints' Herald

Joseph Smith, the Martyr.

Of Joseph Smith it might be said, in the language of Walter Rauschenbusch concerning the oldtime prophets: "He went to school with a living God who was then at work in his world, and not with a God who had acted long ago and put it down in a book."

APRIL 2, 1913.

MAGAZINE
NUMBER

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE, LAMONI, IOWA.

The Unknown Grave.

Words by David H. and Elbert
A. Smith

Music by David H. Smith

Arranged by Audentia Anderson

Flowing.

1. There's an un - known grave in a green low - ly spot,
2. And near by its side does the wild rab - bit tread,
3. The heav - ens may weep and the thun - ders moan low,
4. The proph - et whose life was de - stroyed by his toes
5. The love all - em - brac - ing that nev - er can end,

The form that it cov - ers will ne'er be for - got.
While o - ver its bos - om the wild this - ties spread,
Or the bright sun - shine and the soft breezes blow,
Sleeps now where no hand may dis - turb his re - pose,
In death, as in life, knew him well as a friend,

Where ha - ven trees spread and the wild lo - custs wave
As if in their kind - nesses to guard and to save
Un - heed - ing the heart, once re - spons - ive and brave,
Till trump - ets of God drown the notes of the
The pow - er of Je - sus the might - y to save

Their frag - rant white blooms o'er the un - known grave,
From man's foot - step in - trud - ing the un - known grave,
Of the one who sleeps there in the un - known grave,
And we see him a - rise from his un - known grave,
Will de - spoil of its treas - ure the un - known grave,

rit e dim.

O - ver the un - known grave.
Guard - ing the un - known grave.
Low in an un - known grave.
God bless that un - known grave.
No more an un - known grave.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

Official Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints

Entered as second-class matter at Lamoni, Iowa, post office.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:31, 32.

"There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:36.

VOLUME 60

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 2, 1918

NUMBER 14

EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT

GREAT RELIGIOUS IDEAS ADVOCATED BY JOSEPH SMITH.

It will be remembered that Joseph Smith was in his fifteenth year when his first vision was received, early in the spring of 1820. His second vision came three years later. Contrast the importance, magnitude, and startling originality of the ideas contained in these visions, or growing out of them, with the youth, inexperience, and alleged ignorance of the boy who received them.

The first of these to which we will refer was that of renewed revelation. The religious world was a unit in teaching the idea that revelation had ended long centuries before, when John saw the closing scenes of his wonderful vision on Patmos. No other idea was dreamed of or suggested.

Yet like a flash out of the sky came to this boy the unique, dramatic, startling idea, of renewed revelation—God speaking again to men, angels coming to earth again, just as in all past ages when God had prophets on earth.

How many boys fifteen years of age are thinking such thoughts? How many can grasp an idea of such magnitude, and so adverse to the settled convictions of the world?

And how well this idea was unfolded! Had his revelations when presented been of such character as one would expect from an unlettered, backwoods boy, they need not have caused anyone a moment's anxiety. But this boy was able to bring forth revelations that agitated the whole religious world; that set every existing denomination of the old order against him; revelations that were in fact far beyond his power to conceive of himself.

Here was one, who, as Walter Rauschenbusch says of the ancient prophets: "Went to school with a living God who was then at work in his world, and not with a God who had acted long ago and put it down in a book."—Christianity and the Social Crisis, p. 23.

BIG IDEA NUMBER TWO.

The next great idea was that of the Book of Mormon. Robert G. Ingersoll said that the Christian God was ignorant of the existence of America until

Photo by Elder H. O. Smith.

SCENE OF THE FIRST VISION.

Scene in the forest where Joseph Smith retired to pray, early in the spring of 1820. This is said to be the tree under which he was when the vision was received. Elders F. A. Smith and H. O. Smith are shown in the foreground.

Columbus told him of it. The Book of Mormon challenges that idea. Here was a boy who conceived the idea of producing a book that would give a history of the peoples and races that inhabited the continents of North and South America during all the dim ages of the past. This book was to set forth the remarkable fact that God knew of these people, and that Jesus visited them and told them the story of the cross. It was to be revealed by the hands of an angel, and to be translated by the power of God. What a unique conception! (For convenience of expression we say that Joseph Smith conceived these ideas. Our position on that point will appear later.)

How well this idea was executed! When his book appeared had it been a weak, ephemeral thing; as we might expect it to be, coming from the hand of whom the book tells have been discovered in the exact regions where the Book of Mormon story placed them. And early Spanish explorers, to their surprise, found in South America the cross as a sacred emblem, mute testimony of the truth of the statement that Jesus came to the Western World and told those people the story of the cross.

BIG IDEA NUMBER THREE.

The twelfth chapter of the first Corinthian letter, and the fourth chapter of Ephesians state as plainly as anything can be stated that God set in his church, apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. Other officers, such as bishops, elders, deacons, etc., are mentioned in other places as a part of the New Testament church. There were churches, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, with elders, and some with pastors, and some with deacons, and others with evangelists. But nowhere was one with all of the officers that God set in his church.

But this young man conceived the daring idea of organizing a church that should contain all of the God-appointed officers. Among the many church builders, he alone proposed to build after the original pattern.

How well his plan was carried out! When they met to organize the church, on the sixth day of April, 1830, there were only six members present,—only half enough to fill the quorum of twelve apostles, which was to be a part of the proposed church structure.

It did not seem probable that one with the limited influence and resources that Joseph Smith then had would ever convert enough men to fill his proposed offices.

But Jesus said that he would "draw" men unto him. Jesus was in this movement, and presently his drawing power demonstrated itself. Men came, one from here, another from yonder, by ones and twos, by scores and hundreds, and as God designated them, they were ordained and set in order, until the organization was complete, with its prophets, apostles, seventies, bishops, evangelists, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, "all as at the first." Every officer mentioned in the New Testament as a part of the

Photo by Elder H. O. Smith.

OLD HOME OF JOSEPH SMITH.

Southwest view of the home of Joseph Smith at time of the angel's visit to him, September 21, 1823. The window marked X is supposed to be in the room where this visitation occurred.

an uneducated, backwoods boy, nearly one hundred years ago, no one need have given it a second thought. It would have died of its own futility. It would have fallen of its own weakness.

The fact that the brightest and brainiest men of nearly all denominations have given their brains and their time and their money in a united crusade against it, and societies have been formed to combat it, and learned men of no religious persuasion have attacked it is evidence that it contained a surprising force and virility. Otherwise these men pay themselves a poor compliment, if they are to allege that they have found it necessary to unite their genius and money in a war against a weak and empty sham. Men do not go out with a cannon to hunt a mouse.

Strangely enough, archæology has come to the aid of the book, and the ruined cities of those people of church, was in his place and at work. The great idea had taken concrete shape, as foreshadowed in the vision where it was said that God was about to do a wonderful work.

And to-day anyone who cares to attend the General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints may see a living reproduction of the old Jerusalem church. Standing in the midst of the assembly, he may look about and see the quorum of twelve apostles, the quorums of seventy, the bishops, the order of evangelists, the elders, the quorums of priests, teachers, and deacons, the pastors,—in fact not one officer of the New Testament church can be mentioned that he will not see occupying in his proper place. This is the concrete result of that which we have termed "big idea number three." Its size and importance justify the appellation.

A SCRIPTURAL SYSTEM OF BELIEF.

Many efforts have been made to formulate a satisfactory creed or confession of faith. Resultant creeds have always been inadequate, and time has demonstrated the need of revision; so that when the Lord told Joseph Smith that all the creeds were wrong, he stated a fact that time has demonstrated.

All of this labored creed-drafting is superfluous. In the sixth chapter of Hebrews there is a divinely stated system of belief. Paul, a special, chosen ambassador of Christ, states the principles of the doctrine of Christ as he learned them from Jesus Christ himself. He says that the principles of the doctrine are faith in God, repentance from dead works, baptisms, the laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and the eternal judgment.

Here we have six cardinal principles, based on the existence of God and the Messiahship of Jesus Christ, that are simple, yet all inclusive. They take a man from the very dawn of faith, up through the ashes of repentance, baptism in water, the baptism of the Holy Ghost through the laying on of hands of God's ministry, and on through the resurrection, right into the presence of God in the great judgment. They cover the whole Christian experience.

There it was as clear as crystal, waiting through all the Dark Ages for some church builder to adopt it as a confession of faith, yet all had overlooked it.

Joseph Smith, with an idea bigger and better than any that had come to any creed-maker, cut the Gordian knot of all creed-making perplexities, and adopted this God-given statement of faith as his system of belief.

THE BLESSINGS OF PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY.

Associated with these teachings he conceived the idea that the church of to-day should enjoy the blessings of old, healings, miracles, prophecies, tongues, and all the great manifestations mentioned in Mark 16, 1 Corinthians 12, and many other places, as a part of the divine system.

This was a startling innovation in an age in which nearly all religious teachers of every cult were agreed that such things were to be enjoyed no more.

Yet how well the idea succeeded. Scarcely was the church organized before men and women began to prophesy, and speak in tongues; and the sick were healed. And that has continued. Probably seventy-

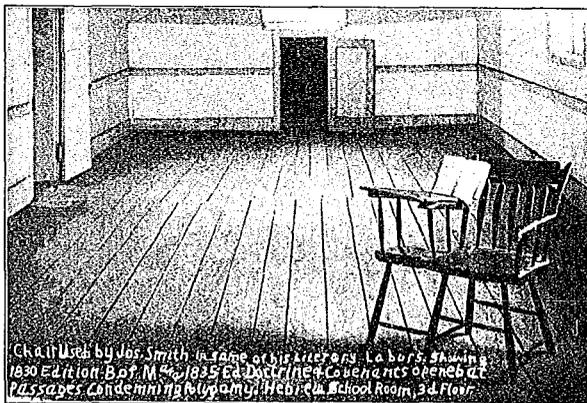

Photo by C. Ed. Miller.

AN INTERESTING RELIC.

Scene from room in third story Kirtland Temple, where the class met to study the Hebrew language. Chair owned by Joseph Smith the Martyr and used in his literary work. 1830 edition Book of Mormon and 1835 edition Doctrine and Covenants open at passages condemning polygamy.

five per cent (perhaps more) of the members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to-day can testify that at some time they have been healed or have seen others healed. And some of these testimonies are of a very remarkable nature.

Since that day great cults have sprung into existence, teaching divine healing. It was a big and a brilliant idea that came into the mind of this youth, anticipating them all, and including divine healing in his program, thus squaring himself with scriptural teaching on another important point.

THE PRIESTHOOD RESTORED.

Priesthood was a clearly defined institution in both the Mosaic Church and the Christian Church. Men did not act without authority in heavenly things. They were duly called of God and regularly ordained by those having the priesthood. Thus authority went down from man to man until lost by reason of sin or apostasy.

How is it with the popular churches of to-day? The Protestant churches unite in condemning the Catholic Church as an apostate organization, yet if the ministers of any one of the Protestant churches attempt to trace their priesthood back, it will lead them, sooner or later, to the Catholic clergy.

So, to avoid this issue, if such clergyman is asked concerning his authority, the chances are that he will quote the injunction: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

But men do not get authority, they do not get priesthood, by reading a passage of scripture. As well claim a seat in the United States Senate by reason of having read in the Constitution that certain men should occupy there. Priesthood presupposes a call from God, and also a valid ordination.

"Ye have not chosen me," says Jesus, "but I have chosen you, and ordained you." (John 15:16.) And when certain men who had not been so called and ordained, attempted to perform priestly funcwhat similar manner, they received the Melchisedec priesthood.

So to-day any elder of this church who cares to do so may trace his priesthood back to a satisfactory source. One may say: "I received my ordination under the hands of Alexander H. Smith, who received his under the hands of President Joseph Smith, who was ordained by William Marks and others, who received their priesthood under the administration of Joseph the Martyr, who received his priesthood by angelic ministrations from God himself. This line of succession is presented as an illustration, and not as an exact line of succession in any individual case; the various elders of the church may trace their authority back in that way.

But if any clergyman in any other denomination of which we have knowledge endeavors to trace his priesthood back in a similar way, he will run it to earth sooner or later in the Catholic Church. It can not be traced back to a satisfactory source. John Wesley frankly admitted that fact, and when his authority was challenged, referred to his ordination under the hands of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who of course traced his priesthood right back into the Catholic hierarchy.

The only logical alternative is restored priesthood, and that is not claimed by any other people, so far as we are aware. This idea of restored priesthood is profound and startling. Compare it with the youth and theological inexperience of the one who announced it.

MRS. EMMA HALE SMITH.

This is taken from an old oil painting. She is shown holding her youngest son, David, who was born after the death of his father.

tions, the devils themselves mocked them, saying: "Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?" (Acts 19:15.) The Devil still laughs at a self-appointed ministry.

If priesthood can not be traced back by succession to the apostles, it can be had only by restoration. This is inexorable logic. There is no escape.

The great idea came to Joseph Smith to present a divinely restored priesthood. On the fifteenth day of May, 1829, a heavenly messenger by commandment of God visited Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery and conferred upon them the Aaronic priesthood. By his commandment they then baptized each other, and also ordained each other, thus respecting the two elements that figure in every ordination—the divine and the human. At a later date, in a some-

THE INSPIRED VERSION OF THE BIBLE.

Two other ideas we desire to mention, that appeared early in the ministry of Joseph Smith, though possibly not directly announced in the visions to which we have referred. The first of these was a divinely corrected Bible.

The King James Version of the Bible comes to us as the result of many translations. It comes to us from sources originally in the custody of the Romish clergy, through dark ages of corruption. No original manuscript is in existence. It is not surprising then that there are mistranslations and evident omissions, interpolations, and contradictions. Thousands of dollars have been expended, and vast research undertaken in the effort to secure correct renditions of the text.

King James in his time authorized this translation that has been so widely accepted. Later came the "Revised Version." The Catholics have a translation. Alexander Campbell tried his hand at correcting the Scriptures. We have been informed of late that the Baptists have gotten out a new version. Many others have translated the Scriptures in an effort to correct some obvious errors.

To Joseph Smith came the idea that it would be possible for the God who gave the Scriptures to correct some of the evident errors that have crept in. The Inspired Version resulted. It rests on its own merits. Here is one rendition among hundreds that might be cited: In the King James Version Jesus is made to say:

"All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers."—John 10: 8.

What a terrible arraignment of Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, John the Baptist, and all who came before Christ. If you believe Jesus, then throw away the writings of these other men. But the Inspired Version comes to our rescue with this rendition.

"All that ever came before me who testified not of me are thieves and robbers."

There were many false prophets who testified not of Jesus,—they were thieves and robbers; but not so Moses, Elias, John the Baptist, and all the bright galaxy of those who foretold the coming of Jesus.

If it were possible to present this version of the Bible as the work of some learned society, one might make a splendid salary selling this book to preachers, on its merits alone. If they did not know its origin they would be delighted with its clarification of old difficulties.

THE EIGHTH BIG IDEA.

The last great idea that we mention is that of Zion as a gathering place. The Scriptures are replete with predictions of a time of destruction, war, and pestilence that shall precede the second coming of Christ. Jesus himself says that when we shall see these things we shall pray that we may be accounted worthy to escape them (Luke 21: 36). Escape! How? Where? Modern theology is silent.

Into the brain of Joseph Smith came the idea of a gathering place, a Zion, where the people of God should be preserved from these calamities. Moreover, this was to be a place of equality and social justice, thus foreseeing in a way the present almost universal unrest due to social and economic injustice and the unjust division and distribution of wealth, with resulting class hatred and warfare.

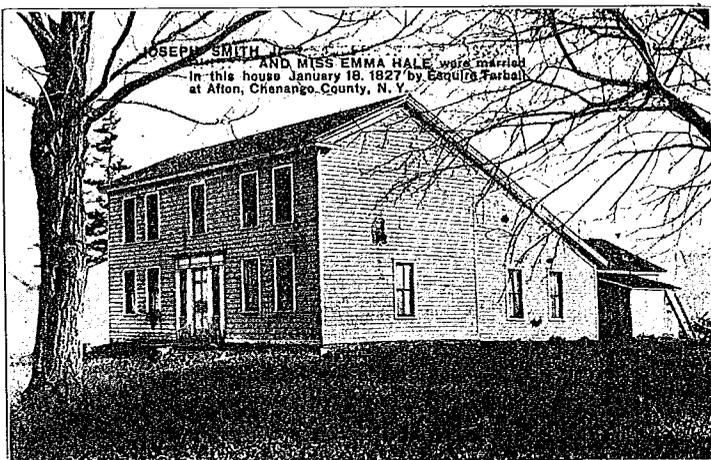

That idea is still in process of development. It was a great big idea for the brain of an obscure, inexperienced young man to grasp and hold.

THE IDEAS AND THE FOLLOWING.

When we consider the youth, inexperience, and obscure station of Joseph Smith, as a boy and young man, and then reflect upon the magnitude, dignity, and far-reaching importance of these ideas, and others that he projected into the religious arena, we perceive that every attempt to account for Joseph Smith and his work from the usual standpoint must fail. He is a conundrum. He is a riddle. There is a superhuman element enters in here somewhere. The world can not explain Joseph Smith.

Men have tried to account for him on the theory that these ideas were suggested to him by some very able men among his followers. Unfortunately for this theory, these ideas were either announced in his visions and revelations, or were foreshadowed, before he had followers. He did not get his ideas from his followers; he secured followers because of the bigness and character of his ideas. Sidney Rigdon, in particular, has been pointed out as a power behind the throne. But it is a fact that Sidney Rigdon never heard of Joseph Smith until after these visions were given, the Book of Mormon in print, and the church organized. This fact is susceptible of positive proof.

Home of Squire Tarbell, where Joseph Smith and Emma Hale were married.

Other churches have been built up on a single one of these great ideas. Christian Science came into existence later, based almost entirely on the idea of divine healing; the same is true of "The Emanuel Movement." Dowie started first with the healing idea, and later adopted the Zion idea. The gift of unknown tongues alone has furnished pretext for considerable religious movements. The second coming of Christ has been the main feature of others. But this lonely, unlettered lad in a then undeveloped country, without theological training, without a body of religious associates and advisors at the beginning of his work, grasped all of these big ideas in advance of these other men and women, and developed them to a splendid fruition, so far as they could be developed in his time.

The truth is that in this work we see the "moving hand of God." For convenience of expression we have said that Joseph Smith conceived these big ideas. The truth is that they were given him by divine revelation. They took form in his brain first among men; but the inspiration came from God. The world can not explain the remarkable man, Joseph Smith, but when we accept his own account of

CONFERENCE ITEMS.

Brother H. N. Hansen writes from New York City under date of March 21, stating that he and Sister Hansen had arrived safely after a somewhat rough voyage during which most of the passengers suffered considerably from sickness. He and wife withstood the trip without inconvenience.

President Joseph Smith has not been in good health for some time and according to latest report he does not contemplate coming to General Conference. The Saints generally are hopeful that he may be permitted to be present.

According to late advices from Omaha, where so much damage and loss of life resulted from tornado on last Sunday (23d) none of our church people were seriously injured, though some of them suffered loss of property. The church building was almost in the path of the storm, but came through with little damage.

The Quorum of Twelve have been in session for a week. The Council of Seventies is in session, conference and convention delegates and missionaries are arriving, and ere this HERALD reaches our readers the conventions will be under way.

Associate Editor E. A. Smith has returned to Lamoni with his family to occupy their home here, after fifteen months' sojourn with the Saints of southern California. The Lamoni Saints are glad to have them back in their midst.

The Lamoni Branch has made arrangements for the coming increased choir work, and the Saints are expecting great things from the efforts during the year of Brother A. N. Hoxie, jr., who has given evidence of great enthusiasm and ability as an organizer and leader.

From an old oil painting.

Emma Smith, wife of Joseph Smith, the Martyr.

how he obtained these great ideas, and read and believe his story of the heavenly visions granted to him, all becomes clear as the white light of heaven.

Here was one who communed with God. Here was one who restored the present tense to religious terminology. Here was one who taught his followers to sing:

"The Spirit of God like a fire is burning;
The latter day glory begins to come forth;
The visions and blessings of old are returning;
The angels are coming to visit the earth."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

The Church Recorder will report total baptisms at three thousand three hundred and seventy-five (3,375), and a net gain for the year of two thousand six hundred eighty-two (2,682). These figures place the total membership of the church over sixty-eight thousand. This represents a gain over that of last year and a good, substantial growth. The Recorder's report may show slight changes from these figures.

AUTOGRAPH LETTERS FROM JOSEPH SMITH TO HIS WIFE EMMA.

Carthage Jail, Jun. 29th 1844,
20. Post S. P. M.

Dear Emma:-

The Gov. continues his courtesies, and permits us to see our friends. We hear this morning that the Governor will not go down with his troops to day, <sup>(to day)</sup> as was anticipated last evening, but if he does come down with his troops you will be protected. I want you to tell Bro Dunham to instruct the people to stay at home and attend to their own business, and let there be no groups or gathering together unless by permission of the Gov. they are called together to receive communications from the Gov. which would please our people. but let the Gov. direct. — Bro Dunham of course, will obey the orders of the Government officers, and render them the assistance they require. There is no danger of any "exterminatory order"

Should there be a mutiny among the troops, (which we do not anticipate. excitement is shooting,) a part will remain loyal, and stand for the defense of the state & our rights. There is one principle which is eternal; it is the duty of all men to protect their lives, ~~from every~~ <sup>necessity</sup> and the lives of their households whenever ~~occasion~~ <sup>necessity</sup> requires, and no power has a right to forbid it.

Should this last extreme arrive, — but I anticipate no such extreme, — but caution is the parent of safety. —

Joseph Smith

P.S. Dear Emma,

I am very much resigned to my lot, knowing I am justified and have done the best that could be done. Give my love to the children and all my Friends, Mr Brower and all who in after inquire after me; and as for Treason

 I know that I have not committed any and they cannot prove one appearance of any thing of the kind, so you need not have any fears that any harm can happen to us on that score. may God bless you all. Amen.
 Joseph Smith

P. S. To me to 10 - I just heard that the Governor is about to disband his troops, all but a guard to protect us and the people, and come himself to Nauvoo and deliver a speech to the people. This is right, as I supposed.

It will be noted that the first of these letters was written from Carthage jail just before the awful tragedy that closed the earth life of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. In this letter the Saints were cautioned to obey the law, submit to the governor of the State, and remain quiet and orderly. Only in the last extremity were they to attempt to defend their lives and the lives of their families. In this, probably the last letter that he ever wrote, penned on the very day of his death, to the well-beloved wife of his bosom, we perceive the calm resignation and assurance of a man who feels that he has done right and that he is justified before God and man.

The second letter was written from the jail in Richmond, Missouri, where, like Paul of old, Joseph Smith and his associates were confined because of the unreasoning religious hatred and bigotry of their enemies. Here they were kept in chains until removed to Liberty Jail.

With varied emotions one reads this letter, revealing the sufferings of this innocent man, his homesick longing for home and family, yet a determination to continue his work and be true to his mission, come what might.

These letters are reprinted from zinc etchings which exactly reproduce the originals, which are now in the office of the First Presidency of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the work of securing the reproductions having been attended to under the oversight of President Frederick M. Smith.

November 12th 1838 Richmond
My Dear Emma,

we are prisoners
in chains, and under strong guards, for Christ's sake and for no other cause, although there has been things that were unknown to us, and altogether beyond our control, that might seem to them to be a protest, for them to persecute us;
but on examination, I think that the authorities, will discover our innocence and set us free; but if this blessing cannot be obtained, I have this consolation that

I am an innocent man, let what will befall me, I received your letter, which I read over and over again, it was a sweet morsel to me. Oh God grant that I may have the privilege of seeing once more my lovely family, in the enjoyment of the sweets of liberty, and social life; to press them to my bosom and, kissing their lovely cheeks would fill my heart with unspeakable gratitude. Tell the children that I am alive and trust I shall come and see them before long. Comfort their hearts all you can, and try to be comforted yourself, all you can; there is no possible danger, but what we shall be set at liberty, if justice can be <sup>and only</sup> done, that you know as well as myself, the trial will begin to-day for some of us, Lawyer Rice, and we expect Doniphan will plead our cause, we could <sup>not</sup> find no others, in time for the trial, they are able men and, do well no doubt. Brother Robison is chained next to me, he has a true heart and a firm mind; Brother Wright, is next; Bro.
Raydon, next; Snyman, next; Parly, next;
Amasa, next; and thus we are bound together in chains, as well as the cords of everlasting love, we are in good spirits, and rejoice that we are counted worthy to be per-

-sented for Christ. So I tell little Joseph, my must be good boy; Father loves him with a per-fect love, he is the eldest must not hurt those that <sup>come</sup> smaller than he, but comfort them, tell little Dunderick, Father loves him, with all his heart; he is a lovely boy.

Julia is a lovely little girl; I love her also she is a promising child; tell her, Father wants her to remember him, and be a good girl till all the rest that I think of them and pray for them all. Ben Rabbit is waiting to carry our letters for us. ~~the~~ Colonel is <sup>now</sup> inspecting them.
Therefore my time is short. ~~the~~ little baby
Elexander is on my mind continually.

Oh my affectionate Emma, I want you to remember that I am true and faithful friends to you; and the children, forever, my heart is entwined around you forever and ever; Oh, may God bless you all;
amen. you I am your husband, and am in bands and tribulation &c

to Emma Smith } Joseph Smith Jr

I will write as often as you can, and if possible come and see me; and bring the children if possible, Act according to your own feelings, <sup>and</sup> best judgment, and endeavour to be comforted, if possible,
and I trust that all will turn out for the best. I yours, J. S.

ORIGINAL ARTICLES.

CHARACTER SKETCHES OF JOSEPH SMITH THE MARTYR.

PHRENOGRAPH BY PROFESSOR HUGH CAMPBELL.

The following character sketch was secured from Bishop R. C. Evans. It was made by Professor Hugh Campbell, of Toronto, Canada. The facts, as given by Brother Evans, are as follows: Brother Evans secured a photograph of the steel engraving of Joseph the Martyr, found in Tullidge's History, which engraving was made from an oil painting of the Prophet now in the possession of his son Joseph. Elder Frederick Gregory took the photograph to Professor Campbell, and he made the following reading, before being informed as to the identity of the person whose photograph he was studying:

If the picture is true, and not flattering, as steel engravings often appear to be, the person must have possessed much more than ordinary mental power and brilliancy. The perceptive faculties are very prominently marked. Ready cognizance of facts; scholarly talent; retentive memory and brilliant descriptive power; are qualities for which he should be distinguished. The head shows breadth enough to give much energy and force of character. Opportunity; education; and circumstances might make of him an orator and statesman.

He possessed wonderful persuasive power; such an one could lead, influence, and impress the minds of others. He has much character; a high-wrought organization; fine quality; can be extremely tender; gentle; kind; and affectionate; or stern; according to circumstances, but the natural leanings are much in the direction of the good and the true. If such a nature is redeemed and devoted to the service of the truth, the good results would be far-reaching. Only the worst of circumstances, with treachery on the part of those he has trusted, could make him a bad man.

At the age when this picture was taken, the lines in the face are not so deeply marked as to show clearly the direction given to the faculties. Such a one requires only favoring environment to become a remarkable man and a power for good. If good, then very good, and brilliant; for he is highly gifted mentally. He possesses wonderful social magnetism and is able to make his influence extensively felt. He resembles his mother and possesses much of her intuitions and instincts. The musical faculty is not easy to read in a picture; so far as can be seen, it should be of a high order, and his tastes are decidedly literary and artistic.

PHRENOGRAPH BY SAMUEL R. WELLS.

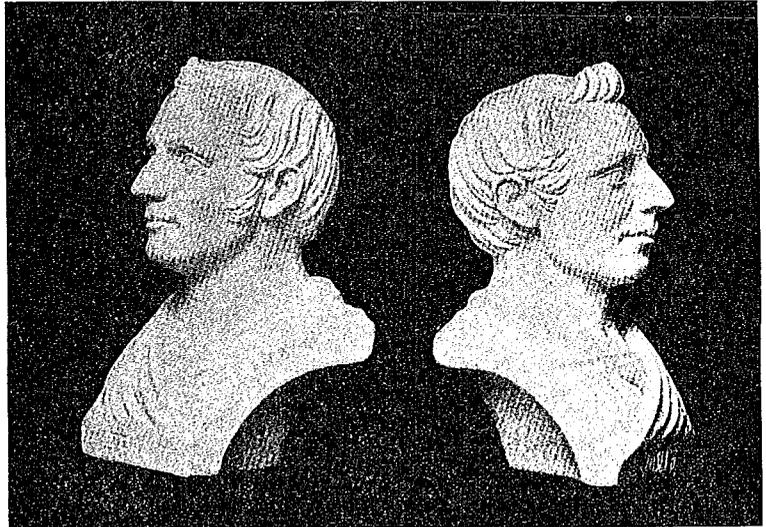

The following is an extract from a lengthy character sketch of Joseph Smith found in the American

Phrenologist for November, 1866, published in New York, by Fowler and Wells. The article evidently is by the editor, Mr. Samuel R. Wells:

The metaphysical Hamlet has well said—

“There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.”

Without bringing into our calculation much of supernatural agencies, there is much of the subtle agencies and methods of man's own wonderful being that none of us can perfectly trace or comprehend. Yet we see them manifested, and they lead us into a labyrinth if we follow them. Surely man is fearfully and wonderfully made; and these men of seer natures are problems that require much examination and revision of our judgments from time to time. Oftentimes we dare neither believe in them nor pass them lightly by. They would throw our practical judgment into anarchy; and even of the Hebrew prophets and seers, Saint Paul has acknowledged for them that they saw but “through a glass darkly.” The prophet and seer are types kindred to genius, and, like genius, they are incomprehensible to themselves and others. Every manifestation with both classes is an inspiration, or an intuition, or a reflection of something, they know not what. They are by no means a perfect race, for when of Esaias it could be admitted that he was a man of like passions with ourselves, it can be readily granted how much prophets of missions and men of genius have marred their missions and work with human passions and fallibilities. The first Napoleon had in him much of the prophet—much of genius, with all its splendor and with all its faults; and it is our opinion that Joseph Smith, as Napoleon the Great, working out his mission, would have made a very striking resemblance to the man who created the empire. . . . Joseph Smith would as well fill the character of a general as that of a prophet, and

JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH.
(Joseph at the right.)

It is by no means improbable that some future textbook, for the use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question he would have fought his battles like Napoleon, from intuition and inspiration, rather than according to military orthodoxy. Had he been born in the times of the American Revolution, he might have aimed to have been a Washington, for though by his enemies it is said he was a great sinner, he was certainly a man of great designs and purposes, and the dignity of the cause might have sanctified the man more to our views. Before his death he was a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Probably he did not expect to be elected, but it was another of Joseph's assertions of his mission. We have seen the Mormon prophet during his lifetime at our office. A writer to the New York Herald thus describes him:

"Joseph Smith, the president of the church, prophet, seer, and revelator, is thirty-six years of age, six feet high in his pumps, weighing two hundred and twelve pounds. He is a man of the highest talent and great independence of character, firm in his integrity, and devoted to his religion: in one word, he is per se, as President Tyler would say. As a public speaker, he is bold, powerful, and convincing, possessing both the suaviter in modo and the fortiter in re; as a leader, wise and prudent, yet fearless; as a military commander, brave and determined; as a citizen, worthy, affable, and kind, bland in his manners and of noble bearing."

Joseph Smith had a large brain, a powerful body, an iron frame, an expansive chest, and, therefore, a large heart, strongly marked features, a nose of much character, especially indicative of force and weight, and massive jaws. Strength was his type, rather than delicacy; yet he was a man of great sensibility and powerful feelings, and he took men to his heart somewhat unwisely. Not so Brigham Young. Probably, though he influenced others so wonderfully, he was too much influenced by others, and not improved thereby. He had also a large bony hand, which indicated that he was an image-smasher. We have nothing but a profile of him to present to our readers, but much of the man might be suggested in the full face of his mother, and that of his youngest son, David. He was murdered before he was forty years of age, and he left his work to be carried on by a man no less remarkable than himself, but of a different type. He was born December 23, 1805, at Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont, and was killed in Carthage jail, Hancock County, Illinois, June 27, 1844. Our likeness of him is youthful, perhaps not the worse for that, for he often played with the boys in their games. One day Joseph and the boys were skating pieces of slate on the water, to see who could skate farthest, the prophet or the boys, when brother Hyrum comes along and rebukes Joseph. "A prophet, holding the keys of a dispensation, and skating slate on the water!" "Give over, boys," said Joseph; "we hurt brother Hyrum's feelings." When the boys at any time saw Joseph coming, they hailed him; and he has often had to dismount from his horse to play a game with the boys. Had a knot of them met him on his way to Carthage, and asked Joseph to play a last game with them, he might have consented, and with more feeling than mirth played that last game; but the boys who loved him so much themselves felt too deeply then.

FROM THE PEN OF PARLEY P. PRATT.

Parley P. Pratt leaves a pen picture of his recollections of Joseph Smith the Martyr that is interesting, though rather too highly colored:

President Joseph Smith was in person tall and well built, strong and active; of light complexion, light hair, blue eyes, very little beard, and of an expression peculiar to himself, on which the eye naturally rested with interest, and was never weary of beholding. His countenance was ever mild, affable, beaming with intelligence and benevolence; mingled with a look of interest and an unconscious smile, or cheerfulness, and entirely free from all restraint or affectation of gravity; and there was something connected with the serene and steady penetrating glance of his eye, as if he would penetrate the deepest abyss of the human heart, gaze into eternity, penetrate the heaven, and comprehend all worlds. He possessed a noble boldness and independence of character; his manner was easy and familiar; his rebuke terrible as a lion; his benevolence unbounded as the ocean; his intelligence universal, and his language abounding in original eloquence peculiar to himself—not polished—not studied—not smoothed and softened by education and refined by art; but flowing forth in its own native simplicity, and profusely abounding in variety of subject and manner. He interested and edified, while, at the same time, he amused and entertained his audience; and none listened to him that was ever weary with his discourse. I have even known him to retain a congregation of willing and anxious listeners for many hours together, in the midst of cold or sunshine, rain or wind, while they were laughing at one moment and weeping the next. Even his most bitter enemies were generally overcome, if he could once get their ears.

RECOLLECTIONS OF ELDER J. C. CLAPP.

The following is from the pen of Elder Joseph C. Clapp, as published in Autumn Leaves, December, 1907:

My recollection of the two martyrs is that they were both good-sized men, Joseph a little heavier than Hyrum. Joseph was of a ruddy countenance, and appeared to be in the very vigor of health and manly strength. Joseph was of a jovial disposition, and appeared to be more mirthful than Hyrum. Joseph, when we boys were playing on the green, would often stop and take a lick or two at our ball with his cane, but I do not recollect that Hyrum ever stopped to play with us. Hyrum was of a sedate appearance, and the boys felt that he was not as approachable as Joseph was. Joseph would generally manage to knock the ball over the fence if he could, and would then say, "Over the fence is out," and would pass on. . . .

One thing above all others is deeply engraven on my memory, that is the death of the two martyrs, and the awful gloom that settled like a pall over the city. There is no language adequate to describe it, or no imagination vivid enough to depict it as it now appears to me after the lapse of many years. I went to the Mansion House that morning with my mother (my father was in the South on a mission), and it seemed that everybody was weeping; the very air was pregnant with sorrow. . . .

I can say of the two martyrs that, according to what I knew of them as a child, and what I have learned during my whole life's experience, and what I have learned by reading their history, there never were two men more beloved, and that by those who knew them best.

"FIGURES OF THE PAST," BY JOSIAH QUINCY.

In Figures of the Past, page 376, Honorable Josiah Quincy has this to say:

something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. And the reply, absurd as it doubtless seems to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who was and is to-day accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High,—such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, impostor, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatics and impostors are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of a religion exerted and still exerts throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be criminated, but as phenomenon to be explained. . . . Joseph Smith, claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have been called to meet, enjoyed a brief season of prosperity such as few men have ever attained, and, finally, forty-three days after I saw him, went cheerfully to a martyr's death.

YE GOOD METHODIST PREACHER TESTIFIES.

A Methodist preacher by the name of Prior, who visited Nauvoo in 1843, speaks of Joseph Smith as follows:

I will not attempt to describe the various feelings of my bosom as I took my seat in a conspicuous place in the congregation, who were waiting in breathless silence for his appearance. While he tarried, I had plenty of time to revolve in my mind the character and common report of that truly singular personage. I fancied that I should behold a countenance sad and sorrowful, yet containing the fiery marks of rage and exasperation. I supposed that I should be enabled to discover in him some of those thoughtful and reserve features, those mystic and sarcastic glances, which I had fancied the ancient sages to possess. I expected to see that fearful, faltering look of conscious shame which, from what I had heard of him, he might be expected to evince. He appeared at last; but how was I disappointed when instead of the heads and horns of the beast and false prophet, I beheld only the appearance of a common man, of tolerably large proportions. I was sadly disappointed, and thought that, although his appearance could not be wrested to indicate anything against him, yet he would manifest all I had heard of him when he began to preach. I sat uneasily, and watched him closely. He commenced preaching, not from the Book of Mormon, however, but from the Bible; the first chapter of the first of Peter was his text. He commenced calmly, and continued dispassionately to pursue his subject, while I sat in breathless silence, waiting to hear that foul aspersion of the other sects, that diabolical disposition of revenge, and to hear that rancorous denunciation of every individual but a Mormon. I waited in vain; I listened with surprise; I sat uneasy in my seat, and could hardly persuade myself but that he had been apprised of my presence, and so ordered his discourse on my account, that I might not be able to find fault with it; for instead of a jumbled jargon of half-connected sentences; and a volley of imprecations, and diabolical and malignant denunciations, heaped upon the heads of all who differed from him, and the dreadful twisting and wresting of the Scriptures to suit his own peculiar views, and attempts to weave a web of dark and mystic sophistry around the gospel truths, which I had anticipated, he glided along through a very interesting and elaborate discourse with all the care and happy facility of one who was well aware of his important station, and his duty to God and man.—Smucker's History of the Mormons, pp. 151, 152.

* * * * *

THE TRAGEDY AT CARTHAGE.

(An extract reprinted from our "Historical Series.")

The Saints having been driven under the exterminating order of Governor Boggs, from their possessions in the State of Missouri, came to a beautiful site on the banks of the Mississippi, in the State of Illinois, where they built a city which they called Nauvoo. A regular charter was obtained from the State, providing for a mayor and council, municipal court; and the city council was authorized to organize the inhabitants, subject to military duty, "into a body of independent military men to be called the 'Nauvoo Legion.'" This provision was for the protection of the city and was under the authority of the state officials and subject to them. During the few succeeding years the city made a rapid progress, the population was constantly increased by large numbers of immigrants—converts to the faith who were seeking association with the Saints.

THE "EXPOSITOR."

On June 7, 1844, appeared the first issue of a paper called the Nauvoo Expositor. This paper was published and instigated by parties who had been excommunicated from the church and were enemies to the church and its officers. Its object was to stir up strife, to aid the enemies of the church by publishing slanderous stories. Its columns were filled with foul abuse of such a character that the city council met and pronouncing it a nuisance, ordered the mayor (who at that time was Joseph Smith) to have the establishment and paper removed without delay, in such manner as he should elect. The result was that the city marshal proceeded with assistants to the office of the Expositor and removed the press, type, and paper to the street and destroyed them. This event, whether wise or unwise, provoked an outburst of sentiment from the people far and near, and was the culminating act which hastened the tragedy. F. M. Higbee, one of the proprietors of the Expositor, went before a justice of the peace at Carthage, and obtained a writ for the arrest of Joseph Smith and members of the city council, charging them with riot. Joseph Smith and others for a time refused to submit to trial by this court and were meanwhile arraigned before the municipal court of the city and also before D. H. Wells, justice of the peace, [not a member of the church] and in each instance they were acquitted.

JOSEPH WILLING TO MEET THE ISSUE.

Joseph Smith, the mayor, made a report of the destruction of the Expositor, to the governor of the State, and stated that if the governor had any doubts concerning the legality of the proceedings he had only to signify it, and all who were implicated would go before any legal tribunal at the state capital and submit to an investigation. They also agreed to waive any legal proceedings in the matter and go upon his expressed wish. During this time mobs were collecting; rumor was spreading; inflammatory speeches were being made from pulpit and rostrum; the most slanderous reports that could be invented were freely printed and eagerly read. One rumor was to the effect that Joseph Smith and his associates were ensconced in the stronghold of Nauvoo, defended by the Nauvoo Legion, defying the law and refusing to respond to the call of justice, whereupon some two or three thousand men rallied to the support of the Carthage constable, some of them coming from Missouri, and stood ready, as they said, "Not only to arrest Joe Smith, but to burn his town and kill every man, woman, and child in it."

Here we may pause to reflect that the matter of the destruction of the Nauvoo Expositor could not be held as a crime whose penalty should be death. It was only a matter of the destruction of property. Some have held that the suppression of this paper was a blow at the doctrine of a free press. We must consider, however, that free press and free speech have limitations, and when the abuse of either becomes so obnoxious, so vulgar and obscene that it may properly be declared a nuisance, a menace to those affected by it, there should be some means by which it can be promptly dealt with. Some may be inclined to think the measures taken were too harsh, but it will be remembered that it was done after due consideration by the city council, and they were willing afterward to answer to any proper higher authority for their action.

As the enemy continued to grow more demonstrative in their wrath the town prepared for defense. The Saints had not forgotten the bitter experiences in Missouri, where they were driven from their homes and shot down as though they were wild beasts. Here they had property, they had wives and children to protect from lawless assassins. And who would dare to call himself a man, who would not in cases of extremity use even violent means to protect his own from being brutally treated and murdered by outlaws? The Nauvoo Legion was called out and placed under arms by instruction of the governor of the State, who was Governor Ford. This gave rise to rumor that the Mormons were about to make a raid on the neighboring settlements. In consequence of this the governor came in person to Carthage, a few miles from Nauvoo. The writ for the arrest of the parties implicated in the destruction of the Expositor was again renewed and Joseph and Hyrum Smith, though willing to submit to legal investigation when protected, feared the violence of the mob and crossed the river into Iowa, where for a time they were secure. Upon the assurance of Governor Ford that they would receive the protection of the militia they returned, and with the city council went to Carthage and gave themselves up and were admitted to bail for their appearance at the next term of the circuit court. It is to be regretted that they were not permitted to answer to this court for their offense. They were evidently not terrified at the prospect of the result of a fair hearing. They had good reason, however, to fear the mob who were thirsting for their blood. Immediately upon being released on bail pending their hearing, Joseph and Hyrum were again arrested on a charge of treason against the State of Illinois, and were committed to jail, without examination, where they met their death.

THE TRAGEDY.

Governor Ford had said to them, "I pledge you my honor however, and the faith and honor of the State, that no harm shall come to you while undergoing this imprisonment." The same day the governor went to Nauvoo, with a detachment of soldiers, leaving a guard of but eight soldiers at the jail where the prisoners were confined. About five o'clock in the afternoon a mob, consisting of about one hundred and fifty men with painted faces, was seen approaching the jail. In company with Joseph and Hyrum, were William Richards and John Taylor, who at that time were prominent officials in the church. They were all in an upper room in the jail and as the mob was ascending the stairway an effort was made to barricade the door. While doing so, Hyrum Smith was mortally shot and falling to the floor exclaimed, "I am a dead man!" Joseph attempted to leap from the window in the room and while so doing received several fatal wounds and fell to the ground exclaiming, "O, Lord, my God." The fiends, not yet satisfied, set up the lifeless body against a well curb and riddled it with bullets. John Taylor received several wounds from which he afterward recovered. William Richards escaped unharmed. So soon as the mob had accomplished their brutal deed they fled at once; they doubtless knew that Taylor and Richards were yet in the jail, but they were satisfied to know that Joseph and Hyrum were dead.

The bodies of the slain were brought to Nauvoo. Mother, wife, and children must for the last time look upon the pale faces from whom no word could be spoken again. They remembered that Joseph had said, "I am going like a lamb to the slaughter. . . ."

I have a conscience void of offense, toward God, and toward all men—I shall die innocent, and it shall yet be said of me, He was murdered in cold blood.”

On leaving them Hyrum had read a selection from the Book of Mormon, in part as follows:

And it came to pass that the Lord said unto me, If they have not charity it mattereth not unto thee, thou hast been faithful; therefore thy garments shall be made clean. And because thou hast seen thy weakness, thou shalt be made strong, even unto the sitting down in the place which I have prepared in the mansions of my Father.

BUILDING THE TOMBS OF THE PROPHETS.

Conditions in the world have greatly changed since this tragedy was enacted and the people in general have come to look at things with a more sane and consistent view. Were it not for the fact that these men died for principle the incident would have long since been forgotten. History is repeating itself and the majesty of the word of God is being openly revealed. Jesus said:

Ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchers of the righteous, and say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.—Matthew 23: 29, 30.

