sion of their inheritances “forever.” “Whatsoever ye bind on earth shall be bound in heaven” is as true in matters pertaining to the temporal affairs of our church as to the spiritual affairs.

The giving of stewardships requires the very best judgment possible. The Lord long ago said, “In the multitude of counselors there is wisdom.”

When we remember that there will be thousands of stewardships to be given—that this financial system, providing for the proper distribution of wealth is the one that shall ultimately prevail, our interpretation of the law of procedure should be broad enough to provide for this necessary growth, yet not so latitudinous as to alienate us from God.

We lack nothing except willingness. The Lord has not only provided the necessary organization to accomplish his work, but has also given us broad but comprehensive instructions, enabling us to proceed in appointing of stewardships with a goodly degree of certainty.

Advisory Aid

The Lord has further hedged this important work with bars of safety. Doctrine and Covenants 42:10 places the grave and onerous responsibility for the proper distribution of property accumulated in the church on “the high council of the church, and the bishop and his council.”

Doctrine and Covenants 122:6 gives added instruction as to how this should be done by these different bodies.

Nevertheless, that portion of that commandment which made it the duty of the high council to assist in looking after the poor and needy of the church, was not intended to put the high council over the bishop in the administration of the affairs of his office and calling, except as they might do so in an advisory manner, and in such way that no one of the poor and needy should be neglected; nor was it designed that the high council should dictate in the matter of purchasing lands, building houses of worship, building up the New Jerusalem, and the gathering of the people, these last named being within the province of the presidency, the twelve as a quorum, the councils or other officers of the branches or stakes where houses of worship are to be built, the conferences and the general assembly of the church, and the direction of the Lord by revelation.

Other groups of quorums in the church who have the responsibility of aiding the First Presidency and the Bishopric in the distribution of church means, are here mentioned:

(a) The High Council.
(b) The Twelve as a quorum.
(c) The councils, or other officers of the branches or stakes where houses of worship are to be built.
(d) The Conference.
(e) The General Assembly.

And above and over all is:
(f) The Lord by revelation.

Should the Lord speak and give direction with reference to the creation of a stewardship or stewardships, the direction would become a law to the church through the regular process—by receiving the indorsement of the various quorums, and finally that of the body. There would remain nothing for the First Presidency and the Bishopric to do but comply with this authoritative command; failing to do so, the First Presidency and the Bishopric would be cited before the Standing High Council for trial.

The same mode of procedure would obtain should the General Assembly authorize the expenditure of any money or the giving of stewardships.

Should the General Conference so authorize by resolution, the First Presidency and the Bishopric would be required to comply or be questioned before the High Council.

All other bodies or quorums, excepting the legislative bodies, are to assist the First Presidency and the Bishopric in giving stewardships out of property belonging to the church, in an “advisory manner” only, as noted in the following:

The bishop should be directed and authorized to proceed as soon as it shall be found practicable by consultation with the general authorities of the church who are made the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal things to carry out the provisions of the law of organization which are by the law made the duty of the bishop.—Doctrine and Covenants 128:9.

And let my servant Edward Partridge ... to divide the saints their inheritance, ... and also those whom he has appointed to assist him.—Doctrine and Covenants 57:3.

Let my servant Edward Partridge, and those whom he has chosen, ... appoint unto this people their portion.—Doctrine and Covenants 61:1.

In the three cases mentioned above by revelation, General Assembly and conference, the instruction coming to the Bishopric comes as law, as the will of the people. The Bishopric, being the servant of the people, complies with the request.

(a) In case the High Council should undertake to assist in the disbursing of the church funds, it could be done only in an advisory manner.

The duty of the bishop shall be made known by the commandments which have been given, and the voice of the conference.—Doctrine and Covenants 72:1.

(The cause is being pressed forward by Brother Charles E. Harpe in the region of Atchison, Kansas. Brother E. A. Davis reports that the conference of the Eastern Iowa District held June 6 and 7 was one of the best in the history of the district.

Those present at the Nauvoo conference held recently report it to have been one of the most successful in history.

Harmony
BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

When I was younger I thought if one were able to make an argument in support of certain principles he was able to properly represent the church of Christ. In more recent years I have changed my mind, for I am now able to understand some deeper things connected with the church of Christ and find that while ability to make argument is a most excellent thing, it is yet very impotent if it is not backed up by the inner harmonies of life, that reveal the life and character of the Just One. I once thought the most important thing was to be able to get into the place we call heaven, but I have lived to discover that place means but little if condition is not properly provided. So, without any extended preliminary arguments, I will state that the one great thing to be learned by the human race is harmony.

In the use of the term harmony, I wish to convey the idea of proper relationships. Before one can represent the church as he should, he must have proper relationships developed within his life; he must find the proper balance; he must be properly related to his fellow men; and he must be properly related to God. It is quite out of reason to expect one to properly represent that which he has not come to evaluate; therefore, I insist that no one is able to represent Christ among men as he should be represented until he has come to evaluate the privilege thus extended. It is sometimes difficult to get the world of mankind to see that the Christian religion means more than going to church on Sunday, and going to heaven when they die. I hope, however, to be able to open a line of reasoning here that may stimulate other thought.

We are confronted with a somewhat difficult problem, because of the general tendency to confuse ideas and terms; but we can reach a proper understanding if we will keep our minds open and weigh carefully the matter presented. One of the first things a logical reasoner is concerned about is to be able to have his reasons harmonize. He shows the relative correspondence in his proofs, and argues that the harmony existing between this and that is evidence that his premise is well laid. It is not a very difficult matter for us to agree perfectly in this matter, but somehow we often fail to see how the argument is weakened when there is a lack of harmony between the profession and the actions of the individual. Let it be remembered that I live what I am. The thing I make flesh, that is, the thing I vitalize, is the thing I actually am, regardless of the professions that may or may not be made by me.

Then I am quite sure we are justified in saying the best argument that can be made for the Christian religion is the living of a life that reveals the harmony of truth and love. He who argues theoretically the doctrines of the church, but who does not exemplify them in his life does not represent, but misrepresents the church of Christ, and hence many shortsighted people say there is nothing to the Christian religion. This is due to the fact that people have not stopped to properly consider the nature of the case. The one who thus professes probably has deluded himself in believing that religion is an argument only; and the one who condemns the religion of Christ on this ground has permitted himself to suppose that a mere profession ought to change the life of man, and since it has not done so he says the Christian religion has failed. In the first place, the man professing did not have the thing he was professing to have, and the other person condemned that which is true simply because a certain one did not have it. Both are out of harmony with the truth.

Perhaps we are now able to develop the next phase so as to see what harmony really means. To properly represent the church of Christ I must be in perfect harmony with the truth, both in theory and practice. I must learn to live the truth, and when this is accomplished I will have no trouble whatsoever in speaking the truth. My life, then, let me say it again, must harmonize with truth before I am qualified to represent the church of Christ. We will not get this at first as we should, but if we will dwell in thought upon it, meditate upon it, it will begin to unfold to us and we will see that complete harmony is the thing needed to fit us for the duties and responsibilities of life. Not long since I asked a young person the following questions: "Were you at church this morning?" The answer was in the affirmative. I then asked, "Did you get the sermon?" and again I was answered in the affirmative. The expression was: "Yes, I got it all." I am drawing attention to this because it involves a matter I would like to have people consider with more concern than they do. No doubt the thing this young person really intended to say was: I heard the sound of the speaker's voice. I asked about the matter for a very prudential reason. I considered the sermon one of the deepest and most instructive sermons I had ever heard, and I wanted to see what answer I might get from this young person. I doubt seriously that there was a person present who got a tithe of the good that sermon contained, and yet the person interrogated said, "Yes, I got it all." Now to be consistent with ourselves and with the young person referred to, we must understand what the person intended to say, and without question it was this: I got all I understood. That is all any of us can do, and I must enlarge my understanding if I would get more out of a thing.

At one time I taught a Sunday school class that was taking its lessons from the Bible without any outlines or helps. The pupils had been covering a whole chapter each Sunday without difficulty. I was two consecutive Sundays on one short paragraph. What caused the difference? I might profitably have spent two months with them on the matter contained in the paragraph, but I want to use this as a means of conveying the idea I want to advance in unfolding the need of harmonizing our lives with the harmonies of the Universe. I shall never be able to reach a harmonious condition in this life or in the life to come until my life is made to correspond with God. There can be no heaven for me until I am attuned to the divine harmonies! Now the big problem is to be able to make the necessary adjustments without losing our balance. I can only harmonize my life with God in so far as I am able to understand God, and I will find both peace and harmony in life so long as I do this. But if I am progressing there is going to come a time when I will be required to readjust and reconstruct some of my most fondly cherished ideas, because I have developed to the place where I see God in a new light.

But what are we going to do? That idea did very well for yesterday, but to-day I must do one of two things, either reconstruct it or be out of harmony with the added light that has come to me. Here is where the religious people of the world find one of their greatest difficulties, for they think to be required to readjust their ideas would be to forsake the pathway of truth, and so they cling tenaciously to the custom of yesterday and discard the light that has come to them to enable them to more nearly approach the harmony of life that is necessary to fit them for a dwelling place with God. The very moment one refuses to be true to the highest within him, that moment he begins to die spiritually. Shakespeare was right when he said: "This above all, to thine own self be true; and it must follow as the night the day; thou canst not then be false to any man." Jesus expressed it when he said: "Walk while you have the light, lest darkness come upon you." Let man learn to be true to himself, true to God, and true to his fellow men, and he will find the harmonies of heaven while he is here upon the earth. His soul will be enlarged, and he will have peace within his own heart, pleasantness in association with men, and a constant communion with the infinite God.

The only way to insure heaven is for us to develop within our lives the necessary harmony to fit us for a dwelling place with the God of harmony and truth. Surely there is room for us to expand and grow into the harmony of life, and this is the very thing the Christian religion will enable us to do. I would therefore urge that we avail ourselves of our opportunities, and unfold our lives so as to have them reveal the infinite harmonies. In this way we will not only insure peace and tranquility to our own souls, but we will be helping to make this world a fitter place in which to live; we may help to make it a fit abode for man, and a suitable place for the return of the Lord of glory.

The experiences of the past will aid us in adjusting ourselves to the needs of to-day. After having read the essay of Emerson on history I wrote this paragraph at the bottom of the page:

Through our knowledge and understanding of the history of the past are we able to adjust ourselves to the needs of to-day, and rightly interpret the prophecies of the future. History is valuable to us in so far as we vitalize it, and make it a part of our actual experience. The achievements of the past reveal to us the possibilities of the future; while the follies of past ages reveal to us our own weaknesses, and bid us look well to our course in life, lest we perish through ignorance.

May the light of truth dawn upon each soul, and may we have the courage to walk in that light and unfold our lives and harmonize them with the life of the Just One! There is every reason why we should make an effort along this line. Are we not willing to do our best to make life all it was intended to be? We are going to be required to receive just that for which we are willing to fit and prepare.

Knisley’s Caravan Car in Saskatchewan

Brother J. R. Dickson writes a few words and attaches a cutting from the Weyburn Review, of Weyburn, Saskatchewan. We reproduce it for the interest it holds to HERALD readers:

From Independence, a suburb of Kansas City, Missouri, to Weyburn in less than three weeks, during which period a number of delays were experienced owing to adverse weather and consequent heavy roads, in a big, powerful, steam-driven motor car, is the achievement of Mr. Alvin Knisley, the man who preached the first Latter Day Saint sermon in the Mervin District, sixty miles north of Weyburn. He drove into the city shortly after noon on Monday, staying only a few minutes before proceeding on his way to visit his brother in the Mervin District, sixty miles north of North Battleford, for a month. He had his wife and family with him.

The big car, with a heavy, roomy caravan top, was, in fact, a miniature home—everything required for the daily round of housekeeping being provided, including comfortable sleeping accommodation for the six members of the party. The top, and several parts of the big car, were built by the owner himself, who is a mechanical adept as well as being a preacher of the gospel. The cost of running from Kansas City to Weyburn averaged two cents per mile, Mr. Knisley stated to The Review. The car has neither electrical current, drive shaft, fly wheel, spark plugs, nor carburetor—being propelled by steam under a continuous pressure of between five hundred and six hundred pounds.

The Wales district conference, Great Britain, was held during the week-end, May 30 to June 1, 1925, at Gilfach Goch, Wales.

Brethren Abel Hall (seventy and supervisor of the British Isles) and J. W. Foster (representative of the Bishopric of the British Isles) were present.

The business session opened at half past six Saturday evening when Elder Abel Hall was elected to be associated with the district presidency during conference.

Elder H. R. Price was unanimously elected district president. Elder T. Davies, vice president; T. R. Jenkins, secretary; T. Price, treasurer; T. R. Jenkins, historian; Rees Jenkins, chorister; all of whom were elected unanimously.

The choosing of auditors was left in the hands of the district presidency.

It was resolved that in future two conferences be held each year, and that arrangements for the next one be left in the hands of the district presidency.

Elder Abel Hall gave notice that at the next conference he will move that district rule number 8 be deleted and that the district work in harmony with the Doctrine and Covenants 17: 13, i. e., conferences to be elders' conferences, as provided for by the Lord, and membership to be represented by delegation.

Brother Fred Mason was elected, subject to his consent, to be supervisor of the Sunday School Department for the Wales District.

Elder J. W. Foster was the speaker for the Sunday morning preaching service which commenced at half past ten. Brother Foster took for his text part of Isaiah 54: 2 and emphasized the impossibility of any Saint ever being a steward in Zion unless he kept the financial law here. The sermon was much appreciated by all present.

The prayer and testimony meeting opened at half past two. A remarkable feature of this service was a boy of five years, John James Jenkins, who knelt and repeated the Lord's prayer. This seemed to open the way for a spiritual feast, and surely all felt the power of God. Truly, as the chair­man remarked, "A little child shall lead them." A number of testimonies were borne, and among the hymns sung were two rendered in the Welsh tongue. As one brother remarked, it was as good as hearing a "gift of tongues."

Surely the Sunday evening service will be one ever to be remembered by the Saints in Wales, when Elder Abel Hall, the supervisor of the British Isles, preached, and for his subject chose "Justification, consecration, sanctification, and glorification." He showed to us how we must live above the law if we ever hope to live and reign with Christ in celestial glory. We wish our brother every success in his work.

On Sunday afternoon two candidates were to be inducted into the fold, but the baptism could not be attended to owing to some slight mishap occurring—blockage in the water pipe. The baptismal service was left over until Monday forenoon, with Elder J. W. Foster in charge. After the candidates had been baptized by the district president, Elder H. R. Price, Brother Hall was invited to speak on "Zion, the ideal of the church." Some very useful information was given, and if put into practice would go far towards advancing the cause of Christ and uplifting the Saints.

The confirmation of the two newly baptized members was then taken care of by Elders Abel Hall, H. R. Price, and J. W. Foster. One outstanding feature of the conference was the spirit manifested by the district president, wherein he exemplified the Spirit of Christ in "preferring his brethren to himself." May God bless him in his labors.

The good Spirit of the Master was present throughout the whole conference services and appreciated.

Brethren Hall and Foster left for London at noon and were accompanied by Brother F. Simmonds and his son as far as Tonyrefail. Brother Simmonds, who lives in Cardiff, had not been attending for some years, but through the efforts of Brother H. R. Price and Brother Hall he is now back in the fold. Another brother, T. Davies, has been brought back into the church during the past few months. These men are indeed "men of God" and full of the spirit of this latter-day work. May God bless them and all the Saints of Wales.

Llanelly, South Wales, June 15.

Special Meeting at Simcoe, Ontario

A large number of the Saints journeyed from Hamilton, London, Delhi, Brantford, Stratford, Saint Marys, Saint Thomas, Tillsonburg, Waterford, Vanessa, and other points to meet with the Saints of the Simcoe Branch at their special one-day meeting on Sunday, June 28.

The services opened with a prayer, testimony, and song service at nine o'clock with the district president, G. C. Tomlinson, jr., Elders H. A. Koehler, James Winegarden, John Shields, and Bishop J. L. Burger in charge. It surely was a good service, many fervent prayers being offered for the onward progress and success of the work, and the testimonies evidenced a sincere desire on the part of the membership to come up higher and make sacrifices to assist in the work.

The preaching service at eleven was in charge of Elders Frank Gray and Clarence Weeks, and at this hour Elder G. C. Tomlinson delivered an eloquent address to the Saints on his solution of many of the problems confronting the people of the church. Brother Tomlinson, though young, is a talented and able speaker, and since being elected president of the London District has been working hard, and with good success, to bring the district up to a higher standard of efficiency. The Saints are justly proud of him, and he is gaining the confidence of the people very fast.

Immediately after the morning service, the Saints adjourned to the beautiful park in the center of the town, where a delightful lunch was served to all in the good old-fashioned picnic style.

The open-air service at half past two was in charge of Elders James Winegarden and John Shields, Bishop J. L. Burger being the speaker. He delivered a forceful appeal to the Saints to rally to the needs of the work and consecrate of their abilities, talents, and possessions to its onward progress.

The evening preaching service at seven o'clock was held in the town theater, Branch President H. Dickhout being in charge. Elder H. A. Koehler made a splendid missionary effort to the large crowd of Saints and nonmembers that assembled.

The Simcoe Saints have every reason to feel gratified at the good success attending their special meetings, as they were well attended and were of a high order. Many of the visiting Saints expressed themselves as being much helped and encouraged by the splendid and uplifting spiritual experiences of the day.

The one- and two-day meetings throughout the London District, which were inaugurated a few years ago, have surely been a wonderful success each year, and by the way they are starting out this year, bid fair to surpass even last year’s meetings, which were a series of spiritual uplifts to the branches where they were held.

The next special meeting is to be held with the Saint Marys Branch on July 11 and 12, and a large number of the Saints are looking forward to it for another time of spiritual encouragement.

Successful Home-Coming at Hibbard

HIBBARD, INDIANA, June 30.—Home-coming services at Hibbard June 28 are now part of local history. The effort was a success from many angles. The day was ideal, and the grove was very inviting. The services were well represented, not only by local Saints, but Hammond, Gary, Laporte, South Bend, Mishawaka, Fort Wayne, Monterey, Culver, Ora, Burr Oak, and some other points contributed to increase the attendance.

The first service, at half past ten, was presided over by Brother Claude Garnet, formerly of Coldwater and Grand Rapids, but now of Fort Wayne, and the sermon was by Elder S. W. L. Scott, who used Matthew 20 as his text, emphasizing the “eleventh hour” of the world’s history and the kingdom of God. The music was under the direction of Brother Levi Fries, supported by an orchestra of four pieces.

Dinner was served from a table over thirty-six feet long, and cafeteria style was observed in serving. The Hibbard Saints do not do things by halves, and the table was a veritable cornucopia of good things to eat.

At half past two Brother Smith of Hammond opened the meeting, and the writer spoke on the possibilities of doing for the latter-day work in isolated places. Brother Garnet followed, speaking on “Gifts, charity, and organization.” After this service a fine audience repaired to “Bishop’s Landing,” Yellow River, and Brother S. W. L. Scott baptized four people—all of them married. They were from the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Christian Churches. All were confirmed at the evening session, which was held in the auditorium.

Every annual recurrence of these meetings at Hibbard, the writer has participated from four to eight people the last three years. The group rejoices at the opening prospects.

We must not omit mentioning the beautiful duets furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Aley from Poplar Grove. The renditions were rich and impressive. They furnished their own accompaniment.

This get-together meeting will long be treasured in memory. The Holy Spirit was mindful, and social features were on a high and happy plane, while hope arose sublime over dark spots in life.

Wiley, Colorado

The work here has not been doing as well as it might; however, the Sunday school has been having regular sessions with good attendance and splendid interest. Church services have not been held regularly, but when some visiting elder happens along, services are held. Sacramental services are held every month with one or two exceptions.

Elder I. N. Delong goes to Eads once a month to preach. Last Sunday was a day of unusual interest, as Elder Bruce Brown, district president, was here, also a goodly number of visiting Saints from Eads, Colorado. The Sunday school reached the high mark of ninety-two in attendance. Elder Brown preached in the morning.

A bounteous basket dinner occupied the noon hour, after which a round table discussion was held that proved very interesting and instructive. The sacramental service was administered, and a prayer service of a high spiritual order was enjoyed. Brother Brown spoke Sunday evening, also Monday evening, but owing to the Chautauqua program on in Wiley, further meetings there were discontinued for the week. Services were held in homes in and near Lamar till the latter part of the week, when the speaker goes to Utleyville over the week-end. His visit has been much enjoyed by the Saints.

 Sister Edith Hughes and son Joe were the only representatives from Wiley to the Young People’s Convention. They report a very profitable experience and bring back many helpful and inspiring thoughts.

The Wiley and Utleyville Sunday schools are holding an attendance contest which is proving quite interesting. The scores are going entirely too much in favor of the neighbor on the south, but that is only a spur to more energetic efforts on the part of the other side. A big picnic in some nice place midway between the two branches is being planned after the contest closes September 1.

A number of Christmas offering buttons are being distributed and are quite popular with the little folks. Several are planning for the yellow ones. Little Ava Dodd was the first one to save up enough for a green button.

Lincoln, Nebraska

June 20.—Since General Conference, which we were glad to have the privilege of attending, many things have happened in Lincoln.

Brother and Sister Rabideaux were called to give up their infant daughter of three months. It was a trial hard to bear, and they have the sympathy of the Saints.

Sisters Hawley and Derry were both badly injured in an automobile accident, and they had to be put in casts. Both are much improved, but Sister Hawley, whose spine was injured, may have to wear her cast for some time. She has been removed to Omaha, where her son is practicing law.

Wedding bells rang loud and clear June 6, when a double wedding occurred at the home of Brother and Sister T. J. Chapple. Their daughter Ruth was married to Lyle McFarlane of Independence, Missouri, and her sister Mary to George Gee of Lincoln, Elder C. H. Porter officiating. We wish the young people all happiness. We will miss Sister Ruth, but our loss will be Independence’s gain. Brother and Sister Gee are to remain with us. The girls were “showered” by their friends, and some happy times were had together before the wedding.

Brother Marcus Blyne, branch president, left us for some time, but we understand he has returned and will locate permanently among us. That is good news to the Saints here.

The following brethren have been with us for a Sunday since conference: Carl Self, M. H. Cook, C. H. Porter, and E. F. Robertson. Attendance is at low ebb.

The writer is a shut-in for the summer—in bed by doctors’ orders—in hopes that a rest may bring renewed strength to a heart greatly enlarged and overworked. Our daughter is here from Los Angeles to be with her mother while she is confined to her bed.

Blanche Farrar attended the Young People’s Convention at Lamoni for a few days and came home greatly enthused. W. S. Farrar is in northern California at present, thinking he may possibly locate there if conditions seem favorable.

Stewardships Interest Saints

Since my last report I have secured the use of the district tent. Am now holding meetings in it near Grand Valley where I was preaching in the Saints' church at last report.

This is in the neighborhood of the Clarks, one of whom (Ada) became the last wife of the late President Joseph Smith, and here the wedding occurred.

The weather has been rather against tent work, as it is cold and damp. Frost two nights this week, but no damage to crops. There have been seven or eight frosts this month. To-day they have a fire in the furnace at Brother R. G. Thompson's, where I am domiciled. The season is very unusual, I am told. Crops are good, but late. Grass is especially fine. Orchards are loaded, and berries are abundant. Strawberries are now getting ripe.

Preached two sermons Sunday in the Cedar Valley Branch. Only a few came to church, twelve in the forenoon and thirteen in the afternoon. This was once a large and flourishing branch, but most of them have moved elsewhere. It was kind of a mother branch for several near-by ones.

Have preached twenty-four sermons so far this month. Seems like old times. Enjoy good liberty on both the spiritual and financial interests of the church. Stewardships is an old and favorite subject with me. It will take some time to get many to put it in practice. But it seems to me that all who do should be organized at once. Or if individuals accept, some kind of recognition should be extended to them. Perhaps a certificate, as in baptism. I wish the Presidency and Bishopric would get out a booklet of instructions for both the ministry and members. I could place a number of such where they would do good. I have been looking for some effort along that line from headquarters. My next address will be Owen Sound, Ontario, 566 Alpha Street.

GRAND VALLEY, ONTARIO, June 24.

Topeka, Kansas

July 1.—There have been some very good sermons preached the past few Sundays. An enjoyable Children's Day program was given at the eleven o'clock hour June 14. Although we have not very many children in Sunday school at this time, all exerted themselves to assist in the program which was enjoyed. Brother Ross and family, of Pomona, Kansas, attended the program, and afterwards their little daughter was confirmed a member of the church by Elders L. G. Whipple and A. P. Crooker. It is beautiful to see children of this early age uniting with the church, thus placing themselves in a position to partake of all the benefits of the gospel, from an early age upward.

Most of us can look backward and wish we had come in close contact with this gospel earlier than we did. The past cannot be remedied, however, and the future is in the hands of God. But each of us has the present to improve as we will. May we make the most of it.

The Department of Women here held a carnival Sunday evening, June 27, at the home of Mr. and Sister Alfrey, five miles north of Topeka. Quite a crowd was present, including several outsiders, and had an enjoyable time. The L. D. S. Dramatic Club, recently organized, put on a humorous playlet among other numbers presented. And last, but not least, perhaps, the Department of Women claims to have cleared quite a little sum from the sale of refreshments, and other things.

We are planning a Sunday school picnic in the near future, as none has been held yet this summer.

Branch business meeting was held at half past two June 28. Quarterly reports were read and acted upon, and some new business also came up.

District President Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas, was in Topeka June 29 and 30 making a few visits with the Saints, on his way home from Scranton, Kansas.

June 30 Pastor A. P. Crooker and family left on a three-week automobile tour through the East, visiting relatives and touching at various points of interest en route, especially in Michigan, which is their old home, and also in New York and Toronto, Canada.

Several of the Topeka Saints expect to camp at Netawaka for the district's annual reunion, arrangements for which are now being made. It will begin August 1.

Superannuated But Still Works

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, June 30.—Since I learned that I was superannuated I felt a relief from the strain of responsibility to a certain degree, as I had discovered that my health was giving way and I had shown signs of nervous breakdown, as many of the Saints know. But I did not like to take the responsibility of giving up the field.

I had fully determined to take the field assigned me, although I knew I was not able. On learning of the change, we fixed up our little bungalow and furnished it, bought a Chevrolet, and expect it to help in the missionary work. Brother A. M. Baker came along and preached three splendid sermons for us and was the first missionary to ride in our missionary car. He was also the first to occupy our spare bedroom. Three years ago when we built our house we dedicated this room to missionary use and called it our missionary room.

The Saints at Springfield appear to be in unity and have started a fund to enlarge the church, which is very much needed both for the fast-growing Sunday school and the congregations.

I will be glad to help out all my strength will permit, in this and adjoining districts. I am sure Sister Sparling will also join with me and help in Sunday school and women's work.

HENRY SPARLING.

Santa Ana, California

Our little Margaret Thurston is now gradually recovering from her long, serious illness, due, we think, more to the Lord's goodness in answer to the prayers of the Saints than to the doctors' conflicting treatment.

Our genial missionary, Brother P. R. Burton, has arrived and is active in the district, as Long Beach can testify, where he is holding what is reported to be a very well attended series of meetings. Monday evening, June 8, was Santa Ana night, when nine of our young people, including the pastor and his wife, attended his service. Some attended again from here to hear another of his interesting sermons. Brother Burton appears to be a good fisher of men and a fisher of good fish, since we met him at Newport Beach early the other morning enjoying the latter sport with wife and Brother and Sister Wilford Burton.

On June 6 we had the honor of officiating at a very pretty wedding at the quaint little chapel at Mission Inn, Riverside. Miss Catherine Cubbon, daughter of Sister Lillian Cubbon of Newport Beach, was the bride, radiating beauty and sweetness; and John Siegel was the smiling and happy bridgegroom. Gerald Mitchell and Marguerite Parks were best man and bridesmaid. Only relatives and a few close friends attended. After a two-day honeymoon trip in the mountains, Mr. and Mrs. Siegel began homekeeping at their own pretty home in Costa Mesa. All their friends wish them happiness and God’s abundant blessings, both temporal and spiritual.

Last Sunday, June 14, many Saints, upon arriving at the church, exclaimed how beautifully the church was decorated.
This was the pleasing background for Children’s Day exercises and a short Children’s Day sermon by the pastor. The work of decorating and preparing the program was done by the superintendent, Sister Phylis Carmichael, and her willing helpers.

The same evening our preaching service was omitted that all might attend the high school baccalaureate sermon.
Among the many graduates is Sister Marie Mitchell, whom everyone loves because she is always radiating happiness and smiles.

We have noticed that Saints who are the most optimistic and smiling are usually the most steadfast in both prosperity and adversity.

Scrapped Entertains Northeastern Kansas

Scranton, Kansas.—The branch here is making some progress, and we feel hopeful for the future development of the work here.

The Northeastern Kansas district conference was held here
May 9 and 10, and although it rained heavily and the roads were bad, we had a fair attendance, and some forward steps were taken. District President Samuel Twombly and Apostles
E. J. Gleazer presided over the conference, and on Sunday Brother Gleazer gave some sound advice to the Saints in the two forceful sermons he delivered.

The young people from Topeka and Sister Vivian Gillespie from Atchison, rendered some very appropriate Mothers’
Day musical numbers that day, which were much appreciated.
The Topeka Saints were out in a body on Sunday, and many of them braved the rain and mud to be present on Saturday.

The next conference will be held at the reunion at Netawaka in August.

E. L. Bullard, Conference Secretary.

Fargo, North Dakota

June 30.—Omer McKinnon, the eleven-year-old son of C. H.
McKinnon, underwent a serious operation at the Charlevoix Hospital. The appendix had burst before the operation, and no hope were given by the doctors for three days. He is now doing nicely, and the Saints feel that their prayers were answered.

A miscellaneous shower was given for Miss Beryl Whiteford Tuesday evening, June 16, at which nearly seventy-five guests were present. She was the recipient of many useful and beautiful gifts. She became Mrs. Theo Scott on June 20.

Miss Dorothy McKinnon just returned from a two-week visit at Gladstone. She was accompanied by Miss Jessie Welsh, who will visit a few days.

The Oriole Girls are having a stand in front of C. H. Mc-Kinnon’s restaurant on the Fourth of July.

The branch and the Sunday school elected officers for the coming year June 29, and the results were very favorable.
We look forward to a good year.

Our organist has been doing duty here most of the time for over twenty years. Also our Sunday school treasurer has

Los Angeles, Central Church

The usual activities of the Central Church have gone forward with gradually increasing interest and attendance. Besides these there have been many happy and interesting occasions when we have arisen to higher planes. Among these are the two sacramental services since General Conference.
In May Brother A. W. Teel, M. D., was ordained to the office of high priest, according to the appointment of the General Conference; and at the June sacramental service Brother Ray Knowlton was ordained to the same office by the same authority. Apostle J. Arthur Gillen was present at the last named service, and was spokesman in the ordination. Brethren Knowlton and Teel are assistant pastors, and the added shepherding and presiding guidance which they will doubtless receive through their ordinations will be of daily assistance to them. They are both men who are loved and honored by the Saints of Los Angeles for their devoted ministrations, and the Saints here are grateful that their worthiness has been recognized of God, and greater efficiency made possible for them. The ordination services were impressive and spir-

Elder T. Chapman, president of the district, was present on both occasions.

Brother Gillen tarried with us but a short time, and went from here to other points of the district in the interest of the work. Brother P. R. Burton, appointed missionary to Southern California District, arrived several weeks ago and has been busy conducting meetings at various points. His next work will be a series of meetings in the district tent at Watts, where there is a mission fostered by the Central Church. Early in April a Sunday school of about fifty memers was organized there by Sister Laura Burton, which has since grown considerably. This Sunday school was the direct outgrowth of services conducted and work done by Brother W. L. Vail and the pastor. Friends of the church provided a small building for services, and now the Sunday school has outgrown the building. Several there are ready for baptism, and it is expected that the meetings will bring more.

Children’s Day was observed at Central all day on the 14th of June. The church was beautifully decorated, as indeed it always is, by Sisters Yendl and Mstatt, both of whom manage to procure flowers which they arrange with fine taste to augment the beauty of our auditorium. Sunday school on that day was increased by about forty visitors. The eleven o’clock service was opened by a short talk on baptism to the candidates about to be baptized, after which fourteen were baptized, among them eight children. Baptism was followed by sacred hymn by the beginner and primary departments of the Sunday school, also individual solos and readings. The closing number was an allegory by intermediate girls, recommending the gospel as the greatest means of happiness.

The evening service consisted of hymns by a chorus of intermediate and junior girls, solos, and readings. The Biblical drama, “Simon’s wife’s mother,” was presented by the class in religious drama from the University of Southern California, under the direction of Miss Lydia Glover, instructor and author of the play. Sister Eunice Wimm Smith, member of the class, had the privilege of presenting the title role. The church was filled all day. The evening presentation was made in the Sunday school auditorium, and there was not room enough to seat all who came. The drama produced a lovely feeling of the presence and help of God, and Christ his Son.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held at Exposition Park June 20.

One of the happy occasions at the Central Church was a beautiful wedding, when Brother Wallace Farley, leader of the East Los Angeles Church Choir, and Miss Edna Crayne, took the sacred vows of marriage, administered by Brother N. T. Chapman, assisted by the pastor. Sister Bessie Farley and Brother Frank Staats were the attendants. The wedding music was played by Sister Margaret Wickes, and solos were sung by Sister Stella Kelley. The choir gave a reception and shower for these young people two weeks later. Sister Mary Wilson and Mr. Pritchard were married at the parsonage in May, by the pastor.

The choir gave a musical comedy for the benefit of the pipe organ fund in May, and later repeated it at the Long Beach church. The Good Times Club gave a musical tea in June. The annual Sunday school picnic was held at Exposition Park June 20.

The choir gave a musical comedy for the benefit of the pipe organ fund in May, and later repeated it at the Long Beach church. The Good Times Club gave a musical tea in June, at which a number of beautiful solos and readings were rendered, and a small play was presented, after which officers for the next year were elected. Their next good time is July 11, when they will have a plunge party at Redondo Beach. The attendance at these affairs is about one hundred and fifty.

June brought with it the great Shriner’s Convention, with thousands of marching men in brilliant uniforms, accompanied by playing bands and flying banners. Los Angeles did its best to welcome these guests and entertain them. A wonderful parade, put on by the public schools of the city, exceeded everything else in beauty. Over a hundred floats, covered with flowers, portraying scenes in the history of California, and participated in by thousands of school children, made a scene never to be forgotten. Some of our children took part in these parades, helped prepare the floats, and rode on them. Sister Hermina Badham was responsible for one of them.

Brother Ralph Mather, younger son of Doctor and Sister Joseph Mather, graduated from the Los Angeles high school. He and his brother Lawrence, with Brother Ronald Smith, are now visiting in Independence.

Sister Olive Lytle is absent from her post as chorister of the Sunday school on a visit to Washington, District of Columbia, with her husband.

There has been some illness, but most of our sick have recovered. However, we regret to record the death of Sister Rose Ware in April. Her daughter, Sister E. S. Outhout, came from Omaha and met with the Saints often during her stay. Also Sister Ada Wales passed on a short time ago, leaving her son and daughter to mourn for her.

The pastor’s family have moved next door to the church, which is vastly more convenient for the family and the congregation. The house number is now 3843 South Grand Avenue.

Dudley Smith left in early June for Skyland Camp, Lake Tahoe, California, where he is counselor. R. Wayne Smith, who has been teaching in San Diego, is attending summer school, doing post-graduate work at the University of Southern California.

Brother and Sister W. W. Smith enjoyed the pleasure of entertaining her sister, Sister Eva Winn Cox and husband, Brother Charles Cox of Independence, and showing them the beauties of California.

There have been a number of visitors at the church, among them Sister Rose Bozarth Buschau and children, Adolph and Doris, and Sister Alice Bozarth, of Wichita, Kansas; and Sisters Marcine Smith and Fern Gould of Independence. Sister Ella Cargyle, who has been teaching near Independence, has joined her family here.

The church here has a number of events scheduled for the future. First is the Fourth of July fete, to be held at Hermosa Beach under the direction of Presiding Deacon O. C. White and the Department of Women. All are invited to come, without their lunches, for there will be everything that one could desire, for sale, and the proceeds will aid the building fund.

The reunion of Southern California District convenes the 7th of August, and it is being planned, prepared for, and advertised now. We are looking for a good crowd and a spiritual and helpful experience together.

The semiannual branch business meeting meets August 8. A telephone message assures us that the pipe organ has arrived and will be set up in a few weeks. The morning mail brings us news that President Elbert A. Smith will be with us on Sunday, July 19, so we have another bright day in prospect.

The work is forward in Los Angeles; there is a great deal to do, but we are thankful to say that workers are coming forward to do the work, and God is blessing them.

Tulsa Church to Have Baptismal Font

(From letter of James A. Thomas, Tulsa, Oklahoma, June 29, 1925, to the First Presidency.)

Our Children’s Day exercises were held the 21st. I was much pleased with the work our people did for that day. After the regular Sunday school session we had a real children's meeting: A tableau of the youngest, wearing flowers and standing under an arch of artificial flowers, backed by a quartet of four girls who sang, made a fitting introduction for a short talk on the blessing of babies. Then followed the blessing of six little ones. The audience sang appropriate songs while we prepared for the baptismal service, which was held in an improvised font, a small stock tank, filled by carrying water on the running board of my car from my own home. (The work I did seemed to have a good effect, for men urged me to take steps to get a font put in, they offering to find material and artisans.) After more songs and a short talk on the meaning of confirmation, we confirmed the four children that had been baptized. This was all woven together to form the eleven o'clock service.

The evening was occupied by the giving of our church program, “The language of the flowers.” All worked well, and some of the parents remarked that it had been the most impressive Children's Day they had ever seen.

Friday evening I baptized another boy who could not make up his mind to be baptized Sunday.

I also had a funeral Friday afternoon, service for an old lady not of our faith, but mother of a member. That was a rather strenuous day as the service was held near Sapulpa, and interment near Bixby. Home to the baptism, and to Religio after that.

This evening I go to Jenks to baptize another of Brother Case’s converts.

While yesterday was the hottest day of the year thus far, our attendance at church was up to the average or better. Several nonmembers were out at night, and I enjoyed good liberty in preaching to them. The increasing power that I feel in declaring the truth causes me to marvel at the thought of what may be when we are really functioning as God's church.
Department of Women in Zion

The Department of Women in Independence is holding monthly meetings to which all women are invited. The programs are varied in nature each month, the subjects including "Child welfare," "Home economics," "Health," "Social hygiene," "Citizenship," "Temperance," and in fact all phases of everyday religion.

The last program was held June 5, and was planned by the superintendent of the Home Economics Department, Mrs. Bertha Donaldson Mader, who gave an excellent talk on the subject, "Practical things a mother may teach her girls during vacation." A brief outline is given below. The meeting was in the nature of a mothers' conference. An interesting discussion was opened by Mrs. Charles Cox, who gave suggestions as to what mothers may teach their boys.

The meetings usually are on the first Friday of each month at half past two, in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church.

Practical Things a Mother May Teach Her Daughters During Vacation

The only excuse for presenting the matter in hand is to freshen memories and give an opportunity for helpful discussion later on. The subject is known to you.

The practical things our daughters may learn are all included under the head: Household management, arts, sciences, and may be enumerated as follows:

1. Housekeeping, meaning the furnishing, upkeep, cleaning, and repairing of the house.
2. Sewing, to include all sewing of the household linens, the making of the garments for various members of the family, and millinery.
3. Cooking, which should mean not only the actual preparation of food for use, but also a knowledge of food values and the ability to purchase good materials at fair prices.

By the time the child has reached school age, she should have acquired sufficient skill in house duties to save her mother many steps. From now on she will have but little time to learn new household tasks that require continuous effort, except in vacation. Vacation time, then, is the mother's golden opportunity to teach her girls the accomplishment of the household duties. In her attitude towards home work the daughter usually reflects the mother's feeling.

The upkeep of the home affords its simplest lessons, because easily divided into units that do not require continuous application. Besides, they are quite easily looked after, while the mother is up and about her own tasks.

Sewing lessons should be begun about the seventh year of age. Some may begin sooner, according to the muscle control. The very nature of the first sewing lessons makes them slow of accomplishment, so they should be undertaken before the adolescent period.

The lessons in cookery may well be scattered over a number of years, increasing in difficulty and scope of allied subject matter as the girls grow older.

The secret of how successfully each mother can teach her girls depends upon her liking for the work of her home and her enjoyment of the companionship of her daughters.

While the value to each girl of a knowledge of how to manage her own household cannot be estimated, yet the greater value in these lessons with mother lies in the opportunity they give to form a bond of confidence that gives opportunity to the mother to guide and direct in the formative years and to look forward and upward to the bigger, better life.

Sioux City Gains in Membership

The Charles J. Smith family returned to the city from Wagner Monday. Elder Smith preached to the Saints and friends there for about ten days. Sacrament was administered last Sunday. Brother Charles Hair brought the family home, returning home the same day.

The D. Morgareidge family motored to Concord, Nebraska, last Sunday; the Ned Calhoon family, Mrs. A. M. Calhoon, and Nettie, to Wagner, South Dakota; Mrs. D. Smith also accompanied Brother Ned Calhoon.—From The Saints' Pilot.

New London, Connecticut

July 6.—Brother Charles Clark, priest, from Barnum-Bailey and Ringling Brothers Circus was the speaker here Sunday, June 21, at both morning and evening preaching services. He told some very interesting things about circus life and travels. The Saints were pleased to meet him and hope to welcome him again when he can come.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has been very active during the month of June. A box social and strawberry festival were given and the proceeds reserved for the building fund. A wiener roast is scheduled for July 7, and a large number of nonmembers are expected to attend, as well as Saints.

Elder Raymond Bradshaw, from Attleboro, Massachusetts, delivered a sermon here Sunday morning, June 28, which was both encouraging and instructive to right living. He was accompanied by his family. The Saints enjoyed their visit very much.

Sister Ila Mae Griffith of the junior class was awarded the prize as winner in a recent Sunday school contest. The prize was the book, Little Women.

Break Ground for Des Moines Church

(From letter of H. A. Higgins to the First Presidency, dated Des Moines, Iowa, June 29, 1925.)

We will commence excavating for the new church to-morrow (Tuesday) morning. In our services yesterday we raised sufficient funds to make our holdings, including the $8,000 held by the Bishop, $10,000. We figure that this will care for our needs for possibly the next ninety days. It is our plan to discount all our bills excepting those for labor, which cannot be discounted.

Stone Church

The Sunday school misses Brother Cooper's orchestra. They have been rendering service on the Campus Sunday evenings until the band is organized.

Elder Cyril E. Wight, son of the late J. W. Wight, was the speaker Sunday morning at the Stone Church, and his effort was highly commended.

Around six o'clock a thunder storm developed and the rain came. It looked as if there would be no Campus services, but the skies eventually cleared and it is estimated twenty-three hundred people took chances on the weather and greeted President Smith.

Miss Amy Winning of Kansas City furnished a splendid musical program.

President Smith continued his subject of two weeks previous, on stewardships and Zion. He took up the program adopted by the late General Conference. The speaker said, among other things, that the program was Christian in the highest sense. Its object is to teach the Saints to live the gospel of Christ in a practical way. We have been teaching stewardships nearly one hundred years. Now we must make the application. Fear always takes place when there is any change of thought and mode of living, etc. There is pioneer work to do for this church. We must blaze the way. It is not going to be an easy task. Can it be done by human strength? No! With Divinity leading? Yes! It is not a matter of numbers but of consecrated efforts. President Smith said, "My deepest interest, my sole interest, for a quarter of a century, has been to try to persuade our people to Christianize their money, their talents, their energies." Stewardship is not an individual affair, but must be cooperative. Christianity is not only individual, but cooperative. This program will sift out those who are willing to go on a divine basis. We must pool our interests. Competition is characteristic of the present system, which is selfish. Stewardship means cooperation and unselfishness. What is necessary to make our program successful? Talent; willingness; capacity. We must know what the manpower of the church is. That is the object of the inventory. It is to obtain the proper information to enable us to understand what our resources are. We must more fully adopt the budget plan. The Government of the United States has found this is necessary. The government of God should work on this basis to get the best results. A willingness to go on the stewardship basis means not being actuated by selfishness. The ruling motive must be the desire to better man's spiritual and temporal condition. The business men of the church must be so organized that the church will obtain the benefit of their practical experience. We shall not tear up the foundation laid by our fathers and re-lay it. We expect to continue the work where they left off. We have a great task before us, but with the Lord's help, we shall succeed.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller made a hurried trip to Cameron last week in his Ford. He says bad roads result in broken springs, but otherwise the trip was quite enjoyable. He leaves Tuesday noon to spend a week or so in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Hot weather may spend itself, but the good work goes forward. The thermometer stood at 98 degrees in the Presidency's office and at 100 in the editorial rooms at the Herald Office one day last week in spite of open windows, extended awnings, and electric fans, yet every one was at his post as usual, drinking a little more ice water than usual, but keeping the wheels turning just the same.

Bishop James F. Keir and Sister Floyd Hamilton were in attendance at the funeral of their father, Elder F. M. Cooper, at Plano, Illinois, on Sunday. Sister J. L. Benson, another daughter, was not in health which would permit her making the trip.

Second Church

Group 16 has been compelled to relinquish the services of their presiding elder, E. E. Willard, who has been over them for several years and has done a good work. In his place they are to have Elder H. J. Kress, recently moved to Independence from Minneapolis, Minnesota, and who bears a good reputation for ambitious endeavor and good work performed.

The young people will go to the home of Brother P. A. Sherman Sunday morning at a quarter to eight to hold their prayer meeting in his grove at eight o'clock. Conveyances are provided for them which will leave the church near a quarter to eight as possible.

Bishop B. J. Scott was a much appreciated visitor and speaker at eleven o'clock Sunday morning. The people are always pleased with his thought, energy, and spirit.

The afternoon prayer meetings are from two to three o'clock on Sunday afternoons during the heated term of the summer.

Sunday evening Priest Glen Davies preached his first sermon at the church to a very attentive and sympathetic audience. He made a studious and spiritual effort, and bids fair to develop into a useful preacher. The Sunday evening services are expected to be very short during the hot weather, occupying less than an hour altogether.

Walnut Park

Sunday morning an excellent sermon was delivered by Patriarch Ammon White on the much-discussed subject of evolution.

Walnut Park Saints were pleased to hear that Patriarch John F. Martin will begin a series of meetings here on July 19. Brother Martin established his reputation as a most excellent speaker in his series before General Conference, and we will gladly welcome him back in our midst.

The community playground on the corner of Alton and Main Streets, which is in charge of the young people of Walnut Park, is open every Thursday evening from half past six to half past nine, at which time there is supervised play for all, both old and young. Come out and help make this a success.

Brother David Harbaugh, who has been very ill for some time, is improved, and it is hoped he will soon be able to meet with the Saints again.

We also missed Sister Hallie Gould from our services Sunday and upon inquiry learned that she is ill at her home on King's Highway. Sister Gould is one of our best workers, and we hope she will soon recover.

Liberty Street

The speaker Sunday morning at Liberty Street was Moroni Traxler, of Lamoni, Iowa, who spoke on the redemption of Zion.

About half past five in the morning four carloads of Saints from this congregation started for Warrensburg, Missouri. They had some car trouble on the way but arrived just as Sunday school was closing. Brother E. T. Atwell spoke at eleven o'clock, and the Liberty Street Temple Builder Quartet furnished the music for the service. Those singing in the quartet are: Susie Adkins, Mabel and Ruth Tignor, and Irma Peak. Besides these girls there were in the party the family of Brother Philip Turner, Brother and Sister Richard Wilkie and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Moriarty. They returned by way of Holden, arriving there at four o'clock. Here Brother Atwell addressed the old people at the Holden Home, and the girls sang; also Brother Atwell sang the “Holy City.”

The stay in Holden was not long and they arrived in Independence in time for the evening meeting on the Campus, where President F. M. Smith was the speaker.

Enoch Hill

In spite of the hot weather, a full house greeted Pastor C. Ed. Miller Sunday morning. His sermon to the young people was excellent, and the Saints felt that the effort to attend had been well repaid.

The choir held a social last Thursday evening at the home of Sister Nellie Kramer, at which time it was decided to disband the general choir work for the summer. For each week that the choir is on its vacation, two people have been appointed to arrange for the Sunday music. Some good programs are being looked forward to.

Quite a bit of interest is being manifest in volleyball. Next Thursday night the Enoch Hill team will meet the team from Walnut Park in a match game on the Enoch Hill court.

East Independence

Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the speaker Sunday morning on “Stewardship,” and Elder J. J. Teeters occupied in the evening. There was a very small audience in the evening, as a good many of the Saints from here went to the Campus for evening service.

The Willing Workers had an ice cream social Tuesday evening on the lawn of Mr. Allick. A large crowd was present, and a neat little sum was taken in.

Kansas City Stake

Fourth Church

Sunday, June 28, was Girls’ Day. The morning talk was by Sister Lulu Sandy, and in the evening Mrs. Evelyn Cope addressed the audience on the subject of “Character building.” Those who were in charge and those who participated, not including the two first mentioned, were the girls of the congregation, and it was thought that a great success by those regularly in charge. Brother E. T. Atwell of Independence was the speaker on the evening of the 5th, and his effort was much appreciated. The little mimeographed sheet, the Ivanhoe Pilot, is still issued and is full of good, pithy suggestions, as well as announcing the order of services each week.

Grandview Church

Children’s Day was June 21. A program of readings, exercises, and music was given by the children of the primary department at 11 o’clock. The baby of Sister Thelma Sterrate was blessed at this service, after which nine children were baptized by Elder Daniel Tucker, three boys and six girls, and confirmation was at the half past six service. On July 2 the Department of Women gave a chicken supper and bazaar during the evening, at which a neat sum of money was cleared. Volley ball games were held on the Grandview court Thursday evening, between the Quindaro and Grandview Girls, Quindaro and Rock Island men, and Grandview and Rock Island men.

The following are on vacations: Brother and Sister Leo Lewis, to Portland, Oregon; Brother and Sister Swearingen motored to Colorado; Brother and Sister C. D. Jellings to Waterloo, Iowa; and a number of others are taking week-end trips to near-by summer resorts. We wish them a hearty good time, but will welcome them back in the same way, as the work is nearly at a standstill. Grandview picnicked with the Chelsea organization on July 4.

Malvern Church

Social activities have been rather slack lately, but since our young people’s class has been reorganized we expect some good lively times. Elder Cyril W. Fligg, Lamoni, Iowa, was the morning speaker June 28. We were pleased to have him occupy, as he always presents a message that stirs us into action. The same evening the new choir sang and there were other musical numbers rendered, after which Brother W. I. Fligg occupied the sacred desk.

Lamoni Stake

July 13.—There were conflicting attractions in Lamoni Tuesday evening, a Latter Day Saint branch business meeting and a free picture show. Needless to say the latter proved the greater. There was little business to be transacted, except of a routine nature, so it was handled by the few who attended. A change in the time of holding branch business meetings was ordered. Instead of being held quarterly, as heretofore, they will be held only once a year, and such intermediate sessions as shall be deemed necessary be subject to a special call from the presidency.

Brother C. E. Wight, our former president, stopped off in Lamoni. He is long enough to say “Hello” to his many friends. He was on his return trip to Kansas City from Des Moines, where he had delivered the Fourth of July address at a picnic held by the Saints of the district. Mrs. Wight accompanied him to Des Moines and also to Kansas City, where Elder Wight is employed and where they expect to locate soon.

One of the leading events in Lamoni this week was a meeting held on the church lawn Friday evening, when forty parents answered invitations sent out by Scoutmaster George Mesley to meet him and his Scouts and Wolf Cubs, in an effort to establish a better understanding of the work he has undertaken and encourage a closer cooperation between these organizations and the home. Each group of boys put on a demonstration of the work they are doing, after which Mr. Mesley explained the object and benefits of the work in detail. “Scouting,” he said, “is making real men out of real boys by a real program. It is a game with high stakes—the development of good citizenship.”

The Wolf Cubs is an organization of boys from eight to twelve years, the work of which is preliminary to scouting. It is not a national organization as yet, but is of European origin; organized out of a definite realization on the part of Boy Scout originators that group training should start before a boy reaches Scout age. Lamoni had the first Wolf Cub organization in America, started last winter. Since that time two others have been organized, one in Oklahoma, the other in California.

The Cubs will be in camp during the stake reunion, and the Scouts will go into camp for ten days following the reunion. They hope to have their uniforms by that time. Brother Mesley has had thorough training for his work and is accomplishing much with the young boys of Lamoni. The meeting held Friday night was conducive of much good.

The social held on the lawn at the home of Stake President W. E. Frall and wife Friday evening, when Brother and Sister Frall and Brother E. Dewey White and wife were hosts and hostesses to a group of young people who are regular attendants at the weekly prayer meeting, was well attended. Games were played and refreshments served. A closer acquaintance between these young people and their leaders is the object of the gatherings, which will be held once each month during the summer.
The Bloomington Branch north of Lamoni is progressing nicely. They are holding regular services, including Religio every Sunday and prayer services Wednesday. There have been five baptisms recently: Donald and Dorothy Ford, Dick Outhouse, Arnold Peterson, all children of Saints, and Mrs. Belle Riley, who has been investigating for some time.

The combined northern stake choirs, including Charlton, Hiteman, Lucas, and Centerville, are holding regular rehearsals under the direction of Evan Fry. A group of singers from Lamoni always accompanies him to aid the northern choir in the preparation of reunion music. They usually return after the rehearsal, but last time the ten singers were rained in and obliged to stay all night in Charlton. They were entertained at the homes of Saints.

Miss Mabel Carlile, the leader of the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorical Society, in company with Miss Lula Porter, home economics teacher of Graceland, is spending a delightful summer in Estes Park, Colorado. Both ladies were successful in securing employment in the park to finance their trip.

Elder H. H. Gold was the speaker at the church yesterday morning, and Elder Peter Muceus at night. Brother Muceus preached his farewell sermon, as he expects to leave Lamoni July 20, sailing from New York July 25 for his foreign mission field in Norway. The high school orchestra furnished music at this service.

Holden Stake

Brother and Sister I. M. Ross are moving to Maryville, Missouri, where Brother Ross will engage in business connected with the distribution of oil, paint, etc. They have been active in the stake work since its organization, he in the bishopric and she connected with the Department of Women. Their son Chilton has also been active and helpful in the work here.

Bishop J. A. Koehler is entering upon the duties of his office in the stake and is making a good impression. He was the speaker July 5 at 8 p. m. The selection of Brother C. F. Scarcliff as his counselor is giving general satisfaction in the stake.

The many friends of Brother and Sister Krahl were pleased to meet them last week and to note the improvement in the health of Brother Krahl. A council meeting was held by the presidency and bishopric. An active campaign is planned for moving the work in the stake.

The stake will operate the Square Deal Dining Hall during the State Fair, August 15-22, and will appreciate an early response to their call for help. They furnish meals, sleeping quarters, and a pass to the grounds for those who wish to attend the Fair and donate a few days' work. For further particulars write W. S. Macaee, Box 125, Holden, Missouri.

Reports from Brethren Curtis and Rowe, who are holding a series of services at Jefferson City in the tent, say they are meeting with a very friendly people and are having a good hearing. The tent is in the Eastern part of Houchin Park, on the street car line. They will be pleased to have any of the Saints coming to the city on the excursion Sunday, July 19, visit them. Take street car near Missouri Pacific depot and go east to Houchin Park.

Elder Hale W. Smith, for several years in the mission field, was a visitor here recently, calling on acquaintances at the Home. His talk to the old people was appreciated. The elders' quorum will hold an all-day meeting at Holden July 26, and all elders in the stake are requested to attend.

Warrensburg

Elder G. W. Hancock was the speaker July 5 and gave some timely advice on the proper athletics for an article mentioned in James 3:56. Look it up. Elder E. T. Atwell and wife accompanied by two car loads of Saints from Independence worshiped with us Sunday, July 12, and Brother Atwell gave us a splendid sermon at eleven a. m. A quartet composed of Ruth and Mabel Tignor, Irma Peek, and Susie Adkins from the Liberty Street Church sang two selections which were very much appreciated. They were accompanied by Sister H. A. Moriarty, superintendent of the young women.

Lees Summit

The Saints were very much pleased with the sermon of Brother John Garver, who stepped on his way from the Sedalia conference. Our Homecoming Day, June 28, was a success. A splendid prayer service occupied the usual Sunday school hour and Brother Miller spoke at eleven o'clock. A splendid dinner was served cafeteria way at half past twelve. Brother Elbert A. Smith preached a fine sermon at half past two and Bishop J. A. Becker finished up the day's activities with a good sermon at eight o'clock. All the services were held in the City Park, due to the painting and decorating of the church. Elder E. E. Long was with us sacrament day. The Children's Day program was given at night, including a talk to the children by Brother Lewis.

Brother Fligg's talk Wednesday night contained food for thought and helped us to classify ourselves according to Christ's teachings.

Lexington

We enjoyed very much the visit June 28 of Brother Scarcliff, but he did not get to occupy much time as Reverend Forman, of the Anti-Saloon League, occupied part of the hour. Brother A. A. Weaver spoke at night on the "Signs of the time." Brother C. B. Hartshorn was also a visitor and worshipped with us. The recent stake conference was a source of encouragement to the Saints, and we feel to press on with greater zeal in putting over the program of the church. We enjoyed entertaining the conference. Sunday dinner was served in the basement of the church to a large crowd.

Holden Stake conference convened at Sedalia, Saturday, June 20, at 10 a. m., with prayer meeting in charge of R. E. Burgess and George Hancock. Business session followed at 11 a. m. with F. A. McWethy of the stake presidency in charge. Brother J. F. Garver of the Quorum of Twelve was associated with the stake presidency in making provisions for all further activities of the conference. Sister Lola A. Johnson, stake musical director, had charge over all the music and song service. Reports were read from the stake presidency, stake bishop, stake recorder, superintendent of the Department of Women, and stake Sunday school superintendent.

All visiting members in the stake were given the right of voice on the conference floor. Sister I. M. Ross, expecting to soon move from the stake resigned as superintendent of the Department of Women. Her resignation was accepted, and a very cordial vote of thanks and appreciation was extended to her for faithful and diligent service performed in this capacity for a number of years. Sister Ross will truly be missed from our stake. The stake presidency was authorized to appoint her successor. The resignation of Brother D. R. Carmichael from the office of superintendent of Recreation and Expression was not accepted, but left in the hands of the stake presidency, as it was thought that it would be likely Brother Carmichael could continue his work in the stake.

At 2.30 in the afternoon regular business was again taken up under the direction of the conference presidency. The resignation of Brother A. B. Phillips as bishop of the stake was accepted. The appointment of Brother Phillips to work under the direction of the conference presidency. The bishopric (each department choosing its own representative) was accepted. The appointment of Brother Phillips to work under the direction of the conference presidency. The bishopric (each department choosing its own representative) was approved by the conference.

It was voted to reaffirm the action of the conference relative to making the stake the unit of organization as adopted in June, 1921, at Lexington, Missouri. A recommendation from the stake presidency asking that a committee of three be appointed, consisting of one member from the High Council, one from the stake presidency and from the bishopric (each department choosing its own representative) to compile and present to the groups the rules under which they will work, was approved by the conference.

Elder E. A. Curtis, missionary of Holden Stake, occupied at eight o'clock Saturday evening. His sermon was highly edifying, setting forth the necessity of our demonstrating a practical Christianity, if we expect to accomplish results in this work.

The Saints came fasting to the eight o'clock prayer meeting Sunday morning. J. F. Garver and George Hancock were in charge. A spiritual meeting was experienced. At the close of the prayer services the following ordinations were performed: J. A. Koehler was blessed as bishop of the Holden Stake, and C. F. Scarciff was ordained as counselor to the Holden Stake Bishop. Sunday school convened at 9.45 in charge of local superintendent, Roscoe B. Moorman, and Brother Scarciff, stake superintendent.

The sermon at the eleven o'clock hour was delivered by Apostle J. F. Garver. This was another one of Brother Garver’s heart to heart talks with the Saints, which was greatly appreciated.

Knobnooster

Elder John T. Nutt, of Selden, Kansas, has purchased a farm here and will take up his residence here in the fall. Sister Brown, of Independence, and Sister Motter, of Oklahoma, are visiting Sister W. J. Weston. Grandma Simmons, of Johnson City, Illinois, who has been visiting her daughter, Sister E. E. Petre, returned to her home; she was accompanied by her granddaughter, Helen Scarlett. The change of time of the Religio from Sunday to Friday evening, has marked an increase in attendance. Sister E. L. Moorman is the newly elected superintendent. Fern and Wayne Burgess are spending their vacation with friends at Lexington.

Our sacramental service July 5 was a great spiritual uplift. Brother and Sister Brendel and Sister Lola A. Johnson of Lexington, Brother W. S. Macrae of the stake presidency, Brother and Sister R. F. Moorman, Brother and Sister Maxwel Weaver of Sedalia and Sister Elza Wood of Kansas City, worshiped with us. Brother Floyd N. Mortimore was ordained to the office of elder as provided for at the stake conference by Elders R. E. Burgess, Petre, Brendel, and Macrae. Elder C. L. House, of Houstonia, was the morning speaker recently.

Mount Vernon's New Church Cornerstone Ceremonies

MOUNT VERNON, ILLINOIS, June 29.—June 28 was an eventful day for the Saints at this place, for it marked the laying of the cornerstone for the new church now being built in the city. A large tent was stretched on a lot next to the church lot, which was made as comfortable as possible for the happy Saints and their friends who came to witness the laying of the cornerstone and hear the speeches made in honor of the event.

The orchestra from East Saint Louis was there, and the beautiful music they gave was very much appreciated. Elder John W. Rushton, pastor of Saint Louis Branch, delivered an educational and interesting sermon at eleven o'clock, and it was most favorably received, especially by those of our faith.

At the noon hour a bounteous lunch was served, a sight to behold, which was greatly relished by an orderly concourse of people.

The great event of the day—the laying of the cornerstone—took place at half past two. The service was presided over by Elder R. H. Henson, president of Southeastern Illinois District, and Elder John W. Rushton delivered a short but very impressive address. He was followed by Elder J.
W. Paxton, who gave a timely speech; then a noted gentleman who is acting secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, a man who has to do with work in our State, delivered a most interesting address that was much appreciated by all present. The cornerstone was donated by the Stone and Marble Company of Mount Vernon, and on it was inscribed in gold letters, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 1925."

The services of the day were marked by the presence of the Holy Spirit, which brought joy and gladness to those who humbly assisted in the work. The church site is in a prominent and pleasant territory on the corner of Twentieth and Casey Streets, one block south of West Broadway, a beautiful location.

Elder O. C. Henson is president of the branch of about seventy people, and these Saints and their friends are making willing sacrifices that the building may be erected and occupied as soon as possible. Any wishing to help may send their donations to O. C. Henson, Route 7, Mount Vernon, Illinois.

Mount Vernon is a wonderful city for doing real missionary work, and the erection and completion of the building will be a wonderful incentive to encourage the people to investigate the claims we offer.

Elder J. W. Paxton has been holding open air services each night before large audiences, and some have already given their names for baptism.

Thurman, Iowa

July 7.—I have been much interested in reading the reports from the different branches of the progress they are making, and the thought came to me that perhaps there might be some who would be interested in a report from the old Thurman Branch.

We have only a little over one fourth the number of members here that we once had, several large families having moved away, and there are only three or four families that attend regularly. However, we have our regular Sunday school with Mark Leeka as superintendent, and regular preaching services each Sunday at eleven o'clock, except the first Sunday of the month, when we have our sacramental service.

Children's Day was observed here the 7th of June. We had Sunday school at ten o'clock and the program at eleven o'clock. Basket dinner was served at noon with a treat of ice cream and cake for all. Four children offered themselves for baptism; Morrell Cottew, Mary and Joseph Wight, and Sue Louise Leeka. They were baptized by District President N. L. Mortimore.

The confirmation was held at the church at half past three and was followed by the sacramental service, which was in charge of two of the district presidency, Elders N. L. Mortimore and H. N. Pierce.

Our priesthood strength has been greatly diminished in the past year from death and exodus to other branches, but we feel that we have some excellent material for replenishing our force among our young men. And perhaps before another year we will have the pleasure of presenting to our district conference some for ordination into the priesthood.

We are by no means discouraged, but are trying to keep up the work here and enjoy the Spirit in our labors. We are ever hopeful of better conditions and of the ultimate triumph of God's work.

Stewardship and Managerial Ability

In the doctrine of stewardships the factor of management looms large. The parable of the talents sets this out nicely. It is presumed that stewards shall be managing businesses or enterprises in which they have an accurate and efficient knowledge. And it is understood further that where in individual cases ability is short, these individuals shall be placed under supervisory direction of those possessing this ability.

On the importance of good management emphasis has always been placed by economists and students of good business; but recently Mr. R. W. Babson has been calling attention to it anew by pointing out that with money cheap, labor troubles few, and opportunities good, there is yet a slowness in general business. In attempting to seek the reasons he assigns the cause to inadequate growth and improvement in management. Among other things he said recently:

The greatest values are created neither by capital nor by labor, but by good management, and this good management is made up of character, judgment, vision, and courage. One thing, however, is certain, that however large the corporation and however many officials it may have, some one man is usually responsible for the management.

Moreover, corporations without such a "boss" are wellequipped with bravery. Certain railroads and industrials which are not doing well to-day are either lacking a boss or need a new one.

After a successful battle Napoleon always gave the credit to his "brave generals." He stated that they really had done all the work and were entitled to the praise. Whatever Napoleon really thought, we shall never know. History, however, teaches that after Napoleon was taken to Saint Helena all the "brave generals" went to farming. If they were all so important, it seems as if one of them would have made good without Napoleon to lean on.

All of which makes me believe that the trouble with some corporations to-day is that the "old man" is either dead or else is not tending to his job. The "brave generals" are doing the best they can, but they are helpless without their leader, however large their salaries may be.

I wish there were some way by which management could be satisfactorily listed in every balance sheet. Of course, the balance sheet reflects management but does not actually list it as a liability or as an asset. Yet in most corporations the management is the greatest asset or liability which the corporation has.

He goes on to set out the value of management in the building up of great fortunes. Of course throughout his discussion he is handling his subject from the standpoint of present industrial conditions and methods. However, this question of management is of prime importance to stewardship. For in every case the successful conduct of the stewardship is presumed. It means fitting the job to the man and the man to the job. The larger the job the bigger the man. And this carries over into group stewardships, so that in the case of the largest and hence rarest of stewardships there must be found those of rarer ability to manage and conduct.

How shall we find these managers of greater ability?

FREDERICK M. SMITH.
son of about three months in the various quarters, embracing June, July, and August.

Permanent grounds are maintained by a number of districts, and a few have permanent buildings erected and many improvements supplying amusements, sanitation, eating houses, shade, pavilion, and streets.

Saints have come to visit these places during their annual vacations from the farms, the shops, and the offices where they work and study, and it is a wholesome thing. Children accompany the parents and are provided organized and supervised play; youths are there and help in the musical and literary and spiritual activities, and enjoy wholesome amusements and entertainment; the adults also bring their unquestionable games and their engaging books, their musical instruments, their fancywork, and altogether these gatherings are coming to be the breathing spells of the Saints, and the times when they mingle and gather encouragement for the remainder of the year by counseling with their fellow Saints on vexing questions.

If you have not given the annual reunion of your district a trial at vacation time, do it this year. Our program is dependent upon our getting acquainted. To delay making this acquaintance is to retard the church's program.

Questions and Answers

Question: It is being rumored that the present Presiding Bishopric since coming into office have heavily mortgaged many pieces of church property. Is this true?

Answer: Up to July 1, 1925, the present Presiding Bishopric had placed no mortgages on any of the church properties. One mortgage for $6,000 on the Blue Springs farm was recorded after the adjournment of General Conference, but the note was signed by Bishop B. R. McGuire. This was a renewal. Since July 1, there have been two mortgages given to secure money placed with the church eight years ago.

Question: I have read a statement which seems to carry the idea that men employed in the office of the Presiding Bishopric are addicted to tobacco. Is that so?

Answer: It is not correct. One of the men now employed in the accounting department did formerly use tobacco. Before beginning work in the Bishop's office, he pledged himself to quit the habit permanently; he tested himself out for a time to assure himself that he could keep his pledge, before he took the assignment. He is an honorable and dependable man and is keeping his word. The use of tobacco is not countenanced in the church offices.

Radio Communicates With New Zealand and Argentina

The short-wave experimental radio station, located in the little building formerly used to house the broadcasting equipment, has recently succeeded in communicating with similar experimental short-wave stations in New Zealand and in Argentina, South America. Communication is carried on between 9 FF (call letters of the church station) and stations on both coasts of the United States almost daily. 9 FF is being operated by Brother Roy Beck, who is also one of the assistant operators of the new church broadcasting station.

Experiments by 9 FF to date have been with radio telegraphy, not telephony. The vacuum tube system is used, however, and can be adapted nicely to telephone experiments. Telephone modulation is not nearly as efficient for long distance communication as telegraph interruption, and to cover such distances by telephony as have been recently covered by telegraphy would require probably six to ten times the present power output (250 watts).

Short-wave broadcasting opens up a very interesting and important field, and it is hoped that those in charge of the church radio work can obtain financial assistance to keep abreast of the very important developments in this new work.

Missouri State Fair August 15 to 22

The Silver Anniversary of the Missouri State Fair will be celebrated this year, the fair extending from August 15 to 22, and the present prospects being for the most successful year in its history. From Sedalia there are continually going out news bulletins announcing large exhibits and attractions. Among these we note the news that $35,000 is offered in premiums for the various types and breeds of live stock, 6,357.50 being offered in the dairy cattle division.

The College Endowment
BY GEORGE N. BRIGGS

Colleges, universities, and other philanthropic institutions are never self-supporting in this country. It is the theory of a democracy that everyone is entitled to an education and the state takes care of the education of its children up to a certain age. In fact, compulsory attendance laws are the rule, and they are very generally well enforced. The expense for this educational program through the high school is met by the state through taxes. Beyond the high school period, the state provides a limited number of higher institutions of learning, where certain of its young people can secure the advantages of a college and professional training. These state institutions can, however, take care of only a small percentage of those desiring a college education, and they do not offer many of the courses and many of the opportunities which the young must have if they are to fill their mission in the church and in the state.

The result is that a large percentage of young people attending college go to church or privately endowed institutions. There is no question about the place of the church college in our general educational program in this country. Its place has been so well recognized in educational circles for more than a century, not only by the leading church men themselves, but by the state educational institutions also, that it is no longer a matter for serious argument.

The bulk of the funds to support higher education in this country comes from four sources:

1. Taxes.
2. Tuition and other fees.
3. Appropriations and subscriptions from church conferences, boards, and members.
4. Interest from endowment funds.

The first item, taxes, of course goes to the support of public institutions.

Tuition and fees are charged and vary in amount depending on location, cost of instruction, and course pursued. In no case are they sufficient to maintain the institution.

Church schools, in addition to the tuition, depend upon the third and fourth items, appropriations and subscriptions by church conferences, boards, and members, and on interest from permanent endowment.

It has been the policy of the Reorganization to support its college, sanitarium, and homes largely through annual appropriations and subscriptions by its membership. This policy has resulted in the development of a high grade junior college at Graceland, a most efficient sanitarium, and some good homes.

The policy has many advantages and has met our needs quite adequately so far.

Colleges in the United States are standardized and classified by certain regional accrediting associations, among these being the North Central Association, having supervision over twenty States extending from Ohio to Colorado and from Canada to New Mexico. These accrediting associations have adopted certain standards having to do with admission requirements; preparation of faculty members; quantity and quality of library and laboratory equipment; number, character, and serviceability of buildings; and financial support.

For many years Graceland has met all of the standards adopted and has been recognized as a fully accredited junior college not only by the North Central Association but by the Iowa Accrediting Commission, the Iowa State Board of Educational Examiners, and the National Association of Junior Colleges.

Recently, however, one of the standards of the North Central Association relating to financial support has been changed, requiring that a junior college receive a certain portion of its income from the interest on permanent endowment.

An endowment for a college means that a certain sum of money is invested in income producing properties such as stocks, bonds, lands, industrial plants, office buildings, and the amount received as income from these properties is used for the running expenses of the college. The principal is always kept intact, is never spent, only the interest on the income being used. If this were not done, it would not be endowment. The endowment must be invested in some income-producing securities or properties as a permanent fund.

The expense of maintaining Graceland under the endowment plan will be no greater than under the plan pursued up to date. If the $200,000 endowment required to continue Graceland as an accredited college is so invested in stocks, bonds, lands, or industrial plants as to produce an interest of 5 per cent, the income thus derived would be $10,000, which would reduce by that amount the sum annually appropriated by the General Conference for college expenses.

The total expense is no greater under one plan than the other, the only difference being that part of the amount needed for maintaining the college will come from the interest on its permanent endowment.
and not from annual appropriations by the General Conference.

All church colleges and universities now recognized and accredited have already provided endowments or are in the process of raising them through subscriptions by the church membership. Some of the well-known small church colleges in the Middle West have endowments as follows:

Babson, one of the most distinguished statisticians and philanthropists in the country, in discussing the matter of enduring investments says:

The important thing is so to dispose of them that they will endure over a long, long period, and if possible, through eternity. The length of life of investment varies from those that endure only a few minutes to those that endure many years or even generations.

Money invested in character building, and educational work endures forever. Winning souls to Jesus is the most enduring investment of all. There is nothing which develops the spiritual side of man as a whole-hearted, unselfish giving. The man who leaves pure charity out of his life misses a tremendous lot of fun. God made this world on peculiar plans. One of these plans is that while he put into the hands of men almost everything they want, he asks that we turn back or dedicate a certain part of it distinctly to him. Why? The reason is simple if we but look and see how much happier and fuller is the life of the one who gives than of the one who does not.

The crying need of this hour is not more factories or materials, or more railroads or steamships, or more navies, or more armies, but rather more religious education. The prosperity of our country depends on the nature and purposes of the people. With the forces of evil backed by men and money, systematically organized to destroy, we should back with men and money campaigns for religious education.

Few are too poor to give something to what they believe is God’s work. I have known a great many “tithers,” but I have yet to find one who felt he had lost anything by dedicating a definite part of his income to God. To everyone, rich and poor, the statement of the Wise Man regarding “bread on the waters,” has a very real application in this matter. There is no more enduring investment than in the building up of our church educational institutions. Their work lasts for eternity.

The social program of the church as adopted by the last General Conference provides for the effective operation of the stewardship plan long recognized as one of the most forward-looking steps ever undertaken by the church.

The hastening time is here and the Lord fully expects each to make his contribution toward the establishment of the program.

One of the fine features of the plan is that both the endowment of the college and the operation of the stewardship program can be made effective with the same money. The $200,000 required for the college endowment cannot be spent, otherwise it will not be an endowment. It can only be invested. For purposes of the church it can be invested in lands, industrial plants, etc., and used for the putting into effect of the stewardship program. Thus every dollar subscribed to the college endowment will serve a double purpose:

1. Save the college so that her standards and accrediting can be maintained.
2. Make effective the stewardship program of the church.

Of course it is understood that the operation of the law of stewardships in connection with the college endowment will be under the general church officers.

What better opportunity is there before the membership of the church to-day?

The Elements of Stewardships and Our Social Program

By Albert Carmichael

Summing up the giving of stewardships, we find that the Bishopric, being the legal custodian of church property, is the one to give the stewardship, so far as its legal aspect is concerned.

Who to Have.

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:9.

A commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship.—Doctrine and Covenants 101:2.

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; . . . let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119:8.

In Doctrine and Covenants 51:1, Edward Partridge is told to “appoint unto this people their portion.” In paragraph 5, we learn “this shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge, in other places, in all churches.”

And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God.—Doctrine and Covenants 70:3.

These authoritative texts give us to know without a doubt who it is that is to have stewardships. “Every man,” “all are called,” “none are exempt,” are expressions that need no explanation.
Qualifications Necessary to Receive

A belief in and a full compliance with the laws governing initiation into the church, known as spiritual laws. These are faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection, eternal judgment, etc. (As this article has to do more particularly with the law of temporalities, we do not enter into this phase of the question.)

A belief in and full compliance with the law of temporalities as revealed in the three standard books of the church, namely, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; . . . and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

Impart a portion of thy property; yea, even part of thy lands, and all save the support of thy family.—Doctrine and Covenants 18: 5.

They have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, . . . and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2.

It is wisdom in me that my servant Martin Harris should be an example unto the church, in laying his moneys before the bishop of the church. And, also, this is a law unto every man that cometh unto this land, to receive an inheritance, and he shall do with his moneys according as the law directs.—Doctrine and Covenants 58: 7.

I require all their surplus property to put into the hands of the bishop . . . It shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you.—Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1, 2.

A certificate from the judge or bishop in this part of the vineyard, unto the bishop in Zion, rendereth every man acceptable, and answereth all things, for an inheritance, and to be received as a wise steward and as a faithful laborer; otherwise he shall not be accepted of the bishop in Zion . . . A few words in addition to the laws of the kingdom, respecting the members of the church; they that are appointed by the Holy Spirit to go up unto Zion, and they who are privileged to go up unto Zion. Let them carry up unto the bishop a certificate from three elders of the church, or a certificate from the bishop, otherwise he who shall go up unto the land of Zion shall not be accounted as a wise steward.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 4, 5.

For according to the law every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 3.

Notice briefly: “Keep all my commandments,” among which are the following:

Lay your moneys (this is a comprehensive word, including all kinds of property) before the bishop of the church. This is done by making a financial statement (called testimony in 42: 9) and placing it in the hands of the bishop. This statement to show the total assets, or what the person has, and the total liabilities, or what the person owes. If this statement shows that you have more than your needs and just wants, then

“Impart a portion of thy property; yea, even . . . all save the support of thy family.” (Doctrine and Covenants 18: 5.) This support being your needs and just wants. This portion to be imparted is your “supreme properties.” (Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1.) You are now doing with your moneys “as the law directs.” (Doctrine and Covenants 58: 7.) This portion imparted or given to the bishop is to be done “with a covenant and deed which cannot be broken.” (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.)

“Your interest” (Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1); “your increase” (Proverbs 3: 9); “the abundance” (101: 2); “a portion” (18: 5 and 101: 2); “all save the support of thy family” (18: 5); and all synonymous expressions meaning the same thing as surplus. (Also see Church History, vol. 1, pp. 259, 260, 300.)

When and Where Allotted.

Recognizing the fatherhood of God logically compels us to admit that divine sonship and brotherhood of man. Every man being, as Paul says, “the offspring of God” (Romans 17: 28), it follows that every man is a steward of God. (Doctrine and Covenants 98: 12; 118: 4.)

Some men may be entirely ignorant of this wonderful fact, but their ignorance does not vitiate the truth. Others may understand their relationship to God, but fail to assume the responsibility. There are still others who understand their sacred calling as stewards, and desire to enter therein and occupy for the Master.

When can this be done? Does the person have to live in Zion or her stakes to be entitled to occupy as a steward?

In Doctrine and Covenants 51: 1, we find stewardships being allotted to Saints in Kirtland, Ohio, which was not in Zion at that time. (See also Doctrine and Covenants 61: 4; 64: 4; 83: 18.)

In paragraph 5, “This shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge, in other places, in all churches.”

This shows that stewardships may be given in all the churches (branches) wherever there is a branch. As stated before, every Saint is a steward of God. His complying with the law of temporalities and receiving the acknowledgment of the church through the proper authority, is what formally makes and recognizes him as a steward. This formal acknowledgment by the church can be done in Zion or outside, and when the Saints so desire, providing the person so desiring has complied with the laws governing stewardships. In fact, every Saint should both in theory and deed become an acknowledged stewardship.
steward, no matter where they reside. The sooner the better.

Doctrine and Covenants 106:2 states emphatically when the time for procrastination must cease—when we “gather unto the land of Zion.” If they do not, “they shall not be found worthy to abide among you.”

All Saints now living in the confines of Zion should hasten to comply with the law of temporalities; failing to do so knowingly, they cannot claim the blessings of God.

Capital to Create, From Where.

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:9.

This clearly answers the question as to what property is to be used to create stewardships. Every person is to consecrate his surplus, if he has any, to the bishop, and retain enough of his own property to supply his needs and just wants, which is his stewardship or inheritance. Over the property retained the party is to exercise the full privilege of a steward, and, of course, does not need to pay for it, as it is his already.

Over that part which he consecrates, the party so consecrating has no more claims. This property consecrated to the bishop is used to aid any worthy Saint to a stewardship.

Here, as in all transactions, the party receiving properties from the Bishop should pay an equivalent. Every man must “pay for that which he gets.” No person able to pay for an inheritance or stewardship should expect to get it for nothing, or even for less than it is worth. This equivalent must be either in money or service.

Exceptions may be made to this general rule, providing worthy parties are handicapped from giving an equivalent by physical or mental disabilities, or by reason of being spiritual stewards.

The Amount to Be Invested in a Stewardship.

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:9.

Here is the general law governing as to the amount to be invested in a stewardship; namely, “inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.”

And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just.—Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.

Our just wants and needs are expressions here used to designate the amount of our stewardship. No doubt both expressions, “sufficient for himself and family,” and “needs and just wants,” mean the same thing.

Let my servant ... appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs.—Doctrine and Covenants 51:1.

And that there might not be any doubt as to whether the above statement was to be taken as the general law governing the amount of stewardships, we find the following given:

Behold, this shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge [the presiding bishop], in other places, in all churches.—Doctrine and Covenants 51:5.

That the reader may get a clearer distinction between needs and wants, we make the following comments:

Needs are always just. Wants may be just, or they may not be just.

Needs

To need means to be without that which is essential for our existence or our purpose.

What we need is considered natural and indispensable, such as food and clothing. That which is needed by one is in like circumstances needed by all; for example: All persons need warm clothing and a warm house in winter.

What we mean by our Wants

What we want is artificial. What one man wants is a superfluity to another; for example: Tender people may want a fire when others may be glad not to have it.

To want is to be without that which contributes to our comfort, or is an object of our desires.

The Law of the “Need”

(a) The Unchangeability of God.

For I am the Lord, I change not.—Malachi 3:6.

With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1:17.

Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever.—Hebrews 13:8.

(b) The Law of the “Equival,ent.”

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.—Genesis 3:19.

The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again.—Psalms 37:21.

For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat, ... for we hear that there are some ... working not at all, ... Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.—2 Thessalonians 3:10-12.

Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:12.

(c) Our Portion.

And will give no bread to eat and raiment to put on ... and of all thou hast given me I will give thee a tenth.—Jacob.
Thou shalt... surely lend him sufficient for his needs, in that which he wanteth.—Moses.

Having food and raiment, let us be therewith content.—Paul.

Every man according to his wants and needs inasmuch as his wants are "just."—Joseph Smith.

The providing for every man's need and just want, no more, no less, is the divine golden warp threading its way through the entire jurisprudence, and on through and around which the infinite law of finance is woven—the true law of equality, God's provision for equal opportunity.

From the beginning, the "needs" of the human race have occupied the Lord's thoughts.

The poor and the needy are the objects of the Lord's thoughts. (Psalms 40:17.) He will continue to keep this class always in remembrance.

When the Lord shall have dominion from sea to sea, the poor and the needy shall be his special care. (Psalms 72:8-18.)

He who does not heed the cry of the "needs" of his fellow man needs to repent.

He who seeks to oppose the needy from his rights is numbered among the wicked. (Psalms 37:14.)

This responsibility is placed upon mankind, for we are commanded to "judge righteously and plead the cause of the poor and needy." (Proverbs 31:9.)

The Lord stands pledged to maintain the rights of the poor. (Psalms 140:12.) The Lord of hosts has promised that "the needy shall not always be forgotten; the expectation of the poor shall not perish forever." (Psalms 9:18.)

The Hebrews were taught prophetically through their leader, Moses, "If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in this land... thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother. But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth." The wise man voiced the same idea when he exclaimed, "Give me neither riches nor poverty." Even in the administering in the sacred edifice—God's house—only that which was needed was to be portioned.

It is significant that the Master of men when teaching his disciples said, "The Father knoweth what things ye have need." He was concerned about their needs only. Who will say that the all-wise Father did not in his plan to men include the laws the obedience to which would amply provide for these same needs. Jesus emphasized his belief by his life: He took only what he had need. (Matthew 21:3.) He taught that a man's need was more sacred than the Sabbath. (Mark 2:25.) Even in his unbounded love for humanity the Christ limited his blessings to those who "needed" them. (Luke 9:11.) In his role as a purchaser, he limited his buying to the actual "needs." (John 13:22.) Under the divine afflatus the Pentecost saints "gave every man as he had need." (Acts 2:45; 4:35.)

Paul's panacea was: "Let him labor, working with his hands for the things that are good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." (Ephesians 4:28.) His "needs" was the reward of the righteous. (Philippians 4:19.) Even the amount of instruction a person should get is measured by his "needs" for the same. (Hebrews 5:12.) It set the bounds for God's gift to man for his salvation. (Hebrews 7:11.) The rescuing of the needy is the Lord's salvation, for "the deliverance of the poor and the needy is the Lord's salvation." (Psalms 35:1.) It marks the boundaries of the love we have for our fellow man. (1 John 3:17.) It will continue through the ages as the standard of God's bestowals. (Revelation 21:28.) It is the touchstone of divinity that obliterates all aristocracy. In its domain "class consciousness" is unthinkable. It answers affirmatively and positively the cry of our race, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The obedience to the "law of the need" safeguards both the poor and the rich.

Basing our assertions on (a) the bulwark of God's unchangeability, (b) the eternal principle of God as reflected in the law of economics, that of giving an equivalent for what one gets, and (c) that the portion of every man has been allotted to him by divine enumeration, this portion being his "needs and just wants," we may with assurance enter into a discussion of the proper creation and distribution of wealth.

Under the Mosaic economy, the schoolmaster, the Lord, made ample provision for man's "needs." We may feel assured that if man's "needs" were carefully provided under the "lesser law," the gospel in its fullness would not do less. Note the solicitude of God for the poor—the needy. At the end of every seven years every creditor was to release his debtor if he was poor—needy. Not only was he to be released, but "thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his needs in that which he wanteth... Thou shalt furnish him liberally." Here the law of the needy was limited to the "poor brother" only, for of the foreigners it is said "of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again; that which is thine with thy brother thine hands shall release." The reason for this law is obvious. If Israel had thrown open her "storehouses" and "treasury" to everybody, bankruptcy would have inevitably ensued. Israel had no way of determining who was the needy or poor among the strangers or foreigners.

The releasing from debts and at the same time furnishing the released debtor a fresh start economically was confined to one class, the poor and needy, for “that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release, save when there shall be no poor [needy] among you.” Here the same and necessary law required to develop character is taught. Every man physically and mentally able should pay for what he gets. Any other program would stultify mankind. Inequality of the crassest kind would ensue, for the “greatest inequality is the treatment of unequals as equals.”

The needs of the poor man was, and is, the law for his release from debt; aye more! the law that provides for his proper sustenance, his board and raiment, whether he can pay for it or not. The Pauline expression briefly put it thus: “Having food and raiment, therewith let us be thankful.” The wise man caught the ideal when he exclaimed, “Give me neither riches nor poverty.” The latter-day prophet saw it clearly when he inspirationally penned the words, “amply supplied” and “according to a man’s needs and just wants.” Let the employer and the employed, the capitalist and the laborer, each make their needs and just wants their only desire for self. Let this desire be only a means unto an end—an altruistic end—and all trouble will vanish into nothingness. Such legislation as “remedial laws,” “coercive measures,” “child labor laws,” etc., will never disgrace our statute books.

Correlated with the law of need stands out in bold relief the law of compensation, the giving of an equivalent, “the earning our bread by the sweat of our face.” The two run parallel through the whole fabric of God’s economics. They never clash. The one is the complement of the other.” Both are absolutely essential to evolve out of man what was involved in man—the image of God. Who wants something for nothing if he has the strength physically and mentally to pay for what he gets? Watch well him who does; with him something is wrong. He is an abnormal person. No normal man asks alms.

Character is never developed in this manner. The man who is really worth aiding is the man who asks for a fighting chance. The law of Jehovah has from the earliest dawn of history thundered against the idler. “The idler shall not eat the bread of the laborer nor wear his garments.” He who can supply his own needs is by all the laws of God bound to do so. If he is so unfortunate, through physical or mental defects, as to be unqualified to “earn his bread by the sweat of his face,” then his need, if worthy, cries out, and God’s law (Deuteronomy 15) becomes his protection. Here is the expounding of the act couched in the language of the apostle, “Let the strong bear the burden of the weak”—the royal law, the law of supplying the “needs and just wants.”

NEWS AND LETTERS

President Smith Visits Owen Sound District

On Board a Nickel Plate Train in Ohio, homeward bound, July 9, 1925.

To Herald Readers: July 1 found me aboard a Grand Trunk train running from Chicago to Montreal and east. I was bound for the Owen Sound district conference, a trip on which I was destined to undergo some new experiences. I looked forward to it with pleasure, for it was my first visit to that district, and entering what to one is new territory is always pleasurable—akin to the joys and thrills of exploration.

My first change of cars was to be at London, and I found myself hoping the train would be some late, for five o’clock in the morning is a bit early to get up, and I had worked late at writing. But the schedule was exactly met, and at half past four the porter warned me that London was the next stop.

Up and off, and with an hour to wait for connection, I recalled the address of good-natured “Commodore” John Vashinder, and risked a telephone call so early; and though roused out of bed, the “Commodore” and his good companion were soon down to the depot for a visit and a chat about London conditions. Thanks, John and Cynthia, for the call.

Off again at six o’clock for Stratford. A short wait, and off on another train for Owen Sound via Palmerstown. At Park Head I met the first of the Owen Sound Saints, Brother J. A. Morrison, who located me on the train and with whom I visited en route to Owen Sound, and at whose home I found a hospitable welcome.

Finds an Oldtime Missionary Acquaintance

Arriving in Owen Sound about one o’clock, I was made to feel a bit more at home by finding John W. Peterson among others on the reception committee.

After lunch, in company with Brothers Morrison and Peterson, a drive around Owen Sound and vicinity, together with calls on some of the “shut-ins” and “stand-bys” occupied the afternoon, and after supper a gathering at the church, where I was the speaker, and being introduced to most if not all of the flock by the veteran, Brother John Shields, filled up the evening.

The town of Providence Bay, the place set for the meeting of the district conference, is on a bay of the same name, situated on the south shore of Manitoulin Island, located in the northern part of Lake Huron, and lies distant from Owen Sound about one hundred and twenty-five miles. To get the visiting Saints from the southern part of the district to Providence Bay and take them back, the district authorities had chartered a boat, and the plan was for the boat to sail from Owen Sound at half past six o’clock on the morning of the 3d. And so the Saints from various parts of the district began gathering early at the dock where the Laura H. Lee lay tied to the wharf. But as is often the case, departure was later than the time set, and it was not till about seven o’clock that the Laura H. Lee moved out into the bay, with the strains of music from Brother Furniss’s “improvised” orchestra floating over the waters. About eighty-five Saints were aboard, who then as well as throughout the trip cheerfully made the most they could out of accommodations a bit cramped.

The Laura H. Lee has been converted from a sailing pleas-
A Beautiful Voyage

The morning was beautiful, the water smooth, and the journey was begun auspiciously; and with songs and laughter and general good feeling the groups passed the time away, while the Laura H. Lee, old but seaworthy, pushed her slow way through the blue waters of the lake.

There is a majestic beauty in the summer scenes of these northern waters, for usually in some directions, and quite frequently in all, the open vista of the limpid water is backed by the rich northern green of a wooded island, or the craggy rocks of a shore line the uplands of which are crowned with the wooded expanse of the beautiful hardwood forests. The changing vistas of between-island views are modified by distant or close-up jutting headlands, all shifting under the changing light of sunshine and shadows cast by fleecy cloud or black storm cloud. One never tires of just looking. So the journey out from Owen Sound into beautiful Georgian Bay, past Griffin's Island, and the many others large and small dotting the mouth of Colpoy's Bay, past Cape Croker and along the craggy wooded shores of Bruce County, the northern part of which is a picturesque peninsula jutting far into Georgian Bay terminated by Cape Hurd and set off by Cove Island as a jewel, around Cabot's Head and past the Flower Pot and the Cove Light, on through the Gap into Lake Huron, past the many islands and along the southern shores of Manitoulin to Providence Bay, is a trip full of rare beauty under any condition, a beauty which is likely to stir one's artistic senses and make him long for came,ra or brush to catch portions of the changing panorama.

Those who planned the trip seemed to have made ample provision for the hungry, and the hurried breakfasts seemed to urge an early resort to lunch baskets.

Some forty or forty-five miles from Owen Sound, also on Georgian Bay, lies the little town of Lion's Head, and there another group of Saints gathered for the trip, Saints from Wiarton, Guelph, and other branches in that part of the district. The Laura H. Lee docked at Lion's Head near noon, and there found about thirty Saints waiting to come aboard. All aboard, the boat was off on what was supposed to be the last lap of the journey to Providence Bay. But the sky became overcast, and as the weather thickened, rain soon began to fall; and soon after passing Cove Island Light, when only a short distance into the Gap, with roughened water and thickening fog, the captain put about, deciding not to risk the shoals off Providence Bay, entrance into which is difficult enough in daylight with clear sky, but decidedly dangerous at night and in a fog. So back past Coney Island Light we went, and for a time the boat lay to under the lee shore of The Flower Pot, waiting to see what the weather would do. This was about seven or eight o'clock.

Services on the Laura H. Lee

The Saints gathered on deck, protected partially by canvass curtains and old sail cloths put on the side of the boat, and, seated on the chairs taken to "seat the conference," gathered around the organ on board, an "improptu" meeting was begun. Brother Peterson "introduced" me to the audience (all of whom I had by this time met) and I spoke for a half hour or so, then permitted questions. Well, the questions came, indicating that Dame Rumor had been busy there as well as some other places.

While the meeting was in progress the boat was got under way again, and after a while the sounds of docking were heard, and we learned the captain had decided not to risk the trip under the conditions of the fog and had run into Tobermory, a port near the head of the peninsula. The meeting continued for nearly two hours, all told, then about thirty of the party went ashore and found lodgings in the homes of the citizens, but with instructions to return in time for the boat to leave at five o'clock in the morning. I found a comfortable bed at the home of Mr. Vail, and was soon asleep. It seemed only a moment till the landlady called to me, saying they wanted me "at the boat." hastily dressing, a brisk walk through the crisp, clear air to the dock found most of the Saints there, and on time the boat left.

Encounter Rough Seas

Once more past Cove Island Light, through the Gap, into Lake Huron. With a clear sky on leaving Tobermory, the sun came up clear; but it was not long till clouds began to gather. And with rising wind and settling fog, there came a change of conditions. As the boat began to roll over the swells and pitch into the quarreling seas, the "seamanship" of the Saints was soon put to a test, and misery was seen written in the faces of many, though even this was taken good-naturedly. Suffice it to say, with rain and fog and swells, the trip was a bit uncomfortable. For nearly an hour the Lee stood off the mouth of Providence Bay waiting for the fog to lift. By "dead reckoning" Captain Reid had put the boat so close to the Providence Bay Light that when the fog suddenly lifted, the lighthouse seemed within easy gunshot of us. Soon we were on the smooth waters of the bay, and the seasick persons began to feel better as the boat steadied.

At the island we found Brother D. B. Perkins, the district president, with a corps of willing workers who had been busy for some days in preparation for the conference; a preparation which resulted in the visitors being comfortably cared for during their stay.

The Conference Begins

Of course the Saints at Providence Bay had experienced much anxiety about us, for we had been expected the evening before, and we had been unable to send them word. But their anxiety was relieved by our arrival, and all were happy.

The delay had upset the program a bit, but after lunch, enjoyed by all but a very few still under the effects of seasickness, the business of the conference was entered into, the meeting lasting till about six o'clock. The meeting was orderly, and the business done with dispatch. The district presidency was chosen to preside, with power to appoint assistants. Brother Perkins appointed Brother Peterson and myself as such assistants.

The entertainment at night drew a packed house and was enjoyed by all. I filled in a part by a talk on "Music in Zion," and Brother Peterson did his part by presiding.

Sunday, a beautiful day, was a busy one. The meetings began at half past eight by a sacramental service, with the presidency of the conference presiding. It was a fine meeting and greatly enjoyed by all. Brother John Shields and I attended to the ordination of Brother D. B. Perkins as high priest, authorized by the High Council in the June sessions.

At eleven o'clock, after only a few moments of intermission, I preached on Zion and had the close attention of the Saints till noon.

After dinner the Saints assembled again at the ball, and with songs and visiting filled the time till half past two, when Brother G. C. Tomlinson spoke to the Saints till three o'clock. At that time, by request, I again spoke of Zion and her laws, and had the attention of the Saints till about half past four. Then a short intermission and the members of the priesthood met at the call of Brother King Cooper, and I was asked to address them, which I did for about an hour or so.

After supper, at seven o'clock, Brother John W. Petersen was the speaker, and for an hour and a quarter held the attention of the Saints while he discussed the Restoration.

At the afternoon meeting it was reported that the captain advised taking advantage of the fine weather to start the return journey at eleven o'clock. It was voted to do so. So after the close of the evening meeting, there was a gathering of baggage, securing provisions, etc., and at eleven o'clock, after good-byes were said, the Laura H. Lee left the dock at Providence Bay, and under a glorious sky, lighted by a full moon, sailed out into Lake Huron on the return trip.

It was really interesting to see the various groups quickly profiting by their short experience as sailors, adapt themselves to the conditions and with “life preservers,” bits of canvas, blankets, and what not, improvise temporary bunks, on chairs, in the hold, under the lee of the scuppers, in lifeboats, and where not, to catch such naps as they could. However, quite a number of the Saints in their happiness had gathered around the organ, and until the wee small hours of the morning the songs of Zion resounded over the waters.

I spent most of the night in the pilot house, talking with the captain, enjoying the beautiful night, and watching the methods of navigating the boat. I got about an hour’s sleep on a bunk in the pilot’s house.

Daylight found us near Cove Island Light, and about six o’clock, when we were opposite it, the Saints were all astir and breakfasts were in order. Everyone seemed cheerful, and in smooth waters again most of those who had been seasick quite fully recovered and were again enjoying the trip.

A Visit to Wiarton

About half past ten landing was made at Lion’s Head, where about thirty of the Saints left the boat, I with them, to go by truck to Wiarton. As the Laura H. Lee left the dock at Lion’s Head Brother Furniss on his cornet began, “God be with you till we meet again,” and soon Saints on board and shore were singing the song feelingly, an evidence that friendships had been renewed, or formed anew and Saints had found deep pleasure in saintly association, and were loath to part.

From Lion’s head, by truck, under Brother Perkins’s direction the group of Saints bound for Wiarton made the trip comfortably, and about noon we were in Brother Perkins’s home where we found a needed repast prepared by Sister Perkins awaiting us.

The Lee, we were afterwards told, battling head winds, did not reach Owen Sound as soon as expected, but without mishap and no further discomfort the party landed on the dock about six o’clock, happy the trip was over, but all feeling that the conference was one of “the best yet.”

It is not easy to tell all which should be told. I enjoyed my experiences and noted with pleasure the thoughtful though arduous preparations for the conference made by Brother Perkins, assisted by Brother G. C. Tomlinson, the fatherly ministrations and visiting of Brother John Shields, the tireless energy of Brother “Oe” Moore in looking after the comfort of the Saints, the systematic and efficient way in which Brother Furniss worked the orchestra and kept the Saints singing at the right time, and the uniform good nature of the whole party, even when things looked gloomy and it was uncomfortable. I enjoyed learning to know the Owen Sound Saints, and shall look forward with pleasure to the time when I can again visit the district conference, even if it means a boat trip to Manitoulin Island.

A good bath and a sleep at the home of Brother Perkins Monday afternoon put me in better shape for the services at night in the Wiarton Town Hall, where I again spoke on things pertaining to Zion. A goodly number were in attendance from Wiarton and neighboring branches.

Tuesday forenoon was spent in conversations with the brethren and calling on some of the aged and sick. After lunch, with Brother and Sister Perkins and Brother John Shields, we drove to Owen Sound, where we were domiciled at the home of Brother Oswald Moore.

At night I spoke to a good audience at the church who seemed to enjoy hearing of still other aspects of our Zion philosophy.

Thus closed my visit to Owen Sound District, for early Wednesday morning, the 8th, after saying good-by to Brother and Sister Moore and Brother Peterson who is staying with them, I was taken by Brother Shields in his car to the train, and when he left I was alone to take up my journey homeward.

I have been glad of this opportunity to visit Owen Sound District, and to meet a few of the many fine Saints we have there, and to learn more of the splendid men and women who have been caring for the work. I cannot mention the names of all I met, but I shall carry pleasant memories of my visit and shall hope it has been good for the Cause.

Blessings upon the Owen Sound Saints! May they “carry on” towards better things and conditions—and Zion.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Prominent Saint of Central Illinois Passes Away

The Saints of Illinois have met a heavy loss in the death of Elder Martin George Bolt of Springfield, who died June 23. He was widely known and respected, both in the church and among the workers and officers of his chosen lines of activity. His funeral services were conducted at the home where Governor Small and President John J. Lewis of the United Mine Workers were in attendance, and finally at Ladd, Illinois, the town where he was reared, Elder John W. Rushton preaching the discourse.

When the gospel produces such characters as that possessed by Brother Bolt, it also knits strong ties of love among the Saints, and those of Central Illinois are grieving because of his seemingly untimely death, as he was in vigorous middle age until very recently.

Elder John W. Rushton, of Saint Louis, Missouri, wrote the following appreciation of our departed brother:

“The passing of Brother Bolt, of Springfield, Illinois, reminds us that among the forces which have made our civilization what it is, democracy has an important place. Our brother, though choosing to engage in the work of a miner at the early age of twelve, filled various important positions in the organization of the miners until in 1907 he was engaged by the State in the Department of Mines and Minerals, where he has since served both the industry he represented... and the State. In 1923 he was made director of this department by Governor Small, and this appointment was ratified for the second time by the Senate the Saturday before death took him.

“Our brother earned a reputation for justice, peace, fair play, and integrity among the miners and the masters alike, besides enjoying the confidence of the Government in all cases needing arbitration. He belonged to that large and growing group of industrial statesmen who are playing so important a part in our modern governments, especially among the Anglo-Saxon peoples. He won his reputation because he believed that right was the only basis of peace. He could not be bought; he could not be threatened. The church joins with the Government he served and the men he loved and worked for in paying tribute to his memory.

“The truth expressed through democracy, such as our brother represented, is defined by Professor Muirhead in the following: ‘It is men and women thinking and speaking for themselves, and respecting the thought and speech of others.’ “

“This form of government requires the combination of intelligence, orderly discussion, and recognition of mutuality. It provides that all sections of the community shall have opportunity to voice convictions on all matters of public well-being. It is therefore opposed to the only alternative of some form of dictatorship ‘in which convictions are stifled, and the thought and feeling of the people driven back upon themselves.’

“Democracy requires those qualities of character in which the knowledge of the truth, and the love for humanity and the will to morality all find expression in the individual activities under the consciousness of responsibility to the group to be and do the very best he can for the benefit of the whole. In this our departed brother proved his worth and rests his hope.”

Young People’s Convention at Madison

July 3 found Brother and Sister John Blackmore of Des Moines with us for our convention which convened the 3d, 4th, and 5th; also Brother and Sister Christy, our “faithfuls.” Four people like that are enough to make anything a success. That’s why we want to tell you about it.

These are the first strictly young people’s meetings held in our district. Brother John Blackmore started off Friday evening with a rousing sermon on, “What do we mean by salvation?” Saturday, July 4, commenced with a prayer service at half past eight, followed by class work the balance of the morning, after the type of those at the Lamoni convention. Brother Christy conducted one in stewardships, while Brother Blackmore discussed the subjects of, “Play on Sunday,” and “Religion, what is it?”

The stewardship class proved very interesting, and was attentively entered into by many of the older folk. There seems to be an awakened interest in stewardships and many desire a better understanding of it, looking forward to its speedy application through the family budget. Brother Christy has a good understanding of the subject and presents it clearly and forcefully.

The class, “Play on Sunday,” brought forth many different ideas, but served to define our terms and make clearer our concepts of right and wrong. One definition of play is worthy of note. “Action entered into for amusement or entertainment and not directly or indirectly for any monetary value or reward.” Work was defined as “Action that we like to do, entered into for its monetary value or reward.” Drudgery as “Work that we do not like to do.” The other class conducted by Brother Blackmore also proved very interesting. Religion was defined as “Man’s conscious attempt to bring himself into harmony with God and his law.” God and his law do not change, but man’s religion changes as his concept of God enlarges and unfolds. We need to be ever ready to change our religion to conform with our latest concepts of God and his law, but in these changes let us make sure they are in the direction of truth and not merely following some of men’s untried ideas. We are wont to stone the present-day prophets and honor those who are dead. This because many of the people do not appreciate the vision of the present-day prophets and are loath to accept radical changes till such have been proved superior to the old paths. This does not usually take place during the life of the prophet.

Sisters Christy and Blackmore had charge of the small children in the basement of the church during classes, but were disappointed in the small number to care for.

Recreation and games occupied the entire afternoon at Tenny Park. The Madison boys defeated the visitors in playground ball, 13 to 1, and volley ball engaged all others who desired. A basket supper was much appreciated after the strenuous afternoon and prepared for the jolly, “stunt” program of the evening. All gathered in a circle, doing stunts in turn, the final “stunt” being to keep the mosquitoes away. After a bonfire all considered the day properly celebrated.

Half past eight Sunday morning found us again in prayer service, followed by a demonstration junior church in charge of Sisters Christy and Blackmore. A very effective dramatization of Moses in the bulrushes was given by the children, and Brother Blackmore gave the sermon on prayer.

At the eleven o’clock hour the keynote sermon of the convention was delivered by Brother Blackmore on, “The wealth of the church.” Not the material elements, though we need them, but the non-material elements were stressed, such as trained energies consecrated to the Lord, including personality, spirituality, knowledge, faith, wisdom, good judgment, honesty, and greatest of all, love.

The afternoon was occupied with four short talks by Brother and Sister Blackmore and Brother and Sister Christy. Brother Blackmore used his time in an effort to sell seats for Zimmermann Hall at Graceland, and in getting subscriptions for Autumn Leaves. Eleven seats were sold, and so far we have ten subscriptions to Autumn Leaves. A unanimous vote was taken, favoring holding another convention next year, and the matter referred to the coming district conference.

Sunday evening closed our meetings. As a subject for his sermon Brother Blackmore used, “What shall the world do to be saved?” He emphasized the fact that the world’s problems are also the problems of most communities, and that we can help to solve them by living the gospel philosophy.

Altogether it was a very successful convention, considering its being our first attempt and the limited time in which it was arranged. We feel certain the young people’s convention has come into our midst to stay.

Phoenix, Arizona

July 3.—The usual quiet of the summer months has begun to settle upon the Phoenix Branch, and at least some of our activities are making the best of the heat for a little relaxation until the cooler weather shall return.

The choir gave a beautiful cantata on Easter Sunday, quite in harmony with the day. The orchestra gave a splendid entertainment in May, and about twenty dollars was collected for the purchase of chairs.

Mothers’ Day the morning hour was given over to an entertainment by the cradle roll department, which is in charge of Sister Ruby Speer. Some of the homes brightened recently by these little sunbeams are: Elder and Sister Johnson, Mr. and Sister Reardon, Mr. and Sister Audrey Smith, Mr. and Sister Chester Barrington, and Mr. and Sister Ralph Barrington.

Children's Day was observed by a full evening's program by the junior members of the Sunday school, and was enjoyed by all.

In May a pretty wedding took place in the little church here, when Brother Hubert Yates and Sister Lois Townsend (formerly of Beloit, Wisconsin,) were united in marriage, Elder K. H. Rogers officiating. The bride's father and brother motored overland for the occasion and started on their return a few days later, accompanied by Sisters Townsend, Witherew, and Alma Townsend, who have been wintering here.

At a little party given recently for the Cactus Club, the announcement was made of the engagement of two of its members, Sister Evalena Yates to Brother Isaac Owens. Two of the Sunday school classes, the Up-Streamers, and the Cactus Club, have each had some very enjoyable parties, desert lunches, and swims, calculated to afford them entertainment within church circles. This branch has a fine group of young people, and the directing of their activities becomes no small endeavor.

Six of the normal department students have just made excellent grades on Bible examinations.

Among the two hundred and eighty students just graduated from the high school here were three of our girls, Georgia Bender, Myra Stewart, and Elorna Lee. Sister O. A. Bender has faithfully cared for the work of the Department of Women as its president this year, but has resigned recently owing to her return to their ranch at Gila Bend for the summer. Sister Carlotta Davis is her successor.

Brother J. E. Yates made a week's visit in Phoenix recently, driving overland from Oklahoma City. He was accompanied by his nephew, Orvil Yates, and continued his trip to San Bernardino, California, accompanied by Brother Ed McIndoo, our Religio president, who was fortunate in having a two-week vacation at that time. Sister Yates and Evalena returned also, but by train, as Sister Yates's health is a matter of serious consideration.

We recently enjoyed several good sermons by Elder Dearborn, of Bisbee, Arizona, who was visiting here.

Brother and Sister J. W. True and their son have moved here from El Paso, Texas, and have gone into business.

Brother and Sister Jolly have returned to Independence, Missouri. Sister J. W. Young and little Dorothy have just returned from a visit with Sister J. W. Rushton at Hollywood, California. Sister Ruby Speer is spending the summer in Hawaii. Sister Sturges and Elva are in Oakland, California.

Sister Mary A. Putman, who has been confined to her bed with spinal injury, was just able to be up and about with the utmost care, when she had the misfortune to turn and sprain her ankle. Thanks to Providential care, the spinal affliction was none the worse. Heretofore the slightest jar has caused a relapse.

Some excitement was stirred up in May when it was announced that a lecture was to be given against "Mormonism" at the Church of Christ, by Reverend Rice, of Abilene, Texas. Some of our members attended, and not considering that the gentleman was giving us a fair deal, Pastor Coberly, who is always ready to take his stand for the gospel's sake, challenged him to debate. The challenge was accepted and the proposition signed, but the next day Reverend Rice received word of the serious illness of his mother and left at once.

The debate was canceled, but recently word has been received that he will be back after September 15, and new propositions have been signed that are more to our liking.

We are hopeful that some one may be sent here to defend this latter-day work and turn the eyes of the people upon the beauty and grandeur of this glorious gospel. Some of the honest in heart whom we have been told should be gathered in this city may be there with eyes to see and ears to hear. Who knows!

Four Members of Branch Die

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, July 1.—The Saints here were made sad when death called four of our members lately, Brother Sylvester Silverthorn, Sister Huldah W. Hastings, Brother Joseph Elms, and Brother Andrew Allen. Brother Elms was buried from the Methodist church of Two Harbors, with W. E. Shakespeare officiating, and Sister Huldah Hastings also was buried from the same church, with Brother William Sparling officiating. The Methodist people of Two Harbors turned out for their church and choir over to the Saints for their use in both funerals, which shows the esteem in which our people are held.

Brother Allen was buried from the church at Duluth, with C. B. Freeman, pastor of Duluth Branch, officiating. Our hearts go out to those who are left to mourn, but we realize that the ones who have passed are in the hands of a just God who can lead the hearts of his children to realize that now is the time for preparation for the higher life, even the more abundant life.

Brother W. C. Stauty, with his wife and son Cyrus, and two younger children, motored with Brother and Sister A. E. Barber and their son Clarence, and Sister Lula Kopenhaven, of Gordon, Wisconsin, to Two Harbors to meet with the Saints there in sacrament the first Sunday of the month. Many earnest prayers and testimonies were offered to the goodness of God, even some whose hearts were rent with the death of their loved ones. The Spirit was manifested in a marked degree, and many moist eyes were seen. Sister Joseph Elms, of Eagle Bend, Minnesota, and Sister Elizabeth Stocks, of Detroit, Michigan, took in the sacramental service and joined their prayers and testimonies with the Saints of Two Harbors.

On June 14 the Sunday school gave a Children's Day program that was well rendered, after which Pastor C. B. Freeman gave an interesting talk to the children. Sister Lula Dathe, of Barnum, Minnesota, had her two younger children blessed. In the afternoon Brothers Stauty and Zuelsdorf motored to Wight, Minnesota, with Brother Harvey Wight and a friend, and on the way back stopped at Sawyer, Minnesota, and made a short visit with our Lamanite brother, Joseph Northrup, who wished us to go into his home and seek from the Lord help for himself and his wife and family. We ask the prayers of the Saints in his behalf, that in due time he may be an instrument in the hands of God in warning others of the gospel. His lot is hard on account of environment.

The local priesthood is trying to hold the banner of King Immanuel on high, calling for the Saints to go forward and accomplish the work God has called them to do, that they may not be found wanting when the trumpet sounds and the dead in Christ rise first to reign with him for a thousand years.

June 28 W. C. Stautz was in the pulpit in the morning and C. B. Freeman in the evening. Sister Lula Dathe and husband, also Sisters Opal and Ada Carlson and a friend, all of Barnum, were present at the morning service. The Saints living near church should take a lesson from these isolated members who drive thirty or forty miles to attend a service on Sunday. Brother and Sister Jay Walters and their daughter Ruth of Carlton were present at the evening service.

The Sunday school quarterly contest for attendance ended June 28 with the True Blues, the senior class, again winning. They will carry the banner for another three months. They also will be treated to a picnic near the first of August, when they will be the honored guests.

The Department of Recreation and Expression had a marshmallow and wiener roast the evening of June 26, on Indian Point, one of the tourist camps in the city. There was a good attendance considering the damp weather. The young people enjoyed themselves from start to finish.

We ask the prayers of the Saints that the young people here may awaken to their duty to the Master, that they may not be led astray.

Many of the Saints here are considering ways and means of attending the reunion at Minneapolis and to make it the best ever.

The church building is having a fresh coating of paint and many other repairs, so as to have a beautiful house of worship. We have open house to all tourists and men of the ministry who come our way. If in the city call Calumet 1427-W for information in regard to meeting place and time. Remember this is the place where rail and water meet, where you are never in any danger of losing sleep at night on account of heat, but can rest in peace.

Portland, Oregon

July 1.—The Saints here are preparing for their district reunion which will be held at Portland Auto Park, a short distance south of Portland on the Pacific Highway. The reunion will begin July 17 and will continue until July 27. A good crowd is expected.

Joplin, Missouri

June 25.—On May 8, 9, and 10 we had one of the best conferences in several years. Apostle J. A. Gillen, Elder Amos T. Higdon, and Brother and Sister John Blackmore were with us, giving words of encouragement and cheer.

The 10th being Mothers' Day, a nice program was rendered under the direction of Sister Blackmore.

On June 1 the Saints here were made glad by the coming among them of District President Amos T. Higdon, who held meetings for two weeks, giving much admonition, cheer, and comfort that was kindly received. He was accompanied by his son.

After preaching service on June 4 the young people motored to McClelland Park, about two miles south of the city, for a wiener roast in honor of young Brother Higdon. The second Sunday in June being Children's Day, a program was rendered and after the exercises all who could went to Fillmore's Bridge, on Shoal Creek, where Elder Higdon baptized seven children. Pastor O. C. Karlstrom was in charge of this service. After the baptizing a basket dinner was served in Cunningham Park. The basket dinner was attended by Elder Charles Dooley and wife, of Mulberry, Kansas, accompanied by two other sisters. Also Brother Gilbert, of Pittsburg, Kansas, was present.

We were again pleased to have with us Elder S. N. Gray and his family, who have located here.

At the present time services in general are not so well attended as they have been. Some of the members have moved to other places for employment and some are visiting in other places. Recently Sister J. A. Graves, supervisor of the Department of Women, returned from a visit at Nevada, Missouri, where her husband has employment. Her son and daughter-in-law are also located there.

Brother and Sister Jason Leslie and children, accompanied by Sister Leslie's mother, Sister G. E. Carter, visited a week with relatives and friends in Texas. Sister Lawrence Wyatt visited a week in Oklahoma. Sister J. S. Mackie will leave Sunday for an extended visit with her daughter and family in California.

The pastor is very busy this season of the year as he is in the ice business, but by the kind assistance of the priesthood the work is carried along nicely.

One of our priests, V. E. Sheppard, is holding services in a schoolhouse at Spring City every Sunday night. He has a very large audience. Another of our priests, Lawrence Wyatt, is wide awake in the work, visiting and encouraging those who are spiritually weak.

Our hearts were made sad June 8 by the death of one of our best members, Sister Bessie Margrave, wife of Dan Margrave and a niece of Elder Lee Quick. Besides her husband she leaves two small sons, her mother, one sister, and many friends. She was a regular attendant, prompt in testimony to the work, and one of the group supervisors of the Department of Women, and will be greatly missed. She was one of our best Book of Mormon students. Her life's work here was short, as she was only twenty-three years old, but we know her works will follow her on the other side. The funeral was in the church, with sermon by Elder Amos T. Higdon.

The groups of the Department of Women are not now meeting in class work, but this activity will be started again in September. Instead of meeting for lesson study, the sisters meet once a month in honor of the birthdays occurring in that month. They meet all day, and each sister contributes something for the dinner. They also give a handkerchief shower for the ones honored, and usually have a little program. Some of the sisters are past seventy-five years of age. These meetings are held to promote sociability among the members and to keep up an interest in the class study which will be resumed this fall.

Some time ago Brother Joseph Simpson was called and ordained to the office of teacher, and he has taken up the work nicely.

Rally Day at Fulton

FULTON, IOWA.—On June 28, the young people of this branch, assisted by a few older ones, put on a splendid rally day program. After Sunday school we had a splendid sermon by District President E. A. Davis; then at noon about seventy-five people enjoyed a nicely prepared basket dinner on the lawn of a nonmember, who invited the Saints over. A literary program was enjoyed from two to half past three, and at eight in the evening, after a short song service, Brother Davis presided at a round-table discussion. The questions and answers were of a high order.

Sister Esther Vickerstoff, sister, and mother, of Clinton, Iowa, were present and were surely welcome. Sister Esther is a talented musician and acted as chorister at the morning and afternoon sessions.

We have been fortunate of late in having district officers visit us occasionally. Brother George McFarlane, of Oelwein, Iowa, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and Harold Shippey, who was the district Sunday school superintendent, came one Sunday in May, and as a result about fifteen of our young people are now organized into a Reliego.

All plans are laid for the coming reunion at Maquoketa August 7 to 16, and an excellent time is expected. Brother Leonard Houghton, missionary, visits us occasionally and gives some good sermons.

Floods did serious damage to quite a number of the branch here. Eight families lost quite heavily. The Saints here extend their sympathy to those in California suffering as a result of the recent earthquake there.

Some here are planning to enter upon the stewardship plan soon. May God hasten the day when every Saint will see the beauties of that plan.

CLARENCE HEIDE

Eastern Michigan

PORT HOPE, MICHIGAN, July 7.—The Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard are still striving to do God's will. They have been blessed wonderfully in the past and realize God has a great work for them to do here. It is their desire to press forward and do their work in a way that will be pleasing in the sight of God.

Some very spiritual meetings have been enjoyed in the little church of the Huron Center Branch. All are thankful for those blessings and hope so to live that they may be worthy of greater blessings in the future.

A two-day meeting was held at this branch July 4 and 5, which was largely attended. A good time was enjoyed. A young people's prayer meeting was held outside early Sunday morning. The sacrament was first served in the church and then to the young people. These young people are striving to do their part and desire God's blessing that they may be faithful.

Young people's prayer meeting is held every other Thursday evening. Recreation and expression is held on Friday evening.

The Saints here ask an interest in the prayers of all that they may ever be found doing God's will.

ELLA CARPENTER
Gomer T. Griffiths Writes of Calling of President Smith

I have felt impressed for some weeks that I should write to the HERALD and give my experience in regard to the calling of Frederick M. Smith to the presidency of the Melchisedec priesthood and of the church.

While en route home from Australia to America in the forepart of November, 1914, between the cities of Honolulu and San Francisco, I had the following dream, which at the time made a very great impression upon my mind:

I thought I was in the Stone Church in Independence, and was standing on the floor in front of the platform. On the platform in the rear of the pulpit were two large chairs; sitting in these chairs were the late Joseph Smith and his son, Frederick M. To my great amazement I saw myself standing with my hands upon Brother Joseph's head, and a white cloud came down over the three and enveloped us. I was praying, and when the white cloud had passed away, I had my hands upon Frederick M.'s head, Brother Joseph having vanished. This was repeated. As I stood on the floor Brother R. S. Salyards appeared by my side, and again the two chairs appeared on the platform, the two brothers mentioned occupying them, and I again stood back of them with my hands on Joseph's head, and I called Brother Salyards' attention to it. Then I awoke.

This dream puzzled me very much at times and I wondered how it was that I could see myself standing below the platform on the main floor, and at the same time see myself on the platform with my hands on the brethren's heads. Again, I could not see why Brother Salyards would be present and I calling his attention to what was going on. However, I could interpret the principal part of the dream, that portion that referred to the transferring of the authority which rested in Joseph to his son, Frederick M., but the question in my mind was as to whether or not I would be the instrument through whom this transfer would be made. I was also impressed that the time of Joseph's departure was near at hand.

About two weeks after my arrival home, I received a telegram from Frederick M., announcing the death of his father and requesting me to come to Independence, which I did. I was one of the pallbearers that bore his mortal remains to the silent tomb, which, to me, was a very sad and sorrowful event, as I had always held him in such high esteem and looked upon him as a real father, and in fact, he had been a father to me for many years. I was not the only one who was made sad over his departure, as the ministry as a whole loved him dearly and mourned his passing away.

The question naturally arose as to who would succeed Brother Joseph as president of the Melchisedec priesthood and of the church. Personally, I knew from the dream I had had on board ship that his oldest son, Frederick M. Smith, would succeed him in that high and honorable position. However, this all-important question was to be decided by the General Conference which was to convene at Lamoni, Iowa, April 6, 1915. But to the disappointment of all the people who gathered at said conference, Brother Frederick M. was detained at Worcester, Massachusetts, on account of sickness and could not be present. Nevertheless, the conference decided by unanimous vote that Frederick M. was to succeed his father as president of the church and provided for his ordination.

In the month of May, 1915, the Quorum of Twelve assembled at Independence to arrange for his ordination. We were in session morning and afternoon. It was decided by the council in the afternoon session, just before adjourning, that if agreeable to Brother Smith, the ordination should be attended to that evening in the Stone Church, and it was unanimously decided by the Quorum of Twelve that I should have charge of the ordination meeting and be the mouthpiece. They also authorized me to select whom I desired to assist.

On the way from Chicago to Independence, on the Santa Fe train, the Spirit of the Lord had descended upon me in great power and had made it known to me that I would be the instrument used in the hands of God in setting Frederick M. Smith apart and ordaining him President of the church. The Spirit was upon me so forcibly that tears of joy ran down my cheeks. At this time part of the ordination prayer was also given to me. The Spirit rested upon me for some time; hence, I was positive that I would be the channel through which the authority of the office of the president would be transferred from the father to the son, as made known to me in my dream while on board the ship, as before related. Yet I could not positively know that such would be the case, as Frederick M. had the privilege of choosing the mouthpiece from the Quorum of Twelve, and the Quorum of Twelve would have to take action thereon. However, I was not at all surprised when the Quorum did direct that I should be the mouthpiece and have charge of the ordination service. But there was one part of that dream that did bother me, for the party was not in Independence; namely, Brother R. S. Salyards, who, in my dream, I had called upon to witness that which occurred upon the platform. He not being there, how could that part come true? The ordination was taking place in the Stone Church, as had been indicated in my dream, but where was Brother Salyards?

At the appointed time a large concourse of people had assembled in the Stone Church and everything was in readiness to start the meeting. I looked in the direction of the front entrance of the church, and to my happy surprise, who was walking down the aisle toward the front but Brother Salyards! This was another testimony to me, and more than that, it was more forcibly confirmed when Brother Elbert Smith requested him to take a record of the ordination. He sat down in front of us and made a note of all that occurred. Thus all that the Lord had shown me on board ship had come to pass literally.

How could I question or doubt the calling of Brother Frederick M. Smith to occupy in the high and holy office which his father and grandfather had held, in view of all that I have written above? What is more, I certify that as my hands were laid upon his head, the Holy Spirit rested upon me in great and mighty power, and practically all that was spoken while officiating in that holy and sacred ordinance was indited by the Holy Spirit of God. Therefore, I know our Father in heaven called this brother to the presidency of the Melchisedec priesthood and of the Church of Jesus Christ over which he now presides.

Many of the predictions that were made at that time in the ordination prayer under the influence of the Spirit have already had their fulfillment, and the rest will surely come to pass in God's own due time.

I am confident from my extensive association with the great body of the Lord's church, that the great bulk of them do not realize the stupendous responsibility that the Lord has placed upon the President of the church and his counselors. I shall herewith give a few quotations from God's Holy Writ which outline the duties of the President and his counselors, as well as our duty toward them.

In Doctrine and Covenants, section 122:2, we are told: "The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall..."
teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time."

QUERY? Why should so many of us worry about the burden and care of the church when the Lord has placed it upon other shoulders? Why not let them carry it, as the Lord has directed that they should.

The Lord directs that it is their duty to teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding as they shall be directed by revelation from time to time, but if we shall continually protest against the revelations that come through these men and virtually turn them down, how can the Lord continue to teach us through this medium?

In Doctrine and Covenants 19:2, the Lord says of the church, "Thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith." Does it not stand to reason, brethren, that we should give some heed to the words that come from the mouth of him whom the Lord says is his mouthpiece? for he emphasizes as follows: "For his word ye shall receive as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith."

Are we guilty or not guilty in complying with this latter statement of God? Has there been much impatience and lack of faith displayed on the part of many of his people in receiving all the words that have come from the prophet during the last two or three years? Is it not possible that we can hamper the Lord's work by rejecting the counsel of God that comes to us through his legal authoritative mouthpiece? Is it not running a great risk to undertake to put forth our hand to stay the ark of God. Some of us might meet the same fate as did Uzzah who, through the reverence and faith he had in the contents of the ark, put forth his hand to keep it from falling to the ground and met his death. This should be a lesson to us not to interfere with things that God has placed in the hands of others to care for. We should leave the responsibility with God and the men whom he has made responsible for them. Does it not stand to reason that the God of our fathers is as intensely interested in the progress of his church upon earth as we finite beings are? Did Jesus Christ not purchase the church by his intense suffering and the shedding of his blood upon the cross? Is he going to suffer Satan, the enemy of our souls, to destroy his church, for which he paid such a great price? My answer is, "No."

During the past few months there have been revelations in circulation, coming through some of the prominent men of the church, that will not stand careful inspection, as their contents are not in harmony with previous revelations coming to the church through the proper channel, namely the prophet. These so-called revelations, if believed in and carried out, would prove very disastrous to the church. We had better give heed to the word of the Lord as found in Doctrine and Covenants 27:2 and 42:1.

Perhaps it would be well for us to refresh our minds with the incident that happened in Moses' time, when the people turned him down because he had married a woman and thereby offended them. They sent Aaron and Miriam to the Lord for information, but he would not recognize them as his mouthpieces to the church, and told them that if they had a prophet among them, he would speak to them through him. It is not wise for us to get on our dignity and turn down God's appointed servants.

In times past I have not always seen eye to eye with some of the policies of the President, but I willingly submitted to them and worked accordingly, as I believed that if any mistakes were made on his part he would be responsible to God and not I. It is a very poor policy for a man to fall down on his job and go out among the people and use his influence to tear down the confidence of the people in God's anointed. In this we should feel as did the Psalmist David who would not do King Saul any harm because he was God's anointed.

Therefore, brethren, my confidence is that God will keep men at the head of the church to direct its destiny whom he wants there; and until he directs otherwise I am going to stand by those who occupy in these responsible positions and support their every effort with what little talent I possess, with the aid of God's Spirit, and I admonish all others to do likewise.

Hence, let us quit our squabbling and cease to contend with one another, but let us work together in harmony and love and by the help of God bring into existence a real tangible Zion, about which we have been singing for so many years, and let the vision we have had of the future become a reality. If we do this, our Father in heaven will crown our efforts with success.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

Enumclaw, Washington

July 8.—We feel that we would be like the nine lepers of old, who when they were healed, failed to return thanks to Christ, if we did not mention some of the blessings we have received in this corner of God's vineyard.

Though few in number and quite badly scattered, we are all trying to keep our little meetings going in Puyallup.

Last sacrament Sunday we had planned to get an early start, as we had about twenty-four miles to go. Elder L. W. Bronson and wife called for us about nine o'clock. When we had gone about four miles on our way the car door came open, and our little four-year-old boy fell out. He was not seriously injured, however, and after about thirty minutes in a doctor's office we went on our way again and were only a few minutes late for Sunday school.

Following Sunday school we enjoyed a wonderful sacramental service and outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Elder E. W. Bronson presided, with Brothers C. E. Wheeler and C. M. Wilcox assisting. The Spirit gave utterance through three of God's servants. Though in session over an hour, no time was wasted. There were about forty-five present, four families from Tacoma being represented.

Surely we can sing with heart-felt gratitude, "Rejoice ye Saints of latter days, lift up your heads and sing."

ADA M. WILCOX

A few of the Saints of Waterloo, Iowa, with some non-member friends, held a picnic July 4, and a pleasant time was enjoyed. Church services are not so well attended during the extremely warm weather, but they hope to do better soon.

Evangelist Willis A. McDowell and wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home church in Plano, Kendall County, Illinois, on Independence Day. Seventy-five people helped them celebrate, including their four children and several other near relatives. The Kendall County News devotes almost an entire column to an account of the celebration, speaking of Brother and Sister McDowell as "two of our oldest and most respected citizens."
Independence
Stone Church

Sunday, July 19, was a pleasant and profitable day for the First Independence Church. The eight o'clock prayer meetings were both quite well attended. At the young people's meeting especially was a beautiful and comforting spirit, and almost every moment of the service was occupied. Brother D. O. Cato was in charge.

Sunday school had about the usual attendance. In a few classes the Christmas offering collected was somewhat in advance of the usual amount. The beautiful morning may have instilled the spirit of giving where otherwise it might not have been resident.

The schedule of the eleven o'clock service was changed somewhat. The organ offertory played by Mrs. Pauline Becker Etzenhouser was followed by a vocal duet by Mrs. H. C. Burgess and Mrs. S. A. Burgess. The violin duet by Misses Emma Sneed and Lillian Green following the opening hymn by the congregation served as an appropriate background for the talk of the hour by Evangelist John F. Martin. Independence audiences are beginning to expect the best that is to be had when Brother Martin is announced to occupy a pulpit. All will agree after Sunday morning's sermon that their expectations, at least on this occasion, were fully justified.

A large audience awaited Brother Martin for the evening worship at the Campus. The crowd approached the three thousand mark for the service was well begun. The sermon was preceded by several selections by the band, a male quartet, and a well-rendered vocal duet by Misses Thelma and Nida Vincent. The sermon was strictly doctrinal. The invocation and benediction were by Bishop J. A. Becker.

R. L. C. A. Uses Campus

The Missouri State Association of Rural Letter Carriers met in Independence July 17 and 18, in their twenty-third annual convention. Regular business meetings were held in the junior high school. The program consisted of addresses, quartets, election of officers, and social gatherings.

On Friday, July 17, the members were put into one hundred and fourteen motor cars, half of which visited Montgomery Ward and Company, and the other half visited the National Clock and Suit Company, of Kansas City, Missouri.

One of the big features on the program of the R. L. C. A. was a barbecue banquet on the Campus Friday evening, sponsored by the Independence Chamber of Commerce.

According to A. G. Alleman, president of the Jackson County Association, about one thousand were present. Mr. Alleman, being a resident, was glad to report that the convention expressed itself that Independence was a fine place in which to live, and the treatment they received here was excellent.

"We could not have found a better place to have held our banquet, where we would have been treated as nicely," Mr. Alleman said. The hope is expressed by the Independence people that this convention will open the way for many more such events; that Independence will prosper accordingly.

The next convention of the R. L. C. A. will be held in Willis Springs, Missouri, in 1926.

Second Church

The young people met in prayer meeting at the grove of Elder and Sister P. A. Sherman southwest of Independence early Sunday morning, and were well repaid by a profitable series of testimonies. Brothers Lane Bolt and Samuel Edmunds assisted in presiding. The junior department of Sunday school held its session at the same place.

Church Historian Samuel A. Burgess was the speaker at the church at eleven o'clock, giving the people an unusually entertaining and thoughtful discourse on a timely topic.

Daniel Goodin, son of Brother and Sister Goodin on South McCoy, was baptized at half past one by Brother J. E. Fouls, and confirmed immediately following his baptism.

At half past two the funeral service of Sister Rachel C. Blodgett, the wife of Elder C. E. Blodgett, was conducted in the auditorium of the church by Elder D. A. Whiting, Bishop B. J. Scott being the speaker. The eight children of Brother and Sister Blodgett were all present at the service. They are: Sister Minnie Collins, Sister Mary David, Independence; Sister Daisy Croft, McConnell, Nebraska; Edgar, Longmont, Colorado; William, La Platte, Wisconsin; R. J., Saint Joseph, Missouri; Sister Ella Dennis, Mapleton, Kansas.

Sunday evening, at seven o'clock, R. J. Lambert talked for a few minutes to those who gathered, many of whom went at the close of this meeting to hear the sermon at the Campus by Evangelist John Martin.

At August the church will remain closed all day, but the regular hours of service will be observed at the Sherman home in the open air—an all-day meeting and basket dinner. Make your preparations to be with Second Church congregation that day.

Next Sunday morning Elder C. A. Kress, the new elder in charge of Group 16, will be the speaker at eleven o'clock. The speaker at seven in the evening will be Brother Lane Bolt. Do not miss either of these; you never heard either one of them before.

Liberty Street

Doctor Florence Houghton, chiropractor, talked to the Temple Builders of the evening of July 19 on how to keep fit during the hot weather. The whole lesson was very instructive and was greatly appreciated by the girls.

Thursday evening, July 16, the cradle roll department gave their baby show, and Doctor Brickhouse Wilson gave the lecture of the evening. The music was furnished by the Lower Circle of Orioles and the Temple Builder quartet. The baby show consisted of pictures of the babies, which had been made into slides, thrown on the screen. The lecture of Doctor Wilson had to do with preserving the health of babies during the hot weather. The large attendance showed that there is great interest in this subject. A collection was taken for the benefit of the baby clinic.

The morning of July 19 Brother George W. Bullard, quite lately moved to Independence from Colorado, was the speaker. He used for his subject, "Individual responsibility.

Several from Liberty Street attended the home-coming celebration at Grandview, Missouri, Sunday afternoon, where Brother E. T. Atwell spoke morning and evening. This service will be reported more fully in the next items from Holden Stake.

Enoch Hill

The speaker at the little white church on Enoch Hill Sunday morning, July 19, was Bishop J. A. Becker, who presented his subject in his usual pleasing style.

Pastor W. J. Brewer was in Holden over Sunday.

Walnut Park

Elder Moroni Traxler, of Lamoni, Iowa, has been visiting with Brother J. Ralph Grewa Walt on East Alton during the past week. Brother Traxler taught the young people's class last Sunday and also preached at the eleven o'clock hour.

Mr. Raymond Rakeley and son Jewett, of Kankakee, Illinois, are visiting his mother, Sister Ellen Kepley, at East Fair Avenue. Jewett took part on the Relic program on Friday evening and rendered two very fine piano numbers which were enjoyed by all.

Patriarch John F. Martin started his series of meetings on a rainy night, but if we are to judge the future attendance by the number who attended on the rainy Monday evening, the series is going to be a great success. He took for his first subject, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." He is preaching at Walnut Park all this week.

Englewood
Some weeks ago the Department of Women held a country store at the home of Brother and Sister L. W. Fike, for the benefit of the building fund. Although there was not a very large crowd, about $45 was cleared.

A splendid sacrament service was enjoyed the first Sunday in July, and there was a larger attendance than usual.

Attendance at Sunday school is increasing also, which would be encouraging were it not for the fact that the church is now too small for comfort. Several new families have moved into this territory and are attending the Englewood church.

Elder John Ely was the speaker the morning of July 12, and Lyman Fike occupied July 19. The infant daughter of Brother and Sister J. A. Nelson was blessed July 19. No evening meeting is held while special services are being held at the Campus.

Saint Louis, Missouri

The Passing of Noah N. Cooke

Sunday, July 5, at eleven o'clock we received word that death had touched Noah N. Cooke, and "he was not." Two weeks before his wife passed away, following a long and painful illness of about ten years duration. Our brother had devoted himself to her care and had weakened perceptibly through the years of his loving vigil. So in peace and quietness his long and useful life came to a close, and he was with God.

It is impossible to speak of the real worth of our brother, but his achievements are written upon the hearts of men and women to whom for many years he has ministered. The Saint Louis Branch itself is a monument to the unfailing and sturdy service which he and others of his school rendered so faithfully and valiantly. Brother Cooke nurtured the church and watched it grow from a very small and weak congregation until it is now one of the largest and strongest in the communion.

Our brother represented a rapidly diminishing number, characteristic of the latter-day work. Not many mighty, not many learned, not many of social standing; poor, despised, and rejected of men, yet strong in the power of God; What mighty exploits they performed! What valiant service they have rendered! It will be a sad day for the churches when they forget, and God grant we never may, the contributions of these unofficial prophets and apostles who blazed a trail for us under conditions and through hardships we can scarcely appreciate now. They came from anvil, loom, plough, and mechanic's bench, not much about them that men desire, but with a burning zeal for souls and an experience with God that gave vitality to their message and converted their rude speech into molten eloquence. They won their way because God was with them in power and life and not because of theories and phraseologies. While they labored for the bread which perished, they dispensed the bread of life which came down from heaven. They could not understand nor explain the doctrine of the incarnation, but they themselves were the incarnation of God in human life. They could not explain the mysteries of the Godhead and all the marvels of his power, but they spelled out God and his grace in terms of loving service, sacrifice, and acquaintance with him in daily life. Their ministry was not in the wisdom of men but in the might and power of the Holy Ghost.

Brother Cooke in his gentle, kindly way had the art of loving men and women into the church, and by a rare childlike trust in the innate goodness of men made them as good as he believed them to be. He was blessed with what we have called "the gifts" of the Spirit, and many are the testimonies which are told of his remarkable ministry in these ways. His power of discernment amounted to what some have called "seership." He was peculiarly blessed in the gift of "spiritual healing," and many have rejoiced through his administrations. He was not a mystic however; his religion was very practical and found expression in working and cheering others. He was made a member of the Mite Society because he worked and prayed for the sisters when they were wrestling with problems too big and heavy for them. He was entitled to wear their badge as "honorary member."

Truly, Saint Louis Branch will miss the kindly little man whose quiet and gentle ways and tender care for others constituted his ministry. He was enshrined in the hearts of many who knew and loved him.

The funeral was conducted by John W. Rashton at the Parker Parlors on July 8. The Masonic Order, of which Brother Cooke had been a member for more than fifty years, concluded the service by performing their impressive rites at the grave.

A monthly priesthood meeting convened on Tuesday evening, July 14, at which an instructive and enjoyable time was had. Brothers Billinsky and Hampson read papers on "Sources of spiritual culture," written on different phases, but each a vital one.

The question of closing the church on Sunday evenings during the heated season was thoroughly canvassed in the branch, and the people finally decided by a small vote to keep it open.

Numbers of Saint Louis people are away on vacations, and some who have been away are returned. Among those having returned are Brother and Sister Arthur E. McKim, who toured the East.

Curtis, McConley, D'Arcy Visit Saskatchewan Conference

July 10.—The seventh annual district conference of the Southern Saskatchewan District convened at Viceroy, Saskatchewan, July 3 to 5, Elders J. F. Curtis, M. A. McConley, and O. L. D'Arcy in charge. Sunday school, Department of Recreation and Expression, and Department of Women work received attention by Sister Elizabeth D'Arcy, M. A. McConley, and Sister L. M. Bergersen. Sister C. R. Bowerman, musical director, was assisted by Brother J. F. Curtis.

Saints were present from Disley, Bethune, Weyburn, Goodwater, Radville, and other points, filling the church nicely. Meals were served in the public school building by the Viceroy Saints, gratis. Bishop's agent's report gave receipts as $710.40, and the auditing committee reported books satisfactory. Brother J. R. Dickson was sustained.

The speakers of the conference were Elders O. L. D'Arcy, J. F. Curtis, and M. A. McConley, whose words of instruction is hoped will take effect. A prosperous year is expected. William McK. Neil of Weyburn and Stephen Gibbons of Viceroy were called to the office of deacon; C. R. Bowerman of Weyburn and George and J. H. Miller of Webb to office of elder; Walter Simpson of Webb and A. N. O'Neil of Victor-roy to office of priest; the latter has not accepted as yet.

The selection of J. H. Miller of Webb as elder is to be acted upon when his call is accepted, as he was not present.

Five persons were baptized, and three babies blessed.

Following officers were elected; Otis L. D'Arcy, district president; Frank Jordan of Viceroy, first counselor, and J. R. Neil of Weyburn, second counselor; J. H. Miller of Webb, treasurer; Sister Elizabeth D'Arcy, District Sunday school superintendent, Sister Myrtle Neil of Weyburn, District Sunday school secretary-treasurer; Sister I. M. Berger- sen of Radville, Department of Women superintendent; J. H. Miller of Webb, Department of Recreation and Expression. Delegates to 1926 General conference: Mr. and Mrs. A. Otis D'Arcy and J. F. Curtis.

Another conference is past, one of the most spiritual. All seemingly went out with a determination to do better in the year before them than in the past; with good crops and conditions looking favorable. Attention was called by Brother Wells on the church lawn next Sunday for the convenience of conference visitors. Brother Edwards preached inspiring sermons Saturday night and Sunday morning, and Brother Wells spoke Sunday evening, enjoying good liberty. Brother Wells is a man of high integrity, is energetic and comes to this district no uncertain sound, and was very uplifting to the true Saints of God, who have the redemption of Zion at heart.

The selection of J. H. Miller of Webb as elder is to be acted upon when his call is accepted, as he was not present.

Brothers Edwards and Wells at Macon Conference

MACON, MISSOURI.—A successful district conference was held here July 11 and 12, at which Apostle F. Henry Ed- wards, District President G. R. Wells, and others were pre- sent. The sisters served dinner and supper on the church lawn Sunday for the convenience of conference visitors. Brother Edwards preached inspiring sermons Saturday night and Sunday morning, and Brother Wells spoke Sunday evening, enjoying good liberty. Brother Wells is a man of high integrity, is energetic and comes to this district highly recommended and well qualified for the duties that lie before him. Hearty cooperation from every member of the district is needed and desired in order to prosper the work of the district.

Preparations are being made for an outdoor service on the church lawn next Sunday evening, with Brother Wells as the speaker.

An Easter bazaar was held by the Department of Women, and the proceeds were used for rugs and mats for the church. This department is to be congratulated for the efforts they are putting forth to beautify the interior of the church.

On July 2 the Sunday school gave an ice cream social on the church lawn, and a nice sum was raised to purchase equipment for the beginners and primaries.

The Department of Recreation and Expression meets each Friday night. The first half hour is spent in study of the Religio Quarterlies on the Book of Mormon, and the other half hour is given over to recreation. In order that each member of the society may be active, each Friday night some family is called upon to render a program.

An oriole circle, The Wild Daisies, has been organized, with Sister Mayme Joyce as monitor. During the w- weather, they meet the first Monday night of each month. Provision will be made for two meetings a month when it is cooler.

The Temple Builders enjoyed several bunking parties when two members of the circle, Misses Alice and Trella Huffman, now of Kansas City, Missouri, were visiting their parents. They also enjoyed a picnic on July 4 at Love Lake. Fishing and boat riding provided part of their merriment.

Sister Eva Welch and Miss Ruby Kent were members of the graduating class. Miss Kent, while in Macon, was a member of the Sunday school and also a Temple Builder. At present she is holding a position as stenographer in Kansas City, Missouri.

The marriage of Miss Zelma Kelley, of Atlanta, Missouri, and Mr. Eddie Anderson, son of Brother and Sister Ed. Anderson, of Anabel, Missouri, was solemnized at the home of the groom's parents June 28, S. J. Joyce, sr., of Macon, officiating.

Sister Pearl Jones, of Beardstown, Illinois, and Brother Lee Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, visited in Macon during the month of June.

Nine Baptized in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA, July 13.—There has been much activity in this branch since our last report. In June a series of tent meetings was held by Brother Hubert Case, some work of preparation having been done by Brother Jonathan Koshiway. These meetings were continued for a few nights by Brother S. W. Simmons and closed July 2 with a sermon by District President Ed Dillon. Nine were baptized.

Some of the local priesthood are assisting in the work at El Reno, a city about thirty miles west of here where a branch is located.

Some of the Saints are now preparing to attend reunion and conference, which will be held at Skiatook July 25 to August 2.

One of our local brethren, J. C. Wilkerson, has been called and recommended to the district conference for ordination to the office of teacher.

J. Arthur Gillen Visits San Jose

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA, July 10.—The San Jose Branch is still producing its quota of musicians. On July 11, the Saints had the pleasure of attending a music recital under the direction of Professor Leroy Brant, of Brant's Institute of Music, held in the Centella Methodist Church, at which time and place one of our young sisters, Lena Alice Christopher, was awarded her degree of Bachelor of Music. At the recital there was rendered a cantata of which Sister Christopher was the originator.

The piano solos rendered by the sister gave evidence of her efficiency.

On the evening of June 27 the department of Recreation and Expression gave a chicken banquet as the climax of a contest by the department, the motive of which was to increase enthusiasm and attendance at Religio. There were about sixty or seventy entertained at the banquet, including a number of visitors from Oakland Branch. A spirit of unity prevailed, and a very enjoyable time was had.

June 25 another evening's enjoyment was had by a number of the Saints. They gathered at the home of Brother B. R. Gilbert, pastor of the branch, when from a clear sky there was precipitated a shower upon his daughter, Sister Grace, who had engaged a passage on the matrimonial ship of life, of which her fiance was to be the captain. The shower consisted of many beautiful and substantial presents; that indicated that in the near future she was intending to keep house.

Sunday, June 28, we were very much cheered and encouraged by the presence of our beloved apostle, J. A. Gillen, who preached a very timely and inspiring sermon, which gave no uncertain sound, and was very uplifting to the true Saints of God, who have the redemption of Zion at heart.
At the close of this service, at twelve o'clock noon Sister Grace Gilbert and Mr. Walter Burleson were united in marriage. Elder W. H. Dawson of Sacramento, a vice president of the district, officiated. Afterwards a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, to which all the Saints were invited.

July 5 the Saints dispensed with their services in the branch here and attended _Realty Day_ services at Oakland, which was a grand success. The church was crowded to its capacity.

On Thursday evening, July 9, Brother Gillen was with us again and gave us another rousing, forceful sermon which was inspiration from start to finish. May he be spared many years to lift up the banner of Immanuel.

Successful Owen Sound Conference

PROVIDENCE BAY, ONTARIO, July 9.—Brother D. B. Perkins and I came up here about three weeks ago to prepare for the district conference and do some necessary work on the church. We worked almost night and day up to the opening of the conference, and as a result of our labors the church is now pleasant and comfortable. I opened the work here some years ago. The conference convened July 4 and was a decided success. President F. M. Smith was in attendance, and the humble, peaceful spirit accompanying him spread over the entire conference from beginning to end.

The priesthood meeting held Sunday afternoon will never be forgotten by those present. Our hearts were made glad, and we rejoiced as brethren in the great latter-day work. Elder J. W. Peterson spoke on the restoration at half past seven, one of the first sermons I ever heard on that subject.

Many could not get into the large hall at the afternoon service when President F. M. Smith spoke on stewardship.

G. C. TOMLINSON.

Indian Members Active in Nebraska

WALTHILL, NEBRASKA, June 12.—I often read articles and letters in the HERALD that encourage me. We like to know how the work is progressing in other branches.

We are getting along very nicely with the work here. Brother Claud Carter, branch president, is with us at each Sunday morning service. We have a splendid Sunday school, with Brother Reilly as superintendent, although during the summer months here as elsewhere the attendance is not so good.

At the last sacramental service we enjoyed the presence of God's Spirit. The testimonies were good, and it is at such times that we feel it is indeed good to be Latter Day Saints.

We are glad to welcome back to our branch Brother J. W. Reilly and Brother Charles Lane and their families.

As leader of the Department of Women I have not been very active this summer, as I have been nursing for the last two months. When cooler weather comes, we are planning big things for this department. Last January we put on a father and son banquet, the first of its kind ever held in this village. We were very successful in selling the tickets, and with Brother P. R. Burton as toastmaster, the affair was a grand success. Practically every business man in town was present, as well as some from neighboring towns. The toasts and their responses were good. As a result of our banquet we sent Brother Freming, of Omaha, Nebraska, one hundred and fifty dollars to apply on the debt against our church building.

We were able to get Addie Boucher, a full blood Winnebago Indian and a graduate from the Cook County Hospital School for Nurses of Chicago to lecture to the women at one of their meetings. Her talk was splendid, especially for the young mothers. She has promised to come any time we need her. Sister Boucher and I are Lamanites, old schoolmates and graduates of Hampton Institute in Virginia. We hope to take up this winter a regular course of study.

We have a group of fine young people in the branch, and I feel fortunate to be their Sunday-school teacher. Here as elsewhere our problem is to keep our young interested. May God bless us all in this great work.

MRS. ETTA M. BROWNING.

Des Moines Is Building New Church

DES MOINES, IOWA, July 16.—Tuesday evening, June 30, the Panadelphia Chapter of Temple Builders gave an ice cream social at the church, which was enjoyed by many of the Saints and their friends. Some of the girls had baked nice cakes, and after the cream was all gone the cakes that were left were sold to the highest bidders. A general good time was enjoyed. The proceeds went into the church building fund.

July 4, Saints of the Des Moines District met in Grandview Park at Des Moines and enjoyed the day. All brought lunches and picnicked together. Brother Cyril E. Wight of Kansas City was the speaker of the day, and there were games for all which were enjoyed immensely. The winners were given prizes, and much interest was manifested. Brother Higgins, pastor of the Des Moines Branch, had his camera and made a picture of all those who could be gathered in the group.

Excavation has been started on our lot where the church burned last winter, and we hope to have our new building far enough along so we can meet in it by the first of 1926 or sooner.

Brother and Sister Higgins are enthusiastic workers, and we anticipate some real progress in the Des Moines branch during the coming months.

Even though the summer heat has been on in earnest for the last few weeks, the attendance in both the Sunday school and church services is holding up well. The midweek prayer meeting is taking on renewed momentum, and as a whole our branch is proving itself a live one.

Flint, Michigan

June 14.—Since our last letter the sixth quarterly young people's convention has passed into history. A goodly number of young people and old too, came together from throughout the district and enjoyed games and a general good time July 4. In the evening a pleasing program was provided in the high school auditorium, consisting of some very fine vocal and instrumental numbers and a forty minute one-act play staged by the dramatic class of the Niles Avenue Flint Church.

On Sunday morning at half past eight about three hundred young people were assembled for the sacramental service. Patriarch John F. Martin delivered the opening address. The presence of the Spirit of the Master was felt, and the gifts of the gospel were manifest.

At eleven o'clock Elder J. Charles Mottasheld delivered an inspiring sermon, using as his subject "This year we sail Zionward, which is our course." The afternoon session was devoted to talks on the Sunday school, the Department of Recreation and Expression, and music, being interspersed with musical numbers.

Brother Martin was the speaker at the evening service on the topic “Taking Christ seriously” bringing to a close a convention of young people, constituting another step in our onward march to Zion.

We were very fortunate in having Brother Martin stay over in Flint for a couple of days, giving us two encouraging talks. On Monday night his subject was “Prayer” and on Tuesday night, “The second coming of Christ.” We believe we are making progress. At any rate we are all united in the desire to do our part in pushing forward the long delayed progress of the church.

The district ministerial conference convenes in Flint July 19, and we are expecting to have an inspiring time. It is expected that President F. M. Smith will be here, also Bishop A. Carmichael.

Since our last letter two have been taken from our number by death: Zella, the wife of Albert Leighton, who suffered long and patiently; and John Decker, one of our zealous workers in the teacher’s office, who was taken very suddenly on July 13 after only five days of illness. The sympathy of the whole branch goes out to the bereaved family in the one case, and the wife and family in the other.

Radio Flashes

Kansas City, Missouri.—A few nights ago I heard your broadcasting over your new 1000-watt set. I was greatly impressed with both your high-class program and the splendid quality of transmission. —C. W. Hudson.

Warrensburg, Missouri.—Your programs are coming in fine. I see a great improvement since the installation of the new equipment. . . . Enjpy your programs and hope you continue with the same good ones.—John E. Stewart.

Baldwin City, Kansas.—Enjoyed your program last night very much, especially the “Poem of life,” read by Mr. Pitt.—Reverend G. E. Seybold.

Richmond, Missouri.—Your programs are always good. You certainly have one of the best stations on the air. I never fail to tune you in. Far better transmission on 441 meters.—Charles F. Bassett.

Atchison, Kansas.—Your broadcasting on new wave length (441 meters) perfect, despite warm, humid atmosphere. Congratulations.—William A. Simpson.

Hartford, Kansas.—I am a boy thirteen years old, and have made a small one-tube receiving set with which I have picked up many stations, but never heard you until Thursday night. KLDS came in so clear that my sister and I were much surprised. It was clearer than any other broadcasting I have heard, and your programs are good.—Buell Beadle.

Lamoni, Iowa.—We enjoyed C. E. Wight’s sermon. The pipe organ music and singing were good. . . . KLDS comes in a little louder than the Kansas City stations, and much plainer. Much greater volume than WOS. It makes me proud to hear the announcement “KLDS, Independence, Missouri,” because Independence is my home town. . . . We listen for you every time you are on the air.—Paul May.

mision of the church, a man of indomitable will and unflinching courage, a champion of the truth, a lover of liberty. He was true to his convictions and knew no compromise. He was kind, considerate, a friend of everybody, would admit an enemy, and was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was the friend of the weak and needy and a true follower of Jesus Christ. He believed in and preached the ethics of Jesus and maintained that Christianity is a life to be lived rather than a creed to be taught.

In the passing of Francis Marion Cooper, the church has lost one of her most loyal sons; the community a fearless and law-abiding citizen; the city a lawyer and honored member. Funeral services from the Methodist Church, Plano, Illinois; sermon by T. W. Williams. Of his immediate family there remains his widow, Sister Jennie Cooper, of Plano, Illinois; his daughter, Eva L. Saints from all parts of the Northern Illinois District were in attendance at the funeral which was one of the largest ever held in Northern Illinois. Interment in the Plano cemetery.

Vineyard Gleanings

Travel reveals striking contrasts—mountain and plain, sea and desert, orange groves and slaughter houses; and as striking contrasts in human experiences.

Among chance acquaintances formed on the train out of Salt Lake City was a young married woman of Los Angeles. She has been married two years. Her husband is assistant manager of a bank and has a large income. She has money for fine clothes and what not. They live at a good hotel—"swell" is the adjective, I believe. She does not have to cook or serve her husband's food or mop floors or wash dishes or mend socks. She is served.

Yet she confessed, "I am almost crazy because I have nothing to do."

Thousands of women would consider her lot one to envy. Yet she was restless and unhappy. If one has not read human nature wrongly and the daily papers in vain, she will presently go to the Devil in a very literal sense. She seemed by nature a good woman but living an abnormal life—always served—never serving—nothing to do—unhappy.

A little later I stayed at the home of a young man and his wife. She lives in a lovely but comparatively small bungalow. She prepares and serves the meals, keeps the home, and cultivates flowers in the yard. She has a splendid baby whom she is rearing along modern lines with old-fashioned devotion. Her income is modest; it does not permit many worldly pleasures, yet she is happy in a clean and wholesome way. She is busy—serving others—living a normal, useful life as a home maker.

So much for a short story with a moral picked up en route. Following the services at Ogden and Salt Lake City reported in my last, I proceeded to Los Angeles. My first meeting in the district was with the Ontario Saints, July 9. Brother F. J. Lacy is pastor of this branch. The following day at the home of Brother and Sister Frank Van Fleet of Cucamonga I was privileged to solemnize the marriage of their daughter Frances to Brother Charles F. Church, jr., of Lamoni, Iowa, this being the culmination of a Graceland College romance. These young people are of old-line Latter Day Saint stock, being, I believe, each of them of the fourth generation to claim the spiritual inheritance of the fathers. They will continue their studies next year at the University of Iowa, where Brother Church is studying choir and orchestra leadership. He is a grandson of Norman W. Smith, known to the Saints as a musical composer, and a nephew of Carrie Thomas, who wrote, "In the light."

From Cucamonga I was driven to San Bernardino by Brother Van Fleet, who is a member of the district presidency. The drive gave opportunity for consultation, which the bustle of the wedding had prevented.

At San Bernardino I spoke Friday evening and Sunday morning to fine and attentive audiences. Some old-time friends were there, known for many years, Uncle Jimmy Miller, A. E. Jones, Sister Poole and Sister Rabel, the Wixoms, the Aldridges, the Anthonys, and others; and a great number of more recent acquaintances.

Brother George H. Wixom has recently been elected president of the branch, with Brother Hubbard as assistant, and seems to be winning the support of the Saints.

Following the Sunday morning meeting Brother N. T. Chapman drove me from San Bernardino to Long Beach, possibly ninety miles, for the evening service. I spoke there Monday evening also. Long Beach has a fine congregation, well situated, as their church building since being remodeled is both commodious and attractive. Some days were spent very profitably with Brother Chapman, and Wednesday I took the boat to San Diego, a five-hour trip down the coast.

At San Diego I stayed at the home of Brother Ray Weatherbee, branch president, and spoke at the church Thursday evening. The Saints in San Diego have a small congregation but are housed in a very convenient and commodious church building which has a large basement equipped, for Sunday school work and social gatherings. There are also two upstairs rooms that might be used for a small parsonage. The Saints there are rather justly asking for aid in the way of a city missionary.

Returning by boat Friday I was again met by Brother Chapman and taken to Los Angeles to meet with the Belvidere Branch. This branch was organized during the past year and is presided over by Brother V. L. Lum, formerly from Oklahoma. They meet in a hall which was well filled by a very attentive audience, and good liberty was enjoyed in preaching to them. A pleasant social greeting followed the service.

I remained in Los Angeles until Sunday, domiciled at the home of Brother and Sister J. W. Mather, formerly of Lamoni and more recently Independence. Sunday morning met with the Saints of the First Los Angeles Branch. The audience was all that could be desired in size and respectful attention. They now have a very lovely and well-equipped building, one of the very best that the church owns, in a splendid part of the city. Here friends too numerous to name were met, and their hearty handclasps and good wishes were appreciated.

Brother Walter W. Smith, pastor, is kept very busy with his pastoral duties, as his flock is scattered over a wide area. Los Angeles is growing beyond recognition and will soon reach from the mountains to the sea—indeed she now has one foot in the salt water at San Pedro, and the other, a very lively foot, in the hills at Hollywood.

Sunday evening was spent with the Santa Ana Saints, where Brother Chapman again joined me for the service. Brother Leonard Rhodes as pastor has done a good work here. The results are shown particularly in the renewed interest of the young people.

This service closed a busy period extending over three Sundays, during which nine branches in two districts were visited, with one and sometimes two meetings in each; consultation had with district and branch presidents; and a large number of personal visits made.

I must not fail to report meeting our missionary, P. R. Burton. He had thought of Southern California as a hard mission field, but instead seems to find great promise. He has pitched the district tent at Watts, a suburb of Los Angeles, in a mission opened by Brother Vaile, formerly of Independence. The attendance is good, and arrangements were being made for baptisms. A font had been dug in the ground inside the tent and lined with canvas. Several were ready to unite, and it was intended to make the service both orderly and impressive. The Saints of Long Beach, Belvidere, and First Los Angeles Branches were arranging to visit their meetings and help out with their presence and moral support.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

These books are distributed free to anyone interested in the doctrine of stewardships who will send in their names and addresses through their branch president. Graceland College Students

Where Are You?
The old college is still on the hill, but where are you—the thousands whose names are on the records? Plans of great interest to the college are being matured, and it is of vital importance to get in touch with you. All former Graceland College students are asked to send their names and addresses to the college at once.

All friends of the college knowing the names and addresses of former Graceland students are requested to send them to the college.

There is good news waiting to be told, and you are sure to be delighted when you receive our letter which is ready to be mailed.

Why not do it now?

Church Radio Heard in London

In last week's HERALD was printed a report of communications carried on between the church short wave experimental radio station and stations in New Zealand and Argentina. Since that time a verified reception report has been received from London, England. FFP has not yet been able to accomplish communication with European experimental stations, but the operator, Roy Beck, is certain that with the coming of cold weather he can communicate with both European and African stations.

Readers should not confuse these reports with the new church broadcasting station. KLD will undoubtedly be heard in a number of foreign countries next winter, but during the summer season real long distance broadcasting is almost impossible.

Many more reports are being received by KLD since going on 1,000 watts, 441 meters, than before the change in power and wave length. The novelty of broadcasting has worn off to a large extent. People now accept it as a matter of course, and very few make reports to the broadcasting stations.

During the past week KLD has received several letters from nonmembers who have been listening to our sermons, requesting additional information concerning our doctrines. Our missionaries are constantly meeting people who have already been introduced to our church by means of KLD. Perhaps the greatest function of our church broadcasting station is to let the world know we are normal human beings with high ideals and a remarkable social plan; then, when our missionaries go out to evangelize, they will find fertile ground to plant their seed of truth.

What One Radio Fan Thinks of KLD

The following letter is typical of what outsiders think of the broadcasting from our new station:

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, June 25, 1925.

KLDS,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Sirs: I have been quite a close follower of your work and have always liked it, both for the programs and the way they are put on the air. I followed you in your tests which I wrote you about. Was always able to pick up your station, no matter who was on the air.

Since you have increased your power and are on 441 meters it is simply great. I consider yours the best broadcasting of over one hundred stations I have logged. As to the programs you give us, I can't see how they can be improved much. Your talks are interesting and the music good. I like the class of music you put out, which is in great contrast to the jazzy stuff handed us by the majority of stations.

I shall be waiting for your Saturday night programs, so I can get more of your good music. Wishing you success, and thanking you for the entertainment you are giving us, I am,

C. D. BENFORD.

William Jennings Bryan Passes

Sunday evening, after having spent the day in active defense of his faith in God and the Bible, and while resting in peaceful sleep, one of the honorable men of the earth, a leader of the common American people, America's leading private citizen, William Jennings Bryan, breathed his last.

He was not an aged man, being in his sixty-sixth year, but he had spent himself unsparingly in causes which he deemed primal. He was the leading prohibitionist for a quarter century; the leading peace advocate of more than a decade; the leading fundamentalist in religious faith at the time of his death. He had seen many of his chosen theories of government enacted into law of State and Nation, accepting this approval with the same grace and dignity with which he had met his political defeats. His greatness of soul had been tested and proved in his private and public conduct.

It is pleasant to all that his body will lie in a beautiful spot in Arlington National Cemetery, among America's hero dead. Funeral rites are to be simple and unostentatious, in harmony with his tastes and at the direction of his honored companion in matrimony. Friday, July 31, has been chosen as the day for the funeral ceremony. In death, as in life, he is the Great Commoner.

The "Saints' Herald" for $2.00

Plans are being evolved to make the SAINTS' HERALD better than it has ever been.

The Bishopric of the church are now, and will for many weeks present the social program and doctrines of the church, including the discussion of stewardships, Order of Enoch, and Zion building.

The department of local church news receives more attention than formerly, and will include during the next three months an account of the various reunions. These will be given sufficient notice to apprise the church of the nature and extent of the regular and special features of each gathering.

In addition to these the official nature of the journal will become of increased importance and interest, and in the hands of the First Presidency will not be permitted to slacken its editorial leadership of the church literature.

No family of Saints can neglect reading the HERALD without losing touch with developments, and the Board of Publication believes that the subscription list can be so increased as to make it a good financial move on their part to reduce the price, and the HERALD is accordingly being mailed for $2 to any domestic address.

Make it your work to see the official organ in some new home before the close of the next month. Soliciting for the HERALD is work for the church.

For What Do We Wait?

By Dalburson

Just over ninety-two years ago Joseph the Martyr received a certain revelation, given, as is all true revelation, for our profit, our instruction. Prophecy should serve for us who believe. Now this particular revelation tells us of the system employed by a great man of God, Enoch, to establish the kingdom of God on earth. I think we understand that God gave this same revelation to Enoch. We are told that Enoch profited by this word of God. This holy man and the people whom he led obeyed the instructions given. We are called upon to obey these same instructions. We long for the results obtained by those early Saints; yet we fail to do those things which bring the desired results.

For What Do We Wait?

We are often told that there must be the proper preparation for this great task of establishing stewardships. We are told that we cannot rush into a big thing unprepared; that a campaign of education is necessary; that the people are not quite ready for it; that it requires time to get the proper atmosphere for the Saints to fully realize their responsibilities. “The purposes of God are not accomplished in a day,” is also a favorite quotation used by some who seem to think we need to be in no hurry about this God-given task. Surely there are none who will seriously argue that we are moving along rapidly enough. Let us remember who gave the command: “It is wisdom in me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship.”—Doctrine and Covenants 101:2. We believe in the omniscience of God, and he says it is wisdom in him that this church establish stewardships. Is there anyone in the church who thinks God meant for us to do this in 1960 or in the year 2000? No, you know there is not. Then, why our delay? Why do we ask the next generation to do what our grandfathers were commanded to do, and which has not yet been done? Why, Saints?

When we receive a revelation instructing us to release or appoint a certain man to or from a certain office, we do it at once. It was only a short time after the decision was arrived at to build a college at Lamoni, until it was an accomplished fact. In only a few (but too many) years after the church decided to build an auditorium, it will be enjoyed by us, and we will be benefited by it. Now, I understand that these instances partake of the nature of acts, while the establishment of stewardships involves a process. The institution of Graceland was or is not merely an act to be completed at one time, but it involves a process, which, while still evolving and developing, is permitting us to reap large and splendid fruits from it yearly. So, also, by starting definite work on stewardships, we will daily benefit; this benefit multiplying like compound interest. Not only will we get the reward which comes from the application of a sure system, but the added reward coming from doing the command of God. At some time, even a process must approach completion. It never does until it is started.

For What Do We Wait?

Are there none in the church whose hearts are willing? If there are only five ready and willing, let us begin at once. Surely we have a few who are sufficiently converted and consecrated to undertake this thing. If there are only five willing and qualified, we are responsible for not allowing those five to reap the spiritual reward coming as a result of applied divine order. Have we thought of this—that possibly we shall be condemned for not permitting them this privilege of living under divine law in operation? I fully believe that we have a few at least who are longing to launch themselves into this plan. Let the call go forth,

“Ye Who Are Ready, Come!”

A plan or order or system or corporation of stewardships can be drawn up and entered into without waiting years to do it. A corporation or company can be organized in a short time, which is binding upon all. We have had the outline—yes, even the details of the plan—for over ninety years, and what can we show for it? We have the plan; we have the men; we have the money, “There is even now in store a sufficient to redeem Zion”; we have even the notary. Let us get some signatures. Let us organize.

God has given the plan; shown us what to do and how to do it. Let us give him our hearts. Let us present ourselves living examples of the virtue of God’s decrees. “It is wisdom in me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship.”

For what do we wait?

They seek not the welfare of Zion. Behold, the Lord hath forbidden this thing; wherefore, the Lord God hath given a commandment, that all men should have charity, which charity is love, and except they should have charity, they were nothing: wherefore, if they should have charity, they would not suffer the laborer in Zion to perish. But the laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion; for if they labor for money, they shall perish.—2 Nephi 11:1-2.

Let every man esteem his brother as himself: for what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter to the other, Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there, and looketh upon his sons and saith, I am just.—Doctrine and Covenants 38:5.

And if ye seek the riches which it is the will of the Father to give unto you, ye shall be the richest of all people; for ye shall have the riches of eternity; and it must needs be that the riches of the earth are mine to give; but beware of pride.—Doctrine and Covenants 38:9.

Think of your brethren, like unto yourselves, and be familiar with all, and free with your substance, that they may be rich like unto you. But before ye seek for riches, seek ye for the kingdom of God. And after ye have obtained a hope to infinite riches, if ye seek them; and ye will seek them, for the intent to do good; to clothe the naked, and to feed the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick, and the afflicted.—Jacob 2:22-24.

If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?—James 2:15, 16.

But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?—1 John 3:17.

Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.—Matthew 7:12.

No stronger statements could be made to substantiate the very important truth that all stewards must be governed by the Spirit of God. Selfishness must be eliminated. The golden rule must be the dynamic to insure success. Altruism must predominate over egoism.

(B) How to Manage—Some Laws Governing.

1. Stewardship to be governed by God's law. (Doctrine and Covenants 101:10.)
2. Stewardship to be governed by the law of the land. (128:7.)
3. Stewardships to be used in manner designed of God. (128:8.)
4. Stewardships should be run in a businesslike manner, so stewardship shall support the steward and if possible make a proper profit. (Doctrine and Covenants 101:3; 81:4; Matthew 25:17, 20, 22, 31; Micah 4:13; Proverbs 14:22.)
5. Steward to associate with the world and yet be not of the world, (Doctrine and Covenants 128:7.)
6. Steward should not confine business to Saints only. (128:7.)
7. Should make money in righteousness. (48:2; 70:1; 101:5; 101:12.)
8. Must "deal justly." (3 Nephi 12:11.)
9. Must act honestly and honorably. (Doctrine and Covenants 128:8; 51:2.)
10. Must not "speculate." (127:7.)
11. Must give an accounting of stewardship. (42:9; 72:4; 70:1; 118:4; 101:2; 69:2.)
12. Must be a steward "in deed" as well as in theory. (101:10.)
13. Stewardship must not be polluted by "jarrings, covetousness, envyings, and strife by the stewards," (98:4.)
14. We must use our stewardship wisely or be condemned. (Matthew 25:14, 30.)
15. Steward must be diligent; if idle, to have no place in church. (Doctrine and Covenants 75:5.)

The program of stewardships includes as its finality the fullest development and proper use of every man's "ability." It provides for a maximum stewardship as well as a minimum stewardship. It recognizes the vital fact that every man, not disqualified mentally or physically, should have at least a minimum stewardship or, in other words, a stewardship which will produce his "needs and just wants."

Every person, eventually, should have a stewardship according to his "ability." (Matthew 25:14-31, I. T.) The economic program of God must and does provide for the fullest utilization of a man's "ability." This "ability" is a gift from God, and as such it is not alone an asset but it is a liability of the person so blessed, and as a liability it must be accounted for both in time and eternity. (Doctrine and Covenants 72:1.)

God is just, and he will not condemn a person whom he has endowed with ability, if the said person, through no fault of his own, had not the capital to use his endowment. Consequently we find that the gospel makes proper provision for the providing of the means with which these various "abilities" may be used—the use being service to humanity.

The first thing, then, in the development of the stewardship plan is to provide every worthy and capable man with a stewardship which will supply him with his "needs and just wants." These "needs and just wants" are to be provided for out of the surplus—this surplus to be received by the church from members who have more than their "needs and just wants," thus bringing equality, having no rich or poor.

The second step is to enlarge his stewardship so as to enable him fully to use his "ability" in the service of his fellow men and thus be truly serving...
Stewardship: How Long to Hold.

This responsibility will last just so long as we have an inheritance, and we have learned on page 741 that this shall be forever.

And this is the beginning of the stewardship which I have appointed unto him, for a blessing unto him, and his seed after him.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 6.

Stewardship—Returns From.

(A) How much retained and how much consecrated.

And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, . . . it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 10.

All more than is necessary is here designated as the amount to be consecrated. Amount equal to necessity is to be retained by the steward.

Impart a portion of thy property; yea, even part of thy lands, and all save the support of thy family.—Doctrine and Covenants 18: 5.

Here all except the support of self and family is to be imparted.

And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me.—Proverbs 30: 8.

From these we learn that the steward is to retain enough for his needs and just wants; the balance is to be consecrated. The significance of this giving of the surplus should not be forgotten by the reader.

Ownership must always be acknowledged by some overt act.

The owner always names the basis of the acknowledgment.

The lender, not the borrower, names the terms. The owner, not the tenant, fixes the rent.

God is the owner; we are the tenants. The rent we must pay has been clearly enumerated—all above our needs and just wants. Every time we pay our surplus we are acknowledging the ownership of God.

Consecrations (Tithes, Surplus and Offerings), Where Placed.

Therefore, the residue [surplus] shall be kept in my storehouse.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 10.

And the storehouse shall be kept by the consecrations of the church [people].—Doctrine and Covenants 82: 2.

And if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 14.

Nevertheless, inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants, it shall be given into my storehouse.—Doctrine and Covenants 70: 2.

That every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse.—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.

Let the Bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church, and let all things, both in money and in meat, which is more than is needful for the want of this people, be kept in the hands of the bishop.—Doctrine and Covenants 51: 4.
Consecrations (Tithes, Surplus and Offerings), How Used.

The revelations to the church as found in the three books state both in general terms as well as in detail how the gains or surplus from the stewardship should be used. Among the general provisions we find such as

1. To be used as the common property of the whole church.

To be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church.—Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.

And all that believed were together, and had all things common.—Acts 2:44.

Neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.—Acts 4:32.

And they had all things common among them, therefore there were not rich and poor, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift.—4 Nephi 1:4.

2. Unto the inhabitants of Zion.

It shall be given unto my storehouse, and the benefits shall be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 70:2.

3. For the benefit of the church.

And all this for the benefit of the church of the living God.—Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.

4. For the good of the Saints.

That he [the bishop] may obtain money to buy land for the good of the saints.—Doctrine and Covenants 57:4.

Obtain in righteousness for the good of the saints.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:10.

5. To administer to those who have not.

It [the consecrated property] shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:10.

6. For the establishing of Zion.

Send it [money] unto the bishop... that it may be consecrated... for establishing Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 83:18.

7. To build up the New Jerusalem.

The residue [surplus] shall be kept in my storehouse for... building up the New Jerusalem.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:10.

8. All things needed.

That he [the bishop] may obtain money to buy... whatsoever things the disciples may need to plant them in their inheritance.—Doctrine and Covenants 57:4.

And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.—Acts 2:44, 45.

Neither was there any among them that lacked:... and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.—Acts 4:34, 35.

If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother: but thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.—Deuteronomy 15:7, 8.

Among the provisions more in detail we find the following:

9. To support the families of the ministry.

I say unto you, that it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those,... who are called and must needs be sent unto the world to proclaim the gospel unto the world.—Doctrine and Covenants 75:4. (72:3.)

10. For the poor and needy.

Which he has consecrated to the church for the poor and needy.—Doctrine and Covenants 51:1; 42:8; 42:10; 82:2; 42:19.

11. The sick and afflicted.

And remember in all things... the sick and afflicted.—Doctrine and Covenants 59:3.

To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction.—James 1:27.

Impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them.—Doctrine and Covenants 102:2.

12. For widows and orphans.

And the storehouse shall be kept by the consecrations of the church, that widows and orphans shall be provided for.—Doctrine and Covenants 82:2.

That ye save all the money that ye can,... that in time ye may be enabled to purchase lands.—Doctrine and Covenants 48:2.

Therefore the residue [surplus] shall be kept in my storehouse,... and for the purpose of purchasing lands for the public benefit of the church. (Doctrine and Covenants 42:10; 57:1; 58:10, 11; 122:6.)

14. To aid in supplying stewardships.

That if any man among you, say unto the treasurer, I have need of this to help me in my stewardship;... the treasurer shall give unto him the sum which he requires, to help him in his stewardship.—Doctrine and Covenants 101:12.

Every man shall be made... a steward over... that which he has received by consecration.—Doctrine and Covenants 42:9.

15. To aid those having charge of literary concerns of the church.

Let my servants who are appointed as stewards over the literary concerns of my church have claim for assistance upon the bishop, or bishops, in all things.—Doctrine and Covenants 72:4.

16. To give the youth of the church a start in life.

All children have claim upon their parents for their maintenance until they are of age; and after that, they have claim upon the church; or, in other words, upon the Lord's storehouse, if their parents have not wherewith to give them inheritances.—Doctrine and Covenants 82:2.

17. To be used for printing the revelations, etc.

That it may be consecrated for the bringing forth of the revelations and the printing thereof.—Doctrine and Covenants 83:18.
18. To be used for building houses of worship.

The residue shall be kept in my storehouse, ... for the purpose of ... and building houses of worship.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 10.

Consecration, How Often.

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me ... thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, ... And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue [surplus] to be consecrated [second consecration] unto the bishop, ... Therefore, the residue [surplus] shall be kept in my storehouse.—Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1.

Object of Stewardship

Stewardships primarily do not concern money. They are bigger than that. They are the hub of the social system instituted by Christ. Through stewardships we have the revealed will of God. No man can live as God would have him and not comply with the law of stewardship.

Stewardship provides the only cure for our social wrongs. Under it we recognize God as the real owner—that all things begin in God and end in him. The management of all our privileges—education, talent, power—are part of our stewardship. Social evils can never be overcome until we are converted to the thought that stewardship is God's way.

Stewardship is not only an asset. It is also a liability. It means the management of an investment of God in you with such things as health, education, talent, influence, business ability, etc.

Stewardship acknowledges "ability" as a gift from God and "capital" as the means provided to utilize this "ability." That "ability" is a spiritual gift, and "capital" is a temporal gift. That both are a liability and must be accounted for, both in time and eternity. That "capital" is the tool of "ability" and that every man should be equipped with proper "tools," hence the necessity of the stewardship plan.

These things are blessings from the Lord. They are God's capital given us by him to possess. As such we are in debt for them. When God made this deposit with us, or loaned these blessings to us, it simply placed greater responsibility, obligation, and opportunity upon us. It meant stewardship, not ownership.

What would you think of a bank in which you made a deposit and the bank would claim the deposit as its own? Would not this be dishonest? Would not the bank books show that they owed you for the amount of your deposit? Then should not you owe God for the above named blessings?

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of light." The Lord says in Doctrine and Covenants 101: 10 that "stewardship is a blessing." The failure to teach stewardships is one important cause of so many false economic programs being taught.

Stewardships would have saved the world from much social confusion.

Stewardship is a safe economic program—it is all truth, not part truth.

Stewardship is the only social program that recognizes the fact that men themselves are selfish and covetous, with no power of self-regeneration.

Stewardships provide a cure for the fatal defect of nearly every communistic experiment, the inefficient man.

Stewardship teaches the basic fact of God's ownership of property and income.

Stewardship affirms that possession under God is a pledge of faithful administration.

Stewardship recognizes the duty of trustship in providing for the good of the whole.

Stewardship does not take away man's individual responsibility, but on the contrary provides for the fullest development of this responsibility.

Stewardship fulfills the injunction of Paul, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."—Romans 15: 1.

Stewardship recognizes the fact that some men are strong and some weak, and makes proper provisions to utilize both factors.

Stewardship "bears patiently with the inefficient man, but cannot in honor reward him."

Stewardship "sees things as they are and would fashion them into what they should be."

Stewardship, as it has been well said, has "gentleness in its heart, but iron in its blood."

Contentment

Let us learn to be content with what we have. Let us get rid of our false estimates, set up all the higher ideals—a quiet home; vines our own planting; a few books full of the inspiration of genius; a few friends worthy of being loved and able to love us in turn; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring no pain or sorrow; a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion, empty of all bigotry, full of trust and hope and love; and to such a philosophy this world will give up all the empty joy it has.—David Swing.
NEWS AND LETTERS

Gomer T. Griffiths at Nauvoo

Dear Brethren: We arrived in this old historic spot June 13; next day was Children’s Day and we had a very fine program, both at the morning and evening sessions.

The Saints have a fine brick building in which to worship, with about two acres of ground surrounding it, being located in what is termed “The Flat,” and is on the same street as the Mansion House and the Nauvoo House are located, only about four or five blocks distant. The branch here is in a very thriving condition; Sunday school and Religion are wide awake. Brother Amos Berve is pastor of the branch, as well as president of the district, being well qualified for the position due to his years of experience in presiding. He also looks after the visitors, and this task alone keeps him very busy most of the time. He is a good counselor and very sympathetic by nature, and has the confidence of the people both in and out of the church. His companion supports him in his efforts, notwithstanding that she does not enjoy the best of health at times.

In the branch work he is ably supplemented by such men as Brethren Layton, Lewis, Sanford, Lee Henderson, and others. We wish it also understood that the sisters in this branch are not sitting around with folded arms, but are awake to the situation that confronts us as a church, and are making themselves useful in seconding the efforts of the brethren.

On the Fourth of July they had a picnic in the grove across from the Mansion House; a goodly number of outsiders were present, participating in the activities, and seemed to enjoy themselves immensely.

The local brethren, namely, Sanford and Lewis, fill appointments on the outside, Sanford presiding over the Keokuk Branch, which is situated eleven miles down the river. Brother Lewis goes here and there, wherever the demand is made, and manifests a willingness to do what he can to advance the cause of the kingdom. Every other Sunday they furnish a man for the Rock Creek Branch. There is no need of any officer being idle in this locality, as there is a branch in Monrose (across the river), Rock Creek (nine miles away), Fort Madison (twelve or thirteen miles), and Burlington (only about nineteen miles above here up the river). Nauvoo is a good point from which to radiate.

Nauvoo is very beautifully situated on the Mississippi River, and there is no more picturesque location for a beautiful city to be found anywhere in the United States. The river is two miles wide at this point; the city is in the shape of a horse shoe, and the river winds around two thirds of it. The rise where the temple once stood, in the days of the Martyr, commands a glorious view, from which point one can see the surrounding country for miles. And what a sight it must have been to stand on the tower of the Nauvoo Temple! One can hardly believe that at one time in the history of the church the population of this city was between thirty and forty thousand. The present population, I understand, is only a little over one thousand. Quite a contrast in point of inhabitants.

At certain times in the year there are millions of live creatures here, especially near the river, that do not wait for an invitation to enter the city; namely the willow bugs. They are harmless, coming instantly and departing in the same manner. They make these visits two or three times in a season, stay a day or two and depart, no one knowing where they go. I am told that the life of one of these bugs is about twenty-four hours.

It is surely wonderful how God selected the most beautiful spots in the United States for his people to establish Zion and her stakes. The farming country around here is most wonderful; likewise Kirtland, Far West, Lamoni, and Independence.

Nauvoo is not a place for a poor working man, as work is scarce and city wages are not paid here. No industries of any kind outside of jobbing around and tilling the soil. A good place for people who are possessed of means and who would be able to start industries of some sort and make work for others; or those who have retired and are living on their income will find this a very pleasant, restful place. Those who come here should be real Latter Day Saints, those who love their religion. As Brother Curtis says, “There is no room for ‘Aints’” but there is room for “good Saints” who have the means to help themselves and others.

The Lord has to have good material with which to build up the waste places of Zion, for he has decreed that only the willing and the obedient shall abide in Zion and her stakes.

The district conference held recently at Rock Creek was a very profitable one. Brother Edwards of the Twelve was present and rendered splendid service and his talk before the large class of the Sunday school and his sermon on “Equality” were well received, as I heard very many favorable comments, especially on the subject, “Equality.” Brother Putnam gave a lecture with his slides on the archaeology of the Book of Mormon, with which the people were greatly pleased. Brethren G. Scott Daniel, Gunn, McIntyre, and others from the Burlington and Fort Madison Branches were present, and Brother Daniel gave us a wonderful discourse. It is very interesting to see so many bright intellectual, young men and women coming to the front, whom the Lord is going to use to bring victory to his church. Brother Berve gave an interesting talk on “Discipline in the home and in the church.” The social services were spiritual and uplifting.

I was especially gratified to clasp the hand of our old-time brother, Solomon Salisbury, nephew of Joseph the Martyr. He will be ninety years of age this coming September. He seems possessed of all his faculties and bore a wonderful testimony of God’s dealings with him, and of other wonderful things that had come under his observance during his ministry. I met him for the first time in the beginning of 1876; he had just been baptized a short time before by the late President Joseph Smith. He was carried from a supposed deathbed to the water. May God’s peace abide with him to the end.

I met a great number of people at this conference whom I have known since they were children; they are now middle-aged people, some of them having large families.

I performed considerable ministerial labor east of here back in 1877-78, and was accompanied part of the time with Brother William B. Smith, a brother of the two Martyrs. Also had the pleasure of visiting his two sisters, Sister McMillen, of Colchester, and Sister Catherine Salisbury, of Burnside, Illinois. Those were “golden” days in my experience. If I could only remember all the interesting things they told me about the early history of the church, it would be of some profit to others beside myself. These good people have gone to their reward long since, and those who were young in those days are growing old and will be classed with the aged within a few years.

We are domiciled in the old home of Apostle Heber C. Kimball, which is a very spacious building, built of brick, and must have cost considerable money in those days. It was erected in 1845, a year after the death of the Martyr. Query: Where did he get the money to build such an expensive home? There are many other fine brick buildings to be found in "The Flat", the old homes of Brigham Young, Joseph Young, Wilford Woodruff, and many others, as well as the old Masonic Hall. There are many other evidences to be found that are marks that have been left by the people who once lived here.

I leave ere long to attend two reunions in Canada and one in Kirtland.

Yours in the faith,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

News of the Saints at Santa Barbara

July 14.—The many readers of the HERALD may be interested to hear how the work is progressing, and of the conditions here since the earthquake which shook this city so severely on the morning of June 29.

Since the close of the late General Conference I have preached at Sacramento, San Jose, Irvington, and San Bernardino, while awaiting word from the two members of the Twelve on this coast, to whom my appointment had been referred.

On the arrival of Apostle James A. Gillen, he made recommendation that I be appointed to take charge of the San Bernardino Branch to take the place of Elder James E. Yates who had resigned as the pastor there, which recommendation was acted upon favorably by the vote of the San Bernardino Branch. Brother Gillen remained and preached for us twice on Sunday, June 21, and his message was well received. The Saints were glad to get better acquainted with "Brother Arthur." We invite him to come again.

As several requests had been sent in to the Twelve, asking that some one be sent to care for the work in Santa Barbara, Brother Gillen suggested that I take charge of the work in this city subject to the approval of the Saints here. Arrangements were made by the district president, Elder N. T. Chapman, to have Brother Gillen and myself go to Santa Barbara, and we accompanied Elder Chapman to this city June 24.

Upon the suggestion of Brother Gillen, the Saints voted to support me as their leader, and all expressed themselves as being ready and willing to support the work here in every way possible. Brother Gillen preached for the Saints here June 24 and 25, then proceeded on his way to San Jose where he was to preach June 28.

Elder Chapman remained over and preached for the group here on the 26th, while I remained to speak here on the 28th. This date proved to be a busy day, for I not only spoke twice at the church, but preached in the afternoon to a large crowd on the beach front on invitation from the captain of the Salvation Army of this city, who is a friend to a number of our members.

After arising in the morning and while preparing for breakfast, at twenty minutes past seven o'clock, I felt the house shaking in a very violent manner, and I walked around through the house to see what damage was being done. It was interesting to see the pictures on the wall tumbling down and to hear the dishes crashing upon the floor. I stepped to the kitchen and found the breakfast strewn all over the floor. I was stopping at the home of Brother and Sister G. H. Stuart, of 809 West Pedregosa Street.

When I looked out to see what the effect was upon other homes, I noticed that buildings were shaken from their foundations and chimneys were shaken down. Brother Stuart and family and I then started on an inspection tour of the city, and the sight of the large hotels and churches, and in fact nearly all the large buildings of the city, left in ruins, was appalling. For a while we supposed that a large number must have lost their lives in this awful crash, but we were glad to hear later that a very small number lost their lives, some fifteen in all.

The shock was so severe that the earth cracked in places, and the pavement and walks were badly broken up. Instead of the ocean coming inland as was feared at first, it seemed to go back, and bathers who were in at that early hour and were out in water fifteen feet deep were able to walk to shore in water waist deep.

The gas and electricity were shut off at once, which no doubt was the reason there were no fires to add to the destruction. One gasoline tank containing a large quantity of gasoline broke and spread over part of the city, but did no harm. One of the large reservoirs also broke, flooding the city with water, but this also proved to be harmless.

The people found themselves without gas for cooking purposes but were soon busy getting their breakfasts on old-fashioned campfires.

On looking up the Saints who reside here, we were pleased to note that all were safe but a little bit nervous and upset.

We found our little hall where we held services all in ruins, but our piano was not injured. We soon removed it from the ruins.

I returned to my home in San Bernardino, on June 29, and found the folks quite anxious to learn the details of the damage done and if all was well with our little group here.

I was pleased to learn that President E. A. Smith was to be with us July 10 and over till Sunday afternoon. The splendid audience which greeted our brother was well paid for coming out to listen, even if the weather was quite warm, for Brother Smith gave the audience a very instructive and interesting sermon.

As I was announced to speak in Santa Barbara on July 12, I had to leave Brother Smith in the hands of the district president and the local workers and come on to this city.

The Saints here are animated by the spirit of faith and are determined to go forward and build for the future, and to keep pace with the people of this city who are clearing away the debris to rebuild to the extent of about $30,000,000. When completed they expect to have a city that will be known far and wide for her beauty and enterprise.

Santa Barbara is one of the most beautiful and picturesque cities on the Pacific coast. Situated 104 miles north of Los Angeles, a city of 30,000 inhabitants, it is known as a thriving and prosperous city. Engineers who have made a very careful investigation of the buildings destroyed, report that all the buildings which were seriously damaged were of inferior quality and workmanship and that if the buildings had all been properly constructed there would have been but little damage done.

The outlook for the gospel work in this city seems very encouraging, and by a united effort I am sure the work will be put on a firm foundation in this city.

So far as I am able to observe, the Saints of Southern California are anxious to go forward and do all in their power to build up the work in every department. I find here a disposition to have greater faith in God and Christ and to let the controversial questions rest until the convening of the General Conference, where important questions can be debated in the open and settled at least for the conference year.
The big question with us all is, Are we living the gospel message day by day, and are we being directed in all we do or say by the voice of God's Holy Spirit? The important question with the ministry should be, Are we preaching Christ and allowing his great message to be reflected through our lives? The world is in need of the gospel message. Are we doing all in our power to push it to the ends of the earth? When Jesus returns at the second and third watches, may he find us ready for his coming! — G. H. Wixom.

Goods News From Australia

Letter to the First Presidency.

The month ended was perhaps one of the periods of the greatest development the branch has ever know educationally, and attendance at the midweek prayer meetings has averaged sixteen, nearly twice the former average. (Many members are separated by long distance.)

There were forty in attendance at a birthday surprise evening given to one of our faithful young sisters who had reached her twenty-first birthday, and the social good will and fellowship was strongly in evidence.

There were over sixty present who greatly enjoyed a dialogue evening arranged by the Reliog, two of the items being the composition of two of the brethren, one but seventeen years of age, and it greatly surprised all, both Saints and friends. Two debates were held between three members of the young people's senior class. Many of the senior class were fortunate enough to have the criticims of a debating critic, who is president of the Norwood branch of the A. N. A. The young men (all three under twenty) won each debate.

Another debate was had between a young man and myself in a Sunday's program. "Resolved, that tea and coffee used as beverages are beneficial to an individual's health." I took the negative, it being the first time I had spoken on that subject in South Australia (publicly), and the result was that several were converted from the use of these beverages.

The Sunday morning preaching by the local brethren has been better attended. Yesterday being the fifth Sunday in the month, the following subjects were ably handled by five of the priesthood. "The Lord's Day and how we should observe it"; "Family prayer"; "Blessed are the peacemakers"; "The social aspects of our work"; and "Church decorum."

I have found that better results accrue when subjects are assigned for the addresses. (Every fifth Sunday in a month we have sermons by the priesthood at a quarter to four.

We have received fourteen numbers of the "dailies" of General Conference; were inspired especially by the unanimous adoption of the stewardship principles, and the immediate steps being taken towards the operation of the same.

Last Sunday I took as my theme for the evening preaching, "General Conference," using as a reading Paul's account of the conference as contained in the Galatian letter, and emphasizing in light of Doctrine and Covenants 98:10; 102:2; 122:1, etc., the greatness of what has been unanimously adopted by the church, wherein that so long preached by us is about to go into practical operation.

I quoted, as I have often done, the words of our President at the 1919 conference: "We are loud in proclaiming our theology, bold in forensically defending our claims, but weak in the practical application of our religion and timid in entering upon the practical demonstration of our social economics," etc.

In the afternoon session of the same Sunday, assisted by the branch solicitor, I was in charge of the round table discussion on the financial law, many questions being asked.

Yesterday evening again I continued the same theme, as July has been proclaimed inventory month, and I have never had greater spiritual liberty in presenting the need, not only of tithing but of filing the inventory. My reading was from Alma: "And now because of the steadiness of the church, they began to be exceeding rich," etc., using as texts, Luke 16:11, coupled with Doctrine and Covenants 70:3, Paul’s statement, "Not slothful in business," and Doctines and Covenants 48:2, 130:7, etc.

We made inventory month a special feature of prayer meeting last Wednesday evening, and many fine expressions were made of greater determination to do more than ever financially, and already the solicitor has been busy filing statements for some of the members.

I am pleased with the trend of the spiritual gifts as exercised at the conference, indicating the practical working of the Zion ideals in the near future. Such a program as the church has resolved to carry out certainly inspires one to greater zeal for the work.

We are anxiously waiting news as to who shall be in charge of this mission.

I forgot to mention something which may give you a little encouragement. In preparing for a discourse on General Conference, I decided it would be a fitting conclusion to sing, "We thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet," but we have never sung this to music, having no book with music to it, so I spent a couple of hours writing parts, and Sister Velt was able to play it for the closing hymn the following evening.

I trust that great peace and unity may soon come to the entire church, and that all will respond to the call of the church to live by the stewardship principles.

I desire to do my part in establishing the principles of Zion, — Harold I. Velt.

Stewardship Is Interesting Theme

The good things that have been printed in the Herald of late are so excellent that I want to make special mention of some of them. The articles on Stewardships by Bishop Carmichael are so good that they deserve re-reading. I hope the membership at large will study them. I am indeed glad to see the leadership we have in this matter; it presages for us the redemption of Zion, with all that term implies.

The little journeys with the editor by President Smith were very much appreciated, and personally I will be very glad to have them continue. I am sure that the Saints in general greatly appreciate these contributions. Wherever I go I hear the members say; "Aren't the Herald's good of late!" Surely those who are not reading the Herald do not know what they are missing.

One other thing that has brought very favorable comment is the reduction in the subscription price. I am quite sure many of the members will avail themselves of this reduction and become readers of the Herald, and thus be able to enjoy with us the good things that come to us weekly.

Our work is forward, and I am very hopeful. I have never enjoyed more of the Spirit of God in my work than I am enjoying at the present time, and I feel that the blessings of the present are only a foretaste of that which is to be revealed when we enter fully upon the work that has been committed to us; for I feel sure that the school of the prophets will follow very closely the carrying out of stewardships, and when we have this established we can expect to have the ministry go out with a united front and with a greater endowment of the Spirit, and hence perform a much greater work than we have ever been able to do in the past.

Not only is the spirit of consecration taking hold of the membership, but I find the people of the world quite favorably disposed to the law of stewardships and of tithing. When we consider the wonderful program we have we should not be able to go out with renewed courage, and every member ought to become a missionary. Surely we can do no other than keep ourselves well informed on the program of the church, and then do our level best to carry it out so that the work will not be delayed by reason of our failure to respond to its demands. J.

When we consider the wonderful program we have we expect to have the ministry go out with a united front and a much greater work than we have ever been able to do.

The branch was saddened to learn of the death of Sister Serrell on the 13th, after several months' illness. She was one of the pioneers in Minneapolis, and has been ever faithful in her service to God and to her fellow Saints since the organization of the branch on February 8, 1893. Of the group of eleven who started the branch at that time, now only two remain here: Sister Serrell's daughter, Mrs. Bertha Wise, and another elderly sister, Mrs. Ellen Hilton. Since that time the branch has grown to a membership of about two hundred and fifty.

KIRTLAND, OHIO.—As I have been appointed to take charge of the reunion bazaar at Kirtland, in the interest of the Department of Women of the districts composing the Reunion Association, not only each society is requested to respond, but others who may be isolated.

The donations should be sent to the undersigned not later than August 9.

The proceeds are to be used for the benefit of the auditorium building fund, which has been made a necessity by the annual reunions being held in Kirtland.

The bazaar will be held on July 18.

WILLIUGHBY, OHIO, R. F. D. 2.

Kewanee District Conference

SAVANNA, ILLINOIS, July 10.—The regular semiannual conference was held June 27 and 28, at Savanna, Illinois, the smallest of the eleven branches in the Kewanee District. There was very good attendence, about ninety-five registering as visitors from other branches, and the Eastern Iowa District.

We were highly favored in having with us Apostle F. Henry Ewards, who in excellent sermons and informal talks imparted to us a deeper conception of the ideals of the church and their application to our lives in preparation for Zion. We wish to thank him for the spirit of consecration and service with which he has inspired us, and to extend to him a hearty invitation to attend many more conferences with us.

We were very glad to have our missionary, O. W. Okerlind, with us again, and enjoyed his interesting and uplifting sermons and experiences. We regret to learn that he may be called upon to leave us to preach the gospel in foreign lands. Our new missionary, John C. Stiegel, was ordained an elder here, and is beginning a series of meetings, together with E. R. Davis, our district president. We are fortunate in having Brother Davis with us for another year, for his efficient and untiring efforts have heaped blessings upon us.

In our business session we decided to provide a building fund so that those places which are in need of suitable churches may receive the cooperation of the entire district, and the work may progress. We also initiated a new program of four annual district meetings, including a young people's convention at Thanksgiving time.

Saturday evening an entertainment was given by the Savanna Branch, consisting of a short play, "Sewing for the heathen," acted by the Department of Women and a conference paper, for which several branches kindly contributed news, jokes, editorials, etc. At the close of this meeting, all the young people, twenty-eight in number, went in cars to the home of Brother B. E. Sartwell, which is popularly called “Purgatory” because of its location at the bottom of a very steep hill, and there a general good time was enjoyed. All found lodgement for the night and early in the morning Brother L. W. Stiegel led us in a memorable young people’s prayer meeting, and then we climbed the steep hill to attend the general prayer meeting at the church.

Our reunion at Galva, Illinois, will be our next district meeting, and we are already making plans that it shall be as successful and interesting as former ones have been. May we keep our eyes Zionward and continue to find that each district meeting is a milestone toward that final goal.

Omaha, Nebraska

July 12.—Our city was visited on the morning of Sunday, June 14, by a terrific hailstorm, which made an unprecedented rush of business for the glaziers of the community. It came in the forenoon, just in time to prevent our assembling for Sunday school. Superintendent Rose Adams arrived just in time to call us together and acknowledge thanks for physical safety, her car having waded through streets submerged in water and dodged many live sputtering, broken electric wires.

The skies had cleared sufficiently by eleven to permit a large assembly to gather and pay a last tribute to Sister Edwin L. Ware, whose body had come from Los Angeles, California, where she had died the last of March. Sister Ware was an active worker in the Department of Women, was a regular tithe payer, and faithful in attendance upon all services. We had greatly missed her when, a year ago, a partial stroke of paralysis caused deep concern among her many friends, and later, the sad news of her passing reached us. Her daughter, Sister Grace Oathout, was permitted to reach her mother’s side before the end, and stayed some weeks in Los Angeles ministering to her aged father. She accompanied the body of her mother home, and, joined by her sisters, Lillian Hall and Ora Schlacter, after the funeral services here, to its last resting place in the old Iowa home town, Henderson. The deep sympathy of all Omaha Saints is with these sorrowing sisters and bereft companion.

June 21 was Children’s Day, when the eleven o’clock hour was occupied by the children in a splendid program which called forth their young talents. Sister Nellie Anderson of Lamoni and Sister Alfred W. Hulmes and children from Independence have been visiting Brother B. M. Anderson and family. Sister Nellie returned home July 3, while Sister Hulmes and son Alfred, together with her young sister, Rogene Anderson, are enjoying a visit in Colorado, where they write of cold nights, of shivering in snow at the “top o’ the world,” and other features doubly attractive just now while our mercury is soaring and staying around the 100 mark. Little Miss Barbara Hulmes is caring for her grandparents while her mother is away.

The Department of Women had lunch on Thursday, June 25, with Sister Anderson, who was assisted by Sisters Greenway, Graham, and Fredrick. Over fifty were present. A musical program was given by Sister Nelle Kelley, vocalist, and our talented young sister, Ann Self, pianist, followed the luncheon, and then Sister Anderson continued her reading and comments of Holland’s “Bitter Sweet.” Sister Wallace Blair of Lamoni, who was visiting her sister, Sister B. W. Hare, was present, as also were Mrs. Bee Hamer of Council Bluffs and Sister Ivan Sloan, of Nampa, Idaho, who was visiting her sister, Sister C. J. Frey. Sister J. E. France, who has recently moved to our city, was with us for the first time and was gladly welcomed by resident sisters. Twelve dollars were added to our building fund by this luncheon.

Saturday, June 27, was our annual Sunday school picnic at Elmwood Park. A record breaking crowd attended, 300 partaking of the splendid supper furnished by the Department of Women. A recreation leader from the Y. M. C. A. had charge of the afternoon sports, all interest later centering around the baseball games between our married and unmarried men. There was some talk of crooked decisions by a certain umpire anxious for the married men to score, and of some eager bystander running around bases to swell the number of runs! The grass was as slippery as the clever tricksters, however, and many a tumble was registered along with the runs. Only darkness finished the contest, and some limping enthusiasts didn’t show up at Sunday school next morning! We suppose they were home investigating the properties of arrnica or Sloan’s liniment!

Missionary Frank B. Almond was our speaker for both morning and evening services on the 26th, and well pleased his audience. His pulpit manner is most pleasing, his choice of language excellent, and the matter presented most timely, encouraging, and instructive. All of us need the little reminders that help us order aright our daily lives, to remember and vision anew our highest ideals, and to ignore our discouragements. The origin of physical man is of really less importance to us in our struggle Godward than a demonstration that love begets love; that virtue is its own reward; that it is possible to daily live the life we profess to love; that the gospel can be made to do hourly

Wednesday evening, July 1, Sister Anderson’s class of boys served the dinner at the church preceding the monthly teachers’ and officers’ meeting. The boys had got busy with printed tickets, and with characteristic pep had rolled up a total of attendance unprecedented. One hundred and twenty were dined, and with the addition of ice cream sold at ten cents a “pony” the boys cleared close to forty dollars on the venture. This will materially help them fulfill their pledge of $100 for the building fund. Their teacher wishes to acknowledge gratefully the assistance given her by the mothers of the boys, and that of one aunt, Sister Oathout.

Sacrificial service Sunday showed the attendance of several strangers, among them Sister Amy Parr of Nebraska City, who was on her way home from California. Sister Parr is a daughter of the late well-known and beloved Brother Mark H. Forscutt, and she bore a strong, unwavering testimony to the work.

Sister Theresa Schafer and mother have had a visit from their brother and son, Cecil Schafer and family, from San Antonio, Texas. Sisters Kelley and Grenawalt have had the pleasure of a visit from their sister, Sister Ruth Spalding, who with her husband spent a week or two in our midst. Sister Mary Kelley of Lamoni visited her sister, Sister Harriet France, over the Fourth. Doubtless a tally of the branch would disclose scores of others who have had visitors coming and going during the vacation weeks.

The Department of Women put on an ice cream social on the church lawn Thursday evening, July 9, serving also cake, lemonade, “hot dogs,” and coffee. Booths had been arranged, and the lawn was gay with swinging lights in Japanese lanterns. The pleasing program which followed was immensely enjoyed in spite of the heat and mosquitoes, and all feel that much credit is due Brother and Sister Elmer Riner who managed the affair. The auditorium fund was increased by over thirty dollars.

The following have been added to the church by baptism lately; six children, and one adult: Helen Ione Saunders, Mildred Lucille Furst, Anna May Fitzgerald, Edna Ruth Hill, Kenneth Gidley, Ward James Hartwell, and Mrs. Rosa Dineen.

We are glad to welcome these new members, and hope their spiritual development may be steady throughout the years ahead.

Brother and Sister Anderson motored Friday, the 10th, to Lincoln, Brother Anderson to transact business and Sister Anderson to have lunch at the executive mansion, as the guest of Mrs. Adam McMullen, wife of Nebraska's governor. In the afternoon she attended a meeting of the state officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which organization she is corresponding secretary for the State.

Sister W. A. Grenawalt of Lamoni was a visitor at church to-day. She was accompanied to the city by her daughter Ruth, and both are guests of Brother and Sister Rob Grenawalt.

Brother T. A. Hicks and family leave to-day for a month's motoring trip into Idaho. Pastor Whalley and wife will live in the Hicks home during the absence of the family.

Young People in Convention at Detroit

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, July 8.—The sixth quarterly young people's convention of Detroit District was held at Flint, Michigan, July 4 and 5.

The morning of July 4 many of the Saints arose to find it raining heavily and returned to their rest. However, some of the braver ones ventured out from Flint, Pontiac, Port Huron, Saginaw, Lansing, Grand Rapids, and other points, and opened activities at Kearsley Park with a game of barnyard golf, commonly known as horseshoe. This was followed by a ball game, in which the Bartlett brothers of Midland formed the battery of the winning side.

By eleven o'clock the weather was fine, and races and other sports were carried on vigorously; and by noon a large crowd lined up for rations in the woods near the ball grounds, among whom were Evangelist John F. Martin, Sister Martin, Sister Proper, and Sister Wilson, of Kirland, Ohio; Brother John Grice, and other prominent workers. A sumptuous feast was enjoyed by all. Brother Martin thought the lemonade was especially good, but at his ninth inning the vendors protested, and he was forced to resort to the hydrant for his cooling beverage.

After lunch the kiddies flocked like ducklings to the shallow swimming pool and splashed and waded there, all unconscious of the fierce ball game that raged between the Flint Regulars and the Detroit Miscellany. All went well with the latter until Billie Ash, the spiral south paw, appeared on the scene. Flint was declared to be the winning side.

The evening entertainment was held in the auditorium of the new high school and was a real success. There were several fine orchestra selections, and a play was given by Flint talent which thrilled the audience for forty-five minutes. Brother and Sister Martin and Brother John Grice also contributed much to the success of the evening event.

The sacramental service on Sunday morning was well attended, and a wonderful spirit pervaded the room. Thirty-two testimonies, thirteen songs, and several prayers expressed the devotion and worship of the audience, which was responded to by a beautiful exhortation in the gift of tongues and a touching admonition through prophecy to the young and priesthood, spurring them on to higher goals and a more consecrated service.

At the morning preaching service Elder Charles Mottash delivered a stirring address on "This year we sail Zionward, which is our course."

Brother John F. Martin gave the children several effective object lessons in the afternoon, which reached the older ones as well. Brother Grice gave a lecture on the Zionward movement from the missionary angle. Also Sister N. C. Holden gave an interesting talk on the musical program, pointing out the great lack of trained workers and making an urgent appeal to the young to qualify for service in this field.

The trio composed of Mrs. Holden, voice; Alvred Lindholm, flute; and Mrs. Wilcox, piano, gave a beautiful number at this time, and Miss Eloisa Holden moved the hearts of those in the audience with her cornet solo, closing with a verse from "Admonition," which was in keeping with the spirit of the day. Brother Grice sang the solo in the "Sinner and the song," the chorus in the gallery echoing back the song from the church with a touching effect.

At the evening service in charge of local men, Brother Martin made a lasting impression with his sermon on "Taking Christ in earnest." By half past nine farewell words had been said, and friends, made dearer by the experiences of the day, set their faces homeward, burning with a zeal to gain the great objective which had been placed before us in such a vivid manner as to seem almost within our grasp.

Seed Sown Years Ago Promises Now

NEWTON, IOWA, July 14.—Many important events are occurring in this part of the field. The tent meetings are still in progress at Knoxville, with Brother W. D. Tordoff as speaker. He has preached every night for eight weeks at least and will continue part of this week. There were five baptized last Sunday.

C. M. Richeson was the morning speaker at Rummells the last Sunday in June. He told of the influence for good in his life, had from attending a reunion here twenty-five years ago. His sermon was well received.

The funeral of Sister Ida Clark was held at the church July 9. Brother D. E. Dowker spoke words of comfort and cheer to the bereaved family and friends upon that occasion. Sister Clark was a consistent member for thirty-one years and will be greatly missed by the Saints. Her last illness began in March of this year. She passed away peacefully, feeling that her life's work was finished. She was baptized by J. S. Roth. Her daughter May, and her husband, came up from Lamoni, where they have been attending Graceland, to be with her and the other children during her last hours.

July 12 work begun eight years ago by a salesman who is a member of the church, bore fruit in an unusual way. This brother, by dealing fairly, won the confidence of his customers, and friendships resulted that have brought about a climax which may result in some being brought into the church.

Inadvertently, it was discovered by some that the brother referred to had something else to sell besides oil and paint. One man asked questions until midnight, sitting on his water tank out by the barn. An invitation was extended to him to attend prayer meeting on the following evening, which he did. He was asked by the presiding minister to talk to the people, and he gladly responded to the invitation. The following evening the salesman called on the minister, staying until quite late, and leaving with the invitation to help them out. As circumstances would permit he accepted the invitation and finally a community day was arranged for, and he was asked to be the evening speaker.

The meeting was held in the Baptist church by a Methodist congregation in a small town near Newton. A Methodist minister spoke on the signs of Christ's coming, a Presbyterian spoke on "The greatest business," and a Latter Day Saint spoke on the signs of the times. At eight o'clock in the evening a large and attentive audience greeted the salesman preacher, and many people were astonished at the message he bore under the power of the Holy Spirit. An hour and a quarter passed before anyone knew it.

Thus the wishes of the brother, made several years ago when an entire stranger, were granted. The people had so much confidence in this brother that they were willing to listen to his message. Seven Saints from Newton attended the Sunday evening service and by their prayers and encouragement helped the brother in his work.

We are hoping that this place may develop into an opening for a missionary effort.

Nine Baptisms Reported

CASEY, ILLINOIS, July 13.—On June 21 the Casey and Bellaire Branches held an all-day meeting. Brother H. M. Curtis baptized three children in the afternoon. Brother L. M. Ulrich, wife, and two children, of Bradner, Ohio, arrived and held services. We are glad to have them with us. Brother L. C. Moore was with us July 3.

Two more were baptized on July 5 by Brother Ulrich. Services were held in the afternoon at Union Center. Before services that evening at Good Hope two little children were blessed, Vera Marie Brandenburg and Frances Evelyn Wright. Little Lyman Brandenburg was blessed on Monday evening.

July 7 four more were baptized by Brother Ulrich. Early Wednesday morning Brother Ulrich and his family departed for the Springfield reunion.

Brother Paxton, from Independence, Missouri, came on July 9. He held services at Good Hope Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday morning, Sunday afternoon at Union Center, and Sunday evening at Cumberland. He expects to continue his services there until Wednesday. We are glad to have Brother Paxton with us.

Brother Jeff Henson arrived here to-day to assist Brother Paxton in his services.

New Philadelphia Mourns

The day of prosperity and sunshine which was being indulged by the membership of the New Philadelphia Branch, Ohio, was suddenly changed to clouds and bleakness by the chilling blast of death which took Irma Viola Robson to her reward and made heavy the hearts of relatives, Saints, and friends.

Death, which occurred on July 10 at the Tuscarawas County Hospital, was due to peritonitis which followed an operation for acute appendicitis.

Sister Robson was born July 12, 1901, united with the church on the third day of July, 1910, being baptized by Elder R. C. Russell, and continued active to her death. On April 10, 1924, she organized an Oriole Circle with twelve charter members which, through her indefatigable efforts became an active circle of twenty-two members, including girls of other church organizations. Sister Robson was also branch organist and assisted in other branch work.

At her home Monday afternoon the body lay amidst a profusion of flowers while Elder William Goudy, branch pastor, delivered an inspiring sermon and paid an eloquent tribute to the noble dead. The Oriole Girls, stunned by the sudden departure of their beloved monitor, stood to salute as the casket passed through their tear-stained lines. Twenty-five automobiles followed to the cemetery where mortality reached its destiny. Now she rests beside her mother, who preceded her in death four years and two months.

The employees of the Tuscarawas County Telephone Company, of which she was stenographer, forwarded a tribute of flowers upon which was inscribed: "To one who did her duty best: Leave unto the Lord the rest."

The Saints are shocked by such an invasion of their ranks and extend to the bereaved family their deepest sympathy.

WILLIAM PATTERSON.

Modesto, California

July 10.—The work here is moving along about as usual. We were favored with a visit from Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, and he gave us a splendid sermon. The Saints regretted that he could not remain longer.

The Sunday school is doing well. A. E. Frazier resigned as superintendent, as his work throughout the summer hinders him from attending. His wife, Sister A. E. Frazier, was elected to take his place, and as she has the confidence of the school the Saints feel certain she will make a success of her work.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave their second quarterly banquet June 25, the honor guests being those whose birthdays came in the second quarter. The basement of the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and shasta daisies. There were nine honor guests.

The district reunion will convene July 24 and will hold until August 3. Several from Modesto Branch will attend.

Enjoy and Profit by Visit of President

WIARTON, ONTARIO, July 12.—Although it was not our privilege to attend district conference on Manitoulin Island, the reports are interesting and encouraging.

As the Laura H. Lee was about to leave Lion's Head, we received a phone call informing us that President F. M. Smith was to speak at Wiarton the following Monday evening. Consequently we hired the town hall for the evening mentioned and billeted the town as well.

Everyone was anxious to meet Brother Smith. Whether it was the hat he wore or the amount of ground his shoes covered that was most spoken of I can hardly say, but as he started to speak on stewardship his other majors faded into insignificance. His discourse was enjoyed by all. There is nothing impossible about the much debated subject, when properly understood. All it needs is our application to its principles. We will do well if we do not procrastinate our application.

Tuesday was spent by some of our local brethren "feeding out" our President on various church topics, also firing some of Madam Rumor's collection at him, which he answered to the satisfaction of all. Anyone who in the future tries to spread some of her propaganda in Owen Sound District wants to beware of the fact that a great number of our church adoption are old Scotch Presbyterian and as loyal as they make them when the true facts are known. Let us remember the ninth commandment: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

Brother Smith, accompanied by Brothers Shields and M. J. Perkins, visited some of the sick and aged, as well as the home of Brother Perkins.

One thing worthy of note was that while calling on the above mentioned people, when Brother Smith got into the back seat of the "Lizzie" she refused to wait for the rest. This was mostly due to his adroit驾驶, especially on down grades.

Farewells were said after lunch, and with anticipation of visiting the district again, Brother Smith left us, leaving behind him respect and honor and a clearer vision of what this gospel means to us and to others when we realize we are our brothers' keeper.

New Importance of Work in Maine

STONINGTON, Maine, July 18. We have greatly enjoyed a visit from Apostles Paul M. Hanson and Roy S. Budd. Though their stay was necessarily short this time, their sermons were full of helpful thoughts and suggestions. Now we are anticipating with pleasure the joys of the coming reunion at Brookville, Maine, August 14 to 23.

The slogan, "Maine in the summer and Florida in the winter," is bearing fruit, and many summer visitors are here to enjoy the cool sea breezes, while the cities sweat in heat. The Vanderbilts, Fords, and many other prominent wealthy people are appreciating Maine so much that they have built almost priceless mansions along its shores, and more are coming.

As last year, the reunion will be held on the shore of a beautiful lake which is fed by springs, making the water pure and clear. The ocean is only one mile from the camp ground and is easily accessible. Everything will be done to make the reunion a spiritual feast without neglecting to care well for the physical man. Meals will be served cafeteria style at a reasonable price. Fish and other sea food and an abundance of blueberry pies will be specialized.

Many said last year it was the best reunion they ever attended, but we are planning for a still better one this year. Write for reservation of rooms or tents to Floyd D. Black, Brooksville, Maine.

CALVIN H. RICH.

Nelsonville Dedicates New Church

NELSONVILLE, Ohio, July 20. This branch enjoyed a most profitable day the 19th of July, the occasion being the dedication of their church. This faithful band of Saints have need to be congratulated in their efforts. After the building was erected many of the Saints were compelled to leave in search of employment, as the mines of the Hocking Valley were closed and it left the burden on only a very few. By the faithful work of Branch President George Wallace and Brother Sam Hanna the Saints were encouraged, and with much sacrifice the task was finished and the South Ohio District may be proud of the Nelsonville Saints and their neat little church.

The day for dedication was an ideal one, and the order of services were as follows: Sunday school at the usual hour, followed by a good prayer service. At noon a very tempting picnic dinner was served in the church, which showed the sisters of this branch have the culinary art well mastered. At two o'clock the dedication services proper were held. Brother Gard Kirkendall offered the dedicatory prayer, and Brother James E. Bishop, district president, preached the dedicatory sermon, which was very masterful and forceful and left each one with a desire to keep his face Zionward.

As the sun was sinking over the horizon, Brother Gard Kirkendall led five souls into the waters of baptism, and confirmation followed at the evening service when Brother Bishop again occupied the pulpit and gave one of those uplifting discourses that only he can give.

At the close of the service, all felt that truly it was the end of a perfect day. Many Saints were present from all parts of the district and all were made to rejoice because of God's goodness to them.

We also had with us Brother and Sister Serig and Brother and Sister Winship and son of Wheeling, West Virginia.

Brother Bishop will continue holding meetings throughout this week.

Lamoni Stake

LAMONI, Iowa, July 20.—The services last evening were held in the church park, the first to be held outside this year. The evening services will be held in the park the remainder of the summer. Brother David E. Dowker was the speaker. Brother W. E. Prall spoke in the morning.

Brother James Schofield and Harry Lorraine were the speakers at the Homes.

An all-day meeting is planned for the Lamoni Branch next Sunday, to be held in the church park.

The air is full of reunion plans these days. A bee is to be held a week from to-day to put the grounds in order. The Boy Scouts and Wolf Clubs are planning to be there with rake and spade with the other helpers. The drawing for tenting sites will be held Saturday. The forecast for attendance is reported as above the average. The programs which have just come from the press promise many interesting things. New features are a course in home betterment in charge of Sisters Lydia Wight and L. Lenore Christy, and a series of priesthood meetings. The boys' meetings in charge of George Mesley and the girls' meetings in charge of Mrs. C. E. Wight and Miss Lena Wells also promise splendid programs. Among the speakers will be President F. M. Smith, President Elbert A. Smith, Apostles E. J. Glaener and J. P. Garver, and Patriarch W. A. McDowell.

Elder L. G. Holloway and three daughters, Esther, Erlene, and Grace, have just returned from a trip to Minnesota, where they spent a week at the Minneapolis reunion and a few days at Balsam Lake, the guests of friends. They tell pretty big fish stories, but we are not inclined to doubt them.

The Saints of the Oland Branch held a social on the church grounds Thursday night which was well attended and served well its purpose to promote sociability and furnish wholesome recreation for young and old. A program was rendered as follows: Congregational song; prayer; reading by Roy Kopp; short talk by Alfred Kaestner; quartet by Mrs. E. Haskins, Mrs. William Johnston, Grover and J. S. Sharpe; a one-act play by Roy and Josephine Kopp; a reading by Clara Nichols. Following the program, games were played and ice cream and cake served. Oland is a rural branch south of Lamoni. They have an acre of ground back of the church, making an ideal place for recreation.

Thompson Branch, west of town, held an all-day meeting Sunday. Elder David E. Dowker spoke in the morning, Mrs. Aline Brackenbury Walden being the soloist. In the afternoon Elder J. C. Ballantyne preached at half past two, the Jolly Four Quartet of Lamoni furnishing music. Elder W. E. Prall spoke in the evening, at which time Mrs. C. E. Wight sang a solo. The basket dinner at noon was an enjoyable feature.

Independence
Stone Church

The attendance at Sunday school took a drop Sunday, being under a thousand. Evidently the fine weather wooed many to the great out of doors.

About seven hundred listened to Elder J. F. Martin as he beautifully discussed "The way to obtain real happiness."

In the evening President E. A. Smith faced an audience of about two thirds of the forty-five hundred Saints in Independence. The Campus service commenced at half past seven, when the band sent out its sweet strains on the evening breezes. Last evening Sister Israel A. Smith rendered a beautiful solo. This half hour of sacred song and instrumental music has a spiritual and refining influence on the people while they are quietly sitting in a receptive mood.

The speaker's subject was the "Program of the church." Here are a few extracts: An institution must have program to do its work in an orderly way. . . . This church has a magnificent program. It will require work to put it over. We often refer to the latter-day 'glory.' It is also the latter-day 'work.' The young will be middle-aged before they know it. Age is creeping upon the middle-aged. Let us not waste the coming year in vain discussions. Some men may counsel us to separate ourselves. That is man's counsel. God's counsel given direct to the late Joseph Smith, Doctrine and Covenants 122: 17 was: 'Yea, verily, thus saith the Lord, unto the church: Continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end.' . . . The first enterprise of the church is 'missionary.' The second is 'pastoral,' Zionic. It is the same general program it always was, but to-day we have different problems to face than in some years of the past. There is also an incidental program to carry out, as well as the general one. Building the Kirtland Temple, the Saints' Home, the college, the college endowment, were at one time in that class, and now the auditorium comes under this head, with other items approved by the conference."

The speaker closed his sermon with a strong testimony, given under a beautiful spiritual influence.

Group lawn preaching services will be held in Independence during the summer months. Elders J. F. Martin, R. W. Farrell, W. I. Fligg, and W. A. Smith will be the speakers. Elder J. F. Martin preached during last week on the beautiful lawn of the Walnut Park Church; Elder R. W. Farrell on the lawn of the H. O. Smith home. The services were well attended, and requests were made for them to continue another week, but it was thought best to give Brother Martin a rest.

President F. M. McDowell, Apostles J. F. Curtis, E. J. Gleazer, and J. F. Garver were visitors in Independence on their way to reunions this last week.

Sister Minnie E. Warnock has left for an indefinite stay with her daughter in New York City. She is a member of the choir, has been assisting the HERALD with the Independence news items, and has developed into an artist of colored lantern slides for the Graphic Arts Bureau.

Mr. and Mrs. George Anway, of the Herald office force; Estella Wight, editor of Stepping Stones, and Miss Marcella Schenk, a former employee of the publishing house, left Friday afternoon for Le Mars, Iowa, to proceed on Saturday morning for points north and east. They hope to attend the Onset reunion on their trip.

Word has been received by Brother Orrin K. Fry that his wife and two children while motoring in the streets of Los Angeles, California, were struck by an electric city car, July 13. The car in which they were riding was being held in line, together with a number of other cars, by the traffic officer. Before warning could be given by anyone the electric car crashed into the line of cars, contrary to traffic regulations. Those riding in the Fry car were: Sister Laura M. Fry, wife of Brother Fry; Orrin, Jr., and Ruth; and Brother O. T. Christy, father of Sister Fry, all of Independence; and Mr. and Mrs. Hood of Los Angeles, with whom they were visiting. Those injured are: Mr. Christy, Mrs. Fry, and Mrs. Hood.

Several car loads of young people from the Stone Church accompanied Brother Jess Roberts on a missionary trip to Courtney. The young people furnished the music and Brother Roberts preached.

The Church of Women are holding a picnic Saturday, August 1, commencing at two o'clock. Program has been provided for the afternoon and evening. At half past six Evangelist J. F. Martin and Elder B. J. Scott will be the principal speakers. There will be a picnic dinner at five o'clock, which everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Independence Health Service to Hold Picnic

The Independence service will give its second monthly picnic July 30 at half past eight in the evening at the Campus. Doctor F. B. Wilson will give an illustrated lecture on a subject dealing with the child. In addition, two moving pictures and band music have been provided for.

Second Church

The baptism of Glen Maxwell occurred at half past seven Sunday morning, Elder A. K. Dillee officiating. At the eight o'clock prayer meeting he was confirmed by Elders D. A. Whiting and John Miller.

Elder C. A. Kress, the new elder of Group 16, was the speaker at eleven o'clock and was given a good hearing.

Brother Lane Bolt preached his first sermon Sunday evening at seven o'clock. He held the interest of the congregation. Next Sunday evening at the same hour Brother Dillee is to deliver a sermon.

Monday evening the choir had another of their social gatherings, responding this time to an invitation from Sister Frank Good, to visit her home on Stone Street. Another good time was enjoyed.

Liberty Street

The men of the Liberty Street congregation decided to show the women just how to properly clean house. All activities for the week were dismissed, and the men set to work to clean the church house with all their might. Every night those passing by could hear the sound of hard labor being performed within. The carpets were taken up and cleaned, the woodwork varnished, and new rubber runners laid in the aisles. We are very grateful to them for their arduous labor.

Elder E. E. Pender was the speaker on Sunday morning. His subject was, "Faith, the foundation of the gathering to Zion." His sermon was much enjoyed by all.

Walnut Park

Sunday morning's speaker at Walnut Park was Apostle J. F. Curtis. His sermon on the duties of Saints was much appreciated by those in attendance, though the congregation was somewhat depleted by the choir members' attendance at the Stone Church and other causes. Brother Nace's junior choir was prepared to sing for the service very acceptably.
Brother J. F. Martin’s series of lawn meetings closed Friday evening. He succeeded in keeping a large number of Saints interested throughout the week, the attendance increasing to about three hundred the last three evenings. Brother Martin will always be welcome at Walnut Park.

On the morning of the 21st occurred the death of Brother David Harbaugh, age seventy-three, he having been seriously ill for a long time. He held the office of priest. The funeral sermon at the church Wednesday was by Brother B. J. Scott. Brother Harbaugh leaves a wife and stepdaughter, Miss Edwards.

The priesthood Sunday afternoon enjoyed a talk by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

Enoch Hill

The church was filled to capacity Sunday morning to enjoy the sermon delivered by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

On Tuesday evening, Group 53 North gave a “safety first” bazaar and social. They were patronized by a large crowd who believed in doing their “Christmas shopping” early. Almost every article was sold, thirty-five dollars being cleared.

Enoch Hill’s volley ball team defeated the Mount Washington L. D. S. boys on the Enoch Hill Court Tuesday evening, and on Thursday evening defeated Walnut Park.

East Independence

Sunday, July 19, Brother J. M. Terry preached a very fine sermon to the branch. In the evening the pastor, M. H. Jowell, preached a sermon which interested the Saints.

July 26 the pastor again spoke to the Saints. In the evening Brother Harry Friend spoke, but as most of them had gone to the Campus to hear President Elbert A. Smith, the crowd was small.

Kansas City Stake

The speakers announced for July 26 are Pastor Joseph A. Tanner, at eleven, and Elder William R. O’Dell at half past seven. Due to the number of new babies coming into the church, it is rather difficult for the parents to attend the services with their little ones as regularly as they would like, therefore a nursery is to be equipped in the new church to care for the babies and little children under kindergarten age. The officers were very much in favor of this move and hope to have the committee well organized so as to have the nursery open for each service and to care for the babies in Kansas City Stake on conference Sundays and other stake meetings. The nursery will be furnished by the Exselsior Class, which was organized the first of the year for young married couples. Socials will be given to raise money to buy cribs, toys, and such articles as will be necessary to make the room comfortable.

Brother Tanner is giving a series of Sunday morning lectures for the young folks, of a fundamental character, touching the belief and faith in general, delivered with a view of stimulating the confidence and increasing the knowledge of the young people. Before his lecture, one of the young men or women is selected to give a five-minute talk regarding it. Each effort is very interesting to both young and old and will be discontinued when Brother Tanner feels he has touched the most fundamental principles.

The membership is enthusiastic about the new church, lately acquired, and is striving to do bigger things towards raising money to pay the balance due on it. An ice-cream social was given Monday evening, July 20, by the ladies of the Dorecas Club. A free moving picture was given after the social. The proceeds will go towards the church building fund.

Armourdale

Stake missionary W. I. Fligg recently closed a series of special meetings, and as a result thirteen souls have been added to the kingdom by baptism.

The Sunday school and Religio gave an ice-cream social on the lawn adjoining the church a few evenings ago, which was well attended, and a good time was enjoyed by all attending.

The Department of Women had charge of the regular monthly meeting of the stake Department of Women meeting at Central Church last Sunday afternoon, at which there was a good representation present from the stake at large.

The Sunday school loaded itself into trucks and went picnicking out in the country July 4, and a very good time was had. The young people of the church have been putting forth an extra effort in the past few months to give good music at all the services, and their efforts have met with very favorable results.

Considering the very warm weather, attendance has been good at all meetings, and the work continues to grow despite the fact that their pastor, Elder John W. Gross, on account of ill health, is not able to be with them very often. It is hoped he will soon have his wonded health so he can take up his work according to schedule.

Bennington

Brother Fred Cleveland has finished his course of illustrated lectures. Stake Bishop F. B. Blair was a recent speaker. The Sunday school is holding its own, notwithstanding the hot weather we have been having.

The church, Sunday school, and Religio held a picnic at Budd Park Saturday afternoon, July 18. A large crowd had a splendid time. Brother Waters treated them with water melons.

The Religio is coming to the front again, rendering interesting programs each session. The Department of Women is serving cream after the study hour.

The stake Sunday school superintendent organized a Sunday school on East Fifteenth near Blue Ridge Boulevard on Sunday, the 19th. There was need for a Sunday school at this point, which had been created by the efforts of the local workers, principally, though about a year ago a series of meetings was conducted by the missionary, W. I. Fligg. There was an attendance of twenty present.

They regret the loss of two workers, Brother and Sister Glen Beaman, who will reside in Chicago for a time.

The primary department gave an ice cream social July 23 and had a fine time, proceeds to be used for working material.

They are publishing a weekly mimeograph sheet announcing their meetings, which informs the people of their neighborhood of the time of their meeting, names of speakers, and of such activities as they may engage in. It is a real live, newsy notification.

Malvern

The morning speaker July 12 was Bishop F. B. Blair. Those in charge of the local work are trying to get a volley ball court ready for the devotees of that game.

Argentine

The speaker at eleven o’clock was Elder Ralph W. Farrell, and at night Elder J. Harry Paxton broke the bread of life, good audiences receiving the pleasing message of each with benefit.

Things are looking up here a bit, a healthy indication being a good attendance at the prayer and Religio services.
Stewardships

At the last two monthly priesthood meetings the matter of taking up a course of study on stewardships was made the subject of discussion, the brethren finally deciding to take up the study of same, as outlined by Bishop Carmichael in the last three issues of the HERALD. The course prepared by President Floyd M. Dowell was also considered favorably, but finally was thought to involve too wide a field of research for the hard-working man to do justice to.

Peter Muceus Sails for Scandinavia

Before departing for my foreign mission, I wish to send a word of greeting to my friends in this land and to all who are interested in the spreading of the gospel among the nations of the world.

Not quite a year has passed since I returned, and when I am back here to New York again in order to take the boat it seems as if it were only a few days since I came ashore last August. Such is life; a stream of changing experiences under which our personalities are unfolding and developing. But if our aim is to do good, to serve man for God, and to dedicate all our powers to that service, the result cannot but be good. In that service will come to us the realization of the promises of God, true and lasting happiness. With this assurance I enter my third foreign church here.

The steamer Leviathan is to leave the pier at one o'clock in the morning, and when you read these lines I may have landed in England.

To all I leave behind, loved ones, friends, and Saints, I say Goodspeed. Let us all our entire trust in God and do God's work in God's way.

I thank you for your kindness and good-fellowship.

Your coworker in God's great cause,

P. MUCEUS

Persia Invites Saints

PERSIA, IOWA, July 20.—One day in June a tornado visited quite a few families in this vicinity. About eighty-five had their homes blown to pieces, and some of those who suffered were church members. When such destruction comes, or trouble of any other nature, we must bear in mind the thought presented by Christ: "That ye may be children of your father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."

Only one church service was held in June. That was when Brother W. R. Adams, of Logan, Iowa, came over and preached for us the morning of July 21. No service was held in the evening. However, the Sunday school held a session every Sunday of the month.

Sacramental service was held July 5, the time being spent in the usual prayer and testimony.

Young people's convention was held at Missouri Valley the Sunday of June 12, so no services were held in the church here.

Persia needs about twelve or eighteen families of Saints. There is plenty of room and a good-sized church. We have no one here to take the lead and preach for us, but if more Saints would come in we believe the work would prosper here.

Seven Baptized on Children's Day

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, July 14.—Children’s Day exercises ended happily here in Oakland, when seven new members were enrolled, two from the Oakland church and five from Melrose Mission. These are the first baptisms coming as a direct result of the mission activities, and Sister N. Pike, superintendent of the mission Sunday school, deserves high praise for her share in bringing about their conversion.

The mission Sunday school gave a cantata, “Hearts of gold,” in which over twenty children took part. After the program the congregation left in a body for the main church where the baptisms took place, Brother Virgil Etzenhouser in charge.

July 5 was a glorious day for the Saints of the Bay District. Brother J. A. Gillen and Clyde F. Ellis held services all day in Oakland. Sacramental service in the morning was very impressive, Brother Gillen presiding.

Folks from all over the Bay District were invited, and lunch was served in the banquet hall of the church.

Brother Ellis spoke in the afternoon, and Brother Gillen at night.

Conditions in Oakland are very encouraging.

Strong Efforts Being Made in Eastern Michigan

PORT HURON, MICHIGAN, July 12.—Five weeks of service in the interest of the church have been completed in the Eastern Michigan District, as branch president at Port Huron, and president of the district. During this five weeks we have been able to meet with three of the branches outside of Port Huron, and can report progress at these places.

Port Huron is a city located on the beautiful St. Clair River, at the lower end of Lake Huron. All is beauty around this city, showing the wonders of the handiwork of God in the development of nature, only a few of which have been marred by man in the marts of trade and commerce. Nine miles of river and lake frontage border the east side of the city, giving rest and comfort in the parks and along the beaches, filled with cottages for resorters.

Of the population of 40,000 there are numbered on the branch records a membership of 578. This has been decreased by removals and deaths, which will soon be shown on the corrected record. Of this number a wealth of young people are found, from which the church may expect some big things in the future. The main church at Varney Street, graces a well-located lot, and from its walls have gone others to extend the work in the development of other places of worship. The Gratiot Avenue Church, meeting in a hall in the north end, furnishes a shelter for those living in that part of the city. At Mortonville (the home of Morton Salt, "It Pours,"!) can be found another group, interested in the extension of the church work here. A well-developed territory waits to hear the gospel call.

The Methodists of the community are joining in the various activities of the Saints, looking toward the erection of a suitable church building in which they can join us in worship. Many of their number have volunteered money and labor to build this place, where their children can enjoy church opportunities.

The fourth group, in the Seventeenth Street district, are getting under way, with the prospects of a permanent location in the near future. At present they are meeting from home to home, which is not very satisfactory. They are looking for a place, and hope for a settlement of their church home for a time at an early date. With these four groups in full swing, there is a golden opportunity of reaching the entire city.

Our visit in the district has resulted in much good. I had the pleasure of meeting with the Huron Center Branch July 4 and 5. The Saints from long distances around the country gathered and enjoyed one of the best two-day meetings I have ever attended. The little church would hardly hold those present. I found here a great number of young people, striving to hold aloft the banner of the King, many of them meeting every discouragement of the small branch, but steadily forging ahead, as we witnessed their march "without the band."

Some of the young men of this part of the district may be heard from in the carrying of the glad news to a dying world. Some to whom I had an opportunity of talking told me their desire to work for the church, and we feel that soon some of them will take the field. With this group of young people back of the district, it cannot help but go forward. I am very much encouraged with the outlook of the Eastern Michigan District, and feel its influence will be for good in the advancement of the church work.

My address is in care of the Y. M. C. A. Port Huron, Michigan. Any of the Saints traveling through this way will be welcomed at any of our services, at any time. We have just enjoyed a visit from Elder A. P. Crooker and family, of Topeka, Kansas. Bishop C. J. Hunt is with us now, touring the district in the interest of the church, and carrying his usual message of good cheer and hopefulness.

The Saints of the district are looking forward to the two-day meeting to be held at Owendale July 25 and 26. At this time we are expecting Brother D. T. Williams and Sister Blanche Edwards, together with Bishop Hunt. A special program has been planned, and there are hopes of the largest crowd of the season.

Valley Center will soon dedicate their church, which will be another feature of the summer program for the district. Then will follow the fall work of the young people for their annual campaign, and the state convention at Grand Rapids in October. So with this in mind, we have a busy time ahead of us, and a corps of consecrated workers to assist us in carrying out our plans.

PORT HURON, MICHIGAN. MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Alabama Branch Needs Help

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA, July 21.—Since the last report our numbers have decreased. Brother C. J. Clark, who was taking charge of the work here, has gone to Florida. He was working here in the postal telegraph office and expects to be here occasionally this fall. His going took Brother and Sister Clark and Sister Carroll. Sister Carroll's sister-in-law, a girl of eighteen, came with her to church, but since Sister Carroll has gone she does not come. At present there are only Brother and Sister Chandler and their boys, Brother and Sister G. G. Booker and their two children, and Brother and Sister E. W. Yoder.

We have Sunday school, and Brother Chandler speaks afterward. We are expecting Brother T. C. Kelley here soon, and maybe he can help us.

EDWARD I. YODER.

Sister Silvia Vandel, of Pleasanton, Iowa, writes that the Herald has been in their home since her earliest remembrance, and now that her parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents all passed away, she feels it her duty to continue the subscription in her own name.

Our Departed Ones

HILLS.—Louis Edward Hillis was born at Whitewater, Wisconsin, July 11, 1867. At the age of fifteen years he was hauled boy with General Custer in the Northern Pacific Survey, but at the request of his mother was discharged from service fifteen months before the massacre. Began religious work in the age of twenty-six years, recently receiving a gold pin indicating over twenty-five years of membership in the Order of Railway Conductors. Married Helene S. Powell, daughter of Apostle Samuel Powell, at Detroit, Wisconsin, September 28, 1885, and to this union was born one daughter, Louise, who is now Mrs. W. W. Kunkel of Idaho Falls, Idaho. Called to the priesthood in 1895 through W. A. McDowell and was ordained a priest under the hands of W. A. McDowell and Charles H. Burr. Three years later he was ordained an elder, and a short time later was called to be a seventy, being ordained April 18, 1901, by Warren E. Peak and R. C. E. Goodwin. He resided in that calling until October, 1903. He was for many years an active missionary, having labored in Wisconsin, Iowa, Montana, and Missouri. During the last eight years of his life he devoted himself exclusively to the study of American archaeology and the traditions of the American Indian in connection with the Book of Mormon. He has long been known as a scholar and a man of laudable character. He has lived in the church and in the world, and was beloved by thousands that the Book of Mormon is a true historical record, which work he translated out of the patriarchal blessing received under the hands of Patriarch John H. Lake in August, 1894. In the following words: "You will be preserved until your life mission is finished and shall help to prepare the church for the coming of Christ. If you are faithful, you will be made strong and will understand thoroughly the gospel work; and your memory shall be strengthened: and as you ex-

The Program of the Church

I. The Missionary Program

Any institution that is doing orderly and constructive work must have a program. What is the program of the church? In section 119, paragraph 8, of the Doctrine and Covenants appears the following:

Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad as far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toil in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

Here we have it stated that there is a work for the church to do which is intrusted to all. The responsibility is not placed upon the ministry alone, but the men of business and of work; that is, professional men and laboring men of all classes in the church are to labor together with the ministry in the accomplishment of that work. Section 122, given to our late President Joseph Smith, closes with the following admonition:

Yea, verily, thus saith the Lord, unto the elders of the church; Continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end.

Others may have come to us with a message of separation. If so, that is man's counsel. We do not come to you with man's counsel, but rather with God's counsel which is, "Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called."

We speak about the latter-day glory. There is something about the word glory that brings a thrill. Our hearts are stirred when we sing the old song:

The Spirit of God like a fire is burning;
The latter-day glory begins to shine forth.

But it is also spoken of as the latter-day work. Do we get the same thrill out of the word work that we do out of the word glory? Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." He did not talk about glory until his work was done, and then he said, "Father, glorify me with the glory that was mine before the world was." Glory came after work. The young people of the church should not be deceived by the leisurely way in which the days pass over their heads. Ere they are aware they will be middle-aged and the time of their preparation will have passed. Those who are now middle-aged, before they fully realize it will find their term of service is past. All, then, should heed the admonition to "work while the day lasts."

We may conclude, then, that the program of the church is one which will involve work. What is the program of the church? In its general features it is the same old program which the church has had from the beginning. However, it may involve new problems. To illustrate: In 1860 the church had the same general program it has to-day, but it had problems to meet which we do not to-day have before us. They have been solved. To-day we have the same general program the church had in 1860, but we have some new problems involved in the redemption of Zion as the "hastening time" draws upon us.

First of all, we may say that the program of the church must certainly include missionary enterprises. The great commission was, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The first work which Christ himself did was missionary work. According to Matthew's record, he went through all Galilee preaching the gospel in every synagogue. He found men fishing and admonished them to lay down their nets and follow him, and he would make them fishers of men. They complied. We need not necessarily think that he passed by a total stranger and that upon his invitation they dropped all and followed him. It is as reasonable to presume that they had heard his preaching, inasmuch as he had preached in all the synagogues, and that they were the legitimate fruits of an orderly missionary undertaking. We prefer to believe that he won those converts by sacrifice, by prayer, and by preaching, exactly as we win converts to-day. The work which he began then must be fundamental, and missionary work must continue to head the list of enterprises, at least in point of time if not in point of importance, because we must first reach men with the gospel message and "convert them," as the term goes, before we can bring them into the church and lead them on in other parts of the program.

Jesus said there were two great commandments: First, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." And the second, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Upon these two commandments all things hang, from decalogue to beautitudes, from Genesis to Revelation. Everything is contingent upon these two commandments. Our missionary enterprise hangs upon the first commandment. Missionaries go out to reveal God to men and teach them to have faith in and love him. There is an instinctive desire in the hearts of men to find God. The missionary acts as a guide to help them in that search, also as an authoritative representative of our Lord. Philip found the eunuch reading the Scriptures and said, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" And the eunuch replied, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" Philip, then, the missionary, immediately proceeded to preach Jesus unto him.

Paul upon Mars' hill found many altars. Polytheism was hospitable. Any foreigner could bring his God into Greece and set up an altar, and he was immediately received and at least tolerated. The Romans later took over the entire Grecian aggregation and added them to their collection of gods. Paul, however, came representing one God—a jealous God, and there was not room in man's heart for any other God. Upon Mars' hill Paul also found another altar erected to the "great unknown God." The many altars were a testimony to the unending search for God; the one erected to the unknown God was a confession that they had not to their satisfaction found him. It is the province of the missionary of the day to reveal this great unknown God to the people who have not found him, but who are seeking after him.

We might pause to inquire why we should go out to seek and save souls. Back of the intensive missionary programs of the Protestant churches in years gone by there was the old idea of hell as a lake of literal fire and brimstone in which souls were plunged to suffer forever. They were supposed to suffer acute torture beyond description, not to-day or to-morrow, but continuously on and on and on without interruption or respite or hope. As a boy, impressed with this old theology, I one time lighted one of the old-fashioned sulphur matches which were very stenuous in their nature and held my finger in the flame as long as I could endure the pain in an effort to form some conception of what it would be to be in hell all over all the time. I concluded it would be pretty severe. Naturally those who believed in such a future state for lost souls would go to almost any extreme of sacrifice in the endeavor to win them to God. If you were to see a man drowning, you would risk your own life to save him. Drowning, however, takes only a few minutes, while hell was supposed to last throughout eternity. It is no wonder, then, that the old Protestant missionaries suffered and endured and went to the ends of the earth to win converts.

It is obvious to all that the old ideas of hell have changed somewhat, but is there any less an incentive to save souls? We have but to read the daily papers and look in the faces of men upon the streets to realize that hell is very real and that its domain not only exists in future life, but here and now. There may be a popular conception that the old word of three letters, sin, is an obsolete word, perhaps to be used only in cross-word puzzles, not to be considered in polite society. And the philosophy of the world may teach us that every desire of the human heart is natural and is therefore a holy desire and should be gratified; that the main aim of life is to seek pleasure, etc. Sin, however, is not an obsolete word. The wages of sin still are death. Sin still brings torment. Men and women are collecting their wages daily, and they are daily in torment, and without doubt will be in the life hereafter.

Any pastor is likely to receive distressing confessions. Members of the Presidency, being pastors of a very large flock during a period of years, listen to many such confessions, and many times men making such confessions have said, "Brother Smith, I have been in hell." The lines in their countenances, the expression in their eyes testify to the truth of that statement. And I have been made keenly to realize that only the gospel of Jesus Christ could save such men here and hereafter. If they had not obeyed it, their salvation was to be found in obedience to it. If they had once obeyed but had drifted away, their salvation was found in a return to obedience.

Not only will it save men from hell, it will keep them from getting into that condition. There are thousands of men and women seeking for satisfaction through the pleasures of the world. They are seeking happiness in being served. They never find it. Instead they find pain, distress, and torment. They need the gospel, even the fundamental principles of the gospel—faith and repentance and baptism. They need its further call to service, that in a life of simplicity, of virtue, and of service to others they may find a degree of joy, even of heaven here, and certainly hereafter. Thus they shall realize the statement of Christ, who said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.” Their salvation comes through an enlargement of the soul. As Alma teaches in the Book of Mormon, the gospel enlarges the souls of men and women, and in that way brings salvation in a very real sense.

We have intrusted to us the greatest enterprise. If I were to question men in different sections as to the greatest enterprise, probably I would have a variety of answers. In the Middle West I would be told that it was the raising of corn and hogs to feed humanity; in the East I might be told that it was to manufacture cloth to clothe humanity. But suppose it should develop that humanity is not worth feeding and clothing. I think I have seen men who ate a great deal who were not really worth the food they consumed, and women who did not wear so much clothing, who were not worth the clothing they wore. It is the work of the gospel of Jesus Christ to make men and women worth feeding and clothing, thus putting real meaning into the tremendous toil performed by humanity to maintain its existence. There can be no greater enterprise, and this is the work intrusted to all.

You my say that you are not a missionary, never having been ordained a seventy or an apostle, but remember that the Book of Doctrine and Covenants says this work is intrusted to the men of business and of labor, and they are to work together with the ministry. There is one way in which you can work with the ministry, and that is through the financial law. There are few, if any, millionaires among you, but all, or perhaps nearly all, can help through the law of tithing, freewill offering, and consecration. I need make no apology for that law or its presentation. The Lord thought it worth while to write it into the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and the Bible and the Book of Mormon, so certainly it is my right and province to preach it from the pulpit and the press. And through this law the man of business, the storekeeper, the professional man, the physician, the man of labor, the carpenter, the mason, the railroad man, the farmer may cast in his lot with the ministry and become laborers together with them and with God and accomplish the work intrusted to all.

A few men have said, “We will be our own bishop.” We have been telling the world for nearly a hundred years that no one could improve on the law of baptism. They may sprinkle, they may pour if they prefer, but they cannot do it in the name of the Lord, and in so doing are not complying with the will of the Lord. Neither can you improve on the law of tithing. The Lord has definitely said a tenth is his, and he has as definitely told how it should be paid and how it should be handled. No man is a bishop until he is called and ordained to the office of bishop and accredited to the church. You cannot be your own bishop or handle your own tithing and comply with either the will or the law of our Lord.

A few have said, We will wait and see how things come out. Ordinarily every horn has two ends, which gives rise to the old saying that things come out at the little end of the horn, and it might be presumed that would be the outcome of any enterprise, all of whose adherents determine to wait and see how things come out. But the church is not going to come out that way. Instead of asking, How is the church going to come out? it would be pertinent perhaps to ask, How are you going to come out? That may be the question the Lord is putting to you at this moment. And suppose after waiting until the church is victorious and Christ has put every enemy under his feet and there is no longer any possibility of a question as to the outcome, you should then bring your offering and he should say, “I have no need of it. There was a time when the church needed your contribution to sustain the families of John W. Rushton and J. F. Curtis and J. A. Gillen and hundreds of others. In that day you withheld it. To-day we do not need it.” The time to help the church is when the church needs help. Men will put all they have and can get from their neighbors into oil stock, real estate, or other speculative enterprises, and then hold back and say concerning the work of almighty God that they will wait and see how it comes out. Personally I know of no more sure investment than that which is made in the church established by our Lord and made in harmony with his divine direction.

One of the first great items, therefore, on the program of the church is that of missionary work. There are many ways in which all can cooperate in this work—by teaching the law to their neighbors; through the Sunday school and Religio impressing it upon the hearts of children; teaching it in their own homes; distributing tracts and SAINTS' HERALDS, etc.; and underneath it all is the financial law of the church, the law of tithing, of freewill offering and consecration, by which the entire church work, including missionary enterprises, is to be sustained. This is a splendid part of our program, and I invite all to get behind it with their moral and financial resources.

Mrs. Blanche Bates says, “The point is just this, What people give to us—how much of themselves they give—depends on our own attitude toward them. If we want their interest, we must give them our interest. And I believe, with all my mind and heart, that this giving and receiving of mutual interest is the great secret of happiness.”
Questions and Answers

Question: It is rumored in my locality that since conference the church has had to pay thousands of dollars of debts for the President. A more specific rumor is that the Joint Council authorized the new Bishop to pay $1,395, covering back debts incurred by the President. What are the facts?

Answer: The first rumor is a gross exaggeration. The second conveys a part of the facts but might give a wrong impression of favoritism and extravagance. The conference of 1922 limited the amount that any general officer might receive for personal and traveling expenses to $1,800 per annum, and limited the family allowance to a similar maximum. However, it was provided that in case of necessity, on order of a joint council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric more might be allowed in given cases. This action recognized that men who travel much and have many other expenses may not be able to keep within the prescribed amount, and sickness or unusual expenses in the family may result similarly to the family budget.

The Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric (President Smith not being present) did, following the late conference, authorize the Bishop to pay $1,395 debts incurred by the President, who had borrowed at the bank that amount to meet traveling and personal expenses over and above the fixed allowance mentioned above. This is as set forth in the rumor; but something else not set forth in the rumor took place which destroys the appearance of favoritism. The same Joint Council took similar action in the case of the retiring Presiding Bishop, Brother B. R. McGuire, as the following will indicate:

Bishop Carmichael then presented a matter of indebtedness charged on the books against Brother McGuire amounting both personal and family to $1,395. This amount being over and above the allowance designated by the conference, the Bishop desired approval of the council before charging off. It was moved and seconded that the amounts referred to be credited as personal expense and extra family allowance. The motion prevailed.

This action is not by any means mentioned to reflect upon Bishop McGuire. The council considered the money honestly spent or the items would not have been allowed. And it need not have been mentioned here had the matter been permitted to go its course and be reported to the conference in due time.

The fact that the council took similar action in the two cases relieves members of the council of suspicion of favoritism. The fact that Bishop McGuire, who is generally considered frugal in his uses of church money, did not keep within the prescribed amounts would indicate that it is not surprising that the President, whose expenses and duties are certainly not less numerous, should have encountered a similar difficulty. The council acted honestly and equitably, and will continue to do so.

It is well to remember that certain church officers have heavy expenses that do not ordinarily come to others. An apostle on a mission overseas may not keep within the amount named, and in some instances have not done so where there were long distances to travel. Both the President and the Presiding Bishop have heavy expenses that others do not meet. As an illustration: When the President must go to Washington, as has happened more than once, and spend some time there securing admission of missionaries to foreign fields, or entrance for some of our foreign Saints to America, the cost of travel and lodging is considerable. And while it is strictly church business, it is charged to the personal account of President Smith. This is mentioned as but one of very many items which both the President and the Bishop have to meet which are not always known or taken into account by those who merely read a report of expenses. It should be remarked also that the items allowed President Smith and Bishop McGuire ran back over more than one year in both cases.

The Church and County Agent Cooperate in Northeastern Nebraska

We received a card July 30, mailed at Decatur, Nebraska, and signed by the agricultural agent located at Walthill, Nebraska, Mr. Everet T. Winter. Mr. Winter is a progressive government and county agent who has given Elder B. F. Creel and wife good support in their missionary and model farm work, mentioned before in the columns of the HERALD and Autumn Leaves. The contents of the card received are here partly quoted:

In cooperation with Elder B. F. Creel, a showing of moving pictures and some good speakers will be included in the program planned for your community next Saturday evening, August 1, 8.15, in the L. D. S. church basement on the Macy-Decatur road. Come and bring a friend. Everybody welcome. Be sure to bring the wives and the children.

We know from this that the church on the reservation is moving forward, and we hope to hear of its completion before many months. The situation is beautiful, the demand is insistent, the opportunity for doing good among the Indian people is great. May these good workers be strengthened for their tasks, and may they obtain joy to their souls from the work they accomplish.

An Unusual Prayer Meeting

On a Sunday afternoon in the early summer of 1911, a group of some half dozen individuals gathered in the chapel room of Graceland College for a prayer meeting. Many prayer meetings had been held in that historic room before that one, and many have been held there since, but this one was unique. To be somewhat specific, the following will be in point:

The idea of dormitories had been inaugurated, and Marietta Hall had been built and named in honor of the one who had done so much in promoting the college idea among the Saints, Sister Marietta Walker. Her pen was ever busy in producing article after article over the signature of “Frances,” and her influence was exercised in favor of the project of having a college under the auspices of the church where the young Saints could be trained for life under circumstances favorable to their religious faith. Among the donors of material means for the establishing of such an institution, she was one of the most liberal. Marietta Hall had served well for a short period the needs of a small number of girls who left their homes and loved ones to be cared for by the college.

The time had come when the one little frame building could no longer fill the need, and it was realized that more commodious quarters for girls must be provided, and no dormitory accommodations for boys had been provided, except such as the basement and third floor of the college building offered, which were very meager.

But where was the money to come from? The running of the college had already piled up a debt of considerable size, and the church had much difficulty in raising funds to keep the missionary program going and do other necessary things. Effort had been made to collect money for college necessities, and it seemed out of the question to raise an additional sum for this special purpose. But the burden of caring for the young people of the Saints who came to the college as a sacred charge rested heavily upon those carrying the weight of responsibility, and it was felt that something must be done. But what?

This was the group, just a small number of those intrusted by the church with the carrying on of the college work; and this was the occasion that brought them together. They believed in a God that answers prayer; and they believed that this God had restored his church with the divine authority of the priesthood, with the organization, doctrine, power, and blessings, as in the beginning. It was to importune this God, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in behalf of the dear boys and girls of his church, many of whom are grown to maturity and are now reading this little reminder with feelings of much appreciation of the faith and works of that group.

One by one those present addressed the God of all the earth, and with words trembling with emotion, and with tears coursing down their upturned faces, pleaded for divine consideration in behalf of the boys and girls who would continue to come, unknown to those who were asking, but nevertheless coming and asking at the hands of the church, God’s church, the church of their fathers, an opportunity to prepare for the activities of life. Would the Lord touch the hearts of a sufficient number of friends who could help, that means might be forthcoming to build a modest dormitory for the care of our dear young people? Would he not fire those of the group who were ready to go out to secure the means, so that they might have divine eloquence to plead the cause in righteousness? This was the burden of their cry.

The Spirit of the living God rested upon them and filled their souls and gave them confidence that the work would be accomplished, though it would seem almost that it would require a miracle to bring it about. The Spirit that was in that prayer meeting did touch the hearts of a sufficient number to make possible the thing undertaken; by the opening of the college year in September following, the work was well under way, and by Thanksgiving the building was ready to be occupied; it was named Patroness Hall in honor of the donors who had contributed most largely to its erection, the Graceland Patroness Society of Lamoni.

This was one of the most remarkable prayer meetings in Graceland’s history, though there have been many where the Spirit of God was poured out in a most remarkable manner.

Evolution of the Reunion

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

In consequence of the discontinuance of the fall conferences of the church, a provision was made at the April General Conference held in Kirtland in 1883 for the holding of mission and district reunions "for religious services, when and where it may be by them deemed best." Under this authority the first reunion of the Reorganized Church was held in Iowa at Leland's Grove. It began Sunday morning, September 16, because Saturday was occupied in setting the camp in order, it being the day of arrival and a rainy day as well. The ministry present at this first reunion of the church included President Joseph Smith, Alexander H. Smith, E. C. Briggs, James Caffall, Charles Derry, Bishop Blakeslee, L. N. White, Glaud Rodger, T. W. Chatburn, J. F. Mintun, and several others well known to the church.

It will be interesting to the Saints to note the purport of a resolution adopted at this reunion touching swings, shows, and intoxicating liquors. It was passed in connection with a resolution providing for the holding of a reunion annually, and reads as follows:

Resolved, That no swings, shows, or intoxicating liquors shall be allowed on or nearer the grounds than is prescribed by law for such meetings. And we invite all districts who may desire to join with us in this movement for the advancement of the cause of Christ to cooperate with us in lifting high the standard of the Cross, that the truth may be made known, our spiritual growth increased, and our God and Christ glorified.

History does not tell us just why "swings" were classed with "intoxicating liquors" in this resolution, but perhaps the fact that both have a tendency to produce dizzy spells may have suggested an affinity to the movers of the resolution. It indicates at least a determination that spiritual uplift should not be neglected for worldly allurements.

The reunion was held next year (1884) at Raglan, Iowa, October 4 to 12, at which fifty persons were baptized and confirmed. Seven places were proposed for the holding of a reunion in 1885, resulting in the choice of Galland's Grove. There were 396 votes cast on this occasion, but that more people were present is shown by the fact that 430 votes were cast in determining the date for the next reunion, which was set for early in October. A reunion was also advertised to be held in September at Wheeler's Grove, as announced by the branch located there, and it appears that a reunion was also held that year at Montrose or Bluff Park, according to notices appearing in the SAINTS' HERALD.

The Reunion Idea Spreads

Within a few years after the holding of reunions had been recommended by the General Conference referred to, notices appeared from time to time in the HERALD announcing the dates of reunions in various other districts of the church. For instance, announcement appeared of a reunion to be held at New Port, California, beginning September 12, 1886. The fourth annual reunion of the church was held that year at Garner's Grove, Iowa, the grounds being laid out in circles, with an assembly tent in the center capable of seating a thousand persons, but Sunday the attendance exceeded its capacity, five thousand to six thousand attending. According to rules adopted by the camp, the day began at five o'clock and closed at 11 p. m., with prayer service and three preaching services each day as had been the custom in previous years. An editorial in the HERALD states that "no noisy games, or merrymaking, or games of chance" were permitted on the grounds.

The first reunion held in the New England mission was a joint reunion of the Maine and Massachusetts Districts, held in August, 1888, at Jonesport, Maine. A sail and a beach picnic followed the closing of this reunion. At this reunion such well-known men as W. H. Kelley, F. M. Sheehy, M. H. Bond, E. C. Briggs, U. W. Greene, and John Smith were present. After 1894 the combined reunions of these districts were discontinued and a committee was chosen to divide the property owned jointly. Massachusetts District continued to hold annual reunions, and various locations were used for that purpose from year to year.

At Vale's Mills, Ohio, a reunion was held in October, 1889, under the presidency of Gomer T. Griffiths, at which about a thousand persons were said to be in attendance on Sunday. In 1891 reunions were held in Detroit, Minnesota; Rich Hill, Missouri; and in two places in California, at Irvington and at Laguna; also in Kansas, at Idylwild Park. The next year eight reunions were advertised in the SAINTS' HERALD, but it is possible that not all of the reunions held that year were advertised. At the Logan, Iowa, reunion held in 1890, it was estimated that ten thousand persons were present, of which about a thousand six hundred were campers.

The desire for spiritual association and development that evidently prompted the holding of these early reunions in due time resulted in other activities than the four meetings each day that quite generally characterized the gatherings of this kind. When at the Dennisport, Massachusetts, reunion of 1898 it was proposed that the week-day afternoons be given to recreation and visiting in the camp.
there were some who expressed the fear that such laxity in the use of time would develop worldliness and disregard of spiritual things. The proposal was adopted, however, and the beginning of a new order was at hand. Similar changes were effected in reunions in other districts of the church, and it was soon noted that increased attendance and interest on the part of young people began to develop. The change, instead of decreasing, increased the effectiveness of reunion work, while giving opportunity to those who must seek a period of rest a most excellent atmosphere in which to recuperate their physical strength and spirits.

As compared with the old-time reunions, those of to-day lack nothing of the spiritual power and devotion formerly enjoyed. On the other hand, the greater number of activities now engaged in even more surely build up the faith and intelligent zeal of the Saints who desire to become of real service to the church of the living God. The social contact is so directed that greater unity, cooperation, and love result in a noticeable degree. The educational features now quite generally found are of a varied character that supply the needs of a greater number than ever before, and the reunions constitute seasons of real spiritual and intellectual enjoyment and growth on broader lines than the old schedules provided for. One needs only to avail himself of the privileges at hand to realize what remarkable instruments for good the modern reunion is become.

In point of accessibility the reunions of to-day are distributed for the convenience of the member wherever he resides, so that no interminable journey is required to gather with the Saints in one of these delightful seasons of helpful association. There are now more than fifty reunions held nearly every year in various parts of the United States and Canada, which are attended by many thousands of Saints, besides a great number of friends and visitors. They have therefore become a considerable factor in missionary opportunity, and one might not be far astray to predict that this feature will be more fully utilized in the course of time, though already much good has resulted from efforts in that direction.

Results We May Observe

Several things can hardly fail to impress themselves on an observer at the reunions I have attended thus far this year. Perhaps the first is the wider comradship that extends to young and old alike. This is certainly becoming more general than ever before in my experience. There seems to be an increase in the cooperative spirit also—the spirit of real helpfulness and desire to participate in responsibilities that must be assumed for the good of the body. At no time did I hear a word of fault-finding or harshness during my association with the reunion Saints at Chetek, Minneapolis, or Inman. Arduous duties were apparently as cheerfully performed as though the labor were a real pleasure, and I am of the opinion that it was a pleasure to those who assumed their tasks in the interests of all concerned.

In recreational activities a splendid spirit was manifested by the young and other Saints participating. The spiritual and moral foundation evidenced in these young lives could be nothing less than a tonic to the soul of the observer. We who have borne somewhat of the burden of church work in the past need have no fears for the future in such consecrated hands as are coming forward among active members of our junior church. The deep interest and steadfast purpose manifested by them must surely produce well-qualified men and women in the days to come when they assume the part some of us now bear in the Lord's work. And this is a beginning of the development to be anticipated.

In all of these district reunions was found the evident desire of the members to learn more fully concerning the program of the church and the prospects of realizing the Zion about which we have sung and for which we have prayed for nearly a century. Absorbing interest was the rule when these things were considered either in sermon or class work. The questions that were asked showed something more than a superficial desire to pass away the time, and one could not but feel that the spirit of sainthood actuated those who attended the meetings—a desire to learn and a desire to do. If this spirit continues to prevail in all the districts of the church, as manifested in the places named, we can look forward with confidence to the realization of our most cherished hopes for the church.

It would require too long a list of names were I to mention all whose devotion to the work might be named, and perhaps it is as well to mention none by name. The careful attention more recently given to reunion work gives clear indications of a bountiful harvest to be realized by the church in the near future, a harvest of fruits both delightful and precious. Added to this hope is the promise that we shall reap in due time if we faint not.

Love is the river of life in this world. Think not that ye know it who stand at the tinkling rill—the first small fountain. Not until you have gone through the rocky gorges, and not lost the stream; not until you have gone through the meadow, and the stream has widened and deepened until fleets could ride on its bosom; not until beyond the meadow you have come to the unfathomable ocean, and poured your treasures into its depths—not until then can you know what love is.—Henry Ward Beecher.

How to Become an Active Steward.

In an address by President F. M. Smith at our late General Conference, he said:

So far as the work of the church is concerned, then, the time is here for the establishment of the practical aspects of the doctrine of stewardships, and for that the Presidency stands, and that we recommend to you—that we enter upon the establishment of stewardships without delay. Let me emphasize those last two words, without delay—for the time demands it.

The Bishopric heartily concur in the sentiment therein expressed. This brings us face to face with the establishment of stewardships without delay. Let me re-peat

The first thing absolutely necessary:

True conversion is the first prerequisite. To be born again, both of the water and of the Spirit. This means something: that we have caught the same vision of our work, in a degree as least, as the Master had, that we are here for service and not to be served—that we can better serve God through serving our fellow man—that we are here to give rather than to get. “God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son,” etc.

Do not misunderstand the position of the church. The motive that should control us in our warfare is that of serving, but this does not mean that we are not expected to receive anything. We are to receive just enough to enable us to properly serve. When it is necessary for us to receive, it should be looked upon as a means only to enable us better to serve.

We repeat that none can expect to enter fully into the exalted work who still cling to the old order of things; the putting of self ahead of his brother; the putting of individual rights above the rights of the group. In other words, true conversion is to be wholly consecrated. We can reserve nothing. Our lives, our fortune, and all we possess are pledged for Zion's weal.

We only have need to follow the Christ all through his ministry to have this great and needful lesson indelibly stamped on our memory, that everything he did was eventually for the good of the whole. He purified the individual that thereby the group might be pure. To accomplish this he consecrated all he had for his fellow man. He has said to us, “Follow me.” Shall we do it? To do so leads to success. To fail to do so inevitably leads to failure. The ideal is high, but to succeed we cannot lower it.

The Second Step, Which Is to Comply With the Law of Consecration of Temporal Things

This step is easy, providing we have unreservedly entered into the true spirit of the Master's work. He who has consecrated his life finds no difficulty in consecrating his means.

But we ask, What are the laws governing the con­secration of temporal things? Let the Lord answer this query:

For according to the law every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 3.

The first step to take to comply with the law of temporalities is to “lay all things before the bishop in Zion.” What is meant by laying all things before the bishop in Zion? It means to do just as we have to do with our Government. Every year we have to make out a financial statement showing our assets and liabilities so the Government may know just how much taxes we owe to the State or how much income tax we owe the United States. When we make out this statement, we take it and “lay it before the state authorities”; or, if it is the income tax report, we “lay it before the United States authorities.” In neither case do we, by this act, give all we have to our Government, but the act is formal recognition of the fact that the Government is the authority from whom we secured the legal title of all we have.

Just so does the Lord demand us to lay what we have before the church through its authorized rep­resentative, the bishopric; the object being to enable both ourselves and the bishopric (the church) to determine just how much we have to give, if any. By this formal act we recognize the fact that the Lord is the real owner of all we have.

Having made out our financial statement (called an inventory) and filed it with the stake bishopric, we wish now to know how much we should give. The amount that we should give, if we have anything to give, and when and how are fully revealed by God in his law.

Let us repeat that the second step was to comply with the law of consecration of temporal things. That the first step to take to comply with the law of temporalities was to “lay all things before the bishop in Zion.” That this meant to make out a statement showing our assets (what we are worth) and our liabilities (what we owe) and hand or send this to our Presiding Bishop; or, if we live in a stake, to hand it or send it to our stake bishopric.

Note that doing this did not mean that you were to give all that you possessed to the Bishopric of the church. You may not just understand fully how to make out this financial statement. So we herewith show you how it is done. After we have shown you how to make out the statement, we will then tell you how much, or what amount or part of your possessions the Lord tells you to give, and always remember that what you do give should be given because you are willing, because you want to give, and never by being forced to give.

We will now suppose that you have never made an inventory or financial statement (called in Doctrine and Covenants “testimony”) and wish to do so. Here is the way to do it. We will suppose that your name is Samuel Doe.

Financial or Property Statement

Samuel Doe owes the Lord $1,620, or one tenth of his net worth; or, stating it in another way, Samuel Doe owes the Lord one tenth of all he has after allowing for his debts.

Remember also that Samuel Doe, up to the time he has made out this statement, has had living supplied. He has had his needs and just wants supplied, but being saving and frugal he has accumulated $16,200.

The Lord says that one tenth of this is his.

Samuel Doe now places this property statement in the hands of the bishopric and pays the Lord’s share (one tenth of the net worth, or $1,620) to the Lord’s representatives, the bishopric.

Up to the present time we have shown that the following steps are to be taken to enter into an active stewardship:

First: A full compliance with the laws governing the initiatory rites leading into the church, these being:

a. Having a proper faith.

b. True repentance.

c. Baptism by immersion.

d. Laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost and a belief in the other two fundamental principles of the gospel which are: the judgment and the resurrection.

Second: A full compliance with the laws governing the proper use of the temporal things in our possession. These steps being:

a. Laying all before the bishop in Zion, or, if in a stake, before the stake bishop.

b. That this is done by making a financial statement of all our assets and liabilities.

c. And placing statement with the bishopric.

d. That, if this statement shows a net gain or increase, to pay the Lord the tenth.

The remaining nine tenths of the net gain may or may not be surplus. If any part of this nine tenths is needed immediately, the amount needed should be taken out of the nine tenths, and whatever is left of the nine tenths is called surplus. Surplus has officially been defined as follows:

That part of a man’s possessions, whether of moneys or properties, of which he has no present or immediate need; the word need being determined by the man’s position, sphere of action, his business and his dependencies.

We shall now continue with Samuel Doe, telling why he should pay one tenth to the Lord and what to do with what is left, the nine tenths.

The net gain was $16,200. Now remember that Samuel Doe, according to the law of God, has not the right to retain all of the $16,200. He should pay his senior partner, God, his share. The senior partner furnished everything with which to make this $16,200 except the labor. God demands as his share of the net proceeds, immediate possession of one tenth. It is not left to any man or set of men to say how much of the net gain should be placed in the possession of the Lord. The Lord himself has forever settled that by definitely stating that it is one tenth. Samuel Doe pays the one tenth, leaving him still in possession of $14,580, or nine tenths. ($16,200, minus $1,620, leaves $14,580.) Now, what does the Lord wish him to do with the $14,580, or nine tenths? To understand our answer to that very important question, we must remember the following facts:

1. That Samuel Doe has now for the first time made out his financial statement, has paid his tithe (tenth), and still has property left in his possession to the net value of $14,580.

2. That this $14,580 represents all that Samuel Doe has gained during his life, or up to the time he made his inventory, after paying his tithe (tenth).

3. That Samuel Doe does not own anything.

4. That God is the owner, the real owner.

5. That God has given $14,580 to Samuel Doe to hold in his possession.

6. That Samuel Doe may have the legal title to this property ($14,580); that is, Samuel Doe is the legal owner of the property valued at $14,580.

7. That Samuel Doe is morally responsible to God.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
for the management and use of this property, therefore Samuel Doe is also the moral owner.

8. Get this necessary viewpoint. That Samuel Doe may hold the title to the property and thus be the legal owner and have possession of the property, but he must account to God for his stewardship. He is morally responsible to God for the use of this trust.

9. That God, the landlord, the real owner, has the right to state the terms of which Samuel Doe may hold possession of any property.

10. That these terms are:
   a. Possession by Samuel Doe, enough property to at least supply his needs and just wants.
   b. To be wise, industrious, and frugal in his management of said property.
   c. To keep an account of all his receipts and expenditures.
   d. At least each year to balance his account.
   e. To give the bishop a copy of his balance sheet, showing his net gain.
   f. To pay one tenth of his net gain as shown by the balance to the bishop.

We are now ready to state what should be done with the remaining nine tenths of his gain, that is, $14,580, and how it shall be done. The law requires:

1. That Samuel Doe determine in his own mind just how much he will need of this property, valued at $14,580, to supply his immediate needs and just wants.

2. After so determining, he states this amount to the church representative, the bishop.

3. The church now, through the bishop, considers the matter, and if in his (the bishop’s) judgment the wants of Samuel Doe are found to be reasonable, he will agree. But in case Samuel Doe and the bishop are unable to agree as to the reasonable amount to be retained by Samuel Doe, then the matter shall be adjudicated in the constituted courts of the church, and the bishop, as well as the steward, must abide the decision of said courts or be considered unfaithful in his stewardship.

4. We will say in this case that the amount stated by Samuel Doe required to supply his needs and just wants was $12,580. That is, he says he needs property in his business to the value of $12,580.

5. Supposing the representative of the church, the bishop, agrees with Samuel Doe. Then

6. Samuel Doe has $2,000 over and above his needs and just wants; in other words, he has $2,000 for which he has no immediate need.

7. This $2,000 is called surplus and should be paid to the church or her representative, the bishop, just as soon as Samuel Doe can do so without financially hurting his business. He should advise with the bishop as to how best to make this payment without injury to his business. In this case, he could make the payment by disposing of bonds or other personal property; or, if found advisable, by selling a part of his real estate—say the town residence, $2,500, of which he had no need; or, if found advisable, he could transfer to the church real or personal property to the amount of his surplus.

8. Samuel Doe will then get a receipt for surplus.

9. Samuel Doe has now fully entered into the duties of a steward and is conducting his business on a stewardship basis—he is a steward indeed.

10. We will suppose that Samuel Doe continues in his stewardship for another year. What must he do at the end of the fiscal year?

11. Doctrine and Covenants 106: 2 says that the steward should report annually; so again he should file his financial statement with the bishop, showing his gain or loss, and pay the tenth (tithe) of the yearly gain as a tithe of the increase, and again determine in his mind the amount of his surplus and pay the same.

12. To do this properly it will be necessary for him to keep an account of his yearly receipts and expenditures just as he does for his Government.

13. His financial statement at the beginning of the first year under the stewardship plan would show a net worth of $12,580 after all the tithes and surplus had been paid.

14. During the first year of his stewardship, his report shows the following:

   | Total receipts | $4,000.00 |
   | Total expenses | $3,000.00 |

   Gain in cash, $1,000.00

His report at end of the first year under the stewardship plan would appear something like this:

Net worth $13,580.00

Less net worth previous year $12,580.00

Gain for the year $1,000.00 $4,500.00

15. Samuel Doe places these statements before the bishop, pays his tithe or tenth of his yearly gain of $1,000, or $100 tithe, leaving $900.

16. Again Samuel Doe must determine just how much of this $900 he needs to enlarge his stewardship. He consults with the bishop, and if they agree that Samuel Doe should add $500 to his stewardship, then Samuel Doe has $400 left which he pays as surplus. This he continues to do year after year, and so long as he is working as a steward. When he ceases to so do, he ceases to be a steward indeed.

No set rule can fit every case; consequently the necessity of the steward and bishop agreeing on some of the details of stewardship. In the above illustration, Samuel Doe has debts, which he may or may not have need to pay immediately. The reduction of debt would increase the stewardship in a like amount. The increase of the stewardship would require the concurrence of the bishop. The debt in some cases might better be met by the sale of a part of the property, leaving the net worth of the stewardship the same.

We can have no surplus until we have been "amply supplied" and until we have paid our just debts, including the tithe or the tenth. The surplus, then, does not include the tenth.

We have no say personally as to how much we shall pay as a tithe. Neither has the bishop nor any other man. That is forever settled by the voice of God to us. It is a tenth of our increase.

We do not give our tithe. The tithe is God's. It is not ours to give. We owe God the tithe, and we only pay our just debt when we settle with the bishop for the tithe.

We do have something to say as to how much we shall pay as our surplus. So does the bishop. Having mutually determined our surplus, we do not give it. We only pay it to God, to whom it belongs. After having so paid, we do not have anything to say personally as to how it shall be used. That responsibility belongs to the officers whose duty it is to administer the law of temporalities.

The church has been instructed with reference to surplus property in a letter to Presiding Bishop Partridge written by the First Presidency consisting of Joseph Smith, jr., Sidney Rigdon, and F. G. Williams. (See Church History, vol. 1, p. 300.)

Brother Edward Partridge; Sir: I proceed to answer your questions, concerning the consecration of property: First, it is not right to consecrate to very great particulars in taking inventories. The fact is this: a man is bound by the law of the church to consecrate to the bishop before he can be considered a legal heir to the kingdom of Zion; and this, too, without constraint; and unless he does this he cannot be acknowledged before the Lord, on the church book: therefore, to consecrate to particulars, I will tell you that every man must be his own judge how much he should receive, and how much he should suffer to remain in the hands of the bishop. I speak of those who consecrate more than they need for the support of themselves and their families.

The matter of consecration must be done by the mutual consent of both parties; for, to give the bishop power to say how much every man shall have, and he be obliged to comply with the bishop's judgment, is giving to the bishop more power than a king has; and, upon the other hand, to let every man say how much he needs, and the bishop be obliged to comply with his judgment, is to throw Zion into confusion, and make a slave of the bishops. The fact is, there must be a balance or equilibrium of power between the bishop and the people; and thus harmony and good will be preserved among you.

Therefore, those persons consecrating property to the bishop in Zion, and then receiving an inheritance back must show reasonably to the bishop that he wants as much as he claims. But in case the two parties cannot come to a mutual agreement, the bishop is to have nothing to do about receiving their consecrations; and the case must be laid before a council of twelve high priests; the bishop not being one of the council, but he is to lay the case before them.

Note carefully the italic sentence in the first paragraph above quoted. This very clearly shows that the First Presidency here was instructing the Saints regarding the surplus and not the tenth.

In paragraph two, we also learn about the consecration of our surplus. This cannot refer to the tithe, as that is, as stated above, already clearly defined as a tenth of our increase. Neither the bishop nor the party paying can change this law.

Having now, first, paid the tithe (one tenth of the gain), and second, paid the surplus, the individual is now working on the stewardship basis and is a steward for God.

(Concluded.)

College Man Urges All to Help Conserve Trees

Forests of the United States are being destroyed at a rate of three to five times faster than they are being replaced, Professor H. A. Phillips, head of the Department of Agriculture and Geography of the Central Missouri State Teachers College in Warrensburg, said recently. The waste of American forests is due to thoughtlessness and carelessness Professor Phillips stated:

“A hundred and fifty years ago there were 825,000,000 acres of forest in the United States and today there are 137,000,000 acres. Already we are having to import pulp for paper. It is said that one issue of a Sunday New York paper will consume the wood of fifteen-year-old trees that cover ten acres of land. If we do not take steps to prevent our forests from being destroyed, we will soon have none.”

In answer to a question as to whether a treeless country declined in civilization, Phillips cited China as an example. “China removed her forests and as a result erosion occurred, which made much of her land unproductive. The soil when it was washed away filled in the rivers and waterways and made navigation impossible. China is notoriously retarded.”

Those interested in the welfare of the United States should help preserve her forests from careless people.
REUNION NEWS

Minnesota District Reunion

The Minnesota District reunion, held this year at Minneapolis July 4 to 12, was one of the most successful in the history of the district in all respects, from the point of view of the preaching, the prayer services, the round table discussions and departmental work, the social and recreational activities, the cafeteria service, and financial support.

The gathering started off with a jump on the Fourth of July, with a picnic at Medicine Lake, about eight miles west of Minneapolis. Autos were provided to carry the crowd from the church to the picnic grounds and return. An interesting program of games, races, and other competitive events followed, and everyone had a good time. The reunion organization meeting was held late in the afternoon, and Apostle D. T. Williams and the district presidency were elected to preside over the activities of the reunion.

Sunday, the 5th, started with a young people's prayer meeting at half past eight, with Brother Williams in charge and a fine group of young people in attendance. At the Sunday school service a special message of greeting was given by Sister Effie Hield, and an announcement was made of the junior church to be held every morning at the preaching hour.

The sacramental service was also in charge of Brother Williams and was much enjoyed by all. A spirit of thankfulness for the blessings of the gospel and a consecration to the purposes of the church were shown in the prayers and testimonies.

After dinner an automobile tour around some of the beautiful lakes and boulevards of Minneapolis was conducted, the sightseers getting back just in time for the afternoon preaching service, at which Brother L. G. Holloway spoke on the subject, “Going forward.” In the evening Brother Williams addressed the assembly, speaking about “Zion the beautiful.”

The daily program during the week was as follows:

Morning prayer service at nine; preaching service and junior church at quarter to eleven; lunch at half past twelve; round table discussions on recreation at two; Department of Women work at four; special recreational features from half past six to half past seven; and evening preaching service at eight o'clock.

The morning prayer services were well attended, and the spirituality of the meetings increased as the reunion progressed. An earnest spirit of consecration was shown, especially by the young people. The theme of the reunion “This year we sail Zionward which is our course,” and which was printed in large letters in the front of the church was especially shown in these meetings. The desire of all seemed to be to labor with their might to bring about the establishment of Zion.

In the morning and evening preaching services, the Saints were much encouraged and edified by the character of the messages brought by each of the speakers. Bishop A. B. Phillips spoke on “Spiritualizing our temporalities,” Elder Hubert Case on “Qualifying for stewardship,” and “Let us follow our leader, Jesus Christ, to Zion.” Apostle John F. Garver dropped in over Tuesday and spoke to the Saints in the evening about “The meaning of Zion.” Brother Williams gave an interesting series of sermons on the theme: “Sanctify yourselves, for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you.” Elders Holloway, Shakespeare, and George Day also did their part.

The junior church was well attended by an average of about thirty children every morning, who listened attentively to the stories, the sermons by the elders, and the special musical numbers. The meetings were held in one of the large classrooms, but on the last Sunday morning this proved too small, and the children were taken out to the park, where they held their service in the cool shade of a natural amphitheater. After the sermon by Brother Holloway, a children's testimony meeting was held under Sister Hield's direction. Anyone who listened to those earnest testimonies could not doubt the value of the junior church to the children, and to the church as a whole.

One morning Sister Ruth Walters, R. N., graduate of the Independence Sanitarium, gave a health talk to the children in such plain language that they had no difficulty in understanding her, and they enjoyed it very much. The music was in charge of the Holloway sisters from Lamoni, and Loleta Johnson of Minneapolis. Florence Elvin and Rosie Parks, of Balsam Lake, Wisconsin, gave some special musical numbers.

The Department of Women meetings were under the direction of Sister Hield, the visiting field worker from Janesville, Wisconsin, assisted by Sisters Myrna Fisher and Alice Kress, heads of the district and local departments respectively. Many phases of their work were discussed in these meetings, and the women gained a greater insight into the opportunities and responsibilities which lie before them. Two afternoons were devoted to a summary by Sister Hield of Betta's The Mother-Teacher of Religion, and several copies were ordered to be used for study in the different branches. A special women's prayer meeting was held on Thursday afternoon, and on Friday they went to the park for a special round table discussion.

The visiting nurses, Ruth Walters and Susie Craven, gave a special health demonstration on the platform Friday morning, showing how to make a bed with a sick person in it, how to carry and lift the patient, how to care for the rooms, and first aid in case of accidents. The help of these nurses was of great value to the reunion and was greatly appreciated. They awakened a desire in several of the young women to take the nurses' training course at the Sanitarium. They also gave a special talk to the girls between the ages of eleven and seventeen on Saturday afternoon.

In the afternoon round table discussions, several interesting subjects were taken up, such as stewardship, the Sunday school, primary work, department work of women, etc.

The recreational features of the reunion were very much enjoyed. Volley ball games were played a couple of afternoons, swimming parties went to the lake for relief from the hot weather, and several diamond ball games were played between the married men and the single men, the latter being victorious in every case. The young women played a few innings with the young men also, but as might be expected it was a very unevenly balanced game. On Wednesday night after the service the Temple Builders gave a party, and Thursday night before church the Department of Women put on a play, “The home beautiful.” Saturday evening was devoted to a program and a social gathering in the basement of the church, followed by a big feast of luscious watermelons. Brother Williams was obliged to eat one whole watermelon, to make good a boast he had uttered previously. He received considerable assistance, however, from the group of gleeful children who gathered around to watch him.
The Minnesota district conference was held on Saturday afternoon, July 11. Several important items of legislation were passed, including a resolution whereby the finances of the district were put under the control of one treasurer, and another providing for a budget committee to consist of the district presidency, the district treasurer and the district heads of departments. Delegates for the next General Conference were elected as follows: Phillip Schnuckle of Duluth, George Day of Bemidji, Wesley Elvin and McGrath of Minneapolis, and Brother Bundy of McGregor. District officers elected for the coming year are: George Day, E. H. Bennett, George Gould, of the district presidency; E. H. Bennett, district-secretary; Lester Whiting, district-treasurer; A. M. Smith, district school superintendent; Leslie DeLapp, district head of Recreation and Expression; and Sister Myrna Fisher, head of Department of Women. The name of Lester DeLapp was presented to be ordained to the office of elder, and was approved by the conference. Minneapolis was selected as the place for next year's reunion and district conference.

The cafeteria service was praised by all who made use of it. The food served was of high order, and the prices were reasonable. Meals were served in the church basement.

The expenses of the reunion totaled nearly two hundred dollars, but the surplus received through the cafeteria, the Sunday school and Religio collections, and one special collection on Sunday morning provided enough funds to pay all the bills and leave a very favorable balance for next year.

Sunday, the last day of the reunion, was the best of all. Starting with an early young people's prayer meeting, in which the young people manifested their desire to "carry on" with the gospel work, and consecrate themselves to the building up of Zion, the interest and support of the Saints continued to the very end. The last two days of the reunion had been set apart especially for the young people, and the sermons were of a type that would especially appeal to them. Brother Phillips in the morning spoke on "Coming to oneself," and in the evening Brother Williams used as his subject, "Playing the game." A special sacramental service was held in the afternoon, and was very well attended. A prophecy was given through Brother Holloway, a particular message to the young people encouraging them in the efforts they had already made, and urging them to go to higher planes of service and living.

The evening Religio program was in charge of the visitors almost entirely, and was very good: A piano solo by Florence Elvin; a clever recitation by Susie Craven; a couple of double quartet numbers; a duet by Sisters Zuelsdorf and Walters; a clarinet solo by Edward A. Sund; and a violin duet by James and George Spargo.

A spirit of harmony and cooperation pervaded the reunion throughout, and the fellowship enjoyed by all, both local and visiting saints, will long be remembered. There were a goodly number of visitors present from all parts of Minnesota, and several of the neighboring States. The opinion of most of them was that they had had the best time of their life, and would look forward eagerly to next year's reunion.

Central Nebraska Reunion at Inman

The annual reunion of Central Nebraska District was held at Inman July 7 to 16. While not so largely attended as those in charge desired, yet the ten days were filled with joyful study and service, which gave all a broader vision of the scope and meaning of the gospel and inspired faith in its coming triumph.

Inman affords a fine location for the reunion, with its well-appointed little church, the fine grove on the church lot, and the hospitality of the local Saints. The district tent was used to house the junior church activities, while the general meetings were held in the church building. A vacant residence adjoining the church property was utilized as a rooming house and dining hall where good meals were sold at cost prices.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and family arrived Sunday morning by auto from Independence. Brother Gleazer was the speaker three times on Sunday, much to the edification and delight of the goodly number of Saints who had driven in from distant points, many of whom drove back in the night.

On Monday Bishop A. B. Phillips and the general Sunday school superintendent, C. B. Woodstock, arrived, and a regular schedule of work was set in order. Young people's prayer services were held at half past eight, sometimes joining with the adult prayer meeting which began at nine o'clock. At fifteen minutes after ten special classes were held for the young people with Brother Woodstock and Sister Pearl Allen as teachers, in which an effort was made to help them recognize and appreciate the gifts God has given them in their strong bodies, their minds, their homes, their church, etc., with a view to their proper care and development. This is the stewardship plan as it applies to youth. At a quarter past eleven the young people entered heartily into the junior church service of song and prayer by the young people themselves, and there was a sermon by one of the priesthood, all bearing upon the life problems of youth and the youthful vision of the church and its work.

At the same hours Brothers Gleazer and Phillips alternated with class work and lectures for the older people, covering the social program of the church and the financial law. The interest manifested by the attendance of the Saints, their ready participation, and their frequent reference in testimony to the light and joy received through the class work, gave abundant evidence that the class presentation and discussions were successful.

At half past two two departmental sessions were held. Two sessions were devoted to women's work, at which papers and talks were given by local sisters, followed by discussion. These were timely, well prepared, and well received. Two days were devoted to Sunday school work and the problems of teaching. One especially happy hour was spent out in the cool shade, discussing the field and function of the Religio. Two volley ball courts were laid out and kept busy by old and young during the out-of-meeting times. On several occasions in the late afternoon the entire camp drove to a good swimming place in the Elkhorn River and enjoyed a frolic in the cooling waters.

Preaching in the evening was preceded by a song service and followed by childhood games and contests on the well-lighted lawn near the church. Inman is on the western edge of the central time zone, so dusk was only gathering when the church service closed at nine o'clock. The evening play hour was greatly enjoyed by the young and middle-aged. It is a fine experience to close a busy day with the rollicking, care-free play of childhood in a spirit of wholesome companionship.
Throughout each day a splendid feeling prevailed. The morning prayer meetings were well attended, inspirational, and comforting. The young people learned to express themselves freely in prayer and testimony, and the Spirit of God was present, softening our hearts and uniting us in the sacred bonds of Christian fellowship. Only those present can appreciate the blessings received. At the business session on Saturday, a unanimous vote asked for a reunion in 1926.

Evangelist Joshua Carlile was on the ground throughout and brought confidence and peace in his fatherly admonition and testimony. His presence was greatly enjoyed by all, many receiving their patriarchal blessing under his hands. Elder Charles J. Smith of Sioux City dropped in for two days and made no slight contribution to the happiness of the gathering during his stay. Elder George Jenkins, missionary to the district, managed the dining hall and was ever alert, looking after the comfort of everybody. Elder Levi Gamet, veteran missionary and long-time president of the district, much loved by the Saints, was chosen to preside over the reunion, associated with Brothers Gleazer and Jenkins.

Sunday afternoon three precious souls were led into the waters of baptism by Brother Jenkins. They were Glenn A. Atwood, a promising young man of Albion; Mrs. Helen Bowman, a nurse of Ainsworth; and Mrs. Emma Ballantyne of Page. The latter is the wife of John Ballantyne, a man of sterling worth who plans to be baptized among his relatives at the Lamoni reunion. The three Ballantyne children were blessed at the morning service.

Saints were present from Chadron, Valentine, Elgin, Neligh, Clearwater, Meadow Grove, Swan Lake, and Page, Nebraska, and from Springfield and Wagner, South Dakota. Outstanding among the promising young people of the district who were present at the reunion were Brother Leslie Flowers, a graduate of Graceland; Brother Earl Oehrting, a civil engineer in the employ of the Government, recently chosen as the district Sunday school superintendent; and Sister Edith Van Alstin, a graduate from Wayne, Nebraska, who will teach at Hardington the coming year. Brother Hare, an educated Sioux Indian from Wagner, South Dakota, was also present a part of the time. If faithful these young people will surely be a source of strength to the work in their day.

On Monday following the reunion, two families of the local Saints, with Elders Gleazer, Woodstock, and Jenkins, drove across the sandhills to meet with the Saints of a newly organized Sunday school near Swan Lake, some fifty miles away. On the outward journey one of the heavy cars suffered a broken spring and overturned down a steep embankment. In this car were seven people, including four little girls. Only by divine protection were they preserved from harm. Slight bruises, only, were sustained; the car was righted, repaired, and the journey resumed. The Saints were made conscious of the protecting care of a loving Father. Pleasant hours were had with the group of Saints, many of whom had been recently baptized. Short, encouraging talks were made by Elders Gleazer, Jenkins, Woodstock, and Fred Gatenby. A feeling prayer was offered by Brother Jay Butler.

The newly organized Sunday school is many miles from a town, meeting in a schoolhouse, but it has 60 members, the largest school in Central Nebraska District.

Heame, Texas

July 3-12.—The conference and reunion of the Texas Central District was opened with a program presented by the local Sunday school, which was immensely enjoyed by an audience of about three hundred members and friends.

District conference convened on the morning of the 4th, with five branches represented, Brother J. M. Clevenger, vice president of the district, being in charge. By an unanimous vote, Apostle E. J. Gleazer was selected to preside, associated with the district presidency.

Elder S. S. Smith was elected president of the district for the ensuing year, with H. H. Davenport and J. M. Clevenger as his counselors. A committee was appointed with instructions to gather funds and labor for the erection of a permanent tabernacle for housing the reunions that are held yearly at this place, and it is hoped that we may see the completion of it before the next meeting time.

General church workers present were: Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Patriarch H. O. Smith, Sister N. L. Booker, and Elder James A. Thomas. It was a pleasure to meet with these friends, new and old, and their efforts in our behalf are more than appreciated. We feel sure that good fruits will be the result.

Each morning at a quarter to eight o'clock, the young folks' prayer service met under the direction of Brother J. A. Thomas. Attendance at these services was very good, and everyone seemed to enjoy the wonderful spirit that was present each time. Brother Thomas and Sister Booker have done much towards fixing the determinations of the young minds of our district Zionward. Following this hour came the general assembly for social service, at which all seemed eager to be in attendance. "Sweet hour of prayer" is our interpretation of this service, when we indeed would cast aside our ever care.

Study classes at a quarter to eleven and half past two under the direction of H. O. Smith, J. A. Thomas, and Sister N. L. Booker alternately, were held each day with fair attendance and good interest. The subject was the "Social program of the church."

Though the attendance at this reunion was comparatively small, the dining hall owned and operated by the district was able to give good service and come out even financially. The recreational department of the district was well supplied with volley ball, baseball, and indoor baseball, and croquet equipment, and much enjoyment was evidenced by those participating in the games.

The slogan adopted by the reunion was "Marching to Zion," and throughout the spirit of the theme possessed the meeting. We feel that a great step was made in that direction. May God lead us out of selfishness into a greater life in his service.

Elder C. J. Hunt writes to the Presidency from Port Huron, Michigan, July 13:—"I left Kansas City Friday evening and arrived in Port Huron Saturday evening. Brother Matthew Liston joined me at Flint en route. He made me welcome in the district, and Brother Robert H. Huntson, Bishop's agent, gave me assurance of hearty support in my labors. Brother Huntson met with us in priesthood meeting Sunday afternoon. His home is at Cape, thirty miles from Port Huron. The good Spirit was with me in the services here, for which I feel thankful. I believe some good was done. The meeting last night was a union service of the three groups or branches."

Little Journeys by the Editor in Chief

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, July 22.—My last letter was written on board a Nickel Plate train bound for Chicago and home, after a visit to Owen Sound District. Reaching Chicago too late for the evening trains direct to Kansas City, I boarded a Chicago & Alton for Saint Louis, where next morning, the 10th, I took the Burlington and Alton train for Kansas City, arriving about 4:30 p. m. Met by the daughters, I was soon at work at some of the many jobs which seem always to be waiting one at “home.”

On reaching the desk at the office next morning, the 11th, I found a pile of mail which was made considerably smaller (but still in evidence) when I quit dictating that night at ten o'clock, a feat made possible only by the good nature of “my boys” at the office, who so cheerfully “hung around” to help “the chief” whenever at the office.

Sunday night (the 12th) I had the pleasure once more of seeing a fine audience on the Campus, despite the rain in the late afternoon and the threatening clouds at “meeting time,” and desire to express my appreciation of the fine attention given me by the large audience throughout the hour while I discussed the program of the church.

Monday and Tuesday, busy with interviews, conferences, dictation, etc., passed quickly, and 7:30 Tuesday evening found me at the union station, having been dropped there by the daughters and the “decrepit Columbia,” boarding a Chicago & Alton train, the Hummer, for Chicago. A fellow passenger with whom we had a pleasant conversation was W. C. Michaels, a prominent Kansas City attorney and former president of the Jackson County Bar Association.

The train on time at Chicago, the four hours between its arrival and time for departure of the Pere Marquette for Grand Rapids, gave me time to visit some railway officials in the interests of the transportation department.

At noon, with the heat growing steadily, the Pere Marquette moved out of the Grand Central Station for Grand Rapids. Securing a table I resumed work and worked steadily at my mail, and at writing, thus forgetting the heat.

Arriving on time, 5:30, I found E. K. Evans and his two sons, Elmer and Alonzo, awaiting my arrival; also a delegation from Lansing. After a short conference with the “delegation,” a “bite to eat” was secured, and the “Evanses” took me to “Let’s Rest Cottage,” on the shores of Bostwick Lake, about seventeen miles northeast of Grand Rapids, where I found Mrs. Smith with Sister Louise Evans, who had been spending a few days recreating or “vacationating.” A pleasant evening was spent in visiting. Among other things I learned to my surprise that I had been expected on Sunday, the 12th, and that while I was addressing the fine audience of Zion at the Campus a “packed house” had gathered in Grand Rapids expecting me there. I am sorry that I disappointed them. Sorry, too, that I missed a reception which had been planned, for Mrs. Smith tells me of the good time had by the Saints who came out to the lake for a social time. Well, I didn’t miss all of it, for the Evans boys came out Thursday night again, with their families, and while some of the party visited at the cottage, another group, of which Mrs. Smith and I were part, with Elmer at the wheel, had a delightful drive among the farms and lakes of Michigan. After a day of steady work at mail and manuscripts, it was restful as well as pleasant. Later in the evening another family of Saints, the Wards, joined the group at the cottage, and visiting was in order till a late hour.

Work at writing was the order for me on Friday till about three in the afternoon, when “the boys” came out from Grand Rapids in the Nash, with the intention of taking us, bag and baggage, into the city for the night. A pleasant trip in was followed by an inspection of the up-to-date and very busy printing plant which, under the management of Elmer and Alonzo Evans, has grown up on the spot where Glad Tidings was so long printed regularly by its founder and owner, Brother E. K. Evans. Brother E. K. was not with us on the “inspection,” for he was preparing to go to Canada to bring back a grandson for a vacation at the cottage.

The rest of the day and evening were spent in “seeing Grand Rapids,” the furniture city. The night was spent at the pleasant and neat home of Brother Alonzo Evans.

On Saturday, after the usual activities contingent upon preparations for a journey or the continuation of one, and after a fine lunch at Brother M. A. Ward’s, good-bys were said to Grand Rapids Saints and friends, and Mrs. Smith and I were taken by Brother Ward in his long-used but dependable Studebaker for the drive to Flint. With the usual number of delays, we were off at about 3 o’clock in the afternoon.

A drive almost anywhere in Michigan is interesting, and one on observing the varied industries, and even the varied agricultural activities, cannot but admire the State which has put the Nation on wheels.

By steady driving of Brother Ward, the unfailing response of the “Studie,” and with a stop at Owasso for supper, we arrived at the home of Brother A. H. DuRose, at Flint, about eight o’clock in the evening. A visit with Brother Durose about Flint conditions and church work was indulged till about eight-thirty, when Bishop Carmichael arrived at the house, brought by Brother Liston from the station. Soon we all went to the home of Brother and Sister C. M. Roberston, the missionaries’ home, where Mrs. Smith and I were domiciled while in Flint. Another period of visiting and talking over plans for the next day, and we retired for the night.

Sunday came—Sunday, sometimes called the day of rest, and I guess it is for some. The activities of the day began early. The ministerial conference, under the auspices of the district president, was well planned, and things began moving smoothly. With Brother W. L. Bennett, the district president, and his associates in charge, ably assisted by Brother DuRose of the Flint Branch and his associates, the activities went on apace. The exercises of the day began with an early morning prayer service, and the First Flint Church was packed to overflowing. The writer and Bishop Carmichael and the veteran William Davis were in charge, and no time was lost. A fine spirit prevailed, which comforted and encouraged. We were pleased to see here Brother G. N. Briggs, of Graceland College.

While Sunday school was being held in the church building, in separate rooms in the school building across the street the members of the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthood met. I met with and spoke to those of the Melchisedec priesthood in charge of Brother Robert Coats, president of the quorum of elders. Over an hour was thus spent. Bishop Carmichael met with and addressed those of the Aaronic priesthood. About thirty of the higher priesthood were present, while the number of those of the Aaronic priesthood was considerably larger. Mrs. Smith found occupation during this period by responding to a request to address a Sunday school class of adults on the psychology of joy.
At eleven o'clock, Brother "Mat" Liston and President Briggs in charge of the meeting, I was the speaker, and till noon discussed Zion and stewardships to an audience which packed the auditorium of the church. A meeting for children was held in the lower auditorium at the same time. "Home" for dinner with "Dad" Roberston and his family (Matt and his growing family being an appendage), then back to the church for the afternoon. The church building being too small, arrangements had been made for the auditorium of the high school to be used for the afternoon and evening services, and it was filled. Bishop Carmichael was the speaker at the 2.15 service, and for more than an hour spoke on stewardships, and a season of questions followed. A short intermission was followed by an ordination meeting, at which Brother DuRose was ordained high priest by me, assisted by Brother W. L. Bennett. Then Brother Bennett, Liston, and Grice (John R.) ordained three of the local brethren to the Aaronic priesthood. With administrations and blessings of children following this, the time was occupied till near five o'clock, and it was a worn and weary (though happy) crowd which then separated for supper.

Under the charge of Brother Liston, Bishop Carmichael left Flint after the afternoon meeting to go to Port Huron for the evening meeting, while I was left to fill the pulpit at the evening meeting.

For supper Mrs. Smith and I had the pleasure of being with Brother and Sister Fred Harder, parents of Howard, one of "my boys" at the office.

At the evening session, Zion and stewardships were again the theme. That there is great interest among the Saints in this theme was again evidenced by the attention given at all the services of the day. I was a bit long winded and spent for an hour and a quarter.

Well, the consensus of opinion is that the ministerial conference was a success. The attendance was large, from all parts of the district, many also being present from the Eastern District. Everyone seemed to enjoy the services and the visits, and we were pleased to see manifested the same forward-looking spirit which seems to become constantly stronger throughout the church. Why shouldn't we be looking forward? That's the direction in which Zion lies. It's towards our goal. The church has long waited for Zion, sung of it, prayed for it, and now that the time has come to work for it there has sprung up a joyousness which promises much for the progress of the church. Such meetings as the ministerial conference at Flint are sure to help the cause along, for I am sure that there is in Detroit District, as a result of the conference, a greater desire and determination to study the problems and the theory of Zion and stewardships.

The conference was over, and I for one was tired, but I was happy, too, for the fatigue had been brought on by spending, and being spent, in the good cause, and the thought that perhaps I had helped the Saints to a better understanding of our problems repaid me to some extent for the labor performed. In these thoughts I was encouraged by many expressions from the Saints.

The ministerial conference of the Detroit District was over, but the work goes on. So, up early Monday, that portfolio of mine needed attention, for its bulge had been increased a bit by the contents of two large envelopes filled with mail from the office. I tackled it and wrote steadily until about 10.45, when Brother John R. Grice called for me. Arrangements had been made for me to act as a "pinch hitter" in addressing the Lions' Club of Flint, the arrangements having been by "Matt" Liston, who as song leader had won a well-recognized place in the club. Out to the Chevrolet plant to pick up Brother DuRose, thence to the Durant, where the club meets. The attendance was not large, for many were vacationing, but I had splendid attention as I spoke on "Your best business asset." Introduced by Brother Grice and supported by Brother DuRose, I felt quite at home. Besides, I was not a stranger to the tribe of felines, having previously spoken to the New York Uptown Club. Lion President La France complimented me on my ability as a "pinch hitter," and other expressions make me feel the time was well spent.

Brother John Grice in his Dodge took us to Brother Robertson's where we gathered up the baggage, and Sister Smith bade good-by to our hospitable hostess and her daughters ("Dad" being on his locomotive in the yards), thence to Brother Harder's to gather up Mrs. Grice and part of John's family (Billie and Wanda), and we were off on the drive to Detroit. Fifty-eight miles and with a Dodge to make it, Brother John expected to arrive easily by six o'clock; but even Dodes will go wrong sometimes. A break in the gasoline line stopped us on the southern outskirts of Pontiac and necessitated temporary repairs, effected by a short piece of rubber tubing and some friction tape. This delay, together with a detour, put us to the home of Brother Bennett about one hour later than we had anticipated, but not too late to find a welcome and refreshments for the auto load.

Bishop Carmichael joined us soon after we reached Brother Bennett's, having reached Detroit from Port Huron via bus line. He reports a full house at Port Huron. After supper Brother Grice and family continued their journey home, to Saint Clair, while Brothers Carmichael and Bennett and I went to the Central Church to meet with district and local officers to discuss local conditions and problems. And until after ten o'clock we did so.

Tuesday, the 21st, was a busy day. The forenoon was spent largely in working on mail. A party as guests of Brother Mottashed had chop suey at a restaurant near the factory where "Charlie" works, and then under Brother Bennett's direction a tour of inspection of church properties begun, which took us to various parts of Detroit, East Side, River Rouge, Highland Park, etc. In response to a call from his son, we with several of the brethren made a ministerial call at the bedside of Brother George Badder, laid on the rod of prayer, and found a hospitable hostess and her felines, and other expressions make me feel the time was well spent.

As write, I am at the home of Brother W. L. Bennett, the district president, and feel because of this visit that Brother Carmichael and I have a better understanding of conditions in Detroit and the district.

This afternoon will be spent with a party of Saints in a drive to points of interest in and around Detroit, and to-night a meeting at the church (Central), where Brother Carmichael will speak. Will speak of this and my trip to Cache later.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

From a letter to First Presidency, dated June 10, by Elder V. B. Etzenhouser:—"Our sacrament meeting this month was of a very high order, and the testimonies and prayers were exceptionally fine. A number of the young people took part, and their expression of faith in the church and its ideals was an inspiration to all. The thinking youth of the church are going to be more active, and just as soon as our program is put into active operation you will have no trouble in getting the full support of the young and those who are youthful in spirit."
J. W. Davis Writes of His Return to America

No doubt many of our friends are wondering what has become of us, so I am writing this short letter to give an account of ourselves.

We are back in our homeland again and are establishing ourselves in Independence, Missouri. We are buying a home and our address is 121 West South Side Boulevard, Independence, Missouri. Our mother, Sister Vida E. Smith, is living with us, and we are very comfortable and happy together. Our house is located on a high elevation midway between Walnut Park and Enoch Hill churches, so we are handy to both.

We returned from Australia only recently, having sailed from Sydney on March 11. Our homeward voyage was pleasant, except for two or three days' indisposition on account of rough seas. We had one very pleasant day in Pango Pango, in Samoa; also a very enjoyable day in Honolulu. Our kind and genial Brother G. J. Waller accompanied us on short visits to the homes of many of the Saints. We had a lovely Chinese dinner with Brother Prescott A. Foo, our Hawaiian Chinese missionary, and his splendid wife Lois, who is a friend of old days in Ohio. We were pleased to find them both well and cheerful. We also met our own girl, Healanii, who was looking better than ever before. We were surely pleased to see her. Had we been three days later we would have been in time for her wedding, but we had to come on. We would have liked to remain in Hawaii a few months, for we have always loved the Hawaiian Saints.

We arrived in San Francisco March 30, and the following evening I came on to Independence, but Sister Davis remained in Berkeley, California, to visit her sister, Mrs. E. E. Inslee.

Since conference we have been working almost beyond our strength getting moved and settled, and carrying on other work incident to earning a livelihood. We have asked for a year off from missionary work in order to get our home established.

We were loath to leave the Australian Saints, for we had grown to love them very much. However, there were a combination of reasons for our coming home when we did. It seemed necessary that we should come, and later developments have proved the wisdom of our decision.

It has been reported that we had to pay our own way home. This is a mistake, although I am sure there was no intention on the part of anyone to misrepresent the truth. It is evidently due to a misunderstanding. The facts are, we did not decide to come home until it was too late to correspond with the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric and secure means of transportation from our home office. After the local bishop in Australia had supplied funds for bringing Brethren McConley and Ellis home, the means in his hands were low. However, the New South Wales Saints arose to the situation, and by voluntary subscriptions in various branches gave us amount which totaled a little over five hundred dollars or a little more than one hundred pounds of English money. This, with some money we obtained by selling our stereopticon machine and a few items of furniture, together with a couple of months' allowance, altogether about two hundred and fifty dollars or about fifty pounds, covered our expenses to San Francisco, and the home offices took care of us from there on.

So there has been no neglect on the part of anyone. Bishop McGuire has since told me that they would have supplied our needs had they known. The Australian Saints have been most generous with us at all times, and they gave us something else as well, the value of which cannot be computed in dollars and cents, or in pounds, shillings, and pence. They gave us a friendship rich in sympathy, companionship, and love, and our hearts are with them, too. We would be indeed sad if we thought we could not renew these friendships again. When the time comes for us to renew our missionary activities, should our appointment read "Australia" we shall be happy to respond.

In the meantime we are at home in Independence, surrounded by numerous friends, many of old acquaintance. We hope we can soon give more attention to our private correspondence, for we owe letters to many people.

We take this method of sending love and greetings to all.

J. W. Davis.

The Chases at Work in Hilo

Sister Chase and I left Independence the evening of June 9, reaching Salt Lake City about one in the afternoon of the 11th. We were met at the depot by Brother Davy, who took us in his car and landed us at the home of Sister Susan Winkworth. Sister Winkworth is one of our children in gospel bonds, and the welcome was sincere and touching. The younger son, William Winkworth, and wife live with her, so we had a visit with them. He is another of our children in the gospel.

The problem of how we should be able to meet the most of the Salt Lake City Saints was solved for us by Brother Davy, who informed us that the Saints were meeting at his place that evening for a farewell party, as Brother and Sister Davy were soon to leave for their Colorado field. We were given a hearty invitation to join the evening gathering and to stay at the parsonage over the one night we could spend in the city. We accepted the invitation and thoroughly enjoyed the hearty welcome from the many Saints who assembled to bid Brother and Sister Davy Godspeed on their journey to the new field.

Before going to the mission house we took supper with Sister George Kinghorn, sr., and family, then called upon Sister Pettit, sr., who lives just across the street from that place. We found Sister Pettit and son Ezra still keeping their home on Seventh South, and though they have both—in common with us—passed some fourteen years since we last saw them, they seem to have aged very little in that time. In this visit, as with Sisters Winkworth and Kinghorn and family, also at the gathering at the parsonage, we were made to feel that it is good to meet and renew old acquaintances.

While at Sister Winkworth's the phone called us, and we were made glad to hear the voice of Brother Charles Smurthwaite. I had written him at Ogden that we would reach Salt Lake City that day, and being in the city on a business trip he called up to know whether we had kept the appointment. When he found we were there, he canceled his business appointment or postponed it till the next day, and came to the house. We were happy to have the visit with him. We had much to talk over, both of reminiscences of our former association in the work in the city (an association which has always been a source of pleasurable memories because of the understanding and comradeship developed therein) and also of the work still lying before us, with the problems of the day and hour.

I have missed one pleasant experience had en route: During our mission in Salt Lake City we were engaged in tent work not far from the temple area, and one evening a gentleman was in our audience who seemed to be very much interested in the message. This was the first of several evenings, and finally he accepted an invitation to attend our midweek services at our church home (then a rented place on Fourth South Street, between Eighth and Ninth East), and in that little social service he rose and told us that it was the Spirit he found among us that was drawing him. That man is our Elder Holm, now located at the parsonage in Provo.

We had written Brother Holm that we would be passing through Provo at this time, so when we stopped at the depot there for a few minutes we got out and were rewarded by meeting both Brother and Sister Holm. Though we had only a few minutes to chat with them, it was pleasant to meet them. It is very pleasant to feel that the spirit of fellowship which began in our former ministration among these people still holds. I am not sure that, were it not for the appointment given from the church and the feeling that we must do our work wherever it may lie, the wish so often expressed to us, “I wish you were staying with us here,” might have been a little hard to deny.

Our train Friday (the Western Pacific) did not leave the city until two in the afternoon, so we took the time to run up to Ogden, where we were met at the depot by our missionary, Brother Levitt, and taken to the home of those who first received us when we made our first visit to that place some twenty-seven years ago, and where we made our first home when sent to Utah some five years later. To those who are acquainted with Ogden, we need hardly say that this was the home of Brother and Sister Wells Chase at that time, though now they are both gone to their well-earned rewards and the home is kept by two of their daughters, Sisters Cooper and Woods. Again we thoroughly enjoyed the renewal of old acquaintances and seeing some of the places with which we were familiar some fifteen to twenty years ago. But back to Salt Lake City, a visit with Sister Eda Swenson and Brother Hyrum Swenson, necessarily a short one, and we were on our way for San Francisco, which we reached Saturday evening.

We had written to Brother J. D. White, but were a little at sea as to just what would be the program here. However, Brother Virgil Etzenhouser met us at the Oakland depot and straightened us out, so we continued our way across the bay, where we were met by Brother Saxe, who deposited us at the hospitable home of Brother and Sister H. S. Lawton, where we were cared for till our boat sailed on the 17th.

Again we experienced a very pleasant surprise, for our former colaborer, Brother H. L. Holt, called us from the home of Sister Charles Parkin. He and his good wife had come all the way from Pacific Grove to meet us and renew our acquaintance and to live over some of the many pleasant gospel experiences which had come to us in our five years of labor together on the Pacific coast.

I fear, were I to try to tell you of all the nice things done for us in San Francisco by the friends and Saints, the auto trips given us by Brother Saxe, the many sights of interest taken in by us, the dinners at Sister Parkin’s and Brother Page’s places, the sightseeing trips taken with Sister Lawton, etc., it would make this epistle overdue. However, all things must come to an end, and noon, the 17th, found us on board the S. S. Manoa, and ready for our first experience on the Pacific Ocean.

We had met the Saints at the San Francisco church Sunday morning at eleven o’clock and spoke for them there, also the Oakland Saints in the evening. At both places the welcome was hearty and the liberty excellent. Twenty-three years had passed since we were in these places, but there were still some to meet us who had known us, besides others to greet us, who, because they were Saints, were not strange to us. As we write of these experiences, we are made to feel the force of the poet’s words:

We hardly need write of the “ups and downs” of the voyage to these islands; some of our readers have experienced both, but for us the “ups” were not so pleasant, and we were glad they did not occupy very much of the trip, being confined, in fact to the first twelve hours out.

We reached Honolulu on schedule time, June 24. The way was made pleasant for us by Brother Waller’s meeting us at the wharf. We had told the transfer agent, who wanted to take charge of our baggage, that we were looking for Brother Waller or some representative of his to meet us there, and as we drew up along the wharf he came to me and drew us to the rail, saying, “There’s Mr. Waller; that gentleman with the black derby.” We felt as though another goal was reached, and the welcome given us fully sustained that feeling.

Brother Waller is a very busy man, but he finds time to do a good many things for the work, which some who are not so strenuously busy think they cannot find time to accomplish. He soon took us to the mission home on Young or Hotel Street, as it is variously called, where we made new acquaintances and were made to feel at home. This was Wednesday evening, and the next morning we had a letter from Brother Williams telling us that they (Brother and Sister Williams, with their daughter, Clara) would be in from Hilo Friday morning.

We spent a week in Honolulu and were busy all the time. We participated in nine services while here (Sister Chase was present in eight of these services) and spoke four times, also found time to take several rides and sight-seeing trips with the brothers and sisters there. Certainly it was not a dull time, or unprofitable.

Coming on to Hilo, we were received by the Saints here as members of the family of Christ. We have now been in this place five days, participating in six services, besides attending the celebration of the Nation’s birthday. This celebration for us took the form of attending the regatta held in the harbor and then going to dinner with Brothers and Sisters Hapai and Mahi, eaten at the home of Brother and Sister Hapai; then a long ride through the suburbs of Hilo, and the evening at home.

We are not burdening you with the details of our church work here, but will say that we have a program mapped out which will keep us busy for a while. We find manifested here and in Honolulu an earnest desire to go forward, and feel our responsibility to the church and the Master to lead where Christ has marked out the path.

Sunday was a very busy day, and at the evening sermon we had excellent liberty in presenting the message. Both Sister Chase and I find we will have full scope for our strength and talents here. We are made to feel the force of the Master’s injunction, “Feed my lambs; feed my sheep.”

There is a fine body of young people here, earnest and seemingly willing to do their work. This afternoon we are to begin the work of putting the playground in order and are to continue each evening till it is completed. Tuesday we are to have a workers’ conference in the interests of our Department of Recreation and Expression. Both Sister Chase and I are thankful that we were moved to accept the counsel of Brother McDowell and complete our course in this study of recreational leadership; and while we lack experience it looks as though we are where that will come. We are made to feel the force of one of our late Brother Joseph Smith's sayings, often uttered when some one regretted the lack of experience of some of our earnest workers, "Send them out and let them get that experience." Pray for us here. Our mission address is Hilo, Hawaii, Box 222.

The Work in Southern California District

Southern California District is still strong in the faith, and everyone has a desire to see the work that is so dear to all of us go forward. There is a splendid spiritual feeling among the membership, and interest in the church and her problems is growing every day. The district has a splendid president in Brother Chapman. He wears the smile that won't come off, and no matter where you meet him, or under what circumstances, he is always the same Tom. He is assisted by a splendid group of officers, and each one takes a delight in making the work go and go strong.

Los Angeles has a large branch and a very fine new church that are a credit to the city. We are proud of this building. Brother Walter W. Smith and his good wife are well liked by all the members of the district. This makes it very nice for them, and they are very happy in their work.

Brother W. L. Vail, late of Independence, is assisting with the mission. Brother Smith invented a new baptismal font to be used in tent work, and last night he tried it out for the first time. It is a canvas font and may be placed in the tent. It weighs less than twenty pounds.

The services last night were very beautiful and quiet, and the good Spirit was felt by all present. Last night the tent was almost too small for the crowd, and most of them were outsiders. Brother Burton is well satisfied with his new mission. When asked how he likes his new mission, he smiles and says, "This is a great country, and they are sure treating me fine."

And happy George Wixom is going strong at his home town and also at Santa Barbara. The earthquake there did not affect his friendship for Brother Chapman, even if Chapman did take him up there and then leave him to be shaken up a bit. It was a good thing Brother Wixom was there, for he is a man of strong courage and cool under all circumstances, and he was the right man in the right place.

And in the small "quake" at San Bernardino he is still the cool, collected, and fearless defender of the church, and the Saints have faith in him. Again—the right man in the right place.

Brother Gillen paid our district a visit and preached us some splendid spiritual and encouraging sermons. We were sorry he had to leave for the north so soon and shall welcome his return at any time. Brother Elbert Smith has been in our district for the past few days, and everyone has been encouraged by this visit. He was very busy while here and made as many appointments as he could fill in the few days while here.

We are looking forward to a splendid reunion and feel that it will be one of our big reunions. The committee is working hard to prepare and put into effect a program that will add to the faith and courage of everyone who attends. The program for the young people under the leadership of Brother Will Teegarden is splendid in its outline, and everyone feels that he will be well supported in his reunion work.

Brother Jack Damron and his splendid wife paid our district a visit last week, spending Sunday at Los Angeles. Everyone was glad to see these good Saints and renew old friendships.

It is said of California that it is a land of pleasure and the playground of the country. In part this is true, and many people come here for the sake of pleasure alone, but among them are many honest-hearted people who desire to know and do the Master's will. The seed of the gospel of Christ was planted here many years ago by some of the men of the "Old Guard": Heman C. Smith, J. F. Burton, J. C. Clapp, Lawn, Mills, and many others. They planted and others have watered and tended, and to-day we are harvesting the increase. We hope we shall not fall down on the job but that we may work together and bring the fullness of honor to the splendid work started by these wonderful men.

The Saints here are reading with interest the articles on stewardships by Brother Carmichael in the Herald, and when we understand just what is required of us and what our duty is we will do it with our might.

I beg space in your column to again bear my testimony to the gospel being restored to earth in these latter days, and that God hears and answers prayers. I first embraced this gospel thirty-one years ago. A few years after this our branch became discouraged, all the Saints moved away, and for several years I lived isolated. I came in contact with arguments used against this church and became discouraged. I finally drifted away, straying from the true fold. The arguments used against this church were on certain points of doctrine I was not enlightened on before I came into the church.

I finally located near a branch after the death of my mother, she having died in this church. Her prayers and influence followed me after her death. I became affiliated again with this church and lived firm in the belief in the doctrines of this church for eight years. I never put away certain sins I indulged in, and I finally drifted away again and became affiliated with Utahism. After seeing the deception they practiced in many ways and reading some anti-Mormon literature and arguments used against certain points of doctrine I never knew of before, and after referring such to the local priesthood and they not explaining or ever attempting to, this again led me into the belief that the church was wrong.

Again I drifted away and united with one of the popular churches. But after a few months I became disgusted because this popular church taught scripture doctrines always taught by Latter Day Saints, but they never practiced such. I withdrew from that church. Being already out of this church and the Utah Church also, I became convinced again that one of these churches was right. After praying over the matter I was impressed to investigate their teachings, and the points of doctrine that had got me off so many times. I submitted questions to certain ones of the priesthood of both the Reorganized and Utah Churches and was ignored, but kept on reading the Bible and asking my God to give me the Spirit of understanding. As I read I finally was impressed to submit these points of doctrine to the historian of the Reorganized Church, Brother S. A. Burgess, acting historian, kindly responded and made all of these points clear to my mind, after which I was impressed to reform from all the sins I had indulged in and again return to the Reorganized Church.

During the past seventeen years of my life I have been afflicted with a severe hernia. After being operated upon nine years ago, a short time after it came back on me worse than before, I got so I was not able to work and had no money to have another operation performed; was in a condition that death's door was staring me in the face. I prayed to God to either cause some means to present themselves so I could be operated upon again and get well or to guide me back into the true church before nine years ago, a short time after it came back. I prayed to God to either cause some means to present themselves so I could be operated upon again and get well or to guide me back into the true church before death claimed me. So my God did hear and answer my prayers. After locating in this town, a stranger I never had seen before, after seeing my condition, was the cause of presenting themselves to me so I could be operated on again. I was in the hospital quite a while. After I was released following a successful operation, the Holy Spirit guided me again into the true fold. I was rebaptized and confirmed Sunday, the 6th, by Brother G. M. Hinkle, of Cardin, Oklahoma, a short distance from where I live.

I feel the blessings of God resting upon me. I am again following my trade extra, and when I get over the weakness of this operation I will be able to work full time. All objectionable points against the church have been cleared away from my mind. I have reformed from my past sins and mistakes; there is no danger of my ever straying away from his only true fold. I need the prayers of God's people everywhere in my behalf. My desire is to live so that I will have a part in the redemption of Zion and be worthy to be in the resurrection of the just.

Productive Conference in Northern Saskatchewan

Senlac, Saskatchewan, July 17.—A successful district conference was held in this branch July 9, 10, 11, and 12 which proved to be uplifting and strengthening to the Saints, but as the press committee is preparing a report for the Herald we will not go into detail, except to say twelve were baptized by J. J. Cornish, and the two young men who were ordained to the ministry belonged to our Artland Branch. They were Priests E. Leslie Mogg and Joseph Bates, both being ordained elders.

About a week preceding the conference, Elder William Sparling, who has been appointed to labor in the Northern Saskatchewan District, arrived. He was a stranger to the Saints here, but was cordially welcomed and preached the Sunday before conference and every evening preceding conference. The Saints were pleased with his direct, earnest style and will long remember him.

Sister Beatrice Huggett is enjoying a visit from her sister, Sister Davis, and her little niece, who attended conference here and stayed over to visit.

Brother and Sister George Atkinson have sold their home and will move to Michigan, after a short round of visits among old neighbors and relatives. They have lived in the branch since its organization some fourteen years ago, and will be greatly missed.

Sister H. A. Hartshorn has a new car and is very neighborly with it, often bringing her friends and neighbors to church.

Brother John J. Cornish, jr, had the misfortune to lose his large barn by fire July 13. He was away at the time, and his neighbors rushed to the scene as soon as they saw the flames but were too late to save the building. Some of the contents were saved.

Several of the Saints of this branch are planning to go to the Alberta conference at Ribstone this year. This conference is so near the border line of Alberta and Saskatchewan that it makes it convenient for the Saints here to attend their conference and Ribstone Saints to attend the Artland conference, which they did, and rejoiced together.

The Saints are looking forward to a most successful year in the gospel. The depression of the last year because of the conditions prevailing in the church has been lifted, owing to the visit of Apostles M. A. McConley, J. F. Curtis, and Elder Sparling. A spirit of optimism abounds, and we hope for good work all along the line of Christian endeavor.

Looking Forward to a Branch

Sarrail, Alberta, Canada, July 5.—We are isolated from church privileges here in northern Alberta, being one hundred miles from the nearest branch, in Edmonton, and the only Saints in this place. This is a good country and there is lots of good land, so I think in time there will be more Saints here, and probably a branch.

We are trying to do what we can for the work, although it is not much. We love to read the Herald and have looked forward to it with greater interest since conference, as it has so much good food for thought. I have been working long days but always find time to read it.

One Sunday it was raining, and while sitting indoors I composed the following verses:

Ever Trying to Be True

Never seeking after wealth or worldly gain,
Never seeking for the fancy, but the plain;
Never caring though we have to suffer pain—
Ever trying to be true.

Always walking in the footsteps of our Lord;
Always trusting in the beauty of his word;
Knowing now that truth is stronger than the sword—
Ever trying to be true.

Shall we wander when the pathway it is straight?
Shall we enter or turn back when at the gate?
Shall we start in time, or shall we be too late?
Shall we strive, then, to be true?

Is the price we pay as much as Jesus paid?
What offering on the altar have you laid?
Was it according to the law that God has made?
Are you trying to be true?

Are you trying to observe the Golden Rule?
Is your love to others warm or only cool?
Do you love them only at the time of Yule?
Are you trying to be true?

Have you faith that carries with it many works?
When it's time for doing, do you try to shirk?
Keeping from the pleasure of this world and murrk?
Are you striving to be true?

If you, then, try to continue to the end,
God will surely his love and mercy lend,
And to you his Holy Spirit he will send. Then he'll help you to be true.

When at last you will have laid the armor down; Then at last from God you shall receive a crown; And upon his face there will not be a frown.

Then he will say, “You've been true.”

We always want to be found doing the will of our heavenly Father so that when the call shall come to gather to Zion we may be numbered among the righteous. We see from day to day that Satan is trying harder to overcome us, so we ask an interest in your prayers that we may be strengthened to overcome. Our prayers are for all of God's people.

Promise of Good Development Appears

LUCASTON, OHIO, JULY 15.—July 5 marked a day of special activities in this branch. Beginning at eight o'clock Priest Mark Crabtree had the privilege of baptizing five young members. He was assisted by the teacher, Luther Crabtree. Priesthood meeting was held at ten o'clock, which was followed at one o'clock by Sacramental service. The attendance was good.

Two prophecies were given, and the Spirit of the Master was present so that all enjoyed the meeting. Many of the Saints from McDermott were visitors on this day.

At four o'clock fifteen or more went to the home of Brother William Cox of Otway, who is very ill, where they administered the sacrament. Preaching was held again at eight o'clock in the evening, making a full day in the service of the Master.

This branch has for the past two months been enjoying the sweet influence of God's Holy Spirit, and all feel pleased with the work accomplished. The priesthood is working for the uplift of the branch, and we feel that there is a good work to be done here. Many who do not belong to the church seem interested, and we feel sure that some will be added to the priesthood, as some have been spoken to through prophecy telling them to prepare themselves for the work.

The attendance of all services has been good. Elder F. May, of Dayton, Ohio, will be with us soon, and he always has something to strengthen us.

We hope every branch in the church is moving forward and working for the upbuilding of the kingdom of God here on earth. If we all do what we can the Spirit of God will be with us to bless.

New Members Appreciated at Pensacola

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.—Surely the Lord is blessing his work in this part of his vineyard, still adding to his church precious souls. Three very promising young people were baptized recently, and others expect to join in the near future.

Effie Lee Morgan, one of the girls baptized, will be a high school graduate the coming term. She is very devoted to her church work.

Mrs. Keen, another new member, was very much sought by another church, but through investigation she saw the true light, and even though she is persecuted by being called a follower of the Utah Church, she is rejoicing that she accepted the gospel.

The Saints here were made glad when Mrs. Sexton, one of the girls brought up to love the work, gave her name for baptism. She recently married and has come to see the true value of the work, so obeyed the command of God.

Brother N. L. Booker is now conducting a singing school here, having about twenty-five pupils. We can surely see improvement in the singing and feel thankful to have Brother Booker with us.

Brother and Sister J. Charles May have been visitors with us. Brother May is going to Milton to help with the work there and Sister May remaining in Pensacola to visit with the Saints here.

We have had several outings, one being on the Fourth of July in honor of our visitors, when we motored to "Magnolia Bluff" overlooking Pensacola Bay. There we enjoyed singing and ukelele music by Brother May, bathing, and then supper, after which we returned to church for our singing lesson.

Sister Carl Carroll and Brother and Sister C. J. Clark motored through from Birmingham, Alabama, stopping at Dixonville and McKenzie. From there Sister Carroll came to Pensacola, Brother and Sister Clark going on to Milton.

Brother Rudd has been helping Brother Johnson with the work in Milton and reports very favorable conditions there. Two were baptized lately.

Sacramental service proves a blessing indeed to the Saints here. The Spirit of God is truly felt by his children, encouraging them to press onward.

The outlook for the future is indeed a busy one, and we trust it will prove profitable.

Visitors Welcomed at Alliance

ALLIANCE, OHIO, JULY 16.—On Sunday, June 28, Elder Harry Green and family of Canton were with us, and he was the evening speaker. He brought out some of the things expected of us and the benefits to be derived from being Latter Day Saints, thus showing why we were able to stand. His sermon was both instructive and inspiring, encouraging us to press forward.

Several families of Saints with friends spent the Fourth of July at Lake Milton. A basket dinner and bathing were the main features of enjoyment.

Brethren Green and Sautters of Canton met with us in our sacramental service this month. We enjoyed a very spiritual meeting.

Sunday July 12 Brother David Lewis of Kirtland and his son William Lewis of Canton visited the Alliance Saints at both the morning and evening services. Brother Lewis of Kirtland in speaking to the Saints at the morning social service, stated that he was very happy indeed because of the present policy of the church. The father of Brother David was one of the early converts in Wales. Both of the brothers have had many rich experiences in the church, some of which they related to us, strengthening our faith and helping to build us up, which after all is what we all should be doing. Come again, brethren.

On the evening of July 12 the Akron choir, with other Saints from there, numbering between thirty-five and forty, visited us for the evening service. We doubt if there existed a happier band of people than the Alliance Saints Sunday evening. Smiles were in evidence everywhere, and if there were any tears, they were tears of joy. The choir consisted of sixteen voices and rendered some very beautiful singing, including duets and solos. The Lord has said: "Let my young men and maidens cultivate the gift of music and of song," and how pleased he must be when he sees that gift used in his service.

After listening a half hour to their song service, our hearts were prepared to better receive the wonderful message of Patriarch A. R. Manchester, who came with them. He truly broke unto us the bread of life. The message was suited to both Saint and sinner, and we truly rejoiced in our soul.

These experiences are what make life worth living, and are like springs of refreshing water along life's path. Words fail to express our appreciation. We hope the Akron Saints will feel repaid in coming so far, and will come again.

Pleasant View Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, July 16.—The Sunday school is moving along encouragingly. The Fourth of July picnic was well attended, but very few of the North Platte Sunday school members came. A nice program was rendered, and the young took active part in the program. The older ones helped what they could in singing the national songs and cheering. A good sociable time was had.

Elder C. W. Prettyman was present at the picnic but was unable to speak. The firecrackers shot off by some boys hurt his already painful head so he could not enjoy himself very much. Brother Prettyman came here June 20 to commence preaching. He continued through the week every other night. Some nonmembers were present, and one lady said she enjoyed his good sermons. Two ladies asked if he would preach the evening of July 4 and Sunday, but his health was so poor he could not.

Elder J. F. Payne filled the morning hour for Brother Prettyman and preached a good sermon. Brother Payne will give a talk on the nineteenth on the duties of branch officers and members. We hope a good crowd will be present.

The first Sunday of the month services were put off till the 12th, thinking that more of the Saints might be present. However, on the 12th none came, but we had a good prayer and testimony meeting, and all present felt repaid for coming.

Tulare, California

July 15.—A rally day was held Sunday, June 14, where many Saints of the southern part of the district enjoyed the day with us. During Sunday school a pretty Children's Day program was rendered by the children. We were very happy to be so fortunate to have as our speaker for the day Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. Apostle Ellis preached two appreciated sermons during the day. After the morning service the Saints motored to Mooney Grove, where they enjoyed a picnic lunch. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in social conversation. The usual Religious services were held in the evening, and Apostle Ellis preached again.

The girls' department gave a surprise party Wednesday evening, June 24, at Mooney Grove in honor of four girls; Eleanor and Esther Snively, Neva Douglass, and Anita Miller. Boat riding was enjoyed, and at the close of the evening ice cream was served. Many pretty gifts were presented the girls.

A surprise party was given at the home of Brother and Sister J. T. Smith, jr., Thursday evening, July 9, for Brother and Sister H. C. Snively and children, Gomer, Eleanor, and Esther. The evening was pleasantly spent by the grown-ups in a social way, while the young people enjoyed themselves in outdoor games. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. The girls' department presented each of the girls with a beautiful ivory manicuring set as a token of their appreciation of the good work the girls have done in helping to make the girls' department a success. The Department of Women presented Sister Edna Snively a linen collar and cuffs set.

Lights Unto the World

I have been reading this morning of the wonderful gift, too little appreciated, which the Savior mentions when he says, "I give unto you to be lights of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." (Matthew 5:16, I. V.)

I had the pleasure yesterday of visiting one of Uncle Sam's big lighthouses, Petit Manan Light. Petit Manan, a small island of only a very few acres, lies about four miles off shore. The island is very low, and surrounded for a great distance by shoal water. A long bar, barely submerged, reaches from the island to the shore. This rocky little island marks one of the most dangerous points known to mariners along the entire Atlantic coast.

As we walked along the outer shore of the island, climbing over the rugged, wave-washed rocks, our attention was attracted by the driftwood and wreckage cast up on the shore. Broken spars, which sometime had carried the sails and rigging of some proud vessel; a few planks, evidently part of some vessel's deck; a twisted and bent strip of heavy iron which our imagination pictured as having served in some useful capacity, perhaps out of sight, but nevertheless quite essential in its place. These sights reminded us of the human wreckage thrown up yearly on the shores of life. Drifting bits of wreckage, victims of the storms of life, tossed about by wind and tide, and finally thrown aside as lost!

We climbed to the top of the lofty tower. We inspected the light. We visited with and enjoyed the hospitality of the keepers and their families. We learned a new meaning to the gift of being lights of the world.

The men are stationed at the lighthouse for the one and only purpose of warning mariners of the location of Petit Manan Island, that they may be guided on their course.

It is summertime now, and the sea is beautiful. But I have seen the sea in its angriest passions, lashed by storm and wind. I have seen the sea when the breakers have been frothing white the entire length of Petit Manan Bar. It matters not how dark the night, nor how violent the storm, this light must never fail. One hundred and twenty-three feet above the high-water mark, the big light sends out its gleaming ray.

The light itself is not very big. It is a small rag mantle, burning on the same principle as the familiar kerosene or gasoline mantle lamp. This light burns kerosene, which is fed to the burner under an air pressure of eighty pounds. The light is inclosed in a big lens. There is ample room for one to walk around in the space between the little light and the circular lens. A second lens incloses the inner one. The outer lens revolves on a nicely adjusted mechanism, its revolutions regulating the flashing of the light. Viewed from a given point, the light gleams steadily for twenty-seven seconds, at 27,000 candlepower. Then there is a longer gleam or "flash" for three seconds, at 100,000 candlepower. This light has a rated visibility of seventeen miles.

Stepping inside of the lens, we were made to appreciate the meaning of "concentration." Have you ever held your hand for a few seconds under the sun's concentrated rays, with a reading glass? Imagine, then the enormous powers of concentration in such a powerful lens as this. A covering of white canvas protects it from the direct rays of the sun during the day, but in spite of this the heat was very great, even in the early morning.

Lights of the world. Perhaps not very bright lights; perhaps not very powerful lights; but what a potential power, when concentrated and intensified under the powerful influence of God's Spirit; when controlled and regulated by his law!

The light is reached by a winding climb up one hundred and forty-four steps, inside of the great tower. Most people appreciate a rest when they get to the top. A great many who visit the tower take a rest occasionally on their way up. There are times when the keepers are obliged to make the trip up in a hurry, not once but up and down several times. It might not be amiss to observe that many of our Latter Day Saints might be able to show a better light if we were not so averse to climbing. Climbing is not an easy task.

There is never an unguarded moment at the lighthouse. Twenty-four hours every day some one is "standing watch." Sometimes as the keeper sits through the long watches of the night with his eyes and attention on the light, he notices that the light is not showing its full brightness. Then he hastens to the tower and adjusts the light, or perhaps cleans out a tiny speck of dust that may have clogged the tiny tube. Failure to attend would result promptly in that most dreadful experience of the lighthouse keeper, a "smoke-up."

When the fog rolls in, as it does very often on this Maine coast, so thick that one can scarcely see a boat's length, the fog horn is set in operation. At regular intervals it sends its deep-throated warning out over the sea. Sometimes for days at a time the fog whistle keeps up its warning. There are two, one large and one small, each with its engine and equipment complete, so that in the event of one being disabled, the other can be used. And if both should be disabled at the same time, a bell is provided to be rung.

There are many lighthouses along both coasts and along the Great Lakes. Most of them are smaller than this light. All are placed by our protecting Government that mariners, fishermen, and those who travel on the water may be kept safe, in a sense, of their problems. Let us come to the house of the Lord and I give unto you to be the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."

The world is waiting for the dependable ray of gospel light to be translated into the familiar language of human relationships. May we hasten our climb, adjust our lights, sound our call to the world, and perhaps reduce the number of human wrecks. What if, in the day of judgment, one of the "wrecks" should tell us, "I couldn't see your light, brother"?

The Saints' Herald for August 5, 1925

Cherokee, Iowa

July 28.—We are still striving to let our light shine before the world, that they may know that we are God's servants by our works.

Vacation time is here and some of the Saints are gone from their homes just every Sunday, but attendance and interest in all services are very good.

Brothers W. A. Smith and F. T. Mussell were with us several days last of June and gave some very good instructions in gospel work.

Brother and Sister McWethy, of Independence, Missouri, were with us several days and attended prayer service July 1.

Our sacramental service July 5 was a spiritual treat for the large audience present. The prayers and testimonies were uplifting, and much good instruction was given the Saints.

Brother and Sister Reeder and family took a vacation trip to Missouri Valley and attended services there July 19.

They very much enjoyed two sermons by D. R. Chambers who was formerly a missionary in our district. They visited Brother and Sister Thissung at Missouri Valley, also Brother J. F. Mintun and family at Council Bluffs; drove to Magnolia and called on Brother and Sister Fyraando and Brother and Sister Chambers. They found these old-time workers just as zealous as ever in the Lord's work.

Brother and Sister Vernon Spence visited Sunday schools at Denison and Deloit during the month.

Brother A. R. Crippen and W. W. Reeder held services at Storm Lake July 12. There was a fair attendance and good interest manifested at this service.

The sermon on happiness July 27 was heard very plainly over the radio here, and is reported to have been extra good.

Brother and Sister J. L. Parker of Des Moines met with us at prayer service July 22. They enjoyed, with us, the wonderful spirit present at this meeting.

Our prayer services are all good, and the Saints are awakening to the fact that prayer will help to solve many of their problems. Let us come to the house of the Lord for prayer, and we will receive a blessing indeed.

Sister J. T. Spence has returned from a visit at Moorhead and Council Bluffs, after attending services at both places.

Pastor A. R. Crippen and family expect to spend their vacation in Illinois visiting relatives.

Brother W. A. Smith is holding tent services at Denison, but we have had no reports on the results thus far.

New Westminster, British Columbia

July 24.—The Saints of New Westminster are as busy as usual, for they are still talking church building. We had a special business meeting to decide what kind of a building, also about what size we ought to undertake. It was decided to write to the church architect for a plan, and I can assure you all are enthused, especially the Department of Women, for while we are few in number, we are looking forward to a busy time raising funds to help the brothers get our building started.

We have had our missionary, Brother A. C. Martin, with us for two weeks, and I am sure all who heard him enjoyed his good gospel sermons. It was made interesting one evening by a Jew who came to hear about the Book of Mormon. Brother Martin read the prophecy concerning the blessings returning to Jerusalem, and showed how these things had come to pass since the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. After the sermon the Jewish visitor requested the privilege of asking a few questions, and before he finished talking he had borne a wonderful testimony to the divinity of the Book of Mormon.

Brother Martin is now visiting the Chilliwack Saints, but we are looking forward to hearing him again at our reunion.

Central Park, British Columbia, 4657 Burke Street.
Fargo, North Dakota

July 26.—Brother Ed. Yockum of Mapleton recently underwent a very serious operation at a local hospital. He has now returned home, feeling much improved and thankful to God for the mercy extended to him in his weakened condition.

The Department of Women missed several sessions during the absence of the superintendent, Sister Worth Cousey, who has been on a trip in the western part of the State. On her return she spent several days at the North Dakota reunion. The meetings are now held again each week at the homes of the sisters. Refreshments are served at each meeting, and the collections given are to be used towards purchasing paint for the outside of the church.

Sister Ferne Shackow, president of Religio, attended the reunion at Burlington and brought home a fine report of the district, and one young man was spoken to and advised to prepare for active service in the near future.

Here a few hours ago, Brother F. T. Mussell arrived July 15 and expects to continue. He then came to Farwell to try to revive the work. He then went to Potash, some belonging to the district supervisor of women, on the outside of the church.

Minnesota, visited with the district supervisor of women, on Sunday, July 11 and 12.

June.

July 26, little Frances Marie Jylen of Minot was blessed at the prayer service by our pastor, Elder E. E. Weddle.

Brother Warren MacElwain, wife and mother, stopped off here a few hours Sunday, July 26, on their way to Independence, Missouri, where they expect to look up a location.

Sister L. F. Peterson of Dunseith visited here in June and attended the graduation of her niece, Eleanor Peterson, from the Fargo high school.

Sister Bundy and daughter, Sister Zuelsdorf, of Duluth, Minnesota, visited with Saints here recently. Their fine testimonies assured us they were still in the faith.

Elder Thomas Leitch went to Minneapolis and enjoyed the last Sunday of the reunion with the Minnesota Saints.

Sister Young and son Raymond; Doctor and Sister Etzenhouser for their fine, instructive lectures.

Elder H. A. Koehler delivered a lecture on “Palestine as it is to-day,” at half past seven in the evening.

The Saint Marys meetings were well attended and were a splendid success in every way. Many were heard to remark that the prayer and testimony meeting in the morning was one of the best they have ever been privileged to attend. The Saint Marys Saints fed and cared for the visitors in their homes, and notwithstanding the large attendance everyone was well provided for, which speaks well for the hospitality of the Saint Marys Branch.

The next scheduled two-day meeting is to be held with the Mitchell Branch on August 8 and 9, and all who attend are requested to bring lunches with them to the town to have lunch, and if the weather should be stormy the people can have their lunch in the town hall.

Mallard, Iowa

July 20.—We held our Sunday school picnic June 25, the principal amusement being games of volley-ball and the big dinner at noon. All enjoyed themselves.

Brother and Sister E. L. Edwards of Pomery met with us June 28, and Brother Edwards preached for us at the morning service. Our examination for Sunday school work was given the same day, and the children were given much credit for their good work.

Some of our people enjoyed the radio services July 12, when they succeeded in getting K L D S for the first time. The reception on the new wave length is very good. We heard Brother Martin speak on the 10th and also the half past six program. We are very much pleased to hear from Zion in this manner.

Special Meeting at Saint Marys, Ontario

A large number of the Saints from all over the London District attended the two-day meeting at Saint Marys on July 11 and 12.

Elder H. A. Koehler was the speaker at the opening service at eight o'clock on Saturday evening. His topic was “A systematic method for study”; it was very interesting and instructive and brought forth a number of questions from those in attendance.

The Sunday services opened with a prayer service in charge of Bishop J. L. Burger, Elders H. A. Koehler, David Smith, and D. H. Withrow. This was a very spiritual meeting; a gift of prophecy through Elder G. C. Tomlinson, jr., gave encouragement, counsel, and advice to the young people of the district, and one young man was spoken to and advised to prepare for active service in the near future.

The educational service at eleven o'clock was in charge of Elder G. C. Tomlinson, jr., the district president, and splendid addresses were delivered by Sister H. A. Koehler, the district supervisor of women, on “The three phases of religious life,” and by Clarence Duensing, superintendent of Sunday schools for the district, on “The best methods to be employed in teaching.”

Bishop J. L. Burger was the speaker at three o'clock, using as a subject “Character building,” and Elder H. A. Koehler delivered a lecture on “Palestine as it is to-day,” at half past seven in the evening.

The Saint Marys meetings were well attended and were a splendid success in every way. Many were heard to remark that the prayer and testimony meeting in the morning was one of the best they have ever been privileged to attend. The Saint Marys Saints fed and cared for the visitors in their homes, and notwithstanding the large attendance everyone was well provided for, which speaks well for the hospitality of the Saint Marys Branch.

The next scheduled two-day meeting is to be held with the Mitchell Branch on August 8 and 9, and all who attend are requested to bring lunches with them to the town to have lunch, and if the weather should be stormy the people can have their lunch in the town hall.

History of the Work at Farwell

FARWELL, MICHIGAN, July 12.—A few years ago a live branch existed here and regular services were held, but about 1918 the work began gradually to go down, and finally, the latter part of 1923, the church doors were closed.

In June, 1924, Brother G. C. Tomlinson, sr., of Saint Marys, Ontario, who was a missionary to Central Michigan District, came to this town and held a series of meetings. He then came to Farwell to try to revive the work. Only a few attended at first, but the Lord spoke to them through Brother Tomlinson in the gift of tongues and interpretation, admonishing them to be faithful and giving them encouragement. Two were called to the priesthood, Brother R. Burt McGuire to the office of priest, and Brother John Armstrong to the office of teacher. These new officers have helped very much to carry on the work. We now have an elder, three priests, one teacher, and one deacon.

New interest was aroused, some who were discouraged took new courage, and throughout the year a brighter outlook continued. During Brother Tomlinson’s stay the Sunday school was revived and has been an active factor with an enrollment of about forty-five.

In May, 1925, Elder Tomlinson returned to hold another series of meetings, which were well attended considering the conditions that existed. It was a busy time, both on farms and in town. At the close of the meetings four worthy candidates offered themselves for baptism. They were: Brother and Sister George Orr and Sisters Waddington and Frizzel, the result of whose baptisms only eternity can tell. They all live in a group of beautiful children, some belonging to the Sunday school.

The Department of Women has also taken up its work

and promises to be an active factor in the future if it continues as well as it has begun.

There are others interested, and some have expressed a desire to obey, but are learning more of the plan; so we feel that if faithful the time will come when our church will not accommodate our numbers. We need the prayers of God's people that we may be able to build up our branch here and thus help to build our part in the Zion that will prepare to meet her God.

Nine Baptized in Central Illinois

Central Illinois district reunion was held in a beautiful grove on the Sangamon River near Springfield, July 10 to 19. This was the first reunion in the district for four years, and in every way it was a great success.

We were most fortunate in obtaining Patriarch W. A. McDowell, President Floyd McDowell, and Apostle John F. Garver. President Briggs of Graeieland College was also present for two days. We believe that the sermons by these men, together with the lessons on social problems by Brother Floyd McDowell and the spiritual prayer meetings that were held each morning, have brought us nearer the redemption of Zion. Indeed, our speakers admitted that it was the best reunion they had attended this season.

We were baptized. Seven of them were our splendid young people, together with two older brothers from the Beardsdale Branch.

The young folks were not forgotten. Thursday was their day, and they enjoyed a hike and picnic supper in the woods. There were also games each afternoon and evening. Brother William Vanhouser, or "Uncle Bill," as he is better known, furnished provisions for a watermelon feast and to stay winner root. Brother Floyd McDowell with his "big brotherliness" and Brother Garver with his fun, won the young folks completely.

There were no "kickers." Everyone had a good time, and before the close of the reunion voted to have another one next year. Already some plans have been made, and we believe the reunion will become a permanent feature of our district.

Spearfish, South Dakota

July 21.—We of the Spearfish Branch are carrying on as best we can, without very much variation. Some things have happened to make us sad, some things to bring us joy. We are holding our regular meetings—Sunday school and preaching services, and are at the present time devoting Sunday evenings to the study of the Doctrine and Covenants. We are also having regular Wednesday evening prayer meetings.

In the recent past we have suffered the loss of one of our best families, that of Brother J. C. Mabbott. This estimable family has been one of the pillars of this branch since the inception of the work here, and to lose them is like taking part of the foundation of a building away. Not only did we of the branch love them, but they were general favorites in the community. We miss them very much, but wish them goodspeed and all the blessings our heavenly Father may see fit to bestow upon them. These dear people left us for the land of Zion two or three weeks ago, so our loss will help to build up that favored place.

On last Sunday, July 19, we had the pleasure of a visit from Brother and Sister Almer Jordison, of Coalville, Iowa. We are glad to have them worship with us. Brother and Sister Jordison had to leave in the afternoon of the same day, but Brother and Sister Mabott were induced to stay over a day or so and go fishing for trout. We enjoyed their company very much.

The different churches of the town conceived the idea of putting into the community house, the tourist headquarters, a church directory, and kindly invited us to have a part in it. We were glad to make use of this avenue of publicity, inviting tourists to worship with us.

Brother Mabott's removal left us without a Sunday school superintendent, a branch teacher, and a publicity agent. This made it necessary for us to reorganize in a way. Brother Cohrt was elected Sunday school superintendent, Sister Fetch, assistant superintendent, and A. O. Plumb publicity agent, but the office of teacher in the branch is left vacant. We may have to cripple along as we are for a while, but we have full confidence in the Father of all, and believe he will help us, and also raise up others to carry on his own work. So we go forward in faith, praying for the success of his cause and the redemption of Zion.
to see a letter from some who were once numbered with us. Speak up and let us know where you are; and if perchance you have changed your name, tell us how it happened.

Your brother, WILL R. ADAMS.

Nauvoo, Illinois

July 27.—The sacramental service held the first Sunday in the month was a spiritual feast. Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths delivered a message to Brother Berve, Brother Lewis, and to the young people, telling them they were to be as beacon lights among their associates, and admonished the branch to be faithful and united and in due time Nauvoo would be a stake.

The Sunday school picnic was held on the Fourth of July in the grove opposite the Mansion House. A basket dinner was served at noon, games and contests were entered into, and then all donned bathing suits and cooled off in the river. A treat of ice cream and cake was served, and towards evening the group reluctantly parted, declaring they were going to meet together oftener.

On July 12 the evening service was dispensed with, that all might attend the convention of the Nauvoo Township Sunday School Association, which was held at the Methodist church. Three of our members were on the program: Brother Berve gave a talk on the “Relation between teachers and pupils”; Sister Griffiths a paper on “Aims and ideals of the primary department”; and Sister Lee sang, “In the garden of our God,” composed by Brother Doty. The election of officers for the coming year resulted in Sister Lee being chosen president.

Brother Forest Roberts and bride of Lamoni have been visiting at the Mansion House and selling rugs made by the Graceland students.

Brother and Sister Newcomb of Boston are visiting Brother Newcomb’s sister, Clara M. Lewis. We are hoping they can be persuaded to make Nauvoo their permanent home.

Sister Emma Burton and daughter Addie Matthews arrived early to attend the reunion and visit relatives and friends. Sister Burton was taken seriously sick the day after she arrived but is slowly improving.

Brother Henderson was called to California, owing to the serious illness of his father.

The Rock Creek Saints held a bazaar on their church lawn last week, and a large number were present. The Fort Madison Band assisted with their music, and the Nauvoo Saints contributed several numbers for the program.

Repair Church—Five Baptisms

FANNING, KANSAS.—The weekly services, as well as mid-week prayer services, have been maintained in spite of the very hot weather. In June the branch president gave a sermon to the children, and they furnished the music. The service as a whole was enjoyed. Brother Hedrick has decided to have a service for the children once a month.

The semi-yearly business meeting was held the last Wednesday night in June. Among other business it was decided to make some necessary repairs on the church soon.

Five dear children were baptized July 5 at half past nine and were confirmed at the eleven o’clock sacramental service by Brothers Twombly, Hedrick, Nesser, and Tilden.

Brother C. E. Harpe, of Lamoni, Iowa, was with us July 12 and preached morning and evening. He remained for the week and spoke every evening, encouraging and strengthening those who were permitted to attend.

At Belch recently there had been presentation slides of the work, ruins, and customs of ancient America. They were very instructive.

Volley ball is played each Friday evening on the church lawn. Sister Hedrick’s class served refreshments one evening to make up their Christmas offering.

Independence

Stone Church

Saturday evening the sisters who are members of the W. C. T. U. gave a splendid program before the pictures were put on at the Campus. Elder B. J. Scott made a striking comparison between conditions in Independence when the town had a population of 4,000 with four saloons and to-day with a population around 14,000 and no saloons. He referred to some of the local business men of the city who had been opposed to prohibition but, after it was adopted and they had seen the blessing it was to the town, had now become enthusiastic supporters of prohibition.

“Give us room wherein to dwell?” is the cry of the Sunday school of the Stone Church. Earnest Sunday school workers meet monthly at a quarter after eight o’clock to discuss problems of the school. Where to find room for some of the classes is one of the many problems they have to solve.

The sacramental service at eleven o’clock was a joyous occasion for the nine hundred present in the upper auditorium. The sacrament was also administered in the lower auditorium, out in the dining hall, and over at the Institute Building to the young people of various ages.

The Saints in Independence love to go to church. The early Sunday morning prayer services have good “customers,” young and old to patronize them. Then there is Sunday school, followed by the preaching service. At half past two another prayer service and in the evening preaching service.

It must be a pleasing sight to the Lord to see in this day of Sabbath desecration so many of his people assembling on the Sabbath Day to honor the Lord and to honor the Lord’s Day.

Groups 14, 15, and 16 are having Elder R. W. Farrell preach for them on Brother E. G. Chappelow’s lawn, on the South Side this week.

Enoch Hill is having J. F. Martin preach on the church lawn this week.

The evening service held on the Campus was truly a fitting conclusion for a beautiful Sabbath Day. A fairly large crowd gathered early. The band played from half past seven to eight o’clock and, whether because of the beauties of the evening or some other cause, it seemed they did unusually well. They seemed to express the peaceful spirit that settled over the waiting crowd as the evening came on. The opening hymn, “Abide with me,” and the invocation by Brother N. Carmichael were both in keeping with that spirit. Special numbers were furnished by quartets, and a vocal solo was sung by Miss Margaret Gard.

The discourse of the evening was by Evangelist John F. Martin, his subject being, “The mission of Jesus.” The first part of the sermon Brother Martin handled in his “story-telling way” that has such an appeal to his audiences everywhere. The latter half was of a more doctrinal nature and, of course, appealed even more strongly to some, and, likewise, less to others. Altogether it was a forceful sermon and well delivered. The benediction was by Pastor C. Ed. Miller.

The Campus Committee, through the auspices of the Independence Chamber of Commerce, has issued letters of invitation to other churches, fraternal organizations, and private parties for the evening of November 1. The committee feels that inasmuch as they have spent a large amount of money on equipment and repairs, that indirectly much of the expended money will be refunded by this arrangement.

A drive was instituted Monday, July 27, by teams from the Chamber of Commerce, to collect funds for the erection of a shelter house on the Campus. This building is to be erected for tourists and is to cost approximately $1,000.

Two hundred signs directing tourists to the camp have been made and are ready for distribution along the highways, according to Howard W. Harder, chairman of the Campus Committee.

T. W. Williams, who has been in Independence since early

The Y. K. T. Class of the Stone Church, taught by Mrs. M. T. Williams, was entertained Tuesday night, July 28, by Mrs. R. A. Harder and Miss Lillian Williams at the home of Mrs. Harder. The party took the form of a vacation trip. Railroad and steamship tickets were issued to the guests, with stopovers in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Kirtland, Buffalo, and Niagara Falls. A picnic lunch was served on the make-believe lawn at Kirtland Temple.

The marriage of Glenn Maxwell and Hester David took place at the home of the groom's parents, 903 South Delaware, Friday evening, July 31, at eight o'clock. Elder C. E. Blodgett, grandfather of the bride, performed the ceremony. Only members of the two immediate families were present. The young couple will make their home in Oblong, Illinois, after August 10. Brother Maxwell is of the Curtis family, and Sister David is a granddaughter of Elder C. E. Blodgett. Both have large numbers of friends in the congregation of the Second Church.

The regular monthly meeting of the Department of Women will be held in the basement of the Stone Church Friday, August 7, at 2.30 p.m. Mrs. Nellie Davis will speak on the subject, "The American home." Some special musical numbers will be given. After this meeting, at four o'clock, there will be a business meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Second Church

Young people's prayer meeting at eight o'clock opened the day's services.

Sunday school at half past nine reports an attendance of 274, and the interest is intense in many of the classes.

Sacramental services at eleven o'clock were spiritual and satisfying, though the number of communicants was not up to normal.

Elder A. K. Dillee delivered the sermon at seven o'clock in the evening, which proved of such interest to the small number present as to call for a repetition of a treatment of this subject by Brother Dillee in the near future at the Sunday morning service.

An all-day meeting has been arranged for next Sunday, August 9, at the suburban home of Brother P. A. Sherman, Magnolia Manor, just a short distance east of Rock's Flower Gardens. Transportation will be given those who wish to attend, leaving at the following hours from the church on Delaware Street and South Avenue: 7.45, 8.00, 9.00, 9.15, 10.00, 10.45, 1.45, and 2.00 o'clock. If you wish further information, get in communication with the committee, W. A. Welton, A. K. Dillee, A. C. Martin. All are taking dinner baskets, and lunch will be eaten on the grounds. Those who wish to send their lunches on the lunch truck will have them at the church Sunday morning by ten o'clock. Special services are provided for the youth and children.

Walnut Park

The usual large congregation gathered for the eleven o'clock sacramental service, and every minute was occupied until past the closing hour. The pastor's opening talk, in which he directed his hearers' minds to the sublime thought of being there in the Master's presence and earnestly exhorted them to prepare to receive all they were entitled to as Saints, touched the hearts of the audience and carried through the service. Another admonition also was given by the Spirit, in kindly warning and counsel.

A recent marriage in this district was that of Sanford Downs and Ione Turner.

The group of Saints in the Cooper-Short Addition and on King's Highway are now organized as Group 41, this making the fourth group in District Three.

The planter's 28 are taught out in large numbers at their week-day meetings at Sister Orlando Nace's home, where they make quilts and are taught church history by Mrs. John Schwab. The children are allowed to come also, and are cared for on the lawn by Sister Delta Nace.

Bishop A. Carmichael came out to the church one evening recently and gave the Saints a talk along financial lines. Plans are being made to have a class organized in Religio, where a competent teacher will continue regular lessons on this subject.

Enoch Hill

Sacramental service was observed on the Hill Sunday, a good crowd attending.

Patriarch J. F. Martin opened a series of meetings on the lawn Monday evening and will continue through the week. Everyone is urged to attend.

Sunday evening of last week the young people of Enoch Hill, Charles Warren in charge, and met and organized an athletic association. Four captains were chosen for the volley ball league, and the players were divided into four teams. Dusts of fifty cents a month each will be collected for expenses.

Lamoni Stake

July 27.—An all-day meeting yesterday, which is something unusual in Lamoni, was so successful that it was voted to hold another one this fall. The regular Sunday school session was held at nine o'clock.

A change in the order of meeting for the Sunday school was started last Sunday; or rather it was a revival of the old way of meeting. The children all meet in the auditorium for opening exercises, including some special numbers each week; then all but the intermediates and seniors march down to separate rooms in the basement for study hour. For some time they have been meeting in their separate places at the opening hour. The inspiration of the young has awakened the old-time enthusiasm of the older ones, and the plan is enjoyed equally by the younger departments. Last Sunday the special numbers were by the orchestra and a solo by Mavis Wells; yesterday a song by the kindergarten children and a number by the orchestra.

At the eleven o'clock service to-day Brother C. B. Woodstock spoke from the text, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." He laid down two fundamental principles necessary in the redemption of Zion, viz., the possession of an abiding faith, a firm, positive concept of God based on both mental and spiritual knowledge; and the spirit of consecration. The discourse was splendid, rang with sincerity from start to finish, and exemplified the power of that Spirit of which he taught. The choir, led by E. A. Martin, furnished music throughout.

One of the most successful parts of the day's program was the basket dinner, served cafeteria style from long tables in the church park, about one hundred fifty participating in it. The arrangements for this were in charge of Sister Lydia Wight, assisted by others from the Department of Women.

The afternoon was given over to a sacred concert by the Lamoni Band under the direction of Brother J. H. Anthony; a community sing led by Brother David Dowker; and an impromptu solo by Job Negeim, with Thelma Lane at the piano.

A baptismal service followed this, at which the following children were immersed: Doreen Hougas, Jessie Rov, and Nina Baker.

At the eight o'clock hour, Bishop A. B. Phillips preached his initial sermon since becoming bishop of the stake. He selected the basis of his sermon from the story of the prodigal son—the words, "And when he came to himself," following with a sermon on works, which was full of good advice for all. Alene Brackenbury Walden was soloist at this service.

The next all-day meeting is planned for some time in September.

A farewell surprise party was tendered Brother Peter Mueses on the evening of July 17 by the members of the Northwest Group. Games and contests occupied the early part of the evening, after which a program in charge of Brother W. E. Prall was given. Brother Prall, in introducing the first speaker, compared the missionary periods of 1830 to 1844 and 1860 to the present day, to show that the spirit of consecration and sacrifice existed in both ages.

Bishop A. J. Yarrington spoke of the work of Brother Muceus from a missionary's standpoint. Brother Muceus from a missionary's standpoint. Sister Stebbins spoke of the lot of the missionary's family. Sister Stebbins having lived for forty-five years in the same group, has been closely associated with many missionary families, especially with the children in her long service in the Sunday school, and spoke from this intimate knowledge. To these speeches Brother Muceus very feelingly responded.

Brother Muceus from a missionary's standpoint. Sister Clara B. Prall and her two children, Doreen Hougas and Jessie Rew, were also in attendance.

Brother Muceus has been in America but a year since a former two-year stay in his native land as a representative of the church.

The Hiteman Sunday school enjoyed a picnic at Evan Beach last Wednesday, participated in by over a hundred people. The picnic dinner, baseball and other games, and the splendid swimming furnished amusement.

Stake President W. E. Prall and family, and his counselor, D. E. Dowker, of Lamoni were also in attendance.

August 3.—A special priesthood prayer meeting held yesterday morning at eight o'clock was well attended and a very spiritual time enjoyed. The special theme was the coming reunion.

At the Sunday school hour the special numbers were a selection by the orchestra and reading by Kenneth Graham. A sacramental service followed at which one child was blessed, Barbara Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom France, by Oscar Anderson and C. B. Woodstock.

Nina Baker was confirmed, having been baptized a week previous. This also by Elders Anderson and Woodstock. The other two children, Denise Houghas and Jessie Row, were confirmed at the Wednesday morning service.

The speaker Sunday evening was Eldred David Dowker.

The reunion bee last Monday was better attended than any previously, eighty men and boys responding. They worked hard all day, cleaning and putting the grounds in order, with the result that they are in the best shape they have ever been for the coming reunion. The ladies of the Women's Department prepared dinner for the hungry men, which was not a small part of the day's accomplishments. Another crowd met yesterday and set up the service tents and to-morrow seats will be hauled so that everything will be ready for the opening service Wednesday morning.

Elder L. G. Holloway recently held a two-week series of meetings in Chariton. He also held a few services at Lacona, this being the latest of his services in Norway. He will be gone two years. Brother Muceus has been in America but a year since a former two-year stay in his native land as a representative of the church.

Hubert Case Happy in the North

My trip to the North has been a great relief from the long siege in the South for nearly twenty-five years. Minnesota, with her ten thousand lakes, her forests of pine, birch and other trees, her wonderful fields of green wheat, oats, and corn, her wonderful gardens, cool nights, and delightful summers, brings thousands of tourists from all over the country.

Our reunion in this city was a spiritual feast to all who came. We had Brothers J. F. Garver and D. T. Williams, of the Twelve; Holloway, Shakespeare, and myself, of the Seventy; a number of the local force of the ministry; and Sister Hildred of the field workers' force, who did much good and is loved by all the Saints.

Following the reunion, a few of the number visiting the reunion went to Balsam Lake to visit the Elvin and Parks home, and to Brother Fligg's residence, which he regarded as very successful. Though there were no immediate baptisms resulting, a number are investigating.

The writer went to Duluth and Two Harbors for a week, to enjoy the cool weather on the Great Lake and assist the Saints at those places. That trip was as much enjoyed as the reunion here, so far as the writer is concerned. Two were baptized on my way up there—Brother Alma Smith and his sister, Mrs. Donald Bishop, at Sandstone. Two of the Bishop children were blessed, and we left them rejoicing in the gospel. Two Harbors and Duluth surely offer a great field for missionary work.

Since Brother C. A. Kress has gone to Independence to live, these people in the Twin Cities were left without a pastor, and at the advice of the brethren of the Twelve the writer accepted the place for a short time. I am to remain during the summer. I love the North and am glad to work with such a band of noble people.

The spirit of consecration is upon the people of the church so far as I have traveled since the General Conference, as I never saw it before. Surely the set time to favor Zion has come. May the God of Israel move the cause of truth onward to victory under its stalwart leader and his loyal associates.

Your coworker,

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA. HUBERT CASE.

Kansas City Stake

Chelsea Church

July 26 was home-coming day for this church, and the response from the former members of the congregation was gratifying. From the old timers was many a reminiscence that had back to the early days. Conditions and hopes ran high, and while there were discouraging experiences endured they gave way to more progressive and uplifting attainment, advancing from a mere handful in numbers to a good-sized congregation and from a mediocre perception of church policy to a fuller understanding of God's law and its requirements. Brother Daniel Hough, one of the pioneers of the work in this place, was the exponent at the morning hour, relating how he labored to keep the camp fires blazing during the uncertain early period of the congregation's existence, and incidently his disappointment in some who would "steady the ark." Sister Lela Eskridge favored them with a solo, "Open the gates of the temple," and Wilmot Palmer a cornet solo. At three o'clock an inspiring experience meeting; then a chat fete on the lawn at half past four, where they talked of old times and renewed friendships. At eight o'clock a musical was given under the direction of Brother E. C. Harrington by musicians from Independence, Missouri, and was excellent. All of the meetings of the day were well attended.

Thursday night, Sisters C. D. Jellings, and Vera Largent entertained in honor of Brother Fligg and Edyth Fowler as respective league managers. One feature in these leagues is the outdoor night playing, each team playing one game a week on artificially lighted courts. Each of the churches has utilized its lawn space to provide a playground.

Quindaro Church

Stake Missionary W. I. Fligg is holding services on the church lawn with good crowds in attendance and splendid interest upon the part of all, of whom many are neighbors. Brother Fligg held meetings in Saint Joseph, Missouri, from July 12 to 19, but on account of the heat there was but little interest and probably little accomplished. He is slated to hold lawn meetings in and around Independence during August.

Argentine Church

Elder Cyril E. Wight was the speaker for the evening hour, presenting a lesson based on the parable of the talents. While this parable gave much food for thought, his chief work was in the life he lived, teaching them how to develop the talents they were endowed with. We, as raw material, can become the finished product only by close observance of the life he lived.
First Chicago Branch

Due to the fact that a new reporter is on the job, with vacations and many other things, it may appear to our readers, judging from the amount of news published, that the First Chicago Branch is not existing. But we are very glad to report that all is well and very much alive at "First Chicago."

Our Sunday school is active and gave a very interesting program on Children's Day, which was enjoyed by all present. July Fourth was a beautiful day, and a picnic had been planned by Religio and Sunday school combined. Those who wished to go met at the church, where a large auto truck waited to convey them to and from the grounds. A good time was had by all, with plenty of wholesome fun, eats, and ice cream. The picnic was held on the district reunion grounds at Elmhurst.

Some of the speakers of the past few weeks have been Elders Philemon Pement, L. V. Butterworth, and Roy Cheville. Gomer T. Griffiths also visited us on sacrament morning. A portion of the time was given him to speak to us. His fatherly ways and instructions were surely appreciated. Sacrament was served, and a good spirit was present.

Our new city missionary, Brother F. B. Almond, has come to labor among us, and we heartily welcome him to our city. His presence has already inspired us to wish to do greater works. His initial sermon was delivered Sunday, July 5. If as a people we would follow the instructions given at that time, we would soon have Zion in our midst. We hope he will want to stay with us.

We have all been very sad to hear of the illness of our Brother Clarence Newman, who has been in a very serious condition. But we are glad to report that he is much improved, he says owing to the faith and prayers of the Saints in his behalf.

Brother and Sister Glen Fairbanks and family of Independence have been visitors in our little branch recently.

Our Sister Marie O'Rielly was united in marriage on June 27 to Mr. A. B. Swanson. The young couple will make their home at 930 West Keystone Avenue, Chicago. Their many friends wish them success on their new venture.

Gallands Grove Conference and Activities

MALLARD, IOWA, July 21.—After the close of the April conference, having been assigned to this district for another year, we began to think of getting out and trying to help carry forth the work allotted, and our first effort was with the Saints at Dow City, where we endeavored to give them a resume of the work of the conference, as well as with the membership at Denison and Deloit. At each of these places the efforts were well received, and in the main the Saints were encouraged and seemed glad to note the prospect for the advancement of the work.

We then visited with the Gallands Grove Branch for a week, endeavoring to strengthen and encourage them, and here too our work seemed to be appreciated, although it was corn-planting time, a busy season. We felt that it was wise not to prolong our stay, and hope to return when conditions are more favorable.

Our next stop was with the Saints at Coalville, where we spent a Sunday in company with our Bishop's agent, Brother E. I. Edwards, whose activity is worthy of mention. He is always on the go in the interests of the work, being out somewhere every Sunday trying to encourage the Saints and to stress his department of the work, and it has the effect of bringing results, as his reports show.

Our district conference was the next point of service. It was held with the Cherokee Branch the first part of June, and the membership responded in a large measure, there being nearly a hundred present from other parts of the district. We were disappointed in not being able to get any of the leading representatives with us, yet those attending seemed glad of the opportunity and partook to a goodly degree of the spirit manifested. One incident we think is worthy of mention. Some time ago a young lady whose husband was a member united with the church, and it was to the dismay of her parents, who felt that the family had been disgraced. At this conference her husband was to be ordained to the priesthood, and the parents had been invited to attend. They were present for the service on the Sabbath, when a goodly degree of the Spirit was felt, and the father (who is a retired minister) was the first to arise and speak when the time for testimonies was given and expressed himself as being well pleased with what had occurred, and stated he could readily assent to all that had been done. At the close of the afternoon session, they likewise expressed themselves as having enjoyed the day and the spirit prevailing.

Those occupying as speakers were Brethren M. Traxler, C. Butterworth, W. A. Smith, and the writer, and all felt the kindling influence of the Spirit, giving light and liberty, notwithstanding the weather was hot and dry. The time and place for convening of the next conference were left for the officers to choose.

After conference Brother Smith and the writer remained for a week and held forth with the branch, Brother Smith then leaving and going over into Nebraska to look after some needed matters, but later returned and was permitted to baptize four.

We then called upon the Saints who live at Storm Lake, but found that owing to some not being at home it would not be wise to try to hold meetings. This is the place we hope by another year it will be possible to hold one of the best reunions, as the place is ideal and can be easily reached, and we feel good can be accomplished.

Our next step was with the Auburn Branch, where we were for two Sundays, but as in other places it was the busy season and not an opportune time for a series of meetings.

We called on the group of Saints at Sac City and found Brother Smith working with them for a few evenings ere he started to operate the tent for this season. Then we went to the branch at Coalville for the following Sunday and the two evenings following, with fair interest and attendance.

From there we came to Mallard, where we are at present sojourning, and have endeavored to do what our hands find to do in various ways, and expect next Sunday to see some of the benefits of the visiting we have had this past week.

We were indeed glad to hear the reports as well as the echoes from the convention held at Lamoni, and also to note the "motto" adopted, as it brought to mind an experience we had in Lincoln, Nebraska, while sojourning there two years ago. One Saturday morning while in the quietude of my room, making preparation for the Sunday services and especially the morning service at which we were intending to speak on Zion, and after making our outline and arranging the same, the following thoughts were presented to us we jotted them down and have made use of the at times since:

Sail on, oh, ship of Zion; sail on, oh, noble barge; Thy captain is our Master, her crew the Saints of God. They think not of disaster, assured they'll win the day; Protection thou hast promised them, and courage for their day.

So with our King for captain, and Zion for our goal, We'll sail into the harbor, nor wreck upon the shoal.

We feel that it is not out of harmony with the onward thought of the day, and we sincerely trust that our course from now on will be Zionward, and that an awakening will be had all along the line, "Till every foe is vanquished, and Christ is Lord indeed."

Radio Flashes

Savannah, Missouri.—I always tune in K L D S every time you broadcast, for the reason that I like your sermons better than any on the air. Your quartets are fine; would rather listen to them than the finest band.—M. J. Frost.

Blythedale, Missouri.—We very much enjoyed hearing our station yesterday morning. It came in loud and clear, the best we have ever heard it.—Mrs. F. J. Sharp.

Berriton, Kansas.—The program you put on last evening was unusually good. We think that type of program is appreciated much more than jazz.—Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Hixon.

Short Story Contest

For "Autumn Leaves"

The social ideals of the church contain many valuable story ideals. And sometimes a short story has done more good than a sermon. With this thought in mind, Autumn Leaves is searching for a good story—the best short story on Zion it is possible to find.

Everybody can take part in this contest. You do not have to be an experienced writer to compete. All you have to do is to tell in a short story your most interesting idea about Zion. The rules of the contest are printed below.

Read them. Then start right away on your story. The prize winners will be published in Autumn Leaves.

HERE ARE THE RULES

1. The story must be centered around the social ideals of the church.

2. You may use any number of words over 1,500 and up to 5,000.

3. Sign your story with a pseudonym; and inclose with your manuscript a sealed envelope containing your name and address, the title of your story, and the pseudonym.

4. All manuscripts must be mailed before October 31, 1925.

II. The Pastoral or Zionitic Program

Peter preached a great missionary discourse at Pentecost, under the power of the Spirit which swept into the church three thousand converts. After Pentecost, what? After conversion, what? Shall we say to the baptized person, Here is your certificate of baptism, signed and recorded; now run along, it will fully protect you in the day of judgment? No. Following missionary enterprises, immediately enters our pastoral enterprise, which involves the whole Zionitic program. The converted people are to be gathered together, administered to, educated, taught to live and work together in branches, districts, stakes, and finally Zion herself.

The second great commandment was, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Upon it hangs all our pastoral program. Brother McDowell suggested to the Young People’s Convention this slogan, "This year we sail Zionward, which is our course." The church was less than one year old when one word with four letters, "Zion," became a very important word in her vocabulary. The church was organized April 6, 1830. In September of that year the first mission was appointed. Four young men started west, presumably to preach the gospel to the Indians. As a matter of fact, they had a bigger and grander mission of which they did not know but which developed later. They traveled westward, paused at Kirtland, where they established the work in a marvelous way, and where it is yet clustered about the temple building at that place. They then pressed on still westward, traveling almost all the way on foot in the wintertime—fifteen hundred miles, at times standing in the snow as they ate frozen food from their knapsacks. Every night they might have said, "This day we traveled westward, which is our course." And had they known, they might have added, "This day we traveled Zionward, which is our course," for eventually, they not knowing the full importance of their journey, the Lord brought them to Independence, Missouri, and later said, "Here shall Zion be established, and this is the place for the building of my temple."

From that day to this, with interruptions, sometimes with backslidings and recessions, the course of the church has been Zionward. It is true the Saints were driven out and interrupted for a time, but during the darkest day the Lord said to them, "Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion."—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 4.

Zion was not to be moved, not to Utah or any other place. Her children were to return. That promise to a certain extent has definitely been fulfilled. The children and grandchildren of those who were driven out, including the children and grandchildren of the Prophet Joseph Smith and his associates, have returned to Independence, until we have to-day between four and five thousand resident Saints where some years ago not even one family would have been tolerated. The return is an established fact. We have the physical basis of the gathering. To establish the spiritual conditions of Zion is now our problem. Zion is as sure as God is. He has said, "Zion shall not be removed out of her place, ... Zion shall be established." I know of no promise so sure and definite as the promise of God. Will you this year sail Zionward?

An important part of our program then is pastoral, or Zionitic—the gathering of the Saints, their education and complete amalgamation as one body in Zion, supported by stakes, districts, and branches. In this work we need pastors, men who are willing to take the pains to be pastors. And anyone who acts as pastor, even over a small body, is likely to have actual pain, perhaps pain of body when weary and distressed; pain of mind and heart when his best efforts meet only adverse criticism and his purest motives are misconstrued; pain of mind when things go wrong and he cannot effect reconciliation or accomplish the work that is in his heart to do. But Jesus, you remember, took the pains of Gethsemane for us, and he said the good shepherd gives his life for the flock. In a large way there are many engaged in pastoral work. Some through Religion, some through the Sunday school, acting as shepherds of children; some in the home, caring for the lambs immediately intrusted to their care; and some in the priesthood as high priests, elders, priests, teachers, deacons. Upon the latter there rests perhaps a more definite and obvious responsibility.

One of the apostles relates that when he was baptized his mother said to him, "Son, hitherto I have been responsible to God for you, but to-day you become responsible for yourself." Later on when he was ordained the same mother said, "Son, hitherto you have been responsible to God for yourself, but now you are responsible for the people." Our pastoral work, then, in the Zion movement is a very important part of our church program.

Church of Christ Still Misunderstand

One of the senior editors of the HERALD wrote a short article for the issue of July 1, under the heading, "Interchange of membership with Church of Christ." The reason for its production lay in the fact that Zion's Advocate had come to the public with a statement which clearly implied their belief that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Church of Christ had mutually accepted certain stated terms as to an interchange of membership, etc., and that this implication was misleading, as the church in the General Conference of 1919 had refused to adopt the report of the committee from which Zion's Advocate had drawn her conclusions. It would seem clear that this committee report to the General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ and the action of the conference upon it was the question under consideration.

In order to be perfectly fair, this editor quoted the entire Advocate article, omitting only the heading, "Church of Christ recognized," this heading establishing clearly the conviction of its writer and the item he desired to impress. The HERALD editor attempted nothing more than an examination of the matter presented as evidence by the Advocate writer, and a terse reply to his conclusions. The whole question of relationship was not under consideration by the Advocate, and there existed no reason for the HERALD going outside the question raised to canvass this relationship.

Comes now the Advocate, dated July 15, 1925, and complains that the HERALD writer did not go far enough, and quotes language used by the HERALD editor which refers to the action of the General Conference of 1919 upon the report of the committee composed of members of the Church of Christ and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, which is to the effect that there are vital facts omitted without which the Advocate article cannot lead to a correct conclusion, and avers that this language applies also to the HERALD article.

We note the writer thus admits the error of the former Advocate article, using his own language:

"The "misunderstanding," if such exists, is not yet corrected, because Brother Elbert has not gone far enough; he "omits other vital facts without which (his) editorial cannot lead to a correct conclusion." It is true, as Brother Elbert states, that the particular report in question was only "received" by the conference of 1919. He should have explained, however, that this report was based upon the action of a previous conference. We refer to the articles of agreement between the two churches which were "presented and adopted" by the General Conference of 1918, with only one dissenting vote.

So the HERALD readers may now clearly understand that the author of the Advocate article does now see the virtue of the HERALD's contention of July 1. But the controversialist seeks cover by asserting that the HERALD is likewise guilty, which charge we wish to examine.

He further states:

"From that document we quote:

"7. Agreed, that we believe that there are individuals in the different factions who hold the priesthood."

"24. Agreed, that there is the Church of Christ and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints consist of members who have been baptized by men holding authority, conferred by ordination under the hands of the servants of God, called during the ministry of Joseph Smith, who have remained true to the original faith of the church, organized April 6, 1830, and, whereas, both organizations stand for and maintain the same fundamental doctrine and practice, and have the same purpose and ideal in their church government and work; therefore, be it mutually agreed, that each recognize the standing of the other as representing Christ, the Master, and the priesthood of each as equally binding before God, when done in accordance with the law."

The above articles are two of a list of twenty-four articles which were adopted by the General Conferences of both churches in 1918. The object of these articles is set forth in the closing paragraph that follows article 24. It is as follows:

"Resolved, that these articles of agreement be submitted to the General Conferences of both organizations, which are to be held April 6, 1918, at Independence, Missouri, for approval as the working basis of harmony between the Church of Christ and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

We think it fair to presume that our critic has produced all the matter from the 1918 General Conference action which he deems will tend to establish his contention, or all that in his judgment bears upon the question of an exchange of membership. We believe we have quoted all his evidence, though not all of his argument, and our readers now have the matter before them. What does it indicate?
That our brothers of the Church of Christ believe that the same status existed between the churches after the General Conference of 1919 as had existed before; and as would have existed had the report of the joint committee been adopted by the body. To this latter we do not accede.

If the report to the 1919 conference was anything, it was either an interpretation of the “working basis of harmony” adopted in 1918, or it was a statement of new items of agreement. It is impossible to conceive that the 1919 committee, consisting of the following members in attendance, should merely re-stated by the chairman; a motion was made to restate, which attempt failed.

It was either an interpretation of the 1918 report of the 1919 committee, consisting of the At a quarter after two the special order was received that persons who are or have been, connected with the church, desiring to unite with either branch of the church, shall not be received to fellowship until the elders of the branch of the church to which they apply shall have opportunity to decide upon their standing; each organization to furnish the other with evidence in their possession with reference to the person in question.”

Agreed, that when ministers of the Church of Christ and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are laboring together, the persons baptized shall have the right of choice as to which organization they will unite with.”

Please consider this action is not stated as an interpretation, or, as our critic describes it, “the only course that could be taken consistent with the articles of agreement, regardless of any conference action.” Neither would such men think as he does now, that “no conference action is really necessary on a simple, self-evident, common sense proposition like this.”

They evidently wished to present to the General Conference new items upon which they could agree, for the purpose of getting the expression of the bodies of the churches as to whether they agreed. What was the result?

The report was presented to the conference on April 8, was again called up by the chairman on April 17, nine days after presentation, and a motion was made that the matter be laid on the table, which motion prevailed by a vote of 136 to 122. From this we could only get one of two ideas: The body thought the action wholly unnecessary; or, the body was unfriendly to the matter of the report. Evidently the latter is a correct interpretation, for at once three members of the committee declined to serve further on the committee, “inasmuch as the body had declined to consider their report,” and the attempt was made to show them it was not meant as ignoring their works, by moving to take up and consider their report. The motion, however, was out of harmony with parliamentary procedure, because the body had just voted on a question which indicated its will on the subject, and it was declared out of order by the chairman.

After further business had been transacted, the report of the committee was taken from the table, and it was ordered that it be the special order of business at a quarter after two of the same day; this after an attempt was made to approve the report, which attempt failed.

At a quarter after two the special order was stated by the chairman; a motion was made to rescind the action of 1918, or the “working basis of harmony,” but the chairman ruled the motion to be out of order. Next a motion was made to adopt the 1919 report. A substitute was made “that the conference receive the report and continue the committee.” A motion to amend the substitute by using the word approve for receive was denied, or, in other words, the conference again refused to adopt these new measures agreed upon by the joint committee; and if it was an interpretation of the 1918 “basis,” the church then and there declared that the interpretation of the committee was not its (the church’s) interpretation. The only action which prevailed was that the conference receive the report and continue the committee.

Does an Interchange System Exist?

Please weigh the facts that exist. The Advocate writer, in order to deduce there was a system of interchange of membership between the two churches, did nothing but quote the report of the committee to the General Conference of 1919, and he based his stated conclusions upon this report which the conference steadfastly refused to adopt.

This writer went not to the 1918 “working basis of harmony” to establish the system of interchange. If it was in that document, and the 1919 report was unnecessary, as he virtually states in the words, “Such would be the only course that could be taken consistent with the articles of agreement, regardless of any conference action,” why did he ignore the basic (?) and sufficient (?) document and quote from an unnecessary and in effect rejected committee report to establish his point? Or does he insist that this is something more than a committee report, because it was offered to a General Conference? The absence of recognition by him as to the status of this latter document calls for this question.

Where is the evidence that there is now a system of interchange of membership between the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ and the Church of Christ? The evidence now presented that J. J. Teeter, a member of the Reorganized Church whose name is still on our record and whose standing is not questioned, was appointed pastor of the East Independence congregation of the Reorganized Church; that elders of the two churches had administered together, laying hands on the sick; that certain parties of the Reorganized Church had partaken of the sacrament with the Church of Christ; that the people of the Church of Christ were invited by some one to be present at the dedication of the Stone Church, and to there partake of the sacrament with the Stone Church congregation, can have no bearing on an interchange of membership, or “the transfer of membership from one church to the other.” Such a claim is surely not intended.

Articles 7 and 24 are quoted from the “working basis of agreement,” and the writer states that these are the basis for the interchange of membership which he implies does exist. Just how he thus concludes we cannot understand, and it is safe to assume that the members of the committee will not agree to such an interpretation.

Has Any Interchange Been Made?

Our critic says that the course outlined in the rejected report of 1919 is precisely the course that has been practiced ever since the articles of agreement were adopted, but he has not presented the evidence for examination. He surely understands that the word interchange means an act of mutually changing; an act of changing each for the other or one for another. Where is his evidence that in the eight years which have passed since the “working basis of harmony” was adopted there has been a single interchange? He himself says:

The Reorganization may have had no occasion to exercise this provision, because we do not know of a single member of the Church of Christ who has associated himself with the Reorganization since the articles of agreement were adopted.

As for us, we know of none coming from the Church of Christ and asking fellowship with the Reorganization. We are not aware of one member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ whose name has been taken from its record in order for it to be enrolled by the Church of Christ.

So much for the existing facts. What is the philosophy of the situation? Is it contended that the Church of Christ wishes a basis of interchange of membership? If so, for what reason? Upon what basis?

Let us suppose the possibility of one or two or more members of the Church of Christ disagreeing with the action of a general conference of that church to such an extent that they state they can no longer find fellowship in the Church of Christ; or that they believe the church to have departed from the faith to such an extent they can no longer work with the organization. Does our critic believe that the Reorganized Church would be living up to an adopted “working basis of agreement” which states that “in order to accomplish the work of the Lord committed to his people, it is necessary for them to unite in one organization, in harmony with the law of God,” if it should receive such ones into full fellowship as members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ? An answer to this question clearly establishes the fact that there is no basis for an interchange of membership in article 24 or at any other place in the “working basis of agreement.”

But suppose that such member or members make application to the officers of the Church of Christ for letters of recommendation to the Reorganized Church for full fellowship. Would the letters be forthcoming? If they were, where would they draw the line as to who were entitled to credentials of this nature? Would the Church of Christ regard that as an equitable basis of exchange, or of mutually giving and receiving?

We believe we are justified in stating that no interchange of membership between the two churches in consideration does now or ever has existed. The editor of the HERALD considered all the vital facts in his writing of July 1, as regards the question he raised, and there is no ground for an implication of unfairness.

We regret that the brethren of the Church of Christ have been offended by our referring to them as “our Hedrickite brethren.” The senior editors often use great freedom in writing their productions, expecting the assistant to correct or call their attention to details which may need further consideration. The assistant in this particular case is the present writer, who should have drawn attention to the possibility that this language would give offense to some one. He assumes the blame and will try to observe the manifested wish of the writer for the Church of Christ.

But so far as the present writer is involved, let our critics know that he does not object to being known as a Josephite brother. We believed in President Joseph Smith and accepted his leadership, and we still believe, and would not deem it necessary to call attention of any that they had used a “nickname” instead of our full name. Sometimes a nickname is quite dear to its possessor; this is to us.

However, in accordance with the command that the church be called after his name, the name of the organization represented by the SAINTS’ HERALD embodies his name which is Jesus who was the Christ: i. e., The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Vineyard Gleanings

Opening the New Church Building in Burlington, Iowa.

It is said that in medieval times a monk during his novitiate would water a dead stick planted in the monastery yard. This was his task morning after morning for years. It was supposed to exemplify zeal and devotion to duty. What a dry and profitless task?

Looking back over our life, it is always a source of satisfaction to realize that we have poured life into a living undertaking; that we have cultivated living things—a living institution, living men, women, and children.

My first mission was undertaken in the Nauvoo District; the first stopping place in that district being Burlington, Iowa. Here my third sermon (so-called) was delivered. And here at its close Sister Maggie Wright uttered her famous and appropriate remark, “Brother Smith, I did enjoy hearing you try to preach.” Many times since then, when I have sensed the beauty and power of the gospel story, I have felt that I have never done more than try to preach. Sometime when divisional lines disappear and in the sacred courts of the Temple we receive the endowment from on high—then may we hope to preach as the message is worthy to be preached.

Some years later, my first pastorate was taken in the city of Burlington, as the first pastor of the branch under conference appointment. This was in 1903. Nearly four years were spent there in that work, during which many lasting ties were formed. Naturally, therefore, it was with much more than ordinary happiness that I responded to an invitation to be present and deliver the opening sermons in the new church building at that place, Sunday, August 2.

It was a great pleasure to be reminded again forcefully that I had not watered a dead stick. Here I found a living and growing organization, and moreover, noted evidences of growth in the souls of many of the people at that place.

The church building is of pleasing architectural lines, of light buff-colored brick, with white casements and cornice, gray asbestos roof, and windows in harmonizing tints. Outside and in it is as pretty as a picture.

The upper auditorium may be divided by accordion doors when the audience is small. On special occasions, when these doors are opened, a fine auditorium is afforded. Back of the pulpit are choir rooms, and a baptistry sufficiently elevated that when the curtains are opened the baptismal service can be witnessed from any seat in the room.

The lower auditorium has a large room for Sunday school work or junior services, which can be used for social gatherings and a well-equipped kitchen. At noon of the day of opening, three hundred Saints dined in this room.

The cost of the building is $18,000 which is three thousand dollars under the contractor’s estimate. The Saints decided to handle the contract themselves, which was done under the direction of the pastor, Brother G. S. Daniel; Brother A. H. Kuntz handling the construction work. The pastor and numbers of the brothers and sisters put many days of hard work on the building, plastering, varnishing, laying floors, cleaning, etc. It was a work of love into which the comparatively small congregation of one hundred and seventy Saints put their labor and their money. The results furnish a shining example of what can be done where there is cooperation.

The actual debt remaining to be met Sunday morning was seven thousand dollars. By night this had been reduced to six thousand dollars by generous collection and pledges. Some one suggested that six more Sundays would wipe out the balance—but that is undue optimism. It is planned to retire the balance in six years.

The opening service was at half past ten. There was a fine musical program, followed by a sermon on the theme, “The Word became flesh and dwell among men, full of grace and truth. “It was felt by the writer that there was only one name preeminently worthy to be lauded at this the first meeting in this new building—and that the name that had been first in the old building. Brother Amos Berve, district president, was present and assisted at this service. Following the service, four were baptized by Brother Daniel as the first fruits of many hoped for.

Sacramental service was held in the afternoon, at which time Brother Albert Kuntz was ordained to the office of priest and the four baptized were confirmed.

In the evening the sermon was from the text, “Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus.” Apostle Gleazer arrived during the day, en route to the Lamoni reunion with his family, and assisted at the evening service. Without doubt the morning meeting was the largest assembly of Saints ever congregated in Burlington. They were present from distant points: from Cedar Rapids, Hiteman, Fort Madison, and Montrose in Iowa; Quincy, Ferris, Rock Creek, Joy, Chicago, and Nauvoo, in Illinois. In the evening there were probably more nonmembers present than we have ever before had at that place. Following the evening service, Brother Daniel was surprised with a very pleasing and generous gift from the Saints of Bur-
Hilo Missionaries in Full Swing

I think two Sundays have gone by since we reported to you. What the report does not show is the daily meeting with different members of the branch to counsel with them in their work in their home mission. There is scarcely a day that we, one or both, do not have to meet and help some of our Saints in these things. Among the activities not listed in our diary are some seven different sessions on our playground, where we have been carrying on the work of grading and erecting play apparatus, as well as supervising play activities. We have gone about as far in this improving of our ground here as we will be able to go at present. We would like to put up a system of electric lights on the grounds but will not undertake that till the money is in hand for the expense. There remains only the completion of our swings, (the uprights are up for those,) and putting in a sand box. We hope to do this to-day and to-morrow.

Yesterday was a busy day, as Sunday usually is, with the added service for baptism at three o'clock. A young son of Brother Joseph Camara was baptized at Cooconut Island at that hour. The father preferred that it be performed there, rather than in the church font. Some had criticised us to him, alleging that these ordinances were performed by us in secret and with indecent rites, so he desired that this be given more than usual publicity, hence the appointment at the island. There was an excellent spirit with us there, and, in fact, during the entire day.

Our attendance seems to be growing here each Sunday, and we have some nonmembers attending. A Mr. and Mrs. Dodge—who are here temporarily (he engaged in compiling a directory, I believe,) were with us the first Sunday evening, and were with us again last night. On account of the prevailing dark skins in our audience, these visitors are noticed more quickly, I suppose, but we do enjoy the interested attention they and all the audience seem to give us in these efforts.

Last evening we used our stereopticon for the first time, giving them a few slides after the Religio lesson and service. Book of Mormon or archaeological slides of Central America and Mexico; and at the regular appointment for preaching service we used slides on the Archaeology of Egypt as bearing on the historical accuracy of the Bible narrative. They want more. Think I must appeal to our Bureau of—oh, I can't get hold of the word, but the appeal will have to go to Brother C. Ed. Miller, who is remembered very affectionately by many of our Saints here.

Yesterday's activities included three sermons, and two lectures before classes, (Sunday school and Religio,) and we are feeling somewhat fatigued this morning. Otherwise, I think that we are both in our usual health. I should add that Sister Chase was as busy as was I, but this follows as a matter of course all the way through.

Sincerely yours,

Hilo, Hawaii, Box 922, July 20.

A. M. Chase.

A Graceland Endowment

In 1910, during an eight-month trip, traveling alone, R. V. Hopkins secured one thousand $10 endowment subscriptions. To a group of men in one of the church offices last week he told his experience.

In 1910 the first effort was made to secure a temporary endowment for Graceland College. R. V. Hopkins, who at that time had spent only one year at Graceland College as a member of the faculty, was selected to travel among the branches of the church and secure pledges of ten dollars each from its members, which was to form a temporary endowment for Graceland College.

This effort was made in the early days of the college, when the institution was fighting for its life, and it took a man thoroughly sold to the interest of Graceland and its program to travel and represent it. R. V. Hopkins at that time was young, both as a man and as a faculty member of the college but being fired with a determination to see that the college should finally come into its own, he left Lamoni during the Christmas holidays of 1909 and traveled until the first of September, 1910. During this time he secured over one thousand ten-dollar subscriptions to the college. They were payable annually, and the payments on many of them were kept up for several years.

In the eight months in which he traveled he covered the States of Michigan, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and all the States east to the Atlantic Coast. Traveling single handed, with very little purse and not much scrip, he was in a most remarkable way directed in his travel as to where to go and how to approach the people on this new subject. Many times he was warned beforehand of the spiritual conditions existing in various branches and was enabled to do much helpful missionary work in addition to the particular college work for which he was specially sent.

Fifteen years does not seem such a long time, but when he took this trip in the interests of Graceland College, in many localities he had to plead the cause of education; however, he was fresh from the experiences of the students the previous year and had clearly in his mind the struggles through which boys and girls were willing to go to secure an education under church influence. They were fired with the ambition to prepare that their service might thereby be a better offering to the church.

He was able to tell the Saints wherever he went of intimate personal experiences through which these boys and girls had passed, through privations of various kinds, some without homes, some without money, but with a deep-seated desire to prepare for service and a deep conviction that Graceland was the place where they could best receive this preparation and training.

When Brother Hopkins started on this trip, he was a priest, but in the early winter, when reaching Philadelphia, was ordained an elder, and under the inspiration and calling of his priesthood did heroic work in a new field of endeavor and made friends for the college and the church.

Many times in his travels he had not sufficient money to go from one locality to another, but thoroughly convinced that the Lord had sent him on this mission, and satisfied that he was directing him in his work, he invariably made the start in the direction he should go, and just as often was the money placed in his hands to carry him to his destination.

This is not a new experience to the missionary force of this church, but to this young man, giving his life to a new cause, it burned into his soul a deep-seated faith in God which has never left him. He often had company in his travels with the missionaries of the church. One time, in company with Elder H. E. Moler, his work led him into the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee, to attend the reunions.

In those days the accommodations at reunions were very meager. He slept out on benches or on a bed of boughs, that the women at the reunions might have the accommodations. They did their own washing and mending, cooked their own meals when obtainable, or went without, traveled on horseback or wagon, by train, and walking when no other way was provided. This man blazed a new trail for the cause of education, for which Graceland has stood in our church activities as a beacon light for over thirty years, yet in the midst of such pioneer experiences the guiding hand of the divine providence was always felt. It was in this year that Brother Clyde F. Ellis was on his first missionary trip, and in company with R. V. Hopkins they visited several localities together.

Under the influence of the strong appeal for the support of the college, many of the Saints gave generously. Some gave under conditions that would be considered by us to-day as justifying our refusal to help, but in those days the strong, powerful appeal from this young and vigorous man engaged in a new work brought forth a response which in the aggregate brought thousands and thousands of dollars to the support of the college when otherwise the doors would have closed.

To-day Graceland looks with gratitude to the man who, single handed and alone, carried the torch of a new vision and won the fight. She looks with gratitude to a thousand Saints who gave generously to keep the old west college door open. It meant life to many a penniless boy and girl who needed Graceland. She has multiplied what she has received and given it back a hundredfold. This is the spirit of Graceland. Let's save the college and keep faith with the youth of the church.

Raising the permanent endowment of $200,000 will do this, and more, too—the doctrine of stewardships can be made effective with the same money, making the matter worthy of the united support of all.

The Origin and Development of Property Rights

By M. A. Etzenhouser

The exact period in the development of man in which property rights were recognized is not definitely known, but it was likely during the matriarchal period. There is some difference of opinion as to the origin and development of property, but this may be accounted for to some extent by the fact that original investigators have confined their research to single people; as, for instance, Morgan who investigated the American Indian only, and his investigations were confined largely to the Iroquois.

The evolution of property seems to have been first communism, in which everything was held in common by the horde or clan and the benefits shared alike by all; then collective property, in which the family was the unit of ownership and everything was held in common by them; and finally, the outgrowth of private property, in which the individual was the owner.

At an early stage there was no individual consciousness and each member thought of himself not as an individual, but in terms of the clan or horde; when he was successful in the chase, whether he secured much or little, it was not his own to do with as he pleased but was the property of the whole clan and was shared by them alike until it was consumed. The means of sustenance was so scarce that it would not have been possible for the individual to have survived, and, therefore, the banding together was absolutely necessary. At this time there was no division of labor, and private ownership was unknown.

There were some things which the savage considered as being for his special use, but they were not conceived as his property in the sense that we are using the term to-day. They were a part of his personality and were the means by which he gave expression to himself, and were such articles as arms, ornaments, skins for keeping himself warm, and his canoe and paddle, and these were not taken from him at death but were burned or buried with the corpse.

There is a limit to the quantity an individual may appropriate to himself. Thus, an Eskimo may not have more than two canoes; the third is at the disposal of his clan, and whatever he may claim that he does not use is considered the property of the clan.

When the savages ceased to lead such a nomadic life and began to establish settlements and build a dwelling, the house was not a private one but was held in common and occupied by all, even after the family began to assume a matriarchal form. In Polynesia, among the Indians of America, and the prehistoric Greeks they occupied long communal houses which were divided into small rooms. The Iroquois cultivated gardens and stored the crop in their dwellings as a common store. There was some degree of individual ownership here; but when one family exhausted its supply, their wants were supplied by other families as long as the supply lasted. When the common dwelling came to be subdivided into private houses which contained single families, they ceased to all eat together, but they all had equal claim upon the common provisions so long as they lasted. Heckwelder says: “The Indians think that the Great Spirit has made the earth, and all that it contains, for the common good of mankind. Everything is given in common to the sons of men.”

With the establishing of permanent settlements came the first division of labor. There were some who tended the crops and did the work, while others who were trained in the arts of war protected the group and went out and subdued other hordes or clans that were encroaching upon their rights. When they were successful in their warfare upon their enemies they took possessions, and captives which were usually women. These did not fit into the general scheme of communal goods and so were appropriated by those who took them captive as theirs, and hence private property became to be recognized. These women were usually considered trophies of war and were evidences of the success and achievement of their owners. They were made servants and thus ministered to the vanity and emulation of their captors. Later these women captives were made the wives of their captors, and so it seems that private property and the patriarchal household grew out of the same cause, the desire for emulation and distinction upon the part of the owner.

In order that the slaves taken captive might be profitable to their owner, it was necessary that they be put to work. The fruits of their labor became the property of their owners, and thus an ownership of commodities was recognized, such as weapons, tools, ornaments, clothing, etc. It was the custom for each individual owner to have his private mark which was placed upon all of his private property. The sacredness of property was established in the taboo, and each article was tabooed to all but the owner and hence was not appropriated by others. In Polynesia wives were also tabooed after they were married, and it became death for anyone to touch them. In this taboo charms are used which mark which was placed upon all of his property. The sacredness of property was known.

With the establishment of the patriarchal family there began the recognition of collective property and some think that it is the essential condition of its maintenance, and that as soon as it broke up the patriarchal family divided into the modern family. The property did not belong to the father nor to any individual member, but to the family considered as a whole which is perpetual and endures from generation to generation. When the head or father of the house died, the property devolved upon the eldest brother who acted as guardian for the whole family. This guardianship, however, could scarcely be distinguished from ownership, as it lasted during the life of the guardian. The property was inherited by all alike, but the dignity fell upon the eldest brother and could not be divided. Among some tribes the movable property was inherited by the sister's children, but personal property played a rather insignificant part. The distinction between the movable property and the immovable was, that which was acquired by the individual during his life was movable and that which was inherited was unmovable. The property was distributed equally among all the sons, and then among their sons, and was the joint property of all and was managed by the eldest brother. A son could not demand a partition of the estate, but he could demand maintenance in lieu thereof. There was no idea of disinheriting any as is involved in primogeniture.

With the establishment of exchange and the vast increase in movable property, unmovable property too began to be exchanged, and instead of collective property it became private property in the hands of individual owners. When private ownership became effective it was necessary to make laws governing the rights of ownership, as then property instead of being in the hands of a few guardians was in the possession of a great many individuals and the rights of each must be definitely defined. It has been said that property and laws were born together and that upon them civilization has been built. The Romans were among the first to make laws governing property, and they were classified and known as the Twelve Tables. (1) Familia, which includes household goods, land and agriculture, beasts of draft and burden, slaves, wife, and children. (2) Pecunia, which includes all other things. In medieval Europe laws were made for conveying lands, and public records were kept indicating transfers, and they also provided for the recording of instruments indicating possession of movable goods.

English and American laws divide property into corporeal, tangible property, such as lands, houses, etc., and incorporeal, intangible property, such as copyrights, patents, contracts, etc. The law requires that property, whether real or personal, must be used in such a way that it will not injure one's neighbor.

Private property has grown as the result of the appropriation or the production of commodities into more desirable forms of utility, and as the direct result of labor. We recognize the rights of property, and believe that a man should have the benefit of that which he produces and is entitled to that which he earns; within certain limits. Property has rights and the acquisition of it has spurred man on to higher and higher endeavor, but in some cases it is questionable if he has not succeeded too well. He has been too well paid for his efforts.

In the new social economy, the concept of property is undergoing a change. The rights of property are like the rights of life, liberty, and happiness, they are not absolute. If the life and liberty of an individual are at the disposal of the state, surely his property should be. The United States demanded the service of over three million men, and required that their whole ability and attention be at their disposal for an indefinite period, and surely they could have equal jurisdiction over their property. In fact, many of these young men found it necessary to make disposition of their property in order that they might comply with the demand of the Government.

The right of property is a vested right and not a sacred right, and should be vested in the state and be controlled for social good, and not for individual ends; especially when it is so used that it becomes a menace to social needs. We believe in the principle of personal liberty, and our Constitution guarantees it to every citizen, but there are limitations to the extent of that liberty on the part of the individual. His liberty ceases when it begins to interfere with the liberty of others. A man has a right to drive his car down Main Street as long as he complies with the traffic rules, but if he refuses to be governed by the signaling of the crossing patrolman, he will be placed under arrest and his liberty denied him.

The right of property must yield to public comfort and convenience. No one objects to a man keeping a pig on his premises if he is living in the country and is isolated from his neighbors, but he cannot keep the same pig in the congested part of the city, for it becomes a nuisance and a menace to the health of the community, and therefore interferes with the rights of his neighbors, and he must dispose of the pig.

During the war many people were arrested and prosecuted for having an excessive amount of sugar in their possession. Why? Because it was considered detrimental to the best social interests. If that is a justifiable reason during the time of war, it is also a justifiable reason in times of peace, when the same social interests are in jeopardy.

It is argued that property rights are sacred by custom, and that they have survived the ages; but if this proves anything, it proves that with the development that is manifested in our social activities, that they are out of date and should be relegated to the past, as not being fit for present needs. We are not sure, however, that they are a very old custom, as the rights of private property originated probably after the birth of Christ.

An individual should be allowed to own and hold property, only so far as it is used for the common good.

According to the modern attitude, property is that which he legally possesses; that is, anything that has come into his possession by no grossly immoral means. He may legally possess that which he has in no wise earned. But until the social mind organizes measures to eliminate all uneared surplus, the actual possession that is not bald theft may be given the sanction of legal approval. He has legal rights as long as society does not distinguish between earned and uneared possessions.

Three reasons have been given as justifying private property:

1. It is a necessary instrument of personality.
2. It is justified in so far as it is earned.
3. It has legal approval.

It is the general view that some manner of exclusive control is necessary over one’s property in order that he may give full expression to his personality; but if that be true, to deprive some one of it is to suppress his personality—then it loses its right to exist.

There are two conditions of ownership that bear upon social welfare: those in which property is in excess of needs, and those in which property is below the level of needs. All individuals should have the control of at least all their fundamental needs, and those who have more than this are antisocial, and those who have less are unsocial, because they are not able to function socially to their utmost capacity. Each individual should have those fundamental needs that would enable him to function to his utmost capacity, mentally, morally, physically, and spiritually, that he might fill his place in society in an acceptable manner.

Some take the position that a man is entitled to all that he can accumulate, provided that it is not acquired dishonestly, that it is his by reason of special ability and qualifications. We must remember that no man lives unto himself and no man produces unto himself, independently of all others; production is a social and not an individual activity, and hence all accumulation is social in its cause and is not the result of his effort alone. Most of the large property rights of families like the Astors and others have become enormous because of the growth of the population in their respective localities. What would property be worth in New York to-day if people should suddenly take their possessions and move to Chicago? How long would Broadway be the “Great White Way”? How soon would the street railway cease operations? It is society that adds property values and contributes the fruits of production.

Property in excess is used in three ways:

1. Personal consumption.
2. Control and prosecution of business enterprises.
3. For benevolence.

The first we think is justified even though it be spent in luxury. The second: usually control is impossible on the part of the individual investor, as his property consists in stocks and bonds in some corporation wherein dividends are the only end. He is not responsible for his ownership, as he has no part in the management of the business and can in no way affect the working conditions of the men employed. His excess property may prove a menace instead of a benefit to his fellow man. Third; benevolence should be administered scientifically and be under the public control and supervision if corrective measures are to be had.

Social obligations in regard to property below needs:

Many people, because of physical or mental conditions, or by accident or sickness are unable to supply their needs. Sometimes the head of the house meets with an accident, perhaps is crippled for life, or develops tuberculosis and is forced to quit work, and perhaps move to another climate. He is not responsible, there has been no neglect on his part, but he is unable to provide for himself and family, and so his burden should be borne by society. His fundamental needs should be provided by society, where he is not able to do it individually. Society should socialize its burdens, as it does its

Religious Test Found Students Are Believers

An indifferent spirit regarding religion is not manifest among the students of the Central Missouri State Teachers College at Warrensburg it was discovered recently. Out of an enrollment of 2,027 students for the summer session only thirty-four declared they had no church preference. The churches and Sunday schools of the city are crowded each Sunday with students who attend.

A questionnaire concerning the religious life of students attending the Central Missouri State Teachers College was given to 1,493 students including postgraduates, seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen to determine whether the said unbelief of college men and women included prospective teachers. Of this number, 1,837 professed to be Christians. A total of 88.8 per cent of the students are church members.

More students attributed their religious training at home to their mothers rather than their fathers. About nine hundred have parents active in religious duties. There were 322 who claimed to have family worship in their homes.

Twenty-three per cent of the students are themselves active in Sunday school work and either teach a class or hold an office. A total number of 66 per cent either tithe or give systematically to church support. Fourteen per cent of the students claim to have attended a religious school previous to entering the Teachers College, while 24 per cent have attended camp conferences.

A question was asked whether faculty members influenced the students to be more or less religious. Three hundred and thirteen students claimed the affirmative, where only twenty-two declared themselves made less religious by the influence of class instructors. No reason for the negative influence was given by these students.

Only five students, all of them members of the junior class, named studies that had undermined their religious views. These subjects were quoted as biology, ethics, and Wordsworth. One student gave as a reason the “disgust of the faculty” without further explanation.

Courses said to have strengthened religious faith were declared by the students to include ethics, sociology, Hebrew history, education, science, English, history, kindergarten theory, biology, citizenship, high-school problems, psychology, child welfare, music, art, literature, and mathematics. Sixteen per cent of the students declared themselves affected by the above classes most favorably.

REUNION NEWS

The Minot Reunion

As the North Dakota reunion is a matter of history, we will try to give to you some of the impressions had while having to help prepare for it and while in attendance.

The reunion was held this year again in the beautiful grove on the farm of Brother and Sister M. D. Graham, about fourteen miles northwest of Minot on the banks of the Missouri river. Many attending consider it an ideal place for a reunion.

We undertook a new venture this year, that of a cooperative dining room, where all could eat at the same table and all feel that they had a part in it. It caused us a little worry at first, for we did not know just how far the Saints would respond to the call made upon them to help make it a success. The weather seemed very much against us right up to the last few days before it was to begin. However, fortune was ours, the weather cleared, and we had no rain to mar the peace of the reunion; the weather was just fine, and so was everything else. We can think of it in no other terms than success.

We feel somewhat indebted to the Saints in Idaho for the eating idea, though we must say we did follow their plan exactly in calling for all the Saints to furnish what they could, which could be used for such an occasion; canned goods, butter, eggs, and the like, and also to furnish some money to buy such things as would necessarily have to be bought, such as bread and meat and the like. We estimated that it would take about fifty cents per day for each person and asked them to figure on about that much, either in money or goods.

The response was very good, and when all was over everyone seemed to think he had been well fed; and by the way, you may ask Brother and Sister Etzenhouser about it. Instead of its costing fifty cents for each person per day, it cost us thirty-nine cents, and this paid also for the cook, which was hired. We have something near one hundred dollars to spare, which we are going to put toward the church. These were each evening.

There were about one hundred fifteen camped on the ground during the reunion. The attendance was very good at all the meetings. Our program was about as follows: Study period from 8 to 9:15 a.m., consisting of lectures by Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser on social service problems and heredity and eugenics. These were each morning during the period from 8 to 9.15 a.m., consisting of lectures by Brother and Sister Graham, however, for the good place we had to make it a success. We had their kitchen to cook in, with a big tent in which to eat just outside the door.

The forenoons were taken up with meetings, and the afternoons were given over to recreation, with the exception of one or two special meetings. At 8 p.m. all met at the tent for song service which seemed to be enjoyed by all. This was followed by preaching at 8.30 each evening.

The recreational features of the reunion consisted of volley ball, kitten ball, swimming, marshmallow roast, wiener roast, and an auto trip to the park at Minot.

We were very glad to see so many of the young people of the district present. It seemed good to have them all come and help make the reunion what it should be, a place for our people, and especially the young people, to get together and become acquainted with each other. I am sure they all enjoyed it, and I think they will want to come again next year.

Many expressed themselves as believing this to be the best reunion they have attended, and all join in saying that the lectures given by Brother and Sister Etzenhouser were needed. Their interest in them was evidenced by the goodly and regular attendance at the lecture hour each morning.

It seemed that none wanted to miss any of them. However, all the services were well attended.

The theme of the reunion was "Zion," and when the reunion was at an end Zion seemed nearer to many. Some of the young people said they had never had a vision of Zion until this reunion. It was preached, it was talked, and Brother Garver said we had a little Zion in the reunion. We all ate together and were one large family. I am sure all felt repaid for coming.

In all there were fifty services held during the reunion. We had with us beside the local force and the one lone missionary to North Dakota and Minnesota, Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser of the Social Service Bureau and Apostle John F. Garver.

It was voted to hold another reunion next year, and we hope all will begin now to prepare for it. It will pay to do it.

W. E. SHAKESPEARE, Correspondent.

The North Dakota district reunion held in Brother Morgan Graham’s grove six miles northwest of Burlington, closing Sunday evening, July 5, proved to be one of the best ever held in the district. The Saints began to gather Friday, June 26, and by Saturday morning a goodly number was in attendance.

The district president, Thomas Leitch, and W. E. Shakespeare presided over the reunion. Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser were with us throughout, and their lectures from eight to nine each morning were well attended and appreciated. Brother John Garver arrived Wednesday and was given a hearty welcome, a large number having met him last year.

The preaching was done by Brethren Garver, Etzenhouser, Shakespeare, Leitch, and Hodges, and was mostly in line with Brother and Sister Etzenhouser’s lectures on preparation for the building up of Zion and Zionic conditions.

The district conference was held Friday, July 3. Thomas Leitch was elected district president, with M. Rasmussen and Frank Hodges, counselors; J. W. Darling, secretary; Warren McElwain, superintendent; Lester Anderson, Sunday school superintendent; Ralph T. Darling, Sunday school secretary-treasurer; and Bertha Graham, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Religious Instruction and Department of Women; Sister Frank Anderson, librarian.

It was decided to hold a reunion in 1926, and the time and place were left to the determination of district officers.

The forenoons were taken up with meetings, and the afternoons were given to recreation, which was taken up with volley ball, playground ball, swimming, and other sports.

Wednesday afternoon near all took autos and drove to Minot, spending the afternoon at Riverside Park, viewing the large collection of animals and other attractions in the park.

The cooperative plan was tried out in regard to meals

About 26 per cent of the students expressed their belief that their instructors were more religious than other people, while 3 per cent said they believed them less religious. The basis of their judgment was determined by the life, conversation, attitude, personality, daily life, general observation, fairness, service, leadership, participation in church life, and broadmindedness of the instructors. It was noted that the longer the students had attended college the more they declared themselves benefited in a religious way.

The median age of conversion is said to be 13, with a range from 5 to 40 years. Nineteen churches were represented in the survey.
and proved to be very successful and we hope will be made permanent.

The weather was beautiful, though the mosquitoes were rather annoying. Everyone went home feeling well paid for any sacrifice made, with a determination to attend next year.

J. W. DARLING, Secretary.

Onset, Massachusetts

The Onset reunion opened July 24 with a lecture by Doctor Walter Scott Athearn, dean of Boston University, who delivered a powerful address on the subject, "The present crime wave; its cause and cure."

The tabernacle was filled to its capacity with a very appreciative and attentive audience. Doctor Athearn's remarks were all based on statistics and were convincing as well as appalling, for he proved by figures that about seven tenths of the rising population of our country under twenty-one years of age are receiving no moral or religious education whatever. This he claimed was the cause of our present crime wave, and its cure was for home and church to give them as adequate a moral and religious training as they are receiving in another way in public schools. In other words, the moral and spiritual development of the rising generation must keep pace with the material development.

The speaker paid tribute to the splendid work being carried on at the Onset camp grounds and said we are on the right road to solving the problem of the present crime wave. He also paid tribute to our singing by saying it was the best congregational singing he had ever heard, because it was so worshipful.

At the close of his lecture he announced that copies of his address would be sent gratis to all who desired, if they would give him their name and address. A great many took advantage of the offer. Upon request he again addressed us at the eleven o'clock session Sunday forenoon with a continuation of the subject of Saturday evening, which was appreciated and enjoyed by all.

The Sunday school sessions are well attended, having an attendance of well over one hundred each Sunday, in charge of Superintendent Herbert Floyd of Onset.

A group of trained workers is here from Graceland College taking care of the different groups of young people and doing a splendid appreciated work.

Things have started off with a boom and a bang, and we are expecting to have the best reunion we have ever had.

The athletic sports are under the able leadership of Harold Cash, of Attleboro, Massachusetts, who is keeping things booming along this line. The single men of the camp challenged the married men the other day to a game of playground ball. The single men won and kept reminding the married men of the result. This brought forth a challenge from the married men for a game of volley ball. They wanted to show the single men they were not "has beens." Being a married man myself and a participant in the game, I don't like to talk about the result. I won't tell you that we lost that also.

Water sports were enjoyed to-day by a large crowd that gathered at the shore. In the under-water swim, which was to dive from the raft and swim towards the shore, one young man from Providence, Rhode Island, swam so far that he scraped the bottom as he reached shore. We were all wishing the water hadn't been "built so close to the shore," so the human fish could have had a longer swim.

The prayer meetings are of a spiritual character and a source of strength to all.

The young people held their prayer meetings by themselves each morning; the one the writer was privileged to attend had an attendance of seventy-two, and nearly every one took part. A little fellow about eight years old led out in prayer. Each prayer and testimony had a true, deep ring of sincerity and a willingness to do whatever God wanted them to do. This speaks well for the future of the church.

The preaching services are of highly educational and spiritual value and will bring results in the lives of the Saints, to the glory of God. We are very fortunate in having as speakers so far that the presidency Frederick M. Smith, Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael, First Counselor Mark H. Siegfried, all of Independence, Missouri; Apostle Paul Hanson; Patriarchs Richard Baldwin, Doctor W. A. Sinclair, and J. A. Gunnsolley; High Priests T. J. Elliott, and A. Max Carmichael, director of religious education, Bishop M. C. Fisher, and others.

The priesthood is meet this afternoon to hear from President Frederick M. Smith and Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael. At the same time a playground ball game is to be played by the single women of the camp against the married women. The junior boys will at the same time be playing volley ball.

Northern Wisconsin

Northern Wisconsin reunion held at Chetek this summer, from June 28 to July 6, was very successful in spite of adverse conditions. Most of the Saints of Northern Wisconsin are farm people, and it was with difficulty that they attended the reunion.

The two speakers, Apostle D. T. Williams and Bishop A. B. Phillips, helped to make the reunion the success it was. The meetings were quite well attended, and a fine spirit was shown throughout the entire reunion.

Very few young people attended, but the few that did helped a great deal toward the good of the church.

Sister Hild, of Janesville, Wisconsin, our Department of Women worker, assisted by Mrs. Mary Maier of Chetek, did much in instructing both the women of the church and the little folks who attended the junior church.

On the whole, the Northern Wisconsin reunion was all we had hoped it would be, conditions being as they are in our district. Many of the Saints here are isolated, but they keep up with the church and show their fine spirit by coming out and enjoying a ten-day reunion with us. We anticipate a splendid and successful reunion next year as a result of our fine session held this year.

"This Year We Sail Zionward, Which Is Our Course," is our motto.

Alabama Reunion

The Alabama district reunion met July 24, at ten o'clock, with H. H. Wiggins and E. C. Shelley in the chair. It was easy to see that God was smiling on us; the day was bright, beautiful one, and the gathered Saints were cheerful.

The organization was effected with H. H. Wiggins and T. C. Kelley in charge and G. W. Mimiard as secretary. D. E. Sellers was elected chorister, with power to choose the pianist. A. A. Odom and G. W. Mimiard were elected janitors, and A. A. Odom was given charge of the usher's work.

The presidency was empowered to complete the organization.

At this same service many earnest prayers were offered, and a number of suggestive talks were given.

Brother H. O. Smith arrived in time to deliver a good sermon at eight o'clock.

Our regular services are prayer meeting at nine; study hour, half past ten; department work, three o'clock; song service, half past seven; preaching at eight o'clock. Brother H. O. Smith preached every sermon until Brothers J. Charles May and John Blackmore arrived, when Brother Blackmore preached with great power Monday evening.

The prayer services are good and still improving. It is indeed inspiring to witness the testimonies of the Saints, especially of the isolated Saints.

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

The Church Building Problem in Detroit

My last letter told of the visit to the Flint ministerial conference and Detroit. On Wednesday night, July 22, we met with the Saints in the Central Church, Detroit. It had been previously announced that Bishop Carmichael and I would be there, and we were greeted by an audience of about 854 officers. At the meeting, as has been the case at many other places, we were cramped for room and needed quite comfortably filled the house.

We found that Detroit, like many other places, is cramped for room and needs in connection with the other activities, for Zion’s redemption will be incomplete without the church, and of what had been the record of the church in the way of building needs in Detroit are acute. The city is one of the most rapidly growing in the country, is one of the most rapidly growing in the country, and has an industry so large and varied that there is an influx of those seeking both temporary and permanent employment. Our own work is affected by these conditions, and the problems presented are not the easiest of solution, and to solve them will require united effort. But Detroit has a capable corps of workers, and we fully expect that under the leadership of such men as Brother Walter Bennett (the district president) and his associates, Brethren Kuykendall, Mottashed, Green, Smith, Coates, and others, the members of the priesthood will work out our Detroit problem. We of the general authorities shall be glad to assist to what extent we can.

It was on Tuesday afternoon, as we were visiting the places of meeting, that Brother Bennett received a call to the bedside of Brother Badder, an old-time Saint. So we went to the home; but as with Brethren Bennett and Coates Brother Carmichael and I entered the sick chamber, we all sensed we were in the presence of death. We had come at the call of the son and daughter (for Brother Badder was unconscious), and with saddened hearts we said prayers and participated in the solemn rites of administration, yet rejoicing in the promises of God and that here was another case where an honorable life had won for a Saint a position of respect that caused all to regret his passing. With words of comfort we could give to son and daughter we left.

Thursday the 23d, was a long and busy day. At Flint we had met Brother William Mae'del, of Cash, Michigan, who had extracted our promise to visit Cash Branch on the 23d, if I could find the means of transportation. This, Brother Kenneth Green furnished by offering himself and car for the occasion. Thursday forenoon (like most of the forenoons at Detroit had been) was spent in working in the mail. A most excellent lunch was set before us at noon, and shortly after Brother Green arrived. With Brother Green at the wheel, I beside him, and Brethren W. L. Bennett and Albert Carmichael in the back, the long drive to Cash was begun. The excellent roads of Michigan and the steady driving of Brother Green negotiated the distance with greater ease and in shorter time than we had expected, and about five o’clock in the afternoon we reached Cash. We were made at home, and we talked of local church affairs, etc., until supper time. After supper we repaired to the Cash church, some half mile or so southeast—a country church, neat and comfortable, in the midst of a splendid farming country, its excellence attested by the many groups of well-kept farm buildings.

By time for the opening of the meeting, every seat was taken, a standing room was occupied, so talk of my work in the church, or in the church, or in the church, we found the attendance in the room fair, and after five years as a servant for the church; my years of preparation, my aspirations, hopes, and ambitions as an officer. Then chance was given for questions. And again we found old Madam Rumor had been at work. Well, we tried to answer these questions fairly, and there was some variety to it. After about two hours of speaking and of answering questions, I gave way to Brother Carmichael, and for about an hour he spoke on and answered questions on stewardships.

After the meeting, some time was spent in visiting, shaking hands, and getting acquainted with the Saints. Then we learned from Brother Matt Liston, the district president, that many of the branches of the district are some of Detroit District, who represented at the meeting one of the most important offenders. Leaving the church house, we repaired to Brother Winter’s home and partook of refreshments before starting for Detroit. At five minutes before midnight we left Cash, tired, but happy to have met with the Cash Saints and in hopes we had accomplished some good by the visit.

Again Brother Kenneth Green proved a safe and steady driver. He stopped only once in the ninety-mile drive back to Detroit. He stopped only once in the ninety-mile drive back to Detroit. J. Charles May gave us a real missionary sermon Tuesday evening. Brother T. C. Kelley arrived Tuesday evening and met with a warm welcome.

The prayer meeting of Wednesday morning was very good, the spirit promising great success for the remainder of the services. The study hour, conducted by Brother John Blackmore, is of a very high order. The lessons on stewardships are instructive.

Sister Nettie Booker is conducting the department work, giving us good advice and instructions in her line. We feel to thank God for her because of her talents. The children think so much of her, as she teaches them every day at half past ten.

The young people enjoy themselves in the recreation work, as Brother Blackmore and Brother May gave them some good games which means much to the youth of our district.

We are looking forward to a crowning success in the remainder of our reunion.

H. H. WIGGINS, District President.

most Detroiters as their greatest asset, and I guess they are about right.

Friday night found us at the church again, a number coming in response to Brother Carmichael's invitation to come out and discuss some of the aspects for helping organizations in business. Many questions followed his talk, the meeting continuing until late. Bidding good-by to the Saints, Brother Carmichael, Sister Smith, and I were, with our luggage, taken by the Bennett family and Brother Kuykendall to the Grand Trunk station, where we entrained for Toronto. Of our visit to Toronto more will be written later.

We left Detroit as we had other places, glad we had come and hoping we may have done the Saints good by our visit. We appreciate the many kindnesses shown us by Brother and Sister Bennett, Sister Sarah Smith, Brother and Sister Mithaug, Brother Kuykendall, Brother Green, the Blairs, the Smiths, and others. The building program of Detroit may recall us to Detroit soon, but we shall return feeling we are better understood than before.

God bless and prosper the Detroit Saints and their work.

Young People's Convention in Little Sioux District

We are glad to report that this first convention is a success. Not overly large in numbers, but the interest and spirituality manifested were very good. The weather was hot, perspiration flowed freely, but all stayed by the ship.

This convention was prefaced by a campaign of nearly every home in the district, Brethren Joseph Lane and F. A. Smith making one team while U. W. Greene and the writer completed the foursome. Brother Greene was taken suddenly ill at Logan and was obliged to return home. His stay, though short, was surely approved by all who met him, and we pray very heartily for his speedy recovery.

We then called into service our genial Indian brother, Charles Hare, of Wagner, South Dakota, who unhesitatingly "hitched" up his Ford and came to the rescue, staying till the end of the campaign.

Brother C. B. Woodstock bore the burden of the responsibility of this convention. He was very ably assisted in the class work by F. A. Smith of Independence, J. A. ("Uncle Jerry") Gunsolley of Lamoni, and Bertha VanEaton of Pisgah. Brother Woodstock represented the field of religious education which he handled with good effect. Brother Smith presented the doctrinal principles of the gospel in his strong, forceful way. Many new thoughts and points were brought out through his instruction. Uncle Jerry followed as an exponent for the gospel, including the doctrine of stewardships. His blackboard outline was very comprehensive and brought to the class many new thoughts on this great feature of the gospel economy. Sister Bertha VanEaton talked to the classes on the opportunities and responsibilities of the young people. We would like to present here the many good things she brought to the convention, but we trust that we will be able to see it worked out in the lives of those who were privileged to hear her.

The whole of this convention was under the general supervision of District President Joseph Lane. Brother Lane's health is very poor, but he was with us most of the time.

One very interesting incident of the convention was the sixty-third birthday of Uncle Jerry. The young people presented him with a large floral offering, Brother J. E. Keck being the speaker. Then on Friday evening the young people gathered at the church and Uncle Jerry was invited to drop and count his sixty-three pennies into the birthday offering, which he very graciously did to the great amusement of the little folk and also the older ones.

Brother J. E. Keck of Sioux City took charge of the recreational feature of the convention, and all enjoyed the hikes, games, "hitching" teams, and many other things that featured this part of the program.

The work opened each day with a prayer meeting, mostly of the young people. All these meetings were under the direction of the writer, and we believe that all are agreed they were a success because of the manifestation of the Spirit and the interest expressed by those present.

The classes were conducted alternately morning and afternoon, with ever-increasing attendance and interest.

Brethren A. Smith and J. A. Gunsolley delivered sermons, and on Friday night the Reverend Mr Channess, pastor of the Christian church of Logan, delivered an address to the young which was very much appreciated.

On Sunday evening the convention was formally closed, the writer being the speaker on that occasion.

We believe we are safe in predicting other conventions for the future, and that they will be more largely attended and better in feature as they should be.

Begin your preparation now for the next one. CHARLES J. SMITH, Press Agent.

Clitherall, Minnesota

July 29.—Sometimes one change will bring about others. For years this branch has followed unvaryingly the order of Sunday school and preaching in the forenoon, and prayer meeting in the afternoon. When services were resumed this summer the small attendance seemed to warrant the discontinuance of the Sunday school, which left the preaching service in the forenoon and prayer meeting in the afternoon.

Some of the members who came from a distance were unable to leave home for the whole day and were thus deprived of attending one of the services.

A short time ago it was decided to hold both services in the afternoon, thus enabling those who attend to take in the two services. Then the attendance picked up sufficiently to suggest taking up the Sunday school work again. Last Sunday was the first session, and a record crowd was present and showed interest, with evidence that the interest will increase.

Thus the branch is in more hopeful condition than it has been for some time past, and hereafter Sunday school will be held every Sunday with prayer meeting following, alternating with preaching.

Davidson, Oklahoma

July 28.—Children's Day exercises were said to be the best that had ever been rendered in Davidson. The church building is large, and it was full. The branch feels to give the credit to two young ladies, Sisters Veleria Parker and Ina Skinner, as the speakers.

Miss Parker has charge of the primary work. She is doing a wonderful work with the little folks. About once a month she has her little folks put on a program. Miss Skinner helps with the music.

The Saints are making preparations to attend the reunion at Eagle City. The meetings here are all dismissed until after the reunion.

Wants to Go Forward

I wish to say to all those who know me, and those who do not, that by the grace of God I am still in the faith of the gospel. I am in the faith of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; at least I believe I am, for I believe in stewardships; I believe in latter-day revelation as well as in former-day revelation; I believe in the program of the last General Conference; and especially in the last revelation given by our Prophet.

I do not wish to live in the past, but now, "heart within and God overhead," let us go on and all move forward, establish stewardships, build the Auditorium, and endow Grace-land. It is no time to murmur or complain. Let us move forward and redeem Zion.

C. J. SPURLOCK.
Moorhead, Iowa

July 29.—The Moorhead Branch has been caused to mourn the loss of two noble sisters during the past month, Sisters Matilda Larson and Dora Davis. They have both been members of our branch for many years and have endeared themselves to all of the Saints by their faithfulness. They both leave grown families, and Sister Davis leaves her husband, Brother Ellis Davis. Brother Larson departed this life several years ago. Both obituaries have been sent to the Herald for publication, so suffice it to say that we miss their presence and testimonies in our gatherings but are comforted in the thought that they were both prepared for the higher life awaiting them.

Our meetings have been carried on about as usual. The hot weather interfering with the attendance of the evening services to some extent, as is usual in the summer months.

Brother Richard Mann of Independence, Missouri, visited recently among relatives at this place and occupied the pulpit on the eve of July 19, exhorting the Saints to faithfulness and maintaining that this latter-day work was confirmed to all who would obey, as he had proved this to be true for over sixty years. Brother Mann was one of the pioneer Saints of this branch and always finds a welcome among us.

Several from here attended parts of the district young people's convention at Missouri Valley, closing July 12.

Sister John Boewell and little daughters returned this week from a few days of visit among relatives and friends in Missouri and Kansas.

Sister Claude Mann and children of Missouri Valley have been visiting among friends and relatives during the past week.

Sister Ruby Inlow was called to Greenfield, Iowa, during the last month, by the death of her husband's mother.

Brother Ammon McIntyre and son Earl, also Brothers Dale and Lynn Wilson, returned this week from an auto trip to Colorado.

Brother Fred Amundson, accompanied by his family and mother, Sister Nettie Amundson, have been spending the past few days among members and relatives.

Brother and Sister Bert Mann and family recently took an auto trip to Huron, South Dakota, to visit at the home of his brother, Brother Carl Mann and family. Sister Emma Mann returned home with them after an extended visit at that place.

Brother and Sister J. W. Townley visited a few days at the home of his brother Joseph and family of Sioux City, during the month.

Sister Grace Richwine and husband were called from their home in Michigan by the death of her mother, Sister Davis, but have since returned home.

Sister Ruby Tornour spent a couple of weeks during July visiting her mother, Aunt Sarah Hoffman, and their relatives at Lamoni.

Moorhead friends and relatives appreciated the visit of Brother R. C. Derry and family of Lamoni, who spent a few days among us.

Sister Carl Ballantyne and son Dale of Lamoni made a short visit during the early part of July among relatives and friends.

Brother and Sister Charles Davis spent last Sunday at Missouri Valley.

Sister Anna Larson departed this week for Chicago, where she will take a course of study preparatory to resuming her school work at Des Moines.

Brother Frank Larson and family drove through from Colorado to be present at his mother's funeral. Brother Cecil McDonald returned home with them.

Sister Fred Pellissier is spending this week visiting at the home of Brother and Sister Jennings Coffman of Omaha.

Brother Perry Mann accompanied a number of friends on an auto trip to the West, departing the first of the week.

Mapleton, Kansas

Since our last news was chronicled, we have held all of our regular services, with good attendance in spite of the hot weather. Our pastor, Lee Quick, and Hollie Dennis have been enjoying the good Spirit in preaching to us.

Our Children's Day exercises are past history and they were a success, as everyone's part was executed perfectly, and although it was a very warm night, there were over five hundred people present. Five more souls were added to the kingdom on that day, being baptized by Elder Hollie Dennis. These are the ones who took the important step: Eva Noggle, Joseph Lucas, Raymond Lour, Violet Graham, and Wayne McBride.

The church handled a stand on the Fourth of July, and while it was hard work we feel that we were amply compensated for our efforts, for when the bookkeeper balanced the books it was found we had the neat little sum of $115 on the right side of the ledger.

Elder C. E. Blodgett and wife of Independence were visiting for two weeks at the home of their daughter, Sister Hollie Dennis. Brother Blodgett was pastor of the Mapleton Branch several years ago and is always a welcome visitor here. Since noticing the above, Sister Dennis received a message stating that her mother had suddenly passed away, only a few days after returning home. Sister Dennis and Sister Mabel McBride, a granddaughter of the deceased, attended the funeral in Independence. Thus are we admonished to be ready, for we know not when the call is coming, and may we all be as near ready as our sister was at the summons from on high.

Our young people gave an ice-cream supper and program Saturday night, the 25th. It was quite a success, and the proceeds are to be used for athletic purposes. Our boys have a baseball team, and they challenge any team in the church for a game. If you feel like trying them, get in touch with Orion or Hollie Dennis.

Stockton, California

We were favored by a visit from Apostle C. F. Ellis, who gave us two splendid sermons on the evenings of July 28 and 29. Several outsiders attended and seemed intensely interested. One remarked that it was the best sermon he had ever heard. The subject was so thoroughly gone into that there was no unsatisfied feeling left in the minds of any. We hope he can visit us again.

This month the Department of Women changed their regular cafeteria supper into a food sale, which was held in a down-town grocery store. This was the first time they had tried a sale down town. About sixteen dollars was cleared, which will go toward church improvements.

Brother and Sister Carl Holden have found it necessary to move to San Francisco. We regret greatly to lose them; they are zealous workers, as well as musical and entertaining.

We feel sad to record the death of one of our most faithful members, Brother L. J. Searcy. He passed from us on July 28, after a short illness. As he was an Odd Fellow, the services were divided. The service at the undertaking parlor was presided over by the lodge. The sermon was preached by Brother W. H. Dawson of Sacramento, under a very beautiful and peaceful spirit. The large attendance showed the respect and esteem of all those with whom he was associated at church as well as on the outside. At the cemetery the Odd Fellows took charge. He was a friend to all, a devoted good father, with always a cheering and encouraging word. He was always at his post of duty, and no service ever found him absent unless he was ill.

There are a number who are away on their vacation, leaving as a consequence a small attendance. All departments are, nevertheless, moving along.

Independence

Stone Church

For the past several weeks Independence has been blessed with beautiful Sundays. August 9 was in keeping with those preceding it. It was a day of beautiful services enjoyed in the light of the “beautiful Spirit.” The young people gathered for their early morning prayer service at the Campus instead of in the Stone Church basement, as they usually do. D. O. Cato was in charge, assisted by C. Ed. Miller and Scott Cochran. Brother Miller cannot be with us very often, and his kindly presence and counsel were a pleasure and inspiration to all. The pleasant spirit of the morning seemed to pervade the service.

Sunday school had about the usual good attendance. The sermon at the eleven o’clock hour was by Brother S. S. Smith, on the campus. He returned from his mission in the Southern States for a few days of visit with home folks. The evening service on the Campus closed the day’s worship very appropriately. Evangelist John F. Martin continued with his series of doctrinal sermons, his subject being, “The beautiful Spirit.” The sermon was preceded by musical numbers by the band, a quartet, a vocal solo, and violin duet.

Roy and Paul, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Gould, were injured in a truck accident August 4. Roy, aged nineteen, driver of the truck for a dry goods firm, to avoid running over a small child who darted out of an alley on a scooter, swerved his car and hit a telephone pole. More serious injuries were sustained by Paul, aged 16, who was riding in the truck with his brother. Both were taken to the Independence Sanitarium and are doing nicely at the present time.

H. E. Cudworth and family have move to Pleasant Hill, Missouri, where they will make their home. Mr. Cudworth has purchased the Tucker Realty Company and will also succeed James F. Kraner as proprietor of Tucker Inn, Pleasant Hill hotel. Mr. Cudworth is a member of the Independence Board of Education. For ten years he has been associated with the Irving Pitt Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, Missouri.

Second Church

Religio is making special efforts under the leadership of Brother Rawlings and Glen Davies and the program committee. August 14 there will be a social in connection with the regular session, and a watermelon feed will be one of the features. Sunday’s all-day meeting was a very successful one. It began at half past seven in the morning by a baptismal service in the font in the church, when Raymond Craft and Beulah Joyce, both of Saint Joseph, Missouri, nephew and niece of Elder C. E. Blodgett, were baptized by him.

Soon after seven o’clock the young people started for the scene of the day’s activities, the country place of Elder and Sister P. A. Sherman and their fine family. This family of Saints spent much in work and otherwise to accommodate the Saints, and all was supplied to make the visitors contented and the meetings successful.

The two baptismed were confirmed at the early prayer meeting, and the Saints enjoyed an hour of prayer and testimony before the opening of the Sunday school. The school held a good session under its regular organization and enjoyed the novelty of the outdoor surroundings.

Elder Sven Swenson was on the grounds all day and entertained and helped the Saints in his unique and earnest way. He preached the morning sermon, making his points by telling the story of his life and how God had worked with him. Lunch was eaten from half past twelve to two, on tables furnished by our hosts and on the lawns of Magnolia Manor, the newly adopted name of this country place.

In the afternoon the people gathered in two groups, the young under Brother Lane Bolt and F. W. Chappelow on the house lawn; those of mature and advanced years in the grove on the hillside. Brother Chappelow entertained and taught the young group by telling a story, and the success of it was testified by the quietude of his auditors.

Elder William H. Kelley was the speaker at the other group’s meeting place, taking for his theme “Zion, the New Jerusalem,” and giving the Saints his theory and description of the city. It was a triumph in entertainment and gave a strong spiritual direction to the experience meeting which followed.

Soon after half past four the meeting adjourned, and the Saints returned to Independence, this closing the day’s activities.

Walnut Park

Brother W. W. Wood, from Bonner Springs, Kansas, a former church worker in Walnut Park, was a welcome visitor in the branch Sunday. He gave a talk to the Sunday school.

Brother and Sister Harold C. Burgess kindly came over and helped with the musical part of the eleven o’clock service. Brother Burgess directed in a congregational song service preceding the sermon, and Sister Burgess sang a solo. The speaker at the morning service was Brother C. Ed. Miller, who talked directly against faults which are too often considered light, but may do a great deal of harm—spreading rumors, exaggerating facts, and being unmeritorious without knowing the full facts in the case. His illustrations and examples were so plain that no one was left in doubt as to the seriousness of such faults.

Brother Miller gave an illustrated lecture at the Religio Friday night on his interesting travels. He will continue the lectures on Sunday evening. All church activities for the week will be dismissed, with the exception of the prayer meetings in Groups 13 and 30 and the one at the church. These will be held for the benefit of those who are unable to attend the lawn services because of distance. We are hoping to reach a great many at these services who cannot be reached in any other way. Special music will be provided, and we believe the meetings will be a success.

Liberty Street

Sunday morning Brother W. I. Fligg was the speaker at the eleven o’clock hour. He used as a text Luke 1: 1-13: 18: 1.

Elder Fligg will open a series of meetings on the lawn at the home of Brother E. T. Atwell, 825 North Main, Monday evening. All church activities for the week will be dismissed, with the exception of the prayer meetings in Groups 13 and 30 and the one at the church. These will be held for the benefit of those who are unable to attend the lawn services because of distance. We are hoping to reach a great many at these services who cannot be reached in any other way. Special music will be provided, and we believe the meetings will be a success.

Enoch Hill

Patriarch J. F. Martin closed a week’s series of meetings on the church lawn, Friday, the final sermon being especially for the youth of the church. The attendance and attention throughout were good. On Thursday night it was voted to continue the services another week. Brother Martin was not available longer, but Brother Ralph W. Farrell has been secured for the present week.

Brother J. M. Terry was the eleven o’clock speaker Sunday, August 9.

East Independence

Sunday, August 2, Brother James W. Davis assumed the duties of pastor. He was present at the sacramental services Sunday morning and preached Sunday evening. Sister Laura Teeter returned from Columbia, Missouri, this last week, where she has been attending the summer school, preparing herself for better work in the schoolroom and as a teacher.

At the Religio service Friday evening, August 7, Brother Davis gave an interesting talk about Australia and his experiences while there. August 9 Brother Davis was the speaker. The evening service was occupied by Brother J. J. Teeter.

The Willing Worker Club will hold a bake sale Saturday, August 15, at Brother B. C. Harder’s store.
Kansas City Stake
Central Church

They will probably hold their first service in the new church building at Thirtieth and Tracy, September 13.

Malvern Church

The young people's class in Sunday school is doing fine under the new leadership of Brother Charles Grabeske, who is giving it some real existing problems to work out that will help them to meet life's perplexities successfully.

Their new volley ball court is progressing and when finished will be first class. Then they will challenge some of the other churches to a game.

Grandview

The girls of Grandview and Heathwood played a game of volley ball Monday evening on the Heathwood court. The Grandview girls were victorious.

Tuesday evening the girls' volley ball team served a vegetarian supper in the lower rooms of the church and reported quite a success. After the supper the men of Grandview and Quindaro played a game of volley ball, Grandview being the winner.

Sister Martha Lehnik and Mr. Richard Lesche were united in marriage at eight o'clock in the evening at the church, the pastor, Charles D. Jellings officiating. They will make their home in Independence, Missouri. Sister Lehnik is one of two sisters recently from Germany, nieces of Brother and Sister Paul J. Brase. Since their arrival both have united with the church.

Second Kansas City

We are glad to welcome to our midst Elder H. R. Higdon and family, and the way they have gone to work is gratifying. Prior to the arrival of Brother Higdon, Brother F. A. Evans was our only elder.

Children's Day, under the direction of Sister Raw, a splendid program was rendered, the theme being redemption of Zion. All were helped and inspired by it.

The Sunday school is doing well; the warm weather did not affect our attendance. Quite a number have been sick, and some are still unable to attend. The Religion programs have been interesting and instructive, and this department is making progress.

Under the direction of the Department of Women, a class meets at the church every Thursday at two o'clock to study the Doctrine and Covenants.

Holden Stake
Atherton

The second Sunday in June we had our Children's Day program, which was very fitting and entertaining. In the afternoon six were inducted into the kingdom of God, four children and two ladies. Our Sunday school is holding its own. The first Sunday in July we had over ninety present.

On the evening of July 5, we had with us Brother James W. Davis of Independence. He was much enjoyed by all and was asked to be with us again last Sunday. He preached in the evening, and Brother C. V. Hopkins of Grandview preached in the morning, giving us a very timely and encouraging talk. We appreciate the visits of the stake officers.

Bishop J. A. Koeberl was with us the 15th and also on the 24th, being the speaker at both services. His sermons were for the soul. How have we the primary diet of milk and now appreciate meat. We should now demonstrate our religion by living same with one another. He said we had paid our tithes and offerings and had omitted the weightier matters. We must needs be stewards indeed to triumph in the work of the Master before the coming of his Son.

Marshall

There is considerable activity among the Saints here. Elder Birch Whiting and family are now living in our midst, and we appreciate this addition as well as the pastoral work of Brother Whiting.

Under the direction of Brother Levi Phelps, missionary work is being done at two points near Marshall: In a union church at Blue Lick and at a point about eight miles north.

We appreciate the visits of Brother Krahel and Macrae, Doctor G. W. Rodger, Elder C. House, and Brother Shoemaker and family.

Four have been added recently by baptism. Brethren Hale W. Smith and H. Barto were recent visitors and held services on the church lawn.

Brother Whiting motored to Cross Timbers in July and met with the Saints in Oak Grove Schoolhouse, returning later to preach the funeral of the child of Brother W. E. Lockling. Brother Mitchell and Sisters Lockling and Edna Lily attended the funeral.

Our sacramental service was uplifting and helpful. A basket dinner and meeting were enjoyed at Fair Play, eighteen miles from Marshall, Brothers House and McCormick occupying. Two were baptized and one child blessed by Brother House.

Sedalia

August 6 no service except Sunday school was held here, there being no one of the priesthood to take charge of the sacramental service. Our attendance has been light of late, owing to so many having gone on vacations, but we hope to have a full attendance again soon.

R. P. Moorman and family have returned from their vacation to the Ozarks.

The A. A. Weaver family have just returned from a three-week stay in Alabama.

The Thistlewaite children are home after a visit with relatives in Holden, Independence, and Kansas City. Sister Parber and daughter Edna are home after a visit with relatives in Nebraska and Dakota. Brother G. W. Rodger and wife left August 1 by auto for a visit with relatives in Indianapolis, Indiana. Their daughter Jean will return with them.

Brother and Sister R. E. Bozarth are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl at their home Sunday, August 2. Brother and Sister Lloyd Cunningham have returned from a visit with the latter's mother, Sister Bailey, in Kewanee, Illinois.

The State Fair opens here August 14, lasting eight days, during which the Square Deal Dining Hall, operated by the Holden Stake, will be ready to serve you with good meals.

Lamoni Stake

The Lamoni stake reunion started Thursday morning with a sacramental service at nine o'clock. The meeting was well attended and was a very spiritual one, foretelling the good things in store at the reunion.

There are seventy-five tents on the ground, nine service tents, fifty-five residence tents, and eleven pup tents.

The Wolf Cub camp is located across the creek on the west side of the grounds, in a more secluded spot, where thirteen boys from eight to ten years old, with their leader, George Mesley, are enjoying the freedom of the woods when not attending services.

The dining tent is in charge of W. W. Simpson, meals being served regularly in the cafeteria style.

The programs for the different phases of the reunion are very complete, being the result of careful planning and much time and labor spent in preparation.

The camp grounds are in the best shape they have ever been, clean and wholesome, there being only one drawback, the need of rain to settle the dust, and prophecy of the skies is for moisture soon.

A spiritual happiness and contentment was the keynote of the first meeting. A full account of the week's activities will appear later.
Topeka, Kansas

August 4.—We are having beautiful weather and are thankful for this and the various blessings we receive. Conference will be held at the end of the reunion now in session at Netawaka, Kansas.

Brother A. P. Crooker and family returned July 22 from an extended tour of the East. They report being very glad to meet with the Saints here.

The Department of Women held a sale, or rather were given the privilege of selling ice cream at one of the city parks during the band concert the evening of July 24. Several dollars were cleared and added to the building fund the Department of Women has started. More success to them!

Brother and Sister Bethel, of Toledo, Ohio, drove through to Topeka a short time ago and are considering locating here. We hope he will find congenial work in Topeka and remain with us, as our numbers are somewhat depleted because of a recent loss of Brother and Sister I. G. Whipple and family, who have been active in all departments of the church work. Brother Whipple and family have been here some years and have seen the various vicissitudes of the branch. Brother A. P. Crooker, who was pastor for two years. They went from here to Wichita, Kansas, because of Brother Whipple's work on the railroad necessitating. Brother W. L. Chapman and family are also leaving.

Sunday, July 26 immediately after the regular services, a crowd of the Saints with their families gathered at the City Waterworks Park with well-filled lunch baskets, after a regular picnic was held, lasting well into the evening. Over fifty were present. A nice Bible was presented to Brother I. G. Whipple, and other church books to Roy, Mabé, and Nellie, in recognition of the services rendered, and as a momento of the Saints of Topeka. We feel the loss in our membership, and in the service rendered by them.

Graceland is also leaving Topeka soon, to enter the vineyard, having resigned his position as salesman in a large furniture store here.

A surprise party was held in honor of Brother and Sister Chapman at the home of Brother and Sister F. O. Kelley, the evening of July 30, at which ice cream was served and a pleasant time had by all present, though the weather was extraordinarily cold for this season. The prayers and best wishes of the Saints go with Brother and Sister Chapman.

Our attendance at the services last Sunday was low on account of the reunion going on at Netawaka, but when it is over we expect to go forward with renewed vim and vigor in all departments.

District missionary Charles E. Harpe was prevailed upon to come to Topeka from Netawaka and address a class of young people, including several theological students, at the Central Congregational Church the evening of August 2. This class is studying various religions and denominations and invited us to give them a speaker to lecture on our belief. We were fortunate in procuring Brother Harpe for this purpose and occasion, and several of the Saints attended the meeting. It is felt that some misunderstandings as to our belief were cleared away, and much good was done in presenting the truth. We appreciate the opportunity given to declare ourselves, and the opening made will be followed by the distribution of our tracts. The Central Congregational is one of the largest churches of Topeka.

We are looking forward to the reunion of Little Sioux District, which will be held in Woodbine August 21 to 30.

Woodbine, Iowa

August 4.—Since last report our hearts have gone out in sympathy to those in trouble, and we have felt to “weep with them that weep.”

Brother Joseph Seddon has lain under affliction’s hand for four weeks, and many have been the petitions offered up to a loving Father, but in the wisdom of the Infinite, only temporary relief has been given.

Sister Elsie Butterworth recently underwent a very serious operation, but her faith in God brought the much needed blessing; she was relieved from suffering and is gradually regaining her health.

All have been made sad through the passing of little Murray, son of Brother E. A. Rosenberger, who departed this life July 31. Although yet in his tenth year, he realized responsibility to the extent that while suffering severe pain he manfully did his part at the piano during the Religious program on July 26, and the whole community was shocked some hours later when a specialist pronounced his case infantile paralysis. He had a very bright mind, also implicit faith in his Redeemer, as many times when suffering he called the family to his bedside for prayer, and when it was made known to him that he could not long remain, made complete arrangements for his funeral. After bidding loved ones good-by he raised his eyes to heaven and said, “Oh, God, take me!” and beckoning with his hand another “good-by” to sorrowing friends, the spirit left the little pain-racked body for the paradise of God, where pain and sorrow are not known.

Brother Fred A. Fry, who stood so faithfully by Murray through much of his illness, and that by the child’s request, officiated at the funeral, and during the discourse fittingly said that because of his faith and talents “God must have needed him in the angelic choir.” May the heavenly Father comfort those who mourn.

Brother Charles F. Putnam occupied our pulpit recently, also Brother Raymond Smith of Biglers Grove August 2. May there be thankfulness in the heart of every Saint for the privileges and opportunities the gospel offers. A splendid spirit was manifested in our last sacramental service.

We are looking forward to the reunion of Little Sioux District, which will be held in Woodbine August 21 to 30.

Rhodes, Iowa

August 7.—Children’s Day was observed here the last Sunday in June. There was a good attendance and a well-rendered program, which we believe was appreciated by all. Those attending from a distance were Mrs. Nellie Holmes and family of Morton; Professor and Mrs. Hild of Collins; Alva and Clyde Walden of Marshalltown; and Blair Roush of Iowa City.

Following the program, V. G. Lents gave a short talk, founded on Paul’s words found in Philippians 4: 8, in which he admonishes the Saints to think on the things that are honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report. E. G. Beye was the speaker in the evening. He gave a good talk on the first principles of the gospel.

C. M. Richeson and E. G. Beye met with the reunion committee and may now look forward to a reunion at Runnells. Brother Richeson spoke for the Saints at Runnells at eleven o’clock; in the afternoon they motored to Knoxville, where Elders Higdon

and Tordoff were conducting a series of tabernacle meetings, with good attendance and splendid interest.

Sunday, August 2, was a busy day in the Rhodes Branch. At a quarter to eight in the morning, they met at the church for baptismal service. After prayer, and singing that beautiful old song, "We will follow none but Jesus," V. G. Levene conducted two very little lads into the kingdom, one of whom was his own little son, Donald. It was a beautiful baptism; and the hallowed influence of the Holy Spirit's presence brought the tears to our eyes.

After the baptismal service there was a short session of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school and Relief Society. Then came the Sunday school, followed by the confirmation and sacrament service. A quiet, peaceful influence pervaded the service throughout, and the time was well taken up in prayer, song, and testimony.

The Des Moines district reunion convenes the fourteenth of this month. Almost the entire branch, we believe, expect to attend, at least a part of the time.

The long dry spell was broken yesterday when there came a gentle, steady, all-day rain without wind, thunder, or lightning. "Come let us rejoice and give thanks unto Him, for his mercy endureth forever."

Ottumwa, Iowa

Some changes have been made here this last month. Brother Thomas Richards was transferred to Dubuque, Iowa, by the Milwaukee Railroad, for which he has been working as foreman. His wife and daughter expect to follow him in a few weeks. We are sorry to lose them. Should there be any Saints near or in Dubuque they will be glad to meet them.

Brother D. T. Williams and wife left here for Burlington, Iowa, where they expect to make their home with his son. Brother Williams was the first president of the Ottumwa Branch, thirty-four years ago, coming from Keokuk, Iowa. During those many years he has rendered some very faithful service. He is one of the faithful few who have endeavored to keep the flag flying here. He is now in his seventy-sixth year. During last year he made a record number of priest's visits. The priesthood here had a farewell supper in his honor at the Ballingall Hotel. A very fine supper was served, and a good time spent. The Department of Women gave Sister Williams a useful gift. At our sacramental service August 2, our brother made his farewell remarks. The words of the song "Blest be the tie that binds," were fulfilled and were timely expressed. It seemed like a funeral. Not a dry eye was seen. The Saints and also some of the neighbors who were present were very sad, as the aged couple is loved by all. Brother Williams is known as Uncle Danny. They are truly a father and mother in Israel, and their places will be hard to fill. Their home was always open to missionaries, where many have stayed while here.

We have also lost by death, Sister E. Kent, who died in a Chicago hospital.

Although we have our sadness we have our joy. The Department of Women had a picnic at the home of Brother and Sister LbPoint, where they entertained their husbands and families. A good time was enjoyed. They had an ice cream social at the home of Sister Plieger. The department, under the direction of Sister E. Hughes, seems to have caught the vision of social activities. Last Sunday they had their annual picnic at Foster Park, where a good time was enjoyed by these little lads into the kingdom, one of whom was his own little son, Donald. It was a beautiful baptism; and the hallowed influence of the Holy Spirit's presence brought the tears to our eyes.

We had the pleasure of having Apostle D. T. Williams at one of our mid-week prayer meetings in July, when he and the pastor blessed the son of Brother and Sister Santee.

Sister D. T. Williams and family, of Lamoni, Iowa, are here visiting her mother, Sister Annie Scott, who has been sick but very patient. She still endeavors to maintain her faith and follows the service of God.

Sister Jane Price, another of the faithful ones, a sister of Brother William Lewis, who has gone to rest, has been very sick. We are happy because our sick ones are receiving blessings after their administration. This strengthens their faith in God.

We have enjoyed the Spirit of the Master at our prayer meetings, which have been a source of strength.

Brother Blake has preached some good sermons, and the pastor has done what he could to present some of the truths of the gospel and endeavors to load us on.

Request for Prayers

Sister A. V. Moore, of Rupert, Idaho, was healed at one time when severely afflicted with tuberculosis. For about a year she was able to do her own work, but now is again in bed. Her fever is high, and she is discouraged to quite an extent. She has written a good account of her blessing and of her desire to be blessed again of God, which is being published in full in the columns of Zion's Ensign. She makes the important request, which no Saint should pass unthinkingly, that on Sunday, August 16, the Saints join with her in fasting and prayer that she may be healed of her present affliction.

Will you help Sister Moore by observing the fast and joining in the general prayer?

A Visit to Holden Stake

By the kindness of Brother and Sister Thomas McKevit, my companion and I were privileged to greatly enjoy a visit to the Holden Home. The car ride through the very picturesque country between Independence and Holden was confirmatory of the wisdom of the choice of this as the location of Zion.

We met a number of old-time friends in the home. There we saw Sister Hastings from Seattle, Sister Keeler, Sister Kearney, and Brother Pomery who was present when Joseph Smith took his place as President of the church. We preached to the Saints in their church and attended the Sunday school in the Home in the afternoon. We found order, cleanliness, and a kindly Christian spirit prevalent throughout.

Zion is being fed on very nourishing spiritual food in different parts by Brothers J. F. Martin and R. W. Farrell, who are holding lawn meetings in different parts of the city, each holding his own sheep aided by those in charge of the district where their meetings are held. Some splendid sermons are being delivered. The faith of the Saints is being enlarged.

We enjoyed very much a visit recently to the East Independence Church; also to the Spring Branch congregation, where we were well received and enjoyed speaking to them.

Though located so comfortably in Zion, yet our thoughts often traverse the fields we have occupied from Chicago to California, and from Seattle and British Columbia District to Oklahoma, especially the latter, where there is a little flock without sufficient pastoral care, but of the best kind what they do have, as the nearest elder is eighteen miles in the country, a very efficient man, Elder H. K. Rowland, owning a large ranch which requires much care. Also, Priest H. V. Piatt, also a rancher far in the country. Our association with them the past two winters formed a golden link of gospel love that binds us to them. My companion shares with me in the above. We love the work in El Reno, Oklahoma, and adjoining branches.

We feel satisfied in stating the spirituality of Zion is increasing, judging from the testimonies we hear at the two prayer services each Sunday and from the general outlook.

The test of a revival meeting is not how many new noses we can count at the close of the series of services; but how many of the converts are faithful a year later? Did they join Christ who abides, or the evangelist who travels?

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION
REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS

"There shall not any man among you have saving money conscientiously offered for a given purpose and then never use it for the purpose for which it was contributed. The late General Conference, recognizing this fact, again ordered the building of the Auditorium. This may not be an easy or a speedily accomplished part of the program. The church has already received in round numbers $473,000 for that purpose. Of this in round numbers $282,000 has been used up in current running expenses. We are not arguing as to whether this was right or wrong, simply stating the fact. It will have to be replaced from the sale of real estate which was set aside to protect the Auditorium fund at the time when the money was used. That may be a slow process. There is, according to the Bishop, approximately $100,000 in liquid assets (at once available) with which to begin the building as soon as the way is clear.

A second enterprise approved by the conference is the raising of an endowment for Graceland College. You should remember that Graceland College was founded during the presidency of the late Joseph Smith. Others were associated with him in projecting it, including such persons as Marietta Walker, Bishop E. L. Kelley, W. W. Blair, and others; but I doubt not that President Joseph Smith more than any other one person was responsible for bringing the college into existence. It was, in fact, a part of our general educational program. The church began to establish schools before it was one year old. The first school in what is now greater Kansas City was established by Joseph Smith in 1830 in what is now Troost Park. Schools were established in Kirtland, Far West, Independence, Nauvoo, and finally at Lamoni.

Graceland College has done a big and splendid work. I have traveled a great deal, and wherever I have gone and have met a group of young people in any branch composed of students or former students of Graceland College, almost without exception I have found them active in church work. I am in-

III. Special Enterprises

While the church has its general program, as already outlined, in missionary and pastoral enterprises, it has always from time to time had special enterprises. One of these, for example, the building of the Kirtland Temple, was at one time an important though incidental enterprise, long ago completed. You may say God commanded that work, which is true. Later on, however, there was, for example, the building of the Saints' Home at Lamoni, an incidental but important undertaking; and I recall hearing Bishop Kelley say that while the Home was in process of construction from week to week he did not know where the money was coming from to pay the mason and carpenters, but it always came. He and those associated with him built by faith. Possibly they made some mistakes, for which they were criticized. To-day, however, these mistakes are largely forgotten in the actual things accomplished by them in a constructive way in the carrying out of the vision given to them.

The building of Graceland College, approved by General Conference, was another incidental enterprise long ago completed.

Similarly the late General Conference approved what might be termed three special enterprises which engage our immediate attention; the first of these the building of the Auditorium.

Any person who attended the late conference, not fortunate enough to be a delegate, who struggled to obtain a seat early in the morning and having obtained it perhaps ate his or her meals without leaving that seat in order to hold a place, conscious that in so doing some other person was deprived of a seat—any such person will recognize the need of an adequate auditorium for General Conferences and other purposes. Recognizing this need, three General Conferences in the past five years have ordered the Auditorium built, and that with few adverse votes, so upon that point there would seem to be general agreement.
formed that during the past year nearly one half of the students of Graceland College have worked their way through. Various enterprises fostered by the college, such as rug making, made this possible. Not only have students been helped through college, but they have been trained to enter upon their life work and win for themselves a higher standard of living, which is not only in the interests of the individual but also of the church.

But now rules and regulations have been passed under which any junior college such as Graceland must have an endowment of $200,000 not later than next March. We did not select the time for the raising of this endowment. We were not consulted in the passing of this legislation. Perhaps a more opportune time might be selected; the choice was not ours. The endowment must be raised, or according to President Briggs the college may as well close its doors. We cannot afford to permit the college to be closed and confess that Joseph Smith had a vision which we are not devoted enough to carry out. We cannot afford to confess we began something we cannot finish. That is a humiliating confession for an individual or an institution, and particularly so when the thing begun ought to be finished because of the righteousness resident in it. We cannot even afford to lose our monetary investment in the college. By all means Graceland College should be continued. We can and should raise this endowment, and when it is raised it will greatly relieve the Bishop from the annual burden of meeting the deficit, since the endowment will go a long way toward caring for the college annually. We are not asking you at this time to contribute, but I am asking that you will be prepared and willing to help when the appeal goes forth.

Thirdly, the conference approved the stewardship idea, not only the teaching of the law of stewardships, but also an early effort to put it into practice.

We need not now enter upon a delineation of the law of stewardships. You have already heard it presented from the stand and through the HERALD. This is referred to as an incidental or special part of the program; however, it is a part of our general program. We have had stewardships in theory nearly one hundred years, not altogether in theory, either, because the missionaries have always been considered as stewards. They have received, not according to their ability, but according to their “needs and just wants,” which is the law of stewardships. But the commandment given in section 101 is that every man should be considered as a steward.

In conclusion, by way of summary, we have set forth as being on the church’s program, first, our missionary enterprises; second, pastoral enterprises; and thirdly, special enterprises, such as the three named: The Auditorium, the endowment for Graceland College, and stewardships.

This may not be an easy program. It may not be one that will be worked out in a short time. Perhaps it would be easier to discontinue our missionary efforts; it would be easier to go slow in our pastoral work; it would be easier to forget about the Auditorium and ignore the obligation involved in the receipt of money to build it; it would be easier to close the doors of Graceland College; it would be easier not to assail the great problem of stewardships which is a part of the whole stupendous problem of Zion; but we said at the outset that this had been referred to as the latter-day work.

Thomas Carlile remarked that humanity has no use for an easy religion. Humanity needs and demands a religion that calls out the heroic; a religion that calls for the element of sacrifice—sacrifice in the interests of splendid ideals.

And surely our splendid program, beginning with the missionary appeal and carrying forward the great ideals of Zion, can and does arouse in us all that is fine and heroic and sacrificial. And in this work remember that all are called, the burden and responsibility rests upon all of us, all should be laborers together. Remember also the admonition given of the Lord through the late Prophet Joseph Smith, “Let nothing separate you from each other.” Let us draw closer together rather than foster a “separatist” movement. And to this admonition was added the further one: “Let nothing separate you from the work.”

The Ties of Christian Brotherhood

One of the most expressive and precious hymns sung by the congregations of Christian people is number 52 in the Saints’ Hymnal, “Blest be the tie that binds.” If we sing this hymn carefully, knowing something of its history, there is generated in us a new Christian brotherhood.

The social services of the church on the Lord’s Day, and in midweek at the cottages, homes, and other places of meeting, should and do find many ways to enhance this spirit, which will make it finally possible for Saints of widely different mental and spiritual habits and training to see eye to eye; or, otherwise expressing the same idea, to “be equal,” to “be one.”

In this issue of the HERALD there is published from the pen of Joseph Dewsnup, Manchester, England, an account of the life and death of Elder William Spargo, of Wigan. This writing is meant for a tribute to Elder Spargo, and it is successful—but it does more. It is given space in the HERALD’s crowded columns for three reasons; it is doubtful if we could give it space were it not for all three, as space is valuable now. These reasons are:

1. It cannot be carefully read without doing the work of binding the Saints of America more closely to the Saints of England by the tie of Christian fellowship and common sympathy and understanding. This binding together while separated by many miles of land and sea is the substantial stone in the redemption of Zion—the land and the pure in heart.

2. Holding up the accomplishments of a humble Saint before the eyes of young and middle-aged active Saints of the hastening time is a sure incentive to like achievement.

3. We read of the affection of Jesus for John and of John for Jesus, and we are purified—our affection is refined. In the affection here unostentatiously depicted, of William for Joseph and Joseph for William, we have an example in the life of today which has a strong tendency to refine and purify.

We believe we have assigned good and sufficient reason for breaking some of our rules and publishing this contribution almost verbatim, and we invite you to write the Herald a card, stating in fifty words or less your thought in connection with it. Do it right now, lest you forget, or perhaps are unable to find as opportune a moment as the present one. Address, Herald Editors, 103 South Osage Street, Independence, Missouri.

Reunion Season Nears Its Close

The reunion season of the church in America opens in June and draws to a close in the early days of September. Two weeks from now the last of them will be rushing towards their closing days, and the Saints will revert to their local congregations and resume their routine. This routine has been interfered with to some extent, and will necessarily be restored else instead of gain coming from the attendance of the Saints at the district or sectional meeting, there would come loss.

What Has Been the Gain?

Men and women of large branches have met with men and women of small branches, and all of these have met the isolated Saints who by a herculean effort have come to get in personal touch with a body of Saints. And this association, this participation of these various classes in the activities of a common meeting has absorbed or dissolved the provincialism which has been growing as they have been confined to their narrower fields and manifestations.

The gospel has been heard from the lips of ministers whose voices are new to the ears of the Saints.

A variety of gospel experience has come to the souls of those who have been confined, possibly, to a limited experience, as in social meeting the testimonies of the stanch and tried members have been interspersed with the accounts of conversion by those whose voices are new in the gatherings of the Saints. Newly acquired and precious zeal has mingled with the fervor and quiet faith resulting from years of service in the ranks of the church and of its ministry.

Common living accommodations, including shelter, food, hours of retiring, rising, worship, amusement, study, rest, have been shared for a week or ten days. Men have become tired in looking after the welfare of the camp and the conducting of the meetings; women have expended their strength in the like manner and in the protection and direction of the children; youth has exercised the talent, the sprouting genius, the new faith, the profuse energy in contributory ways to the advancement of the meeting; and children have played together and have learned to divide the use of means of amusement: the benefit to every man, woman, and child, is incalculable—they are closer in the bonds of brotherhood.

So, as we sense the fact that from the reunions of Canada and the East; from Kirtland where the Temple of the Saints adorns one of the beauty spots of what was once an organized stake of Zion and still is a place for the gathering of saintly reserve strength; from Lamoni which is a wonderful little city where Saints in large number live under favorable conditions and train the young of the church for future valiant service, a community always spending itself yet we trust constantly growing richer and having more to spend; from Nauvoo the beautiful, in the State of Illinois, and Far West in Missouri, from points in Kansas, Colorado, and the Far West, to their homes all over the broad land, Saints are returning by automobile and railway and other modes of conveyance, the church is taking to every nook and corner of its habitation fresh installments of knowledge, spirituality, brotherly love, and always and on a broader and deeper knowledge of what it means to be engaged in this great latter-day evangel.

We cannot calculate the good in such a manner as to tabulate a statistical table, but the men who travel from place to place in the church may sense the gain just as definitely as though we could.

For this reason we rejoice to see the growth of the reunion spirit.
A Faith That Works

BY A. B. PHILLIPS

It has been said that everything in the world may be classed under one of two headings. It is either good for something, or it is good for nothing. That which is good for nothing cannot benefit its possessor, but it may do him considerable harm, for he may depend upon it at a time when important results are involved. He who wisely chooses the things that are good for something and rejects those that are good for nothing is the person who succeeds in life. One who does not do this never accomplishes many things worth while, and usually is being constantly disappointed in the results for which he is responsible. This is the natural fate of one who constantly uses poor judgment and does not properly learn by experience. The fundamental reason for his failure is in himself, however much he may dislike to admit it.

In early colonial days a number of settlers discovered an immense quantity of golden grains along the Virginia coast. Excitement ran high, for they believed a greater fortune was now assured them than Croesus ever dared dream of. With feverish haste they proceeded to load their ship with the precious treasure until they feared it might sink if more should be added, upon which they sent the vessel to England. Great suspense followed, for the voyage was long and dangers lurked in the trackless deep, but at last they landed safely only to discover that their prized cargo was nothing but fool's gold, or common pyrites. Great disappointment was the natural consequence of their enlightenment, of course.

There is a vast difference between credulity and faith. The hope of one is largely pinned to chance, and poor chance at that. The other is founded upon truth and right principles—a foundation which is secure both now and for the future ages. Faith is an active, not a passive principle, and produces results according to the extent of its operation, for it is to be used with intelligence and according to law, and when so used it is as certain as the law by which it works.

Worldly Wisdom and Spiritual Stupidity

Jesus had to deal with people occasionally who were much like many in the world to-day, having worldly sagacity but spiritual obtuseness. One of his most pointed parables concerned the man who had accumulated so much of earthly goods that he built greater barns to hold them, thinking that his soul could "eat, drink, and be merry" for many years. What a shock it must have been to hear the following words:

But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then where shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.—Luke 12: 20, 21.

As fall the leaves of autumn to mingle with forgotten dust, so are men and their possessions and plans swallowed up in the tide of oncoming life, and soon only a hazy memory of them remains. All the worldly goods they acquired must be left behind when they depart from the shore of life. In the other world they are enriched only by the good they have done, but there their possessions shall never be lost, while here they may enjoy only a few years of life at best. He who is truly wise, then, will acquire that which he may continue to enjoy in the next life. To believe that he may live selfishly here, and yet enjoy eternal life, is credulity; for the divine law states otherwise. The very spirit of the law of life is opposed to selfishness, for it is the spirit of charity—the love of God for man.

He whose energies are spent on himself and his own has not really begun to live. He little knows the sweetness of the more abundant life which Jesus says was the object of his mission among men. He may be wise in the things of the world, but the Lord has warned us that "the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." Let none of us be so foolish as to lightly esteem the life that never dies, and let us not neglect the things of which that life is composed.

The Testing of Faith

Abraham believed God and acted upon that belief. The test of his faith was his works. James rejected the notion of a passive faith, when he said, "I will show thee my faith by my works." Faith is something to be demonstrated by deed. To profess appreciation for the restored gospel is well, but to show that appreciation by giving treasures for the cause is very much better and more acceptable to God. What we give is the test, and no person need be deceived even for a moment concerning where his heart is. Jesus has explained that, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Religion is essentially a thing to be demonstrated; its profession is a matter of less importance. And to be all that God meant it to be, it must be supreme in the activities of life. The things we render to God should be of first consideration, not secondary. Even the Mosaic law, the "schoolmaster until Christ," required both the first-born of man and beast and the first of the first fruits of the ground to be set apart to God.

Hear the great lawgiver:

And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Sanctify unto me all the first-born, whatsoever openeth the womb among the children of Israel, both man and of beast: it is mine. -Exodus 13: 1, 2.

The first of the first fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the Lord thy God.—Exodus 23: 19.

And that we should bring the first fruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine and of oil, unto the priests to the chambers of the house of our God; and the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage.—Nehemiah 10: 37.

And the first of all the first fruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house.—Exekiel 44: 30.

The reality of our faith is manifest when we make God and his work our first consideration, instead of putting him last. It is what Paul calls the "faith that worketh by love," concerning which James tells us that it is by works that faith is made perfect. A faith that works produces results, for results are, the objects of faith and are proportionate to it, so that the greater the faith the greater shall be the results.

Sowing and Reaping

Life is like a great field in which are being sown good seed and tares. And we are doing the sowing, day by day. If we sow tares we must not expect to reap wheat, for tares do not grow wheat, and the good book says: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." It ought not to be difficult, therefore, to learn what sort of a harvest our sowing shall produce. We need only to examine the seed we are sowing, and surely we ought not to sow any seed before we learn what kind of seed they are, lest we reap to our sorrow and loss. The sacred word suggests the use of caution:

For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.—Galatians 6: 8.

Not only shall we reap the kind of harvest that we sow, but our reaping shall also be in accordance with our sowing in quantity. Therefore he who desires to avoid the labor of much reaping may ensure that result simply by sowing his seed with a sparing hand, for the record informs us:

He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver.—2 Corinthians 9: 6, 7.

From what we have observed it is evident that faith cannot stand alone. Its potency and worth are found in its motivations. Its supreme dynamic is love, and when the love of God and the love of man guide in our lives we can remove mountains by faith. Obstacles become subject to our will, and devotion sublimates our labor, for we realize that we are coworkers together with God. To give our lives, our tithes, our offerings, and all our spiritual and physical powers becomes a glad privilege. It is a faith that works:

For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. —2 Corinthians 4: 6.

The Spirit of Stewardship

BY EDWARD RANINE

Altruism: The principle of living and acting for the interest of others.—Webster.

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13: 35.

But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?—1 John 3: 17.

And no one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 11: 4.

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8.

In the hearts of most normal persons the spirit of altruism reigns, and among pioneer people it is especially strong because of their poverty and dependence upon each other. As wealth increases and poverty disappears, so does the spirit of altruism vanish. Dependence upon God and neighbors is fertile soil in which altruism will grow. In an organized manner it expresses itself through fraternal societies.

Because of the methods in use in the conducting of business and management of industries, it is impossible for all men to have steady employment or receive a compensation for their service which will permit them to supply their needs and just wants. The farmer has his difficulty in another way—the high price of land makes it almost impossible for a poor man to buy a farm. It will cost more now to make one payment in purchasing a farm than it took to pay for an entire farm fifty years ago. There are only a few men managing large industrial institutions that will pay all their employees, skilled and unskilled, a wage sufficient to supply them with the necessities of home.

Our heavenly Father foreknew the conditions that would exist in these latter days, when Zion was to be built up and be a haven of rest to all his people who would keep his commandments. And with that foreknowledge it pleased him to give instructions by the spirit of revelation, supplementary to that found in the New Testament and Book of Mormon, to carry into effect his law that would eliminate poverty and bring about a condition of equality.
That law we call the law of stewardships. All the wisdom that good men can muster will not be sufficient to devise a plan to accomplish the Lord's purpose. If we hope to succeed, we must make our effort in the Lord's appointed way; it would be folly to try any other plan.

If material wealth were the only benefit to be derived from the operation of the law of stewardships, it would not be worth spending so much time talking about it. Men of the world have devised a great number of good plans to accumulate wealth, but we need a plan which will develop spirituality and eliminate selfishness at the same time.

In the sixteenth chapter of Luke, Jesus is reported as trying to teach a lesson on the proper use of wealth in his story of the unjust steward. He says, "If, therefore, ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?" Is not that a true principle? Who does an employer reward? Most certainly the faithful employee, by promoting to more responsible positions and an increase in wages! The true riches will be the bestowal of spiritual blessings that come from the indwelling of the Holy Spirit that will "guide us into all truth" and give us eternal life in the world to come.

In Doctrine and Covenants 70:3, the Lord informs us that all who belong to his church are subject to the law of stewardships, and whether we are engaged in the spiritual affairs of the church or in temporal matters of business and industry, the law applies to us. The concluding admonition is, "Nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld." If we are not faithful in the use of our material wealth, our heavenly Father will withhold from us his Holy Spirit that will give us light, wisdom, and understanding.

In order to make a start to begin life under the law of stewardships, it is not necessary that we should be perfect in knowledge, wisdom, and righteousness; but there must be a fair and reasonable degree of those principles well grounded in us before we can start with any hope of success. About eighty years ago Robert Owens, a manufacturer and philanthropist of Great Britain, bought in southern Indiana about three thousand acres of improved land with all necessary buildings and equipment, from a German colony, and invited a sufficient number of colonists with their families to occupy it without cost to them. He had paid one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for it. They could not work together in such a way as to bring success, and in less than three years they had changed their form of government seven times, and finally failed. They had not made that measure of Christian development which would enable them to work together in peace and harmony.

The following story will illustrate the principle involved:

Mr. Jones was a banker living in the town of Z—and had plans made for a very fine brick house. Near the place where he intended to build his home was a bank of clay with sufficient material to make millions of brick. He wrote to a friend in a near-by city, a builder and contractor, to come and build his house for him, and that he had all the material ready to begin the work. The contractor, with a sufficient number of mechanics with their tools and necessary equipment, went to the town of Z—and with Mr. Jones, visited the building spot. The contractor looked around and saw all the necessary building material except the brick, and remarked, "Mr. Jones, where is the brick?" He replied, "There is in that big clay bank enough to make several million bricks." The contractor looked surprised and said, "Mr. Jones, that is the raw material from which brick is made, but I am not a brickmaker, and you must make the brick before I can begin to build your house." Unless we purify ourselves and become a peculiar people and zealous of good works (Titus 2:14), we will be raw material, using the law of stewardships, it is not necessary that we begin life under the law of stewardships, and whether we are engaged in the spiritual affairs of the church or in temporal matters of business and industry, the law applies to us. The conclusion of the story is, "And the whole body of the church when organized." Read all of section 128, Doctrine and Covenants, and especially verses one (the latter part) and six.

Elder F. T. Mussel writes from Mallard, Iowa, July 16, to the First Presidency: "I am trying to keep on the move where wisdom seems to direct and where I think I can be of service, yet I find it quite a task during this extremely warm weather to keep up an interest in church work; and, too, right at this time it seems that everybody is busy with farm work. It is my desire while in these parts to try to get in touch with some of the isolated members of the church who seldom get any recognition from the church; yet I find it a difficult matter to reach them, as they are much scattered and do not seem to want to let their whereabouts be known. I am in hopes that after the busy season passes we may be able to get some more interest awakened among the membership."

Sunlight for the Babies

So says Doctor Martha M. Eliot, director of child hygiene of the Children’s Bureau, United States Department of Labor, urging “more sunlight for babies.”

Doctor Eliot is directing a demonstration of the control of rickets in New Haven, Connecticut, in which the Children’s Bureau and the Pediatric Department of the Yale school of medicine are cooperating. This demonstration has proved again the power of the sun in preventing and curing rickets.

Says Doctor Eliot:

In the campaign for better babies and healthier children, more stress must be laid upon sunlight. The baby or little child who has been kept out of doors and tanned by the sun is strikingly healthy and vigorous in contrast to the pale, flabby baby or child who has been kept indoors.

When the sun’s rays are analyzed by the physicist, it is found that some of them produce visible light which can be divided by a prism into the well-known spectrum of colors, red, orange, yellow, green, blue, and violet. It is also found that beyond each end of this visible spectrum there are invisible rays; at the red end, the infra-red rays which produce heat, at the violet end, the ultra-violet rays and X rays. It is these ultra-violet rays which have so powerful an effect on living matter, destroying bacteria, healing tuberculosis and rickets. When sunlight shines through window glass, the visible light and the heat rays pass through, but the ultra-violet rays do not penetrate beyond the glass.

Sun baths in the direct sunlight are the simplest method of giving the baby enough ultra-violet light. Sun baths should be begun when the baby is about three or four weeks old. On this first day the baby’s hands should be exposed to the direct sun for a few minutes. Care must be taken not to burn the skin. A slight reddening of the skin each day will gradually tan the baby. Unless the baby is accustomed to the sunlight from exposure indoors, the first sun bath should be for ten or fifteen minutes only. Each day thereafter the exposure to the sun should be increased from three to five minutes until the baby lies directly in the sun one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon. Every few days the amount of body surface exposed should also be increased, at first slowly, but as the spring days grow warmer, more rapidly. After the face and hands have become accustomed to the sunlight, the sleeves may be rolled up one at a time and the arms exposed, beginning with a few minutes and increasing daily. Very soon the stockings may be taken off one at a time for a few minutes each. Gradually the baby becomes accustomed to the sun bath, and by the middle of May or first of June sun baths can be given to the whole body. In the heat of July and August care must be taken to give the sun baths in the early morning before ten o’clock or in the afternoon after three o’clock. The head should be protected when the baby is in the hot sun between ten and three o’clock.”

Visits Toronto Reunion

The similarity of customs, manners, business methods, and even race on both sides of the American Canadian boundary line makes it sometimes difficult for an American to realize that when in Canada he is on “foreign soil”; but on crossing the line he is made conscious of the change of country by the official curiosity of both customs and immigration officers. This ordeal, however, is soon over, and as we left Detroit on Friday night, the 24th of July, before the train had been ferried over the Detroit River to Windsor, our baggage (Mrs. Smith’s and mine) had been inspected and “chalked”; and Brother Carmichael, by retiring early into an upper berth, his bag with him, escaped, not even knowing the inspectors had passed through the car. Off from Windsor at last we retired to our bunks for some rest before reaching Toronto.

On time the next morning at Toronto, we were met at the station by Dr. Charles McLean, father of the international grandchild,” made famous by Elbert A.’s pen, which baby is one of the cutest little “red heads” one is likely to see in a day’s journey. We arrived early and breakfastless; but the latter condition was remedied by “Fay,” Doctor’s wife, who had remained behind to care for the grandparents for us. We were a hungry trio, and did justice to her well-prepared breakfast. After breakfast Doctor went to his office and his patients, while the rest of us, under Fay’s guidance, went in the McLean Edition of “490” to the custom’s office to rescue a suit of clothes sent by Sister Carmichael in response to an S. O. S. from her husband, not the Elbert A. soil, and must have forgotten about “duties.” On the way down we “joshed” Brother Carmichael a bit about the amount of duty he’d likely have to pay. But, whether due to the Bishop’s ministerial appearance or Fay’s famous smile, or that emergency suits are not dutiable, no import dues were collected, and Brother Carmichael returned to the car smiling, with the needed suit under his arm.

That smile broadened a few moments later when Doctor McLean said: “Say, brethren, there are no meetings at the camp to-day, and you’ll not be needed there, and there’s a double header on between Toronto and Rochester. What d’ y’ say?” Of course we were all “sick” and needed recreation at Hanlan’s Point. So it was arranged. A hasty luncheon was taken at the station, and for about two and one half hours we watched on Canadian soil a fine display of the American pastime by two teams composed almost entirely of Americans, but one team under Toronto’s colors, and the crowd seemed to be as enthusiastic fans as are the Americans. A thin, drizzling rain at times threatened to end the game; but the double-header was finished, both being won by Toronto by splendid teamwork as well as brilliant individual playing. We all thoroughly enjoyed the recreation, even Murray the Red having a good time, being a little tot who seems to possess the happy faculty of easily adapting himself to circumstances. It was the first professional game Mrs. Smith and I had seen together for many months.

Shortly after the grounds were left, rain came in earnest, and by the time supper had been prepared and eaten, and the seventeen miles driven to Woodbridge, where the reunion grounds are, we found the camp wet, but the campers happy, as usual.

Woodbridge is a small town about seventeen miles north and a little west of Toronto, touched by both the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railway. It is also served by “Radical,” or the electric traction line. It is also on the Humber River, a stream of water which empties into Lake Ontario in the western outskirts of Toronto. The camp lies north and west of Woodbridge about three fourths of a mile, on a tract of about ten acres owned by the Toronto District. It is peculiarly suited, in a picturesque region, on the Humber River, with possibilities of having the present lack of bathing and water sports removed by some work and planning. We found quite a number of tents on the ground; but the camp’s propinquity to Toronto in this day of easy and quick transportation is responsible for the small number of campers unoccupied by the numbers which gather evenings and week-ends.

The “stand-bys,” Bishop McLean, “Dave” Pycock, Alice McLean, Leslie Prentiss, and others, were on hand busy as bees, looking after the efficiency of the camp and the comfort of the campers.

On Sunday morning the reunion was off in full blast, and with an attendance which filled the tent to overflowing from the early prayer service to the close of the evening preaching service. An early hour saw Brethren Floyd McDowell, G. T. Griffiths, and James Pycock of the general ministry at hand, ready to do their part, so that with the later arrival of “Uncle John” Shields and the various local brethren of the priesthood, there was no lack of talent to carry on the work of the reunion.

Zion and Her Problems

All day Sunday Zion was the theme, for at the morning and evening hour I spoke on Zion and stewardships, as did Bishop Carmichael in the afternoon. That the Saints present were interested there is no doubt, for their many questions presented when opportunity was given evidenced that fact. And on Monday Zion was again the theme, for in the morning Floyd M. began his classes, to run through the reunion, in which he purposed to present an intensive study of Zion and her problems.

Corner Stone of Woodbridge Church

Besides a prayer meeting and three preaching services on the 26th, there was another exercise of considerable interest; for at two o’clock the corner stone of the Woodbridge Church was laid, in which ceremony I had the pleasure of wielding the trowel. The wall was laid, in which ceremony I had the pleasure of wielding the trowel. The ceremonies were under the quiet and unobtrusive direction of Brother “Sam,” with District President David Pycock in charge, and Gomer T. Griffiths, Bishop McLean, and myself taking our parts. May divine direction and support be vouchsafed to the early builders of the Saints who constitute the newest branch of the Toronto District.

Monday was a busy day, for with writing all forenoon while Floyd M. conducted his classes, and with conferences with officials and more writing in the afternoon, the time for camp recreations, the day passed quickly despite the rain. The evening saw a goodly crowd out to hear Bishop Carmichael, who with his practical presentation of stewardships held the close attention of the audience throughout the session.

Off Again for Onset

That evening we bade good-by to the Saints on the reunion grounds, for next day Brother Carmichael, Mrs. Smith, and I were to go on eastward, towards Onset, leaving the other brothers already mentioned, together with Brother Curtis, momentarily expected, to “carry on” at Woodbridge.

A Wonderful Water Trip

Some half hour late, the Providence at last, with roar of whistle, slips out into the Hudson River and begins her trip down to the bay, around Battery Point, into East River, under Brooklyn Bridge, Williamsburg Bridge, and others, past Governor’s Island, near Statue of Liberty, past Blackwell’s Island, through Hell Gate, out into the sound. It is a trip which is matchless in interest. I have taken it many times, yet I find it all the more so at times. And this time the conditions were particularly favorable. A clear air, bright sun, light wind, we sat on the fore deck and enjoyed every minute of the time till we were well into the sound and the gray of the gathering dusk began to thicken in night.

What a trip it is! The slip from which the ship unberthed is one of scores, large ones, jutting out into the mighty Hudson, on whose bosom there run, gilded, and rolled a multitude of craft, steam, gasoline, row, sail, and what not, whistling, booming, squeaking, screaming, all busy tooting at one another in signals full of meaning to the knowing but to others simply additions to the din. Down the Hudson, around Battery Point, into East River, perhaps the busiest stretch of water in the world, passing as it does... through the heart of one of the densest and greatest centers of population in the world—a center teeming with the activities of industries and endeavors of every description. And what can one say of the skyline of lower New York, only as has been repeatedly said? It is matchless and can be seen only here. And from an upper deck of one of the Fall River Line boats, as it sweeps majestically down the Hudson, curves gracefully around Battery Point, and glides under the bridges and up the channel of East River, that marvelous skyline and mass of great buildings are seen at their best. A thousand points of interest greet the eye, and can one ever tire of making the trip? But the longest lane has a turning, and the most interesting of trips will end. So when the succession of docks and power muneces, and the varied scenes of the city had finally given place to the uniformity of the distant Long Island country shore line, matched by the shore line of the mainland, we left the deck to seek the dining salon. Then, it being a bit late, I sought my bunk, leaving Mrs. Smith at the writing desk, “dropping some lines” homeward. Then, funny thing that it was, she forgot the number of our state-room, and when after the concert by the ship’s orchestra she wanted to retire, she was lost. She had an idea of about where our room was, on the deck; so she tried to locate the room by listening to the snoring. The fact that she failed to locate it thus proves to me that either (her assertions to the contrary notwithstanding) I do not snore or else do so so seldomly that it is not learned to identify it. Either that or else I have learned to sing the night song in such a variety of keys that the purser could not tell her the room number. So she located it—two hours and a sound was lost. She paid her late hours, for, landing early at Fall River, a deck steward, or some other heavy-booted or footed seaman, was doing a marathon or something else on the deck above, and crossed the roof of our cabin at frequent intervals with a mighty tread which fairly shook the cabin. “Oh, what’s the use! Let’s get up!” We did, with the advantage that at the breakfast table we got cream in our cereal instead of the milk served the late comers. “No loss without some gain,” etc.

An early train out of Fall River put us into Onset about eight o’clock in the morning where at the station we were met by Brother E. L. Traver, who in his Franklin took us to the camp. The morning prayer meeting being in session was changed into the activities of another reunion. Of this more later.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Fairview, Montana

July 22.—Branch election brought no change at Fairview. The officers have been sustained for several years just as they now are: President, Elder W. R. Hillman; priest, A. R. Ritter; deacon, Vernon Dittom.

Besides the regular services we have had two enjoyable occasions lately. One Sunday, after the usual meeting at Fairview, most of the flock journeyed by auto about fifteen miles to the home of Brother Ami Briggs and family, where between showers a picnic dinner was disposed of. This family seldom gets to Fairview, and for their benefit and for some nonmembers who were visiting there, a prayer and sacramental service was held, and then a short sermon delivered.

Another Sunday we drove over to Yellowstone River for lunch. The young people are looking forward to a Friday evening out of doors at Brother Hillman’s. A campfire, with ice cream and cake, stories and songs are being provided for.

Several members of the branch attended district conference and reunion at Glasgow. All reported a good time though no action was taken providing for a reunion next year. A. E. RITTER.

Hard at Work in West Virginia

It has been some time since a letter has appeared in the HERALD from the West Virginia District, and although we have been silent in this respect, we have not been idle, and much has been done in this territory.

On May 10 a Sunday school institute was held at Fairmont, with representatives from many different branches in the district, and interest was shown.

The morning part brought Brother J. D. Shower, the new missionary in this district, visited Parkersburg. A few interesting meetings were held, and we were surely glad to have him with us, even though it was but a short time. From here he went to Clarksburg, where quite a number of meetings were held, and just before his departure they had a wiener roast, about twenty attending and all reported having had a splendid time.

The next eventful time was a one-day meeting held June 28 at Toll Gate. Saints were present from Clarksburg (coming by way of automobiles), Parkersburg, and from Columbus, Ohio. Brother Shower was the speaker at the morning hour, assisted by Brother Newton, president of this district, and we also had with us Elder E. E. Pinken, missionary from the Southern Ohio District, and Brother J. D. Williams of Columbus.

Immediately following the morning services the Saints and friends adjourned to a beautiful grove near by, where a delightful lunch was served to all in the good old-fashioned picnic style.

On July 4 a general Sunday school picnic was held at Morgantown, in the grove near the church. Quite a large number were present, as elsewhere, from different parts of the state.

The program of the day began with prayer meeting at half past nine in the morning with Elders McConnaughy and Newton in charge and lasted for one hour and a half, and a splendid spiritual time was enjoyed by all. Immediately following this service were games for the children, and at noon a picnic dinner was served. At half past two a short program was given, appropriate for the day. At the close of the exercises it was announced that July 26 would be rally day in Clarksburg, and all were invited to attend.

At this rally day meeting quite a number were present from the various branches in the district; also Pennsylvania and Ohio were represented. At the evening service Brother Frank Shinn, formerly of Clarksburg but now of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, was the speaker. The subject on the subject of service he was very beautifully given. The Saints expressed themselves as being much helped and encouraged by the many wonderful points made.

The afternoon session was the second Sunday school institute class to be held this year, and was in charge of Brother Harry Smith of Parkersburg, the district Sunday school superintendent, and Brother C. W. German of Morgantown, assistant district superintendent. Many interesting subjects were taken up and discussed, among them the following: “A successful teacher,” "Relation of the Sunday school to the branch"; “How shall we increase the membership of the Sunday school?” “How shall we hold the attention of the beginner?” “Best methods of training the teacher.”

In addition to these subjects, Brother Harry Smith read a most interesting paper showing some of the statistics of the Sunday schools in the district, as well as general information along this line. Also at this meeting the question of adopting the stewardship plan of handling all finances in the branch, Sunday school, and Department of Women was discussed at some length.

Brother James McConnaughy, of Barberton, Ohio, has been in the district since the early part of July and has been very successful at Morgantown where a series of meetings has been held for two weeks. Even though at times the weather was very bad, the interest was good. During this same time Brother J. D. Shower has been holding meetings at Indian Creek with good success.

As I am interested in the work of the Department of Women in this district, I do not want to omit telling a little of the work they are doing. There is a Department of Women organized in each branch in this district, and although small in number in most places they are busily at work. They have a very pleasant duty—to help carry the burden resting upon them. Study classes have been started in some places, and all seem very much interested.

Southern Indiana

On Friday, July 3, Elders O. J. Hawn and Charles H. Fish, accompanied by Sister Hawn and daughter Ina and Sister Fish, left the "Hoosier Capital" via the auto route to attend the two-day meeting at Louisville, Kentucky, at which point we arrived in due season with appetites "whetted" to do justice to the evening meal.

On Saturday, July 4, the Louisville Sunday school held its annual picnic in a beautiful park. Here we spent the day with old friends and new friends, and such a happy gathering as it was, the children, both old and young, indulging in wholesome sports and profitable recreation.

Sunday, July 5, the priesthood of the branch met in the church at eight o'clock, at which a profitable session was held, all expressing a desire for greater unity and earnestness in the work and a determination to move forward. At half past nine the Sunday school was held, and at ten it did one's heart good to see the young folks growing up in the work to take the places of us older ones when the time comes, for come it will, that we will be compelled to lay the burdens down. At the morning hour Brother Hawn delivered a fine sermon, which was much appreciated. In the afternoon the Lord met with us in our sacramental service, speaking words of comfort and cheer to us and manifesting his pleasure in our efforts to do his will. The evening hour was also profitably occupied with a sermon by Brother Hawn, all feeling that our first two-day meeting had been a decided success.

On Monday, July 6, we visited Saints at New Albany and held a well-attended service in their hall in the evening.

Tuesday, July 7, we motored to Corydon, the old territorial and first State capital of Indiana. The old State Capitol still stands intact, but the old "Constitution Elm," the tree under which the constitution of Indiana was written, has succumbed to the ravages of disease, though it still stands a waymark in the progress of our State. Here we were well received by the Saints who had comfortably lodged at the home of Brother Brown, at whose home we held service that evening, and the following morning we went out on "the ridge" or "the knobs." "Some hills," says Brother Brown. We enjoyed our visit with the Saints at this place but missed the home of "Uncle Jimmy Wynn" to visit; however, we thought and spoke of him.

On Wednesday we motored to Marengo and visited the branch at that place, met with them in prayer service Wednesday night, visited with them on Thursday, and Thursday night Brother Hawn preached for them.

Friday we returned to New Albany. We took the "way-boat," the Steamer Southland, for Derby, the home of the former President, Brother V. D. Baggett, at which point we arrived at half past six, Saturday morning, having had a very enjoyable trip. We were met at the wharf by Brother William T. York, who escorted us to his home, where Sister York prepared the breakfast for us. After our morning meal, Brother "Johnnie" Glenn took us by auto to the foot of what Brother Hawn thought were the "lastling hills." Well, I can say they have lasted as long as I have known them, and how long they will continue I cannot say, but look just as formidable and are just as easy (?) to climb. We arrived at the church and opened our services with a good prayer meeting in the forenoon, round table discussion in the afternoon, and in the evening Brother Hawn delivered a good sermon which was well received.

On Sunday the Saints met in Sunday school capacity with a good attendance, at which time the school organization was perfected, and the writer was the speaker at the morning hour. In the afternoon we held sacramental service, the meeting being characterized by the presence of the Spirit, with marked interest in the young people, Brother Glenn, being called to the office of priest of the Aaronic order, which office he accepted, and was ordained and set apart to that position. In the evening Brother Hawn delivered another fine sermon, and the Saints felt they had been strengthened and built up in the faith and hope of the gospel.

Monday morning Brother Leonard and Sister Houston Good and by the way they are two of the main spokes that make the wheel go round in the Hope Branch at Derby, drove us to Marengo. Derby is located in Perry County, a county that boasts of six miles of railroad, a place where you can get close to nature and where nature will get close to you—they have a tiny red insect there that they call a "chigger." They say, "The merry little chigger, is an awful little digger," and I believe they are right. I've heard the boys who participated in the World War say there were times when they had to take a shovel and dig themselves in; they ought to take lessons from that same "little chigger," for he certainly knows how; he must have a steady steam shovel. Anyway, we know he likes Fish, and we are persuaded he hasn't very much aversion to Hawn. But God has a people there, and their hearts are as big as the hills upon which they live, and their faith is as enduring. From Marengo we proceeded to New Albany by way of the "iron horse and steel ribbons," where we met with the Saints again, Brother Hawn being the speaker.

Tuesday morning we left for home, "the Hoosier Capital," arriving safely about two o'clock, grateful to get back home and in some places, and all seemed to do justice to the evening meal.

Pensacola, Florida

The Saints of the Pensacola Branch have been very busy, having attended the singing school and going to the reunion held at the Alaflora Branch. Our people were well represented, some of them staying over for the entire week, others for a shorter time.

Sunday morning twenty-five of the Saints made the trip, going in Brother Dungan's truck. Others were in touring capacity and spent a very enjoyable day. The trip seemed only too short when we realized that our pleasure had come to a close. We hope to meet all the Saints again at the next reunion.

We had the pleasure of having Brothers H. O. Smith and John Blackmore with us for Wednesday night prayer meeting. They came down with Brother Rudd to visit with the Saints of this branch for a few days. Brother Blackmore was very much pleased to meet so many young people, encouraged them, and pleaded with them to prepare themselves for the great work that they most surely will be called upon to do. He also urges a young people's convention, and with such words of encouragement we feel that the young people of the South will step forward, and for this end we will surely work.

Our work here is indeed prospering, and our pastor, Brother Rudd, finds time to go out and assist others. His work has been mostly at Milton. He and Brother May report very favorable conditions there, Brother May having just closed a successful meeting, baptizing several and creating a good interest.

The request that the next district conference be held at this place was granted, and in connection with the conference we hope to have our church dedicated.

We have chosen anew our officers for this year, and we feel we are in shape for real work. We are truly enthusiastic over such bright prospects, for we want to help redeem Zion, giving all the honest souls of this place a real chance at the true gospel.
Fresno Dedicates Her Church

FRESNO, CALIFORNIA. July 29.—July 19 occurred the dedication of our church building—with our district president, J. D. White, presiding. Elder John B. Carmichael, first president of the branch, gave a short sketch of how the branch began and of the struggles and successes of its early days.

Sister L. Norwood, the branch clerk, had compiled a brief history of the time of the organization down to the present date, which she read at this service.

Words cannot express the feeling of gratitude we felt by having with us two of the members of the Quorum of Twelve, Apostles J. A. Gillen and Clyde F. Ellis. Apostle Gillen delivered the dedication address, using two of the beatitudes as a text: “Blessed are the pure in heart;” and “Blessed are the meek.” One most timely remark we felt very keenly was, the building could not be dedicated unless we dedicated our lives to service also. Every word was full of inspiration and the whole room seemed crowded with love and devotion, and with a desire to consecrate our lives more than ever before to the building of Zion and going thereto. Apostle Ellis offered the dedicatory prayer, which was one that could not have been offered except he be a true servant of our Master.

The district president presented the key to our pastor, Elder A. S. Votaw, telling him to remain humble and full of love, but to be firm; to which Brother Votaw humbly responded.

A. J. Damron, a past president of the branch, dismissed us, after which we took our lunches out to beautiful Rolding Park, where all enjoyed a picnic lunch with ice cream and lemonade. The time was most pleasantly spent by all, including a number from Tulare Branch, who so kindly responded to the invitation extended them. Among the number was Elder J. T. Smith, a vice president of the district. There were Saints from Dimba and Sanger also.

Some were compelled to leave for home before the evening services, but a large number remained to attend the Revival, at which time a special program was given, to which Brother Ellis contributed by a talk about the Society Islands. He sang a song in their native tongue, and we felt that we had been royally entertained.

Apostle Ellis preached in the evening, a very interesting sermon, taking for a text the 27th verse of the first chapter of James: “Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this—to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.” It was a day to go down in history; long to be remembered as full of rich blessings.

The admonition has been given us by different ones in our services that there is a bright future ahead of us if we are humble and faithful. We are greatly encouraged at the feeling of union and love which now reigns.

Thayer, Missouri

July 24.—We have a small branch of Saints here, but we are wide awake as to our duties and are trying to push forward. Two were baptized a few weeks ago by Brother George A. Davis, and we feel that our efforts are not in vain.

We have our Sunday school at the regular hour on Sunday mornings, our prayer meeting Wednesday evenings, and Bible study Friday evenings. Brother George Davis preaches for us every third Sunday. We are always anxious for this night to come. Brother A. M. Baker was with us a few days the first of the month and preached some wonderful sermon. We are looking forward to the time when he will be back.

We desire an interest in the prayers of all the Saints that our lives may be worthy of the blessings of the Master and that we may see others brought into the kingdom.

MRS. HARRY MILLER.

Littleton, Colorado

July 27.—The drought still prevails in this part of Colorado. We have had a few little showers, but the ground has been dry so long it will take days of steady rain to wet down to moist earth.

Sister Kennedy, who suffered a broken limb by being thrown from a street car, is much better. She is on crutches and hopes to be walking soon.

Sister Emery had a fall and broke her arm a few days ago. She is ninety-three years of age, and it is going pretty hard with her.

R. S. Salyards, Jr., is making his home in the city at present; he is much improved in health.

Elder Bruce Brown, on his way to Fort Collins, stopped off in the city in time, Saturday, the 18th, for the Sunday school picnic at Washington Park. He was quite active in the baseball game, and from all appearances baseball or some other violent exercise is just what he needs.

Sister Radcliff acted as umpire of the ball game, and some of her decisions were radical; but she held her own and made the decisions stick. Our worthy pastor, E. J. Williams, hit a home run. He had to slide a long distance to reach home plate, but he came in victorious. Pastor Williams says the Sunday school picnic was a success, and he ought to know.

There have been some baptisms since last writing.

Elder Bruce Brown returned from Fort Collins and was the speaker at the church morning and evening, Sunday, the 26th.

Elder U. W. Greene is expected in the city for Sunday school August 2, and will go from here to Colorado Springs for the conference and reunion.

Brother Homer Shupe came up from Trinidad for the week-end, the 25th, returning Monday morning, taking Elder Bruce Brown with him to administer to Sister Martha Pople, who is quite poorly. Sister Eva Shupe and daughter Veda are spending their vacation in Denver, visiting Sister Shupe’s mother.

Utleyville, Colorado

July 28.—We feel that we have been greatly blessed lately, both temporally and spiriually, the recent rains making everyone smile; and the spiritual blessings which attended the meetings while Brother Bruce Brown was here brought us all nearer to God.

A lady who lives about fifteen miles north of here was baptized during Brother Brown’s recent visit, and several others in her locality are interested. As she had been one of the leading church and Sunday school workers in their vicinity, we believe that the way is opened for the advancement of the gospel cause in a fair field.

Ruby, the daughter of Brother and Sister Berry, and Iryld, daughter of Brother and Sister Lowe, have been baptized recently.

We were challenged by the Wiley Sunday school for an attendance contest during the summer months, and it is our endeavor to run them a hard race. At the close of the contest the two schools will meet about fifty miles north of here for a picnic and a general good time.

We are all proud of our Sunday school and have an attendance of about sixty-five, which we think is good in this thinly settled country. There is a union Sunday school nearby, but about forty percent of our attendants are those who do not belong to the church.

Our picnic at Carrizo Springs the last Sunday in June was a great success. We invited the union Sunday school, and we all had a good time. Such things help to overcome any enmity which others may hold against our faith and draw us nearer together.

Brother H. L. Bausell has recently moved to Graft, so that he will be able to give more attention to the small group of Brother J. D. Curtis’s converts which are located there.
He is now dividing his time between Utleyville and Craft, and we are glad we can say that the work of our Master is still moving forward in this part of his vineyard. Several expect to attend district conference at Colorado Springs next month, and we know from the past that they will be well paid for their trouble. We have recently organized a branch, which we have at seven o'clock Sunday evening. There is much interest taken in the study of the Book of Mormon, and we find the quarters of much assistance to us.

Mindem City, Michigan

July 31.—The past month has been one full of interest to the Saints in this branch. On the Fourth of July the branch met at the home of Brother and Sister Willard Parks and celebrated the day in different amusements, such as volley ball, baseball, swimming, singing, eating, and visiting. The day was enjoyed.

July 22-24 Bishop Hunt was in our midst and gave us wonderful counsel on tithing and stewardship, and we enjoyed every moment spent among us, as having much food for thought. If applied to our lives, it will develop in us the Christlike characters that we should and must have in order to redeem Zion. Some of the sisters here also had the grand privilege of meeting Sister Blanche Edwards, general superintendent of the Department of Women, while at Carsonville and Owendale. It was a wonderful privilege to meet such a woman as Sister Edwards, who, through the medium of work and is willing to make great sacrifice and self-denial to perform her part of the work in God's vineyard. Listening to her powerful talks surely was uplifting and encouraging and should create a greater desire within us, as God's handmaidens, to try with our might, mind, and strength, to more successfully do our part in helping to redeem Zion, by establishing homes where the angels of peace may stand on the threshold and welcome the guests that may enter. Homes that will be a part of Zion, fitted to be gathered to Zion for safety, where Jesus will come and be a teacher and guide among us. May we in this part of God's vineyard be able to do our bit in bringing about, and by our lives lead the honest in heart into the fold. We were told a thousand times in the gift of prophecy, "There are some in this vicinity to be gathered." We ever hope and pray that we may be successful in doing what is required of us.

July 30 our Sunday school and Carsonville and McGregor met in a joint Sunday school picnic at Forester in the county park. The day was spent in amusements of all kinds, such as foot races, volley ball, baseball, swimming, singing, reading, etc. Dining was made a part of the amusements, and the next day sister recently arrived arrived to make it a permanent annual affair. The superintendents of the different schools are to act as the committee to make all arrangements. All enjoyed the day.

New Liskeard, Ontario

The Saints of New Liskeard held their annual picnic at New Liskeard Beach on Saturday, July 18, meeting with the Saints from Thornloe and East Road, where an enjoyable afternoon and evening were spent. The large pavilion was placed at our disposal through the kindness of the park commission, where tables were spread to accommodate about one hundred and sixty Saints and friends. After supper races were indulged in by the children, and a group photo was taken, after which came packing up and making for home. The local officers are busy in preaching at Thornloe Sunday evenings at half past seven, Sunday school being looked after by local officers. Preaching also at Dale's Schoolhouse East every other Sunday at three o'clock. This is a new opening and is fairly well attended. About two dozen tracts have been handed out. Your prayers are solicited in our behalf. A few tracts would be welcomed.

Your brother and coworker, A. C. W.

Owen Sound Conference

District Conference was held at Providence Bay, Manitoulin Island, July 4 and 5. Saints from the various branches of the district and from Toronto began to arrive in Owen Sound the afternoon of July 3. All were eager to meet President F. M. Smith, who arrived on the noon train. A special service in honor of him was held in the church at eight o'clock in the evening. Here we had the first opportunity of having Brother Smith address us.

Friday morning about eight-fifteen boarded the "gallant schooner" Laura H. Lee, on route to Providence Bay. We called at Lion's Head, where about thirty more joined our number. All went well (and slow) until we reached Cove Island. Here a fog appeared, and the island fog-horn began sending out its warning. The deep sound of the horn seemed to affect those aboard worse than the fog. We felt somewhat in the same condition as the children of Israel when they came to the Red Sea. To continue our journey meant possible shipwreck, and to return to the nearest harbor meant sleeping accommodation for eight or ten with over a hundred remaining. Of the two evils we chose the less, and to the line we struggled on. The few residents of this place kindly consented to accommodate about twenty. The others were made as comfortable as possible, life preservers being used for mattresses and quilts (blankets were absent). President Smith helped to while away some of the evening's monotony by talking to us for an hour or so. Five o'clock in the morning found us again on our way. A goodly number of the members of the remainder of the trip looking over the rail. Brother Smith proved to be quite a good sailor, although we think he felt rather peculiar inwardly. Encountering another fog we had considerable difficulty in locating the harbor. The appearance of land, about noon, was welcomed by all on board. The island Saints spared nothing to make things comfortable for us, the spirit of sacrifice being quite evident. The writer retired to bed where accommodation for forty-five had been made. Sacrifice truly.

The usual business session convened during the afternoon, and an excellent program was given in the evening. President Smith was the principal speaker on Sunday. He presented the stewardship program in a very clear and concise manner. Other speakers present were Elders J. W. Peterson and G. C. Tomlinson, sr.

We left for home at half past eleven Sunday night, a more pleasant trip being experienced throughout. Upon arrival, Brother Smith addressed the Wartons Saints Monday night and those at Owen Sound Tuesday night. On Wednesday morning we reluctantly said farewell, he returning via Toronto to Independence.

We are sorry to report that Brother R. J. Wilcox has had to resort to the use of a cane to enable him to go about. While working in Detroit and ascending on an elevator, in some manner the cable came loose, allowing the elevator to rapidly descend for a distance of thirteen stories. Brother Wilcox most miraculously escaped death, receiving only a few scratches and a broken heel. All join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Elder G. C. Tomlinson is with us, coming here from the conference. We were sorry to have Elder J. W. Peterson leave us, he having gone to Elora, where he intends to hold a series of tent meetings. Success to him is our prayer.

Newton, Iowa

Newton is doing what it can for the church. We are organized as a group and have from thirteen to twenty-five out to our Sunday school. We have preaching services every other Sunday and have a good percentage of our members out at every meeting. While it looks small and we sometimes get discouraged, we are still thankful, for we have a beautiful place in which to meet. We want the prayers of all the Saints that we may grow and eventually organize a branch.

George C. Duvall, Group Leader.
Articles on Stewardship Appreciated

I must express my appreciation of Bishop Carmichael's articles in the Herald of June 24 and July 8, on stewardship and the redemption of Zion. They are the finest articles I have ever read on this line; and I would suggest to all the Saints who have not read these articles to read them at once. If your neighbor Saints are not taking the Herald, carry yours over to them and ask them to read those articles.

Yes, Zion must be redeemed. This year so far has been full of its usual sorrowful and awful events, and they are growing worse every day. The Almighty has laid his hands upon the nations of the earth, to scourge them for their wickedness. Plagues and destruction will continue to grow worse until the Lord comes to reign with the pure in heart.

With patience the race that is set before us. I wish I were able to tell it now, both morning, noon, and night.

May the Lord bless his work.

E. A. IRWIN.

Los Angeles, California, July 20.

Hammond, Indiana

July 30.—This branch is made up of what we may call "willing workers." They are a loyal band of true Saints. The branch was organized two years ago by Elder E. K. Everts, who is president. Since the organization a church which formerly was occupied by the Methodists. They have worked very hard in remodeling and fitting up this building until now it is one of which the little band has good reason to be proud. I cannot in justice fail to mention of the splendid and unceasing efforts put forth by the Department of Women in trying to raise funds to meet payments on the building.

Last Sunday was held one of those good old gatherings, which was termed a rally day. Untiring efforts were made in preparation by all departments. Saints came from various near-by branches, a goodly number attending from Chicago, who supplied the musical part of the day's program.

At eight o'clock in the morning prayer meeting was held, with Elders Roy W. Smith and Percy E. Farrow in charge. Almost everyone present took part in the service. At ten o'clock Sunday school was the order, in charge of the district superintendent, Brother Denison H. Smith. At half past eleven Brother O. A. McDowell, of DeKalb, Illinois, delivered a very fine sermon on the necessity of the spiritual gifts. The sermon was very instructive, especially to church members. After this service all retired to the basement, where a delicious dinner was served by the women.

By a few minutes past two, the upper auditorium was the scene of another meeting in charge of Brother O. A. McDowell, who spoke in the interests of the Department of Recreation and Expression, after which the Department of Women occupied this auditorium, the meeting being in charge of Sister Hazel B. Dexter, of Lansing, superintendent of the department for the district. At the same time the priesthood gathered in the basement for a round table talk.

The evening service at a quarter of eight was in charge of the branch president, Elder James E. Smith. Brother McDowell offered prayer, and the writer was the speaker for the hour, the theme being "The kingdom of God." This service commenced a missionary effort which we are conducting here. Good results are following this, and many members appear to be very much interested, and we are hoping that some souls may be born anew ere we complete the effort.

So far we have been very much blessed in our missionary labors this year. Our purpose is to preach an affirmative and constructive message, and we pray God that, as the hastening time is upon us, we may speedily realize the actual experiences of our dreams; the redemption of Zion. This can be brought about only by a united force of loyal workers in all departments. May unity and peace prevail.

Northern Saskatchewan District Conference

Convention and conference are only a memory now, yet a pleasant one to all. Missionary William Sparling and Apostle J. C. Osler brought the themes of God's power and the sin which beset us, and hope and courage came with them. The year past had been so depressing that it made us very happy to hear the message of cheer these brethren brought, assuring us our ship would move Zionward, "which is our course."

We were privileged to have in attendance the president of the Southern Saskatchewan District, Elder O. L. D'Arcy, and the president of the Alberta District, Elder William Oder. In fact, eighteen elders were here. The prayer services were spiritual and satisfying. They gave the Saints strength and courage for the days to come. The gift of prophecy was given twice through Elder Sparling, to the comfort and encouragement of those concerned.

The organization of the conference was effected Thursday morning, which was followed by an able discourse by Elder William Sparling and another by him in the evening. He kept assuring the Saints that Apostle McConley and Curtis would be here to preach, little suspecting how delighted we were with his preaching. He was a stranger when he came but an old friend when he left.

Friday morning after prayer service and Sunday school business session, Apostle J. C. Osler preached a characteristic sermon, with such life and vigor that the Saints paid full attention and remained in their seats. After dinner Sunday school service was completed, which resulted in the officers retaining their seats for another year. Then Apostle Myron A. McConley addressed us on the Sunday school department and its officers, telling us what kind of officers ideal ones are. How we did wince and cringe at his remarks, knowing full well how far short of the ideal we were. On the whole, Osler's sermon was one of the finest I ever heard, and Curtis was too hard on assistant superintendents, but when it was known the brother was an assistant superintendent himself, we understood his misery. Quietly putting on the coats that fitted us, furnished by Apostle McConley, we motored down to the lake for the recreation hour, to see the missionaries play ball against the home team. Sometimes volley ball was played during the recreation hour.

Friday evening was the Sunday school program. The special numbers outside of the usual music and readings were a talk on dancing by Lottie Clark Diggle of Saskatoon, "The preacher's vacation," by Elder J. J. Cornish; violin numbers by Sister Yager of Ontario; "How to court," by Apostle Curtis; and the Lord's prayer in the Hawaiian language, by Apostle McConley. Ah! How I would like to tell you the whole program, and have you enjoy it.

Saturday morning after the prayer service and after the first business session of the conference was over, Lottie Clark Diggle addressed the Saints on the Word of Wisdom, which was well received, and favorable comments were heard. Saturday afternoon the concluding business session resolved in the reelection of the old officers, with the exception of a new chorister, Sister Bossie Cornish. All business was peacefully transacted. Then Elder O. L. D'Arcy addressed us on "The ultimate purpose of God, which is the salvation of all men." The evening hour was occupied by Elder Joseph Yager, theme: "A call for service." Text, "Here am I, send me." His appeal was addressed especially to the young people. A priesthood meeting at eight o'clock, Sunday, and sacramental service at nine. A most peaceful influence hovered.

over the assembled Saints. Two of our most promising young men, Leslie Mogg and Joseph Bates, were ordained to the office of elder.

At eleven o'clock Brother William Osler preached a stirring sermon from the text "Here am I, send me." With only five minutes for lunch a meeting was called for one o'clock under the auspices of the Department of Women. Sister Diggle addressed the parents, past, present, and future, on their responsibilities, and was followed by Elder William Sparling, who caused us all to stop and think. His subject was, "Home and our part in it."

Apostle Curtis was the speaker at two. He preached a splendid gospel sermon from his chart to a crow which taxed the capacity of the tent.

At half past three Brother Myron McConley lectured on Hawaii, to the delight of all, and at five o'clock we all returned to the lake, where Elder J. J. Cornish baptized twelve.

In the evening Apostle McConley preached a most constructive sermon from the text, "I will build my church." And so, after a strenuous day, we bade a lingering farewell to the Artland Saints who had been so kind to us; to the apostles who had brought us good tidings from afar; to the missionaries whom we hoped to see among us ere long; and to the many friends whom we hope to meet again next year.

The keynote of each address seemed to be a call to greater activity, and we who attended are roused from our indifference and ready to do what the Lord wants us to do.

We had almost forgotten to mention the music. Brother Thomas Bates at the organ, assisted by the Artland Sunday School Orchestra, gave great pleasure to all assembled. Sister Osler, with her lovely voice, and Sister Yager, who accompanied on the violin, were much appreciated.

Coffeyville, Kansas

We have been enjoying some spiritual progress since our organization on February 22, 1925.

At our last business meeting, which was held June 24 and 25, Brother Howard Anderson, formerly of Pittsburg, who has been transferred to Coffeyville on business, was elected president, after Brother Guy Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, had resigned. A vote of thanks was given Brother Cadwell in appreciation of his good work, and we wish him success with the Saints at Independence and Cherrvyle, Kansas.

Sister Marie Phelps was elected pianist, Sister R. C. Walton chorister, and Sister James Reynolds secretary.

The Sunday school also elected officers at this time. Brother Robert E. (Bob) Jones, who has been attending Granger College, was elected president; Sister C. R. Walton assistant superintendent, Sister Margie Pitcock pianist, Sister James Reynolds secretary.

We are taking up the Seven Laws of Teaching under the direction of Brother Jones, also in instruction in musical leadership. We hope to profit greatly by these instructions in our Sunday school work.

On the Fourth of July we held a picnic on the Hart farm, near Angola, Kansas, which was enjoyed by many, Brother Higdon, president of the Spring River District, being with us; also Brother Gilbert of Pittsburg and Brother Westervelt of Angola.

Games were in keeping of the day; swings were put up as soon as possible, then horseshoes, volleyball ball, and army ball were enjoyed before dinner.

The basket dinner was a huge success, being served cafeteria style. After dinner games were enjoyed for a while. At half past one Brother Higdon gave a patriotic address, which was very fine. Then games, such as the discus throw, long broad, ten-yard dash, broad grin, shot put, etc., were enjoyed, after which the little folks had a fine swim. Ice cream was on hand, a basket dinner called for one o'clock.

On Sunday, July 5, we had all-day exercises, with visitors from surrounding towns present. In the morning we had a very fine Sunday school and a good sermon by Brother Higdon. Dinner was served at the park, all returning to the church for sacramental service. A goodly portion of the spirit was present.

Brother Higdon was the speaker for the evening, giving a splendid sermon on "sacrifice," which was enjoyed by all, closing another big day for Coffeyville.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is meeting since they were organized to Friday evening, and playing volley ball and other games before class. Everyone seems to have a good time, and the lessons on stewardships are becoming very interesting under the teaching of Brother Anderson and Brother Jones.

The work is hopeful and pushing forward.

C. R. WALTON.

Alma Branch of Far West Stake

We are scattered over Ray County, divided in three groups: Alma, Richmond, and Wakenda. Alma is two miles southeast of Richmond, while Wakenda is eighteen miles northeast. Richmond, the county seat of Ray, is a nice little city, coal mining being its chief occupation.

We have had four "get together" meetings this summer. The first was a two-day meeting May 23, 24. We had seven stake officers, including Sister Liggett of Saint Joseph, who is head of the Department of Women of this stake. June 14 and July 12 we met with the Wakenda Saints. At the latter meeting we had with us Brother Hale W. Smith, Brother and Sister Omar Cato, and Brother and Sister Walter Curtis, all of Independence, Missouri. Brother Smith preached two good sermons that day. Brother Cato gave us a good talk also, urging us to go onward and upward, that we may prepare ourselves for the building up of Zion.

August 2 the Saints of Richmond, Hardin, and Alma met at Hamilton Park, one mile east of Alma. Sunday school was held at ten o'clock, with W. G. Ferguson, superintendant of the Richmond Sunday school in charge. W. G. Hamann, our branch president, was the eleven o'clock speaker. We had a basket dinner, after which we visited until called to order to witness the baptism of three girls: Margaret Curtis, Loretta Wilkerson, and Helen Hutson, by Brother Ferguson; confirmed by Brother Hamann. Margaret has the honor of being one of the fifth generation to belong to the church.

The happy and profitable day closed with Thomas Graham as the evening speaker, his subject being, "Every member a tithe payer." Brother Graham is a teacher at present and has been wonderfully blessed, and we know that much good will come from his efforts.

Sister Alice Ferguson of Kansas City and Sister Laura Mulnix of Independence, who are visiting relatives at Hardin, worshiped with us Sunday.

We are sorry to report the illness of Elkanah Craven of the Wakenda Group, who has been falling since April. For years Brother Craven has been one of the mainstays of that group. His home has always been open for missionaries, and it can be said of him that "he has lived in a house by the side of the road and been a friend to man." We ask the Saints to remember our brother in their prayers, that if it is not the Lord's will that he be healed, he may have peace and rest.

Our oldest member, Martha Mullins, has been very poorly of late. Sister Mullins is almost ninety years old and has been a member of the church for years.

Brother Clifford Hughes, of Oak Grove, Missouri, visited his parents, Brother and Sister Anry Hughes of Hardin, Sunday, August 2.

Brother and Sister T. L. Ferguson of Hardin have had a very sick baby the past week. We hope and pray for a speedy recovery.

We are elated that we have two new members at Rich­mond, Brother and Sister Will Chambers, of Bucklin, Iowa. This brother and sister are new in church work, having belonged since January, but they have joined in earnestness and are ready to help. We are to hold our midweek prayer meeting at their home August 4.

Our Religio has been very interesting of late. We are taking up the "fruits of the Spirit" in way of a program. Many good and useful thoughts and ideas are being brought out.

We are in need of a church at Richmond, having met in a room in the old courthouse for the past four years. Conditions have now arisen that make it almost impossible to hold services, as the Salvation Army are holding forth across the hall, with drum, guitar, and tambourine.

We have a building fund that is steadily growing, and we hope to build a church that will make up for all the unpleasantness we have endured. EUNICE F. CURTIS.

RICHMOND, MISSOURI.

Cheboygan, Wisconsin

Our one-day meeting on July 26 proved a success. Sunday school at nine o'clock was well attended. Prayer service at ten o'clock was in charge of Patriarch James Davis of South Boardman; Branch President Elder Irving Sheffer; and Elder W. H. Sheffer, our local pastor. Eleven of the priesthood were on the platform during the service. This service was both spiritual and instructive.

At two o'clock Elder A. E. Starks of Boyne City preached a very fine sermon on the life of Christ. He was assisted by Elder Elmer Parks of Onaway.

The sermon at half past three was in charge of Patriarch James Davis of South Boardman; Branch President Elder Irving Sheffer; and Elder W. H. Sheffer, our local pastor. Eleven of the priesthood were on the platform during the service. This service was both spiritual and instructive.

Good Conditions Reported From Cleveland, Ohio

Many things of interest have happened among the Cleveland Saints. We are in a much better spiritual condition and the Lord is blessing us abundantly in our services, for which we are very grateful. The Saints of Cleveland are more cognizant of their duties and responsibilities than they have been for a long time; a sure sign of progress, and if continued a steady growth will be maintained.

Our Sunday school is conducting a class contest at this time, and we hope through this medium to awaken a greater interest. The young folks are becoming more interested in this line of work, and we can notice a marked degree of talent in various lines among them. The school is in a fairly good condition for this time of the year, for as usual when vacation time comes the attendance "goes down." Interest is maintained in the classes as the teachers expound the Lord's word, showing a desire to become better acquainted with the work in every detail.

Religio is becoming more interesting to us each week. Book of Mormon study is the medium by which this department serves the best food in Cleveland. Our programs are always inspiring and uplifting, bringing out the talent of our young people and children. Cleveland cannot get along without this department, and we are busy therein every Friday evening.

Last Sunday at our early morning prayer service the Spirit of the Lord visited us in power and remained throughout the day. Our sacramental meeting was surely a blessing to everyone present, and it is our desire to so order our lives that we may always enjoy these blessings.

Our choir and music are still progressing, and we are planning on enlarging the choir this coming season. The choir visited Kirtland Branch Religio last Thursday evening. They were pleased to have us with them, and we surely did enjoy ourselves.

We are safe in stating that the Cleveland Branch is unanimous in its support of the church and is constantly praying for those at the head and for the welfare of all concerned. We are deeply interested in the forward movement and have implicit faith in our heavenly Father to bring about the successful conclusion of his great work.

We realize our needs and ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that God will assist us in our undertakings to build up his work in this community.
Detroit, Michigan

August 4.--Some time ago a close observer of men and affairs listened to James, the Lord's brother, define heavenly wisdom as being "first pure, then peaceable, gentle, easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." In my travels among the Saints, I believe I can discern that the true meaning of wisdom in church affairs is being studied and more fully appreciated than for years, which means greater stability and a healthier growth. Solomon said, "wisdom is the principal thing," and "he that getteth wisdom loveth his own soul," meaning, of course, that he will not receive himself and throw his own life work away.

During the past two years my labor in reunion season was in the Southern States. This year the months of July and August are being spent in Michigan, a much cooler climate. In this State are the greatest automobile factories in the world. Agriculture, dairying, salt works, fisheries, etc., are spoken of with pride.

My first twenty days was spent in the Eastern Michigan District, presided over by Matthew W. Liston, whose schedule for my group was about twenty branches and groups so perfectly that from nine chapels, with twenty-six sermons, I was enabled to preach to hundreds on the great program of our blessed gospel and church. The hearty welcome by Brother Liston was equally given by Robert H. Huston, the genial Bishop's agent. They believe in and practice "teamwork," which will mean success in their field of labor. Every branch president and officer where I labored treated me with saintly consideration, and the congregations gave good attention to the glorious message of this closing dispensation. Some capable young people are singing, as other missionaries from their State have, "I will go where you want me to go, dear Lord," while many others, both young and older ones, express a firm desire to "do what you want me to do, dear Lord," among financial and stewardship lines. May their courage never fail them.

Since writing the above I have entered the Detroit District and preached three times in Central Church at Detroit, receiving a splendid welcome from District President W. L. Bennett, Bishop's Agent Robert H. Coats, and Pastor G. R. Kuykendall. After two evening services at Flint, presided over by Elder Arthur H. DuRose, my next labors will be in a ten-day reunion at Boyne City in Northern Michigan District, after which Central and Southern Districts will hold reunions.

I am truly pleased to be able to say that in my association with the Saints I hear the Heralds, Ensign, and Answers, their official organ. Every family of Latter-day Saints is called upon to subscribe to these papers, for there is much in them to enlighten and encourage every member to "press on to the consummation designed of God for his people—unity, honor, sanctification, and glory." C. J. Hunt.

Appreciates Bishop Carmichael on Stewardships

August 2.--Please permit me to say that I am captivated by the new book on stewardships and the article in the Herald of July 29 from the pen of Dalburson, entitled "For what do we wait?" How many times since embracing the gospel has the stewardship plan appealed to me as it has to this brother? It seems to me if God was able to organize his church in these latter days with so few members, that he can at this time, without further delay, establish stewardships in like manner; and for me, let me suggest that I am ready and willing, and I hope that my name, if they choose to use it, will be found at the head of the list of latter-day stewards in the alphabetical order. The time is here to begin this beautiful and sacred order of things, and while destruction is written across the face of everything that has placed its structure upon the foundation wickedness, the Lord has prepared a means, provided a way, and given us timely counsel when most needed, that if heeded will bring to us success, lasting comfort, and honor to our heavenly father.

I sincerely hope some one else will not have to remind us of "For what do we wait?" and that I can get as many to join with me in the invocation of stewardships as were in the church at its organization.

Michigan Branch Reorganized

From a Report to the First Presidency

As reported in mine of the 26th inst., I came here with Elder William Osler, district president, on July 22.

There are about thirty-five members actually resident here, and they own a neat little frame church which is centrally located, though not all finished inside. Due to removals and internal differences, the branch has been without a presiding elder and in a practically disorganized condition for about two years.

On our arrival last Wednesday we started meetings and had forty-five adults the first night, forty-five the next night, and fifty-five on Friday night. On Sunday afternoon we held a sacrament service with seventy-one present, some coming over from near-by branches, and a few were outsiders.

Last night we held a business meeting.

Elder Joseph Bates, who is a member of the Artland Branch, lives only three and one half miles from the Michigan Branch church, though over the line in Saskatchewan, and hence a member of the other district. The Spirit seemed to us to direct that he was the man needed here. So we arranged with Brother W. J. Cornish, president of the Artland Branch and of the Northern Saskatchewan District, to let us have Brother Bates for use here.

He is a young man and is well qualified to undertake the task. He has been a priest for several years but was ordained to the eldership at the Northern Saskatchewan conference a few weeks ago.

We nominated him for the branch presidency, and he was elected unanimously. Other officers necessary were chosen, ten new Hymnals ordered, and a committee appointed to put the church in proper order and to attend to erecting a shed for sheltering the horses in the yard behind the church.

Regular meetings were appointed as follows:

Sunday: Sunday school at a quarter after one, followed by preaching at half past two, except on the first Sunday, when the sacrament will be administered. Midweek prayer meeting will also be held on Wednesday night at eight o'clock.

We visited almost every home in the branch and met with a good response, and we feel that the branch is started toward better times.

To-day we leave for Edmonton, the capital of Alberta. Praying that the Spirit of God may guide and direct all his servants; and that by reason of their ministries there will come new life and vigor to the church throughout the world, and with best wishes to all.

KILLARNEY LAKES, ALBERTA.

MYRON A. MCConLEY.

From letter from John A. Judd, Enfield, England, July 15, to the First Presidency: "By the time you receive this letter we will be holding our first Sunday school reunion, and I am pleased to say that everything points to great success. We will send you a report of the same when we are through. Meanwhile we ask for your prayers for our schools here. We are moving ahead with our school work; each district is organized, and we are now trying to get schools established in every possible place. Where the distance is too great we advocate holding small auxiliary schools in the homes of the Saints, so that our children should not have to be brought up in sectarian schools."

Stone Church

Although the temperature was too high for comfort, Sunday in Zion was in keeping with the past several Sabbaths. Good weather, good attendance, and a good spirit were the order of the day.

Both early morning prayer services were well attended. The young people’s meeting was enfolded in a comforting, quiet presence that seemed to inspire every soul there. Hardly a moment but what was taken in prayer, testimony, or song.

Sunday school had about its usual attendance. Both Christmas offering and the general collection were a little low in a few classes, but the total was quite good.

The pastor, Elder C. Ed. Miller, was the speaker at the eleven o’clock service. His subject was, “Christian discipleship.” He said, “The gospel law demands that which is contrary to our human natures; a genuine disciple of Christ must be a strong character.” There can be no true discipleship without the love of God in the heart, and there must be a heart service.

Threatening skies did not prevent a large audience from attending the Campus services. An unusually fine program was given by the band soloists and musicians preceding the sermon. Mrs. Lillian Ewing, formerly music instructor at the Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kansas, had charge of the song service. The sermon by Elder J. F. Martin was on the second coming of Christ and was a splendid effort.

President F. M. Smith was in Independence Friday and left for Lamoni to attend the reunion there. Bishop Carmichael has returned from the East and is again at his desk. Bishop Becker and his family are motoring to Colorado on church business. Brother Becker will also obtain a much needed rest on the trip.

Richard Henry Lunceford, thirty-eight years old, died at his residence, 527 Cedar Avenue, Tuesday night, August 11, at twenty minutes past eleven. He is survived by his wife; one son, Carl; his mother, Mrs. Ella Lunceford; and three brothers. Funeral services were held Thursday at three o’clock in the Mount Washington church, in charge of Robert Bishop. Burial in the Mound Grove Cemetery at Independence.

Gerald Thorpe, son of Mrs. Mary Thorpe, was killed Sunday afternoon, August 9, near Pueblo, Colorado. Mrs. Thorpe was riding with a friend when the car left the bridge and fell twenty feet to the bottom of a dry creek, killing both of them. Mr. Thorpe was forty years old, unmarried, a barber, and had been spending several weeks in Colorado for his health. He is survived by his mother, two brothers, two sisters, and two half brothers. The funeral services were held in the Stone Church Thursday, August 13, 1925, at three o’clock. Bishop B. J. Scott preached the funeral sermon. Interment in the Mound Grove Cemetery.

Brother and Sister I. N. White celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage Sunday, August 16, at their home, 806 West Maple. They were married August 16, 1865, near Newton, Jasper County, Iowa. Brother White has spent the most of his time since his marriage in church work. Brother White is eighty-five; Sister White is seventy-eight. They have five sons, four daughters, seventeen grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

The caretakers of the Stone Church and library-building labors have been taking great pains this summer to keep the grounds looking nice, and their tidy appearance is a credit to the church.

A member of the Graphic Arts Bureau held up a vigorous ninety-two-year-old man by the name of Head on the Stone Church lawn early Tuesday morning as the old brother was trimming the grass—and took his picture. Old Brother Head, in spite of his advanced years, is a fine specimen of vigorous manhood.

The partitions in the little building east of the dining hall on the Stone Church lawn have been torn out, so it is now better adapted for class work, committee meetings, and Women’s Department requirements.

The group preaching services held in three different parts of Independence have been splendidly attended. This week Brother Martin will be at Spring Branch, Brother Farrell in Group 10, north and south, 11, and 12. Elder Fligg will continue another week in Groups 13, 25, and 26.

Tuesday evening presents an animated spectacle at the Campus. It is recreation evening for the Department of Recreation and Expression, and young and old enjoy themselves on the spacious grounds. There are two croquet courts often occupied by the middle-aged. Then there are two volleyball courts and fine baseball grounds. Many powerful electric lights illumine the grounds, making the use of the courts and Campus possible. There are swings hanging from the sturdy limbs of the magnificent old trees, which are generally monopolized by the children. There are chutes which are enjoyed by the smaller children. So the Campus caters to all ages.

On the third floor of the Institute Building, which is situated on the Campus, twenty-five devoted musicians are practicing selections that will be used in the following Sabbath evenings at the Campus service. It is the Latter Day Saint band. Mr. Roy Turner is the leader. The band is giving splendid service.

The Kansas City Times, August 17, referring to the laying of the cornerstone of the Memorial Building on West Maple, Sunday at half past two, said:

“Avenue tax-paying citizen of Independence was represented in the Memorial Building, the corner stone of which was laid yesterday afternoon. The building was financed, not by any one organization, not by a few individuals who felt a deep interest in the young men who lost their lives, but by a bond issue of $150,000 by the city.

“In the ceremonies of the corner-stone laying yesterday, polls were scattered with flowers, and the general singing whole-hearted in the ceremony. On the program were ministers of the Protestant, the Roman Catholic, and the Reorganized Latter Day Saints. In the closing prayer the Reverend A. G. Clohesy, parish priest of Saint Mary’s (Catholic) Church, of Independence, referring to the young men who had given their lives in the war, remarked:

“Jew and Gentile, Protestant and Catholic, they were fighting side by side, and they were buried together—God grant they may all rise together when God shall call them from their graves.”

“The invocation was by the Reverend C. Ed. Miller, of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints Church.”

Second Church

Sunday’s heat and the many attractions at other points were instrumental in diminishing attendance at services. The pastor, Elder R. J. Lambert, was the speaker at eleven o’clock.

Many copies of the booklet on stewardships, recently from the pen of Bishop Albert Carmichael, have been requested and are being read by the members of the congregation.

Brother and Sister John F. Curtis are at Caseyville, Illinois, because of the death of the father of Sister Curtis, which occurred Friday night.

Liberty Street Church

The lawn meetings conducted by Elder W. I. Fligg on the lawn of E. T. Atwell, 825 North Main, all of last week, will continue all of the present week. The theme of sermons for the present week will be the dispensations at told in Matthew, 20th chapter. Much interest is shown in these meetings; nonmembers are attending in goodly numbers.

The programs for the past week have been furnished by a male quartet, Oriole Girls, and others. The quartet sang a song with electric lights illuminating the group.

Sunday, August 16, Elder J. M. Terry spoke to the congregation about Zionic conditions.

The Sunday school class of Mrs. George A. Gould enjoyed www.LatterDayTruth.org
Last Sunday evening several strangers were noted in attendance at our service. We welcome them and invite any Saints passing through, or stopping in our city, to meet with us in our new church home, corner of Pratt Street and Chester Avenue.

The Passing of Elder William Spargo

By Joseph Dewsnup

"He's gone! His work on earth is done; His battle's fought, his race is run; Blest is the path he trod:
For he espoused the glorious cause, In prompt obedience to the laws Of the Eternal God."

Yes, William Spargo has gone, but oh! what an influence for good he has left behind! He was honored and respected in the town of Wigan, (Lancashire, England,) and for a period of forty-five years he represented his Master, Christ, as a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Three months after he was baptized he accepted the responsibility of his calling, and it can be truly said of him that he was faithful unto the end.

Yes, "his battle's fought." He was the type of man who never took a mean advantage over his opponent, and he was ever ready to return "good for evil" when attacked by those who disliked his faith. He suffered for the Master's cause; was assaulted in the public streets; held up to ridicule; and ignominy was heaped upon him for delivering the gospel message, by those who claimed to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. But our brother counted it all joy to suffer for the Master and was confident of the promise of his Savior who said, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake."

He stood in the public streets of Wigan without fear and proclaimed "the angel's message" to thousands of his fellow townsman.

The inhabitants of the town of Wigan, largely through the efforts of our brother, had the gospel preached unto them as a "witness," and through him many ministers of the Reorganization also had the opportunity of preaching "the old Jerusalem gospel" in the open air, to audiences of men and women of all religious beliefs or none, gathered in their hundreds to the meetings that our brother held.

As a citizen he was well known by the leading men of the town. His friendship was sought by prominent men, and he has left behind him a priceless legacy to his sons and daughters and their offspring, of a name untarnished. His piety, his veracity, his true manhood were known and appreciated in hundreds of homes (including nonmembers and members of the church) in the town of his adoption.

He was in every way a true type of "nature's gentleman." Although brought up in lowly estate and without many opportunities of education, "he studied to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Oh! that wonderful grip of his, when he took your hand with the fervor of his soul, and greeted you with such simple sincerity. Although a big man physically (when in his prime), he was as humble as a little child, unassuming, cheerful of countenance, and always appreciative of any help given to him in his work of love in proclaiming the gospel.

The ministry of the Northern District of the Reorganized Church will not soon forget William Spargo. My own remembrances of him go back between forty and forty-five years, when as a youth and young man I used to accompany my father ('Elder Joseph Dewsnup, sr.,) to the town of Wigan, to help establish the work of the Master. The homes of William Spargo and his brothers, James and Thomas, (the former still residing in Wigan and the latter in Ottawa, Canada,) were always homes of welcome, and the ministers of Christ were always made to feel they were appreciated.
Our departed brother was not only interested in the work of the Reorganization, but found time for activities in the temperance cause. He served on the committee of the Wigan Parent Total Abstinence Society for many years, in which society he was esteemed very highly for his services as a temperance worker.

For many years he suffered from the affliction of deafness and found it difficult to follow the preacher at the services of the church, where he was found Sunday after Sunday. Of recent years he also suffered from an internal complaint, which caused him much pain and ultimately affected certain organs of his body to such an extent that his medical adviser said the only hope for him was an operation. The brother, however, brooked not the operation. With this object in view our brother was removed to the Wigan Infirmary and underwent the operation on June 25, but he was not equal to the ordeal and passed peacefully away on the 3d of July, nine days after the operation was performed.

Learning that he was ill, I traveled by road to Wigan, (about forty-four miles there and back) on my push-bike the day on which he was operated, and I was permitted as his friend to go to his bedside, and to where I found his wife and eldest daughter in silent grief by the bedside. When he saw me, he smiled and said, "It's Brother Dewsnup I want," and he took my right hand in both of his and in his weak state drew me down toward the bed and kissed me, a kiss of appreciation and resignation, and when I told him to have faith in God and trust him, he said, 'You could tell him, he replaced me, it's right, Brother Dewsnup, whichever way it is." I felt in my soul that the grave would be robbed of its victory and that death would indeed lose its sting. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

The funeral service took place July 8, when the inanimate body of our brother was taken in its casket of wood to the Total Abstinence Hall, Greenough Street, Wigan, where we held the funeral service. Under the direction of Elder H. Chandler (president of the Northern District), assisted by the writer. At this service an old and valued friend of our deceased brother, Mr. William Rigby, president of the Wigan Parent Total Abstinence Society, addressed the congregation, which included many who were not members of our church but who had come to pay tribute to one whom they loved.

"Sleep on, beloved; sleep and take thy rest; Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast: We love thee well; but Jesus loves thee best— Good night! Good night! Good night!"

"Until made beautiful by love divine. Thou, in the likeness of thy Lord shalt shine, And He shall bring that golden crown of thine— Good night! Good night! Good night!"

"Until we meet again before His throne, Clothed in the spotless robe He gave His own, Until we know even as we are known— Good night! Good night! Good night!"—Miss Sarah Doudney.

Obituary

Elder William Spargo was born at Four Lanes, near Redtruth, Cornwall, England, March 4, 1859; died July 3, 1925; aged 66 years. He was baptized at Farnworth, Lancashire, January 25, 1880, by Elder Henry Boydell. He was ordained to the office of deacon March 51, 1880; teacher, April 10, 1881; and elder August 10, 1884, under the hands of Elders Joseph Dewsnup, sr., and James Spargo. For many years he held the position of president of the Wigan Branch, until the affliction of deafness compelled him to relinquish the position, which he filled with conspicuous ability. He leaves a widow (second wife), five sons (three of whom are in America), and four daughters, by his first wife, to mourn his loss.

Joseph Seddon Is Dead

PERSIA, IOWA.—Persia Branch is small, but it meets regularly every Sunday for both Sunday school and preaching. Sometimes our worship is very impressive. I often think of the statement by Christ that we should worship in spirit and in truth. I have felt as I heard President Frederick M. Smith once say in a prayer meeting in Magnolia, "A prayer meeting is what those present make it by what they put into it." I had never looked at it that way before. But if a prayer meeting opens with two or three spirited hymns and a short, spirited talk, put something into the service and you will get something out of it, more than you put in. My experience is that we have to work for all we receive, but if we do it God's way we get more out than we put in.

The first Sunday in August we had our sacramental and prayer service and spent the time in expressing ourselves as to how glad we are that we have accepted the gospel.
Brethren Smith and D. R. Chambers were here during the month and preached. We always feel cheered up when some of the brethren are with us.

Last Monday Brother Joseph Seddon, who had died the week before, was buried. Funeral services were at Woodbine, and a large gathering was present. Brother Seddon was a man who was well known; everybody seemed to miss him and came to his funeral to see him once more. Brother Fry of Woodbine made the talk at the house.

Brother Joseph Seddon has lived in this vicinity for many years. He was ordained to the ministry a number of years ago, served the church as president of the Second Quorum of Elders for a number of years, and served also as president of the Persia Branch for a while.

He was a man who will be missed by many in various ways. Many sought his counsel.

Omaha, Nebraska

August 12.—Omaha Branch has again been encouraged by the attendance and ministry of visiting brethren. The evening of July 19, Bishop Arthur B. Phillips gave us a most scholarly analysis of the mission of Christ and its influence in the world. He was on his way from the Inman Branch still with us. They have been very devoted in attendance and to the church, and in this way have been both example and encouragement to the younger and newer members.

Brother O. E. Dingle was baptized July 26. He recently moved to our city from near Sioux City and has a family of four or five children. Sister Dingle entered heartily into the activities of the sisters of the branch, and the young people are steady attendants at Sunday school, and will, we hope, follow their parents into the fold.

A watermelon social on the 30th cleared about thirty dollars for the sisters. It was followed by a fine musical and literary program in charge of Sister Elmer Riner. The monthly dinner given last Thursday for the Sunday school teachers and officers netted Brother David Lewis's class over $14. Besides the good eats, a well-planned study-program added to the value of the meeting. A discussion of "Is Zion established?" was led by Brother W. E. Stoft, who was followed by Brethren Self, Lewis, and Anderson, and Sisters Anderson and Adams. It was counted very profitable, for many splendid thoughts were set forth. Sister Doris Fredrick sang, "I love a little cottage." About fifty were present.

Brother Whalley reports the condition of Brother Albert Merrick as serious but hopeful; Sister Alice Leach of Bennington as having gone home from the hospital for a few days, but under the necessity of returning at the end of the week; and Sister T. A. Edwards as suffering from an attack of appendicitis. Brother and Sister Whalley keep in close touch with the sick, not confining their ministry to those of our faith but giving freely to many "outside the fold" as well.

Brother Whalley preached at Council Bluffs morning and evening on the 9th, and in the afternoon assisted in their funeral service there for Sister Beatty's sister. Brother Carl W. Self occupied the pulpit here in the evening, and the morning hour was occupied by the Sunday school, which, under direction of the superintendent, Sister Rose Adams, gave an "anniversary program," celebrating the second birthday of our church home.

On this occasion, solos were sung by both Brother Harlow and Sister Doris Fredrick, and a duet by Sister Nelle Kelley and Brother Harry Greenway. A splendid talk on "Keep going south; the best is yet to come," was given by Brother Howard Elliott, who drew his observations from the great Mississippi River, which overcomes every obstacle in its path, keeps headed for the ocean, and, by its steady determination to "go south" at all events, brings life and blessing to all along its path. Sister Anderson drew some lessons from the pages of the past, giving a sketch of how the Saints at Kirtland worked and sacrificed for their temple, and how the Lord rewarded them in proportion to that work and sacrifice. There was a wonderful feeling of attention and reverence throughout this entire program, which showed a remarkable continuity of thought, although each participant had prepared his or her part without consulting the others. A thank-offering was taken at the close.

The Omaha Saints must lose no opportunity to add to their constantly-growing "auditorium fund." Our Sunday school is pushing out our church walls; we cannot now accommodate comfortably the numbers who attend, and many more are in sight who would come, with slight urging. Until we get more room for classes, we seem to be at a standstill. The brethren of the branch will soon definitely take up the work of moving into the program of building. We do not hope, as does Brother Peter, to rival in size and magnificence the great cathedral which rears its lofty towers but a few blocks from us, but we cannot shut our ears to the cry of Zion's children, "Give us room, that we may dwell."
The Eastern Montana district reunion opened the evening of July 8. Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser from general headquarters and Elder George W. Thorburn, missionary in charge of Montana, were on hand ready for action. The district president and his two counselors, Bishop's agent, district secretary, treasurer, and superintendent of Department of Women also attended. Brother and Sister Etzenhouser were especially helpful in conducting class work, preaching or assisting in meetings, and giving personal advice. A good spirit prevailed throughout.

Four were baptized by Elder Thorburn. The prayer meetings were held in the forenoon and were all very good. One hour for preaching in the forenoon, class work and recreation in the afternoon, preaching or program in the evening was the general schedule.

A few early morning meetings were held by the young people in the near-by woods. We put up the reunion tent beside the Saints' place of meeting. The tent was used for a lounging playroom and sleeping quarters, the hall for meetings and meals. The meals were served cafeteria style, without charge. Each person contributed as he felt able, in cash, supplies, or labor.

The Glasgow Religion, the only one in the district, gave the program one evening and a wiener roast another evening.

The Saints have a playground for public use, but it was far too hot in the afternoon for games, some reporting from a distance of two hundred miles.

Financially the reunion was a loss. The cash carried over was a little less than last year. The Saints expressed a desire for a reunion again next year. It was a success in education, a source of spiritual strength, a thing to be desired and sought after. Let's all come next year.

A. R. Ritter.

Chetek, Wisconsin

The Northern Wisconsin district reunion convened from June 26 to July 6. The missionary force was composed of D. T. Williams, Bishop A. B. Phillips, and L. O. Wildermuth. E. J. Lenox dropped in and spoke to us the first Sunday; this was a glad surprise to all of us. We felt very glad to have such able speakers with us, for they gave us much for the improvement of Israel, if it were only applied to the lives of the hearers.

The attendance was the smallest for many years, with the exception of the last two days, when many from Porcupine and some from other points gathered in. Elle Hield was with us in honor of the Department of Women and did much to make the reunion a success.

Those elected for the re-union committee for next year are: S. E. Livingston, Pepin, Wisconsin; Leo A. Lafferty, F. A. Atwood, G. E. Clark, Chetek, Wisconsin; and Horace Scafe, Black River Falls, Wisconsin.

We wish that God's Spirit might prevail throughout the coming year as it did through the ten days of reunion, and thus we might be prepared to meet at another reunion.

We have no accurate report, but did not do as well financially as we did last year.

Brother Manly Sheed is to be commended for the sacrifice he made in helping to get things ready and in order for this reunion, and the dining room and kitchen force thanked. The same cook, Mrs. Andrews was chosen; she never fails to satisfy the inner man with good food.

The Department of Women's services have been resurrected, and an interest seems to be prevalent. Brother Clark has been chosen as superintendent of the young people, and they are planning a social in the near future.

We are looking forward to the dedication of our new church in the near future. We pray for the progress of this great work in all the world.

I. B. Clark.

The Northern California district reunion opened July 24, with District President J. D. White in charge, Brethren J. A. Gillen, W. W. Smith, and F. B. Blair as his associates. The general order of the happenings at the reunion was run on somewhat of a schedule. The early morning quietness of each day was broken by a six o'clock bugle call, followed by breakfast and general games. At half past eight each morning prayer meetings were held. The afternoons were spent in recreation: swimming, games, track meets, children's programs, auto rides for the adults, and meetings after the afternoon services in the evening some time was spent in camp-fire singing, get-together parties, stunts, watermelon feeds, and a general recreation get-acquainted program.

One of the big features of the reunion was the early morning prayer meeting of the young people. Each morning they assembled at half past eight under the leadership of the district president in the young people's tent, so as to give each local its share of duty. The number attending these services averaged about forty. The limited number did not hinder every minute of the meeting being occupied. The meetings lasted from one to two hours, having as many as thirty-two testimonies, several prayers, and fifteen songs. The Spirit was manifested on several occasions.

The junior services held each day from eleven to twelve o'clock in the young people's tent in charge of J. T. Smith, Sister Inslee, and others, were very inspiring. These young people contributed to their services in choir work, special musical numbers; and each young face showed eagerness to take part in the service. Talks were given by older folks on subjects of interest to children—their spiritual experiences in relation to their daily life.

The Department of Women played a very interesting and important part in the reunion. A special tent was kept by them where each day two women played hostess to those who desired to come to the tent to rest between meetings, to visit, or to buy those things the ladies had for sale. It had been planned that each day two women from some one of the several locals in the district should take charge of the tent, so as to give each local its share of duty. On several occasions the Department of Women met in regular session to hold business session or to listen to talks on "The place of woman in Zion," and on subjects pertaining to personal hygiene.

On one occasion the Book of Mormon was read throughout one whole day to those who desired to listen. Arrangements had been made for a change of reader every two hours. This was appreciated by those reading.

Most inspiring and impressive was the pageant presented by the junior people of the reunion and was declared by all to be a huge success. The arrangement of the pageant was made by Sister Ruth Bradley of San Jose. More than sixty-five young people took part. The name used was "The Mission to the Christmas offering." The story was of the work of the Christmas offering in spreading the gospel to foreign lands and in making possible the gathering to Zion. Very little can be said at present about our finances. We have to date $232 of the $500 we need. This is very encouraging. This year, because of faulty storage, much confusion resulted. This we hope to remedy.

Congratulations are in order to the reunion committee on their splendid judgment in making arrangements for parking the cars at a distance from the big tent where services would not be interrupted every time one of Henry's specials got under motion.

We had with us Virgil Etzenhouser, who took charge of the recreation; Bishop F. B. Blair, who gave us some splendid talks on tithing; etc; Apostle J. A. Gillen, whose advice and counsel we enjoyed very much; Walter W. Smith from Los Angeles; Frank Briggs, a representative for the church papers; J. D. White, district president, and others. A very good time was enjoyed by all who came, and especially were the preaching, prayer, and junior services appreciated and enjoyed by those in attendance.

Our pledge is: Zion shall be redeemed; therefore I will work, give, sacrifice, endure, and I will fight cheerfully and do my utmost, as if the whole issue of the struggle depended on me.

Thinks Reunion Work Profitable

(Except from letter of Eli Bronson, Portland, Oregon, July 28, 1925, to the First Presidency.)

The Portland district reunion closed Sunday night, July 26. We are glad to be able to report a very successful reunion. The success is due quite largely to the splendid assistance rendered by Brother James A. Gillen and Brother and Sister Etzenhouser. Their work is greatly appreciated. I have sometimes wondered if the effort, time, and money, used throughout the church in reunion work could not be spent more profitably in some other line of church activity, but after observing closely the good accomplished and the reaction following a reunion such as this, I am convinced that no line of church work with the same amount of time and money would bring greater returns. Favorable reaction is noticeable in individual spirituality, in increased con­ception of the good accomplished and the desire for good time was enjoyed by all who came, and especially were the preaching, prayer, and junior services appreciated and enjoyed by those in attendance.

Western Oklahoma

Western Oklahoma district reunion was a very spiritual feast for all who attended, and everyone had a pleasant time visiting with the Saints. There was no sickness on the grounds during the reunion except among those who were ill when they came, they were prying for relief and were administered to while here and were helped.

The weather conditions were excellent during our meeting. We had received two or three showers a few days prior to the opening date, and the grass and trees had freshened up and were real pretty. We had a few showers during the meeting, which made the air fresh, and it did not get as warm as it was a year ago. We had the largest crowd we have ever had, quite a number more than last year, and more came for the first of the meeting this year than last.

Our prayers were very spiritual; the gift of prophecy was given a few times. Our largest young people's prayer meeting was attended by almost a hundred people, and the time was used to good advantage, the response being good. A few prayers were offered, and seventy-eight testimonials were given.

Care of the Poor

In this issue will be found an article by Bishop A. Carmichael which we commend to the careful reading of the thoughtful, particularly to the members of the priesthood. Under the head of “Aid” the church pays out large sums of money. Is it wisely spent? In answering that, there should be taken into consideration group needs and conditions as well as individual ones.

“There shall be no idle in Zion” applies to poor as well as rich. The best aid which can be extended to one in need is to give opportunity for him to help himself. This, in our opinion, is comprehended in the divine instruction to care for the poor. Giving aid in such way as to encourage idleness engenders dependency and is wrong, doing injury to group as well as individual.

To care for the poor, therefore, contemplates an order in which each will have opportunity to care for himself to the extent of his ability, under his own directions if capable, under the directions of others if not. Such “care” develops and preserves self-respect, a highly desirable characteristic.

We trust our readers will digest Bishop Carmichael’s article.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

The Auditorium—Its Location

BY H. C. SMITH

We have been disturbed for the past thirty-five years by having our largest church building located on the principal street in town. The cars interrupt the services regularly. It is often hard for the speaker to hold the attention of his audience, because of so much noise beyond our control. Such interruptions are distressing, and they often ruin what would otherwise have been a perfect service.

We frequently criticize the early builders of our church for overlooking this vital point of location. It is true that they did not own all of the land around the building at the time it was started, but it is quite possible that cheap land at the rear could have been purchased, so that the approach would not have been crowded out into the street. However, we can say that this building is in a prominent place, much better located than many of our churches which are built just over the hill, around the corner, and sometimes in very inaccessible places, carefully hidden away where no one but a few of our own pious members can find them.

To avoid a repetition of disturbed services, especially those so vitally important as the General Conferences, to be held in the Auditorium, our first concern should be its location. We should make a mistake if we put it in the midst of traffic or hid it away in some secluded corner. We must secure a location that will be easy of access and yet not too close to traffic ways or other sources of city noises. The Auditorium must be given a setting commensurate with its size and function in the life of the community. Unless we do this we shall fall far short of our opportunity and our duty.

Independence was not planned for municipal, public, or semi-public monumental buildings. Very few cities in America have given any consideration to the proper setting for their important buildings. This city, however, with its irregularly laid out streets and additions offers enough sites with suitable surroundings so that the Auditorium could be properly located with only slight changes in the existing conditions. Five different locations are being studied, any one of which could be made to meet the requirements as generally understood of this building. With a reasonable amount of open space, there need be no disturbance inside from noises without, for the Auditorium has been planned with the assembly hall in the center, surrounded by quorum rooms, foyers, corridors, classrooms, and offices.

One morning when on my way to work, a member of one of the leading quorums asked me where the site of the Auditorium was to be. Imagine my dismay when I discovered his object in asking this was that he could put up a row of store buildings for personal gain. At that moment I realized that we were far from Zion, for there people will have the interest of all at heart and not want to interfere with a project for selfish ends.

On the other hand, many people are anxious to share their part of service and property to see the Auditorium work begin. The number of those who are putting their own interests ahead of the interests of the group is gradually on the decrease, and when we once have a monumental structure, awe-inspiring in its dignity, we feel assured it will inspire even the most selfish with the utmost civic pride and godly worship.

It should make us ashamed to think that we in this day and age of enlightenment and prosperity could not erect monuments to the cause of religion equal to those constructed throughout the past, even in the Dark Ages. So many of the wonderful cathedrals have been made possible only by the unceasing toil and sacrifice of the poor people. How willingly they sold the products of their labor at the market place, that they might contribute to the place of worship so dear to their hearts.

We boast of having a religion much more inspired than that of the early Christians, yet it seems inconsistent that we should be satisfied with such mediocre meeting places and hesitate to erect the most sublime edifices which the mind of man can conceive as an expression of his tribute to the glory of God. The Savior gave his life for us. How very small in comparison if we give a few earthly possessions in appreciation of his love.

We shall trust that every selfish obstacle shall soon be removed which now is hindering the development of the Auditorium and that every heart will be filled with a feeling of worship and benediction from on high in giving to this cause. We shall then be making a start toward Zion, where there will be a place provided for the people to gather and worship in harmony.

Short Wave Radio Heard in South Africa

The latest distance achievement of the church short wave experimental radio station is South Africa. Signals were reported there as “Q S A” (very loud). The report of this reception from 9 F F was relayed through the American Radio Relay League headquarters, 9 F F being only one of several United States experimental stations heard by the far-away South African listener.

Several reports on 9 F F’s transmission have been received from England. Communication has been established direct with such long distance countries as New Zealand, Australia, and Argentina. A report was also recently received from Buenos Aires.

Short wave broadcasting tests will likely be made this winter, on a wave length of 67 meters. This wave is not within the range of ordinary broadcast receivers, and at present is mostly used for experimental re-broadcasting. K D K A and W G Y broadcast on short wave lengths simultaneous with their regular higher wave lengths. The companies owning these two stations are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on radio experimental research.

It is reported that American listeners will be able to hear broadcasting this winter from Germany and other European countries. This will be accomplished by short wave transmission from the European stations, and re-broadcasting on regular wave lengths by certain United States stations.

ARTHUR B. CHURCH.

Forty Superstations Now Broadcasting

Two years ago a 1000-watt broadcaster was unheard of. To-day forty stations are sending a total power of about 60,000 watts; this does not include the 50,000-watt experimental broadcasting station W G Y, at Schenectady, New York.

When the campaign for a 1000-watt church broadcasting station was started over a year ago, there were only eleven superstations, and none used over 1,000 watts. A number of radiocasters are now licensed to use 5,000 watts. Several others have 5,000-watt stations, but are licensed to use 1,500 to 2,500 watts.

Superstations of the future doubtless will use greater powers than appear practicable at present. Some kind of special restrictions on these stations will be necessary. Already interference between broadcasters’ waves has become quite prevalent, even on Class B wave lengths.

Many owners of broadcasting stations appear to be preparing for a “survival of the fittest” contest. What the outcome will be cannot be foretold. As a pioneer church broadcaster, we cannot afford to be crowded to the rear. K L D S was designed for power increase to several thousand watts simply by adding plate power supply—storage batteries. Should an increase to 1,500 or 2,000 watts be made this fall?

ARTHUR B. CHURCH.

A movement is on in Independence, under the leadership of Brother Charles Koehler, to provide a fall festival which will give prominence to the products of the soil of Jackson County. For several seasons such a celebration has been staged by the people of Second Church, and the 1924 festival was very successful, furnishing more than six hundred jars of fruits, vegetables, preserves, jellies, etc., for distribution by the bishop of Zion. But the principal benefit is not to be seen in this material manifestation, for the doors of possibility were opened to the gaze of men and women who were looking for ways and means to help in the work of redeeming the land and the people of Zion. We hope this year’s effort may enlarge greatly this comprehension of our possibilities.
Procedure for Relieving the Poor

BY BISHOP ALBERT CARMICHAEL

I. Securing the funds.
(a) The permanent way—Stewardship.
(b) The temporary way—Collections.

II. Securing the necessary data.
(a) Investigation.
(b) Registration.

III. Distribution.
(a) Through our church organization.
(b) Through other social organizations.
(c) Through various State organizations.
(d) Through individual effort.

IV. Adequate relief: What is it?

The Permanent Way—Stewardship

The ideal as well as the practical way is via the stewardship route—anything foreign to this way is only temporary—an expedient.

The Stewardship Plan

The socialization of the surplus is the true and only way of producing the necessary funds to care properly for our poor. When this socialization of our surplus is a real fact, we then can go vastly farther in our program for aiding the needy than providing for the immediate needs of humanity. The socialization of the surplus puts our organization on a higher ethical plane than any known to the world as “charitable organizations.” The surplus belongs to the worthy members of God’s kingdom, hence is in no sense the giving of charity. Here society gets back through the proper channels that which belongs to it. We have not yet attained to this ideal condition—in fact, we are far from it, so we are under the necessity of adopting temporary methods and means, and as such these means and methods do not and cannot produce ideal social conditions.

The Temporary Way—Collections

This method is the one used by most charitable organizations and by many of the church societies. It is a crutch only. The world uses this method because they have not seen the light. Of course, it is better than doing nothing. When used by us it should be recognized as a needed expediency. It is a sad comment to make about our church, but it is a fact, that many of our branches are still using the old-fashioned mustard plaster in place of the cure-all, i.e., stewardship or socialization of surplus. In using this method, we do so because we are forced through circumstances to recognize the limitations of the social view of our people. We must work with them as they are, not as we would like them to be. As to the method of making collections, they are varied and many; all the way from the grab bag in which the gambling instinct—getting something for nothing—is made the incentive, to that of via the stomach—which, by the way, is generally very successful. It has some merit in it, at least. It begets a fraternal spirit, thus leveling castes. It is useless here to discuss the ethics of these various ways. Each has some good points as well as bad ones. They all are but temporizing with the working out of the big, whole-hearted program of stewardships.

Investigation

Some of the reasons for a thorough investigation are as follows:

(1) To be able to tell between worthy and unworthy, and the deserving from the undeserving, and thus protect the coffer of the society from impostors.
(2) To enable us to teach efficiency, thrift, and frugality, we quote Devine:

In the hands of the charity organization societies, investigation has come to mean something much more than it had meant for those who proclaimed the necessity for discriminating between the deserving and the undeserving. Investigation is not solely or even primarily for the purpose of thwarting the expectations of impostors. It is not even merely a device for preventing the waste of charity upon unworthy objects in order that it may be used for those who are really in need. Investigation is rather an instrument for intelligent treatment of distress. It is analogous to the diagnosis of the physician, who does not attempt to treat a serious malady from a glance at its superficial indications, but who carefully inquires into hidden and early manifestations of the disease and seeks to know as much as possible of the complicating influences with which he must reckon in effecting a cure. Investigation, therefore, while it should never be inconsiderate or blundering or heartless, must be painstaking, conscientious, and honest. It will exclude irrelevant gossip, but will embrace a close scrutiny of the exact facts, its aim being not to enable the investigating agent to affix a label of worthy or unworthy, but to determine what help can be given, from what source it should come, and how these agencies may be brought into definite and hearty cooperation.

This kind of investigation has been developed in the work of the charity organization societies. Its possibilities have been only gradually unfolded. They are realized only gradually in the experience of individual workers. Investigations made at the outset, even by one who has thoroughly grasped the principles involved, are certain to appear to himself, in the light of later experience, to be either superficial and inadequate, or crude, mechanical, and unnecessarily elaborate. A bad investigation may be either too full or too meager, or it may be neither.

The investigation is made, not for its own sake, but as a necessary step in the careful and adequate remedy of the defects or misfortunes that have brought the applicant to himself, to be either superficial and inadequate, or crude, mechanical, and unnecessarily elaborate. A bad investigation may be either too full or too meager, or it may be neither.

The investigation is made, not for its own sake, but as a necessary step in the careful and adequate remedy of the defects or misfortunes that have brought the applicant to himself, to be either superficial and inadequate, or crude, mechanical, and unnecessarily elaborate. A bad investigation may be either too full or too meager, or it may be neither.
The investigation is not merely for the purpose of reaching a decision as to whether relief shall be given or withheld. It is for the further purpose of enabling the amount and kind of relief to be determined, and also to reveal the personal and natural resources from which relief may rightly be obtained. The thorough searching out of those facts in the investigation will in many instances all the important organized charities regularly report to the bureau, and receive in turn information as to what is done by the other agencies for families in whom they are interested.

Even if there are not formal reports from the relief societies, the registration bureau of an active charity organization society gradually accumulates the information that is of value concerning nearly all of the families asking for relief, and almost certainly concerning those who are known to two or more relief agencies. This information is obtained in the course of the investigations made by the society when application is made at its own office or to individuals, churches, and societies who request an investigation by the society. The ideal plan, however, is undoubtedly for the registration bureau to receive this information directly from the relief agencies, with the understanding that it is confidential and is to be imparted only to those having a legitimate interest. — Devine.

Distribution Through Our Church Organization

The tithe is primarily to be used to take care of needs of the priesthood and dependents. The surplus may so be used. Also offerings may be used for these needs. The surplus is primarily used as a "common fund" from which the needs of the wise, worthy, and faithful, not of the priesthood, are supplied. Either of the other funds, i.e., the tithe and the offering, may be used to aid the needy not of the priesthood, and dependents. The tithe (tenth) being used primarily for the support of the general church officers (conference appointees) should be directly under the general church officers. All such funds, if retained in the office of the local bishop, should be paid out under the direct instructions of the general church officers having jurisdiction, or be sent directly to the general church officers and by them paid out. The surplus is more localized. It should be paid to the church authorities of the various stakes. This surplus fund should be retained in the stake for stake activities in what is known as temporal and spiritual work, but which in reality is all spiritual. The surplus fund in unorganized territory should go to the headquarters or Zion, to be used as wisdom permits. As to whether the surplus should be held by the district for local activities is not clear in our mind. We are inclined to the thought that the district is not organized compactly enough to handle rightly this fund; that this is one of the strong reasons for the necessity of stake organizations. To handle such a fund successfully there must be a strong centralization of power in the hands of a competent group of men—men who are endowed with the necessary “gifts” and who sense fully the “calling” to do this work—men who have “made the word flesh”—who have demonstrated by act the law of stewardship, and thus as far as outward act is governed, are beyond questioning as to their integrity. There are good reasons why the surplus should be expended by the local authorities. These men know better than any other group of men, the needs of those in their own stake. They know the character of the applicant who applies for funds, his integrity, etc., and these are better qualified to act intelligently than any other man or set of men. The retaining of the surplus in the local treasury for local needs will stimulate the members of the stake to build up a fund sufficient to accomplish the work needed in the stake. Further, it will draft the very best business minds in the stake, combined with the true spiritual attitude, making for a far closer and safer cooperation in the business affairs of the stake.

This retention of the surplus to be used by the community providing it, is receiving its due notice by modern writers. We quote an interesting discussion regarding the merits of holding the surplus, from a late work edited by Charles J. Galpin, now at the head of the Division of Farm Population and Rural Life of the United States Department of Agriculture.

When title to land—that is, actual ownership—leaves the farm community and moves to the city and to city industry, there is another by-product of tenancy that needs most careful consideration and analysis. This situation amounts to a drainage of surplus profits, dividends, or accumulations from the land and away from the agricultural population to cities and city industry. The seriousness of this state of affairs is hidden. It needs bold statement and candid disclosure. Surplus accumulations tend to embellish, enrich, or surround the community with comfort and refinement. A surplus will express itself in houses—more ample, beautiful, distinctive. Surplus will gradually from generation to generation manifest itself in the improved appearance of homesteads, farmsteads, but especially institutions. Surplus gives art. Surplus brings the appliances for more pleasure. When surplus is constantly drained off to cities, the countryside is left barren. The country then is considered only as an economic implement, a tool to be kept in order, but not a medium for the expression of human refinements. The accompaniment of this drainage of surplus to the city is the creed and public doctrine that the city is the place for the amenities, for the embodiment of the subtler and finer thoughts, through the transformation of surpluses. Is this true? Must there not be a re-canvass of this creed? Is there not due to the country and the rural community an undrained-off surplus which is to be turned into beauty and meliorations for the people who sweat for bread and live there?

Here is where the tenancy system presents a problem very grave indeed. With all the rural effort for institutions and for beauty in landscape, if more and more the drainage of the surplus continues through the hands of the absentee city landlord, what hope is there? England’s country life has its refinements because the English landlord did build and maintain an establishment in the country. The castle or “great house,” parks, the paved roads gave back to rural England the values of some of its surplus. If rural England is to lose its country refinements by the break-up of its estates, it will face the same situation as America has in its aimless rural life.

Much of Doctor Galpin’s argument loses its force when we remember that our social program includes an ideal town for each rural group, where the surplus or social income will be centralized.

The success of our social groups will mean the success of the whole church. In such an organization do we see the true work of the Order of Enoch. This does not mean that each stake is to be independent in the use of its surplus. Zion is to have a close-up contact with all such stake activities. Just as the stake work is to be organized compactly so must the various stake business groups be organized compactly by an organization centering in Zion. Light and supreme directional control must come from the head. The activities of the stake should be subservient to the activities of the whole. In this way can a program be laid out for a definite goal. Every part (stake, district, and unorganized territory) be working in unison for the same thing. Why not this supreme council in Zion be composed of delegates from each stake? Thus every stake will be represented by its best spiritual and business representatives, and the need of each stake will be properly placed before the supreme council and given due consideration with the needs of all. We are strongly of the opinion that we will not get far in our work for the redemption of Zion until this very important piece of work is accomplished. Zion represents a status of society which we believe will, must, require a very closely knit cooperation, the idea of a theocratic government being the warp and woof of it all, God directing and the people through the right of common consent following these directions. Herein is our conception of the true way of caring for our needy through church organization. Under our present regime the branch deacon has a very important duty to perform in the distribution of the needs for members. As such he should be qualified. If not, then do not hesitate to get some one who is, we care not whether male or female. If the deacon is not competent, then the branch is to blame for putting him there. During our scattered condition we will never be able to distribute to the needy as we should, therefore the necessity of the gathering—gathering into model towns, etc., enabling those having supervisory control to exclude idleness, encourage industry, promote love, subdue selfishness, encourage virtue, prevent crime, and avoid hurtful competition and provide a safe equitable cooperation. The work of the gathering should receive at our hands more careful analysis and be put into operation. Of course in our present status, and no doubt always, the work of supplying the needs should be co-laboratively with the church officers having the responsibility.

Church Homes—Children and Old Folks

These institutions are closely akin to institutions of similar purport kept by other social societies and by the state. The ideal condition is a private home for every person, be he young or old. We believe the time will come when the laws of stewardship are fully complied with, that a private home for every person needing one may be had. There may be a few exceptions to this, where mental or physical infirmities are such that the needs of the patient may require care not obtainable in a private home, but such institutions should be so conducted as to breathe as much as possible the atmosphere of a real homely home.

Distribution Through the Social Organizations

Upon certain ones is placed the burden of caring for the needy among us. These officers should always remember that our church members are not yet perfected—that the human equation in them must be properly evaluated to enable a correct solution. Our experience has taught us that some of our members are not averse to getting aid from any source they can, while others shrink from taking aid from any kind of charitable institution. Each class must be handled differently. To aid wisely with the first class, we found it absolutely necessary to cooperate with the various charitable societies of the city in which we worked. We had several cases of our members trying to work every charitable society they could for aid, hence the necessity of allying our activities along these lines with those of other institutions, exchanging so far as necessary the history of the case enabling the various societies interested to cooperate and solve the case intelligently.

Utilization of State Institutions

Here we are treading on questionable grounds. Some of our good brethren oppose the idea of using to any extent these institutions, especially what is known as the “poor house.” We certainly appreciate the feelings of loyal brotherhood actuating these brethren, but suggest that again we are dealing with facts—conditions as they are, and not as we would like to have them. Until the surplus is made a common fund, we cannot take proper care of all our needy. Better give the unfortunate half a loaf than none. Let us keep constantly in mind the fundamentals. The need of the individual is the first thing to consider, and the means of alleviating these needs is the second thing to consider. Failing to use the means God has revealed to us we must of necessity use temporary expediences, and among these are such as the state institutions. While carrying out our program for relief under expediencies, we may, or we may not be compelled to resort to such aid as the state may give.

Distribution Through Individual Effort

Aid through individual effort should be the exception. It lacks the necessary exactitude of a scientific method. The chief virtue claimed for it is that it does more good to the giver than to the one given. We sometimes wonder if there is not an undue stress put on the value of “individual charity.” Would not a big percentage of the present-day individual aid be unnecessary if the rights of the group were recognized? We would not detract from the splendid efforts made by individuals to alleviate the condition of the poor. Under the present individualistic regime it is indeed commendable, but why continue a program that puts the individual under the necessity of assuming so great a responsibility as the correct distribution to the needs of humanity requires? Better for each individual to use his energy in creating and let those specially fitted for aiding do so. The constitution of our society as revealed in the three books, when properly interpreted, limits the giving of aid by individuals to emergencies only. An immediate need should be the incentive; regular contribution for helping should be left to the group of men recognized of God as the ones to so officiate.

Cooperation

A close cooperation must be had between the factors constituting our (a) church organization; (b) between our church organization and the associated charities; and (c) between our church and the giving of aid by individual members of our church; and finally (d) between our society and state institutions for the aid of the needy. This cooperation should always have as its aim the development of individual powers and initiative to secure the freedom of the needy one—to make, if possible, every member of our organization a producer, one who would be able to contribute to the surplus fund rather than one who is receiving.

Adequate Relief

Adequate relief is a difficult thing to give under present conditions. All expedient ways of helping the poor do not and cannot take in their equation the two necessary elements—the divine and the human—needed to solve the same. Stewardship takes these two vital things into its program and is thus bound to succeed. Adequate relief means eventually to place every human being in such environment that through their own effort coupled with the divine, they can become one hundred per cent efficient physically, spiritually, morally, and intellectually. Adequate relief gives a sustaining hand only when it is a means to a greater freedom, the exception being, of course, when the aided one is physically or mentally unfit and this unfitness incurable. It will be seen then that to give adequate relief the activities in our church organization must be very comprehensive—must cover a wide field of research, investigation, and application. We have as yet hardly made a start. The stewardship plan demands no less than this. It should in the great number of cases be relief and seldom support. Support only when physical or mental conditions demand it.

Relief should follow after:

(a) A full knowledge of the case which will enable us to:

1. Make the proper discriminations.
2. Give proper treatment for the case, disciplinary or corrective for those criminally responsible for said dependency.
3. Intelligent relief, including proper oversight for those who cannot maintain a normal standard of living.
4. Definite and absolute refusal by way of aid to those who can maintain a proper standard of living.

Finding Employment for the Needy

Here is where our organization is lame. So far as we are aware, very few systematic efforts have been made to place our needy for employment. In this we see one of the strong reasons for our social idea of gathering. Only in a gathering state can this work of finding proper work for those needing it be perfected. It can be done in a limited manner under the present status of Latter Day Saint society. No more important piece of work toward the curing of our social ills can be performed than the efficient organization of our people for the placement of those among us who need such placement. It means trained minds who cannot only read human nature, but who know just what data or facts are essential to enable a wise and just judgment, and when these facts are obtained, to be able to wisely utilize them. Here we need, indeed, efficient workers who are “Daniels come to judgment.”

Intelligent Functioning

We have strongly hinted in several places in this article of the necessity of trained minds—intelligent action on the part of those seeking aid as well as those helping. Too great an emphasis cannot be placed upon this part of our program for relieving the poor, or for the doing of any other constructive work. Every activity which we expect to enter, in our redemptive process, must be thoroughly analyzed and understood theoretically before we can make a practical demonstration of its value. Once more, let us say, there is no place in the social program as put forth by our church that puts a premium on ignorance—for ignorance is bondage, and intelligence is freedom. Our educational institution, Graceland, should as soon as practicable be ready to give the necessary courses to train efficiently the men and women needed to do this very effective work.

The Ideal

BY D. K. MANEELY, D. D. S.

Close your eyes and think over this great land—children, babies everywhere. These are the future of the church, the citizenship; in short, the world itself a few years hence. In a group such as this, whose program is of far-reaching dimensions, this generation cannot hope to accomplish the ideal. Our contribution is not alone our ill-fitted selves. If the ideal is to become a reality, this future generation must be equipped with the keenest minds and the strongest bodies. A keen mind lives in a healthy body, and a healthy body must have a clean approach. Through the mouth passes all the food, liquid, and air, which develops the body in health or breaks it down in disease. Food cannot pass through a diseased mouth and not enter the body in a poisoned condition.

Allow me to show a simple example: Your kitchen is clean, your table is scrubbed, your food is wholesome—if this food is to play a part in the child’s growth, why, oh why, must it enter through a mouth filthy with decay and polluted with many days’ accumulation of stale food? It is exactly the same principle as though your cooking utensils were never cleansed. Why not allow them to accumulate from day to day, the germs thriving on the stale food as they do in the mouth? Give the child’s mouth the same chance as your dishes.

In the recesses of decayed teeth, the pockets of inflamed gums is an ideal incubator for the germs of tuberculosis and many dreaded child diseases, as diphtheria and scarlet fever. Need I enumerate their results—poor eyes, defective hearing, stunted growth.

Too many people think, “Oh, these baby teeth will soon come out.” Did you know that before these teeth are shed a child attains three fourths of his adult height and three fifths of his weight? Out of every hundred boys, sixty-seven are under weight. They are not difficult to pick out, with their fatigue posture, drooped head, flat chest, physically unfit, nervous, and irritable. These are certainly not the healthy, clear-eyed, keen-witted men and women we need to carry on the work we have left unfinished.

A clean mind lives in a healthy body. Childhood is the time of preparation in mind, body, and morals, and upon the foundation of youth is built the man.

[This is the first of a series of three terse papers by Doctor Maneely, and which will profit the readers. The second will be contained in an early issue of the Herald.—EDITOR.]

Qualities I Want My Son to Have

I want my son to be God-fearing. By this I do not mean that I want him to be afraid, as one would be afraid of a selfish or tyrannical mortal parent. I want him to fear God in a reverent way, to love the law of God so much that he will have no desire to stray from it; so much that, like David of old, he will find his delight in the law of the Lord and will meditate on it day and night. There is more in silent, prayerful meditation than those who live in a hurry can grasp.

I want my son to love God supremely; to have an affection for good; to get into the secret place (the understanding of His law) and abide there. I want him to love, not in a selfish way; I want him to know the greater love that Paul tells about in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians; the love that Henry Drummond knew to be “the greatest thing in the world.” Without this great love, my son, though he were gifted with the oratory of Demosthenes or the wisdom of Solomon, would be as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal.

If love be in his heart he will have all the other qualities that I want him to have. He will have patience: “Love suffereth long”; he will have kindness: “and is kind”; he will have generosity: “love envieth not”; humility: “Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up”; courtesy “doth not behave itself unseemly”; unselfishness: “seeketh not its own”; good temper: “is not provoked”; guilelessness: “taketh not account of evil”; sincerity: “rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth.”

These qualities make up the supreme gifts, the stature of the perfect man. Could I wish my son to have more?—J. H. Bell, in Unity, July, 1925.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Ear Noises

There are few things more distressing than a persistent ringing or buzzing or thumping in the ears; actual pain, if severe, is perhaps more injurious to the heart, but the sufferer often finds it more endurable. The noises in tinnitus, which is the medical term for the condition we are discussing, are of the most varied character—whistling, sizzling, blowing, chirping, drumming, crackling, booming, squeaking, clicking, rustling, and sometimes a continuous musical tone. But musical or discordant the unceasing repetition makes the condition almost maddening.

The cause of the noises in most cases is some abnormal condition of the ear itself, acute or chronic; but they are sometimes caused by conditions entirely independent of the ears. Auto-intoxication from whatever cause—bad teeth, diseased tonsils, or sluggish intestines—nasal obstruction, catarhal sore throat, injuries to the brain, meningitis, overindulgence in tea, coffee, or tobacco, and indigestion are frequent causes. Certain drugs can produce them, such as quinine or salicylic acid. Hardening of the arteries, certain forms of heart disease, and disease of the thyroid which increases the force and rapidity of the circulation, are also occasionally responsible for tinnitus. Finally, ear noises may be owing to some anatomical defect that is congenital; in such a case the noises have always been present, and a person accepts them as part of normal existence and can hardly be said to suffer.

The possibility of cure or amelioration depends upon the underlying cause. The prospect of relief is brighter when the noises are not continuous, but come and go. Unfortunately a very frequent cause is a thickening and matting together of the structures of the drum cavity, and that is virtually incurable, though something can be done by treating the nose, and conditions, and by general tonic treatment. Any form of auto-intoxication must be searched for and removed, if possible. Sometimes great benefit is afforded by sonant massage of the nose, and conditions, and by general tonic treatment. Any form of auto-intoxication must be searched for and removed, if possible. Sometimes great benefit is afforded by sonant massage of the ears by an electrically run buzzer, or by listening in on the radio through the earphones, plugged into the highest stage of amplification. Many sufferers have complete relief during a railway journey. The noise of the cars sets up a new set of vibrations that drown out and sometimes silence the subjective noises.—The Youth’s Companion, July 30, 1925, p. 524.

Portland District

July 26 marked the close of one of the finest reunions in the history of the Portland District. Much of its success is due to the work of Brother Gillen and Brother and Sister Etzenhouser, but we believe that perhaps the fundamental reason for such a fine spirit on the grounds was the absence of contention and adverse criticism. The atmosphere throughout the whole week seemed to be one of peace and happiness, and a desire on the part of everyone to put his best foot forward, ready to the wheel to aid in the mighty progress of this work.

Brother M. H. Cook of Seattle, our retiring district president, was present at the opening of our reunion. Brother Eli Bronson, our new missionary to this district, was elected to the office of district president at the conference session. Brother Bronson is a wide-awake man and has already won his way into the hearts of the Saints of the district.

Brother Gillen was able to remain throughout the ten days of reunion, for which everyone gave thanks and a sigh of relief when no telegram arrived requesting him to “move on.” His influence for good and the interesting stories of his early missionary life were a source of delight and comfort to those permitted to associate with him during the ten days.

The value of the splendid work of Brother and Sister Etzenhouser cannot be estimated, for their lectures were well attended, especially by the young people. We believe the work of Brother and Sister Etzenhouser are doing will certainly be a big factor in speeding the redemption of Zion with a clean, wholesome people, and we were very glad to see such hearty interest given their lectures.

The first Sunday evening of reunion was given over to services held by the Portland choir under the direction of Sister Fay Buchanan. Soloists during the week were: Sisters Bess Young, Fay Buchanan, Lillian Livingston, Lila Smith, Velva Kenny, and Sylvia Lasley; Brother Percy Quance, and Mr. Mitchell. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, who are not members of the church, came quite a distance to our grounds, five or six evenings of the reunion, to assist with the music.

Their contributions were very much appreciated. Young people’s prayer meetings were held each morning at six o’clock, and despite the early hour they were well attended, and the meetings were usually one hundred per cent. Brother Bronson was in charge. Other meetings of the day were: Prayer meeting at 8:15; lecture hour by Brother and Sister Etzenhouser at 9:15; preaching at 11, and at 8 o’clock in the evening. Brother Gillen occupied each evening and gave us many fine sermons and much encouragement. The afternoons were given over to recreation, volleyball being the chief sport, and after services each evening everyone gathered round a bonfire to sing songs and tell stories before Brother Bronson’s final admonition, “Bedtime.” Great interest was manifested in the afternoon games, as well as the evening gatherings, by both the players and the audiences. Brother Gillen, it might be mentioned, spent the evening moments playing “horseshoe,” due to the fact, we surmise, that the volleyball net had been strung to a distance. He informs us that the interest is good, and he feels much good may be accomplished.

Eastern Iowa

Reunion of the Eastern Iowa District is on in earnest at this place. A beautiful park near the center of the city, with good water, light, and other accommodations, are all freely given. Members of the church in this vicinity stand well in the community as citizens. About one half of the audience each evening is made up of residents of the city, who give splendid attention to our message.

A heavy rain fell on the opening day, which hindered service, but the rain was greatly appreciated by the farmers of Iowa.

Elder C. B. Woodstock of the Sunday School Department, arrived Friday afternoon, and the work of the reunion set in motion that evening. Attendance from the first has not been as large as the membership of the district would warrant. We believe people will see the effort necessary to place their families at the reunion. The privileges of regular attendance are esteemed altogether too lightly. We are not willing to make the effort or pay the price, and the Lord must withhold the blessing designed for us.

Sunday was a beautiful day and filled with joyous service from the early prayer meeting in the morning to the evening sermon. The Saints came generously from Clinton, Davenport, Oleswein, Muscatine, and Cedar Rapids, many driving in for the day. Elders J. F. Garver, Ammon White, and Leonard Houghton came in Tuesday and completed the working force.

A series of lectures on character building and another series on the social program of the church, with talks on the departmental work and a series of splendid sermons, have made up a strong educational program. A fine spirit has attended every session.

The interests of the young people are being ably looked after by Sister Ida Mae Case of Iowa City. A good recreational program of games and contests has been varied by morning hikes, afternoon swims, evening camp fires, and an auto trip to the scenic state park eight miles distant.

Sleeping accommodations have been secured at very moderate rates in two large rooming houses, and good meals are served in a near-by residence.

Elder E. R. Davis, the missionary district president, has been unting in his efforts to make the reunion serve the needs of the membership.

A group of Temple Builders from Davenport have served as a nucleus of energy and enthusiasm among the young people. They came under the leadership of Sister Ruth Benson.

Sister Nellie E. Newland was present a large part of the time with a large group of Campfire Girls from Viola.

Young people organized a Booster Club to foster the various activities in connection with the reunion, and to solicit the attendance of young people at the reunion in 1926. They have fully determined to bring five auto loads of young people to the Young People’s Convention next year.
Irvinton, California

From a letter to the First Presidency

Have just returned from a fourteen-day stay at the Irvinton reunion. We had one of the best reunions I have ever attended. The preaching of Brother Gillen and Brother Blair was well received, and they have strengthened the Saints greatly by their words of cheer and good counsel. Their sojourn among us will mean much to the work in the district. Their lives coincide with their message, hence they make a wonderful impression.

I was chairman of the recreation committee and had the direct supervision of such activities. Our work was made pleasant by the loyal support of the Saints and the reunion officers. We had swims, games of various kinds, camp fires, watermelon feeds, etc. We held a prayer meeting up in one of the canyons very early in the morning, and after a very active meeting we toasted winiers, and the whole experiment proved quite satisfactory. The young people's prayer meetings were well attended, and at one meeting eighty-three per cent of the folks took part.

Only one change was made in the district officers. Brother J. T. Smith was succeeded by A. J. Damron as second vice-president of the district. A wonderful spirit prevailed at the conference, and all seemed to be well pleased with the results of the past year's endeavors. The reunion committee has made some very pleasing changes in the appearance of the grounds.

Brother Blair will address the combined priesthood of Oakland and San Francisco tomorrow night at Oakland. He speaks in Oakland on Wednesday night and in Oakland on Thursday night. We expect a good crowd to hear him.

Spokane District

The Spokane reunion has just passed into history. We want to report that there was an enjoyable time had. We had with us, by very good fortune, Brother F. A. Smith, the presiding patriarch, and Apostle Clyde F. Ellis; also Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser.

Brother and Sister Etzenhouser's lectures were very interesting and instructive, and we recommend them as a necessary part of our social education.

Brother Smith's has become, because of his many visits here, a household name, and we always appreciate having him with us.

We enjoyed having Brother Ellis with us, it being his first visit to Spokane. His sermons and pleasing manner and stories of his work in the islands, also his good-will toward his brethren, were pleasing and were well enjoyed.

There was a committee appointed to look for a location, with the intention of buying permanent reunion grounds.

Owing to the late date of our reunion we did not have the crowd that we have had in former years, but we can say that the reunion was a success in many ways.

A field meet was held under the supervision of W. W. Wood, superintendent of the Recreation and Expression Department, which was enjoyed by the old as well as the young. Prizes were awarded in each event.

Arrangements were made for a young people's convention to be held in Spokane some time in October.

We feel that the work is onward in Spokane District.

Encouraged at Oklahoma City

A short letter from Wilson S. Huff, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, says: "A number of Saints from this branch attended district conference and reunion held at Skiatook July 25 to August 2, and this with hot weather made attendance light at services. But conference is past, the Saints are at home, the weather is cooler, and attendance has improved. Saints who attended reunion and conference came home encouraged."

Idaho District

The Idaho District's reunion, which is being held at Hagerman is well under way, with the district president, Elder R. C. Chambers, in charge, and the missionary force represented by Elders R. L. Fulk and M. A. Etzenhouser and Mrs. Etzenhouser.

Saints are in attendance from various points in Idaho and a few from Washington. New faces are appearing daily.

The meetings are very interesting and beneficial. Even six o'clock in the morning is not too early for the young people to rally for prayer meeting, and the old people are young enough to take active part in the sports.

Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts

Reunion of Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts at Council Bluffs, Iowa, met for their first session on Thursday evening with a large gathering in attendance to enjoy a mixed program of music and readings. The preparations for the meetings of the reunion had been largely made, and on Friday morning about twenty tents were erected for family camps, and before services were held the day the reunion is held is in excellent condition, and the Saints who have assembled feel much pleased at the prospects for a spiritual and social gathering. Brethren William Bath and J. D. Stead are on the grounds, and Brother Gleazer and family are looking for to-day. The services so far held have been good. Patriarch Joshua Carille is present and busy.

At the business session the district presidency of the two districts associated with E. J. Gleazer of the Quorum of Twelve were chosen to preside, with Brother J. F. Minton as secretary. The entire program prepared for the sessions of the reunion by the reunion committee was approved.

The permission of the sale of articles was left to the reunion committee, as they were authorized to provide for the complete organization of the reunion.

More to follow.

Eastern Iowa

FULTON, IOWA, August 20.—Eastern Iowa district reunion has again passed into history. The only sentiment we heard expressed was, "This is the best reunion Eastern Iowa has ever had."

At the Saturday morning prayer service a peaceful spirit was felt, which continued to grow stronger as the reunion progressed, until the last two days were indeed a spiritual feast long to be remembered.

Brother C. B. Woodstock of Le-moni was with us at the beginning to care for class work, but it proved to be one continuous class for him, for he preached and "talked" to classes about thirteen times in four days. His work was enjoyed by all. Sister Ida Mae Case of Iowa City had charge of playground activities. She provided hikes, breakfasts, and various games to help the young enjoy life better. Tuesday day besides these Brother White and John Garver came on the scene. Brother White endeared himself to all by his quiet, sincere manner and fine logic in telling the gospel story and in his patriarchal work. And Brother Garver, well, you know the church has only one John Garver. Always happy, yet firm in his convictions. At the Saturday morning prayer service (prayer services were held every morning at half past eight) the theme was "Zion and its redemption." A great outpouring of the spirit was felt. Brother White spoke by the Spirit, admonishing the Saints to live more consecrated lives, and giving words of counsel and instruction.

But Sunday was the climax to all that had gone before. At the morning prayer service, Brother White again spoke by the Spirit, and Brother Garver gave a very fine and quite lengthy admonition by the Spirit. At this time the priest-

On Board Lackawanna Train Number 5, Near Water Gap, Pennsylvania, August 12, 1925

In my last I told of reaching the camp grounds at Onset on Thursday, the 30th of July. Onset reunion grounds have, of course, been quite well known to the general representatives of the church who work in the eastern part of the United States, and having visited it several times since its establishment some years ago, I was aware that it had become a popular gathering place for the Southern New England Saints; but I am a bit surprised to find to what extent its popularity has grown. Eleven years ago my family and I were guests of the reunion, and we were domiciled in the cottage of Sister Norton of New Bedford; but instead of its being the only cottage (or one of a very few) on the grounds, we found it seventy-nine companions.

This substantial increase of buildings has of course been accompanied by a decrease of the number of tents, yet of these there were not a few, and some of them were occupied by Saints who had come from far to be in attendance at the meetings. Onset's popularity has widened its geographical bounds. The eighty cottages, all well built and comfortably furnished, plus the general buildings, such as the commodious and cement-floored tabernacle, the commissary, with its kitchen and dining-room quarters, the store, together with nine permanent and well-laid-out tennis courts, volleyball balls, etc., all give to the grounds now an atmosphere of permanency which was not present ten years ago.

We found the reunion well organized and under way, with Brother P. M. Hanson and the district and local authorities in charge. Prayer meeting was in session as we entered the grounds, and this began for us a busy period of several days. Preaching by Brother T. J. Elliott followed the prayer meeting, which was the first opportunity I had had to hear "Tom" dispense the word. We found him to be an earnest, forceful speaker.

In the afternoon a meeting of those holding the priesthood was held, with thirty or forty being present. Among them there were the following of the general officers: Bishops A. Carmichael, M. E. Siegfried, C. F. Fisher, and later, John Zimmermann; P. M. Hanson, of the Twelve; and Richard Baldwin, of the Evangelists. I shall not attempt to name all who attended. This meeting lasted from half past two until five, and later on two other sessions were held, the number in attendance running about the same. Many of the problems of the church were touched upon, and I tried to give instruction which would be helpful to men in their work. The courteous responses and the close attention given encouraged me to believe good work was being done. I appreciated the support given me in these meetings by Brethren Carmichael and Hanson and the local authorities.

Besides these priesthood meetings in the afternoons, another series of meetings which seemed to do good and were greatly enjoyed were the "problems meetings" or "round tables" held in the forenoons for several days, the first one on Friday morning, the 31st. In these meetings, usually presided over by Brother Hanson, Bishop Carmichael was the chief actor, since very many of the questions propounded bore on the financial and Zionistic aspects of the work. And I think I can truthfully say that the frank, free, and thoughtful answers given by Brother Carmichael quite captivated the Saints. The first night we were on the grounds Brother Carmichael was the preacher, and he opened a great field of thought in his presentation of our social program, which seemed to stimulate the Saints to practical thoughts of Zion, shown in their questions. Of course, some of the questions had been stimulated by rumors, and these were answered considerately and fully. I heard many commendatory remarks about the "round table" meetings.

Besides the various addresses to the priesthood meetings, and the desultory talks at the round tables, I was asked to preach three times, and I spoke on the social program of the church as adopted by last General Conference, and Brother Carmichael followed the same line; so Zion was distinctly the theme of the reunion while I was there. And it was surely a popular one with the Saints.

Of the general news of the reunion there will doubtless be due report made by others. With Independence represented by Bishop Siegfried and family, Ellis Short and wife, "Estella" and "Marcella," George Anway and wife, and others, and Lamoni by "Unee Jerry" and wife, President Briggs, and Max Carmichael and his party of Sunday school workers, we would have felt quite at home, even if we had not found a large number of old acquaintances among the "Easterners" to whom the bonds of friendship have tied us for years—the Fishers, the Searses, the Traverses, the Sinclairs, the Joys, the Bakers, the Combes, the Toombes, the Suttills, the Chief actor, since very many of the questions propounded bore on the financial and Zionistic aspects of the work. And I think I can truthfully say that the frank, free, and thoughtful answers given by Brother Carmichael quite captivated the Saints. It is among such that the periods of interim meetings are too short for the visiting they love.

In thinking of the friendships formed in the passing years as I have at intervals more or less long had occasion to do work for the church in New England, I recall my first visit to the Massachusetts district reunion, held not at Onset, but Silver Lake, and one particular event which for a time jeopardized my standing with the "younger set" from Fall River, Massachusetts. As anything, it was a young men's game. It was a ball game, brought about in this way: The Fall River Sunday school boys had a ball team. They felt pretty sure of their prowess and challenged the camp. That was in my athletic days, and I felt disposed to accept the challenge, so organized a temporary "team." And what a team! the Fisher boys (Ed. and Myron), R. C. Evans, F. M. Sheehy, Frank Bussell, Randall Sheehy, Fishers, the Suttills, the Whipples, and I. Frank Spinnett and I constituted the "batter," he doing the receiving, I the pitching. We won the first game, so the youngsters wanted a return game, which we gave them after our "lamehood" had worn off a bit. The first game was smooth enough, but the second one developed the conditions under which my "standing" for a time was in abeyance. Now, mind you, the youngsters had lost the first game and were losing the second, George Sinclair was at bat. I started a fast "in shoot," which I saw was a bit close, so shouted, “Look out!” George “went for it,” but got it on the head instead of his bat. Well, he went groggy, and the Fall River fans went “mad,” for they seemed to think I had purposely tried to injure their “star player,” and I had quite some time convincing them that such intention was far from me. Well, that ball game made me quite well acquainted with the camp, particularly with the Fall River “crowd”; and that “in shoot” connecting my hand with George's head developed a bond of friendship which has strengthened with the passing years. Here's to you, George! May your head be spared another such crack, but I've always been glad that in shoot found me another friend.

I didn’t play ball this time at Onset—too busy, and perhaps too old.

We had three diversions from the routine of camp which gave us enjoyed variety. One afternoon (July 31) “Doc” Sinclair invited a number of the brethren down to his Cape Cod farm to have a “Finnish bath.” Whether it was from curiosity or need, we all accepted. Another thing which made the episode interesting to me was that “Dan” Joy not only invited me to accompany him on the trip in his new big Willys-Knight, but he “knew my weakness” and said, “Take that one. It will give you a chance to do it yourself.” Well, he was commodore of that craft, so I obeyed orders. I here and now confess to feeling the thrill of pleasure in sitting at the wheel of a powerful well-working car.

And that Finnish bath! I shall not describe it. Ask “Doc” about it the next time you see him. Tell him to outline its anatomy for you. It's hard to recall a connected idea of it from just one experience. It's like reading one chapter of a phrenody or two sticks. For example, of one of Kipling’s I read once all I recall now is, “A rag and a bone and a hank of hair.” And so of this Finnish ablutionary epic, about all I can recall is “a hut and a fire and a pile of stones.” But the stones were hot; and hot stones and water make steam. And of steam there was “a plenty.” And “they say” that Nurmi takes one such bath every day when training. Well, I wonder when he will be able to do it. Well, I’ve heard one, anyway, and wouldn’t run from another, but rather for it.

The “bath” safely negotiated, “Susie” refreshed the party by serving lemonade and cookies, and we returned to camp. The “we” in this case means Brethren Paul Hanson, Richard Baldwin, Myron Fisher, Daniel Joy, and me. The commodore again ordered me to the wheel—I obeyed—and we returned up the river.

The second diversion came on the 3d of August. Down on the shores of Cape Cod Bay, near East Sandwich, on a stretch of interesting beach, stands a cottage in which now the second generation of Saints spend the summer. It is the old beach house of the Hoxies. Built many years ago by A. N. Hoxie, sr., it is still owned by the Hoxie family and is the summer headquarters for A. N. Hoxie, jr., and his family, and was “Jesse” Hoxie, “the skipper,” as he is termed, or “Uncle Jerry,” as he is familiarly known to his friends and the “kiddies.”

To this summer cottage flow the friends of the Hoxies in a rather constant stream—and they never fail to find a welcome. Sister Hoxie (Clara) had on Sunday extended to Sister Smith an invitation (which included me) to come to dinner. We left the camp at 1:30 p.m. and got there (about eight miles from the camp) was answered by Brother Ellis Short, who said, “My Jewett isn't in use today; take that.” So, in the “borrowed finery” of a new Jewett roadster, we (Kelley Anderson with us) went in state down the Cape to Scorton Beach. Jesse was the first we met, and his hearty, “Where're you goin'?” was followed by an aside to me “Say, your overalls are in the closet; get them on.” I did, and felt at home, and in bathing suit and overalls I “recreated” in sand, and boat, and water. Even Mrs. Smith went in the water—at least got her feet wet.

The 3d of August! Whether or not they knew it when they “invited us down,” I cannot say; but anyway, Albert and Clara found out that it was the 28th anniversary of the wedding day, they ‘did it’ and by their “celebration” the occasion by setting us down at noon to a feast which was “some feast” and an event which we shall long carry among our pleasant memories; for Clara and Albert Hoxie are most genial hosts and gracious entertainers. There were eight at our table: Albert and Clara Hoxie, Bishop and Mrs. John Zimmermann, Kelley Anderson, William Zimmermann, Mrs. Smith, and I. At the “Annex” table near by, under the stern command of “Skipper” Jesse Hoxie, were the lively Hoxie youngsters, “Albo,” “Lucy,” and John. For the happy dinner, for the sail, the boat trip, the swimming, the evening ride through the woods, the evening visiting, and all—a most pleasant wedding-day anniversary—we are grateful to our hosts of the day.

The third diversion was on the 4th—a day to and from in Boston. An early breakfast with “M. C.” at the commissary, a sleepy garage man routed from bed to give the Reo a supply of “gas,” and with Sisters Smith and Leckney and “George” Nurmi, we drove via Stoughton, to drop “Grammie” and Sister Leckney at the former’s home. Behind us trailed the Jewett, carrying Ellis, Mabel, and Mark.

Massachusetts has developed a fine system of main roads, and unless compelled to detour because of “Road under construction ahead,” sixty miles are easily and smoothly negotiated. Well, we did have to do it, and so it was not long until the two cars were stopped alongside the Boston Commons for agreement on meeting places, etc. This arranged, the party broke up into three—M. C. to go about looking after many business details demanding his attention; Ellis and Mark to look up some banking matters, and Ruth, Mabel, and I to call at some publishers, bookstores, etc.

I plan to return to Boston next week. I visited The Saints’ Herald for August 26, 1935

Flint, Michigan

August 12.—My last letter left us looking forward to the visit of President F. M. Smith and Bishop Albert Carmichael, on the occasion of our district ministerial conference. The great day opened with a prayer meeting at half past eight in charge of President Smith and Bishop Carmichael, at which the Newall Street Church was filled to capacity. At a quarter to ten the priesthood assembled in two classrooms of the Dort School, across the street, where the Melchesidek order was addressed by President Smith, and Aaronic order by Bishop Carmichael, while Sunday school was in progress in the upper and lower auditoriums of the church. Sister Smith, who accompanied the President to Flint, was prevailed upon by one of the classes of young folks to address them upon the psychology of joy.

At eleven o'clock President Smith addressed a full house, taking up some of the questions and problems of stewardships.

At the afternoon and evening meetings the size of the crowd made it necessary to use the auditorium of the Dort School. Bishop Carmichael, in his characteristic schoolteacher fashion, drove home point by point the process and the advantages of the stewardship program at the afternoon session and, at the close of his discourse, answered many questions.

Four local men were ordained at the close of this meeting; one teacher, two priests, and one high priest.

At the evening service President Smith again held a capacity audience in rapt attention while he enlarged upon the necessity of our putting into practical operation our theories of Zion, and demonstrating to the world that a better, a more Christianized social order is not only possible but it is absolutely necessary if civilization shall not go down into oblivion.

It was a wonderful day for Flint, the character of our prayer meeting shows that the spirit of Zion, and demonstrating to the world that a better, a more Christianized social order is not only possible but it is absolutely necessary if civilization shall not go down into oblivion.

The next day President Smith addressed the local Lions Club at their weekly noonday luncheon on, “Your best business asset.” The members of the club spoke in the highest terms of the speaker, and the Chief Lion said that President Smith was the best pinch hitter they had ever heard.

August 5 and 6 we had Bishop C. J. Hunt with us. His talks on tithing were very well received.

The membership in Flint are intelligently optimistic. We know the church is moving Zionward, because we are helping push it that way. Our young people are still very much alive, working together, creating a general feeling of good fellowship. Sunday school classes are having a friendly rivalry in working for Christmas offering and for our building fund. The new building that was erected last year for the Niles Avenue congregation is still in need of considerable work to make it habitable for winter. In the last few weeks we have added several to our number by baptism.

We have to report the death of Brother William Woodworth August 3. He was an invalid for several years and leaves his wife and daughter to mourn his departure.

Portland Will Hold Young People's Convention

August 6.—Many of the Saints here were made sad to hear of the death this morning of our beloved brother, Al Moore, of this city. Brother Moore was well known and highly esteemed by the Portland Saints and many other residents of this suburb, Montavilla. We mourn the loss of this brother but are cheered by the hope that we shall meet again “beyond the veil.”

Elder Eli Bronson began a series of missionary services Sunday, August 2, at Bay City, Oregon, near Tillamook. The meetings will continue three weeks. Miss Lila Smith of Portland accompanied Brother Bronson, to assist with the music.

A. G. Shultz and family, S. A. Dobson and family, and a few other members of the church reside at Bay City and hold Sunday school there, so the field is not entirely new.

Our reunion was a decided success, although not so well attended as last year.

W. W. Belcher, the local scoutmaster, reports a pleasant outing over the week-end, August 1 and 2.

Brother Belcher and twelve boys went to Camp Millard, twenty-three miles from the Portland church. Arriving at Eagle Creek, where the boys camp, they loaded a horse with a trail around their half acre claim and built a dam across the creek to make a swimming hole. Sunday morning the scouts had their usual Sunday school session and in the afternoon returned to town.

After Religious Friday evening, July 31, the young people decided by unanimous vote to hold a young people's convention here some time in the fall. The dates are to be decided in the near future.

Committees were chosen to have charge of the publicity, preparation of music, programs and recreation, entertaining of guests, financing, etc.

Brother Bronson will be chairman of the preparations at least, being selected by the young people to have general oversight of the preparations and to appoint committees and to arrange for speakers.

PORTLAND, OREGON, 152 East Seventy-Fourth Street

Eastern Michigan District

MINDEN CITY, MICHIGAN, August 12.—Since last writing for your columns, there has been plenty of work to do, both in the city of Port Huron and in the district. With the announcement of our reunion at Port Huron, the speakers we were to have for reunion came to us just the same, and after a two-day meeting at Owendale we toured the district, meeting at large number of branches, which has been the means of much good.

July 23 we were pleased to have with us President F. M. Smith at the Cash Branch. His talk of the evening eased some of the tension that has been prevalent, and while the majority who were present were satisfied, some found excuse to criticize for not being asked personally what was in their minds. However, this visit has been very profitable, and we are looking forward to his return among us, and if possible satisfying these.

Bishop C. J. Hunt came into the district July 12, when I met him on the train en route to Port Huron. After a very profitable prayer meeting in the morning at the Varney Street Church, and the priesthood meeting in the afternoon, he addressed the union service of the city and missions in the evening; also on Monday and Tuesday, he left Wednesday for Brown City, Valley Center, and Marlette for the balance of the week. He continued for two weeks longer, going to Carsonville, Ubly, Minden City, Owendale, Caseville, and Saint Clair. In arranging his schedule, we had in mind getting representatives from every branch in the district to hear him. This was very well accomplished.

July 19 Bishop A. Carmichael visited Port Huron, where another union meeting of the city churches, and Saint Clair and Sarnia, Ontario, across the river from Port Huron, join with us to have a district meeting “Stewardships.” He left the next day for Detroit to meet President Smith, and then came President George N. Briggs of Grace-land to put before us the needs of our educational institution. His talk was enjoyed by all, and with it came a desire to assist in some way to solve the problems confronting these men.

The following week, on Thursday evening, the 23d, Brother D. T. Williams of the Twelve arrived. The next day we were driven by Brother John Steinhaus to Owendale for the meetings there. Here we enjoyed the hospitality of Elder Myron Carr, an active worker and president of the Owendale Branch. He is also my counselor in this part of the district. I have another at the other end of the district. Saturday morning dawned with Saints gathering from all parts of the district. Among the eldership were William Davis, who preached his first sermon in these parts, and J. J. Bailey, who is loved and respected by all who know him.

The meeting had been in progress only a short time when Sister Blanche Edwards and Sister Mae Engle, district organizer of the Department of Women, arrived. With these women on the scene, the workers and crowd in evidence, a good time was assured, and by faithful participation on their part, this was had. After the prayer service, Bishop Hunt spoke and in his forceful way presented the needs of the church. The afternoon was taken up with talks from our three visitors, followed by a round table. With this came an examination of the people regarding the leading quorums of the church, to see how familiar they were with them.

The evening service was in charge of the Department of Women, and they used it to good advantage. After a short program, Sister Edwards delivered her lecture on "Leadership." This was enjoyed by all who were in attendance. There was a desire on the part of those present to hear her again, so the next morning at eleven o'clock she spoke, using for her subject, "What is your girl worth to you?" Elder Williams spoke in the afternoon, and the writer at night.

The two-day meeting over, Sister Edwards and Sister Engle left to visit Cash, Carsonville, Crosswell, Port Huron, and Valley Center Branches, holding afternoon and evening meetings at most. The writer and Elder Williams left for Shabbons, Sandusky, Applegate, Crosswell, and Port Huron. With this tour of the district, the Saints had a splendid opportunity to get acquainted with these folks and get a glimpse of the forward movement of the church in general. The general expression heard from those who had an opportunity to hear these workers was that they wanted them back again.

To-day I am at Minden City, where I preached last night, coming here yesterday from Cash. I am waiting for Elder Truman Richards, our district missionary, to come along and go with me to Bay Port for to-night, and Caseville for to-morrow, to attend the annual picnic of the Sunday schools of the northern part of the district. This will complete my tour of the northern part of the district, having only the branches at the south and west end to visit in order to have a complete record by the convening of the district conference at Croswell, September 26 and 27.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Platsmouth, Nebraska

August 10—This group enjoyed a profitable day August 2, when we held our all-day meeting. The day was an ideal one. The services were Sunday school at a quarter of ten, which was quite largely attended. Fifty-three members and visitors; at eleven o'clock was preaching service, when Brother Becker was the speaker, the subject being the stewardship plan, which held the attention of about one hundred in attendance.

At noon a very tempting picnic dinner was served in Phillips's pasture, about three quarters of a mile out of town. A picture was taken of the priesthood first, and then of all the attendance, which included Saints from thirteen different groups and branches.

Again Brother Becker was our speaker; and our group president, Brother Robertson, and Brother Surratt were in charge.

We returned to the church. A vote was taken, and our social service was omitted, a talk being given by Brother Creel from Macy, Nebraska, about the Lamanite brethren and his work there. Everybody enjoyed his talk. Then we adjourned for more refreshments at the different homes.

At the close of services, Brother Becker concluded his talk on the stewardship plan. Attendance was not so good, but good attention was held for this beautiful message.

Your brother in Christ,

Believes Isolated May Develop

Just having finished reading the Autumn Leaves for August, and the article, "Adjusting the pattern," it seemed that I was for the time being flooded with the Spirit to a wonderful degree and wished in some way to express myself as to my appreciation for the church papers and what they do for those of us who are somewhat isolated, though I am not forgetting that Flomaton has but recently organized a thriving little Sunday school and also has the sacrament on the first of the month. For this privilege I am thankful, as I thought in coming to Flomaton to make my home I would be cut off from the church except as I went to Pensacola or Mobile for sacrament.

Here, as elsewhere, it seems there are many who are sleeping on their privileges. When I hear some express themselves as having being isolated, and as how to a degree they have failed in the work, it makes me feel sad, for I know now that if we each and every one do our bit, and all we can, we will always be working, whether isolated or not; and I have seen that God surely blesses us in our efforts, and good can always be accomplished, no matter where we may be. Each and every one of us has an influence on some one's life.

By keeping on and doing what we can, I have seen others come into the kingdom, and they in turn have been instrumental in bringing others. So let us not, because we are isolated, think we are handicapped and cannot accomplish anything for the cause, but just remember that by our faithfulness and doing what we can we will be sure of a blessing and will help some soul to find the truth as well. How many times have we met those who tell us that they have been in the church so many years but have been isolated and so have not progressed any farther.

I wish to be forever found standing up for Jesus and doing my bit, whether isolated or in Zion.

How sad is the world and lonely,
When from Jesus we depart;
It seems that everything is lost
When Jesus leaves our heart.

The skies seem wider, bluer,
When Jesus dwells within;
The whole wide world seems truer
And we love our fellow men.

The springtime is much sweeter
When his tenets we can live;
Our lives seem richer, fuller,
Guided by his saving grace.

Elder Archie Beegs has been preaching each Sunday evening at the Saints' Church, and Priests William Candage and Floyd Young Sunday mornings.

The sacramental service was good the first Sunday in this month. The Saints were wonderfully blessed with a good spirit, and all expressed their determination to try to live closer to God, that the long-looked-for day of Zion's redemption may be near at hand.

The Sunday school is getting along well, as is the Department of Recreation and Prospection. The Saints here are planning to attend reunion at Brooksville, Maine. There is a large crowd expected at the reunion from all parts of New England.

The sisters are still holding regular suppers each fortnight in church vestry and are receiving good patronage from the public. We predict that the suppers are going toward local church building debt. The sisters are faithful and loyal and the brothers cooperate with them in their work of raising money for church building.

Spring River District Is Paying Tithing

PARSONS, KANSAS, August 12.—"I know this latter-day work is true," is a testimony we hear in our prayer meetings. We are indeed glad to know that this knowledge is given unto the Saints. If conditions were to come so that the Saints could no longer bear such testimony, then it would be discouraging to go out into the missionary field, but as long as we hear such testimonies it gives us courage to press on in our work.

The Saints of the Spring River District are feeling happy in the thought that the church is going to move forward, and to demonstrate that feeling they are imparting of their substance for that worthy purpose. In fact, during the last quarter there was almost as much paid in tithes and offerings as is usually paid in a year. Who would not be thankful and optimistic to labor in such a field?

Wherever I have gone I have found an increasing desire to stop renewed their subscriptions, and there have been new their subscriptions sent in. The Lord has his hand in my work since the General Conference; I cannot say more than ever before, because the Lord has always been good to me in giving me liberty in the presentation of his message. I am happy in the work and hope to remain faithful to the Cause which I know to be true.

Sister Pitt Writes of Elder Pitt’s Troubles

May 5 we left Joliet, Illinois, in our car for our mission—Kirtland, Ohio. Elder Pitt having failed much in weight and suffering with constant pain in his body, we decided to heed the advice of friends and, en route, go to the Battle Creek Sanitarium for a thorough examination, to learn if possible the cause of his illness and remedy it, that he might be better fitted for the work assigned us.

He had consulted other physicians who seemed unable to locate the trouble. So we came here, and after a ten days' examination the cause of his illness was found to be a tumor pressing against the bladder, which very soon would result in operations were said to be necessary, and the only remedy, pressing against the bladder, which very soon would result in operations were said to be necessary, and the only remedy, pressing against the bladder, which very soon would result in operations were successful. The recovery is not so rapid as we had anticipated, and yet we found here in Battle Creek for Elder Pitt in several ways.

This information came as a complete shock, and when two operations were said to be necessary, and the only remedy, our first thought was to return home, leave the car, and go via train to our Independence Sanitarium. However, upon reconsideration we decided in order to save time and avoid the extreme heat prevailing at that time in Independence to submit to the operation here. We are thankful both operations were successful. The recovery is not so rapid as we had anticipated, and it has been a very trying time to Elder Pitt in several ways.

The wound is not yet healed, but he is able to be up, and we are hoping to reach Kirtland before the close of the re-union. It will require time for him to gain strength; he is still very weak. We are anxious to reach our post of duty and to do the best we can under the circumstances.

We feel we owe very much to Doctor Martin, who performed the operation and who is said to be one of the best surgeons in the United States—a conscientious, Christian gentleman as well. We regretted being among strangers, and yet we found here in Battle Creek a band of noble Saints, who ministered to us in every way possible. We would like to mention each one, but space forbids. We cannot refrain, however, mentioning the kindness of Brother and Sister McCarthy, who were sympathetic and considerate in every way.

The weather has greatly favored us here, having been delightfully cool all summer thus far. This is the busy season here, as people come from all over the world to partake of the diet, which is strictly in harmony with the word of wisdom. We wonder why we as a people do not carry this into effect.

We are still hopeful for the success of the work.

Manteno, Illinois

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a Fourth of July picnic at Schreiffer’s Grove. A sumptuous basket dinner was enjoyed at noon, and ice cream was served during the day. Volley ball and other games were played, followed by contests which delighted the children. Several carloads of Saints and friends from Hammond, Indiana, were present, and also friends from Chicago, Wilmington, and Richie, which added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

The sacramental service held August 2 was well attended and was an inspiration and help. District Superintendent J. L. Cooper was with us and gave timely instructions.

Sister Isabel Loverin, an isolated member of Deselm Branch, who is at present making her home at Matteson, Illinois, spent a week with the Saints and displayed a humble, loving spirit, making us all wish to live closer to the lowly Nazarene.

Elder J. L. Cooper was the guest of Deselm Saints for three days, bringing the joy of the gospel into the homes of the Saints and preaching a rousing sermon, Sunday evening, August 2.

We have just passed through a trying season when the farm work is strenuous that the church work lags; but, we believe the latter is growing; in the future we will renew our efforts to upbuild the church of the living God.

Members of the Deselm priesthood have been meeting with the Piper City-Buckley Saints, the third Sunday of each month during the summer. The meeting August 16 will be at the home of Brother and Sister William Hardy, near Buckley.

Coldwater, Michigan

This, one of the oldest branches in the district, is yet on the map, and standing firm for the Reorganization as God’s choice for the expression of the great latter-day work. The greater percentage of membership manifest strength of faith and decision of character.

Proselyting seems slow amid the bubbling activities and bustling environments in this section of the Master’s vineyard, yet betimes the “spirit that entices to do good” opens the fountain of baptism, and the hearts of the young and tender seek the protection of the gentle Shepherd. Such was the case two Sundays since, when four were added to the kingdom by baptism in the font at Saints’ Chapel.

Coldwater Branch is stable in the faith, and the Sunday school is doing fine work in perpetuating the stream of the latter-day work uncorrupted.

In every organism there must be portions making for stability and permanency, and the vital parts in which reside capacity for growth. There must be the fiber and rigidity as a foundation for the uplifted plant, as well as a sensitive and responsive growing point, mysterious and complex beyond analysis though, it seems, at which and through which the everlasting principles and processes of life find new expression and expanding opportunity. I may be pardoned the foregoing expression, for during the greater part of my life I have been working with men who can decorate any proposition with the most gorgeous kind of linguistic plumage. The chief thing is to translate the laws of life and the dreams of the righteous into a workable plan, for the maintenance and preservation of “peace on earth and good will to men.”

Last week we made a visit to Fort Wayne, Indiana. We found Brother Garnet installed in the electrical business and also making friends for the church in that unworked city. We held some good services at the homes of Brother Clair Crandall and Sister Sadie Stoehr.

Knisleys Leave the North

We are on our return journey from the far north, shifting some places from our going route. Fuel becomes cheaper as we get farther south, but the gallons are smaller than over the border, for four Canadian gallons make five here. Then the Canadian dollar is worth more than ours on the New York banking market to-day.

Wheat is bringing less money in this country than up in Canada, and the great Canadian “wheat pool” of the farmers indicates their triumph at last against capitalististic exploitation of that greatest of agricultural products. It is hopeful that their success is not a transient visitor, but that by the myriads of elevators falling into their lands they will hereafter have to themselves the spoils and fat on which craft has thrived.

Another much discussed feature of Canadian ambitions is the abolition of their present banking system, which is similar to our own and which they explain as accounting for the slump of 1920, or thereof and the failure and financial ruin of farmers on a broad scale in both countries.

But after all is said, the gospel of Christ is the only thing that spells ultimate emancipation from economic ills. It is the only thing; the last word. But that is not saying but what our people should support good measures and thus employ their franchise in the betterment of conditions as far as they can.

While in the north country I preached in Turtleford, Mervin, Saskatoon, Bethune and Weyburn. At Tynan I baptized and confirmed three and rendered service otherwise while in the province.

One does not sense the same restraint now which was our common heritage twenty years ago upon those plains in presenting to our people the stewardship system, together with the tithe and consecration. It is the demand of the day. And why not, when we come to consider that the Lord promises us salvation physically, spiritually, and temporally—in spirit, in body, in production of our financial prosperity.

But, as one brother, perhaps weary of waiting, said to me the other day, “Let them show us at least one working example of the stewardship system in the land of Zion.” He was right. Such ought to be visible. Such ought to be in the show-case, as well as the martyr’s chair and some old dusty relics from Nauvoo and one place and another. My position is that we don’t need new books on the stewardship system—we need the stewardship system. It is a subject which can no longer be ignored by our missionaries.

But returning for a moment to the thought of my native country, let me mention that near Prince Albert there are some Swedes who several years ago captured some small black foxes. They constructed proper fencing above and below the ground, allowing and providing for them, as captivity would permit, the privileges of nature, of their native habitat. The result was, in due course a well-populated fox farm. The furs are very valuable, bringing from perhaps one hundred and fifty to three hundred dollars each. As a result the proprietors are to-day very well to do and are ready to sell their animals to anyone who is willing to pay for about five hundred dollars a pair to any stewardship investor in the land of Zion. Who will be first?

Ere we left Saskatchewan we visited its mysterious salt lake at Watrous. We went in bathing. It was not quite as salty as Salt Lake, Utah, but nevertheless it will sustain you afloat. Salt, however, is not the only sediment or residue left from the great glacial lakes. There is a quantity of oily substance from which salve and ointment are manufactured and highly recommended and sold.

We were way north of Battleford to the lakes and to the timber, and we still have lots of dried and smoked white fish in old Stanley as a result of that excursion. The lakes are alive with the best of fish, and berries and game are in abundance. But Zion is the place for fruit. The Lord has never reversed himself on the gathering, so often counseled.

Sincerely and hopefully,

S. W. L. Scott.

Fresno, California, Dedication

Since 1910 we had been looking forward to the completion of our church building and its ultimate freedom from debt; and when our pastor announced that the debt had been fully liquidated and our building was ready for dedication, arrangements were soon made for the event, which took place on July 12, with our district president, John D. White, in charge.

Our first pastor, Brother John B. Carmichael, gave a brief account of events leading up to the organization of the church and its building. To sell the lumber and to keep our missionary, Sister L. Norwood, gave an outline of the church history from its inception to the date of dedication, giving us a retrospective view of fifteen years that have passed by one into history, recording our experiences preceding this final victory.

Last and best of all was the address delivered by Apostle Arthur Gillen, which was the finest we have ever heard.

We also had with us Brothers Apostle Ellis, H. J. Damron, and J. T. Smith, of Tulare.

The day was one of Fresno’s hottest, so we took our baskets and hied to our famous park and spread our refreshments in the cool, deep shade of its lofty trees. This last act being always an agreeable finale to any event, we went to our homes feeling that truly God was good.

Alliance, Ohio

August 17.—Sister Ida Tubbs, of Freesoil, Michigan, is visiting relatives here, Ohio being her childhood home. Sister Tubbs was one of the Saints from here who was baptized by J. J. Cornish at Hersey, Michigan, about thirty-eight years ago. She is expecting her daughter, Sister Clara Tubbs, to join her, and they with other Saints from here will attend the Kirtland reunion. At present Sister Clara is attending school at Columbia University, New York, where she is taking an advanced course in mathematics and a course for advisers of girls and women. She is also working for a Master of Arts degree from there. She has attended the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor and obtained a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1920. Since that time she has been head of the mathematics department of the Owosso, Michigan, high school, and has been asked to take the position of dean of girls next year. We are happy, indeed, when we see our young people preparing for greater service.

Brother Frank Gordon, the nine-year-old son of Brother Joseph Gordon, met with a painful accident. He was run over by an automobile while riding a bicycle and received a broken collar bone. We feel that once more God has displayed his power and love by protecting one of his children, since the front wheel passed over his right shoulder and down across his chest and stomach and left leg, and his only injury was to the collar bone, which is mending nicely.

Elder Harry Green, of Canton, Ohio, was the speaker at the morning service Sunday, August 9. Having been in the church a number of years and receiving many testimonies of the truthfulness of this great latter-day work, Brother Green always has something of interest to say to the Saints.

Minneapolis, Minnesota

August 18.—The Minneapolis Branch has continued to show the same excellent spirit as was evidenced at the union held last month, and interest in all the church activities has been maintained in spite of the hot summer weather. Under the able leadership of Elbert Hubert Case, who is to be in charge of the branch until some time in September, assisted by Elder Leslie DeLapp, the Saints have entered upon several lines of progress. One of these is a campaign to pay off thirty-five hundred dollars of the church building debt.

A supper was given in the basement of the church on August 13, the proceeds of which went to the fund. The women are also sewing and selling the articles made. They have decided to operate a dining hall at the Minneapolis State Fair and have obtained an excellent concession for this, a large building in good condition, located on one of the main streets of the fair grounds, along which thousands of people will pass every day of the fair, which is from September 5 to 12. Brother Case, who has had years of experience in this line of work in Oklahoma City, has consented to direct the undertaking.

A special series of missionary services is now being held. They started on the 9th and are held each evening at the church. Brother Case is the speaker and is adding interest to the meetings by showing pictures illustrating his experiences in the South Sea Islands and among the Indians of Oklahoma. The attendance has been good throughout.

When Brother Case came back from a special trip to Independence, he brought Sister Case with him, and the Saints here are very happy to meet her and have her in Minneapolis.

Several distinguished church visitors stopped in to visit the Minneapolis Branch on Sunday, the 9th—Brother and Sister Charles Chapman, from Independence, and Sisters Lowry and Filmore, of Mount Vernon, Illinois.

An event of special interest was a trip made by the young people of the branch on August 15, when they drove up to Brunswick, about seventy miles north of here, to visit and hold services in the home of Brother and Sister Moody, who are isolated and unable to get to the church very frequently. They started out from Minneapolis early in the morning and got there in time to have prayer meeting, Sunday school, and a preaching service. They took their lunch with them and had a very enjoyable time; also did some good.

The young people's prayer meetings, which have been held every Sunday morning at the hour preceding Sunday school, have been increasing in attendance and interest. The young people are learning how to pray and testify in public, and they are getting much good from this type of spiritual fellowship.

The junior church is also being held every Sunday at the regular preaching hour, with the exception of sacrament Sunday, when all, both young and old, meet together.

Sister Kress and the rest of her family left for Independence last week. The Minneapolis Saints were very sorry to see them go, and they will be missed very much. The best wishes of all go with them to their new home.

One item of interest was left out in last month's news letter, and that was the fact that the young people in Minneapolis and those in attendance at the reunion had bought twenty seats for Zimmermann Hall at Graceland College, which means that they had paid or pledged a total of eighty dollars or more for that purpose. Sister Grace Tutty was also active in getting subscriptions for Autumn Leaves, and about twenty new subscribers were signed up for this magazine.

An Exhortation and Testimony

IOWA CITY, IOWA, August 3.—I am deeply impressed with a desire to write a few lines to the HERALD, and thank the editors and all who are helping to make the HERALD so interesting and good.

I love to read the letters from so many Saints. Although scattered many miles apart, the gospel story rings true wherever it is told. To know that God is blessing his faithful wherever he is, is a great inspiration.

God is very good and kind to us in our everyday life, and I feel and know that he is blessing us with many blessings, and now since my husband came into the church last April at General Conference I can feel an increase of God's Spirit and blessings with us. We are both trying to come up to the mark of our high calling in Christ our Lord. We have accomplished much already, but there is still much to accomplish. Sometimes when we are trying the hardest to do right in all things the evil presents itself, trying to lead us astray, but by the grace of God and his loving mercy we are still hopeful of accomplishing our desires.

It is said in holy writ that God will reward or punish us according to the true desires of our hearts. This statement has given me new courage. God knows the desire of my heart is to do good and my failings cause me the deepest regrets and sorrows, but I am trying hard to overcome these fleshly weaknesses day by day, and to make some spiritual advancement. Trying more and more to bring the carnal into subjection to the spiritual, I am made to realize more and the days go by that each Saint of God must be up and doing and putting on the whole armor, fighting manfully a good fight of faith; putting on our straps of righteousness, living what we profess to believe. Whenever we as a church will do this, loving our brother as ourselves, supporting each other in faith and prayers, doing all we possibly can that will make for peace, putting our shoulder to the wheel and helping to push forward this blessed work of building up the kingdom of God upon earth, then God is bound, and he will fulfill his part of the contract, and we will roll on to the final completion of God's purposes concerning the redemption and salvation of the human race. But we must remember that God has said he will have a tried people, tried as gold, seven times in the furnace of fire. When it is in the crucible being tried, the goldsmith heats the gold until he sees the mark of our high calling in Christ. Then he removes it from the fire. So with us, we are in the crucible, being tested and tried by the things we are called upon to undergo. When we are purified so that God can behold his image in us, or rather, when we become like him, then we will be removed from the crucible, or God will say it's enough. Being tested and tried in all things and being found purified by reason of our applying our trials for our good, learning the lessons that are therein for our good, profiting by these varied experiences we become better subjects for his kingdom. If only we can come through it all with stronger faith in God, knowing that God knows just what we need, and if it takes trials to make us pure, let us pray that his grace will be sufficient in the hour of need to bring us safely through it all. What we all need is greater faith in God; faith not only to believe that he exists, but that he is interested in us and will hear and answer us as we need. And this is all we can ask for his church and his faithful children.

My prayers are for those who are called to preside over us as a church, that he will bless them, and keep them humble, faithful, and strong for the truth and the right; also for all the officers of the church, each in his position and calling. Oh, God, bless them and help them to see as thou would have them to see that they may grow in grace, wisdom, and love, and be able to work together in harmony and peace, that envying, jarring, strife may cease among them, and that each individual member may sense the responsibility which rests upon him.

Saints, did you ever think what will be our condemnation if we as a people fail in doing our part in this great plan of redemption and salvation of the human race, after receiving the light we have received? My faith grows stronger as the days and years go by, and I can see that the time has come for us as a people to make a practical application of the law of God. May God help us so to do is my prayers.

For many years we had no services here in Iowa City. We were here for years without hearing a sermon or having any meetings of any kind. Many times I hungered to hear a gospel sermon or to attend a good prayer meeting but could not, only as I went to my God alone and in secret had a prayer meeting with him; and if I just want to say God always met me half way and sometimes more than half way. I thank him that he was pleased to hear my weak, humble petitions for divine help and guidance. I have had many severe trials to endure or go through, but by the help and grace of God I have received help to bear up under it all. I have learned many good lessons by reason of the things I have suffered. Surely we who have built our house upon a sure foundation, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone, ought not to be shaken when the storms beat upon our house. Man may fail but Christ and his plans, never. God will still be at the helm, steering the old gospel ship, no matter how hard the storms may beat against her. The setting time is here; everything that can be shaken, will be shaken. Let us pray that the soures that are in the world to-day may go past us and not affect or hurt us in any way, that we may have help to live upright and eventually be prepared and worthy to be gathered home to Zion to live in peace with God. I believe as Zion is the place where God designs to gather his people, Satan knows it also, and there he will work to get in his works of discord and destruction, trying hard to destroy the church, and we all should be praying for those in Zion that God may help them to see eye to eye, more and more as the days go by, that he will be with those Saints who gather there and enable them to fall in line and be living the gospel.

The Saints in Iowa City have started to hold sacramental services once a month now, and this will be a great help to us all. Should any Saint be coming here for any other purpose, we would be glad to have them call us up and also attend these services if they can. We meet at 906 Davenport Street at the home of Brother L. B. Moore. I am sure all will be made welcome. Asking an interest in the prayers of the Saints in behalf of our family, I remain your sister in faith.

MRS. MAY BENCE.

Appreciates Letters of President Smith

Since reading the letters in the HERALD from our beloved President, Brother Fred M. Smith, entitled "Little Journeys with the editor in chief," I have had a desire to express my appreciation.

Many times I have looked through the HERALD to see if there was a word from him, but there was none. To me it is like getting a letter from home, from some one we love dearly. For are we not one large family in this church of ours, and is he not our father in spiritual things, our shepherd chosen of God to lead us to Zion? So it is with joy that I read his letters.

Many times when I was a little girl of ten years, and also in later years, I can remember being seated in the congregation of Lamoni and also Independence while Brother Fred M. and his beloved father, Brother Joseph, presided over the church services and also conference sessions. My heart warmed toward them as I looked and listened, and my childish prayers went up for them as I realized they were chosen of God to lead his people. How I loved to meet Brother Joseph on the streets in Lamoni. He always knew me.

I was proud to know that Brother Joseph had such a wonderful son prepared to take his place to carry on the work that will lead us to Zion, and I have not been disappointed. My confidence in him is just as stanch as when a child, but my prayers are more fervent, as I realize to some extent the arduous duties he has to perform.

Although I am isolated and feel exiled from home, yet I am still faithful to this latter-day work. Worldliness has no charms for me. I am so in need of God's Holy Spirit all the time that I cannot afford to let worldly things drive it away from me and my home.

I ever pray for our beloved leaders and the redemption of Zion.

MABEL GUNSOLSEY LEEBOLD.

New York District

New York District offers the following program for the ensuing year: District conferences, Sherrill, October 17, 18, 1925; Buffalo, June 5, 6, 1926. Institutes, Greenwood, September 5, 6, 1925; Syracuse, September 12, 13, 1925; Rochester November 7, 8, 1925; Fulton, two-day meeting, September 19, 20, 1925; Niagara Falls, March 13, 14, 1926. The Department superintendents are urged to plan their programs early, and if they cannot be present, notify the president, or have some one qualified to take their place.

We would also like the locals to see that all membership in their vicinity be notified either personally or by letter.

We sincerely solicit your cooperation in our endeavor to make these meetings profitable for all. Suggestions are always in order, and your prayers earnestly requested.

A Suggestion to the Saints

While attending services one Sunday morning last year at the Kirtland reunion, my little girl was not feeling very well and I was holding her on my lap, and thought I would sit still during the singing of the first song; when the number was announced and the singing began, I was raised from my seat, holding my five-year-old child with perfect ease while the song, "We thank thee, oh God, for a prophet," was sung. The inspiration given me was this; that we as true Latter Day Saints should rise to our feet at the singing of that song the same as we as true American citizens rise to our feet when the national anthem is sung. I have always wanted to express this, but being timid I have refrained. I have now awakened to the fact that I can no longer sit at ease with folded hands. Living in a large and wicked city, there is much to be done, and I must do my part.

A SISTER.
San Jose, California

July 12 the pulpit was occupied at the morning hour by Elder C. J. Gady, for three missionary to Mexico, and the evening sermon was by the branch president, Elder B. R. Gilbert. Both efforts were appreciated by the hearers.

Sister Rose Dawson of Sacramento and Sister Grace Hook of Roseville have been visiting with the San Jose Saints during the forepart of July and express themselves as having had a very enjoyable time. These sisters are daughters of Brother Robert and Sister C. W. Hawkins, and grew from childhood to womanhood in the San Jose Branch. They were very lively members and were much missed when Cupid stole them away, and their visits here are very much appreciated by those who remained to mourn their departure.

During the preaching services of July 19, the church building was rocked by an earthquake, but not sufficient to cause visitors to go to sleep; and while it caused the hearts of some to beat faster, they were not sufficiently agitated to cause them to leave their seats. It was sufficient, however, to remind us that the prophecies are being fulfilled which portray the near approach of the Lord.

July 24 there were no services held in the church here, it being closed in order to admit of the Saints attending the reunion of Northern California District, which was convenient which the Saints from the different branches, from which it is quite evident that this latter-day work is not on the wane, for some came seventy miles to this meeting.

On the evening of Wednesday, August 5, the church doors were again opened for regular church services, it being the night for our midweek prayer meeting. Apostle J. A. Gillen was with us at this service, at which time he ushered another precious soul into the kingdom, after which he gave some very interesting and encouraging experiences and testimonies of the truth of this latter-day work.

Special Meetings at Mitchell, Ontario

The appointing committee of London District set Sunday, August 9, for an all-day meeting. The prayer meeting from nine to eleven was presided over by Elders H. A. Koehler, G. C. Tomilson, j.r., and David Withrow. There was quite a large gathering of Saints from the different branches, from which it is quite evident that this latter-day work is not on the wane, for some came seventy miles to this meeting.

We expected Bishop J. L. Burger, but we were disappointed. George C. Tomilson preached on the social message of Jesus Christ. It was a good sermon and was attentively listened to by all present. Brother George is a coming man to preach the gospel and assist in carrying on this latter-day work.

At three o'clock Elder Koehler preached at our open-air meeting in the Kelerson Park, in front of the grandstand that would seat 1,000 people, and it was fairly well filled by Saints and citizens. As Elder Koehler preached on the social problem of the church, he got the closest attention. The correspondent of the Stratford paper reported the sermon, said he was a man of great ability, and others spoke of it as an exceptional sermon. Elders Akinson and Gleason, of Saint Marys, presided with Elder Koehler. Elder Koehler was the speaker at the town hall at seven o'clock.

The Stratford orchestra supplied the music at all meetings. They are surely a noble band of young people to make music for the Saints and attend all the meetings of the district.

There are only three families of Saints of the Mitchell Branch living in Mitchell, and one five and one half miles out, or twenty-one members altogether. The appointing committee at Saint Marys announced for us to bring our baskets. The branch also made preparations to bring to the hall an automobile, filled. So there was plenty, and enough to care for a lot more. As this is our first move of a departure from the old method of caring for our gathering, I hope it will be adopted by all branches. All enjoyed themselves, and a good social time was had during the recess. We expect Brother Koehler on the twenty-fifth and expect the Stratford orchestra on Sunday, August 30.

Modesto, California

August 16.—The Saints here are moving on as usual, all trying to do their part; that is, all the active ones or those who attend. A good feeling abounds. The Lord blessed us in the prayer meeting, and his Spirit is often felt to a marked degree. So the Saints are encouraged from time to time to live more closely to God and hold on to the rod of iron.

A number attended the late reunion and came home enthusiastic to try to keep the laws more fully, as the instructions given were so plain and beautiful.

The departments are all doing well and have good attendance. The leaders are doing their best and hope to improve all the time.

The busy time of fruit harvest is now on, and everyone is working.

Clarksburg, West Virginia

August 1.—Saturday, July 4, a number of the Saints of Clarksburg motored to Morgantown to participate in the annual joint Sunday school picnic with the Fairmont and Morgantown Sunday schools.

Fair weather, plenty to eat, a timely prayer meeting, together with an appropriate entertainment, helped to make an enjoyable occasion. A heavy rainstorm, accompanied by a strong wind, met those returning in the evening, this being the only discomfort of the day. Many of those attending concluded that the picnic this year was the most successful of any ever held.

On July 19 Elder H. G. Johnson of this branch preached on "The Inheritance," at the morning hour. For the evening service Presiding Elder Thomas L. Newton continued on the theme presented by Brother Johnson in the morning sermon.

Sunday morning, July 26, found Elder Frank L. Shinn, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, formerly of this city, occupying the stand. Brother Shinn delivered a beautiful and inspiring sermon on "Service." The message brought out the fact that all of God's commandments were commandments of service to God and our fellow man, there being no room for selfishness.

At two o'clock a district Sunday school institute was held, the same being in charge of the district superintendent, Brother Harry B. Smith, and his assistant, Brother C. W. Gorman. After the talks and papers had been delivered, the meeting was turned into a round table discussion of subjects relative to Sunday school work. Some of the subjects discussed were: "A successful teacher"; "The aim of the Sunday school"; "The relationship of the Sunday school to the branch"; "How to increase membership"; "How to interest the beginner"; "The best method of training teachers"; and, "How much of the branch expense should the Sunday school pay?" Many interesting and instructive points were presented throughout the entire program.

While debating on the last-named subject, two points worthy of consideration were brought to light, viz, that the branch (or church) is the parent and the Sunday school the child, figuratively speaking; therefore the parent must support the child; and if the plan of stewardships and a common storehouse was ever to be an actuality, at home is the place to begin by having a common (or one) branch treasurer.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
In the evening Brother James McConnaughy preached, his sermon covering a portion of our Zionward movement program. Brother “Mac” as he is commonly known, was unexpectedly called to the bedside of his son, who is critically ill as the result of an operation for appendicitis. Our dear Sister Agnes Rexroad, who was at one time raised from the bed of affliction by the Savior, met with a serious automobile accident Saturday, July 28, but at this time is reported as recovering very nicely though slowly.

Sioux City, Iowa

Sunday, August 9, following the regular Sunday school services, the eleven o’clock church service was in charge of Milo O. Hall with Jay E. Keck preaching a sermon on “Back to the commandments.” The young people’s Religion convened at the usual hour in the evening, having a very fine program for its close.

At the evening service W. J. Smith occupied. The Department of Women met at two o’clock Thursday afternoon, August 6. The study period was followed by a sewing hour. The Riverside division of the Department of Women will meet on August 12, with Alice Bower.

The George Kroesen family and Sister Mary Rich are enjoying a motor trip through Missouri, stopping at Independence and Kansas City.

A complete renovation has taken place in the basement of the church—a very much-needed necessity. We do not regret our money being used for such necessities.

Little Margaret Connell suffered some severe bruises when an auto in which she was riding overturned a few miles east of the city. It was necessary to take a few stitches to replace her right ear. She is resting easily now.

August 19.—Attendance at all the services has been far below the average during the past month. Vacation periods and Sunday excursions have taken many of the Saints away from the noise of the city. However, some have stayed by the fort and have seen that the doors of the church have not been closed.

Brother and Sister Arthur Sherman have gone to Chicago, where Brother Sherman has a position in a large store. Sister Margaret Cannon is visiting at Rewey, Wisconsin. Brother and Sister Bert Gilmore are enjoying the reunion at Council Bluffs. The Misses Lillie and Nettie Calhoon are attending the reunion at Woodbine, where Nettie is assisting with the junior church.

Brother and Sister George Kroesen and children are leaving for Independence in a few days, where they will enter the grocery business. We are sorry to see these young people leave, but our loss will be Independence’s gain.

July 12 a little son was born to Mr. and Sister Roland Foster; a little girl was left at the Olen Rock home July 20; a son came to Mr. and Sister G. H. Gill July 25, and a little girl to the O. T. Bower home July 27. On August 16 little Frances Ella, small daughter of Brother and Sister Wayne McIntyre, and Myrtle Virginia, youngest daughter of Brother and Sister O. T. Bower, were blessed by Elders C. J. Smith and Clement Streeter. The ordinance seemed most palatable when both fathers and both mothers brought their little babes to the altar for their blessings.

The Religio local has gone on record as desirous of sending the General Religio Department one dollar each month for use in that department. We are hoping that other locals have adopted this plan. This department will hold a picnic Labor Day at one of the city’s parks. Voluntary numbers are given at the regular sessions during the program hour. They are proving popular, and the majority of the Religioans are taking advantage of the opportunity.

The Sunday school has eighty-two “boosters,” divided as follows: green tree, 33; red tree, 19; blue tree, 10; green ribbon, 16; red ribbon, 2; and gold tree, 2. The Kelley Park Sunday school has one red-tree, one blue-tree, and six green-tree “boosters.” There are thirty-two names enrolled on their record.

Rally and home-coming week will be about the third week in September, at which time the Publicity Department expects to make a campaign for subscriptions to the church papers.

All of the Saints are blessed with work at the present time, for which we are thankful. A number of new projects will be in the course of construction this winter, which will be a boon to many. It is expected work will be scarce. Surely the time is near when we should prepare to “sail Zionward.”

Special Services at Bisbee by E. E. Long

Bisbee, Arizona, August 10.—The members and friends of the Bisbee Branch enjoyed, during the two weeks ending August 9, a treat in the way of some splendid sermons by Elder E. E. Long. His explanations of the many prophecies were especially clear and interesting. On several occasions a number of the Douglas Saints motored up to attend the services.

August 10 Brother Long, at the urgent request of the Douglas Saints, left for Douglas to hold a series of services there. The Saints at Tucson and Phoenix have also expressed an earnest desire to have him, so Brother Long will be kept busy for some time to come.

Arizona has had so few missionaries the past several years that one will now be appreciated more than ever. Come again, Brother Long! Let the good work go on.

Artland, Saskatchewan

August 13.—The Saints of this branch were not long indulging in the loneliness that followed the departure of their guests, Heber and son of our Alberta conference, which occupied July 19. It was there announced that Apostle M. A. McConley would preach at Artland Branch the next Sunday morning.

He and Elder William Osler, president of the Alberta District, arrived in time for Sunday school, after which Apostle McConley addressed the Saints on the subject, “The ideal education,” which he declared was the education that would best develop one’s talent, that it might be used to serve others. Perhaps one could sing better than his brother, but his brother could preach better; thus each one had his niche, all working together for God.

Apostle McConley, after several invitations to remain longer to continue his practical sermons, was forced to go to his next appointment at Michigan Branch. In the evening art of the Saints were not long to get there went over to Michigan Branch to hear him preach again. Many favorable comments were heard.

The first Sunday in August, when the Saints assembled for Sunday school, they were agreeably surprised to be greeted by the superintendent of the largest Sunday school in the church, Brother C. B. Hartshorn, of Independence, Missouri. He with his wife and daughter were visiting his parents, Brother H. A. Hartshorn and wife, who reside here. By vote of the branch he was requested to talk to us after the sacrament, instead of the usual prayer and testimony meeting. His subject was, “Lifters or leaners; which?”

In the evening he was requested to occupy again, which he did to the profit and pleasure of many. Part of his theme was taken for the Psalmist, of the eagle that strestes her nest. We were taught that the best characters are those strong to bear difficulties, buffeting, adversities. The Saints would have been glad to hear him again, if he could have remained. Two more were added to the branch by baptism that day.

Elder J. J. Cornish has a new opening at Herbark Hall, about five miles south of the branch. About ten years ago he visited the branch and both mothers brought up her nest.

He and Elder William Osler, president of the Alberta District, arrived in time for Sunday school, after which Apostle McConley addressed the Saints on the subject, “The ideal education,” which he declared was the education that would best develop one’s talent, that it" the singers go from this branch to help in this new effort. Fair crowds attend, and we hope for good results. The annual Sunday school picnic held with Michigan Branch August 8, was a decided success.

Lucasville, Ohio

August 17.—Here is a little in regard to our advancement in church work at this place. I am very much pleased to state that the work in the last three months has been very encouraging; and for myself, in particular, I wish to say that the enjoyments and pleasures which I receive in this work are far superior to all the earthly amusements I was accustomed to when I was groping in darkness and sin.

Since we have been ordained a priest in this church, I have witnessed many wonderful manifestations of the Spirit, some of which might seem almost incredible to those who do not believe in these wonderful gifts. One case I wish to tell you: A little more than a week ago I had the pleasure of listening to a prophecy uttered by a little brother, eleven years of age, which was indeed wonderful, and it impressed me very much. Many people not of our faith were present at the occasion, and they were agreed on the fact that these utterances were nothing phoney of the songs of the South Sea Islanders. It is nothing more or less than the mighty manifestation of the Spirit. This little brother whom we have mentioned is Nelson Crabtree, nephew of Mark Crabtree. He has been in the church only about six months but has made much improvement since he came into the work.

We will start August 18 for the Kirtland reunion, to be gone for a few days, and on returning will go to Buena Vista, Ohio, to hold a few meetings.

Church Opening at Burlington

BURLINGTON, IOWA, August 19.—The Saints are enjoying the blessings of the Lord to a great extent. We now have our new church, and on the opening day, August 2, we had a wonderful outpouring of God's Spirit. We received there a foretaste of what Zion would be. President Elbert A. Smith gave the opening address and also was the speaker at the evening service.

Immediately after the morning service, four people were baptized. The Department of Women served dinner to about three hundred people. In the afternoon we held our monthly sacramental service. We received much encouragement and strength at that time. Brother H. A. Kunz was ordained a priest at the opening of that service. We feel that we have very much to thank the Lord for.

On July 27 Sister Frederika Bromman, one of our dearly beloved sisters, was taken from our midst. She was always one of the most faithful of our small branch, and we feel that in leaving us she has gone to receive the reward which she has earned in this life.

Quite a number of the Burlington Saints are in attendance at the Nauvoo district reunion. The Lord is with that reunion, as he has been at other reunions of the church.

We were glad to have Brother Forrest Roberts, of Lamoni, and his wife with us for a few days. Brother Roberts spoke to us at the Sunday evening service.

Good Meetings and Nine Baptisms at Denison

The tent meetings held with Elder W. A. Smith in charge during the last five weeks at Denison, Iowa, have been very successful in point of liberty in presenting the gospel, in the attendance secured, and in the fact that four times have the waters been troubled that baptism might occur. Nine people have entered the church, and it is hoped that the end has not yet been reached.

First Chicago Branch

August 2 Sunday school was held at the usual hour, being very well attended, after which our young sister, Velva Trowbridge, daughter of Brother and Sister William Trowbridge, was inducted into the kingdom through the waters of baptism, Brother Guy Fairbanks officiating.

The regular monthly sacramental service followed, with an especially good attendance. The Spirit of God was present from the beginning of Sunday school, as many testified during the meeting. We were spoken to by the gift of prophecy through our city missionary, Brother Frank Almond. The confirmation of Sister Velva Trowbridge took place at this time.

Brother and Sister Guy Fairbanks and son from Independence have been visitors in our midst of late.

The young people's meeting was held at a quarter after six, an hour being devoted to study of the Book of Mormon. The young boys, under the supervision of Brother Bert Hayden, are being trained at his home along Boy Scout lines.

Following the study hour, a portion of the time was devoted to program work, Brother F. B. Almond entertaining us by singing some of the songs of the South Sea Islanders in their native tongue. It was enjoyed immensely.

Brother Almond was the speaker in the evening, after which he ordained Brother Clarence Newman to the office of priest. "In the sweet by and by" was beautifully rendered at this service by the men's chorus, under the direction of our little brother, Sister Ruby Newman.

The following two weeks' services, with the exception of our weekly prayer meetings, were held at our district reunion grounds at Elmhurst, Illinois, under the direction of our district missionary, Brother Jerome Wildermuth. Services were conducted every evening during this time by him. A few of those who could camped on the grounds.

Brother Wildermuth is to be complimented on his earnestness and zeal in the gospel work. He also proved to us that a good reunion could be had with very little expense or labor on the part of those wishing to partake, if we would only see the value of the spiritual side, rather than the material.

We also wish to thank our faithful company, who so nobly assisted him to make his work a success. We could not help but notice their thoughtfulness for all.

The second Sunday was special young people's day, under the direction of Brother Oliver McDowell, district Religio superintendent, assisted by Brother Roy Cheville of Grace College, who assisted with the singing. Sister Nina Campbell directed the choir, which consisted of the young people of Central Chicago Branch. She is to be commended for her excellent work.

While this is not entirely First Chicago news, we feel interested, as most of our members attended this series of meetings. The district was well represented, and we felt well repaid.

Brother and Sister Louis Gauchier are the proud parents of a son. We extend congratulations. The little one's life was feared for, but God once more came to our assistance through faith and prayer and blessed us by sparing it to its parents. Mother and son at this time are doing nicely.

Fanning, Kansas

At the semiannual business meeting it was decided that we give two or three ice cream socials to raise funds to paint the church. The deacon, Brother Emil Jeske, was chosen chairman of the committee. To date the necessary funds have almost been raised.

Our reunion is now history, a number from here and Troy attended, more especially on each Sunday. All report a real profitable time was had. A good force of the ministry was present, among them Brother J. A. Tanner.

A sermon will be given by branch president, F. G. Hed-
August 5.—We are striving to fly the banner of King Immanu-el in this part of God's vineyard. Our endeavors are to go onward and upward, that we might be helpers in building up God's kingdom and to establish his righteousness, that Zion may soon be redeemed and put on its beautiful garments, and that the light of the gospel might radiate to the convincing of the world of the truth of the message that Christ brought to the earth.

June 20 we had news of Sister C. B. Truman, our pastor's wife, falling and breaking the small bone in her wrist. She is recovering, and we hope that it will be well again so that she can mingle with us in the different services.

July 3 Brother Jay Walters and companion, with daughter Ruth and Brother W. C. Stauty and daughter Virginia in one car, and Brother Robert ZueIdsdorf and companion and Brother C. B. Truman and Melvin Blake in another, motored to Minneapolis to enjoy a spiritual feast at the district reunion. They were not disappointed, as on July 5 at the sacramental service a fine spirit prevailed, and the sermons by Brothers Holloway, D. T. Williams, and A. B. Phillips were inspiring and comforting. They left for home on the 5th and 6th.

Those who took in the Minnesota district reunion reported the finest reunion yet attended, one that will long be remembered. The Saints of Minneapolis are to be commended for their hospitality and the fine love that was demonstrated in their lives, showing that the gospel is not within them in word only, but that they are doers also, exemplifying the life of Christ. We all received greater vision of the latter-day work.

On the 22d Brother Hubert Case, missionary of Oklahoma, came to Duluth and met with us in the evening prayer service, going from here to Two Harbors, returning to hold prayer during services Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, when a feast was given to all—true manna from the storehouse of our heavenly Father that encouraged the Saints to move Zionward, which is our course. He left, promising to be with us again if possible.

On July 5, in absence of the local priesthood, Brother Samuel Case and Brother A. S. Davis, the former of Pine River, Minnesota, and the latter of Wrenshall, Minnesota, took charge of the sacramental service, when a fine spirit was manifested.

Out of town visitors July 26 were Brother and Sister A. S. Davis and boys, of Wrenshall, Minnesota; Sister Ada Carlson, of Barnum, Minnesota; Brother and Sister Grant Byace, Charles Byace, Sister Sadie Byace, and Brother Elvin Byace and Sister Samuel Sloan, of Two Harbors, Minnesota; and Brother Wesley Elvin, of Minneapolis. Come again, one and all.

July 19 the waters of the bay were disturbed by the baptism of two children of Brother and Sister Harvey White, Robert Lee and Gladys Lucile, with Brother W. C. Stauty officiating. One young lady was confirmed under the hands of Brother George W. Day and Brother C. B. Truman, our pastor.

August 2 was ushered in with fair weather, and we gathered at the eleven o'clock sacramental service, thankful in our hearts for the blessings that God bestows upon his believing children.

Our district president, George W. Day, was with us in charge of the service, Brother C. B. Truman and A. S. Davis assisting, with Brother W. C. Stauty and Robert ZueIdsdorf passing the emblems. The prayers and testimonies were inspiring, and the spirit of unity was manifested, with many desires for greater service, even among some of the young people. May our faithful ones increase until each puts on the full armor of the gospel of Christ, exemplifying the life of our Savior in their lives.

Savanna, Illinois

We have just finished a week of enjoyable services with our missionary, O. W. Okerlind, to whom we feel greatly indebted for the wonderful words of inspiration and love which he has brought. Although there was little outside interest, the Saints feel more ready to bear the light a little higher and put more into this fight of life.

Sunday we were favored by a splendid sermon from Brother Volberg, and the latter of Wrenshall, Minnesota, that we are glad to have them in the district. Miss Naomi Davis has been very successful in selling Graceland rugs this summer.

Our missionaries, O. W. Okerlind and J. C. Stugil, have been visiting different branches with series of meetings which are much enjoyed.

A few weeks ago the Kewanee priesthood held a meeting with Galesburg. We fear we may lose Brother Okerlind in near future, as he expects to sail for Sweden, unless other plans are made.

May the Lord bless his people and help them to carry forward the great task of establishing Zion.

Gray's Harbor Branch

Aberdeen Washington, August 10.—The work in Gray's Harbor Branch is progressing nicely. Our pastor, E. E. Fishel, and some others are attending the reunion at Silver Lake.

The Saints have found a way to advance the work along social lines. They plan entertainments, invite outsiders, getting them interested in this way. More than one has joined as a result.

The Saints enjoyed a wiener roast at the home of Brother George Essig, two miles from Aberdeen, Saturday night, August 8.

We have welcomed home Brother Paul Fishel, who has been attending Graceland.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Priest J. E. Phillips—Brother H. P. Williams, of Eros, Louisiana, and Miss Adella Balderston of this city being the parties to the contract.

The work in the three harbor cities needs the services of a missionary very much. It has been five years since a missionary visited this place. The weather has been ideal, but soon the perpetual rains will begin.
Santa Ana, California

Many events of interest have occurred since our letter of two months ago. At the head of the list is a wedding; our friendly and genial brother, Lloyd Stevens, was married to Miss Velva Moroni on June 19. Brother Stevens is one of those exceptional young people who thinks of home, health, and work before jazz, joy rides, and pleasure seeking.

On June 21 Apostle J. A. Gillen visited our branch in company with Brother N. T. Chapman and preached two faith building sermons. Would that the church had more men like Brother Gillen whose very presence inspires faith in God, his Christ, and his church. The pastor took advantage of his opportunity to play truant, and attended the morning services at the new Central Church in Los Angeles, but was back in time to meet Brother Gillen and hear his evening sermon.

We believe that as the years go by the church will give more and more attention to educational features, especially those that make for better spirituality. Sisters Phyllis Carmichael and C. I. Calkins have caught this vision, and on June 22 initiated a normal class dealing with the Seven Laws of Teaching and managed to complete the course in three weeks. Sister C. I. Calkins taught the class.

California agrees with the pastor in a health way. In our report to the branch for the second quarter we were able to report twenty per cent more church work accomplished than we had performed during the second quarter of the previous year. The branch, too, has advanced steadily in this time, but the credit for this belongs to a loyal group of workers who needed only to be encouraged to prompt them to move ahead. May God bless them.

On July 19 our district vice president, Frank Van Fleet, preached an earnest sermon on fellowship. Come again, Brother Van Fleet. On that same evening President E. A. Smith preached to us. He, too, is a man who brings a message of faith, inspiration, and courage.

Perhaps the biggest thing of recent occurrence in the minds of all Southern California Saints is the recent Hermosa Beach reunion, which closed August 16. Notwithstanding certain unpleasanties and clashes of opinion that occurred, it was the greatest and most inspirational reunion the writer ever attended, and I have been attending reunions since 1900. Brother Gillen remarked that the Spirit of light was present in many if not all the meetings.

Bishop Blair’s sermons elucidating the Lord’s laws dealing with tithing, consecration, surplus, inventories, and related topics were alone sufficient to repay us for attending. We felt a greater reverence for this part of God’s law than ever before. Surely his work will result in increased spirituality in this district. From among his many excellent remarks we quote the following:

"Stewardship is being a colaborer with God and our brethren to put across the program of God."

"If I can’t have your heart first, I don’t want your money."

"The wild rose is the work of God; the American Beauty Rose is the work of God and man working together."

"The title belongs to the Lord before as well as after you pay it. You do not give tithes, you pay them."

Brother Walter W. Smith’s lectures were full of light and inspiration. He lectured three times on Life, twice on other subjects, and preached once. His sermon was on Jesus Christ and him crucified; and was attended by an outpouring of the Spirit rarely experienced at a preaching service. From his many thought-laden sentences we quote but one: "Every single vice in the world is a virtue gone wrong."

Brother J. W. Rushton was at his best and spoke three times. Few will want to forget his Sunday afternoon sermon of August 9, from which we obtained these two jewels of thought: "The difference between what I am and what Jesus wants me to be is the measure of my sin."

"Jesus calls me to put away sin and destroy evil; reveal God to us; and to build up the kingdom of heaven."

And Brother Gillen; what earnest, fatherly, spiritual counsel he gave us! It is a benediction to be in his presence and to see the light of God’s Spirit in his face as he endeavors to bring God’s message to us. And Brother P. R. Burton; what a zeal he brings to us for missionary work and the converting of souls to the gospel! Brother Chapman’s official acts and teachings were peace-loving, kindly, charitable, and first of all spiritual.

Most of the prayer meetings were wonderfully blessed with the Spirit. At one of the prayer meetings we were led to relate a testimony of the Spirit which we had received from another reunion eight or nine years ago. There had been borne testimony to receiving God’s Spirit who differed radically with each other, and in some confusion we had silently asked God how it was that two people opposed each other’s views could testify to receiving the Spirit, and the voice of the Spirit answered: "See, I have given you all of My Spirit, and owned you all; ought ye not to own each other?" The young people’s prayer meetings among the sand hills were always well attended and very spiritual.

While there were a number of sharp differences of opinion during the conference sessions on Friday and Saturday, the one thing they did unanimously was to re-elect Elder N. T. Chapman district president, with Walter W. Smith and Frank Van Fleet vice presidents. The next conference is to be held at Los Angeles, and is to be a mass instead of a minute conference. The finances of the district were placed in the charge of one custodian under the district’s agent, at present David B. Carmichael, 1311 North Garnsey Street, Santa Ana, California. Tithe payers please note the address.

Four baptisms took place in old Pacific on the last day of the reunion. Brother F. R. Burton did the baptizing. One of them was a great grandson of Joseph Burton; one was C. J. Dahl, whom we had the honor of uniting in marriage to Sister Mattie Dahl over a year ago; and Miss Grace Burns, of our Santa Ana young people.

On Saturday before the close of the reunion we were called to Corona to preach the funeral of Brother H. E. Houts. Brother Houts was born November 15, 1861, in Washington County, Illinois; and died at Corona, August 15, 1925. He is survived by his wife, Sister Abbie Houts, three brothers, five sisters, and four sons. He joined the church in his youth and was later ordained a priest. He loved the church and he loved the Herald; his faith in God was great even during the intense suffering of his final illness. He was a member of the Holden, Missouri, Branch, but had been in Alaska nine years and in Corona over two years. May God bless his loved ones.

Leonard S. Rhodes.

A Girl of Ten Wants to Help

I have just been reading the letters from the brothers and sisters in the faith, and I would like to write. I am a little girl ten years old. I was baptized last June, a year ago, by my stepfather, F. A. Winders. We moved here from Rich Hill, Missouri, last February, and we miss the Saints and church very much, as there are no Saints here.

The people here have never heard the gospel. We wish some minister would come and help daddy open up the work here as we believe that is why we were brought here.

We would like for Brother Haden to come to visit us, that we may be all that the Lord would have us to be.

Your sister in the faith,

Ianthia, Missouri

Mary Costelow.

Brother G. H. Shell, writing from Brewton, Alabama, asks the Saints to help him bear his companion before the Lord, in prayer that she may be restored to health. They have spent over fifty years in the church, have been active and have helped care for many missionaries, and they count many in the church who have come through their efforts. In this they rejoice greatly. Let the Saints remember them.

Stone Church

Sunday, August 23, was quite up to the average in Zion. Both prayer services had at least the usual attendance, the young people's service possibly exceeding its average. A beautiful spirit was present; the theme of the meeting being the gratitude for prospects of the work and the large place it held in the lives of the various speakers.

Sunday school had about its usual attendance with the collections reported a little above the average.

At the eleven o'clock hour Elder C. E. Wight of Kansas City, formerly pastor of Lamoni Stake, was the speaker. The opening song was preceded by an organ solo, "Consolation," Mendelssohn, played by Robert Miller, who also played the offertory following the invocation by Elder R. W. Farrell. The sermon was immediately preceded by a vocal solo by Miss Madge Nesbitt.

Brother Wight's subject was, "The Christ of our own experience," and he showed very beautifully how Christ's concept changes in the progress of society as in the growth of the individual from childhood to maturity. Very forcefully he showed how responsibility as a church and the challenge for two weeks, the weather permitting.

A beautiful Sabbath evening drew out a large congregation to the Campus to hear the closing sermon of the series by John F. Martin. The musical program consisted of a vocal and saxophone solo, double quartet, and three band numbers.

Brother March leaves for his home in Kirklawn, Ohio, next Thursday. He has done splendid work here in Zion. It is planned to begin meeting on the Campus by two of the apostles, the 6th of September, to continue each evening for two weeks, the weather permitting.

Elders T. C. Kelley and J. W. A. Bailey have been home for a few days.

A special young people's prayer service, followed by a musical program, will be held in the Stone Church Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. These Wednesday evening services are attracting considerable attention for the young people.

Second Church

Religio is taking on new interest. There are a number of young people becoming very active in study and program work, and in advancing the attendance. The coming Friday evening they announce a musical program, with the orchestra as special attraction.

Evangelist John F. Martin was the morning speaker to an audience of interested listeners who expressed themselves as wishing to hear him again.

Brother Henry H. Montgomery, father of Sister Ida and Sister Reed Gordon, who has been an invalid at Sister Ida Gordon's home for several years, died on Wednesday of last week. The funeral was held at the residence on Friday afternoon at half past two, Bishop B. J. Scott preaching. Elder C. A. Kress-attending and in charge of the service. Brother Montgomery was a man who had honored the church and contributed a clean, devoted life in his office of priest. There is much sympathy expressed in the group where he resided, and where his children and grandchildren live.

Andrew R. Boyd, who had lived to the ripe age of eighty-six and down on the ground, which, although poisonous to locusts, does not affect the crops. Immediately millions of these locions were killed, and were raked up into great heaps. They became so afraid of the airplanes that when they heard them they would fly away, and in this way many were driven into the sea and drowned. Aviators reported that they could actually be herded and driven in any given direction by the airplanes. Within a few days the pests were stopped.

Herding the Locust

The Air Service sent a couple of planes and their crews to the locust infested fields of the Philippines, with what is known as dusting equipment, which is a method of throwing out a solution of arsenic and other drugs into the air and down on the ground, which, although poisonous to the locusts, does not affect the crops. Immediately millions of these locusts were killed, and were raked up into great heaps. They became so afraid of the airplanes that when they heard them they would fly away, and in this way many were driven into the sea and drowned. Aviators reported that they could actually be herded and driven in any given direction by the airplanes. Within a few days the pests were stopped.

Sunday morning Elder A. K. Dillee will be the speaker, at the request of the pastor enlarging on a valuable sermonette recently delivered on Sunday evening.

Ross Leaverton has been chosen scoutmaster to succeed Brother Carpenter, forced to resign because of removal from the city. Brother Leaverton has with him another of our developing young men, Glenn Davies, and the boys are assured a good troop if they show proper willingness and desires. They meet Tuesday evenings at Curtis Hall.

Wheat Park

Attendance at the early morning prayer meeting is increasing and it seems evident a larger room may soon need to be utilized.

Brother W. H. Kelley was the eleven o'clock speaker Sunday. Brother John Crosby, the blind brother of the late Sister Victory, requested that the young people hold their prayer meeting at his home. They gladly responded last Wednesday evening in good numbers, and the white-haired old brother listened with the greatest of pleasure to the young voices in song, prayer, and testimony. It was an especially enjoyable meeting to everyone.

The stewardship class was organized Friday evening at Religio, with a large attendance. More are expected to join next Friday.

Group 41 shows a real anxiety to be at work. A building in the Cooper-Short Addition has been rented in which to hold meetings of various kinds. Last Sunday afternoon twenty-four members met and formed a temporary Sunday school organization, with Clarence Martin superintendent, J. S. Meyers assistant, Roy Sherman secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Roy Sherman chorister, and Mrs. W. A. Atwell, pianist. The school will meet in session next Sunday at half past nine, and there will be preaching at eleven. The Department of Women will also occupy this building on Tuesday afternoons for study and sewing, and Wednesday evening prayer meetings may occasionally be held there.

East Independence

On August 16 Brother E. Rannie was the speaker in the morning. Brother J. W. Davis, the pastor, was the speaker in the evening.

As Brother Davis was planning to make a trip to Michigan and would be gone several weeks, he wanted an assistant pastor. He left it to the people to elect one. Instead of that a motion was made to leave the services in charge of the local priesthood. This was carried.

August 23 Brother Walter M. Self was the speaker in the morning and Brother E. T. Atwell occupied the evening hour. At the morning service, Helen LaVon, the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Earl Minton, was blessed by Brethren J. T. Teeter and William Self.
Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Young people's prayer service has been held the first Sunday of each month at six o'clock in the evening, but due to the warm weather it seemed impossible to have a large attendance. So the group voted to have the meeting at eight in the morning next time, and on the first Sunday in August the main auditorium was almost full. Everyone enjoyed the fresh morning air. The meeting was wonderful, being opened with a very beneficial talk by Elder Cyril E. Wight on spiritual growth. Several gave testimonies of how happy they were that the meeting hour had been changed, and everyone promised to attend the first Sunday next month at eight o'clock.

Brethren J. A. Tanner and F. B. Blair are attending reunions, Brother Blair being in California, accompanied by Sister Blair and son Roland. Brother Tanner has returned and will now be found at his desk or occupied with other of his many duties.

It was thought that the new Central Church would be occupied about the middle of August, but the present occupants cannot vacate until their remodeling is finished, and after they get away our carpenters must have their session, remodeling to suit Sunday school requirements, so the opening will probably be about the second Sunday in September, with an appropriate program. A large crowd is expected.

Central Church announces a tentative program for the opening service to be held Sunday the twentieth of August, at the new church, Thirtieth and Tracy Avenue.

At half past nine, Sunday school; at eleven o'clock President Elbert A. Smith will address the gathering; at three Bishop Carmichael will be the speaker; President Frederick M. Smith will occupy the sacred desk at a quarter of eight. A large attendance from all churches of the stake is anticipated at all services of the day. A basket dinner of the old-fashioned sort will be had on the lawn immediately after the morning service. So prepared to put in the day in this feast of good things.

Los Angeles, California

Central Church

The work has been moving forward very successfully since our last report, in spite of the fact that it is the vacation season and many have been away for short periods. July Fourth a large number of Saints met at the reunion grounds at Hermosa Beach to spend the day. No one carried lunch, but patronized the ladies' aid of Los Angeles Branch, who served excellent refreshments at reasonable cost. A brief program was given in the forenoon, consisting of patriotic speeches by George H. Wixom, N. T. Chapman, P. R. Burton, and Walter W. Smith, two anthems by the Los Angeles choir, and singing by the congregation. The afternoon was devoted to swimming and a baseball game between the Long Beach players and Los Angeles, in which the latter was defeated. There was fine sociability, and incidentally a profit of over one hundred dollars went to swell the building fund of the Central Church.

The July sacramental service was very largely attended and the time profitably occupied. One feature was a most interesting testimony by that veteran missionary, E. A. Erwin, who is living in Los Angeles at present. Brother Strube, of Emporia, Kansas, was baptized, also Brother Jack Dunlap, husband of Sister Thelma Haldeman Dunlap. Confirmations were made at the close of the service, and also the small son of Brother and Sister Walter Terry was blessed. An afternoon service was held at Hermosa Beach, at which a number from the district attended. The speakers were Brethren P. R. Burton and Walter W. Smith. Two meetings of the district presidency and heads of various departments of the district was held to make plans for reunion.

On July 7 twenty-two men and women interested in the financial affairs of the branch met at a supper-table conference in the Sunday school auditorium. The finances of the branch were gone over and discussed with fine unanimity of feeling; and it was decided to have another meeting next month, each couple to invite another. The matter of funding the church debt was discussed, and a plan proposed by the president of the Board of Trustees, Brother Willard Badham.

On July 8 the regular semiannual business meeting of the branch occurred, the pastor presiding, assisted by Brother Ray Knowlton. The report of membership showed a slight net loss, but when we considered that forty-two members had withdrawn from the branch in order to organize the East Los Angeles Branch, we realized that we had really made quite a substantial gain in membership during the past few months. The membership is now six hundred and thirty-four. Sixty-two delegates were elected to the district conference to be held in August at Hermosa Beach.

July 19 President Elbert A. Smith warmed our hearts and renewed our faith by a splendid sermon, after which he went to Santa Ana for the evening sermon. We wished he might have stayed longer and preached more. There was a large attendance, as the membership had been invited by post card to hear him, and the response was very satisfactory. The infant son of Brother and Sister Joseph Camp and gave the name of Harold. Sister Margaret Wickes had charge of the music that morning. Sister Wickes is supervisor of music in the district and has been giving considerable attention to the Los Angeles choir of late, assisting Sister Stella Kelley, who is always faithful and at her post. We wish without being selfish, that Sister Wickes could be with us all the time.

The Sunday school is going forward, making gradual gains, and has held up attendance well in spite of vacation. Religio is also keeping up attendance and interest, with good programs, and it is the aim of the president to see that every member participates in the program in one way or another. Our dramatic club has been working in two groups. Sister Willie Skinner is directing a group in an amusing comedy to be given at the reunion; and Sister Eunice Smith is directing two groups in religious dramas to be presented on the two Sunday mornings at the reunion. A large class studies the Book of Mormon, another class studies church history, and then there are groups of boys and girls. The final dress rehearsal of the two religious dramas, "The seeing heart," and "Lydia, seller of purple," was given on Friday evening, August 7, as the Religio program. Sister Grace Billingsley of Saint Louis, visiting here for some time, assisted with the music.

There has been the usual number of visitors, many of whose names the reporter was unable to get, but among them we noted Brother and Sister Rufus Smith and daughter Marjorie, formerly of Independence but now of Spokane, Washington; Sister Farrer, of Washington, District of Columbia; Sister Bender and her son and daughter, Blanche and Blaine, from Independence.

The August sacramental service was large and inspiring, and everything is tending toward the reunion at Hermosa Beach, August 7 to 17. A great many Saints from this branch are planning to go for a part or the whole time, and we are looking forward to a spiritual upbuilding.

Fairview, Montana

August 17.—One evening last month the Sunday school officers, teachers, and juniors gave an evening's entertainment in the country at the home of Brother W. R. Hillman. The attendance was more than the most optimistic expected. All united in singing songs, accompanied by Brother Roy Goldsmith's guitar, then all took part in a season of games, races, and jokes till the fire was started on the neighboring hill for roasting wieners and marshmallows. The usual camp fire sociability was enjoyed, along with the sandwiches, ice cream, and cake.

The gathering dispersed about eleven o'clock, some having as much as twenty-five miles to go to reach home.

Sister Emily Pooley and her two children, formerly of this place but now residing in Coram, Montana, have been visiting here for a few weeks.

Several members of this branch visited the Williston, North Dakota, Saints, and did what they could to assist in the tent meetings being held there by Brother William Shakespeare.

Seattle, Washington

August 21.—We have been having some real good services of high order spiritually. The last two weeks in May we had present among us Brother A. C. Martin, whose sermons were uplifting and seemed to be the one thing the Saints were needing.

On May 30 we enjoyed a clean-up day at our new reunion grounds at Silver Lake, Washington. The Saints of the Seattle-British Columbia District purchased these grounds a year ago at the reunion and are all looking forward to the time when it will be beautified and things made convenient for its purpose. A great deal was accomplished, making quite a change in the appearance, the trees being trimmed and the brush being cleared away. Everybody worked hard and remembered for some time that they had celebrated, because of sore arms and limbs.

On Children's Day we were made glad when there were four precious souls expressed the desire to follow Jesus, and to keep his commandments, by entering the waters of bap-

Sees Necessity of Stewardships

It has always surprised me to see how many of the Saints can get along without the church papers. I enjoy both the Ensign and Herald and would not care to do without either. It is encouraging to see the zeal with which the brethren are entering into their work, and from almost every quarter the Saints are reporting progress.

I was baptized thirty-one years ago last April in Arnold's Creek, near the Masonville Branch in Ontario, by Elder J. L. Mortimer. We enjoyed very much the two-day meetings that were held every summer in John Wilson's bush at the Masonville Church. I well remember the preaching by Brothers W. W. Blair, John R. Hillman, and many others.

Many and varied are the changes which have taken place since then. Some have finished their work and have gone on to a sure reward. Others fell by the wayside, having torn down that which they had built, and we leave them in the hands of a kind and just Father.

I have been very much opposed to the system of supreme direction control, as I felt that it would infringe upon our freedom as saints. However, I have a new vision of matters since Brother M. A. McConley visited my home, and perhaps if all were able to hear both sides they would have a different view.

A new era seems to be dawning in the church, and if supreme direction control means putting the stewardship plan into operation, it is indeed a good thing. We must come to this way of living if we wish Zion to be redeemed, and if we believe the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

Awake, ye Saints, awake, for time is fleeting,
And we are still so very far from our goal.
Put on the gospel armor, and with greeting
Go forth and strive to win a precious soul.

God wills that we shall up and do his bidding,
For he has called us from out the giddy throng.
Shall we not heed the voice of inspiration
And day by day uphold the right, despise the wrong?
Zion must be redeemed, her flag unfurled.
Within her stakes the Saints shall safely dwell.
The task is great, but who will shirk his part,
Knowing that Christ will guard his people well!

Look Zionward, then our leader's call obey.
Earnestly strive our mission to fulfill,
With broken heart and contrite spirit pray.
That we may be God's chosen people still.

W. A. Cooper.
tism. We hope for them all the joy that can be gotten for them out of this gospel.

On June 21 Brother M. A. Cook started a series of services which lasted for one week, all being benefited thereby.

We have just finished painting our church and are very much pleased with the results. Our church grounds are said to be the finest on the Pacific coast, and are kept up by an expert gardener, Brother H. R. Tabbut, who keeps them in excellent condition.

We have a fully graded Sunday school, our primary department being held in the basement of the church. It is very well attended, considering the young people, with Brother Monte Lasater in charge of the school, with Sister Lasater in charge of the primary department.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is doing very nicely under the leadership of Brother Medoll Brown. We have classes in the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and church history, which have proved to be of a very beneficial nature in bringing out the laws of the church.

Our reunion was very well attended and was said to be the best reunion held in many years. It was very spiritual and uplifting. We had with us from headquarters Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. His sermons were enjoyed by all, and his visits and experiences as well as good times, will long be remembered by young and old. Not the least among these were the early morning talks on the hillside overlooking the camp. These were especially for the young people and covered many recent experiences as well as instructive experiences of missionary life in the South Sea Islands. We also had with us our venerable Patriarch F. A. Smith, and his time was well occupied both with preaching and the giving of blessings, and his presence among us was enjoyed by all. He gave twenty-one blessings and was assisted by a Baptist stenographer, Miss Alice Phipps. Brother and Sister Eltenhoeuser were also present among us, with the name of D. S. McDole as pastor.

Additional Reunion News

The Western Colorado reunion that was held at Durango Colorado, August 1 to 9, was not what could be called a huge success, but nevertheless it was a reunion that was very profitable to all who were able to attend. There were many obstacles to be met, chief of which was the fact that it rained every day, and some days it was more than rain: a downpour. The reunion was not as well attended as was hoped for, due largely to the weather conditions.

The regular services of the reunion were well balanced so as to take care of all the needs of those attending the reunion. The morning activities began with a prayer service that was usually fairly well attended and a good spirit present. At the ten o'clock hour the Department of Women, under the direction of Sister Moser, carried on class work. This was followed by preaching at eleven. At noon the Children's Department was in charge of the control. The afternoon activities began with a prayer service that was fairly well attended.

The only general church officers present were Elders J. Arthur Davis, district president; J. D. Curtis, missionary in Eastern Colorado; and R. E. Davey, missionary in Western Colorado. Through the united efforts of these brethren the reunion was made well worth while.

Brother Davey was placed in charge of the young folks, and although there were only a few young people present, the reunion was made of interest to them. The early morning hike and prayer meetings were well attended, and there was a wonderful response upon the part of the young in the prayer services, a large percentage of those present each morning taking part. Every afternoon from three to five, recreational activities were entered into by both old and young. Ground ball and volley ball were the chief games played, and it was a good sight to see the young at play, and especially to see some of the older ones belle their age by their activities on the ball field or in the volley ball court. A wiener roast was held one night following the evening service, and a marshmallow toast another night.

Arrangements were made to feed everyone on the reunion grounds free of charge. A cook and dining-room tent was erected, and the whole reunion ate together, like a big family. The sisters in attendance united their efforts in seeing that there was plenty of good food cooked to satisfy the appetites of everyone, even to that of the missionaries. Provisions were made for holding the next reunion at Delta, and already work has started to make the coming reunion a success.

They Are Coming

BY MINNIE EUGENIA WARNOCK

I hear the tramp of thousands drawing nearer every day, The armies seeking for the Lord, in the good old gospel way, And for the City Beautiful, which prophets have foretold; They're coming, coming, coming, with their silver and their gold.

Chorus

Oh, they're coming; yes, they're coming;
Marching to their songs of joy.
All the powers that hinder Zion
God himself will soon destroy.

The children of the north are marching down the great highway,
Which from the ocean's depths is raised, the way the Scriptures say;
And lo, the icy crash of barriers giving way is drowned
By mighty shouts, as through the sea they march on solid ground.

And enemies who seek their progress to retard are slain;
Lo, Zion is their goal, the priesthood crown to gain;
To be restored to kindred tribes, from whom they've long been lost:
Oh, they're coming, coming, coming, this mighty, glorious host.

From north and south and east and west I hear the glad new song
Of all the honest souls of earth who've prayed to God so long
For peace and rest and safety from this worldly strife and sin:
Those blessed weary pilgrims soon will all be coming in.

And Lamanites who've long been dumb beneath affliction's rod,
Are waking up and calling on their everlasting God,
And plume themselves in feather from the broad o'er-shadowing wings,
Line up for truth and righteousness—oh, glad their war cry rings.

Are we busy making ready for this multitude of guests?
Are splendid preparations going on as God requests?
Let us hasten, gladly hasten, 'tis the glorious jubilee,
For they're coming, coming, coming, over land and over sea!

Anabel, Missouri.—I listened in on your Sunday morning program and heard the fine sermon by the elder. You certainly have a fine choir. Such lovely singing! “Music hath charms. It soothes the weary child and calms the savage breast.” In the evening I enjoyed the good, soul-stirring tunes. Isn’t the radio the most wonderful thing that has ever been developed?—George E. Mapes.

Kansas City, Missouri.—Taken as a whole, in my opinion your programs are the best I receive on my crystal set. I nearly always listen in for K L D S in preference to any others. Your musicals and sermons are fine.—A sincere Methodist friend.

Hannibal, Missouri.—I heard your station for the first time to-day, and am certainly glad to know you are broadcasting religious services. I tuned in about 11.30 a. m. this morning and heard the sermon, one song, and the pipe organ. I enjoyed it all very much. We didn’t have any services at the Fifth Street Baptist Church where I belong, so I came home from Sunday school and listened to your services over the radio. I shall listen to your station regularly. You are surely doing a great work.—L. P. Conley, 2008 Chestnut Street.

Tipton, Missouri.—A word or two in appreciation of your programs yesterday, July 19. They came in fine and were greatly enjoyed. The sermon by John F. Martin was especially enjoyed by my mother, seventy-four years of age, who is unable to attend church services. We were unable to pick up your station on the short wave length.—J. R. Fruechey.

Shenandoah, Iowa.—You came through with beautiful modulation Tuesday evening; modulation as good as I ever heard. The volume was not quite what I expected for 1,000 watts. W.H.B. (Kansas City) had about the same volume as you, but with not as good modulation nor as sharp tuning..... Your announcing was unusually good.—Henry Field (owner and announcer of K F N F).

Vineyard Gleanings

The Chevrolet 490, which figured in print some years ago, incident to the trip east, was taken from dry dock August 8 and headed for the Lamoni and Nauvoo reunions. The journey itself was without incident worthy to be chronicled; but the reunions were very interesting and profitable.

The Lamoni reunion was one of the best ever held at that place. The attendance was about as it has been from year to year; excepting perhaps a larger attendance of Saints from other districts. One ever-pleasing feature of this reunion is the excellent order. Some years ago the custom of appointing police to maintain order was abandoned, as it became no longer necessary. Organization and system spelled the difference—and particularly the fact that now all classes, including even the very small children, have a part in the camp and its religious as well as recreational activities. They think of it as "our reunion."

The prayer service of the first Sunday was a spiritual feast, with the gifts manifested in great power. Elder Joseph Lane, president of the Little Sioux District, was present and testified that he had attended reunions since the organization of the first reunion to supersede the semiannual General Conference, and thought the meeting of Sunday equal to anything that he had experienced in all those years.

Among many other visitors from adjacent districts and stakes was Brother T. T. Hinderks, of Stewartsville, Missouri, well known for many years in the Far West Stake, and for some years member of the Standing High Council of the church. He bore a strong testimony as to the divinity of the work, and at the close of the service related to me this impressive experience: Many years ago, Jason W. Briggs, who had taken so prominent a part in the Reorganization, but who had at that time become darkened and was rapidly drifting away, visited his home. Unfortunately, in that state of mind he busied himself relating incidents supposed to have occurred at Nauvoo; also many things supposed to be wrong with the Reorganization and the administration of the late President Joseph Smith. All this tended to shake the faith of Brother Hinderks and family. (Why should any church representative seek to shake the faith of the Saints? But it was done, even in those days.)

Finally Brother Hinderks had a dream. As nearly as I can recall his account of it, he found himself in the church building of the German Saints of Stewartsville. President Joseph Smith and a strange man came down the aisle and greeted him. But Joseph did not introduce the stranger. So Brother Hinderks said to the stranger, "My name is T. T. Hinderks; what is your name?" The stranger replied, "My name is Wonderful." (Possibly in reference to the saying in Isaiah, "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Prince of Peace.")

After some conversation the Stranger pointed to a massive rock lying upon the platform, in the middle of which was set a block of pure white marble, and said, "This white stone represents the Reorganized Church. It shall never be moved out of its place." The faith which man had shaken, God restored.

The presence and testimony of such veteran defenders of the faith greatly helped the reunion. However, I have delayed too long to report the Lamoni gathering in detail. The closing Sunday is said to have been a fitting climax, as President F. M. Smith was with them for the three services. However, we missed that event, as we were obliged to push on to the Nauvoo reunion, where we arrived Saturday, August 15, after a drive of one hundred and seventy-five miles from Lamoni.

Nauvoo still preserves much of the old-time distinctive flavor. She is approached by ferry across the wide and lovely expanse of the Mississippi River, which at this point is a mile and a half or more in width. At that the ride is all too short; but suffices to take one in a very fitting way from the dust and noise and hurry and confusion of modern automobile or train travel to the quiet charm and reverent calm of the Nauvoo reunion.

The tent was pitched at the foot of Main Street, in the middle of the very wide street, and not far from the water's edge. (The town proper is some distance away upon the summit of the hill, where the temple once stood.) It is in the very center of a cluster of historic buildings. Just to the west is the Old Homestead, the first house to be occupied by Joseph Smith following the purchase by the church of property at Commerce, now Nauvoo. This building was an Indian trading post and is of logs. It has been cased and painted, leaving one end and the front exposed so that the original log structure can be observed. Very near to this building, on a green sloping hill leading down to the water’s edge, the “Two Martyrs” rest.

East of the street is the Nauvoo House, which was in process of construction at the time of the expulsion. The first floor of this building is used as a cafeteria, and from the doors and windows those who dine may also feast their eyes on the ever-changing panorama of the river, whose waters come within a few feet of the old and worn doorstones. The upper stories are used for sleeping rooms. One block further up the street stands the old Mansion House, where Joseph lived and from which his body was carried to its burial.

All of these buildings are now the property of the church. Of late years the buildings and grounds have been put in excellent condition, first by Brother Layton, later by Brother Berve. Some well-designed landscape gardening has been carried out under the direction of Brother Moroni Traxler, and the shrubs and greenery about the old buildings are very attractive.

The reunion was ably conducted by Brothers Berve and Scott Daniel, of the district presidency. Charles Putnam and John F. Sheehy of the missionary force were present and furnished invaluable assistance in preaching, in the conducting of recreational exercises, and be it not forgotten in the arduous task of washing and drying dishes and serving in other ways in the commissary department. With ease and dignity they doffed the clerical robe betimes and assumed the apron of the dish washer. Both won a warm spot in the hearts of the Saints.

Those who attended will not soon forget the very great degree of spiritual light and comfort experienced in the rather wonderful prayer services. With others, our aged Sister Joseph Burton spoke on several occasions, twice exercising the gift of tongues. One feature of the reunion was a memorial service in memory of Bishop George P. Lambert, who had passed to his reward during the year; a very unusual man, he left his mark in the community and was honored and loved and trusted without limit by those without as well as within the church. Such men are the real assets of the church. These assets do not appear on the Bishop’s books—rather on the Recorder’s books.

Another unusual feature was a pilgrimage made by the young people of Lamoni, to Nauvoo, under the able direction of Elders Wilber Prall and David Dowker, of the stake presidency, and Bishop Yarrington. Sixteen automobiles carrying seventy-six persons made the trip without mishap. They reached Nauvoo Wednesday afternoon about two o’clock. Our Nauvoo young people, with John Sheehy as song and cheer leader, met them at the dock. Evan Fry, leading the Lamoni young people, got a little the start of us and sang, “There’s an old, old path,” and the two groups joined in singing it as the boat swung in. The song seemed to blend their voices and makes the two groups one indeed. This ended, the Nauvoo delegation led out in a song of welcome and a cheer for the visitors. All repaired to the tent, where a fine prayer service was held. After that a tour of historic places was made under Brother Berve’s leadership, and in the evening a sermon. Thursday morning a boat trip was made to Fort Madison, and back in time for the nine o’clock prayer meeting. Our visitors then drove to Keokuk for a tour of the famous power plant, then home to Lamoni. This event will long live in the memory of the young people of Lamoni; and it put new life into the Nauvoo reunion.

By contrast I recall a time when I was still comparatively young, the first year of my married life, when wife and I visited this reunion, then held across the river at Bluff Park. We were young, the river was lovely, and for me contained many sermons and poems. We yielded to temptation and with others took a short excursion down the river one day. It was orderly and respectable; but at the next morning’s prayer service the elders in charge rebuked us rather severely—or so we thought.

I contrasted the experience. This year the elders had the party in charge. They went with the young folks. Hymns were sung and a good time had. The young people behaved splendidly. The most capacious could not have criticized them. They enjoyed the event hugely. Then they returned with their elders and pastors and in a body attended the prayer service and bore splendid testimonies. They were tied up to the church. To my mind the way of 1925 is the better way.

The reunion decided to invite adjacent districts, Eastern Iowa, Kewanee, Northeastern Missouri, Central Illinois, and perhaps others to meet with them next year. No doubt Nauvoo is the logical place for a big reunion rather general in its nature, just as Kirtland is such a logical center further east. The historic interest of the place and the beauty of the surroundings conspire to make it so.

In Nauvoo itself the work is in much better shape than for many years past. Several families have moved in of late years. The Saints of Nauvoo are high grade Saints and by exemplary lives have won the confidence and respect of the entire country around about, so that the prestige of the church is very high. This is as it should be in every community where our people dwell—but it is especially pleasing to find it so in Nauvoo.

We wish them success in their work. May their happy growth among the vine-clad hills of Kirtland, Onset, Lamoni, and others of the larger gatherings.

We may safely say that this year all, from the least little one in the kindergarten to the aged veteran missionary, James McKiernan, and the even more aged Solomon Salisbury, who will shortly celebrate his ninetyeth birthday, enjoyed the reunion greatly, while the business men of the town evinced interest by attendance and also by making up a generous purse without solicitation for the reunion expenses.

ELBENT A. SMITH.

The Kansas City Journal for August 31 represents Bryan D. Robison who is lecturing in a tent at Troost Avenue and Linwood Boulevard, Kansas City, as saying, "The fall of Turkey, which will occur soon, will mark the beginning of the Battle of Armageddon and herald the second coming of Christ." He continues: "The Bible states the 'king of the north shall plant the tabernacle of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain, yet he shall come to his end and none shall help him.' What will happen then? The following verse says Christ will come, the graves will be opened, and awards shall be apportioned. To-day we see the end of Turkey coming rapidly. The world is demanding its extinction. During the war, the allies announced the terms of final peace would include the banishment of the Turk from Europe. To-day Turkey is being permitted to exist only because other European nations cannot agree among themselves who shall occupy the vacated territory."

Are you reading "Little journeys with the editor," which have been appearing in the letter column? The editor works overtime and sometimes at great inconvenience to give these to you. If you want to have them continued, write a card to the editor or to the First Presidency and state your appreciation. We had some difficulty in convincing the editor that the Saints would get satisfaction from such contributions, but we believe we were right. What do you say?

Questions and Answers

Question: We have had with us a former missionary who has left the church and denounced it, has also been placed under silence, yet he continues to preach and claims to retain the priesthood. Is his action logical and justifiable?

Answer: Barring the harshness of the language, this question is well enough answered in the language of Daniel Macgregor in answer to R. C. Evans in 1919, and it is of special significance at this time and in this connection. The language is as follows:

In conclusion, may we ask why is it that Mr. Evans still continues to bask in that honor of office conferred upon him by the Reorganized Church? He still claims to be bishop, although his only ordination thereto was received under the hands of Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley.

If the church he denounces is wrong, then the ordination virtue from such a church is wrong also, and Mr. Evans, instead of being an accredited representative of this or any other church, is nothing more or less than an unblushing impostor.—Daniel Macgregor, in St. Thomas Times-Journal (Ontario), April 6, 1919.

Question: Would you kindly inform me on points of doctrine in regard to administering sacrament to those not members of the church. There seems to be different opinions given by different ones of the priesthood. I feel that the question should be unified so that we as members of the priesthood administering the sacrament can know wherein to take our stand that in unity of thought, purpose, and action we will be as one. A takes the stand that only members be allowed to partake; while B takes the stand that those who are present and are diligently seeking for the gospel should be allowed to partake. The question then arises, Are we close communionsits or open communionsists?

Answer: We have before us your letter of August 3. In reply to your question on the sacrament, will say that the position of the church has always been that it is to be served only to the church members. In some instances where elders have served the sacrament to people who were investigating and ready to be baptized, no objections have been urged; but it is contrary to the church rule as per General Conference Resolution Number 91: "That unbaptized persons, whether children or adults, are not entitled to partake of the sacrament of bread and wine."

A short note from President Frederick M. Smith while in attendance at the Montana reunion states that a good spirit prevails there and that the people appreciate the work of Brothers F. A. Smith, Clyde F. Ellis, M. A. Etzenhouser, and Sister Etzenhouser.
The New Way.—Number 1

BY A. H. CHRISTENSEN

All the people could be divided theoretically into two groups: those who believe Utopia on earth is possible of realization, and those who believe it is not. The former class may be divided again into two classes: those who believe it can be, and those who believe it shall be. Those who believe it shall be are sure to realize it, even though it be after many disappointing attempts. Those who believe it can be may hope but may perish hoping. Those who believe it cannot be are impossible. Faith is the first subject to take up with them.

Believers in God and the Bible are not long opponents of the idea, for having their attention called to the promise of God to man through holy prophets of old, they are quickly assured that we shall reign on earth with Him, and a perfect adjustment of all things, both temporal and spiritual, shall then prevail. This is the great millennium, the reign of Christ on earth for a thousand years. It is Zion, a new Jerusalem, a prototype of the New Jerusalem that John saw coming down from God out of heaven unto the New Earth that shall succeed this earth when this has passed away. This first city and its country is to be the preparatory college in which the pure in heart shall be trained in all the requirements of the final New Jerusalem. It is the Utopia, so-called, of the reformers who have caught the vision of things that can be and have set to work to realize it. They belong to the classification of those who believe it can be. But to belong to the shall be class, one must take God and his prophets into the plan, and that is where the plan passes from plain theory to fact. His word never fails.

But to begin the study of the principles upon which that perfect government shall rest, or to begin actual foundations therefore, preparatory to the coming of the kingdom, one may have to unlearn some of the things generally passing for fact. One may have to learn that not everything taught in the university or learned in the bank cage, or at the commercial club, bears the indelible stamp of truth, although it may bear the trademark of the institution from which it comes.

And to him who from these lines fears an attack is about to be made upon any of these institutions, let me say that no such thing is intended with a view to outlawing them; but if an attack it must be called, let it pass for what it is, an effort to induce reform, or repentance within them, so that they may be redeemed and possibly live forever.

Right here the church and the commercial world clash for a finish fight over the question of whether or not business, commerce, and economics should be an active, creative, moral force. A textbook on economics, written by a teacher of that subject in one of our great universities has this to say:

Can Men Change Themselves?

Man has not made himself, nor can he remake. No one can lift himself by his boot straps, nor can any man add one cubit to his stature. In matters of human nature and human society, men are not directors and governors, but mere observers. Man as he is, men as they are, these, they say, are a fixed term—the known quantity in the equation of human life. In the years or the centuries, human nature may be changed, but it cannot change itself. Where any social problem demands for its solution another human nature or a new species of human beings, it is well to drop the problem as insoluble. If the reformers’ millennium awaits a regenerated humanity, the millennium must be a weary distance ahead.—Outlines of Economics, by Davenport, instructor of economics, University of Chicago.

And so the public believes—that religion and business are separate and will not mix; that men cannot change; that repentance is for the liar, the thief, the swearer, the drunkard, etc., but not for the generally honorable man who has a wrong system of business economy, by which, in the aggregate, the justice and equality of Zion is indefinitely procrastinated. Repentance does not always have reference to sin, but sometimes to a change from ways that may be un­sinful morally, though not correct theoretically.

Therefore the phases of the gospel that affect the economic field should be taught to all, including those powerful organizations of our day by which is controlled the whole economic world, including the tiller of the soil and all other labor.

It cannot be denied that business organizations are at the head in executive economics to-day. Boards of trade, manufacturers’ associations, chambers of commerce, banking associations, and hundreds of like orders of the present day meet in their chambers, enact orders, and through their perfect cooperation carry out their desires to the very extremities of the complicated system of human existence as it now operates. And the system as a whole, I freely charge, have for their objective the getting of gain. And I call upon the ready author last quoted to state the world’s viewpoint under his topic heading:

Will Men Work Without Self-Interest?

Men now work under the incentive of want, incited and persuaded to effort by their interest in themselves and in those dependent upon them—wives, children, relatives, and friends. Include all this activity under the head of selfishness, though the term seems, in some measure, an inapt one. But how insur that men will work strenuously, that society shall consume the largest practicable amount of wealth, if for that which we call selfishness there is substituted an interest in the nation or a love of humanity in general? It will not remove the difficulty to show that the interest of each is at one with the interest of all. How shall anyone find strenuous effort to be for his own interest? In America, for example, if he is able to persuade himself to work twice as hard and to produce twice as much, his own share will be increased thereby one seventy-millionth. Brotherly love will not stand this strain.—Ibid., p. 188.

In this author again we see, as all of us have done before, one (I cannot call him a reformer) throwing idealism to the winds and dealing with clay as it is. Perhaps some one will say at this, that he is a practical man and would make a success in business. That’s just it; I have often heard that preachers never make a success in business. But whose is the inclosure. Few indeed who have attempted to make stewards out of them in the world and then proceed to mark off a territory that is forbidden to enter. They have brought the people to the attitude but have forbidden works within the inclosure. Few indeed have been the Christians who have attempted to make stewards out of “owners.” Stewardship invariably grows out of idealism.

It has often been said that the present economic system is wrong; and I believe it. That is not to say that there is no good to be found in it, for there is; but it is so much wrong that it cannot be used as a vehicle for carrying out the economic intent of the gospel of Christ. It is much like old bottles that will not hold new wine; or like old garments that will not hold new patches. It is asked, then, What is to be done? The answer is, Do as the Master did when he restored the gospel; build anew from the ground up. This is also what he did when he came among the Jews at Jerusalem.

We consider it important that at the outset we take stock of ourselves and see just how firmly we are held in the grip of the traditions of our time, and to believe that the old order may be supplanted by a new order without making any criticism or change whatsoever in our civil government. And the new order can be inaugurated and run parallel with the old without conflict. Its principal changes will be to new motives, new objectives, and new and perfectly legal processes. It is the stewardship plan for everyone, and embraces the industries of production, manufacture, distribution, and consumption; including also a storehouse.

In discussing prevailing systems of economics one should keep in mind that there is a vast difference between the Constitution and laws of our country, and the theory of economics as it is in force now. The Constitution and laws were authorized by legislators elected by the people, while the theory of economics was simply handed down by certain thinkers, and does not come with any more authority than that which the next writer shall present. Honorable W. J. Bryan calls attention to the question of authority as it is now questioned in Tennessee, in the case of the teaching of the theory of evolution in the schools there, which thing had been forbidden by law. He calls attention to the fact that the one is a part of our country, while the other is a wandering star without a legitimate father. This is the distinction that I have tried to make above in pointing out that there is a distinction between our present economic system and our country.

This lack of power to discriminate and to trace events to their causes has been noted in late years in the writings of illogical news correspondents in the daily press, who have charged off the decline of faith in God and the Christian religion in Russia, to communism. While in fact the tendency there to abandon the rules of civilized lands for the propagation of the human species, of which marriage is the corner stone, for the loose rules of the natural world, is not the outgrowth of communism, but of the teaching of evolution which is entirely detached from communism, and never should have been used by “ownership” to beat into insensibility its dread enemy. So in criticizing the present economic system I trust that I shall not fall into the unhappy state of being esteemed a critic of our country, as is often the case, for I love our country and hope it will be better for my having lived in it.

Habits—Good and Bad

BY D. K. MANEELY, D. D. S.

Did You Know—

"Doctor Durand in a study of several hundred cases found bottle-fed children to have nearly three times the decay as in breast-fed children."*

All the baby teeth are one fourth to one fifth grown before birth. This period is of great importance, for a poor start seldom encourages a good finish. The damage may be done before birth.

"Unless on a very carefully prepared formula, the bottle-fed infant acquires an appetite for sugar that is going to be a habit almost impossible to break in later life. The large number of children suffering from rickets (disease resulting from malnutrition) in infancy are, with but few exceptions, bottle fed."*

About the sixth year, the baby teeth separate. This indicates growth of the jaw to accommodate the larger second set which soon will be coming.

Thumb and lip sucking often has the disastrous effect of distorting the soft, pliable arches, and results in crooked, crowded teeth.

The "Six-Year Molars."—These four molars come at the age of six, one on each side of the upper and lower jaw, just back of the last tooth of the first set. They are usually mistaken for first teeth. The first baby tooth is eagerly looked for. The first baby tooth is eagerly looked for. It is more important to look for the first of the second set. Ninety-five per cent of adults have these six-year molars filled or extracted. They come in at an age of neglect and ignorance and are not given the proper care.

"More than forty diseases may be traced directly or indirectly to tooth troubles." A healthy mouth is not a cure-all but is an important factor.*

Drink a glass of water before breakfast—your stomach needs a bath the same as your face.

You may laugh if you wish, but constipation shows in the tissues of the mouth. The American people suffer from chronic constipation. Teach children a regular twice-a-day habit.

The gum chewer seldom masticates his food thoroughly, and the saliva, being exhausted,impairs digestion.

Soft, mushy food deprives the teeth and gums of the exercise which is essential to their growth and health. It is the same as though you never lifted anything heavier than a few ounces. Your arms would soon become soft, fat, and flabby.

The most unfortunate child is the one who is indulged and spoiled, and when fitfully corrected does not understand. Such a child has irregular habits, with no duties, no guidance, and often drifts into poor health. A habit is a habit, and a bad habit is hard to break: so also is a good habit. The child is a creature of habit. They are as natural as life. A little thoughtful direction will train them into a right course and work for the upbuilding of health throughout life.

[This is the second of a series of three valuable articles by Doctor Maneely. The third and last will appear in an early issue of the HERALD, upon the little understood topic of the six-year molars.—EDITOR.]

Playing the Game

BY ANNE FRIEND ROBERTS

The "game of life" is one all must play; the character will denote how it has been played.

The rule of the game is this, "That life—the life of boys and girls—must obey certain definite rules in order to be a success."

Our code for the game of life is, kindness, faithfulness, truthfulness, forgiveness, generosity, obedience, courage, self-control, and service to others.

How to best teach these principles in order to make them both interesting and effective is our problem.

Modern psychology finds in natural play a more valuable means of education than any pedagogical device ever formulated by a teacher, because it is the natural means of expressing the mental and physical power of the child. The fact that the football game was lost by disobedience of a "rule" of the game shows similarity between our living and the playing of a game—both require that rules must be followed.

Story-telling is the oldest art, and the traits that served the race in its infancy are the ones that mark the unfolding life of every child. More and more, in these days, the leaders of educational thought are coming to recognize the significance of story-telling in the training of the children. Precepts may fail to impress; personality never does.

Long before teachers or textbooks appeared, instruction was given in story form to children. "I would rather be the children's story-teller than the queen's favorite or the king's counselor," says Kate Douglas Wiggin. G. Stanley Hall says, "Let me tell the stories, and I care not who writes the textbook." Modern mothers use story-telling, not knowing why. Natural instinct leads them in this great art.

In every age, really great teachers who have had character building as a conscious aim have known the value of stories and have made it a most effective means of shaping the lives of both old and young. Jesus, Plutarch, Froebel, and the kindergartners of to-day have not failed in accomplishing their aim.

*J.—ADA Department of Health Education, volume 12, numbers 4 to 7.
One of our greatest educators has said, "Good story-telling is the best intellectual qualification of the teacher."

Human nature in general can be laughed, more easily than reasoned or persuaded, in or out of any measure. In a case at law, some lawyers try to make the people reflect, which they won't do; others try to make them weep, which they can't do; and the lawyer with well-told stories, well applied, makes the people laugh, which they like to do, and he wins the case.

The minister who understands psychology uses the story method to a marked degree; it is more easy to remember a story than the statement of a fact. When a story is used to illustrate a point, the mind cannot think of the story without thinking of the point it illustrates. The whole world loves a story, but they do not take the value of stories seriously enough.

Some people object to fairy tales from lack of understanding. The fairy tales have this distinctly moral value: Virtue is rewarded and wrongdoing punished. While this is true in real life, frequently the child is unable to trace the relation between cause and effect.

Nature's penalties are sure, but often one must wait a lifetime to see their completion. In fairyland, penalty quickly follows offense. Oftentimes a fairy tale points a moral more effectively than a story drawn from real life.

A child does not see things as we see them; his imagination is strong. A broom handle becomes a prancing steed; a crooked stick a gun; a row of chairs a wonderful train of cars; and so on. He has the knack of grasping the moral lesson without thinking of the fictitious part of the story. "It is not the gay forms that he meets in the fairy tales which charm the child, but a spiritual, invisible truth lying far deeper," says Friedrich Froebel. Sara Cone Bryant tells us, "The story of the ugly duckling is much truer than many a statement of fact."

The story of a "good turn" may be taught from "The good Samaritan," but the story-teller must know the background of history, the times concerned, and something of the dangers involved in a trip far from frequented regions in those days. This story teaches concretely the lesson of human kindness, and after the telling of this story you might plan for a week of good turns.

The story of "David and Goliath" teaches the great lesson that faithfulness to small duties prepares one for the larger tasks that lie ahead.

If a good story is well told, moralizing is not necessary; it only weakens the moral influence. The mother who says to the child, "Go out in the sand pile and play awhile," is likely to secure a period of privacy; but if she adds, "I want to be alone a little while," the result will not be the same.

"The normal boy would rather read of a good boy than of a bad one, if the good boy will only do something. He must have action, good or bad," says Warren F. Gregory.

At the age of about eleven or twelve, habits take on a rather permanent form. Stress should therefore be placed on the forming of desired religious habits, such as church going, sharing with others, proper Sabbath observance, Bible study, and loyal support of the Sunday school class. Children of this age desire to see their heroes in action, and they, glory in their acts of bravery or sacrifice.

Judge Porterfield tells us: "Less than five per cent of children who attend Sunday school regularly are ever brought into court." The Sunday schools use the story-telling method in teaching; they have only one hour a week, yet they have this great effect on the lives of boys and girls. What might we not hope for if this method were used every day.

The picture show is only stories told in pictures, and the effect they have upon the lives of the boys and girls is quite deplorable. Why? We do the thing we think about. The great majority of minors who commit crimes, when questioned as to the cause say they were inspired to do these things because of the picture show they attended where the hero was an expert robber, burglar, or thief. If the picture had told a different story, one that would have inspired honesty, truthfulness, self-control, and service to others, the result would have been quite different.

On one matter the teacher must be very clear, that he is to teach not subject matter, stories and such—but boys and girls. The stories are but instruments in his hands by which lessons can be taught; the truths in the story, if properly applied, will stimulate, inspire, and guide young lives.

Walter L. Hervey says, "The children thirst for stories—but has it no significance, and does it not lay a responsibility upon us?"

"Of all things that man can do, the most blessedly fruitful is wise talking to children. This is the supreme art. No sculptor molds a statue so superb as a growing life. No artist has ever painted a picture that compares with a lovely character. The architect cannot rear a building; the poet cannot write an ode; the inventor design a machine that is worthy to stand for an instant beside the completed, living, loving, achieving product of wise teaching," says Amos R. Wells.

"But when that great scorer comes
To write against our name,
He does not write whether we lost or won,
But how we played the game."

A Chapter of the Popol Vuh, the National Book of the Quiches, Descendants of the Ancient Mayas

(This chapter is to be read in Quiche by Senor Flavio Rodas, member of the Society of Geography and History, at the concert organized by the Conservatorio National de Musica in honor of Honorable Walter Williams, Dean of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, U. S. A., and Director of the Historical Society of the State of Missouri.)

The Popol Vuh is the most striking and instructive of the myth records of primitive America. Other legends are as comprehensive in scope, as varied in material, and as dramatic in form; but no other, in anything like the measure of this document, combines with these qualities the element of critical consciousness, giving the flavor of philosophic reflection which lifts the narrative from the level of mere tale-telling into that of literature. Something of this character is clearly due to the fact that it was written down after the introduction of Christianity by an author of authors, professing the new faith; yet it is equally clear to a reader of our day that this is not the whole cause, that there is in the aboriginal material itself such an element of deliberate reflection as appears in the Aztec rituals recorded by Sahgun and in some of the Incaic fragments, though scarcely to be found elsewhere in the New World, at least in the myths as they have been preserved to us.

The work is divided into four parts, consciously literary in arrangement. The first recounts the creation of the earth and of the first peoples, together with the conflicts of the Hero Brothers with Titan-like Earth-giants. The second part depicts the duel of the upper world heroes with the nether-world demonic powers. An elder pair of Hero Brothers are defeated, later to be avenged by the younger Hero Brothers, the slayers of the Earth-giants, who overcome Death in his own lair and by his own wile. This incident of "the harrowing of Hell" belongs in mythic chronology to a cycle of events earlier in part than the giganto machy, and it is obviously for dramatic reasons that the longest book of the Popol Vuh is devoted to it. With the third part the original narrative is resumed, narrating the creation of the ancestors of the present race of men and the rise of the Sun which now rules the world; while the fourth and last part continues the tale, giving myths of cult origins, tribal wars, and finally records of historic rulers, thus satisfying the feeling for consecutiveness and completeness.

The narrative opens:

Admirable is the account of the time in which it came to pass that all was formed in heaven and upon earth, the quartering of their signs, their measure and alignment, and the establishment of parallels to the skies and upon the earth to the four quarters thereof, as was spoken by the Creator and Maker, the Mother, the Father of life and of all existence, that one by whom all move and breathe; father and sustainer of the peace of peoples by whose wisdom was premeditated the excellence of all that doth exist in heavens, upon the earth, in lake and sea.

Lo, all was in suspense, all was calm and silent; all was motionless; all was quiet, and wide was the immensity of the skies.

Lo, the first word and the first discourse. There was not yet a man, not an animal; there were no birds nor fish nor crayfish; there was no wood, no stone, no bog, no ravine, neither vegetation nor marath; only the sky existed.

The face of the earth was not yet to be seen; only the peaceful sea and the expanse of the heavens.

Nothing was yet formed into a body; nothing was joined to another thing; naught held itself poised; there was not a rustle, not a sound beneath the sky. There was naught that stood upright; there were only the quiet waters of the sea, solitary within its bounds; for as yet naught existed.

There were only immobility and silence in the darkness and in the night. Alone was the Creator, the Maker, Tepeu, the Lord and Gucumatz, the Plumed Serpent, those who engender, those who give being alone upon the waters like a growing light.

They are enveloped in green and azure, whence is the name Gucumatz and their being is great wisdom. Lo, how the sky existeth, how the Heart of the sky existeth, for such is the name of God, as He doth name Himself!

It is then that the word came to Tepeu and to Gucumatz, in the shadows and in the night, and spake with Tepeu and with Gucumatz, and they spake and consulted and meditated, and they joined their words and their counsels.

Then light came while they consulted together, and at the moment of dawn man appeared while they planned concerning the production and increase of the groves and of the climbing vines, there in the shade and in the night, through that one who is the Heart of the Sky, whose name is Hurakan.

Then was Gucumatz filled with joy.

Then they came to Tepeu, to Gucumatz and held counsel touching civilized life; how seed should be formed, how light should be produced; how the sustainer and nourisher of all.

"Let it be thus done. Let the waters retire and cease to obstruct to the end that earth exist here, that it harden itself and show its surface, to the end that it be sown, and that the light of day shine in the heavens and upon the earth; for we shall receive neither glory nor honor from all that we have created and formed until human beings exist endowed with sentience" (?) Thus they spake while the earth was formed by them. It is thus, veritably, that creation took place, and the earth existed. "Earth," they said, and immediately it was formed.

Like a fog or a cloud was its formation into the material state, when, like great lobsters, the mountains appeared upon the waters and in an instant there were great mountains.

Only by a marvelous power could have been achieved this their resolution when the mountains and the valleys instantly appeared with the groves of cypress and pine upon them.

Then was Gucumatz filled with joy. "Then art welcome, O Heart of the Sky, O Hurakan, O Streak of Lightning, O Thunderbolt!"

"This that we have created and shaped will have its end," they replied.

And thus first were formed the earth, the mountains, and the plains, and the course of the waters was divided, the rivulets running serpentine among the mountains; it is thus

Kewanee District

GALILEO, ILLINOIS, August 27.—We hesitate to report the news of the Kewanee district reunion, for fear we will not do it justice, owing to the rush of work at this time and our own lack of talent for writing.

From the reports coming from different parts of the district prior to the reunion, the writer had some misgivings as to its success; but can say now that our fears were groundless; and that the 1925 reunion was a decided success in every way, the best reunion I have ever attended, and I believe it was one of the best this district ever held. The register of attendance was larger than last year, and financially we were able to meet all demands. The weather was ideal.

Young people's prayer meetings were held every other morning at half past six and a general prayer meeting every morning at half past eight. A marked degree of the Spirit was present at all these meetings, and the testimonies were of a highly intellectual order, manifesting a sincere spirit of consecration on the part of those testifying. On the last Sunday morning the sacrament was served, the attendance was large, and we had a wonderful meeting. This meeting was in charge of Apostle John F. Garver, Patriarch Ammon White, and District President E. R. Davis. Near the close of the meeting Brother Hopkins of Lyndon was unexpectedly walked into the room. We were glad to have him with us and to hear him bear his testimony, in which he stated that he had not been in an assembly of the Saints for a year, owing to the state of his health. The gift of prophecy manifested itself through Brother Ammon White, in which Brother Hopkins was commenced for his faithfulness, and the need of the world was brought to his attention, that he be able to take his place again in the work he loves. The Saints were also commended for their faithfulness, and told that God's Spirit had been in their midst during the meetings, and would continue to be with them inasmuch as they were faithful. They were admonished to avoid the pleasures of the world.

Sister Clara Winquist of Kewanee, and the work was a success. This was Sister Winquist's first attempt at work of this kind, but she showed herself to be willing and devoted, and did a wonderful work with the children. The activities of the children were: Prayer meetings, industrial work, story-telling, Sunday school, and junior church. Some one of the elders was called in each morning at the eleven o'clock hour to talk to the children, where many beautiful thoughts were brought out. The attendance at the children's tent was from eleven to thirty-four, with an average of eighteen.

The recreational activities each afternoon were under the supervision of Harry Jones, superintendent of the department, and Missionaries O. W. Okerlind and John Stiegel. The games were participated in with a fine spirit of cooperation. The losing sides proved themselves to be good losers and seemed to enjoy the sports as much as the winners. The playtime hour, just before retiring, which was held sometimes in the pavilion, and other times out on the grass under the trees, was participated in with great zest and enjoyment, by both young and old. One of the noticeable activities of this playtime hour was the evening prayer just before breaking up to retire to the tents for the night, when at the call of Harry Jones, the merriment would cease, all would stand with bowed heads, and one of the elders would offer the evening prayer, thanking God for his blessings, and asking for his continued mercy and blessings.

The meals were served cafeteria style, at a reasonable price. Brother Truman Ziegenhorn presided over the dining tent and proved himself to be a very agreeable and efficient chef. In this connection Sister Williams of Buffalo Prairie rendered very faithful and efficient service all through the reunion, and deserves commendation. Many of the Saints were persuaded to work in and around the dining tent and on other parts of the grounds. Their names are too numerous to mention here.

As Sister Denton, our district chorister, could not be present only on Sundays, she asked Sister Naomi Davis to look after that part of the work, so with the assistance of the other musical talent of the district, this part of the reunion need was quite well cared for.

The health of the campers seemed to be excellent. Only two or three children expressed of not feeling well, owing to overindulgence in some things.

Apostle John F. Garver preached several sermons in his characteristic way, in which he enjoyed a great degree of the Spirit of God. He also delivered several lectures on the spiritual program, with much force and plainness, which had a decided effect upon those who heard him. Brother Garver was also the life of the recreational and playtime activities. We noticed that whatever he did he did with all his might. We profited much by having him with us.

Patriarch Ammon White delivered several forceful and very interesting sermons in which he enjoyed a goodly degree of the Spirit. Brother White made many friends during his stay among us, and his interesting stories at the playtime hour were much appreciated.

Brother C. B. Woodstock, general superintendent of Sunday schools, delivered several interesting and instructive lectures on character building and the work of the departments. These talks were much needed, very impressive, and well received, and proved that Brother Woodstock is very efficient as an instructor. We appreciated his stay among us and look forward to his promised return to the district, to visit the branches in the interest of the Sunday school work.

Missionary O. W. Okerlind was always active in some useful way about the camp—in the dining tent to see that the blessing was asked upon the food, to help with the washing and wiping of dishes; in the recreational and playtime activities; taking charge of the young people's prayer meetings, as well as taking an active part in the round table part of the class and lecture periods. He also preached for us a couple of times.

Our young missionary, John Stiegel, was active in many ways about the camp, contributing to the success of the reunion and preaching when called upon.

One of the bishop's agencies was very active among the busiest of the busy ones all about the camp, making several trips to town each day to take visitors to and from the trains, and to purchase supplies for the refreshment stand and the cook tent. He also looked after the tent accommodations of the people. The success of the reunion was due to the help of many whose names cannot be mentioned for lack of space. One of the commendable things of the reunion was the spirit of good fellowship that prevailed. The good Spirit was felt in the first meeting on the opening day and continued to increase throughout the reunion, until it reached its climax in a wonderful outpouring on the last day. On the whole we feel that the reunion was a decided success, and well worth the effort.

One of the wonderful things in the success of the church was never greater. The testimony of the Spirit, and its presence with those who preached to us, and taught us, and bore their testimonies, is strong evidence that God is still with the church and will carry it on to success.

We are thankful for the help of the general church representatives who came among us, and feel that they contributed much to the success of the work in the district. As a result of this association we move forward with a stronger faith and hope in the great cause.

E. R. Davis.

Open-Air Meetings Win Four More

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, August 20.—The Eastern Colorado reunion closed August 16, and all report having had a good spiritual and social time. We were fortunate in having with us such able speakers as Bishop J. A. Koehler, Apostles R. S. Budd and M. A. McConley, and Patriarch U. W. Greene. The sermons of these brothers were indeed food for thought.

Brother Koehler’s lectures on stewardships and the social program of the church were highly appreciated, and many expressed themselves as ready to go on the stewardship plan with us such able speakers as Bishop J. A. Koehler, Apostles J. F. Curtis, Charles Fry, and James E. Bishop. These men were elated with the results of their work and greatly encouraged by the unabated interest. Sermons were delivered in the boys’ tent, and summer school was held in the city hall by Sister O. Proper. Perhaps the Kirtland people will soon see church and school—devotion and learning—conducted in this revered edifice, the purpose for which the Kirtland Temple was erected and dedicated. Devotions were given over entirely to recreational activities under the direction of Brother Joseph Jaques and Sister Lucy Lockhart, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The nearness of Lake Erie made possible recreational diversion and convinced all that this large body of water was not wet enough to dampen the devotion, joy, and ardor of the camp of the Saints. Each evening at seven the Temple was filled with the soul of song—the baton being wielded by Elder T. G. Neville. At a quarter of eight, a preaching service was conducted, at which one of the missionaries preached. The Chagrin River, near the bridge, where many a soul in the “early days” was buried with Christ, became the scene of several baptismal services throughout the reunion.

Kirtland Reunion: Bigger and Better

The Kirtland Reunion Association convened its annual gathering Thursday, August 13, 1925, at Kirtland, Ohio. Elder F. J. Ebeling, chairman of the committee, presided at the opening session.

The committee slogan, “Bigger and better reunions,” bore fruitage, and all concluded that this gathering was the most successful the association has yet held. Many thanks are due the committee, which worked indefatigably throughout the year.

As the reunion progressed accommodation was at a premium, and even our genial and uniring Robert Miller found difficulty in locating the hundreds of Saints and friends. Traffic, too, became so congested at the Temple that the state highway authorities were obliged to issue precautions to ensure safety.

Organization Good; Saints Cooperate

The committee is to be commended for the effective organization developed. Specialization is finding the most efficient men and women for the respective work, developing individual responsibility and initiative, and making for general efficiency and tranquillity. Then, too, the Saints greatly cooperated with the committee—a necessary ingredient to successful reunion work. Even the weather man bespoke his approval and vied with us to make the gathering a success.

We feel especially disposed to mention the excellent service and good cooking at the cafeteria, complaints against which were not breathed. Kirtland is the burying ground and not the health resort of the disgruntled.

Choice Reunion Presidency

Rarely do we find the quorums of the church so well represented in reunion presidency as was the case at this reunion. They were: President Floyd M. McDowell, Apostle J. F. Curtis, Bishop Charles Fry, and High Priest James E. Bishop.

Young and Old Pray, Play, and Study

With eagerness old and young assembled in the “House of the Lord.” At 8 a. m the older in years met in the lower court, while the younger assembled in the “School of the Apostles”—the upper room—to pray. These meetings were fraught with the spirit of devotion, earnestness, contrition, faith, humility, and love—necessary attributes in Zion’s redemption. From 10 a. m. to 12 noon class and lecture periods were conducted by Floyd M. McDowell, J. F. Curtis, Charles Fry, and James E. Bishop. These men were elated with the results of their work and greatly encouraged by the unabated interest. Sermons were delivered in the boys’ tent, and summer school was held in the city hall by Sister O. Proper. Perhaps the Kirtland people will soon see church and school—devotion and learning—conducted in this revered edifice, the purpose for which the Kirtland Temple was erected and dedicated. Devotions were given over entirely to recreational activities under the direction of Brother Joseph Jaques and Sister Lucy Lockhart, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The nearness of Lake Erie made possible recreational diversion and convinced all that this large body of water was not wet enough to dampen the devotion, joy, and ardor of the camp of the Saints. Each evening at seven the Temple was filled with the soul of song—the baton being wielded by Elder T. G. Neville. At a quarter of eight, a preaching service was conducted, at which one of the missionaries preached. The Chagrin River, near the bridge, where many a soul in the “early days” was buried with Christ, became the scene of several baptismal services throughout the reunion.

Pentecost in the Woodland

Friday evening Floyd M. McDowell interviewed Mr. Hare, one of Cleveland’s noted and respected business men, and requested the privilege to hold a young people’s prayer meeting on his magnificent farm—situated two miles south of the Temple. Only those who have visited this property, indulged the elevated view overlooking Temple and lake, can appreciate this rare privilege. Saturday morning two hundred and fifty-four young people drove to the farm and from there hiked to a V-shaped piece of land overshadowed with stately trees and where a small stream trickled northward separating equally the inspiring group. This scene was greatly enhanced by an outpouring of the Spirit of God such as is rarely experienced by any people. The gift of tongues was delivered through Elder O. J. Hawn, of Cincinnati, and interpretation brought joy to every heart.

“The Spirit of God like a fire was burning” and we “stood on holy ground.” Following this wonderful meeting games were indulged, after which the happy band hiked through the woods and down the winding path to the serpentine, gorgeous, and beautiful Penitentiary Gully—the most beautiful portion of which is owned by the mentioned gentleman. Prior to emerging from the ravine the Saints stood beneath the bungalow-cabin and serenaded the family with wholesome songs and spiritual hymns. Thus ended a never-to-be-forgotten morning with the young in prayer and play.

With the young people on this occasion was a Mr. Ellis, grandson of Sidney Rigdon. In the course of the meeting he arose and said: “I came to this gathering out of curiosity to see how you conducted your meetings. I am a grandson of Sidney Rigdon. I see all that you believe in polygamy and other evils. My mind has been changed, and I can say that I have been greatly benefited by coming. When I saw you young people in the Temple and observed your devotion I was made glad. If I am spared I am coming back next year.”

Speakers and Musicians at Best

Kirtland reunion is generally favored with good speakers and musicians, but this was the exception. The following speakers were at their best: President F. M. McDowell, Apostle J. F. Curtis, Bishops Mark H. Siegfried and Charles Fry, Evangelist G. T. Griffiths, High Priest James E. Bishop, Seventy W. C. Neville, Elders O. J. Hawn and P. Weegar. The musical talent included orchestral numbers and vocal quartets, duets, and solos.
"Times" Representatives Visit Kirtland

An editor and photographer from the Cleveland Times visited the reunion and received historical data and took pictures which formed the basis of an article which appeared in a recent issue of their widely circulated paper. Though the article was not altogether in harmony with the development of the Department of Women. Her lectures were very interesting to the audience of women present.

especially is this true in Nauvoo, where the spirit of good cheer and helpfulness! The spirit of those who have gone on still lives in the hearts and homes of many. With sadness each said farewell, and only the fond anticipation of the next reunion stayed the fount of sorrow.

Eyes that had been courted with sadness saw the light of day; hearts that were burdened were made light; souls that were drooping were refreshed; the sleepers were awakened and the weak were made strong by the association of God's people in the house of his choice.

May this gathering be a premonition of the "gathering of the Saints."

WILLIAM PATERSON.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The Nauvoo district reunion opened July 14 with District President A. N. Berve in charge, Elder G. S. Daniel assisting.

We had with us President Elbert A. Smith, who delivered two very fine lectures to the priesthood, and gave a series of missionary sermons; Elder John F. Sheehy, who alternated with President E. A. Smith, taught the young people's class, and was a jolly good fellow on land and in the water, greatly assisting in bringing about a feeling of good fellowship; Elder Charles Putnam, who gave a splendid illustrated lecture on the Book of Mormon and also delivered one of his forceful sermons. E. J. Lenox dropped in for a few days and preached twice. Bishop M. H. Siegfried, on his way home from the East, stopped over a day, but found so many attractions that he stayed four, visiting relatives and friends of bygone days. He delivered a very encouraging sermon, urging the Saints to pay their tithes and offerings and stand by the church in its hour of need. President G. N. Briggs of Graceland College also made a flying visit, calling together the heads of the different branches to counsel with them.

Sister Griffiths was in charge of the children of ages five to twelve, and with songs, stories, games, and handwork, kept them well entertained during the study hour. She was assisted in this work by Sister Ethel McCough.

We were very fortunate in having with us Sister Christy, of the Department of Women. Her lectures were very instructive, especially the one on "The spirit of the home," which was accompanied with a goody degree of the Spirit and sank deep into the hearts of the hearers. It made one ask himself, "What is the spirit of my home?" It is a spirit of cheer and helpfulness! The spirit of those who have gone on still lives in the hearts and homes of others. Especially is this true in Nauvoo, where the spirit of saintliness is still felt by all who visit there.

A terrible storm arose on Tuesday evening during the song service, and the big tent was blown down, but fortunately no one was hurt. All rushed for the protection of the Nauvoo House until the storm had abated. The next day it was necessary to have one of the tent poles mended before services could be continued, but when everything was in readiness, and while the morning prayer meeting was in progress, another gale sprung up, and no time was lost in vacating the tent, which was lowered to prevent further damage. The storm caused considerable damage to trees and crops for miles around, but Nauvoo escaped unharmed.

A delegation of seventy-six young people from Lamoni, under the leadership of Brethren Wilber Prall, David Dower, Willard Hield, and others, arrived in cars on Wednesday afternoon. They were met at the ferry landing by the young people of the camp, and with song and yells were given a rousing welcome. They were directed to the camp ground, and the prayer meeting that had been interrupted by the gale was continued, the Lamoni young people taking an active part. They were then conducted on a historical tour through Nauvoo. The next morning they were up at five to take a trip up the river on the Bald Eagle, which plies between Saint Louis and Fort Madison. A drizzling rain was falling, but this did not dampen the ardor of the young folks, the majority of whom had never been on a boat. Arriving at Fort Madison they just had time for a hurried visit through the big penitentiary before the return trip to Nauvoo and the early morning prayer meeting. Farewell songs were then sung, and the delegation started for Keokuk to visit the dam on the way back to Lamoni. These young people were a source of inspiration to the old and young alike.

The prayer meetings throughout the reunion were of a high order, the gifts were manifested, and all felt blessed and strengthened. Sister Emma Burton related an experience that had been hers since coming here. She arrived several weeks ago with her daughter Addie to visit her relatives and attend the reunion. The day after arriving she was taken seriously ill and lapsed into unconsciousness. Her family gathered about the bedside, thinking her work on earth was finished and she was soon to be called home, but she rallied and although very weak was able to attend several of the prayer meetings, and through her the gift of tongues was manifested on two occasions, restoring the faith of her granddaughter, who had been sorely tried, and who had never heard the gift of tongues before, although her grandmother has had this gift for many years. Sister Burton also related what had been given to her relative to the calling of President Frederick M. Smith, and that had raised her up from the bed of affliction that she might bear one more testimony to the divinity of his calling. She was shown unmistakably that President F. M. Smith was the true prophet of the Lord.

Two early morning prayer meetings were held for the young people, one in a beautiful spot on the bank of the river with Elder John F. Sheehy in charge, and another in the old Homestead in charge of Elder A. N. Berve. There was a very decided manifestation of the gift of tongues, and words of encouragement were given them and to several of their number individually through the gift of prophecy.

At the close of the prayer meeting on Sunday morning, led by President Elbert A. Smith and the priesthood, all marched to the little cemetery on the hill close by, where lay the two Martyrs. All gathered about the graves and listened to the reading of the life of the martyrs by President F. M. Smith, which was then sung by the Burlington quartet. All joined in singing, "I came to the spot where the martyrs lay." The service was then dismissed by Brother Berve.

The recreational features were well cared for by the De-department of Recreation and Expression. Swimming was one of the biggest features of the afternoons, and games were played at the close of the evening services. A wiener roast was given one night, as a marshmallow toast, and on Saturday evening a concert.

The Port Madison Band gave a concert the first Sunday one o'clock, and the following Saturday evening were giving another when word reached them that one of their members, Raymond Melling, while on the way to reunion had met with sudden death in an auto accident. This cast a gloom over the camp. No more concerts were given, and all games were dispensed with.

The commissary was in charge of Brother Elmer Sherman, who worked untiringly in caring for this department of the reunion. Sister Smith of Fort Madison and Sister Langfied of Burnside were the cooks, and meals were served at a reasonable rate on the cafeteria plan in the Nauvoo House. Our missionaries, Charles Putnam and John Sheehy, did not feel above washing dishes, and rendered the women valuable service along this line.

Brother Elbert Smith in closing admonished the Saints to return to their branches carrying with them good cheer and a determination to build up their locals in every possible way. John Sheehy also admonished them to help in every good cause, regardless of creed, and demonstrate by their lives what the gospel was doing for them.

Southwestern, Kansas

The Southwestern Kansas reunion convened at Winfield August 14 to 23. Apostle R. S. Budd, Bishop J. A. Koehler, and Missionary H. V. Minton were in attendance, Bishop Koehler coming the fore part of the reunion, Apostle Budd the latter part, and Brother Minton staying throughout. Brother Koehler delivered a series of lectures and sermons on the subject of stewardship. Brother Budd preached a number of very helpful sermons, linking them up to the Latter Day Saint topic of the day, stewardship. Brother Minton delivered a number of sermons during the meetings, closing the reunion with an interesting illustrated lecture, "Milestones in the Life of Christ." District President T. S. Williams also conducted a class in the study of the principles of the gospel.

While the attendance was small, we are encouraged in that the number attending was larger than that of the two years previous. The prayer meetings, sermons, and lectures were of an excellent quality. With an attendance of sixty-two in our Saturday morning prayer service, fifty-nine testimonies were offered in about thirty minutes. Two young girls were baptized Saturday afternoon.

The Saints voted to have another reunion next year. We are going to make it possible for a larger number of our people to attend next year. This will be possible provided we have the cooperation of all the membership of the district.

Saints of Southwestern Kansas, will you help?

Pottawattamie and Fremont

The reunion of Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts was held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, from August 13 to 23, in a park of the city, the use of which was granted free.

After the organization, which has been previously reported, the regular program for the week days was prayer meetings at nine; religious education at half past ten, in which the reunion was divided into three groups, one for the children, one for the young people, and one for the adults; the adults being further divided into four classes. The boys were cared for by Mabel Rasmussen and Peter Whalley. Recreation was at the intermissions, under the direction of W. E. Brown.

Ten general prayer meetings were held, and two young people's prayer meetings, and they were all good, getting better from the first. The gifts were manifested to the up-lifting of the Saints, showing that God has not cast off his people.

Twenty sermons were heard, and the character of the instruction was very helpful and spiritually healthful.

Of the general ministry there was one of the Presidency, President F. M. Smith, Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael, Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Patriarch Joshua Carlile, Seventies J. D. Stead and William Bath, and High Priests J. A. Hansen, J. F. Minton, B. S. Lambkin, and T. A. Hougas, besides many of the local officials, all working together without contention or conflict. As a result, so far as can at present be heard or seen, the Saints as a rule are greatly helped in a spiritual way, and the work of young and old is taking on new life.

There was a play given, written by Sister J. F. Peterson, from the first chapters of the Book of Mormon, and after four days of study it was pronounced good, and of benefit by all who saw it.

Decision was made to have another reunion in 1926 at Council Bluffs, the place being chosen unanimously. The instruction was generally along the line of Zion's redemption and the work necessary to prepare for it.

J. F. MINTUN, Secretary.
along through Water Witch, over Atlantic Highlands, past Sandy Hook, and out again to the main highway near South Amboy Central Station, the real veritable subterranean traffic. In a string of vehicles of all sorts, which extended for miles, headlight to tail light, that medley of cars “snailied” along. Creep, creep, creep! The monotony was changed about eight or nine o’clock by one of the most terrific electric and rainstorms we have experienced in years. The snail’s pace was kept up through South Amboy and Perth Amboy; then it picked up a bit. Some time after one o’clock in the morning that Forest Hills was reached—more than seven hours consumed in coming the seventy miles or so. It’s an experience quite interesting, but not likely to tempt one to repeat it if it can be avoided. I wish I knew how many times I “went through the gears,” or partially through. Can’t guess; but I know that clutch spring seemed to get constantly stiffer, and even now, four days after, the muscles of my left leg are sore from the exercise. But it was worth it all to see the Jersey coast. Besides, in driving I had some help from the back seat.

It reminded me of the new book of Complete Instructions on How to Drive From the Back Seat, which I saw recently. It was a book of some four pages and its contents comprise two words, “Shut up!” They are complete at that.

The Hudson River is one of the majestic watercourses of the world and has an importance exceeded by few if any. Rising in the Adirondacks in its southward flow, its entire course is marked by a beauty which in places approaches the sublime, while along its shores factories and industries of a wide variety find homes. Its highlands are dotted by beautiful homes and rich estates, while the rich soil of the terrain contiguous to its banks supports a varied agriculture and produces fruits of the finest flavor. It has been closely connected with the historical development of the country, and its towns and cities abound in fine traditions connected with the development of the whole country. In its lower streams it carries on its bosom a water traffic which for variety and quantity is exceeded nowhere. From the days when its floods carried the queer ships of Hudson, sailing craft have found room to maneuver on its surface, and even since the steam-driven paddles of the Clermont splashed its waters, frightening fish and native, those waters have almost constantly been agitated by whirling paddle wheels and propeller blades. All kinds of craft find homes in this great river, from short and dumpy one-man scows up to stately river and sound steamers and majestic ocean liners, not to say secretive submarines and grim war vessels. And the vast current permits heavy draft boats as far up as Albany. So, whether by water craft or land, small craft or large, by train or by motor car, a trip up the Hudson is, as I have said, replete with entrancing vistas and points of keen interest. Yonkers, Tarrytown, West Point, Peekskill, Irvington, Croton—what wealth of historic association and tradition.

So when we planned a trip up the Hudson to Red Hook, to visit the home of an old-time friend of the Smith family (Mrs. Smith’s family), we felt sure every moment would be pleasurable. And so we found it. From Forest Hills by electric train, under East Portland at the wonderful Pennsylvania Station, underground again to Forty-second Street and to the Grand Central, which is connected with the other great lines of the perfect transportation system of the city, we went still underground and beneath the great buildings along Park Avenue, I marveled at the foresight and engineering ability of the New York Central officers; and as we emerged and whirled along Harlem River, I recalled from our college day studies of the history of transportation how the New York Central seized and held by means of the Harlem River the railroad monopoly of Manhattan, made an island by this river. Striking the Hudson at the confluence of it and the Harlem, as the train rapidly ran its sinuous, riparian way, we were entranced by the changing and always beautiful vistas. Three or four of the beautiful “White and Gold” river steamers were making their stately way upstream at a speed which kept them long in view from the train. A fleeting glimpse of the grim walls of Sing Sing as we rushed close past it was followed later by a fine view of West Point across the river and so wonderfully situated for both beauty and labor, and by the sight of the great chain which once spanned the river, perhaps not far from where the new bridge spans the Hudson, recently designed and erected; so severely plain that it has called forth a large amount of criticism, even from such practical journals as the Scientific American.

At Rhinecliff we left the railroad, and by auto went to Rhinebeck, some two miles away. Here at a historic hospice dating back to 1700, I refreshed ourselves and then by auto went to Red Hook, six miles farther on, through a beautiful and quiet rural community.

We soon found the home of the friend we were looking for—Mr. John Bain, a man of near seventy, but whose clear, frank, blue eyes reflected a life of clean living, and whose activity as a merchant up to date bespeaks his useful habits and tendencies. His home is on a three-acre plot. And what a plot it is! Trees and shrubs, flowers and vegetables, vines and plants of almost every kind which the climate will support, testified to the horticultural ability and love of the beautiful of its owner, while cats and chickens of remarkable tameness and absence of fear of man bespoke the kindly disposition of the master.

It was many years ago that I met Mr. Bain, once, so Mrs. Smith did most of the visiting, while I listened to recollection of Little Sioux and Harrison County running back many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Bain, with her visiting sister, Mrs. O’Dell, gave us a fine welcome, and the two or three hours of visit were all too short; but with reservations for the next day, homeward bound, we must needs get back to New York. So other good-bys, and we were off, back across the country to Rhinecliff, down the wonderful river to the equally wonderful city of New York, and to our temporary home in Forest Hills.

The next day we left Forest Hills, appreciative of the warm hospitality of Brother and Sister Nichols, homeward bound, over the Lackawanna Railroad and the Nickel Plate Road, a trip which I have had occasion to make many times. And usually I have spent the time in writing. We are nearing Chicago, and, on time, we expect to make connections for Kansas City and be home to-morrow morning.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Sherrill, New York.

August 25.—Our pastor has of necessity been away several Sundays, and Brother Floyd Rathbun, now living in Morrisville, has preached.

Brother George W. Robley, returning from General Conference, stopped in Sherrill several days, being made comfortable at the Comfort home. Recently his daughter Lillian has made Sherrill Saints a visit. Brother Robley’s former labor in this district endeared him to the Saints here.

The 12th of March a beef steak supper was held at the Montgomery home, which was quite well patronized.

The extra district conference, held in Buffalo the 14th and 15th of March, Sherrill was unable to attend, but we heard fine reports from it, one item being that of the baptism of Sister Elsie Elms, whom we mentioned in our last letter as the one who moved in the district in the spring. She was connected with a number of different camps, and belonged to us as a people. Elsie takes her covenant seriously.

When our regular June conference came (the last of May), earlier than usual by a week in order to have with us President Elbert A. Smith, Sister Elsie gave up a trip to Malone, New York, to be with us. Brother Smith mentioned how he enjoyed hearing her sing, “Israel, awake from thy long, silent slumber.” She repeated it at the close of his Sunday evening sermon, at the request of the church, who appreciated Brother Smith’s presence with us and his timely remarks and sermons. There was a good spirit throughout. Brother Elliot, our new missionary, was there and seemed full of ambition for the work of the New York District. He should eventually be able to see results of labor he plans to perform. Brother George Landes and several of the ladies and young people furnished excellent meals at reasonable cost in church basement, thus enabling us all to keep together. A fine delegation from Toronto was over. Those representing Sherrill returned encouraged and feeling they would like to have the next district conference, to be held in October. Come one, come all—17th and 18th of October.

On Good Friday, April 10, Elder Mesle, by invitation of our Episcopal rector, spoke in the Episcopal Church with the other ministers on the last words of Christ, and his talk was very favorably commented on.

Easter exercises were held in Syracuse jointly, a sermon by Brother Mesle being part of the program.

Syracuse was invited down to Sherrill for Children's Day. The few who came were appreciated and welcome.

On May 3, a beautiful Sunday morning; our young brother, Floyd Whitehead, from East Syracuse, was married in our living room to a very sweet girl of the same city, two friends from there accompanying them.

On Tuesday, May 5, Brother and Sister O. L. Newcombe and E. L. Traver, Jr., arrived in Sherrill, westward bound. Later while visiting Syracuse Saints, Brother Newcombe met with an accident, as a result of which all five grown-ups were badly shaken up, bruised, and some bones broken. Brother Traver was still in Sherrill at time of accident and later returned to Boston. Brother Newcombe however had no permanent injury and was not indefinitely delay his trip west. When all were on the road to recovery, he purchased another car, and he and Sister Newcombe went on to Nauvoo. We hope none will be permanently disabled.

On May 11 we had a very suitable program for Mothers' Day at close of Sunday school, taking the place of regular precepting service.

Never having owned a piano for the church, an extra effort was made, and our committee who took it in hand procured a fairly good second-hand piano, and used it for the first time for Children's Day exercises. Better still, we had Brother A. E. Stone with us, who gave us a sermon in the morning for the program. In the evening, as previously agreed, we went to hear the baccalaureate sermon at the high school auditorium. Brother Stone preached for us again before he left. We hope he isn't so long coming next time.

When business took Brother Mesle to Montreal the last of June and first of July, we visited Malone both going and coming, and on Sunday evening he spoke to a group of Saints and friends at Sister Effie McDonald's home. We wish we were there to gather around the table of the Sherrill Branch and seem to thoroughly appreciate hearing the word of God preached. We came home via the Adirondacks through the northern part of the State to see Brother James Breegle and wife. Brother James surprised us with a generous payment on our little Sherrill church building, as well as paying some tithing to the Bishop's agent.

Sherrill boasts of a fine choral society, led by a professor of music from Utica who directs a like society there. A joint sacred concert was held in Sherrill in June, and by request of the society Brother Mesle gave a talk on music at close of the recital, being also in charge of the whole service. Three of our Latter Day Saints are singing in the chorus.

A week ago Sunday, August 16, after giving up a pilgrim-age to Palmyra where Brother Mesle was to preach (some being unable to go), two carloads went to Fulton, where he preached for his own crowd mainly, Brother Davis and two sisters only being out. We returned in time for evening service here.

This letter was delayed by a trip east to the Southern New England reunion, which was enjoyed immensely. With President Smith and Brethren Carmichael and Siegfried present, much was accomplished toward a better understanding of the church program. The Saints we believe want nothing but the truth, and are generally open minded. We need to have the subject of stewardship for breakfast, dinner, and supper as it were, and learn to act on it. We feel the church will go forward at a quick pace as the Saints move out on this line,

Last Saturday, the 22d, according to plans, we went to the Skanenadou & Elms Farm, by invitation of Sister Elsie, for our Sunday school picnic. Syracuse as well as Sherrill was pretty well represented. We went there via Manlius and Pompey Centre from Syracuse. A fine location, a beautiful day, a majority being young people made for fun, a hostess abounding in hospitality—all made for a splendid time. Forty-three sat down to dinner. Music, games, races, quizzes, etc., were in order.

We forgot to mention that on the 19th of March our pastor was surprised by a party of Saints and friends who came in on him and during the evening presented him with a hand-some, a majority being young people in turn, the Comforts and Brother Montgomery have been surprised. Brother Montgomery has been doing outside work by advice of a physician the last few weeks. Last Friday evening, or one week ago, Sister Agnes Comfort, Brother Floyd Rathbun, and Mr. George Hatch, and myself celebrated our birthdays together here at the Mesle home, with our immediate families present. Chats, music, and refreshments were enjoyed.

Wish we could report bigger, better things from Sherrill, but we hope for more enthusiasm, more personal righteousness, and greater attainments.

Are There Many Like This?

[Here is a letter from an isolated Saint who has been able to retain a strong interest in the developments within the church. We venture the opinion that she has been a consistent reader of the church papers.—Editors.]

Permit me to say that we are very much pleased with the stewardship plan as presented by Bishop Carmichael in the Herald. The more we study it, the more perfect and desirable it seems. I have longed for just such a condition ever since coming into the church twenty-eight years ago and sincerely hope that my name may be placed on the list of stewards.

As we are among the isolated, without the privilege of attending any services at all, it might not be out of order to add that an elder would be very much appreciated. We have never had a pastor in this mission, and many of the Saints that were baptized by the missionaries have been left without any encouragement for years. Being so neglected, some have entirely lost interest. Many of them do not take the church papers so do not know what is going on.

If an elder should come this way, we would like to have him make his home with us. We would help all we could in finding the members or in any other way possible.

BAYARD, NEBRASKA. MRS. J. C. HANSON.

Florida Saints Getting Better Organization

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.—Brother W. B. Paul, of Independence, has been visiting the Saints of Pensacola Branch and gave us some very interesting talks. His gentle, quiet way of telling the gospel and what it has done for him was much appreciated. He also spoke of the real value the church papers are to the Saints. Surely he will do much good in helping to increase the subscriptions to the Herald and other church papers. Brother Paul was shown many places of interest, and we believe he goes from our midst as a booster for our work here as well as our beautiful city. We only wish his visit could have been prolonged.

We were sorry to see Sister Mearl Blue and her husband go away. He was transferred from the naval air station of Pensacola to Portsmouth, Virginia. We will miss them and hope they may soon return.

On August 23 the Young People's Bible Class was organized, and gave us some very interesting talks. Others have promised to come. They are planning many nice things to have in the near future, and we are sure they will prove to be real loyal Latter Day Saints.

Chicken gumbo, ice cream, and cake were served under the large oaks at the church recently, and nearly twenty-five dollars was realized, which goes to help finish painting the church.

Attendance is gradually increasing. Others are coming in from different parts of the State, having been isolated from church work, and express themselves as being greatly pleased. The Wednesday night prayer service is a source of pleasure and help to the Saints, and we are made glad to see the young people arise and bear their testimonies. Many are the sincere prayers offered to our Father in heaven, that his people may live in unity and peace, that the great ship of Zion may sail onward.

We are expecting District President A. D. McCall to be with us next Sunday.

Cherokee, Iowa

August 24.—During July and August the attendance at services has been very irregular—some Sundays good and others very poor. Now that vacation time is about over we hope to see an improvement in all departments.

Pastor A. R. Crippen and family spent their vacation at his old home in Lanark, Illinois. Brother Archie Walker spent a few days with Saints at Clitherall, Minnesota. Harold Reeder just returned from a trip to Lanark and Mount Carroll, Illinois.

Albert Haynes is superintendent of the Christmas offering and is working hard for its success.

Christmas offering in the Sunday school is growing steadily. One gold button member is reported, also several blue ones. Albert Haynes is superintendent of the Christmas offering and is working hard for its success.

The Sunday school picnic was held the evening of August 13 at Riverside Park. The Saints met in the afternoon, and supper was served in the evening. Plenty of ice cream and lemonade were provided with the bounteous supper. All report a good time, about seventy in attendance.

This branch seems to be on the upward road and ready to improve in the Master's work. The local treasurer reports finances in better condition than they have been for a long time. Wednesday night prayer services is a source of much pleasure and help to the Saints, and we are made glad to see the young people arise and bear their testimonies. Many are the sincere prayers offered to our Father in heaven, that his people may live in unity and peace, that the great ship of Zion may sail onward.

We are expecting District President A. D. McCall to be with us next Sunday.

Saint Marys, Ohio

August 23.—The Saints here are pressing onward. The local brethren fill appointments in the branch services, but they do not get the support that is due them although they have done their best. They have made wonderful progress since they entered into the work, yet it is discouraging to them to see people leave the room after Sunday school. While some have stated that they would rather have six honest-hearted listeners than a houseful of uninterested people, still the presence of the Saints gives encouragement to the speakers.

When the work was opened up in the hall owned by Brother Mets, it would hardly accommodate the crowds. From the lips of O. J. Hawn and E. L. Ulrich we listened to the angel message. A few have lingered on and hope to reach the goal, but this may be accomplished only through an earnest effort. Sacramental services are fairly well attended, and good spiritual meetings are enjoyed. The Religious held on Friday night has proved interesting, especially since we have with us Brother and Sister I. O. Robinson, who expect to make this their home for some time. Brother Robinson is well versed on the Book of Mormon and is able to present the knowledge he has gained. With them at present are their son and his wife and baby, and they also are excellent workers.

We wish to express our appreciation of the recent visit of Brother and Sister Rowe, who were on their way to Kirtland reunion. Brother Rowe preached several good sermons, and Sister Rowe gave some excellent short talks. Brother Clark also visited us one evening in August, and although his presence was known very few came out to hear his forcible sermon on stewardship. We have also been visited by Brother and Sister Hawn, and Brother Hawn had a good audience to hear his sermon on stewardship. They, too, were on their way to the Kirtland reunion.

Our Christmas offering goal has been set at $75—$25 more than last year. The plan of giving buttons is working fine, and the Christmas offering fund is growing.

One-Day Meetings at Delhi

SAINT THOMAS, ONTARIO.—Ideal conditions greeted the Saints and their friends as they met at the little church in the wildwood, made dear by many wonderful experiences in times past, for their one-day meeting.

Prayer service was held at nine o'clock in charge of Bishop J. L. Burger, and very little time was lost, especially when the Saints were reminded by Elder J. Winegarden during his testimony, of the importance of earnest continuation without reserve in order to receive the blessings from the Giver of all good.

Two of the brethren were called to the priesthood through Bishop Burger, Wilfred Smith of Stratford to the office of priest, and Will Summers to the office of deacon. A few moments later, as Elder G. C. Tomlinson, jr., was bearing his testimony, he turned to the priesthood with words of comfort through the Spirit, admonishing them to heed and study the fundamentals of Zion, that great blessings and knowledge should come to them to encourage, and those whom they should teach would be stimulated to seek more earnestly to understand the teachings as set forth by the church for the establishment of Zion. Testimony and song were of a high order, and many earnest plats were made for further light and knowledge, while love for the work was retold with fervor and joy.

Brother Burger occupied at eleven o'clock, taking for his subject, "Who is my neighbor?" It was handled in a wonderful manner, and his answer might be summed up in the words: "The world that needs a friend is my neighbor." Many nonmembers were present, and they expressed pleasure.
Dinner was served at half past twelve, a veritable feast. But behind the feast we saw a devoted people sacrificing to make other Saints happy. The trouble and anxiety seemed nothing so long as every child of God could enjoy the repast, and the glory of God's handiwork could be seen in the careful and systematic preparation. One hundred and five were fed at the first sitting, then almost as many more, before those who had prepared the food served themselves. Delhi Branch is to be complimented on this achievement.

In the afternoon Elder H. A. Koehler of the seventies occupied. He used as his subject, “Am I my brother’s keeper?” There is greater responsibility resting upon us since we heard that sermon. District President G. C. Tomlinson occupied at night, but owing to distance and darkness some were not permitted to remain for that service.

The lessons of the day might be summed up as follows: If we wish the church to don her beautiful garments, selfish individual ambitions must be replaced by altruism. Our first thoughts should be to the forwarding of the cause of Christ, in advancing stewardships, and other important factors that confront us as a church.

O the joy, the love of greeting
Saints that gathered on the award,
At the Delhi one-day meeting,
Where we sought to worship God.

At the church that’s in the wildwood,
Throve our happy praises rose.
Testimonies borne by all could
Cheer the soul, and bring repose.

Conscious of the Spirit’s presence,
Softening every saintly heart,
Filling souls with effervescence
Of the Grace it did impart.

Yes, our hearts rejoiced with gladness,
And our souls were filled with love.
Tears fell fast, but not with sadness,
Brought by Grace from God above.

Then we yearned to be like Jesus,
Spread abroad peace along life’s way.
Acts of love will always please us,
Let us learn them, day by day.

Saints Are Encouraged by Good Meetings

MALLARD, IOWA, August 20.—The Saints are striving to keep the work going, and results during the hot, dry weather are encouraging.

Brother T. M. Mussell was here for two weeks the latter part of July, but as the farmers were busy with harvest no attempt was made to hold meetings during the week. An all-day meeting was held July 26 with Sunday school at ten, preaching by Brother Mussell at eleven, and a picnic dinner at Silver Lake. At three o’clock Brother Mussell baptized three children. A number of nonmembers were present at the baptismal service and at the confirmation service held in the evening.

Brother and Sister Clarence Cosner and their three children of Centerville; Brother and Sister McKinn and children of Emmetsburg; and Mrs. Charles Stafford and her five children, of Alpha, Minnesota, were visitors at the services July 26. The baby of Brother and Sister McKinn was blessed at the morning service.

Brother and Sister E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, Iowa, were with us August 9 and Brother Edwards preached in the evening. Brother and Sister Anderson, formerly of Des Moines but now of Emmetsburg, also met with us and promised to attend our services regularly.

We have not missed a service all summer, regardless of the hot weather. As our members are mostly farmers, we feel we are doing well to keep up interest in this manner. We are anxious to see this great work move forward and believe the Saints have a great desire to do all they can to push God’s work along.

Enjoy the “Herald”

We wish to express our appreciation of the many good articles we find in the Herald pages, and especially for the article by Bishop A. Carmichael on stewardship and our social program. Each issue is better than the last.

In regard to the account of Elder William Sparogy’s life, which appeared in the issue of August 19, I am sure it was inspiring to all. We should have more of such characters to help build up Zion. As we read we realized that there must be many in Israel that have not bowed the knee to Baal, and it gives us courage to press onward in the great cause, as no doubt Elias felt when the Lord made known to him that seven thousand had not bowed the knee to the image. We do not feel that any rule was broken by publishing the account, but that the right should be reserved to publish what the editors deem best.

Owen Sound Through American Eyes

I arrived in the Owen Sound District, situated in northwestern Ontario, around the east and north of Lake Huron, late in May. The weather was then cold for a Missourian, but I was informed that several weeks of pleasant weather had been enjoyed earlier in the season. My first impressions were not very favorable. Almost June and yet no summer. It reminded me of a question asked of the natives of Duluth, Minnesota, as to the summers, and the answer was that they always celebrated that day. I felt as if I wanted to be much unlike Pat O’Connor, who was standing on the veranda when one of the neighbors said, “I see, Pat, that you are shaving on the outside to-day.” He replied: “Sure I am shaving on the outside. Did you think I was fur-r-r lined?” I was thinking to be fur lined would be a good thing for this country, but I have had a complete conversion. It is a country of the most beautiful landscape, and the summer climate is almost ideal. From the number of tourists and tourists’ camps I think every family in the northeast quarter of the United States, that can leave home, spends its summers over here and returns from year to year. To summer once in this country is to wish every year to return. Many tourists from the States have their summer dwellings here, and most of Ontario seems to spend her vacation on the lake shores.

The hundreds of miles of shore line on beautiful Lake Huron and the rugged banks of Georgian Bay with its cedars and pine, together with beech, hard maple, linden, and butternut, make ideal camping places. The prevailing tree is what we call in the States the arbor vitae, but here is called the cedar. Formerly this country was covered everywhere with enormous cedar of enormous size. Even yet after two hundred years of occupation, the rocky land and swampy places abound with almost impenetrable forests of it. Rather than destroy these forests to no purpose, the early settlers hit upon the happy idea of using the best of it for splendid lumber, shipping it to New York and the Mother Country, and for establishing immense furniture factories, many of which still exist, and using the poorer stuff for burning brick and lime. Every few miles there are yet ruins of old brick yards and abandoned lime kilns. Consequently it is a country of brick houses. A frame house is the exception, and most of them are of recent construction. Barns are of enormous size, and there are one or two on every farm.

Formerly farms were small, being divided among the second generation and subdivided among the third. The people were happy and contented in their wonderful country and did not care to migrate, but the country became too small.
and the western and southwestern fever became contagious. The building up of the West was at the expense of the East. The most successful farmers bought out the others, until now abandoned houses may be seen here and there in the new villages, turned to by a dozen farms being merged into one. On account of the long, hard winters, a big barn is a necessity. Having abundant material, they stopped at nothing until their heart's desire was obtained with regard to a barn. It is more a country of brick houses than of big barns with their great cedar beams and frames and with unpainted cedar or pine sides. Most of them are bank barns, with stone basements for the stock, and with all the grain and hay and the machinery above. Root crops are here what corn is in the States, so that most barns have a root house in the bank, opening into the basement. All the chores are thus done under cover and out of the cold. The western boys may well envy the Canadian chores.

Fields are small, ten to twenty acres no matter how large the farm, and each one well fenced and well tilled. Most of the fences are of the worm rail style or other rail kind, being built of cedar or tamarack of great length. More recent fences are of woven wire with cement corners. A great many farms have a few acres of sugar bush, and maple syrup is a daily luxury. In such a rugged country of copses of trees, almost surrounded by the largest lakes on earth, it may readily be seen that the brooks, rivers, and rille tumble over numerous cascades and waterfalls, ending at Niagara, the king of them all. In the lakes, bays, and est and cleanest of est and most beautiful fresh water beach in America.

The Nottawassaga River enters the Nottawassaga Bay at the east end of Nottawassaga Beach, beyond which no decent man ever goes. It is a wilderness of wickedness, kept quite well in check, however, by the efficient Canadian police.

A Wonderful Beach

I must not fail to mention Nottawassaga Beach, the largest and most beautiful fresh water beach in America, if indeed it does not surpass the salt water beaches of Florida and California. Many tourists here claim that such is the case. The water gradually deepens for a quarter of a mile before one reaches the depth of six feet, making it a safe and ideal place for children, while at a depth of three feet the young folks play water foot-ball, using a rubber inflated ball a foot or so in diameter, and still further out the bathers, and yet further the boating and boat races. There is not a stone or snag, and no mud, either below water or on the shore. Those who desire a beach have only to go inshore a half mile where the river parallels the lake shore for miles.

The Nottawassaga River enters the Nottawassaga Bay at the east end of Nottawassaga Beach, beyond which no decent man ever goes. It is a wilderness of wickedness, kept quite well in check, however, by the efficient Canadian police.

A Relic of the War of 1812

A half mile up this river a British gunboat, during the war of 1812, was furnishing supplies to their Indian allies. Two United States war craft discovered them and fired on the gunboat and the blockhouse beyond. By quick work the supplies were gotten ashore and distributed among the Indians, and the boat set on fire to prevent its capture. Burning to the water's edge, the hull sank in the river and was forgotten, only to be discovered this summer after nearly a hundred and twenty-five years. Some of the Saints, myself among the rest, at a Sunday school picnic went to see the old relics and took an excursion on a pleasure yacht to see the old war craft. The papers here have been filled with the account, and it has furnished the meat for the summer's conversation, especially if there is an American around, and they do not fail to mention that the two American boats were followed a hundred and fifty miles and destroyed.

A More Secluded Place of Beauty

West of Nottawassaga Beach separated by a mile or so of impassable shore line and rocky waters extending far out into the lake, is a smaller beach of only a few miles in extent, beautiful as the one I have described, where some of the Saints have purchased lots for summer homes where they offer for tent meetings next summer, or for a reunion yet in the making. The Saints throughout Ontario could very profitably spend their next summer's vacation at this secluded beach. Many hundreds from the States who want to spend their summer away from the sweltering heat could also camp here and assist in and enjoy the tent services, for we expect to have the tent there (reunion or no reunion) during the camping season. Begin to arrange for it now. This ought to be the most popular reunion in the Dominion, if not of the whole church, owing to the beautiful location and the mild summer weather. Anyone desiring to make arrangements for grounds ought to write early to Brother Robert Harrison, at Cremore, Ontario. Everyone can get away and this should include many from the States as far away as Los Angeles or Florida.

A Land of Honey

Only a few miles from the proposed reunion grounds lives Brother Harrison, who already this year has taken six tons of honey and expects two more. Sister Dayton, a little further away, expects five or six tons, and Brother Brown, president of the Ravenna Branch, where the district tent is now located, expects to out-honey them all. This is one of the greatest honey countries in the world. I cannot imagine what the bees want, as they want to be in the States when the very best lies here. But the country has never been advertised. If it had been it would now be one vast tourist camp. It did get some adverse advertising, however, through the divorce cases of Fifi Stillman.

As for church news, I will write of that later. Suffice it for the present to say that I have enjoyed myself hugely among the Saints, who have treated me royally. While rejoicing at the wonders of nature, I have none the less appreciated the wonders of the gospel. Indeed one enhances the other. I am delighted with the country and the Saints as a rule. The gospel has a good hold on many, and most of the nonmembers know our position. Prejudice runs high in places, but we have many friends. The union of the Methodist and Presbyterians has been discouraged and disgusted many, and they are wondering where to find a church home. We often see their earnest countenances in our congregations. Among the Saints no troubles are being aired and no rumors indulged in. Neither are any bearing false witness against their neighbor. I have been greatly blessed while preaching, and there are more calls than I can fill. Little sawmills dot the countryside everywhere, and at one of these, near Ravenna, the district tent is located. Brethren Grant St. John and R. C. Russell are with me. Brother St. John has a double stock of witty jokes. His latest is of a clergyman who was teaching a class of boys in Sunday school. The lesson was about the sheep and shepherd. The preacher took occasion to remark that the language was spiritual and figurative, and represented the church and the members, and the preachers as the shepherds who cared for, fed, and led the sheep. "And now, boys," said he, "what does the shepherd do for the sheep?" "He shears them, sir," remarked an observing boy.

M. J. Chapman, in renewing his subscription for the Herald, says he is ninety-one years old, and although he has been in poor health, he feels that he is doing well considering his age. He feels that he has much to be thankful for.
Independence

Stone Church

Sunday, August 30, the Saints of Independence were privileged to enjoy a most inspiring sermon, delivered by Doctor G. Leonard Harrington. As a text he used the passage from Proverbs 4: 28: "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." He interpreted heart to mean the psychic side of the individual and showed how the whole life of a person is changed when proper consideration is not given to this phase of development, especially in childhood. The clearness and practicality of the address held the undivided attention of the audience throughout the hour. The sermon was preceded by two musical numbers: a mandolin and guitar duet by Tycho Gerdin and Floyd Luttrell, and a vocal solo, "The slave song," sung by Miss Vivian Latta.

Last Wednesday night the young people in Zion held a union social service in the Stone Church basement. The room was quite crowded before eight o'clock. An hour was given to a very spiritual prayer and testimony service, followed by a musical program which was entered into with equal enthusiasm. The meeting was occasioned by the departure of Elder J. F. Martin, who has been with us several weeks.

The Saints of Independence were pleased to meet and visit with Brother Charles Wicks, Sister Jessie Wicks, and their two sons, Morgan and Walter, who were returning to their home in Kingfisher, Oklahoma. With them was Chief Turkey Legs, a true son of the Cherokee nation. He is very much interested in our gospel, and we hope he will soon be able to direct his people as one of our brethren. Brother Wicks and family have been with 101 Ranch Show, but he headed the call to return to his people with the restored gospel. Surely success will follow a willing service.

Reports last week to Brother Miller's office show several of the groups are functioning one hundred per cent as far as priesthood activities are concerned. Group 6 had one elder, one priest, one teacher, and one deacon present Wednesday evening. Group 14 also reported they had a full attendance of the priesthood.

There was a quiet little wedding at the home of Pastor C. Ed. Miller Wednesday evening when he united in marriage Mr. John Pendleton and Sister Martha Logsdon, daughter of Brother Alvin Logsdon of North Union Street.

Brother Mark White, wholesale candy dealer, has beautified the corner of West Maple and North River Boulevard by erecting there one of Independence's most beautiful homes.

President E. A. Smith was back in the office Saturday but left for Woodbine reunion Saturday evening. Apostle Frank Edwards left Saturday for Stewartville.

Services will commence on the Campus Sunday evening, September 6, and will continue every evening (except Saturday evening) for two weeks, weather permitting. Apostles J. F. Curtis and M. A. McConley will be the speakers. A half hour song service will begin at half past seven.

Another sunshiny Sabbath made a good attendance at the Campus service possible. A slight shower in the afternoon cooled the air so the Campus service was well attended. Elder W. D. Tordoff, who was a missionary to the Isle of Pines and the Cayman Islands, was the speaker. His earnest effort was very favorably commented upon. The sermon was along missionary gospel lines. The song service consisted of two numbers by a quartet composed of Paul Craig, George Anway, Mrs. Israel Smith, and Mrs. S. A. Burgess. There were three splendid numbers by the band. There was also congregational singing directed by Paul Craig.

The Department of Women will hold their regular monthly open meeting in the basement of the Stone Church at half past two Friday afternoon, September 4. Mrs. R. D. Etzenberger, president of the Parent-Teacher Council, will have charge of the program and will have many interesting things to tell. There will be special musical numbers. At four o'clock will be held a meeting of the local W. C. T. U.

Saturday night a special collection was taken at the picture show on the Campus to meet extraordinary expenses incident to running the grounds as a park and playground. This was advertised as a Dollar Night, and everyone was urged to contribute a dollar. The collection totaled $336.70.

"The results of this effort to place the Campus on a self-supporting basis for this summer are keenly disappointing to the committee," said Howard W. Harder, chairman. "An analysis of the figures shows that less than seven per cent of the crowd of more than five thousand persons present could have given a dollar each. The percentage actually runs much smaller, since over $100 of the amount collected was in quarters, dimes, and nickels."

Though the committee is disappointed in this effort, they report that they are not discouraged with the entire proposition, and will try again to raise enough to pay the expenses which have been incurred this summer in providing for the comfort of the people. There is also a large item to be considered in the nature of taxes. Brother Harder says he cannot believe that the people are unappreciative of the Campus, and he thinks the negligence of the people must be charged to thoughtlessness. He says that the committee has long been urged to fence in the seats and make a small charge for them, but the proposition has each time been voted down, the members believing that many who could not pay even a small sum would thus be kept out of the seats and thus the very people who could not afford any other means of recreation. The plan always has been to encourage those who can to pay, and provide clean, wholesome entertainment for all. However, it will be necessary to make a small charge next year if better response to Campus needs is not made this fall.

Second Church

A series of meetings is being conducted in Group 17 during the evenings of this week, Elder W. I. Fligg being the speaker, and the location is the lawn back of the home of Brother and Sister Charles Fry on West Hayward.

The musical program at Religious Friday evening was successful, quite a number of visitors being attracted by it.

An instructive meeting of the young people was held Sunday morning at eight o'clock, but the attendance was noticeably smaller than normal.

Elder A. K. Dilley was the speaker Sunday morning, delivering an instructive, inspiring sermon on the subject of giving, to the joy of an attentive audience.

The priesthood of the section met at three o'clock in the afternoon, just following the afternoon prayer meeting which is held regularly from two until three. The priesthood were in session for more than two hours, considering a suggested program of activity for the coming four months, but were unable to arrive at a decision.

Sister Clara Curtis took the choir to Lees Summit Sunday evening to furnish the music for the opening session of a series of tent meetings to be held in the heart of town, the preaching being by Elder R. D. Weaver.

Walnut Park

The preaching Sunday was by Brother Glenn Smith at eleven o'clock on Zion's problems. A quartet furnished two appropriate songs for this service, both given to Brother Joseph Luff by the Spirit. Those emphasized the points made by the speaker, and with other efforts that are being made the Saints are being strengthened in faith and knowledge concerning their work as stewards in Zion.

The Walnut Park choir is now working on a Thanksgiving cantata, and the regular Christmas cantata will not be given this year. A special day of music is arranged for about the middle of September. The entire day will carry the theme of music. There will be lectures, round tables, and in the evening an excellent program.

Elder F. R. Schafer has undergone a serious operation in the Sanitarium, but having received a special blessing through administration, he is now at home, and his early recovery is hoped for.
The Saints' Herald for September 2, 1925

I formed the acquaintance of a number of Saints and renewed my acquaintance with others whom I had not seen for years. It was my first visit to Toronto and Brethren Prentice, Doctor Weaver, and Richardson did all within their power to make my sojourn among them pleasant and interesting. I visited the Saints' church and also the church as established by R. C. Evans, which latter church was under repair. I was informed that just previous to my getting there about 125 to 150 of his followers had withdrawn from his church, which augurs well for the statement that any building built upon a sand foundation will fall in a wise of time. This should be a warning to other men who are trying to establish churches of their own, that the same consequences will befal them. No faction will stand that has been brought into existence because the leaders are not subject to the majority rule and pull away to injure some one else, and thereby only succeed in injuring themselves as well as those who accompany them, bringing destruction to themselves and all those who follow their counsel.

I wish to call attention at this juncture to some such factions that came into existence during my membership of some sixty years. Men who held prominent positions in the church when first I started out in the ministry got the nonsensical idea into their heads that if they withdrew their support from the church, the church would soon go down, but instead of the church going down they have gone down, and very few people in the church to-day know that such men existed. Some of the prominent men of the day was Joseph the Martyr, and David Whitmer organized a church. Elder Charles Wicks, who at one time was a bright, capable young man, joined Ebenezer Robinson with a few others, and they were going to make the new church a monster affair in the world and thought that the Reorganization would go flat once they got started with their church, but their organization did not last very long; it soon faded away.

Jason W. Briggs, an apostle and president of the quorum; Zenos H. Gurley, an apostle; his brother, Ed. Gurley, a very prominent minister, all withdrew from the church because the church would not cater to their views and do as they thought ought to be done. How many people to-day know that such men ever existed within the church?

Davis H. Bays, a seventy and one of the most eloquent preachers I have had left the church and published a book against it. How many people to-day are acquainted with him and his work?

Joseph A. Crawford, one of our best preachers, and with whom I at one time traveled, and who preached the funeral sermon of Emma Smith, left the church and took a crowd of followers with him; he died cursing God.

Robert Ware, a missionary for some time, also left the church and spent his time in opposing its work. Who in the church to-day knows of him?

W. E. LaRue also left the church and published a book against it.

I could name many others who followed the example of these men, and what have they accomplished by so doing, either for themselves or others? The fact of the matter is that when they left the church what good did they draw from their church?

What of R. C. Evans and the crowd that followed him? It is a mistake to think for a moment that if we withdraw from the Church of Jesus Christ the church is going to go to ruin. God has decreed that the church, or his kingdom upon earth, shall stand forever and never again be drawn from his church, which augurs well for the statement that any building built upon a sand foundation will fall in a wise of time. This should be a warning to other men who are trying to establish churches of their own, that the same consequences will befal them. No faction will stand that has been brought into existence because the leaders are not subject to the majority rule and pull away to injure some one else, and thereby only succeed in injuring themselves as well as those who accompany them, bringing destruction to themselves and all those who follow their counsel.

A Tour of Reunions in the East

After six weeks of absence, attending reunions and in other church work, I have returned to the old historic spot, Nauvoo.

The reunion here closed last Sunday, and all who attended report that it was a success. It was my privilege to attend the Toronto district reunion at Woodbridge for a few days, which is located about twenty miles from Toronto. Here we met President Smith and his counselor, F. M. McDowell; the Presiding Bishop of the church, Albert Carmichael; Brother Curtis, of the Twelve; the two Brethren Pycock, Arthur Koehler, John Shields, all of those of the general ministry, besides many of the local ministry.

The reunion grounds are beautifully situated; the attendance throughout the week was not very large during the day, but in the evenings and on Sunday the attendance was much better, as most of the Saints had business to which they had to give attention during the day. Everybody seemed in the best of spirits, and the meetings were of a highly spiritual nature. On the first Sunday President Frederick M. Smith spoke twice, morning and evening, his theme being "Stewardship." I have never heard more eloquent and logical sermons than were delivered by him on these two occasions. The beauty of them was that they were both attended by the Holy Spirit to a marked degree, which was evidence to those in attendance that our Father in heaven is back of him and is directing his efforts to enlighten the minds of the people regarding this important and interesting subject. In the afternoon of the same day Bishop Carmichael preached, as well as again on the following morning, Monday. He also preached two grand and eloquent sermons which made a wonderful impression upon the minds of his hearers. Personally, I have never heard a finer or more plain exposition on finance than delivered by him, and he, too, had the spirit of his office and calling in the delivery. How any person could go away from those meetings an unbeliever, after hearing such logical and spiritual exposition on finance than delivered by him, and he, too, had the spirit of his office and calling in the delivery.

The meetings that have been held on the lawn of Brother E. T. Atwell for the past three weeks closed Friday night, August 28. Brother Atwell was kept going at high speed last Sunday, as he taught his Sunday school class at half past nine, then was called to preach the introductory sermon in the afternoon, and at sunset was ready to preach. Brother Atwell was the most eloquent and spiritual discourses on the subject matter dealt with by these brethren is a mystery to me, for they were surely handled in a masterly manner.
we do not approve and which cause much sadness, but such has always been the case and will continue to be until the King of kings divides the goats from the sheep. Therefore, let us be patient and endeavor to do our part so that we may be numbered with the sheep whom he will receive unto imself in that glorious day.

The Chatham reunion was well attended, and the Spirit of the Lord was present to cheer and to edify those in attendance. Brother Curtis and D. T. Williams of the Twelve, were present; also F. M. McDowell at the latter part of the reunion. John Grice, John Shields, and Brother Doty of the general ministry, as well as a great number of local ministers. The location of the reunion grounds is right on the lake front, and the only objection to it is the pleasure resort close by, where they hold dancing three or four times a week, have merry-go-rounds, and other amusements, which, in the writer's opinion, is not conducive to spiritual development, having too much attraction for the young. Jazz music, spiritual hymns, and preaching do not harmonize when they are in operation at the same time. The command of God, “Come ye out from among them and be ye separate” is just as imperative to-day as it ever was. It is true, as Mohammed said, “The mountain won’t come to us, but we can go to it,” and just so it is that the amusement grounds won’t go from us, but we can take the reunion grounds away from them. Reunions always lose some of their value when the man can be fed and the Saints have a real spiritual feast apart from the world and worldly things. I find a tendency on the part of many to go to reunions, not for the spiritual good they may obtain, but to see and to be seen and for worldly pleasure. During social service and preaching they are walking around on the outside, apparently very little interested in what is going on within.

Brother Lamont, Bishop Dent, and other members of the committee were kept busy looking after the interests of the people. They were very faithful in the performance of the work assigned to them. We were pleased to see Bishop Dent so far recovered from his severe illness, and we hope he may be spared for many years for service in the work.
Notwithstanding the jazz music, we experienced some wonderful spiritual meetings, and the preaching was of a high order.

The Kirtland reunion was one of the best ever held in that place, and the gathering of Saints there was the largest in its history. The main auditorium was well filled at the first meeting. It was a very pleasing sight to see the crowd that filled the lower auditorium every morning. If everyone were present both the upper and lower auditoriums were well filled. The institute work car-rried on under the supervision of President McDowell was a success beyond all expectations; the interest displayed on the part of the people in this work was wonderful, and Brother McDowell was there with the goods. He was very ably assisted by Brothers Curtis, James E. Bishop, Doctor Weegegar, and others. The sermons were inspired from start to finish and were enjoyed by the people.

Everything passed off very pleasantly, and personally I heard no complaints. The singing and the song service every evening under the direction of T. G. Neville were excelent and greatly enjoyed. The band, under the direction of Brother Romig, was the best we have ever had at a reunion. The people enjoyed and appreciated their efforts.
Curtis devoted his entire time to looking after the dining hall and providing food for the people, which is a tremendous task; the food was good and the prices reasonable. Robert Miller, one of our up-to-date, active workers, looked after the housing of the visitors, the camp grounds, and also served as chief of police. He was “Johnny on the spot.” Bishop Currist and Bishop Doty, with Brother McDowell and Brother Curtis, were in charge of the spiritual features of the reunion. Brother G. T. Neville was in charge of the music and also the refreshment tent;
he was ably assisted by his brother Cecil Neville and other faithful workers. All these brethren had to work hard to make the reunion a success. Our old war horse, James McConnaughy, was in tune to the song alongside Brother Newton.

Brother Stone and the writer were kept busy in blessing those who desired patriarchal blessings. Also the writer preached and presided over the social services on several occasions. Brother Clark, of the missionary force, was also present.

Brother Joseph A. Jacques was in charge of the recreational activities for the young, in which he was very ably assisted by Sister Lucie A. Lockard, and their work was a wonderful success.

Sister Proper was in charge of the school work for the children, and she surely had a big job on her hands, for the children were present.

I must not forget to call attention to the young people's prayer service that was held one morning in a place called Penitentiary Valley. There were between three hundred and fifty and four hundred young people present, Brothers McDowell and Patterson in charge. All who attended pre-nounced it one of the most spiritual meetings of the reunion.
The gifts of the gospel were manifested, to the consolation and joy of all present. Wonderful testimonies were borne, and the young folks were stimulated to double their efforts in service to their Master.

On the last Sunday of the reunion, in the room of the apostles, in the upper auditorium, those present experienced a wonderful spiritual service. There were eighty-five testimonies borne and many spiritual hymns sung, as well as prayers and the blessing of several children. One was reminded of the day of Pentecost. The Lord manifested himself in the gifts of the gospel to the comfort and joy of his people. Surely the Lord is blessing his people as they put themselves in the proper attitude before him.

All three reunions were a success spiritually, and God be praised. Notwithstanding all these pleasant and interesting features of the work, there are those who will tell us that the work is going to hell in a handbasket. However, they may retard its progress by failing to do their full duty and in making the sacrifices required of them by the Lord. But Jesus Christ will care for the church, and it will finally be victorious. He paid too dear a price to establish it to be victorious. He paid too dear a price to establish it to for the church August 29 and September 30. September 6 a young people’s convention is to be held in Ogden, Utah, and beginning September 13 Elder Guy P. Levitt and Elder E. B. Hull will begin a two-week series of meetings in Malad, Idaho.

Kirtland has become a mecca to which the people love to gather; those of the church as well as outsiders. There is no more promising missionary field in the world in which to present the gospel for about nine months during the year.

The committee did its work in a splendid manner. Brother Francis Elbeling devoted his entire time to looking after the
A priesthood convention was held in the Salt Lake City church August 29 and 30. September 6 a young people’s convention is to be held in Ogden, Utah, and beginning September 13 Elder Guy P. Levitt and Elder E. B. Hull will begin a two-week series of meetings in Malad, Idaho.
Why Raise This Question Now?

It has been a long time since I troubled the HERALD press, but I read and hear so much about our worthy President that I feel it my duty as a member of the church to say a few words in his behalf.

It truly is the sifting time, and we should be very careful what we say and write, as we will have to answer for all our works. It has been a question in my mind why some people are begging to find out that we do not need a President. True, the Bible is silent on that point, but why wait one hundred years before saying anything about it? If it did not please God, why let it go until now?

I hope and pray that we will all get into the stewardship plan and do our part. If God does not want a President, let him say so, and we will dismiss Brother F. M. However, I believe God does recognize our beloved President, and all earnest Saints should support him.

May God show the light to some one so that it will be broadcast and all may understand. We are living in a time when such matters should be left to the Father of light, believing that he will in his own good time show his will concerning his Prophet and President.

I am going to try to obey what I know is right, and if our forefathers have made a mistake we are not to blame.

May God bless our President and all his Saints, is my prayer.

Lamoni Young People at Nauvoo

Early Wednesday morning, August 19, found a large group of young people in front of the Brick Church at Lamoni preparatory to leaving on their pilgrimage to Nauvoo. The leaving time was a quarter of five, and before dawn the long line of cars was well on its way. Numbers had been drawn, and each driver was expected to hold his position. Excellent order was preserved in the line, and very little trouble was experienced, only one car having tire trouble.

Those comprising this party were principally the young people who had been attending the young people's weekly prayer meetings. There were seventy-seven in the party and the mission of the church and including a statement concerning the young people's weekly prayer meetings. Surprises Himself in Taking Subscriptions

I have the letter you wrote about getting subscriptions for the church papers, especially the HERALD. So I surprised myself by trying and got five HERALD subscriptions in one evening at the prayer meeting. I shall try this year and get many more.

Things here are going along very fine, it seems to me. I love this work and the Saints of the place. I am very busy in the Fair move for the big dining hall. It is the largest I have ever tackled, twice as large as the one at Oklahoma City, being 38 by 196 feet. We are getting the thing lined up for real business. Brother and Sister Dillon of Oklahoma City who helped in the Sedalia Fair are coming to help me out here, as they and I are the only ones I know of who have had any experience in such affairs.

I go to Duluth to-day for two days to help the Saints there in their rally day exercises.

I will say in conclusion that the HERALD is such an inspiration now to all who read it, it is a pleasure to recommend it to the Saints and friends.

Successful One-day Meeting

BELLAIRE, MICHIGAN.—A one-day meeting was held with the Saints of Bellaire Branch, in the hall where they hold their meetings. A number of visiting members were present, some driving a hundred miles to attend.

Sacrament service was held first, followed by preaching by Elder Earnest Burt, Allen Schreur, and A. E. Stark during the day, and by Elder Burt at the evening service.

Several members of the Northern Michigan district orchestra were present and furnished music for the services.

One was baptized the following Monday morning.

Ideas, not gold, govern the world. Machines do much of the world's work, but machines are born of ideas. A human worker without ideas is only a machine. He is content to serve all his life, doing the same work over and over again, making the same thing year after year, without progress, ambition, or purpose. It is the thinking man who becomes master workman, perhaps proprietor. Ideas become to him an inspiration and force. They rally his intellectual powers; and ideas only can make a man.—William M. Thayer.

Radio Flashes

Oak Park, Illinois.—I received your station for the first time last night (August 25). The program was very loud and clear.—LeRoy Brumm, 831 Marion Street.

Leona, Kansas.—Words can hardly express our appreciation of the real music and equally fine talent producing it. Stations like yours make radio worth while. Last night's program (August 25) was great.—J. M. McCormick.

Cedar Grove, Louisiana.—Dear ones, we enjoyed your service over the radio very much, especially because it is from our own station. Any time, you have anything on the air always remember we will be listening in. Ever yours in the L. D. S.—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Norman.

Saint Joseph, Missouri.—Your programs come in strong and clear. You would be surprised to know the high standing you hold among radio fans here. Think this is the best advertisement the church ever had.—Mrs. Edna Mayer, 325 Highland Avenue.

Kansas City.—The Standard Oil program splendid. Mr. Cox and all are to be complimented for their splendid numbers. Your volume and modulation can't be better. Clear and plain through WQO and WHB.—Earl Berger, 1020 Askew.

Baltimore, Maryland.—Picked your station up during latter part of program, Sunday night. The final number was Schubert's Serenade, played by Robert Miller. This is the first time I have heard you.—Edward Voelker, 900 Rutland Avenue.

Liberty, Missouri.—I want to thank you for the many fine programs broadcast from your station. I have heard some of the lectures on "Christian stewardships" and think they are fine. Enjoyed the Standard Oil program last night. The duet, "Moonlight and roses," was especially fine. It would take too long to write about every program. Taking them altogether are fine, and we do appreciate them.—Mrs. Fields Duncan.

Saint Joseph, Missouri.—We thoroughly enjoyed your Tuesday evening program; it came in very clearly. Mr. Cox's cornet solos were beautiful. "The sunshine of your smile" was fine. The two young ladies (Mrs. Koenig and Mrs. Cox) who sang "Moonlight and roses" have exquisite voices that blend perfectly; their rendition of this number was the best I have ever heard. With both regards and appreciation of your good work.—Miss Vivian Keller, 2001 Seneca Street.

Fort Washington, Pennsylvania.—Received your station clearly to-night (August 25).—Charles B. Allison.

Fairfield, Maine.—On Sunday, August 23, I heard your station broadcast a sacred concert until 11 p.m. (E. S. T.), sermon until 11:35 p.m., then final organ selection; all with volume enough to be enjoyable. Hear K L D S quite often during the week night programs. Used to hear your station nearly two years ago on 240 meters as K F L X, and later on about 268 meters, but reception not as consistent as now.—P. H. Merchant.

The Impossible

—Is often surprisingly easy when we try it.
—Puts all the wish-bearers to flight early.
—Is what makes heroes out of ordinary men.
—Is only the mask which the difficult wears.
—Is where the ordinary man quits and the extra-ordinary begins.
—Terrifies the timid and challenges the courageous.
—Is usually the most obvious after it is done.—Reverend Roy L. Smith.

Nine new members were added to the branch at Waterloo, Iowa, recently by baptism. A few more have united with the branch, having been transferred from other branches, thus enlarging the membership and helping out considerably in church work. Those who attended the Eastern Iowa reunion report a good session and renewed enthusiasm for the advancement of the work.

Mrs. J. R. Scruggs, Rockafellow Bath House and Hotel, Hot Springs, Arkansas, in renewing her subscriptions to the church papers, says also: "If any of the missionaries come this way we would be glad to have them stop with us. My husband is not a member, but our home is open to the missionaries. During the day they will find me at the Rockafellow Bath.

Educational Activity

The ancient worthy says there is a season for everything, and society has decreed that the season of educational activities opens with the coming of autumn.

Graceland College Opening

Graceland College, the leading educational activity of the Reorganized Church, held its opening exercises Monday, and the opening address was delivered by Floyd M. McDowell, who has been active at Graceland either as student or faculty member for eighteen years, and is now severing his close connection with her activities.

The enrollment of students was progressing rapidly Monday afternoon, and it seemed then to promise an extended usefulness for the year 1925-1926. Large numbers of new faces were present, and the faculty displayed new faces also; it consists of the following members: G. N. Briggs, president; Roy Cheville, history; Lonzo Jones, philosophy; H. H. Gold, director teacher training; Forest Roberts, sociology; Esther Irene Layton, English; Roy H. Mortimore, mathematics, physics; Eva Lewers, education; Charles B. Woodstock, religious education; J. A. Gunsolley, religious education, doctrine; Morris E. Mortimore, geology, biology; Ruth V. Fisher, dramatics; Mrs. N. R. Carmichael, home economics; J. C. Bergman, romance languages; A. R. Gilbert, psychology; Vivian McElroy, foreign languages; Oren Hartschen, agriculture; Jessie Mae Norris, piano; J. H. Anthony, band and orchestra instruments and directing; Mabel Carlile, art, public school music, harmony; Doris Gieselman, voice; Ethel McGough, physical education.

A feature of the opening address of President McDowell was the tone of farewell, and response to this was made by Brother Gunsolley, who tendered him a gift from the faculty in the shape of a beautiful Gladstone bag.

Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences

Registration dates for the Independence Institute are announced as September 16, 17, 18, and class work will open September 21, under the direction of the new head, President Floyd M. McDowell, who is at present very busy looking up a faculty of teachers. President McDowell was in conference with the superintendent of public instruction for Missouri, W. G. Dillon, last week, and every effort will be made to give credit for the work done in the Institute. For this end Superintendent Dillon has tendered his personal interest. Further announcements of the activities for the year will be made in the near future.

Questions and Answers

Question: I have read a statement to the effect that the official force in the Presidency's office has been increased since General Conference. Why should this be necessary?

Answer: There has been no increase in the office force in the Presidency's office. It remains as it has been for a year or more.

Question: I have read a further statement that a certain man has been attached to the Presidency's office as official letter opener to open and read the letters coming to all departments to detect reflections or criticisms upon the Presidency. What is the basis of this report?

Answer: No one has been attached to or is in the employ of the Presidency's office for this purpose. By agreement between the Presidency and Bishopric all letters coming to the various departments are now handled as church mail rather than as mail to isolated departments. They are opened in one office (not the Presidency's office), by a man (not in the employ of the Presidency but rather in the employ of the general church offices), stamped with the date of receipt and the amount and nature of inclosure, if there is an inclosure, and then distributed to the various offices. The Presidency's mail passes through this routine with the other. This plan is in execution in many institutions receiving large amounts of mail as does the church. No mail marked "Personal" is opened by the distributor. Any letters opened and discovered to be personal are delivered to the proper persons without further reading.
President has not read or inquired into or had any interest whatever in any personal references. Anyone writing about personal matters to any person at headquarters can and should mark his letters "Personal," and they will be delivered unopened. Letters dealing with strictly church business should not be so marked.

Question: The Editor of the Saints' Herald: I noticed in the questions and answers of the Herald of August 5 a rumor that was going the rounds of the country, the answer to which to my mind has cleared the minds of many of the Saints. And it has prompted me to mention a rumor which has come to me. The rumor handed down to me is that President F. M. Smith while in California had his car shipped to him from Independence by express. Is this true?

Answer: Dear Brother: Your letter of the 7th of August addressed to the editors of the Saints' Herald has been handed to me.

The rumor which has reached you to the effect that when I was in California I had my car shipped to me from Independence by express, is quite untrue. While I was on my mission to Europe the car was shipped to California for the use of my wife, who was there for the benefit of her health, but it was shipped by freight, and the freight was paid by a friend of mine not a member of the church.

Very sincerely yours, F. M. S.

Question: Brother Carmichael, we have had some among us who say that the church is in a very, very bad condition financially and that it cannot continue its progress much longer.

They also quote Brother Elbert A. Smith as stating on the Campus last Sunday that "the church is out of money and unless something is done to secure money we must relinquish our efforts."

It has also been reported that the Auditorium funds have been used and that you are borrowing money and placing local church property under mortgage for it (Saint Louis $17,000 for instance). I want to know if this is true or false. I hope it is untrue. My desire is to see the work progress. May it be so.—Extract from a letter to Bishop Carmichael.

Answer: In reference to the financial condition of the church we wish to make this statement: During the past three years the church has sustained a deficit in the operating expenses, the total amounting to over three hundred thousand dollars; as a result of which, of course, the indebtedness of the church to-day is just that much greater than it was three years ago. But the church is sustaining no greater deficit now than it was during the past three years.

In fact, we believe the efforts of the church in presenting the social program at the present time, together with the arrangements to curtail the operating expenses in every way possible, will in time place the church where, instead of having a deficit each month, we will have a credit balance on hand.

The rumors that the Bishopric was mortgaging all local church properties is absolutely false. Not a single mortgage has been placed on a local church building to secure money with which to meet the operating expenses of the church. The Burlington, Iowa, Branch is placing a mortgage of $2,000 on their local church property, but the reason for this is they have erected a new building and did not have quite enough money to pay for it, so that they felt it necessary to borrow the $2,000. However, when the building is completed and title placed with the church, our assets will be increased rather than decreased, even though there is a mortgage of $2,000 upon the property.

The General Conference instructed the Bishopric to proceed with the erection of the Auditorium. A large percentage of the Auditorium Fund had been borrowed by the former Presiding Bishop with which to meet the operating expenses of the church. As a result, it becomes necessary for us to refinance that fund. To do so we are planning the placing of a mortgage on some general church property, including the Battery Block in which we have our general church offices. However, this money that will be borrowed on this property is not for the purpose of meeting the operating expenses of the church but to replace the fund used, as stated, by the former Presiding Bishopric. The placing of these mortgages does not increase the indebtedness of the church, for the report presented to the late General Conference showed that the church was in debt to the Auditorium Fund for a large sum of money. Upon securing the money for which we are to give the mortgages, we will wipe out this indebtedness of the Auditorium Fund, so in reality it will simply mean a shifting of the indebtedness.

The Saint Louis congregation did owe some money on the purchase price of their church building, but we are of the opinion that this indebtedness has been paid, and as far as we know the property is unencumbered at the present time.

In reference to the statements supposed to have been made by President Elbert A. Smith on the Campus, the substance of his sermon has appeared in the Herald under the caption, "The program of the church," editorial department, Heralds No. 31, 32, 33, present year. He made no such statements as are attributed to him in the rumor.—Extract from answer by Bishop J. A. Becker.

Seeing the Kingdom

By Bishop J. A. Kohler

You may find the story that forms the background for this talk in the book of Saint John, the third chapter, verses one to nine:

There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicolaius saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit. Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

If a text is needed, this language of Jesus may serve: "Blessed are your eyes for they see."

Viewpoints of Life

To the average adolescent boy a crying babe presents quite a different picture from what it does to the real mother upon whose bosom her darling baby rests. To the one the babe is a sort of nuisance or necessary evil or the like; to the other it is an object of parental affection and of loving care. The average boy who must rock the baby to sleep has a "task" to perform: a piece of work that has been imposed upon him. But the true mother who takes up her babe to rock it to sleep has nothing worse than a bit of "work" that has first claim in her affections upon her energies and to do which she willingly lays aside other matters. To the first the crying babe takes away from the pleasures of life; to the second it is something that helps to fill life with the joys of loving service. Such is the disparity in the viewpoints that different people have of life.

The discipline to which the average boy is subjected looks like an entirely different thing to the boy from what it does to the parent who (perhaps with aching heart) administers that discipline. But the same individual who to-day rebels against parental authority, to-morrow, after advancing years and the experiences of life have given him a new viewpoint, will bless the thing that once he hated.

The changing circumstances of our lives change not only the coloring on the picture of life, but they change even the lines and the settings themselves. The "eyes" which to-day are "blind," to-morrow, through the regenerating power of experience, may be opened to "see" what before was entirely hidden.

Two Ways of Approaching the "Kingdom"

There is a great disparity in the concepts that different people have of the kingdom of God. To some the kingdom of God is the church; that is, this group of people that has come into existence officially through an administrative act of some heavenly being. To others, such as the Apostle Paul, the kingdom of God is "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Romans 14: 17); that is, the kingdom of God is at bottom a life of right doing, a social life the mode of which is grounded in good morals, a group life that manifests "God in us."

The kingdom of God is not "meat and drink"; it is, among other things, the right use of meat and drink. In Paul’s day some saw in the "church," in "Jesus," in the "kingdom," a sure supply of "loaves and fishes"; they were thinking of the "body of Christ" in terms of prophecy, tongues, healings, and the like; they were thinking of the "plant" in terms of "apples, peaches, pears," and not in terms of the process or state of vegetating nor of the relationship of the "life" of the "plant" to existences in general. But Paul conceived the kingdom of God to be an expression of "the beauty of holiness," and the church the matrix in which raw, crude, and missshapen material is molded into the manhood of Christ. That is the "nature" ascribed to the church by that foremost of Christian philosophers in his letter to the Ephesians (4: 11-16):

And he gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

To Paul the church is the matrix of Christian manhood; it is a divinely ordered aid to the expression of the life of God in the souls of men; and in so far as the "church" is that, it is the "kingdom of God."

Blessed are the eyes that look beyond the date of the birth of the church, the name by which it is called, the events attending its organization and growth, the words by which its officers are designated, and the personal advantages derived by them.
from their “membership,” and who “see” that church as a divinely inspired movement, a great moral enterprise, working for the redemption of the world.

The Lesson Story

Our scripture reading introduces to us an interesting character in a most interesting way. Nicodemus, a Pharisee, a ruler among the Jews, a master in Israel, a typical Jewish theist, came to Jesus by night. To this man Nicodemus, God was the supreme ruler of the universe, and, therefore, he disposed the things of this world and the forces of nature at his pleasure. And since this man Jesus was the demiurg, a Pharisee, a ruler among the Jews, a master of the kind of miracles that Jesus wrought within us, we know not how, by the power of God, he must, therefore, to the mind of Nicodemus, be a teacher sent from God. And he complimented Jesus on being an agent of such a powerful Ruler. But if Nicodemus thought that a little flattery would win for him any special personal favors from Jesus, he certainly missed his mark, for Jesus immediately plunged this important social character (important from the world’s viewpoint) into one of the most tempestuous seas of philosophical thought that man ever set sail upon. And immediately the intellectual compass of Nicodemus was all awry; his mental steering apparatus failed him. “How can a man be born again?” How? How can a man be born again? That was too big a problem for the mind of Nicodemus just then. Later his vision may have clarified.

Had Nicodemus said: “We know thou art a teacher sent from God because thou art the “way,” the “truth,” and the “life,” he would have given evidence of spiritual insight into the mission of that man Jesus. But he didn’t. No! It was not that that made Nicodemus know Jesus was a man sent from God; it was because “No man can do these miracles which thou dost except God be with him.” The test of divine “authority,” according to that, is the official right and power to perform certain miracles in the name of the God of heaven. To Nicodemus, Jesus was an “official” clothed with the powers of the Ruler under whom he officiated. And it is not strange that Nicodemus saw Jesus in that light, for his whole training had given him that viewpoint. Was not Nicodemus himself an official vested with the powers of the government which appointed him? And did not his official standing give him power to dispose men and things? And did he not spend his thought, his time, and his energies in the exercise of the powers of his office? What was more natural than that Nicodemus should see Jesus in the light or in terms of his own experience?

It may be true that Nicodemus did not regard Jesus as the representative of an earthly or political sovereign, but rather of a sovereign who holds human destinies in his own hands, and who had the power (the official power) to say to him that lay in the tomb, “Arise,” and to the fig tree, “Let no man gather fruit of thee henceforth,” and to the waves, “Be still.” Nevertheless, whatever Nicodemus’s viewpoint, it was such that Jesus said of him and to him: “Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God.” To understand Jesus, to apprehend God, to comprehend the way of life, to “see” the kingdom, Nicodemus, and all others who have the world viewpoint, must somehow get a new mind; he must build up different modes of regarding persons and things; he must acquire a new state of consciousness, moving him to a new mode of life; he must (in his thinking, in his feeling, and in his will) become a new creature in Christ Jesus. And that new birth is the miracle of the gospel of the Son of God. It cannot be bought; no one can give it to us; it is a transformation in our own selves that is wrought within us, we know not how, by the power of God.

Along by the side of Nicodemus let us set up Simon the sorcerer. Compared to Nicodemus, Simon may have been a low moral type; but however much these two men may have differed in these respects, they both had the same fundamental need—need to be “born again” in order to see the kingdom of God. Their viewpoints were both wrong. Observe Simon’s habitual mode of regarding persons and things. To him even the sacred rights and powers of the priesthood were commodities to be bought and sold like merchandise. And hence he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay my hands, he shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.” What Simon’s concept of the Holy Ghost was, we may only conjecture. Simon, like other men, saw the work of the apostles in the light of his own way of thinking; having himself deceived the people with the artificies of his profession, being himself in the very warp and woof of his mental and moral fabric a sorcerer, it was but natural for him to see in the things of the kingdom of God the reflection of his own life; having a sordid nature he regarded the church with a sordid eye. To Simon the kingdom of God was “loaves and fishes,” “meat and drink,” power to heal, and the like; it was not the righteousness of God, the beauty of holiness in the life of a people. Personal advantage, not personal worth, was the end of Simon’s endeavors. Nicodemus may have been a political mountain but, like Simon, he was a spiritual molehill; he may have been an intellectual giant but, like Simon, he was ignorant of the things of God. Both must be born again to see the kingdom.
Two Aspects of Divinity

The story of these two men directs our attention to ways of regarding Jesus. Some see Jesus as a being possessed of the miraculous power of God, as a dispenser of divine charities, as a source of advantage to them. Others see Jesus as a witness to the truth, a leader in the way of right conduct, an example of a godly life to be emulated, an inspiration to acts of helpfulness in the midst of their fellows.

The manner in which some regard God is pitiful almost beyond description. Think of such a concept of God as this: “A person with hands and feet and other parts such as men have and having the form of a man.” “There may be no blood in his veins, but surely there is some kind of fluid.” “I should say he is about six feet tall.” “He lives in heaven,” and so on. Looks; size; form; color; place of residence, and the like; these are the marks of some concepts of God! But again, such concepts may be accounted for by what goes on in the lives of people. Those whose experiences do not extend far beyond the limits of their own bodies, whose concern is chiefly about the cut of their own hair, the attractiveness of their own persons; those who have pleasure in commanding others, who love to exercise power, who delight in the accumulation of property, and whose goodness consists in charities, are quite apt to have mental pictures of similar things and matters when they try to envisage God. Those who see God in this light may think of him as a collector of revenue or rent, and of the payment of tithes and offerings as an act of propitiating the gods.

Then there is another viewpoint of God and of Christ and of his church. There are real sisters and brothers, real neighbors and friends in the world. There are people who live in the lives of their fellows, who desire their welfare and their comfort, who delight to make this world a beautiful place in which to live. To such God is a father, Jesus is an elder brother, and they are sons of God whose duty it is to live together as brothers, as friends, and as neighbors. And to them the church is a family of which Christ is the head, that organizes its forces and utilizes its resources for the redemption of the world. To such “the kingdom of God is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.”

Idealism Versus Mechanics

Nicodemus said: “We know yours is the work of God because of the miracles thou doest.” To-day people say: “We know this is the work of God because we have the gift of unknown tongues, of prophecy, and of healing, and the like.” It doesn’t take a very good eye to see such things as that. Most any normal person of mature years has the mental capacity to see the church as a First Presidency, a Quorum of Twelve, Seventies, and so on. One need not be born again to see that body of officials standing in their several offices and having certain rights and powers, and the members exercising their rights of legislation. One need not be born again to see that in the church and through its ministrations gifts are bestowed upon them. But one does need to be born again to see the kingdom of God.

Of what does the farmer think? Of his private income only, or of doing his share of the world’s work? Is his delight only in the harvest? Or does he delight in the wonders of plant and animal life? Does he desire satisfaction only from a full granary? Or does he have pleasure in controlling the factors which make for a bountiful harvest? Is agriculture only a means of livelihood to him? or is it a fulfillment of duty to those who make like contributions to his welfare? It all depends upon the kind of man the farmer is. If the regenerating forces of the gospel have done their work in his life, agriculture will be his service to God as far as the circumstances of the life of the group of which he is a part leave him free to make it such. If he does not have the kingdom of God viewpoint, agriculture may be only a business venture, a necessary occupation followed for the sake of a livelihood only.

Of what does the church member think? Only on his personal income from his investment in the church? or does he think of the opportunity that membership affords him to help win men to Christ? Is his delight only in his security? or does he delight in the beauties of the Christian life? Does he derive satisfaction only from the generosities of his God? or does he derive pleasure in helping to order and control the affairs of society so that there may be a bounteous harvest of souls in the kingdom of Christ? Is the church to him only a vehicle for transporting him into the paradise of God? Or is his church life a fulfillment of his duty to his God and to his fellow men? It all depends upon the kind of church member he is. If he has experienced the new birth, he will see in the church his opportunity to do the things that are worthy and in the doing of which he satisfies the demands of his conscience and the longings of his soul.

Any normal person has eyes that see the mechanics of the automobile as it moves along with the pressure of a button, the release of the brake, and the shifting of the gear and the rest. One need experience nothing extraordinary or marvelous in his thought to see tires and gears and oil and gas, but it is not every person who, looking at an auto, sees a combination of a power plant, an ignition system, a lighting system, a cooling system, a lubricating system, and the rest. These are things that are hidden from the eyes of many normal beings, notwithstanding.
ing they are common and everyday affairs. Some see in the auto an opportunity to gather funds with which to command a share of the products of current industry; others see in the auto a wonderful creation that may be made a wonderful blessing to mankind. These are different things that are seen by different eyes.

In the same way, any normal person should be able to see the mechanics of the church, the officers and quorums and official acts by which the machinery of the church is kept in motion. But it takes more than an average eye to see the church as a coordination of godly functions, a union of the lives of individual men in a divine system of administration of affairs, a mode of life on the part of a group in which each individual member has a part and which secures to men individually opportunities for all legitimate forms of expressing the powers of their beings.

But we cannot stop with such uses of words. There are concepts to be clarified. There are questions to be answered, such as “What are the legitimate forms of expressing the powers of being?” And upon our ability to answer such questions does our ability to see the kingdom depend. It is easy to talk of justice and of judgment. It is easy to speak of mercy and of faith. The words which are used to describe the kingdom of God may be found in the vocabulary of the blindest infidel who walks the street. But who has eyes to see what is just in the varying circumstances of human experience? For it is only eyes with such powers of discernment and discrimination that can see the kingdom of God.

In the days when Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote Uncle Tom’s Cabin, even ministers who talked about the kingdom and God and justice and the like occupied their pulpits in the defense of slavery. Had the men who saw the “decrees of God” in that abomination that blasted the souls of men experienced the new birth which gives power to see the kingdom? Positively no! But do not overlook the fact that those very men perceived justice to be a divine principle. They used the language of the kingdom in their conversation; they admitted the truth of the word of God, but their eyes were blind to its meaning.

To-day we are not altogether different from the people of 1850. We, too, say that God is good; that God is love; that God is just; that his kingdom is righteousness. But do we know the good, and do we know love and justice and righteousness as applied to present-day affairs? Do we understand the true application of those principles of truth to present-day conditions? Such are the questions to which we must be able to give answer before it can be truthfully said of us, “They have been born again.”

The specific justice and judgment of the kingdom are not to be seen with an unregenerated mind. And yet it is precisely those stipulations of justice and judgment in relation to the affairs of our day in which the kingdom of God to-day is grounded. And it is the power to see these things that gives evidence of being “born again.”

We build as we see. Those who see the church only or even mainly in terms of its parts or its mechanics are disposed to spend their time and energies in disputation and in the observances of forms; they are bent on remaining on board the gospel ship so that they will arrive with it at the port of heaven. But those who see the church as a living temple, the stones of which are the children of the kingdom who perfect the form of that temple and accomplish its completion by expressing in their lives singly and unitedly the ideals of the Christian religion, the righteousness of the kingdom — those, we say, will be intent upon effecting the individual regeneration and the social reconstruction that Christian ideals implicate and that Christian conduct necessitates.

The Righteousness of the Kingdom Versus Customary Morality

Nicodemus, like most men in all ages, was a customary moralist. Like most men, he thought and acted on the level of the group of which he was a part. Measured by the current standards of his day and of his people, Nicodemus was a good man. And yet, so long as he thought on that level, there was no chance for him to see the kingdom of God. He must first be born again. And being “born again,” emerging from his present habitual mode of regarding persons and things into a new view of life, was a soul experience too profound for his immediate comprehension. “Every way of a man is right in his own eye.” Surely; it is right; and what is right does not need to undergo a transformation or regeneration in order to be right. That is quite true. We cannot anticipate the viewpoint that comes with the new birth; we can only see it and appreciate it when it burns its way into our beings.

But Jesus had the kingdom of heaven viewpoint. He saw also the level upon which Nicodemus felt and thought and acted. He saw the disparity between the two viewpoints, and he knew that the new birth would put Nicodemus (and the rest of us) on as much a higher perceptual and conceptual and emotional level as the devoted mother of the crying babe occupied in advance of the level of her complaining and self-centered adolescent son. This new birth, when it is accomplished, raises us (each and every one of us) above the ethical standards of the day in which we live and plants our moral concepts and our conduct in the righteousness of the kingdom of God. The gospel level is not the level of the world; and hence it was and is true, that "except your righteousness exceed," except there is more to it, except it is of a superior order, "you can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven."

Now this is all we have tried to say in this discourse. It is enough to say at one time. A lesson that we need to learn is that seeing the kingdom of God means first comprehending the modes of human activity and conduct; and second, experiencing the sympathies and the motives of action that exemplify the righteousness of the kingdom of God. And that means nothing short of comprehending our duty to ourselves, our duty to our fellows, and our duty to God in the varying circumstances of human life. These duties relate to body, to mind, to soul, to possessions; to every act that has any bearing upon human values; and to the possession, use, and disposition of the material things upon the possession, use, and disposition of which human welfare depends.

The inaction of the passing years, the necessity for continuous and persistent argument and other forms of discourse to persuade the members of the church to unite for the purpose of advancing the cause of Zion and the establishment of her stewardships is proof enough that not even all the members of the church have had their eyes opened to behold the kingdom of God.

With the new birth, experience comes to have a new meaning; apostles and prophets, devotions and sacraments and ordinances, and property and our relations to men and things come to have new moral values and new spiritual significance; and Christian manhood is perceived to be the end of all adjustment. And when that miraculous change is wrought, interests, which before were focused inwardly toward self, will come to radiate outwardly until they shall embrace all the objects of God's love and ministration.

Blessed are the eyes that have been impressed with the divine nature, for the things which they see are the things of the kingdom of God. One cannot see those things except he be born again.

The Light of Life

I know not what shall be,
But fear dwells not with me,
For in Him,
When earth lamps are all dim,
The light of life I see—
Love
Above
All things this earth;
And I follow Him
Trusting
On and on.

—Thomas Curtis Clark, in the Christian Century.

The New Day.—Number 2

BY A. H. CHRISTENSEN

[Brother Christensen's article, number 1, of last week, should also have had the caption, "The new day," not "The new way."]

Before one can become a wise steward, he shall have to analyze his motives and processes, and if he finds them wrong he should make plans to change them, not excuse himself by saying that the world does so, or acknowledge his inferiority and cowardice by saying it is impossible to successfully antagonize the world. For illustration we present the principles of value, price, and labor. Under the present system, which is the measured and which the measure? My textbook on economics puts it this way:

Labor has value merely in the sense that the value of the product may be ascribed to the labor which will produce the product. It is therefore not logical to measure the value of the product by the value of the labor; the labor is measured in value by the product.—Elementary Economics, by Davenport, p. 72.

No wonder there are labor strikes and eternal strife over wages when the sweat of a man's brow is measured by a board of trade, or a curbstone broker. Just the reverse should be true; a day's labor should be the unit of measure, and all other prices should be based upon it. Even the ancient Americans came nearer the true principle in this, as we see by the account in the Book of Mormon record as follows:

And a judge received for his wages according to his time: a senum of gold for a day or a senum of silver, which was equal to a senum of gold; ... A senum of silver was equal to a senum of gold; and either for a measure of barley, and also for a measure of every kind of grain.—Book of Mormon, p. 339.

In order to clarify the foregoing quotation, we will state it in the following terms, which are more easily understood:

A man received a dollar for a day's labor; and a dollar, whether of gold or silver, was the price of a unit of measure of every kind of product.

Of course we do not propose that our present system of money and the system of weights and measures shall be abandoned for a new classification, but we insert this quotation to emphasize the dignity of labor; to take it from beneath and place it above.

How easily this whole question can be solved by all accepting the idea that each should buy his living with his labor, or something which stands for so much labor (money); and if then they want to know the value of that food, clothing, or other articles of that living, ask themselves how much labor it cost to get it, and that will be its value. This logic would solve the question of the wages of two men of different living conditions in the following manner: A family of five would purchase their living with the labor of the breadwinners of the family for the period; and the single man would purchase his living with his labor for the time. So different quantities of food, say, would be purchased for the same price in the two instances, but would have the same value, viz, its eating value, not its selling value; and it was produced to be eaten.

We presented the Book of Mormon quotation above, not as a correct formula, for it is altogether correct only in that it places labor first; and the purchasing power of a day's labor should be at least equal to all the living of that day. This idea carried out certainly would be better than to hold up his pay until the product of his day's labor was sold on the market and the value was "discovered," and then retracing gauge the labor that produced it by giving the producer what was left after the broker, and the manipulator, and the handler, and the employer, and all that had come in contact with the product had taken what they desired of the selling price. When labor comes first in the equation of economics, then the question of labor troubles will be settled; and there is no chance for an argument here, for all will be laborers.

At different times efforts have been made to fix stationary prices for commodities, but they have usually had to give way to the persistent attack of the commercial idea, for to fix prices is the death knell to speculation, and speculators will not stand for it. But whether prices shall be fixed and stationary or not, at least selling prices, which some erroneously call value, should not govern production; neither should producers make prices the paramount consideration at planting time; but there should be an estimate of how much of each commodity should be planted to supply the demand of consumers (not traders), and by conference and cooperation that much of each produced by those most fitted for it by virtue of being in control of the land and other things most fitted for it.

Few people believe now that prices really are fixed by supply and demand. But that responsibility is welcomed by the commercial organizations, especially the more powerful ones. It always struck me as more than passing strange that wheat, for instance, should invariably fall in price at precisely the same time each year, viz, just before thrashing time, when the commercial man is buying and the farmer must sell; and that as soon as the most of the wheat in the country is in the great concrete elevators of the traders, and the time to begin selling back to the consumers arrives, that the price of wheat rises, and will generally stay up until the fateful month of the next year.

The demand of consumers is for flour, not for wheat; and the consumption is about uniform the year around. This being the case brings us to the conclusion that "supply and demand" that is put forward apologetically as the cause of the fluctuating price of flour or bread, is not the fluctuating demand of consumers but of traders. And even if this supply and demand of commercial men for commercial reasons does control prices, it has not the moral right to do so. I am surprised that such a theory is taught in our colleges and through the daily press.

Better far accept the stewardship motive, that we labor or produce to supply our just needs for consumption, and for the needs, by our surplus production, of those who are not able to supply their own. This brings us to the question of whether or not we will be our brother's keeper. In this connection I am pleased to present the thoughts of another writer on the subject of economics, who is a striking contrast to the one from whom we have been quoting. This latter one is idealistic and spiritual, while the other is not a moral idealist and is unspiritual. He writes:

The Spirit of the New Day.

One approaches such a subject with caution, for each person who tries to understand for himself the meaning of the new time will, of course, come to a point of view a little different to that of anyone else, and will moreover express his views somewhat differently. When one is dealing with so big a thing as the rebuilding of human society, it becomes almost foolish to prophesy. Great currents are sweeping us on. We cannot control them, and we are not even sure where they are taking us. Their direction may change over night; because for a long time after peace comes, human society will be subject to volcanic disturbances that may change the whole face of the earth. But even if we cannot tell just what is going to happen, we may with some measure of confidence describe the great hope and the great faith in the new spirit that will animate human affairs when once more the efforts of men can be used for construction instead of for destruction. The Farmer and the New Day, by Kenyon L. Butterfield, president Massachusetts Agricultural College, p. 26.

This prophet sees some of the forces that will sweep us on to Zion. He calls it the spirit of the New Day. He realizes that the spirit of the toiler is the thing that shall count. That implies also the toiler's vision and motive. He asks the farmer, one of the producers, to rise to higher idealism than planting corn in place of wheat simply because there is to be made more money in corn than in wheat; or to get above the motive of feeding his corn rather than selling it because more money can be made in selling the stock than in selling the crop. These are his words:

The war has revealed to the farmer more clearly his duty as a member of society. He has seen as never before his obligation to strain his back to even severer toil for the sake of those so dependent upon him. Heretofore he has been more concerned with his rights—with getting a fair and just return for his labor. He has not felt a keen and personal sense of obligation to supply food for people who cannot grow it for themselves. Now the deepest parts of a nature rich in feeling have been touched. The farmer has been asked to produce, not primarily for profit, but for a great

Southern California District

The reunion of 1925 is past, and a very successful reunion it was, in spite of the fact that a number of forces seemed to conspire to make it otherwise. The attendance was the largest within the recollection of any present. Good, spirited preaching, excellent prayer services, plenty of recreation and play, well attended study hours, and a general good spirit of fellowship, though strained once or twice near to the breaking point, prevailed.

District President N. T. Chapman called the first business session on Friday afternoon, August 7. He and Apostle J. A. Gillen were chosen to preside and authorized to choose assistants and complete the organization of the reunion. Frank Van Fleet of Cucamonga and Walter W. Smith of Los Angeles were associated with the presidency, and Wilfred Burton was made secretary. Margaret Wikes, district chorister, was in charge of music.

The order of the day, so far as very successfully during the reunion, was as follows: 6:30 A. M., rising bell; 7:15, morning prayer in tabernacle; 7:30, breakfast; 8:30, study hour; 9:30, prayer meeting; 10:45, preaching; 8:30 to 12, children’s meetings, playground, workshop, and kindergarten. 12:15, dinner. The afternoons were devoted to recreation and swimming; 6, supper; 7:30, preaching; 9, recreation; 10, prayer meetings.

The prayer and preaching services were under the direction of the presidency. The children’s meetings, playground, workshop, and kindergarten were under the direction of Sister Eunice Winn Smith, assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, assisted by Sisters Alta Stuart and Hermima Badham. The Department of Women meetings, and the Girls’ and Temple meetings were under the direction of Sister Dickey Rogers, superintendent of Department of Women. The morning study hour was under the direction of Walter W. Smith, and the recreation and organized play under the direction of W. A. Teagarden, superintendent of Recreation and Expression. A certain amount of time was allotted to each department. The Sunday school, besides caring for its own children, met with warm approval, and other branches have arranged to have the plays presented in their churches.

The Sunday school workers at a study session developed a standard of excellence which they will strive to attain this coming year.

The Department of Women occupied a day with addresses and discussions. The principal talk was by Sister Effie Van Fleet. In the evening they presented a religious play, written and produced by Saints from Long Beach.

The Department of Recreation and Expression had a full day, with verbal reports of the activities of the different local organizations, and an address by Brother Arthur Gillen. The afternoon brought a baseball game between Los Angeles and Long Beach, with a low score in favor of Los Angeles. The evening was given over to three short plays put on by the locals of Long Beach, Los Angeles, and San Bernardino.

The preaching was of a highly spiritual and instructive order, by Apostle J. A. Gillen, Bishop Frederick B. Blair, and Apostle John W. Rushston of Saint Louis, of the visiting ministry; and by George Wixom, P. R. Burton, T. W. Williams, and Walter W. Smith of this district. Four were baptized in the Pacific at the foot of Longfellow Avenue by P. R. Burton, on the last Sunday.

To those who have attended reunion at Hermosa Beach, no description of the matchless situation and weather is necessary. But to readers in general, it should be known that the grounds, about five acres in extent, lay back from the ocean front about five blocks, elevated enough to see the boundless ocean from nearly every point on the ground, swept hourly by the cool breeze, and smiled upon by the sun, day after day, with never a hint of rain. Hermosa Beach (the Beautiful) is ideally located, some eighteen miles from Los Angeles, within easy reach by motor car, interurban car, and Santa Fe Railroad.

The last three days of the reunion were devoted to the semiannual district conference. Some matters were introduced that divided the sentiment of the conference, but general unanimity of opinion prevailed in the end. Brother N. T. Chapman was elected to succeed himself as district president for the coming year, and Frank Van Fleet and Walter W. Smith were elected as elders. Asby Turner Lewis was chosen secretary and recorder, and David Car- michael, nominated by the Presiding Bishop, was approved as Bishop's agent. Brethren J. C. Stuart, Wilfred Burton, and W. A. Teagarden were chosen reunion committee for next year. Brother Herbert Pederson was elected superintendent of the district Sunday schools; Brother W. A. Teagarden, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; and Sister Rosa Tier, superintendent of Department of Women. By action of the conference, future conferences of the district will be mass conferences instead of delegate. Adjourned to meet in Los Angeles at the call of the presidency.

Des Moines District

C. M. Richeson, president of the Rhodes Branch, was the first man on the reunion grounds, coming on Wednesday night and pitching his tent so as to help with the work incident to the preliminaries preceding such events. District President Henry Castings and Missionary Wilfrid Tordoff arrived early Thursday, the former with his "unionalls," and sleeves rolled up for work. From then on things began to happen.

Other Saints began to arrive, and Thursday night found twenty-five tents occupied, and the merry voices of the Saints rang out in splendid harmony, presaging a glorious time that was about to be ushered in.

Friday morning at ten o'clock the largest prayer service, in point of numbers attending, was held in the large tent. A spirit of devotion was manifest that cheered the hearts of all who were present.

At half past two formalities of organizing were attended to, in which the district presidency were associated with Apostle F. H. Edwards in the presidency of the reunion.

Saturday morning found the young people congregated at the church for a six o'clock prayer service, and the day was started in a proper manner. Then to the large tent went everyone for the eight o'clock general prayer service. Three of those early services were had by the young people during the ten days, and the results were very heartening to those in charge.

A storm on Wednesday morning threatened the peace and tranquillity of the Saints. Rain poured, and the wind raged through the camp during the general prayer, with flowers and shrubbery scattered about the sides of the tent to keep the wind out, all were singing songs, and the morale of the Saints was kept up until the west end of the tent caved in; then all sought shelter in the tent homes excepting the brethren who took a drenching in an effort to save the tabernacle from blowing down. The influence of God's Spirit was felt by many during this interlude, and their faces were shining with tears which coursed down their cheeks.

On Monday night Brother Edwards called the priesthood together at nine o'clock for prayer, that there might come to the Saints the blessings that had been withheld for some reason until this time. After the storm that came Wednesday, the spirit of unity was intensified, and more of the blessings were poured into the hearts of those who had come that they might receive a spiritual uplift.

Brother Edwards lectured on stewardship and preached the same until Bishop A. B. Phillips arrived. These brethren came in the spirit of Christ, and the result of their teaching will be manifest in the near future.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell ministered in his office in a wonderful way to the edification and blessing of all. He is a father in Israel in very deed. We were deprived of his companionship too soon, however, as he was called to Wisconsin to attend to a funeral service. Brother Phillips had to leave to go to Boston and move the family to Lamoni before school begins.

Then Brother Edwards did as the other two had done, leaving on Friday night for a reunion in Oklahoma, where they were not so well equipped with speakers as we were. Brother Tordoff preached in his characteristic missionary way several times and assisted in many ways to make the reunion the success it enjoyed.

Pastor H. A. Higgins of Des Moines was the speaker on the last Sunday morning, inspiring the Saints to have greater faith in God and the church.

Brother Castings preached at eleven o'clock Saturday, one of the best sermons of the many that were delivered. He gave much counsel by the Spirit, which caused us to exclaim, What manner of Spirit is this?

Brother D. E. Dowker, of the Lamoni Stake Presidency, spoke the benedictional sermon of the reunion. Filled with the Spirit, he encouraged the Saints to build upon the sure foundation that was laid by Joseph and Hyrum and the early Saints at so great a sacrifice.

Brother Robinson demonstrated his ability as recreational leader, to the satisfaction of all. Games were played all afternoon; and the evenings, after preaching, were filled with enjoyment for all. Three camp fires were held, in which old and young took part.

Sister Lentell and Sister Higgins had great success with the "youngsters" in every way, in prayer meetings, class work, and industrial instruction. The junior church was the most successful ever held, and we hope that Sister Len­tell will come back next year.

As viewed from every angle, the reunion was successful. The power of God was manifested in many ways. Prayers were answered, sick were healed, and the windows of heaven were opened in the preaching and teaching of the word of the Lord.

We are expecting a renewal of effort all over the district as a direct result.

The large tent was shipped to Webster City, where Brother Tordoff will conduct a series of gospel meetings, beginning next Tuesday.

Irvington

STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA.—About twenty of the branch were permitted to attend the reunion at Irvington. They report it to have been one of the most spiritual and best that has ever been held. The grounds, which have recently been beautified with flowers and shrubbery, added not a little to the enjoyment of all.

The talks given by Apostle Gillen were strengthening, as were also those of Bishop F. B. Blair. The subject of stewardship was so thoroughly gone into and illustrated that there could be no room for doubt in the minds of those who were privileged to hear them. All from here returned with greater zeal and determination to go on and fulfill all the law.

Among those who were baptized during reunion were two from Stockton Branch: Sister Farley, who is the mother of Sister Agnes Vallem, and Mrs. Dagan, the wife of Brother Samuel Dagen. Both have been interested listeners for some time, and their coming in is a result of a thorough investigation on their part. We rejoice to have them numbered with us.
The Department of Women has followed its usual custom and has postponed all activities during the hot weather of July and August.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave two socials, one a wiener roast at the home of Sister Tinker, an admirable place for a big bonfire, which was enjoyed by a large crowd. It was reported as one of the most enjoyable times in recent months. One evening a watermelon feed was given at the home of Sister Carey. There also a bonfire was enjoyed, and all ate watermelon until they declared they could hold no more. There have also been two swimming parties.

Other departments are moving along nicely.

Little Sioux District Reunion

In the beautiful City Park at Woodbine, Iowa, the Little Sioux District held their 1925 reunion.

This year we were alone, whereas for the past few years we had consolidated with the Gallands Grove District. But during the past year the two districts mutually agreed to dissolve the union.

We are glad to say that this was a good reunion. It was also augmented very much by the attendance of many of the Saints of the Gallands Grove District who came as visitors, and we were glad to have them with us.

The reunion was presided over by the district presidency, with Joseph Lane as the head and W. E. Adams and C. B. Woodstock as counselors. They called in with them, E. J. Gleazer of the Quorum of Twelve, and Charles J. Smith, district missionary.

As per custom, each day's activities was prefaced with a prayer meeting. These meetings were spiritual and held a high average. The blessings and manifestations of the Spirit were to all and, needless to say, all enjoyed them.

Our departmental work came both in the morning and afternoon and was under the general supervision of Brother C. B. Woodstock. Brother Woodstock's classes in religious education were well attended and much appreciated.

Professor C. R. Hield gave several lectures on Sociology in class form and without question did a good work. These classes numbered from about 125 to 150 in attendance.

The Department of Women was ably represented by Sister Myrtle Crabb, and the message presented was enlightening and edifying. This class period was in the afternoon.

The Health Department, under the supervision of Sister Laura E. Bateman, formerly superintendent of the Independence Sanitarium, was, of a high order and was much appreciated. The need for the work is very great, and surely the greatest cooperation along this line should be had.

The writer featured the junior church work and was much pleased by the response of the juniors. Our work was demonstrative, and the effort to make the complete organization of the church. The juniors desire to assist in the work and to find their place, and are cooperating along this line in order to develop the latent talents. Sister Nell Kennedy deserves much credit for taking the junior church and working out a beautiful little dramatization with the final climax depicting the perfect home operated on the true stewardship plan. She wrote the lines for each one, assembled them on the ground where they were rehearsed, and on Friday eve presented the playlet in the big tent. Many complimentary remarks were passed regarding it.

The recreational activities were under the direction of "Bill Johnson, and during this period all who cared to kept busy. One feature was a game of ball between the "boys" of the town and the "boys" of the camp, in which the "camp boys" carried away the honors by a score of 6 to 5.

Of the general church officers we had with us E. J. Gleazer of the Quorum of Twelve, who worked untiringly and whose contribution was for the edification of the body. On Thursday Bishop Carmichael arrived and remained till late Sunday afternoon. Seemingly every moment of his time was occupied. Stewardship was the only theme, and he handled it as only he with his years of prayer and study could do.

Early on Sunday morning President Elbert A. Smith arrived and offered his contribution of two sermons, as well as many personal talks with Saints and friends. It was a feast to have him with us, and surely great good was accomplished.

Brother W. A. Smith, missionary to the Gallands Grove District, was with us most of the time and renewed many old acquaintances as well as some new ones. He preached for us three times, and one could easily understand that he was still "in the faith."

The general attendance was much better than the past few years. Twenty-four tents were on the ground, and about an average of 250 driving in each afternoon and night. Of course this was very much augmented on Sundays.

A dining hall was conducted in the basement of the church two blocks from the park. Brother Charles Hyde presided over this feature of the work, with the assistance of two of our worthy sisters. When necessary they drafted others to care for the overflow. Much credit is due these consecrated folks for their sacrifice and the good, wholesome food, well spiced and cooked. The average price for meals was about thirty cents—all you cared to eat. At this rate it paid its own expenses.

The general attitude was one of progress; and the determined expression on the faces of the Saints and the way they are taking hold denotes failure for the Devil and success for Zion.

All in all we had a good reunion.

CHARLES J. SMITH, Press Agent.

Clinton District

The reunion of Clinton District convened at Eldorado Springs August 21 to 30 on the high school campus. The district officers, assisted by Apostle R. S. Budd, were in charge. Apostle Budd, Bishop J. A. Koehler, and Elders Lee Quick, W. E. Haden, R. T. Walters, Henry Sparling, and H. E. Moler were in attendance.

All the services were very much enjoyed. Eight early morning prayer services for the young people were well attended, and they proved to be a feast and a source of great comfort to many. The seven general prayer meetings at nine o'clock were also well attended and enjoyed, especially by the isolated ones.

Each morning at a quarter of eleven Bishop Koehler lecture on stewardships, which was much enjoyed. He ably presented the plan to many who did not understand it, and illustrated the lectures on the blackboard in such a manner that all were better able to understand.

Five extraordinarily good sermons by Apostle Budd were much appreciated, because many present had not heard him since the first years of his missionary work. They could realize the great change in him. This being his home town, it is needless to say he preached to large congregations each time. The association with Saints and friends of his youth was very much enjoyed.

Brother Quick preached two very interesting sermons, and Brother Haden preached once, delivering his message with power and consecration. Two interesting sermons by Brother Henry Sparling, in his interesting English way, were enjoyed by all. Former District President H. E. Moler also gave a good sermon.

All services were accompanied by splendid song services, and some very good special numbers were rendered.

On Thursday and Friday evenings the young people gave instructive and interesting programs, showing a good deal of talent in the district.

The afternoons were devoted to the work of the Sunday school, Department of Recreation and Expression, and Department of Women work, recreation, round table, and on Saturday an exciting game of ball. The young people enjoyed a wiener roast at the lake, a picnic at Nine Wonders

www.LatterDayTruth.org
with ice cream and iron water for refreshments; and Friday all, young and old, enjoyed "kid" costumes and a program of several hours. But all enjoyed themselves in their play, they were ready for good meetings at the hours set apart for them.

The general health was good, and all felt more than repaid for the time and effort spent in coming. Good meals were provided for about seventeen cents a meal. Several tents on the grounds, and many roomed in the homes near the campus.

A spiritual time was enjoyed, and we feel that the reunion next year will be even better.

Irene Nafus Allen, Secretary.

Eastern Colorado

The Saints of Eastern Colorado enjoyed another spiritual feast with a large attendance of Saints, between three and four hundred, gathered at the beautiful reunion grounds at Colorado Springs.

The services were conducted under the big tent, and small tents were put up among the pines and along the beautiful mountain stream which flows through the grounds, where the Saints from other towns might enjoy real camp life for ten days. Meals were served in the cafeteria building.

We were fortunate in having with us many able speakers. Bishop J. A. Koehler delivered a series of powerful lectures on consecration and stewardship and urged the Saints to keep the financial law; for it is one of the important laws of the gospel.

Apostles R. S. Budd and M. A. McConley, Patriarch U. W. Greene, and Elders Edward Curtis, Jake Curtis, and Ward Hougas delivered inspiring sermons of a nature to urge the Saints to consecrate their lives to the service of the Master—to work, sacrifice, be steadfast, and pray that Zion might be redeemed.

Young people's prayer meeting was held every morning at six at Stratton Park, a beautiful mountain park. General prayer meeting was held at nine, and lectures by Bishop Koehler or preaching service convened at eleven o'clock. Preaching service was also held in the evening.

The afternoons were occupied by departmental work, followed by recreation in the form of a fast volley ball game, hand ball, or horseshoe; or a hike or drive in the mountains. But enjoyable days ended when the hike was justly, near the bewitching hour of midnight, when a hiking party of thirteen, including Brothers Ed Curtis, Roy Budd, M. A. McConley, and others, feeling the call of adventure and youth, endeavored to prove that they are still young; started a nine-mile climb up Pike's Peak. After a night of honest labor, half past eight Saturday morning found Brother Ed Curtis, Brother Bud, and five other heroes shivering but happy on the summit of "Old Baldy," 14,109 feet high. Brother McConley suffered "cold feet" at the halfway house in spite of the fact that he wore two suits of clothes. Feeling the call of Duty, Sleep, and Cold, he gathered a small band of deserters and descended that hard-earned ground, arriving at camp in time to see the faithful returning from early morning prayer meeting. The others returned much later in the day and took refuge in their tents.

The regular semiannual conference convened at ten o'clock Saturday, with District President Bruce E. Brown presiding. The customary business of reading the minutes was in order, after which reports were received from the presidency, department heads, and local branches. Many of the reports showed excellent work being done in the small branches. The appointment of Brother Brown as district president by the First Presidency was ratified, and he was unanimously elected. He appointed E. J. Williams of Denver as first counselor. Other officers elected were: Ward A. Hougas, of Venango, Nebraska, secretary; Ethel Willis of Wiley, superintendent of the Department of Women. The ordination of Brother E. P. Darnell to the office of elder took place. He is a young man of high ideals and comes highly recommended. We trust he may have the hearty cooperation of all the Saints in La Junta, that his efforts may prove successful.

The sum of $1,200 was raised by subscription and loan to help clear the debt against the reunion grounds, and a plan was adopted whereby all members in the district pledged the amount of ten cents a week to further liquidate the indebtedness. The next district conference was voted to be held in Denver.

Sacramental service was held Sunday morning at eleven. A peaceful spirit prevailed, and the Saints were encouraged to continue in the great work of preparation for Zion. In the afternoon the Saints departed for their homes, taking with them the spirit of the reunion, a true concept of life, and resolving to seek the law, do the law, and keep the law.

Southern Wisconsin

On the shores of beautiful Lake Monona, amid the virgin timber that lines its banks in Olin Park, Madison, the Southern Wisconsin reunion was held. The scenes of beauty without seemed to contribute to harmony and spirituality within.

In fitting, masterly addresses, Elder Floyd McDowell of the presidency and Apostle John F. Garver both entertained and instructed the assembly, so that by many a new vision was caught of the stewardship plan for Zion's redemption. The Spirit of God seemed to melt the hearts of his Saints to his will. Many spoke of their entire trust and confidence in the Christ and his church, and that Zion be quickly and fully established seemed to be the desire of all. More than that, they wished to render all possible aid that Zion might speedily be.

It was not a large assembly, but there were present quite a number of priests. Among those present were there: Patriarch W. A. McDowell and Elders W. L. Christy, J. O. Dutton, E. J. Lenox, Leonard Houghton, L. O. Wildermuth, and S. M. Reiste of the missionary force. The local eldership of the district was well represented, as well as several from northern Illinois, among whom we noticed Elder Cooper and Elder Heyer.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Sisters Hieb and Christy, did very efficient work. Why should they not, under such leaders?

On the whole, a very enjoyable time was had, and all seemed to have the desire to come again.

S. M. Reiste, Secretary.

An Estimate of the Kirtland Reunion

(Excerpt from letter of G. T. Griffiths, August 26, to the First Presidency.)

The Kirtland Reunion was a great success from start to finish; the largest gathering we have ever had there. In the upper auditorium the closing Sunday we had a glorious time. Eighty-five testimonies were given, and the Lord manifested himself through the gifts of the gospel to the consolation of the people. Both auditoriums were full of people.

The institute work in charge of Brother McDowell was a wonderful success and the people seemed to be intensely interested in his lectures. He and Brother Curtis wielded a wonderful influence for good and preached some very constructive sermons. Others of the ministry were also blessed in the preaching of the word and in the performance of their duties incident to the reunion. The committee and the presidency of the reunion worked together very harmoniously.

The Kirtland Reunion has become a great factor for good. There were people present from all parts of Canada, the Eastern States, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Texas, Alabama, and California, to our knowledge. Kirtland has become quite a rallying point.
Ohio’s Most Successful Reunion
(Excerpt from letter of James E. Bishop, Steubenville, Ohio, August 27, to the First Presidency.)
Last Sunday the most successful of all of the reunions held by this association closed. The schedule of services was as follows:
Prayer service 8 to 9:30 a.m. Class work 10 to 11 a.m. There were three classes: “Methods of teaching,” F. M. McDowell; “Church problems,” Charles Fry and J. F. Curtis; “Problems in human nature,” James E. Bishop. At 11 a.m. the classes assembled in one group and were taught the social program of the church by F. M. McDowell. He covered many points. He laid the foundation securely and ended with the mechanics of the financial statement. It was so plain that I felt to reject it would be rejecting light and truth. All afternoon was devoted to recreation and one afternoon a trip to the lake. Preaching in the evening was preceded by a congregational song service with some special numbers. Saturday evening was devoted to Graceland College, Brother McDowell in charge, assisted by Brother Gunsolley and some special music.

Another Good Reunion in Illinois
(Excerpt of letter from Elder E. B. Davis, Galesburg, Illinois, August 27, to the First Presidency.)
Our reunion is past history, but we trust the things experienced there will remain fresh in our minds. I am happy to say that it was the best reunion I ever attended, and the attendance and financial support were better than last year. We are thankful to be able to say that all needed funds were available before we left the grounds on the last day of the reunion.

A very good spirit was present throughout. The Spirit of God was noticeable in the opening meeting on the first day, which continued to increase throughout the reunion, until it reached its climax in a wonderful outpouring upon the last Sunday. A wonderful spirit was present at the prayer service on Sunday morning, and Brother Garver preached a powerful sermon under the influence of the Spirit at eleven o’clock, and Brother White enjoyed a great degree of the Spirit in preaching at two o’clock.

Hagerman, Idaho
August 24.—The gospel tent which sheltered the Idaho district reunion was returned to its place of storage this morning, and the Saints are speeding by auto and train to various parts of Idaho and neighboring States. From the general expression, all are carrying with them memories of a pleasant and profitable time.

Elder and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser closed a series of very instructive lectures Friday. Brother F. A. Smith gave several patriarchial blessings, and it goes without saying that he occupied the rostrum frequently and to good advantage. Apostle C. F. Ellis, our all-round man, who preached, helped take charge of the young people’s meetings, related his experiences in the South Sea Islands, conducted roundtable and patriarchal meetings, was generally appreciated. General Missionary R. L. Fulks was on the job every minute and not only entered wholeheartedly into the work of the pulpit but manifested a keen interest in volley ball, wiener frolic, marshmallow roast, and the fish line. Elder G. P. Levitt, of the Utah Mission, arrived the latter part of the week and contributed to the success of the reunion. District President R. C. Chambers, who is ever on the alert for the spiritual welfare of the Saints, was with us most of the time. At the election of officers he asked us to elect a more competent person to take his place, but the Saints decided such an individual could not be found, so he was sentenced to another year.

Friday evening a large delegation of Saints from Boise arrived, and in the prayer service Saturday morning the voice of the Spirit admonished them to move forward in constructing a place of worship in their city. Brother Earl Root was spoken to and told that he was called to the priesthood.

Arrangements were made with a local eating house to serve meals at reduced rates to those attending the reunion. The basket dinner served in the tent last Sunday was supplemented by Brother Fulks’s forty-pound fish, and the farmers’ watermelons. Ten people—eight children and two adults—were baptized.

An unusually fine reunion was held at Brookeville, which closed last night; fine attendance, beautiful grounds, perfect weather. A high standard of spirituality prevailed throughout all meetings. M. C. Fisher conducted a round table every morning, much like at Onset.—Letter from Paul M. Hanson to the Presidency, Brookeville reunion, August 24.
crops—are they as prolific as they will be under Zion's conditions. The farm buildings—are they such as we must have to bring the desired conditions socially? The soil—is it uniform enough in strength, and quality to promote individual farming on the basis of the stake? You know, agriculturally, or would the diversity of crops indicate the advisability of group organization? One can even find himself trying to guess as best he can from the fleeting observations to be made from a running train where will be the locations of some of the ideal agricultural communities for which the stewardship development will call. The little communities along the line—when will we be sufficiently in control to turn the social and educational and industrial activities into the channels we desire to see them enter? Even the climatic conditions, such as annual rainfall, total days of sunshine, total days without frost, the variability of the seasons, etc., are thought of in connection with Zion. And then, too, as one's eyes sweep over the visible expenses of the splendid agricultural terrain, there is sure to come the question of the untapped or undiscovered natural resources lying just out of sight.

The long station stops, especially from Grant City north, which are so tiresome to many, are sure to turn my thoughts to another aspect of our problems. These delays are easily understood by those who travel the express car ahead. The country around Lamoni is particularly well adapted to grazing; but the cream sold by the farmers who do milk cows goes to a town northeast of Lamoni, and is there made into butter, which in turn is shipped east, largely to Massachusetts. And butter is shipped into Lamoni! How long shall this continue? Until we and our eyes adjust to the ever-present impression that country and develop on the stewardship basis the dairy business of Zion. When shall we do it? Do I hear you say? It would not be long if I could have my say.

Even the journey to Lamoni comes to an end, and on time we rolled into the pretty little Iowa town. When I was a lad of seven the family had moved into it, and from then till I was past thirty it was "home." There I went to school, there I went to work at blacksmithing, at clerking, at telephone construction work, etc. There I was married, and there our two girls were born. There dwell even yet many of the friends I found as a boy, and still others found as I entered into manhood. They are interested in Zion, the gathering, stewardship, etc.

The Lamoni Reunion

Having arrived too late to get the benefits of the evening meeting at the reunion ground, I took advantage of the opportunity to stroll around the streets, to see who of old-time friends I could see. I saw several; but the large number of younger and new faces bespoke the many, many changes which the passing years had wrought. But I enjoyed meeting the old friends, and it was good to hear their hearty, "Hello, Fred, how are you?" "Joe" Anthony and his band were giving their usual Saturday night concert, and this recalled other days, when as a member of the "Lamoni Cornet Band" I participated in these weekly concerts. I went to bed that night almost feeling that I had renewed my youth by exchanging old-time greetings with "Charley," and "Jim," and "Dave," and "Joe," and "Bert," and others, and as I recalled as I quieted into sleep, the pleasant memories of early days in Lamoni, I "shunted" from some of the memory pictures which conjured up the many changes wrought by the passing years which had changed the little prairie crossroads of "Sedgwick" into the picturesque and magnificent place it is today. I was born in Lamoni, and have lived here all my life.

Sunday, the 16th, was a busy one for me, for I was scheduled for three sermons, so quite early Brother Otis took me to the grounds where the reunion of the stake is held. Here, too, memories were aroused; for the old South Woods, private property of David Dancer, had been the playgrounds of Lamoni youth in early days. But it was highly pleasing to see how those rough woods had been converted into the well-kept and beautiful park which is now the permanent home of the stake reunion, having been some years ago, and added to until now it comprises about thirty-seven acres, and is becoming a recreation ground of great importance to the community.

Not a large number of tents was on the grounds, for here as elsewhere many of the Saints depended upon the modern charette to come and go. Perhaps the heavy rain early that morning kept many away because of slippery roads; but by the time prayer and sacrament meeting was over, there was a crowd of Saints on the grounds which quite filled the big tent, and the tent was filled at all the meetings of the day.

My theme for the three sermons was the social program of the church, and the splendid attention given me by the big audience attested that here, as elsewhere I had been, the Saints are keenly interested in Zion, the gathering, stewardships, etc.

In the evening, a concert excellent in character preceded the preaching hour, and, a bit prolonged, it was about a quarter to nine when I was introduced. Off to the southwest for a moment I saw the flash of lightning and the black mass of clouds gave promise of a vigorous thunderstorm. Knowledge of what these storms will do to dirt roads caused many of the farmers present to grow restless, and by the time I began speaking perhaps a third of the audience had gone, and the whirr and clatter of Ford and Buick and Chevrolet and others indicated they were getting under way. As the storm broke, a storm which lasted most of the night.

Brother Chapman had expected to drive to Independence Monday, the 17th, and had invited me to go with them, but the heavy rain caused me to decide to return by train; so not being up in time for the early train, I spent the forenoon in writing and reading; and after an excellent lunch prepared by the hostess, I had good-by to my most genial host and hostess, and trusting myself to the custody of "Art" Downey, made the "perilous" journey to Togo to catch 112 for Kansas City. "Art" made it despite the mud and deep ruts, but not by a very wide margin.

A number of Saints were making the journey, so in visiting and reading the time was spent. Most of my visitings had been done with the "old-timers" of Lamoni, Brother C. F. Church, who went as far as King City.

Back to Kansas City and Independence for another busy season of almost endless routine and details, before another trip to reunion or conference.

A Sample Day's Work

I wonder if a sample day's work will be interesting to you? Let me take the next day after returning. Almost as quickly as I had reached the house Monday, the 17th, Bishop Carmichael called by telephone to say he wanted an interview with me early Tuesday, as he must go to Lamoni and other places. Right after supper Henry C. Smith, the church architect, came in, and for an hour we were discussing plans for the new home of Graceland College and headquarters for Lamoni Stake.

Then a trip to Togo to the Sanitarium with Brother J. A. Gardner to administer to a lad who was to undergo an operation next morning. And as the boy gripped my hand as we left, I knew he had been encouraged and helped. Dropping Brother John at his home I drove to the Campus, to see what the band, our L. D. S. Band, was doing in the way of practice. Hot as it was, one of the hottest days of the summer, that band was hard at work with their weekly practice, and I was glad to note their zeal. Roy Turner was working them out in a good as well as hot practice.

The Campus
On going into the Institute, on the third floor of which is the band room, I had noticed on crossing the Campus it was teeming with young people. On inquiry I learned that it was the regular Tuesday night "recreation," and while on the third floor I was led on the lawn to a porch on the north side and looked out over the grounds. They were well and even brilliantly lighted, and those youngsters were having a good time. I counted three volley ball games, and I think as many games of croquet going on simultaneously, besides other games of various kinds and descriptions. I went down on the grounds and passed through the merry crowds, and chatted for a few moments with some of those in whose care the youngsters were. I could not but rejoice that our youth could find recreation and opportunity for play on our own grounds, under the guidance and direction of those interested in their spiritual welfare. And I felt that we were approaching the solution of a group of problems in our Zionism growth, those having to do with legitimate and properly supervised play and recreation as one of the factors in social betterment and spiritual welfare. But the equipment of the Campus and the Institute needs broadening.

The K L D S Radio
Leaving the Campus I went to our radio station, K L D S, to see what was going on there. Here I found another earnest though small group hard at work. The program was going out well, so I listened to the balance of it. "F. H. C." was announcing, and Mr. Virgil Thomson and a friend by the name of Campbell (if I remember aright) were putting on a special piano and organ program. Of course "Zella" and "Ray" were on hand, as such stand-bys are.

At the close of the program, I took the two performers in my car to Kansas City and then went home to bed, feeling the day had been a busy and useful one.

And so the routine continued through the week, or till Friday night, when I left Kansas City for Council Bluffs to spend two days at the Pottawattamie reunion. Of that more later.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

The Branch at Lucas, Iowa
We have not reported the work and condition of the Lucas Branch for many years past. This branch was organized forty-eight years ago, 1877, with sixteen members. Since that time a great work has been performed, fulfilling the word of prophecy that had been received. Father John Watkins was our first president and served for many years. Father John R. Evans was a faithful associate. A great many joined the church at this place. Quite a number of them have furnished working material for other branches. Apostle T. W. Williams, High Priest John R. Evans, John Davies, Lorenzo W. Powell, and Evan B. Morgan, who were ordained seventies, were of this branch. In past years we were greatly blessed with what is known as outward manifestations of the Spirit, and surely the true prophetic gifts were with us, as many can attest.

Our Sunday school had been a great force for good and had its results in engraving the gospel truth into the hearts of many of the young. They may have been slow in coming forth to obey, but many of them united with the church and remained faithful.

At present a faithful few are holding services right along. We have moved in other rooms, and have come to a point to say to us. To-day Brother and Sister Clark came back from Florida a short time ago, but because of his work they did not always meet with us. To-day Brother and Sister G. G. Booker were with us again after an absence of nearly a month, they having been at Akron, Ohio, to spend his vacation, and also at the Kirtland reunion. Sister Lee, one of Sister Booker's sisters, was with them to-day. And what joy for us! They want to come to Birmingham to live. The writer also received a letter from another brother from Florida, stating he was considering coming here to work, asking information. I only wish a lot of people would be of the same mind, and maybe we could get something started here in this city of iron.

Birmingham, Alabama, A Great City
August 30.—To-day has been a day of encouragement at our little meeting on Fulton Street. For some time previously there have been only two families to meet at our service. And to say the least, it seemed discouraging to us. Brother and Sister Clark came back from Florida a short time ago, but because of his work they did not always meet with us. To-day Brother and Sister G. G. Booker were with us again after an absence of nearly a month, they having been at Akron, Ohio, to spend his vacation, and also at the Kirtland reunion. Sister Lee, one of Sister Booker's sisters, was with them to-day. And what joy for us! They want to come to Birmingham to live. The writer also received a letter from another brother from Florida, stating he was considering coming here to work, asking information. I only wish a lot of people would be of the same mind, and maybe we could get something started here in this city of iron. And if people knew something about Birmingham and its environs, they might really want to come here, so I am going to try to tell something about it. Of course there will be a whole lot I cannot tell, for I do not know it all myself. And then everybody must consider that it is not always what they want to do that is the right thing, for maybe God wants something else. People are different; everybody is not alike, and the good Master of men does not deal the same with everyone. We are so differently constituted that he has to deal with us according to our needs and in a way that will be effective. So, anyone seeing this and desiring to come here had better pray about it, and maybe ask the Bishop about it. There is lots of work here and lots of people to do it.

Birmingham is located in a valley, with mountains all around it; in sort of a pocket. One disagreeable thing is, when the air is heavy, there is so much smoke that you get a great deal more smoke than you do fresh air. There are so many smelters, foundries, and steel mills that the air is full of smoke unless the weather is very clear. I was told when I was here last January that there were fifteen skyscrapers to be built this summer. There are a number under construction, and some have been finished. Houses are being built wholesale; stores and apartments a plenty; factories not a few. Additions are being made to the large steel mills owned by the T. C. I. Coal and Iron Company. This company has hundred acres of land, the largest steel plant in the world, and one of the best in the world. Andes Iron and Steel Company. This company has hundred acres of land, the largest steel plant in the world, and one of the best in the world. Andes Iron and Steel Company. The writer and his wife recently went through the Fairmont plant, which is situated on a hundred acre plot of land. Here they make structural iron, angle, eye beams, rods for reinforcing concrete work.
steel cars, tie plates, railroad spikes, bolts, sheet steel. Here we saw one of the two largest electric motors in the world. The other is in Japan. I saw a three hundred and sixty thousand horse power motor. It was set up to run a large set of rolls that rolled sheet steel, a sheet about thirty feet long and about six feet wide, out of a chunk of hot iron about two feet by two feet by six feet long.

This plant employs at present about four thousand men. The Enseley plant employs the same number. There are numerous other plants here—several other large steel plants making wire and nails and other products. There are numerous concerns making by-products of coal, for the three great coal fields of Alabama are located here or near here. One of the largest, I understand, has been little developed as yet.

There are cement factories, tile mills, lime plants, and many others I cannot name. This Birmingham is just in the period of development; a few years ago it was only a small town. Anyone who is willing to work, and prove himself, need not be idle here.

You read a great deal about Flint, the great automobile center. I mean Flint Branches and their young people. I remember about fifteen years ago that the Flint Branch was a small affair; the Saints met in the Odd Fellows Hall at the corner of West Kershely Street and I think it was then and Sturtevant Street where our first branch was held; the Buick began its boom; Saints came from all around; others were baptized; they built a church, then another, and then another; now look at them. I only hope the same thing will happen to Birmingham, Alabama. Here we are! three active families resident here, possibly a few more who do not come to meetings; the nearest branch is two hundred miles away, where is there a better field to work? And, by the way, people are religious down here, too, in their way. You see crowds at the churches on Sundays, and lots of churches, too. Only no Latter Day Saint church. The HERALD is of real interest; lots of news. I am glad the President's presence is being enjoyed in many of the branches. I am sure it will be a power for good. Also glad the time is fast coming when stewardship will be a reality and not only something to talk about. I trust that God's great work will speedily roll on to its final consummation,

San Francisco, California

August 26.—The 1925 reunion for this district is now a part of history, but the lessons learned, the social affiliations, the inspiration we experienced will stay with us and encourage us to go forward the coming year with renewed zeal; in fact, the general feeling is that we have come higher, as we have been commanded, though all realize that there are still higher planes for us to strive for, before we can attain that which we are told is awaiting us.

The stewardship plan was made so plain to us that many are availing themselves of this privilege, realizing that only by obeying the full law of God will they be able to obtain all the blessings which God is only too willing to shower upon them.

The athletic meet at Irvington was won by the San Francisco Branch, and they will be the custodians of the Cup for the coming year. The Religio, to celebrate this, had an "indoor track meet" at the home of Sister Putney on August 21, which was enjoyed by everyone present. Affairs like this bring home to us the fact that we need a recreation hall, so that our Religio can function to its fullest extent.

For the first time the church at San Francisco did not close its doors during reunion time. Elder L. B. Shippy was unable to leave town during this period, and he volunteered to preside at all regular meetings, which was appreciated by the Saints who, like him, were not able to be at Irvington.

The early part of July we were favored by having Apostles Gillen and Ellis with us; we are looking forward to the time when they can again be with us. Bishop Fred B. Blair addressed us on August 5; Bishop Blair was with us during all reunion time, and we were very glad to have him with us at our little church. On August 16 Elder J. W. Rushton preached for us at both the morning and evening services. The Saints are still talking about the wonderful things they heard that day.

All departments of the work here are in excellent condition, and all those in charge are alive to their responsibilities and are using every opportunity to further the cause.

Missionary Work at Watts, California

The central Los Angeles Branch fosters several missions in adjacent towns and communities. The latest of these is at Watts, some six miles from the church. Brother W. L. Vail was appointed to work among the few Saints living there. For several months he conducted a preaching service there weekly, in private homes. The pastor and others assisted in the preaching. Interest grew, and a desire for Sunday school brought about an organization last April. The school has grown to be the second in size in the district.

About the fourth of July, Brother P. R. Burton brought the district tent to Watts and began a series of meetings. These caught the interest of the people in the neighborhood at once, and for almost a month he preached every night, and he, Sister Burton, and Brother Vail visited among the people by day. The result of the meetings was the baptism of eighteen persons and a very promising outlook for more in the near future. The Saints of Los Angeles appreciate the untiring work of Brother and Sister Burton and Brother Vail and of the little group of Saints in Watts, and feel that the Lord has been with them.

At the close of the reunion, Brother Burton again took the tent back to Watts and is continuing with good interest. Brother Vail has gone to Independence for a visit but half promised to return and bring help with him before very long.

Porcupine Branch

ARKANSAS, WISCONSIN, August 31.—Although the membership here is not so large as in former years, some having moved away and many others scattered in various places, yet the few families of Saints that remain are trying to keep up the work under the leadership of Branch President Manly R. Shed, assisted by District President S. E. Livingston.

Sunday school is held each Sunday with Brother Clive Metcalf as superintendent, assisted by Brother Lloyd Shedd. There is an average attendance of about thirty-five, and the following special days have been observed: Easter, Mothers' Day, and Children's Day, appropriate exercises having been furnished for each day.

Sacramental service is held once a month, and the usual weekday service, at which the attendance is not very large. We truly feel, after our early starts, that we have a greater desire to press onward in the gospel work.

The Department of Women usually meets once in two weeks, but owing to the very busy season on the farms, regular meetings have not been held of late. Regular meetings will be resumed soon. We feel that much good can be accomplished in this department.

Quite a number from this branch attended the reunion at Chetek June 26 to July 6, and we are now looking forward to the conference which is to be held here some time in October. We trust that many from the various branches will be able to attend and enjoy the occasion with us.

We are sorry to note the loss of Sister Louisa Shedd for a time as she expects to leave this week to attend Grace College. She has been organist for church and Sunday school for some time and will be greatly missed. However, we hope for her success.

Mrs. Elsie Ganoe.
Southern Nebraska District

Our district is a large one so far as territory goes, making it quite a task to travel and care for. There are four branches, all small, three groups, and over two hundred scattered members. At the conference last March it was decided that two-day meetings should be held this summer in all the branches. When our lone missionary, Brother E. F. Robertson, arrived in the district, he at once began preparations to carry out this order, with such modifications as wisdom and circumstances seemed to advise, with the result that he has had a busy summer. Some fine meetings have been held, and we trust good to the work has been accomplished.

One-day meetings were held at Nebraska City July 26, Wilber July 26, and Plattsmouth August 20. At these meetings Bishop J. A. Becker was the speaker, presenting the program of the church from the standpoint of the bishopric in an able and satisfying manner. Saints from Plattsmouth, Lincoln, Union, Nebraska City, Auburn, Tecumseh, Douglas, Palmyra, Pickrell, Blue Springs, Elron, Superior, Wilber, DeWitt, Fairfield, and Franklin, also a few from outside the district, attended these meetings, so we feel that the message brought by Brother Becker will be quite well disseminated throughout the district.

Two-day meetings were arranged for at Fairfield and Kearney. Being unable to secure a speaker from headquarters for these meetings, Brother Robertson tried to get Brothers W. M Self and J. R. Sutton. These brethren laboring in the same field for a number of years are known and loved by the Saints here for their long years of faithful work among them. Brother Self could not come, but Brother Robertson succeeded in bringing Brother Sutton by driving to Colorado in his car and bringing him back with him. They had a very nice meeting at Fairfield, Saints from surrounding country attending, also some nonmembers. Meetings were well attended and the interest was fair.

After these meetings the brethren made a hurried swing around the district, spending one Sunday at Wilber. At this place there are very few Saints left, but in the morning the Methodist minister and his congregation attended the services, and at night the church was almost filled with nonmembers.

The next day they drove to Lincoln, more particularly that Brother Sutton might call on Sister Lydia Horne, Grandma Horne we all lovingly call her, who is ninety years of age. She is still full of love and faith for the work and the servants of God, and has known Brother Sutton in the years that are gone. It was a great joy to her to meet him once again. Grandma Horne is another of our dear English sisters, coming to this country some years ago.

Going on to Nebraska City, a meeting was arranged for Tuesday evening. The church was well filled with old friends and Saints who enjoyed the sound of Brother Sutton's voice on this occasion. The church was in fair condition.

From Nebraska City they drove to Franklin, and would go from there to Kearney, where there is a large group, for the two-day meeting previously arranged. We are unable to report on this meeting, not having heard from there. Sister Letha Sutton accompanied her father in his journey through the district.

Brothers Robertson and Sutton were called from Fairfield to Kearney Friday, August 21, to conduct the funeral of Sister T. E. Fitzwater, formerly of Pawnee City, who died in the state tubercular hospital on that date. The body was taken to Mount Washington, near Independence, for burial.

The district conference will be held in Lincoln September 19-20. For this reason no two-day meeting was arranged for Lincoln. As this district now holds but one conference a year, unless especially arranged for, the delegates to next General Conference, election of officers, etc., will be a part of the business before us. Reports should be sent in promptly. We have the promise that if possible one of the Presidency will be with us. We hope for a good attendance and a season of good cheer.

We wish that all young people of our church who come to the state university at Lincoln the coming year would try to get in touch as soon as possible with our young Sister Blanche R. Farrar. She can be found at the university library, in the social science building, room 209, telephone B6891. She has a message that should interest all.

Sister Bertha Hart left Lincoln for Los Angeles August 29. Sister S. E. McWilliams and her daughter Thelma attended the reunion at Council Bluffs, Iowa. Brother Grover W. Parker and the Colorado Saints are journeying to Oregon. We are spending vacation as a "shut-in" but are supposed at least to be much improved.

BLANCHE H. ANDREWS, District Secretary.

Lamoni Stake

Hiteman Home-Coming

A home-coming was held at Hiteman on Sunday, August 30. Brother W. E. Prall spoke in the morning, and at noon a sumptuous dinner was served in cafeteria style at the church. The Lamoni High School Orchestra gave a concert in the afternoon, assisted by the Jolly Four, girls' quartet, from Lamoni. These young people made the trip of ninety miles to Hiteman in five cars. After the concert the visitors were treated to a trip to a coal mine. Another short concert was given prior to the evening service, at which hour Brother David Dowker spoke.

Allendale

At the Rinhardt home, six miles northeast of Allendale, Missouri, an all-day meeting was held on August 30. This meeting was held in a little grove near the home. Elder L. G. Holloway preached at eleven o'clock, and a basket dinner was enjoyed at noon. Brother Holloway spoke again in the afternoon, and at this service the little child of Brother and Sister Ira Rinhardt was blessed under the hands of Elders E. Dewey White and L. G. Holloway.

There was good attendance throughout the day. Plans are under way to hold a series of meetings in that neighborhood some time in November.

Lamoni

Brother Willard Hieb, the new public school superintendent, spoke on the subject of diligence at the eleven o'clock service August 30. At the evening service, August 30, Rev. Mrs. E. B. Fay, baby daughter of Brother and Sister F. M. McDowell, was blessed. In the evening the meeting was held in the Central Stake Center. Brother and Sister F. M. McDowell left the Central Park the evening of August 29. Brother and Sister McDowell leave for Independence and Brother and Sister Carmichael for Iowa City.

There have been two excellent young people's prayer services recently. On Wednesday, August 26, they discussed their Nauvoo trip and testified of the greatest benefit derived therefrom. On the following Wednesday evening, September 2, their subject was, "He leadeth me." Sister Lucy Lyons Resseguie passed away on September 3. This sister is well known to the Saints here, having come to Lamoni in the early 1880's. For thirteen years she held the public office of postmistress in this town, later becoming the home maker for the children of Brother and Sister Elijah Banta. This position has been hers for many years. She was an active church worker when she was still able to attend the "deaconess" department in Sunday school and later occupying as a teacher there. Her knowledge of music and her willingness to respond to the church's need made her service of great value.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Among the many other tasks which fell to her lot was helping in the compilation of the hymns for the Saints' Hymnal, her name is seen among the committee on one of the first pages of our song book. The funeral of this sister was held at the home of Sister Mary Banta, which has also been the home of Sister Marietta Walker. This service was on Sunday afternoon, at which time Elder Joseph Lauff preached and was assisted by Brother F. A. Smith.

The college opening was held Monday, September 8. Many familiar and unfamiliar faces were to be seen in the audience on Sunday. The sacrament was administered to a full church and was a service of high order. Brother F. A. Smith was the evening speaker.

Central Chicago

Sixty-Sixth and Honore Streets

Central Chicago Branch ushered in the month of August with a church wedding, when Brother William Keir and Sister Marie Yates were united in marriage, Brother H. F. W. Keir performing the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated, and the ceremony was exceptionally pretty. A shower had been previously given the young folks at the home of Brother and Sister Keir and they carried with them into their new home many substantial evidences of the good wishes of their friends.

For two weeks the doors of the church were closed because of the camp meeting at Elmhurst. All who could attended the meeting at return from the events which attended their gathering.

The Department of Women started the winter campaign with a get-together meeting at the home of Sister Belle Simmons, president of the department, and later an all-day meeting at the home of Sister William Bass. Sister Eugene Horton will be the hostess next Thursday.

Our new missionary, Brother Frank B. Almond, is taking an interest in the activities of the various departments, thus infusing the officers and members with new courage and enthusiasm.

The plays given by the young people August 31 were enjoyed by all. Our young people show ability in anything they undertake. Why should not our work prosper if they put their shoulders to the wheel?

Logan, Iowa

September 5.—We are again pleased to report some of the activities of the branch and let you know we are still a hopeful band of Saints trying to carry on the Lord's work. Our meetings are quite well attended, especially by the sacramental services. At our last meeting of this nature we had a splendid spirit present and a true devotion of the Saints. God was pleased to speak to us through the gift of tongues, giving comforting assurance, also admonition. The coming of our Master was assured to the Saints as being nearer than any riled. Faith in God, confidence in the men of the church placed there by God for the directing and leading of his people, is a part of the message. Sister J. L. Gray, of Independence, Missouri, worshiped with us over two Sundays, being here on a visit at the home of Mrs. Gerald Gunsolley. Also Sister Minnie Massie (Kennedy), of Independence, was with us, both bearing splendid testimonies of an encouraging nature. Sister Massie remained for a two or three weeks' visit with relatives, and her mother, "Grandma Kennedy," as she is known by all in our branch. She is one of the few remaining charter members of the Logan Branch. She is past the eighty-year mark but is still able to be about, and is a regular attendant at church services, giving many splendid testimonies of the divinity of this work.

School soon begins, which is going to take many of our young people, who are earnest workers, from our midst. Sister Bernice Hansen goes to Pittsburg, Kansas; Elva Merrill goes back to Graceland for another year; Sister Ruby Murfield, who has been attending school at Omaha, Nebraska, this summer, will teach this winter near Neola, Iowa; her sister, Pay Murfield, is now attending school at Omaha. Brother Clair Crabbs is going to Graceland this year, a fine young man, reared in a home of true and loyal Latter Day Saints, and I am sure the church will profit by his future contribution of service.

Brother George Whitehead and family have moved to the center place. It seems that Graceland and Zion are drawing heavily on us this year, but we are happy to have the recruits to send, and trust that the little start made with friends and Saints of the Logan Branch will expand under more favorable circumstances and conditions to broader fields of usefulness.

At a special business meeting of the branch it was decided to put in a basement under a portion of the church. A new furnace, toilets, and some other repairs are some of the improvements planned.

When we get all fixed up ready for the "Bridegroom" we are going to plan a home-coming day for all who once worshiped in the little Logan chapel, which was dedicated in 1872, and on that day we will re dedicate our lives to God and his service. "Loganites," be on the watch tower, for ye know not when the hour will be. "Be ye also ready." The work on the basement is progressing rapidly and will soon be ready for the finishing coat.

We had the pleasure recently of a visit with a family of Latter Day Saints whom we met in far-away Texas, Brother and Sister Gatrost and family. They are now located at Marfa, Texas, and doing quite well; no Saints there that they know. I solicited him for a subscription to the SAINTS' HERALD, with a promise that as soon as they were back home he would subscribe.

We enjoy the HERALD very much, and when it arrives it is like having a big family visit to sit down and read of the doings of the Saints from various parts of God's great vineyard. Long live the HERALD, and may she herald glad tidings far and near of the onward march of progress for Zion's redemption.

We just closed one of the best reunions ever held in the Little Sioux District. This was the common expression of the Saints on the ground. One of the first motions of the Saturday business session was a reunion for 1926. Let us begin now to make plans for its success. We feel to praise God for the good spirit that was present during the reunion and for the leaders who came and gave us a wonderful vision of the future policy of the church. We are now looking forward to this year's District conference.

There is always something to do for the Master as the days go by. May the words of the Master, "Occupied till I come," be one of our slogans. May God bless his church in her onward march.

Casey, Illinois

September 1.—On the afternoon of August 9 Brother M. E. Harris preached at Union Center. At night Brother H. M. Curtis preached at Good Hope.

District President F. H. Benson preached at Good Hope Sunday morning, August 16, and in the evening at Bel laire. He was called here to preach the funeral of Brother Boyd, of Kibbie, Illinois.

August 23 Brother H. M. Curtis preached at Union Center. In the evening S. F. Jolly occupied at Good Hope. Brother, the little son of Brother and Sister M. E. Harris, died Wednesday morning, August 26. Funeral services were held at the Bellaire church August 28, in charge of Brother H. M. Curtis. Several of the Saints from Casey attended.

Those from here that attended the Brush Creek reunion were Brother and Sister H. M. Curtis and their two sons, Paul and Glenn; Sister Ellen Wright, Sister Clarence Kidd, and Brother Bert Kidd.

Stone Church

Brother C. B. Hartshorn, superintendent of the Sunday school, returned from an extended trip in the West. He was called quite frequently to preach at various locations, and he said he enjoyed the experience.

J. August Koehler, bishop of Holden Stake, was here Tuesday morning.

Apostles J. F. Curtis, M. A. McConley, C. F. Ellis, J. A. Gillen, E. J. Gleazer, R. S. Budd, and F. H. Edwards have returned from reunions. Bishops A. Carmichael, J. A. Becker, and M. H. Siegfried have also returned. The joint council will meet in the near future.

The three members of the First Presidency have been in Independence for a few days. President F. M. Smith was here in time for the Labor Day exercises. President E. A. Smith spent Sunday at the Far West reunion in Stewarts-ville.

About two hundred friends of Brother and Sister T. J. Watkins gathered at their home on Thursday, August 27, to help celebrate their twenty-third wedding anniversary. Brother Watkins has just recovered from a severe illness. He has so far recovered.

There was a good attendance at the sacrament service, but not as large as usual. Refreshing showers were a benediction as they fell in the early part of Sunday afternoon. The evening service had to be conducted in the Stone Church, as the showers had made the Campus unfit for use. A large audience greeted Brother J. F. Curtis in the first service of the week fromChecksum long.

Labor Day on the Campus was observed in the usual holiday fashion, with the exception that there were no activities in the forenoon. Beginning at three, o'clock there was a real ball game between the Standard Oil All Star Team of Independence and the Mount Washington baseball team. The teams were so evenly matched that at the end of the ninth inning the score stood at five to five. In the tenth inning so evenly matched that at the end of the ninth inning the score stood at five to five. In the tenth inning the game finished five to ten in favor of Mount Washington. A large crowd saw the game, and there was much enthusiasm.

At seven o'clock President F. M. Smith addressed the crowd of 6,500 on the subject of "The sanctity of labor." He had splendid attention and excellent liberty in presenting his message, and he expressed himself as being glad he made the trip from Michigan to give this talk.

Motion pictures, "The speed spook," an entertainment film, were shown at eight o'clock, and the Campus was quiet before ten, ending another day of recreation on Independence's playground.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ellen D. Gould, wife of C. G. Gould were held at the church at a quarter after one Sunday.

On Monday funeral services were held for Elder C. C. Foss at the church at three o'clock. Brother Foss was one of the old-time missionaries. He did a great work for the Lord, and his reward is sure.

Brother B. F. Lee, of Sugar Creek, died at the Sanitarium Sunday, September 6.

President F. M. McDowell has moved to Independence from Chicago. He will occupy the former Zimmerman Flagg home at the corner of West Lexington and Short Street.

Group One claims they also should be credited with one hundred per cent priesthood efficiency, as at a recent prayer service they had three elders, two priests, one teacher, and two deacons present, with an attendance of thirty-eight.

Group Six had two elders, one priest, one teacher, and two deacons present.

Dudley Smith, the son of Walter W. Smith, former pastor of the Stone Church, is recovering, steadily improving at the Sanitarium, where he underwent an operation.

Mrs. Minerva Gates Smith, formerly connected with the Sanitarium, is looking after the office work during the absence of Miss Copeland.

Apostle E. G. Gleazer was in Des Moines, Iowa, Sunday for the laying of the corner stone of the new church under the direction of H. A. Higgins, pastor of the Des Moines Branch.

Second Church

Considerable serious sickness and affliction are among the Saints and their children, affecting attendance at the services.

Sunday's monthly social service at which the Lord's supper is served was a splendid meeting, in which the voices of the young and the aged mingled in testimony and exhortation.

Among the unexpected happenings is the serious illness of Lawrence Good, who was taken to the Independence Sanitarium late Saturday evening, and almost immediately surgical aid was summoned, for a burst appendix had ensued, and peritonitis was advancing. His present condition is quite hopeful.

Some of the groups are at present actively working on the harvest festival assigned. Brother Charles Koehler made announcement Sunday morning that the festival and public celebration of the harvest would occur at the Campus during the last week of the present month, and urged that Saints contribute to the success of the effort. Let the importance of this work not be overlooked by people of Second Church congregation, who for the past celebrations have been almost entirely responsible. Let us do our part.

Walnut Park

The sacramental service Sunday in charge of B. J. Scott and Glaud Smith was well occupied. Brother Scott felt impressed again to urge the importance of prayer on the part of the Saints. We remember this as one of Brother Scott's most earnest and Sammy Uptegrove.

Brother Charles E. Blair, suffered from quite a stroke the early part of last week. However, his case has responded readily to treatment so that he was able to be out on the streets Tuesday morning.

Brother W. T. Gard has been chosen as leader of the Walnut Park young people.

The Sunday school organized in Group 41 has been named Bethel Star. Superintendent Alice Cowan visited there Sunday and was pleased to find an attendance of thirty-four and an active corp of officers and teachers, so the organization will be considered permanent.

Spring Branch

Sister Dollie Uptegrove and George W. Burnett were married September 2 by George F. Weston at his home in Spring Branch group. In the evening a group of relatives and friends gathered at the new home of Brother and Sister Sammy Uptegrove, brother of the bride, in one of the Wilkins buildings near Spring Branch where a wedding supper was enjoyed. A wedding march was played by Brother Weston on his flute, and several appropriate songs were sung by Brother and Sister.

Group services at the church are good, with an increased attendance at the Religio meetings.

East Independence

The last Sunday in August Brother Walter M. Self was the speaker in the morning. He talked along the line of faith, and his effort was much appreciated.

In the evening Brother Walter Chapman talked on the same subject. Both sermons gave much food for thought, and while Brother Chapman said his sermon was for the young, it was suitable for all ages. We hope his presentation of the subject may inspire action among us all.

At the sacrament service September 6 a good spirit prevailed. Some good testifying was written, showing the need of being prepared for whatever work the Lord has for his children to do, and the loss that results from lack of this preparation or in failing to move forward in the path of duty.

The young people of our three groups have been wanting to do something in a social and financial way. As a result of this desire some of them formed themselves into a dramatic club, and the last few months have given much of their time to preparing to give a comedy, "The winning widow." Last Thursday evening and Friday nights were spend- ing much for the entertainment. About forty dollars was cleared, and the young people are to be complimented for the work they have done.

Sunday evening Brother J. M. Paxton was the speaker. The Saints were glad to hear him present the gospel story again. We were favored at this service with a song by a quartet from the Fairmount church.

Brookton, Massachusetts

September 1.—Our church activities commence on September 6, after a summer vacation. The church services here during July and August were discontinued with, so the majority of the Saints could attend the two months' reunion at Onset, Massachusetts. Everyone feels as though the services were very beneficial.

We are in hopes of starting things here, and with a greater desire to accomplish something than ever before. Never before has there been so much faith and confidence expressed relative to doing our part. We know we can labor, and God will give the increase.

We are starting the Sunday school activities by holding an annual picnic on Labor Day. The outlook is good, and if we can only keep ourselves in the right condition we know there shall be results.

The general expression here is that every eye is Zionward. There is every assurance that this year will be one of effort such as has never been before. Let us pray that this feeling may prevail throughout the church. We sincerely trust that next month there will be more news of interest to the Saints from Brookton Branch.

Moorhead, Iowa

August 27.—Services here are closed at present on account of the reunion being in session at Woodbine. A few Saints from this branch are tenting, but the majority are driving back and forth as circumstances will permit. A large number attended Sunday school, and all seemed pleased with the services.

Brother Joseph Lane was called from the reunion one day last week to preach a funeral sermon at Pisgah. He passed through Moorhead and called on some of the Saints at that town.

Brother C. R. Hield and family returned to their home about the middle of this month to prepare for his duties as superintendent of our school. Brother Hield spent part of his vacation in attending summer school at Madison, Wisconsin, while his family visited relatives.

On August 16 Elders T. O. Strand and Mark Jensen accompanied Brothers Ole and Elmer Anderson to Lake View, the home of Brother and Sister Arthur Baughman. Sister Baughman has been sorely afflicted for a long time, and the Moorhead Saints and others have been diligently remembering her in their prayers.

Brother and Sister John Adams and their son Frank are enjoying a few weeks of outing in Colorado and other points.

Brother C. B. Woodstock was a guest at the home of his nephew, C. R. Hield, Tuesday night, August 23. Both he and Brother Hield are attending the Woodbine reunion.

Miss Clara Strand, of California, has been a guest at the home of her brother, T. O. Strand, during the last few weeks.

Brother Jesse Smith and family, of Sioux City, visited relatives at this place a couple of weeks ago. Brother Smith occupied the pulpit one Sunday evening.

Brother and Sister Glenn Wilson and their children spent last week among relatives in Sioux City.

Brothers Mark Jensen, T. O. Strand, and Ira Wilson and wife attended the funeral of Joseph Seddon at Woodbine August 10.

Brother Chester Davis and family, also Ellis Davis, jr., returned August 18 from a visit with relatives in Michigan and Indiana. They returned home by way of Lamoni, where they attended the latter part of the reunion. They were accompanied to Moorhead by Sister Mary Lewis of Lamoni, who is at present visiting among relatives.

Brothers and Sister David Outhouse and daughter Ethel, also Sister T. O. Strand, enjoyed a visit with Lamoni relatives and attended part of the reunion there.

District President Joseph Lane made Moorhead Saints a short visit just prior to the Woodbine reunion.

Brother Perry Mann, in company with others, returned last week from a trip to the Western States.

Mapleton, Kansas

We are unable to report any rain since our last news items were written, but as I write the distant roar of thunder can be heard. In spite of the sweltering heat our attendance barometer has been registering well up the scale.

The Christian people of this place are holding a revival meeting in the Mapleton Park. Fairly large crowds are attending, and some constant improvements have been made in the evangelist's message on hell. He placed everyone who fails to accept Christ in his life, whether an honorable person or not, in hell to sizzle and fry forever and ever with no possible avenue of escape—and still he said he was representing a just God.

A newcomer, who has been given the name of Hollie Dennis, has taken up his abode at the home of Brother and Sister Everett Hillman. The little man arrived Saturday night, August 15. The little babe of Brother and Sister Everett Hillman was blessed at the eleven o'clock service of Sunday, August 23, by Brothers John Graham, sr., and Hollie Dennis. Brother Graham, who is in his ninety-second year, was the spokesman. He has a wonderful mind for a man of his age. It is keen, alert, active, and always ready and able to defend the faith of the Church. Of his last sermon he says, "I am ready to leave this stage of action, for it is only a step over there, and I am ready. I have no dread in the passing. This gospel is true and gives me great comfort." When Brother Graham leaves this life, there will be many hearts saddened. His life has been faultless, and we look upon him as a father or patriarch to this branch.

The prayer meeting of August 16 was presided over by three of our young prospects: Orion Dennis, Wayne Jennings, and Arthur Dennis. A fine meeting was had, as the good Spirit was present. Pastor Lee Quick was the speaker in the evening, telling why Christ built his church. Many good thoughts were left with his hearers. Hollie Dennis was the speaker morning and evening on August 23, using for his subjects, "Men that I know," and "Honesty and sincerity; will they ever have you?" He said that the atmosphere at the meeting was so wonderful that he also spoke the evening of August 23 on "Probation after death, or hell." There was a large and attentive audience. Brother John Graham, sr., was the morning speaker and gave a very fine talk.

Brother Lee Quick and family took in all of the reunion, and several from here took part in it. A fine reunion was the result. We took part of our ball team over for a game on the last Saturday and came back on the wrong end of a nine to seven score. We played the Christian team of Fort Scott Tuesday evening, winning by a score of five to two.

Sister J. L. Gunsolley and the Wellington family are welcomed back to our midst after a vacation visit with relatives and friends.
The following young people are leaving this week for school: Pearl Arnold to Alliance, Nebraska; Lulu Needham to Independence, Missouri; Helen and Clara Belle Weeks and Nellie Dennis to Fort Scott, Kansas. They will be missed, and we want them to return as soon as possible.

Welcomes Pamphlet on Stewardships

(Excerpt from letter of Elder A. H. Parsons, New Port Richey, Florida, August 5, to the First Presidency.)

This morning I will say that I am still among the living, but have not been able to do anything sufficient to warrant me in buying a car, as my health is very uncertain; yet, though the spells I have if I step out too quick are not so severe as up north, I get over them much sooner, and I am not left so depleted, yet I have to be very careful of my movements. For this reason I have had no report to make, and until I get on my feet so as to go by myself I do not suppose I will have much worth to report.

I want to say for your encouragement that I have enjoyed reading your reports in the church papers, and also the Bishop's write-up on stewardships. As far as I have read, I think it the best ever put out, and I can, when I get strength, preach that doctrine. I have not done so for a long time, as I did not know what stand to take. Now we have a guide to direct us so that we can all say the same thing.

Topeka, Kansas

September 2.—Those of our numbers who attended the district reunion at Netawaka, Kansas, the forerapid of August report a very enjoyable time with spiritual influence and a good interest.

Weather has been very warm here the past few weeks, but attendance has been about normal. Sunday evenings services which were discontinued through the months of July and August will be resumed the first Sunday in September.

We have plans made for a Sunday school picnic to be held Labor Day in the city waterworks park of Topeka, the entire park having been reserved by us for this purpose. It is a beautiful place for such an event. We will have races and contests of various kinds for the folks of all ages, with prizes for the winners, and expect that everyone will enjoy the day. We will have a good interest.

It is a beautiful place for such an event. We will have races and contests of various kinds for the folks of all ages, with prizes for the winners, and expect that everyone will enjoy the day. We will have a good interest.

The following young people are leaving this week: for southern Illinois, Marguerite Vesney; for Kansas City, Margaret Case and Norah Sharp; and for Alliance, Pearl Sharp.

Central Los Angeles Church Consecrates Pipe Organ

On the closing day of the Hermosa Beach reunion, representatives of various branches of the district announced special day services in their churches and invited all to attend. Among these invitations was one to attend Los Angeles on Sunday, August 30, when the new pipe organ should be formally opened and consecrated.

When that auspicious day arrived the church was filled with members of the branch, and Saints from Long Beach, Santa Ana, San Bernardino, Ontario, Watts, Hermosa Beach, and East Los Angeles. Sunday school and three services filled the day. Apostle J. A. Gillen preached the sermon at eleven o'clock and the prayer of consecration was made by the pastor. Three organ programs were played: Sister Nelle Crum played at the morning service, Sister Olive Lytle at the afternoon service, and Sister Margaret Wickes at the evening service.

The cantata, "Esther," was sung by the choir in the afternoon, under the direction of Margaret Wickes. The evening sermon was by Apostle T. W. Williams. A basket dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour, in the near-by park. The large attendance, the splendid spirit of love and fellowship, and the presence of the Holy Spirit all day long made us feel that we have scored another success for the work here.

The tent meetings at Watts, conducted by P. R. Burton, are being well attended, and will continue another week. The tent will then be moved into the neighborhood of the East Los Angeles Branch, and Brothers Burton and T. W. Williams will begin preaching services.

A number of Saints from Los Angeles are planning to attend the rally day services at San Diego on September 6, and at Santa Ana on September 13. The rally day of this branch will be on September 20.

La Junta, Colorado

August 30.—La Junta is wide awake and on the job even though we have not been writing to the church papers very often.

The latter part of June and the first of July Elder Solomon Tripp, who was a great help in the early organization of the branch here, made us a visit which was enjoyed by all.

We had a very spiritual prayer service the evening of July 1, when the voice of the Spirit came to the Saints by way of encouragement. We always have a goodly number of young people at the midweek prayer services, and their prayers and testimonies are a source of strength to all.

August 2 District President Bruce E. Brown was in charge of the prayer and sacramental service. The voice of the Spirit again came to us with a message both to the pastor and membership, giving cheer and encouragement and pleading with the Saints to come up higher.

Pastor E. P. Darnell, who held the office of priest, was in the meeting called to be an elder in our branch, as we have felt the need of one for some time. He has been busy since his ordination because of sickness in the branch.

About thirty-five of our members were privileged to attend the conference at Colorado Springs. All express themselves as having had a good time and enjoying all meetings as well as the association with the Saints.

We are glad to welcome an elder in our branch, as we have felt the need of one for some time. He has been busy since his ordination because of sickness in the branch.

We are thankful for nine baptisms within the past two months and a half. We hope and pray the good work will go on. (Continued on page 966)

What Does Graceland Mean to Me?

In response to personal letters to several Graceland students, they answer the question in their own words. Reading them is just like a heart to heart talk with young people who feel deeply.

The following letter is from Elsie Smith, Bythewdale, Missouri.

What does Graceland mean to me? I have never had that question asked of me point blank before, and I must stop and consider just what it has meant to me. Not because it helped me so little, but because it has helped me so much, and I must pick out the most important things.

I went to Graceland more as a matter of course than because of any great urge urging me to go there. I wanted to go to college somewhere; Graceland was nearest, and I was low on funds. I am going to Graceland again this fall. Not because I must go some place and it is nearer, but because I have a burning desire to be under the roofs of the buildings there, and I wish to mingle with “worth-while” people who have the “worth-while” philosophy of life and religion.

Graceland has given me self-confidence, assurance, and a definite aim in life. I wish now to get what knowledge I can and then come back to Graceland and offer my services as an instructor. I may not be able to do much, but I am willing to do what I can for the institution.

Graceland has a different atmosphere than any other college, it seems to me. There is an intangible something all about you. You feel it, you sense it, but at first you do not entirely comprehend it. Only after serious thinking and careful observation do you become aware of the cause of that “intangible something.” It is, first, cooperation on the part of both students and faculty; second, earnestness in all occupations; third, purpose, everyone seems to know where he is going and how he is to get there; fourth, reverence for things which call forth that trait; and fifth, enthusiasm, which marks all phases of work taken up. With those characteristics so dominant in a school, it cannot help but be different—and better!

I am willing to do what I can to help the college keep its high ranking.

Safety Education

Half the toll of children killed by accidents in the United States might be saved by a campaign of safety education in the schools, according to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. Three university fellowships of $1,000 each for the study of safety education have been established by the bureau.

Patriarch Pitt’s Recovery Delayed

Early in the week we had word that Brother Frederick G. Pitt and Sister Pitt were at their special work of caring for the Kirtland Temple, but under date of September 2, a letter from Sister Pitt conveys this information: “We regret to say we are obliged to give up our work here, owing to Elder Pitt’s condition. He suffers severe bodily pain, making him almost helpless. We know you sense our sorrow in leaving the place and the work we love so much, but are glad to leave it in such good hands as Brothers Fry and Patterson. We came and tried to do our part, but find it impossible at this time. We are still hopeful all will be well in time.”

How Shall Graceland Be Maintained?

The only institution of higher learning to be organized and promoted by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is Graceland College, located at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

After five years of organized and determined pioneer effort, it opened its doors to students on September 17, 1895, on the second floor of a store building in this attractive little country town, and the enrollment was so small that it could not be denominated an auspicious beginning.

Through long years of intense struggle this little college pursued its course, bringing to numbers of young men and young women now prominent in its faculty and in the working forces of the church, including its leading quorums, training which has been of great value. But this does not measure the benefit which has accrued to the individuality of the church, for the culture of the body has been perceptibly raised by the contact made possible when these trained young men and women have been deployed throughout the membership of the body. Nearly one thousand young people have completed some course of study offered by Graceland, and more than five thousand have taken some training under her faculty.

The first college building, when its doors were opened for students in January of the year 1897, and which still crowns College Hill, was then estimated to be an asset of possibly $30,000 value. From this initial valuation, the physical properties forming Graceland College have steadily increased until now it is worth almost ten times that amount, or at least $275,000. With the increase in valuation of its properties has come more than a corresponding increase in its usefulness to the church, and now we find that instead of a graduating class of one person, the class of 1898, in 1925 it sent out a class of ninety-eight to make themselves felt in the working organizations and councils of the church.

A Change in Questions

For many years the annual question was, Shall the church conduct the college for another year, or shall its doors remain closed after the present college year is over? Of late years this question has been changed, and at this time the question is, How shall we conduct Graceland College? And this question became acute a short year ago, when the division of the accrediting association of the country known as the North Central Association made a new ruling, that a portion of the income supporting a four-year college should be derived from a permanent endowment of not less than $500,000; and that a junior or two-year college should derive a portion of its support from a like endowment of not less than $200,000.

This would seem to indicate clearly the answer to the present question as to the financial method to be pursued in conducting the college—it should be at least partially by the endowment plan. For a number of years the college has been fully accredited by the North Central Association, and the whole system of higher education in America to-day is built upon a system of accrediting. No college could hope to secure a desirable student body, either as to number or quality, which institution did not protect its graduates and further their interests in the world by seeing that its standing was such as to give them equal standing in the marts of trade and education with the graduates of other like institutions. What is more, no thorough Latter Day Saint wants to place his young brothers and sisters just entering the world of earnest activity under any handicap which is avoidable. They will have enough to carry at best; we all want their load to be as light as we can make it.

$200,000 Must Be Raised to Maintain Present Standing

Last General Conference adopted the following as its conviction of what should be done:

Whereas the financial support of the institutions of the church, including Graceland College, has been under consideration by the leading quorums and General Conference for many years, and

Whereas the leading quorums of the church have adopted

www.LatterDayTruth.org
the policy of maintaining a fully standardized and officially accredited college of recognized standing in the educational world.

Whereas the standardizing and accrediting associations of the country have recently revised their standards relating to endowments, fixing $200,000 permanent endowment for junior colleges and a minimum of $500,000, for four-year colleges, and

Whereas the matter of endowment for Graceland College has been under consideration by the leading quorums of the church for several years and by resolution been favored by the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric, as well as by the Standing High Council, and

Whereas all income derived from permanent endowment will reduce by that amount the appropriations required for the General Conference for current running expenses,

Therefore, be it resolved, That we favor the policy followed for many years of maintaining and supporting a fully standardized and officially accredited institution of higher learning at Graceland College; and

In view of the fact that in order to maintain a junior college an endowment of $200,000 is required, and for a four-year college an endowment of $500,000 is required by the accrediting associations of the country,

Be it further resolved, That we favor the raising of an endowment for Graceland College of $200,000 at once in order to maintain our present junior college, and an additional $300,000 at the earliest possible date for the accrediting of a full four-year standard college.

Immediately the forces of the church offices took up the work of carrying out the will of General Conference, and two and one half months of preparation have already been made for the raising of the necessary endowment of $200,000, that the present standing of the college may be maintained. There are left six weeks to complete preparation for the raising of the fund, which will be begun November 1 and completed November 15.

Two hundred thousand dollars would seem to be a large sum to raise, but when the burden is divided among all the people of the church who are producers, it is not an oppressive or impossible one. Of course every member should do his share, and "according as the Lord has prospered him." We are "in the world" in the matters of educational training as well as in the organization of associations to complete the economic or industrial or social redemption of Zion, and we cannot withdraw ourselves so completely from a qualified dependence upon our Gentile neighbors as to ignore this action of the accrediting associations of the country. It is our duty as a church to conduct our college according to this ruling, that our graduates may receive the benefits.

Methods of Raising the Fund

One leaflet recently sent out from the church offices contains the following items of information concerning the manner in which subscriptions will be taken and payment made:

Terms of Subscription. Pledges will be accepted for any amounts, and eight months will be given to complete the payment. If possible, one fourth of the pledge should be paid in cash at the time when made, but this is not absolutely necessary. Do not hesitate to accept pledges without cash payments, if necessary. The pledge cards provide for payment being made on the 10th of the month, and it is desirable to have the total unpaid amount of the pledge paid in monthly installments. This will make it easy for the signer to pay the pledge. Your committee should be thoroughly informed regarding the terms of subscription, so that a correct explanation can be made to your members.

Amounts to Accept. Accept any size contributions offered, but impress on the people the fact that dollar subscriptions will not raise this college endowment. We must talk in terms of one hundred dollars and more. Few wage earners but can afford this much, considering the fact that they have eight months in which to earn it. Some of our missionaries and members whose income is very limited have signified their willingness to help and are giving most generously. Use discretion, however, and avoid urging members to subscribe more than they really can pay. Discernment on the part of your committee members should govern in this matter.

Where to Remit. Pledges and amounts collected should be turned into the hands of the Bishop's solicitor in your branch and by him turned over to the Bishop's agent in your district.

Further information will be supplied from time to time, and full preparation should be made to raise the required pledges during the first fifteen days of November.

The feature of this plan which makes it possible to further the stewardship program and provide the endowment for the college will be discussed in these columns in the near future.

Questions and Answers

Question: What is meant by the second paragraph of the paper known as the "Program for the establishment of Zion," adopted by the late General Conference, which reads as follows: "That the Bishopric secure completed financial statements by the selection of a corps of men qualified by special training (if possible) who shall be assigned territory with a view to securing these financial statements by personal contact." Does this special training referred to mean college training?

Answer: Answering the question as to our understanding of what was meant by the command of the late General Conference instructing the Bishopric to "secure completed financial statements by the selection of a corps of men qualified by special training (if possible) who shall be assigned territory with a view to securing these financial statements by personal contact," we advise as follows:

It is our understanding that the Bishopric should select men who understand not only the law governing the stewardship plan, but who are capable of attending to the mechanical part, or who are able to make out these financial statements.

The word qualified is understood by us to be used here in a limited sense, and not that this corps of men should necessarily be college graduates. The General Conference, including the Solemn Assembly, is the highest legislative body in the church, and when it commands there remains nothing for us to do but obey. The Bishopric then desire to find men who are fully in sympathy with the financial program of the church, who have shown their sympathy and sincerity for the same by fully complying with its provisions, who are competent to teach the same both theoretically and practically. The various bishops, Bishop's agents, and the agent's solicitors should all be in full accord with the program and constructively try to get all members to comply with this program.

Does This Peddler Come to Your Door?

Then Beware of His Wares

A small boy returning from Sunday school was asked concerning the golden text for the day, and replied, "Go ye into all the world and tell the gossip to all the people."

Luke in his seventeenth chapter of Acts of the Apostles has this parenthetical comment: "For all the Athenians and strangers who were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing."

Human nature does not change very much. Today's new rumor has more disciples than yesterday's truth. At least it has more patrons and colporteurs—they may not be truly disciples, since to-morrow men and women of that type are intrigued by another rumor.

Jesus himself furnished material for gossip—or at least he was the victim of it. The story got out and spread abroad that he was a tippler and that he was a glutton and a winebibber. His parentage was questioned. (Parenthood is at least claimed.)

Jeremiah suffered: "And they said, Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah. . . . Come and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words."—Jeremiah 18:18.

It was gossip that put Jeremiah in the dungeon, and Joseph Smith in Carthage jail, and Jesus Christ on Calvary's cross. Gossip has not lost its power to blacken, to distress, in the last extremity to incite murder.

Particularly when there are strong differences of opinion, gossip is busy. To-day is no exception to the rule. There is in circulation a great variety of rumors, stories, and assertions (gossip), some of which is being printed and widely distributed. An occasional rumor may be corrected; most of them go beyond reach of correction. Some of this gossip, gathered on the street and elsewhere, may be true, though truth is not often sensational enough to appeal to the peddler. Some of it is utterly false, without even a minimum of truth. Some of it is made up of half truths. This may be more dangerous than the other, because of the adulterous relations truth is made to bear with error, the children of which belong in the house of correction but instead get into very good homes because of the respect had for the one parent. (Parenthood is at least claimed.) When people know that a part of a story is true they are prone to accept it all without further investigation and may be deceived where an out-and-out falsehood would have been investigated and exposed.

It was known that Jesus ate with publicans. On the strength of that fact the story that he was a drunkard the more readily obtained credence. The peddler could barter that story where others might have been rejected. But, oh, poor peddler! He has sunk into merited and no doubt welcome oblivion. To-day he would curse the man who would make his name known. How foolish, how vicious, how despicable his industry. The name of Jesus of Nazareth has risen far beyond his power to besmirch. And this is true more or less of every faithful man or woman. When Brigham Young began to deride the name of Emma Smith to her two sons, Alexander and David, Alexander being impetuous naturally became indignant; but David taking it philosophically laughed at the blustering Brigham and said, "You might as well try to rub the silver from the moon as to endeavor to tarnish the name of Emma Smith."

The man who really is called of God and knows it, and is trying in humility to do his duty as best he can, may have many arrows shot at him from in front and some from behind, but he can stand in the strength of Israel's God conscious that. The discussion of truth is always respectable; to divert attention from principles and embark upon a campaign of personalities is a sad mistake.

Sometimes when the real truth of the matter is brought to the attention of the peddler of rumors, he takes shelter under the plea, "I did not know that." But generally there is a way to know. Why repeat a story until you have made a reasonable effort to discover whether or not it is true?

There are always two pertinent questions to ask: First, is it true? Second, even though it prove to be true, will any good come from repeating it? There seems to be an ever-present impulse in the human heart to immediately repeat a spicy story. We almost burst with importance and must relieve ourselves by rehearsing it to others. We have the haste and the zeal of a messenger. But what sort of a messenger?

Is our message true? We may talk largely about truth, and spell it with capital letters, TRUTH. But is the particular story we wish to spread true? Do we take time to find out whether it is true?

Granting that the story is true, should it be told? Shall we win our way by such methods? Shall we help others and the cause of truth thus? Here wisdom must enter in. Paul says, "Speaking the truth in love." Is it really love that prompts diligence to gather such rumors and such haste to relate them, even if assured of their truth?

James wisely said: "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain." On the other hand, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." The man who can control the tongue that is so eager to talk can control all the rest of the body.

Here is a rule that is Christian: When stories come to you on the printed page or by word of mouth, before you believe them and speed them on their way to other homes and hearts to blacken the reputation of men or quorums, go to or write to those concerned and get their side of the story. (It matters not who is concerned, the procedure is Christian.) I have tried it many times with profit; in the few instances where I have failed, regret has followed. A bad story thoughtlessly repeated leaves a bad taste in the mouth and a bad feeling in the conscience. It may not blacken any other soul; but it will tarnish the soul of the man who constantly indulges in such practice.

Having verified the story, if it be true, is it such a story as should be published abroad? Can you speak it in love? Is it such a story as you would tell your neighbor about those whom you love most? These are searching questions. Straight answers will greatly help. And they will eventually put the peddler of gossip out of business in Zion.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

The information your letter [a letter from the Presidency's office] contained as to activities in financial lines is encouraging indeed. And we are happy also to note from the Herald and otherwise that the spiritual condition is greatly improving. From the rapid change to better and more pleasing conditions since the conference, it appears that some wonderful experiences are immediately before the church. Anticipating this, we pray that we may ever keep pace with its progress—Excerpt from letter D. J. Williams, Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, August 25.

What Think We of Jesus the Christ?

Sermon by Charles E. Irwin at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, April 20, 1924.

In a consideration of the life and message of Jesus Christ, there occurs at least one episode to which we would like to call your attention. Upon one occasion, as recorded in the 16th chapter of Matthew, you will recall he was discussing with his disciples the results, so far as they were then ascertainable, of his mission on earth, and he propounded to his disciples this very significant question, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" We are not imputing to the Master a selfish motive in this query. He was merely jealous of his mission upon which this Father had sent him. He was interested in the thing for which he was giving his life, and hence from his emissaries he sought to secure the information which perhaps would enable him better to direct his effort in the salvation of mankind. You will recall, without my making further extended reference to the scriptural reading, that there were various answers given to this question, almost each one of which seemed to indicate very clearly the absence of definite understanding on the part of the men of the world with respect to the purposes of that mission. The question is, at least in some respects, pertinent to us in this age, and I contend that Jesus Christ is quite as much interested in our conception of his mission to-day as he was during his active ministry in the world. And if we are to judge the effect of that ministry, we should to-day draw ourselves apart that we may obtain a perspective of the results obtained.

And by what means shall we discover the results of the ministry of Jesus Christ? There is but one way to judge of the effectiveness of that mission, of that life, and of that consecration, and that is by ascertaining and evaluating the conduct of man. In terms of human conduct and behavior, shall we therefore be enabled to discover the full extent to which this message of Jesus Christ has had its place in our lives. I invite you, therefore, to draw yourselves apart for the moment and in your mind's eye picture the world as it exists to-day in terms of the ideal established by Jesus Christ. There can be no question but that this behavioristic analysis is the only one open to us.

At once one is perplexed by the extent to which the social conflict of the world has driven us in these the last days. In what extremity do we find ourselves in the midst of this great social conflict? It means simply this, my friends, that we have come to the point where conflict is regarded as the normal state of affairs. We are forced to acknowledge to ourselves and to our brethren that peace is no longer a normal expression of social life, but that as a matter of fact conflict becomes a conventional social state. It is true that conflict is sometimes an agent of progress, but unfortunately we are too often compelled to observe it in its most malicious and destructive form—the offspring of a selfish mind. We are not therefore assured of the final triumph of righteousness and truth. It is this that Mr. Wells has in mind when he speaks of the race between education and catastrophe. So far, then, has the message of Jesus Christ been distorted that truth staggering under the tremendous burden of the ideal established by him is waging a controversy, the outcome of which is, to say the least, doubtful. Nor should we forget that in this struggle we are facing the very definite responsibility of making the gospel of Jesus Christ a power unto salvation, that it shall not return to God void, that it shall not be a nameless thing, but that it shall be a thing full of power unto the salvation of mankind.

We are confronted to-day with the type of conflict between nationalism on the one hand and internationalism on the other, and we are attempting in our weak way to discover the happy medium between a purely nationalistic spirit, sometimes falsely expressed in terms of patriotism, and the higher level of conduct which must of necessity emanate from internationalism, and that conflict creates a multitude of problems, a multitude of difficulties which affect very vitally the issues involved in this gospel of Jesus Christ. It gives rise to race prejudice, internecine conflict, and civil war, brother against brother and father against son.

The same serious conflict confronts us when we observe our economic life. We have on the one hand a determined camp representing capital; on the other hand we have a determined camp representing labor, whose interests normally should be the same, identical, and yet they are standing face to face with swords drawn, and we have elevated in the midst of these camps, not the standard of human welfare but the standard of a dollar's value represented in material goods.

In religion, likewise, we have the same conflicts confronting us. Just now it happens to be the fad to declare one's intentions to be a fundamentalist or a modernist, forgetting all the while the supreme sacrifice and devotion mentioned by the Lord Jesus Christ and the preaching of his message which, interpreted in terms of modern life, means, if it means anything at all, higher levels of conduct and a maximum of human welfare. Not infrequently our religious difficulties are intensified by the fact that there is rolled up in them and entwined with them this most difficult problem of intolerance, representing not the disposition of man to discover the truth in an unbiased fashion, but rather determining in one's own mind to believe that which he wants to believe rather than that which determines in the last analysis to coincide with truth.

The same problem is confronting us in our educational world. It ranges all the way from the so-called ultra-liberalism to the very definite absolutism which is established in various types of institutions reflecting again this age-old problem of departure from the ideals laid down by Jesus Christ in his mission.

And now, my friends, Jesus propounded to his disciples a second question. Not only was he concerned in knowing what men might say of him—men not of his flock, men outside of the pale of his influence, but he confronted his disciples with this question, "But whom say ye that I am?" "Lay aside for a moment what these men outside of my influence may say; disregard for a moment the shame which they would heap upon me; I want to know what think you of me?" And I say again that perhaps this thought uttered so many years ago may not be beyond our conception. May we analyze it for just one moment, please?

If I read history aright, it seems to me that the crux of the matter involved in this question was this, "To you, my disciples, to you, my friends, I ask these questions: What witness are you bearing for me? what testimony of my mission? What power and energy are you giving to the dissemination of this higher life that has brought me among you?" And that implies further, my friends, this still more pertinent question, "To what extent, my friends, have you been with me and learned of me? and having been with me and learned of me, what conduct issues as the result of that contact with me? Are there those who know me through you? Is it possible, my brethren, that men who do not now know me may perchance know me through the fulfillment of your ministry?"

I wonder to-night if that question does not face us squarely. Is there not confronting us, my brother, my sister, this very definite question, that having learned of God and learned of Jesus Christ, having come to know the Father, having searched after him and having found him, does there not rest upon us a very definite responsibility to establish that contact with others, that they, too, may know of God; and that they, too, may come to serve him; and that having come in possession of this knowledge they shall have set their feet upon the way which leads to truth and to freedom? But, my friends, if we would discharge our responsibility, we must discard the attitude of the biased mind. It is altogether too easy to agree with one’s fellows when they agree with you, but not quite so easy to maintain your own attitude when your friends forsake you. And yet there is definitely committed to us the belief that having come into possession of the truth and having tested the truth we shall maintain it at all costs.

Furthermore, in bearing this witness it is implied that we shall live that more abundant life, and that in the last analysis, my friends, means eventually making your religion a part of your life and not separated from your life. We have too long maintained, both in the world and in the church, perhaps, the attitude that our religion is to be maintained in conveniently labeled compartments which are used only on Sundays and to be neatly folded out of the way during the remainder of the week. And having kept this thing apart from our life we have witnessed to the world that we, too, perhaps, have failed to live on this higher level approximating the ideal of Jesus Christ, and have denied the power of the gospel to save men here and now.

That very definitely commits us to the notion that having set our feet in the way we shall not turn our faces backward to the darkness of reaction, backward to the mists of uncertainty, but that we shall press forward, carrying with us the motives that shall direct us to higher levels of conduct as exemplified by the Master himself. And let me say in the fear of God that if there is a man or woman within the sound of my voice who feels that Jesus Christ and his message cannot be taken with him or her into the daily life in which he or she is engaged, there should be a careful analysis of that religion or an analysis of your conduct; and should there perchance be revealed as a result of that analysis a laxity in complying with the law of God, then there rests upon us the definite responsibility of disciplining ourselves that there shall be incorporated into the acts of the day the higher motives and ideals which characterized Jesus Christ himself, and under no other assumption can you, my brother, or you, my sister, preach the gospel of Jesus Christ in power and assurance. And as a corporate body there rests upon us the further responsibility of uniting the interests of each one of us and harnessing them into a superpower project that the gospel of Jesus Christ may be felt in the world, not nominally but really. And the testing time to me means that we shall here and now declare whether we shall be longer counted in the ranks of merely nominal Christians or in the ranks of real Christians. We need not ask for a greater opportunity. It will never come. The greatest of all opportunities is here now. Look, if you please, upon this world of conflict, of turmoil, of suffering, and then say if you can, “I shall wait for a brighter day, for a more propitious opportunity.” It will never come. And there may, as a result of our delay, a more serious complication arise, making it still more difficult for the voice of God to be heard through us in the carrying forward of his ministry.

That his light may come into our lives, that it may stimulate us all to a higher level of conduct, that his name may be honored, that his power may be felt, that his glory may shine forth, I pledge you my faith and my prayers.

The New Day.—Number 3

BY A. H. CHRISTENSEN

We begin this article with emphasis again on motive and objective, because we believe them to be the touchstones of success. If only humanity would get the proper motive, at least have a good one, they would not go far wrong. In this the old-fashioned evangelist who bears down hard on “getting right with God,” is not far from right, for if one has the proper motive and objective he will usually reach them under any system. But the trouble is, too many have no high motive, and their objective has degenerated to the ultimate dollar. This degeneracy came about, we believe, by long periods of oppression of the weaker by the stronger, in which the weaker were subjugated to the conditions imposed by the stronger; and the weaker had their spirits broken thereby until they are no longer interested in public improvement, and a great many of them have only enough spirit left to fight for one thing—mere existence.

Idealism must again be instilled into the minds of the laboring class, and by the term laboring class we mean principally those who do physical labor. Surely the intellectual laborer may also be technically a laboring person, but the term is usually used to denote those who use their brawn. I believe the matter of viewpoint to be of such importance that it may be paraphrased as the “one thing thou lackest” of this present problem of the establishment of Zion. In the following quotation note closely the change of viewpoint and compare with your own stewardship.

A New Approach Necessary

We have heretofore approached the farm business from the standpoint of production. We have been asked, What can farmers produce? We must face about and begin the discussion of problems with the query, What do consumers want? This will be a hard saying to many men, but it is the beginning of new wisdom about our agriculture. We have said to farmers, Produce, produce, produce! We have given away land by the million acres in order to stimulate production.
Men purporting to speak for farmers have said, "Why worry about the consumer? He will take care of himself. Let us take care of the farmer." Agricultural colleges have experimented and taught and advised concerning production. But for years past, any farmer would tell you that his big problem was not one of production, but of selling to advantage. The war has taught us that the task of the farmer is to grow food and other soil-grown materials for the rest of the people. . . . We must think, then, of farming as mainly an effort to supply the demand for food.—The Farmer and the New Day, p. 32.

I believe this altruistic motive to be, in large measure, the force by which the cohesion and the equilibrium of Zion shall be maintained. Therefore such high importance is given to it. The obtaining of high idealism is much of man's regeneration. The earth is covered with farm papers, and the keynote of all of them is, "How to produce more." This is held out as the solution, in a great many cases, of present inequality; but never have I heard of the motive of selflessness and altruism being proposed by them. Alternating crops, intensified farming, cooperative selling, collective bargaining, and such like, propose only partial and temporary relief, but by them the soul is not regenerated. The same old motive of forcing the consumer to pay as much as possible, with no thought for his welfare, remains the motive in that case. In the majority of cases, all such proposed methods are sponsored by politicians and saturated with politics. But the farmer may take little or no hope in political reform.

The Farmer in Politics

How can the farmers make themselves felt in our political life? As a party, shall they have representation in legislative business? Shall they, in so far as possible, control the making of laws? Are they to have as much vote as the city dwellers or the laboring classes? Neither of these things seems very practicable, perhaps not even desirable. On the other hand, Are the farmers to be left out of account and have nothing to say? Are they to have no unified opinion or desire that finds expression through the political party or government? How can we find the balance between practical neglect of our farmers, and political revolution among the farmers?—Ibid., p. 55.

The author closes the topic without answering the questions he asks. And indeed it may be entirely impossible to answer through politics, for the matter is one of economics and not of politics. It would be vain to look for relief by legislation while ninety-nine per cent of the legislators are of the old school of economics, holding still to the theory of production for profit, the competitive system for labor, etc. The problem is economic, not political, and needs no new legislation for its solution. All the idealism that we have discussed may be crystallized into real life by a group of persons living under and keeping the present laws. In fact, we have reason to believe that the present constitution and laws were made as much, if not more, for the new order than for the old. He that keeps the law of the Lord will not need to break the laws of any land.

As a beginning, then, it is suggested that we start at the soil and make labor paramount. That we produce, manufacture, and distribute with a new ideal of service, and lose sight, if possible, of the idea of gain for its sake. That the group raise food and other raw materials for shelter, clothing, etc., and that we endeavor to supply our own needs as soon as possible. For a group effort to essay to produce food with the objective of feeding the whole world, would be some like the effort of one man of whom I have read in the daily press, who undertook to build a railroad aided only by a faithful team. At the end of a number of years he had only a few miles of roadbed finished. But a group should more rationally undertake to produce as the people of California produce peaches—they, of their product, "eat all they can, and what they can't eat, they can.'

This program will call for canning factories, which will take care of the surplus food as we should also lay away our surplus money for the use of ourselves and neighbors in times of shortage. In this way we shall obey the advice of the wise man and consider the ways of the ant and be wise. The storehouse will take care of the surplus, both of money and meat, and distribute according to just rules of the gospel to those who have need.

I consider the industry of canning food one of the important industries of Zion. It should be one of the first established. Very little equipment is required to make a start, and we already have the land and the labor. Tomatoes, beans, peas, cabbage, pickles, corn, and fruit of all kinds could be canned and stored as well by us as by others. It seems the location for the plants should be where gardening and fruit growing are both successfully carried on. Southern Missouri and Arkansas and eastern Oklahoma are among such places. By thus husbanding our food resources we could escape being affected by the fluctuation in prices occasioned by the so-called supply and demand. A flour mill would next be established in order that the wheat of the farmer steward could find its way quickly to the table of the consumer, without having to pass through too many hoppers of control.

Speculation

The Lord has said that the spirit of speculation is wrong. This is a statement of abstract or general truth. Speculation, it seems, is foreign to the plan of God. It produces nothing. The whole economic system should be made up of production, manufacture, distribution, and consumption. We now ask, at some hazard, Shall the institution serve the people, or shall the people serve the institution? I take it that the institution (the church) shall serve the people, upon the same principle that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath. It seems that the spirit of speculation on the part of the institution whereby, say, a piece of land is purchased at an acre price and sold to the Saints at a town lot price, at no saving to the Saints over the purchase price elsewhere, but by which the church is enriched, makes of it a commercial organization of the old type with the spirit of gain instead of service. Or a storehouse which is built upon the present economic plan of increasing its capital each year by profits gained on each sale of food to the inhabitants of Zion at no saving to them over the prices elsewhere, but by which the church is enriched, again makes of it a commercial organization and eligible to membership to the chamber of commerce wherever it may be found.

If we can show the world that Zion will bring better conditions, they will be interested and wish to take up their residence there, and become a part of it; but if we can only invite them to come and help the institution, while not seeing any progress being made in the temporal blessing reaching the people, they will likely do as they have in the past, become dissatisfied. Brotherly love may stand that strain, but will reason? Is there not suggested in this an answer to past failures in church institutions? Our friendly criticism is intended to help inspire another attempt, employing the Spirit of the New Day. Then if the people are temporally blessed, the profit that would have accrued to the institution shall have been saved per capita by the people and will return to the storehouse in the form of tithing and surplus, and the people will get the spiritual blessing and reward of giving it. If the institutions of the church then have need of anything in their stewardship, cannot they apply also where others apply for aid? It is a long step indeed to abandon the competitive profit system entirely for one which relies solely upon the religion of the people to make it go, but if the people cannot be trusted in their idealism, then no system of which they are the major element will work, and Zion will be indefinitely postponed.

I have written in these articles of only a few of the phases of Zion's preparation. I have not quoted much from the three standard books, which I feel are preeminent in this doctrine, for I have considered that the readers were sufficiently familiar with those books to have supporting passages suggested by what we have written, without special references. I trust that what has been written will at least arouse interest in some of the things needed for the establishment of Zion. As long as we live we expect to be idealistic, altruistic, zealous, and industrious in the endeavor to establish Zion.

Religious Influences Among Ancient Nations

Address of A. B. Phillips, January 13, 1925, at Radio Station KLD S.

The rapidity with which important events are moving to-day so closely engages the attention of the people that they find little time to search the misty ages of the dead in order to discover what remarkable events took place in the early periods of history. Even if we use, for convenience, the chronology of Bishop Ussher, which has been generally accepted as a basis of biblical periods, it seems almost an immeasurable time back to the flourishing ages of the Egyptians and Babylonians. If interpretations of archaeological research are used as a basis of consideration, however, we may find that the history of man goes much farther back than had been supposed until recent time.

No matter how far we attempt to trace the civilizations of the past, we shall find that in every important period discoverable by us there existed among all the great nations of antiquity most astonishing religious influences; and it was these influences that most largely contributed to the great developments that took place among the nations from time to time, without which the nations themselves would, in many instances at least, have long before ceased to exist.

The value of religion in the progress of the world can hardly be esteemed too highly. It is true that many mistakes and misconceptions have written their dark pages in the annals of the past, but it is also true that the most sublime ideals and the greatest attainments of all time would have miserably failed without the inspiration and support that religious effort has supplied, even from the most remote ages known to us. He who sees no value in these ancient influences has probably not discerned the fact that they supplied a very human need, even if they also held much of error. Many of the ancient teachings by religious leaders were remarkably lofty and of the highest ideals, so far as man's duty to his fellows is concerned.

Priesthood in Religion

It is of unusual interest to note that all the great religions anciently existing functioned through a priesthood among the people. This was true in a particular degree of the old Babylonians, the Egyptians, the Hindoos, the Grecians, the Persians, the Hebrews, and the Maya nation in Mexico. While the Bible has enabled us to know more of the details of the Hebrew priesthood than we have learned of those that existed among other ancient peoples, it was by no means the only one of remarkable interest in those periods of long ago.

In most, if not in all of these nations, it was the well-organized and powerful influences exerted by the priesthood that solidified the governments themselves, and in many instances the reigning monarchs preserved their dominion through observing close connection with the established religions of their respective times. The security of his throne was often dependent upon the monarch’s religious behavior. In many instances this served to prevent oppression, and gave a measure of freedom to the people that otherwise would never have been realized.

This concept of a priesthood must have been a very ancient one, as it is traced back clearly to a probable period of not less than three thousand years before Christ, and is in evidence at an even more ancient date. The fact that it was splendidly organized and powerful at that time indicates that it must even then have come up through a long period of development in order to have attained to that condition.

Among the Babylonians

From its earliest known period the Babylonian religion was strongly organized with a priesthood and religious observances. Magnificent temples also existed in which many devotions were performed. Anu, Bel, and Ea formed a sort of trinity which represented the divisions of the universe, but there was a confused variety of other gods, some of which were apparently held in about equal esteem. By about 2,200 years before Christ, or in the time of Hammurabi, there existed in principal cities certain deities having political powers, which were supposed to hold great influence there. Hammurabi himself is by some believed to have been the Amraphel of Genesis, king of Shinar.

The Babylonians are believed to have derived much of their religious belief from the Sumerians, a very ancient people who seem to have preceded the Babylonians around the plains of Shinar or Babel. To their gods were attributed certain qualities, as justice, and mercy; and devotions were offered to secure the favor of the gods possessing those qualities the exercise of which might be desired. In this respect the knowledge had by the Babylonians in astronomy was applied in the belief that celestial phenomena produced certain results on the earth, thus affecting their religious prospects.

The significance of Babylonian religious life is shown to an extent in the fact that Canaan was under the influence of Babylonian rule as early as the time of Abraham. Babylonian inscriptions reveal the names of several characters mentioned in the Bible. The name of Adamu, found among Babylonian words, means man, and his descendants were supposed to have been of the red race. Among the startling similarities between the biblical and the Babylonian records are accounts of creation, the holy tree, the guardians of the tree, the building of the ark, the flood, the sending forth of the raven and the dove, the confusion of tongues, and the dispersion of the people. The Sumerians knew the plain of Babylonia as “Eden,” and the Babylonians called it “Edinu.”

It was to the temple stores that even the ruling monarch of Babylonia had to go at times, and what he borrowed must be returned with scrupulous care. The tithes and consecrations of the people could be used by the unfortunate in time of adversity, and the agriculturist might borrow his seed from that source but must return its equivalent when prospered by his crops. It was a common store to which all in need had access under proper rules and restrictions, and must have resulted in knitting the people together largely.

Religion Among the Egyptians

Owing to their long connection with Hebrew history, interest particularly centers on the people of ancient Egypt, with respect to their religious activities. Authentic records extend over a period of about two thousand years, though religion must have been strongly established among them long before then. A multiplicity of gods existed there, of which Re was chief god of the universe, Osiris was ruler of the dead, Thoth was the moon god, and Isis, the mother of Horus, was the chief national goddess. An intricate polytheistic form of worship developed, but in time Ammon, Re, and Ptah became the three ruling gods of Egypt.

In Egypt, as in the Hebrew religion, there existed in the priesthood an order known as high priests, who performed certain civil functions, as well as those of a religious nature. The Egyptian priesthood was strongly organized with graded offices in which each performed definite functions. The priesthood was highly educated, and the ruler himself sought these educated oracles in time of exigency; he also was authorized to perform certain of the devotional rites when occasion required. The presiding priests were men of great power, and in some respects largely dominated the ruling monarchs. A high priest known as a Great Seer functioned at times among the priestly offices, but this office seems not to have been always occupied.

The Egyptians appear to have believed in immortality as a prominent feature of their religion. A belief in the future state is amply proven by their sacred literature, such as the Pyramid texts, the Book of Gates, the Am Duat, and the Book of the Dead. Magic was to some extent used by them, and this may have been similar to the ceremonies of the Magicians mentioned in the book of Exodus. A belief in one immortal and uncreated God has been proven to have been held among them, and is shown by inscriptions on a tablet in the British Museum.

The Tel-el-Amarna records, the remarkable value of which is now well known, give us the name of Abdi-Ihepa, a king of Jerusalem, and a vassal of Amenophis IV, who ruled in the fourteenth century before Christ. Amenophis IV was one of the most remarkable rulers of ancient Egypt, who sought to destroy the worship of the many deities esteemed in Egypt, and to establish the worship of Aton, a word meaning the sun. He changed his own name to Akhenaton, which signified the worship of Aton, and built a capital at El Amarna, near where many inscribed tablets have since been found. His son-in-law, Tutenkhaton, finally reigned, changing his name to Tutenkhamon, to show his reverence for the god Ammon, which his father-in-law had unsuccessfully tried to do away with. It is the tomb of Tutenkhamon that has recently been discovered, about which much has been written.

The Place of Hebrew Religion

From the time of Abraham, who was called the Father of the Faithful, the Hebrews were distinguished from all others because of their distinctive religion. It was the Hebrews that established the distinctive worship of Jehovah, the one supreme and only, God of the universe. Historically it is to the Hebrews, whose religion became the dominant power in their national life, that we are indebted for the first great concept of the one God who possesses in supreme fullness every attribute that represents a perfect Deity, so far as concepts have enabled man to evaluate these attributes.

This one important concept of Deity was itself calculated to destroy all polytheistic worship when it should win its way among the nations of the world. To find in one God a fullness of power, wisdom, love, virtue, mercy, justice, immortality, and all that is comprehended in intelligence, was never so conceived by the heathen nations at any time in their history as known to us to-day.

It is true that the Hebrews as a whole probably did not grasp in a very great measure every detail of this concept at any time of their national history, but the religion which embraced these essentials became more clearly understood as Hebrew religious experience developed, and when the Messiah came in fulfillment of the promises of God, this development had enabled many of the Jews to grasp the significance of his remarkable mission to an extent that otherwise would have been impossible for them. Thus through the Hebrews came the religion that now invites the world's worship as the only perfect religion, the religion that satisfies the whole soul of man.

The Six-Year Molars

BY D. K. MANEELEY, D. D. S.

The morning baby's first tooth is discovered nosing its way through soft, pink gums is a gala day for the whole family. By the time baby has grown to a sturdy youngster of six, new teeth have lost their thrill. This year is many times more important than the first tooth, for it is then our darling youngster cuts teeth which should give service for many years. At the age of six, the first four permanent molars erupt. They occupy the space just back of the last baby tooth in each quarter of the mouth. These usually slip through without any fuss and are decayed before the parents are aware of their existence.

In this connection let us consider how these teeth may cause crowding of the second teeth. The baby tooth just ahead has decayed, so it must be extracted. This allows the first molar to come in the space of one tooth too far forward, and does not leave enough space for the other teeth which come in later. This is a frequent cause for many so-called "tusks," which are unsightly.

Two teeth come in behind the first molar. If this tooth is too far forward, the second molar and "wisdom tooth" have an excess of space and become crooked and tipped.

Ninety-five per cent of adults have either lost or filled this important tooth. When it first breaks through the gum, above and below, they do not match for almost a year. Food crowds into the grooves and cannot be removed except by brushing. Result: decay, abscesses, extraction; and all because we supposed it to be a baby tooth.

This problem must be met and conquered or we will soon become a nation of twisted faces and crowded teeth. I should like to shout from the rooftops, "Save those baby teeth and make the mouth safe for the permanent."

"I never had a chance," is a coward's whine, yet it is surprising how many people put up that excuse for failing to make of their lives all they should. Opportunity is open to everybody and though the supreme opportunity may come only once in a lifetime, other opportunities are sure to follow. . . . The chance we all seek in all probability is close at home, right at the door, instead of in some bigger city or some foreign country. There are those who feel that they are not in the right work of life. Let them change if they can, but if they can't let them learn to love the work they have to do. There is something fine and good and inspiring about everybody's work.—Burris A. Jenkins.

The Graceland College Endowment Fund

Facts relating to the resolution unanimously adopted by the last General Conference providing for this fund.

For many years Graceland College has met all standards required and has been recognized as a fully accredited junior college, not only by the North Central Association, but by the Iowa Accrediting Commission, the Iowa State Board of Educational Examiners, and the National Association of Junior Colleges. Recently, however, one of the standards of the North Central Association relating to financial support has been changed, requiring that the junior college receive a certain portion of its income from the interest of permanent endowment. The expense of maintaining Graceland College under the endowment plan will be no greater than under the plan pursued up to this time.

The present plan of supporting the college aside from tuition and fees, is the annual appropriation by the church and the annual College Day collection. If the $200,000 endowment required to continue Graceland as an accredited college is so invested in stocks, bonds, lands, or industrial plants as to produce an interest of five per cent, the income thus derived would be $10,000, which would reduce by that amount the annual appropriation by the General Conference for college expense. The total expense is no greater under one plan than the other, the only difference being that part of the amount needed for maintaining the college will come from the interest on this permanent endowment and not from annual appropriations by the General Conference.

Your attention is called to the following action of the General Conference of April, 1925, which was passed by unanimous vote:

Action of Conference

"Whereas the financial support of the institutions of the church, including Graceland College, has been under consideration by the leading quorums and General Conference for many years, and

"Whereas the leading quorums of the church have adopted the policy of maintaining a fully standardized and officially accredited college of recognized standing in the educational world, and

"Whereas the standardizing and accrediting associations of the country have recently revised their standards relating to endowments, fixing $200,000 permanent endowment for junior colleges and a minimum of $500,000 for four-year colleges, and

"Whereas the matter of an endowment for Graceland College has been under consideration by the leading quorums of the church for several years and by resolution been favored by the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric as well as by the Standing High Council, and

"Whereas all income derived from permanent endowment will reduce by that amount the appropriations required, for the General Conference for current running expenses,

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we favor the policy followed for many years of maintaining and supporting a fully standardized and officially accredited institution of higher learning at Graceland College, and

"In view of the fact that in order to maintain a junior college an endowment of $200,000 is required and for a four-year college an endowment of $500,000 is required by the accrediting associations of the country,

"Be it further resolved, That we favor the raising of an endowment for Graceland College of $200,000 at once in order to maintain our present junior college, and an additional $300,000 at the earliest possible date for the accrediting of a full four-year standard college."

In the administration of this fund when raised, it is suggested that in the development of the stewardship plan, lands may be purchased and resold, the interest on the purchase price to be used for the maintenance of the college to meet its endowment requirements; or, if it may be loaned to the general church, the interest secured by properties held by the church and on which money is borrowed, the interest now being paid to outsiders.

One of the fine features of the plan is that both the endowment of the college and the operation of the stewardship program can be made effective with the same money. The two hundred thousand dollars required for the college endowment cannot be spent. Otherwise, it will not be an endowment. It can only be invested for purposes of the church. It can be invested in lands, industrial plants, etc., and used for the putting into effect the stewardship program. Thus, every dollar subscribed to the college endowment will serve a double purpose.

1. Save the college so that her standards and accrediting can be maintained.

2. Make effective the stewardship program of the church.

Of course it is understood that the operation of the law of stewardships in connection with the college endowment will be under general church officers who are under obligation to carry out the instructions of General Conference.

A report must be made during the present college year to the North Central Association, stating that the $200,000 college endowment has been subscribed and paid. The college is on probation during this time limit set by the accrediting associations of the country, and if we do not meet these requirements, Graceland College, our own and only church college, to which for thirty years we have given our time, effort, and money to sustain, will be accredited. The church has accumulated an investment of $275,000 in college property and equipment. We cannot afford to lose it!

For the present school year, up to July 1, 1926, Graceland College is fully standardized and accredited, and students will receive full credits which will be accepted in other colleges and universities of this and other countries, and when the endowment is raised Graceland can meet all further requirements after that time.

Think what THAT means.

The credits of Graceland students will continue to be universally accepted. Its normal graduates can still secure situations in any public school. Our integrity as a church will be maintained; and, best of all, the church will keep faith with its young people.

We must decide a vital issue.

It means just this—much to lose or everything to gain.

This $200,000, divided among the active membership of the church, means a very small amount per member. There are substantial individual gifts in sight which make the outlook very encouraging.

A booklet descriptive of Graceland College, written by George N. Briggs, president of the college, is now released for free distribution, and copies have been mailed to all missionaries and into all branches. Articles are now appearing in the HERALD, giving some very interesting facts in regard to Graceland College. The branches throughout the world will be circulated, showing the necessity for raising this fund, which, if not raised, will cost us practically the value of our investment of thirty years.

As the general church officers are intrusted with the responsibility of carrying out the instructions of General Conference, we are going to the ministry and membership of the church, acquainting you with the situation and asking you to lend your support to this movement. The united support of the ministry and membership of the church means everything to the success of church projects, and we feel confident that to this particular issue before us you will give united support.

Very sincerely yours,

REUNION NEWS

Central Oklahoma Reunion and Conference

Our reunion closed August 2. It was a decided success; one of the best reunions held in the district. It was held in a beautiful grove near Skiatook. This was a new experience for the Skiatook Branch, and it was enjoyed so much we would like to have another one here. We had with us Apostle Roy S. Budd and family; Patriarch Ammon White, Bishop J. A. Koehler, Brother S. W. Simmons, and Sister Wilkie Ammerman, president of Greadland College. We may pass the following on the details of reunion and semiannual conference: The morning study hour each week day, in charge of Bishop Koehler, on stewardship proved interesting and profitable.

The young people's prayer services at half past seven each day followed by the old people's prayer services were introduced as the chief source of recreation. Old and young corresponded in the part of Recreation and Expression. Volley ball was proved interesting and profitable.

A reunion committee of five was selected, for one, two, three, four, and five-year terms, respectively, subsequent elections of one for a five-year term to follow each year. This committee, thus constituted, was empowered to fix the date in connection with suggestions from the general reunion committee.

Frederick W. Holman acted as secretary for reunion and conference.

Seattle, Washington

Seattle and British Columbia district reunion closed August 16, after ten days of pleasant renewals of acquaintance and the making of new ones, together with the spiritual development attained by all who attended. The attendance by the membership was as large if not larger than that of last year, and the interest equally as good if not better, the arrivals not quite so good.

The prayer services were good and fairly well attended. Much interest was manifested in the new grounds, and considerable permanent improvements were made through the efforts of the young. A well about eight feet in depth, giving forth an abundance of good water, had been dug; also a portion of the dining hall had been erected preparatory to the convening by the older ones.

Those of the general ministry present were Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith who gave several blessings, ably assisted by Miss Alice Phips as stenographer; Apostle Clyde F. Ellis who preached several fine and instructive sermons; also Brother and Sister M. A. Ettenhouser, departmental workers, who lectured each day on the principles of preparedness for Zion. A couple of sermons were also preached by each of our local district missionaries, M. H. Cook and A. C. Martin. The most instructive sermons and those of extensive admonition to the Saints, however, were preached by Patriarch F. A. Smith.

Conference sessions were held at intervals, beginning on the 11th. Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: Marcus H. Cook, president; Isaac S. McMullen, vice president; Sister Emma McDole, secretary, F. W. Holman, following after twenty-one and a half years' continuous service; H. A. Sprague, treasurer; member of library board discontinued; Austin Earl, chorister; H. A. Sprague, assistant; H. R. Tabbat, member auditing board for three-year term; Sister Jennie Jones, superintendent of Department of Women. Statistical report showed a present membership of 1,060, a net gain of thirteen. Local ministry reporting were Elders L. W. Brunson, O. L. Oppelt, and F. W. Holman, also Priests W. J. Puglsey and Thomas H. Spargo, and Teacher Oliver Shippy. According to a petition from the Seattle Branch, Monte Lasiter was ordered ordained to the office of elder and Samuel Stearns to that of deacon; also as per one from the Bellingham Branch, Oliver Shippy to the office of elder, Ira Lade to that of teacher, and Joseph John to that of deacon, all of which were consumed in the following Sunday's services.

A proposed change in Rule 3, district by-laws, was presented, to read as follows: "Regular conferences shall convene in July or August, the date to be determined by the district presidency or action of conference. Special conferences may be called by the district presidency." A reunion committee of five was selected, for one, two, three, four, and five-year terms, respectively, subsequent elections of one for a five-year term to follow each year. This committee, thus constituted, was empowered to fix the date, in connection with suggestions from the general reunion committee.

Northwestern Kansas

The Northwestern Kansas district reunion was held August 20 to 30 in a grove near Studley, Kansas. The young folks were a motley bunch of much concern during this reunion. Good, spiritual men had charge of the meetings, and a common good time was enjoyed by all. Fifteen tents were pitched, besides a large tent for services. Four branches were represented. Some members came for the first part of the reunion and some for the latter part. Camp fires were the means by which meals were prepared by most of the ladies, but there was one gas stove on the grounds which served to accommodate several families. Breakfast and supper were usually prepared by each family, but dinner was eaten by all at one large mess.

Entertainment of the young people formed a prominent part in this reunion. Sister John Teeters, who has charge of the Department of Recreation and Expression, had secured funds from the various branches and sent off for a volley ball and croquet set. Brothers Ed Curtis and Bruce Brown took charge of the young people and did all within their power to make this reunion a time long to be remembered as one of the bright spots in their memory. These young men are especially gifted in caring for the children and young people. Being young themselves, they have not forgotten traits of youth, and thorough study and practice have taught them to draw out the best there is in the young and direct their amusements into clean, wholesome channels. The great secret of their success is that they were one with the young, enjoyed their sports, and won the love of the boys and girls until they had but to suggest and their suggestions were gladly followed. Parents were caused to take notice, and received many helpful suggestions to assist them in dealing with their young.

A volley ball court was in the center of the grounds and furnished amusement and exercise afternoons and evenings between services. Three days the young folks, accompanied by many of the fathers and mothers, went over to the beach at Tasco, which is located about eight miles from the camp. It is a beautiful little lake surrounded by trees and arranged conveniently for swimming. Fathers, mothers, missionaries, and all at times went in for a common good time. Some of the days that they did not go to the beach for swimming the young folks went to the pool close to camp.

Much care was given the grounds to keep them in a sanitary condition and avoid sickness, and to our knowledge there was no sickness in camp during the reunion. The time after services was spent in games by both old and young, until half past ten, when all formed a circle and sang a song, usually "Conservation," after which prayer was offered by one of the missionaries before all retired. One night after services a winner roast was held.

Words fail to express the spiritual feasts that were enjoyed during the early morning prayer meetings and preaching services. Hovering over the camp the spirit of peace and unity and common good will to all produced a proper atmosphere for the good spiritual sermons that were presented.

We were especially blessed with good talent for the services. Brother Bruce Brown of Colorado Springs preached in the morning, and with but few exceptions the evening sermon was a missionary sermon by Brother Ed. Curtis. The last two nights, however, Brother Silvers delivered the evening sermon, as Brother Curtis had been called home on account of sickness in the family.

The Department of Women had charge of the forenoon sessions. The first subject taken up was the work of the department in the church, one of its greatest works being the training of children. Next was brought up the question of subjects for study in the department. "They say" was one of the subjects to be avoided in the women's meetings. The subject of religious education was enlarged upon by Sister Brown. Other valuable thoughts presented by her ave: Education trains emotions as well as brain. We should search out motives and train them. We should find talents and develop them. Education makes people able to adapt themselves. Religious education is not a substitute for the divine element in religion. A child's environment should encourage and strengthen good. Work must begin in infancy. One session was devoted to the question of church schools—the division of classes, beginning on time, praying simply so the child can understand, methods of teaching. At the round table sessions other vital subjects were considered, such as making proper entertainment interesting, drawing the line in amusements, dress, etc.

Central Michigan District

The fourth annual reunion of the Central Michigan District convened at Midland, Michigan, August 14, under the direction of the following committee: W. M. Grice, chairman; Otto Bartlett, secretary; William Mother, treasurer; Willis Schroock and S. T. Pendleton. The organization was effected, the district officers being put in charge. A large number of Saints were gathered even on Friday, the number far exceeding that of any previous reunion.

Grounds and weather conditions being ideal contributed very largely to our success. A wonderful spirit prevailed throughout the entire ten days. The spirit of humility and consecrated service was evident everywhere—each one being more than willing to perform his part to make this reunion the best.

At 6 o'clock the first bugle reminded us that we had had our rest, and that it was time to begin our activities for the day. At 6:30 family prayer was observed in the assembly hall. We must not fail to mention the large number present each morning. All seemed to feel the spirit of devotion, and we were glad to make this little sacrifice so early in the morning.

At 7 o'clock breakfast was served in cafeteria style. The meals throughout the reunion were served free of charge to everyone present, and surely God looked down upon us with a smile of approval, since this plan enabled many to attend the reunion who might otherwise have been compelled to remain at home. We commend the cooks and those who had this work in charge. The meals were nicely prepared and served in systematic order, as many as between 500 and 600 being served at a meal in forty minutes.

At 8.30 was general prayer meeting, followed by preaching at 10.30; dinner at 12 o'clock; a preaching service at 2.30, after which the remainder of the afternoon was given over to recreational activities. At 7.45 there was a song service, followed by preaching at 8 o'clock.

The music rendered all through the reunion was of the highest order. Orchestra music was a prominent feature of nearly all our services, it being under the able direction of Elders H. A. and B. H. Doty. Much credit is due these brethren and their band of musicians, for the music rendered, both by them and the choirs and organists, was enjoyed by all. We were also favored with excellent vocal music in the form of solos, duets, male quartets, etc. Surely we were made to rejoice that God has so wonderfully blessed his people with these talents.

We had many wonderful speakers present from various parts of the country. Among them were: Elder D. T. Williams, of the Quorum of Twelve; Elder C. J. Hunt, of the Ord. of Bishops; Sister Blanche Edwards, representing the Department of Women; Patriarch J. J. Bailey, John Shields, and G. W. Burt; as well as many missionaries and local elders from other fields. We had visitors from various parts of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Illinois, Texas, and many parts of Canada, and all seemed to enjoy the reunion to the greatest degree possible.

Friday afternoon Elder John R. Grice fired the first guns, delivering a very inspirational sermon, which seemed to impress the hearers to a marked degree. All seemed to catch the sentiments of meekness and humility throughout his discourse. He emphasized particularly the need of more consecrated service to God; that having food and clothing and the necessary things of life, let us be content, for that was more than nine-tenths of our people. The appropriate opening discourse could not have been given.

At 8 o'clock Elder B. H. Doty was the speaker, delivering a powerful sermon on the text: "Feed my lambs; feed my sheep."

He impressed his hearers that that divine command should be carried out; that he hoped we would leave the reunion bigger men and women than ever before.

At 8.30 Sunday morning there was a general prayer meeting. This meeting was highly spiritual and inspirational. At 10.30 there was preaching by John R. Grice, and at 2.30 Bishop C. J. Hunt was the speaker. His subject was: "Duties and responsibilities of Saints." He delivered a very inspirational sermon along the line of financial needs of the church, and that the church had grown, and the people present. Brother Hunt has an excellent way of putting the financial problems of the church before the people, and we are sure that the seed sown by him will bear abundant fruit.

At 8 o'clock Elder S. T. Pendleton was the speaker, using for a text: "Whosoever a man soweth, there shall he also reap." Brother Pendleton brought out many excellent thoughts that sank deep into the hearts of his hearers.

Sunday morning at 8.30 prayer service was in charge of Brethren John Shields and G. W. Burt. This was acknowledged by many as being the greatest outpouring of God's Spirit they had ever experienced since coming into the church. Truly it was a pentecostal shower. The building was filled to capacity, there not being even standing room. The time was well occupied in prayer, testimony, and song services, many being on their feet at one time to bear testimony. The gift of tongues and interpretation was given through Brethren John Shields and John R. Grice, in which many were spoken to encouragingly, and much encouragement was given us concerning the church work generally. Words are inadequate to describe this meeting and express the power of God manifested. Truly we felt to rejoice.

At 8 p.m. Elder B. H. Doty was the speaker, using John 17:21 as his text.

Monday at 8.30 another wonderful prayer meeting was enjoyed, in which the gift of prophecy was given. Much encouragement was given the Saints, and all enjoyed this meeting to a marked degree.

At 10.45 Elder J. W. McKnight preached from the text: "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting." He handled this text very ably and impressed his hearers with the thought of their responsibilities after leaving this reunion.

At 2 p.m. Bishop Hunt occupied, and 8 p.m. preaching was by John R. Grice.

After the prayer meeting on Tuesday morning, there was preaching at 10.30 and at 2.30 by Elder E. N. Burt.

At 8 o'clock preaching by Apostle D. T. Williams. This was the first time we were privileged to hear Brother Williams, and truly it was a treat. Brother Williams endeared himself to all from the very first, and all were delighted to have him with us. He possesses a rare trait, that of being chummy and making himself a real pal to everyone, both young and old. Surely God delights in such men.

On Wednesday our meetings were in the usual routine, except that we had an addition to our staff of speakers in the person of Sister Blanche Edwards. We wish to commend the work of Sister Edwards. Her lecture on the departmental work of the church is worthy the highest praise, and surely the church is extremely fortunate to have such women as she to go out in the interests of the auxiliary departments. We are unable, however, to find words at this time to do her full justice.

At 8 p.m. D. T. Williams delivered an excellent sermon on the "Golden to-morrow."

Thursday morning at 10.30 we were again privileged to hear Sister Edwards speak on "America's biggest business." It developed from her discourse that the biggest business in America was that of home making. Her talk was splendid. Thursday afternoon was field day, races and various sports being indulged in. This brought much merriment to the young people, as well as to many of the older ones. At 8 p.m. Elder D. T. Williams again addressed a large audience in an open-air meeting on the campus. Needless to say, this was also a treat.

Friday services were as usual, with Brother E. A. Goodwin the speaker at 10.30. Brother Goodwin gave a wonderful lecture, and it was very much enjoyed by all. At 2.30 Sister Edwards again spoke on departmental work, greatly impressing her hearers and stimulating interest in both young and old for increased zeal and greater activities in the church. For evening service at 8 o'clock an entertainment was given in the assembly hall. Musical numbers, recitations, monologues, etc., were features of this entertainment, and all were wonderfully pleasing, educational, and uplifting. Much talent was displayed in the rendering of this program.

Saturday the meetings were held according to schedule, with C. J. Hunt, G. W. Burt, and D. T. Williams as speakers. Sunday morning we again had a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit of God in our prayer meeting. The gifts were present with us, and all were caused to rejoice in the goodness and mercy of God. The speakers for the day were Sister Edwards, Brother Williams, and our district president, Elder W. M. Grice.

At 3.30 in the afternoon there was a baptismal service, at which time fourteen candidates were conducted into the kingdom, seven having entered on a previous day, making in all twenty-one.

Another feature of our reunion was the marriage of Brother Benjamin H. Ouderkerk and Sister Emma Pauline Methner, of Coleman, Michigan, at the Midland Saints' church, on August 24, Brother B. H. Doty officiating. Brother Ouderkerk holds the office of teacher, while Sister Ouderkerk is very active in musical lines. This couple is very popular in the district, having a host of friends who wish them God's speed on their journey through life.

We are extremely grateful over the outcome of this re-union, as we feel its influence will be far-reaching. Not only has this feast of good things been enjoyed by the several hundred present, but it will be passed on to many others who also will receive strength and encouragement to go on in the Master's great work. Only eternity can determine the extent of the good accomplished, but we feel certain that in the coming year there will be greater zeal manifested and increased activities in all departments of church work. We are looking forward to a greater effort being put forth in Central Michigan District the coming year than ever before, as all seem to have caught a new vision of this great work.

Our reunion closed this year by breaking the record of our success of previous years. It has been very successful in the purpose that it was held for. Our people have gone home strengthened, more able to meet with the discouragements they will have to meet during the year that is before them.

We were glad to have with us many of the Saints from the other districts in Michigan and from other States and Canada. We hope they will all return next year and bring others with them.

We were also very glad to have with us Apostle D. T. Williams, Bishop C. J. Hunt, Sister Blanche Edwards, John R. Grice, and B. H. Doty, sent here by the church. I am sure we have all enjoyed their sojourn with us. Their teachings will not soon be forgotten. They have been the causes of many consecrating their lives to the church.

We enjoyed the teaching of our local missionaries and others who were permitted to meet with us.

Both Sundays were pentecostal showers, there being seven gifts of tongues in one meeting. The spirit of unity prevailed upon the camp ground the entire ten days. The young people were very active, and in their recreation the spirit of oneness was there. Everybody considered the feelings of the others.

There were about one hundred tents on the grounds. The regular attendance during the week was about five hundred, with a much larger attendance on Saturday and Sunday. The Saints have sacrificed much to make it possible for us to enjoy this reunion. Our expenses were high, but we have about four hundred dollars over to start with for next year. God will bless his people when we are working for the benefit of others. All meals were served free, and no charge was made for meeting trains or carrying baggage.

We are planning on our reunion growing still larger and better next year. We want you to plan on coming to our reunion next year and enjoy the services with us. We are making plans for you to attend. Don't disappoint us.

Otto Bartlett, Secretary.

Southeastern Illinois

The Southeastern Illinois reunion, held at Brush Creek south of Xenia eight or ten miles, is now history. A large crowd was in attendance, especially nights. At one time at night it was estimated four thousand people were present, if not more. A large crowd was in attendance, especially nights.

Ammon White was there from Tuesday, after the reunion had begun the Friday before, until the closing service on Sunday night, and rendered some very fine sermons on the leading questions of the church that I believe were well received by many of the members of the church. Brother J. W. Paxton was present all the time, and besides doing his share of the preaching, was a great help as one of the reunion committees. He was permitted to meet with us.

As we viewed the trend of the reunion all through, we considered it a success in many ways. The sermons were of a highly educational character, and the Saints in a measure caught the vision of the program of the church and its requirements, especially in the way of filling out inventories, paying their tithing, and making fuller consecration of their lives, talents, and material means for the carrying out of and the redemption of Zion.

There were many features that were encouraging over what past reunions have been in this district, so that we are hoping and praying and expect individually to work to make the reunion of Southeastern Illinois next year better than any preceding it has ever been.

Northeastern Kansas

In the beautiful city park at Netawaka, Kansas, the brethren at Netawaka, under the direction of Brother John Green, had tents erected and all ready for the convening of the reunion of August 1. Prayer meeting was held at nine, followed by reunion organization. District President Samuel Twombly, J. A. Tanner of Kansas City Stake, and Missionary C. E. Harpe were chosen to preside, and Sister Vivian Gillispe to act as secretary and press committee.

Prayer meeting was held at nine; class study at a quarter after ten, having stewardships for its subject and J. A. Tanner as class leader. Those who were not permitted to attend the reunion missed a good opportunity of becoming acquainted with the church's teachings on this all-important subject the church is now putting over.

The afternoons were given over to recreation, consisting of baseball, volley ball, sack races, foot races, etc.

A morning prayer service was provided for the children under the direction of Sister Bert Deller and Elders Walter Chapman and Will Bollinger. Some very fine spiritual meetings of this group that represents the church of to-morrow was had.

The officers of the Department of Sunday school had charge of the Sunday school work, and two model sessions were held. Brother and Sister Bert Deller are the superintendent and secretary. As superintendent of the Department of Sunday school, Elder D. L. Draper, held a very fine program the evening of Friday, the 7th, demonstrating the value of this department of the work. All other evenings were given over to preaching by Elders J. A. Tanner and C. E. Harpe, and Patriarch Joshua Carlisle, which were of a very high and educational order.

Three preaching services were held each Sunday, and the Saints from afar, who were gathered on the camp ground, were strengthened and encouraged in the carrying on of the work of the Lord.

District conference was held on Saturday, the 8th. Provision was made for the ordination of Brother Bullard to the work of the Lord; a morning prayer service was provided for the children, and the speakers were Elder G. W. Thorburn, Elder D. L. Allen, Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, Apostle C. F. Ellis, Patriarch F. A. Smith, and President F. M. Smith.

The time to prepare for the next reunion is now. Let us all work for a bigger and better reunion in 1926.

Samuel Twombly.

Mobile District

The Mobile district reunion is now history, having been held August 1 to 9 at Gautier, Mississippi, under the statly oak trees heavily laden with moss, on the banks of the West River where it flows into the sound. The waves at early morning and the beautiful moon in the evenings cannot be forgotten. A more convenient location could not be found, as it is a short walk from the depot and is directly on the old Spanish Trail.

We were fortunate in having with us Brothers H. O. Smith and Wilbur Paul of Independence, Brother John Blackmore, Brother and Sister J. Charles May, and Brother and Sister N. L. Booker. Also Brother A. G. Miller was on the job every minute to assist with the speaking as well as in various other ways.

The prayer and preaching services were a spiritual uplift, and the study hour, conducted by Brother Blackmore on stewardship, was very instructive and greatly appreciated.

The recreation hours were filled with bathing and interesting games, and the serenade party each night filled the air with song. Marshmallow roasts and other parties of a varied nature—fishing parties for the men, with profitable gain—claimed some of the recreation hours. In fact, the entire nine days was one round of spiritual and social pleasures, aiding the Saints to catch a vision of higher and nobler lives.

The mosquitoes were very profuse in their entertainment for the first few days, but a strong breeze came up in our favor and blew them back to the Louisiana marshes.

The general kitchen was maintained this year, accommodating an average of sixty each meal, while quite a number of the Saints were prepared to live at home in the tent city. It is quite encouraging to know that we have a nice balance in our reunion fund, which is made possible by the donations and contributions of Saints and friends toward the support of the reunion.

A motion to hold reunion next year was carried, and we feel assured that with the upward trend now in evidence, our reunion will continue to grow. To miss attending will mean a keen disappointment to any member in the district.

When the hour for departure came we were made sad to say good-by to Brother and Sister Booker, who with their daughter Arone, soon will leave for the British West Indies, to be gone at least two years.

Mrs. A. C. Solomon.

Western Montana District

Western Montana reunion was held from August 21 to August 30 at Race Track, Montana.

There were twenty tents on the grounds; even the big tent (where services were held) was used as a lodging place.

Despite the rainy, chilly weather, the health conditions of the camp were excellent. It is true that Doctor Charles Chase held a free clinic, but he was treating bodily ailments which were of long standing.

Much of the success of the reunion was due to the untiring efforts of the committee and the willing cooperation of the Saints.

The said committee consisted of G. W. Thorburn, missionary in charge; Elder E. Ellis, district president; Sister William Rootman, Brother E. Smelzer, and Brother Alfred Peterson. The unceasing efforts of these good Saints to make the reunion a success were greatly appreciated by the visitors.

The membership of the Western Montana District is widely scattered, so the responsibility of preparing for a reunion falls upon the few Saints who live near the Race Track reunion grounds, and they carry the burden faithfully.

So many articles of food were donated that the committee was enabled to furnish excellent meals for fifty cents per day.

There were five baptisms by Elder Thorburn.

The speakers were Elder G. W. Thorburn, Elder D. L. Allen, Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, Apostle C. F. Ellis, Patriarch F. A. Smith, and President F. M. Smith.

Zion, and how to obtain Zionic conditions, were the themes most discussed.

Many of the listeners had heard no sermons for a year, and their hungry souls were nourished and refreshed by listening to the sermons and lectures.

President Smith conducted a round table, at which many questions were asked and much sound advice given.

Patriarch Smith gave twenty-three blessings.

The spirit of peace seemed to hover over the assembly from the beginning to the close of the reunion.

Little Journeys With the Editor

Off for Council Bluffs Reunion

On Friday night the 21st, I left Kansas City for Council Bluffs, Iowa, to fill a conditional promise to be present one Sunday if possible at the reunion of the Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts, scheduled to close on the 23d. The day had been a busy one—the one that night I was a bit restless, so that the call, "Council Bluffs next," found me still a bit tired. But I was up and dressed in time to meet Brothers M. A. Smith and George Beatty, each of whom, unbeknown to the other, had come to the train to meet me and see that I had a bite to eat before beginning the activities of the day. It is not often that an itinerant such as I have been for so many years, if I have worked during the day, has two breakfasts awaiting him at his journey's end. So I had to choose. I knew where both men lived and chose the nearest. "A bird in hand" might easily be changed to "get the nearest bird."

Breakfast over, M. A. took me to the reunion grounds, where I found Brothers Gleazer, Carmichael, and others of the conference appointees had been carrying on for some days. The day was a busy one for me, for with prayer meeting, round table, Brother Carmichael's sermon in the afternoon, and preaching at night there remained only the "social functions" of lunch and dinner to make up a full day. And lunch at Brother M. A. Smith's, followed by dinner at Brother G. J. Hanson's, will mean to all who know them as generous hosts that it resulted in a full man from the standpoint of food. My diet rules were badly shattered that day.

Why Not a Permanent Reunion Ground?

The reunion of the Pottawattamie District, or rather of that district and Fremont, has for some years been held in a small city park in the north end of the city. While there has always been a welcome there, and there is plenty of good shade, yet the feeling is prevalent that the grounds are neither sufficiently large nor well enough appointed to adequately meet the needs of the two districts. These districts are far from being new, and they are sufficiently prosperous generally to justify the belief that a permanent and well-improved reunion ground, one that each year will be further improved and which will eventually (or soon) become such that the Saints desiring to recreate during vacation might resort to it, should be secured. Why not, Council Bluffs is one of the oldest branches in western Iowa, as well as one of the strongest, and it is destined, in my opinion, to become the nucleus for a stake organization. Reunions have become a permanent part of our church activities, and are of growing importance as centers of education in church matters—procedure, program, etc.—and I should like to see Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts secure permanent grounds for these purposes. These two districts might easily be joined by the two eastern Nebraska districts to the advantage of all concerned. Let us hope that District President John A. Hanson and his associates in the reunion committee will move surely and wisely in this direction.

The Sunday morning prayer service (the 23d) was one of the best in the reunion. A deep spirit of religion was present, and the forward-looking testimonies bore evidence that the spirit of Zion was beginning for a day devoted to thoughts of Zion; for my two sermons (morning and evening) and Brother Carmichael's in the afternoon were on Zion and her laws. And once again the sustained interest throughout by the Saints bore evidence of how close to the heart of this people lies the great subject of Zionic stewardship.

Interests between the social and social functions, Brothers Gleazer, Carmichael, and I had opportunity to go over matters needing conference, and to talk with district and local officers about various affairs.

After the close of Brother Carmichael's meeting in the afternoon, he left the grounds with Brother B. F. Creed and wife for a visit to the "Model Farm" at Walthill, while another party (not so small either) repaired to Lake Manawa for a picnic or cooperative supper. The party seemed to be under the direction of Brother and Sister G. J. Hanson, and the meal was served on the upper porch of the Fish and Game Club, of which Brother Hanson is a member. The meal, made merry by joke and jest, by friendly converse, the merriment subdued and softened by fraternal ties, the rest by and the boat trip on the waters of the lake, brought a pleasing and restful change in the busy day, and the whole party returned to the grounds with greater zest for the evening and closing meeting of the reunion.

In the congregations throughout the day were to be seen many faces from Omaha, for the Omaha branches had adjourned their meetings for the day to be with the Council Bluff Saints. Peter Whalley and his band were out in force. So deeply had the news of Brother John of 1925, one of "the best yet," according to general verdict.

I left the grounds after many good-bys, to return to the comfortable and hospitable home of my hosts, tired, but happy that I could have been of some help to the Saints in their reunion, and encouraged by the belief that good had been accomplished for the cause, a belief strengthened by the assurances of Brother "John" Hanson and his official associates that such had been the case. Furthermore, one can scarcely visit a district conference or reunion in that district without finding encouragement from the old-timers whose fervent testimonies bear evidence of a long life of loyalty to the church and happiness springing from devotion to the work. God bless the "old-timers."

On to Western Montana District Reunion

At the suggestion of my genial host and hostess, I "slept in" the next morning, and while I had retired wearily from the strains of a busy Sunday, I arose late on Monday morning refreshed from a long and good night's rest. Breakfast with the "Smiths," a trip to the reunion grounds rapidly being cleared by "Brother John" and his faithful helpers, a hasty conference with and good-by to Brother Gleazer and his family, and others, and I was off with my hand baggage for Omaha, to take a noon train on the Union Pacific for Pocatello, Idaho, on route to the Western Montana district reunion at Race Track.

The train left on time, and soon I was at a table in the Pullman, hard at work on the mail still remaining in the portfolios which constitute my perambulating office. And as train No. 17 rolled smoothly across the prairies of Nebraska through scenes made familiar by frequent trips, I worked steadily through the afternoon and into the evening.

And so it went the next day, the 26th, as the train whirled swiftly through Oregon, Wyoming, into Idaho. Near six I detrained at Pocatello, and after a meal in the station, a walk around to stir circulation, about half past seven in the evening I was off on the lap to Butte, where early next morning (the 26th) I awoke to find the car on the siding. Up off and, a hasty breakfast at the lunch counter, and I was on train again to Deer Lodge, Trains stopping at Race Track seem to be scarce, so I bought a ticket to Deer Lodge, expecting to double back on the next local. That train seemed to make all the stops between Butte and Deer Lodge except Race Track. I was looking out to see the town, but missed it, for I was looking on the wrong side—the station was on the other side. So I was surprised when the trainman called “Deer Lodge” as the grinding brake shoes indicated the train was slowing down for the stop. I got off expecting to have to wait some two hours for a local back, but as my feet struck the platform I was greeted by Brother Eliason, the district president, who had come to meet me, having been informed by the boys at the office when I would arrive. He took me and my baggage to an awaiting car, a Nash light six, and soon we were on the road rolling rapidly south to the camp of the Saints. And who do you think was our chauffer? Sister Brooks Johnson, or "Monnie," as Independence Saints still remember Brother I. N. White's youngest daughter.

We reached the camp grounds in time for part of the morning prayer meeting, and so we began our part of the activities of another reunion. We found Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, Clyde F. Ellis, F. A. Smith, and George W. Thorburn of the general forces there and at work, while the details of the reunion were being looked after by the reunion committee, Brothers Thorburn, Ellis, and others.

The prayer service was followed by a lecture period occupied by Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, which included the daily program. All the following day Brother Ellis preached. The "announcements" indicated that afternoons were devoted to recreation and that on that night I would be the speaker. And so we were initiated into the work of the Western Montana reunion. FREDERICK M. SMITH.

DEER LODGE, MONTANA, AUGUST 27.

Solid for Church Working Program

(From a letter to the First Presidency and the Quorum of Twelve.)

Things are seemingly on the forward move in all the branches of our district.

I am kept busy in my business, and to such an extent that I cannot devote very much of my time to church work, at least not so much as is needed.

Our reunion closed Sunday. It was a very fine one. We had a good working force with us. Those present who took the most active parts were N. L. Booker and wife, H. Charles May, who I think is a typical missionary, H. O. Smith, who is spiritual adviser, and Brother John Blackmore, who knows his business, in teaching stewardships.

Everybody in attendance was well pleased and went home with new vigor and a determination to do more.

I think that stewardships is one of the grandest features of our work. It covers a great field, and it takes better with the members and outsiders than any other subject I have ever heard discussed.

I want you to know that this whole district is solid for the working policy of the church. I am planning a stewardship class in each branch. I wish also to state that Brother W. B. Paul was a big help to us in our reunion while here on his vacation from his work in the Herald Office.

It would be a nice thing if we could get one of the First Presidency and one of the Bishopric here for our reunion of 1926. Can we do this?

The time for holding the next reunion was left with the reunion committee and the general appointing powers, but it was decided to be held at the same place as the last one, at Gautier, Mississippi, and if possible in July or August.

May God ever bless us and assist you men in your work is my prayer.

Sincerely yours,

A. G. MILLER, President Mobile District.

PASCAGOULA, MISSISSIPPI, AUGUST 12.

Lose Five Active Workers to College

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

We had a very fine attendance at our services yesterday. A good spirit was clearly present in our meeting.

I am made sad yet pleased to report that we are losing five of our young people, our most energetic workers, who are leaving for college: Brother Lawrence Brockway for Lincoln, Ellis Bedwell and Byron Jennings for Graceland, Mrs. Ellis Bedwell has already gone to Saint Joseph to work while her husband is at Graceland, and Sister Stella Brockway is leaving for her second year at Graceland. This branch will be fairly well represented at Graceland this year, four being in attendance. Wallace Nelson, who left here for Graceland last year, will spend his second year there. We will in a large measure be able to fill the places made vacant by these folk with the Whipple family, who have moved to the city.

I am to be a busy man this winter. I am going to try to organize the priesthood into a class for the study of stewardships. A number of sisters have asked me to lead them in a class study of the same subject. I am also to teach a class of young people in Religion. I am pleased to report this, as it offers an opportunity to do good, and a busy man is always happy.

Five Baptisms and Prospect of More

ALEXANDER, KANSAS.—On July 19 Ormos and Verlyn Ebert and Carlyle and Clifford Thompson were baptized by Brother John Teeters in the Walnut Creek. They were confirmed at the water's edge by Brethren Reed and Teeters. This makes five baptisms this summer, and we think more will follow.

The Sunday school is doing well, considering the busy season. The church painting will soon be finished, and the general appearance will be greatly improved. There is still more repair work to be done.

On August 21 the families of Peter Schaben, Wallace Ebert, and John Teeters motored to Studley, Kansas, to attend the district reunion. They report a fine time while there. A good spirit prevailed throughout. All enjoyed the association of Brother Bruce Brown and his lovable wife, Mary. Brother Ed Curtis won the admiration and love of both old and young while at the reunion. Missionary A. C. Silvers was on the ground and worked from beginning to end to make the reunion a grand success.

With God's help, the Saints of Alexander Branch hope to work harder to draw all in the branch to a working position. May all so labor that we may be able to help redeem Zion and be worthy of celestial glory.

Visiting the Saints Thought to Be Important

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

I am very glad to report that upon last Tuesday night, we had nine members of the priesthood out visiting. This is a mighty good showing for the Philadelphia Branch, and while I am encouraged now I will not be satisfied next year upon last Tuesday night, we had nine members of the priesthood out visiting. This is a mighty good showing for the Philadelphia Branch, and while I am encouraged now I will not be satisfied next year.
Independence

Stone Church

Sunday was an average Sabbath, in spite of an overcast and gloomy sky and the seeming promise of rain at almost any time during the day. Both early prayer meetings were well attended, especially the young people's service. Sunday school had its usual attendance and interest.

Apostle J. A. Gillen occupied the pulpit at the eleven o'clock hour, his subject being, "The fruitage of faith." His line of thought was that we should have faith in a God who has been great enough to produce the marvelous handiwork of this universe as witnessed about us on every hand; and having such faith in God, we should have faith in ourselves in the carrying forward of this great work. Altogether it was an interesting and inspiring discourse. Special music consisting of an organ offertory played by Robert Miller, an anthem by the choir, and a vocal solo by Mrs. I. A. Smith, preceded the sermon.

Reeligio will not be held this week because of the series of special meetings being held by Apostles M. A. McConley and J. F. Curtis.

Elder Charles W. Prettyman, seventy-nine years old, for many years active in the missionary service of the church, died at ten o'clock September 10, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Bills, in Independence. He had undergone an operation at the Sanitarium and never fully recovered. The funeral services were held at the Stone Church September 12, at half past ten, with burial in Mound Grove Cemetery. The body lay in state from ten until half past ten. He leaves his wife, six daughters, and two sons, of the immediate family.

Another aged church member, John P. Bierlein, passed away September 11, at his home in Independence. The funeral was held at the home Monday afternoon at three o'clock. He leaves two daughters, two sons, and two brothers.

Brother John W. Rushton, whose home is in California, and his son were recent visitors in Independence. Brother Rushton is on his way to Saint Louis, where he is pastor of the branch.

The early morning prayer service for the older people has an average attendance of about fifty.

The rains of the past week made it impossible to have services on the Campus, so they were held in the Stone Church. The attendance was only fair. The meetings will continue this week on the Campus if possible, in the church if rain.

Sunday evening the audience about filled the Stone Church to listen to Apostle McConley preach on the subject of the spiritual gifts. These special sermons are being reported and no doubt will appear later in print.

President Elbert A. Smith was at Council Bluffs last Sunday.

Elder Alvin Knisley, of the missionary force, has been in Independence during the past week.

Liberty Street

Last week, after the close of the series of special meetings on the lawn of Brother E. T. Atwell, all regular activities of the congregation were resumed.

Sunday morning, September 13, Bishop A. Carmichael talked to the Saints on finance. After his talk he gave opportunity for questions regarding the financial condition of the church or other items that were not clearly understood, and several took advantage of the opportunity to clear up points they did not understand.

Second Church

The Saints of District 2 owe about seven hundred dollars on the purchase price of the lot adjoining the church on the north. At the priesthood meeting Sunday afternoon it was determined to make the necessary effort to pay off this debt. Elders A. K. Dillee, D. A. Whiting, and E. E. Willard were placed in charge of the campaign and they are working through the group organizations. Among the priesthood about $130 were raised for the purpose. W. A. Welton, church property custodian, will have something to say of the effort and of his work next Sunday morning just preceding the sermon.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller came to the Second Church Sunday morning and gave the congregation some splendid exhortation during his forty-five-minute sermon.

Religio is putting on a pie supper Friday evening, for the purpose of raising money to meet their deficit and pay their debt. They give promise of a good time and solicit your attendance.

Walnut Park

Brother W. I. Flagg spoke at Walnut Park Sunday forenoon, dealing with "overcoming" and being truly "born again."

Superintendent R. Barnhardt called a Sunday school officers' and teachers' meeting at the close of the eleven o'clock service. The attendance was so good and discussion so general that it was voted to hold these meetings at that hour in the future. A rally day was arranged for the last Sunday in October, and a debate for and against report cards in the junior department was had, resulting in a committee being appointed to investigate their use and value in other places.

Enoch Hill

The eleven o'clock speaker Sunday was the pastor from Englewood, J. E. Warne, his subject being "Service."

Preparations are being made for Enoch Hill's part in the Harvest Festival of September 24, 25, and 26. The committee chosen to collect the produce includes the women's supervisor and the group leaders.

The women of the groups are to resume work again this week after the summer's vacation, and studies will be taken up besides the usual routine.

East Independence

Sunday the Saints at this place enjoyed another spiritual feast. Brother W. A. Smith and Brother Roy S. Bud were the speakers, and the Spirit of God was with them in such power that for a while we forgot the speakers and thought only of the message they were bringing.

At the close of the morning service arrangements were made for a young people's prayer meeting at a quarter of nine next Sunday morning.

Sister Gladys Teeter returned to her work at Graceland on September 4. We hope that many more of our young people may see the need of preparation for more active service, and if possible get some of that preparation in Grace­land or do work at the Institute.

Englewood

There was a good crowd at the September sacrament service, and a splendid meeting was enjoyed.

Sunday school on September 13 had an attendance of ninety-one. Interest and attendance is steadily growing. The speaker Sunday morning was Elder Charles Koehler.

For the past two months or so a young people's prayer meeting has been held every Sunday morning. There is a good attendance most of the time, but it would be appreciated if more of the older young people, from eighteen to twenty, would come. This is a new feature for this congregation, and the meetings seem to be appreciated.

The Department of Women is planning to resume its regular meetings for the winter soon.

Money, like some other essences, has a pungent, sweet taste; but to be kept must be corked tightly. It evaporates in the open air, and the vapor is called interest. A mortgage is a condensing instrument which enables a Money-spender to evaporate a Money-spender.

He that doth lend doth lose his friend.
Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Confirming their former announcement, opening services will be held next Sunday, the 20th, for the new church at 30th and Tracy Avenue, Brethren Elbert A. and Frederick M. Smith being the speakers at eleven o'clock and a quarter of eight respectively, and a number of the Presiding Bishopric in the afternoon. A basket dinner will be served after the morning service. A large attendance is expected.

Malvern Church

The women of the church should be commended for their work in assisting to keep the church clean. They meet at class every week to study and sew.

A large attendance was present in the afternoon, but through the persistent efforts of Sister Bernice Griffith, the choir leader, they will pull through the hot spell, after which there will be better attendance.

They have their new volley ball court ready for action now. A team from Central Church is going over to show them how volley ball should be played.

Elder D. J. Kennedy was the speaker last Sunday morning, and the pastor, Elder W. O. Hands, was the speaker in the evening, the first for many weeks, and he had a real message for his little flock.

Argentine Church

Brother Ralph Goold occupied the sacred desk in the morning, and Elder Charles D. Jellings broke the bread of life at a quarter of eight, his subject being the workings of the Holy Spirit.

Of General Stake Interest

Religious day-school as a part of the Kansas school curriculum, is a matter for consideration by the pastors of the stake, as the use of our churches is being asked for, as also teachers, to conduct the same. We have responded very readily for the past two years, with both, and no doubt will respond as readily again this year. It will be held one part day each week, and will commence about October 1.

Holden Stake

Holden

On the eve of the departure of Brother and Sister Ross and son Clifton for their new home at Maryville, Missouri, a large number of Saints gathered at the stake home office rooms in the Home Building to bid them farewell and Godspeed. A member of the stake presidency spoke in appreciation of their service in the stake since its organization.

Brother and Sister Ross responded appropriately and referred to the pleasure they had in their contribution to the stake work. A short time was spent in social converse, following which refreshments were served.

Elder John Lovell, who has been confined to his bed for several weeks with blood poison, is able to be out again. He assisted in the sacramental service at the church Sunday and conducted the weekly prayer service at the Home.

Sister Blanche Christiansen is now located at Grandview, where she is teaching. Sisters Mae Moler and Daisy Spence are away for the winter, the former teaching her second term at Clinton, Missouri, and the latter attending Graceland College.

Those who have contributed to the fund to build a much needed porch at the Home will be pleased to know the carpenters are now at work, and the long-cherished hope will soon be realized. The funds on hand are still short of the needs, and contributions will be appreciated. Send same to the matron, Sister Edith Carr, Holden, Missouri.

Bishop J. A. Kohler has returned from his reunion work in Holden last week. Elder T. C. Kelley worshipped with us the first Sunday and was the evening speaker.

Elder W. S. Macrae reports about one thousand dollars cleared by the Square Deal Dining Hall at the State Fair this summer, at Sedalia, Missouri.

Atherton

Our sacramental service for July was very encouraging. The Spirit of God was with us to encourage us to press forward and do his will. In the evening Brother W. H. Kelley's sermon was well chosen to follow the sacrament. He showed what it meant to "see" the kingdom of God—to perceive. August 9 Brother Rannie spoke on stewardship—love, the foundation. At the evening service Brother J. W. Davis spoke from the text, "Have faith in God." He was accompanied by his wife, the McCallums and Salyardses, and Sister Vida Smith. J. W. Metcalf occupied the following Sunday with his good missionary sermon. Five years ago the branch was started. We have been fortunate in securing the use of the hall over the general store. This room is still our meeting place. Three rooms besides the main room are available for our use. We have a fine gathering of Saints in this community and are working together in unity and love. Our prayer meetings are a source of much comfort and encouragement. Thursday our fifth annual Sunday school picnic was had in Swope Park.

Marshall

Brother D. A. Whiting and niece Mildred and Brother C. A. Kress of Independence were visitors, Brother Whiting speaking at eleven o'clock from Hebrews 12. Following this service four cars of Saints drove to our missionary appointment at Sister Jones's. After a basket dinner, Brother T. L. McCormick preached a good sermon. Brother C. A. Kress spoke in the evening.

Sedalia

Services which were dispensed with during the State Fair have been resumed again with fair attendance. The Saints were glad to meet again in church activities.

Quite a number of our members assisted at the Square Deal Dining Hall during the State Fair and enjoyed the association of the Saints in the cooperative enterprise. Brother and Sister Ed. Dillon and Sister Arvilla Sanders, of Oklahoma City, rendered very acceptable service at the dining hall. Following the fair they visited relatives near Stover, Missouri, and later went to Minneapolis to assist with the dining hall there.

Warrensburg

The opening of the college for fall and winter, September 15, is apparent, as our population is being augmented by the arrival of students, among whom are a number of Saints. Not the least in the list of activities of the students should be included the regular attendance at and participation in the services of the church. No course of education is complete which does not give liberal attention to spiritual needs. The church is located one block west and one half block south of the courthouse, on Washington Avenue. W. S. Macrae, pastor, residence 107 West North Street.

Brother Cramer of Independence, who purchased the Harring-Ross coal mine near here, has moved to our vicinity. Helen Myers, graduate of the college, is teaching at Kingsville. Edna Johnson has a position in the school at California, Missouri. Brother R. W. Farrell, former pastor here, will appreciate knowing some of his acquaintances made outside the church are "listening in" on his radio sermons. Favorable comments are made.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister F. M. Ball was blessed at the church by Patriarch I. M. Smith and George W. Hancock.

Grandview

July 19 was home-coming day, and a very enjoyable time was had, Elder F. A. McWethy was the morning speaker and Elder E. T. Atwell spoke in the afternoon. A splendid dinner was served in the basement of the church at noon. The services were well attended, many out-of-town Saints being present.
August 11 a farewell party was given for Brother L. E. Danforth and family at their home before their departure for Phoenix, Arizona, where they will remain a year with their children, Brother and Sister Keith Rogers. We regret losing this family from our church activities, especially the music department, in which they have rendered valuable service. Sister Hopkins was chosen superintendent of the department of music to succeed Sister Danforth.

We are anxiously looking forward to the stake conference which convenes here in October.

Blue Springs

The Saints of the Blue Springs and Milton Road congregations held a joint picnic at Horse-shoe Lake on Labor Day, about eighty attending. The activities of the day began with the baptism of Brother Edgar Stoner, of Milton Road. Races and games of various kinds, including baseball and volley ball, were engaged in by children and adults, the appetites thus developed being well demonstrated on a veritable feast of good things to eat. Athletics, boating, etc., occupied attention till half past four.

Knobnoster

The sacramental service was lightly attended, but the Spirit of the Master brought joy to the worshipers. Recent speakers are C. V. Hopkins, J. F. Grimes, F. W. Mortimore, recently ordained to the office of elder, J. F. Petre, and R. E. Burgess. The sermon of J. F. Petre on stewardship was well received. Many of our Saints seem to be imbued with the spirit of consecration and are ready to move forward in harmony with the program of the church.

Omaha, Nebraska

September 9.—On the evening of August 12, Brother Nicholas M. Rumel passed away. He was one of the oldest members of the branch, having been born in 1852, a resident of Omaha since 1857, and of the church since 1869. The funeral services were held at the church on the 14th and were largely attended. Brother Carl Self read the obituary and paid a warm tribute to the departed. Pastor Whalley preached the sermon. The music was rendered by Sisters Nelle Kelley and Cloc Fleming, with Sister Doris Frederick accompanying. Brother Rumel was a good husband and father, a kind and true friend, and a consistent member of the church and the community. He leaves a frail little wife, three daughters, one son, two sisters, and one brother to mourn, to all of whom our sympathy is extended.

"It is an ill wind which blows no one some good" is a maxim proved true for Omaha Saints on Sunday morning, August 16, when, through some misunderstanding, Brother B. F. Creel and Bishop Albert Carmichael failed to meet at an Omaha railway station. Brother Carmichael found his way to our church, coming in just before Sunday school closed, so was induced to preach for us that morning instead of at the Indian mission at Decatur as was intended. His sermon was exceptionally inspiring, and left the Saints with a definite desire to "carry on" in the work intrusted to their care.

Brother Enfield, of Melrose, Nebraska, has been at the Lord Lister Hospital and thus came under Brother Whalley's kindly administrations. He has returned to his home.

The church was closed for Sunday the 23d, so that all might attend the reunion at Council Bluffs where the President of the church and the Presiding Bishop were to address the Saints. Three wonderful sermons were presented, giving various phases of the Zionic program of the church, and our personal responsibilities as stewards. Pastor Whalley made a valuable contribution to the success of this reunion by taking charge of the young boys. And those boys felt that they had a "real soldier" giving them orders, too, and were proud as peacocks over the military precision and formations which Peter brought about. Many a good lesson, doubtless was sandwiched in between those hikes, drills, swims, and games, whose influence will go on down through the ages, expressed in nobler character building.

Sister Paden, with her "weeks," and Sisters Kirkpatrick and Smith were the hostesses at the last meeting of the Department of Women. No business was transacted, Sister desiring Sister Anderson to complete the reading and discussion of Holland's Bitter Sweet. A piano solo was given by Rogene Anderson, preceding. Sister Augustine and daughter, from St. Joseph, were guests that day of her sister, Sister Anna Potter. Sister Anna Kinney was with us for the first time since her severe illness of a year ago. She was accompanied by Mrs. Grimes. They seem to be imbued with the spirit of consecration and are ready to move forward in harmony with the program of the church.

On Friday evening, August 28, the Saints were treated to a fine concert, sponsored by Sister Whalley, and followed by "eats," all free to the comer. Sister Nelle Kelley was at her best in several groups of songs, and that is saying something, for she is ever a prime favorite. Other musical and literary numbers rounded out a successful evening.

Sunday, August 30, we were treated to a splendid sermon by Brother J. W. Rushton, who, with his son William, were on route, by auto, to Independence and thence to his pastorate in Saint Louis, where William will share bachelor quarters with him the coming year. Brother Rushton spoke at Council Bluffs in the evening. Both sermons were reflective of a very uplifting and hopeful outlook upon life in general, and on church work in particular, and cannot fail to be of great encouragement to those who listen.

Friday evening at the church, on September 3, at which plans for building the main auditorium of our church building were discussed. An architectural drawing of the floor plans and completed building were presented by Brother W. A. Wellman and were favorably received. It is not considered timely, however, to do other at the present moment than to appoint committees to survey our resources and to outline a plan of the present school is doing well towards the fulfillment of its pledge to raise $1,000 this year. Brother Merchant's class of young women gave the church dinner last week and realized over $25 towards their class pledge of $60. It will take "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together" however, before enough money is in sight for the accomplishment of our fond dreams in the direction of a completed church building.

The Anderson family has scattered—Duane taking a position in Kansas City, Brother B. M. going to Colorado to escape the ravages of his annual siege of hay fever and asthma, and Rogene departing this week for another school.

On the 30th, we would commend him to the kindly attentions of the pastor of Central Church and his young people's supervisor.

Sister Merile Self, daughter of Brother and Sister Carl T. Self, also enrolled at Graceland this week and will share with Rogene a room in "Bide-a-Wee" dormitory. Sister Vivian Wrenn, however, decided to go to another school, and so our Omaha trio of Graceland students becomes only a pair.

Our pastor and wife have moved and are now to be found at 4622 Izard Street. Any time you want some one to umpire a ball game, call on the sick, clean up the church, arrange a program, get out a bulletin, rah-rah for Graceland, help eat a chicken dinner at Happy Hollow, go swimming at Carter Lake, or put up a snappy fight for "the administration," just call Walnut 6658. He'll be "Peter on the spot," instanter.

Last week he traveled all the way to Lincoln—not under custody, either—and while there, aspired to, and attained the governor's chair! Well, at least one of the governor's chairs—in his office! Peter liked our new capitol building. He'd like to move it over to Thirty-sixth and Burt, to make it a market.

Among the solosists who have given freely of their gifts of late have been Sister Nelle Kelley, who sang "Ave Maria" in the morning and another very beautiful song in the evening of the 80th; and Brother Harlow Frederick and wife, who sang "O for the wings of a dove," the morning of the 16th. These three, assisted by Brother Harry Greenway.
and young sister Ann Self, will put on a radio program at Council Bluffs in the near future. We are always glad to hear the young people's choir Sunday evenings, and they are now taking up their work in good earnest after a month's vacation. Brother R. W. Scott is their director and is planning and hoping high things for them.

Graceland Chats

The Opening Address

On Monday, September 7, in the forenoon occurred the opening exercises of Graceland College. Just before the time set, students, both former and new, began to gather at the college building. In twos and threes and small intimate groups, they made their way into the chapel.

Here as they waited was the greeting of new friends and the recognition of former ones that was most pleasing to see. There is always, however, an element of regret upon such occasions for those who no longer meet with us, and, as is usual under the circumstances, the happiness and gayety of the gathering did not hide from the seeing eye, the longing for those whom this year were prevented from meeting with us.

It was good to see Brother Gunsolley, familiarly known to the student body as Uncle Jerry. For thirty years and more he has watched over the interests of Graceland with unfailing and unrelenting care. Such an occasion as this could not fail to be an intense gratification to him. There, too, was Brother Wilber Prall, whose recollection of Graceland extends over some twenty years, and Brother McDowell, eighteen years ago a student and for some years recently a member of the faculty and dean of the senior college. Many more stalwarts were present; others whom we hope will in the future years be known as stalwarts were happy to be associated with them.

The principal speaker at the opening exercises was Brother F. M. McDowell. Humorously he recounted some of his early experiences at Graceland, but beneath the humor it was obvious that a spirit of great determination lived, otherwise, without splendid courage and great determination of purpose, it would have been impossible to have made good under those early conditions.

The theme of Brother McDowell's address was, "Why are you here?" The destiny of mankind and the institutions of civilization depend to a far greater extent than you are aware upon your answer.

Using a classification of Doctor Horne, he divided society into seven groups:

1. Those who live for show, for pleasure—the human butterflies. 2. Those who make sports, clubs, comics, their principal aim—the human fans. 3. Those who center their interests in food, drink, and sex—human imps and devils. 4. Those who live for creature comforts, who grunt when satisfied and squeal when hurt—human pigs. 5. Those whose great aim in life is the amassing of wealth, getting of property—human ants. 6. Those who strive for social efficiency, who delight in achieving and are up and doing—human beavers. 7. Those who have a true interest in humanity—human uplifters.

Enlarging upon his theme and this classification, Brother McDowell told us that groups five and six, composed of people whose aim is to acquire, far outweigh the first four groups in social worth, but this is not sufficient for Graceland students. The standard is not high enough. If Graceland is to benefit the world at large, her students must belong to group 7.

"Hats off to the men who make," Brother McDowell said, "Hats off to the men or women thirsting for knowledge. But the mere power to make, or mere knowledge will not serve the world, and Graceland will fail in her purpose if she gives to her students nothing more than these.

"One of the great things in this life is, What is your motive? When you leave Graceland, what are you going to do with the knowledge and the power gained there? The world has plenty of power; what it really needs is that that power become refined and spiritualized in the highest degree. This is the mission of Graceland, that her sons and daughters may acquire not merely knowledge, not only skill to do, but virtue in accomplishment."

Brother McDowell's address was not only splendid in conception and forceful in delivery, but filled with that spirit of loyalty and devotion that has always characterized his association with Graceland.

Mayor G. W. Blair on behalf of the town formally welcomed the students. In his characteristic way he made all feel that just as the town shared the college, so the town is conscious that the college should share in its life and well-being.

Brother W. E. Prall very earnestly welcomed the students to Sunday school, Religio, and all church services.

Brother J. A. Gunsolley followed by giving in a few words a picture of Graceland hill as he saw it thirty years ago. He then proceeded to give the history of a certain young man who through different stages of eighteen years association with that hill has endeared himself to the hearts of all. On behalf of the faculty he then presented Brother McDowell with a fine Gladstone bag as a token of remembrance and appreciation. Very feelingly Brother McDowell replied, and the tension of the approaching separation was therapeutically lessened by fifteen rousing rars for our splendid "big brother." Excellent music for the program was provided by Miss Gertrude White and Mrs. Frances Norris.

Registration

The enrollment so far stands at 224—about the same as this time last year. It is very interesting to note that this registration includes representatives from twenty-four States—that is fifty per cent of the States of the Union—and five foreign countries. You will be glad to know that the junior class is fifty per cent larger than ever before.

Faculty Reception

On Friday evening was held the annual reception of the faculty to the students. Soon after half past seven the faculty gathered in Zimmermann Hall, and at about eight o'clock the student body began to gather. It was indeed a matter of great congratulation to be associated with such a splendid and worth-while group; delightful to meet again students of former years, and equally enjoyable to become acquainted with new students who in a very short time will be as dear to us as their predecessors.

Of course the receiving line came first, and then followed a real get-together that several amusing stunts were offered. The traditional apple cider brought the close of a very happy evening. All left with a firmer determination to make good and a stronger resolve to make this year at Graceland count more than any other year in their lives.

A Large Two-day Rally Meeting

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, September 1.—We feel that we as a people are sailing Zionward. The fine articles in the Herald and Ensign would prove that. May we always be found sailing in that course, with a leader inspired of God, that the church may not be wrecked. Such a man is our present leader. Our prayers are for him and all officers who are trying to build up the kingdom of God.

On Friday evening 9 W. C. Stauty spoke at eleven o'clock, and C. B. Freeman spoke in the evening. On the 16th Brother Robert Zuelsdorf occupied the pulpit in the morning and T. G. Schnuckle in the evening. Their sermons were appreciated by all.

Brother and Sister Knight, of Minneapolis, stopped over at the home of Brother and Sister W. C. Stauty August 16 and August 17. They were on their way from Minneapolis to International Falls near the Canadian border. They resumed their journey on the 17th. We hope they will come again.

August 22 and 23 found us busy with a two-day rally which opened with prayer service at half past nine, followed by preaching at eleven by W. E. Shakespeare, our missionary. In the afternoon a round table was held at half past two, with Brother Hubert Case in charge, assisted by W. E. Shakespeare. Brother Case preached in the evening. Sunday morning opened up fair with a young people’s prayer service at nine o’clock, Brother Wesley Elvin of Minneapolis in charge, assisted by Brothers W. E. Shakespeare and Robert Zuelisdoerfer. Sunday school convened at a quarter of ten, with an attendance of ninety-six, the biggest register yet for the Duluth Sunday school. All good things start small and grow big. Brother Case preached again at eleven o’clock, using for his theme, “Service and Zion,” with preparedness as a real necessity. Following this, baptismal service was to have been held, but one candidate failed to appear on time, it was postponed until after sacrament service, called for two o’clock.

Sacrament service was in charge of District President George W. Day, with Hubert Case and W. E. Shakespeare assisting. Brother Case had to leave before the close of the meeting in order to catch a train for Minneapolis. The priesthood met at seven o’clock and received from the district president instructions in regard to duties and the need of cooperation in furthering the work here. Sunday evening Brother W. E. Shakespeare gave a lecture on Joseph’s land, using his machine and slides to illustrate. This lecture was much enjoyed.

The following were visitors from out of town: Brother A. R. Elvin, and two children, Wesley Elvin, Brother and Sister Arthur Bundy and a friend, of McGrath, Minnesota; Sister Don Bishop and husband and children, and Sister Kate Smith, of Sandstone; Sister Bertha Eckley and husband and son, and Sisters Ada and Opaal Carlson, with a friend, from Burnum; Sister Sally Kuppenhavon, of Gordon, Wisconsin; Brother and Sister Samuel Sloan, Brother and Sister Grant Byce, Sadie, Lena, Stella, and Alvin Byce, James Vennard, Brother and Sister Joseph E. Hastings, their daughter Lydia and granddaughter Pauline, Sister Susie Craven and Sister Elizabeth Stocks, of Two Harbors, Minnesota; Brother and Sister Jay Walters and daughter Ruth, and Sister Alpha­retta Johnson, of Carlton, Minnesota; Brother and Sister Hubert Case of Minneapolis; George W. Day of Bemidji.

This was the first rally Duluth has enjoyed, but we pray it will not be the last, as it was an inspiration for greater service in the gospel. It brings the Saints nearer to unity with God, draws them nearer to a realization of Zion and the gathering of God’s elect. The sermons were of a nature that would help to build for the higher and more abundant life. May we each catch a greater vision of this latter-day work and go hand in hand to perfection.

An error occurred in the news letter last month. Instead of the pastor’s wife, Sister C. B. Freeman, breaking a bone in her wrist, it was her mother, Sister Davis. Also the name C. B. Freeman should have been C. B. Freeman.

On August 30 Brother A. S. Davis of Wrenshall was the speaker at eleven o’clock on, “There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death.” He showed clearly a better way, which is God’s way. Brother W. C. Stauty occupied the evening, using Philippians 2:12-16: “Therefore, my dear friends, as you have always obeyed, not as in fear, but as enjoying the favor of the Precious who has called you, do your work, and trembling,” laying stress on Luke 19:25, “For I say unto you, That unto every one who occupieth, shall be given; and from him who occupieth not, even that he hath received shall be taken away from him.”

Gray’s Harbor Branch

ABERDEEN, WASHINGTON, September 5.—The work of the Master is still alive here, although the church services have been called for. The membership of Gray’s Harbor Branch is scattered over a large territory, which makes it difficult for all to attend at all times.

We have some new faces among our number now; Brother and Sister Gilmore from Idaho are domiciled here at present. Sister Josephine Ulltican has just returned from a visit to her relatives at Hagerman, Idaho. She also had the pleasure of attending the reunion there.

We now have four members of the priesthood, two elders and two priests. The branch president has instructed them to take their turns at preaching. We also have a deacon to perform the duties of that office.

We are still wondering why the missionaries to this district do not visit us. The Saints need the visit of a missionary very much.

Pittsburg, Kansas

September 8.—The work at Pittsburg, Kansas, is still moving along, although the recent hot spell has depleted our ranks somewhat. According to reports, Kansas was the hottest State in the Union, and we of Pittsburg believe that Crawford County was the hottest county in Kansas and Pittsburg the hottest town in the county. Consequently, if any disaster should overtake us, we are prepared for the worst.

A number of our people came out at our recent reunion held at Miami, Oklahoma. They all report having had an enjoyable and a very profitable time. Sister E. E. Gilbert has been very ill since she returned, but is now recuperating nicely. It is thought she may have contracted typhoid and was saved from a long spell of sickness only through administration. Brother Alva Gilbert, of Grace land, was home for a few days visiting and renewing old acquaintances. Brother Morgan Ryan, foster son of Brother and Sister Gilbert, was home from New York, where he is engaged in electric work. While here he was married to Sister Mabel Carter, of our branch. The ceremony was performed by Brother James Richards. They purchased a car to return to New York in, but when they got as far as Illinois they had the misfortune to have the car and all their personal belongings stolen.

Brother John Negewin from Jerusalem, but more recently from Graceland College, is now a member of our branch. He expects to attend the college here.

The Sunday school has been having nickel, dime, and quarter Sundays in an effort to raise the Christmas offering fund above that of last year. Sister Ester Wilson is chairman of the junior department of the Sunday school, and she is proving herself very efficient.

The gleaners, of the Department of Women, had an ice cream social in July which netted them over forty dollars as profit.

The Religio has been trying some new measures with its “Piker Programs.” They originated on this wise: We usually have the classes responsible for a program, each one in turn. If it was impossible for a class to give their program on schedule time, the names of several of the members of the congregation were written on slips of paper and then drawn as lots. The one whose name was drawn either had to contribute a selection to the program or have his name written on the board under the heading of “Piker.” The children usually drew the names, and one little brother by chance drew his own name. His face betrayed his consternation, but he did what we older ones often fail to do, arose to the occasion. Then we tried to get more people to come on time by using the “Piker” method, but strange to say the superintendent headed the list of the “tardies.” However he came up to time, with a vengeance, and then next Sunday night nearly all the Religio members had “their names written there.” Now we are going to call on the tardy ones to furnish the program when we get “up against it.”

There have been some new arrivals in the branch: Brother Raymond (Blossom) Booker and Mrs. Booker are the proud parents of a fine boy, and Brother and Sister Leonard Boone have a fine boy also.

Sister Cheeseman was operated on in July for appendicitis and is now enjoying better health than she has known for many years.

The God of the Living

"He is not the God of the dead; but the God of the living."
—Mark 12:27.

There is always a tendency to revere the revelations that came to men long, long ago—men who are now dead and gone. If they are far enough back in the dim past and their humanity thus less obvious, it seems more easy to believe that the Lord did really speak through them.

Jesus found the Jews willing to accept the revelations which came through Moses. Moses had been dead a long time, and that incident of his losing his temper and acting so brusquely had been forgotten. Moses dead was a great prophet. Moses living did not find the children of Israel too ready to believe.

Jesus living found comparatively few followers. To-day many accept his words. So with his disciples. The inspired words of Peter and John are accepted now as a part of one's religious equipment. Peter and John are dead. They have been dead a long time. Peter's one-time profanity and violence do not now greatly discount his words. Charity seemingly works best at long distances.

Peter and John were thus accepted in 1830, but when at about that time Joseph Smith came with his message the religious world found it incredible that God should speak to a living man. Joseph Smith was close at hand, and his human defects were easily visible; moreover, rumor and prejudice grossly distorted and exaggerated these defects and spread the story of them abroad.

Even those who accept his message in later years came under the same obsession. When he was dead and safely buried, enshrined and hallowed in the memory of Latter Day Saints, then came his son Joseph wearing the mantle of the prophet. His first general epistle was in the voice and with the power of a prophet.

In the name of the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, I now call upon all the scattered saints, upon all the broad earth, to arise and shake off the dream that hath bound them these many years, take on the armor of the just, calling on the name of the Lord for help, and unite once more for the emancipation of the honest in heart from the power of false doctrines and the shackles of sin.

In the name of blest Zion, I call upon all those who have been wandering in by and forbidden paths, and have been led astray by wicked and designing men, to turn from their scenes of wickedness and sins of convenience, to turn from their servitude to Satan, in all his seductive devices; from vice in every phase, and from the labor of sin, the wages whereof are ever death, unto their true and delightful allegiance to the principles of the gospel of peace, to the paths of wisdom, to the homage of that God that brought the children of Israel out of bondage; to turn and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon; to lay hold anew upon the rod of iron which surely leads to the tree of life; to remember that those who live to the Lord keep his commandments, and that the promises are unto the faithful, and the reward unto those that endure unto the end.

And in the name of the Lord of hosts, I call upon all the inhabitants of the earth to repent, believe, and be baptized, for the time cometh when the judgments of God are to be poured out upon all nations, and the besom of God's wrath shall smoke through the land; when men shall know that there is a God in Israel and shall he is mighty to punish or to save; that the prayers of those under the altar have been heard, and a swift retribution is to come, when the despoiler shall be despoiled; when those who denied justice shall be judged, and the measure meted unto others shall be meted unto them; when the prisoner shall go free, the oppressed be redeemed, and all Israel shall cry, "Glory to God in the highest be given, for he that is long-suffering and slow to anger, has arisen, and shall bring again Zion." Amen and Amen.—Church History, vol. 3, pp. 294, 295.

How many of our friends in Utah who revered the dead Prophet Joseph accepted the words of his son Joseph, the living prophet. Yet God is the God of the living. In every age he is the God not of the dead but of the living.

Shall we repeat the common error and have eyes only for the past, ears only for the dead? Or shall we think of God as at work in the church to-day, now, the great I AM? We need not reject the words given in the long ago; they are still living and vital with truth, truth for the living. But we do not have to go back among the dead to find God.

It may seem easier to go back to the days of the late revered President Joseph Smith, especially if we go back some years into his ministry. Or we may go back to the days of Joseph the Martyr. We may even crowd him back to the year 1830 or 1882 and refuse to accept his later revelations. Or with the Methodists we may go into the cemetery of the prophets and seek a tombstone still more weather-beaten and an inscription even more worn—back to the days of John on Patmos. Or with the Jews we may plod wearily still further back, away back of Jesus and the apostles to find a prophet long enough dead that we may accept his words. No, God is the God of the living and is at work to-day, and this is our day.

The Lord set his hand to restore his gospel and establish his church on earth in these last days. He met with six persons, April 6, 1830, when the church was organized. But he is not alone the God of those six dead men. He is to-day, in the year 1925, working with the church to lead it on to victory. Will we accept his power and follow his leadership?

Do not let us think of God as the God of the dead only; let us rather think of him as the God of the living, and deport ourselves as living men with a living faith.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Questions and Answers

Question: We have both heard and read the statement that Bishop Albert Carmichael teaches that even though one may pay tithes and consecrate surplus to the church, the church thereby comes under no moral or legal obligation to help that one if in need later on. In other words, that one would have no legal or moral claim on the church and should be directed to the county or state to obtain relief. What is his position in this matter?

Answer: The statements to which you refer are an utter misrepresentation of Bishop Carmichael’s position. Bishop Carmichael’s claim is this:

Though one should pay, say five hundred dollars tithing, and subsequently, for example, one thousand dollars surplus, and later should be in need, he would not have claim on the exact fifteen hundred dollars paid in, since it all was paid on a debt owed to the Lord. Nor would he have claim for any sum merely because he had paid in fifteen hundred dollars. At that point your informants seem to have deliberately stopped in their report on Bishop Carmichael’s position. Mark you, he goes on to enlarge his position as follows: That man would have claim, but it would rest on the basis of every other man’s claim, i.e., the basis laid down in the law, his ‘needs and just wants.’ He would not necessarily have more claim than a poor widow who had given fifteen dollars. In both instances the claim would rest on ‘needs and just wants,’ where the law puts it. Is that not clear and just and scriptural? The misrepresentation may not have been willful; it certainly was unnecessary.

As to obtaining aid from the county or state, the only reason for ever requiring our members who are worthy, wise, and faithful to seek relief from the state or any charitable organization is that we do not always have the means to help them. Here the “law of the need” again applies. They may come to us for help at a time when we have not the means to help; then the next best thing is for the ones seeking help to go where they can get it; that is, from some charitable organization or from the state. Better to get a piece of bread than none at all when bread is needed. Nor do we consider it a disgrace to ask the state to aid. The Saints pay their share of state taxes and have the right to have the poor among them provided for out of this tax, when they cannot give aid in other ways.

However, as a people we ought not to be satisfied with our efforts to aid the poor among us until everyone can be supplied out of the church treasury and not out of the state institutions or any other charitable institutions; until we can truly say there is no poor among us.

Any way of taking care of the poor outside of the stewardship idea, that is, of everyone having his needs and just wants supplied, is only a temporary expediency and when resorted to should be done because the church treasury cannot furnish the help needed.

The foregoing sets forth Bishop Carmichael’s position fairly. There will be no excuse in the future to misrepresent it.

Des Moines Church Under Way

Our correspondent from the capital city of Iowa mentions the progress made in the building of the church which is to take the place of the one destroyed by fire last winter. The Capital and Tribune of September 7 each give good mention of the laying of the corner stone on September 6. President D. W. Morehouse of Drake University was the principal speaker and used as his theme, “The place the church has occupied in civilization.” Others on the program were Pastor H. A. Higgins, Chauncey A. Weaver of Des Moines, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer, of Independence, Missouri.

The location of the new church is on East Twelfth Street, between Maple and Lyon, the estimated cost is $40,000, and the seating capacity is to be 675.

A man may leave a patrimony to his son; but how soon it may be mortgaged! He may leave him money; but how soon it may be squandered! When he gives him a strong constitution, an unblemished reputation, a good education, and an inward abhorrence of vice, in any shape or form, these cannot be wrested from him, and are better than thousands of gold or silver.
K L D S Recognized by “Journal-Post”

The leading feature of the Radio section of Sunday’s Journal-Post is a short history of our radio station, K L D S. It is not a matter of news to some that our church is a pioneer in the field of radio broadcasting, but to others it may be. To all it will be interesting that this great newspaper has given station, K L D S so much attention, which it is not likely has reached the various parts of the country are good, but there is still much to be achieved.

Here is the text of the news story:

Independence Station Pioneer Church Radiocaster of the World

Organization Has Been in Radio Field Eleven Years; Present Plant Most Powerful in This Area; Uses Storage Battery Power

The age-old problem of speedy communication over great distances resulted in the laying of the foundation eleven years ago which led to the establishment of Radio Station K L D S, Independence, Missouri, the most powerful radiocaster in the Kansas City area.

On a railroad trip from Independence to Lamoni, Iowa, Doctor Frederick M. Smith, leader of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, an organization numbering more than 100,000, was pondering over how some means could be devised for speedy communication between the church offices in Lamoni and Independence.

In Lamoni Doctor Smith noticed a large radio antenna system over a modest dwelling. Seeking the radio operator, Doctor Smith inquired if communication could be carried on with Independence.

“That’s easy,” was the reply.

And that’s how K L D S happened to come into existence.

 Erect Two Radio Stations

Within a few months the church erected two stations, one in Lamoni and the other in Independence. Douglas Flanders operated in the western station and Arthur B. Church, managing director of the present station, the other.

Operation of these stations continued until the World War emergency caused the closing of all except Government stations, Flanders and Church entering the service in the signal corps.

With the close of the war, the church stations were reopened, and others in Holden, Missouri, and Des Moines, Iowa, established. Shortly afterward, Mr. Church removed to Independence and opened the Central Radio School.

Open First Station Here

In 1920 the school was moved to Kansas City, and the first radiocasting station in the city opened. Shortly after a license was granted to K D K A, Pittsburgh, a federal license was awarded W P E, the Central Radio School here, and with the assistance of the Kansas City Post the first general radiocasting was accomplished.

Later a power increase was granted by the Government, the station becoming a 100-watteter. Radiocasting of programs for the church continued, and in 1922 W P E was removed to Independence and installed in the Stone Church.

In the summer of 1923 the Independence station was licensed by the Government and given the call letters K F I X. Interest in the radiocasting developed rapidly among the church members, and in 1924 a campaign for a 1000-watt station was oversubscribed, the station K L D S being completed and put into service early this last summer.

Built by Two Church Members

K L D S was built by two members of the church, A. R. Moler and Mr. Church. Several new features stamp the station as a leader in this district.

Water-cooled vacuum tubes having a maximum capacity of 5,000 watts each are employed instead of a battery of 250-watt air-cooled tubes. Storage batteries, numbering in all about 1,300 cells, furnish the power supply instead of the usual generators.

A short wave experimental station, licensed as 9 F F, is maintained at K L D S. It uses 250 watts power and has communicated with Australia, New Zealand, England, South America, and many other distant points.

K L D S, the pioneer church radiocaster in the world, has a modern studio in the Stone Church. A reception room, separated from the studio by plate glass partitions, is equipped with loud speakers, visitors being enabled to hear and watch the radiocasting of all programs.

Split Time With W O S

The station divides time with the state marketing bureau station, W O S, Jefferson City, on a wave length of 440.9 meters, 680 kilocycles. Entertaining programs are put on the air beginning at eight o’clock Tuesday and Friday nights. Sacred services are at eleven o’clock Sunday mornings and half past six and a quarter after nine Sunday nights.

Although K L D S went on the air at the start of the so-called summer static season, its record thus far is enviable, the signals having been picked up in every section of North America and on the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

October 1 to 31 Is Stewardship Month

A letter from the First Presidency to General Conference appointees, district and branch presidents, and Bishop’s agents is urging the observation of stewardship month, October 1 to 31, during which everybody is urged to make a special study of this subject. Classes are being formed all through the church, and the Saints everywhere are at work weighing the evidences. They are also being instructed from the pulpits, missionaries are asked to present the subject throughout October.

The letter closes with these paragraphs:

Many expressions of joy and satisfaction made voluntarily by those studying this subject greatly hearten us in carrying the responsibilities of administrative work with the assurance that soon this can be shared by a larger number.

Make the month of October a happy one in your church life. Special musical numbers for your October meetings will add spirit to the services. Especially should you encourage congregational singing. The songs of Zion have ever been a source of inspiration to the Saints, and with every year undoubtedly bringing us closer to the time when Zion MUST be redeemed we hope you will enter into this month of special worship with enthusiasm, earnestness of spirit, and consecration of effort.

The outlook is encouraging, and we pass on to you the hopefulness we feel in the final establishment of Zion.

Be ready to give your time to an intensive study of stewardships during October. Help organize for this purpose.

Never lose an opportunity of seeing anything beautiful; because beauty is God’s handwriting.
“Wisdom Hath Builded Her House”

Memorial service of George P. Lambert, at Nauvoo, Illinois, August 22, 1925, by President Elbert A. Smith.

Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbitteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that swareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved.

I have read the fifteenth psalm, and in the first chapter of the Second Epistle of Peter we read:

And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your peace with God, and to make your peace with one another.

Many years ago, when the Thirteen Colonies that later formed the American Republic were struggling for their existence, the sympathy of France was aroused, and she sent us money and arms; but greatest of all, men. And among the men who came was Count Lafayette, a young French nobleman who threw his fortune and his life into the struggle for American liberty. He took such a prominent part in the conflict that the natural gratitude that America felt toward France seemed to cluster around his person. He came back later for a tour of the country and was received everywhere with honor and ovations. By and by he died and was buried in his native land. Many years later the World War broke out, and the life of France was in danger; and America, remembering her debt of gratitude, sent money and arms and men, and in command of these men and these forces was General Pershing. Coming to the tomb where Lafayette was buried, General Pershing uncovered his head and delivered himself of this sentence, “Lafayette, we are here.” It meant the debt of gratitude was not forgotten and that our men were there to carry on the struggle for freedom.

This morning, in view of the debt that the church owes our Brother Lambert, we might say, “George Lambert, we are here.”

For many, many years he fought the battles of this church in this community; and by an honorable life, supported it is true by others, he won for us a standing here that to-day is priceless.

He was with us a year ago, and we fully expected him to be with us this year, but he is not. He is not here in body, and it is only due him that we should pause a moment and say, as Pershing said, “Brother Lambert, we are here. We are here carrying on the conflict along the lines that you carried on during your life. We are here to see that the life you lived was not lived in vain.”

We owe something of honor to an officer of the church. For many, many years he occupied in different offices in this district; for many years as bishop, but quite aside from the officer we owe a debt of gratitude and honor to him as a man.

A Man of More Value Than Gold

In Isaiah 13:12 it is written the Lord says he will “make a man of more value than precious gold, of more value than the golden wedge of Ophir.” I believe it to be literally true, that a real man and a real woman are of more value than precious gold. It is true that in the church the Bishop makes a report annually of the assets and liabilities of the church. We own so many dollars. We own so much wealth, represented by so many dollars, buildings, land, and so on. I will remind you that the greatest and chief assets never appear on the Bishop's books. They appear on the Recorder's books. The chief assets of this church are the men and women of the church who are really living the message and philosophy of the church in humility. As in the case of Christ, “The Word has become flesh and dwelt among men, full of grace and truth.” And of course the greatest liabilities of the church, by reverse reasoning, are the men and women who are not living in harmony with their profession.

Many of you have heard of Babson, the great statistician and financial expert. His forecasts of business conditions are noted and observed by the business men all over the world. His books are read. Millionaires send their sons to sit at his feet and be taught business management. And in his book, The Fundamentals of Prosperity, Babson says that America has erected an enormous superstructure of material wealth, which is doomed to fall unless America shall put under it a foundation of spiritual values. And in this book, when he comes to name the real foundation stones, he does not name the material resources of the country at all; he names faith, religion, virtue, honesty, industry, and thrift.
are the things that will make the foundation that must be put under the material superstructure.

I think, then, we can say that the man who has lived those things in his life is worth more to the nation than gold, and certainly he is worth more to the church than gold. "I will make a man of more value than precious gold."

Seekers After God

This same Babson says that we have gone crazy over material things—steamboats, airplanes, railroads, mines, and skyscrapers—and have forgotten the really important things, the souls of men that underlie all these things and from which all these things originate, and we must turn our attention to the development of the human soul.

Also in his book he tells about an interview had with the president of the Argentine Republic of South America. The president of the Argentine Republic said to him, "Why is it that North America has always been so much greater than South America? We have our forests, we have our mines, we have our great plantations, we have our resources of every character. Why is it that North America has always been so much greater than South America?"

And Mr. Babson, not wishing to be discourteous, said, "Well, perhaps you had best answer the question." And the president of the Argentine Republic said, "I think it is because South America was settled by Spaniards who came seeking gold, while North America was settled by the Pilgrim Fathers who came seeking God."

They were the men who put under America her real foundation. They were the men who were of more value than precious gold. And so it must be true that any man from that day to this who is really a seeker after God and has found him and put into his life the fundamentals of religion which are the fundamentals of citizenship, is of more value to a nation, and certainly to his church, than any quantity of gold could be.

Many times when I have met with Brother George Lambert I have thought in my heart, "Here is one of the old Puritans." Devoid of the austerity and religious bigotry of the Puritans, with a brotherly charity that came from Christ himself, at heart he was a Puritan. And he was a great man, because he was a seeker after God and not a seeker after gold.

The Seven Pillars of Wisdom

In Proverbs 9:1 the statement is made, "Wisdom hath builded her a house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars." If I were to try to enumerate the seven pillars of wisdom that Brother George Lambert erected in his spiritual structure, perhaps first of all I would name faith. You know if we are to live any sort of life that is worth while, we must have a philosophy of life. A good philosophy must have underlying it eternal principles, such as the belief in the existence of God, and in the immortality of the human soul, and in man's agency to choose between right and wrong. These are a part of the great religion of Jesus Christ. And so it is true, as the Apostle Paul says, that "other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ." You cannot build a life on any other foundation.

The Poverty of Atheism

Haeckel, the great German agnostic and scientist, as late as 1902 or thereabouts, delivered three lectures at the University of Berlin, in which he assaulted religion, and in one he said that the old ideas of religion, God, and immortality, and agency, had been disproved by science. Science had proved they were not true. Then he went on to make this singular proposition: He said that though they are not true they ought to be preserved in poetry because of their value in organizing society and building up the characters of young people. That was the most bald confession of the poverty of atheism that I ever came across. Having sought to destroy belief in immortality and in God and in the agency of man, he then turned around and confessed that he had nothing to suggest in their place and proposed that they should be written into poetry so that we would still have something on which to organize society and something on which young people could build their characters. Now these things are either true or else false. They are not rag dolls to amuse men with. They are true, and they furnish the foundation on which to build life. And so Bishop Lambert erected one of the pillars of his structure in the form of faith on the sure foundation that Jesus Christ had laid.

Brother Lambert was a builder. He was constructive. He had faith in God, faith in truth. That was fundamental with him. He had faith in his fellow men and had faith in the church. Religion was the great big thing in his life. It was inseparable from him. Nobody in Nauvoo or anywhere around thought about Bishop Lambert excepting as they thought about his religion.

A Home Builder

The first day I was here I was up town at a store, and a man not a member of the church said to me, "Well, this year there is one man not with you who was here last year. He was a fine man. We did not have his equal in the community." When he thought about Brother Lambert, he thought about the church, and when he thought about the church he thought about Brother Lambert. The word had become flesh in the person of that man.
And the second of those pillars is that of virtue. The apostle said, “Add to your faith virtue.” In a generation that has to a certain extent forfeited its virtue, in a generation when the American home has begun to disintegrate, in a generation when the marriage tie is lightly held — when Bishop Lambert made his pledge to his wife, “I will keep myself for you and from all others,” he made that pledge in the sight of God, and he kept it. No one ever thought — it would have been absurd to think about him as doing anything else. He was true to his wife, true to his children. He was that most valuable asset of the church and the Nation, a home builder. The heart of his wife rested in perfect peace when he went abroad. His children felt that their good name was entirely safe in his keeping. His home was sacred, and every other man’s home was sacred to him.

I might name as the third pillar, that of intelligence. “Add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge.” But knowledge itself is only a part of intelligence. Tennyson says that “knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.” You can go to college and get a lot of knowledge in four years, but wisdom lingers. Wisdom comes by experience and with prayer. Brother Lambert was an educated man. I do not know whether he went to college or not, but he was an educated man. He sought knowledge by faith and also by study, which is the divine plan as stated in section 85 of Doctrine and Covenants. He stored his mind with knowledge. He applied it to life, and that was the part of wisdom. The glory of God is intelligence, and it must be the glory of the Saints also shall be intelligence.

I might name as the fourth pillar, that of industry. Some people have the idea that work is a curse that was pronounced on humanity in the Garden of Eden, but my idea is that excessive toil was the curse: “In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat.” In the beginning, God set Adam and Eve in the garden and told them to tend it. They were expected to engage themselves in wholesome, pleasant, constructive, fruitful labor.

Brother Lambert was wrapped up in his work. It was constructive; not only his agricultural work, but his church work. If I would accuse him of intemperance in anything, it would be that he worked too hard, but he gave himself over to constructive and productive work.

I might name as the fifth pillar, thrift. He was thrifty; willing to forego many of the lesser pleasures of life, secured by spending your substance as you go, that he might accumulate and spend for the satisfying experiences of life — a home and a family well clothed, well educated, well reared. For these big things he was willing to be thrifty and lay up, sacrifice himself, live humbly, and for the further purpose that he might live to create a surplus, which surplus would be at the command of God for the service of humanity.

And the sixth pillar is that of temperance. We are commanded to be temperate in all things. Brother Lambert was a temperate man. He was opposed to strong drink. That, too, would have seemed ridiculous to any thinking man, that he would be intemperate. But he was also temperate in many other ways. He was a careful, wise man, slow speaking. He spoke with deliberation and carefully. He was temperate along all these lines.

The Master Virtue

The greatest pillar wisdom erected was that of charity. The apostle tells us that is the greatest virtue: “Now abideth faith, hope, and charity, but the greatest of these is charity.” The Book of Mormon defines charity as “the pure love of God.” And certainly that had a pronounced place in the life of Brother Lambert. He was a man who loved God and who loved his brethren. In the Galatian letter, the fifth chapter, the statement is made, “The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.” I have heard this verse read like this. I believe it brings out the meaning: “The fruit of the Spirit is love, which includes joy, peace, long-suffering.” In other words, the fruit of the Spirit is love. If you have love, joy is there. If you have love, you will have peace. And if you have love, you will be long-suffering. I believe that to be literally true. When I have loved the brethren I have had joy, and when I have loved the brethren I have had peace; but at any time when that love has been diminished and there has come resentment and anger and division, my joy and my peace have departed from me. Charity, or love, is the master virtue, and the others follow. When within the church we shall have unlimited love, the pure love of God, I think it will follow inevitably that we shall have joy. Oh, how joyful we will be when that day comes — and we will have peace.

Brother Lambert had love in his heart, and as a result he had a great deal of joy and an abiding peace. He was a man of love and peace. In connection with him I have thought about this little poem Longfellow wrote called “The arrow and the song: I shot an arrow into the air, It fell to earth I knew not where, For so swift it flew, the sight Could not follow it in its flight.

I sang a song into the air, It fell to earth I knew not where, For who has sight so swift and strong That it can follow the flight of song?
Long years afterward in an oak,
I found the arrow still unbrok
And the song from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

Longfellow was fortunate. His arrow lodged in an oak and his song in the heart of a friend. Sometimes the arrows we shoot lodge in the heart of a friend and the song is lost. But I am sure Bishop Lambert never shot an arrow in the heart of any man, and I am sure that though he may not have been a singer, the song he lived will lodge in many hearts long after he is gone.

A Demonstration of the Gospel

One of the brethren remarked the other morning that the church had not made a demonstration.
That is literally true in an organic capacity. So far as Zion is concerned we do not yet have any demonstration that we can point to. But, thank God, in many individual lives the church has made a demonstration, and in this life it made a demonstration to which we can point, and we can say to all this community without reservation, "There is what the gospel does for a man and in his home."

The Life Under the Foundation Stones

The Russian people had a custom when they would erect a structure that under the corner stone they would put some living thing, under the impression that into the structure went the life that came out of that creature. I have seen a painting which showed them in the act of dragging a young girl to be thrown into the pit to be crushed under the stone that her life might go into the building. So in Nauvoo in years gone by, into the temple went the lives of men. I do not mean simply the lives of those that were killed, but the lives of those who toiled in the pit and on the drills, that they might pry up the great blocks which must be drilled upon each side with toil and brought and placed one upon another.
Their lives went into that building. And so into the church and nation go the lives of men and women who have gone before us, like Brother Lambert, who have put their lives into their work.

To-day I do not come before you with sorrow. I do not feel sorrow at all. Oh, I feel a great regret that I could not meet Brother Lambert to-day, but really I am happy that we had such a man and that I knew him.

We had in one branch a man who was trusted by the whole community. He was honored. He was a banker, and secretly and deliberately for years he undermined that bank and squandered the money of widows and orphans until, when the bank failed, the whole community was robbed and betrayed by a man they had trusted. To-day he is in the penitentiary.
That is something to be sorry for. It is something to make his son hang his head. But for the life of a man who lived a great many years the kind of life lived by Brother Lambert there is no occasion for sorrow. I can say to this widow and children, Lift up your heads and thank God that it was death and not disgrace that robbed you of your father and husbond. Thank God that he left you a heritage that should make you happy and proud.

One of the traits of his character was simplicity—simplicity of dress and speech. And it is therefore the more fitting that he who never sought public recognition should receive it to-day. One of his friends has formed this little wreath out of simple things, cedar boughs and wild "pride of the valley," and it is the desire that the family should take this wreath and put it upon his grave. And we will be content with the simple words I have spoken and this wreath to be placed on his grave, that he shall indeed hear our words, "Brother Lambert, we are here."

The Printed Word

A paper prepared for preconference council,
Sydney, Australia, April, 1924, by Harold I.
Velt.

Foreword

We are engaged in a great and marvelous work.
We are comparatively few in number. What a responsibility rests upon us: that of preaching the gospel in all the world as a witness to all nations!

In Doctrine and Covenants 83: 8 we find that the Lord administered a stern rebuke to the church, be­ because they had treated lightly the things which they had received. For this, he said, their minds had been darkened, and the whole church was under condemnation, which condemnation would rest upon them until they repented and remembered the commandments given to them not only to say but to do according to what was written. Then follows that paragraph which indicates that one of those commandments which they had treated lightly was that which required the solemn, prayerful bearing of testimony in all the world of those things which the Lord had communicated to them. So the admonition followed: "Therefore, go ye into all the world, and whatsoever place ye cannot go into, ye shall send, that the testimony may go from you into all the world, unto every creature."

Sending the Word

What better way have we of sending the gospel than by the printed word? Was it not Joseph Luff who spoke often of how little tracts would occasionally be sent to him, and how he began to become interested in the church? How many other prominent men and women of the church have had the first gospel seeds sown in their hearts through the reading of a tract, an article in Herald, Ensign, Standard, or church book?

How many whose pride would hinder their attendance at a church service, or their being influenced by an interchange of views with a Latter Day Saint, have had their hearts softened by a quiet reading in lonely hours of some well-prepared church literature? How many, being separated, even hundreds of miles from the nearest Latter Day Saint, have first been apprised of the restoration of the gospel by a folder inclosed in a letter from a friend? How many more might have been enlightened in this way, were it not for some one’s neglect or indifference?

Printing Press a Boon to Humanity

We must admit that nothing has been more conducive to the civilization of the world than the art of printing. Gross darkness, barbarism, and ignorance were once the common lot of the hordes of humanity. With the inventing of printing, a brighter day dawned. The multitudes were destined to become better acquainted with that book, the Bible, the reading of which has already influenced the world.

The reformed world must thank God for the printed Bible and other good works printed and distributed among the people.

The Restoration

To-day we live in the light of a still brighter day. A restoration has been accomplished. How may we spread the news of renewed revelation from God and the many truths conveyed therein?

How great a part must the printed word play in bringing about that higher civilization which is to be effected through the everlasting gospel?

Church Periodicals

The church early realized the power there is in the printed word, and during the early years of its existence published several periodicals that were intended to serve the double purpose of educating the Saints and conveying the gospel to those outside.

The first of these was The Evening and Morning Star, first published in June, 1832. At later times appeared the Messenger and Advocate, Times and Seasons, Millennial Star, and other publications.

Great difficulties were experienced with regard to the printing of some of these, even to the destruction by the mobs of printing office, machinery, and general property, to the extent of upwards of £1,000 damages at one time. Yet the church steadfastly maintained its printing operations, that the gospel might be sent abroad and that education and development might result through the study of its articles.

In the Reorganization

The printed word played a great part in the re-gathering of forces after the “dark and cloudy day” of latter-day apostasy. Considerable sacrifice was made to provide for sending thousands of copies of the SAINTS’ HERALD to the scattered ones who had followed no schisms, and also to those who had been so led. In the HERALD for August, 1860, appeared the following: “Near one thousand copies of each number have been sent to the scattered members in the United States, Utah, Canada, and Europe.”

Yes, as is often required, heavy sacrifices were made by the few, but thousands to-day are reaping the benefits of that sacrifice.

Advantages of the Printed Word

As already intimated, the printed word is peculiarly fitted for requirements which cannot otherwise be cared for. The spoken word may be forgotten. The printed word may be read and reread. The spoken word may be heard by a few hundreds, while the same in print may be read by many thousands, even after the writer has passed away. The spoken word may be misunderstood or misrepresented; the same is not so likely of the printed word, which may always be referred to. It may not be convenient for some to hear the word spoken, but the silent preacher, by way of tract, book, or paper, may be appreciated even to pass away lonely hours.

Value of Books

It may be said that millions of lives have been influenced by the reading of books. Characters have been built, others dwarfed, according to the class of reading adopted.

It is our part to encourage the reading of good books. What an appeal to the nobler side of nature has been made by the reading of such books as Joe Pine, With the Church in an Early Day, Peter Bosten, The Little Brown Cottage, The Vineyard Story, The Two-Story Book, etc.

There are good books, too, written by those not of the church, but to the mind of the writer of this paper, those mentioned, and other church books, are among the grandest, noblest, and most edifying, and should form part of the education of our young people.

The same is true of the beautiful stories, articles, and letters which appear in Autumn Leaves and other periodicals. These stories, too, are well adapted to the spiritual needs of nonmembers and will often engage the attention of those who are not studious enough to study deeply into the more doctrinal works, such as The Fall of Babylon, Voice of Warning, etc. These latter are most valuable as educators, once interest has been aroused sufficiently, or to the more studious minded.

Though our church books are of the very highest order, we have as yet a very limited supply, and we hope to see many additions to the list in the near future.

Tracts

To the busy classes, and to strangers, a small tract is often best adapted to the immediate need. This is especially true of opening up the work in new fields. From Doctrine and Covenants 125:11, we have the following: “It is the duty of the church to provide tracts in the Scandinavian, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese languages, and others,” etc.

Many tracts have been prepared by the church in the past, and much good accomplished by them. The many and peculiar conditions and opinions of people to-day, however, seem to demand a great variety of tracts. While some are adapted to the needs of almost all, others appeal more especially to a particular class.

The Church, in Relation to World Problems, and The Social Ideals of the Church, are valuable tracts for use among the laboring classes and many business people of to-day. They are very suitable also for the rationalist, infidel, or skeptic.

The Latter-Day Glory, to the mind of the writer, is the style of tract which supplies an urgent need, containing, as it does, in a beautifully concise and interesting manner, a statement of the rise and history of the church, the latter-day apostasy, and the reorganization, etc., with court decisions and some doctrine.

The History of the First Presidency is also a fine tract for use, in that it illustrates, through the portraits of our three successive presidents and its accompanying language, that which serves to correct a popular error in the minds of many people.

The Angel Message Series are tracts well written, and attractive in style, as also are many others, all of which are splendid in their place and profitable for distribution.

Tracts Needed

There seems to be one outstanding need, however, and that is for a variety of one-sheet leaflets for promiscuous use; something of a less expensive style, like The Pure Gospel of Christ, or, Do You Know? These have served well, many thousands having been read in Australia. The latter, Do You Know? would need now to be altered, as some of its statements are not true of the present time.

Other requirements for the times are tracts briefly dealing with spiritualism, rationalism, and spiritual healing. These are subjects of vital interest to-day in Australia, and no doubt equally so in other lands.

Book Agencies

Some other religious bodies do much of their propaganda through book-selling canvass from door to door. Some of their methods, such as hiding their identity, may not be commendable, yet we would probably do well to canvass diligently for the sale of some of our books.

Man Here and Hereafter is a valuable work, and would, if a cheaper edition could be got out, find a good sale.

Can we not devise some means of depositing some of our best books throughout the length and breadth of the country? or even of securing a place for them in the public libraries of all the States? Something has been done, of course, in this line, but how much more must we do, in spreading the gospel through the printed word.

One Very Effectual Way

There is one very effectual way, however, and some have not been slow in this duty: that of keeping the matter ever before the Saints. Sell them the books. Persist in endeavors to get their subscriptions for Gospel Standard, Zion’s Ensign, etc.; and as the articles appeal to them, they in turn will solicit subscriptions from their friends, especially if encouraged and advised in this means of spreading the gospel.

Valuable Part of Missionary Work

The distribution of the printed word is one of the most effectual phases of missionary work. Not everyone is skillful in presenting the gospel.—Let Elbert A. Smith’s talent fill the need. There is data you cannot remember.—The Gospel Standard will furnish the information. In matters of psychology, and anatomy of man, time has not permitted of a lengthy study.—Let Brother Haworth help you with his book, Man Here and Hereafter. Do you need assistance in describing the wonders of American archaeology?—Louise Palfrey, Henry A. Stebbins, and others can supply the information in a convincing way through their valuable books. In fact, you have no need to lack anything by way of convincing argument; let the church literature be your support.

Keep the Membership Mindful

We must ever keep the membership mindful of the fact that the Standard House, or our publishing house in America, are not the property of any man or board of publication, but of the church, and that we and they constitute the church. That without their support printing operations would cease and great loss be involved.
Language in Doctrine and Covenants 38: 9 is beautifully fitting to this subject. "And again I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded."

This places equal responsibility upon all. Again, in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8 we have, "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad, so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them, and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that toileth in the ministry, and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work, labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all."

Let it be again repeated, then. The membership of this church must be educated to their responsibilities of spreading the gospel news into all parts of the world, or at least of doing their part, and this we believe cannot be better done than by use of the printed word.

Important Doctrines Defended by Granville Hedrick

BY J. F. CURTIS

The following extracts are taken from a book published by Granville Hedrick, at Bloomington, Illinois, in 1856, entitled, The Spiritual Wife System Proven False; and the True Order of Church Discipline.

At the present time it may be interesting to the readers of the HERALD to know the position of Granville Hedrick in 1856 on what he believed to be the doctrine of the church at that time. That he based his belief on the three standard books of the church as the fundamental law of the church is shown by the following:

Brother Hedrick and the Three Books

Speaking of the Book of Mormon he says:

This Book then contains the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, according to Joseph's own translation; Joseph was called and inspired to translate that Book, (not wives) he completed that work; he then received revelations and commandments from heaven, together with the priesthood (which is authority,) to organize the identical church of Jesus Christ upon the principles contained in the Book of Mormon and Bible, and the church Articles as given in the Book of Covenants. Did Joseph Smith, jr., positively and certainly organize the church of Jesus Christ, on this foundation by a special call from heaven, to lay the foundation of a great work? Was the Book of Mormon, the Bible, and Book of Covenants to be the rock and pillar of their faith, for the foundation of the church which was organized, on the 6th day of April, 1830, and was these three inspired Books to be a standard for the people of God? Yes, this position is true, and cannot be controverted by any man or set of men. Then Joseph organized the church on that rock or plan of salvation, as contained in those three inspired books. This was the identical great work that Joseph was called to do.—Pages 15, 16.

In these three inspired Books, we have heaven's plan, God's will to fallen man.—Page 17.

Now, as it has fallen to my lot to take up my pen and vindicate the cause of truth as it is in the church of Jesus Christ, as established in these last days by that man of God, Joseph Smith, who was called and inspired to lay the foundation anew of the only identical church of Jesus Christ (since all others have apostatized in omitting some of the doctrines and commandments of God, and substituting the commandments and precepts of men for doctrine, thereby apostatizing themselves from the true faith of the Lamb of God;) and that the church of Jesus Christ being established anew, upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, of the Son of God, on the 6th day of April, A. D., 1830, embracing the doctrine contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants for their faith and practice. These three above named inspired volumes was received by the whole church of Christ, as established anew again by Joseph Smith, jr., to be the rock, and pillar, and ground-work of their faith and doctrine in Christ Jesus, in the first days and years of this the identical church of Jesus Christ; hence we have the foundation of this church before us, of which I profess to be a member.—Pages 19, 20.

Here, then, we have it proved positively that the Bible, and Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, are the things referred to containing the foundation of the new and everlasting covenant. Blessed be God, for them; and by this holy standard, shall the spiritual wife system be tried, and proved to be false; and also, that it is the doctrine of devils.—Page 83.

I say then to you, brethren, be not discouraged. God has left a promise on record, that this identical church shall be delivered, and yet be glorious, even in the estimation of many nations; and the time has come when we should be up and doing, that we should set ourselves, by the help of God, in order, and read the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Covenants, and obey the Lord Jesus Christ, according to the things that are written in these three inspired books, and as many as will do these things, shall enjoy the Spirit of Jesus Christ the Son of God, and be saved in his everlasting kingdom.—Pages 89, 90.

Let those who wish to do right, and serve God, according to the gospel plan of salvation, call their solemn assemblies, and in council determine to stand and build upon the things given in the beginning to this church, as is contained in the BOOK OF MORMON, AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS, WHICH WERE GIVEN FOR THE FOUNDATION AND STANDARD OF FAITH AND DOCTRINE FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST, IN WHICH ALL THINGS ARE GIVEN THAT ARE NECESSARY TO BUILD UP THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS AND REGULATE ALL THE AFFAIRS OF THE SAME.—Pages 90, 91.

This church organization was founded on the PRINCIPLES OF THE DOCTRINE as contained in those three BOOKS OF INSPIRATION, and that the things written in those inspired volumes, when rightly observed, are wholly sufficient to govern and regulate all church matters and affairs, both great and small, with perfect accuracy, and that the church must come to this STANDARD before she can lend them the apostasy, and set the right, and become acceptable before the Lord.—Pages 91, 92.

I might cite several other statements showing that the three standard books are referred to as the foundation upon which the church is established, but I think the above is sufficient to clearly show his position.
His Position on the First Presidency of the Church

I will next give a few quotations from this book concerning the position of Granville Hedrick as to the First Presidency of the church:

The high priests are ordained to the highest authority in the high priesthood, except the presidency of the high priesthood, which is a delegated authority by the body of high priests and elders, and even the whole church, by choosing one or three of the number of high priests, then officiating, in good standing, and appointing, and ordaining them, by the body of high priests to the office of presidency, (Section 3, paragraph 11.) to preside over the whole church. This then, constitutes the presidency of the high priesthood, and the first presidency of the whole church.—Page 96.

Speaking of different quorums and presiding officers over them, he says:

This identical order was also given to all the quorums of the several grades of office, from high priests down to deacons. For in the 31st paragraph of section 3, says the Lord, there must needs be presiding elders, to preside over those who are of the office of an elder, and also priests to preside over those who are of the office of priests. And in like manner of the teachers and deacons; and so of the seventy, and also of the twelve. Section 3, paragraphs 11 and 43. Hence we see, in several offices of the church, on several quorums, all in like manner, of necessity, to appoint and ordain for themselves each a presidency, so that there might be proper order observed, and that each might act in their own standing and capacity under their several presidencies. This is the identical order which is given in the Book of Covenants, and is most beautifully harmonized into the very best church discipline that could possibly have been given. There is no subject perhaps so important, and yet so plain to the church, as this one subject, which is on the presidency of the church of Jesus Christ; especially that of the first presidency, as well as all the different quorums.—Page 96.

I have shown that the presidency of this church must come in at the door; that the office of the first presidency is the office that Joseph Smith held in this church, and that it is an office of delegation; that the right of choice is in the people or whole church; but that they should choose one from the number of high priests of the high priesthood, and that the right of appointing and ordaining is invested with the body of the high priests of the high priesthood. (See Book of Mormon, pages 253 and 254.) For when the chosen one is agreed upon, then it is the duty of the body of high priests to appoint and ordain their elect to the office of presidency, but the president is to be appointed by revelation, (section 5, paragraph 6,) and also two other assisting presidents, in the same manner.—Pages 105, 106.

Thus comes the subject of the presidency of the high priesthood, which is pointed out as plain as language can make it, that one from the high priesthood should be chosen and appointed to preside over the priesthood. Section 3, paragraph 11. And he shall be called the president of the high priesthood of the church of Christ, and the identical office which Joseph Smith held in the church. Section 3, paragraphs 31 and 42; also section 5, paragraphs 5 and 6. Well, says one, I cannot see yet how that the president of the high priesthood of the church of Christ could act in the same church capacity that Joseph Smith once did, for he was a seer and revelator. Well, friend, read the 42d paragraph of section 3, and then you will find that for the president of the office of the high priest is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses. Behold here is wisdom; yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.—Page 97.

As to who should ordain the First Presidency, we note the following:

Then it is the duty of the high priests' quorum to ordain their elect to the office of the first presidency, to preside over the whole church.—Page 109.

His Estimate of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants

Speaking of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, he says:

If I did not know, by the spirit of truth, that the things in that book were true, I would not give myself the trouble to defend them, at so great odds, for I have to meet opposition in the church, as well as out of it.—Page 109, 110.

One thing more. I wish the brethren to understand particularly that the office of presidency is an office of choice only, and that it can only be attained to by election or appointment, and when attained to by force, or invasion, it ceases to be an office of presidency, and is only an authority of tyrant will; and that the right of inheritance destroys the power of election; therefore, when the right of election ceases, the presidency is at an end. Therefore, when you yield the right of the presidency to an authority under the claim of an inheritance, you destroy the office of the presidency.—Pages 110, 111.

So, brethren, you have my opinion on the subject of claims. Let us not destroy the office of presidency by the right of inheritance, but let them come in at the door.—Section 14, paragraph 2.

Now, brethren, as we have the mode of choosing our president, as given in the Book of D. Covenants, in a plain and easy manner, to the understanding of all who wish to be informed, they need but read and see for themselves, and as to the other officers, such as apostles and bishops, and of the seventy, it is not a matter of any difficulty to have them arranged, when in the proper time, for it is out of place to have a bishop or an apostle, or seventies, before the presidency of the church is selected, and this cannot be done until the whole church is ready to go into an organization under the reform, upon the gospel plan of salvation, and then we can fill all the quorums at the same general conference, and also choose two assisting presidents, in like manner as the first.—Page 111.

High Priests, Elders, and Their Duties

Speaking of high priests and elders, he says:

I have stated that the high priests of the Melchizedec priesthood hold all the authority that is or can be in the church, and also that the elders are of the high priesthood, and that with this authority, when rightly brought into action, is sufficient authority, by the help of God to renovate this church.—Page 112.

The elders, together with the high priests, have been ordained, in these last days to establish righteousness and peace in the land, and will yet be accomplished, with those who are faithful.—Page 112.

The priesthood has been restored to the earth again, at a time when it was not with man, to Joseph Smith, who was the first high priest and elder to this church. He ordained many high priests and elders.—Pages 112, 113.

His Comprehension of the Brigham Young Church and Spiritual Wifery

Under the heading of “The priesthood and the true order of church government,” he says:

Now, that the church, as organized through Joseph Smith, was invested with all the authority of the priesthood of the Son of God, that was necessary, in this age, to build up the church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints, and regulate all the affairs of the same, was once believed by every member, who understood the ground work of this church organization, and during Joseph Smith’s lifetime was acknowledged to be the president of the high priesthood of the whole church, by every orderly member of the church. And for the space of thirteen years general satisfaction prevailed in regard to the authorities, as the church was then regulated. The several quorums were kept regularly filled, and all seemed to acquiesce in uniformity of their church government, until Joseph's death. But, alas! since the death of Joseph Smith, we have another and entire different picture to look upon. The church has apostatized, and for the last ten years have practiced all manner of iniquity.—Pages 86, 89.

Speaking of the spiritual wife doctrine, he says:

Here, then, we have it proved positively that the Bible, and Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, are the things referred to containing the foundation of the new and everlasting covenant. Blessed be God, for them; and by this holy standard, shall the spiritual wife system be tried, and proved to be false; and also, that it is the doctrine of devils.—Page 33.

That he is making this argument against the Utah Church is shown by the following:

Now, that the Brighamites, or the apostasy, have a pretended revelation, that contains the principles of the foundation of their spiritual wife system, upon which they base much of their doctrine of polygamy, I have given in full in the fore part of this work.—Page 33.

I shall also have occasion to make quotations from the SEER, published by Orson Pratt, and also, Orson Spencer's Letters, and other standard works of their own publication. I wish special attention given to those parts that I shall refer the reader. Now, that Joseph Smith ever pretended to have received any such revelation from God, and gave the same to the church, is very doubtful.—Pages 33, 34.

I think the above is sufficient to show that Granville Hedrick in 1856 indorsed the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and that he believed in all the different quorums of the church, including the First Presidency consisting of the president and two counselors, also the Quorum of Twelve, Seventy, High Priests, and Elders, and that he seemed well satisfied with the condition of the church up to 1844, the time of Joseph Smith's death.

The above quotations, which are all taken from The Spiritual Wife System Proven False; and the True Order of Church Discipline, show that Granville Hedrick was closely identified with the belief of the Reorganization.

"Where the State has bestowed education the man who accepts it must be content to accept it merely as charity unless he returns it to the State in full in the shape of good citizenship."—Theodore Roosevelt.

The little kindergarten child is seldom an object of this kind of charity. He usually makes return "in full in the shape of good citizenship." Are the little children of your community attending kindergarten? If they are being deprived of this benefit, why not try to get a class opened? The National Kindergarten Association, 8 West Fortieth Street, New York, will gladly assist you. Write for advice and leaflets.

The Colesville Settlement; Swallowed Up by Kansas City

You probably never heard of the town of Colesville. But you all know Troost Lake. Well, where Troost now stands Colesville was before Kansas City reached anyway near that far south from the river.

Colesville, named in honor of Colesville, New York, is not a deserted village—it is a swallowed village. It was harassed by war and then absorbed by that giant which was incorporated February 4, 1850.

Westport, likewise, was swallowed by the giant; but individualistic folk living there have persistently kept Westport on the map.

It is well known where Westport begins and where it ends. But as for Colesville one has to ransack abstracts, historical society archives, church records, school history, and military chronicles and the recollections of the oldest inhabitants, and even then the outlines of Colesville appear as shadowy as those of that German village Gerstaecker tells about which rose from the dead every thousand years.

On Bank of Troost Lake

But Colesville was not a myth; it was a flesh and blood village, standing approximately along the western shore of Troost Lake. And whosoever knows not the whereabouts of Troost Lake, well, for him we do not write.

Colesville became self-conscious in February, 1832, eighteen years before the big city on the bluffs shouted to the world, "I am here."

About that time a strange sight might have been seen. Twelve men, each representing one of Father Jacob's boys, might have been seen bearing a log groundsel, which they solemnly placed in what is now the front yard of Doctor R. H. Williams, 2812 Paseo, where the magazine called Right Living is published.

Land of Milk and Honey

The symbolic dozen were acting under a command of Joseph Smith, prophet of the Latter Day Saints, who had ordered Parley P. Pratt, the first western missionary of that body, to go on foot, for the most part, from New York to Kansas and there "teach the gospel to the Delaware Indians." When Pratt and three companions had fulfilled this task, the former came to Kaw township and found a land of milk and honey. Cows were roaming wild on the prairie, and milk was to be had for the taming, while wild bees made the prairie flowers buzz with their labor, and honey could be bought for twenty-five cents a gallon.
Pratt, at the spot already pointed out, became Kansas City’s first school-teacher, and the log building served as school and church. Pratt’s school term was three months, but even that is more than some of Missouri’s backward counties have to-day.

The next year Colesville was wrapped in the horrors of the Mormon War. Numerous skirmishes took place there, and in one of them Pratt was so seriously wounded that he fled to Clay County and there supported himself by chopping wood. Later he was imprisoned in Columbia but escaped and made his way to Illinois, then to Europe, back to America, on to Utah, and finally to Arkansas.

In that southern State, twelve miles north of Van Buren, Pratt drew the jealousy of Hector H. McLean and was slain May 14, 1857, just fifty years old, and was buried a mile from where he met his adversary.

Eighty Acres for $100

Another celebrated Colesville settler was Bishop Edward Partridge, a Massachusetts man, who was an active worker in the combined school and church at Colesville, who, May 17, 1832, paid the sum of $100 for eighty acres lying on the west side of what is now Troost Lake.

The bishop was slain in the Nauvoo, Illinois, massacre when Joseph Smith met his fate. His widow lived till June 9, 1878, dying at Oak Creek, Idaho.

One of the most prominent settlers at Colesville was Sidney Rigdon, pastor of the Baptist church at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, later a fellow worker with Alexander Campbell and Walter Scott in the Christian Church, and lastly a Colesville Branch enthusiast for the faith of the Latter Day Saints. Rigdon and Campbell were such friends that a conversation between them began at sunset one day and did not cease until the sun was rising over the West Virginia hills.

Colonel Alexander W. Doniphan did not live at Colesville, but November 28, 1858, he, with Amos Rees, bought the Partridge eighty acres that six years before the bishop had paid $100 for. The new owners paid $500 for their land. There were signs of a great city.

This is the same Colonel Doniphan that lies buried at Liberty, the same peerless leader that led the army of Missourians to Santa Fe during the Mexican War, the most remarkable military expedition the world has ever known, not excepting that of Xenophon, of which name Doniphan is nothing but a corruption.

The same day Edward Partridge bought his eighty acres for $100, Elliott (or Ellet) Johnson acquired an adjoining eighty-acre tract for the same amount of money.

January 16, 1836, James Porter, grandfather of Jesse Lee Porter of the Porter-Hall-Porter real estate firm, purchased a Colesville eighty acres for $400. James Porter, like Charles Lamb, could have written a dissertation on roast pig. The prairie groves about Colesville were grunting with small and scrubby but eminently edible wild pigs, fattening on acorns, called mast. The hams of these pigs had a delicious, nutty flavor like the Smithfield, Virginia, hams which are the delight of Baltimore epicureans, hams from pigs fattened on peanuts.

James Porter always dressed his pigs in the grove back of the residence at 2814 Paseo because of the big spring that burst forth there and to-day helps feed Troost Lake, conducted along an underground pipe. The other springs that feed the lake burst forth at the foot of Mount Hope, the hill that is crowned by the new osteopath hospital, near the great and beautiful elm that waves its triumphant branches just south of the lake. Willis Allen owned this spring and there built a noted stone milk house. Another spring burst forth near Thirty sixth Street, but it has been sealed and does not find its way to the lake.

This spring was at the head of the draw through Troost Park and on north, which was converted into the Troost Lake of to-day by the Kansas City Cable Company about forty years ago. The area of the lake was at first three acres but was later enlarged to six acres. It was used as a part of an amusement park by the company. Thrilling boat races took place on the lake nearly forty years ago. A creditable zoological garden was maintained in what is now Troost Park.

The city acquired the lake about twenty-five years ago, paying about $15,000 for it.

Several tragedies have occurred near the lake. On the west side, many years ago, Thomas Scruggs was slain by a desperado gang. On the east side, years ago, a young woman committed suicide by leaping into thirty feet of water.

Most tourists to Kansas City visit the lake.

Recently a party of Kansas City folk who had just returned from a tour of the lake region of Colorado were looking at a bunch of lakeview kodaks they had taken. One was so beautiful that a member of the party exclaimed, “Well, I did not know there was a lake as beautiful as that in Colorado!”

“There is not,” was the answer, “that is a view of Troost Lake which accidentally got among my Colorado views.”

The hickory, black walnut, cherry, honey locust, mulberry, coffee bean, hackberry, basswood, and box elder trees are all gone. Only the big elm has survived.

REUNION NEWS

The Spirit of a Reunion in Central Michigan

Since attending the reunion of the young people held at Midland, Michigan, August 14 to 23, my mind is so full of the enjoyment of those ten days that it seems I should try to pass it on to those who were not there.

The first thing that comes to my mind is the wonderful sacrifice of the Saints of Central Michigan District, for sacrifice it certainly was: Imagine supplying from four hundred to seven hundred people with three meals a day! There was no meat, tea, or coffee, but our plates were loaded with three or four different foods, besides the dessert and Postum—all free. And the service we received was first class. Picture to yourself if you can the work it would take to feed all, and the piles and piles of dishes to wash, and the work to be done. I realize more than ever before what it means to give yourself to others, because Central Michigan has set the example to perfection.

I understand that each branch is given a quota for each reunion, after voting to sustain the next one; and instead of making their quota, they far exceed it. One year after expenses were paid they had $300, and another year $500 or $600. They have voted to hold another reunion next year.

The spirit that was manifested upon the grounds was truly a taste of the millennium. Never once during the whole ten days did I hear an unkind word or thought expressed. All seemed to be one family, one mind and thought, and that was of kindness and love for others.

The prayer meetings were very spiritual; the gifts were manifested and were of great benefit and encouragement. The sermons and lectures without exception were helpful and instructive.

Brother D. T. Williams, of the Twelve, taught us of the greater significance of the church, which gave us greater strength and love for the gospel and the redemption, also a zeal stronger than ever to keep going.

The teachings of Brother C. J. Hunt on the stewardship plan were fine and what we all needed, as that subject is little understood. His way of explaining gave us the understanding, causing us to want to cooperate in the great plan of building up Zion.

Sister Blanche Edwards represented the Department of Women. We enjoyed her talks very much. Once when the rostrum she observed a horseshoe under her chair. How it got there is a mystery, but good luck to her. Still, we know she did not need it to bring her good luck, as her perseverance, sacrifice, and love for others brought her that.

At two o'clock on Wednesday, August 19, we attended an elders' quorum open meeting, which was very interesting. We sat from two until half past five and the time seemed short at that. There were short talks on different topics, interspersed with vocal solos and orchestra music.

Speaking of the orchestra, we had one to be proud of here. There were six violins, four or five cornets, three or four saxophones, drums, piano, horn, and I do not remember what else, which were in charge of Brothers Homer and Byron Doty. One evening we went to town and played on the main street. After playing a few selections, which the crowd seemed to appreciate, Brother Doty, dexterously balancing himself on a water hydrant, told the crowd we had the biggest thing in the world in the plan of redemption of mankind and invited them to the reunion.

We had a field meet on Thursday, which all enjoyed, especially those who won the prizes. Friday evening an entertainment was put on, and every number was of the highest order, showing much talent and work. Saturday a marshmallow roast was in order; also community singing around the big bonfires, led by Brother John Grice, who thoroughly understands the art of putting enthusiasm into the singing. An unexplainable incident happened Saturday evening. Over the camp was spread a sort of rainbow of light, seemingly about four or five feet wide and stretching from one end of the camp to the other. It was so low that it seemed to be in the tops of the trees. Whether it was a manifestation of God's pleasure over us, we know not, but it was wonderful.

Prayer meeting was very spiritual the last Sunday morning. A beautiful gift of tongues was given us through Brother John Grice; and the words of knowledge and instruction that were given us, and the encouragement, were of the nature that the whole church needs at present. A beautiful song was also given with the gift, to the tune of "Lead, kindly light." The power of God's Spirit accompanied the gift so strongly that we were thrilled through and through and felt, "Why should we not serve such a wonderful God and Father?" Truly this church is of God. Sometimes we feel discouraged when others are slow to accept the gospel and the other brethren are getting nervous and feel that God has forgotten us, or is slow to assist us, but we forget that this work is his and that we are to assist him. In reality God is still at the helm, planning, directing, and carrying out his plans insomuch as we are willing to be led by his Spirit.

We are too apt to take the full responsibility upon our own shoulders and, not being capable, lose out. If we could only content ourselves to do our part and leave the increase with God, we would accomplish more.

Sunday night came all too quickly, and as the good-bys were said we all felt that truly we had had a little taste of heaven where "all were of one mind, and each loved the other."

Eastern Oklahoma

The Eastern Oklahoma reunion was held at Winthrop, Arkansas, August 6 to 16, and was considered a success from several points of view. The attendance from visiting Saints and the other branches was good, and we had a goodly attendance of nonmembers from the local town people. However, the nonmember attendance was not so good as our local brethren wished, because of the fact that the Nazarene Church was holding a protracted meeting in an arbor just one block from our arbor.

The Saints of Winthrop had built a good arbor in a good grove, with plenty of shade. They had an eating house, where all were served free, and there was also a large community sleeping house. This, with the church and a few cots, made ample sleeping quarters for all, and no charges were made for accommodations. The bills for food were met by all giving what they felt they were able, according to what was needed. The Saints of Winthrop had prepared beforehand to have fruit and vegetables, so the bills were not so large. While we were there we lived like one large family.

Of the conference appointees we had Patriarch H. O. Smith; H. E. Winegar and J. T. Riley, seventies; and of the local men Brothers J. W. Jackson, T. B. Sharp, C. G. Sharp, B. P. Pollard, and the writer, all contributing to the preaching.

The outstanding features of the meeting were the great degree of unity and the general feeling that the church in eastern Oklahoma, and the whole church, is going to arise and shine. The Zion movement was a continuous theme.

The Saints' Herald for September 23, 1925

The success of the young people's meetings was very gratifying. Several of the mornings, at the close of their prayer meeting, they marched to the arbor to be at the regular meeting, which they attended well throughout. I was particularly impressed one morning when about thirty of them came marching two by two, singing, "We are marching to Zion." They formed in a half circle at our arbor, where we were just opening service, and finished the song. The look on their strong young faces impressed upon me the fact that they believed they were marching to Zion. Later the same day, as they were going to a river near by to swim, I looked at them closely and could see only joy and gladness on their faces—there was no evil.

The young people were led in their sports and meetings by H. E. Winegar and wife and Brother and Sister C. G. Smallwood. All are heartily in favor of another reunion next year.

During the reunion we had some splendid testimonies from such men as H. O. Smith, J. T. Riley, J. W. Jackson, and many others. Also our one-time missionary, a pioneer in this district, J. D. Erwin, was with us and gave some good testimonies.

The Saints of Winthrop, headed by their branch president, T. B. Sharp, are to be commended for their preparation and the way in which they cared for the Saints.

Lamoni Stake

The twenty-second annual reunion of the Lamoni Stake was held on the reunion grounds near the Missouri River. This park of thirty-seven acres is owned by the church. On Monday, July 27, eighty-two men and boys responded to the call to assist in preparing the grounds for the approaching reunion. The ladies of the Department of Women of the Lamoni Branch served lunch, thus making it possible for the workers to remain all day. As a result of their labors the grounds were more beautiful than ever before.

The two-day meeting opened with a communion service on Wednesday morning, August 5. A business session followed this service, at which time the stake presidency (W. L. Prall, David E. Dowker, and Roy A. Cheville), Elbert A. Smith of the First Presidency, and J. F. Garver and E. J. Gleaner of the Quorum of Twelve, were chosen to preside over the reunion.

Attendance

Sixty-six residence tents, fourteen scout tents, and eight service tents—eighty-eight in all—were erected on the grounds during the reunion. Three hundred and fifty-one people—seventy-five more than last year—occupied these tents. Hundreds of others from Lamoni and adjacent territory occupied the camping grounds, and the total number between thirteen and fourteen hundred. About two hundred visitors from other stakes and districts attended all or part of the reunion. The following stakes and districts were represented:

Far West, Holden, Independence, Kansas City, Nauvoo, Des Moines, Eastern Iowa, Little Sioux, Minnesota, Southcentral Illinois, Northeastern Illinois, Southern Wisconsin, Central Texas, Southwestern Texas, Western Nebraska, Central Nebraska, Northeastern Nebraska, Northeastern Kansas, North Dakota, New Mexico, Pottawattamie.

Speakers

There were assigned to the reunion of the First Presidency, Frederick M. Smith and Albert A. Smith; of the Quorum of Twelve, J. F. Garver and E. J. Gleaner; of the Order of Patriarchs, W. A. McDowell; and as a representative of the departments, Sister L. Lenore Christy. In addition to the above named, S. A. Burgess, church historian, L. G. Holloway, and Fred T. Mussell, of the missionary force; and Joseph Lane, president of the Pottawattamie District, and all of the Lamoni stake officers were in attendance.

The 10:45 a.m. preaching service on week days, with the exception of the one held on young people's day, was discontinued, and departmental sessions, class work, priesthood meetings, and special services for the children and boys and girls were held at this hour.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Frederick M. Smith, Elbert A. Smith, E. J. Gleazer, J. F. Garver, W. A. McDowell, S. A. Burgess, A. B. Phillips, and Roy A. Cheville did the preaching, which was of an exceptionally high order. President E. J. Gleazer was in attendance on the last Sunday and spoke three times, taking for his theme, as he said, "a new subject—Zion."

Music

The musical activities were under the direct supervision of Brother Elwin A. Fry and added much to the success of the reunion. Fifteen minutes of congregational singing preceded each evening service. The choir appeared on each Sunday, also a number of nights during the week. The Lamoni Band gave a full evening's program on Monday night, and the Lamoni Orchestra furnished music two evenings during the reunion.

Young People's Activities

The following young people's organizations were represented in the camp: The Cubs, under the care and direction of Brother George E. Mesley; the Lamoni Orioles, under the supervision of Sister Emma Chaeye; and the Hiteman Orioles, under the care of Sister Ann Morgan. Many other young people were on the rosters.

Brother David E. Dowker, of the stake presidency, and Elder E. Dewey White were directly in charge of the young people's social services. The attendance averaged 120, and the participation on the part of the young people was excellent.

The children's meetings were under the supervision of Sister Esther Grim. Programs were arranged for the younger children and were well attended by them, an average attendance of seventy-five.

Sisters C. E. Wight and Lena Wells had charge of the girls' meetings. A complete change of program was had at each session, and all were of an exceptionally high order.

The boys' meetings were under the direction of Brother Melvin E. Jones. The subjects presented were very interesting as you will note by the following, "Regular fellers of foreign lands," and "You cannot carve rotten wood."

Wednesday, August 12, was young people's day. At a quarter of eleven Apostle E. J. Gleazer delivered the sermon to the young people, and in the evening the young people of the Sunday school presented the play, "Golden birds," under the direction of Misses Lena Wells and Florence Thompson. This was given in costume, and in a very beautiful way taught the lesson of humility and love as against selfishness.

Class Work

This was a new undertaking for the Lamoni stake reunion. Stewardship classes were held under the direction of Bishop A. B. Phillips and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Home Betterment classes were conducted by Sisters L. Lenore Christy and Lydia Wight. The attendance at these classes was far above expectations, and the only complaint heard was that one could not be in two of the classes at the same time. In addition to the Home Betterment classes, the Department of Women gave a play, "Bread or stones." The object of this play was to emphasize the importance of good homes and shouted two themes; first, when the individuals think only of self, without any consideration of others; second, which was in fact the first one reorganized through the agency of the Department of Women, presented to the audience a Zionic home.

In a very clever way the Sanitarium, Graceland College, and the stewardship plan were woven into the theme of the play.

Preachement Meetings

These meetings were under the supervision of the stake presidency. Apostle E. J. Gleazer and President Elbert A. Smith delivered the lectures to the priesthood. These lectures were very helpful and should encourage our ministry to a fuller and more efficient service among the Saints.

Recreational and Social Life

A large number participated in the recreational activities. On alternate days, with the exception of Sundays, organized play was carried on. The freedom of the afternoons from meetings permitted much visiting among those on the grounds, thus giving us a much better opportunity of becoming acquainted. We are quite of the opinion that when the Saints come to know each other better and understand each other more fully we will find that many of our differences have been eliminated.

Order

One of the pleasing features of our reunion was the excellent order. A desire for the comfort of others was the spirit evidenced on the part of all. Some years ago the custom of appointing police to maintain order was abandoned, as it was no longer necessary. When all groups, including even the very small children, have a part in the camp and its religious as well as its recreational activities, they come to think of it as our reunion and are anxious to prevent anything that will mar the peace of the camp.

Spiritual Development

All of the activities of the reunion were arranged for the purpose of developing the spirituality of those who attended. Our social services were inspirational—the word of God came through the game to permeate the whole week—and, to the strengthening and encouragement of the Saints. An excellent spirit prevailed in all of the services, also upon the playground and throughout the camp; in fact, the Spirit of Christ was prevalent in every activity.

Reunion Theme

The theme, "Seek ye the Lord," certainly struck a responsive chord in the hearts of our people. The Saints of the Lamoni Stake are convinced that the work of the church, which they understand to be the preaching of the gospel to the people of the earth and the building of Zion, can only be accomplished by a people who are constantly in communion with the Infinite Father through the gifts of the Holy Ghost.

This reunion was but a forerunner of what our people will enjoy when we are living in harmony with the Zionic plan.

Deer Park, Pennsylvania

About thirty miles from the Philadelphia church, on the Old York Road, a road that was once the main artery between the two great cities of New York and Philadelphia, there lies a most peaceful little lake of cool, sparkling water. The autoist must make a very sharp turn off of the Old York Road to reach one of the wonders of the great State of Pennsylvania. One who for the first time rides to the great oak tree and gazes upon the little pool of crystal water underneath its great spreading branches may not be struck so forcibly with this great wonder, but like the unfathomable truths of the Almighty, it takes some time before it is appreciated. Close to the roots of this mighty oak there comes forth from Mother Earth a never-failing spring of pure, sparkling water, filling this little pool, which in turn tumbles over a steep hillside, into a quiet lake overhung by rich growth of small oak trees. One who looks into this little pool and easily sees the bottom that it is about ten or twelve feet deep, nor is one aware that this spring issues ninety barrels of water per hour after year, nor that the temperature of this cool and delicious water is about fifty-two degrees the whole year through. This wonderful spring reminds one of the deep and far-reaching veins of the earth, from which spring a number of streams. The water of this spring is not aware as he drinks it, that I shall give him shall never thirst; but who ever deliberates with the Master of the springs how and when he will give it; and the Master of the mine saith, "But who ever drinketh of the water of the Lord, shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Passing on up a steep winding gravel road, a sight most familiar to many Latter Day Saints greets the eye; that is, during the reunion. A tented city, together with a large sixteen-sided auditorium, a commodious commissary, a power house, and a storeroom. There is just enough slope to the grounds, and the soil is of such a character where the tents stand that even in rainy weather it is not at all difficult to get around. A tract of seventy-eight acres, most of which is heavily wooded with beautiful oak trees, with a ball diamond, tennis courts, volleyball courts, and equipment galore, make up beautiful "Deer Park." The auditorium is a very peculiarly constructed building, having seven double doors with no pillars or supports in the center of the building to obstruct the view of the audience, and a seating capacity of about 1,000. The roof is supported by a series of large iron rods coming from the sides and cupola of the building. In former years it was used as a dance hall. The commissary has perhaps the best-equipped kitchen and dining hall in the entire church. A huge gas stove, a steam table, a large ice box, together with a room where seven or eight hundred pounds of ice can be stored, a gas baking oven, hot and cold water with sinks to wash dishes, all the kitchen utensils any good cook would want, together with tables, trays, shelves, dishes; in fact, everything that goes to make up a kitchen and dining room, this commissary is equipped with. In the power house is the gas engine which is used to generate the electricity, giving light all over the grounds, and also it pumps plenty of that pure, cool, delicious spring water up the hill for the campers' use. The storeroom is a small building in which goods are stored from one reunion to another.

Deer Park reunions have been held for the past six years. The writer has attended the Lamoni and Onset reunions, two very well-known reunions in the church that have been running for many years, and knows the equipment and the grounds of both, but I must write that Deer Park has the most beautiful grounds and is the best equipped. Being young in years and tender in experience, the Deer Park reunions are not as largely attended, nor are they as well organized as the other two reunions.

This year it fell to the lot of the writer to assume the burden of the responsibilities of the reunion, as it was impossible for the district president to be present on the week days. At the first Sunday morning prayer service, the Saints experienced the spirit of mercy. Did you ever attend a prayer service where the Spirit of the Lord flooded the room, pleading with you to render obedience to its whisperings, softening your heart until you shed tears, and filling your soul with hope and determination? If you have, then you can understand the nature of the first prayer meeting held at Deer Park at the last reunion. From every indication, it was wholly the mercy of God that moved him to do this, and we were indeed thankful. He rendered valuable service, even though the Saints did not respond to the whisperings of the Spirit as they could have done, and as a result a blessing was lost. Many beautiful testimonies were given, and the Spirit strove with many at this service; however, the Pentecost that was in store for them was not enjoyed. On the third Sunday, all felt that we were going to have a most wonderful service, it being the last prayer service of the reunion, and while it did not come up to our expectations, yet a beautiful spirit prevailed, causing some to confess their omissions of the past which helped to delay the pentecostal blessings.

Patriarch A. E. Stone arrived the middle of the second week and was kept busy preaching, giving blessings, and advising with and counseling the young. The fellowship of these brethren is wholesome.

Brother Thomas M. Carr, a missionary from the Isle of Pines, was with us a few days and preached to us. He was also one of the chief promoters of the "mock wedding" that was "pulled off" as one of the annual affairs of the reunions. Brother Carr was formerly a Graceland student and lives at Elk Mills, Maryland.

At our reunion, like other reunions, some of the people did not attend the services as they could have done, and like other people our people lost valuable blessings. Since the reunion, the Spirit of the Lord has striven with the Saints of the Philadelphia Branch, and they have responded wonderfully. We feel sure that another reunion will not go by with as much indifference shown as at the last. A most valuable lesson has been learned.

Busy Reunion Program in Western Montana

I have just left the camp of the Western Montana district reunion, which was held at Race Track, as mentioned in my last letter. The daily program provided for meetings with only short intermissions in the morning or forenoon: young people's prayer service before breakfast, prayer meeting after breakfast, lectures by M. A. and Ida Etzenhouser, and preaching services just before noon; a busy schedule. The afternoons were devoted to "recreation"—games, trips, etc. On the afternoon of the day I arrived the diversion for the adults was a trip to Anaconda to visit the great smelter, the Anaconda Reduction Works. The party went in three cars, about fourteen in all. Our group went in Sisters' cars and in a Nebelink car. Bench Johnson, in the group were Clyde F. Ellis, M. A. Etzenhouser, Ida Etzenhouser, and myself. "Monnie" asked me to take the wheel, an invitation I unreluctantly accepted, and enjoyed the task of negotiating the seventeen miles of road between Anaconda and Race Track.

The great chimney outletting the enormous flue through which the gases from the smelter pass, with its constant streamer of white vapors, is visible from all parts of the valley, and so plainly that when we saw at a forking of the roads the sign "Nine miles to Anaconda," we were disposed to question the accuracy of the information, for the chimney appeared to be closer. We soon learned that this was due to two things; first the usual deceptive appearance of close mountain sides, and second, the false sense of nearness given by chimney passes the waste, in the form of white vapor, which floats out from the top of the great chimney, a streamer-like cloud, the weather vane of the whole valley; while another waste in the form of slag pulverized by being dropped white hot into water is hauled in cars by chugging compressed air locomotives or through flumes out on the circling roads of a hill, a great black truncated cone almost as conspicuous from afar as is the cyclopean chimney. Yet another waste, the tailings, is carried by flumes out onto the flats below, and is spread over an expanse covering many acres. It is the water running off these tailings which has destroyed the farm of Deere Lick.

As we returned to the starting point, our tired feet bore evidence of the truthfulness of the claim, "biggest in the world," but to our further conviction we were handed a pamphlet replete with laconic description and startling figures. Here are some of the facts gleaned therefrom:

The Butte mining district is one of the greatest in the world; and of the mines in operation the Anaconda Copper Mining Company has long been the chief producer of the world's copper. Anaconda is the largest smelting center in the world; and of the mines in operation the Anaconda Copper Mining Company has long been the chief producer of the world's copper. At Anaconda ores producing zinc, copper, manganese, silver, and gold. At Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and Great Falls, Montana, other plants of the company take the "metallic copper" as it leaves the Anaconda plant and extract the gold and silver present, and market all the metals. In the past twenty-five years, most of the silver produced in the world has been a by-product of copper and lead smelting. Though in the Butte district the silver averages only about two ounces per ton of ore, so large is the ore production in that district it has been for many years one of the chief sources of silver. The normal output of the plant is 16 tons of zinc, 20,000 tons of copper, and 10,000 being developed by steam at the plant. Some other figures denoting the great size of the plant are that nearly 1,000,000 tons of limestone are used each day, 30,000 tons of coke, and 750 tons of coal, while 80,000,000 gallons is the daily consumption of water, and 500,000,000 cubic feet of compressed air per day are used.

Located at Anaconda, twenty-six miles from Butte (because of the water supply), the reduction works handles ore producing zinc, copper, manganese, silver, and gold. At Perth Amboy, New Jersey, and Great Falls, Montana, other plants of the company take the "metallic copper" as it leaves the Anaconda plant and extract the gold and silver present, and market all the metals. In the past twenty-five years, most of the silver produced in the world has been a by-product of copper and lead smelting. Though in the Butte district the silver averages only about two ounces per ton of ore, so large is the ore production in that district it has been for many years one of the chief sources of silver. The normal output of the plant is 16 tons of zinc, 20,000 tons of copper, and 10,000 being developed by steam at the plant. Some other figures denoting the great size of the plant are that nearly 1,000,000 tons of limestone are used each day, 30,000 tons of coke, and 750 tons of coal, while 80,000,000 gallons is the daily consumption of water, and 500,000,000 cubic feet of compressed air per day are used. in blowers, furnaces, air locomotives, etc., 15,000 horsepower being used to compress this great quantity of air, which weighs 18,000 tons. Besides the copper, zinc, manganese, silver and gold, produced, other products of considerable magnitude are arsenic and sulphuric and nitric acids.

After digesting all these figures, and remembering our tired feet and muscles from up the grade and down the long series of stairs, I concluded another Missourian "had been shown," and that the Anaconda Reduction Works was the largest of its kind "in the world."

So with sighs we dropped into the cushions of the parked cars, seemingly drawn by the starter switch, then on the "gas," and were off for the camp. But we took a turn through the streets of the lively smelter town of Anaconda, where we have a branch of Saints, most of whom I met later at the camp. Among this group is Fred Kendall, the Grace-land lad I came near beating in the "fat man's race" at the young people's convention two years ago. He bantered me for another race, and I guess I'll have to take him on, but I'm going to wait till he gets a bit fatter. Don't believe I'll have to wait long.

As we went up the valley from Race Track to Anaconda the masses of storm clouds in the mountains on several sides looked to me, a tenderfoot, as though we "had rain." I so expressed myself, but was laughed at, as the "wet season" had not yet come, and the Over-warder had a "stomach" to laugh over afterwards. Behind the towering peaks rising in some instances to 11,000 feet above sea level, some thirty miles long by about ten wide, well watered and fertile. The chief industry is stock raising, cattle and sheep, and such crops as the oats and barley and wheat, hay, corn, etc.

The Saints of Western Montana number about five hundred, and they are the forebears of the chief town of the valley, is of about 3,000 population, prosperous and wide awake, with well-paved streets and good buildings, and is the trading point for a large agricultural district and the home of the state prison. It is a division point on the C. M. & St. P. Railway and is also served in transportation by the Northern Pacific and a bus line from Anaconda.

Several new buildings have been erected, and the "Race Track" is a station on the Northern Pacific not far from Champion on the Chicago, Milwaukee, and Saint Paul. Both mark a spot which in the day of horse racing was visited occasionally by hundreds and even thousands. But to-day Race Track, the town, has shrunk in importance till it is scarcely more than a flag station, while the race track itself is fast overgrowing with grasses and shrubs. Yet Race Track is not devoid of beauty, for even a flag station located in the valley of Deer Lodge River will afford vistas of entrancing beauty, the valley being one of the most beautiful in Montana. It is not the wild beauty of some of the craggy mountain mass in the monument, but rather the soft and swiftly changing beauty of a peaceful, fertile valley surrounded by wooded foothills and towering peaks rising in some instances to 11,000 feet. The valley itself is about 5,000 feet above sea level, some thirty miles long by about ten wide, well watered and fertile. The chief industry is stock raising, cattle and sheep, and such crops as the oats and barley and wheat, hay, corn, etc.

The large mining town of Butte and the smelting town of Anaconda, both near the southern end of the valley, furnish ready markets for all the chickens, eggs, and vegetables the valley produces.

The towns of the valley are not large, but everywhere are the signs of prosperity, while some portions possess a fertility permitting intensive agriculture and animal husbandry and support ranches wide in expanse and large in product. Deer Lodge and the other western counties of the state are largely wooded, and the rainfall is rather abundant. The river is there and the valley is filled with the water from the mountains. cloud and lightning and mountain peaks and foothills grouped into a picture of sublime beauty in colors of blue, at times so deep that they rival and even match the deep blue of marine views, softened here and there with a variegation of shades. The light green of the dense mountain forests, the grays of untimbered peaks, and the peaceful valley with its varied agricultural aspects in the fore, makes a picture no amateur photographer can see without a stirring of the emotions. And no less beautiful is the sight when the whole valley lies beneath a sunlit heaven, the hills and peaks a variegation of the brown of seared meadowlands, the light green of grain still unripe, the black green of the dense mountain forests, the grays of untimbered peaks, silhouetted against the massive piles of white cloud banks driven upward by the rising line of saturation. And it seemed that every person had a happy smile on his face. And what! and how! And there is no better since you came, Brother George Thorburn.

As we left for the second call she remarked, "I know Andrew will be pleased." He seemed to be. We found him (Andrew Hanson) to be a little Dane, eighty-one years old, with a happy range of his life, and he felt sure that Doctor Green would send him to "the San" for ten days. So I had advised Brother Ellis that he had better go to Independence for treatment to get in shape, if possible, for the coming council meetings. I hope that under Doctor Green's care the knee will be reconditioned, and that he may be able to successfully combat the other disease of which I spoke.

Saturday had been a beautiful day, clear and warm; and Sunday was its equal or better. It brought forth the largest attendance yet had at the Western Montana reunion, and the day was a busy one, the activities beginning early, before breakfast, when the young people met for prayer, and continued until the school hour. I was occupied by the women, when the men came about in small groups for the evening entertainment, which proved to be a combination of music, play, etc., which bespoke much time spent in preparation and which quite amused and pleased the large audience.

I mentioned one incident which seemed to please many; it occurred when we were leaving the camp for the second call. She remarked, "I wonder what was behind that expression and movement?" And perhaps there was a smile in the eyes, that bright smile which overflowed her eyes, that light smile that shone through them. What a blessing it is to be able to preserve through adversity an active sense of humor! She did not speak much about her parental illness and helplessness. The visit strengthened my experience: Shall I thank Sister Bertha for it? She overflowed her eyes, that bright smile shone through them.

As we left for the return trip to the camp, I found myself saying under my breath: "Brave pair that, Mrs. Bernard and her brother Andrew Hanson! Would that amid my own troubles and trials and suffering I could display such brave patience."

We reached the camp just as Brother A. J. Moore was pronouncing the benediction in dismissal of the evening service. Brother Clyde F. Ellis had been the speaker but had already gone to Race Track station to entrain for home. I phoned out from Deer Lodge, and a car was ordered to take me in to attend to that. I had intended to drive to the camp again, arriving in time to hear "Fred A." dispensing the word.

Friday some more telegrams at Deer Lodge demanded attention, and this time it was "Doc" Casey, of Polson, Montana, who offered to take care of me, providing I was "willing to ride in a Ford coupe." I wonder what was behind that expression and movement? And who offered me a ride? and why? She said, "I have heard of the Ford cars of which Dame Rumor would have me possessed? Anyway, we went, and at my request he drove to Deer Lodge via Dempsey, where we stopped to examine (from the exterior) and photograph a neat-looking, small building labeled over the entrance, "The Lord's House." It is the only church building owned by the Morrisites. We stopped for a lunch at a local cafe, and then on to Deer Lodge, where, telegrams received and sent, we found a photographer to develop our films, for with a new supply of films we intended to go back by way of Dempsey in case our exposures had been faulty and try again. We found a photographer to develop our films, for with a new supply of films we intended to go back by way of Dempsey in case our exposures had been faulty and try again.

But the negatives were reported O. K. by the photographer, so we went back to camp leisurely via the main road and reached there in ample time for the evening entertainment, which proved to be a combination of music, play, etc., which bespoke much time spent in preparation and which quite amused and pleased the large audience.

The evening was spent in preaching service. From my arrival Wednesday morning up to and including the Sacramental service at half past two was followed closely by business. Sunday school at nine was followed by preaching at eleven by "F. A." Sacramental service at half past two was followed closely at twenty minutes past four by a priesthood meeting, and the evening was spent in preaching service. From my arrival Wednesday morning up to and including the sermon Sunday night, I spoke in various addresses throughout the day and evening, seven and one half hours, all on Zion and its problems; yet there was effort made to have me speak at the Sunday school hour rather than have the classes. I declined, saying that was the children's hour and I would not take it.

I must mention one incident which seemed to please many, particularly the women. It was on Saturday noon when the "Widow's Missionary" was occupied by the women, when the men waited on them, then washed the dishes, reset the table, fed themselves, and again washed the dishes and scrubbed up the pots and pans. It came about in this way: Brother and Sister Etzenhouser, finishing their lectures in the morning, had planned to leave in the afternoon to be in Salt Lake City for Sunday. Sister Etzenhouser had on request consented to address the women, and the only hour available was from one to two, and this was feasible only if the men would wash the dishes. So Brother George Thorburn agreed to do so and called for volunteers to help. I think every man in the camp responded to the call. I shed my coat and called for an apron. Sister Bootman, the largest woman in the camp, handed me hers and pinned it around me. Why? What is funny about a large man wearing a large woman's apron? And you should have seen... the businesslike way in which Clyde F. washed dishes and scoured pots and pans. He quite won the hearts of the ladies. Wonder where he got his previous experience? In the Tuamotus, perhaps. I was compelled to lay off the apron before the dishwashing job was complete, to answer a "phone call at Toey's"—another telegram. When I returned, Clyde was at the last cooking vessel to clean, and the dishes were put away. Some of the sisters told me the men-washing-the-dishes trick was a success, as was the lecture.

After my sermon Sunday night, I bade good-by to District President Eliason, Evangelist F. A., and several other Eliasons, and Christoffersons, and Thorburns, and Boots, and Allen, and Petersons, and Smietzers, and Caseys, and Mesdans, and--oh, what's the use, I can't name them all; but I know I had formed the opinion that the Western Montana Saints form a group of fine people, and that opinion is borne out by the testimony of Brother A. J. Moore, and he ought to know, after more than a quarter of a century of church work in that field.

I left the grounds, assured by what I had seen and heard that the Saints of that district were keenly interested in the work of the church and solidly behind it. Among others met were the M. G. Perrin family of Deer Lodge. Sister Perrin formerly was Miss Callie Langworthy, for several years a teacher in the Lamoni schools; and the Leibolds, formerly of Independence, and some others from "back east" whose names I do not now recall; and Robert M. Es­gar and family, a former Lamoni boy; and Dale Stead and family, also a former Lamoni boy (Lamoni people are becoming almost ubiquitous—one finds them everywhere); Sister Louise Reese, formerly Sister Nunn (nee Roeder) of Independence. Two very conspicuous beings on the grounds were "Jackie" and "Wolf." About the former, ask "Doc" Casey of Polson, and about the latter ask "Doc" Chase of Billings.

Sunday night I spent with Brother and Sister Brooks Johnson in their home in Deer Lodge, and Monday (to-day) morning, refreshed by a good night's rest and breakfast served by "Momie," I boarded the "Olympian," one of the Milwaukee Road's best trains bound for Chicago and Indiana Lake, Michigan, the latter place being the meeting place of the reunion and conference of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District; and thereon will probably hang another tale.

Two-day Meeting at Butman

The two-day meeting held at the church in Butman, Michigan, was a very interesting and enjoyable occasion, participated in by the membership and nonmembership. Among the speakers for the two days were Patriarch G. W. Burt of Beaverton, Elder Earl Burt of Saginaw, Elder F. McDonald of Clare County, Elder Pridd易 of Edwards, and Elder G. W. White of Gladwin.

Among the meetings worthy of mention was the rendering of some beautiful songs by two baritone singers, Harold Morrison and Clare Sacier of Detroit. One is a brother to John Morrison, new deceased, who was star baritone Irish singer.

About four hundred meals free to all who came were served by the Department of Women, assisted by selected waiters. Credit must be given to this department for the palatability and variety of good foods served.

Mrs. Earl Burt was chorister and music leader, which was wonderful talent.

Business was done only at the beginning, when the pastor, Elder Israel Goheen, was chosen to be presiding elder, choosing speakers and setting time of meeting.

The blessings of God's Spirit were predominant. Prayer meetings were of a high spiritual character, and all left with better resolves.

Two-day Meeting Successful

(A report to the First Presidency)

Our two-day meeting at Fairfield came off according to schedule, Saturday and Sunday last. We held three sessions on Saturday and four on Sunday.

Saints were gathered from several different points, though there were several who were intending to come but for some reason did not arrive. Brother J. R. Sutton was with us, and the Saints were surely glad to meet him again in the flesh and to hear his voice in testimony of the gospel and of the constituted authority of the church.

On Saturday and Sunday nights there were quite a number of outsiders present, Sunday night the house being quite comfortably filled, the congregation I believe being quite equally divided between members and nonmembers. My theme was the social ideals of our church, and I have seldom faced a brighter-eyed and more interested audience.

We returned to Franklin yesterday to bring the folks who went with us from here to attend the two-day meeting, but Brother Sutton and I will continue the meetings there the remainder of this week, and I will remain over next Sunday and a few nights next week if the interest justifies, though I have arranged for Brother Sutton to visit the Wilber Branch next Sunday. His efforts are fruitful in reviving the Saints and renewing interest in the work.

Two were baptized at Wilber a week ago and one at Fairfield last Sunday. So we are surely, if slowly, gaining ground.

Utah District Young People

The second young people's meeting of the Utah District has passed by, and notice of its passing was taken by the district being represented from Malad, Provo, and Salt Lake City Branches. The meeting was held in Ogden, beginning Saturday evening with a program and an address by the ex-mayor of Ogden, Frank Francis. Mr. Francis gave a very inspiring address, which was well received by the adults as well as the young. He paid a tribute to our work, also a tribute of appreciation to Brother G. P. Levitt, our district president, for the service he offers to his people and the community in which he lives. After the evening program, all went to the home of Brother and Sister Hewes to have a social evening and eat hot dogs. We anticipated roasting our wiener's by a camp fire; but when it began to rain such hot dogs you never ate—better than those you toast by the camp fire. Singing and games were also enjoyed. At eleven o'clock Brother Hewes adjusted his radio, and we heard the city clock in London, England, strike the hour of seven, after which we all crowded into one room and had family prayer with Brother and Sister Hewes.

Nine o'clock Sunday morning saw everyone at the church for prayer and sacramental service. This service was a bene­diction for all. The Spirit of God was present in power, manifest in testimony, prayer, songs, and the gift of prophecy. Surely it was good to be there. Sunday school took up at eleven. At the close of this hour, Brother Levitt was allotted five minutes, and $10.20 was raised to go toward the seating of the young people's Convention Hall at Graceland.

At noon all went to the home of Franklin Robertson, State President of Women of Ogden, under the supervision of Sister J. Chase, gave a demonstration of organization. Good things to eat were set on tables, so all could line up like a big family. At half past two back to the church, where we were privileged to hear a splendid sermon to the young by Brother E. B. Hull, who has charge of the work in Salt Lake City. Following this service, a goodly number visited Sister Hull, who was in the hospital owing to an auto accident from which she received bruises and broken bones. Sister Hull was to have taken part in our meetings in a musical way. We missed her.
Supper was served at the parsonage, and then followed the last service of our convention. Brother Levitt was the speaker, and he very forcefully brought to his hearers a message for youth and adult. His subject was, "The meaning of youth."

From the way folks stayed around the church after the service, we are sure they were loath to part. Remarks such as the following were heard: "I have heard things that will stay with me awhile"; "The best Sunday I have had in years"; "Surely we have another convention, Brother Levitt!" It has been a long time since I have felt such a degree of the Spirit."

We were given a happy surprise Saturday evening when Brother R. E. Davey and family drove up to the church. Brother and Sister Davey have endeared themselves to the Utah folks, and we were happy to have them with us. They drove from their field in Colorado to get some belongings, as they are getting located in their district.

Development is being noticed in the Utah District, and with the youth rests the responsibility of carrying it to higher and nobler planes. Pray for the establishment of God's kingdom in Utah.

May God bless his people with his Spirit to help them carry on his way is our prayer.

Wichita, Kansas

September 7.—It has been some time since the church work in the "Peerless Princess of the Prairie" has been reported in the columns of the Herald. It has not been from a lack of news, but due to the neglect of the reporter.

A number of the Saints who have been away on their vacations during the summer season have returned. Elder Orson Bradford and family have returned from a trip to their old home in Web City, Missouri. Elder E. L. Barracough has returned from a business trip through Indiana and Illinois and is now giving all his time to study in the Colvin School of Chiropractics. Sister A. A. Buschow, son Adolph and daughter Doris, and Sister Alice Bozarth have returned from their vacation in California. Sister Stella Williams and son Blaine are also at home after a vacation in Iowa. Sister Stella Holsworth and niece Emma Holsworth of Independence spent the summer at the home of Brother Roy Field.

Brother Ira Whiple, formerly of Topeka, has moved his family to this city. This family gives promise of some good church workers for this branch. Brother Smoyer and family is another addition to our number, they having moved from Kansas City, Kansas. Brother Reese Williams, who has been with us since the first of March, has helped increase our membership by moving his family here from Hiteman, Iowa. Sister Pearl Margrave and daughter, of Webb City, Missouri, have also moved into our city.

We have recently lost a number of our active workers. Lawrence Brockway, who has occupied in the office of priest and as superintendent of the Sunday school, has gone to Lincoln, Nebraska, to attend the university in that city. Byron Jennings, who occupies the same office in the priesthood and who has also been superintendent of the Religio, has gone to Graceland. Elder Ellis Bedwell, who has acted as counselor to the pastor, has also gone to Graceland to take up the course in religious education. Sister Ellis Bedwell, who has been one of our energetic departmental workers, has accepted a position in Saint Joseph, Missouri, in order to be near her husband. This makes five of our young people who are attending college this year, four of them at Graceland. Sister Stella Brockway and Wallace Nelson are there again for another term, they having spent last year there. While we miss these folks very much right now, we look forward a few years and recognize that this branch or some other congregation will profit by their increased talents and consecrated hearts. Let us hope it will be this branch.

Brother Charles T. Pooler has been chosen to act as superintendent of the Sunday school for the balance of the term left vacant by the removal of Brother Brockway. Sister Eleanor Williams has been chosen to act as superintendent of the Religio for the same reason.

Brother James Jennings has moved his family to Dalhart, Texas. We regret very much to lose this family. Abner Jennings and wife have moved to Hutchinson and should be a great help to the church people in that city.

It has been determined that the theme from both pulpit and class for the coming season shall be that of stewardship. A number of classes will be organized to take up this interesting subject. We are determined to set our faces Zionward and march toward our objective.

Flint, Michigan

September 11.—Since our last letter things have gone quietly and steadily in Flint. Most of our membership have returned from vacations, reunions, etc., so we expect to get back to normal shortly.

I omitted to mention in my last letter the visit of Sister Blanche Edwards and her wonderful talk at the Newell Street Church August 3 to a mixed audience.

The writer is presenting a series of sermons at the Newell Street Church on the following topics: "The church of Jesus Christ (Which)?"; "Why a restoration?"; "The gospel restored?"; "The church of to-day?"; "The church of science."... We recently had a visit from J. A. Gardner of Independence. He happened to drop in to the monthly young people's prayer meeting, giving a very timely talk.

On Saturday, Sunday, and Monday (Labor Day), the young people of our three churches went to Pine Lake, the local Boy Scout encampment, about nineteen miles away. Although there was quite a little rain Sunday, the services held in the large dining hall were well attended. Monday there were games, races, and swimming, and a general good time enjoyed by all.

This month I have to note two deaths in our number. One, the seven-year-old son of Brother and Sister Charles Sewell, ill only two days, died of mastoid. The other, Leslie Monroe, aged twenty, was instantly killed in the Buick factory September 2, leaving his wife and infant son.

Minden City, Michigan

September 10.—The past month has been a very busy one here. Nearly all the Saints live on farms, so through the tumult of life, many times being physically weary from the toils of the day, it had a tendency to decrease the attendance at church gatherings, especially Religio, which was held Friday evening.

We are hoping for the day when the Saints of God will be able to get themselves into a condition where they will be able to apply more fully to their lives the instructions given in the word of God: "Seek first to build up the kingdom of God." You will remember the sisters of Lazarus. Martha was concerned in doing the things pertaining to the physical life to such an extent that she asked the Savior whether her sister could not come and assist her in her labors. His answer to her was, "She chooses the better part."

Some of the Saints have been away on their vacations, and some have entertained friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Greneisen, from Alliance, Ohio, visited at the home of Brother and Sister Alfred Greneisen; and Brother and Sister Parks entertained relatives from Onaway, Michigan. Brother and Sister James Davis from Independence surprised the Saints here by calling at their homes a short time. All were very glad to see them.

Young man was also there with the Democrats, and President Matthew Liston one evening, and he gave an interesting talk along different lines, one of them being, "Is stewardship a failure?"

A young son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Herb Volz recently. The youngest child of Brother and Sister Parks has been seriously ill but is somewhat improved at present. Ralph Greneisen, son of Brother and Sister Alfred Greneisen, met with an accident on Labor Day which could have proved disastrous. While on his way to Detroit, after spending Sunday with his parents, he struck some loose gravel, and the car upset. The three who were with him escaped with only a few bruises, but Ralph had a gash cut in his limb large enough to make several stitches necessary.

Interesting Lectures in Contemplation

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

My meetings here have been well attended. The branch is well cared for under the pastoral care of Elder Archibald Begg, an interesting, intelligent, and devoted Scotchman. The branch was well represented at the reunion at Manitoulin Island, Ontario, September 7. The local branch is in fine condition, and all in attendance were benefited in a high order, and the singing was good. Sister Katie Peterson's sermon on the subject of Zion, or any theme directly associated with the subject, was indeed thankful for the courtesy show them by the Baptist people. The program, as there was no piano in the schoolhouse where the conference was held, had to be worked up to cover two weeks, including three Sundays, and excepting Saturdays, a week of illustrated lectures of a character to appeal to various minds, covering the first week, followed by subjects such as:

1. "God's great out of doors."
2. "Scenes abroad."
3. "A trip through the Holy Land."
4. "Rambles about Jerusalem."
5. "Mighty monuments of ancient times."
6. "Among the dead cities of ancient America."

I have wondered if special subjects could not be worked up to cover two weeks, including three Sundays, and excepting Saturdays, a week of illustrated lectures of a character to appeal to various minds, covering the first week, followed by subjects such as:

1. "Open-mindedness."
2. "Important little things."
3. "Things that troubled the Lord Jesus."
4. "Social aspects of salvation."
5. "Fundamental gospel principles."
6. "The true apostolic church extant."
8. "Stewardships."
9. "Zion."

Of course I see that only in a series could such be used. I believe it has been my experience that never have I spoken on the subject of Zion, or any theme directly associated therewith, except with a divine blessing attending. I look forward to reaching home soon after the middle of September.

Sincerely,

PAUL M. HANSON.

VINAL HAVEN, MAINE, August 31.

Bradner, Ohio

September 7.—The local branch is in fine condition, and its members in one accord have a specified purpose in view—to lay their all on the altar of devotion and service, with Zion as the goal.

On August 16 a pleasing diversion from the usual Sabbath meeting occurred in the form of a junior church in evidence at the local church. The entire service, with the exception of a sermon delivered by Elder E. L. Ulrich and a trio which sang very softly and sweetly in the basement at the conclusion of the sermonet, was conducted by the juniors. The singing of this song brought to a close the closest and most beautiful and inspiring service, many being moved to tears. The program was under the supervision of Sister Olive Ulrich.

The branch was well represented at the reunion at Kirtland this year, and all in attendance were benefited in a large measure by the things they beheld and the fine sermons and testimonies they heard. The Kirtland Temple is truly a place of inspiration. The peaceful, hallowed atmosphere of this wonderful place of worship gives all a desire to live better and more consecrated lives.

Conference will convene here September 18, 19, and 20. A large attendance is anticipated. Elder Walter Wirebaugh, a local missionary worker in the Western Michigan District, came home the latter part of August to remain during conference.

Elder Ulrich returned last week to Casey, Illinois, after a visit with his family here.

Reddickville, Ontario

September 8.—After the district conference held at Providence Bay, Manitoulin Island, Ontario, I remained a week in Providence Bay assisting S. G. St. John in a series of meetings in the church. I also attended an all day meeting at the Sash Brach, visited Manitowaning Branch, preaching at both places. I then came on to Owen Sound and spent a few weeks, baptizing four. While staying in Owen sound I attended an all-day meeting at Ravenna, also conducted the funeral of Sister Jackson. The Royal True Blues of Sharon Lodge 299, of which she was a member, attended in a body, conducting an impressive service at the grave.

I next attended an all-day meeting at Port Elgin, then visited Southampton where I preached in their hall. Here I baptized a promising young woman whose husband, a splendid young man, has been in the church for some years. It is certainly encouraging to see young people of high standing identifying themselves with the work.

I expect to remain here in Reddickville for a short time, then go to Ravenna.

In my letter in the Herald of July 22, regarding the Owen Sound district conference at Providence Bay, July 5 and 6, I am quoted as saying J. W. Peterson's sermon on the Restoration was the first I had ever heard on that subject. It should have read "the finest sermon I ever heard on that subject."

Southwestern Texas District Conference

The Southwestern Texas district conference convened at Pipe Creek, Texas, August 28 to 30 with President T. J. Jett, j.r., in charge. Ruth Hutt was elected secretary pro tem. There was preaching Friday evening by Elder D. S. Palmer; prayer and testimony meeting at nine o'clock Saturday; preaching again at eleven o'clock by R. E. Miller; business meeting at three in charge of the district president, assisted by Missionary Supervisor D. S. Palmer.

A nice program was given Saturday evening by the district Sunday school, in charge of the district superintendent, Mrs. Flossie Waite. Through the efforts of Sister Katie Callahan, the Baptist church was procured in which to have the program, as there was no piano in the schoolhouse where the conference was held. The Saints were indeed thankful for the courtesy shown them by the Baptist people. The house was full, and many were forced to stay on the outside because of lack of room. The program was enjoyed to the extent that some were asked to repeat their numbers.

A number of San Antonio Saints were in attendance, also some from Pearsall, Melon, Hines, and Bandera. The preaching was of a high order, and the singing was good. Sister Paul Richardson sang at the close of the program.

Sunday, prayer meeting was held at eight forty-five in charge of Elders D. S. Palmer and W. H. Manpering. Sunday school followed at ten o'clock in charge of the district superintendent. Preaching at eleven o'clock was by R. E. Miller. Sunday school business meeting was held at four o'clock; then there was preaching again in the evening by D. S. Palmer, assisted by W. H. Manpering.

Four were baptized Sunday afternoon at half past two, by Elder D. S. Palmer.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: R. E. Miller, district president; E. L. Henson, vice president; Ruth Harp, secretary; Robert Jett, treasurer; Evva Richardson, pianist; and Mary Barber, chorister; Zetta Jett, president of the Department of Women; W. H. Manpering.
President of the Religious Society. It was ruled that the next district conference should be held at San Antonio, the time to be left to the district officers and missionaries.

The next reunion is to be held at Bandera, Texas, with the prospect of establishing Bandera as a permanent place to hold the reunion.

All the Saints who attended the conference felt that it was a decided success. A bond of brotherly love was more closely woven, and peace and harmony was felt at all the services. May we be privileged to have more such meetings in the future is our prayer.

Mrs. John Harp, Secretary.

Utleyville, Colorado, Branch

Springfield, Colorado, September 7.—The gospel is surely finding lodgment in the hearts of the honest in this part of the vineyard.

Last spring we found a brother who has been a member of the church for twenty years, but as he has been isolated he was inactive, and in late years never mentioned his church connection. I lived near him and never knew he was a member, until one day our conversation revealed the fact. I already had obtained his promise to attend church, so they went with us, and the brother testifies that since that day there has sprung up in him a desire to do something for the church. Since then he has given up the use of tobacco and besides other bad habits, and is living a godly life. From the time of their first visit I have had the assurance that the day was not far distant that his family would see the light of the gospel.

This brother's wife was a Baptist. They have attended services regularly, with the result that their Baptist friends have done all they could to hinder them. However, on August 30 I had the pleasure of baptizing her and their three sons.

Yesterday, when I drove up to the place of meeting, I was agreeably surprised to be introduced to a lady who asked to be baptized. She had never heard a Latter Day Saint sermon, but by reading and prayer she had been caused to see that this is the true church. She was baptized August 6.

Our branch was organized last November and is growing steadily. We are very optimistic concerning the future, for we have good attendance at all services.

The Saints who attended the reunion at Colorado Springs all feel that they have been brought nearer to a correct understanding of Zion's ideals. The lectures on stewardships were very instructive.

We earnestly look forward to the establishing of stewardships and the speedy redemption of Zion. May the Lord help us to do our part.

H. L. Baussell.

Prefers to Still Preach the Book of Mormon

I came to this place from Valentine, Nebraska, stopping at Norfolk for a few days; then on here. At Valentine I baptized four and found good interest. One Mr. Latti, a non-member, spoke very highly of the preaching and expressed himself as being pleased with the sermon on the second coming of Christ. The reign of Christ on earth for a thousand years was "the grandest" he ever heard. He said if I would leave out the Book of Mormon he would take me where thousands would come out to hear, but people would not come because the Book of Mormon was an offense to them. I prefer to stay by the Book of Mormon even if I may be compelled to preach to small congregations.

The Lord surely has blessed me in presenting the angel's message. Since coming to my field I have baptized twelve, and others are near the kingdom. I consider it a privilege and a great privilege to be allowed to preach this grand gospel. As we read in Ephesians 4:13, it is to bring mankind to perfection. Nothing else can accomplish this miracle but the gospel. By it the kingdom of God is established. It must get into the lives of men, and when it has complete control it will be the means of establishing righteousness. It is the sin we do that brings the suffering in the world. If it is the good we do in this life that brings peace and happiness in the by and by. Are we using our God-given talents to better the condition of our fellow men, or are we using the office of a steward as God requires of us? Let each of us see to it that no cobwebs accumulate in the steward's office. God has given us. I care not what part of the world God has consigned to me, whether it is an officer in the church or a member, we all have our stewardship, whether it be one talent or five. Can we return them to God with the proper amount of usury? If not, why?

It seems that sometimes we easily forget our duty. There is no power that can hinder one from being saved in the world to come but himself. As the Lord has said, if you would do what I say, then am I found. As the apostle says, it is not the hearer of the word, but the doer, that shall be saved.

We are living in the hastening time, as indicated not only by the Scriptures, but by modern inventions. Are we as swift in trying to get ourselves ready for the coming of the Lord, under existing conditions, as everything around us is moving forward in haste? Might not we forget to move forward, and while we are gathering in our objects, awake to find that we are only standing still and not keeping pace to win our goal? May this not be the case with any of us?

Ever praying for the success of the work,

George Jenkins.

Happy and Busy While Building Church

Mount Vernon, Illinois, September 6.—The Saints here enjoyed the sacramental service to-day at eleven o'clock in the basement of our new church.

We are glad to report that the Saints here are doing their best to carry out the social program of the church. We have our lesson studies on stewardships every Sunday at three o'clock. The Spirit certainly was with us to-day in our study. We hope to have part in the great work of redeeming Zion and are trying to prepare a people for the speedy return of our Lord.

We like the slogan, "This year we sail Zionward, which is our course," and the Saints seem very much enthused over stewardships. We hope we can soon qualify ourselves and have one of the Bishopric come down and organize us. We thank the Lord for a prophet to guide us in these latter days. Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments, for the hastening time surely has come. The sifting time is here as it was in the days of Nehemiah when he stood before the people admonishing them to keep the commandments of God, and impressively shaking the lap of his robe, he said, "So God shall shake out every man from his house and from his hand that performeth not this promise, even thus he shall be shaken out and be emptied."

The Lord has decreed that the poor shall be exalted and the rich made low. "Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made and impart not his portion," he shall suffer the penalty mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 101:2. Saints, let us not fall simply because God has decreed that we should keep his law and love our neighbor as ourselves. Christ says his burden is light and his yoke is easy. Let us go forward.

The Mount Vernon Saints are active in all departments of church work. The Department of Women has been abundantly blessed, especially in raising the $500 pledge to help build the new church. They are well advanced with their work. We now have the new church paid for and ready for dedication one year from the day we laid the corner stone, which was on June 28. We expect to have one of the Presidency with us on that day. We have felt the directing influence of the Spirit in selecting the location, also in the erection of the new spiritual home. It is located in a nice part of the city, and the street in front is now being paved, which makes it convenient for all the Saints in bad weather.

Our missionary, Brother J. W. Paxton, has ably assisted during the summer, holding one-four week meeting in which he baptized eight. Others are near. We are glad to have added to our number Brother and Sister Nelson, from Springfield, Missouri. Brother Nelson is a barber and was successful in getting a good job on the public square.

The reunion, which was held at Brush Creek, was one of the best ever held. One of the most interesting features of the reunion was the lectures on stewardship, given every morning at eleven o'clock by Brother Ammon White. He has a wonderful vision of the future, and the Saints, were awakened, to some extent. The Bishop's agent was kept busy explaining the financial law and fitting up inventories for both young and old.

The leading speakers of the reunion were Brother Ammon White, J. W. Paxton, F. L. Sawley, the district president, and the local force. Large crowds attended.

Brother Sawley is now with the Brush Creek Saints doing a good work.

Saints, let us thrust in our sickles and reap while the day lasts, striving to do our part in every way, and praying for the redemption of Zion.

Prayer makes the darkest cloud withdraw; Prayer climbs the ladder that Jacob saw, Brings exercise to faith and love, Brings every blessing from above.

Restraining prayer we cease to fight. Prayer makes the Christian's armor bright, And Satan trembles when he sees The weakest Saint upon his knees. O. C. HENSON.

Des Moines, Iowa

September 9.—Many of the Des Moines Saints enjoyed the reunion at Runnels, some spending the entire time there living in tents. We always feel we are near a perfect Christian union after such a glorious feast together.

While during the reunion most of the Saints were in attendance there, the Des Moines church was open each Sunday, and those who could not attend the reunion met at the church and had Sunday school.

Our new church building is getting well under way. The cornerstone was laid Sunday afternoon, the 6th of September, at three o'clock.

When our past branch presidents, Elder C. E. Hartshorn, of Independence, and Elder L. M. Silinsky, of Detroit, Mich., were present, the cornerstone exercises.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer, representing the church, spoke at the corner stone exercises. Chauncey A. Weaver, city solicitor of the city of Des Moines, gave the address of welcome for Mayor Carl Garver; and Doctor D. W. Morehouse, president of Drake University, was the principal speaker. There was a large attendance, and much interest was manifested as our pastor, H. A. Higgins, laid the stone in its place, where it will proclaim to future generations the name and time of our people coming to Des Moines.

We held services on our own premises again in the evening, and we hope to have the roof on and the building in shape for comfortable use when winter comes upon us.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, September 17.—Those of our members who attended the reunion at Kirtland reported a fine time, and some are making preparation to return next year. The work is going on nicely, and there is good interest at Sunday school.

Brother Mark Crabtree has been holding a week's meetings outside near Portsmouth, Ohio, in a new opening where the true gospel has never yet been preached. He reports good attendance and thinks he will go back in a few weeks.

Sacramental service was held September 6 with thirty-two members present, and we enjoyed a feast from the heavenly Father.

On September 12 Elder Francis May, of Dayton, Ohio, commenced a two-week meeting, and on the following day preached the funeral sermon of a nonmember. The house was full, and many could not get in to hear his wonderful sermon.

Some are planning to go to conference the 25th, 26th, and 27th of this month, to be held in Middletown.

Brother William Cox of our branch is very poorly, and Brother R. Crabtree, who suffered a stroke nineteen months ago, is not improving any. His right side is helpless.

First Chicago Branch

4416 Gladys Avenue

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 15.—On August 32 our Sunday school opened at the usual hour, a quarter after ten, with good attendance. Superintendent Hadley has been faithfully working to the end that our Sunday school might be a bigger and better one than that of the past, and his efforts have not been in vain.

Preaching in the morning was by Elder Axel Edstrom, assisted by Elder F. E. Bone. Solos were rendered by Brother Fred St. John and Sister Violet Bone; also an anthem by the choir. Preaching in the evening was by Brother F. B. Almond, assisted by Brother L. V. Butterworth.

On August 30 we were pleased to have with us one of our past branch presidents, Elder C. B. Hartshorn, of Independence, who accompanied him. He was the morning speaker, and Brother Almond, our city missionary, was the evening speaker. Brother Almond has started a series of Sunday evening services to continue for three months. A special effort is being made both by Brother Almond and the members to arouse the interest of the people so that they might have a desire to come to church, and also that all might become more active in the work. Special posters and bulletins are being made and sent out to advertise these meetings. Brother J. W. Petterssen, who is in charge of this work, is being kept very busy. Also special singing has been arranged for under the leadership of Sister Ruby Newman, music being furnished by a male quartet, mixed quartet, male chorus, and anthems by the choir. The choir members are faithfully assisting by their talents to make the meetings successful. Members have pledged themselves to write at least five people each week who do not attend, urging them to come out. Visiting committees are also assigned. Already we feel our combined efforts are bearing fruit. The church has been filled each Sunday night, and it is coming late are in danger of having to stand. This has so inspired Brother Almond that he has had great liberty in addressing the people.

September 5 was sacramental Sunday, with a very good attendance and good spirit, so no time was wasted. Brother Almond was the evening speaker, with music by a mixed quartet, an anthem by the choir, and a solo by Melva Weis, of Burlington, Iowa.

Some of the visitors of late were Brother and Sister Tucker of Minneapolis; Brother Stielisky, of Detroit, Michigan; Sister Chamberlain of Kansas City; Sister Most of Michigan. We were pleased on Sunday, September 13, to have with us an Arabian brother who has lately come into the church, Brother George A. Nejeim of Palestine, who is on his way to Graceville College. He visited a few days with Brother and Sister Harry Passman. We understand he became acquainted with the gospel through the labors of Brother and Sister Passman while they were in Palestine.

A shower was given in honor of Sister Evelyn Werner at the home of Brother and Sister St. John. Sister Evelyn received many beautiful gifts which will be useful in her new home which is to be established in the near future, as she has announced her marriage on September 19 to Mr. George Dehnecke.

Brother and Sister W. L. Christy, formerly missionaries in this city, are visiting here this week. Brother Christy occupied Sunday morning, and during Sunday school Sister Christy spoke to the children. We were all glad to welcome them in our midst, and they were delighted to see the growth and activity of our church.

Brother Almond was again the speaker in the evening, with an anthem by the choir, “God is my salvation,” and a solo by J. W. Pettersson for the special music.

On Labor Day a large company of old and young met at the church at two o’clock where a large auto truck waited to convey them to the reunion grounds at Elmhurst. Also those who owned their own machines filled them with friends and neighbors, and about seven automobiles followed the truck. Volley ball, baseball, and many rousing games were played, after which they enjoyed a watermelon feast, returning home tired but happy.

On September 10 a farewell party was given in honor of our aged Sister Emma Wheeler, who is leaving us to make her future home with her son at Columbus, Ohio. The ladies donated cakes, and a delightful lunch of lemonade and cake was served. An address by Brother Axel Edstrom was given, after which Sister Wheeler expressed her sentiments as best she could under the circumstances, for she was over­joyed to see such a great number there. Brother J. W. Pettersson sang “Mother Machree,” after which all joined in singing, “God be with you till we meet again.” The cakes were not all eaten, so what remained and some fudge were sold, netting $5.15, which was given our sister as a small token of our love and esteem.

Sister Almond and her son arrived from Independence on September 1. Brother Almond had been expecting her for a long time. Arrangements had been made by some to make her arrival unusual. As it happened to be Brother Almond’s birthday, a surprise was planned. It was the third year that the Saint­ers who had gathered to greet him, also his wife and son, had been a wonderful evening.

Thursday evening, September 16.—After such a splendid reunion at Nau­voo, we feel much encouraged in our work at Burlington. A number of the young people enjoyed our own reunion so perfectly and were sent out by a loud speaker to all parts of the crowd. They were all glad to see the growth and seeming promises of rain. However, the Saints of Zion did not seem to fear the weather’s promises, for they turned out to the morning services in goodly numbers. Both prayer services were quite well attended. The young people had a spiritual and beautiful service, even above the high average enjoyed through the past months.

At the eleven o’clock service Brother Charles Koehler gave a preliminary address on the subject of the harvest home committee. Brother R. J. Lambert gave the sermon, following the same subject. Some one had said that Adam and Eve were placed in the garden to cultivate it. The Lord has blessed the earth with plenty and to spare. He has endowed it with beauty and wishes his people to be happy upon the land. He established Israel in a choice land, and the same God led the people to Joseph’s land, which was to be choice above all other lands. When the angel came to earth as provided for in Revelation 14: 6, 7, he was to give an invitation to all the world to worship God, who made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. This signifies there should be an appreciation of these temporal blessings. The speaker said he was struck with the fact that this wonderful source for blessing had been neglected. Its possibilities were not fully appreciated. Some of the leading corn specialists of the United States are Latter­day Saints. We should stock our back yards by raising food to relieve the poor. Last year the harvest home com­mittee obtained 608 quarts of fruit, jelly, etc., which were turned over to the bishop. We should gather seeds which are acclimated which will produce better than imported seeds. These matters are now being studied, and beneficial results are following.

The harvest festival will be held on the Campus October 8, 9, and 11 and will receive donations of canned fruits, vege­tables both fresh and canned, seeds, flowers, etc. Saints should not fail to bring some of the first fruits of their har­vest in vegetables, grain, fruits, and flowers, and present them to the Lord with an expression of gratitude for the bounties and beauties of his creation.

This work is being fathered by a committee with Bishop J. L. Becker as chairman, and among the members of the group of the city the organization of the Department of Women is in charge of the details of gathering the offering and display. Try to have some special flowers for decorating the Campus during the festival.

Sunday evening closed the services on the Campus for this year. Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker. Although the weather was quite cool, there was an attendance of about 1,800. The band furnished the half hour music used and rendered most acceptable service. The musical numbers furnished for the Curtis­McConley Campus services by Sister Myra Brackenbury were of a high order. Thursday evening Sister Bernice Griffith, with two young sisters from Quin­daro, Kansas, congregation, furnished the program for the half hour song service. Their beautiful voices blended perfectly and were sent out by a loud speaker to all parts of the Campus.

Sunday’s edition of the Kansas City Journal-Post gave our radio station quite a lengthy write-up, illustrating the arti­cle with a view of the interior of the studio, the Stone Church with radio tower, pictures of Arthur B. Church, station di­rector; Mrs. Howard W. Monday night Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke in the Stone Church on the subject of authority. He had splendid liberty and presented his evidence in a very masterful way. This is one of the outstanding sermons of the series. Thursday night Apostle McConley delivered a sermon on the Book of Mormon. His subject was handled from many angles, and the harmonious whole was a splendid contribution to the defense of the Nephite record. With the beginning of the Campus services, the group meetings that have been held during the summer closed.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences has registered over one hundred and fifty students for high school, college, and special courses. Class work began Monday evening, September 21, at half past seven. The Institute is held in the building on the Campus.

Brother Paul N. Craig has returned and is taking up his musical activities here again. He is organizing a men’s chorus, for which he hopes to obtain thirty-five members.

Patriarch F. A. Smith has returned after being away for some time engaged in church activities at reunions in the Northwest. He reports a very busy and successful trip.

Visitors in Independence are President G. N. Briggs, Sister Blanche Edwards, Elders J. F. Martin, Alvin Knisley, W. A. Smith, Ammon White, J. E. Vandermook, Max Carmichael, Brother and Sister Alma Booker, and Brother John Irving, one of our Indian brethren, with his family of wife, babe, and two small children.

Second Church

Religio gave a splendid program in Curtis Hall Friday night, and followed it up with a pie supper to raise funds for the paying of the Religio deficit. Considering the other attractions, the attendance was very good, and the sum raised was satisfactory. Brother Barmore made a splendid address on what had been accomplished by pie suppers in church and civic ways, and auctioned the pies in a masterly way.

Sunday’s sermon was by Patriarch Frederick A. Smith, and was an interesting and much appreciated address to a good audience.

Next Sunday at half past three the priesthood of the section begins its study of stewardships. Elder A. K. Dillee will teach the first session.

Liberty Street

Elder Leonard White had charge of the young people’s early prayer meeting Sunday morning. Brother Baker urges very strongly that all who can should attend these meetings.

The priesthood is desirous that the people remember the midweek prayer meetings. These meetings are held every midweek in all the groups, and besides that a special meeting is to be held in the church to accommodate strangers and others who might desire to go there. All are welcome.

The Temple Builders had a birthday party last Tuesday night to celebrate the birthdays of three of their members. The party was held at the home of their leader, Sister H. A. Moriarty. Because of the fact that several of the Temple Builders have enrolled for work in the Institute, they voted to meet for the winter on Sunday afternoons at two o’clock. Quite a number of the Liberty Street people are taking work in the Institute.

The activities of the Department of Women in the various groups are being resumed. Study classes will be held, as well as meetings for morning work.

Apostle M. A. McConley spoke Sunday morning, using for his subject Romans 1: 10, the theme of which was, “Are we living what we profess?” Next Sunday Patriarch F. A. Smith will occupy the pulpit both morning and evening.

Walnut Park

Apostle D. T. Williams, the eleven o’clock speaker, gave an eloquent exegesis of the life of Christ and reminded us of our agency to follow in his steps or not, his earnest, reasonable plea making it very desirable to his congregation to choose the better way.

Sunday School Superintendent Barnhardt and his association invited other Sunday school workers to visit Walnut Park on their rally day, October 25, to observe class work and listen to the good speakers expected, including General Superintendent C. B. Woodstock; also to the hour’s program by departments just preceding the eight o’clock evening speaker. Let it be a home-coming day to former Walnut Park Saints, who will be made welcome from the opening of the morning prayer meeting at eight o’clock to the close of the evening service. It is hoped the day will leave all with a greater knowledge and appreciation of Sunday school work.

Enoch Hill

Enoch Hill Saints enjoyed a sermon on “Stewardships” Sunday at eleven o’clock by Bishop A. Carmichael.

Alton School, the new public school where Enoch Hill children will attend, is now completed and equipped for work. The local parent-teacher association gave a reception Friday evening at the schoolhouse for the faculty and school board which was largely attended. Talks were given by school board members and principal, and punch and cookies were served.

East Independence

Friday evening at Religio a musical program was given by members of the Englewood Religio.

Sunday morning the young people held their first prayer meeting. A large number were present, and those in charge report a good meeting. All are urged to be in attendance each Sunday morning at a quarter of nine.

The speaker for the day was Brother W. A. Smith. After the morning service the Saints met to surprise Brother J. C. Shannon, this being his sixty-second birthday. A basket dinner was served, and an enjoyable time was had by all.

We feel strengthened by the message received from the sermons and from the meeting in a social way.

Englewood

The meetings of the Department of Women for class work will be resumed next week. The meetings will be held in the church on Thursday, October 1, at two o’clock. Sister W. L. Cowan will be present at this meeting.

The speaker Sunday morning was Elder John Ely. Evening services at the Englewood church will be resumed next Sunday.

Sioux City, Iowa

September 16.—A very beautiful occasion occurred Thursday evening, September 16, when about forty of the friends of Brother and Sister John Dickey and Brother and Sister John Bower met in honor of their golden wedding anniversaries. Brother and Sister Bower’s anniversary was August 26, and Brother and Sister John Dickey’s will be September 28. Two pretty gold sugar shells were presented them as mementos. This occasion was held jointly, with a surprise welcome reception given Elder Lowe and family at their home at 1516 West Fifth Street. Instrumental selections and community songs, together with some “brain teaser” guessing games, were the diversions. Such occasions bring us just a little closer to that family spirit which is recognized in true Latter Day Saints.

On August 24 a farewell party was tendered the George Kroesen family at the church. The first volume of the Church History was presented them by friends who had gathered for the farewell. The Temple Builders presented Sister Donnar Kroesen with Builders of the Temple. About one hundred met for this occasion. Everybody was served with generous helpings of ice cream and cake, and it was a late hour when the good-bys were said. We are sure these young people will enjoy their new home at 205 East Alton Street, Independence. They will operate a grocery store in that city.

Mrs. Pearl Asplund, of Minot, North Dakota, visited her sister, Mrs. Lillian Kingsbury, and family near Sioux City during August. Mrs. Glen Wilson and children of Moorhead visited in the W. Jesse Smith home the latter part of August.

A good representation from this branch attended the district reunion held at Woodbine last month. About thirty-five were present the second Sunday, when President Elbert A. Smith and Bishop Albert Carmichael delivered wonderful sermons of the affirmative gospel. They were worth going many miles to hear. Living examples preach beautiful sermons, and Latter Day Saints are not slow in catching the spirit of service.

Charles Bryant has gone to Des Moines, where he is employed by a wholesale grocery company. Brother and Sister Hall and son Wayne have gone to Chicago, where they will spend the winter. The Central Sunday school has gone over the two-hundred mark in Christmas offerings. The Boosters clubs are continuing to grow. Of an enrollment of 112, there are 88 in the different divisions. It is our custom to send this offering at the close of each month. The Department of Women are offering some nice tied comforts at a reasonable figure this month.

The College Endowment Fund was the theme of last Sunday evening’s discourse by the pastor, Elder W. W. Baker. Sioux City is standing back of our college. The Publicity Department is anxious to get literature into the hands of all the Saints.

Why Not Lead?

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, September 19.—Concerning the Minneapolis trip I took this summer, I will first tell of the experience we had at the state fair at Saint Paul.

The debt on the new church in Minneapolis was becoming irksome to the noble group of Saints in the Twin Cities, and we suggested ways and means to pay the debt. A drive was made to raise money, but this was not adequate to meet the needs, so I suggested that we rent a big dining hall at the state fair.

We rented one at a cost of $700, fifty-eight by one hundred and ninety-six feet large, and had to buy all our equipment and interest for the building. We made all the tables, bought all the stoves and kitchen equipment, and had to rent or buy $1,400 worth of dishes, etc.

I made a misstatement in my last letter and said Brother and Sister Dillon of Oklahoma were to assist us as the only ones I knew who had had experience. I meant to say they were the only experienced ones there, but learned later that some there had had experience, such as Brother and Sister Arthur Smith.

I never saw people work better than those Minneapolis Saints did, and all seemed to enjoy it. Most of them are the very salt of the earth and in nearly everything they do are genuine Saints.

Unity prevails, and where it is present success will follow. The presence of the Lord is there, and all are happy in the service they render. They left the fair grounds almost with reluctance. It had seemed more like a reunion, though they work as no people will work for money. They were working for the Lord, and his service is sweet to everyone who works in the right spirit. Sister Lister said she wished it would last another week.

We did not make as much money as I anticipated, but we paid for our equipment, except some of the rented dishes, and cleared $1,000 besides, so we all feel well over the experience and can have the building as long as we desire it, so we have our equipment locked up there for next year’s work.

We led the fair in feeding people. We set the price at fifty cents, while the other churches tried sixty and seventy-five cents but had to come down to fifty to meet our price.

We fed the crowds.

We hired a male quartet at a cost of $20 a day for the three who did not belong to the church. They were our best advertisement, except a sign at each end of our big hall which read, “Square Meal Dining Hall. All you can eat for fifty cents.”

Served family style, Favor the Ladies’ Aid.”

At our business meeting Monday night, Brother Ray Whit ing was chosen pastor for the coming year. He is a fine worker and is loved by all the Saints.

My short visit to the North, away from the heat in Oklahoma, has restored my physical strength. I met fine people in Minnesota wherever I went, and I leave them with the best of good feelings. I now turn to the Oklahoma field, where I have worked so long and learned to love the many Saints in that rich field.

Loyalty to God and his work is the greatest thing that moves the church Zionward to-day. HUBERT CASE.

Rhodes Branch

RHODES, IOWA, September 16.—From an educational point of view we believe the Des Moines district reunion on August 14 to 23 exceeded any we have ever attended in the district. But as a good synopsis has already appeared in the HERALD, we will confine our news to activities in the branch.

The Rhodes Branch was well represented at the reunion, there being eight families, or parts of families, camped on the ground, with several rooming. There were forty-five small tents on the ground, with one hundred and eighty-two campers and thirty-five roomers.

Arthur Smith and Bishop Albert Carmichael, the two oldest people on the ground, were Sister L. C. Nirk, who will be eighty-seven years old the first of December. Much interest was shown in the stewardship class conducted by Bishop A. B. Phillips and Apostle F. Henry Edwards.

The burden of the testimonies heard at the reunion seemed to be a desire to have us save our young people the regular attendance at the college. One good elder, who had not attended, expressed the desire of the people for regular attendance.

One good old veteran of the cross, who has borne the burden and heat of the day, in writing to us concerning the work at the “center place,” said: “I never felt more enthusiastic or optimistic for the final outcome of the work or the redemption of Zion than I do now.”

While God is marshaling his army for the rescue of his truth, Satan is also marshaling all his forces to hinder and overthrow. If possible the Lord’s work. “The one strength of his despairing; for each other let us pray.” There is no greater or more effective weapon than prayer.

Nine were baptized at the reunion, most of whom were children of the Saints. One estimable young man who has been acting as superintendent of the Religio at Runnells was among the number.

Brother V. G. Lents had the misfortune to lose his home by fire September 2. He was away from home at the time, and very few of the household goods were saved. He carried only a small insurance on his goods. The house was a rented one. The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil stove, and Sister Lents in trying to reach the telephone, was quite badly burned, but the wounds are healing nicely.

The citizens and friends had a shower for them at the opera hall a few evening after the fire, when they received many useful articles and a number of cash presents which will help them to get started in housekeeping again. They have located in the Hays property just east of the schoolhouse.

There has been quite a thinning out of our young people in the past few weeks. Violet and Charlotte Lents, daughters of Brother and Sister L. O. Lents, have each taken unto themselves a life partner and gone from the branch. Ruth Richeson has resumed her school work at Graceland, and Fred Cheville, brother of Roy Cheville, has started to Graceland this fall. Brother Marion Backus has joined the army, and Fern Richeson Roush and family have returned to Colorado where Brother Roush has accepted a position as superintendent of schools.

Brother E. G. Beye and family spent a few days at the Stewartsville reunion in the early part of September. They report a fine reunion.
What Does Graceland Mean to Me?

In response to personal letters to several Graceland students, they answer the question in their own words. Reading them is just like a heart to heart talk with young people who feel deeply.

The following letter is from George Mesley, Creston, Iowa.

Since I have received your letter I have thought of many things relating to our dear belove Graceland. Just what does Graceland mean to me? So much that it is difficult to put it into words. In my eyes she is the personification of all that is noble and good. The spirit of preparation and service which predominates the entire school creates an environment that no red-blooded boy or girl can afford to miss.

I didn't choose Graceland because I believed her to be a great, massive school, but because of her lofty ideals and the spirit of good fellowship so noticeable among her student body, and because of her excellent faculty who give the very best within them.

Graceland has given me a much broader conception of life. A keener appreciation of worth-while things, a desire to give a service that will be a service.

It was the height of impossibility for me to picture Graceland with dirty windows and locked doors, and her beautiful campus overgrown with weeds. No, a thousand times no. This conditions must never be. Surely the church cannot help but realize this. Is not Graceland turning out the very best of men and women who make successes of themselves in all walks of life?

I am willing to do as much as I can, and it pains me to say that just now it is not possible for me to lend any financial support. But I shall never forget Graceland and her needs. After my schooling is completed, then comes the freedom to serve Graceland as she has served me.

Sincerely yours,

HELEN B. FRANKLIN.
General Conference
Said Yes!

VOTING UNANIMOUSLY the last General Conference approved the resolution providing for the

Graceland College Endowment Fund

The North Central Association which has the authority to fix standards for Junior Colleges, to which Graceland College, as an educational institution is subject, makes this demand of the College.

THIS ASSOCIATION HAS FIXED BOTH THE TIME AND AMOUNT

It Did Not Originate With the College or the Church

We cannot afford to permit our college to be discredited and thus jeopardize our accumulated investment of thirty years which in money amounts to one-quarter million dollars, but in sacrifice and work amounts to more than can be measured in material wealth.

This Demand Challenges the Willingness of This Church

The active campaign work is set for November 1st to 15th.

Prior to this date all will be informed of the organization plan and methods to be used in securing pledges. A descriptive booklet of Graceland College has been mailed to all General Conference appointees and branches, which tells the needs of the college, and also its accomplishments.

A Move Toward Stewardships

There are many reasons why Latter Day Saints should generously contribute to the Graceland College endowment fund; in fact, we feel they should be grateful for the opportunity.

Institutions of higher learning are seldom if ever self-sustaining; and hence for them to keep the price of tuition within the reach of the masses they must look to sources other than tuition or matriculation fees. These sources are private donations (gifts), appropriations (state, municipal, institutional, etc.), taxes (state or government), or income from endowments.

In the past Graceland College has met the annual deficit occurring from failure of tuition fees to meet expenses by depending upon gifts, donations, and annual appropriations made by General Conference. We cannot but feel, therefore, that the move to endow Graceland with the purpose in view to establish a steady and dependable income is wise and timely. Had the many gifts and donations to Graceland in the past been set over into endowment, many of the problems we now face would find ready solution. This error cannot be mended by regrets; but it should not be continued. To rectify it means to endow, and to endow needs a beginning.

There is another outstanding and even greater reason why Saints should be glad to contribute; for coupled with the endowment of Graceland is another matter which has always lain close to the heart of our church members, and always will do so—the redemption of Zion. The phrase, “redemption of Zion,” cloaks a whole range of ideas and subjects, among which stands prominently that of stewardships. It was a happy thought some one had when it was suggested that this worthy endeavor, the establishment of stewardships, be linked up with the Graceland endowment move.

Endowment funds must be invested in order to bring income. In order to guarantee steadiness of income, safety of investment must be secured. The safety of investments may quite accurately be gauged by the promised return. The safer the investment the lower the rate. Projects with large risks promise large returns. Government, state, municipal, and corporation bonds are among the low-rate investments, while mining projects, oil speculations, are types of the high rate. Secretary Gage of the United States Treasury once said to a woman who sought his advice on investing a large sum of money and who said she had a chance to invest in mining stock or to buy government bonds: “If you want to take chances on the hope of large returns, invest in the mining project, but if you want to sleep well, buy the government bonds.”

College, university, and school endowments always seek the safe investments, so that income is figured on the basis of usually four or five per cent. It is therefore quite appropriate that the proposed endowment fund should seek one of the safest investments. This is found in the proposition to use the money for the establishment of agricultural stewardships, the Saints cannot but find a joy which will be a guarantee that the fund will be over-subscribed. “Buy land in the regions round about,” has long stood before us as a divine command only slightly or faint-heartedly obeyed. Now comes the opportunity for all who will to participate in this highly important work.

It is proposed that on the land purchased will be placed worthy members who desire to function as stewards. To merely purchase land does not mean its redemption; but to convert it into uses from which the church benefits by sharing in the surplus does; for then it is converted to religious and holy purposes—consecrated. Thus it is fully redeemed. We thus move directly towards one of the objectives of the church, and in this is cause for great rejoicing. How gladly should we participate, even to the point of sacrifice.

Change in Sunday Night Broadcasting Schedule

Effective October 4

During the summer K L D S has begun the broadcasting of its Sunday night service at 9.15. This was to enable W O S to broadcast from eight o’clock until 9.15, the union services from the Capitol steps at Jefferson City.

Beginning next Sunday night, October 4, K L D S will resume the nine o'clock hour, and W O S will broadcast from 7.30 until about 8.50. W O S is also using the 441-meter wave length each Sunday morning from 9.30 to 10.30.

K L D S Honored at National Association of Broadcasters' Meeting

K L D S is recognized by broadcasters as a representative church broadcasting station.

At the recent annual meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters, the only organization of its kind, Brother Arthur B. Church, director of the church radio activities, was unanimously elected as one of the association's directors for the year 1925-26. Others on the board of directors are Mr. Jewett, president of Paige-Jewett Motors, owners of W J R; John Shepard III, of Shepard Stores, owners of W E A R, Boston; Mr. Kuntz, president of Bankers' Life, Des Moines, W H O; Professor Jansky, director of the 5000-watt Gold Medal station W C C O.

Brother Church was the only broadcaster in the Kansas City area elected to the board, and is regional director of that district.

This distinction conferred upon K L D S indicates the high standing with which it is regarded by the broadcasters of the United States.

The annual meeting of the National Association, held at Hotel Commodore, New York, consumed two days. The principal matter for discussion was the music copyright situation, a serious problem which has reached tremendous proportions. The American Society of Composers and Publishers is exacting increasingly large and unfair royalties for the broadcasting of music composed by its members. It is able to do this under existing laws which do not specify royalty amounts for radiocasting.

Most broadcasters feel that the society is taking a very unfair advantage in the present situation, and that its demands are exorbitant. The society has sued several broadcasters, some successfully. All stations broadcasting music composed by members of the organization are liable to legal prosecution. This makes a very unusual and complicated problem. Broadcasting has popularized music, especially new music, as nothing else ever has. The society should and does realize this fact, and owes broadcasters a debt which will never be repaid. Nevertheless it holds the whip over broadcasting stations.

The consensus of opinion was that the only possible permanent solution of the music copyright problem lies in the passing of proper laws by Congress. Similar legislation was necessary to solve the copyright problem in the production of phonograph records and player rolls. It is hoped that the necessary radio legislation will be passed by the next session of Congress.

The society has not yet bothered church-owned broadcasting stations, and to date K L D S has not been directly affected.

Other matters discussed at the meeting were: wave length allocation, super-power stations, advertising over the radio, and interference.

Corner Stone Laid for Indian Church

Our readers will remember the illustration of the proposed Indian church which was printed in an April HERALD. It is to be a beautiful and practical structure erected on the lower corner of the church farm, on the reservation, between Walthill and De­catur, Nebraska, for social and religious uses in the work of the church among the Indians of eastern Nebraska.

September 29 the HERALD received a day letter giving an account of the setting of the corner stone of this building on September 28, and a newspaper comment on its significance from the Walthill Times. The country thereabout is much interested in the work of Brother and Sister B. F. Creel, who have in charge the development of the farm and the missionary and social work of the church among the Indians, including the building of the church. Much of the skilled and common labor of the building is being accomplished by the Indians of the church in that section.

Parts of the Times comment we are reproducing:

If the plans of the builders for the purposes of the church and farm continue to be realized through succeeding years, the inspiration, helpfulness, and encouragement for the Indians in this country will vindicate the foresight, the expenditure, and the toil of those who conceived the idea and furnished means for materializing it.

As to the number of years its usefulness is destined to survive, no one can tell. They may be few, they may be many. In any case, they will depend primarily on the vision, the zeal, the practical understanding, and the winning personality of the local missionary in charge now and hereafter. Secondly, they may be affected by changing conditions on the reservation.

Be the period long or short, generations of unbroken services for humanity and civilization or the monument of a zealous ambition, the little church will stand by the roadside, quickening the impulses of those who worship therein, or mutually reminding the passer-by of one of the efforts wrought by sacrifice of the white man to lead into equal citizenship the descendants of the native aboriginal American. In either case it will be the landmark of a noble ideal.

It should be hoped in view of its location, its type of architecture, its necessary connection with the Indian tribe still on the ancestral domain, that this building be permitted to remain as a landmark, if the time should come when the need and opportunity for which it is erected pass away. This reservation has lost one such notable landmark, dating back into the tribal life, when the old mission was dynamited. That structure can never be replaced.
A very great controversy has been going on for centuries between the Protestant and Catholic clergy as to the office and importance of Peter in the church of Jesus Christ. Some of the claims of our Catholic friends have found lodgment among us in a semi-official way. One of these claims is that Peter was the chief and head of the clergy and of the church in general. If we are to accept at full value, Catholicized tradition and history, this claim is hard to meet, and the Protestants who do not believe in a presidency at all have not successfully met the Catholic claims. However, the position taken in this article will answer most conclusively both Catholics and Protestants and will, we hope, set aright those among us who are in doubt.

That there exists a presidency of three in the kingdom of God, both on earth and in heaven, is logically and historically true.

When Moses was being instructed how best to proceed with his leadership over the children of Israel in the wilderness, he was commanded to follow the pattern of heavenly things. (Hebrews 9: 23; 8: 5.) Even the material things of the tabernacle were strictly to conform to a vision shown to Moses in the mount of God. (Exodus 25: 9.) Paul intimates, in my first reference, that this vision was a reflection of things in heaven. The church, the tabernacle, and indeed most of the Mosaic economy were types and shadows. Shadows of the true Substance in heaven (Hebrews 10: 1), and types of that which was to come. (Hebrews 9: 9.)

The church on earth is a little bit of the heavenly kingdom transferred to this world. Moses, therefore, being instructed of the Lord, organized the church in the wilderness (Acts 7: 38) with a presidency of three, typifying the Grand Original in heaven—the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Of that earthly imitation, Moses was the chief of the three, and Aaron and Hur the other two:

And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let them come unto them. And Moses went up into the mount.—Exodus 24: 14.

In this citation, Moses virtually commands the priesthood of Israel to hearken to Aaron and Hur in his stead and in his absence. This shows their superiority as rulers in Israel. This also gives the reason why these same two men accompanied Moses to a commanding position and held up his hands while he prayed for Israel in one of their most critical moments. (Exodus 17: 10, 12.) It is little wonder that the Lord recognized their official act. To minimize this official act as a mere commonplace affair will not fit in with the surroundings or with the results accomplished. The two texts coupled together show the superiority of these three men over all other rulers in Israel, and just as clearly the equal priesthood of the three. There is no escaping the conclusion that they formed a presidency of three.

Not only did Moses have a presidency of three in the church in the wilderness, but also the twelve princes who stood with Moses and not with Aaron. (Numbers 1: 16; 7: 2; 34: 1.) He also had the seventy elders (Exodus 9: 17), the other elders (Exodus 19: 7), and the lesser officers including the bishop or high priest of the lesser priesthood. In that church in the wilderness Jesus was the director (Acts 7: 38).

When Jesus came bodily (Hebrews 10: 5) to the earth, he again reorganized the church as he had before done under Moses, patterning it each time after the Great First Church in heaven.

When, on the new earth, the Grand Original and the Great First Church are transferred from heaven to this world, it will be the consummation of all the types and shadows which have gone on before, including the church of the present day.

That we may become accustomed to heavenly ways, even while in this present life, and understand heavenly rule the better, the church or kingdom of (from) heaven has been established among us with a presidency of three in imitation of the First Presidency of the Universe. A rebellion against that divine order here and now makes it easy to rebel against the same kind of order in heaven, of which the earthly is the shadow.

Let us now return to the consideration of the church reorganized by the personal efforts of the Son of God in New Testament times. Often the most important things one would expect to be revealed in several verses are, in the New Testament, couched in a single sentence. And often things we greatly desire to know about are omitted altogether. The full organization of the church is omitted, and the duties of the various officers are only hinted at in the case of some offices and in others not given at all. Ecclesiastical history helps some, and supplies some of the missing links, but not all. It is quite clear, however, with regard to a first presidency, and serves nicely to explain some obscure passages of scripture about this office. Many things which Jesus did are not recorded at all.

And there are many other things which Jesus did, the

which if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written.—John 21: 25.

Jesus continued to give commandments to his disciples "through the Holy Ghost" after he was taken up (Acts 1: 2), but we have not a single one of these commandments. He was with them forty days "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1: 3), but we have only a mere mention of what he said. Of all his teaching, this, after his resurrection, must have been important, and no doubt included church organization, for the very first official act of the apostles when Jesus had gone away was to regulate the official character of the church and put in a new apostle in place of Judas, who had fallen. Christ even called apostles and prophets for the church after he had ascended to heaven (Ephesians 4: 8, 11), and yet we have not the name of a single prophet thus chosen, only as we find them mentioned in ecclesiastical history. We must not be too sure, then, that all that Jesus ever did for the church is recorded in the New Testament. We know that such is not the case, the New Testament itself being the witness.

However, this ecclesiastical history is not only incomplete, but in some cases mistranslated, even on this very matter of a presidency. But the correct rendering is easily made in a credible and legitimate way, which all scholars will, I am sure, readily endorse. The English language is of course a modern language. Therefore, the history of the first three centuries of the Christian era could not have been written in our modern English. We must go back to the Hebrew, Greek, or Roman (Latin) for the history of that time. These books have been translated into our modern English by those who have peculiar religious views of their own, and they have played the same trick on us in translating these histories that they have in translating the Bible. Take baptism as a Bible example. They did not translate it at all, but transferred a Greek word into our English Bible and left the world to contend over its meaning ever since. The original Greek is baptezo, which means to immerse. But the religious proclivities of the translators would not permit them to translate the word as they should have done, so they gave it an English ending, ism, and the common people are compelled to ask Greek scholars what it means, and even then they would not know whether or not the right interpretation be given them. In ecclesiastical history we meet the very same trick. This time with respect to bishop. And yet it is not precisely the same degree of deception, for it is in some respects a translation but a false one. The original Greek is episcoopo. This word was first mistranslated into the Saxon language, biceop. Accepting this mistranslation and giving the word the English spelling, they transferred that Saxon word into English and left the world to go back to the Saxon and finally back to the Greek to find what it meant. But this is easily done. The original word, as we have shown, is episcoopo, and its meaning is overseer, and never in any sense whatsoever does it mean bishop. But the highest office in the Episcopal churches is a bishop, therefore they translated this word to correspond with their highest office. However, the highest office in the primitive church was much higher than a bishop. We shall force these translators to admit their bias and to acknowledge that the real meaning of episcoopo is overseer. Indeed, they very readily admit this, but claim their bishop is an overseer. But let us see:

It is highly probable that the church at Jerusalem was the first to choose a president or bishop. Let none however confound the bishop of the primitive church with those of whom we read in the following pages, for, though they were both distinguished by the same name, they differed in many respects.—Footnote in Mosheim.

The Encyclopedia Britannica has published the following:

The word is derived from the Saxon biceop, which is a corruption of the Greek word episcopo, which signifies an overseer or overseer. The principal city of a district under his superintendency was called seedes, and the latter (district) called sees and subsequently a diocees. Thus we see that seedes and sees and diocees all revert back to the seer or overseer. All of this establishes the meaning of the original Greek word episcoopo or episcopos (authors spell it differently) to be overseer and never bishop.

With this just explanation of the meaning of this word we are often to use in the following pages, let us proceed to the history. To prepare the mind to understand our object, I will pre-state that history seems to be quite clear that James, the brother of our Lord, was the chief seer of the primitive church, and that Peter and John were his two counselors. From the fact that Peter was one of the presidency, this article will answer every Catholic citation from either the New Testament or ecclesiastical history, even when Catholicized works are quoted, but he was not the chief of the three. James was the chief. The three general epistles in the New Testament indicate this fact, both as to their general character and as to their order, James, Peter, and John. James's leads the other two, being addressed to the "twelve tribes scattered abroad," while the other two are addressed to districts or persons. Scholars recognize the general character of all three, or rather all six. This indicates the general office of the authors as being above apostles.

The Episcopalsthe, when translating the Authorized Version of the New Testament, exhibited their bias... as proven by later and better scholars. The Authorized Version in every place but one renders the Greek word episcopo, "bishop." But why the one exception? In that one exception they render overseer, as they should have done in every case. (Acts 20: 28.) But in the others (Philippians 1: 1; 1 Timothy 3: 1, 2; Titus 1: 7; and 1 Peter 2: 25) they have rendered it bishop. The latter reference, however, applies to Christ. Surely Latter Day Saints will hardly claim that Christ was only a bishop. He was, however, the Great Overseer.

Some of the more modern translations render episcopo, overseer, thus showing the bias of the King James Translation. One of the most scholarly of these, according to various testimonies as well as its own internal proofs, is the Interlinear Greek New Testament, by George Ricker Berry, Ph. D., professor of Semitic languages, of the Chicago and formerly of other universities. It is one of the most costly, too, by the way. Two others quite as authentic are the Emphatic Diaglott, an English under the Greek, word for word translation, and the other is the Twentieth Century New Testament with a committee of scholars back of it. The latter, however, renders 1 Timothy 3, presiding officers, which is no doubt the true meaning. Overseer, used by the others, however, contains the same meaning.

Obtaining the true meaning of episcopo to be overseer, we ought now to understand ancient history a little better, especially when approaching the mistranslation bishop.

The first and most important of these ancient histories is that of Pamphilius Eusebius. This history was written in Greek about 324 A. D., the author himself being an overseer in the Christian church at Cæsarea in Palestine. His history is readily endorsed by both Catholics and Protestants. It is one of the most important of the early Christian centuries. Indeed, most modern historians depend upon it for the history of those times. Let it be carefully noted in all these citations that there was a presidency of three in the primitive Christian church, higher than the twelve and installed by their consent as the regulating quorum of the church. These three men when installed in office, subsequently directed the twelve in their labors.

Eusebius writes:

James, the brother of our Lord . . . whom the ancients, on account of the excellence of his virtues, surnamed the Just, was the first to receive the episcopate at Jerusalem.—Page 37.

Here the translators have literally transferred the Greek word episcopate into the English, rather than translate it overseership, as they should have done. How very much like the same trick performed by the Bible translators!

Eusebius continues:

Peter, James, and John, after the ascension of our Savior, though they had been preferred by our Lord, did not contend for the honor but chose James the Just as bishop (overseer) of Jerusalem.—Ibid.

Surely the reader can here see a preferential office of three. Does it mean nothing that this triumvirate relinquished their honorable position to the nearest male relative of our Lord? Does it mean nothing that he was placed in charge of the center place? Later we shall see that this appointment was but the confirmation of the appointment and ordination upon him by Christ. We shall see that the twelve also ordained him to this position. Two ordinations, one divine and the other human, correspond with the double ordination of Joseph and Oliver.

Still further Eusebius writes:

The Lord imparted the gift of knowledge to James the Just, to John and Peter after his resurrection, and these three imparted it to the rest of the apostles.—Page 38.

Here is a link omitted in the New Testament history. These quotations from Eusebius plainly show the superiority of James the Just and indicate the elevation of Peter and John from the quorum of twelve to that of the three, if indeed that had not been accomplished before. After his resurrection Jesus officered the church in imitation of the heavenly triumvirate as he had also arranged the church in the wilderness.

But this is only one of several references to the same effect. Already we have shown that special presiding gifts were delivered by our Lord to three men, that James was the chief of the three, and Peter and John the other two. These received it direct from the Lord, but the twelve must be content to receive the gift in a secondary and indirect manner from the three. Nothing could be more plain than that a superior quorum of three existed in the primitive church as soon after the resurrection of Christ as James rose to the heights required (for he did not at first believe in the divinity of his brother) and as the circumstances demanded.

On page 31 Eusebius continues:

Many of the ancient writers affirm that James, the Lord's brother, he that was first ordained bishop (overseer) at Jerusalem, was not of the number of the twelve apostles.

Let it not be overlooked that James was not merely appointed to this position, but that he was ordained. Later we shall notice that while he was an apostle he was not of the twelve, but was the successor of the Christ apostle.

(To be continued.)

Education, an Instrument of Social Progress

A SERMON BY LONZO JONES

Social progress is the conscious movement of society toward definite goals or objectives, upon which the members composing the society are harmoniously agreed, and toward which they collectively strive even at the sacrifice of personal ends and ambitions. These goals appear fixed at the time, but when attained should prove to be merely new vantage ground from which new and wider goals can be viewed. Goals unattained add to that long list of castles in Spain, while those which fail to expand become stagnant pools in the social world and breeders of reactionary and distrustful agencies.

The objectives of any group are set by the very forces which drive or draw men together in social groups. It may require the foresight and ability of a leader, or a group of leaders, of a seer or a prophet to point out the objective and crystallize the group mind, but the objective is set for them when they recognize the force which draws them together. This holds true for the warring tribes driven together for safety; for the pastoral clan banded together for mutual aid in protecting and caring for their flocks; for the labor union formed to secure shorter hours and better pay; for the industrial or manufacturing corporation incorporated for economical production of goods; or for the religious body bound together by common desires for worship. A common danger or a common love may bind men together; but education is neither of these.

As a social factor education can be illustrated better than it can be defined. The great falls at Niagara, one of the world's great wonder spots, represent centuries upon centuries of the restless forces of nature's processes. The potential energy of those tumbling waters is the resultant of all the geologic past of that area. By the magic power of the turbine and dynamo, that undirected energy is transformed into an invisible and silent force which lights the cities' homes and factories and drives the wheels of industry and transportation. This gift of Nature undirected is but a scenic wonder, but when transformed becomes the obedient servant of those who gave direction to its energy.

As are the falls, so is our civilization to-day. It is the created values by which great social groups can live together. Viewed uncritically the interrelatedness of the Twentieth Century World is no less than a social marvel. It represents the social processes of ages upon ages of attempts at human living together. What we are in civilization is the resultant of all that has gone before. Education is the dynamo silently running on, day and night, transforming the potential energy of society to-day into the intangible forces which are charging the living batteries of boyhood and girlhood, of manhood and womanhood. Charged with the traditions and ideals of the society that is and has been, these living batteries direct that energy upon the problems of the society that is to be so that civilization is no stagnant pool but moves steadily on from goal to goal—from objective to new objective.

Socially, education sets no goal and furnishes no common bond. But having given the conscious goals of the group, education furnishes the effective instrument by which the ideals and achievements of that group are disseminated and promulgated, and redirected upon those goals.

Education and the Latter Day Saints Church

As a small unit in the great social world of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, we as Latter Day Saints have had our objective and our ideals. These objectives have shifted as progress has been made, and the basic principles of the organization have been revitalized in harmony with the needs of such a changing world. From our earliest history until this hour in which we celebrate "College day," the instrument adopted for achieving those goals has been education. A few instances will illustrate clearly this tendency.

In those happy, active days at Kirtland, where the temple still stands as a monument to the united purpose and zeal of that little band, as early as 1831 a wooden schoolhouse was built for the education of the children. The pages of revelatory utterances in those early years are replete with "callings" and "commands" to preach the word of God, and to cry "repentance to a wicked and adulterous generation."

It is peculiarly significant to our theme to-day that among these pages there is a record of certain men being called to write textbooks for the education of the young, and to teach them in the rudiments of learning. In these same pages one of the most scathing denunciations given by a religious zealot was given to certain leaders in the church for neglecting the instruction of their children.

Referring to the Latter Day Saints in Caldwell County, Missouri, 1836 to 1838, the history of the county records that "There were also many persons of education and accomplishment among them. School-teachers were plentiful, and schools were numerous."

In the diary which Joseph Smith kept for years, we find recorded in November, 1833, the fact that the elders who had been out all summer on missions would soon be coming into Kirtland and that he was busy arranging for a school to teach them grammar and theology. These men were organized in classes
December 1, 1833, and studied and recited all winter, until March 25, 1834.

In January, 1836, a Mr. Seixas from Hudson Seminary was hired to teach a class of forty men the foundations in Hebrew grammar. He was to teach seven weeks, and received $320. In the diary of Joseph Smith for the winter of 1836, we find recorded a brief reference to this Hebrew school, which is a tribute to his zeal for learning: "I attended school and read and translated with my class as usual. My soul delights in reading the word of the Lord in the original, and I am determined to pursue the study of languages until I shall become master of them."

With reference to the attitude of the early church toward education, we cannot neglect mentioning the provisions made for a university in Nauvoo when the city was chartered in December, 1840. This university, abandoned when the other enterprises of that city were abandoned, was the first Municipal University in the United States.

Education in the Reorganization

Since 1860 the main educational effort of the church has centered in the establishment of Graceland College. In 1872, in summing up the situation of the church, Joseph Smith expressed the need of an educational institution to which our young people could be sent. No definite steps were taken until 1889, when the Board of Trade at Lamoni and some of the church officials made out articles of incorporation for a college at Lamoni. The stocks sold poorly, and the plan was abandoned. The project was agitated again in 1894; and in 1895 upon land donated by Sister Marjietta Walker, Brother W. A. Hopkins, and Sister M. A. Wickes, the first building of our college plant was begun, to be known as Graceland College.

The Real Graceland

The real Graceland is not the buildings of brick and stone and mortar which are seen in tangible ideals of leaders of this church plus the spirit of the men and women who have lived within her walls. From the little wooden schoolhouse in Kirtland, through the establishment of schools in Missouri, through the chartering of the University of Nauvoo, the first university in Illinois, to the laying of the corner stone of Graceland College in 1895, the educational vision, the dream, the ideal of this church for each individual has been to "Study to show thyself approved unto the Lord; a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Socially the goal has been the establishment of a social order in which the inborn powers of each individual are developed to the maximum, and when developed to be turned into the service of the group which fostered them, to reinterpret and achieve the social needs of the time, and to transmit to future generations the heritage which is their due.

A word should be said of the devotion of the men and women who have stood by Graceland in her time of need since the laying of the corner stone. There was a time in the life of the institution when it required faithful, persistent holding-on in order to keep it going, in order to even open the doors of Graceland College when the fall term came. Many were the times in those days when Professor Gunsolsey and Professor Hopkins during the noon hour went out and added to their works the prayer of faith that the funds might come—funds enough to even keep the college open. At a later time, when prosperity came to the church in material form and there was an opportunity for the advancement of the work of the college, again there came the man and the men and women associated with him who led Graceland into the fellowship of educational institutions so that to-day she stands as fully accredited as any college of her kind in the United States. Not only is the real Graceland the vision, the dream, and the ideal of the leaders of the church, but it is the fruitage of the devoted loyalty and skilled leadership of the men and women who were led to "stand by" when dogged holding on was required, and to move forward when the opportunity for expansion came.

The Five Worthy Needs

It has always been the primary purpose of Graceland College to maintain an educational standard which would establish in her students a fully rounded character, a character which would serve as an unshaken standard by which every situation could be judged. To develop that well-rounded character, Graceland has undertaken to establish what I shall term the five worthy moods: 1. There is the scientific mood, which is characterized by a passion for facts and a clearness of vision. It describes. 2. The philosophical mood, which interprets. 3. The artistic mood; it enjoys. 4. The religious mood; it appreciates. 5. The ethical mood; it cooperates. These five moods make for fully rounded manhood and womanhood, and this is the standard which Graceland College has always sought to maintain.

The Traditions of Graceland College

The traditions by which she has lived are as follows:

1. The development of character, of purpose, of values, of an integrated personality; an attempt to build character which remains firm, though all things else may change; to develop men and women who fulfill Polonius's advice to his son: "To thine own self be true, and it will follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man.”

2. Her traditions have been those of Kindliness and Love and Godliness: “Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful.” There is no room here for the scorer and the ill-willed. Personally, if I were to reject a student from Graceland College for any cause, that one cause would be, a scornful and ill-willed spirit.

3. Cleanliness. By wholesome athletics, by freedom from noxious habits, by healthful regulations of food and sleep, cleanliness and strength of body is developed. By providing against idle time, by furnishing clean, wholesome companionship with students and faculty and with the best minds of the ages represented in the choice readings of the library, mental health and cleanliness are sought.
There is no need to seek the loafing places of street or elsewhere unless the student is of such a caliber that he is unhappy without it.

4. Scholarliness, which is characterized, a, by the searching spirit; b, the willingness to amend views; and c, the toleration of the views of others.

Graceland Achievements; Graceland as an Institution

Although Graceland has been in existence less than thirty years, she can now truthfully claim both state and national recognition. In recent years under the excellent leadership of her present president, Graceland has developed step by step until she stands in the forefront of institutions of her class in the country. Graceland is accredited for three years of student college work by the state institutions of Iowa. Her work is accepted without discount by all institutions in the North Central Association, including eighteen States of the Middle West. Graduates of Graceland are granted state certificates by the State Board of Examiners of Iowa without examination. A few years ago, Doctor Koos, of the State University of Minnesota, completed a national survey of junior colleges, some eighty-four in number, and reported that Graceland was one of the three best of its kind in the country.

For a number of years now, Graceland students have been received literally with open arms at a number of our larger institutions. From many sources reports come to us that Graceland students are allowed to enter institutions with far less preliminary red tape than those from institutions much larger in size and equipment.

Graceland Students Achieve

Only a comparatively small number have completed the work at Graceland. Including the graduates of 1924, the total number who have received diplomas from this institution would be only 846.
Of this number, 307, or more than one third, have been graduated within the last four years. It will thus be seen that, measured either in terms of time or in terms of numbers, Graceland’s work is yet comparatively insignificant, and yet these few people have made their influence felt in many ways.

Success in Life’s Work

The faculty at Graceland is perhaps the strongest, both from viewpoint of numbers and training, that Graceland ever has had. It is interesting to know that on this faculty there are thirteen former Graceland students, and that eight of these thirteen have at least a master’s degree. These people are serving the church with a consecration and devotion that is hard to excel.

When you turn to the general church work, the facts are equally interesting. We find that seven­ ten out of the group listed as general church officers are Graceland graduates.

The foreign missionary list is also very interesting. All of the following have attended Graceland;
Ohlert—Switzerland; Sorden—Patistone; Ruch—Norway; Foo—Hawaii; Hunker—Norway; Farthing—South Sea Islands; Carr—Isle of Pines; Dewsn­ up—England.

When we turn to other fields of activity, we find our students achieving in almost every line, making records of which we may well be proud. We now have among our graduates experts in social service, medicine and surgery, law, politics, geology, music, and teaching. Our students in these various lines many times have had to face many difficulties—in the majority of cases they have had to earn their way—and yet they have stuck by it until they have achieved success. This success is not to be measured in terms of idle flattery, but rather can be measured by real work accomplished in each respective field.
Some of the largest and oldest institutions of the country are loud in the praise of these people.

Achievement in Attitude

We believe that Graceland’s greatest contribution to the world will be in the attitude which it develops in the minds and hearts of its students. We believe that Graceland’s scholarship can be equaled elsewhere. We know Graceland’s equipment is very meager indeed when compared with that of other institutions. Were we to depend upon scholarship or scientific training alone in making our contribution, our work would not be above the average; but there is one thing that can be done here that we believe cannot be excelled elsewhere, and that is the development of a Christlike attitude and the interpre­
Heritage and Responsibility

It has been said that if the individual as a biological link in that endless chain could feel in his veins the stirrings and sacrifices, the hopes and ideals of his progenitors, and if he could hear in the hidden chambers of the germ plasm the pleading voice of the unborn generations to their right to be well born, that he would guard that eternal fire given into his keeping with a jealousy equaled only by the love of life itself. But those voices he cannot hear.

In the social life it is different. We can hear the voice of the past in the standards and traditions of the institutions of which we are a part, and we are mature enough when we inherit them to sense our responsibility in maintaining them.

The legacy of Graceland, small though it is when measured by material standards, is great when measured by the standards of character, kindliness, cleanliness, and scholarliness. The legacy of Graceland just as she is, is your heritage and mine. Her standards and traditions are in our keeping. We will do less than to maintain them. It is our privilege and opportunity to advance them.

The special call of this day is to give of your material wealth that our college may be of more service to the social group. If we can transfer some of our potential energy to the college endowment, it can be released to charge the living batteries of the oncoming youth of the church. With these students so charged, the future progress of this church will be assured.

Child Management

How many parents realize that the spoiled child is really a mentally sick child? This question is suggested by the latest bulletin of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. The bulletin is called "Child Management" and was written for the bureau by Doctor D. A. Thom, an authority on mental hygiene. Doctor Thom organized "habit clinics" for children in Boston and has general charge of eight such clinics established by the Massachusetts State Division of Mental Hygiene.

"Child Management" is the first publication of its kind issued by the Children's Bureau. It brings to the average parent in simple and practical form the results of modern research in the mental-hygiene field, just as the bureau's pamphlets on prenatal, infant, and child care, which have reached a circulation of nearly four and a half million, have brought to mothers and fathers the results of the research of medical and health specialists.

Zion

BY ELDER JOSEPH DEWSNUP

'Glorious things are sung of Zion,' Enoch's city seen of old,
Where the righteous, being perfect,
Walked with God in streets of gold:
Love and virtue, faith and wisdom,
Grace and gifts were all combined,
As himself each loved his neighbor,
All were of one heart and mind.

—W. W. Phelps.

Probably the only the two religious denominations in the world that look seriously upon the term Zion, are the Jews (descendants of former-day Israel), and the Latter Day Saints, (descendants of latter-day Israel). David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Micah, and other prophets, have written and sung its praises as the place where God would ultimately gather the children of Israel in the land of their inheritance.

Joseph Smith the Martyr, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, W. W. Phelps, Joseph Smith the younger, David H. Smith, Alexander H. Smith, Mark H. Forscutt, Charles Derry, and many others who have passed to the beyond and others who are still in our midst, have written, preached, and sung of the glories of Zion, as the future home and resting place of God's people under the new covenant.

Whether there will be two places called Zion (I think there will be), I am not concerned for the present, but I am concerned about the Zion of latter-day Israel, and therefore my desire is to stimulate and encourage our people in looking forward to such a place, and at the same time to demonstrate from the teachings of the books of the church that there is a Zion to be established and built up in the land of America, and that its exact location is on record, as well as its object and purpose.

The following extracts from revelations given to the church indicate the spot where Zion shall be built and from where its borders shall be extended, as the gathering together of God's people shall demand from time to time.

Hearken, O ye elders of my church saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints: wherewith this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion. And thus saith the Lord your God, If you will receive wisdom here is wisdom. Behold, the place which is now called Independence, is the center place.—Doctrine and Covenants 87:1.

... the word of the Lord concerning his church, established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion, which shall be the New Jerusalem; which city shall be built, beginning at the Temple Lot.—Doctrine and Covenants 88:1.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
These references establish the fact that there is a place called Zion; therefore we will try and show who will comprise the inhabitants of this city, "New Jerusalem."

And righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem.

—Doctrine and Covenants 36:12.

Behold, blessed, saith the Lord, are they who have come up unto this land with an eye single to my glory, according to my commandments; for them that live shall inherit the earth, and them that die shall rest in peace, and their works shall follow them... blessed are they whose feet stand upon the land of Zion, who have obeyed my gospel,... Wherefore I give unto them a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor do anything like unto it. Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things. Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unsnared from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times.—Doctrine and Covenants 59:1, 2.

The foregoing extracts from the revelations to the church do not need any comments of mine as to who shall live in Zion when the city, "New Jerusalem," is established, and the standard of morality and righteousness which will be expected to prevail among them.

Having indicated the spot where this wonderful city of God is to be located and the class of people who are to reside therein, we will briefly consider the possibilities of development, agriculturally, industrially, educationally, economically, and socially.

The following description of the land of Missouri will give some idea of the agricultural possibilities:

Unlike the timbered States in the East, except upon the rivers and watercourses, which were verdantly dotted with trees from one to three miles wide, as far as the eye can glance, the beautiful rolling prairies lay spread around like a sea of meadows. The timber is a mixture of oak, hickory, black walnut, elm, cherry, honey locust, mulberry, coffee bean, hackberry, hemlock, basswood, aspen, cottonwood, buttonwood, pecan, soft and hard maple, upon the bottoms. The shrubbery was beautiful, and consisted in part of plums, grapes, crab apples, and persimmons. The prairies were decorated with a growth of flowers that seemed as gorgeous and grand as the brilliancy of stars in the heavens, and exceed description. The soil is rich and fertile, from three to ten feet deep, and generally composed of rich loam and clay. The prairie soil is the most productive of any in the world from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, as well as from the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains, in the thirty-ninth degree of north latitude and between the tenth and seventeenth degrees of west longitude [from Washington]. It bids fair to become one of the most blessed places on the globe, when the curse is taken from the land, if not before. The winters are milder than in the Atlantic States, of the same parallel of latitude; and the weather is more agreeable, so that were the virtues of the inhabitants only equal to the blessings of the Lord, which he permits to crown the industry and efforts of those inhabitants, there would be a measure of good things of life, for the benefit of the saints, full, pressed down and running over, even an hundredfold. The disadvantages here, like all new countries, are self-evident, lack of mills and schools, together with the natural privations and inconvenience, which the hand of industry and the refinement of society with the polish of science overcome. But all these impediments vanish when it is recollected that the prophets have said concerning Zion in the last days how the glory of Lebanon is to come upon her; the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of his sanctuary, that he may make the place of his feet glorious; wherefor brass he will bring gold, and for iron he will bring silver, and for wood brass, and for stones iron; and where the feast of fat things will be given to the just; yea, when the splendor of the Lord is brought to one consideration, for the good of his people; the calculations of men and the vain glory of the world vanishes; and we exclaim: God will shine, the perfection of beauty out of Zion.—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 207-209.

Such was the description of the land of Zion over ninety years ago, and present-day statistics prove that the writer of the foregoing was not making an idle boast when he wrote, "It bids fair to become one of the most blessed places on the globe." The wild animals and the disadvantages of a new country are fast disappearing before the onward march of progress in "Joseph's land," and Missouri to-day, together with the adjoining States, which represent the "stakes, for the curtains, or the strength of Zion," are among the richest lands in the Union.

The following statistics regarding Missouri alone (space forbids me to give particulars of the adjoining States) taken from The World's Almanac and Book of Facts for 1925, proves the wisdom of our heavenly Father in the selection of the place where he ordained that Zion shall be built.

Missouri. Area, 69,420. Population (estimated) 1925, 3,466,781. Wealth (estimated) 1923, $9,981,409,000 (approximately £1,396,281,000). Missouri: a West North Central boreal province. About one fifth of Missouri lies within the east by Illinois and Kentucky, on the south by Arkansas, and on the west by Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska.

The Mississippi River skirts the entire eastern boundary line for five hundred miles, and the Missouri River the northern half of the western line, cutting through the State to confluence with the Mississippi at St. Louis. In all it has nearly one thousand miles of navigable waterways.
Its topography is varied: Upland table in the north and west, the Ozark Mountains in the center and South, with low lying river bottom areas in the extreme southeast. Its climate is a compromise between the north temperate and subtropical. Economically, it partakes of the characteristics of both North and South, is strong agriculturally, timberwise, horticulturally, industrially, and in education. Farms number 263,004, with 34,774,699 acres.

Manufactures exceed agriculture in value of products, reported by the 1920 census as more than $1,694,298,538 (approximately £318,841,668). All crops being valued at $659,947,554 (approximately £111,908,571). Manufactures rest chiefly on soil produce as raw material. The list includes meat packing, flour milling, machine making and foundries, with very large production of boots and shoes, chemicals, tobacco products, paints and varnishes, corncob pipes, and timber and timber products. The total number of establishments was 8,592, with a capitalization of $938,733,778 (approximately £187,772,191), and employing 244,939 persons.

Industry centers in Saint Louis, principal city, at the junction of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, and in Kansas City, at the junction of the Kansas and Missouri Rivers on the western border, and is spreading rapidly into other parts, as well as increasing in volume.

Saint Louis in 1919 had 3,205 manufacturing establishments, with a total product of $871,700,438 (approximately £174,340,088), and employing about 115,000 workers. Kansas City with 997 establishments had a total product valued at $192,815,052 (approximately £35,563,011).

The Census Bureau estimated that on July 1, 1924, the population of Saint Louis was 812,698, and of Kansas City 359,650.

Missouri is second in the production of zinc and lead, the value in 1922 being $21,468,814 (approximately £4,295,763).

Agriculturally, it is a great State. There is a total of about 23,500,000 acres, in all of which the 1920 census assigns to farms 34,774,000, with more than 24,000,000 improved. The corn crop was 182,000,000 bushels; wheat and oats together more than 76,000,000; tobacco, 3,700,000 pounds. The crop of cotton, mostly in the southeast, was 78,000,000 bales on 117,000 acres, far above the average acre production.

In live stock the Missouri mule, which is facetiously said to have won the war, has always been used much locally and exported to all other States and to foreign countries.

Railroad mileage in 1923 was 8,059.

With 4.8 per cent of Negro population, the average of illiteracy for the State is 3 per cent for all classes; native white percentage, 2; and foreign born, 9.6.

The schools enroll about 750,000 of a population of 3,404,655, by the 1920 census. The State University at Columbia, Saint Louis University and Washington University at Saint Louis, 12 colleges, and 7 normal schools are the higher institutions of learning.

Saint Louis is the gateway for north and south travel as well as of freight traffic, and many tourists stop there. A feature is the famous bridge across the Mississippi, which is said to accommodate more freight cars than any other in the world. River traffic is immense to and from New Orleans and intermediate points.

The State of Missouri, with the seven adjoining States, which can reasonably be assumed are the "curtains" of Zion, cover an area of 505,895 square miles, with an estimated population to-day of 22,686,156, which works out approximately at 14½ acres for each person, and if grouped into families averaging 5 persons, would work out approximately at 71⅔ acres for each family. Surely, then, on this basis alone, making allowance for the building up of cities and towns where the housing problem and the building of factories, etc., for industries would be the keenest, there is still plenty of room for extension, and the unbiased mind will readily see what stupendous results will be obtained when Zion is peopled by those whom God has decreed shall inhabit the land.

The Government returns of the United States prove that the State of Missouri is one of the best, if not the best, all-round producing States in the Union; so far as the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms are concerned, we can rightly conclude from the brief evidence produced that agriculturally the State of Missouri offers most things that a nation would require for food. The land is so fertile that everything required for the upkeep and development of a people is said to lie above and below the earth. I have it from an American friend, who has lived for the last half century in Missouri and some of the adjoining States, who has studied the geographical and economic conditions of Missouri from the viewpoint of colonization, that if the State were walled in and every means of escape barred, the people could not be starved into submission by an enemy, because the land could produce all the food-stuff that was necessary to maintain life. Therefore, when Zion is established and made the earthly abode of God's children, there will be nothing to be afraid of from the outside, even if his Satanic Majesty with his myriads of evildoers were to come up against Zion with the object of thwarting the purposes of God, for the Lord says he will fight our battles. (See Doctrine and Covenants 95:6.) And when Christ shall come and reign with his people for a thousand years and put his laws into their hearts and teach them the ways of holiness, what will it matter if Satan is loosed again for a season? Zion will be safe, and the inhabitants will have no need to be afraid.

the SAINTS' HERALD for May 27, 1925, comes as further evidence of the richness and fertility of the land of Zion.

CHICAGO, May 8, (AP).—The "Heart of America"—the Central West—prepared by geologic forces for man's use for a thousand million years, was pictured as the most favorable place for developing a great civilization by Professor Forrest Ray Mouton of the University of Chicago in an address here at a preparatory school conference.

"The time and the place in which we live are the most favorable the world has had or ever will have for the development of a great civilization," he said. He embraced the territory from western New York, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, to Kansas, Nebraska, and South Dakota, and from the Great Lakes to Tennessee.

Once covered by a shallow ocean, he said, the region was made rich in mineral deposits and soil fertility. "There is not in the whole world another area in one body of equal extent that has so fertile a soil," he said. "The climate is about all that could be desired for the production of food for mankind and for stimulating him to his best efforts.

"Enormous quantities of timber, grain, live stock, and fruit are produced in this area. About one half of the corn of the world is grown there, and, just beyond, nearly one half of the cotton of the world is produced.

"In all this region," he continued, "a single language is spoken. Its inhabitants are largely of a single race. There are no frontiers to restrict and hamper trade. There is not a single fortified town and no body of troops to be supported.

"Within this circle there live approximately 50,000,000 of people who are the wealthiest, best fed, best sheltered, best clothed people in the world, of this or any other time."

Industrially Missouri and the regions round about have everything to offer the industrious. The raw materials, such as coal, iron, cotton, wool, etc., are practically at the feet of the population, and lie there awaiting a progressive people to handle and turn into untold wealth.

Stone, wood, and clay are to be found in abundance. Coal to find employment for the miners and to supply fuel for the workshops and the homesteads. Iron for the engineering and allied industries. Wood, clay, and stone for the building and allied trades. Cotton and wool for the textile workers, and many other products and by-products which we could enumerate from an industrial point of view and thereby show the possibilities of the land chosen and indicated by God as the place where Zion is to be established. Space will not permit me to go into details, but authentic information can be produced from various sources that will prove that the chosen spot is in a region of the country which offers all that the industrious could wish for.

If our fathers in the early days of the church had heeded the revelations and with wisdom discharged their duty to God and to their children and children's children, Zion would probably have been established on firmer and more equitable conditions than we find it to-day. It is not too late to stand by the church and rally our forces and harness the power that we have and redeem this "promised land," and we could in a few years' time bring about a full and complete realization of our hopes, with the blessing of God and the spirit of sacrifice.

The following extract from a revelation given to the church in 1831 is applicable to-day, and if obeyed will receive the blessing of our heavenly Father.

For, behold, verily I say unto you, The Lord willeth that the disciples, and the children of men, should open their hearts even to purchase this whole region of country, as soon as time will permit. Behold, here is wisdom; let them do this lest they receive none inheritance, save it be by the shedding of blood. And again, inasmuch as there is land obtained, let there be workmen sent forth, of all kinds, unto this land, to labor for the saints of God. Let all things be done in order.

—Doctrine and Covenants 58:11, 12.

Economically and socially it is intended by God that the inhabitants of Zion shall be a people of the highest type of manhood and womanhood, physically, morally, and spiritually; with mind well balanced and governed by the highest standard of moral and economic laws, so that growth and development shall have an environment that will not only produce healthy and high-toned social conditions, but will also produce the highest type of children. The following extract from a revelation indicates this high standard of growth and development:

And inasmuch as ye do these things, with thanksgiving, with cheerful hearts, and countenances; not with much laughter, for this is sin, but with a glad heart and a cheerful countenance; verily I say, that inasmuch as ye do this the fullness of the earth is yours: the beasts of the fields, and the fowls of the air, and that which climbeth upon the trees, and walketh upon the earth; and, the herb, and the things which cometh of the earth, whether for food or for raiment, or for houses or for barns, or for orchards, or for gardens, or for vineyards; yea, all things which cometh of the earth, in the season thereof, are made for the benefit and the sustenance of man, yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body, and to enliven the soul. And it pleaseth God that he has given all these things unto man; for unto this end were they made, to be used with judgment, not to excess, neither by extortion: and in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments.—Doctrine and Covenants 59:4, 5. [Read all the section.]

Space forbids my pointing out further the economic and social condition of Zion as viewed from the law of God, concerning tithes and offerings, etc., but in passing I will just add, that stewardships will be appointed and inheritances will be given. There will be no poor or no "idle rich," and the wealth of the land and water will be gathered by the people and conserved by those in authority for the benefit of the people, so that when any member of the community finds that he or she has not enough to provide all things needful, they will have the right to go to the steward of the storehouse, or any of his assistants, and ask for that of which they stand in need, and it shall be given to them; and when they find they are prospered and have more than they need, they will give of their increase to the Lord's storehouse, so that it can be given to those who have need. (See Doctrine and Covenants 101.)

Educationally, Zion is intended to be a seat of learning. Colleges, schools, and educational establishments are to be built and equipped, so that the people can be educated in science, art and craft, and thereby obtain preeminence in the world of learning and knowledge. The following extracts from revelations given to the church for guidance in educational matters, will give readers some ideas of the curriculum to be followed in Zion:

And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and perplexities of the nations; and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kindoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you. . . . Therefore, verily I say unto you, my friends, Call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you; and as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith. Organize yourselves; prepare every needful thing, and establish a house, even a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of faith, a house of learning, a house of glory, a house of order, a house of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 21 and 36.

. . . and study and learn, and become acquainted with all good books, and with languages, tongues, and people.—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 5.

. . . and to obtain a knowledge of history, and of countries, and of kindoms, of laws of God and man, and all this for the salvation of Zion. Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 12.

If you will read the whole of the revelations here referred to, you will find that educationally our people are to take up the study of general knowledge, also astronomy, geology, mineralogy, biology, pathology, zoology, physiology, psychology, theology, and the various theories of evolution, so that we may come to the knowledge of the truth in all things, and if we will take the trouble to read and study the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, we will find all the evidence necessary to prove that God intends that “Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.” The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth.

What constituted the glory of the ancient nations? Was it the extent or acreage of their country? Was it their resources? Was it the greatness of their armies or the vast multitudes of their population? No! Their glory consisted in the advancement and achievement in science, art, craft, and even religion. Intelligence always has, always will indicate the glory of a nation and even an individual, when they have reached the standard of perfection, out of which God has shined. Therefore, as God’s chosen people, let us awake to righteousness and bring forth all we possess in brains, muscles, and wealth, and lay it on the altar of God, so that his righteous purposes shall be accomplished.

I am sure if Latter Day Saints will only heed the commandments of God and prepare themselves for the things which he has promised to them if they are faithful, Zion will in very deed prove to be a haven of peace and tranquillity where there shall “be nothing to hurt or destroy.” That being so, Zion will indeed be the place of the pure in heart.

Zion will have to represent the acme of intelligence, and to this end as a church we ought to be endeavoring to equip and prepare ourselves so that we shall be able to fill the various positions and conditions that will be the outcome of our progress.

For the establishing of Zion, we shall require the smartest and most intelligent men and women that the world can produce. Zion will require the specialist in every branch of the sciences, arts, and crafts; yea, even the laborer as well as the specialist will be so trained in Zion that he will be able to show by the work he does that his intelligence has been so developed that he is able to show that even in menial work, “Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.”

O Zion, when I think of thee,
I long for pinions like a dove,
And mourn to think that I should be
So distant from the land I love.

But yet we hope to see the day,
When Zion’s children shall return;
When all our griefs shall flee away,
And we no more again shall mourn.

The thought that such a day will come,
Makes e’en the exile’s portion sweet;
Though now we wander far from home,
In Zion soon we all shall meet.

Choosing a Vocation

No man struggles perpetually and victoriously against his own character; and one of the first principles of success in life is so to regulate our career as rather to turn our physical constitution and natural inclinations to good account than to endeavor to counteract the one or oppose the other.—Bulwer.

Far West at Stewartville

Stewartville reunion opened on schedule time and was full of interest from the start. We had the pleasure of having with us quite a number of the general church officers, including President Elbert A. Smith, Apostles F. Henry Edwards and E. J. Gleazer, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, and General Sunday School Superintendent C. B. Woodstock. Apostle Bud came in for a day but felt he was there to take a rest rather than to do service. John Lentoll of the Seventy came in to do his part in the reunion. Elder O. W. Okerlind, former missionary to the stake, brightened up the reunion by his presence, spending at least a part of a day with us. Former Bishop Koehler, wife and son, also accorded us their presence for a day. Bishop A. Carmichael was with us several days, and the general talk was that Bishop Carmichael met the question of stewardships sufficiently plain that if an individual was not convinced before, he was when the lectures were finished. Besides doing departmental work, Elder C. B. Woodstock gave us a lecture on intensive farming. Roscoe for the 1926 reunion.

The young people, among whom he has worked in former years, appreciated the work of the junior department under the leadership of Sisters Leggett and Lentoll was handled in a very satisfactory way. They are already planning for better equipment for the 1926 reunion.

Stewardships was the big item of discussion during the reunion, and it has been carried out into the branches. Some have already applied to Bishop Burnett, expressing themselves to the effect that they desire to enter into stewardships. Do doubt the coming year will see many changes in this regard. Donations and tithes were more liberal than in the past. We are looking forward to a big reunion in 1926.

The Maine Reunion

The Maine reunion is one of the babies among the great family of reunions. It is just three years old, but we unhappily proclaim it will be difficult to find a livelier, more active, or more interesting three-year-old than this reunion. Reunion opened Friday evening, August 24, with a short organization meeting in charge of Elder C. H. Rich, president of the Western Maine District and chairman of the reunion committee. The Maine reunion is a joint reunion of the eastern and western districts.

Following the business session, J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, Iowa, was introduced as the speaker. Apostle Paul M. Hanson was in charge of the reunion, having associated with him Patriarch Richard Baldwin in the spiritual matters of the reunion.

Saturday evening, preceding the preaching service, the marriage ceremony of Elder Myron Holman and Sister Gracia Walker was solemnized, H. A. Chelline officiating.

The theme of stewardships and the financial law were presented each forenoon in a series of chart lectures and forum discussions. These meetings were under the direction of Bishop M. C. Fisher, assisted by Edward L. Traver.

During the prayer meeting period, the children were provided with handwork, in charge of Sisters Lena Baldwin and Gracia Walker Holman. The young people's prayer meetings were in charge of J. W. Roberts and Sister J. D. Steed. I spent much of the day at the table writing; but in "rest" spells I visited with Elder, especially on the open observation car attached to the rear of the train at Butte and taken through the Montana Canon to Harlowton. This open observation car is particularly pleasing to ride in because the train from Avery (west of Deer Lodge) to Harlowton is drawn by the world-famous electric locomotives of the Milwaukee road, which without smoke and cinders smoothly handle the trains on up-grade and down, in starting and stopping. To one working at writing the difference in smoothness between electric and steam locomotive is very noticeable.

The second of September was spent in reading and writing. I had for some time been carrying in my portfolio two books which I wanted to read. One was Beck's American Constitution. This I found so delightfully instructive that most of the day's reading was devoted to it. And as I read and made notes, and at times stopped to write, a young woman who with her mother occupied the space opposite Number 4 in which I was located, asked me, "Are you writing a criticism of the Constitution?" "No," I said, "but I am reading a very splendid treatise on it." She must have taken me for a law professor. I afterwards learned she was a graduate of the University of Illinois and was on route to Cambridge to do post graduate work in psychology at Harvard. The young man who was my "section mate," occupying "upper 4," when he saw me industriously writing, asked, "Are you outlining the Constitution?" I found it delightful to walk along the great Missouri river with the world famous "Luna Clipper" and to take a bit of a toll at Harlowton. The Maine Reunion is the Atlantic Reunion of the Pipers.

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

At Home, Kansas City, Missouri

My last letter to you closed at nightfall on August 31. From nine o'clock that morning I had been on "The Olympian," or Train Number 16, of the C. M. & S. P. Railway, having boarded it at Deer Lodge, Montana. Deer Lodge is a division point where train crews change. The flagman "out on 10" that morning was a former Lamoni boy, Dale Stead, son of and sister J. D. Stead. I spent much of the day at the table writing; but in "rest" spells I visited with Elder, especially on the open observation car attached to the rear of the train at Butte and taken through the Montana Canon to Harlowton. This open observation car is particularly pleasing to ride in because the train from Avery (west of Deer Lodge) to Harlowton is drawn by the world-famous electric locomotives of the Milwaukee road, which without smoke and cinders smoothly handle the trains on up-grade and down, in starting and stopping. The meetings were marked by a high degree of spirituality, both in the prayer meetings and in the preaching services. There were eighteen baptisms during the reunion. Patriarch Richard Baldwin gave many blessings. The speakers were Elders Baldwin, Chelline, Fisher, Gunsolley, Hanson, Rich, and Wilson.

"Earnest workers," the camp song which the young people selected, expresses the sentiment of the reunion of the Pine Tree State. H. A. Chelline, Assistant Secretary.

your courses?" "No," I said, "just making notes for some lectures." You see, he had also taken me to be a college professor. I learned he was a University of Wisconsin graduate and was en route to Northwestern University to take a teaching fellowship and do post graduate. He in turn learned I was somewhat of an itinerant church man en route to another church gathering. And at lunch the young man who sat opposite looking at Lamb Delta Sigma key, remarked, "What a beautiful key that is! What is it?" So I told him.

It is a bit strange, but true, that I am seldom taken for a preacher. I am usually chanced by chance acquaintances as lawyer, physician, or professor, sometimes as an electrician, but seldom as a merchant or artisan. I wonder why? Lamb Delta Sigma is perhaps unknown to some Herald readers and so it may be well to tell somewhat about it. It is an organization among the college men and women of the church, organized in the interests of the education in the church. Some who are not graduates have been admitted because of their work in educational lines and their friendship towards educational endeavor. The society or fraternity may be said to stand for the spirit of stewardship; for the sentiment subscribed to by the members of the organization is that talents and possessions are consecrated to the service of God and the church. Lambda Delta Sigma will be recognized as the Greek letters corresponding to L. D. S. The fraternity fostered at Graceland College represents the Graceland spirit.

Rather late on the night of the 2d I closed my book, having finished it, turned off the light and sought sleep. Due into Chicago a little after nine o'clock on the morning of the 3d, the time after arising was spent in getting breakfast, packing grips and portfolios, and preparing to detrain.

The Grand Trunk train for Vicksburg, Michigan, was due to depart at a quarter of one, so I had three hours to make the transfer. This gave me time for a call at the office of Brother F. H. Johnson, whose wife is Mrs. Smith's sister. (This makes Fred H. and Fred M. brothers-in-law, does it not?) As assistant to the president and receiver of the road, he has had much to do with our traffic problems.

Well, because of sickness at home he was late to his desk, and by the time he arrived I had read the batch of mail I found awaiting me at his office. Then followed a visit about home folks, transportation matters, and finally lunch together, and then I was off to get the Grand Trunk train for Vicksburg; and as soon as the train was ready I was aboard, got a table, and went at that bunch of letters, and before Vicksburg I had so many on "Overland" on it.

Writing materials, etc., repacked in portfolios, I sat back for some meditation, and to wonder just how I would get from Vicksburg to Indian Lake, the train not stopping at the latter, hence the necessity of detraining at Vicksburg. I could not but think of conditions I might find in the district, for I knew that some of the Saints had been disturbed by the work of one who, disaffected himself, had while under appointment and drawing support from the church yet sown seeds of distrust and discord.

On detraining at Vicksburg I was pleased to find Brethren D. T. Williams and E. B. Blett awaiting the arrival of the train. My problem of transportation to Indian Lake was solved, for Brother Blett's "all steel Overland" was also waiting. A hasty trip to the post office to post the last of the mail I had worked out, and we were soon on the road to Indian Lake. I felt at home, for meeting "Dannie" was like meeting one of the family, and in Brother Blett I found a former fellow worker at Graceland College. At the reunion grounds in Lemon Grove I found many more old acquaintances and friends. I was domiciled at the cottage occupied by Brother Blett and family, and entered at once upon the work of the reunion, which was well in swing under the direction of Brother E. K. Evans, the district president, and Brethren, well supported by other earnest workers. I found the number of campers according to reports smaller than last year, due (it was thought) largely to the lateness of fixing the date and also to a shift in the date. But the spirit of the reunion was good, and the meetings were peaceful and profitable. Even the round tables (several of which were held) while earnest were quiet and resulted in good and in a better understanding on the part of many.

Once more my theme in speaking was largely on Zion and her problems, and once more I was made to rejoice in seeing the interest of the Saints in her problems, and hope here was.

The general order for each day was: Young people's meeting at 6.30 a. m., followed by breakfast. Then some classes by Sister Blanche Edwards, followed by a general prayer meeting at 8.15 to 10.30. Preaching 10.45 to noon. Dinner (or lunch). At 2.30 stewardship classes by Brother C. J. Hunt. Recreation in the afternoon. Supper. Entertainment of some sort in the evening, sometimes dancing, sometimes singing, sometimes stunts, followed by camp prayer.

Variations from this occurred on Thursday and Friday (3d and 4th), when round tables were held in the afternoon; and on Saturday, when a special district conference convened. At this conference the attendance was one of the largest the district has had. The special conference was called for the purpose of selecting a president. Brother E. K. Evans of Grand Rapids had been appointed by Brother Williams to fill a vacancy. Because of conditions existing, and because of Brother Evans' physical condition, Brother Williams and I after consultation with several of the local brethren, and also with the assembled members of the priesthood, determined that Brother Evans should present it would be best to recommend to the conference that to Brother C. J. Hunt be given the responsibility of district president, and we did so. Our recommendation was approved. Other matters related to this change were attended to, and the question of reunion for next year, the selection of committee, and matters relating to reunion finance, etc., were freely discussed. It was a good conference and in consonance with the prevailing spirit of the reunion.

Of the general authorities and conference appointees I found, besides Brethren Williams and Hunt already mentioned, Brethren John Shields, Percy Farrow, and S. W. L. Scott of the appointees, and Sister Blanche Edwards of the Department of Women, and Brother J. A. Gardner of the Publicity Department. Asisting Brother E. K. Evans of the local men were Lee Hutchins, E. B. Blett, C. R. Garnet, and others.

Indian Lake is a body of water some miles in length and perhaps a mile in width, one of the many beautiful lakes so abundant in Michigan. On its west shore is the fine grove of trees over which Lemon Grove and here on a lease the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District has erected a tabernacle and eating house, and in the shade of the grove each year have nestled the tents of the campers at the annual reunion. It is a beautiful spot, duly appreciated by the Saints who come to the reunion each year.

Sunday, the 6th, not alone the closing day of the reunion of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, but for me the closing of the reunion season, dawned to the accompanying pattering of rain. The rain was much needed by the farmers and fruit growers, but for reunions and camps rain is always somewhat of a "dampner." And yet the spirit of the camp was bright, for hope looks forward to the coming of the sun. Preaching was continued, not deferred; for by the close of the prayer meeting the sun had broken through and the Saints were happy. All Saturday afternoon and all Sunday forenoon there were new arrivals on the grounds, Saints from far and near coming to get what they could of the reunion. Some arrived just after the close of the morning preaching service, but were unable to overhear the speeches and had the close attention of the audience which filled the tabernacle. At the close good-bys were said, for Brother Williams and I were to take train out of Kalamazoo about 1.30, as I was due in Independence for Monday night, for a Labor Day address.

I arrived on the grounds feeling that on the whole the reunion meetings had accomplished much good, that the efforts of the opposition had been minimized, and feeling that the work was safe in the hands of the fine corps of local workers.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
I had met many old-time friends, and formed new acquaintances among the Saints. I was reminded of early Graceland days by meeting Volney Gilden and his brother, with their faithful Volney had been a fellow student with me at Graceland and in the days when we recited in the "Flare Block"; that was the first year of Graceland's work. The few moments of conversation had with Volney revived many old-time memories.

I shall watch with interest developments in Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, feeling quite sure the work is onward and growth is certain. May fraternity in and fealty to the cause characterize the workers of that district and may God bless and direct their efforts.

After a hasty but ample lunch at the cottage of Brother and Sister Kutt, Brother Williams and I were taken by Brother M. A. Ward in his Studebaker to Kalamazoo, the second time in recent months. Brother "Manley" has helped us out in reaching appointments.

Reaching Chicago at the Illinois Central Depot, a transfer to the Union Station, and at 6 p.m. we were out on a Milwaukee train, Brother Williams for Ottumwa, where he was to transfer to Lamoni; I for Kansas City—home and office work.

Driving over to the Campus in the evening I found it swarming with people. A closely contested ball game was running into extra innings, and evidences were plenty that a "big day" had been enjoyed. At the evening hour I spoke to about the largest crowd I have addressed on the Campus, speaking on the subject, "Labor."

Next day, the 8th, I took up routine of home and office duties, getting ready for the convening of the council on the 15th.

And so, at home once more after the busy reunion season, hard at work with the multitudinous duties of office and administrative work, with scarcely an opportunity to recreate among my machine and hand tools in my basement workshop, my "Little Journeys" will cease for a while at least. I shall hope that those who have in spirit followed me on these trips may have found some interest and benefit in reading of the incidents of a church man's activities. I have been busy, but the hope, the belief that my ministrations have helped the Saints onward, and mayhap caused them to "look up" with more cheer, more hope, with their burdens lightened a little by our common aspirations and deep interest in Zion and her cause, has buoyed me up, and I feel glad that I have been among the Saints in the various fields. I am encouraged by the many manifestations of faithful devotion I have seen. May God bless the faithful Saints.

Seeking to Reach Young Not of the Church

CALUMET, OKLAHOMA, September 18.—About half of the group of young people here does not belong to the church, so we plan to give half the time to programs that will interest them and also give them an opportunity to take part.

We find that by the young people of the church taking the lead we can get the others to take part in debates, songs, plays, and readings, and by careful selections can get readings or songs that will be worth while.

We have also found that by having our young people meet together and getting accustomed to getting up and expressing themselves helps to cause a better feeling in our community. Also having our meetings in the church helps to keep the Evil One from putting in his temptations to drag the young boys and girls onto the downward road.

Our officers are: Harry Murl Elwell, president; Earnest Crownover, vice president; Elwin Crownover, secretary and treasurer; Earnest Crownover, teacher of the Book of Mormon class.

We ask the prayers of HERALD readers that God may use us as instruments in his hands for the uplifting of the gospel banner; also that we may live clean and pure lives before those who do not belong to the church, that it may cause them to want to join.

A letter to the First Presidency

I conclude my series of meetings at Fort Collins to-night. Have delivered ten sermons to attentive audiences of Saints, with a few interested nonmembers present each evening. It has been a pleasure to meet with the splendid Saints here who are trying hard to pay for a good church building and to let their light shine to others.

Will be in Denver Wednesday. By request of Brother Brown, district president, I will visit Wiley, Colorado, for a two-day meeting Sunday, the 20th. It is a long journey from here, but am glad to render assistance whenever I can. Have been greatly blessed in my work by the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, and rejoice in the blessing of God granted to me. Weather has been delightfully cool here. My top coat is very comfortable most of the time.

Am feeling the strain of constant preaching and will welcome this few days of rest before our next service.

Another Testifies as to Efficacy of Word of Wisdom

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA, September 20.—Alabama is one of the States that borders on the Gulf of Mexico, and the sun shines hot, especially in spots. The Birmingham official registered thermometer reads 95 degrees and more.

Next day, the 8th, I took up routine of home and office duties, getting ready for the convening of the council on the 15th.

And so, at home once more after the busy reunion season, hard at work with the multitudinous duties of office and administrative work, with scarcely an opportunity to recreate among my machine and hand tools in my basement workshop, my "Little Journeys" will cease for a while at least. I shall hope that those who have in spirit followed me on these trips may have found some interest and benefit in reading of the incidents of a church man's activities. I have been busy, but the hope, the belief that my ministrations have helped the Saints onward, and mayhap caused them to "look up" with more cheer, more hope, with their burdens lightened a little by our common aspirations and deep interest in Zion and her cause, has buoyed me up, and I feel glad that I have been among the Saints in the various fields. I am encouraged by the many manifestations of faithful devotion I have seen. May God bless the faithful Saints.

Seeking to Reach Young Not of the Church

CALUMET, OKLAHOMA, September 18.—About half of the group of young people here does not belong to the church, so we plan to give half the time to programs that will interest them and also give them an opportunity to take part.

We find that by the young people of the church taking the lead we can get the others to take part in debates, songs, plays, and readings, and by careful selections can get readings or songs that will be worth while.

We have also found that by having our young people meet together and getting accustomed to getting up and expressing themselves helps to cause a better feeling in our community. Also having our meetings in the church helps to keep the Evil One from putting in his temptations to drag the young boys and girls onto the downward road.

Our officers are: Harry Murl Elwell, president; Earnest Crownover, vice president; Elwin Crownover, secretary and treasurer; Earnest Crownover, teacher of the Book of Mormon class.

We ask the prayers of HERALD readers that God may use us as instruments in his hands for the uplifting of the gospel banner; also that we may live clean and pure lives before those who do not belong to the church, that it may cause them to want to join.

Special Meeting Uncovers Deep Interest

CORINTH, ONTARIO, September 11.—A very profitable day was spent at Corinth on Sunday, September 6, when Saints and friends gathered to celebrate the one-day special meeting. It was indeed a time of rejoicing, although the day and attendance were affected by rain, for it poured from early morning until about three in the afternoon. However, for those present the sun of righteousness shone in the meetings from their very beginning, and our hearts were made glad by the continuous outpouring of the Spirit which ran from one to the other like oil from vessel to vessel. The prayer service of wonder and delight, filled with ardent testimonies of a longing to do more effective work for the church, was the order of the day. Such prayer services are an inspiration, a foretaste of Zion. Sacrament was served at this service.

Bishop J. L. Burger was in charge of the prayer services, and he also occupied at eleven o’clock with a discourse which was much appreciated. His timely topic was, “How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him.” Make the church your choice, or do the other thing. Don’t halt; you’re losing ground.

Dinner was served in the church because of the continuous downpour of rain. Corinth Saints have a happy knack of being able to bring delicacies to everyone. A couple of games of ball were played, one by the Harriston branch and two small fishes, there seemed to be an abundance left.

After dinner everyone settled down for a real afternoon of sport. A couple of games of ball were played, one by the Harriston branch, the other by the sisters making good ground. The younger ones were also on their own.

Elder H. A. Koehler occupied at half past two with the service of prayer and discussing the suitability of purchasing a reunion ground.

Elder G. C. Tomlinson, sr., was with us and most of the afternoon could be seen trying to defend his territory, the old man. Before the noon hour had rolled around, all were enjoying themselves, some playing ball, others quoits, while the majority of the children were making good use of the swings, slides, etc., provided by the park.

A very pleasant climax to our visit in Sweden was that on our last night in the country we were able to enter into a covenant relationship with God in this true church of which we are members. It was a pleasure to me to find that there is a long-felt need in the Owen Sound District to have at least a partially filled service.

Eight Weeks in Sweden

This writing finds me back at my home in Porsgrun, after an absence of nearly ten weeks. We were in Sweden over eight weeks of that time and enjoyed working with and assisting Brother Johnson in his missionary activities in that field. Brother Johnson is a fine man, a humble and faithful missionary, self-sacrificing, and always willing to prefer his brother in honor. It was a pleasure to me to see those eight weeks of association with him. I trust that our sojourn among the Swedish Saints was as much benefit to them as it was to us.

Brother Johnson has a very hard field, working as he does, in and around Stockholm. In that large city there are so many meetings held in the name of Christ, so many voices crying to people, that it is very difficult to interest many in the message that we bring. However, Brother Johnson is not discouraged but is up and doing, visiting people, distributing tracts, and holding as many meetings as he has opportunity. It is well that he is to receive some help in the near future. He has been there alone as a missionary for five years. But these eight weeks in the country will help to make him feel more confident and not so much alone, even if they do not work together all of the time.

A very pleasant climax to our visit in Sweden was that on our last night in the country I was permitted to baptize Brother Johnson’s two oldest daughters. This event brought joy to the hearts of the parents, and indeed it should, for I am sure that most parents are glad to see their children enter into a covenant relationship with God in this true church of which we are members.

It was my happy privilege, on the morning of August 19, to attend the opening session of the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work. That large church was crowded to capacity with over six hundred church representatives from all parts of the world, the King and Queen of Sweden and several other members of the royal family, and many hundreds of visitors (as many as could crowd into the church).

Perhaps never before in the history of the world has there been assembled in one service such an august body of churchmen from many religious faiths. The songs, as well as the response by the congregation to the chants of the officiating priests, were sung in four languages—Swedish, German, French and English. Copies of the songs were distributed... among the congregation, and each person sang in the tongue that was easiest for him. Never before has the Patriarch meet in an international conference with other church de­ were present at this conference.

The opening address was delivered by the Lord Bishop of Winchester and was a stirring appeal to the churches of the world to put into operation and practice the social program of Jesus Christ. He used many expressions that are just becoming household words among Latter Day Saints, such as “community conscious”; “the salvation of the group as well as the individual”; “the changing of society’s viewpoint as well as the private person’s”; etc. It was a wonderful address, but as I stood there in that crowded church listening to it I could not help but wish that it had been our own church president who had been extended the honor of presenting that important subject to that world representative assembly. His many years of intensive study of that question, coupled with the inspiration that the church has received from God, has qualified him to present that subject as well if not better than any other man in the world. But it is doubtful as to whether our church would have been permitted a representative in the conference, much less our leader having the honor of giving the opening address.

We left Stockholm on the evening of August 27 on our way home to Norway. We stopped at Ben next day and remained there three days, holding three meetings and encouraging the Saints all we could. We came home to Porsground August 31 and received a royal welcome from the Saints here. We were met at the train by Brother Muceus and several of the other Saints. This was our first meeting with Brother Muceus since his return to this field. We have begun working together, and we trust that our united efforts will put the church work in the country on a firmer foundation than before.

Before Brother Hunker’s return to the States, he and I worked for several weeks selecting songs and making the manuscript for a new song book for this mission. I placed the order for five hundred copies with a printer here in Porsgrund shortly before I went to Sweden. Since my return
I have received the books and am highly pleased with them.
This mission has been short of song books for some time, so we are glad to have a good supply. They are nice little books, containing one hundred and forty-two songs, and are bound in cloth. We have raised over half the money to pay for them and are confident the remainder will be forthcoming in due time.

I trust the work of the church is moving forward and that all engaged therein are being blessed in their efforts.

Belvidere Sunday School Visits Rockford

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS, September 14.—The Saints here are striving to climb upward in this great work and this year have had much to encourage, one of the main things being the renewal of our prayer meetings with greater interest than ever before.

Several visits from our district president, the district mis­ ionary, and one from the district Sunday school superintendent, have been much appreciated, and we would say to all to come as often as possible.

Rally day was held May 24 and 25, which proved very interesting. Invitation cards were sent to all near-by branches, about seventy-five responding. One family came from Michigan, the Jordans, one-time members of this branch. Elders J. Cooper and O. A. McDowell were the speakers.

On June 21 we had a Children’s Day program and entering the cradle roll mothers. The program was composed almost entirely of children and was the best ever given in the hall here. May we have more like it.

Elder Okerlund gave us two very interesting discourses
July 26.

Attendance at meetings has fallen off quite a bit this summer, but we hope that in the fall everyone will be at work again.

Judge from the report of others who attended the reunion at Madison, Wisconsin, that they truly enjoyed a spiritual feast.

On September 13 the Belvidere Sunday school came over and surprised us. An enjoyable time was had, and as they departed for their homes we wondered why we do not have more of these surprises that draw us nearer together in this wonderful Lord’s work.

The Department of Women is still trying to do its part, meeting every two weeks to study the Book of Mormon.

Four members have been added to the branch, two by baptism and two by letters of transfer.

But with all the good things, we have had our trials. One family of seemingly good workers has been lost through indifference, and two splendid young mothers were taken by death. We are trying to leave it to God, who knows best, and ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers, that we may do our part in this part of the Lord’s vineyard.

From the Hoosier Capital

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.—A former mayor adopted as a slogan for our city the term: “No mean city”; so, like one of our former brethren, a resident of Tarasus, we feel proud of the fact that we are “a citizen of no mean city,” and assure you that Indianapolis is still on the map, and we are striving to keep it there.

Two of our speakers were at the Kirtland reunion, although some were only able to be present on the closing day. Those who attended the greater part of the reunion are enthusiastic in their praise of the benefits derived from their attendance. The writer was privileged to attend the closing day and feels another beautiful experience has been added to his life.

Kirtland has to be seen to be appreciated. The architectural beauty of the temple and the care exercised in the execution of the minutest details of its construction, denote that its builders were deeply in love with their work, that each sensed his responsibility and was inspired with a de­ gire to give the best there was in him. How like the Master of men, and what an inspiration it should be to us who are intrusted with the redemption of Zion to use that same painstaking care to display that same earnestness of purpose, to sense our opportunities and responsibilities, and to so labor in our sphere that we may leave to our posterity as fitting a monument of our love and devotion to the Master and our predecessors who lies left in “The temple on the hill.”

Several of our number motored to Michigan and spent their vacation attending the reunion with the Wolverines.
An enjoyable time is reported.

Brother and Sister Bennett of Martinsville recently met with us in our sacramental service. Sister Powers of Morgantown is a frequent visitor at our services and renders valuable assistance in the Sunday school. Brother and Sister Frandsen of Anderson were present at our last sacramental service, and we enjoyed their presence and association.

Sister Alice Hartje has returned to Graceeland to continue her studies under its beneficent influence.

The vacation season has ended, and we are again getting down to business. The state fair was held in our city September 7 to 12, and our branch decided to run a refreshment stand. The financial result was $251.45 cash, and supplies on hand to the value of $20 which can later be used to further swell our treasury.

But this is not all. A vast amount of valuable experience has been gained, a business and financial standing has been achieved in our city and with the State Board of Agriculture. These are assets which will be of great value to us in the future. But best of all is the knowledge gained of what can be achieved by unity of purpose and cooperation of effort.
Port Huron Branch Has Good Meetings

September 14.—Vacation over, school opening, the Port Huron Branch has settled down for the season’s work ahead. The Department of Women in the city is very busy arranging for its annual rummage sale, the choir is getting under way for some new music, the Temple Builders are planning their work, and the priesthood are getting together under way for some new music, the Temple Builders are every other week for a fifteen-minute prayer service, then starting out for a house to house visit of every member of the church in the city.

Experience has taught us that personal contact gets results. We are trying to keep in close touch with every movement in the city in the interest of the church work. The Department of Recreation and Expression is organizing the various study classes which will give to its membership plenty of opportunity to improve their knowledge in the church laws. The prayer meetings lately have been of a high spiritual order. The keen interest being manifested along this line tends to bring the plane. Work of the Eastern Michigan District shows improvement. The two-day meeting at the Marlette Branch August 29 and 30 was of a high order. The Sunday morning prayer service was especially enjoyable. Elder T. L. Clark sang the following, to the tune of “Admonition”:

Hearken, oh, my covenant people, 'Tis "I Am" that speaks to thee, And your prayers and testimonies Have ascended unto me, In times past, have I not blessed thee With a measure of my grace? And my hand is not now shortened But will guide you safely through. Yea, through trials and temptations By my Spirit, I will be Your salvation, shield, protector, Till the dawn of perfect day. Lift then up your heads, my people, Cling more closely unto me, By the measure of your service I will measure unto thee.

Be ye not disturbed, my people, By the rumors that you hear, Though through darkness some may falter, Multitudes my work will hear. Zion's beauty shines before you, Reclining that you forward go, Will ye heed my loving counsel, And by deeds your purpose show? Swift destruction waits the heedless, Who my work have tried to fraught, Bringing grief by loving Spirit, Heedless of the things I've taught. Why, then, will ye linger longer? I, your Savior, call for thee, Come, oh, come, where peace and pardon Offer joy so full and free.

Following the song, Elder John R. Grice spoke in the gift of tongues and gave the interpretation. Excerpts: “My people hear my voice, and their hearts are rejoiced.” “It is my will that my people put in operation my law.” “My fire shall burn in the hearts of my people, purging out the dross of sin.” “My decree has gone forth to evangelize the world; I have set my hand the second time.” “I commanded you to uphold the hands of him whom I have put at the head of my people, and also him whom I have placed as Presiding Bishop.” No doubt could exist in the minds of those present as to the divinity of these manifestations.

The district is looking forward to the annual conference at Croswell September 26 and 27. Interest being manifested in this gathering and the outlook of other gatherings for the work of the young people, give new zeal to all working for the accomplishment of the work we love best. At the close of the preaching service last night, we united in marriage Brother John Garner of Detroit and Sister Ellen Sheffer, daughter of Elder and Sister W. H. Sheffer, of Cheboygan, Michigan.

M. W. LISTON.

Wiley, Colorado

Now that conference is over and the usual summer vacations and visits have been taken, the attendance at Sunday school is getting back to normal. Last Sunday it was fifty-eight, which gives those who have the responsibility of the work encouragement in pressing on.

Last Wednesday evening a few of the Saints gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. DeLong for a birthday surprise party. The surprise was a complete success, and the birthday presents bestowed gave pleasure both to those who gave and those who received.

The last Sunday in August was the date set for the joint picnic of the Wiley and Utleyville Sunday schools, and the place was on one of the creeks between Lamar and Springfield. A very pretty site was selected by the Utleyville school, and those of the Wileyites who were able came well supplied with ice cream and lemonade. About eighty were present at the picnic, and a fine time was enjoyed by all. Brothers DeLong and Bausell gave excellent short sermons after all had arrived.

After the bountiful dinner, the crowd walked down the creek to a suitable place where the ordinance of baptism was administered to a fine mother and three of her sons, Utleyville people, who will make a worth-while addition to the membership there.

Of course Utleyville won in the attendance contest—such enthusiasm as they are able to keep could not go unwarded, and the Wiley folks were glad to put up the treats for the winners. May the good spirit that is now theirs ever abide with them.

There is a rumor of a two-day meeting at Wiley some time in September, when Brothers Brown and U. W. Greene will be here. Further announcement will be made when more particulars are available.

Preaching services are now being held every Sunday morning at the Wiley church.

Santa Ana

August 23, the first Sunday following the reunion, the Santa Ana Saints revived local services again. Naturally the big question in the pastor’s mind was, How many will now demonstrate that the reunion was to them a spiritual revival, an inspiration to service; and how many will demonstrate that the reunion was to them a sort of spiritual struggle or effort from which they must now relax or take a vacation? The renewing of services seemed to indicate that we had both, but happily the former class are in the majority.

On August 30 we omitted services to make a pilgrimage to Los Angeles. The occasion was the consecration of the new pipe organ, of which the Los Angeles Saints are so justly proud. Most of the Santa Ana church-going Saints were there. The principal events of the day were the services by J. A. Gillen at eleven o’clock; picnic lunch at Exposition Park; Oratorio, “Queen Esther,” at three; and the sermon by T. W. Williams in the evening. The latter we could not remain to hear.

September 1 was Santa Ana night at Watts, where Brothers P. R. Burton and T. W. Williams have been holding forth with the missionary tent. We feel that Santa Ana Saints had demonstrated their missionary spirit when we counted twenty-six from Santa Ana, members and nonmembers of the church. Brother Williams gave an excellent sermon on the first four principles of the gospel.

On Sunday evening, the 6th, the pastor and his family and Sister Taressa Koonce went again to Watts to hear
Gains and Losses at Runnells

RUNNELLS, IOWA.—We have received a young man into the church who has been helping as Religio superintendent for the past six months. He is Ralph Freml, who was baptized during reunion. Nine were baptized during that time, and he is the only one who became a member of our branch. His grandfather was an enemy of the church, also his father, but after investigating the work for over two years he has obeyed the gospel. He was ordered by his father to leave the house in the night, but a reconciliation was effected the following day and he was asked to return. The rest of the family are members of the nonprophetic branch Church of Christ, and he is trying to convince them of the truth.

Sister Charles White is convalescing after having all of her teeth removed.

Faye Heiny will leave Wednesday to attend the State Teachers College at Cedar Falls. The prayers and best wishes of the Saints will follow her.

Lola White, Mabel Tingle, and Winnie Clark are teaching the same schools they had last year and are very successful in their chosen work.

Attendance at branch services was very light during the state fair, and it is hoped that now the event is passed we will enjoy better attendance.

Arthur and Blanche Williams, who were faithful about coming to church, have gone to Dexter to engage in the poultry and produce business. We miss them very much. They have not united with the church but have helped greatly in the branch work. Fred Williams went with them also, which took another prospective member away.

Thus we are dwindling in numbers, but we hope to continue to keep the camp fire burning and make a great contribution to the community life of this place, gathering in the honest in heart and preparing all for Zion.

Earl Ackelson, who was not a member of the church but was friendly to it, was killed in Maytag's factory at Newton, Iowa, August 28. He was grinding aluminum tubes at the factory when the emery wheel broke, striking him in the breast and killing him instantly. Friends bore his body home to his family, who did not know of his death until they arrived. The shock overcame his wife, and it appeared for a time that she would not recover. She is the granddaughter of W. C. Nirk. The funeral was held at Morgan's Funeral Home on August 30, where all who could get in gathered to show their respect to the deceased. Elder Clyde McDonald of Runnells preached the sermon. Many who were there had never heard a Latter Day Saint sermon before, and much interest was manifest in the good attention shown. Besides the widow, he leaves a boy of three and a baby four weeks old.

A Profitable District Priesthood Conference

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

Last Sunday we held our district priesthood conference in Salt Lake City with a good attendance. I feel that it was one of the most profitable services held in the Utah District in my experience. The papers prepared by the brethren were splendid, which proved to me that the men are developing. Discussion was entered into with interest in all the subjects under consideration. We discussed at length the program of the church and our social plan. Am glad to report that the majority of our priesthood in the district are very much interested in this phase of our work. We are trying to establish classes in the different branches to take up the pamphlet prepared by Brother Carmichael and study it. I feel that possibly a greater good will come this way.

Saturday and Sunday we have our second young people's meeting of the district, holding it here in Ogden. There is considerable interest shown in this.

The thirteenth of this month we begin tent services in Malad. We are setting the tent up near the center of the town. We anticipate a good series of services.

Altogether our work in the district is better than it has been for some time. Though there are features that are discouraging, yet I feel like pressing on and helping to establish faith and confidence among our people so that our cause may be more permanently established in the Utah District. The Presidency has a standing invitation to visit the Utah District at any time. Come and we will try to make your visit worth while.

May success attend you is my prayer.

OGDEN, UTAH, September 1.

Fanning and Troy, Kansas

FANNING, KANSAS.—The cooler September days are here, and we look for a bounding upward of attendance at all services. Also there are busy times for the farmers, as the apple crop is being harvested in this locality. Many strangers are being housed in and around Troy, which is an apple center. Many loads are being hauled daily, to be shipped out, while many crews of pickers and packers are busily engaged in the orchards.

The Marsh brothers, of Bern, Kansas, have purchased houses here and will move next spring. We welcome them in our midst.

The branch president is preparing to have special services for the young people next Sunday morning, and the chorister is arranging to have a junior choir furnish the music.

Sister Vera Twombly has gone to resume her studies at the State University at Lawrence. Brother Samuel Twombly and his wife went to Netawaka, Kansas, last week, where he preached the funeral sermon for the infant grandchild of John and Maggie Green of that place.

We speak for those with whom we have conversed, that the writings of our editor in chief are very much enjoyed, and we hope to see them continued.

We are doing some special work in endeavoring to get the church publications in the homes of the Saints.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Council Bluffs, Iowa

September 22.—Council Bluffs Branch is progressing as usual, but with renewed interest since the district reunion held in this city in August. The Wednesday evening prayer meetings have been especially good since then; everyone seems determined to make them better by doing his part, and the result is more spirituality among those who attend.

We have been fortunate, too, in having several good speakers. Brother Rushton spoke for the Central Branch on Sunday evening, August 29, and gave us a splendid sermon. President Elbert A. Smith spent all day Sunday, September 13, with Council Bluffs Saints, speaking both morning and evening to a full house, and to the members of the priesthood in the afternoon. His sermons were uplifting, and the good resulting from his visit cannot be told. On Sunday, September 20, Apostle James A. Gillen was with us and preached twice for us in his characteristic and forceful way.

Now that vacations and reunions are over, our Sunday school attendance is picking up, and earnest efforts are being put forth to make the school better in every way for the fall and winter. Two classes for the special study of stewardship have been organized, and a great deal of interest is shown. Teachers and officers' meeting was held recently, preceded by a luncheon. Attendance was good, and all seemed to be enthused with the work before them. Promotion day exercises are to be held the first Sunday in October, at which time about forty will be promoted in the different departments. The average enrollment of our school for the first six months of the year was 298, with average attendance of 201. One of the greatest drawbacks to the success of our school is the lack of parents. We are hoping for better days along this line. In the meantime the superintendents say they will crowd the walls to the utmost.

The Religious or Department of Recreation and Expression, is moving forward in a pleasing way since reunion. Brother C. A. Skinner is again in charge, and, together with his committee, has provided some very interesting programs. One Sunday evening we were entertained by four prominent musicians of the city in violin, piano, and vocal solos and duets. Another evening a group of songs was given by Brother James Dempsey and illustrated with chalk by Brother Skinner. There are other good programs planned for the future. Programs are not the only interesting feature of our Religious, however, as several of the classes have decided to study stems manifested, while the Coward Branch is now planned by the Coward Branch. Saints are anxious to prepare for the establishment of Zion.

The Department of Women is meeting regularly and held its last monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. F. C. Fulberg. All business matters were transacted, and plans for the annual bazaar to be held in November were made. During the social hour that followed the business period, Mrs. Fulberg sang, Mrs. Rudd gave a short talk, Mrs. Heide gave a piano solo, and Mrs. Currie, the president of the department, gave a short talk. Refreshments were served to about forty-five guests.

The Department of Music is also moving forward with renewed interest, now that the fall months have arrived. Beginning with the month of October, the department will broadcast from the new radio studio, K O I L, the Monomotor Oil Radio Station at Council Bluffs. The date set for this program is October 2, and the studio broadcasts on 273 meters, 500 watts. Again on the 6th of November and again on the 21st of December the Department of Music will broadcast a program over this new radio station. This last date being during the Christmas week, will be under the direction of Brother W. T. Spanswick, director of the Central Church Choir.

Beginning with the month of November a series of programs will be given at the Central Church, the first one being a joint recital by Miss Cleo Faye, pianist, and Miss Marie Salisbury, violinist. Both of these young ladies are instructors in their respective lines.

The choir at Central Church is turning out for practice on Thursday evenings in good shape, and the results are shown at the Sunday services. This is one of the best choirs in the city, and many compliments are given to its work by out-of-town people who visit us from time to time, as well as from our own people.

The L. D. S. Orchestra of Central Church is doing well, and we expect very soon to hear a program given by them. We have a very capable leader in Brother Jean Turpin.

The young people of to-day are the grown-ups of to-morrow and must be taken care of, and the music department intends to do its part in giving them something to do in the church and its work so that they will not care to go elsewhere; and as we do these things in an unselfish manner, God being with us, we will succeed.

Pleasantview Branch

TRIVON, NEBRASKA, September 14.—The work in this branch is progressing slowly but surely. Preaching is held every other Sunday, and the first Sunday in the month is set aside for sacramental service and prayer meeting.

Last Sunday Elder J. F. Payne delivered a very fine sermon, using for his text, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way." He talked mostly on the duties of officers and members, and his instruction was appreciated by all.

The Sunday school meeting held August 29 was well attended. A program was given, and the young people took an active part in the entertainment. The older ones also acted on the program to entertain the young.

The need of suitable entertainment to meet the needs of the young is keenly felt here. They need something entertaining as well as educational and uplifting, and they should not be left to seek entertainment for themselves in the world.

Our Sunday school is a help to the church, and we are grateful to God for the workers that furnish such good lessons, and to those who work hard to make them meet our needs. The pupils of the junior grade here are a live group and like the lessons fine.

The Sunday school will have a program and some other entertainment once in a while. It is a help in many ways and takes a heavy burden from the branch by supplying the need of proper entertainment.

Prophecy and Tongues Bring Comfort

MARION, MICHIGAN, September 14.—The Saints here have had some discouraging times, but more have been encouraging. At times I have been tried until I did not know which way to turn, but God has come to my rescue.

Sunday morning we had prayer meeting after Sunday school. I had asked the Saints to remember me, as I have a goitre that has been bothering me lately. I had been administered to, and had taken medical treatment, and it seemed as though something had to be done. During the meeting a brother arose and spoke in prophecy, telling us that the Lord was pleased with our prayers and desires were one. He told us not to worry over the trouble in the church, for he had placed those in charge who could care for it. After the brother sat down a verse of "Redeemer of Israel" was sung, then he arose again, coming over to where I sat. He spoke in tongues, after which the interpretation was given, telling me to be of good cheer, that the Lord knew of my condition and was watching over me. I was told that if I underwent an operation, He would guide the hand of the physician, so that I need not fear.

It is wonderful to be in a church or organization where God will speak his will to us. I hope to live so that I will not grieve Him who is so good to us.

The Coward Branch is small, we are trying to live in unity. We can gratefully say that all pray for our President, that he may be led aright. We are weak, but are trying to overcome so we can be worthy of God's Spirit.

Santa Barbara Expecta Church House and Branch

We all being interested in the great work of Christ, Santa Barbara desires to take advantage of this opportunity and pass along some notes on what this group has been doing and expects to do in presenting the restored gospel to the people of this city.

Our Brother G. H. Wixon wrote for these columns and remarked upon the rather severe earthquake he had experienced while in this city, and now that two months and more have passed we can see more clearly and know the real effect the concussion had upon the city and add some observations on it, also the prospects for growth of a church here.

For the benefit of those who have never visited this city, it may be well to pause a moment in delineation. Santa Barbara is a unique city. To fully describe it would take several pages, so suffice it to say, we have a city permanent in character, carrying a population of thirty-thousand, supported in part by outlying agricultural districts, by retired persons of wealth, and by tourists. We claim no beach town popularity, but remark upon the moral cleanliness and orderliness that usually distinguishes a town where there is that lack of lower class amusements and recreational gatherings.

The city lies nestled in a small valley, one end terminating at the sea. It spreads over the entire valley and part of the surrounding hills, enjoying that natural tranquility afforded by its snug position between the mountains on three sides and the deep blue channel on the other, having no factories or noisy industrial activities to mar that restful impression: at peace with itself and the world.

It was founded by the Spanish, most of the streets retaining their original Spanish names. The buildings of recent design and construction distinctly reveal the Spanish influence upon architecture. Not only is this true of dwellings, but of business houses. The old mission adds to the atmosphere, and on the whole the Spanish Bararians proudly boast of the beauty of their city with its flower gardens, the hint of Spanish origin in building designs, one section of business properties being so elaborate as to give the impression to one of really being in old Spain; the moderate climate, and the picturesque setting that causes much enthusiasm among many visitors who view the delightful panorama from the scenic drives along the hillsides.

Summer was here. Spirits were high, and to awake on the morning of June 29 to find the cherished city they so proudly held as the best efforts of their labor and ingenuity lying scattered at their feet! Shapeless piles of debris where once stood the thing of beauty! Would it not rend their hearts and almost bring suffering to the very soul of a population that loves to delight in the beauty of a city rather than hold just a pecuniary interest as an incentive? Probably it did at first, but the outcome was as a stimulus to optimism, an optimism that remains paramount in the minds of all. Not only is rehabilitation actively under way, but the slogan, “A bigger and better Santa Barbara,” has been adopted, all proof of the determination to emerge from the ruins to a more beautiful and grand city than before. No laxity is manifest, but a spirit for achievement and progress.

So the city stands—ready—presenting the opportunity to establish a branch of Christ’s true church within its limits, to arise simultaneously with the city. And, too, it may be noted that this is the first endeavor of our people to build in this place.

Eighteen months ago a Sunday school was organized. We met in the homes of the Saints, at the parks, and finally rented a hall. We served as stewards of meetings and to hold us together but was not well adapted as a place of growth. Also we were handicapped by the lack of local leadership; but this period of slow progress served to strengthen us and prepare us to put forth greater efforts as opportunity presented itself. That opportunity has come. Our program is worked out; interest is high; and we are going on with that determination of success; the success that we all feel assured will come. We have prayed, we have hoped, and have looked forward to the time that Christ’s church could be truly represented in Santa Barbara, and now with glad hearts we feel a vision from past days about to materialize; our dreams transformed into reality.

From past experiences here we know that this city contains many gospel-hungry souls, people seeking light and truth, people starving for the true message of Christ and his gospel of love. The field is rich for missionary work. We as just a group cannot handle the situation, and it needs be that we receive help. In this we have been unusually fortunate, having allowed the missionary tent. It is to come here very soon with Brothers G. H. Wixon and P. R. Burton as speakers. They will have numerous charts to speak from. A stereopticon machine with many interesting slides will be used. The people are to hear something along gospel lines that they have never heard before. Do you wonder our hopes are high?

The next feature on our program is a building. The hall spoken of earlier in this letter was not very suitable. It was a small building in a poor location, but that does not worry us now because of the fact the earthquake wrecked it for us. Buildings are at a premium now, and it would be rather difficult to secure a place suitable to invite interested persons into.

Our group met in business capacity to consider this need and, as a result, voted to build something more in harmony with our hopes of progress, something to follow up the tent meetings. For our individual need we might get along well enough, but the work urgently requires that we build. It is a missionary work we are called to do. We must not fail.

The particular location of the building-to-be is in a newer portion of the city, and no church is as yet in this section. It is conveniently located and accessible from all parts of the city. Again we have reason to feel grateful for the opportunity and advantages. In regard to the church building itself, committees have been appointed and are in operation. Members of this group have pledged the first full day’s pay of each month to be placed with the building fund. The business houses and the banks of the city are to be canvassed, not taking the nature of a begging campaign, but, on the contrary, it is quite in taste in Santa Barbara now, after the recent disaster.

Optimism and enthusiasm are contagious, and we are trying to pass the germs along to all whom we may expose to their effects.

The Southern District of California has seen and indorsed our needs by a liberal contribution to the fund, and we acknowledge hearty gratitude for their action. Apostle Gillen has been with us and knows of our need. Bishop Blair, N. T. Chapman (our district president), and others who have come to a knowledge of our efforts have highly favored this program. We are promised a regular branch organization. Leadership is expected to come here soon, leadership capable of caring for our needs after the tent is gone. The work is destined to rise. We must have a church, and do you think we would slight anyone or deprive them of an opportunity to assist in this work here? Most certainly not; but we issue an open call for help to membership individually, and any contribution, no matter how large or small, will be most kindly received, that we may go on with our program and Santa Barbara may add members to the church and be strong enough to be an asset in times of need.

And please do not feel we are interested alone in letters of monetary worth, but will be glad to hear from Saints at any time or answer questions for those further interested in the work, our group, or city.

Before closing we wish to add that the paths of the Saints here have not always been rosy. Contention has been in the past. The influence of opposition is even felt in our group to-day, but we know a wonderful work can be carried on here, and being true, Satan earnestly desires to overthrow us in our infancy, but it cannot be accomplished when Christ is on been our privilege to enjoy, and remember the strength that come to us in those times of need; so we continue praying for the work, not only here but wherever it may be to the end that Zion may be redeemed and Christ come triumphantly to his Saints.

Houston, Texas

September 22.—The three-week series of meetings conducted by District President S. S. Smith closed Sunday, September 20. The attendance was very gratifying, considering the inconvenient location of our church. The latter part of the meetings were held on the lawn. Five children were blessed, and Brother and Sister Oliver’s little daughter, Cecelia, was baptized.

A business meeting was held September 21, with Brother Smith presiding. Brother W. H. Mannerwing, who came here recently from San Antonio, was elected branch president.

The branch has been divided into three groups, each to meet once a week for observation and study. The study course this year will be stewarships.

A committee of six has been appointed to solicit funds for the Graceland endowment. Those serving on this committee will work in pairs, and the work is being arranged in the nature of a contest, each team endeavoring to raise the largest sum. Much interest has been expressed.

On Labor Day about half the branch motored out to Clear Lake where they had a picnic dinner. Later went on to Kemah, where a glorious afternoon was spent bathing. Supper was spread on the beach at sunset, thus ending a perfect day.

Brother and Sister A. J. Banta and three small sons have returned from Lamoni, where they visited relatives and friends.

We are much interested in “Little journeys with the editor” and hope they will continue to appear in the HERALD.

MARY E. WILKINSON.

Spearfish, South Dakota

September 21.—Although our numbers are small, we are happy to report that we are still holding regular meetings, and whatever it is—Sunday school or church service—we enjoy the association of the Saints and the study of the sacred word, for we all wish to grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth.

Several families of Saints who were touring the Black Hills visited us this summer. We are always glad to welcome such at our little church. Among our visitors were Brother and Sister Faunce and their two boys, of Nebraska City, Nebraska. Sister Faunce is a daughter of the late Elder Mark H. Forseut, and upon the invitation of our branch president she gave a very interesting talk on church affairs around headquarters. One of the boys, who is a student at Graceland, was also prevailed upon to talk about the activities at Graceland. These things are very interesting and instructive to us out here in the Black Hills, for we are intensely interested in what pertains to the church. We will be glad to welcome these good people again.

We were made sad to hear of the passing away of good old Brother C. W. Prettyman. He was a father to the Saints here at Spearfish, and we loved him very much.

After Sunday school three weeks ago, the Saints went in cars to Sturgis and met Brother and Sister Dickey and family and other Saints. There was a picnic and a good old Latter Day Saint solemn time, with church affairs the subject of discussion.

The waters of Spearfish Creek have again been troubled this summer, the first occasion being the baptism of the young son of the late Elder Hyrum Mahoney, of Alva, Wyoming. Sister Mahoney came from Casper, Wyoming, to have this boy brought into the church. The second time the young son of Mr. and Sister John Mahoney, of Alva, Wyoming, was baptized. They attended services at the church, after which we repaired to the water’s edge, and another soul was born into the kingdom. Brother Cohrt, our elder, officiated at both these ceremonies.

After the day’s services were over, and upon the invitation of the Mahoneys, Brother Cohrt went with them to their home, and in the three weeks of his stay preached eleven sermons. He was rewarded for his labors by leading Sister Mahoney’s husband into the waters of baptism, and thus another family was united in the church.

Alva is forty-five miles from Spearfish and is Brother J. M. Stubbart’s old stamping ground. Brother Cohrt reports that there are others there interested who will probably come into the church later. All of us are anticipating going out there in a week or two to hold all-day services. There are three families of Saints in that neighborhood. We may have some things to contend with that are discouraging at times, but these experiences bring joy to the soul and encourage us to press on in the fight. We ever pray for the success of the church and the redemption of Zion.

Where Do You Stand?

By Joseph R. Lambert

I stand right where I have always stood since April, 1920. Read this short communication, then you will know. Please read it carefully and prayerfully, for it was given through a clear revelation of God’s Holy Spirit. IT IS DIVINE. I am not in accord with the late General Conference action on church government, but I do believe it is my duty, and yours, to remain in the church and help to establish the kingdom of God among men, so that we may be the means of bringing salvation to those within, and taking the precious boon to those without.

If the time shall ever come for us to make war on the church of God (and I pray God it may never come), clearly, that time is not now. Why? Because it is not necessary, unwise, unjust, and premature, in case it should ever become necessary.

A Testimony by a Prominent Patriarch

At, or soon after the close of the late General Conference, while my wife and I were yet in the Sanitarium, I had recovered sufficiently to take little walks away from the building, and while on one of these walks I fell into deep meditation on the present situation in the church.

What led up to this meditation, was the fact that many of our old friends from different parts of the country, brothers and sisters in the church, kindly called on us, and gave us very glowing accounts of the conference proceedings, affirming that they never attended a conference which equaled this one in the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, unity of action, liberality of the brethren, etc. This kind of report was almost unanimous.

In my meditations my thoughts ran thus: Admitting that the conference was a good and important one, which I was neither prepared nor inclined to dispute, it is possible, if not probable, that the division which has been so apparent to many, will continue for a time, at least; and if so, how can the church do the work which seems now to be demanded at her hands? I believed then, as I do now, that the hastening time is right at our doors. I was strongly wrought upon with the gravity and importance of the present situation, and said in the energies of my soul, “Lord, what can we do?” meaning the church.

At once I felt stirred with the gentle, potent influences of the Holy Spirit, and this is the substance of what was given:

“Stand by the work which you have received—the restored gospel and church—and sustain the First Presidency in the high and important duties of their calling. Oppose that which you conceive to be wrong, and dangerous to the interests of the work, in kindness and at proper times and places, and with all the wisdom you can secure; and I will do the rest."

All this was just as plain as if it had been spoken in an audible voice, and the last statement, which I have taken the liberty to emphasize, came with peculiar force, making the strongest impression on my mind.

Now, so far as I am concerned, a great weight has been lifted from my mind. More than ever do I believe that God is still at the helm, and he will, if we permit him, bring the old ship through all the storms that may seek her destruction, in safety, without the loss of one soul. There is nothing extraordinary, or new, about this communication; but under existing conditions, and having been given, as I believe, by the Spirit of truth, which is the Holy Ghost, it will, I trust, emphasize, and make still clearer to us, that this is the way, and the only way out, without undue loss. Who is to be humiliated in the final decision, is not stated; but can we not well afford to be humiliated if the work has been properly cared for, or humiliated and corrected if we have made an important mistake? Let God be true, however much it may reflect upon us.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, November 9, 1920.

Interesting Occurrences in Life of a Minister for Christ

I read with interest in the HERALD for August 19 the account of the passing away of Elder William Spargo, who was my bosom friend when we labored together about thirty years ago. We both lived in Farnworth at that time and were appointed by the Manchester district conference at a little town called Tinsley Bands to labor together. Those were happy times that will never be forgotten.

We made it a point to speak on the market place on Sunday evenings. When the other churches were dismissing about eight o'clock we would start singing and would soon have a crowd.

Brother Spargo was one of the most calm and gentle men I ever labored with. It was at Wigan that I preached the last Sunday I was ever to preach in the States before leaving for Canada. I always made my home at Brother Spargo's. He would always grasp me by the hand and bid me welcome, and when he took your hand you felt that his heart was yours too.

I recall a little incident that came between us. He thought I had done him an injustice, but he did not do as I have seen many do. He came to me like a brother, and we soon made things right. If we could only get the Saints to do as Brother Spargo did, we would have better conditions in the church.

Some years ago while in Farnworth, Brother Spargo was in the open market place. While walking around and looking at the various stands he said an old gentleman who was near increased came to him. His hair and beard were white as snow. He shook hands and said, "How are you, Brother Spargo?"

"I am very well," he replied, "but you have the advantage of me."

"Yes, I know you, but you do not know me," said the old man. "Continue faithful, Brother Spargo, and you will have strength.

Never once did Brother Spargo think to ask him his name or where he came from or where he was going, or what was his business. He only said, "Brother, let us go and meet Brother Hassell, the herb doctor." They shook hands with Brother Hassell, but the old man did not say the things to Brother Hassell that he had to Brother Spargo. They stood there about a minute, and Brother Spargo turned his head to see if he could see any of the Saints to whom he wished to introduce him, and the old man disappeared. No one saw him ago. Brother Spargo stayed about the market and looked all over but never saw the old man again. But while in deep meditation the Spirit rested upon him, revealing to him that it was the angelic messenger, John the Revelator. Brother Spargo said his countenance was beautiful to look upon and expressed the wish that he might see him again.

Brother Spargo was a kind of the Methodist Church and is the mother of the late Sister Spargo, but she has her deepest sympathy in her hour of needment, and her faith is unshaken.

Brother Spargo was not a great orator, but he was a wonderful preacher, not so much in word as in deed, for he demonstrated in his life the gospel of Christ. He was always congenial and always had a pleasant smile and a cheering word for his associates.

He has left behind him a record that is worthy of imitation. He was a lover of all that is noble, pure, and good, and as the Master said to his apostles, his works will remain to be a stimulant to all who knew him. May God bless his wife and sons and daughters, that they may continue the work he so nobly laid down, that they too may be numbered among the redeemed.

THOMAS MILLS.

MOUNDSVILLE, WEST VIRGINIA, August 31.

Woman of Seventy-four Years Baptized

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA, September 11.—The church work is moving along about as usual. Sometimes there is a gain in numbers and sometimes a loss.

We are very much pleased with the tone of the HERALD of late. The instruction given and the splendid reports coming in from the reunions in different fields are very encouraging indeed. It is truly gratifying to see the "mists of darkness" arising and the Saints getting a clearer vision, which causes them to rejoice and go forward with renewed hope as the clouds begin to part and they catch a glimpse of the silver lining beyond.

The experiences of our beloved President as he travels from place to place among the Saints are enjoyable to read and cause us to rejoice in the Spirit. We would say, Keep up the work, Brother Smith. Let it go on until every member of the church has had a chance to look into your face and hear your voice.

Sunday, August 30, was an enjoyable day for the Saints here. The Spirit of the Master was present in all the meetings, beginning with Sunday school and continuing to the close of Religio at night. At the beginning of the eleven o'clock service the babe of Brother and Sister Schall was blessed by Elders C. W. Hawkins and C. J. Cady. Brother Schall is a student at Stanford University and is preparing for future work in the church. His wife is at present a member of the Methodist Church.

At the close of the morning service a woman seventy-four years of age was baptized. She was formerly a member of the Methodist Church and is the mother of the Sister Spitzer who was recently baptized. Elder C. W. Hawkins officiated at this baptism.

On last Sunday the hearts of the Saints were made sad by the sudden death of Brother William Spitzer, who fell dead in the streets of San Francisco while on his way to work. He was a tower man, in the employ of the S. P. R. R. Company. The funeral took place from the Saints' church on Thursday afternoon, September 13. C. W. Hawkins officiated, assisted by the pastor, B. R. Gilbert. Interment in Oak Hill Cemetery in San Jose.
Independence

Independence visitors during the past week were: Miss Blanche Edwards, Elders Winegar, Shaefer, and Hubert Case; the mother, C. J. Hunt; Bishop M. G. Fisher of Boston, and Bishop Dent of Bothwell, Ontario. Elder E. Y. Hunker, missionary to Norway, also arrived in Independence Monday.

The Sunday school went over the 1,200 mark in attendance with eleven perfect classes and $30.22 collection. It was promotion day, and a number of the pupils were promoted.

Elder W. A. Smith was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and he said he had been requested to preach an old-fashioned gospel sermon, which he did.

At half past two there were about three hundred members of the priesthood present to listen to an address by President F. M. Smith. In his introductory remarks President Smith said the reason the church has not made greater progress towards its ideals is that the ministry have been studying apart instead of studying together. An individualistic spirit has been developed instead of a cooperative spirit. He hoped this was the beginning of a cooperative movement in studying the word of the Lord. These addresses to the priesthood will continue during the week. Wednesday evening the meeting will be open to the membership also, and Brother A. Carmichael will deliver the address. Next Sunday at half past two the conference will begin with a round table discussion.

Sunday evening President F. M. McDowell was the speaker, using as his subject, "The gospel motive," and choosing as his text, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God." He brought in the motives of men; our social esteem, pleasure, creature comforts, gratification of passion, wealth, and power. The most worthy motives of men being the desire to know and the desire to make. One is the motive of science; the other the motive of inventors. These two motives have revolutionized our environment, they have given us knowledge and power sufficient to annihilate the human race if misused. The only hope of civilization is the proper use of this knowledge and power. The gospel motive guarantees proper use of this power. It says what we have and are and hope to be must be spent in the building of God's kingdom. That is stewardship; that is the motive of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

A good attendance at all of the services was made possible by the beautiful weather.

Next Sunday the Relief will begin its service at a quarter of six, changing from Friday evening.

The Harvest Home Festival will be held on the Campus October 8, 9, and 11. Offerings of seeds, flowers, fruit, vegetables, etc, will be turned over to the bishop for distribution to the people.

The eight o'clock prayer service Sunday, September 27, was held in the Stone Church basement, where both old and young met in the monthly union service in charge of Elder D. O. Cato. The first part of the meeting was given over to a very spiritual season of prayer, after which both old and young entered actively into the testimony service. A quiet, peaceful spirit pervaded the whole service.

The Joint Council has been holding two sessions daily during the past week.

The Department of Women will hold their regular monthly open meeting Friday, October 2, in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. The principal speaker for the afternoon will be President F. M. McDowell. Special musical numbers will be given. Preceding this meeting, at half past one, there will be a business meeting of the Frances Willard Union of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. All members are urged to be present.

A business change which should be of interest is the purchase by Brothers B. O. and Walter Chapman of the Good Luck Cereal Milling Company's business from Brother C. A. Garwell. The purchasers have formed an ambitious development of the business and are starting to execute it. Pure and proper cereal foods prepared by our own people have a strong attraction.

Second Church

On Wednesday afternoon the pastor was called upon to baptize Vernon H. Jordan in the newly arranged font. The next afternoon Brother Jordan and Sister Nancy V. Boyd were united in marriage at the home of Sister Boyd's brother, Orville, on West South Avenue, by Brother Lambert. The young couple went into their new home in Pendergrass, Missouri, which was in readiness for them. Brother Jordan is a telegraph operator for the Santa Fe, stationed at Sibley.

Sunday morning's prayer service was presided over by Heman H. Davies, and the service at eleven o'clock was directed by A. K. Dillee, the pastor being absent again. Bishop Charles J. Hunt was the morning speaker, and Bishop Charles Fry spoke in the evening.

There are no prayer meetings in the groups this week, because of the open meeting at the Stone Church Wednesday evening, when Bishop Albert Carmichael opens his series of three special lectures, the others to be given Thursday and Friday evenings.

Sister E. E. Weir and others are busy among the women arranging for a contribution to the October festival and a donation of decorating material for the same purpose. The Saints are giving canned fruits in their new home in Pendergrass, Missouri, which was in readiness for them. Brother Jordan is a telegraph operator for the Santa Fe, stationed at Sibley.

Good words keep coming from Elder and Sister Frank Veenstra, our missionaries at work in Holland. Several, at least nine, have already been baptized, and much pleasant and profitable work is being done by them. They are enjoying good health.

Liberty Street

The prayer service last Sunday afternoon, and the one on October 4, was called off to allow the priesthood to attend the lectures at the Stone Church being given for the priesthood by President F. M. Smith and Bishop A. Carmichael.

Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker both morning and evening. In the morning he took for his subject, "That ye love one another as I have loved you," and in the evening he used John 4: 34 to 36 for his theme: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together."

Patriarch Ammon White will be the speaker next Sunday evening.

Miss Nellie Sampson addressed the Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders Sunday afternoon at the church on the need of beautiful homes in Zion. A large number of mothers and older sisters were in attendance.

Walnut Park

Brother Hubert Case's sermon at eleven o'clock on "The power of the clean life" was enjoyed by a good-sized audience.

In the evening Bishop A. Carmichael spoke, endeavoring to convince his hearers that Zion cannot be redeemed until the Saints come up to a higher level, making all of their work religious work, living as Enoch's people lived, learning to think as God thinks and doing as God does.

Brother Gland Smith preached in Group 41's church at eleven o'clock.

Brother Robert Oliver's class from Enoch Hill gave a good program at Walnut Park Relief September 25. They deserved a larger audience, since they themselves were willing to come out through the rain to keep their appointment.

Enoch Hill

Enoch Hill had two good sermons Sunday, one from Apostle D. T. Williams at eleven and from Bishop J. A. Koehler at seven.

The choir, which has been disbanded during the summer, will meet next Thursday evening, October 1, for a business meeting and for practice.

A special business meeting of the district was called Monday night, the matter of the local church debt being presented. Nineteen hundred dollars has been collected since last business meeting, leaving twelve hundred dollars to raise. In the evening, Brother J. W. Gower, the church member, paid five cents a day toward liquidating the debt, but at this meeting it was decided that each member save all he can every day or week and turn over to the deacon, so that on each Sunday the thermometer can be raised to show the entire offering. The ambition of the whole membership present is to get the debt entirely paid before the end of 1925, the speakers all urging that a genuine sacrifice be made on the part of each one during the balance of the year.

A committee will be named next Sunday to cooperate with the general committee in raising the required quota for the Graceland endowment.

East Independence

Sunday morning the young people met at a quarter of nine for prayer service. There were twenty present, and a good spirit prevailed.

At eleven o'clock a temperance program was given by the Sunday school, instead of the regular preaching service. Each of the classes took part, even the little tots doing their share. An interesting talk was given by Brother Frank Minton on the text, "Temperance in all things," showing that we should not do those things that would lessen our power to do the things God would have us do.

Brother J. J. Teeter gave some statistics in regard to the use of cigarettes. Boys, how much easier it will be not to form that habit than it will be to try to break it after it is once formed. We trust the lessons of the morning hour will be of use to each one and will bring results.

In the evening, Elder H. C. Snively occupied the pulpit. His sermon was elevating and inspiring and certainly should have encouraged each one to do his part in helping to carry out the program of the church. Such sermons as these make us feel that no difference what hindrances the Adversary places in the way, we will go forward with God’s help, and overcome.

This remark was made by one after the evening sermon, “I have had so many good sermons of late that we ought to be good.” If our everyday thoughts and actions are not better, those sermons, so far as we are individually concerned, are of no worth.

A birthday surprise party was held at the home of Brother Alonzo Minton Saturday evening. He was indeed surprised, and all had a good time.

Englewood

Work was started on the new church Sunday morning, September 28. These Saints expect to finish the basement and have it ready for occupancy before cold weather, as it is impossible to meet in the old building another winter.

Apostle M. A. McConley spoke Sunday morning, and Elder L. W. Fike occupied in the evening.

The women will have their first meeting next Thursday afternoon, October 1, at two o’clock, at which time they will plan their winter activities. Mrs. W. L. Cowan will be present.

Tulare, California

September 15.—There is quite a good attendance at church considering our number, as many have moved away.

H. C. Snively and family have moved to Nauvoo, and last Friday evening a farewell party was held for T. J. Smith, er., and family, and O. L. Beat and family, as they are leaving for Oklahoma. After a sociable evening, refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. During the evening, Elder J. D. White arrived, which was quite a surprise to all.

Sunday morning Elder J. F. Wiles was the speaker, assisted by Elder W. A. Brooner. Brother Wiles has only lately returned from Nevada.

Kansas City Stake

Sunday, September 20, was as wonderful a day as Central Church has ever experienced. It was the first day in the new church home at Thirtieth and Tracy Streets. The sun played hide and seek all morning, the obscuring clouds permitting some sunshine to come through the atmosphere, but was displaced by bright sunshine about noon and so continued through the day, winding up with a real chill air. Notwithstanding the weather, however, there were capacity crowds at all services.

The services were opened with Sunday school at half past nine. The classes met en masse, and a biblical story was dramatized. Five hundred and thirty people were present for this service, and about eight hundred for the eleven o’clock service, at which President Elbert A. Smith was the speaker. He used as a basis for his sermon part of Matthew 22, emphasizing verses 36 and 40. He said that the one questioning Jesus was not seeking the truth but was laying a trap for him, but by making a simple defense Christ did not get into the trap laid for him. Jesus was the law-giver. The Pilgrim Fathers adopted the “Pilgrim’s Compact,” which began in the name of God; Amen. In their beginning they got close to Jesus Christ and the two great commandments—the love of God and love of their fellows. We are lost in a maze of laws, national, state, and city. The Saints should find out the underlying principles of law and the ten commandments—God’s laws, and try to live above them. Man has always been in search of God; God has always sought to direct the human. The underlying principle of the whole matter is love. The policy of the church is to bring together a people who love each other. The only way that love can manifest itself is by service. On behalf of the general church he congratulated the Central folks on the splendid church home they have acquired.

At the close of the service, a baptismal service was held, a family of three obeying the rite. Pastor J. A. Tanner officiated. The font is located just back of the baptismal bowl used by the Episcopalians, the former owners. Comment was made contrasting the God-given method, immersion and the man-made way, sprinkling. The choir, under the direction of Brother Eugene Christy, pleasingly rendered the anthem, “Praise the Lord, oh Jerusalem,” at the opening of the service.

The afternoon service was at half past two, at which Bishop F. B. Blair and A. H. Siegfried were the speakers. After Brother Blair had made some comment on the success of the stake in building eight churches in the past eight years, Brother Siegfried said that the great job is to make the services in this church as God would have them—make this church what it ought to be, a church of service. We cannot have anything without Christianity. No man has the right to think that wealth will save him. Trouble is, the world is not financial but moral. A wide field exists for social workers. The field of God is greater than all, hence there is no hesitancy in talking stewardships. Stewardships put life and vigor into men.

In the evening President F. M. Smith delivered a very inspiring sermon on “The place of the church in the community.” Brother Smith remarked that on this ground the Saints built their first schoolhouse in Kansas City, the Saints having owned this same property in 1832 to 1880. President Smith suggested that it was just as impossible for a church to live alone as for an individual. Its place in the community is the spiritual home of the people. They should not look for spiritual sustenance from the world. It is the expression of vitality. Religion is teaching by example. We must reflect the presence of God. The children of the church must stand for ethics—for God. His place must be ever in the mind. To keep God in mind we must pray. Where touch is established with God, there is a home where God dwells.

Meetings were held all last week, and President E. W. Edwards being the speaker the first three evenings, and Apostle D. T. Williams the remainder of the week, closing Sunday, the 27th. The Central members are expecting to be very happy in their new home and hope to derive much spiritual.

Radio Flashes

Kansas City, Missouri.—My mother and I enjoyed your programs at 6:30 p. m. and 9:15 p. m. yesterday, very, very much, and they came in very clear on loud speaker. We thought Elder Miller's sermonet on "The Father's business" the most beautiful Bible story we ever heard, and I would appreciate it very much if you would advise me where I can get it, if it is in printed form. I assist in Sunday school work and think that would be a beautiful and helpful story for children. Best wishes for your station and your fine programs, which we enjoy so much.—Mrs. G. M. Stoneham, 3925 Genesee.

(Note: Brother Miller's sermonet, mentioned above, will be printed in an early issue of the Zion's Ensign.)

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—I get you consistently now; have heard you regularly lately, and in many cases through the entire program without serious interference.—Fred W. Dreyer, 863 Mineral Street.

Bend, Michigan.—Heard K L D S for the first time Sunday evening (August 30). Got it Tuesday and Thursday also. Came in fine Thursday evening. When you get ready to increase power, let me know. I will do my part.—D. E. Widrig.

Savonburg, Kansas.—I listened in to K L D S last Sunday morning, as I have at various times, but never have acknowledged to you how I have enjoyed your services. . . . I am not a member of the Reorganized Church, I belong to the Christian Church. Yet I can enjoy and recognize good things in other denominations, and I want to thank you for broadcasting such splendid services.—Ira J. Barsby.

Lamoni, Iowa.—Your vesper service Sunday evening of September 6 was great. The first four numbers by the quartet appealed to me. They are the songs we L. D. S. should spread around the earth. You came in clearer and with more volume than any other station I receive this time of the year. Let the good work go on.—Joseph Shakespeare.

Kingston, Ontario.—I listened to your program last night and enjoyed the playing of the trio. You came in very clearly and with good volume.—W. J. Marshell, 181 Chatham.

Yale, Oklahoma.—I was very much pleased to hear your station recently and enjoyed the program. Quality was good except for some local interference. I especially enjoyed several numbers, and if you would send the detailed program I could obtain the music for several of them.—L. W. Scherer.

Leona, Kansas.—Words can hardly express our appreciation of the real music and the equally fine talent producing it. Stations like yours make radio worth while.—J. M. McCormick.

What People Are Saying About the Graceland College Endowment

Reports are beginning to come in regarding the progress of organization in various branches and districts in the world, and almost without exception reports indicate splendid enthusiasm, personal interest, and cooperation in organization.

Here is a letter from Amos T. Higdon in the Spring River District:

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: Working with Brother Freeman of Webb City we recently met and, in organizing our district committee, added Brother Charles Wilson as a third member. At this time we drafted a letter that we sent out to each branch president, informing him of the plan of organization of the campaign. In a letter I received to-day, I note that the quota for this district is $4,000. I have the utmost confidence that we will raise that amount. Of course it will take work, but we have those in this district who are certainly willing workers. Praying the blessing of the Master may be with you in this work, I am

Very sincerely yours,

AMOS T. HIGDON.

A letter from Matthew W. Liston in the Eastern Michigan District:

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: About the Graceland Endowment, we have the organization pretty well in hand for the present, and next Sunday we will meet with many of the branch presidents at the conference at Croswell and go over the matter personally with them. We have divided the district quota. All branches have been notified, and the branch committees are being organized. We are meeting with good response, and we have every confidence the quota for this district will be raised.

Very sincerely,

M. W. LISTON.

It seems as if Michigan is always the first to be heard from when there is work to be done. Bishop’s Agent W. S. Meither, from the Central Michigan District, writes:

COLEMAN, MICHIGAN.

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: I am planning on making a tour of the district in company with the district president, and I am going to make every effort to do all I possibly can in this campaign, because I firmly believe this is the starting point in the establishment of Zion, and through this very thing we will be able to demonstrate our great social program. In fact, down through it all I can see God’s hand directing this work. I will send in the returns from our trip through the district from time to time.

Yours in bonds,

WILLIAM S. METHER.

From Illinois, F. B. Almond, associate editor of Autumn Leaves, offers the columns of the Leaves to help Graceland College:

OAK PARK, ILLINOIS.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
Dear Brethren: I have perused with deep interest your letter of August 7, inclosing the outline on stewardships and also relating to the Graceland Endowment Fund. Both of these projects should and will find a responsive note in the hearts of the Saints. In Chicago there is a distinct undercurrent of deep interest in our stewardship program. As you know, Autumn Leaves is especially striving to emphasize to the young people the value and importance of stewardships and the need of Graceland. Any suggestions or help that you can give to me in making the Autumn Leaves the organ of inspiration to our youth along the lines of our social program will be appreciated and used.

Yours sincerely,

F. B. ALMOND.

A letter from B. M. Anderson, while away on his vacation, contains some encouraging news:

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: While I am on my vacation for a few weeks I want you to know I received word about the college endowment and took it up with the district president before leaving home. I believe it is our first duty to raise this college endowment and meet the emergency inasmuch as the accrediting associations of the country have made this demand upon us. Please send us a full set of letters and descriptive literature that can be used in the campaign. We wish you splendid success in carrying out this good work in the interests of the church.

Very sincerely yours,

B. M. ANDERSON.

A one hundred per cent letter from V. B. Ettenhouser in California shows that he will personally do his utmost for this endowment:

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
Dear Brethren: You received your circular letter regarding the endowment fund for Graceland College and am happy to know that you are starting the campaign to raise it. Even though the new ruling of the North Central Association had not been made, there is every reason to believe that our college should have an endowment which will give it the proper standing among the colleges of the land. That the college is worthy of this movement, no one who has the interests of the church at heart will deny. I spent two very profitable years there myself, and I know the value of the work done there.

I would not attempt to add anything to that which you present in the circular. Only I want you to know that I am 100 per cent for the movement and will do all that I can to assist in putting it over.

Sincerely,

V. B. ETTEHNOSER.

From the Southwestern Kansas District comes a request for more literature:

WICHITA, KANSAS.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
Dear Brethren: Will you please send us about 150 additional circulars describing the Graceland College campaign, as we desire to send it out to the branches from this office so that we can accompany it with a letter from the district officers.

Sincerely,

T. S. WILLIAMS.

Michigan again is represented in our correspondence when we have a letter from the district president of the Detroit District, W. L. Bennett:

DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: We have the district quota divided among the branches and the branch committees for the endowment drive all appointed, except in one branch, and that will be accomplished this week, and the secretary of the district will mail you a report of our organization plans. Please send us another supply of campaign folders to the branches in our district, so that all will be posting themselves in reading for the campaign work when started.

Respectfully yours,

W. L. BENNETT.

From Steubenville, Ohio, William Richards is in favor of the campaign:

STEUBENVILLE, OHIO.

A. CARMICHAEL,
Dear Brother: Reading the circular letters sent out regarding the endowment for the college, I can certainly heartily indorse the project. We cannot afford to forfeit our investment which we have accumulated through effort and sacrifice at Graceland College. Let us ask God’s favor in the endeavor is my desire.

In gospel bonds,

WILLIAM RICHARDS.

The Two Great Commandments

I. TRACING LAW BACK TO ROOT PRINCIPLES

When the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together. Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matthew 22: 37-40.

At first glance a tree may seem to be a confused mass of foliage. But we know by observation and experience that every leaf, twig, and branch may be traced back to common roots from which they derive vitality and power.

In answer to the lawyer's question Jesus seemed to trace all the many good laws and true prophecies of all time back to their underlying principles. The lawyer was of that kind who cross-question in order to put one in a trap, and not with any desire to discover the truth. We owe nothing to him. But Jesus by the simple philosophy of always telling the truth easily evaded the trap. He went to the roots of the matter, and to his simple but profound answers we owe a great deal.

Certainly he traced all divine laws back to their fundamental roots; all of them grow out of these two; and to a large extent he pointed out the principles underlying enlightened human legislation.

Man has been very busy for a very long time making laws. If we go back into the dim past and dig among the dusty ruins of Babylon or Egypt, upon the cylinders and bricks and parchment exhumed, we find their ancient laws. The Medes and Persians had their laws, supposed to be eternal—"like the laws of the Medes and Persians which never change." But they only flattered themselves. All human laws change, perhaps almost imperceptibly, from generation to generation, almost from day to day. The letter may remain the same, but the interpretation and application change.

The Mohammedan law limited polygamy to four wives for the one man. Why the number was fixed at four we do not know. That may have been considered the limit of man's power to enjoy, or it may have been considered the limit of his ability to endure. But so the law read and still reads. Yet press dispatches some years ago reported the Sultan of Nedj (Arabia) as having this happy interpretation of the law: he has one permanent wife and three transients, and the three may be changed every ninety days.

The Romans were great lawyers; from them the English inherited, and America in turn from the English. America began legislation early. The founders of the Massachusetts Colony before disembarking pledged themselves to abide by the laws found in the Bible until they had time to draft something more suitable. That endeavor still goes forward.

The Pilgrim Fathers came nearer the root of the matter as stated by our Lord. Before disembarking at Provincetown, they gathered about the table in the cabin of the Mayflower and put their names to the "Pilgrims' Compact." Though engaged in a noble and epoch-marking enterprise, though deeply religious and consecrated, yet were they torn by quarrels and bickerings such as vex humanity in almost any community enterprise. There seemed grave danger of division into an unguessed number of fragments. So by "common consent" the Pilgrims' Compact was entered into to preserve the unity and continuity of the colony.

The Compact began, "In the name of God. Amen." In other words, the first great commandment to love and serve God was primary. They verily felt that they spoke "in the name of God" and expressed his will. And I believe they did. They next pledged themselves to institute just laws that should be for the good of the colony: "Just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions . . . for ye general good of ye colonie." In other words they carried forward under the spirit of the second great commandment to love and serve their brethren.

This was a noble start which recognized the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and this pioneer state paper has been classed as not second in importance in American history to the Declaration of Independence.

Since that day legislative enactments have multiplied. The national legislature passes almost innumerable bills. This goes on from year to year while Congress is in session. The various state legislatures do likewise. City councils pass many ordinances. There is a confused mass of legislation confronting the citizen. Efforts of the courts to interpret the law, and efforts of lawyers to either clarify or becloud the issue, according to their type, do not greatly help.

In the midst of this situation it may help the ordinary citizen, and certainly should help Latter Day Saints, to endeavor to get down to the roots of law; to clearly see and understand the root principles to which they should conform their conduct and their lives.

This done, life becomes clearer and human conduct rises to a higher plane. For he who understands and keeps the law of God has no need to break the law of the land. (Doctrine and Covenants 58: 5). Or as Paul expresses it, he will “live above the law.” He is above the law in this sense; he conforms to the general principles of righteousness, and so his conduct is habitually right, and the many statutes and ordinances designed to keep the wayward and rebellious in line do not touch him. He is governed by righteousness and not by restrictive statutes and ordinances; he is not in conflict with such or in violation of them; he is definitely above them.

And according to Jesus the root principles of law enjoin right relations with God and with man, and in both instances these relations spring from love.

“Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.”

Every Minister Can Do It

A young missionary in the Southeastern Mission got busy early in September in response to the call of the church for an increased patronage of the periodicals published under its direction and control. We heard from him soon after the 20th of the month, and we were made happy to be informed he had secured twenty yearly subscriptions. There is room for every active minister to equal or excel this record, and if it were done think how the lists would be increased! It would mean the lists would be larger by thirty-three per cent, or almost one third.

This would mean that the church would have a more progressive and better informed people. Why not try it?

Many Request Change of Hour of Radio Vesper Service

Several months ago, at the request of a considerable number of radio listeners, mostly in greater Kansas City, the radio vesper hour was changed from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Quite a number of the friends of K L D S objected to the change in schedule, and recently many have reported that the present hour is seriously interfering with the attendance at the Religio meetings.

Those in charge of the broadcasting realize that it is impossible to select hours that will meet the convenience of all listeners, but feel that the radio should not interfere with activities of other church departments such as the Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression. So a change in the present radio vesper service hour appears advisable.

What hour will best serve the majority of listeners? That is the question that should be definitely answered before a change from the present schedule is made. The same question was presented to radio listeners before the last change was made, but with indifferent response. Those who do not take sufficient interest and time to write the radio department their preference for the vesper hour should not make complaint after the change is made. This is a question that affects nearly every church member, whether or not a regular radio listener. A postal card, stating your preference, addressed to K L D S, Independence, Missouri, will enable this question to be settled according to the wishes of the majority. Do it now.

Church Numbers 99,203

(The appended note has been received by the President of the church, from the Department of Statistics.)

Since sending you our monthly report for September, 1925, we have received fourteen additional baptisms from the British Mission. The total number of baptisms for the month is now 357, making the total gain of 440. Membership of the church at present time 99,203.

Alma T. Whipple, president of the branch at New London, Connecticut, announces that the opening services in their new church will be held Sunday, November 8. The church is located just off the main thoroughfare between New York and Boston, next to 888 Bank Street. Everyone is especially invited to attend and help make the services a success. It is expected that Apostle Paul M. Hanson and Patriarch Richard Baldwin will be present.
Questions and Answers

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,

Dear Brother: It is being circulated among the Saints that in an article written by you in the HERALD of June 13, 1923, under the caption of “Care of the poor,” you make the statement that the poor of the church should first be taken care of by the state institution before they should receive help from the church. Will you kindly let us know your position on this proposition?

Answer:

Dear Brother: That part of the article referred to in your letter, no doubt, is the following:

The aid of the needy may come from the following sources:

1. Relatives.
2. The church.
3. Charitable organizations.
4. Civil authorities.

The aid of the needy may come from the following sources:

1. Relatives.
2. The church.
3. Charitable organizations.
4. Civil authorities.

The ideal condition to be obtained is a brotherhood so knit together by a common faith that the needs of every worthy member shall be supplied.

First, by his own efforts.
Second, by his near relatives.
Third, by the church, through its charitable organizations and the bishopric.
Fourth, by charitable organizations.
Fifth, by civil authorities.

The line of demarcation between the second and the third is not clearly drawn—nor can it be so. The Master intimates that the ties that bind those of like faith are stronger than the ties of blood. Under the Mosaic economy, relatives were required to give aid to their needy blood relations. The gospel of Christ is no doubt on a higher social plane.

Modern writers recognize the fact that a common religion provides a tie of comradeship closely approaching the tie of blood relationship. Society to-day places the primary obligation of aid upon the near relatives, then comes the church.

Securing aid from the civil authorities is looked upon by some as too humiliating. Why so? We all pay our taxes, a part of which goes for this very purpose. Why is it humiliating to accept means provided from the taxes paid? We believe that it is not only right, but that it is our duty to use this means as much as possible, thereby enabling us to use our group funds for other necessary work.

A fair interpretation of this position taken here and the interpretation in the mind of the writer is this:

First, the ideal way to aid the poor is stated, and you will note that aid from the charitable institutions of the land comes next to the last and aid from the civil (state) authorities comes last. This being the “ideal” way, we believe it is God’s way, but we cannot do things always just as God would have us. We are victims of our circumstances. When we do not have the means needed to carry on our work in the ideal manner, we must do the best we can.

When this article was written (1923), the church was badly in need of financial means with which to carry on. We needed means to take care of our missionary families. We also needed means to take care of our poor. Both of these must be provided for. How should it be done? We did not have the financial means to take care of the various activities of the church which absolutely needed to be done. What then? We could not ask the civil (state) authorities to help financially to meet the needs of the missionary families, but we did have the right to ask the civil authorities to help us care for our poor. Under such circumstances (which are not ideal) we penned the sentence, “We believe that it is not only right but that it is our duty to use this means as much as possible, thereby enabling us to use our group funds for other necessary work.”

Anyone reading the whole article with unbiased mind will readily note that in the mind of the writer the care of the poor is a sacred responsibility and must be provided for, and in such a manner as will eliminate poverty rather than perpetuate it.

My Church

Is where the word of God is preached, the power of God is felt, the Spirit of God is manifested, the love of God is revealed, and the unity of God is perceived.

It is the home of my soul, the altar of my devotions, the hearth of my faith, the center of my affections, and the foretaste of heaven.

I have united with it in solemn covenant, pledging myself to attend its services, to pray for its members, to give to its support, and to obey its laws.

It claims the first place in my heart, the highest place in mind, the principal place in my activities, and its unity, peace, and progress concern my life in this world and that which is to come.

I owe it my zeal, my benevolence, and my prayers. When I neglect its services, I injure its good name, I lessen its power, I discourage its members, and I chill my own soul.

I have solemnly promised in the sight of God and man to advance its interests by faithful attendance, by reading the literature it advocates, by never neglecting its ordinances, by contributing to its support, by meeting with my fellow members, by watching over their welfare and by joining with them in prayer, praise, and service; and that promise I this day renew, before God my Father, Christ my Redeemer, and the Holy Ghost my Comforter.

How to Tune in K L D S

A number of letters requesting information for tuning in the new church broadcasting station have recently been received at K L D S. Doubtless many purchasers of new radios, as well as some distant listeners, have not yet picked up the new radiocaster. It is hoped, therefore, that this little article will help clear away the tuning difficulties.

Practically all modern receiving sets dial approximately 200 to 550 meters. The newest models evenly distribute the wave lengths over the dials, but the older models crowded stations on the lower dial readings. On the latter type, the wave length of 441 meters (employed by K L D S) is tuned in at about the middle dial readings. With the newest models, 441 meters comes in considerably above the middle dial readings. Several new radios are calibrated in meters, and although the calibrations are often not absolutely accurate, it is easy to learn to operate such sets and to tune in stations whose wave lengths are known. Most newspapers now publish condensed radio programs, giving the call letters, locations, and wave length of the principal broadcasting stations.

W O S, Jefferson City, Missouri, with whom K L D S divides time, has been broadcasting on 441 meters for several years and has been heard by the majority of radio listeners. K L D S should be tuned in on exactly the same dial settings as W O S. Two broadcasters located in Rhode Island, also on 441 meters, may be heard by Eastern listeners, and the same dial settings used for K L D S.

In event one has not tuned in any station using 441 meters, it is a good plan to tune from the basis of dial settings for stations whose wave lengths are
A Greater Internationalism

Talk by President Frederick M. Smith at the international service held during the Young People's Convention at Lamoni, Iowa, June 8, 1924.

I expect that most of you have been quite impressed with the theme. So far as I am concerned, while I have not had time to give much study to internationalism in its broadest sense, I believe that internationalism means more to us than to any people on the face of the earth. Why? Because, as the young man stated when he arose, we are laboring under that commission given of old, which is to each just above and just below 441. W M A Q and W Q J, both of Chicago, employ the next higher wave, 447.5. Canadian stations C N R O and C F C N employ 434.5 meters. Thus the 441 meters dial settings would be approximately half way between those for 447.5 and 434.5. Other stations with wave lengths only a little lower than 441 meters are W S B, K P O, W L W.

Every radio fan should subscribe for a radio publication which prints tables of broadcasting stations, their wave lengths, power, schedules, condensed programs, etc. Such a magazine is Radio Digest, published in Chicago. It is a weekly publication, obtainable at news stands for ten cents a copy, also obtainable from the publishers, 510 North Dearborn Street, Chicago.

When tuning in K L D S, be sure that the station is broadcasting. The present weekly schedule, together with programs, is published in each issue of the SAINTS' HERALD, and Zion's Ensign. Those living in the East or in the West should make proper allowance for regional standard time changes, also for daylight savings time, where the latter is employed.

With cold weather near at hand, K L D S should reach much greater distances than has been possible during the unfavorable summer season. Those in charge of the church broadcasting station are always pleased to learn from listeners, near and far, how K L D S is received. If listeners could realize how much their reports are appreciated by those responsible for the programs and their transmission, they would write much oftener than they do. It takes only a few minutes to make a report and address it to Radio K L D S, Independence, Missouri.

ARTHUR B. CHURCH.
effort we put forth in the way of missionary service, we come far short of our duty.

For one hundred years this church has been proclaiming to the world that we have a social philosophy which will solve some of our problems and eliminate some of our evils; yet we are standing to-day with our wheels not making a single turn of progress toward the establishment of that social doctrine in fact. And some one will have to pay the penalty! Who will it be? How are we to accomplish this “going into all the world and preaching the gospel”? Our methods in the past we must pronounce as being inadequate, for while it is true that the church has sent in some instances half a dozen people to one country, let it be said to our shame in too many instances we have satisfied for the time being their hungering with what we have had to give, then have gone off and left them to starve.

The world as yet is unfamiliar with our doctrine. It seems to me that means a change of method—not of principles. It does not mean to change the gospel, but it means we must change the method of bringing this gospel to the people. We have tried to lay down to the church this new method by which we can create a corps of people who will become pronounced assets—workers, so that we can know of a surety that when they go into a foreign country we can there establish them permanently. Our past methods have been taking people from this country and sending them into a country with the necessity of learning a new language and becoming acquainted with the idioms of the other language and familiar with the history and the laws and governments of the countries to which we have sent them, and about the time they have become trained or qualified to go ahead with the work we bring them home and send some one else. The result is that our work has been only initiatory in most places. We have not consummated the work we began. So we have tried to bring young people from these countries, indoctrinate them here, get them enthused with the spirit of the church, get them trained in our philosophy, and then let them go back to their home countries and assume their life work, coming back sufficiently often to keep in touch with the situation and affairs of the church and then going back to their countries refortified and reenthused.

I feel certain, young people, that the time is soon here (unless we give way to the forces making to lead us backward in the scale of progress) when young people will be called to give their lives to some of our foreign missions; when you will be called upon to go not for two years or three years or five years, but with the idea of spending your lives there. And that means without doubt that you choose the land from which you came, so far as your ancestors are concerned. That means that we will ask men familiar with the Arabic language, knowing their customs, to carry the message to the Arabic countries. It means we will ask men familiar with the Gaelic tongue to go into the countries where that language is still used, knowing the customs of the people, knowing the government and history, being able to interpret our message into terms that the people are familiar with. And they will be able to appreciate our message because it touches their problems here and now.

I wonder how much longer the delay will be had in the church before we will put that program into fact. That delay will continue just so long as the people of the church listen to opposition to progress. Let me say that according to this program there will be young people from various parts of the world brought here to be enthused and thrilled with the message of the gospel.

Now let me state something here that might surprise some people who believe that I am purely academic. I want to say that a large factor in the presentation of this gospel is the emotional element, and we cannot separate our message from this emotional content. I say, therefore, that you cannot bring a student here as a pure intellectual and drill him in the philosophy of the church, and send him out as a successful missionary, for he must find that something—he must experience that soul-moving something that causes him to know this gospel and this message. A Jew who has been converted by his intelligence alone could not give expression to the desire the young Jew expressed to-night to take this message of Christianity back, not only to his race to help his race and nation get on its feet again, but to other peoples as well. What he has expressed I doubt not, after hearing the splendid and eloquent plea made by the young man from England, is experienced by every foreigner on this stand.

I want to ask you, How long are we going to tie the hands of this splendid corps of young people who are thrilling with the vision this gospel brings to them, who are desirous of going to other peoples to speak the words of peace and comfort and joy that have entered their souls? But merely to teach the universality of God will not do. We must in a practical way preach the catholicity of our social philosophy. And let me tell you that no religion will become catholic, no religion can become universal, that fails to touch the problems of people here and now. Therefore, it seems to me, we must have theology, but we must have more than theology. It must have to do with more than what God is and what his abilities are. It must deal with the problem of what interest God has in his people now and what influence he is exerting here and now.

This church to-day stands at the parting of the ways. We have been preaching a practical religion, and yet we are refusing to enter the road that points toward a demonstration of it. And the plea must go out, the emotional plea, if you please, as well as the plea that appeals to the intelligence, the plea to rise up in splendor and magnificence and cause them to feel the emotion moving in this gospel, seizing and holding their souls, lifting up their minds, brightening their intelligence with the greatness and goodness and magnificence of God, which will make them feel called upon to lift their voices, not alone in warning and threatening of the calamities that are to come, but with a message of the gospel, saying, Here is shelter that God has demanded we erect to protect you at the time that you shall come to the land of God. And to this people has been assigned the task of perfecting that place of safety. And yet it has not been done. How long are we going to fail to move forward?

Of one blood hath God created the nations of the earth. It will be useless for us to go out and preach the oneness of the blood of which the nations of the earth have been created, until we can show a unity of purpose and goal, a social philosophy that will unite the sympathies and the friendships of the peoples of the earth. And that will come by finding our common needs. The problems that come to you are the problems which are coming to all the peoples of the earth. You should have a closer relationship with God, that shall be manifested in a better relationship with your fellow man. And when you can carry to the nations of the earth the message which says, Your problems are ours, and because they are we therefore can point you the way, then you will have established the fellowship of man. And in truth then can you speak of universal brotherhood in a common language.

There is no church upon the face of the earth that has made a greater plea for universal brotherhood than this church, and no church has to-day a finer opportunity of presenting to the world—a world which has been searching for the solution of the great problems of life—the solution to those problems than this church; and yet we are falling in our opportunity. Opportunity after opportunity is going by, and we are refusing to seize it because we are contending over things having to do with internal administration.

What a spectacle we present to God to-day! I wonder how long he will withhold the condemnation that sooner or later must fall upon us if we refuse to move in and occupy where he has intended we should.

I do not suppose that there is a place on the face of the earth where internationalism is destined—if I can read the signs of the times aright, and perhaps reading the signs of the times causes the light of my hope to be centered on this people—I do not believe there will be a spot on the face of the earth where a higher order of internationalism will find expression than on these sacred grounds, for to me they are sacred. I believe that Graceland College is destined to become one of the greatest international schools in the world. Greatest not perhaps because we may have large numbers in the school, but because of the largeness of the spirit that will here be developed.

I challenge any man or any woman who has gone into the atmosphere of any school here or abroad, and then sensed the atmosphere that is in Graceland College, to tell me of any school which has a larger spirit than Graceland. That simply is a promise of the greatness of the Graceland of the future, if we will but give opportunity for Graceland to express herself in these international lines. She can become the greatest international school only when she recognizes the plan I have suggested to you—when some of these nations that are hungering for this social philosophy that we alone are able to give them come here and train not only intellectually and physically, but also spiritually, and also emotionally—young men who are skilled and qualified and who have sensed the thrill of God's Holy Spirit enlarging their souls until they want to go to all the universe and tell mankind what they have found here. Then can they return to their lands carrying this message to the people, which will demonstrate that God is still in his heaven and is concerned with the world and is preparing a place where their social problems will find solution. And Graceland will train these representatives who will go to all the nations of the earth to carry this message, this soul-stirring, soul-satisfying message that gives hope that God's universal love will eventually establish universal social peace.

The following accompanied a renewal subscription from Harry L. Shippy, Effingham, Illinois: "I have been a reader of the HERALD many years, and to my mind the HERALD this summer and fall is a better servant of the church than it ever has been before. It is the kind of HERALD we have been waiting for. Keep up the good work. You can also number me among those who are glad to read "Little journeys with the Editor in Chief." We have not had confidence in him always; he has been too much of a stranger to us, and he has been much spoken against in our hearing. Let him come to our homes with his talks; let him come down to us in close friendship and be one of us, and he will receive as united support as we are able to give."

God Is Moving With His People.—No. 1

BY CHARLES COUSINS

The title of this article indicates that the writer is of the opinion that God is still directing and guiding the affairs of his church.

For a number of years, as a church we have been passing through troublesome times, not only because of conditions in the world, but also by misunderstanding among ourselves. Yet despite the dark and cloudy day we have just passed through, we are of the opinion that if we look carefully at the work of the church the past few years, we can see where the hand of the Lord has been with us.

The work which God designs to do is to redeem those who have covenanted and will covenant with him by obedience to the gospel. And that is the thing which the leaders whom God has set in the church are calling our attention to; namely, the redemption of Zion. But there is only one way in which the redemption of the Saints can be effected, and that is God’s way, for this is what he says, “And that ye might escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless.”—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 7.

Here is a specific statement that the Lord designs to gather together a righteous people. And that this may be accomplished, the Lord chose Independence, Missouri, as the center place for the gathering of his people, that their redemption might be effected.

On the second day of August, 1831, the land of Zion was dedicated for the gathering of the Saints. (See Church History, vol. 1, pp. 206, 207.) And in the same month the Lord gave advice to the church by revelation relative to the gathering, in the following language:

And now, behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning his saints, that they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste, lest there should be confusion, which bringeth pestilence.—Doctrine and Covenants 63: 8.

The gathering then commenced, and the whole of the church then had their faces turned Zionward. This was a commencement of the gathering of the Saints. But their redemption was not accomplished, for those that had gathered to the land of Zion had not been there long before persecution arose which eventually terminated in the Saints being driven by their enemies in a cruel manner from their possessions. In the hour of their trial the Lord spoke comfort to his people and said:

Therefore, let your hearts be comforted concerning Zion, for all flesh is in mine hands: be still, and know that I am God. Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion. And all these things, that the prophecies might be fulfilled.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 4.

These words should have given strength and comfort to his people, for despite the fact that they were being driven by a heartless mob, and made homeless, yet the Lord assured them, “Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered,” and that those who remained and were faithful should again come into their inheritances. But this did not give the Saints the satisfaction they desired, and they still importuned the Lord relative to their redemption. Then the Lord told them why their redemption had not been accomplished, as follows:

Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and it is not by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer. . . . Therefore, in consequence of the transgression of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, that they themselves may be prepared, and that my people may be taught more perfectly, and have experience, and know more perfectly, concerning their duty, and the things which I require at their hands; and this cannot be brought to pass until mine elders are endowed with power from on high; for, behold, I have prepared a great endowment and blessing to be poured out upon them, inasmuch as they are faithful, and continue in humility before me; therefore, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season, for the redemption of Zion.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2, 3.

In the above quotation it is clearly said that the elders must wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, because they were not prepared themselves, and that the Saints might be taught more perfectly their duty, also to do those things required by the Lord.

One thing especially should be noticed in this quotation, that “the Lord hid up to himself the set time when the redemption of Zion could be accomplished.” It is also reasonable to conclude that the elders would be quite prepared to teach the Saints their duty and the things which God requires at their hands, when that set time comes. Furthermore, this set time could not be known except by the revelation of the divine mind being given to his people. This could come only in the way the Lord has always designed that he will reveal his mind and will, and that way always has been “through his servants the prophets.” (Amos 3: 7.)

Since the time of the expulsion of the Saints from the land of their inheritance, the church has passed through dark and cloudy days. Her prophet was slain, and false leaders led away many honest souls from the truth into error. But there remained a few who were faithful to the truth, and in due time the son of the prophet, in harmony with the law of the church, came by direction of God and took the place for which he had been set apart, at the head of the church. He sent out a message calling to the Saints to set their faces Zionward, and in due time he declared the hastening time had come. And in every sense it can be said that in honor before God he faithfully discharged his duty and was loved by the whole church, yet he never had the revelation saying that the set time had come for the redemption of Zion. But in 1917 we have the signal given, and the set time revealed for the redemption of Zion.

Our brother, President Frederick M. Smith, who was appointed as was his father, in harmony with the law to the church, and was ordained prophet, seer, and revelator to the church, in his address to the church at the conference of 1917 made the following pronouncement:

As a church our work is onward. The signs of the times point to imminence of momentous events. Everywhere there are evidences of an awakening among our people which indicate that God's Spirit is moving mightily among us. The hour has struck for the redemption of Zion. May we under God's guidance be equal to the difficult tasks that hour brings and have grace and strength for the responsibilities confronting us.

Here, after nearly thirty-three years of waiting, the secret for the first time has been revealed, that "the hour has struck for Zion's redemption."

We certainly ought to rejoice, knowing that the Saints have risen to such a condition that heaven could smile upon us and tell us the time for our redemption was here. And we would say, Is not this evidence that God is moving with his people? Yes, it is evidence that God is moving with his people, and we should now be able to sing with heart and soul:

Triumphant Zion! lift thy head
From dust, and darkness, and the dead!
Though humbled long—awake at length,
And gird thee with thy Savior's strength!

Put all thy beauteous garments on,
And let thy excellence be known;
Decked in the robes of righteousness,
Thy glories shall the world confess.

No more shall foes unclean invade
And fill thy hallowed walls with dread;
No more shall hell's insulting host
Their victory and thy sorrows boast.

God from on high has heard thy prayer;
His hand thy ruin shall repair;
Nor will thy watchful Monarch cease
To guard thee in eternal peace.
—Dorridge, Saints' Hymnal, Number 122.

When we as a people arise to the condition as outlined by the poet in the above, then will the saying of the Psalmist come to pass, that "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."—Psalms 50:2.

The First Presidency.—No. 2

BY J. W. PETERSON

Eusebius continues:

It is an old tradition that James was ordained bishop (overseer) of Jerusalem by Christ.

Here is another omission in New Testament history, and a very important one. If there had been such an historical account concerning Peter, it would have been painted in red and gold during all the following ages.

Still further Eusebius declares:

James, the brother of our Lord to whom the episcopal seat (overseer's seat) of Jerusalem was committed by the apostles.

"Episcopal seat," which means the seat of the overseer, agrees very nicely with the Doctrine and Covenants where it mentions "the seat of the presidency." (99:11; 122:12.) James, chosen and ordained by Christ himself; chosen again by the three preferential disciples and later by the twelve and installed at a place called a seat—a church seat as we now have a "county seat," is certainly strong presumptive evidence of James's superiority. We see another harmonious act in the twelve thus regulating affairs, as it is stated in latter-day revelation: "The twelve are to regulate all the affairs of the church in all nations."—Doctrine and Covenants 104:12.

Yet more from Eusebius:

He (James) was alone allowed to enter the sanctuary.

It is not shown what that sanctuary was, but it is certain that the Jews would not allow a Christian minister, and the chief of the despised sect to enter the sanctuary of their temple. The quotation must have reference to a Christian sanctuary. Of all the officers in the church (Peter and John also excluded), James was alone allowed to enter that sanctuary. If this statement of history does not positively show James's superiority, I am sure no words could indicate that fact. In harmony with this the Britannica says:

He was bishop (overseer) of Jerusalem and was president of the church in its earliest day. Such a position required him to reside at Jerusalem, while had he been an apostle we should have expected him to have taken his share of missionary labor.

This profound scholar had a better insight into church government than some of us. He points out clearly why there should be a seat of the president at the center place, and who occupied it.

As to the ordination and commission of James, Bingham in his Antiquities quotes Jerome as saying:

James to whom Christ committed his own throne on earth.

Here is another omission in New Testament history. James ordained chief seer (overseer) and appointed in charge of the seat of the first presidency and committed the spiritual throne of Christ on earth, especially endowed by Christ himself and he alone allowed to enter the sanctuary, certainly ought to give Catholics and Protestants something to think about.

As we have seen: James was not second with the apostles, and yet both in ecclesiastical history and in the New Testament he is called an apostle. The word apostle simply means one sent. Jesus being sent of God was also called an apostle. (Hebrews 3: 1.) James, as successor to the spiritual throne of Christ on earth, is entitled also to be called an apostle, but not of the twelve.

Yet again from Eusebius:

But James the brother of our Lord who, as there were many of this name, was surnamed the Just by all from the days of our Lord until now, received the government of the church with the apostles.

The words, received the government of the church, indicates more than a local officer. With the apostles, indicates it still further, for he is here associated with general officers. This citation lifts him above a local pastorate to the government of the whole church with headquarters at Jerusalem. It is proper to interpret our officialdom by scripture and history, and it is just as proper to interpret their officialdom by ours, the Lord being the author of both. The very same road which runs up hill runs also down hill.

Still further Eusebius continues:

Indeed on account of his exceeding great piety he was called the Just . . . and Oblias and Osleam as the prophets declared concerning him.

We do not now possess the scriptures which Eusebius refers to, but we cannot help noticing how much Osleam harmonizes with Gazeleam of the Doctrine and Covenants. (101: 4.) In Enoch's time Gazeleam was the director.

Cyprian and Tertullian usually call the chief officers presidents:

... who have the care and presidency and inspection of the church, and because this presidency was not only over the people but also over the clergy, they were defined upon this account with the distinguishing characteristic ... princes of the clergy.

How much this latter expression agrees with the statement of the Doctrine and Covenants: “Presidency of the high priesthood.” (104: 4.)

Ignatius in his epistle to the Mogensians says:

Do all things in unity under the bishop (overseer) presiding in the place of God.

This shows the importance which those ancient historians and members of the church attached to this office. This reference, more than the others, shows that this office represented God on earth, but of course according to law, for God works always and ever according to law and does nothing otherwise. Our objectors who reject a presidency of three in the church and disclaim the official rights of worthy and rightful descendants to inherit their father's office as well as his property, should turn their attention to ancient history and eliminate much of it. Accepting history for what it is worth, we cannot by any mode of reason believe that the overseer of those times referred to the financial agent of the church—the head of the Aaronic priesthood—the bishop. We must accept the fact that episcopo applied to a higher order of priesthood and that the term is connected up with the office of a seer both in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, as also in latter-day revelation. That James the Lord's brother was that seer is evident.

Smith's Bible Dictionary declares concerning him:

He is represented throughout the Acts as exercising great authority among and even over the apostles, and in the Saint Paul epistles he is placed before even Peter and John . . . that he was formally appointed bishop (overseer) of Jerusalem by the Lord himself is reported by Epiphanius, Chrisostom, Proclus and Potius.

These four historians of sufficient importance to be quoted by this noted dictionary, certainly give weight to the appointment of James by Christ.

Smith also notes that James was even over the apostles and was greater than Peter, as he finds it mentioned in the Pauline epistles. No doubt James was one of the prophets whom Jesus appointed to the church as mentioned in the fourth chapter of Ephesians (verses 8, 11). Paul also agrees with himself where he says:

And God set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets.—1 Corinthians 12: 28.

Apostles first and prophets after, is historically true. James was not set in his rightful place until long after the twelve were chosen. That order of events is also true of this latter-day dispensation so far as the office of twelve and presidency are concerned.

During the occupancy of James as seer of the church at the seat of the president, there assembled a general conference to determine the value of the law of Moses. Peter and Paul were the chief speakers. After all had spoken who desired and silence had ensued, James, as president of the council, first gave his reasons for the decision he was about to make, and then said:
Wherefore my sentence is that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God—Acts 15:19.

Ecclesiastical history throws a world of light on this obscure passage. James is here ushered in without much previous notice as the chief man in the church and of sufficient official position to decide apostolic disputes. A little later Peter and John are mentioned as his assistants—not later in office, but later in the New Testament account. But this we will notice later. The more one examines that short verse and reads in the same fifteenth of Acts what led up to it and what grew out of it, the greater it appears. It is the hub of New Testament officialdom.

Of that decision of James, F. W. Farrar, D. D.; F. R. S., in his Early Days of Christianity, writes:

About 50 A.D., when Paul and Barnabas went up a second time to Jerusalem for the settlement of the great question which was then contesting the church, we see James as the most prominent figure in the memorable synod... but I might here repeat that the whole weight and responsibility of the decision rested with Saint James, and he arose on that occasion to a height worthy of his parentage and of his character. In the face of all the prejudices of his life, rising superior to the opinions of the Rabbins, his predecessors and contemporaries—ignoring the wrathful and fantastical arguments of the Pharisaic zealots, he, in the opposite sense to what seemed to have been expected of him, decided the question. He the righteous—he the priestly Nazarite, Christian though he was, even Jews looked upon with reverence—he who was so rigidly accurate an observer of all the precepts of legal righteousness—he the very man whose name and authority had been claimed by the Judaic emissaries who had troubled the church at Antioch by their insistence on legal scrupulosity and Jewish particularism—he, whose name they afterward abused in counter missions to undo the teachings of Saint Paul—he gave his voice in favor of the liberal view. Never, perhaps, did a result so awful in its responsibility depend upon the wisdom of a single man. When James was also convinced—when his particular wisdom had grasped the truth of that which the Holy Ghost was peremptorily clear to the minds of the early apostles—the greatest victory ever achieved by Gentile Christianity was won.—Pages 96, 97.

This “awful weight and responsibility” to decide the greatest question of that age, when “the greatest victory ever achieved by Gentile Christianity was won,” did not rest upon Peter or the twelve, nor yet upon the whole conference, although they adopted the decision when given, but it was James, the nearest relative of our Lord, to whom belonged this right of authority. He did not fail to rise equal to the occasion, doubtless with divine favor and grace. Perhaps on that decision rests the salvation of the Gentiles, and they, be it said to their everlasting dishonor, many years later tried to displace this very man who had voted them into the bond of the everlasting covenant, by claiming Peter as pope or head of the clergy. Peter had been dead many years; therefore he himself is free of the charge. We can now prove a complete alibi for him, which we shall presently introduce.

A very significant statement which supports the fact of Peter and John being the counselors of James is found in Galatians 2:9:

And when James, Cephas (Peter), and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and to Barnabas the right hand of fellowship that we should go unto the Gentiles.

Paul and Barnabas, according to verse 2, had come up to this seat of the presidency to report their labors, and it is significant that they came up by revelation to do so. It is also a convincing point that after they reported they were in turn assigned to new fields of missionary labor by the three, who must have had the authority to do so.

Paul had been indorsed by these same men fourteen years before and at the same seat of the presidency (Galatians 1:18, 19).

James’s superiority was early recognized by Peter. When he was released from prison by the intervention of an angel, he said: “Go show these things unto James and to the brethren.”

Why was James to receive the report before the other brethren? Why was James first in Peter’s mind? These questions cannot be avoided. They must be answered, and there is only one answer: James’s superiority. He was the first officer in Peter’s mind. From that time on, the reports of the apostles came up to Jerusalem, where James was in charge. Rome was never the divinely appointed headquarters of the church.

enter into weather bureau forecasts. Not only will 1927 be “nineteen hundred and freeze to death,” but all very severe winters and “bad summers” will be plotted out, long in advance, so that the world can get ready for them.

Hand in hand with this, new developments are entering the weather service, of the utmost value to the shipping trade, farmers, ranchers, packers, and all who depend upon the weather.

Severe Winters in Long Periods

The man who made the great discovery in France is the Abbe Gabriel, professor of mathematics at Caen. It was considered so important that President Bigourdan himself presented it to the Academy of Sciences.

Being a statistician, Gabriel had for a long time plotted out, from statistics and from historians and great writers of all ages, the extreme seasons—severe winters and great summers—as recorded, wherever found. Arago had done much work of this kind, but fragmentary. When Gabriel had his mass of dates completed, he was surprised to find them fall into a curious periodicity.

Comparing them with the revolutions of the moon and with sunspot cycles as generally established, he “established that there exists a hitherto unknown lunar-solar cycle of 744 years, composed of exactly 9,202 revolutions of the moon and sixty-seven periods of sunspot variations. This primordial cycle subdivides into two periods of 372 years and four of 186 years.”

“This discovery has special interest in astronomy which only technicians can appreciate,” says Gabriel Guilbert, meteorologist at the Paris observatory, “but the corresponding periodicity which it has established for extreme winters and summers interests everyone!”

And 1917 Was a Period Year

Thus, the rigorous winter of 1917, so bad at the front in the World War, has corresponding to it the hard winter of 1544—exactly 373 years previously—which itself has for precedents the winters of 1859, 988, and 881, all noted in history for their rigor. The hard winter of 1895 corresponds to that of 1709, of glacial celebrity—after exactly 186 years! The celebrated winter of 1879-1880 comes, at 186 years’ distance, after that of 1694, itself preceded, at 186 years’ distance, by the very severe winter of 1508. And 186 years before 1508, it was the historical hard winter of 1323.

No dates of the past are more corroboratively established than those of the great winters and extreme summers—historians, writers of chronicles, theologians, and even the great poets have always been fond of recording them in all centuries. So, when correspondences like these are found so exactly throughout history, it follows that there must be a real lunar-solar law of periodicity for the weather—which will hold good in the future, as it has done in the past. So contends President Bigourdan, not only chief official astronomer of France, but head of the French nautical office.

In this way the hard winter of 1917, after 186 years, will be repeated in the year 2103, and that of 1895 in the winter of 2081. These dates do not interest us personally. But it is easy to understand that when all such extreme seasons are plotted out along the line for past, present, and future, they will form a solid backbone for weather forecasts.

Points to 1926-1927

One example shows the great test of the present. Along the plotted line, Gabriel finds the great winter of 1553, which broke up the army of Charles V at the siege of Metz. Add the lunar-solar cycle of 186-187 years, and we arrive at the celebrated winter of 1740, which froze the Seine and the Thames and carried away the bridges of Rouen. Then, add 186 years to 1740, and what do you get?

You get the year 1926-1927!

“The absolute periodicity of great winters in past centuries,” says Guilbert, meteorologist at the Paris observatory, “the way in which they have returned, in the past, to fixed dates (with one year’s leeway, at most), scarcely permits doubt that the Abbe Gabriel has discovered a cycle heretofore unknown. From it we must conclude that in January or December, 1926, there will come upon us a long and rigorous winter, astronomically foreseen according to periods first noted in 995, and affirming itself, period after period, up to the historical winters of 1553 and 1740.”

Gabriel will publish the full tabulated list of great winters and hot summers in history. It is quite long and will compose a booklet with notes. One such winter has been preserved in a noted painting. This was the “Long Winter” of 1788-1789, when snow remained in the streets of Paris in the first weeks of May. The painting, which hangs in the gallery of Versailles, shows King Louis XVI relieving distress in the Paris suburbs. According to Taine, this long winter, by filling Paris with a tough multitude of refugees, actually furnished the occasion for the great revolution, which began on July 14, 1789, in the following summer.

Smithsonian Confirms Forecasts

And at this same moment, the Smithsonian Institution at Washington not only confirms President Bigourdan and the Abbe Gabriel in the prediction for 1927, but tells what kind of extreme year it will be. All 1927 will be "a year without a summer." It will be "nineteen hundred and freeze to death," in analogy to 1816 in our grandparents' memory. It does not mean a year of constant low temperatures. Even "a year without a summer" means only frosts or freezing weather for perhaps less than half the days of each summer month. Between such extraordinary cold spells, there may be days or weeks so warm that new heat records are established.

How such outrageous variations of cold and heat persist, is explained by the new weather forecast service established by the Smithsonian, Doctor Abbot and Doctor Clayton are its high directors. Sunspot activity enters largely into their calculations, and "long-range forecasting" is their specialty.

The maximum of spots occurs every eleven and one third years. At this crest of the curve, the sun is hottest—and so, naturally, should the earth be, except that dust clouds thrown out by seething sunspots intercept radiations most of the time, so the earth gets only a minimum of solar heat. This explains chill, freezing weather through a whole summer. In between, short record heat alternations are due to the sun's extra heat accidentally side-stepping the dust clouds.

Two Maximums Together

We are now approaching a grand maximum of sun spots. The Smithsonian is strong for 1926-1927, when the peak of the curve is reached. According to H. Jarvrin Browne, they will be "danger years, which threaten the world's harvests." Not only does 1926-1927 come with the ordinary eleven and one third years solar maximum, but it hits a recurrence both of the greater fifty-five and six tenths years maximum, and the peak of the super-maximum of 271 years.

Thus 1926-1927 will be the sixth recurrence of the super-maximum since the great famine of Diocletian, A. D. 299-300. It will be forty-eight ordinary sun-spot maximums from the great obscuration of the sun of 1872.

So, says the Smithsonian, it is time to get ready and be prepared. The coincidence of its warnings with those of President Bigourdan attracts great attention in French meteorological circles.—Sterling Heilig.

We hear of young men and women beating their breasts, lamenting the fact that all opportunities have been embraced. There are yet wonders to unfold, discoveries to be made beside which the airplane and wireless are simple as two and two.—F. L. Brittain.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Department of the Sunday School

At a recent meeting of the consulting board of the joint departments, provision was made for the publication of several new series of adult quarterlies for the use of study classes whether in Sunday school, Religio, or Department of Women. These will cover a wide range of fresh material and should be ready for distribution and use beginning July 1, 1926. The new quarterlies or texts are not intended to replace the present Sunday school quarterlies, which are serving splendidly many of our needs; but there will be a constant revision of the material of our quarterlies to keep it fresh and closely applicable to the needs of the times.

The new series for adult use in the Sunday school will supply a need for students in the senior department who have spent at least three years in the present senior quarterly. It should be understood that the present senior lessons are repeated in a three-year cycle; every three years we start in on the lessons studied three years before. For this reason young people being promoted from the intermediate to the senior department should be expected to study the present senior quarterly for a three-year period before taking up the adult quarterly work.

To make provision at once for adult classes in the Sunday school that wish to enter upon special study other than the senior quarterly, we recommend the use of one of the following courses previously issued by the Religio. These we find on hand at the Herald Office in fairly large quantities, and may be had for use at any time as long as the supply lasts. Each contains material for thirteen lessons. They were used in 1922 and 1923 and will be dated for those years, but the dating should not interfere with present use.

The courses referred to are as follows:

Course I.—Religious Education in the Family.

This quarter's work is based on a study of the text by the same title by Cope, a copy of which may be purchased of the Herald Office for $1.60. At least one copy should be available for class use. Especially recommended for parents' classes.

Course II.—Religion in Business.

Based on a text of that title by Babson, to be purchased of the Herald Office at $1.60.

The following books may be used as references: Christianizing the Social Order: Rauschenbusch. This course is especially desirable for a mature consideration of the function of religion in our industry.

Course III.—The Meaning of Service.

Based on a text of that title by Fosdick, to be purchased of the Herald Office at $1.65. This is a splendid course to give one the foundation ideas of real service as propounded by a current thinker and as contemplated in the gospel economy. This will lead up to further courses on the stewardship plan as provided in the church.

These courses may be ordered from the Herald Office at a uniform price of ten cents each copy.

The present Book of Mormon lessons in the Senior Religio Quarterly will complete the two-year series with the quarterly for October, November, December, 1925. Some Religio classes began late and will use the Book of Mormon lessons perhaps up to July, 1926. The regular senior quarterly will be issued, however. The first two quarters of 1926 will furnish two lines of study which were used five or six years ago, but dealing with problems of most vital significance to the church today. The courses provided will be, "How to teach religion," a splendid study for Sunday school and Religio teachers and parents. Her study is based on a well-known text of the same title by Betts, costing $1.65. With this, in the same quarterly, is issued a series of lessons on "The history and development of the stewardship idea in the church." This material will cover the first two quarters of 1926 and... fully out to sea, like a large bird upon the water, with these friends and coworkers on board and the band playing a sad moment for us when that ship began to sail so gracefully. We felt very much alone.

However, we could not allow that condition to interfere with our work to any great degree. We had to shake off the feeling of homesickness and complete our arrangements for our trip to Sweden that we were to take within a few days. We left Oslo next day and went to Bergen, Norway, over the week-end and held two meetings with the Saints and friends there.

On June 30 we boarded a train for Sweden and arrived at Stockholm next morning at 7:05, where we were met at central station by our congenial brother, Oscar Johnson. He escorted us to his home where we were given a hearty welcome by Sister Johnson and their three daughters.

Brother Johnson has been one of the missionaries in Sweden for the past five years. He has struggled nobly, against great odds, to build up the work and has made some progress. He has a very difficult mission, working in and around that great city of Stockholm where so many voices are calling to people and so many meetings to attract their attention. But Brother Johnson and his excellent helper are not discouraged. They are both optimistic and are moving forward in faith and humility, putting their trust in God, and performing their duties with an eye single to his glory. They are to be congratulated for their faithfulness and untiring efforts in the work of the Master.

Brother Johnson has several openings in and around Stockholm. During the two months we were there, we held meetings at six different places. On Sunday afternoons, as a rule, we used a rented hall in the city. During the week we took advantage of the warm weather and held open-air meetings at various places. We also held a few meetings in private homes. Some of our meetings were well attended, and the good Spirit was present, helping in the presentation of the word.

On Sunday, July 26, twenty-four Saints and friends hired an omnibus, and we started out early in the morning on a missionary trip. Our first stopping place was at the seashore about twenty miles from home at a bathing beach, where we held an open-air meeting at 10:30 a.m. Brother Johnson told a portion of the gospel story to several who gathered, some of them attending the meeting in their bathing suits. At the close of this meeting we went about ten miles farther to the home of a friend, where we held another open-air meeting at one o'clock. The writer was the speaker at this meeting and enjoyed good liberty in presenting the necessity of baptism to a fair-sized audience of interested listeners. Our next appointment was still another ten miles on, to which point we journeyed and once more gathered out in the open, in God's first temple, under the shade of the trees, and broke the bread of life to the one hundred or more assembled people. This was our best meeting of the day. Brother Johnson and I both took our turn in speaking to the people, who were manifestly interested in the message we presented. God very graciously enabled us to assist our Lord and his Kirk members to advantage in this service.

V. D. Ruch and Family Visit in Sweden

On June 25 my wife, little girl, and I left our home in Porsgrunn, Norway, and went to Oslo so we could meet Brother and Sister Hunker. They were leaving for America the next day, and we desired to accompany them to the ship that we might extend to them our best wishes for a pleasant journey and to say our last "good-by" for the time being at least. You can well imagine that it was a sad moment for us when that ship began to sail so graciously out to sea, like a large bird upon the water, with these friends and coworkers on board and the band playing the "Star Spangled Banner." A feeling very much akin to homesickness and complete our arrangements for our trip to Sweden that we were to take within a few days. We left Oslo next day and went to Bergen, Norway, over the week-end and held two meetings with the Saints and friends there.

The third day after our arrival in Sweden, we were pleased to witness the baptism by Brother Johnson of a lady who has been a member of the Utah Church for thirty-five years. The meeting was well attended, and the usual courtesy of shaking hands with us, but went into their living apartment that is in connection with the assembly hall. But he could not rest long before the meeting was over, and he invited us to retire early at the Mormon headquarters in Sweden.

At the close of this last meeting a lady suggested that a collection be taken up for us. Another lady, acting upon the suggestion, took a hat and collected a neat little sum that was applied on the expenses of the bus. We arrived back home about nine o'clock in the evening, a tired but happy group, and had the satisfaction of knowing that we had spent the day in the service of God.

Another experience may be interesting. One afternoon, Brother Johnson and I rode our bicycles to a little town about twenty miles from the Johnson home to hold an open-air meeting. Brother Johnson had ridden there two days before and advertised the meeting to be held out near the edge of town at a place under some trees. When the time came for the meeting to start not a soul was present besides us two missionaries. What were we to do? Return home and not have any meeting? No. We had come far to have a meeting, and we were determined to have one. So at the appointed time we selected a song and began singing to the birds and the trees above us. I cannot say that the sound of our voices was "so sweet the birds hushed their singing," but as we stood there and sang a boy came riding by on his bicycle. He stopped to listen to our song. It would be difficult to say just what thoughts passed through his mind as he gazed upon two men standing there by the roadside singing, with no human being in sight to listen. He may have thought that we were escaped lunatics, or, at least, fit subjects for an asylum. But soon another person was attracted by our song and another, and still others. We sang two songs, had prayer, and then another song. When the end of the third song was reached some twenty-five or thirty people had gathered.

We opened our Bible and began telling our story. The result was that we had a good meeting, each of us occupying about thirty minutes. Moral: "Never be discouraged."

The day after our arrival in Sweden, we were pleased to witness the baptism by Brother Johnson of a lady who has been a member of the Utah Church for thirty-five years. The meeting was well attended, and the usual courtesy of shaking hands with us, but went into their living apartment that is in connection with the assembly hall. But he could not rest long before the meeting was over, and he invited us to retire early at the Mormon headquarters in Sweden.

At the close of this last meeting a lady suggested that a collection be taken up for us. Another lady, acting upon the suggestion, took a hat and collected a neat little sum that was applied on the expenses of the bus. We arrived back home about nine o'clock in the evening, a tired but happy group, and had the satisfaction of knowing that we had spent the day in the service of God.
to crowd in. Many who desired to attend could not gain entrance. Probably, never before in the world's history has there been such an august body of church men and women assembled in one meeting. Thirty-seven different countries were represented and many religious faiths.

The opening and closing songs, as well as the response by the congregation to the chants of the officiating priests, were sung in four languages at the same time (English, German, French, and Swedish). The songs were printed in a booklet form in the four languages, and one could choose the language in which he wished to sing. Truly it was an unusual experience.

The address was by the Lord Bishop of Winchester and was delivered in English. Copies of the address were distributed to the audience in German, French, and Swedish. It was a stirring appeal to the churches of the world to put into operation the social program of Christ. As I listened to that masterly address, filled with thoughts and expressions used by our own people in presenting our social program, I could not help but think how God is moving upon the hearts of men everywhere, preparing them for the reception of the very message that we have for the world. But soon another thought crowded itself upon me. It was this: Are we going to procrastinate the doing of this great work for God so long that it will be necessary for him to use another people to do that work? The great crime was that has swept the world since the war has made it doubly imperative that the social teachings of Jesus be taught. Surely the time is ripe.

At the close of the meeting the representatives marched from the church to the King's Palace, where they were the guests of the King and Queen at lunch. It was indeed an interesting experience. Many were provided in rich robes of various colors and fashions, while others wore full dress suits and high hats. There was one negro there to plead the cause of his race and, by the way he was from America. Perhaps the most interesting representative present was the Patriarch and Pope of Alexandria with his staff of officers and servants. He was given much attention at the conference, as well as in the newspapers. He is eighty years of age and wore a long black robe.

As a very pleasing climax to our sojourn in the land of the Swede, it was my privilege to baptize the two oldest daughters of Brother and Sister Johnson. It was indeed a joy to me to be used as the instrument in the hands of God to induct these two girls into his kingdom. Naturally, it was a happy hour for the parents and servants. Brother F. T. Mussell came with them and assisted throughout the following week.

As relatives of Brother John Trong.

The branch teacher, Albert Haynes, was married to Sister Ruth Lees at her home near Vail, Iowa, September 5, Charles E. Butterworth, the bride's grandfather, officiating. The couple arrived home September 10 and were given a reception by the young people. The Saints all wish them much joy and happiness.

Brother and Sister Halberg brought over a load of Saints from Storm Lake for sacramental service September 13. Sister Crippen and Harold Reeder drove to Deloit September 12 with Brother Mussell and Sister Blackmore, where they were to conduct some meetings.

Little Laura Shore, one of our Sunday school scholars who has been very sick in Saint Joseph's Hospital at Sioux City, is recovering nicely.

Work and Play Indicate Life at Mallard

MALLARD, IOWA, September 19.—Our Department of Recreation and Expression had a wiener roast and picnic at Medium Lake the evening of August 20. A big bonfire was provided, and the children fished while the older ones told stories of the past. A very enjoyable evening was had by all.

On August 23 Mrs. Millie Block and daughters Esther and Margaret, of Saint Louis, Missouri, attended services. They are relatives of Brother John Trong.

An all-day meeting was held in the church August 30. Brother F. T. Mussell was the speaker in the morning, and Brother John Blackmore spoke in the afternoon and evening. There were twenty-one visiting Saints present from Pomeroy, Coalville, Albert City, Pocohontas, and Emmetsburg.

Brother and Sister Blackmore conducted a school of instruction in junior church and stewardships throughout the following week. The meetings were much enjoyed by our people, and we believe much good was accomplished. The weather was very hot, but the attendance and interest were good.

Saturday, September 5, we held our church picnic in Tourist Park at Emmetsburg. We were favored with a cool day, and the bounteous dinner was much enjoyed. The day was spent in playing ball and volley ball, and all present report a good time.

Brother Robert Fish was absent from services September 6, as he drove to Cherokee to take Brother Mussell and Brother and Sister Blackmore to conduct meetings the following week.

On September 11 the junior Book of Mormon class gave a dramatization of the first three chapters of Nephi, which helped greatly to impress many good things on our minds.

Des Moines District Religio Rally

The Des Moines District will hold its annual rally for the Department of Recreation and Expression at Rhodes, Iowa, October 17 and 18. The rally will start Saturday afternoon at half past two with competitive games, and recreation will continue until half past five.

In the evening, starting at half past seven, a practical and helpful program for all interested in the work of the department will be offered.

All Sunday services will apply to the special work of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

A large crowd is expected to attend both days, and every Religio officer is especially invited and urged to be present for both days. The special speaker, one of the best in the church, will have an important message, one we all should hear.

The rally will be entertained by the Rhodes Branch, and everyone in the Des Moines District knows what that means. Meet at the church at half past two and join in the big parade through the town. The full program for the rally will appear in the Herald for October 7.

Urge your friends to attend the rally. Work up a good stunt to stage Saturday, and let us all work together to make this the largest and best Religio rally we ever had.

STEPHEN ROBINSON, District Superintendent.

Two-Day Meeting at Lachine, Michigan

In spite of unfavorable weather conditions, quite a number of the local Saints assembled for prayer service on Saturday morning, September 19, in charge of Elder Guy and Brother McLennan. Shortly after dinner, Brother Smith, the branch teacher, held preaching service, followed by preaching by Brother Hicky of Hubbard Lake.

District President Allen Schreur arrived just before supper and occupied in the evening. Matthew 11: 28, 29, “Come unto me,” etc., formed the basis of his most interesting remarks.

The weather was ideal Sunday, and although it turned cold in the evening, the day was quite warm. At nine o'clock Saints gathered from various branches throughout the district for prayer and testimony meeting. Brother Elmer Parks of Onaway and Brother Schreur were in charge. Brother Parks gave some impressive remarks on the goodness of God to us.

At a quarter of eleven our local elder, Amos Guy, addressed the now full house. His lesson of warning and admonition was taken from John 6 using verses 67 and 68 for his text: “Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life!”

Brother Allen Schreur’s afternoon address on stewardships was, as are all of his sermons, most encouraging and uplifting. Questions on stewardships and also the Grace College endowment were answered by various members and answered by Brother Schreur. The congregation voted to continue the service by sermons by Brother Elmer Parks and Elder Dirk Schreur, who addressed us on the same subject.

Regardless of the long distance many had to travel, a large number remained for evening service, at which time Brother Dirk Schreur spoke on, “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation.” The power and authority with which he spoke bears his strong faith in God.

Elder Rudd’s assistance as chorister was much appreciated as was the special singing under his able direction.

The Department of Women furnished free meals in a vacant store building in the village, and they are pleased to report that because of the generosity of the Saints in donating they had plenty to feed the crowd without buying supplies.

As a whole the two-day meeting was very successful. We only hope that we may remember some of the many good things we learned during that time.

JENNIE B. NUGENT.

Change in Location of Meeting Place of English Saints

LEICESTER, ENGLAND.—The work here has been impeded for some considerable time, but it is now moving along in the usual way and regular services are being held.

Owing to alterations of the property that the Saints occupied, they were given notice to quit. All efforts were made to remain, but they proved ineffective.

Brother John R. Etheridge opened his home for Sunday services during the time the Saints had no place of meeting, and all made the best of the inevitable. The meeting house which the Saints occupy now is not so easy for the members to reach, because it is a considerable distance from their homes.

There are good opportunities for spreading the good news of the gospel of Christ in the new surroundings.

The meeting room will seat upwards of one hundred people, and more if necessary. One cannot help but notice the hand of the Lord is in the movement, and he has blessed the effort of those who are anxious to keep the work moving.

Elder J. T. Norton is pastor of the branch and has the support of the Saints. Services are held every Sunday, preaching at eleven o’clock, Sunday school at three in the afternoon, and preaching again at half past six. Choir practice is held Monday evening, in which the young people take part. Brother W. A. Eccleston from Independence is taking active part as organist for the choir and supervisor of the activities for the Religio.

Everything points to happy times for this branch in the near future.

J. T. NORTON.

An All-Day Meeting Proves Interesting

INDEPENDENCE, KANSAS, September 23.—We have been greatly pleased to have Brother Amos T. Higdon, our district president, with us for the past week. We have had fairly good crowds and good interest and feel that a great deal of good has been done both among the Saints and others that heard him.

On Sunday, September 20, we had an all-day meeting with basket dinner at the park. The Saints from Parsons, Cherryvale, and Coffeyville gave a fine attendance, and we had a day of real pleasure.

One of the speakers of the day was Brother Howard P. Anderson, the pastor of the Coffeyville Branch, who delivered a good sermon in the afternoon.

We have only a small Sunday school here, there being only four families with some nonmembers attending. We are striving to be faithful and press onward and upward to do more for the upbuilding of the work.

We are planning on going over the top on our quota for the Grace College endowment fund and pray that many more may do the same.

We enjoy reading the church papers and always look forward to the accounts of what other churches and Sunday schools are doing.

We hold our Sunday school and church services in the Seventh-Day Adventist church and would welcome any missionaries or members who would be coming through here.
Independence

The Quarterly Conference

Monday evening the Saints met in conference. They filled the church to its capacity and transacted the business with dispatch, finishing the work by nine o'clock. President Frederick M. Smith presided.

Several ordinations were ordered; the report of a bishop's court was received, which recommended the dropping from the records of the church of several who had requested that they be released from membership.

The ordinations ordered were: Amos Allen, Alva Logsdon, Scott Cochran, to the office of elder; Arthur B. Church, Albert Bruckenberg, Isaac D. Riggs, Frank Hershey, and Roy McNeal to the office of priest; and Floyd O. Kelley to the office of teacher.

At the close of business Brother Roy V. Hopkins was asked to talk to the Saints and did so with all of his old earnestness, declaring his greatest desire was for strength to work in the church. President F. M. Smith then addressed the assembly for more than half an hour on the subject of Zion and her development, emphasizing the further preparation of the people for effective work.

Stone Church

All last week a remarkable series of meetings was conducted by President F. M. Smith and Bishop A. Carmichael at the Stone Church. The intent of the meetings was to examine the attendance to the priesthood, but from Wednesday the meetings were open to all. Sunday afternoon, September 27, between 250 and 300 members of the priesthood assembled in the upper auditorium to hear President Smith lecture on “The objectives of the church.” Monday and Tuesday evenings President Smith continued the subject, and each evening there were about 300 of the priesthood present.

Monday evening the meeting started President Smith was shown a beautiful enlarged photograph of his father. He seemed to be led into a retrospective mood and related some boyhood experiences that he had with his father and how, after the years came upon his father, he developed a Job-like patience when trials were upon him. During a period when a number of his loved ones were taken away he composed the beautiful words found in Hymn 206 in the Hymnal, “Beneath the darkest cloud God’s hand I see, Although it be a shroud that showest me.”

President Smith then asked the brethren to sing it for the opening number. Those who were there will not soon forget the spirit which was present when the hymn was sung. Many were heard to express themselves that they had never heard such singing before. Each man seemed to sing it as a prayer unto God, and while there were possibly 300 present, each voice was subdued.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings Bishop Carmichael was the speaker. There was so much interest taken in the lectures that the meetings were thrown open to everyone.

Sunday, October 4, at half past two, President Smith and Bishop Carmichael conducted a round table. One and one half hours were devoted to the session. Many written questions had been sent up to the desk, and the answers evidently were satisfactory. The character of the questions revealed a genuine desire for information.

During the lectures, the speakers, under the blessing of the Lord, repeatedly demonstrated that they were men “speaking with authority.” These services were conducted in an effort to carry out the policy of the leader of the church that the church shall have an enlightened people.

The extent of the study President F. M. Smith had given to this subject to properly qualify himself for the work to which the Lord has called him was a revelation to many of the priesthood. He suggested to the brethren a list of books they should read on these various matters that they might become acquainted with the world’s philosophy on these subjects. He suggested certain books of the Bible which they should study, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, to which special attention should be given. He clearly pointed out the fundamental weaknesses of socialism and communism, that both aimed at developing class hatred, and warned the ministry against partaking of this spirit, as Christ’s philosophy demanded the “brotherhood of man.” After these books had been read, the ministry could readily see the Lord had revealed the real solution of this problem.

Some High Lights in President F. M. Smith’s Address

One of the big problems of the church is to eliminate poverty. The first fruits of stewardship would be to bring about a leveling process—lifting up the poor by the rich turning their surplus into the group, which would automatically eliminate poverty. A great evil in the world to-day is the unscientific effort at philanthropy. The church is also guilty of this. The doctrine of stewardship would permit the poor to help themselves. There is no provision in our philosophy for idlers. Our aim is to reorganize society that labor will be sanctified. Hoover has referred to United States individualism. He has shown how wealth has been accumulated, but he has failed to reveal how it is to be distributed. Our philosophy would cause a just distribution of the wealth of the group and automatically keep it distributed. The present system of intense individualism produces the peaks and valleys in the distribution of wealth, while our method of organized society on the stewardship plan would automatically distribute the wealth produced by individuals for the benefit of the group as a whole.

Thursday evening the choir was present. They seemed to be especially skilled in rendering the beautiful anthem, “How beautiful upon the mountains.”

Bishop Carmichael is a teacher by profession, and he has a clear, terse, and effective way of expressing himself. Among other things he said, “We have a tremendous task to perform, but can we be satisfied with anything less? Preparation is necessary. Who can call God’s laws sordid? Can one law which emanates from God be more true than another? We must think as God thinks. God said he has never given a law which would make men selfish; but why? There is no provision in our philosophy for individualism.

The world is sick of poverty. The bread and butter question must be governed by spiritual law. We may call it temporal, but God looks upon it as spiritual. Labor must be lifted higher and higher. Abraham made a failure of organizing society the way God wanted it; so did Moses; so did Joshua; so did Christ. But Enoch made a success of it. Why was Enoch successful and Christ unsuccessful? Christ said, ‘How oft would I have gathered you, but ye would not.’ Under the leadership of to-day, when men are trying with their might to bring about a successful reorganization of society, shall it be said, ‘Ye would not?’ Enoch was not an individualist. He was for the group. What man has done, men can do. Enoch socialized his people. Every activity of Enoch’s group was sacred. Do you get the vision? The Lord gave the law of tithing which primarily goes to support the families of the missionaries. When the church ceases to be a missionary church, it will be a failure. Our missionary efforts in the future will be more or less unlimited until we demonstrate to the world that our theories are workable. The world is sick of theory. They want demonstration. This is the call to demonstrate that our philosophy is of God and therefore workable. The Bishop shall not have all of the say as to what shall be done with the surplus. The business men of this church must be organized to distribute the wealth of the church property.”

Group No. 1 used the Campus several times this year for picnic purposes. Group 20 had a gathering in the dining hall.
The Laurel Club had a picnic supper on the Campus, forty-one being present. The choir had a social evening for its members in the studios of Paul N. Craig and Arthur H. Mills on North Liberty Street September 29.

Brother P. Guy Fairbanks, who has been secretary in the Presidency's office for the past eight years, has resigned to go into the insurance business. Brother Fairbanks's pleasing personality will be very much missed in the Battery Block offices.

Brother C. A. Gurwell, who recently sold his Good Luck Cereal Mill, has closed his business and gone to San Diego, California, to spend the winter, while Sister Gurwell remains in Madison to keep the home where they have made their residence for some years, and which they expect to have in full motion again upon the return of Brother Gurwell.

Harvest Festival of the land of Zion opens Thursday at the Campus and will continue until Sunday evening. Good programs of speaking and of music have been arranged for Thursday and Friday evenings; Saturday evening the regular program of the Campus Committee will be given, which includes a good picture; Sunday evening the closing address will be given at the Stone Church by President Elbert A. Smith.

Apostle R. S. Budd was the speaker at the Stone Church at eight o'clock Sunday night, choosing as his theme the subject of "Sowing the seed!" and dwelling mostly on the "tares" of jealousy, suspicion, hatred, deceit, and self-pity. He quoted the old adage that "the Devil has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all." He related several incidents in his missionary experiences which brought out clearly the fact that any person sowing any one of these tares is simply another victim of egotism. As it was sacrament Sunday the choir was present Sunday evening and rendered their regular monthly musical concert from half past seven until eight o'clock.

Second Church

Attendance at the young people's eight o'clock prayer meeting was light, as was the attendance at the service of the Lord's supper at eleven o'clock, but Sunday school reported an attendance of 260.

Sunday afternoon the funeral of the infant of Brother and Sister Guy Hurshman occurred, from the residence of Brother and Sister J. E. Foukis to Mound Grove Cemetery, where the beautiful little form of the day-old infant now sleeps.

Elder Charles Edmunds preached a short but instructive sermon Sunday evening to the largest audience we have seen congregated on Sunday evening since very early in the summer.

The young men are planning the formation of a club which is to manifest itself in Sunday school, Religio, and at other church services and functions, and will lend aid to church activities and enterprises.

Walnut Park

Sunday was promotion day at the Walnut Park Sunday school, and the older ones again enjoyed the beautiful sight of seeing scores of tiny tots and juniors marching up from the basement and down the aisles to the front of the church, while those being promoted took their places in the choir loft. There were seventeen primary pupils, nine juniors, and nine intermediates. Department superintendents received their new members with appropriate short talks, and the pastor gave an encouraging talk to the entire school.

The hour and more of the sacramental service was fully occupied, every song, prayer, testimony, and exhortation conveying a heartening message to the listening Saints.

Many of the Walnut Park Saints have attended the open meetings at the Stone Church the past week, necessitating the canceling of group meetings and Religio, which will now be resumed.

Apostle J. A. Gillen, the speaker Sunday evening, held his audience like a magnet with the power of his delivery, aided clearly by inspiration from the Father above, whom he has learned by his wonderful experiences to trust implicitly. His expressed faith was, and will continue to be, a tower of strength to his listeners.

Liberty Street

The funeral of Brother George W. Cain was held Saturday afternoon at the Liberty Street Church at three o'clock, in charge of Pastor J. M. Baker. The sermon was by Brother W. S. Macrae, pastor at Warrensburg, Missouri, who was a life-long friend of the family. Brother Cain died Thursday at midnight, at the age of seventy years. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Dora Cain, and three sons, besides two grandchildren. Internment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Enoch Hill

Former Pastor Charles Fry, recently returned from England, greeted his friends at Enoch Hill Sunday and was heartily welcomed.

This district maintained its reputation at the eleven o'clock sacramental service, having as usual a large crowd and a good meeting.

The seven o'clock sermon was preached by Apostle J. F. Curtis, taking his text from Luke 19.

The Department of Women of Group 32 have raised $100 toward the church debt. Their success is commendable and should be an example to others in showing what a united effort can accomplish.

Those named as the committee to collect for the Graceland Endowment are Roy Hill, J. C. Alexander, Harold Hatty, and Sisters Kramer, Clements, and McKean.

East Independence

Several from East Independence attended the priesthood meetings and the open meetings held at the Stone Church last week.

Sunday morning a very fine sacramental service was experienced, as there was a good spirit present throughout the meeting.

In the afternoon quite a delegation attended the round table meeting at the Stone Church.

Brother J. J. Teeter preached a good sermon in the evening.

Coalville (Iowa) Branch Over the Top

A Testimony and Its Result

Coalville is only a small branch in the Gallands Grove District. It is a small inland town. During the past season they have been engaged in repairing and renovating the little church at a cost of five hundred dollars, which sum has been funded and paid. This was a burden to the small membership of 108.

Upon our arrival here we were more than pleased when the branch president told us that the subscriptions for the Graceland Endowment Fund were already coming in and that half of the quota for the branch was subscribed. Next day a brother told me of his experience while the president of the branch was making his announcement regarding the amount of the quota for the branch. He told how the Spirit directed him to subscribe a hundred dollars to the drive in order to stimulate others to make it a success. He further stated that he did not have a dollar of the money on hand, but during the week approached a man who had been owing him that amount for some time, telling him just the situation and that he now needed the money, and the check was willingly given. That check is now in the hands of the branch president for the full amount.

Another brother told me that it was one of the most peculiar and marked manifestations that he had ever witnessed in the church. He was so impressed in the meeting that he also subscribed a similar amount. Another made his contribution in the same meeting, so that half of the quota was subscribed.

After hearing of the manner in which the Spirit had indicated the duty of the Saints, we thought it would be a good thing to put this across thirty days ahead of schedule. A suggestion to the branch president indicated he was in accord. The result was that by the close of the Sunday evening service all but seventy-five dollars of the total quota had been raised. The subsequent result is that the entire amount has been subscribed, and oversubscribed to the extent of nearly fifty dollars, and the end is not yet.

We feel to mention that three nonmembers subscribed toward the drive to the extent of twenty-five dollars each, thus indicating that they are interested in the welfare of the church of which their companions are members.

We trust and hope this will prove an incentive to other branches and to our membership in general to “go and do likewise.” We are surely pleased to report that this branch is thirty days ahead of the schedule, and also over the top with a bound.

Yours for the success of the same,

F. T. MUSSELL

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

On last Sunday afternoon, the regular monthly stake meetings, postponed from September 20, were held at three o’clock. The men have taken up the study of the lectures of Bishop Carmichael, which have appeared in the HERALD, now furnished in booklet form, with J. A. Tanner as teacher. However, they will probably meet oftener than once a month, time of which has not been determined.

The Department of Women was favored with a lecture by President F. M. McDowell at the same hour. Brother McDowell was the speaker at eleven o’clock to a fair-sized and appreciative audience.

The Lord’s supper was administered this morning, and Patriarch F. A. Smith preached one of his characteristic sermons to-night, which was reported as excellent.

November 1 to 8 a series of special meetings will be held for the young people of the stake, with President Elbert A. Smith as speaker. Particulars will be announced later.

The special week’s meetings following the opening on the 20th, by Apostles D. T. Williams and F. Henry Edwards, were well attended, the result being a better understanding of the faith and a closer fellowship upon the part of those who attended.

Malvern Church

The Religio is gradually building up in attendance. Friday night was regular recreation night, usually all participating, but this time they had moving pictures followed by ice cream, the proceeds of which paid for the pictures. Everyone enjoyed the fun. They have opened their church for religious day-school, which begins October 7. They expect a larger enrollment than last year, when it was over two hundred and fifty. President F. M. McDowell has secured a fine corps of teachers, as follows; Sisters Strachan, Helen Page Brackenbury, Gracie Preston, from Independence and Sister Cyril Wight, now in the stake. Others are also volunteering their services, all of which insures success to this worthy project.

On the 27th, Apostle F. H. Edwards was the morning speaker and Stake President J. A. Tanner occupied at 7.30, both efforts being much appreciated.

Grandview Church

They had the pleasure of listening to Apostle Myron A. McConley September 27 at the evening service. The girls and boys volley ball teams enjoyed themselves at a wiener roast Monday evening the 28th.

Fourth Church

Sunday, the 27th, was set apart as girls’ day, in harmony with Kansas City officials, churches, and schools. Fitting programs were arranged for the various services of the day. Sisters R. E. Newkirk and M. A. Ettenhouzer were the lecturers, morning and evening respectively.

The girls’ day in the city was really sponsored by the Cooperative Club, a business men’s association, who spent months and money about the affair which found its expression in a street parade with 5,000 school girls in line, which was one of the most interesting parades ever seen by your reporter—vivacious, active, a little noisy, but orderly; ward, parochial, including colored and Mexican, each school vying with others in making the best showing. It is said to be the first effort of its kind in the United States. In our church, the festive events scheduled for the Fourth congregation, has this to say in regard to the girls: “We find them in executive positions of responsibility, teaching; classes in the music department, in social leadership, and so on. And all this in addition to just their bright happy presence. What should we do without them?”

Graceland Chats

Our Present Enrollment

Back on the hill are many familiar faces and others who in a remarkably short time will be familiar. It is very interesting to notice that the Junior class of the college is larger this year than ever before, while the sophomores register about the same as last year.

As usual, the student body is composed of representatives from all over the States, and from abroad. The following figures show how varied our representation is: Lamoni 60; Iowa, 45; Independence, 19; Michigan, 15; Nebraska, 13; Missouri, 11; Kansas, 9; Illinois, 8; Colorado, 8; California, 5; Idaho, 4; Pennsylvania, 4; Ohio, 4; Wisconsin, 3; Oklahoma, 3; Alabama, 2; North Dakota, 2; Oregon, 1; Maine, 1; Minnesota, 1; New York, 1; Florida, 1; South Dakota, 1; Indiana, 1; Massachusetts, 1; England, 4; Australia, 2; Canada, 1; Isle of Pines, 1; Syria, 1. Total 232.

Annual Faculty Recital

During the summer one of the Graceland friends visiting in Michigan overheard this conversation: “What kind of talent is displayed at the lyceum numbers in Lamoni?” and on being assured that it was of a high order, the first speaker continued, “Yes, I suspected it was. Graceland has the reputation of demanding the best.”

This reputation was certainly fully sustained on the evening of the annual faculty recital. Lamoni demanded the best, and indeed she was not disappointed.

The recital was held as usual in the Brick Church, which was comfortably filled by students from the college and the townpeople. The former students knew they were in for a real treat, but the new students were not so sure. The element of doubt was plainly visible, but at the close of the evening all this doubt had been dispelled most satisfactorily. Graceland students have every reason to be very proud of their faculty, for the display given on Friday night was of an exceptionally high order. Mr. Anthony represented the band and orchestra department by two clarinet numbers. A trio made up of Miss Emma Snead, violin; Mr. Anthony, cello; Miss Gertrude White, piano, was very pleasing. The piano department was very ably represented by Miss Jessie Mae Morris in three selections, well chosen and very well executed. The department of speech was represented by Miss Ruth Fisher, who used a selection from Shakespeare’s “Twelfth Night.” The department of violin was cared for very effectively by Miss Emma Snead, while Miss Doris Gieselman represented the department of voice in a number of well-chosen selections.

It is beyond question that so thoroughly enjoyable a time was very highly appreciated by the audience, and their appreciation has already traveled far beyond the confines of Lamoni.
Lambda Delta Sigma

The first meeting of the Lambda Delta Sigma Society, Alpha Chapter, was held Thursday evening, September 24, in the gymnasium. The occasion was of the order of a social get-together, in order that the new members might become more thoroughly acquainted with the former ones. A thoroughly good time was enjoyed, a picnic dinner shared by all, then a business meeting brought the evening to a close. It was a very happy occasion, and everybody left full of enthusiasm, determined to make more of their Lambda Delta pledges than they had done heretofore.

An Interesting Chapel Talk

On Monday, the 28th, Graceland students and the people of Lamoni were fortunate in having for their speaker in chapel, Doctor John Tigert, Commissioner of Education, Washington, District of Columbia. At the invitation of President Briggs, Doctor Tigert drove over from Leon to address the students of Graceland.

His address was extremely enjoyable, the theme practically being, "If I could live college over again I would take it more seriously." Doctor Tigert went on to say he would not choose from the study course only "snaps," but rather some of the harder studies from which determination, will power, fortitude, and courage would develop. He explained that to learn a few things well is infinitely better than to make a slipshod attack on a great many.

The point of greatest interest was that the speaker said he would not attend other than the church school on account of the development of character in the church colleges. To us this was particularly interesting, "A system of education which lacks the element of religious training, which does not develop a spirit of love rather than hate is a system which we dare not risk," were Doctor Tigert's closing remarks.

Young People at Grand Rapids

The second annual state convention of the young people of Michigan will be held at the Coliseum, 78 Commerce Street, Grand Rapids, October 24 and 25. The program for the convention is of a high order, and everyone should attend.

Saturday will open with a prayer service at nine o'clock. At ten the convention will assemble in classes. These classes will have as their instructors, F. M. McDowell, a member of the First Presidency; and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. It is expected to have Bishop C. J. Hunt present, and he will assist. Other classes will be formed as the occasion demands.

Saturday evening Elder McDowell will be the speaker, and he will address the convention on Sunday. The music will be in charge of Elder B. H. Doty of Traverse City, and he promises a large orchestra to furnish the music.

A state musical program will be broadcast from station W B D C, of the Baxter Laundry and Dry Cleaners. The call letters of this station stand for "World Baxters Dry Cleaners." This program will be on the air at seven in the evening, and from the present response of the state talent, it will be of a high order.

The hotels of the city are cooperating with us and have reduced their rates for the convention. Those driving cars will find plenty of available parking space at the Grand Rapids Garages, Inc., who have also reduced their rates to accommodate the conventioneers.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday and Sunday, October 17 and 18. We are making a special effort to get every Religio worker present for the two days, and we believe we have something very practical to offer. The nature of the program will be about as follows, and it will be noted that we have Professor Lonzo Jones of Graceland College, a young man and one of the best speakers in the church.

Sixteen Baptized; Ages Eight to Eighty

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, September 29.—The Saints feel encouraged since the tent meetings held for three weeks by Elders A. H. Christensen and H. E. Winegar. Sixteen were baptized, the oldest eighty years old and the youngest eight.

Brother Christensen was here a week before Brother Winegar came, and he laid one of the best foundations for a series of meetings we ever heard, and many were interested in the preaching.

It is with sadness that we report the death of Sister Mary Parker, the wife of Brother R. J. Parker. She and Brother Parker came from Maysville, Arkansas, as he was fortunate enough to draw a claim one mile from Davidson. They moved here in August, 1901. Brother Christensen preached the funeral sermon at the grave of his dear friend.

The Department of Recreation and Expression put on its first program Sunday evening, September 27, the first since July. The subject was, "Were there any prophets after John the Baptist?" Some good things were brought out. Quite a number of nonmember friends were there and gave good attention.

About fifty of the Saints and their friends met and had a wiener roast just recently. After the roast both old and young played games until a late hour. They were like one big family. It is good to have this foretaste of Zion.

On the afternoon of September 13 we had a hailstorm that destroyed several hundred acres of cotton. Several windows were broken out of the Saints' church.

May God's blessings be with his children.

Our Departed Ones
BIERLEIN.-John Peter Bierlein was born at Gustenfelden, Bavaria,
Germany, November 3, 1844, the son of Leonard and Margarette Bierlein.
Came to America in 1853 at the age of nine years, locating near Hamilton, Ohio. Moved to North Freedom, Sank County, Wisconsin, in 1859.
Married Miss Sophia Ode in January, 1865, who was born at Tabelitz, Macklenburg, Sheorin, Germany. To this union nine children were born, and besides this lie assumed early in life the responsibility of caring for his widowed mother and the rest of her family. Baptized in March, 1865, and in October, 1874, was ordained an elder. He presided over the branch at North Freedom, and in 1884 moved with his family to Dakota Territory. In 1910 he came to Independence with his wife and daughter, where he resided until his death September 11, 1925. His wife and five children preceded him. The gospel was uppermost in his life from the time he embraced it.
WILDERMUTH.-Eli M. Wildermuth was born November 22, 1836, at !ndependence (now Charleston), Illinois. When a small boy he moved with his parents to southern Wisconsin. 'Baptized August 15, 1850, by Zenos H. Gurley and not long after was ordained an elder. Ordained a seventy by Zenos H. Gurley and J. W. Briggs at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, October 8, 1855. Labored locally until 1863, when in connection ·With C. G.

Lamphier he traveled through Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri on foot, preaching the gospel and baptizing many. He reinained in active missionary service fifty-five years, and as a superannuated minister during the rest of his religious service to the church. It is claimed that he and his brothel'. Edwin, of Oakdale, Nebraska, were the two remaining charter members of the Reorganization. He always bore a strong testimony to the work,· and only a short time before his death said in the Plano church that he had faith and confidence that the Presidency of the church would lead it to victory. Died September 14; 1925, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Moore, of Plano, Illinois. Leaves one brother one sister nine children, forty grandchildren, and twenty great-grandchildren, besides many relatives and friends. Funeral sermon by W. A. McDowell, assisted by J. L. Cooper. Interment in Plano Cemetery.
.JENSEN.-J. Charle~ J~.msen was born at Copenhagen, Denmark, June 17, 1847. Departed this hfe at Council Bluffs, Iowa, September 2, 1925, a!;'ed 78 years, 2 months, 15 days. With his mother he came to America in 185~, the:!'. goin!> to S~I~ Lake City, Utah. Upon their arrival they were disappointed in cond1t1ons they found, and as soon as opportunity a~orded they left, again wending their way eastward. He, then a boy of nme years, traveled on foot many, many miles through an unsettled and undeveloped country, reaching Council Bluffs, Iowa, in the summer of 1857. Herc they made their home practically all the remainder of their lifetime, his mother departing this life in 1909. "Charlie," as he has always been familiarly known among his friends, went to the public school when able, and worked 'for the Nonpareil newspaper and did other odd jobs a studious and industrious boy could get to do. In 1864 (when Abraham Lincolµ was President) Charlie's mother was married in this city to Andrew Hall, and he and Charlie engaged in the furniture business on Middl~ Br~adway, under the firm.name of Hall and Jensen, which partnership existed for some years and was then dissolved. Then he worked as a drug clerk and in the Bushnell Bookstore. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Council Bluffs, ,Iowa, by President Joseph Smith on October 18, 1871, and from that time till death (a period of time covering fifty-four ,years) he remained a faithful and consistent member, serving the local branch and church in various official places in an efficient ·and commendable way. He never married. He leaves a foster sister, Mrs. Annie Booth of Watts California, and a host of friends, many of years' standing, an'd others the younger ones whose parents were his close friends in the days when they were "here, that are now past and gone.' Charlie has gone to his r:eward. The ranks of the church n1ilitant have again been broken, and one of our pioneer members has crossed the bar to join the church triumphant .. In the passing of Brother J. Charles Jensen we have lost one of the Old Guard. He was one of the early members of the Reorganization, being very closely associated with the branch organization in Council Bluffs. and has . rendered service in various ways. He has occupied -as Sunday school superintendent, branch clerk, Sunday-school teacher, and for many years acted as clerk for the district; and also as historian. In all th<;se place.s of, trust Brother Jensen served very efficiently, taking great interest 1n hlS work. and was always very careful to avoid errors.
He was sound in the faith, and no one was better informed in the doctrine and history of the church than was Brother Charles. As a Sundayschool teacher he ranked high. Many have been heard to express th<;ir appreciation of his efforts along this line. He was known as a n1an of integrity and uprightness. Since the death of his mother a number of years ago, he has been alone in the world so· far as blood relationship is concerned. He was not, however:1_·, without friends, and. he found truthfulness in the words of the hyn1n, "The friends that most cheer ine on life'·s rugged ·road are the friends of my Master, the children of God.'' This to our brother was not an idle dream, for he was cared for during his last illness by Sister Nelson and family with all the kindness and tenderness of a near relative.

aged brother. Baptized by T. W. Smith in_ New Brunswick March 11, 1869, and three days later was ordained a priest by the same brother.
September 3 of the same year he was ordained an elder by T. W. Smith, to be a seventy, being thus ordained in Jonesport, Maine, September 3, 1873, by T. W. Smith. Later, in Independence, Missouri, he was chosen and ordained to. be one 9f ·the seven presidents of seventy, under the hands of Alexander H. Smith. His travels for the church carried him over a large part of the United States and parts of Canada, and through his ministry thousands heard the gospel and many were baptized and rejoiced in the glad news. Sister Foss was ever ready that he should go and . shared equally the hardships and the joys of service. Their rewards are sure, and their lives of sacrifice are an example to all who knew them.

Stewardship
Brings Responsibility and Provides Opportunity

Supplying this need of the College will make the actual operation of Stewardships a reality.

“Buy the Land”
Every District, Every Branch, Every Member

Can now share in keeping this commandment given in 1881. This $200,000 Endowment and Stewardship fund will be used to “buy land” which in turn will be sold.

Only to those who will operate it on a Stewardship Basis.

The establishment of Agricultural Stewardships is fundamental in the development of Zion.

The Graceland College Endowment is a demand made of the College (and the Church) by an outside association.

Raising the fund now is an emergency we must meet.

This emergency will be used to put our social program into operation by using the money to Make Stewardships Effective at Once

In the past no effort has ever been too great for the Saints to make when the progress of the church is at stake.

CHANGING LEAD to GOLD
The transmutation of baser metals into gold was the dream of ancient alchemists. But they did not succeed. Neither is there a “secret” recipe for saving money to-day.
A country school teacher once asked a bright lad the meaning of the word “famous.”
"Why?" the lad answered and thought a moment, "why, famous means, well—just famous."
Just so with saving. Saving merely involves spending less than you earn. Do that and you cannot help but save. Fail to do it and you can never save.
There are many plans for saving, but after all the actual practice of thrift rests with you and your will power.

The Two Great Commandments

II. AS THE BASIS OF ECCLESIASTICAL LAW

And Jesus said unto him, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."—Matthew 22:37-40.

In ecclesiastical or church laws it is quite clear that the two commandments mentioned by our Lord are basic. Given those two only, we could almost supply the others by deduction.

So far as the Christian dispensation is concerned, we might say that the ten commandments were the beginning of the law. By that we mean that the Mosaic economy was, as Paul said, a "schoolmaster to bring men to Christ." True, Adam had the law, and so did Enoch. But our record of their law is meager. With the giving of the decalogue, the way began to be cleared for the full revelation of the gospel dispensation which brought the "perfect law of liberty" to light.

When we read the story of Sinai, we are duly impressed with the demonstrations of majesty and power that accompanied the giving of the law. We are told that the mountain was all of a smoke. There were thunderings and lightnings and the insistent, dominating sound of a trumpet. The hosts of Israel trembled in fear and dared not even touch the foothills abutting Sinai.

In the motion picture, "The ten commandments," an effort has been made to depict this scene. It is man's most ingenious and daring attempt to visualize that tremendous divine drama. Moses is depicted standing over against the cliff in the midst of the tempest of thunder and lightning and fire and smoke. From time to time out of a dazzling chaos of light and glory one commandment after another takes shape in letters of fire and projects itself forward to confront him. Then with mallet and chisel he carves it upon the tablet of stone outlined upon the granite cliff. When all are transcribed, there comes one blinding flash of lightning which smites the cliff and rends the tablet bodily from the solid rock, and it is ready for Moses to deliver to his following.

With or without the aid of this dramatization, the bare record enables us to grasp the idea that majesty, force, power, dominion were displayed in the giving of the law. As at Horeb, Moses learned again the lesson of one great God. He grasped the message of monotheism. The Great I AM had spoken.

One great God had been revealed. But what kind of a God. First of all, a God of power. It was natural that fear, even terror, should be the reaction. Where fear is the attitude, worship takes the form of bribery. God is a being to be kept in good humor by offerings, so that at least he will leave us alone and not visit wrath upon us; or at best that he may condescend to bestow favor.

Where the attitude is love rather than fear the natural reaction in worship is service and fellowship. It may well be that the revelation at Sinai was the best that could have been given to a stubborn and rebellious body of people. The schoolmaster to bring men to Christ had to assert authority first.

But back of the law were fundamental principles later revealed through Christ. Moses revealed God. Jesus interpreted him. Moses said God is. Jesus came to show us what sort of God he is.

His first great commandment, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," brings to our attention one great figure: Jehovah. It also brings to our attention one great principle, The fatherhood of God. He taught us to pray, "Our Father, who art in heaven." I heard one man interrogate President Frederick M. Smith. He had heard it said that President Smith did not believe in a personal God and so came to put him to the test theologically. President Smith replied, "I never repeat the Lord's prayer, 'Our Father which art in heaven,' without having a vivid sense of the personality of God."

Jesus came to interpret God as a personal God and to teach us the attitude of sonship. That was his province as the "Son of God."

He gives us to understand that primarily, underlying all ecclesiastical law from the days of Adam to the present time, is the first great commandment.
to love the Lord. That is fundamental, since our attitude toward God determines our whole religious life, including our attitude toward our fellow men.

In a way this first commandment underlies all our missionary program. Missionaries go out to reveal the Lord to men and to teach them how to know and love him. Paul on Mars Hill found many altars. Many so-called gods found free domicile on the sunny slopes of that great pinnacle of culture and learning. At last he found one erected to “the Unknown God.”

There was Paul’s opening. The many altars testified to man’s unending search for Deity. The one altar to “the Unknown God” testified to their failure to find satisfaction. There was the preacher’s opportunity. And that is still the basis of missionary work.

Man’s search for God has gone forward in every land and clime and in all ages. It is not strange that this should be so. If I walk in a well-ordered garden and observe the arrangement of masses of flowers and foliage, with appropriate open spaces, and well-blended colors, I know that back of the garden is one who planned and planted—a personality. If I walk in the switch yards of a great railroad terminal and see the engines shunting cars to and fro in the complex maze of tracks, and see great overland trains depart east and west at frequent intervals, I know that back of it all is intelligence, direction, personality.

If I did not already know quite well what sort of personality is back of the garden and the switch yard, my curiosity would be aroused to go search and find out. All about us in nature, in our own beings, above us in the skies, we see order, design, processes constantly leading to definite, intelligent, and intelligible results. So it is natural that man should have ever felt that back of it all is intelligence, personality.

But here is intelligence on an incomprehensible scale. Both the telescope and the microscope reveal worlds within worlds. Here is infinity. No wonder man’s imagination and zeal have ever been fired to go out and find this God, especially as man’s own eternal welfare is involved in the search. But the problem is too complex for him to solve alone. Everything with which we have to do is finite; it is so big, or so long, or so heavy, or endures so many years. Now we go to seek the Infinite, the Immeasurable. No wonder God cannot just walk around and let us look at him. No wonder the children of Israel were warned to beware of his glory.

Moses could talk about such a God. But it was necessary for Christ to come and help us through his blended manhood and divinity to form contacts with God, to understand him, to love him. And the first lesson for us to learn is that of love. On that basis the search may go forward. Man cannot “by searching find out God”; he may find many evidences of him, but only through revelation can understanding come. And revelation is founded on the principle of love.

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Judas saith unto him, (not Iscariot,) Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world? Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

—John 14:21-23.

(The Harvest Festivalt Movement)

There is no activity which can be entered into by Latter Day Saints which will so link the physical and material things with the spiritual affairs of life as the Festival of the Harvest, and for this reason it should be encouraged throughout the domain of the Church.

The joy which comes with the gathering of the fruits of the land, whether it be the flowers and grasses, the grains, or the fruits produced by the vine and the tree, should be kept a pure and wholesome and reverential joy, and activities which are inspired by a desire to accomplish this purpose are natural and religious.

At Independence the movement to institute an annual harvest festival has been growing stronger for several years, and this season it assumed such a considerable proportion as to attract not only Latter Day Saints but many of our neighbors who are citizens of the city and of contiguous rural territory, some contributing exhibits which enhanced the value of the offering to be placed in the hands of the bishops for the use of the poor and needy, and the sustaining of the charges of the church.

For several years the congregation of the Second Church has set apart Friday, Saturday, and Sunday of some week in the autumn which they have named the Harvest Festival. They have worked through a committee, but all have worked to lighten the committee’s burden, and a joyful, profitable season has always resulted. Men, women, and children have shared alike in the work and the entertainment of this feast of the harvest, and a feeling of unity, or a common purpose to be served, has grown to be one of the anchors of love and friendship to be found and noted in this congregation.

In the fall of 1924 the little church at the corner of Delaware Street and South Avenue which is known as Second Church proved too small, and inadequate in other ways for the purposes of a fitting and representative fall or harvest festival. Almost six hundred cans and jars of preserved vegetables and fruits were contributed as an offering at that time, besides boys and girls contributing a considerable number of chickens from flocks which had been suggested and made possible by the work of one or more of the harvest festival committee.

Immediately upon the closing of this annual meeting, a new committee was chosen, and it was expected would begin work at once upon the harvest festival for 1925. The conditions in the church were not conducive to the success of the undertaking, however, and nothing was done to keep up the growth of the movement, but a few believed so thoroughly in the value of this activity that even during the very late summer and early fall days they were able by Herculean effort to resuscitate the spirit of the movement and begin definite arrangement for a display and program to keep it alive.

These efforts culminated in the announcing of October 8, 9, 10, and 11 as the days set apart for the Harvest Festival of 1925, and the location was announced as the Campus. It was expected that a large tent would be secured, decorated, seated, and altogether fitted for the meetings, but at the last moment the weather became inclement, and the lower floor of the Institute Building was given to the committee for the collection of the offering, while the Stone Church was used for the programs.

Early in the week the work of gathering and placing the decorative material was begun, and along with this came the collecting of the offering in the shape of seeds, grain, fresh and preserved fruits and vegetables, and other offerings of the people presented for the care of the needy and as a manifestation of gratitude to God for the bounties of the land of Zion.

When the work was completed on Wednesday and Thursday, it was found that the ground floor of the Institute Building was groaning with the weight of its contents. The people of Zion had responded to the call to bring a little of their abundance and offer it for the laudable purposes suggested.

Friday morning a reporter of the Independence Examiner visited the building and wrote the following description, which will give our readers a very good conception of its appearance:

The seventh annual Harvest Home Festival, which is being held at the Campus under the auspices of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints Church, practically amounts to a county fair, with displays of superior fruits, vegetables, and other products from all parts of the county. The festival is one of the most unique affairs of its kind, in that the products displayed are donated to the church to be used for any kind of charitable purpose that Bishop J. A. Becker may see fit.

The festival started last night and will continue until ten o'clock Sunday night, keeping open until ten o'clock each night. It is open to the public without charge.

The displays are arranged artistically, according to groups, and the visitor passes through aisles lined on both sides with large quantities of attractive fruits, superb-vegetables, flowers, grains, canned fruits and vegetables, and tall shocks of corn. Practically everything grown in the county may be found on the shelves.

"Produce the best and save"—that is the lesson which the festival proposes to teach, according to one of the committee in charge. "The donations not only are to be utilized for charitable purposes, but they are intended to inspire persons to produce the best and utilize that which they produce," said a committeeman.

More than two thousand quarts of fruit and vegetables are being shown, and several truck loads of fresh fruit and vegetables are on display. Corn shocks, pumpkins, squashes, and flowers have been used in decoration of the entrance and corners of the rooms. "Harvest Home" spelled in corn and wheat on a large placard heads the display.

The Commodity Shop display, which fills one room, consists of articles of clothing for everyone, from a baby doll to an octogenarian, all made from old clothing and pieces of material which otherwise would be wasted. The church maintains the Commodity Shop to make articles from donations, to be sold at a very low rate to persons who are not able to pay current prices for clothing. The shop functions under the Social Service Bureau, which investigates the needs of unfortunate persons.

The displays were donated and arranged by all of the Latter Day Saints Churches of Independence and those in Englewood, Mount Washington, Atherton, Courtney, Spring River, and East Independence. The Flory Flora Company and Floris Floral Company have flower displays.

Bishop J. A. Becker, C. C. Koehler, and R. J. Lambert have charge of the festival, and the displays were arranged by Mr. Koehler with the assistance of the members of the Department of Women.

The Ukulele Lady in all her tropical splendor sits under a large tent of elephant ears and forms one of the most unique displays of the festival. She is decidedly a vegetarian, being composed of small pumpkins, carrots, potatoes, and onions with only the aid of a tuck to complete her anatomy. She was made by Mrs. A. V. Trego of Mount Washington. The elephant ears measure four feet in length and three feet in width at the widest point. Two huge mangel wurtzel beets have been made into dinosaur-like creatures. P. A. Sherman is displaying a huge bush of flaming scarlet sage, which measures four feet across the top. D. R. Hughes of Atherton is showing several ears of corn which Professor B. L. Hummel, of the Missouri College of Agriculture, characterized as one of the best he had seen this year.

Among the freaks at the festival are branches of apple and peach trees in full bloom. They came from the Hummel orchard on the Milton Road. A fifth cutting of alfalfa, which is 20 inches long, is another unusual display. It was raised by William Gard, Milton Road.

Small quantities of seed are being given to those who want them. The Boy Scouts of Independence are collecting seeds of all the varieties on display.

The evening programs at the Stone Church were entertaining and instructive. Bishop J. A. Becker was the speaker Thursday evening, after a specially enjoyable hour of music rendered by the talent of Independence.

Friday evening Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker, and he drew several lessons from Nature for the instruction and contemplation of an audience which had been prepared for his effort by song and instrumental music.

Sunday's sermon was by President Elbert A. Smith and will be given to the readers of the HERALD in the next issue.

The spirit of the harvest was given a good chance to permeate the membership of the church, and its wholesomeness is evident. New ambitions have been born in the minds of denizens of Independence, and we confidently expect that 1926 will bring out a display which will make the 1925 offering appear of less advantage than it now appears.

One of the principal gains which will result to the people who reside in towns and cities is the replacing of weeds and unsightly barren places by such growths as will please the eye and cause the passer-by to walk closer rather than to go by on the other side; and this change is needed in Zion and her stakes. God has given us the opportunity and the resources to beautify and make bountiful the land upon which we dwell, that all his human creation might have enough and to spare; that our eyes might be pleased, our hearts gladdened, our need for food and raiment supplied, our bodies strengthened, and our souls enlivened.

Let us learn to more intimately and intelligently praise the Lord of the harvest! R. J. L.

President Frederick M. Smith left home early last week for the West and Northwest. His appointments are made for attendance at three young people's conventions: Seattle, Washington, October 16, 17, 18; Spokane, Washington, October 23, 24, 25; Portland, Oregon, October 30, 31, November 1.

President Floyd M. McDowell leaves Independence to be present at the young people's meeting in Chicago October 16, 17, 18. From there he will go to Detroit for October 19 and 20; will visit Bay City October 21, 22; and will attend the State Young People's Convention of Michigan to be held at Grand Rapids October 23, 24, 25.

Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael made a trip to Denver, Colorado, in company with President Smith early last week, remaining there over Sunday, but returning to his offices in Independence Tuesday morning, while President Smith proceeded on his visit to the Northwest.

Apostle J. A. Gillen leaves Independence to-day for San Francisco, California, and several other points in the West and Northwest, to remain in that section for two or three months. He will likely be in attendance at some of the conventions of young people to be held this fall in Oregon and Washington.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson has gone to his missionary work in the East, having left Independence the last of the week.

News came by cablegram to the church offices yesterday stating that Elder Joseph Dewsnup, for long time a pillar among the English Saints, had died on Sunday. The English people are thus subjected to another heavy loss, and the church will miss the influence and activity of a good and capable man.

Wanted: Radio Reporters

In order to check up the transmission of the new 1000-watt station and its reception in all parts of the country, those in charge of the radio work are anxious to obtain regular reports from a staff of listeners who are concerned with the success of our church broadcasting.

If possible, it is desired to collect data on fading, comparative transmission from night to night, reasons for nonreception or unusually loud reception, changes in modulation quality, interference from other stations, etc.

If the necessary cooperation can be obtained, a very valuable report can be made, useful not only to us but also to other broadcasters. Such a report would be gladly used by radio organizations and their publications, and K L D S would receive due credit and desirable publicity.

How can you help? First, send for report blanks and stamped, self-addressed envelopes. Second, listen for K L D S at every schedule of broadcasting, whenever possible, and fill out the forms as indicated by instructions thereon. Third, mail reports twice each month. You will be kept supplied with report blanks and stamped envelopes.

Those who would like to help but are unable to listen more or less regularly are asked to so state in their first letter. Reports from such persons will be of assistance but will be handled separately.

Your cooperation is earnestly solicited for this experiment, which has possibilities for doing much good.

ARTHUR B. CHURCH.

Preparation

God of all, we in union beseech thee
   For thy strength that we need from above,
   That our minds may be filled with thy wisdom
   That our hearts may be touched by thy love.
   Oh, direct us, we pray, with thy Spirit,
   For without thee our efforts are vain;
   Give us clearness of vision and judgment
   In the things thou wouldst have us attain.

As young people a great work awaits us
   Hence we meet to gain strength for our task,
   That in truth we may live our religion,
   Doing all that thy wisdom may ask.
   So we here pledge our lives to thy service,
   That we'll work with our banner unfurled
   Till the plan brought to earth by our Savior
   Has truly united the world.
The Essence of the Christ Message

BY A. CARMICHAEL

1. Every man has the inherent right to state his own views—present his own message. He surely knows if anyone does, just what his ideas are. One of the great ideals for which the advanced races of all times have tenaciously clamored and willingly died is that of freedom of speech; but what does this terse and virile phrase, freedom of speech, mean? Simply another way of saying, "Let him tell his own story; he knows what he has to say better than anyone else."

2. If we were asked to state what we would consider the essence of the message of the Son of Man, we would unhesitatingly refer the questioner to the statements of the Master himself.

3. For surely the Christ had not only a clear, concise, and definite conception of the message which he was the bearer, but he also knew just how to state this message; and what is of far more importance, he knew how to live his divine tidings—to make these tidings flesh.

4. When approached by his cunning questioner, the Teacher of the ages had his chance to boil down into a few brief statements the philosophy for which he was willing to die—the philosophy which the combined experiences of the human race have demonstrated to be the best.

5. "Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

The Setting

6. Christ had been giving the Sadducees his ideas of the resurrection of the dead. They listened and were astonished at his doctrine. It is useless for us to say that Christ had no doctrine, for the record plainly states this important fact. And what is doctrine? A collection of principles in any branch of knowledge, and Christ knew whereof he spake. It was an opportune time for questioning the Master as to his belief—his doctrine—the principles he had espoused. Not only was it an opportune time for the one questioned, but the questioners had among them a man trained to ask questions, a lawyer, a man with a legalistic mind, one whose profession had taught him the art of asking questions going to the very root of things. That this certain lawyer was not a pettifogger is plainly apparent from the question put to the Savior. The Master had been for days advocating his doctrine. We can imagine somewhat the range of his intellectual mind. Two thousand years have come and gone, and no mind has been able to encompass in its philosophy the height and width and depth of the philosophy of Christ. To-day it stands without a peer—unique in its isolation—the only real hope of the sin-cursed world.

7. Well does the narrative say that this lawyer sought to prove Christ—to try him—to see if this wonderful man knew the very quintessence of his marvelous message. Was he presenting an ill-matured scheme? Did he see straight? Had this man gone over and through and around his proposition and tested every principle included therein? Was he giving a real contribution to the world?

"Master, which is the greatest commandment in the law?" Whether Jesus answered immediately or took time to consider, the record does not state, but the triumph of the Master Mind comes down to us through the ages as couched in this comprehensive, all-embracing answer: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

8. Did you ever listen to one of our able jurists sum up the whole case? With what consummate skill he pushes to one side the chaff, the irrelevant matter; then, mustering in battle array his evidence pro and con, weighing, evaluating, giving every piece of evidence its just value, finally in a few brief cogent paragraphs states his conclusion. We have heard many such. We have read with keen delight the chain of reasoning and the final verdict by our most able jurists, but they all sink into insignificance when placed beside this final summation of all the revelations of God to man and all the relations of man to man. The question was unanswerable by a finite mind, only an infinite mind could answer it, and that answer will stand as long as time shall stand, aye! even when time shall be no more, love, the "sole necessity of earth and heaven," will still hold its sway, for "charity [the pure love of God] endureth forever."

9. The love here asked for, both for God and our fellow man, must claim the undivided attention of the whole man. For we are to love God with all our heart or feeling, with all our soul or will power, and finally with all our mind or knowing. Our worship, then, of God should be one of deepest feeling, one of the strongest will power, and one of the highest intelligence. Surely God would be satisfied with no less. Mankind should offer no less. While this is true of our relationship with God, the Master gives us to understand that the same thing is true in our association with our fellow man, for he significantly says, "And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

10. Our psychologist friends tell us that the three great divisions of the ego of man are feeling, willing, and knowing. The Master knew this and couched his summation in such language as to require the whole man to recognize and worship his Maker.

To-day all Christendom is agreed that this abstract thing called love should be the dynamic of all our activities. But just what is this thing we term love? About all we can say is that it is an attribute of the Lord of hosts, just as yellow is an attribute of gold. As gold is indestructible, so is its color indestructible. Just so as God is indestructible, so is his attribute, love, not destructible. We know that this analysis of what love is, is not very satisfactory. For love in itself is an abstract thing. Rather would we try to state just how love manifests itself. Telling a person "to love God" is speaking in general terms and leaves the would-be worshiper in the fog. Again we repeat that the Christ of all men is the one to tell us what his ideas are as to the manifestations of love. Let us hear him:

11. "If you keep my commands you will remain within my love, just as I have kept my Father's commands and remain within his love."—John 15:10.

How easy, then, it is for us to tell who it is that loves. Husband, do you love your wife? If so, then you will keep inviolate all the laws governing your associations with her. My fellow citizen, do you love your country? Then you will be loyal to her laws. My brother, do you love your God? If so, then that love will be measured—commensurate with the effort that you make to keep the commands he has given you.

This love described by the Christ should hold full sway in the life of each one of us, for we should love with our whole heart or feeling. Love is not cold, not dead. It is warmth. It is life. Every emotion exercised by us should be the result of the urge of love. It crowds out bitterness, hatred, jealousy, pride, and all such. These have no place where true love dwells. These and love are incompatible. We are to love with our whole soul; the entire will power. That thing within each one of us that dares to do, to achieve, to climb back to the throne of God, cost what it may. The will to do. That something within us which if motivated by love will enable us to climb higher and higher until our destiny is assured; if motivated by hate will sink us deeper and deeper until the lowest hell will find us.
