12. We are to love intelligently, not ignorantly, for we are to love with our whole mind. This means that no matter how far afield we may go in search of truth—no matter how far our thirst for knowledge may take us—we cannot succeed unless this knowledge is seasoned by the love of God and man. If we take our journey in the realms known to men as Infinity plus—and out into the infinite abyss known to the finite minds as space; or, should we face about and delve into Infinity minus—into the atomic world—we can measure our success only in the degree that we clothe this acquired knowledge in the habilaments of love for God and our fellow man. Well has it been said, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." The filling full: for without love, law is the letter only and "the letter killeth."

13. "On these two hang all the law and the prophets." This seems almost incredible—to think that around this theme, love, this law of love, all other laws cluster. From the law of love all other laws radiate.

In the one single word love have we the real constitution governing heaven and earth and hell. All other laws are but secondary—emendations—enlargements, if you please: explanation of this one term, for "On these two," the love of God and the love of man, "hang all the law and the prophets."

Here is a challenge. The Master is telling us that every revelation from God to humanity, no matter where, when, or how, is but a restatement of God's conception of love. From the first of Genesis to the last of Revelation, wherein God himself speaks, or when through his beloved Son he reveals himself, or whether through angelic messengers, prophets, seers, revelators, apostles, or good men and women come light and instruction, invariably the object is to explain some detail of the God attribute—love.

The Goal

14. The end of all achievements will be perfect love. We are far from it to-day. This fact need not cause us to despair. We are the offspring of God, for "he is the father of all spirits." The ego within man is as infinite as its father—God—and like its Creator has the inalienable attribute called love. It is this that has furnished the greatest urge of the centuries past, and will continue to furnish the greatest urge until the demand for eternal life—living as God lives, loving as God loves—will have been obtained. Well has the Quaker poet made it the commanding drive of the human race when he says:
God Is Moving With His People.—No. 2

BY CHARLES COUSINS

There is another event which we desire to notice, which is of great moment and which is evidence that God is moving in his majesty to fulfill his promise. It is general knowledge that part of the Jews were slain and the other part taken captive, and their land became desolate unto them. This occurred in the year seventy, in fulfillment of the statement of the Savior when he wept over Jerusalem:

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, . . . how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—Matthew 23: 37, 38.

Since that time the Jews have been driven from pillar to post, being persecuted and slaughtered by thousands. And their home, Palestine, which God gave to Abraham to be for him and his seed an everlasting possession, has continued in the hands of the Gentile nations as it was in the days of the Savior. (For in the days of the Savior the Jews had to pay tribute to the Roman Emperor, Caesar.) And they have not had any rest since, being without a national home, and for hundreds of years they have been a hiss and a byword. The writer himself remembers quite well now that when the Jew came with his pack on his back he was looked upon with disdain. He was an outcast.

But the Savior himself indicated and gave promise that the Jew would some day come back to his own inheritance, for in Luke 21: 28 he says Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. This statement of the Savior is equal to saying that when the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled the Jew would again come back into his own inheritance.

Early in the last century there came a gleam of hope and a promise that the time was near when former-day Israel would be gathered back to his land, Palestine. God, being true to his word and working in his own way, “through his servant the prophet” as Amos said, in 1823 gave this promise. Joseph Smith, in his writings as recorded in Church History, volume 1, pages 11 and 12, makes the following declaration:

On the night of September 21, 1823, when retiring to bed, I betook myself to prayer, in which I asked God for his forgiveness of my weaknesses, and for a manifestation to me, . . . And I had full confidence of obtaining a manifestation from God as I had previously had one.

While I was thus in the act of calling upon God, I discovered a light appearing in the room, and a personage appeared at my bedside. . . . When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said he was a messenger sent from the presence of God, that God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be both good and evil spoken of among the people. . . . He then quoted the prophecies of the Old Testament, but with a little variation from the way it reads in our Bibles.

... One of the prophecies he quoted was the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled.

Please note that this angel of God which appeared unto Joseph Smith said the eleventh chapter of Isaiah was about to be fulfilled. In this chapter we have the following declaration:

And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.—Verse 12.

A few years after this announcement to the world, the Jews began to gain favor in the eyes of the world, the cloud began to be lifted off him, and step by step he came into favor and prospered, until today he stands par with every other citizen in nearly all the nations of the world. But as a financier he has been able to finance most, if not all, the nations of the world to-day. In this alone we can see where God has blessed Judah.

But all this prosperity has not relieved his heart's desire. For from the time he was driven out of his own land he has been a wanderer in strange lands, and his hope to be again established in his own land has not fully materialized.

At the commencement of the World War, Turkey held dominion over Palestine and was an enemy to the Jew. And it is evident that under Turkey's rule the Jew could never have been established in his own land. When the World War reached its height, Turkey succumbed to the arms of the British and French armies, who drove them entirely out of the land of Palestine. Thus Turkey no longer has dominion over the land which God gave to Abraham and to his seed. This paved the way for the British Government to voice its sentiments in favor of the Jew. And this she did.

Just seven months after the Prophet had said, "The hour has struck for the redemption of Zion," we have the following pronouncement from the British Government, in what is known as the Balfour Declaration:

The British Government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object.—William Balfour, Foreign Secretary, November 2, 1917.

After the World War was over, when the allied nations were met in council to consider the dividing up of the lands which the enemy had held, they apportioned Palestine to the British protectorate, and since that time Britain has been at work reconstructing the land and its people, evidently with the view in mind that Palestine shall be the national home of the Jews.

Then after about two thousand years of exile it has been made possible for Judah to return to her own land and be established there, fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah and confirming the message of the angel to Joseph Smith, that the prophecy of Isaiah was about to be fulfilled. It is also an evidence to the world that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God.

Is it not remarkable that these two events should occur so close together? One that the hour has struck for Zion's redemption, and the other that Palestine shall be the national home of the Jews? And are not these evidence that God is moving on behalf of his people?

Yes; to my mind it is so. And as he raised up a Cyrus to be an instrument in his hand to deliver his people from their bondage in Babylon after seventy years of captivity, so we believe he has taken hold of the British nation to be an instrument in his hand to help to bring about his purposes, in making it possible for Judah to be gathered back to the land of her inheritance.

The First Presidency.—No. 3.

BY J. W. PETERSON

Some Catholics and some Latter Day Saints hold that Peter went to Rome to live in A. D. 42 and lived there until 66 A. D., where he was crucified head downward. But let us see:

Paul was converted in 39 A. D. Three years later he went up to Jerusalem to see Peter. (Galatians 1: 18.)

After Paul's visit, Peter came to Lydda, afterward to Joppa, and still later to Cesarea, and returned to Jerusalem, all in the year 42. (Acts 9: 32-39; 19: 24; 11: 2.)

The Book of Acts is very particular about Peter's visits elsewhere, but not one word about his having gone to Rome.

Herod Agrippa died A. D. 45. Not long before his death he killed James (not the Lord's brother), and cast Peter into prison (Acts 12: 4). Peter had not yet gone to Rome to live.

Fourteen years after Paul's visit to Peter, the council at Jerusalem was called, and Peter was present. That would be 56 A. D. (Acts 15: 6; Galatians 2: 1.) From that council he went to Antioch. (Galatians 2: 11.)

Two years later Paul wrote his letter to the Romans, and in it he sent greetings to numerous saints and officers in Rome, but not one word to Peter, evidently because he was not there.

In the year 61 Paul arrived in Rome, and the brethren went out to meet him, but Peter is not mentioned. It is inconceivable that the two leading men did not meet each other.

In the year 66 Paul wrote his second letter to Timothy from Rome. Paul makes no mention of Peter. In fact, he says "only Luke is with me" (2 Timothy 4:11). Peter was not then in Rome and doubtless never was.

It is generally conceded that Peter was about five years older than Christ. In 66 A.D. he would be seventy-one. Rather old after that to go to Rome to establish church headquarters.

The above alibi was set forth in Rome about twenty-five years ago by the ripest scholarship from England in a public debate with the Catholic authorities, and the facts were never successfully met by the Catholics. The points were published throughout the Protestant world, but the Catholics did not even publish their side of the question. More than a decade later, after Gladstone's death, they said:

It is little less than scandalous that after the tested facts of the chair of Saint Peter being established in Rome, certain scholars should now arise to doubt that fact.

But the proofs are against them, and they dare not attempt a reply and cannot answer the criticisms; neither can any faction of the Latter Day Saints.

As we said before, none of the three presidents were ever in Rome, and that city was never the divine choice for the seat of the presidency.

A few more extracts from ancient history will strengthen our claims as to the presidency of James and his lineal right to that office. From the Biblical Encyclopedia, volume 1, page 681, we excerpt the following:

James was president of the church at Jerusalem.

From the Pictorial Bible, by David C. Cook, the following is taken:

James, who gave the final opinion in the assembly of the apostles and elders at Jerusalem, whom Paul named with Cephas (Peter) and John as one of the pillars, and who elsewhere appears as a man of commanding influence in the church at Jerusalem, also called the Just, was the author of the epistle that bears his name.

In Paul's account of the appearance of Christ he separates James and Peter from the rest of the apostles and indicates their superiority. (1 Corinthians 15:5-7.) These historical and Biblical accounts are sufficient to show that a presidency of three was placed over the rest of the officials in the church and of the church itself, and that their headquarters was at Jerusalem. They settled apostolic disputes and directed the apostles in their labors.

James was not therefore a bishop in the sense we use it or in any sense. He was beyond all doubt the chief seer—the overseer—the "chief of the clergy."

We can further determine the importance of James by his successors. Eusebius goes on to say:

After the martyrdom of James, and the capture of Jerusalem which immediately followed, the report is that those of the apostles and disciples of our Lord according to the flesh, for the greater part of them were yet living; these came together to determine who it was proper to pronounce worthy of being successor to James. They all unanimously declared Simeon the son of Cleophas, of whom mention is made in the Scripture, as worthy of the episcopal seat. . . . He was the cousin germain of our Lord.

This choice was occasioned because James died childless and because Simeon was next of kin. This conference, with apostles and others present, indicates something of the office which they chose Simeon to fill—the office of James. It is in harmony with the Doctrine and Covenants where it declares:

Every president of the high priesthood and presiding elder . . . is to be ordained by the direction of a high council or general conference.—17:17.

Should my servant . . . prove unstable and unfaithful, another may be chosen, according to the law already given.—127:8.

That is: lineage and the vote of the people. In that early time, indeed from the beginning, we have every reason to believe the church was under the same rules and regulations as now, and why not, seeing God is unchangeable and the nature of man is ever the same?

Lineage is recognized in many modern kingdoms, although fitness is often disregarded. May we not assume that lineal right in its proper form, in view of what we have presented, originated with the people of God. Indeed, all the standard books of the church are full of it, and it needs only to be stated to be proved. But not, of course, unworthy lineage.

In Kidder's Christian Pastorate, page 84, quoting Cyprian, he says of Cornelius, who was in line of succession from James:

Cornelius was made overseer by the judgment of God and of his Christ, by the testimony of almost all the clergy, by the suffrage of the people who were then present, and by the assembly of ancient priests and good men.

One can almost imagine himself in a Latter Day Saint general conference when choosing a president of the church. First, a revelation from God through Christ. Second, the testimony of those who have received divine evidence of the call. The assembly of the priesthood in separate assembly. The consent of good men, and, finally, the suffrage of the people present.

Concerning lineage there is also considerable history. In Bingham's Antiquities we read:

James as first bishop ( overseer) of Jerusalem . . . was designed as a peculiar honor . . . as the brother of Christ, for though our Savior usually gave preference to Peter and John and James, John's brother, but chose this James to be bishop ( overseer).—Vol. 1, p. 16.

Channing on James the Just, says:

After the resurrection (of our Lord) he (James) was honored with a particular appearance of our Lord to him, which, though passed over in silence by the evangelists is recorded.
by Saint Paul. Some time after this appearance he was chosen bishop ( overseer) of Jerusalem, preferred by all the rest for his near relation to Christ: For the same reason Simeon was chosen to be his immediate successor in that see, because after Saint James he was our Lord's nearest kinsman—a consideration that made Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, though they had been particularly honored by the Savior not to contend for the high and honorable station, but freely chose James the Just bishop ( overseer) of Jerusalem. —Pages 221, 222.

That Saint James was cousin of Christ, rather than brother, is a Catholic claim to avoid the lineal strength of his right. It has no foundation in fact and has been thoroughly answered by various scholars.

I am sure nothing could be more plain than that lineage was recognized with regard to the chief officer in the primitive Christian church. If the foregoing is not sufficient, then perhaps the following will answer:

For nothing is plainer than that Saint James ... presided among the apostles ... he was preferred before all the rest for his near relationship to Christ.

To say this choice was mere sentiment will not fit in with the ordination placed upon James by Christ himself, for he was beyond all doubt not subject to sentiment, nor can we in truth believe all the twelve would be ruled by sentiment, especially after receiving forty days of instruction with regard to the things of the kingdom after the resurrection and before the ascension of Christ. To deny lineage being acceptable in the early Christian church is to discredit oneself as a discerning reader. To deny it in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, with certain necessary exceptions, is to reflect on one's judgment.

As to the office of seer, every book accepted by the church speaks of it, and the New Testament would have been full of it if the translators had translated episcopo correctly. In the Inspired Version, Jesus refers to the name of Peter as indicating a seer. (John 1: 42.) As one of the presidency, that was his right. And this, too, agrees with the Doctrine and Covenants, where Hyrum Smith was given to understand that he was "a prophet, seer, and revelator as well as my servant Joseph." (Doctrine and Covenants 107: 29.) Thus every passage of scripture and every quotation of history which speaks of Saint Peter is legitimately answered when we know he was one of the three presidents of the church.

Perhaps I should answer one or two objections. The first is that Jesus did not appoint a presidency on the Western Continent, among the Nephites. I am very glad he did not, for then there would have been two presidencies on earth at the same time. We never could have answered our opponents with such a blunder confronting us. But Jesus did not blunder. He knew he had ordained James to be the chief officer in the church at Jerusalem and that he had two counselors. He would not place two chief quorum on earth at the same time. He did exactly the right thing in not appointing a presidency here. The Nephites were but a branch of the house of Israel; the main official stock was in Palestine.

But some assume that there was another quorum of apostles here. That is to assume knowledge beyond all written history. The twelve disciples here were never called apostles. And that of itself is sufficient to offset any mere assumption. The law of the church provides for a council of high priests abroad, and that was needed here, and the work they did here was of that character. (Doctrine and Covenants 99: 11.)

It is again assumed that because there are three who bear witness on earth, "the Spirit, the water, and the blood" (1 John 5: 8, I. V.), that therefore we must not have a presidency of three. This is fallacious reasoning. As a matter of fact, the Holy Ghost would in all probability seek on earth the likeness of things in heaven with which to associate—a presidency of three. There is neither a shade nor shadow of reason that indicates that because these three agree as witnesses on earth therefore there ought not, or cannot, be a presidency on earth.

With all the foregoing array of proofs, and there is much beside, I would be doing violence to my judgment to deny or even doubt the existence of a presidency of three in the primitive church when fully organized. Not all the facts are in the New Testament, and not all are in the Book of Commandments either. In former times much must be gained from subsequent history. In latter days much must be gathered from later revelations than those found in the Book of Commandments, which itself has a shade upon it. The whole church in former times made no objection or complaint when the revelations contained in the Book of Commandments were corrected to correspond to the truth of God in other ages of the world. The revelators themselves believed they corresponded in the Doctrine and Covenants more nearly to the original intention and inspiration of the Holy Ghost to them.

I am compelled to accept lineal priesthood in the church in order to be fair and honorable with ancient writers, and I am glad to do so, believing it to be the safest and best way to hold in check unworthy aspirants, besides being the will of God. I stumble no more that a worthy man should inherit his father's office than that he should inherit his property.

I rejoice that the church in latter days agrees so perfectly with the church in all dispensations. Our official arrangement is defensible anywhere, and before any people. I praise God that the church on earth is a reflection, a counterpart, of the one in
The need for an educated, intelligent, and sincerely devout body of seventies to promulgate the gospel, and high priests to preside over the churches, has been, and now is, felt very sensibly by very many who have the salvation of souls and prosperity of the church at heart.

Etiquette is not taught in the camp, nor the art of war in the nursery, neither are priests educated at Oxford, nor rabbis with the Jesuits; nor can we reasonably expect a plentiful supply of genuine Latter Day Saint elders to be furnished by the schools of the Gentiles; as well might we look for the sturdy oak in the hothouse, or the orange in Lapland, as for thorough, devout, self-abnegating elders from the popular schools of fiction and fashion; "tis contrary to the common course of nature—the child clings to the breast from whence it derives its nourishment, and the faith of the pupil is tinted with the mind of his professors.

Church property contributes to the stability of the work, and we need a school wherein to educate our own young men. As discipline detracts not from the courage of the soldier, neither would a proper ministerial education detract from the piety and earnestness of the ambassadors of truth; but on the contrary would give confidence, couple wisdom with their knowledge, and judgment with their zeal. . . .

Resolved, That this conference recommend for the consideration of the Twelve and the general church authorities the feasibility and advisability of establishing a school for the education of our own young men with a view to the ministry.

Joseph Smith

The establishment of schools we are most decidedly in favor of . . . If a people would be free, they must be intelligent, and intelligence other than the light of the Spirit must be cultivated, and cultivation must be had in the schools; and these schools to be effective for the people, must be of and by the people.—Saints' Herald, vol. 19, p. 19.

It was intended by the leading men of the church to seek to establish such an institution, [a college] when at all practicable, as far back as in the early sixties. Then the matter of locating a permanent business center for the church was being discussed and provided for, the education of the rising generation was also had under earnest consideration, and the subject has ever been one of living, growing interest with those whose duty it is to watch over and minister for the best interests of society and especially "the church of the Lamb of God." Prominent among those who, during those early years and since, have ardently advocated it, are the First Presidency, the Twelve, the Bishopric, the High Priests, Seventy, Elders, and other church officials, also a large proportion of the membership, prominent among whom are "Sister Frances" and a host of other faithful sisters.

The Saints need an institution of the kind where their children and the children of others can be educated without constant contact with sectarian bigotry, denominational dogma, and that blind, partisan zeal which will "compass sea and land to make one proselyte" to their creedbound systems; for they and their children have suffered in the past not a little in this direction. And they need also to step to the forefront and demonstrate the fact, that a college can be successfully operated purely as an educational institution, free from denominational bias or sectarian taint or intermingling. This can be done, and will be done in due time.

Lamoni offers a site that, in some respects, has unequaled advantages. It is "beautiful for situation." The moral tone of society, in and around the town, is of a very superior character, and we trust it will be maintained and steadily advanced. In respect to its healthfulness, it is unsurpassed. Food and fuel supplies are easily obtained, and at cheapest rates. It is sufficiently remote from large cities and their allurements, excitements, and confusion, to afford that quiet which is so essential to successful study, and pure and fruitful education.—Saints' Herald, vol. 36, p. 17.

Whoever helps forward the cause of education is a public benefactor, and with such the question will not be as to how much interest his investment will return, but how much good will come to society.—Saints' Herald, vol. 36, p. 278.

No argument is needed with many to show the need of a first-class educational institution under the management and moral influence of the church, where the young men and women of the Saints and their friends may be well and thoroughly disciplined and instructed aside and free from the snares, prejudices, and corruptions abounding abroad. The moral, social, and physical welfare of the student, and the peace and satisfaction of the parents and guardians, are all largely at stake in these matters.

A person starting out in life with a thorough, practical education; pure, solid morals, and a healthy, vigorous body, is rich in the essential elements of a useful, happy life, and is prepared to make life a success and to bless and benefit society. Such have a fortune that fire cannot burn, thieves cannot steal, and corruptions cannot waste, which only increases by use, and which rightly used proves a blessing to all. This should be eagerly, patiently sought after, and all who can should aid in the good work, for both themselves and others.—Saints' Herald, vol. 36, p. 353.

For our part, we hope to see the time when flourishing colleges shall be reared by our people, not only at Lamoni, but at other points, north, south, east, and west, as circumstances will undoubtedly demand. But we must begin some time and somewhere; and we believe that that time is now, and that the place is Lamoni. However, let the location be decided upon later, but let us have a college; and when others are necessary, let the same spirit of unity induce subscriptions from all sections, and then let them build them. We can better manifest our love for our children and for those of the traveling ministry than to promptly aid in this matter. Shall we act, or shall we hesitate and let a golden opportunity be lost?—Saints' Herald, vol. 36, p. 613.

Resolution by Conference of 1890

Resolved, That in the opinion of this conference, the time has arrived when it may be expedient to establish an institution of learning under the control or influence of our church organization, and to this end there shall be a committee appointed (by the body) to receive proposals for a location and take such other preliminary measures as may be necessary; and said committee are empowered after receiving such proposals to make all necessary arrangements for the establishment of such institution.—Saints' Herald, vol. 39, p. 34.

Joseph Smith in 1892

If a wise man should have need of the services of a man for any specific work, and there were two men to choose from equally tall, equally wide, measuring the same in size of frame, with the same sound minds, and of the same general texture of fibre and temperament, the one an educated man the other not, which one would he be likely to select, alike in all respects save education, would Heaven, for if I shall be fortunate enough to become a citizen in the celestial kingdom, things will not seem strange to me.

May we never allow our prejudices or preferences to lead us into error because we rightly or wrongly think some man may or may not be doing all he should in the office. The pattern is true, no matter what any man, trying to follow the pattern, may do or say. Let us accept the pattern as a representation of the Great First Cause in heaven.

not the educated man render the best and most satisfactory service?

Which of the four evangelists who wrote the gospels gave the clearest account of the Christ and his work? Is it not Luke? Which writer and apostle of the epistles is the most noted and most widely quoted? Is it not Paul? and whose work has been of the most importance in evangelizing the world. And were not Luke, the physician, and Paul, the Saul of Tarsus, the scholar of Gamaliel the lawyer, both educated men?

From what we can gather concerning the apostles chosen by Jesus, there was not a single dull brained man among them. It is taken for granted by some that because of some them that are fishermen, that on that reason they were ignorant, or that because they avocation made them ignorant, or that because they were toilers they had no education. . .

Moses was a learned man, an educated man, master of the learning of the Egyptian schools, and was chosen to do the Lord's work, because he was a "proper child."

We have quite a number of men in the ministry who when called were not masters of learning; but have they remained ignorant? If anyone has, he is now right where he was when he started, while others—the more successful ones—are far advanced. They have not been contented to remain uneducated, but have applied themselves diligently to make up the deficiency with which they were burdened at the start. —Carnegie.

Many of the Saints are anxious that their children shall have an opportunity to secure something of an education, and to this end are willing to make some sacrifices of money and ease, and are doing it, sending their children to schools, here, to have an opportunity of knowledge. They would be pleased to see them make use of an opportunity seldom had to them, while others—the more successful ones—are laying up treasures in heaven by an avocation that has fostered them, that in turn has been fostered in their efforts by the church of their residence while in school life. The student who has pursued a course of study in an institution under the care of a church cannot but feel this same love towards the church, even though not affiliated with it. Then should not Latter Day Saints feel that interest in their young, should they not be as solicitous to gain and hold the love and good will of their young, that they will see to it that a place is provided and maintained where they can acquire an education and feel that they have been fostered in their efforts by the church of their choice?

Graceland may be a failure; it may be none will help sustain her. It might, left to itself, like the sick, hunger-weakened pauper who falls by the wayside and dies unbefriended or alone, sink into the oblivion of memory, and be buried beneath the debris of frustrated hopes and shattered dreams of success. But no! It cannot be! It must not fail! That beautiful building on College Hill empty, or tenanted by others than Graceland students would be an indelible blot on the history sheets of the people who founded it. She is not a pauper; she is the child of a people who will not desert her. Her support must be forthcoming. At her pinnacle must float still that glorious emblem. Behind her wall must be diffused still the principles that will send from her hundreds who will rise in their gratitude and call her blessed. She must be the pride and joy of the hundreds who, recognizing the uniqueness of her mission, will generously support her in her noble work.—SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 45, p. 408.

Joseph Smith, June 12, 1838

We are celebrating the success of Graceland College. We are in duty bound to give it our moral support. The whole community is interested in it, while I as a man may be pleased that the student to graduate to-day* forms a portion of my family and may reap the first benefits; nevertheless it reaches out into every branch of the community, and I am thankful the occasion is of that character, though it really finds its first developed plant in my family. I feel then that our obligation to Graceland College is to see to it that we by no means slacken our efforts to relieve.

*Frederick M. Smith, the first graduate of Graceland College.

What Men Preach They Should Practice

The members of the Joint Council in their meeting of September 23, 1925, voted unanimously their collective and individual belief in the Stewardship plan, and MORE THAN THAT—They agreed by resolution that the individuals composing this Council should set the example and comply with both the spirit and the letter of Stewardship.

Immediately These Men Acted

Inventories are being brought up-to-date, new ones filed, tithing accounted for and surplus determined. Those members living outside of Independence will make their accounting as soon as they return home. The following were present at this meeting and voted, unanimously to do this.

The First Presidency: Frederick M. Smith, Elbert A. Smith, F. M. McDowell.

The Quorum of Twelve: J. A. Gillen, Paul M. Hanson, J. Frank Curtis, Clyde F. Ellis, M. A. McConley, J. F. Garver, R. S. Budd, E. J. Gleazer, D. T. Williams, F. Henry Edwards.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Corner Stone of Indian Mission Church Laid

(This letter was written to President Smith and is in the nature of a report, while it contains news for HERALD readers.)

Dear President Smith: Received your special delivery of the 25th, and yesterday, the 26th, we journeyed to the reservation. The services for the laying of the corner stone began between two and three o'clock.

Doctor H. A. Merchant represented the district.

Attorney Carl T. Self, the historian.

An Indian named Mr. Blackbird represented the Omaha tribe.

Elder Creel, the Indian Mission.

Peter S. Whalley represented the Presidency of the church.

Deacon was represented by a banker.

Walthill, Macy, and Winnebago were finely represented by business men, and all spoke splendidly of the confidence they had in Brother Creel, also of their willingness to assist him in the future.

I took the liberty to tell everyone present that nothing would have pleased you more than to have been present in person, but because of important council work you were detained at headquarters; and not only you were behind them, but almost one hundred thousand members in the civilized world wished them Godspeed and prosperity in their work of the future. I dwelt a little on the historic importance of what the Indian Mission Church means to us white people; something we had looked forward to for many years, and that God no doubt was using the Omaha tribe for the blessing of the whole Indian nation in the great future.

Especially did I stress to the business men in your name your profound appreciation for what assistance they had rendered to Elder Creel, and appealed to them to continue their support. Every one of them came to me after the service and said they would do anything they could to help the cause in the future. They seemed to have caught the vision of what this church is trying to do for the Indian farmer. They expressed themselves that not only would it be a great benefit to the Indian farmer but the white farmer as well. I promised them that I would report their work and it pleased them. So I have done so.

Sincerely yours,

PETER S. WHALLEY.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, October 29.

Nauvoo, Illinois

September 30.—Our pastor, Brother Berve, and his wife are taking a vacation, and Elder R. W. Farrell, of Independence, is caring for the church property during their absence, and telling the gospel story to the visitors, who come from all over the country to visit this historic spot. Brother Farrell is also caring for Brother Berve's little flock, and on Sunday mornings has been giving a series of lectures on Christian stewardship, and in the evenings a series of missionary sermons, when a number of outsiders are present. He is also to give a lecture on the history of Hancock County during the Centennial celebration.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths and wife are leaving us and going up to Burlington, where they will be more comfortably situated during the winter months and more convenient to Brother Griffiths' mission. All feel sorry to see them go, for they have been a big help to our little branch. Yesterday, at the close of the Religio hour, they were presented with a small sum which Brother Sanford told them was to buy a wedding present as a remembrance of their visit to Nauvoo. He also congratulated Brother Griffiths on his good judgment in choosing Nauvoo in which to spend his honeymoon, and giving us an opportunity to become acquainted with his good wife, Mary, whom he has hearts of all. At the close of his discourse, Brother Farrell spoke on the high esteem in which Brother Griffiths is held, and said we might all take a lesson from him in learning how to grow old gracefully.

Nauvoo is getting famous as a home for honeymooners, as we have on record such notables as Ed Fox and bride of Providence, Ronald Smith and bride of Independence, Forrest and bride of La Grange, and now Gomer T. Griffiths and bride. Who will be next? Forest Roberts suggests that a home be set apart for honeymooners and that Graceland keep it filled.

Brother O. L. Newcomb and wife of Boston, who have been spending the summer here, have gone on to Independence, but we are hoping they will return and make Nauvoo their permanent home.

Although they come and go, yet our little branch is steadily increasing in membership. The newest arrivals are Brother Wilfred Wood, wife, and son Myron, of Onset, who have purchased a home here, and Elder Snively, wife, and daughters Eleonore and Esther, of Tulear, California. Brother Heber C. Snively was born across the river and went west with his parents when quite young, and for many years has looked forward to returning to Nauvoo. He was named after Heber C. Kimball and visited the old Kimball home for the first time, where his heart was made glad to find his father in the gospel, G. T. Griffiths. The Griffiths' have been doing light housekeeping in three furnished rooms of this old, historic house, which is large enough to house two or three families. Brother Snively's son Gomer is attending Graceland this year.

A farewell supper was held Monday evening in honor of Brother and Sister Griffiths, on the shore of the river in front of the Nauvoo House. The Saints brought well-filled baskets and spread their contents picnic style on the lawn. Seats from the autos were arranged in a circle and all gathered around as one family just as the sun was setting in all its glory, its rosy beams reflected in the river, making a wonderful setting for the feast. The moon then rose and added it from everything that may hinder its progress, and thence to continue earnestly until we shall send from this little hamlet of our individuals who may be justly found in the front ranks of men of ability and force in the great battle of life, because they have made a right choice, because they have been diligent in the occupation which they have chosen to follow.—SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 45, p. 407.

Mark H. Forscutt, September 8, 1898

Had I children or grandchildren of suitable age, and possessing such acquisitions as would entitle them to be enrolled among the students of a university, if I felt deeply solicitous for their progress and for the development of their characters, morally, mentally, and physically, and for the harmonious blending of their complex natures into the beautiful whole of an approximately ideal manhood, I know of no other institution of learning in which I could place them with equally confident expectation that the result would be favorable to my parental hopes. Not that I regard Graceland College as now perfect, but it possesses the element of progressiveness in an eminent degree, and it is subject to the united voice of the ministry of God. . . .

Let Graceland's debt be lifted, and let her light shine forth as the morning sun.

Let those whom God hath blessed with more than an abundance for their descendants, now step forth from their ranks, and in the intensity of their love for God, lift Graceland high in honor; and when our children's children shall come forth with the well-merited diploma in their hands, the good they do shall reflect honor upon him who made possible the doing.—SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 45, p. 603.
its glory to the scene. When all had satisfied the inner man, Brother Griffiths was called upon to talk to us, and in his fatherly way gave good counsel as to our part in the building up of the waste places of Nauvoo. Others responded, and a splendid spirit was felt by all present. We wondered if the spirits of the departed were cognizant of the return of the Saints to this place, and if they were rejoicing over the fact that they were being kindly received by their former enemies.

A wonderful feeling of good fellowship was experienced at the first meeting of the Parent Teachers’ Association, of which Brother A. L. Sanford is president. A reception was held for the teachers, and a welcome extended to them such as they had never experienced before. Speeches were given by the new principal of the high school, members of the board, and the president of the association. All were requested to shake hands with everyone present, and many faorable comments were heard upon the good spirit that pre-valued. Ice cream and wafers were then served. Sister Flor-“Men are that they might have joy.”—2 Nephi 1:115.

Surely when we have worked diligently, and on our knees asked our Father to bless us, to increase our numbers and help us serve him aright, then to see such splendid improvement in our church work and social life is indeed joy. Real joy comes from obeying God’s commandments and working in his vineyard.

We have realized a neat sum from another supper, and we are planning to serve another this week.

District conference will be held here November 8, and it is then we expect to dedicate our church. We are looking for Brother F. M. McDowell to be with us then.

Only those who have been isolated for years and are then privileged to have a splendid chapel, as we now have, can realize how much this dedication really means to us. We pray that we may dedicate our lives anew as this material building is offered unto the Lord.

Brother J. M. Simmons, of Wichita Falls, Texas, has located in Pensacola, and we are glad to welcome him as one of our number. Brother Rudd has often expressed the desire for help, so we feel that together they will be able to do a greater work. Brother Simmons came through from Texas to Tampa in an automobile, then came back to Pensacola. They say our city is much better than anything they saw farther south.

Brother N. L. Booker, wife, and daughter, in company with Brother Chris Rummell, of Saint Cloud, Florida, came through from Ocean Springs, Mississippi, to South Florida.
As we have remarked, they were only hitting in high places on their way to the islands. They were well ententained while in Pensacola.

Monday evening a very enticing supper was served at Bay View and about sixty of our people enjoyed a swim.
Then on Tuesday night a wiener and marshmallow roast by the side of beautiful Pensacola Bay was enjoyed. Brother J. C. May came over from Milton to be with Brother Booker before he departed for the islands, so he was included in the party. The bathing, supper, singing, and Brother May’s music were thoroughly enjoyed. The only gloomy shadow caat was the saying of the final good-bys. We trust that Brother and Sister Booker may be wonderfully blessed, and that we all may meet again.

We were glad to have with us last Sunday President
A. D. McCall. Both Brother McCall and his wife are talented young people and will be of great service in the district.
Brother McCall is principal of the large school near Milton, and Sister McCall is teaching music there.

Brother Rudd will preach at Flomaton, Alabama, next Sunday, leaving Brother Simmons in charge of services here.

Our elders are preaching and teaching the stewardship plan, and we trust that the people as a whole may grasp the beautiful plan as taught by our Father, thus hastening the redemption of Zion.

Eastern Michigan Conference

Annual conference of Eastern Michigan District convened at Croswell on Saturday and Sunday, September 25 and 26. Saturday weather was fair and moderately warm. The conference was preceded by a prayer service which opened at nine o'clock with Elders H. L. MacPherson, Lewis Grice, and John Ledsworth in charge. A splendid meeting was enjoyed. At ten o'clock sharp the conference was called to order by the district president, Matthew W. Liston. Elder Liston was chosen to preside, and associated with him were Elders William Davis, Myron Carr, Lewis Grice, and William Grice, retiring district president. The district secretary, Henry Swoffer, was chosen secretary of the conference and G. T. Richards to assist.

Reports were first in order. Elder Liston reported that he had visited all the branches. Apostle D. T. Williams, Miss Blanche Edwards, and Bishop C. J. Hunt had also toured the district, visiting many of the branches and cheering the Saints. He also reported President Smith's visit to Cash recently in behalf of the work, which had resulted in much good and the dislodging of many rumors. Elder George M. Briggs also visited the district in behalf of Graceland College, and much interest was aroused because of this visit.

Elder Liston stated that in his opinion the Saints were starving for service and that a more efficient work on the part of the priesthood was needed. Greater efforts must be put forth in behalf of our young people. They should be given the privilege of putting on and caring for special services in the branches. Give them something to do. A young people's organization was effected at Caseville. Elder Liston recommended that we look with disfavor upon a reunion for solutions in behalf of Elder William M. Grice, retiring district president.

Elder William Davis said he had visited nearly all the branches but had been detained somewhat on account of illness in the home. Report of Elder Myron Carr was also read. Elder G. T. Richards reported 28 baptisms, 176 sermons, confirmations 19, children blessed 4, new openings 852, pastoral visits 512, marriages 4, new openings 1. Department of Women reported the organization of five new locals.

The statistical report of the secretary gave the membership of the district as 1,829, with two branches not heard from. The treasurer reported tithing receipts to the total of $6,457.61; total moneys received from all sources, 8,291.18. The date of the next conference of the district was May, 1926. Exact day and place left with the presidency of the district. Conference voted to purchase a multigraph for the use of the district president in his work.

The date of the next conference of the district was May, 1926. Exact day and place left with the presidency of the district. Conference voted to raise $4,500 for Graceland. Committee on resolutions appointed were Frank Benedict and John Ledsworth. The resolutions were read to the conference on Sunday afternoon, and copies will be mailed to the Herald for publication. The conference also voted to purchase a multigraph for the use of the district president in his work.

The Spirit of the Lord was present and the spirit of testimony also, twenty-four testimonies being borne in thirty-two minutes. Many young people from Port Huron and other towns were at this service, manifesting their zeal in the work of the Lord.

At nine o'clock the regular prayer service convened, Elders Liston, Davis, and Grice in charge. Elder William Davis opened the lesson and the General Officers were present. Six testimonies were offered at this service, which lasted until a quarter of eleven. A gift of poetry was given through Elder John Grice at this service; also one by Elder Liston. Preaching at eleven was by Elder William Grice, assisted by Walter Bennett and Kenneth Greene. Elder Grice took for his text John 3:16. His sermon was along the lines of love and sacrifice, and was richly enjoyed by all present. At eleven o'clock the priesthood met at the church, 60 being present. At one o'clock a meeting of the Department of Women was held, with Sister May Engell in charge. At a quarter after two preaching by Elder M. W. Liston; text from the Psalms: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Joint texts: "Be ye perfect," etc., and "He that looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein." There must have been between four and five hundred people at this service. The conference was well attended at all the services.

At these services resolutions were read in behalf of Elder William M. Grice, retiring district president, which were very appropriate and a fitting response was made by Elder Grice. At a quarter past seven preaching by Elder G. T. Richards. The writer, not being present at this service, is not able to mention the theme of the service but is willing to vouch that it was good. Thus ends our little story. May the good work of the Lord go on.

Yours sincerely,
H. L. MacPherson,
G. T. Richards,
Press Committee.

Lansing Branch Again Active

LANSING, MICHIGAN, September 23.—We are glad to report that Lansing Branch has again resumed activities after a siege of despondency and bitter trial. We have had discouragements here of late; contention for right against wrong; a struggle for church advancement against the most bitter opposition, and a violent effort to avert the evils causing frustrated friendships and loss of confidence.

As the mighty giant of the forest, crashing through the underbrush, sweeps all before him in his headlong crash, so have we felt the emerald of the ruinous collision, so have we taking all to the ground with him or leaving bruised and maimed those victims of the ruinous collision, so have we

Rejoice That God Has Heard Their Prayers

ALLIANCE, OHO, September 28.—On Labor Day the Alliance Saints held their annual Sunday school picnic at Lake Park, about five miles from here. Because of the cloudy day, not as many attended as had been expected, but this did not keep those present from enjoying themselves. Elder McDonald, with two daughters, of Saginaw, Michigan, was visiting his son who lives here, and attended the picnic; also Brother Harry Green and family of Canton. Pitching horseshoes was the chief attraction for the menfolks till the call to dinner came. Among our number we note some who can preach and some who can pitch horseshoes, but all do splendidly when it comes to dinner baskets.

Brother Smith, the last two months been suffering intensely with one of his eyes. He received a cut on the eyelid, and ulcers formed. After the ulcers were under control, the specialist who was attending him stated that the blood vessels were growing in on the cut, impairing his vision, and in time would cause total blindness to that eye, and there was nothing he could do to stop it. We called a fast, some of the Canton Saints joining with us, and on Sunday as he was administered to, the Lord saw fit to speak to him through one of his servants to cheer and encourage him, the message coming in poetry. The following week the specialist voiced his surprise, stating he had never before seen anything like it. The blood vessels were still there, but their growth had been arrested. The Saints are rejoicing with our brother, and all are more determined than ever to do the Master's will.

The infant son of Sister Pearl Moore was blessed on Sunday, the twentieth. His name is Robert Keith.

Gilbert Leib of Alliance, while out hunting Saturday, September 19, was accidently shot while climbing over a fence with his gun. He was the brother of Sister Pearl Shank, of Freedom, Pennsylvania, and Sister Lula Forbarik, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. These sisters have the deep sympathy of the Alliance Saints. They are well known to us, as it was here that they first heard and obeyed the beautiful gospel of our Lord. He was a member of the Nazarene Church and known as a man who lived above reproach and had a kindly feeling for all his fellow men.

PRESIDENT F. M. SMITH,
Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother: Seventy-five years ago this 15th day of September, 1825, a wee, wee baby was legitimately born in Glasgow, Scotland, later called Roderick, and reared to manhood in the Highlands in the town of Stornoway, Island of Lewis, and for the past seventy-five years as Roderick May. He still lives, hearty and healthy, and if no intervention happens, he may live another seventy-five years or more.

Emigrated to Canada April 15, 1883, age twenty-three. United with the church in London, Ontario, May 7, 1876. Ordained a priest July 28, 1877, under the hands of President W. W. Blair at London, Ontario, and selected priest of the branch.

Union Branch at Clitherall, Minnesota

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, September 30.—In point of attendance we have nothing to be proud of, but the earnestness and interest of those who do attend services regularly is very gratifying.

The stewardship plan seems to be uppermost in our minds and is meeting, as far as we understand it, with hearty approval.

Sickness and our scattered condition are the chief causes of our low attendance, but there are a few cases of indifference that are harder to cure than bodily sickness, and with which every branch has to contend.

We are looking for Brother W. E. Shakespeare in a short time to hold a few meetings.

Sister Charles Bundy of Park Rapids attended services at Clitherall on September 20.

Coffeyville, Kansas

October 2.—After having gone visiting for the last three or four Sundays, the Saints are home again and ready for active service. Several of the Saints from here attended the district reunion at Miami, Oklahoma, the last of August, and report having had good time thereby.

On September 13 an all-day meeting was held at Parsons, and again on the 20th a similar affair at Independence. Both meetings were well attended by Coffeyville Saints.

The work in this place seems to be on the upward trend, with all departments working in the very best of order.

With the departure of Brother Robert Jones for Grace-land, the office of Sunday school superintendent was left vacant, but the school elected Sister Orpha Cummins to fill the office, and we feel that she can ably carry on the work.

A farewell party was given Brother Jones by the Department of Recreation and Expression at the home of Brother James Reynolds. Brother Jones was presented with a fountain pen as a token of gratitude for the splendid help he gave us this summer.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has taken up the study of stewardships and finds it very interesting and helpful in our onward movement.

We must not forget to mention the splendid efforts that have been and are being put forth by the Department of Women. During the extremely hot weather this summer, we were content only for the lesson study. But now that the weather is more pleasant they devote the entire day to work, setting aside one hour in the afternoon for the study of the Doctrine and Covenants. Since the first of January they have quilted twelve quilts and have made in that time

www.LatterDayTruth.org
$78.63. We feel we have a right to be proud of this department.
The fourth Sunday of each month is devoted to the Juniors, at which time a junior church is held. The service is in charge of the children, except the story or short sermon, which is given by the pastor or some member of the priesthood. We are especially pleased to see the active interest taken by the children in these services.

Sunday evening, September 20, Elder A. P. Crooker of Topeka was the speaker and gave us a much appreciated sermon. Brother T. J. Sheppard, of Joplin, Missouri, met with us in prayer services on Wednesday evening. Being here on business, he could not tarry with us long, but we hope for his speedy return, as we enjoyed greatly having him with us.

MARGIE PITCOCK.

Interested in Doctrine of Stewardships

(A letter to the First Presidency)

I was very much pleased to learn that during the month of October a special effort would be made to advance the doctrine of stewardships throughout the church. While the church is considering that phase of our work as never before in its history, a month devoted to an intensified study cannot help but result in much good. It will crystallize sentiment and emphasize the need of sticking upon the yard of our work now. You may rest assured I shall be glad to help put the program over so far as my limited ability will permit.

Here in Chariton, at my suggestion, the Saints took up the study of Bishop Carmichael's book on stewardships. Last Sunday we had fifteen in the class, and so far as I was able to discover, all were in perfect accord and were eager to see the program put over.

At the morning hour on that day, I had an opportunity of preaching to the young people, using as a subject, "How can I help redeem Zion?" I enjoyed a marked degree of liberty, which convinces me the Lord is working mightily with his people to bring about the desired end.

In nearly every branch I find some who have recently subscribed for the HERALD. While I have not personally taken any subscriptions, I have tried to assist the local officers in their efforts and am sure a degree of success has attended our efforts.

May the Lord give you strength and vision so his purposes may be realized is my prayer.

L. G. HOLLOWAY.

Woodbine, Iowa

September 29.—As has been previously reported, the Little Sioux reunion was considered a success. To us it seemed the following quotation was applicable to the Saints, that the Lord God had sent "a famine in the land; not a famine of bread nor a thirst for water; but of hearing the words of the Lord."

Stewardships and a learning to live together was the silver thread that ran through every service, and the instruction was taken in as is the rain by the thirsty plants. We could but compare Apostle Gleazer's sermons to the prophetic warnings to old Israel and wonder if we will straightway forget what manner of men we are.

Again we have been called upon to give up one of our number, Brother Joseph Seddon, who was widely known and dearly beloved of the Saints. He was a man that could pray with the Spirit and preach with understanding, and many have been melted to tears under the sound of his voice. However, it seemed hard for him to understand that Zion would be redeemed to any but to the Jews, but a short time before his passing he stated that he had received the evidence that Zion will be redeemed on this land, and that before very long. May his reward be great.

Two of our high school graduates have gone to college to continue their studies, Sisters Edith Putnam Davis and Laura Belle Isle. May their home training and education in the gospel be an ever-present help in resisting the temptations of the world.

Sister Carrie Pitts has successfully undergone a serious operation and through the blessing of the Master is again home with loved ones.

Brothers Joseph Lane, Charles Putnam, and Fred A. Fry have been the preachers of the word the past month at the church, and George Young, D. A. Holcomb, Howard Reynolds, and Frank Fry at the mission in Dunlap.

We were pleased to see Sister Joseph Carr of Lamoni, a one-time Woodbine Saint, in our congregation Sunday evening.

Richmond, Missouri

On August 30 we had an all-day meeting at Alma, two miles south of town. Sunday school was held at ten o'clock, with Brother George Norwood of Henrietta in charge.

Brother Omer Cato of Independence was the morning speaker. Brother and Sister James Curtis sang a lovely duet, "Come, Holy Spirit." Brother Cato gave many new thoughts and ideas on stewardships.

After a basket lunch at noon we gathered at the church for an hour's singing, in which all took part, with Sister Curtis at the piano.

At half past two Brother Claud Kress, also of Independence, gave us a wonderful sermon, one that will long be remembered by the Alma Saints. We have heard many fine sermons this summer, and the Saints are trying to profit by them.

Death has again entered our branch and taken one of the oldest members, Sister Kathryn Roberts. She died September 5, and the funeral services were held at the home of W. G. Hamann, assisted by several other members in the music. "Abide with me," Sister Roberts's favorite hymn, was sung; then three Welshmen sang a song in Welsh, following with the song in English. Sister Roberts was born in New South Wales ninety-two years ago and had been a faithful Saint many years.

Our Religio attendance has been fairly good. The Juniors are studying the Young People's History, with Sister Mary Hamann as their teacher. Brother Thomas Graham is the senior teacher. This class is taking up the Doctrine and Covenants and Church History. Sister Eunice Curtis is the teacher in the senior teacher, and they were invited to the home of Brother Ferguson, vice president of the Religio, at Hardin, but on account of bad weather we have not yet made the trip.

We were disappointed September 27 as Brothers Hendrix and Hovenga of Stewartsville had promised to be with us. On account of the bad roads in their part of the country, they were unable to make the trip.

October 4 a sacramental service was held at eleven o'clock in charge of Brothers Hamann and Ferguson. The little son of Brother and Sister Cecil Hutson was blessed by Brother Hamann.

Sister Abbie Hartwell and her daughter Audrey, of near Knobmester, Missouri, are visiting her niece, Sister Elbert Curtis. Sister Hartwell bore her testimony, telling of her years of isolation in North Dakota, but not once had she felt like giving up her hope in the gospel. She tried to live as a true Saint. One of her sons, C. B. Freeman, is pastor in Duluth, Minnesota.

Brother and Sister Norwood of Henrietta have had several Argentine, Kansas, Saints this fall, Brother Walter Gates and family, and Sister Schirman and her son. Brother Norwood preached for the Alma Saints the evening of September 6. Some of the Saints said it was the finest sermon ever preached at Alma.

Marjorie and Ruth Lewis, daughters of Sister Viola Gra-

ham Lewis, were baptized and confirmed by Brother Hamman August 23.

Brother and Sister W. G. Ferguson are the proud parents of a baby girl born September 6. They have given her the name of Lois Fay.

The Do-Right Coal Company, operated by Brother Elbert Curtis, was awarded the county contract for furnishing coal to the courthouse, county home, and jail. There were ten different companies bidding, but Brother Curtis was chosen in spite of the fact that some underbid him. It is another evidence of what a helpful and teeming spirit is in the Do-Right Company.

The condition of Brother Elknah Craven is not promising. He continues to grow weaker, having been afflicted with rheumatism since April.

Brother and Sister James Curtis, who are superintendent and principal of the Rayville high school, visited Brother and Sister Hamman September 26. Rayville is ten miles northeast of Richmond.

Brother and Sister Forest Snodgrass, of Independence, Missouri, were visitors at the A. A. Hughes home at Hardin on October 4. Sister Snodgrass is a daughter of Brother and Sister Hughes.

Sister A. E. Ferguson is not so well at this writing. She has been ill most of the summer.

Saints of Brockton Look Forward

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—After one month in the gospel harness we are pleased to say that the branch here is on the upward trend. The Spirit is very much in evidence, showing itself in knowledge and wisdom. We believe the time has come when every member should get behind the plow and push, and not leave it to a few to pull, as has been the case in days past.

The outdoor meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression, which took place every week, has been called off for the present, but the work of this department should be carried on in indoor meetings.

The Sunday school has just completed a promotion and reorganization of classes. Superintendent Donald Crowell has certainly been greatly aided in his work by having an able and efficient corps of teachers.

All in all, Brockton looks ahead into the future optimistically, and with the words of the prophet we say, "Let Israel go forward."

Educational Conference at Middletown

MIDDLETOWN, OHIO, October 5.—The semiannual conference of the Southern Ohio District convened at Middletown, Ohio, Friday evening, Saturday and Sunday, September 25, 26, and 27. We had a goodly number of Saints from Columbus, Lucasville, Portsmouth, Springfield, Dayton, Hamilton, McDermott, Sinking Springs, Hillsboro, The Plains, Germantown, Excello, and of course our district president: hails from Steubenville.

A glance at the register indicates that about eighty visiting members and delegates journeyed to Middletown to take part in the services, receive the inspiration and knowledge that can be gathered from the lectures and sermons, and enjoy the social gatherings and testimony meetings as well as the social gatherings that were had.

Friday evening, September 25, the conference got under way with District President James E. Bishop in charge. Brother Bishop gave us an interesting illustrated talk on his missionary trip abroad, which was very pleasing as well as entertaining and educational.

Saturday morning a board of those who try to do right.

The business session convened at two o'clock with President James E. Bishop in the chair, assisted by Elder Floyd Wight. Outside of reading and receiving the reports of officers and standing committees, all of which reported progress, very little business was left to be transacted. Two resignations were turned in, that of Sister Mabel Bailey as district chorister, and that of Claude Barker as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, both of which were accepted. Sister Hazel Gribbens of Columbus was recommended to be the district chorister.

Near the close of the business session Brother Joseph E. Wight was recommended by the district president and also by McDermott Branch for ordination to the office of elder. Following a statement from Brother Wigt the conference approved the recommendation, and his ordination was ordered.

At half past seven in the evening a pleasant entertainment was provided by Sister Hazel Gribbens, which was enjoyed by an audience of ninety-three. During the intermission a collection was taken for the benefit of the Grace­land Convention Hall and gymnasium, which netted $17.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning, a large group of Saints attended the prayer and testimony meeting. In the early part of the service Brother J. E. Wiget, after a brief introduction of which a spiritual meeting was enjoyed, the Saints taking active part in prayer, song, and testimony. Near the close of the meeting Brother Bishop told of an experience he had in regard to the leadership of the church and encouraged the Saints to have the utmost confidence and respect for our leader and prophet.

Sunday school was held at half past nine, with the local superintendent, Claude Barker, in charge.

High Priest C. W. Clarke of Columbus preached a powerful sermon before a full house at eleven o'clock, using as a text the two great commandments given by Jesus, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind, and strength," and "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." He pointed out that the second commandment is an expression of action for each of us. He also emphasized the need of building up the stewardship plan. The next day at the office I met a young man who lives next door to the church. Although neither he nor his mother belong to the church, he asked me what we had at the church the day before, a convention of some sort? I replied in the affirmative. He told me that his mother has not felt like going to church, so stayed at home. The windows in the church were open, and she could hear every word distinctly. He said she was glad she had stayed at home, because she had heard a wonderful sermon. He added that he wished he too had stayed at home.

Sunday afternoon Brother Bishop gave one of his inspiring sermons, and after the service we heard such remarks as, "Isn't he a deep thinker!" "Wasn't that a good sermon!"

It is reported that there were one hundred and twenty-five at dinner Sunday, which speaks well for the interest manifested. Much credit is due those men and women who worked untringly and cheerfully that others might enjoy the opportunities and advantages of the various services. The meals were served free, but an opportunity was given for those who wished to contribute. This plan was very satisfactory.

Sunday evening and the following three evenings Brother Bishop gave inspiring talks at the Garfield Union Mission (nondenominational) before a good attendance. He talked of the spiritual prizes and riches of Christ and his teaching upon the parables of the good Samaritan and the ten virgins. Brother Bishop was well received and invited to come again.

On October 2 Brother Bishop was back at the church and gave us the benefit of many years of study and training in his talk upon the social problem and the stewardship plan of the church.
At eight o'clock Sunday morning some little problems were ironed out in the priesthood meeting, and adjustments were made. We are looking forward to the future with greater courage, faith, and enthusiasm, that much good may be accomplished.

Sunday school was followed at eleven o'clock by the social and sacramental service, and all attending felt blessed for their efforts.

At noon good-bys were said, and Brother Bishop was soon on his way to Dayton to continue his district and missionary work. We hope he will come again, for his efforts were appreciated.

Sunday evening the associate pastor, P. W. Barker, occupied the pulpit, declaring the words of eternal life. He used as his text, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." LEONARD W. BARKER.

Reports Good Meetings at Colorado Springs

(Excerpt from letter of Elder Bruce E. Brown, Colorado Springs, Colorado, October 5, 1925, to the First Presidency.)

There was a very good attendance at all of the services yesterday. Many of the old Saints said the sacramental service was one of the best they had attended in a long time. There was a splendid spirit of unity and consecration present. We spent a profitable hour in the afternoon in a priesthood meeting. I was the speaker in the evening. I used as a subject, "Love the prerequisite to stewardships." It was well received. Brethren LaLonde and Rogers preached at the schoolhouse several miles east of here in the afternoon. They have been preaching there every other Sunday all summer. They are doing a good work.

Ottumwa, Iowa

October 6.—The Saints here are still made happy through the gospel. The attendance at services has been on the increase, and the Spirit of the Master has met with us in our sacramental and midweek prayer services. We have been made to feel glad because of the renewed activity of our priesthood. Brother LaPoint has preached two very nice sermons which were certainly worthy of commendation. Brother Baker and Brother Erskine have given us sermons containing food for thought. Our pastor also has endeavored to present the ideal of the temple church, and at the evening service the first Sunday in October he presented some thoughts on Zion, taking as the theme the need of Zion and the need of a practical demonstration of the brotherhood of man.

At the business meeting it was decided to do the best we could to raise our quota for the Graceland endowment fund, and Brother E. H. Lewis, Bishop's agent, is chairman of the committee.

The Saints have enjoyed reading the wonderful letters, sermons, and articles in the Herald.

The Department of Women had a picnic in August, and an enjoyable afternoon was spent. On October 1 the sisters were entertained at the home of Sister H. Scott, who was assisted by Sister G. H. McMickle. Refreshments were served, and some money was raised toward our church repair fund. Also the sisters gave a supper at the home of Sister Nevin, the proceeds being given to the same fund.

Brother and Sister D. T. Williams, sr., paid us a visit for a few days. All were glad to see them.

We are happy to say that Sister Shockley is still with us. This good sister is eight-five years old and has been a member of the church for fifty-five years. She has been a widow thirty-three years and lives alone. Owing to her health she is unable to attend services, but she endeavors to make a few dollars at her old-time weaving machine, making rugs. When visiting this dear old sister she greets one with a smile. She cherishes her church books and loves her church and the Saints. Sister E. H. Lewis is often found at her home, to see she has what she needs.

We are sorry to say Sister W. Green has been sick quite a while.

The Sunday school is to have its rally day program on October 11.

Elder L. W. Edwards has been sick, having had two strokes, but we are happy to say he is some better at present. He has been a patient sufferer.

Brother John Baker rendered a fine solo and Sisters McMickle and Richards a beautiful duet on September 6.

Conference at Wichita October 3, 4

WICHITA, KANSAS, October 5.—The Lord's work is moving on in Wichita. Our conference closed Sunday evening, October 4, after a profitable and enjoyable time for all. We had with us Apostle M. A. McConley, District Missionary Harvey Minton, and a number of Saints from different parts of the district.

Brother Minton gave one of his wonderful picture lectures Friday evening, which was much enjoyed. This, with Brother McConley's fine sermons and the round table talk on stewardship, was a feast not soon to be forgotten. We heard many times the expression: "Wasn't it wonderful!"

One cannot help thinking that the Lord is helping His people with wisdom and understanding by the way they are grasping the main theme of the church, stewardship. The Lord said he would hasten his work in his own time, and I believe that time is now.

Branch President T. S. Williams and Brother Minton are leaving for the southwest district.

I am going to do all I can to get the Saints here to take the church papers, for I believe if there ever was a time when we needed the church papers it is now. I am enclosing several subscriptions and have the promise of several more soon. Let us

"Onward, Christian soldiers, Marching as to war."

Those who can't be leaders get behind and push.

We have heard much about our children going to redeem Zion, but I believe some of us older ones will have a part in that great work.

How thankful I am that I am permitted to live in this day and age, with our faces turned toward Zion, taking as the theme the need of Zion and the need of a practical demonstration of the brotherhood of man.

At the business meeting it was decided to do the best we could to raise our quota for the Graceland endowment fund, and Brother E. H. Lewis, Bishop's agent, is chairman of the committee.

New Church to Be Dedicated November 8

NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT, October 6.—Elder George W. Robley was the speaker here Sunday, August 30. Brother Robley has been visiting in the branch and has been the speaker since at several preaching services. He was a pioneer worker in this vicinity and seemed deeply interested in the church and its growth. Brother Robley's discourses are very educational and encouraging, and are also distinctly appealing to one's better self.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Slater and family, formerly residents of Fall River, Massachusetts, have moved to New London. Sister Margaret Slater was a member of the Fall River Branch. The Saints here extend them a glad welcome. Marion Slater, who has been seriously ill, is slowly regaining health.

Sister Brindley and several members of her family from Fall River have been recent visitors here.

Sister Blanche Lanman of the Boston Branch has also been a visitor in Groton. Her beautiful singing is greatly enjoyed.

A supper, given by the building fund solicitors Friday evening, October 2, proved a splendid success. Quite a number of neighbors, as well as branch members attended, and the supper netted a good sum. A cordial sociability was manifested, and singing and piano selections were enjoyed.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
At the sacramental service Sunday, October 4, a beautiful spirit of fellowship was demonstrated that seemed to unite the Saints more closely in the bonds of love.

On November 8, New London Branch has scheduled the dedication of the new church building. The chapel is located at 44 Lee Avenue, New London, on a lot given to the church by Brother David and Sister Rose Tourtellot. Brothers Thomas G. and Francis H. Whipple, Willard M. Blodgett, David Crouch, and John E. Blastow compose the building committee. The church has been stated by some nonmembers to be a credit to the street, and it is the sincere prayer of the Saints that the influence of its membership will be such as to bring others to worship within its consecrated walls.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley Writes of His Work

(From a letter to the First Presidency)

My work at the the college kept my attention till about the first of July, finishing out the year in the classroom and closing up the books, taking inventories and making out the annual statements and closing up some business matters, I started July 22 for the East, and well it might be so called, since “Zion is the pure in heart.” It is not perfect, however, and no one claims that it is, but they are well on the road toward that goal, if comparing them with the world is a dependable basis of judgment. Here, as at Missouri Valley and elsewhere, those of the younger generation are ready for the advanced program of the church, including the doctrine and practice of stewardships. In fact, the people present at the reunion, almost to a unit, were seemingly convinced of the righteousness of the proposed program of the church, and many will arrange to fall fully into line as a result of the splendid work of President Smith and Bishop Carmichael, if I am not mistaken in my analysis of the spirit of the people.

We broke camp Monday, August 10, and departed for Boston, by way of Plymouth, going by auto with Bishop Fisher. In company with Brother and Sister E. L. Traver and Paul Hanson, I left for the Maine reunion the 14th in Brother Traver’s fine Franklin sedan.

It was a most wonderful drive from Boston to Brooksville, Maine, along the highway which parallels the coast, as nearly as it could, making a crooked line. The time the drive enabled one to look out over the salt water. We reached camp in time for evening meeting, and after a short business session I had the pleasure of addressing the gathering. The Maine Saints have selected a most beautiful spot for their permanent camp. It is a beautiful southern slope facing a fresh water lake, and bordered on either side and at the rear by pines, spruces, hemlocks, and birch trees, making a rich bank of varying shades of green. There are a sufficient number of granite bowlders here and there to give it a most majestic appearance. If New Hampshire has any more granite than that part of Maine I saw, I cannot understand how they farm without moving stones. The dirt on the roads and at the picnic grounds and the gatherings of the Saints, the stewardship plan was made to be the leading topic of instruction, and here, as elsewhere, it was received very readily, under the special instruction of E. L. Traver and Bishop Fisher, who were able by means of the splendid charts prepared by Brother Traver to present the subject in a clear and concise manner. I certainly enjoyed meeting with the Maine Saints, and tried to do justice to the shore dinner kindly provided by our host en route, the blueberry pies and other forms of serving this Maine delicacy, the clams, “Johny bread,” and many other good things put forth by the commissary under the efficient management of Brother C. H. Rich and his corps of willing helpers, not forgetting to mention the music furnished by the kitchen chorus during the day.

I left Brooksville for Boston by boat on the afternoon of the 19th and was met at the dock the next morning by Sanford Fisher and Harold, after a very pleasant and uneventful ride on the briny deep. Had a pleasant time with my son’s family, and said good-bys to them at the station at 6.10 p. m., homeward bound. I detained at Painesville and proceeded by interurban to Willoughby; met by accident Brother Bishop at the barber shop, who kindly provided conveyance to Kirtland, where I arrived Friday evening about four o’clock. Reunion was drawing to a close, and I had a very enjoyable time visiting the temple and shaking hands with a number of people whom I had known and some whom I met for the first time. I occupied the evening hour in company with Brother F. M. McDowell in behalf of Graceland, and took my departure the next morning, being taken to Willoughby by Brother William Patterson in his Ford coupe in time to catch a car for Cleveland and the West.

Reached home the morning of the 24th of August and after three days at the college office and at home I went to Stewartsville to attend the conference in the Stake union where I had been assigned by the reunion committee. Here I tried as best I could to perform my part as to preaching, teaching, giving blessings, and such other service as came to my hands. My work closed there Saturday evening, September 5, and accepting an offer of George E. Anway, who was en route to Laomni, I accompanied them home, so as to be present at the college opening, September 7.

You are aware of the fact that I am teaching the religious education class in the subject of church doctrine and philosophy. I hesitated to accept this responsibility, since I had been appointed by the General Conference to serve as patriarch to the Laomni and Far West Stakes, for even though Graceland was named as the objective, I understood that my work was to be such as pertains to my new office of evangelical minister and patriarch. However, being advised by the First Presidency's office, the Presiding Bishop, and the presidents of both stakes to do so, I have consented, though with considerable reluctance, to undertake it.

Sincerely in gospel bonds,

LAMONI, IOWA, October 3.

All-Day Stewardship Meeting

DAVENPORT, IOWA.—An all-day meeting was held at Daven­port Sunday, September 27, the special theme of all services being stewardships. Saints from near-by branches were present, bringing the total attendance to an encouraging mark.

Brother E. A. Davis was with us and more fully instructed us with regard to Zion.

At Sunday school Brother Davis taught a large class in stewardship; and in the afternoon he delivered a very fine address on Zion.

At eleven o'clock Elder W. W. Richards was the speaker, and in the evening Elder C. A. Beil, of Clinton, Missouri, occupied.

In the afternoon at half past three, a round table discus­sion was presided over by Elders Davis and Richards. Questions asked showed the deep interest the Saints are taking in the program of the church.

The services throughout the day were educational, and the interest manifested at all services reflected the attitude of this district. All desire to assist in advancing the redemption of Zion. A profitable time was had by all who attended, and the closing song truly reflected the feelings of the people as they separated. "God be with you till we meet again."

On October 4 Elder Lindsay baptized five Sunday-school children, and they were confirmed at the sacramental service by Elders E. A. Davis, W. W. Richards, and P. E. Lindsay. At this service Joseph Willey was ordained a deacon.

Thus the work is again moving upward in Davenport. This branch is presided over by P. E. Lindsay. W. W. Richards is superintendent of the Sunday school, which department is very active. A stewardship class has been organized which we feel will accomplish a good understanding of the aims of the church. The effort to build the orchestra has progressed to two violins and one guitar. On the whole, the work here seems to be going on under favorable conditions.

The vision of redeemed Zion challenges us to redoubled efforts to bring its realization to pass.

Burlington Branch Gains Seven by Baptism

(Excerpt from letter of G. Scott Daniel, Burlington, Iowa, October 5, 1925, to the First Presidency.)

Since moving to the new church I have baptized seven, all adults except one. We are trying to make the Sunday evening service the largest of all and are making it a strictly missionary effort. So far we have had from twelve to fifteen nonmembers in attendance. Brother J. F. Sheehy of Cameron started a series of services here last evening, and the prospect is good for a successful campaign. There were about thirty nonmembers present at the first service.

Gomer T. Griffiths Writes of Nauvoo and Early Church

Just arrived in Burlington a few days ago, where we expect to reside until after General Conference, unless conditions change. We are living in furnished rooms in the home of Brother and Sister Bierman of this city. Burlington is situated on the Mississippi River, and our place of residence is not far from there. This is quite a pleasant place in which to live and a very convenient place for me to travel from in my mission because of the railroad facilities.

The branch here is in a very flourishing condition under the presidency of Brother G. Scott Daniel. He has a corps of willing workers as assistants in the discharge of his duties. Their new brick church is a credit to the Saints here, and one of which they should be very proud, it being unusual in size and equipment. They also have a flourishing Sunday school.

On October 5, and accepting an offer of George E. Sheehy of Laomni, I accompanied them home, so as to be present at the college opening, September 7. outsiders. A great many people argue that God has deserted Nauvoo and the temple spot and will never again use it for the purpose for which it was originally intended. But this is not the first temple lot which has passed from the hands of the saints of God into the hands of the enemy, as I remember standing upon the temple lot in Jerusalem where once stood the temple of God, but now it is in the hands of the hands of outsiders. A great many people believe it for the purpose for which it was originally intended. But this is not the first temple lot which has passed from the hands of the saints of God and a temple of God built thereon. Personally, I am just foolish enough to believe that the same thing will happen in Nauvoo that has happened in the past, they just have not cented and for something like six hundred years. Nevertheless all Latter Day Saints and other religious people believe that the time is coming when the same (as well as the city of Jerusalem) will again be in the possession of the Saints of God and a temple of God built thereon. Personally, I am just foolish enough to believe that God can and will reclaim them has little faith that God can and will reclaim them has little faith in God and his power to bring to pass his righteous purposes. Is it possible that Latter Day Saints have lost confidence in the power of God to fulfill his promises and in his ability to perform the same wonderful things in the future that he has in the past? I am satisfied and confident that he will, in his own time and way. The God who has divided the sea, moved mountains, and raised the dead, can certainly restore the waste places of Zion, and all that appertains thereto, some time in the future. There is one thing that the Devil and his agents have not been able to do, and that is to divide the sea, move mountains, and raise the dead. One thing more! In his ability to perform the same wonderful things in the future that he has in the past? I am satisfied and confident that he will, in his own time and way. The Devil, the power of the Devil, will never bring to naught the designs of our God. I am certain that if Christ were here on the earth he would say to many who profess to be his followers, "O ye of little faith."

As I stood in the room of the old Nauvoo House, where the Lord spoke to Joseph Smith, I was reminded of what the Lord said to her in 1830, "Thou art an elect lady, whom I have called." The question naturally suggested itself, "Was the statement of the Lord as made to her true?" And I was constrained from what I know of her history to feel satisfied that she had proved to be all the Lord had said of her, and that she had manifested to us an ability to converse with some of the old settlers, many of whom had been prejudiced against the church, that she was an honest, virtuous, intelligent, and God-fearing woman, one who attended strictly to her own business and the rearing of her family. They gave her special credit for the manner in which she brought up her sons to be honorable men. We have never heard one word spoken against her by the people, but in every instance the testimony has been one of respect, a good Christian woman, one who had the love and confidence of all in the community in which she lived. The same testimony has been borne in regard to her sons, the late Joseph, Alexander, and David Smith. Here she resided, with the exception of a few months, from the time of the assassination of her husband until she departed this life. What a wonderful record she made for herself; one that reflects credit upon the church. This in the face of all the prejudice against the church prevailing at that time. She was able to live it down by her wise and godly walk. She also protected her boys from the evil influences of the world and reared them to believe in God. It was a useful time in their day and generation. How proud she must have felt when she accompanied her oldest and beloved son Joseph to the Amboy conference where he submitted himself to the will of the Lord and his people, to assume the Presidency of the priesthood and of the church, rendering service in this honorable position for fifty-five years. Her second son, Alexander, who occupied in the office of seventy, apostle, and presided over said quorum, was counselor to his brother in the Presidency for five years, and was general patriarch to the church at the time of his death. Then her youngest son and baby, David, who was born after his father's death, a natural poet and was known in the church for many years as the "sweet singer of Israel." He also served in the office of counselor to his brother for several years. I can well remember David when as a young man he attended school with the Psalmist David, the harpist of Israel.

Emma Smith compiled a book of hymns for use in the Saints' services, being commanded by the Lord. She also acted as a scribe for her husband in the translation of the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures, preserving the latter from destruction by the enemy. As we took a picture of her grave a few days since, the thought came to me with great force that therein had been placed the remains of a noble, virtuous, honest woman, one whom the Lord had and honored, and in spirit, "Lady" and one who will come forth in the first resurrection of the just. Her body was laid to rest very near to the body of her companion who had preceded her to the spirit world years before.

Brother Amos Berve and wife have gone on a much needed vacation. Brother Ralph Farrell was sent to Nauvoo to take the place of Brother Berve, temporarily, showing the old folks the historic points of interest and filling the pulpit in the Nauvoo Branch. He is delivering a series of sermons on "Christian stewardship" on Sunday mornings, and in the evenings he speaks on subjects for the enlightenment of outsiders, as a goodly number of these attend the evening services. His preaching has been of a high order, both logical and eloquent. Brother Ralph is a wonderful Christian, a man of integrity and faithfulness. He is one of the most logical and eloquent preachers of the young people in Zion should be. God bless them and all others of the young in the church who are trying to keep out of Babylon and place themselves in an acceptable attitude before the Lord, for I feel that the Lord is feeling after the young and wants to use them as instruments to consummate his greater latter-day work. We older ones will have to look to it that they do not take away our laurels. God speed the right. God speed the right. God speed the right. God speed the right.

Gomer T. Griffeth.

Stockton, California

September 30.—The Sunday school picnic which was postponed in the spring was at last held on Labor Day, at Spanker's Grove, near Lodi. A large crowd was in attendance, and all enjoyed the day. Contests and games were held for all ages, with prizes to the winners. There was also swimming. Added to the regular picnic food were ice cream, melons, and grapes, making it all anyone could ask for.

On September 17 the Department of Women gave a chicken supper, which was the best attended affair this year. About $35 was cleared, which goes towards church improvements. u00e9numend at event and to bring home from church, Sister Tinkess, her four children, her mother, and Sister Mallory were injured when a speeding machine struck the one in which they were riding, turning it completely over and wrecking it. That none were seriously injured seems miraculous. All are recovering except Sister Kinney, who is still confined to bed. We are indeed thankful it did not result in death, as we cannot spare one of our faithful little band.

All departments are putting on greater activity, and rally day is being planned for in the near future.

Graceland Chats

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society last Sunday afternoon met in the choir loft of the Brick Church. It was crowded almost to its capacity, for one hundred and thirty singers were in their places ready for the keen enjoyment of choir rehearsal.

Early in the fall this society held business meeting, which resulted in the election of the following officers: Miss Carlile, director; Mr. Cheville, president; Miss Tess Morgan, secretary; Mrs. J. A. Gunsolel, treasurer; Mr. George Gates, librarian. Since then Miss Carlile has been very busy trying out canidates for membership, and sixty-five new voices have been accepted.

Sunday evening, October 4, was the occasion of the first program. "Send out thy light," by Gounod, rendered by the Oratorio Society was the first number. The rendition was quite good and augurs well for the success of the society. This was followed by "Lento," piano solo (Cyril Scott), by Miss Rogene Anderson. The room was very quiet, and as the full liquid notes fell, I wondered what were the thoughts of the people listening. It is difficult to say, but looking into their faces one might be sure that the melody drew them nearer to God, so that when Mrs. Frances Norris and Mrs. Allene Brackenbury Walden sang their beautiful duet from Mendelssohn, "I know that my Redeemer lives," their confidence easily communicated itself to the listening congregation.

It was a very happy occasion for both choristers and audience, and one that we hope will be repeated again in the near future.

A Cappella Chorus

The A Cappella Chorus is in good form once more. Miss Lena Wells, a former member of the chorus, is returning to Lamoni, and she will be singing with this group once more. Mr. Thad Howland, also a former member, returns to the tenor section. In addition, five new members have been voted into the chorus: Miss Elsie Milligan, alto; Forrest Jennings, tenor; Austin Wells, Franklyn Weddle, and Donald Barrow, bass. These people realize that they must now win their laurels. This is asking a great deal, for the A Cappella Chorus of previous years has set very high standards. Yet we have no fear; there is good material here, and under the able leadership of Miss Carlile we shall soon be enjoying once more the work of this enthusiastic group.

The College Players

The College Players have all lined up for a winter's good work. A business meeting was held upon "a grassy bank" in South Woods, where, in spite of the distracting loneliness of the surroundings, much was accomplished. Worth-while discussions were held, and as the various opinions were given it was evident that these young people were out for work and that nothing but the best will satisfy them. The corps of officers is strong and promises much achievement: Roscoe Faunce, president; Elva Merrill, vice president; Clarice Gillen, secretary; Wayne Bootman, business manager; Harold Brown, stage manager; Lucille Harder, costumer; Miss Ruth Fisher, conductor.

On October 22 the first number in the Lyceum course will be given. This takes the form of a musical program by the Cathedral Choir, a company of eight voices, one of whom is Eugene Christy, already well known in many parts of church work.

At the end of the month, the second home-coming will be held. Arrangements are not yet complete, but from the way things are moving a most enjoyable time is anticipated. In imagination we can see the alumni and other old friends of Graceland returning to spend a few days in her beloved environments. It will indeed be a most happy occasion, for, small though she is and apparently insignificant, Graceland holds an appeal for all with whom she has come in contact; an appeal, a love that the passing years but increases. From far and near, we hope her friends will come, called by this opportunity, and once more wander through her halls, eat in the familiar dining room, and chat with the faculty and student body. One and all have the same cry, "It is good to have been at Graceland." "Those years were the happiest of my life." May God bless Graceland!

Topeka, Kansas

October 6.—There has been more than usual activity here during the past month, and the branch as a whole is in a livelier condition than for some time, with greater prospects in view for advancement of the work. The month started out in an auspicious manner, with a very spiritual sacramental meeting September 6. Among those present from other places were Brother and Sister W. I. Fligg of Independence and their son and daughter-in-law who are attending Kansas University at Lawrence. Elder Fligg gave us a short but much-enjoyed address. He touched mainly on the great blessing it is for the Saints to be able to meet together and associate regularly, and that each of us derives from such association, social and spiritual. Two of our members were called to the priesthood.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held Labor Day in one of the city parks. The weather was beautiful, and almost a hundred people were present. The picnic opened about ten o'clock in the forenoon and extended well into the evening. A great variety of games and contests were held in the afternoon, with prizes for the winners, donated by merchants of Topeka. Everyone had a good time, and this was claimed to be the biggest and best ever in the Sunday school picnic line in the experience of the branch.

The Boosters' Class, comprised of the younger married people, was organized at a class meeting held at the home of Brother and Sister Kelley on the evening of September 3. Although the weather was exceedingly warm, quite a number were present, and the evening was pleasantly spent with games, etc.

Sunday morning, September 13, we were agreeably surprised to have with us Brother Charles E. Harpe, district missionary, this being the first visit with the Topeka Saints except at reunion. He preached us a short sermon, showing the power the gospel has had on the lives of individuals he had been acquainted with in his life. The time was somewhat taken up with business matters, considering new church quarters and other affairs. It was decided not to hold meetings at the church the first week he was here because of the state fair being in session but to devote most of the time to visiting. Meetings were held twice, however, at the home of Brother and Sister Conard in North Topeka, Brother Harpe preaching one night and Brother Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas, the other. Brother Twombly was in Topeka part of the time during the fair. He and Sister Twombly visited at the home of Brother Kelley; also at the home of Brother Dave Little. Brother Harpe was returning to Fanning.

Brother Harpe devoted a great deal of time in calling on the various members at their homes, and especially in looking up and calling on those who have not been regular attendants at church, and in this way working up an interest and bringing out some who have not been meeting with us. Everyone here appreciates the work Brother Harpe has done and is doing.

The following two weeks meetings were held regularly each evening at the church, with good attention and good attendance most of the time, Brother Harpe being the speaker. He touched on the principles of the gospel and various other points of interest in the latter-day work, notably, the nine spiritual gifts, general destiny of man, the atonement, present-day manifestations, restoration, unchangeability of God, and the sacrament.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Good use was made of the illustrated chart in connection with some subjects. Some outside attendance was in evidence and good interest maintained. Brother Harpe will devote a few evenings to discussion of the plan of stewardship outlined by the church before he leaves Topeka, and it is hoped all members will be present, as this is one of the most vital questions of the church to-day.

Several of our members went to Kansas City to attend the opening services at the new Central Church, and they report their experiences well worth the effort.

Our department of women has been busy lately, having devoted several days to sewing, etc., in preparation for a rummage sale to be held at an early date.

We regret to report two of our members somewhat incapacitated by accidents at this time: Sister Helen Hayes by a fall, and Sister Charles Sheets injured cranking a car, both the same day. Hope is expressed for their early recovery, as they are among our most active workers.

A good sacramental service was our privilege on October 4, the time being well taken up by prayer and testimony, extending well past the usual hour.

Sister F. O. Kelley visited in Selden, Kansas, and attended some of the meetings conducted there by Brother Silvers the early part of September.

Far West Stake

The effects of the late reunion at Stewartsville, Missouri, have tended to enhearten and stimulate the Saints in their efforts to follow out the program of the church. From all quarters come encouraging reports. At Cameron the members of the priesthood are arranging a special class for a deeper study of the plan of stewardship, in order that they may more fully prepare themselves for a greater work.

The Saints of the Far West Branch conducted a basket dinner on Sunday, September 27, the speaker for the day being Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley. Quite a goodly number were in attendance. Many came from a distance to enjoy the privilege of hearing Brother Gunsolley unfold the beauties of the gospel in his usual characteristic way. His efforts in humility as a father in Israel mean much to those with whom he labors.

By unanimous vote the Saints of the Kingston Branch had decided to attend the basket dinner at Far West on Sunday the 27th, but storm and bad roads necessitated a change of plans. In spite of prevailing conditions, a pleasant time was had at home. Elder Charles Wood occupied the morning hour, whilst Brother Ford of Hamilton addressed the congregation in the evening.

An interesting letter has recently been received from Sister Faye Clark (formerly Gates), of Columbus, Ohio. In renewing her subscription for the stake paper, Sister Clark shows an intense interest in the activities of Far West. There are, no doubt, others who are likewise interested. These would also do-well to arrange for a copy of the Far West News to be sent them each month. Subscription only fifty cents a year.

We are thankful to report the return to health of Sister Olive McLean, Sunday school superintendent of the Fifth Saint Joseph Branch. The past efforts of Sister McLean have meant much to the Saints of this group, and all rejoice to hear that the reins once more are in her hands.

On Sunday morning, October 4, an amalgamated sacramental service was held at the First Saint Joseph Church. The attendance was excellent, all the available seats being occupied. Throughout, the meeting was characterized by a marked degree of the spirit of peace and a desire on the part of those assembled to come to a greater appreciation of the work that lies before us. Elder Charles W. Wood, pastor, and likewise stake president, O. Salisbury, addressed an attentive congregation, his subject being that of stewardship. In his usual frank way Elder Salisbury endeavored to show the Saints the connecting link between stewardships and the Graceland College endowment fund. The simplicity of his illustrations and clearness of thoughts enabled many to see more clearly that stewardships is but a means to an end—Zion.

Our stake bishop, Brother Milo Burnett, is being kept busy each evening visiting with the Saints and organizing and teaching stewardship classes. May his untiring efforts bring forth much fruit.

The stake bishopric and presidency are busily engaged in forming plans in preparation for the big Graceland College drive that is shortly to take place. It is hoped by all that old Far West will lead the way in this campaign.

WALTER H. CRYER, Stake Secretary.

Independence

Stone Church

The Harvest Festival which closed Sunday evening was one of the most successful ever held. The exhibit rooms on the first floor of the Institute Building were gorgeously decorated with flowers and greens, and displayed an abundance of fruits, vegetables, grains, and sewing and art work kindly donated for the benefit of the poor. One section also contained a dainty selection of pastry given by the Independence Bakery and used as refreshments.

Individual groups and organizations were represented, the products blending into one harmonious layout which spoke clearly of God's goodness to man and of the significance of the doctrine of Christ that "we are our brother's keeper."

Doctor Harrington was the speaker Sunday morning. He said, in part, that during the World War some of the soldiers suffered from shell shock and would flee from the dangers of battle to the safety of the dugouts. When examination was made it was found to be a reaction of the mind more than physical conditions. In times of peace there are people who suffer from shell shock. They are the ones who cannot face difficulty, and instead of meetings life's issues squarely they hide. They are "subterrifers of the mind." It is escaping from a disagreeable situation. That is physiologically they are adults; mentally they are not grown up.

The speaker read the story of the creation from Genesis, in which it is said that the Lord gave to man every herb bearing seed and every tree bearing fruit. Also the statement that the Lord made a garden and set man in it to tend it and to dress it. This is a story of cooperative gardening. The man and the woman and God working together in the garden. Man became a collaborer with God in the very beginning and at a most vital point, since the soil is back of all life. God put the potentialities into the fruits and flowers, but left them for man to bring out and develop. Burbank took the wild daisy and cooperated with God for twenty-five years to develop the Shasta daisy.

Moving over from the physical to the spiritual, Paul presents God in cooperation with man to develop the fruits of the Spirit. These beautiful fruits are grown, developed, and matured over long periods of time. God, who put the potentialities into the wild daisy and the wild crab apple, put into your soul and mine the potentialities of the perfect man in Christ Jesus. The development of these fruits is constructive Christianity; it is affirmative. The destruction of weeds is incidental to the cultivation of fruits. If we fill our gardens with well-cultivated fruits, there will be no room for weeds; if we fill our lives with well-nurtured fruits, there will be no room for sin and folly. Even as we have had our harvest exhibit of fruits, so in Zion may we have on exhibition the development of these fruits—not an annual exhibit or a Sabbath Day exhibit, but one that shall last the year around, three hundred and sixty-five days in each year.

Next Sunday morning in the Stone Church President Elbert A. Smith will speak on the theme, "Your tongue: Is it set on fire of hell? (James 3:6) or of heaven? (Isaiah 6:6)."

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Brother R. V. Hopkins will meet with the young people in prayer meeting Wednesday evening at the Stone Church.

Second Church

The interest of Second Church people was largely centered all of last week upon the Harvest Festival being held at the Campus. Because of the fact that the movement was largely originated at this point of the city of Zion, the people are much interested and display that interest by their work and donations, or more properly speaking, by their offerings. The largest section of the display was under the label of groups from this congregation, and much of the work of the entire showing was done by members of this congregation.

Sunday morning's sermon by Elder William H. Kelley was an exhortation of value to Saints, and breathed a spirit of devotion which is wholesome.

In the afternoon the social service opened at two o'clock, at which the eight-year-old son of Brother and Sister Zion was confirmed, having been baptized by Elder A. K. Dillee just preceding the service.

Immediately succeeding this meeting, the priesthood of the section met in study class and started the examination of the subject of stewardships under the leadership of Brother Dillee. This was a profitable hour for the priesthood, and they will meet again October 25 for the same purpose.

There was no evening preaching service, and the congregation usually assembling went to the Stone Church to hear President Elbert A. Smith in the closing meeting of the Harvest Festival.

Monday evening a pie social was given by the men of the congregation for the purpose of raising money to be applied on the church debt. The social was under the leadership of the young men's club and was quite successful from every point of view. The reversal of the usual order, the women bidding for the pies brought by the men, caused no little amusement, but as usual, they rose to the demands of the occasion and bought all the pies at good prices.

Friday evening of this week the choir is giving a musical program, supplemented with some good readings, at which a silver collection will be taken. These proceeds are also for the purpose of applying on the indebtedness of the local congregation. The program will be furnished by the talent of the city, not confined to our congregation, and all are invited to come and fill the church to its capacity.

Walnut Park

Assistant Pastor B. J. Scott was the eleven o'clock speaker, assuring his flock once more, as a watchman on the tower, that "the foundation is sure," and reminding us that our great need is to see that we are building on that sure foundation.

The women of Walnut Park announced a chicken dinner and bazaar they will give at the Stone Church dining hall on October 22. Dinner will be served throughout the evening beginning at half past five. The proceeds will be applied on the Walnut Park church debt. Friends who have offered to help speed for the church and others who may wish to do so should mail them early to Mrs. C. E. Blair, 1123 South Noland Street, Independence, Missouri.

In the evening Evangelist G. T. Griffiths preached one of his enjoyable sermons—full of humor, interesting experiences, and good fatherly advice.

Sunday, October 18, will be observed at Walnut Park as Music Day—the entire day, beginning with the eight o'clock prayer service, being devoted to the interests of the Department of Music in District Three. The orchestra will be featured at the Sunday school hour. Elder Arthur H. Mills, general secretary of the Department of Music and former pastor of Walnut Park, will be the speaker at eleven o'clock. At half past seven in the evening Elder Paul N. Craig, director of music in Zion, will talk on "Hymns and hymn singing" with demonstrations by the audience. At eight o'clock the young people's chorus, numbering thirty-five voices, under the direction of Brother Orlando Nace, assisted by Mrs. Guy Reynolds, reader, will present the story-cantata "Paul, a prisoner of the Lord." All music lovers are cordially invited to worship with us on this day. A special invitation is extended to those who in years past have contributed to the development of this department of the Lord's work in Walnut Park.

Enoch Hill

The eleven o'clock speaker was Patriarch Gomer T. Giffiths, on the subject of faith, taking his text from Romans 4 and citing his congregation to instances in the past when the faith of God's servants prevailed with the Lord, also indicating our present duty in regard to exercising faith. Points made in his humorous way kept everyone alert and were easily grasped.

U. W. Greene preached in the evening, speaking from Jeremiah 7. He emphasized the fact by various instances that God's admonition has always been to go forward, not backward, and urged that the great opportunity now for the Saints to go forward was by uniting in the stewardship plan and working out the church ideals.

Holden Stake

Sedalia

Elder R. E. Burgess of Knobnoster was with us, giving us two splendid sermons on the 13th ult. His evening topic was "The gifts of the Spirit," which he made very plain. Our choir work is progressing under the direction of Sister Mount, who is stressing the training of leaders. A junior choir has been organized with Sister Moorman as leader.

Sister Elmer Riceland has been appointed chorister of Sunday school.

The Department of Women recently held a window sale, netting a nice sum.

Recent speakers here are J. E. Bozarth, A. A. Weaver and G. W. Rodger; also a Brother Kuykendall, of Detroit, Michigan, who was traveling through here and occupied on September 27. His sermon was enjoyed by all, and we hope he may come this way again. Brother Kuykendall was accompanied by his mother, of San Antonio, Texas.

Sister Mount has left us again, to spend some time with her daughter Lila. We will miss Sister Mount in the music work.

The Department of Women is preparing for a bazaar to be held November 14.

Lexington

Since our last items we have had some wonderful and very spiritual meetings. The Lord is surely blessing his people here, and from the letters and articles that appear in the HERALD we see that others through the world are enjoying his blessings.

On August 30 we held our annual picnic, and everyone seemed to enjoy the outing as well as the program of the day. There were eighty-five present.

We had several members assisting in the work at the stake fair dining hall, which is an enterprise of the Holden Stake. They are Lola Johnson, Julia Rosewall, Florence Robinson, Marie Brendel, Irene Conaway, Lerene Conaway, Lucille Robinson, and Ivan Beebe.

Our sacramental services of August and September will long be remembered by those in attendance. The Lord blessed us in abundance, his Spirit causing all to rejoice in this great latter-day work. Words of comfort and admonition were given by the Spirit. Brother Burgess spoke at the evening hour. On September 13 at eleven o'clock Brother Finis Beebe was the speaker. Brother J. A. Brendel spoke at the evening hour, his subject being stewardship. This has been his subject for several Sunday evenings.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Brother Ellsworth Moorman and wife, Brother Ernest Moorman and family and Brother R. E. Burgess and family of Knobnoster all worshiped with us on September 6, at our sacramental service.

We hope that every part of the church is enjoying the gospel as we are, and that we may all come higher. "We are marching upward to Zion."

Atherton

On the 23d of August we had the happy privilege of having Brother R. S. Salyards with us for the morning sermon. His sermon, as much as was also the sermon in the evening by R. J. Lambert. The 30th we were again made to rejoice to have with us a true and tried veteran in the gospel, Brother Richard Bullard, who preached both morning and evening. He was wonderfully blessed of the Spirit, and he expressed how much he enjoyed being with the Atherton Saints. This was his first effort in preaching for a few months, owing to illness, September 6 he was with us again, both for the sacrament—and at the evening service, where he again occupied in the pulpit. He was much improved in health.

Last Tuesday the Saints met at the home of Brother H. G. Williams in honor of his sixty-sixth birthday. We met as one big family, and an enjoyable time was had.

The Saints of Atherton are being made conscious of the love and unity that exist among us at the present time. We had our ups and downs and our severe trials, but no doubt each branch must be tried as each individual.

September 13 Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker in the morning, and in the evening Brother Alvin Knisley.

September 20 Brother H. O. Smith occupied at the eleven 0'clock service, using as his text the 8th verse of the 119th section of Doctrines and Covenants. A very helpful sermon.

In the evening Brother J. E. Vanderwood occupied, and he portrayed the importance of keeping close to the pattern using as an illustration the old-fashioned copy book, where each line seems to be copied from the preceding line, and the last line is scarcely recognizable as a copy of the "pattern."

September 27 J. A. Becker preached in the morning and W. A. Smith in the evening.

Sacramental service as usual October 4 with a good spirit present. Promptness in taking part was one characteristic of the meeting. In the evening we were very much pleased to have as a surprise Brother W. S. Macræ of the Holden stake presidency with us, who gave us a very interesting and helpful sermon, using as a basis of his sermon a little writing that was " boca uno. Glad to have with us Brother D. R. Carmichael, who was in charge of the meeting.

Our Department of Women has resumed its studies again after a vacation during the summer. The ladies of this department canned and donated one hundred and twenty-seven quarts of tomatoes to the Sanitarium.

Knobnoster

Our pastor, Brother R. E. Burgess, took a trip out in the stake, visiting Lexington, Sedalia, and Marshall. He reports having enjoyed the trip very much. Our Wednesday evening prayer meetings are well attended and very spiritual. Elder J. F. Petre has lately favored us with some gospel sermons from his chart. They have been well received.

Sister Emma Ross, wife of our Sunday school superintendent, Earl Ross, has been seriously ailing the past three weeks, and Saturday morning was taken to the Independence Sanitarium. We are hoping and praying for her speedy recovery.

Lees Summit

After five weeks our tent meetings that Brother Richard Weaver has been conducting here have closed. It has been a wonderful series of meetings, with good attendance of nonmembers every night, rain or shine. God has been in our midst; yes, even the nonmembers have felt that the Spirit of God was with us, and they say, "We are hungry to hear the real gospel."

Brother Weaver in his smiling and pleasant way and with the Spirit of God presented it so well so that a child could understand it. Although we baptized only four, we are not discouraged, for the truth has been planted deep in some hearts and will surely bear good fruit.

We cannot forget to thank our dearly beloved pastor, Brother James D. Gault, and wife, also the members of the different branches of Independence who assisted us in our services with their wonderful singing and instrumental musical message.

It has been a great inspiration to all of us to press forward and not be idlers in the vineyard of the Lord. We pray that all Saints in this branch will conduct themselves so that the people here can see we are truly the children of God.

Holden

Bishop J. A. Koehler has a class of thirty, which meets in the stake office each Friday evening. They are studying stewardships.

Evangelist John F. Martin is conducting a series of meetings here. The Saints are being encouraged and edified by the splendid sermons presented. Last Friday evening, the 23d, was given to a social evening. An entertainment was given, consisting of readings and musical numbers; games were played on the lawn, and refreshments were served to all. About four hundred were in attendance.

Our communion service was well attended. The Spirit was in evidence in much power, Brothers Martin and Burgess each delivering a communication of high order. The meeting was held in the Holden home. A part of the message given through Brother Martin was calling the attention to the fact that the Spirit which they were enjoying in that meeting was in harmony with that which had so often come to them previously, thus attesting that this was the same church of Christ. The Saints were admonished to heed the words of President Smith whom the Lord had chosen and acknowledged as his prophet.

Apostle John F. Garver was with us on September 13, speaking at the eleven o'clock hour, and at 2:30 p.m. In the afternoon he also conducted a problems meeting. His visit to Holden was of great value to the Saints. The afternoon meeting was such as to set at rest many of the fears and rumors which have been circulated by influences not from above. The best meeting ever held in Holden, was the very delightful meeting.

Elder John Lovell and son Will were called to Lamoni on account of the severe illness of Alfred Lovell, eldest brother of John.

The work of paving Second Street is under way. This will be the first paving for Holden and we trust not the last. When the work of hard surfacing Number 12 is completed, it will place us in nine miles of hard surface roads to Kansas City. The proposition to oil the nine miles (to Pittsville) is now under consideration.

Sister Anton G. Anderson has made a very fine offering of seventy-eight quarts of canned fruit to the Holden Home. Other offerings have been received and will be acknowledged by the matron. Those wishing to contribute anything to the Home please send same direct to Mrs. Edith Carr, matron, Holden, Missouri.

Mrs. Mary Lamson's Sunday school class gave a social at the Home on September 22. About $60 was realized, which will be used for Christmas offering and College Endowment Funds.

Bevery Lenore, daughter of Brother and Sister Freelin Hampton, was blessed Sunday, under the hands of Elders Knisley and Scarceff.

The work on the new porches at the Home is nearly completed, and the improvement will be appreciated by our aged Saints, especially the "shut-ins." It occupies the entire space between the two wings on the west. Sister Edith Carr, the matron, wishes to extend thanks in behalf of the Home to all who have assisted in making these porches possible. These are built from offerings received and proceeds derived from sales, booths, etc., without calling on the general church funds. The need of these porches has been apparent for a number of years. The general offices granted Sister Carr permission to go ahead and build if the money could be found outside of the general funds. She advises that there is need of a little more to complete the work properly and will gladly receive further offerings.

Brother Krahl wishes to advise the Saints of the stake that he is now at the office at Holden looking after the work again. He appreciates the kindly words extended him during his affliction, and the patience manifested by the Saints. Especially does he value the help of Brother Macrae and Brother McWethy and others of the ministry who have given attention to the work the past few months.

Holden stake conference will meet at Grandview, Missouri, Saturday, October 17, and continue over Sunday.

Central Chicago

66th and Honore Streets

Rally day, October 4, proved quite a success. Invitations in the shape of footballs had been sent by the Sunday schools to all members and many friends, and each individual was given a rally pin to wear. Quite a number of visitors were present, possibly the larger number being from Hammond.

The morning sermon was preached by the city missionary, Brother Frank R. Almond; the evening sermon by Brother Oliver McDowell.

Brethren Cooper, McDowell, and Smith had charge of the afternoon sacramental service; it was a splendid service.

The Spirit was present, and one testimony followed another so quickly that there was no time wasted.

Our Sunday school made its debut as a closely graded Sunday school.

Earl in the month a luncheon was given by Sister Bell Simmons. Thirty-five cents a plate was charged, the money going to the building fund.

Brother and Sister Christy, Sister Frank Almond, and Sister Axel Edstrom from Oak Park and Sister Aura Fike Jones from Washington were with us. The afternoon program furnished by the visitors was both interesting and instructive.

The following Sunday evening service was in charge of the Department of Women. Sister Bell Simmons presided, and the Department of Women formed the choir. Sister Christy was the speaker of the evening, Brother Christy adding a few remarks. It was a wonderful service, and Sister Christy's advice not to grow weary of holding up our ideals before our youth touched a responsive chord in the hearts of her audience.

The infant of Brother and Sister James T. Gilbert was blessed.

Brother Almond has organized a club for the young people in connection with the Religio. The purpose of the club is service to the church. Sister Ruth Ortlieb is its president. We are proud of our fine young people and are pleased to have their efforts directed by such a leader as Brother Almond. STELLA E. THOMAN, Correspondent.

Thinks Minneapolis Has Wonderful Opportunity

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

This is to let you know that I was never so busy or so happy as I am now in my new work. As I get to know more and more of the Minneapolis Branch and of the wonderful opportunities for service, I become thrilled with the boundless possibilities before us.

The men of the priesthood are indeed a superior group of men. The Department of Women is active and, too, contains most noble women. The young men and women have organized themselves in clubs of different kinds and are demanding expression. Almost every member of the branch is tingling with energy and life. I truly feel very grateful for the privilege of working in a branch that is a winner. My slogan is: "Watch Minneapolis lead." With God's help we can and will do it.

I shall soon present for your consideration my plans for the future.

RAY WHITING, Pastor of Minneapolis Branch.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA, 2306 Western Avenue North.

Will Spend the Month Studying Stewardship

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, October 7.—We are glad to note the forward movement in the church in general. We feel that this branch needs a spiritual uplift, one that will make each one that has named the name of Christ feel we are called into this work to consecrate our all to God, whether in money, talent, service, or whatever we possess, not walking in the ways of the world, but following the steps of the Savior, and becoming one in his hands that the work may go forward in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have a work to do here which no one can do for us, but if we fail God will raise up others who will work.

On September 13 Brother Robert Zaelsdorf spoke in the main and Pastor C. B. Freeman in the evening. On the 20th the pulpit was occupied by W. C. Stauty in the morning and by the pastor in the evening.

The sacramental service on the 6th was not very well attended. It has often been said that the spiritual growth of a branch is estimated by the sacramental and prayer services. In our midweek prayer services can be found some of the faithful few, but many a Saint is missed who ought to come to receive spiritual food.

The attendance at the young people's prayer service at nine o'clock Sunday mornings seems to be on the increase, and we pray that the minds of others may be drawn in communion with God, for in unity there is strength, and the group must suffer to some extent when even the weakest member is absent. May God in his mercy pour out his Spirit, that indeed an awakening may come.

Brother George W. Day, district president, was with us on the 27th and spoke at eleven o'clock, explaining the work to go forward in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have a work to do here which no one can do for us, but if we fail God will raise up others who will work.

Brother George W. Day, district president, was with us on the 27th and spoke at eleven o'clock, explaining the work in regard to the endowment fund for Graceland College and going back to his home at Bemidji on the evening train. We hope he may come again soon and stay longer.

On September 28, Brother Samuel Case and his companion and Sister Delia Hamlin of Pine River and Brother Grant Bye, Sister Catherine J. Hastings, and Sister Susanna Sloan of Two Harbors. We sometimes wonder why it is that members living close to church do not come oftener, when other members will drive one hundred and fifty miles to be in time for Sunday school at a quarter of ten, and let all who are handy to branches take part while opportunity is ours, for maybe sometime we will be away from church privileges.

Brother Shakespeare is here and spoke on the evenings of October 4, 5, and 6 on the subject of stewardship. He will go on to Two Harbors on the 7th but will be back here for the 8th and 9th. He will then go to Fargo. The whole month will be given over to the subject of stewardship. His message is plain and simple, showing indeed the greater necessity of a social program that is God-given.

May each one of us love the Lord God with all our might, mind, soul, and strength, and love our neighbors as ourselves, that Zion may blossom as the rose and her garments be pure and white so that the world will soon find a solution for her many ills and those that are heavy laden may find rest to their souls.

With the President of the Des Moines District

The Saints' Herald readers will, no doubt, be interested in reading about how one district president not under conference appointment spends his time. It has been my pleasure and privilege to be in company with Brother Henry Castings for two weeks' work out in the field. He is vice-president and Iowa sales manager for his company, besides doing his pastoral work.

Three other salesmen and I were called to Ellsworth, Iowa, to assist him in selling a car of goods. While we were there he sold more goods than any of his men, working early and late. Three evenings he went to Webster City to help out with the meetings there. One night he met with a farm bureau group and made the address of the occasion, speaking on the subject of "Organization."

Last Friday night, upon reaching home and answering correspondence, he set out to collect for a car of coal that had arrived in his absence and had been distributed among the Saints at cost.

He next called the superintendent of the Des Moines warehouse about some shipments; then a long distance call to Adair, resulting in a sale.

Doctor Hull was then called regarding "home-coming" services at Pershing. The doctor said, "Well, if you say so I guess I'll have to preach." Then twenty minutes were spent in conversation about the delivery of the coal, at the end of which Brother Castings said, "Well, I guess I'll catch the midnight train for Saint Joseph and see what's going on at the office." His family started to protest, but the argument ended when he disappeared with his grips, in the rain, to catch a street car for the depot.

Brother Castings does not neglect any of his work, and all is carried on successfully. He is loved by all of the Saints, because he is one of them and does not feel that he is above the humblest member.

The eight weeks' home-coming services began at Pershing last Sunday and will continue until all branches have participated. It is hoped that the Des Moines church will be completed to a point that the closing service may be held in it.

Brother Wilfrid Tordoff closed a five-week series of meetings at Webster City on September 29. One was baptized, and more will follow if the work is followed up. Doctor Slocum and wife were of great assistance during the meetings.

This is the third series of meetings that Brother Tordoff has conducted since coming to the district. He is a tireless worker and it demonstrates the confidence the love of the Saints and nonmembers. One lady who was not a member offered to pay his fare home and back if he could spare the time from his work to go. Boone was ready for a series following the dedicatory services, and he is busy again.

Brother H. A. Higgins, Des Moines pastor, is pushing the work on the church and has his hands full directing the work and buying the materials for its construction. He is the right man for the task.

The Pershing "home-coming" is declared a success. Doctor Hull preached in the morning and Brother Castings at night. The afternoon prayer service was very spiritual and will long be remembered by those who were there.

The Saints Equip a Playground at Matherville

Matherville, Illinois, is a mining town of some fifteen hundred people. The village is about fifteen years old, springing up without much planning around a coal mine. Among the early miners were a few Latter Day Saints who soon became the nucleus of a live branch of the church. Our work has had varying success, as the mining population has shifted and missionaries have come and gone. It has not been advisable to build an expensive church house, but the Saints have purchased and equipped a very comfortable hall for their use.

Outstanding features of our work in this community in recent months have been sponsored by the Live Wire Club, composed at first of a group of young people under the leadership of Sister Jacobs. They met on a week night at their hall, enjoyed social games and contests, and prepared programs for church entertainments. At first they served refreshments on club evenings, contributing ten cents each, weekly, to cover the cost. This met their social purposes well, but soon they began to look ahead. They realized neither the town nor the church was making any provision for the recreation and social needs of its young people during the long summer months. Encouraged by their genial home-comings, the president, the branch president, and their "eats" at their social evenings during the winter, and by spring their dues had accumulated into a considerable sum. Early in the spring a committee began to look about for a vacant lot or some convenient place that could be secured for an outdoor playground.

Now the little branch at Matherville has the unique distinction of having a force in the priesthood, two brethren, George Sackfield and Mark Knott, both past sixty years of age but still young in spirit, agile, and quite appreciative of the need of joyous physical exercise under wholesome conditions. Their own participation in athletic games and exercises in youth, and later with their children and grandchildren, has tended to keep them young in body as well as in spirit. The agility and skill of their boyhood days has been largely retained, and as the playground project developed these two brethren, the former being president of the branch and the latter the town marshal, were admirably fitted to lead in the activities.

A four-acre wooded tract on the edge of the village was leased, and the willing workers, now including the entire membership of the branch, bent to their task. Playground plans were cleared by Brother Tordoff and set apart, cut away. The whole ground was raked and leveled, the sisters doing their part, planting flower beds and shrubs in an attractive arrangement. Two volleyball courts were laid out, two tennis courts, and a basket-ball court. Eleven rope swings were put up, nine tire swings, three trapezes, and four turning poles. In addition are croquet grounds and spaces for horseshoes and quoits.

To secure needed finances, several programs were given by the young folks, which were generously patronized by the public. A subscription paper passed among the business men raised seventy dollars, and the opening program and dinner netted over one hundred dollars. With these means a commodious platform was erected, wiring, lights, ropes, balls, nets, etc., were paid for. All equipment is cared for on a basis of a donor's name and the cost, which is entirely paid for.

The new L. D. S. Park is the pride and joy of the whole village. Hundreds of people, young and old, gather here every pleasant day and evening throughout the year, especially through the warm summer months. At present work in the mine is slack, and the playground affords a most welcome gathering place. Men and women join heartily in the games and keep themselves healthy, happy, and strong.

Only one day in the week, Tuesday, is reserved for members of the Live Wire Club, who pay their weekly dues to meet the small current running expense. This splendid piece of social work has manifested one of the most beautiful and essential characteristics of the gospel of Christ. It has proved a wonderful source of development, socially, physi-
Institute Work in New York District

According to schedule, institutes were held at Greenwood and Syracuse, both being very profitable. Doctor P. L. Weegar, our district president, was present and in charge of both, though badly hampered by his fall attack of hay fever. At Greenwood, the 5th and 6th of September, the attendance was good, considering its remoteness from most of the branches. Those attending from Sherrill drove about two hundred miles to get there. Two young men, Brother Rathbun, seven-past-age, and Brother Mesle's Buick, made the trip, the latter staying over night in Syracuse the previous night to have a start and pick up Sister Ava Davison, who assisted with the music. Brother and Sister George Lloyd drove through from Buffalo, bringing Doctor Weegar's girls, Maurice and Doris, and were a power as they ever can be with their contribution of music. Doctor Weegar came by train and bus.

The round table discussions Saturday afternoon with talks by the Doctor and Elder Mesle sandwiched in, were on the live topics of the church, as was also the evening talk by Brother Weegar. A good prayer meeting was held Sunday morning. The Sunday school session was devoted to talks, including one by Brother F. Rathbun, with special music to set the tone for the day. The Department of Women in Greenwood is hardly over a year old, but their talks and papers were excellent during the afternoon program. Sister Jason Weeks is their president. All departments had some attention, even to the bishop's, which was not slighted at all. Greenwood Saints turned out well and certainly entertained the officers of the branch early in the evening, to be followed by a general service at eight o'clock. We have been kindly met at every place and have especially enjoyed the Spirit of the Master as we have sought to unify the forces of the branch for the accomplishment of the great objectives of the church.

We are immediately concerned with the need of trained officers and teachers, convenient arrangement of classes, grading, and the type of quarterly material needed. We are sure there must be intelligent cooperation between our officers and teachers and parents if we are to lead our youth to those ideals and to that stability of character which shall help to make them earnest, faithful citizens of the kingdom of God.

We trust we are able to broaden the vision of Sunday school workers and to impress them with the seriousness and the joy of their work. We hope, too, to be able to help improve the methods now being used. At the same time we are gaining a fund of information as to the needs of our schools, small and large, and we trust this may be an advantage in the preparation of future quarterly material.

The following ten days will be spent in Wisconsin on a similar mission. If these tours prove worthy and accomplish our purpose we shall be glad to extend them into other districts.

Young People’s Convention

Seattle and British Columbia, at Seattle, Thirty-sixth and First Avenue Northwest, (Freemont), beginning Friday, October 23, with registration, sightseeing tour of Seattle, and opening program in the evening, at which time President Frederick M. Smith will deliver the keynote address of the convention. Meetings will continue through Saturday and Sunday, October 24 and 25. Apostles J. Clyde Bevier welcomes you. G. R. Wells, district president.

Appointment of Agent

The death of Brother Martin Bolt, Bishop’s agent for the Illinois District, makes necessary the appointment of a successor. The church has lost a faithful and conscientious representative in Brother Bolt, who, on June 23, 1925, passed on to a well-earned reward.

At the recommendation of the district conference, we appoint Brother George Nowack, 1736 South Douglas Avenue, Springfield, Illinois, as Bishop’s agent for the Central Illinois District. All branch solicitors will please make their monthly reports to Brother Nowack the hearty support of the membership of the district. Approved by the First Presidency.

THE BISHOP’S SECRETARY

By A. CARMICHAEL.

Conference Notices

Gallaudet Grove District will meet at Dow City, October 24, 25. Branch and priesthood reports should be mailed to Brother Nowack hereafter. We send me your permanent address reporting were H. O. Smith, president; H. G. Johnson and E. L. Baker, secretaries; M. L. Smith, treasurer.

Addresses Wanted

All high priests, including bishops and evangelists, please send me your permanent address so I may be able to furnish you with the information sent you in connection with the official publication of the High Priests’ Quorum. A prompt response will be greatly appreciated. C. I. Carpenter, secretary, Quorum of High Priests, Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Conference Minutes

WEST VIRGINIA.—At Stealey Heights, Clarksburg, September 12 and 13. Convened in business session Saturday at 10 a. m. with Brother Newton in charge, assisted by Clarence W. Germon and R. G. Johnson. Officers’ reports and financial report were given; statistical reports showing: President, 59; Montana, 52; Parkersburg, 54; Fairmont, 54; Mount Zion, 22; Harmony, 45. Business session continued in afternoon, followed by special school convention at 4 p. m., with Harry E. Smith in charge, Department of Women, with Thomas Newton in charge in the absence of May R. Griffin, district superintendent, held a short session following the convention. Financial report of Bishop’s agent from August 23, 1924, to August 1, 1925, showed receipts of $11,195.30, a decrease of about 20 per cent. For the year, total for the conference, $12,761.00, 33 per cent of the membership contributing during the year. Ministry reporting were H. D. Johnson, Clarksburg; E. G. Germon, M. A. Smith, H. O. Smith; Thomas Newton, E. L. Bungelow, W. C. Warren, U. G. For­ester, Charles M. Shinn, and summarization of work done in Morgantown Branch. It was decided that bishop members pay for their meals at conference, being charged a minimum sum. Following officers elected: C. W. Germon, president; H. G. Johnson, and Clyde T. Baker, counselors; Mabel J. Smith, secretary-treasurer; Harry R. Smith, Bishop’s agent; May R. Griffin, superintendent of Department of Women, with Opal Baker as assistant; H. D. Johnson, superintendent of the Merrillville Sunday school, Otis O. Forester, and L. B. Smith, district vice president; H. O. Smith, district president. Miscellaneous reports were H. O. Smith, superintendent of the Merrillville Sunday school, Otis O. Forester, called to the Missouri Conference, assigned to the district. Reports for the district for the week during the conference were T. L. Clark and J. D. Shower, missionaries. Priesthood meeting Sunday at 7 a. m. at Independence, Missouri. Closing services Sunday at 4 p. m. at the hotel. A vote of thanks was extended to the Saints at Clarksburg for their hospitality during the conference. Mabel J. Smith, secretary.

NORTHERN KANSAS.—At Atchison, August 28, 29, with A. C. Silvers presiding, assisted by Mark Williams. Right of the floor was extended to visiting Saints. Following officers were elected: A. C. Silvers, district president, Mark Williams, elders, and M. L. Stephenson, secretary. Financial report of Bishop’s agent, A. C. Silvers, showed receipts of $622.18, an increase of $300.90 over previous year.

The Two Great Commandments

III. THE SECOND OF THESE COMMANDMENTS

Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

If the first of the two commandments brings to our attention one great figure, Jehovah, and one great principle, the fatherhood of God, the second commandment brings to view another figure, man, and another principle, the brotherhood of man.

Jesus as the Son of God came to reveal God to us, but as the “Son of Man” he came to reveal man to us. It is said of him that he had no need that anyone should tell what was in man, for he knew man. And only in the light of his gospel can we truly evaluate and understand humanity.

He reveals man to us as a being, faulty, erring, yet of such potential value that the Son of God should die for him. He reveals to us man’s need. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son. He gave in response to our very great need. It is true there, as in temporal matters, that man should receive according to “his needs and just wants.” Hopelessly lost, without power to save himself, afflicted with ignorance, poverty, sin, and death, man’s immeasurable need rose up to God and found a response in an infinite love that prompted the infinite atonement on Calvary’s Cross.

And in turn Jesus reveals to us humanity’s need and would have us understand that the only adequate motive prompting service and response is that of love: Thou shalt love thy brother as thyself. We are not to love him more or less, but just as ourselves—on the common level of humanity’s appeal and need under the gospel law.

On this second commandment hangs the pastoral program of the church, to gather together first into groups or branches, then into districts or stakes, and finally into Zion, the Saints of God and teach them the law of love and cooperation. This is a slow, oft-interrupted process. Probably all, in every rank and order of the church, in priesthood and membership alike, at times break over this law; and we are all very slow to learn. Nevertheless it is true that everything hangs on this second commandment, as far as human relations are concerned.

There are two compelling emotions: love and hate. During the World War Bulgarians and Roumanians hated each other most intensely. And some one, I think it was Bernard Shaw, told this story: An angel appeared to a Bulgarian who had been very active in defense of his country, and said to him, “I have been sent to give you any gift that you may ask. Think carefully and tell me what you wish, and it shall be granted.” Then the angel added, “One more thing, there is a condition: whatever I do for you I do twice as much for your neighbor, the Roumanian just across the river.” The face of the Bulgarian lighted at once. His problem was solved. And he replied, “I pray you, put out one of my eyes.”

Hate may prompt strenuous exertions and terrible sacrifices. But its results are destructive. Love

Think carefully and tell me what you wish, and it shall be granted.” Then the angel added, “One more thing, there is a condition: whatever I do for you I do twice as much for your neighbor, the Roumanian just across the river.” The face of the Bulgarian lighted at once. His problem was solved. And he replied, “I pray you, put out one of my eyes.”

Hate may prompt strenuous exertions and terrible sacrifices. But its results are destructive. Love prompts exertions and sacrifices that tax human nobility and rise to the divine. And its results are constructive. It saves; for it allies us with God. If we love, we are content to have according to our needs and just wants and are happy that our neighbor should receive even more generously—to the double, if his need be double.

In religious law these two commandments are supreme. And this is also true to an extent in civil law. A man and his wife live together. Before them the state sets the commandment, Thou shalt not kill. They are subjected to the strains of everyday living together. What agent has the state adequate to the task of seeing that the commandment is kept? It is easy to slip poison into the coffee. Or the wife may learn to use a revolver. It seems to be quite the thing in polite society for a dissatisfied wife to shoot her husband. And generally she escapes. Male juries are sentimental.

No, if there is hatred in the family the city may keep a policeman at the door, and the law will yet be violated. But if there is love in that home, the commandment, Thou shalt not kill, becomes quite superfluous. The city may withdraw her police.

So with the commandment, Thou shalt not steal. In a community where fellowship exists, the doors may be left unlocked. You do not lock your doors against the neighbors who love you, or who even have a feeling of warm fellowship. You lock them against another class. The only real safety in any community is based on fellowship, some sort of manifestation of obedience to the commandment, Thou shalt love thy neighbor.

Lastly, obedience to the second commandment seems the only road to obedience to the first. The question is pertinently asked, "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"—I John 4:20.

Love seeks expression in service. We cannot today give God anything that he really needs. Yet Jesus to some at a time will say:

For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.—Matthew 25: 35, 36.

Well may his hearers reply, "When were you sick and we came unto you?" It is inconceivable that God should be hungry and we feed him. Or that he should be in prison and we visit him. Deity is far beyond our power to help. We can only help by way of humanity. And so the reply will be:

Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.—Matthew 25: 40.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

ing any other office may possess prophetic gifts. The First Presidency according to recent revelations are apostles. They are the chief or presiding apostles. . . . if the church is to be according to the pattern of heavenly things there must be the quorum of three holding the chief authority on earth.—The Truth Defended, pp. 73, 75.

We were interested some years ago, when this subject was up, to canvass the question with leading men at that time members of the Quorum of Twelve, and others who had been members but had been released or called to other responsible positions. We submitted to them the quotation from Truth Defended up to the point of the ellipsis. The replies were up, to the point of the ellipsis. The replies quite unanimously supported the position taken by Heman C. Smith. While they might not exactly agree in detail, there was a surprising general agreement. Our readers may be interested in some of these replies:

Joseph R. Lambert

Elder E. A. Smith, Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother Smith: Your letter of to-day, received this evening, has been read with pleasure, and I hasten to send you a few lines in reply.

I fully agree with the position you set forth by quotation from The Truth Defended. Brother Heman and I talked this matter over a good many years ago, and while we did not go quite so far as this quotation from his book does, yet we fully agreed upon the matter; and our views, expressed at that time, are now found to be in complete harmony with what our lamented brother has so briefly and clearly expressed. It is only necessary for me to say that in my opinion this is the only position that will stand the test when tried by what is written in the Bible and Doctrine and Covenants.

Independence, Missouri, 1609 West Walnut, February 19, 1921.

T. W. Williams

The First Presidency,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brethren: Replying to your communication of February 7 (inclosed) will say:

(a) There are in the church two priesthoods. (Doctrine and Covenants 104:1.)

(b) The Quorum of Twelve and the Presidency are but orders in the Melchisedec priesthood. (Doctrine and Covenants 129:7.)

(c) The President of the church is an apostle. (Doctrine and Covenants 17:1.)

(d) The counselors to the President are apostles. (Doctrine and Covenants 17:1.)

(e) Apostleship is not confined to the members of the Quorum of Twelve. (Doctrine and Covenants 17:1.)

(f) Seventies, under certain conditions, are in the power of their administration apostles. (Doctrine and Covenants 120:3.)

(g) Christ set in the church first apostles. (Matthew 10:1, 2.)

(h) The function of a prophet is not an order in the priesthood. We cheepen the spiritual function of the President or even the Presidency of the church by limiting it to prophecy; the President of the church may prophesy—so may his counselors—so may members of the Quorum of Twelve—so may others who do not hold the priesthood.

The President of the church holds the keys which entitle him to receive the oracles of God for the whole church. His ordination gives him this right. It is through him that God reveals his mind and will to the church. This may at times take on the nature of prophecy. More frequently it is direction, counsel, and admonition. He possesses this right, not as a prophet but as an apostle and high priest.

The word prophet does not designate the first elder of the church. The word president does not designate this position. Unfortunately we have not yet a term which does justice to the position. The term "chief apostle" more nearly supplies this lack.

Sincerely, T. W. Williams.

Jerusalem, Palestine, March 17, 1921.

M. A. McConley

First Presidency,

Office.

Brethren: Relying to circular letter of the 13th inst.

The general position taken by Elder Heman C. Smith in The Truth Defended defines my position on this matter. I have always understood that the members of the First Presidency were apostles, but not members of the Quorum of Twelve.

Sincerely yours, M. A. McConley.

January 18, 1921.

John W. Wight

President E. A. Smith, Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother: Replied to yours of 13th will say: Yes, I am in harmony with Heman’s answer in my belief. It may, however, be still somewhat amplified, as for instance, that with the “first elder” or apostle of the church (all of which applies to the First Presidency) the prophetic and teaching gifts inhere, hence the statement that “God hath set,” and the further statement of “first,” “secondly,” and “thirdly,” or in other words God “set” such an one and as a result there is inherent the official right to exercise the kind of prophetic gift that reaches beyond the fact of alone telling that which is yet future to the point of further inherent right—teaching, or expounding the law governing the body—not a teacher in the sense of holding that office in the Aaronic priesthood . . .

I may say, then, that without apostolic authority the Presidency of the church could not expound in harmony with the prophetic and teaching offices he implied (the Apostle Paul, I mean) in these letters. The distinction, according to Doctrine and Covenants, being that the apostleship of the Presidency is of a presiding nature, while that of the Quorum of Twelve is one of traveling.

Hoping that it has been made plain,

Very sincerely yours,

Lamoni, Iowa, January 16, 1921.

J. W. Wight.

R. C. Russell

The First Presidency,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brethren: Yours of the 13th, 20th, and 24th, were awaiting my arrival.

In answer to that of the 18th relative to whether or not in my judgment the First Presidency are apostles, I might say I have at different times when preaching relative to the officers in the church always claimed that there were fifteen apostles in the church when the different quorums were full—three in the First Presidency and twelve in the Second Presidency. I personally believe that the prophets referred to by Paul as “secondarily prophets” means the patriarchal order.

Cornwall, Ontario, Box 577, January 31, 1921.

U. W. Greene

First Presidency,

Office.

Brethren: I am of the opinion that the language, “God set some in the church, first apostles,” means that he called special witnesses for Christ—those sent to testify that Jesus was the Christ.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
In section 17, paragraph 1, we learn that Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were both ordained as apostles, yet they did not occupy in the Quorum of Twelve.

In section 122, paragraph 14, we learn that the First Presidency and Twelve are apostles and high priests.

In view of this statement, I am of the opinion that Brother Heman C. Smith was correct when he said, "The First Presidency according to recent revelations are apostles."

In the inception of the latter-day work it is evident that Joseph Smith was so set apart and ordained, and I am of the opinion that in setting apart the members of the Presidency this office should be designated.

Very sincerely yours,

The Quorum of Twelve.

By U. W. Greene.

Paul M. Hanson

ELBERT A. SMITH,

Dear Brother: In answer to your letter in which you desire to know whether or not I believe the First Presidency are apostles, wise say that I am in hearty accord with the view expressed by Heman C. Smith as quoted in your letter from The Truth Defended. My understanding is, there is no higher authority in the church than apostolic authority.

Sincerely, Paul M. Hanson.

FIRST PRESIDENCY,

Office.

Brothers: Yours of February 9 received and in answer will say that I have always understood that the Presidency are apostles, and agree with the sentiment expressed in Heman C. Smith's statement, but of course, there is a difference in the work of the Presidency and the Quorum of Twelve.

W. M. Atior.

February 21, 1921.

C. A. Butterworth

TO THE PRESIDENCY,

Dear Brethren: Your letter of February 9 in reference to Brother H. C. Smith's comment on Paul's statement that God had set in the church, first apostles, etc., reached me a few days ago, and I am pleased to say that I heartily agree with the latter part of his comment, about the Presidency being the chief apostles in the church.

I preach that we have 505 apostles when all the quorums are full, divided up into three quorums, the Presidency, the Twelve, and the Seventy. Our Lord was the chief corner stone in the church and was anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows, and Paul calls him the Apostles and High Priest of our profession.

Although he was an apostle and high priest, he did not belong to the Group of Twelve men whom he had chosen to be with him, but acted as their counselor, their leader and commander, for "the head of every man is Christ."

PRESIDENT E. A. SMITH,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother: The motive of these brethren in trying to repudiate the Doctrine and Covenants is because the revelations in this book are emphatic in that they teach and support the doctrine of lineal priesthood; and define and point out that the First Presidency are over the Twelve and direct their official acts, and also outline the method by which Zion is to be built up and redeemed.

Their argument to eliminate the Presidency from a Bible standpoint is flimsy, and is an "old chestnut." Their quotation from Paul is far-fetched for the reason that Jesus Christ was an apostle but was not one of the Twelve. Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were also apostles but never belonged to the Quorum of Twelve. I have always taught that there were two quorums of apostles at the head of this church; namely, three, and twelve. And that these two quorums of apostles were the standing and traveling presidency of the church, and our position in this respect is correct and according to the revelations of God as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants.) No wonder that they want to knock this book out as a part of the constitution of the church. However, they forget that when John the Baptist came to the Jews he had was the Old Testament. And that was all that Christ had when he set up his church. The Christian church of this early day was fairly completed in organic structure ere the New Testament was written. They say that we must stand by the constitution of 1830, which was the Bible and Book of Mormon, and thus they lose sight of the fact that there was no Quorum of Twelve in 1830. The only apostles that we had then were those that constituted the First Presidency, and the Quorum of Twelve did not exist until 1835.

Yours in the faith,

Gomer T. Griffiths.

SHERRILL, NEW YORK, December 11, 1920.

John W. Rushton

TO THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

Independence, Missouri.

Greetings: Two letters dated December 23, 1920, and January 15, 1921, respectively came to hand. I am assuming that these deal with the same matter.

The question: As to my ideas with reference to the three leading quorums, viz: the Presidency, Twelve, and Seventies holding apostolic authority.

I have said that the Presidency and the Twelve held inherently, by virtue of their call and ordination, the same "priestly authority" which is essentially apostolic. And, that this apostolic authority was the highest authority known to the church of Christ. The Seventies could be delegated to represent the apostolic quorum in emergency, and then they would exercise "apostolic authority." But in this case such authority was "contingent" and not inherent.

In extension, I may say further: I would not interpret Paul's language in the Corinthian letter (the first, chapter 12, verses 27-31) in a literalistic sense to be applied to "persons" or even "officers," but functionally.

The apostle is discussing the church as the body of Jesus Christ, and evaluating the individual as he stands in relationship to the body. Consequently, the only value which an individual can have at least concretely, is demonstrated in his functional activities by which reactions favorable to the well-being of the whole are set up in the society to which he belongs at least religiously. The church being analogous to the "human body" must, therefore, be interpreted in the same way, in that the logic characteristic of the apostle's presentation shall not be violated; the church of Christ therefore must be explained and understood not in the terms of mechanics and physics, but rather in the terms of life and biology. The true value and purpose of the church as an agent is functional and not mechanistic.

The first and primary function of the Church as the Body of Christ is apostolic, namely; to be the special witness of Jesus Christ in the world, and just as God draws nigh and becomes identified with man in the person of our Lord, so does Christ become identified with the world or human social life and in through the church and her activities.

Secondly, the function of the church as a psychic, prophetic being in essence, the revelation of the mind of God. The word mind here must certainly include all that this word includes when applied to human psychological phenomena, viz: the effective functions, the cognitive and the conative or striving functions. Altogether these constitute the "person-
Graceland College Endowment

An investigation recently made in connection with a number of small Iowa denominational colleges discloses the fact that many of them have conducted endowment campaigns during the past two years. A comparison of five of these Iowa colleges in respect may be of value to those having the interests of Graceland College at heart. All five of them have very largely increased their endowment during the past two years. They are all church colleges, two being Methodist, two Presbyterian, and one Dutch Reformed. The following information will be of interest:

These five colleges and their enrollments are as follows: Simpson, 715; Iowa Wesleyan, 343; Buena Vista, 151; Central, 233; Parsons, 487. Ranging from 151 to 715. Two of them have a smaller student body than Graceland and three larger.

These colleges had endowments as follows in 1923:
- Simpson, $500,000
- Iowa Wesleyan, $500,000
- Buena Vista, $200,000
- Central, $200,000
- Parsons, $500,000

During the past two years they have increased their endowment as follows:
- Simpson, $1,825,000
- Iowa Wesleyan, $1,000,000
- Buena Vista, $250,000
- Central, $300,000
- Parsons, $500,000

The present endowment in each case is:
- Simpson, $2,325,000
- Iowa Wesleyan, $1,500,000
- Buena Vista, $450,000
- Central, $500,000
- Parsons, $1,000,000

The endowment per student in each of these five colleges is as follows:
- Simpson, $3,250
- Iowa Wesleyan, $4,809
- Buena Vista, $2,980
- Central, $2,150
- Parsons, $2,055

Endowment per student in each of these five colleges is as follows:

HOVER CALLS RADIO CONFERENCE

Secretary of Commerce Hoover, whose department has supervision of radio activities in the United States, has called a meeting in Washington beginning November 9. The conference is for the purpose of discussing and considering matters affecting radio communication and broadcasting in the United States from the viewpoint of the public interest.

The conference will include representatives of all radio activities. Representation is accorded members of broadcasting stations, commercial radio stations, publications with radio interest, press associations, amateur radio organizations, United States Government departments, radio manufacturers, Institute of Radio Engineers, and several other groups connected or affiliated with radio.

Although consideration will be given all radio problems, those of broadcasting will receive prime attention: The subjects thus far outlined are:

Recognition of the principle that service to the listening public must be the basis for every broadcasting privilege and for all radio regulations.

The present saturation in broadcasting due to the exhaustion of channels, and the necessity for limiting the number of stations on the basis of public service.

The requiring of permits in advance of construction of broadcasting stations.

Frequency band (wave length) assignments for the various classes of radio communication.

The use of high power for broadcasting.

The location of broadcasting stations so as to prevent interference in congested centers.

Time division, duplication of frequency assignments, and a geographical basis for allocations.

The use of broadcasting for advertising.

Matters affecting amateurs.

Matters affecting the marine and mobile service.

shaping of vital radio legislation. The November meeting will, in all probability, be a very important one, for there are serious problems in broadcasting that must be solved. The greatest pressure is being brought to bear by owners of powerful new stations for which there are no Class B wave lengths; they claim that with their new equipment of the most powerful and highest quality, they have as much right for a Class B wave as present broadcasters.

Many Class B stations, including our own church broadcaster K L D S, are not making use of all the useful time they have, and those thus far denied Class B waves strongly argue that Class B stations have no right to hold their wave lengths and not make efficient use of their time. Further division of time is demanded.

It is contended by some that religious stations are for propagandizing and should not occupy Class B waves. And others say that church stations are of local character and therefore should be licensed Class A.

It is unfortunate that K L D S is not making fuller use of its time on the Class B wave length. President Smith has strongly favored broadcasting on a much heavier schedule, and were we doing this we would be in a much more favorable position to meet opposition. A broadcasting station, to occupy an exclusive wave length, must perform a recognized public service, and be desired by a great number of people. Our station should be functioning as a real school of the air, with religious education as a cornerstone. We have not fully lived up to our opportunities.

Elimination of the present classification of stations is anticipated at the conference called by Secretary Hoover, and in this event the present allotment of wave bands for the different classes of stations will be discontinued.

Where will K L D S be in the new classification?
That is a question that vitally affects our broadcasting station. As a church we believe that K L D S has an important missionary work to perform.

Our church radio department should be represented at the Washington conference next month.
We qualify for representation on at least four points.

Sanitarium Needs Reading Matter

There is a scarcity of reading matter for those who are detained at the Sanitarium. Many are compelled to spend hours within the doors which might be cheered by a broader choice of reading, and this can be supplied from the abundance of the Saints' homes and offices, without cost to the institution.

Elder George E. Harrington is devoting his time to ministering to the patients lying there. A recent letter from him suggests the need of high grade fiction, and of current or month-old magazines and journals such as The American, Ladies' Home Journal, Literary Digest, Woman's Home Companion, religious books and stories, and the magazines and journals of the church.

Send such contributions to G. E. Harrington, care

The Lesson of the Harvest Home Festival

Scripture Reading: Genesis, chapters one and two.

In connection with the scripture I have just read I would remind you of Paul's saying, "We are laborers together with God." In harmony with the theme of the evening, which has to do with our Harvest Home Festival and the religious lessons that may be drawn from it, I want to tell you first a story about cooperative gardening and then draw a lesson therefrom touching us as individuals first, and secondly touching us as a church.

In the reading we have just listened to, the statement is made that God made a garden and that he set man in the garden and told him to dress it and tend it. In other words, the first man got the first job; and the first job was gardening, and the first man was a gardener. The old couplet used to say, "When Adam delved and Eve span, who then was the gentleman?" The answer naturally is that the first gentleman was a gardener, a farmer, if you please. The House of Lords traces its origin back to a gardener, and the great House of Commons traces its origin back to the same source.

Even when Adam went out of the Garden of Eden, he went out to farm. God said to him, Behold every herb that bears seed and every tree that has fruit on it is yours to cultivate.

In the scripture lesson which you recognize as being from the first and second chapters of Genesis, we have a picture of creation. In the opening verses it is said that the earth was without form and void. It was chaos. And darkness covered the face of the deep. In the picture we see the hand of God moving in this darkness and in this chaos, bringing order out of chaos and forming the worlds and speeding them on their courses. Then his voice is heard saying, "Let there be light." The first red glow of the first morning dawned. We see him separating the water from the dry land, and the mountains and the plains appear; and the separation of the darkness from the day, so that as earth revolves and the sun shines day and night alternate. Then we see the green grass and trees cover the hills and vales. We see the animals appear. And finally man himself appears—poor, lonesome Adam, without a woman at home and without any gang on the street for him to run with. No wonder that he was lonesome. No wonder that he sought rest in sleep. How happy he was when he awoke and found Eve by his side!

We see God at his work. Six days he labored, and on the seventh day he rested from all his work. A laborer is one who puts forth energy for the accomplishment of some purpose, mental or physical. God labored. And certainly when we think about the infinite variety of plant and animal life and the tremendous vitality that was in each and every species to carry it down throughout the ages, we can realize that when the Lord God breathed this vitality into the animals and plants that he expended a tremendous amount of energy—he worked. When he sent the planets and suns whirling on their courses with speed and power never to diminish, certainly he put forth almost infinite energy. God worked.

And then it is presented to us that we may become collaborators with God, and this idea goes right back to the beginning. One of the first things he did was to plant the garden and then say to man, "Move in and tend it. We will establish a partnership." God gave man, as we have already read, the herbs and trees bearing fruit for his heritage, to cultivate.

Every Man Under His Own Vine and Fig Tree

That was primarily work. That was getting right down to fundamentals. The soil is back of everything, and this was the beginning of man's inheritance, right down in the garden next to the soil working with living things; the man and the woman and God working together in the garden.

That may be why almost every man has an interest in a garden. The average man when spring comes is fired with zeal and goes out and gets a lot of tools and seeds and starts gardening. (By July his garden may not look like Eden.) I think it is normal and right and proper that every man should have at least a small garden. I certainly would be lost to live in a city flat where I could not have a little garden and a little yard with rose bushes and fruit trees and vegetables to tend. And that may be why the world is lost to-day—too many city dwellers. The beautiful promise made of the millennium is that every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree. I have a fig tree that I planted on the Irvington reunion grounds in California. If not allowed to sit under it, perhaps a cherry tree in Zion will do as well.

Seedtime and Harvest

Seedtime and harvest have been great epochs in all ages of the world. In nearly all literature, seedtime and harvest appear. It runs all through the Bible. There are hundreds of parables and illustrations and figures of speech taken from seedtime and harvest. Seedtime is the time of prophecy, the time of faith. Whenever a cold winter is ended and the sun returns again to cheer the earth and the miracle of a new creation and resurrection begins all around us, man naturally enters into renewed cooperation with God and plants seed in the ground.

There has always been a great deal of glamour and romance about digging gold, and the discovery of gold in any part of the country draws men like armies from the ends of the earth. But men have taken more wealth from the earth with the plow and spade than they ever dug out with the aid of the pick and the prospector's pan. You cannot eat gold. If you were starving you could not possibly eat an ounce of gold and get any nourishment from it. It is not, in the literal sense, real wealth. But the men with the plow and the spade and the hoe have dug out of the soil that which has sustained the human race.

The Man With the Plow a Home Builder

The story of the "Covered wagon" tells us that when the immigrants heard of the gold strike in Southern California they divided at some point out west, and those seized with the gold fever threw their plows overboard and bought themselves pick-axes and miners' cradles; while those who were naturally home builders held to their original resolutions and kept their plows and seeds and kept on their course northwesterly. These latter contributed more to the real wealth of the Nation than all the gold seekers of California, for they were home builders.

West over prairies, through strange hills,
Calm pioneers fought on—
What? Was it gold that thowed their wills
And led to Oregon?
Long muskets hooked beneath their arms—
Afraid of none but God—
They carried plows to virgin farms;
Lean soldiers of the sod.

These were the men who saw wild grass
With creeping death astir;
Who fought red terror in the pass,
And braved the massacre.
They loved the smell of virgin soil,
The fertile feel of loam,
Yet mingled daring with their toil,
And so, at last, came home.

—S. Omar Barker.

I am happy to remember that though I did not share the dangers of those pioneer days, while I was a very small boy my parents moved to a section where the prairie was unbroken. It was wild and unfenced, just as God tended it and planted it with all his wild things. As I grew older it was my lot to break up many acres of that tough original sod. So I saw the transfiguration of that wild prairie of the west into homes; the dream that fired the men who went to Oregon. And there is the source of all wealth. It lies in the soil.

The Penny on the Rail

Again when I was a small boy on that farm the first railroad went through, and we boys heard the story about one boy who put his pennies on the rail and when the train went by it flattened them out so large that people took them for quarters. In some such way in ages gone by, alchemists thought they could transmute lead to gold. But mankind finally discovered a magic process of mixing sunlight and rain and sweat and muscle and transmuting black soil into gold, or, much better, into yellow wheat and yellow corn.

Seedtime always has been the time of expectation, while harvest time is the time of realization, the time when the golden stores have been wrung from the soil and are gathered in against the winter cold. That meant a great deal in early days when men lived in secluded or isolated settlements. Harvest time was more vital if possible than it is to-day.

Reuben Whitten's Stewardship

Some of you perhaps noticed a few days ago in the Kansas City Star in the morning edition a little story about Reuben Whitten. It told about a monument in the White Mountains which was erected to the memory of this man, who during the cold season of 1816 raised forty bushels of wheat, which kept his family and neighbors from starvation. This little settlement planted its corn as usual. There was a cold summer, and the seed rotted. They replanted it, and it rotted again. Finally, as the summer wore on, they settled down on the little settlement. When winter came they had very little to eat excepting the forty bushels of wheat which this man had reaped from the hilltops. He put it at the disposal of the community and rations were doled out daily. Harvest meant something in those days. Here was a man on the stewardship basis; all his increase was at the disposal of the community, and it kept the whole community alive. He didn't simply gather it into his own barns and say, "You starve while I feast."

Forecasting the Storehouse

There is no starvation imminent here, but this people have raised fruits and have taken them over to the Institute Building, from where they will be distributed to the homes of the poor and to the Sanitarium. And this, too, may be but a prediction, a little forecast of the time when men shall from the farms and gardens bring their surplus "in kind" into the storehouse of the Lord.
Literally, if the harvests of the world should fail, the race would die. You cannot live on automobiles and the one hundred and one luxuries that are manufactured. If the gardeners and the farmers of the world should fail, we would all die.

But going back to the beginning of the story, a little story of cooperative gardening, the first point of cooperation between God and man was in the garden. God left the fruit for man to cultivate. He created it; he put into it its potentialities; he put the potentialities in life and left it for man to bring them out. Man was to be a collaborer with God.

God and Man Cooperate in Nature

Naturalists tell us that the cabbage, turnip, and cauliflower are all derived from the same root. One group cultivated it for the leaves and got the cabbage, one for the root and got the turnip, and one for the flower and got the cauliflower. I suppose that is the basis of Mark Twain’s statement that “A cauliflower is only a cabbage with a college education.”

It is also stated by naturalists that the peach and the almond came from a common ancestor—the bitter almond. When it was cultivated for the pulp, it brought forth the lovely, luscious peach; and when cultivated for the pit, by and by we had the paper-shelled almond. God put the potentialities in the ancestor and left it for man to work them out. I suppose that if all of the apple orchards of the world were blotted out, man to-morrow could go into the forest and get the wild crab apple and, given time, could bring back the Jonathan apple and the Grimes Golden. God put the potentialities into the little sour, dried-up crab apple and left them for man to bring out by culture.

Now to the application. We can carry this cooperation over into spiritual matters, and the spiritual is always more important than the material, because it is that which gives life to the material. We have been talking about the fruits of the orchard. Paul says the fruits of the Spirit are love, “joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.” So that even as God made us collaborators with him in the garden and gave us the wild crab apple and left it for us to produce the Jonathan, and gave us the wild daisy, and left it for us to produce the Shasta daisy, having the potentialities in them by creation, so in your soul and in my soul he has placed the potentialities of the “perfect man in Christ Jesus.”

God knows that in our present state many of us are hard and bitter and unpromising, but by cooperation with him and his Spirit for years and years and years, the miracle that was wrought in the daisy and in the apple may be wrought in your life and in mine, and the fruit of the Spirit by cooperation with God will adorn our lives, just as the apple and the peach adorn our orchards. God in the orchard and God in your soul. So these Christian fruits like the fruits of the orchard are not produced in a minute. Conversion is not instantaneous. But they are grown and developed and matured over long processes of time.

Constructive Christianity

This is formative and constructive Christianity. Sometimes I have illustrated what I mean by this illustration: If you were given an acre of black soil and were told to cultivate it, and you should devote all your attention only to keeping the weeds out of that soil, you would have a busy summer with nothing to show for your work. That is a negative proposition. You might hoe that acre of ground every morning until your back aches—and it does not take long to produce that result—and the next morning, especially if there was a little rain over night, you would find weeds in that garden. If you kept it up all summer, you would have nothing at the end of the season but bare ground, because your work would be solely negative. “Thou shalt not have any weeds in thy garden, and thou shalt not have any weeds in thy neighbor’s garden.” Some of us are more concerned about the neighbor’s garden than about our own.

If you took that acre of ground and planted it as full as it would hold of fruits and vegetables and then hoed the soil, just incidentally as you were cultivating the fruits and the vegetables, you would kill the weeds, and by and by you would have it so full of fruits that there would be no room for weeds. That would be a positive proposition.

Do not let your religion become negative and all of the time watch yourself to keep something out of your life. Give your primary attention to putting something into your life. “Thou shalt cultivate.” And while you are cultivating the fruits of the Spirit, tobacco using, liquor drinking, swearing, and what not will just incidentally be killed and cast out and rooted out, and your garden will be full of good things.

I pray God that in Zion we shall see on exhibition constantly the fruits of the Spirit, not just an annual exhibition or Sunday exhibitions, but that three hundred and sixty-five days of the year the fruits of the Spirit shall be on exhibition.

There Was a Sower Went Forth to Sow

Coming now to the general application. Alma says that he will compare the word of God “to a that is, the secret of life. You take the little black apple seed and plant it in the ground. Finally there comes up through the soil a little shoot which grows and develops until it makes millions of times its own weight in matter and builds a great tree, and there annually hangs on it bushels of apples, each with several seeds, any one of which will produce that miracle. Think what God crammed into that seed. Alma likens the gospel of Jesus Christ to a seed full of life that science cannot understand or explain. You may plant that seed in your life, and by and by you will be able to see and know it is a good seed, because it has made you bigger and better. It is the work of this church to go out and plant that seed. Paul said, I have planted and Apollos watered, and God gave the increase. God stands ready to give the increase, but he waits for us to plant and cultivate. So the primary missionary work of this church is to go out and plant that seed.

We are reminded of that lesson again from this Harvest Home Festival. Jesus says there was "a sower that went forth to sow," sowing the seed of life. We are exhorted in modern revelation that we shall see to it, it is the seed of life we sow and not the seed of discord and bitterness. The solemn charge to us from the throne of grace is that we shall sow the seed of life, and that is the command to this church, and any sower that goes forth sowing the seeds of life may claim that God has sent him, while any sower that goes forth sowing the seed of discord may know that Almighty God has already repudiated him. Let us sow the good seed, and God has promised that he will give the increase.

God Is Moving With His People.—No. 3
BY CHARLES COUSINS

As we have observed that in 1917 God spoke to the church, telling that the hour had "struck for Zion's redemption," we could expect now that the work of the church would be put in shape for bringing about the redemption. The Lord emphatically stated that "mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, that they themselves may be prepared, and that my people may be taught more perfectly concerning their duty, and the things which I require at their hands." And it is quite evident that when the elders were prepared to teach the people more perfectly, the work towards the redemption would be able to move more rapidly than it has done.

Since that time there has been quite a change effected, and this change has placed the church in a more complete condition, so she can function better in developing a perfect man, both temporal and spiritual.

According to the view of the writer, the church is constituted to-day of various departments as follows: Missionary, pastoral, bishopric, religious education, women's activities, health, and recreation and expression. We believe there will also be need for a labor department.

In 1917 it cannot be said that the church was so constituted. Still there were among the Saints what were known as the Sunday School Association, the Religio, and the women's organization. But these organizations were not a part of the church. They were outside the church, working separately from the church and electing their own officers, etc., without being subject to the General Conference or the general authorities of the church. Yet the object of these organizations was to be a help, or, as they were styled, auxiliaries to the church.

Much good work has been accomplished through these organizations, and to my mind they were much like Sidney Rigdon, who was preaching the principles of the gospel without authority from heaven. But when men came to him vested with power and authority from heaven to preach the gospel, he accepted it, and then he also was vested with power and authority to administer in all the ordinances of the gospel. (See Doctrine and Covenants 34: 2.) In this same section Sidney Rigdon was told he was sent as a forerunner to prepare the way for better things. And just so we believe these organizations were forerunners for better things, for when the light shed in upon the minds of those who comprised these organizations caused them to see that they were in the wrong place, they became willing to be dissolved and to take their place in the church where they should be. It must be remembered that the church is one body, not many, though it is made up of several departments.

This transition from separate organizations to departments in the church, together with their status in the church, is explained in the HERALD of January 23, 1924, pages 82, 83, as follows:

The Status of the Departments

Just what is the status of the Departments of Sunday School, Women, and Recreation and Expression? This question has been asked, and the superintendents of departments think it wise to join in a statement of their official opinion of this matter.

A Bit of History

1. The Woman's Auxiliary in its general convention of 1920 passed the following resolution:

"Having in view the necessity of making changes to meet new conditions of church work, and to complete the transition of the women's organization from a separate society to a department of the church, we see that the ultimate abolishing of the constitution under which we have been working will be inevitable, and inasmuch as some changes in the officers seem advisable now, we authorize the executive committee of the department to make such changes in the governing rules as developments demand in harmony with the church authorities. And in order to facilitate the work of the executive in meeting the demands likely to be made upon our organization, we authorize our general director to appoint such officers as she may consider necessary in place of the present corps."

2. The Religious Department in its general convention of 1920, voted to adopt the recommendation of the superintendent of the department:

"We suggest dispensing with the present constitution as a separate rule of action and the incorporation into the general church law such necessary provisions as may govern this department."

3. The General Sunday School Association in its general convention of 1922 voted to concur in the recommendation of the general superintendent, and asked him to recommend plans as soon as possible. His recommendation was as follows:

"It would seem to your superintendent that the Sunday school is an integral part of the church, and that rather than set itself up as a governing body it should not think to form any new constitution but submit itself to the control of the General Conference of the church. We would respectfully urge that this be the action of this body. If such action were taken, it would throw Sunday school business on the General Conference floor, where we believe it should be."

Effects of Acts of Convention

The acts of the convention cited above are interpreted by us as having the following effect upon departmental administration:

1. They placed the responsibility of the work to be accomplished by the departments and the church upon all who were the constituent members of the church. The members composing the groups—the local, the district, or the general organization—could pass legislation for the respective departmental activities within the respective groups—local, district, or general—as was deemed wise and for the best good of the group as a whole. To illustrate:

a. The General Conference could pass legislation affecting the general departmental work;

b. District or stake conferences could pass legislation affecting the work of the departments within their various territories in harmony with rights of legislation that were in the province of district or stake control;

c. Branches in their business meetings could pass such legislation affecting the departments within the branch as was the province of the branch so to do...

A. MAX CARMICHAEL,
Department of Sunday School.

F. M. MCDOWELL,
Department of Recreation and Expression.

DORA PANKEY GLINES,
Department of Women.

The above is evidence that the work of the church is become more permanently and more fully organized, that it may be able to meet the demands which are made of it.

And when the social program which was approved by the action of the last General Conference is put into operation, then the church will be able to take hold of a child from birth and, by training through the various departments which are in the church, develop him into a perfect man, physically, mentally, and spiritually. And this is what we believe the Lord has intended, to make men complete in body and in spirit.

Another feature in which I believe advancement has been made, is Graceland College. The college now is being utilized to prepare our young people, both male and female, that they may move out into the various walks of life, and, as they do so, be able to clearly represent the church. Also Graceland serves to fit and qualify those who may be called to minister in the ordinances of the gospel. This the church was advised to do long ago. In 1832 we have the following advice given:

And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and with all the energy and grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed in all things as outlined in the above paragraph they are then instructed more perfectly, and are much more able to magnify their calling when sent forth to tell the gospel story to fallen humanity.

In this matter Graceland College is doing her part, and we believe she is doing it well. Though the writer is five thousand miles away, we have been pleased to receive reports from individual students that confirm our confidence in the work which Graceland is doing for our young people. May the Lord prosper Graceland.

At the present time our attention is being called to the plan of stewardship, which is being ably set forth in the HERALD by Bishop Carmichael. It is included in what is called “Our social program,” and is held forth as being qualified to cure some of the present evils which exist among mankind, and of putting all men on an equal basis. This was and is the intention of God, “that one man should not possess that which is above another” (see Doctrine and Covenants 49:3), and it is intended that man shall use the talents which God has given him, or, as the Lord says in Doctrine and Covenants 81:4:

... improve upon his talents, that every man may gain other talents; yes, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

It is quite evident that no man ever created his own talents, any more than he ever created his own body. God created mankind. He also created the earth and all things therein for the benefit and use of mankind—not for one man or a few, but to serve all. And he has asked all men to use their powers of body and mind, not solely for their own benefit, but also for the benefit of their fellow men. By so doing they will be able to show that they not only love their God but also their neighbors as themselves.

The writer is of the opinion that this plan of stewardship is the only thing that can solve the economic problem and bring about an equal distribution of wealth. And as a people we shall have to enter in and occupy, if ever our redemption is going to be effected. The Lord told the church in 1834 that they could have been redeemed then (see Doctrine and Covenants 102:2); but they were not redeemed. He has also told us that the time has come for our redemption. Now is the time for our redemption to be accomplished, if we will only allow ourselves to be led by those whom God has appointed to be our leaders. He says:

And if my people will hearken unto my voice, and unto the voice of my servants whom I have appointed to lead my people, behold, verily I say unto you, they shall not be moved out of their place.—Doctrine and Covenants 197:19.

As a matter of fact, the Lord has informed us that he would raise up a man to lead his people, that their redemption might be accomplished. In his words there is no uncertainty. Listen:

Behold, I say unto you, The redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore I will raise up unto my people a man, who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, fore ye are the children of Israel, and of the seed of Abraham; and ye must needs be led out of bondage by power, and with a stretched out arm; and as your fathers were led

Central Michigan Conference

Central Michigan district conference convened at Beaver-ton October 3 and 4, Elder William Grice preached the opening sermon Friday evening, which was enjoyed by all. Saturday morning at eight-thirty prayer meeting was held. At ten o'clock conference opened for business, and right from the beginning to the end a fine brotherly, peaceful spirit prevailed. Reports were read and accepted. The report from the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric regarding the raising of funds for Graceland College was received, and provision was made for the people of this district to do their part. The report of our late reunion was received with joy, when we found that we had nearly one thousand dollars left in the treasury. The money was raised by subscription and collections, and no charge was made for meals. It was voted to hold another reunion in 1926 at Midland. The officials of the city invited us to return.

At 12 o'clock the conference adjourned to partake of the good things that the ladies had prepared in the basement of the church. At 2 o'clock another business session was held, and after a few more reports were read we proceeded to elect officers for the different departments for the coming year. Elder William Grice was chosen to act as district president, with power to choose his assistants. He later named the following brethren: Elders Otto Bartlett, E. S. White, Marshall McGuire. The heads of departments were chosen to represent the reunion committee for 1926. The name of Marshall McGuire was presented for ordination to the office of priest and indorsed. The names of Richard Stewart for ordination to the office of elder, which had been provided for previously, and provision was made at the first, even so shall the redemption of Zion be.—Doctrine and Covenants 100:3.

Yes, God has said he would raise up a man to lead his people to their redemption. And as the “hour has struck for the redemption of Zion,” the man certainly must be there in his place as the leader of the people of God.

Let us give heed to the warning voice of the Master who says: “I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.”—Doctrine and Covenants 81:3. And move on unto perfection, that the saying of the Psalmist may be brought to pass: “Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.”

made for both to be ordained at the Sunday morning prayer meeting. At five o'clock the conference adjourned until the evening, when a fine program was rendered by the Department of Recreation and Expression.

At 8:30 Sunday morning we assembled for prayer service. The brethren named were ordained and a number of fervent prayers were offered for the good of all and for Zion's redemption. A fine spirit prevailed. Zion's beautiful songs were sung and testimonies borne, while the spirit of prophecy was manifested three times. The people were counselled to have faith in God, that his Spirit was peace, love, joy, patience, goodness, and that he was leading his church through his servant Frederick M. Smith, and the time would soon come when the faithful would receive the great endowment which had been promised to his people so many years ago. Brother Byron Bartlett was called to the office of elder and Brother Hulbert to the office of teacher.

At eleven o'clock Elder E. A. Goodwin was the speaker. He stressed that stewardships is the timely program of the hour and that we are our brother's keeper. All seemed to enjoy the many thoughts that he presented. The Sunday school held their session at 2 p.m., the juniors in the basement, Eugene Harder in charge, and the seniors in the main auditorium, with Earl Burt in charge. He and Elder Goodwin gave fine talks in regard to our church papers. I do not see how some people can get along without them. I think the church papers are better than they have ever been, and consider them as necessary as the furniture in our homes.

I have been busy all summer, and since August 30 I have been very busy holding special meetings, and am now in the fifth series. I still have one more place to visit before I have completed the program of special meetings. The branches affected in these special meetings are as follows: Dahinda, Galesburg, Kewanee, Joy, Buffalo Prairie, Millersburg, Rock Island, and Moline. In most cases the Saints have done very well in supporting these meetings, in spite of the fact that we have had considerable bad weather and bad roads.

I have been using the Ford in church work of late, and at Joy, Buffalo Prairie, and Millersburg the Saints loaded my car with apples, vegetables, canned fruit, pickles, etc., and even gave me a live rooster to take home to the wife and children and half a gallon of religious honey. The reason why I call it religious honey, is that the brethren took it from between the studding of the Buffalo Prairie Church. They took off some of the weather boarding and even gave me a live rooster to take home to the wife and children of privacy. We appreciate the kindness of the Saints of this district very much, and only hope we can prove worthy of their love and esteem, and can make our services among them worth while. May God's blessing rest upon them.

During the week of October 4 to 11, I had the pleasure of being with Brother C. B. Woodstock, general Sunday school superintendent. We traveled about 270 miles together in the Ford, and Brother Woodstock spoke about ten times in the interest of the Sunday school and other departmental work, reaching almost every branch in the district. This work of Brother Woodstock is somewhat of an experiment, but we feel that his visit among us did considerable good, and think that with the proper following up much good will finally result. Brother Woodstock, having been a schoolteacher for almost a quarter of a century, is well qualified to instruct the Sunday school and Religion workers in their work, that they might become more efficient. He thought I would get tired of hearing him discuss the same subjects every night, but he used such variations in presenting the matters that it was always very interesting. Of course we were quite amused and had considerable fun over his trying to tell the people about Elijah feeding the ravens, but then Brother Woodstock isn't the only one who sometimes gets the cart before the horse.

The Saints and friends of the Tri Cities are somewhat saddened to learn of the serious sickness of our young brother, William (Fritz) Stiegol, who has recently undergone an operation for appendicitis, and is now quite seriously ill at the hospital. This illness has revealed the fact that our young brother has a host of friends, both in and out of the church, and we are looking forward to his recovery and his return to activity in our midst.

Many of the Saints of this district are deeply interested in the stewardship plan, but the monthly "stewardship" group meetings that are held in three divisions of the district are not as well attended as they should be.

We are arranging our forces and preparing for the Grace- land College Endowment Drive, which we expect to see go over the top if those who have been assigned special work in this campaign will do their part.

The general outlook for a practical application of our religion is very bright. We look forward with hope in the success of Zion's cause.

I appreciate very much the splendid things found in the church papers. I do not see how some people can get along without them. I think the church papers are better than they have ever been, and consider them as necessary as the furniture in our homes.

Stewardship and Junior Church Work

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

According to previous arrangements, on August 30, in company with Brother and Sister John Blackmore we commenced a tour of the district in the interests of "stewardships and junior church work."

Our first branch was Mallard, where we found that the people were quite anxious and willing to enter into the spirit of the service, and they did certainly try to improve their opportunity of getting a better understanding of these two phases of our work.

We held forth there for six days, with three sessions each day. Although the weather was extremely warm and uncomfortable, it did not detract from the interest.

Our next branch was Cherokee, where we had to change our program to suit existing conditions. While we were able to hold only two sessions each day, yet the matter which was presented seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed by all who were there. From here we went to Deloit, where we met with a hearty reception, and a keen interest was shown during our entire stay. We stayed there six days, as we had previously done at the other places which we visited.

After concluding at Deloit, we spent one Sunday, or rather two services, with the Gallands Grove Branch, returning from there to Dow City for the evening services and for the services of the two evenings following. We then spent a week's service at Denison, going from there to Coalville, where we stayed for an entire week with profit to the membership, who seemed especially interested.

The phase of the work stressed by Sister Blackmore was that of the methods generally used to interest the child in religious education. The materials used were pictures and related stories of prominent Bible characters. Object lessons were used to convey moral truths. Each service was concluded with an interesting story from our Church History or the Book of Mormon, with a review of the story of the previous day. From the interest given, it was plainly seen that their young minds were keenly alert to grasp the truths presented.

Stewardship was stressed under topical headings.

1. We are stewards over "Original Nature," indicating all capacities with which birth has endowed us.
2. We are stewards over “Acquired Abilities,” i. e., all that experience has given to us, such as knowledge, skill, and attitudes.

3. We are stewards over all of our “Opportunities,” wealth being considered an opportunity to do; also our opportunities for culture and achievements.

Financial stewardships as outlined by Bishop Carmichael, occupied its place at the close of each series.

We feel that the five weeks were of more than ordinary interest to our membership, as it was somewhat of a departure from the beaten path of sermonizing and included the important place of teaching, thus giving more latitude for the exchange of thoughts and comments.

Thus five weeks soon sped by in which some eighty services were held and a keen interest manifested by those attending, with a pressing invitation for a joint meeting with the Saints there, and this was enjoyed by all.

We hope to have them meet with us in like capacity soon.

Elder E. A. Davis, district missionary, was here and held a joint meeting with the Saints there, and this was enjoyed by all.

Sincerely your brother in the covenant,

Elder E. A. Davis, district missionary, was here and held some meetings in the interests of stewardships and Zionic problems. The Saints feel encouraged to continue in their efforts.

Several of our number went over to Oelwein to hold a meeting with the Saints there, and this was enjoyed by all.

We hope to have them meet with us in like capacity soon. We are all in this district trying to get together more and make stronger efforts in building up the church work.

People Want a Practical Religion

Just a brief note to acquaint you with my activities and the outlook of the work in this part, which I believe will be of interest to you.

I have just closed a two weeks’ campaign here at Bel­laire, resulting in the awakening of the Saints to a marked degree and the baptism of six into the church. One of those baptized is a man about forty years old and a wheel­barrow maker by trade, employed at the present time by a large Wheeling Furniture Company. He manifests the true spirit of consecration and has expressed his willingness to give his life and service to the great task before us in the redemption of Zion.

I proved to my entire satisfaction during this effort that the practical aspects of our message are what the thinking people of the world and of the church want to hear.

The following are some of the subjects I discussed during this campaign:

1. Does the world need religion? The life more abundant; the night I lectured on stewardships, I secured $48 in money and pledges for the Graceland Gymnasium, and about a dozen Saints asked for inventory blanks and expressed their intention to enter upon the stewardship basis. I furnished them with the blanks, and they will be instructed and directed in their work of filling them out by the proper authorities.

2. We are stewards over all of our wealth.

3. We are stewards over all of our opportunities. Thus five weeks soon sped by in which some eighty services were held and a keen interest manifested by those attending, with a pressing invitation for a joint meeting with the Saints there, and this was enjoyed by all.

4. We have the assurance of speaking from this pulpit or any pulpit under the jurisdiction of this branch until said person has been reinstated in his office and calling by the proper authorities of this church.

5. There were also some favorable comments and encouraging remarks upon the outlook for immediate establishment of stewardships and the Zionic plan.

6. The business meeting was preceded by a supper, served in the basement by the Department of Women, to raise funds for special purposes, such as their subscription to the branch Ford.

The young people, and older ones, too, are becoming enthusiastic over the prospects for a wonderful young people’s convention to be held at Portland on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday October 30, 31, and November 1, President Frederick M. Smith has promised to be with us, and we anticipate a spiritual feast and much encouragement and instruction. The meetings will be given under the auspices of the young people, but all are invited, regardless of age.

Sunday morning, September 27, we had the pleasure of listening to a sermon by Elder Swen Swenson, the first he

Portland, Oregon

October 6—This evening our quarterly branch business meeting convened at the church. After the usual reading of minutes, reports, etc., the following motion was passed: Moved that any man that has been placed under silence by proper authorities of this church be denied the privilege of speaking from this pulpit or any pulpit under the jurisdiction of this branch until said person has been reinstated in his office and calling by the proper authorities of this church.

The matter of a more extensive publicity campaign was discussed, and various good suggestions were presented for the furthering of the publicity work. Also the missionary work was mentioned and commented upon by our missionary, Elder Eli Bronson. A missionary effort is being planned for this city some time during the coming winter, and a branch budget is to be prepared during the coming quarter to cover regular expenses and publicity and missionary work. There were also some favorable comments and encouraging remarks upon the outlook for immediate establishment of stewardships and the Zionic plan.

has preached here for years, but we hope not the last, as everybody who knows him loves him.

In the evening of the same Sunday Brother M. A. Eisenhouser was the speaker. His sermons on the stewardship plan and the redemption of Zion are always appreciated by the forward-looking Saints.

Omaha, Nebraska

October 14.—A normal Bible class conducted by Sister A. A. Thiehoff has begun its fall work, meeting at the church on Monday evenings.

Our branch has listened throughout the month of September to sermons on stewardships, the pastor discussing various phases of this current topic and pointing out our duty and privileges in connection therewith. During October other members of the priesthood will give their viewpoints on the subject, High Priest Carl T. Self opening the series on the morning of the 11th with a thoughtful exposilion of the necessity for a spiritual adjustment, a mental attitude, before one can successfully line up with the temporal plan.

Our young brother, T. Howard Elliott, left us on Friday, September 18, to enter Washington University in Saint Louis, Missouri, the competitive city. The young people gave a farewell party in his honor at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Gibson, on the evening before he left. He will be greatly missed by all the branch members, and a multitude of good wishes go with him.

Two Latter Day Saint homes have recently been gladdened by the arrival of new members of the family. Brother and Sister L. C. Linder had their young son blessed on September 20. Brother and Sister Raymond Rumel are the proud parents of another daughter. We trust the blessings of health and happiness may always attend these little buds of promise.

Sister Mildred Winder, who has made her home for two years with Brother and Sister Fredrick, returned to Chicago on September 20. She obeyed the gospel while in our midst and endeared herself to the hearts of many.

Branch President B. M. Anderson returned September 26 from his enforced vacation in Colorado. He is much improved in health and able to take his place once more in the activities of the branch. On October 11, Brother Anderson, accompanied by Brother Carl T. Self, H. A. Merchant, and George E. Steele drove to Fremont, where a Sunday school organization was effected in the afternoon.

District conference at Walhill October 3 and 4 was ushered in by an all-day driving rain which made roads impassable, and as a result some parts of the district were not largely represented.

On Sunday morning, September 27, Brother Cecil Burton was ordained to the office of deacon. This young man has proved himself, in the brief year he has been in our city, a valuable assistant in all good efforts in the branch. He has been acting as second assistant of the Sunday school and in other ways has evidenced his willingness to serve the branch. District President H. A. Merchant, with considerable envy, enjoyed the opening service and the ordination prayer, which indicated a path of service opening before the young brother. We trust he may be blessed and find joy in the consecrations he is making.

Saturday, October 10, death claimed the young wife of Brother Everett Gamet, a little son being left to the care of the bereaved husband as a parting gift from one whose life had been joyous, bright, and loving. The funeral services were held Monday, Sisters Frederick and Fleming giving musical numbers, accompanied by Sister Waller. Pastor Whalley offered prayer, and Doctor W. H. Holler delivered the sermon. The sympathies of all the branch go out to the family so suddenly bereft of a cherished wife, sister, and daughter.

Sister Christiana Waller, of San Francisco, California, arrived Monday, October 12, to visit at the home of Brother and Sister Anderson for a week. At the church dinner and Sunday school officers' and teachers' program on the 14th, she sang an interesting group of songs in her artistic and charming manner. Sister Waller is a devoted young Saint, fresh, wholesome, and inspiring in her outlook upon life and her religion of joy and good will. She has been as a sunbeam of happiness to scores of our missionaries and their families as they come and go through her home city. It is a pleasure for many of them to try to repay in small measure her unfailing hospitality of the past, during this her brief vacation visit in Los Angeles, Independence, and Omaha.

Other visitors have been Brother Creel, the Indian mission; Sister George Geeth, of Logan, Iowa; a cousin of Doctor Merchant; and Sister Anna McElrath, of Wessington, South Dakota, a sister of Brother Willis Pruden. Sister Clara McDonald and daughter Helen, of Moorhead, Iowa, are among the new additions to our membership.

Brother David Lewis gave a short but interesting sketch of the Book of Mormon on the evening of October 11, drawing several good lessons from the experience of those early inhabitants.

Good Conference at Toronto

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

The Toronto district conference was held in Toronto, October 3 and 4. The sessions were well attended.

Secretary's report showed a membership of 1,510, a gain of 56. Thirty-seven baptisms. Fifteen branches in district, one new branch at Boston.

Officers elected are same as last year with the exception of W. F. Clifton, who was elected superintendent of Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression; and Floralice Miller, home study worker in compliance with the suggestions of the general department heads.

The speakers on Sunday were Elders David and James Pycock and Bishop A. F. McLean. All three were on stewardship.

The prayer service was the largest and best we have had for a few years. At this time Brother Martin A. Ware of Niagara Falls was ordained of the office of elder. Patriarch Shields admonished the Saints to stand by the First Presidency and leading quorums, and told of how his prejudices had been removed since last General Conference.

There seems to be a better understanding among the Saints of the social program of the church and of some of its problems. All attending the conference were anxious to learn and appeared to be very happy and sociable. A splendid feeling existed throughout the two days.

FLORALICE MILLER, Secretary.

One-Day Meeting and Dedication at Star, Michigan

Sunday, September 27, a one-day meeting was held at the Star Branch five miles east of Alba. The main feature of this meeting was the dedication of their little church. Although it was quite rainy in the morning, by nine o'clock there was a nice gathering of people present, visitors driving from Grayling, Bellaire, Boyne City, Vanderbilt, and Gaylord.

The prayer service was in charge of District President Allen Schreur, Brother Dean Osborne, and Brother Herbert Morey. The Spirit was present to a marked degree in the opening prayer by Brother Morey, and it continued throughout the meeting.

At half past ten Allen Schreur gave a talk for Grace College which seemed to be well received. He was assisted by Brother Dean Osborne.

At noon a picnic dinner in the church was enjoyed by all, and at two o'clock Elder Arthur Stark preached the dedicatory sermon, using for his text the first verse of Psalms 127: "Except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it." His sermon was very good and brought much encouragement to those who had labored hard to erect the building.

After the service, Brother Stark and Sister Faulkner sang a duet, "Jesus leads," then Brother Allen Schreur very feelingly offered the dedicatory prayer.

At half past three Brother Herbert Morey preached an interesting and spiritual sermon on the text, "I will build my church." He was assisted by Brother John Paulson.

The services of the day closed with the singing of "A parting blessing" from the Zion’s Praises. All felt they had spent a profitable and enjoyable day in the Lord’s service.

Flint, Michigan

Things are moving along very nicely in Flint. Our churches are getting back into the stride for winter, and musical activities are taking on new life.

Quarterly union sacramental meeting was held Sunday afternoon, October 4, being very well attended, with a good spirit of unity present. The various departments are making strenuous efforts to raise the necessary money to complete the New Avenue Church, and we are hoping to have it in good condition for winter.

The young folks of the district are planning a Halloween party near Orion, October 30. We must not forget that Flint will be well represented at the state convention of young people at Grand Rapids October 24 and 25. President Floyd M. McDowell and Apostle E. J. Gleszer are expected to be present.

On Saturday, October 17, the ladies of our three local churches are putting on a baked goods sale at one of the down-town stores.

At our regular bimonthly business meeting October 5 Elder Arthur H. DuRose was chosen to preside during the year 1926. Our reason for choosing the presiding officer so early is that it permits the president elect to plan for the coming year's work and have it in shape to present at the December meeting, which is the annual election of officers.

Our semiannual district conference was held October 10 and 11 at Detroit Central Church. Elder W. L. Bennett was chosen president of the district, with Elders J. Charles Mottashed and Arthur H. DuRose as counselors.

Flint is getting ready to "Go" on the Graceland endowment drive, and we expect to do our bit.

One of our members recently suffered a very serious accident in one of the local factories. Brother Emery Pinder in his duty as a millwright was repairing a coal conveyor when some one started it. He was caught by the buckets and dragged through a two-foot square hole four times and then dumped on to the coal pile. It was surely the mercy of God prevented him from being torn limb from limb. As it is, he is in the hospital progressing very nicely.

Centralia, Washington

October 8.—Our sturdy few are still struggling to remain upon the "old ship of state." Of late we have received a shaking up, yet our mooring is still anchored in the center of the harbor, safe from the rocks on the shore.

Within the last seven weeks we have welcomed five visiting elders in our community, and they have brought encouragement and strength. First to come was Elder Marcus Cook, our newly appointed district president, accompanied by Elder Will Bronson from Portland District.

Brother Etzenhouser, who assisted very materially at the late reunion, appeared on the scene September 27 and occupied the pulpit at the morning hour with a well-directed and instructive sermon, leaving immediately after for Portland, Oregon.

Elders Swen Swenson and A. C. Martin have just left for other fields. Brother Martin held a series of meetings lasting one week and presented a strong and affirmative message. Elder Swenson gave two old-fashioned and magnetic sermons on the subject of practical instruction and experiences. Their reassurance of God's omnipotent power to direct and save his people has greatly strengthened this body of Saints. We sincerely welcomed their messages of light and peace in our midst, but regret their departure. We ever pray that God's Spirit may always be with them.

We had one baptism here this summer, a young lady, Branch President Carl Crum officiating.

Some awakening has been effected in our membership of late. We hope for a greater zeal to manifest itself in the priesthood, and with the membership as well.

We are anxiously awaiting the 22d, 23d, and 24th of this month, the dates of the first young people's convention for the Seattle and British Columbia District. Portland and Spokane have planned to join in this assemblage at Seattle.

A visit from President F. M. Smith is being anticipated with interest.

We solicit your prayers in behalf of the convention, that it may prove a success and be a strong spiritual uplift to all who may attend, as well as to neighboring communities and districts.

As right and truth prevail and the Saints of God prove faithful until the end, is my sincere prayer.

Elder Harpe Enjoys Presenting Stewardships

(A letter to the First Presidency)

I was able to be out yesterday to the church for the first time for a week. (I had been in bed almost one week with the influenza.) I was blessed far beyond my anticipation. The power of the Spirit was felt greatly. The audience was also blessed and was in attune with the subject of stewardships.

We also spoke on the same topic in the evening, and it was the best effort, so some of the members say, I have made while I have been holding forth at this point. To God be the honor and glory. If the endowment is greater than I enjoyed in my two efforts yesterday, I would ask the Lord to withhold some of the Spirit, as it was more at times than I could stand.

Dear Brother F. M., I was permitted to see some of the great future that stewardships will bring to this people as they fall in line with the same. I was carried away into the future while I was preaching and saw you, my dear brother, working to the end that stewardships was the thing God wanted his dear children to engage in now. I can and will use my influence among the Saints to assist them to see their privilege.

I trust God will continue to bless all of you.

Gray's Harbor Branch

ABERDEEN, WASHINGTON, October 10.—I am glad to report the work in this branch is still going forward.

We have long needed a missionary service, and recently we have been repaid wonderfully in this respect. Brother Swen Swenson, of Cameron, Missouri, while on a tour in the West, visited us and preached three wonderful sermons for us. Brother Swenson visited the Pacific Northwest eight years ago, so he had the pleasure of renewing old acquaintances. This Swedish brother was well liked by all.

We have also had the services of Brother M. H. Cook, president of Seattle and British Columbia District.

The young people here are looking forward to the young people's convention at Seattle. President F. M. Smith is expected to be present.

Stone Church

The Just Folks Sunday, School Class entertained with a poverty social in the dining hall last Thursday night. The social was given in the interest of the Christmas offering, and a very successful evening was reported.

Brother R. V. Hopkins met with the old people in prayer service Sunday afternoon and will also meet with the Saints in Group 19 on Wednesday evening, October 21.

At the Stone Church President Elbert A. Smith spoke at eleven o'clock on the subject, "Your tongue." He argued that the gospel should apply to the whole man—hands, heart, brain, and tongue. James says that the tongue may be "set on fire of hell." A man with such a tongue may set on fire his own home—not his house, but his home—many homes are burned out while the house yet stands in excellent condition. Or he may set on fire the neighborhood, burning up old friendships. This is the worst type of incendiary. Such a man may set on fire his own spiritual life in the church and even burn up the spiritual structure of others. On the other hand, Isaiah saw an angel take a live coal from the altar and touch his (Isaiah's) lips with it. Isaiah went forth enkindled from heaven.

The speaker then applied the gospel law to the home, the neighborhood, and the church. A man may beat his wife with a club and get arrested; but if he beats her with hard words he is quite likely to go free. The law of kindness should govern speech in the home. There are three magic words, "I love you." Let both husband and wife use them often; they will settle many quarrels. If you do not let the "sin go down on your wrath" in the home, it will never go down on a divorce in that home. In the neighborhood the Golden Rule should apply. Keep your hands off your neighbor's person and your tongue off his name. Shakespeare said, "Who steals my purse steals trash, but he that fitches from me my good name, robs me of that which neither enriches him, and makes me poor indeed."

In the church the commencement long ago was, "Thou shalt not be a talebearer among thy people." That is good counsel for members of any church. If you hear gossip, ask two questions, Is it true? Is it such a story as you should repeat? Paul said, "Speaking the truth in love." Is the story one you would tell about those you love?

Words killed McKinley. Radical propaganda fired the brain of the man who fired the bullet. Words killed Joseph Smith. Smiling Lincoln, The volume of abuse directed at him at home and abroad filled with hatred the brain of a half-crazed actor who fired the fatal shot. On the other hand, words may heal. They may comfort. They may save. Jesus said, "My words are life, and they are light." We should heed Paul's advice and think on those things that are fine and "of good report"; then our conversation will be constructive and healing.

Next Sunday morning President Smith will speak on, "Your heart." This will be the second of a series of practical and personal Sunday morning sermons at the Stone Church.

In spite of the fit of winter that suddenly blew out of the northwest Sunday morning, services in Zion had about the usual attendance. Early morning prayer service of both old and young show some decline in numbers, but those present enjoyed a splendid service and were well repaid for their efforts. Sunday school found most everyone out, as usual, as did the other services the rest of the day.

The Religion is growing decidedly. The change from Friday evening to Sunday at a quarter of six must be meeting the conveniences of a great many, or our corps of excellent teachers is being so well advertised that the Saints cannot pass up the chance of attending.

The sermon of the evening was by Brother U. W. Greene, who spoke on the subject, "Why I am a Latter Day Saint." It was a truly beautiful and inspirational talk and left all who were privileged to hear, the feeling that an added testimony of God's goodness to men had been given them. Splendid musical numbers, both vocal and instrumental, preceded the sermon and produced an appropriate setting.

All persons interested in enrolling in either sociology or economics at the Institute are requested to meet Brother M. A. Etzenhouzer at the Institute Building at half past seven Tuesday evening. These are especially important subjects, and a large number should be enrolled in each. The absence of Brother Etzenhouzer has made it impossible to begin classes at an earlier date. Remember this group meets for the first time Tuesday evening at half past seven at the Institute Building.

The Society of Patronesses of the Independence Sanitarium held a home-coming meeting at the Institute Building on the Campus Friday, October 15, and seventy-five persons were in attendance at the entertainment and dinner. The dinner preceded a speaking program at which several participated, as follows: Bishop E. L. Kelley; Mrs. Mary Mott, the first person to hold the office of superintendent of nurses; Miss Ina Cockerton, first student nurse to be graduated; Mrs. Frederick M. Smith; Miss Gertrude Copeland, the present superintendent at the Sanitarium. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. John Watkins; violin solo by Mrs. Irene Burroughs; a quartet by Mrs. John Watkins, Mrs. Mark H. Siegfried, Mrs. James D. Gault, and Mrs. Gertrude Copeland.

The present corps of officers of the Patronesses are: Mrs. E. L. Kelley, president; Mrs. B. R. McGuire, vice president; Mrs. F. O. Thomason, secretary; Mrs. Joseph Arber, treasurer.

The first funds to start the work of this society were secured from a yearly fee of fifty cents paid by each member, and the benefits accruing to the Sanitarium were for a time not large in material things. But it is interesting to know that since 1915 materials amounting to $649 have been made up into standard equipment and given to the Sanitarium. The first gift from the society was a washing machine at a cost of $70. Special donations of no small size and number have also been made, one of which was a special sheet donation of $76, and decorative material and linens have not been accounted, but have been furnished in large quantity. An electric sewing machine in the sewing room is another of its contributions.

Second Church

Sunday was observed as home-coming day, and the Saints enjoyed the services. The attendance was very good, notwithstanding other attractions in the city and inclement weather.

The first home-coming service was at eleven o'clock under the direction of Brother J. T. Curtis, who was one of the very active charter members engaged in building the church in 1909 and 1910. The speakers at this service were Brother George E. Harrington and Hugh W. Goold. Brother Harrington was the president of Independence Stake when the Second Independence Branch was organized, and Brother Goold was its president for the first seven or eight years of existence. The people received these brothers and their talks with great joy and satisfaction.

In the afternoon the meeting was addressed by Elder P. A. Sherman, one who has done much to build up the Sunday school and has taken other active parts. He read a history of the branch during its formation and up to the time of the dedication. He also gave an interesting description of the pulpit of the church, which was built by Brother Henry Davia, recently deceased, it taking over three hundred hours, and including many kinds of native and foreign woods.

Sunday evening Evangelist Frederick A. Smith was the preacher, and he used for his theme, "Our present need," analyzing the Lord's prayer, and concluding from his reasoning that practically all we need for the making of our present abode into the Zion of the Lord is embodied in the proper interpretation of the prayer.

Friday evening was so stormy that the choir entertainment was postponed until Thursday evening of this week. The program is very attractive, and a houseful of interested spectators is expected. Admission is without charge, but a silver collection will be taken to apply on the debt which still remains because of the improvements added last year and the purchase of a lot adjoining the church more than two years ago.

Liberty Street

Patriarch F. A. Smith preached Sunday morning on, "What is your revelation [or conception] of God?" He read from Saint John 7:14 and 17:1-3, but quoted from other gospels and from a number of the epistles. His sermon was so plain and simple that anyone could understand, yet was so forceful that he held the close attention of the big congregation.

President Elbert A. Smith preached at night on "Why I am a Latter Day Saint," or, "Why I am a follower of Jesus Christ and bearing his name." The attendance and the attention were both very satisfactory.

Brother Leonard White and George Bullard are calling a special meeting for the young people, and have requested that only those between the ages of ten and thirty-five attend. The meeting will be held next Thursday night, October 22, at the Liberty Street Church, and will consider matters of importance concerning the welfare of the young people.

Last Sunday, October 11, at half past two, Doctor John R. Green addressed the Temple Builders and the mothers who cared to come, on "Contagious diseases and the little child." The talk was most interesting.

Enoch Hill

The Wednesday evening cottage prayer meetings are increasing in attendance as well as interest, while stewardships and Zion are mentioned in many of the testimonies. President Elbert A. Smith met with the young people last Wednesday evening, and a fine service was enjoyed by all.

Beginning next Sunday Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths will begin his stewardships. All are invited to attend.

Doctor G. Leonard Harrington was the speaker Sunday morning, and his talk was full of interesting and important matter. Bishop J. August Koehler was the evening speaker.

Walnut Park

As announced, Sunday was "Music Day" at the Walnut Park Church, beginning with the eight o'clock prayer meeting. Sixty-nine were present at this service. The meeting was active, the importance of music in the work of the church being brought home forcibly in the testimonies of both old and young.

The transition period from prayer meeting to Sunday school was occupied by the orchestra, which also played at Sunday school and at the eleven o'clock preaching service.

Brother Arthur H. Mills was the speaker at eleven o'clock. He talked of the progress made in musical lines during his period of service in the church. From the time that as a boy of fifteen he played the organ for the Sunday school in the old brick church here in Independence, he led us down to the present and gave the musical workers reason to rejoice in the advantages that are now theirs. Especially striking was the encouragement given Brother Mills by the revelation concerning music (Doctrine and Covenants 119), coming as it did during a time of great prejudice against musical activities that he believed should be promoted.

The choir, under the direction of Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, presented the special number at the beginning of this service.

At half past seven Brother Paul N. Craig began an interesting talk on "Hymns and hymn singing," and used the congregation to illustrate his points by singing several good old gospel hymns in an inspiring manner.

Immediately following this, the young people's chorus of thirty-five voices brought the climax of the day by the presentation of the story cantata, "Paul, a prisoner of the Lord." This chorus is conducted by Brother Orlando Nace and acquitted itself quite creditably. The readings between choruses were given by Sister Gay Reynolds. Isabel Garrett officiated at the piano, and solo parts were taken by Harold Schafer, Margaret Gard, Arnold Brady, and Sanford Downs. Beginning with the miraculous conversion of Saul of Tarsus, the epic of story and song carried one through the trials and triumphs of the apostle to the grand finale of a life well lived, expressed in the well-known words, "I have fought a good fight," etc. It is estimated that four hundred were present at this service, and all lovers of music went away assured of a bright future for this work in this congregation when these young men and women move into the places of those who are not carrying on.

W. M. Self was the speaker in Group 41 Sunday. This congregation have been very appreciative of their church privileges in the little building which they rented and fitted up for use, and were keenly disappointed the past week in learning that it had been sold. However, Brother P. A. Sherman immediately offered them his vacated dwelling house, which they may occupy through the winter if it can be heated satisfactorily.

Next Sunday is Sunday school rally day at Walnut Park Church.

East Independence

The young people's prayer meetings are increasing in attendance. October 11 there were sixteen present, and on October 15 there were twenty-five. We trust that they may continue to increase in interest as well. Each Sunday morning and evening one of their number announces the meeting for the next time and speaks in favor of the services.

October 11 Brother W. D. Bullard was the speaker both morning and evening, and he had some good thoughts for his congregation.

Thursday evening, October 15, the Spring Branch Parent Teacher Association met at the church, where L. M. Birkhead, of Kansas City, was the speaker. He is the pastor of the Unitarian Church and is a very pleasant and interesting speaker. His subject was "Your biggest job—parent or business." In a pleasing and forceful way he presented what parents are and what they ought to be. Miss Pauline Small gave several readings and sang a solo. Those who failed to come certainly missed a treat.

Sunday morning, October 18, Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the speaker. He also spoke in the evening. He made very plain the necessity of having faith in God and of living one day at a time, taking no anxious thought or worry for the morrow. We should live in the present—not in the past or the future. The evening subject was Christian stewardship. An earned plea was made for every Latter Day Saint to become one hundred per cent steward.

Onaway, Michigan

October 16.—A one-day meeting was held at Onaway, Michigan, October 11, and very well attended.

At the close of the first meeting, a good, spiritual social service, the following committee was elected to preside over the services of the day: Elders A. Schruer, E. N. Burt, and E. L. Parkes.

Elder Rudd was chosen chorister, Sister Doris Kramer pianist, and Brother George Buddy usher. Sister Ruth Roberts assisted at the piano.

The preaching service in the forenoon was presided over by Elder Burt and addressed by Elder Henry Scheffer of Cheboygan.

After dinner Elder A. Schruer of Gaylord, district president, presided. He was assisted by Brother Max Kramer. This was followed by an address in reminiscent mood, by Elder E. N. Burt. Brother Owen Wood opened the meeting.

In the evening Elder Rudd of Alpena was the speaker, the meeting was opened by Elder McClellan of Lachine.

The fine sermons, special music, and association with brothers and sisters from other branches was much enjoyed by all.

Central Church

The ladies at Central met for the first time in their club room at the new Central Church Tuesday, October 13. Luncheon was served at one o'clock, followed by a program. Mrs. Frederick M. Smith was the speaker for the afternoon, giving a very interesting talk on the importance of a club. The ladies will organize at the next meeting, and it is hoped that much good will come of their work. Committees will be appointed to visit the sick and needy, thereby caring for people we sometimes neglect.

Much enthusiasm is being created in the Religio or Department of Recreation and Expression. Last Friday evening a program was given, after which games were played and refreshments served. A dramatic club was organized by those who did not care for the Book of Mormon study. Officers were elected, and a name will be chosen later. A play will be started at once, to be given at Thanksgiving time. We find this club an asset to the Department of Recreation and Expression as it creates an interest in the younger set of people.

Bennington Heights

We have had the pleasure of listening to sermons preached by Apostles J. A. Gillen, Bishop F. B. Blair, Patriarch F. A. Smith, and several other good speakers since our last report.

Recent visitors have been Sister F. M. Smith and Sister F. Henry Edwards. Two of these have been added to our church through baptism, Brother and Sister S. S. Armstrong.

The Lord's supper was served the first Sunday of the month with a goodly number present. The prayer meeting was very spiritual.

The Department of Women gave a social and made over $45, which was turned over to special meetings for the young people.

The cradle roll had Sister Roberts give a talk on children, which was very good.

The mission on Blue Ridge is still progressing. They have a building to meet in now and had sixteen out to Sunday school last Sunday. Brother W. I. Fligg and Brother Ammon White held two weeks of meetings there, and although there were no baptisms some good seed was sown.

Armourdale

On Sunday morning, September 27, at eleven o'clock, we had with us Bishop F. B. Blair, who delivered a very instructive and interesting sermon. The evening was given over to special meetings for the young people.

At half past six we had a young people's prayer meeting, at which thirty young people were present. At the close of the meeting a young man and a young woman presented their names for baptism.

Brother C. A. Kress of Independence talked to the young people at a quarter of eight.

After the hot summer days are over, during which time the Department of Women has not been meeting, the women are again meeting each Thursday afternoon. Much enthusiasm is apparent in their ranks for the work of the winter months.

The Armourdale Saints expect to do their share for Graceland College. The committee is getting each department organized for the drive November 1 to 15.

The Sunday school and Religio continue to grow, and the attendance at all meetings is very good indeed. Everything looks bright for Armourdale.

In a recent letter from Arthur H. Wicks, Clapton Park, E. F., London, England, he says: "The Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard are still without any meeting place. No Sunday meetings have been held at London for over a year. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that soon we may be able again to meet together in a place of worship. We are still carrying on with our Religio class at the home of our branch president, J. W. Worth."

Graceland's Worth

A symposium by three of Graceland's graduates now interested in three different lines of activities in the church and in the world, all making their distinctive contributions to the civilization of our time and making a better place in which to live. They are types of the hundreds who have passed through the halls of our church college.

Can anyone read these letters and fail to see the imperative necessity of continuing Graceland on its present very high standard and ever increasing its opportunities to minister to the needs of our young people?

Franklin D. Jones, of Washington, District of Columbia, one of the leading Counselors at Law in our National Capital:

I look back to my days at Graceland with only happy recollections. Graceland gives to her students something that the large universities, turning out students by the thousands, cannot give. When I say this, I speak from an experience of several years at three of the large universities of the country.

First: is the constant direct association in small classes and outside of classes with faculty members of high ideals, whose counsel and friendly supervision is a help and inspiration to any ambitious boy or girl.

Second: is the opportunity to exercise one's talents, whatever they may be. The lessons of the football field, the debating forum, and the dramatic club tie up more closely with life than any of us realized until we were out facing its struggles. At Graceland any student can get the chance to participate in these activities, which teach him to fight hard but fair; to reason logically and persuasively, and to be self-possessed before crowds—all of them qualities of leadership.

Third: is the entire absence of class distinction. The poor boy and the rich boy are on equality at Graceland, and all are friends.

Of course, Graceland gives also the highest type of instruction by a most competent faculty, as do other schools, but Graceland does more than train brains; Graceland builds character.

Any boy or girl who has the privilege of spending several years at Graceland is indeed fortunate. Very few small colleges can boast of such a faculty, whose members are sacrificing personal opportunities for advancement and honors in a spirit of self-sacrifice and service.

Ralph W. Travis, State University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa:

I think we all can safely say that the period we spent in training at Graceland College represents one of the important epochs in our lives. A man has about so long to live, you know, and from a standpoint of time he has little choice. Every year of life, up to thirty anyway, represents building time; and upon the character of the building done during that time will depend the character of work and progress made from then on. This is one reason why my five years at Graceland mean more to me to-day than ever before. I am now in the position where I can look back with a certain degree of perspective and appreciate the importance of those years of training and of the building up of clean and healthful associations.

I appreciate these the more when I speculate upon what I might have done had I not gone to Graceland. Probably would have gone to work some place and have settled down to a life of comparative contentment, no doubt, but of little service. A perfectly respectable existence to be sure, but if I properly understand the purpose of our creation it means more—and that is a maximum of performance.

My experiences at Graceland represent one of the biggest turning points in my life. From there a road was opened to me which offers all that I may reasonably hope to attain and more.

To my mind the two most important things that Graceland instills into her pupils are tolerance and a spirit of service. And these are all powerful when it comes to making our way among our fellow men. We need tolerance so that we may be proficient in the difficult art of getting along with our friends and neighbors, and embedding within their lives a deep appreciation of our own worth. This cannot be done without tolerance. In service we make ourselves supreme. By and through service to those about us, we develop the highest, finest, and noblest elements of our lives.

The Christ is remembered because of tolerance and service to those about him. They were helpless to do other than emblazon his name upon their records.

F. M. McDowell of the First Presidency:

You ask what Graceland means to me? To attempt to answer is as difficult for me as it would be for me to tell you I love my family. Some things are too close, too dear, too much a part of one's very self to explain or to tell others about. For eighteen years Graceland has been my inspiration, the source of my ambitions, the subject of my dreams, the opportunity for my service, the altar where I worshiped God in word and in deed. It shall never be my privilege to put in my language that would enable me to answer your question. That I may help just a bit in furthering the interests of our Alma Mater, I undertake an inadequate enumeration of Graceland's gifts to me.

1. Graceland found me when I was without desire for higher education; when I knew absolutely nothing of the meaning of college and university life. The term college degree meant nothing. Graceland gave me not only the desire but the determination to continue my education. Without that influence I am absolutely certain I would never have received even a bachelor's degree.

2. Graceland gave me a vision of the program of our church and a desire to spend my life in the furtherance of that program. I received there increasingly an appreciation of the meaning of service, of the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God in the furtherance of his divine purposes. I received there my first spiritual awakening and my first opportunity to serve as a member of the priesthood.

3. Graceland gave to me scores of friends—friends of the real sort—life-long friends. Outside of my immediate family, I am certain that ninety per cent of the men and women who mean most to me and my life are directly or indirectly the contribution of Graceland. Among these are some who could be numbered, yes, to the circle of their own flesh and blood—those with whom the hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, pleasures and sacrifices of life have been shared. There is scarcely a gathering of Saints which I attend, be it east or west, north or south, but what I find some of these Graceland friends.

4. Graceland gave to me a companion who was in later years to take the place of mother, standing by in the long struggle which resulted in my securing the highest degree that it is the privilege of a State to give. There are some who would ridicule the place that Graceland has played in the establishment of happy homes, but this feeling I do not share. It has been my observation that the homes which have been established as a result of Graceland friendship stand out far, far above the average of the homes of to-day. I believe with all my heart that ninety-nine per cent of these homes are happy and united, giving to the world a lesson sorely needed to-day—an example of homes, not houses—a living testimony of the value of high ideals, mutual ambitions, mutual purposes, and mutual love. Graceland's gift to me was a home of this sort.

5. Graceland furnished me an opportunity to serve. There I was given responsibility; there I was given tasks that seemed beyond me; there I was brought in contact with the souls of hundreds of young people. There I developed what I verily believe to be an unyielding love for youth. There I received the experience which daily helps me in the carrying on of greater tasks.

Why Continue Graceland As Our Church School?

Graceland is but thirty years old, yet during that time high schools, colleges, and universities have sprung up by hundreds. Millions upon millions of dollars have been spent in our cities and towns in the erection of public school buildings that excel in every respect the physical plant of Graceland. On every hand are colleges and universities with rich endowments. Why continue Graceland?

My answer is found in the need of humanity. The world needs to-day—more power; more wealth; more knowledge? Yes, perhaps, but more than these, the world needs to-day new motives and new attitudes. It has been thought that the world could be saved by improving the material environment of man. We have given man things to do with; we have thought little about what man would do with these things. We have thought too much about improving the lot of man and too little about improving man. To-day civilization stands at the crossroads. It may go up or down. Which it shall be depends upon the choices of men; the choices of men depend upon their attitudes. Our only hope is that sort of education which shall reach the hearts of men; which shall so influence their attitudes as to cause them to use their knowledge, powers, lands, money, and all in the interest of humanity.

Graceland is a church school, a school under the supervision of a church with a social program, a program which demands socialization and spiritualization of the powers of men. Graceland, I say, stands in a very significant way alone in its opportunity to furnish to the world that thing which the world most needs. Graceland cannot compete in the work of carrying on scientific investigation or in the preparation of professional experts. Graceland cannot compete with other institutions in physical plant or number of graduates or degrees conferred. But Graceland can and must excel all these in the ideals, ambitions, and attitudes which she implants in the very souls of her students.

The task before the church is a gigantic one. The best in every field will be demanded. We shall need experts; we shall need money; but more than these, we shall need a faith in the ultimate achievement of right and the ultimate victory of decency and virtue. We shall need the courage to go to work to make this vision a reality. We shall need to be able to put first things first. We shall need men and women who can see clearly the meaning of history and the program of God for men; men and women who see, who know, who feel that nothing is more sacred than human life, that anything that separates men, anything that kills, destroys, or blasts their lives is always wrong.

If our church has any message for the world to-day; if it has any worth-while gift to offer, it is found in the opportunity which we have to give a demonstration of the practicability of Christianity applied in the affairs of men. In a word, it is the task of the church to demonstrate to the world the real meaning of the kingdom of God on earth. It is because I believe with all my heart that Graceland is indispensable in such a program that I am pleading to-day that her doors be kept open. It is because I believe, yes, verily know, that Graceland can furnish that peculiar type of manhood and womanhood that both can and will “seek first the kingdom of God.” It is because of this that I pledge my unyielding loyalty to my Alma Mater.

If civilization is to be saved from its inherent wrongs, Christianity must prevail. If Christianity is to prevail, it must be made applicable; it must be applied in the affairs of men. If this is to be accomplished, a new type of manhood and womanhood must be developed. Religion must be mixed with life, and this mixture must take place first in the hearts of men and women. I not only believe, I know that Graceland can do this one thing better than any other school in the world.

RESULTS ALREADY!

The campaign to raise $200,000 to maintain Graceland’s accredited standing and to establish agricultural stewardships is nearing its opening date. Some are not even waiting until November 1.

Will the Saints Respond?

HERE ARE FOUR ANSWERS TO THE QUESTION
(and we have hundreds just like them)

$10
A small group of young people in Lincoln, Nebraska, on October 5, sent in $10.80 just to start their quota.

$100
The true, loyal Saints at Clear Lake, Michigan, have $100 already pledged to start their endowment campaign.

$500
The Coalville Branch in Iowa reports they have oversubscribed their quota of $500.

$1,000
A brother in East Saint Louis, Illinois, had planned to buy a Willys-Knight car. Instead he will buy a Ford and give the difference—$1,000—to the Endowment Fund.

What will YOUR contribution be?

Every mail brings a flood of just such encouraging reports. Organization work is being completed, membership lists checked up, quotas assigned, and work planned so that on November 1 everything will be in readiness for a prompt, enthusiastic start on the active work of securing pledges.

Individuals, Branches, and Districts are now thinking in bigger terms than assigned quotas. Reports indicate that many are saying—

NEWS FROM CAMPAIGN WORKERS

Each mail brings a large number of encouraging reports from all parts of the field represented by our church, but it is only possible to mention a few from week to week as our limited space will not permit us to mention all.

SAND SPRINGS, OKLAHOMA, October 13.

Dear Brother Carmichael: We are meeting with the best of success in Oklahoma and we see every reason to believe that this district will do its full share in meeting its quota for the endowment-stewardship campaign. Many classes are studying stewardship, and the publicity given the work of the college has revived the interest in college work among the Saints in Oklahoma.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, October 9.

The Presiding Bishopric: They are all set here for the Graceland endowment-stewardship campaign which is to start November 1, and we feel confident that we will get through all right.

G. R. BEATTY.

WILLIAMS, OHIO, October 3.

To the Presiding Bishopric: I am glad to support Graceland's Endowment Fund. Graceland has done much for me and I am now concerned about doing something for her. To-morrow I leave my Temple work and visit two branches in the interest of Graceland. The Saints will not allow Graceland to close and I am sure will be glad to do something for her.

WILLIAM PATTISON.

(Missionary under appointment to the Kirtland District.)

COALVILLE, IOWA, October 14.

Presiding Bishopric: Graceland has meant the world to me. She gave me the foundation to build upon. She gave me direction in my thinking. Graceland in her study and influence increased my estimate of the value of the church. She has increased my experience by her association and spirit and deserves all and more than we can give. Graceland College is a necessity in the church, and to support her is our duty.

JOHN BLACKMORE.

(Missionary in Des Moines District.)

DAVIDSON, OKLAHOMA, October 15.

To the Presiding Bishopric: In this part of the field we have caught the vision of the college endowment-stewardship campaign and are trying our utmost to do our part. Send us additional pledge cards and circulars for scattered members. We are making a strong pull to go over the top in subscribing our quota.

Yours in the faith,

E. B. STAFFORD.

LACHINE, MICHIGAN, October 15.

Dear Brother Carmichael: Our district president, Brother Allen Schreur, has instructed me to report the progress of the organization in this locality. The situation here has a bright outlook and we will be glad to receive any further instructions you can give for our benefit.

JENNIE B. NUGENT.

FLINT, MICHIGAN, October 15.

Dear Brother Carmichael: Attached to this letter is a list of the committee, completing the organization for the endowment-stewardship campaign in Flint, Michigan. Please send us 350 pledge cards which we feel we can use to advantage. The Saints here, I am sure, will be glad to do their share in raising our quota.

ARTHUR H. DUROSE.

Branch President.

DERBYSHIRE, ENGLAND,

HIGH STREET, CLAY CROSS.

To the Presiding Bishopric, U. S. A.: Your circular letter with cards on which to report the members of the committees for the campaign for the Graceland endowment-stewardship fund, I received yesterday. But they are too late. We got a start in Clay Cross ahead of you. Since the announcement was made that this was necessary, I called the priesthood together and we agreed upon a plan of action which will meet our needs here, and we are all desirous of doing our part in raising our quota. A few days ago we counseled with the priesthood relative to having our quota ready for you by the time you need it, and I am pleased to tell you all are agreed and satisfied we should have our quota and have it ready in time for you when you need it.

CHARLES COUSINS.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, October 14.

Announcement in the Saints' Pilot, a weekly bulletin issued by the branch at Sioux City, Iowa, indicates that they called a special meeting on October 10 during their home-coming and rally day week, to consider the endowment-stewardship campaign. This shows the personal interest the Saints of Sioux City are taking in this church-wide responsibility.

FORAKER, OKLAHOMA, October 13.

Dear Brother Carmichael: Please send me about fifteen more of those circulars giving information on the Graceland College endowment fund. Send us additional information about the college that you think will help us. We have no former Graceland student in this branch, but we believe this church and its program are the work of God and we want to help all we can.

ED WORKMAN.

CRESTON, IOWA, October 19.

A little branch of thirty-eight members has raised $800 and the time of the drive can hold no terrors for them. What a worthy example of energy and loyalty!

ANDOVER, MISSOURI, October 19.

The quota for this little branch in Lamoni Stake is $800, and it has already been oversubscribed, while the workers are still going strong. This news from Cresenton and Andover comes through the president of Lamoni Stake, Wilber Prall.
Notice of Appointments

The following appointments have been made by the Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric:

J. H. N. Jones; Queensland, Brisbane, objective—Missionary.

The First Presidency, The Quorum of Twelve.

Independence, Missouri, October 17.

Requests for Prayers

Mrs. S. E. Hurley asks prayers for her son Hilliard, that he may be restored to health to work in the church. She says he has great faith that the Lord will restore him. She also asks prayers for herself, as her health is very poor.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dodge, Kendall, Kansas, ask the prayers of the Saints for their little grandson, who is very low with fever and kidney affliction, that he may be healed. The doctor does not seem to be helping him, and as these Saints are isolated there is no elder to act as secretary pro tem.

Conference Notices

Nauvoo, at Burlington, Iowa, November 7 and 8. Election of district officers and delegates to next General Conference. Meetings will be held in the new church at the corner of Twelfth and Locust Streets, W. H. Gunn, district clerk, 225 Tracy Street, Fort Madison, Iowa.

Those attending conference at Taberville, Missouri, October 30 and 31 and November 1, who desire conveyance from the train at Rockville, write the undersigned, Ira W. Roberts, Rockville, Missouri.

Conference Minutes

Fremont. At Shanondago, Iowa, October 3 and 4, 1925. Called to order by N. L. Mortimore. District presidency were chosen to preside, and by motion J. A. Beckner was elected to assist in presiding over the conference. The district clerk not being present, R. E. Pratt was chosen to act as secretary pro tem, to be assisted by Luella Topham. Branch reports were read and approved from Hamburg, 19; Thurmaren, 7; Glenwood, 86; and Shanondago, 114. Ministerial reports were read from S. S. Currie, deseret; F. B. Knight, priest; R. S. Lambkin, high priest; Roy J. Dunham, teacher; J. D. Stoud, seventy; C. W. Forney, priest; N. L. Mortimore, elder; and J. W. Dunneagain, elder. Sunday school report from Shanondago was followed by remarks by J. L. Mortimore concerning conditions in the district generally. Moved and seconded that we hold the next conference in February. After considerable discussion the motion prevailed, the exact time and place being left with the district presidency. Resolution from the Henderson Branch pertaining to the disorganisation of said branch was read by T. A. Hougas. The resolution was adopted and the branch declared disorganised. Moved and seconded that the presidency communicate to the organisation of the conference by the appointment of speakers and deciding the character of meetings to follow. Informal discussion concerning the disorganisation of the Hamborg and Riverton Branches was had, but no action taken. Benediction by J. A. Beckner. Preaching at 8 p.m., Saturday, charge of T. A. Hougas, sermon by J. A. Beckner. Prayer service at 7 a.m. Sunday. In charge of J. A. Beckner and J. D. Stoud. Preaching at 2:30 by J. A. Beckner, assisted by T. A. Hougas. Beliefio at 7 p.m. in charge of local officers. Preaching at 8 by J. D. Stoud, assisted by N. L. Mortimore. Meeting to adjourn according to previous resolution. Benediction by N. L. Mortimore. R. E. Pratt, secretary pro tem.

The Angel Gives the Name of Christ

The church is called after his name, The Church of Jesus Christ. And it omits no part of his name. What is his name? The angel said: “She shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus.”—Matthew 1:21. His name appears thus six hundred and fifty times in the Bible. Why are we asked to drop that holy name from the church?

It is true that in the Book of Mormon in four places the church is spoken of as the “Church of Christ,” but equally true that in at least eighteen places it is called the “Church of God”; twice it is called “the Church of the Lamb of God”; elsewhere it is called the “True Church of Christ.” Evidently the Book of Mormon writers did not make a man “an offender for a word.” The use of the word Jesus certainly would not be objectionable to them in connection with the word Christ. As Doctor Luff recently said, “If it be not the Church of Jesus Christ, what Christ does it represent?”

Book of Mormon Gives His Name

If the church is to be called after his name, then the Book of Mormon is explicit in giving that name in several places, as for example: “There is none other name given under heaven save it be this Jesus Christ of which I have spoken, whereby you shall be saved.”—2 Nephi 11:39.

It is in accord with the Book of Mormon rather than against it to call the church: “The Church of Jesus Christ.”

Michigan Has Set the Example
What Will You Do?

The Name of the Church

Question: I have been told that the church should be called the Church of Christ on the ground that we are commanded in the Book of Mormon to take upon us his name or to call the church after his name. Please explain why it is called the Latter Day Saints Church.

Answer: First, the name of the church is not Latter Day Saint. Read it more carefully. Note the real and vital part of the name: “The Reorganized CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST of Latter Day Saints.”

The Book of Mormon commandment to call the church after his name was in opposition to the idea of some that it should be called “after the name of a man,” Moses or some other. The name of The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ avoids that error and does include as its principal factor the name of Christ. Moreover, the passage referred to must be considered in connection with other revelations bearing on the same subject, a safe rule of interpretation. By adhering to a rigid interpretation of one text and ignoring all others, some interpreters are inclined to believe they make out a case for trine immersion: “In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.” That is poor argument.
Book of Commandments and Book of Doctrine and Covenants

Moreover, we have a revelation on the subject given directly to us in this dispensation, equally valid and more recent. It was given as early as June, 1829, and is accepted by all groups of believers in the latter-day work, including the "Church of Christ" on the Temple Lot:

Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved. Behold Jesus Christ is the name which is given to the Father, and there is none other name given whereby men can be saved: Wherefore all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day: Wherefore if they know not the name by which they are called they cannot have place in the kingdom of my Father.—Book of Commandments, Chapter 15: 23-26. (See Doctrine and Covenants 16: 4.)

Here it is clearly stated, "My name, which is Jesus Christ," and this is the name which the church is to take upon it. Why omit the most personal part of that name, the part given by the angel when he said, "You shall call his name Jesus"?

So the name of the church includes his name as well as his title, "The Reorganized Church of JESUS CHRIST."

The Prophet Joseph on the Name of the Church

In his account of the organization of the church on April 6, 1830, Joseph says: "I then laid my hands on the head of Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the 'Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' after which he ordained me to the office of an elder in said church."—Times and Seasons, vol. 3, pp. 944, 945. This was at the very beginning of organization and in the full flood of divine light. It appears in the same connection and in the same account with his story of the angel's visit and whole work of restoration. To most readers of the Herald, Joseph is still a reliable witness on those important early events.

Daniel Macgregor on the Use of the Word "Saint"

The word reorganized is merely a prefix. The words Latter Day Saint are explanatory: the Church of Jesus Christ composed of latter rather than former-day saints. On that point Daniel Macgregor has an excellent comment in his Marvelous Work and a Wonder:

The kingdom of God has all these features. It has citizens, commonly called Saints, made so not by canons and decrees, but by reason of their citizenship in the kingdom. This is their common name, by which they have ever been known. The name Christian originated at Antioch and was used in derision by those not of the faith. It is found but thrice in all the Bible, while "saint" is referred to some ninety-nine times. Personally we prefer the appointed name rather than a nickname. Marvelous Work and a Wonder, p. 8.

From this it appears that the term Saint is scriptural; in fact, if we did not use it we would not be in harmony with the Scriptures, as that is the "common name by which they have ever been known," used at least ninety-nine times in the Scriptures.

KLDS Begins Winter Lecture Course Series

A special series of radio lectures is being arranged by President F. M. McDowell, dean of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. These will begin Thursday, October 29, at 8 p.m.

The first course will be presented by Mrs. M. A. Elzenhouser. It will consist of nine lectures on heredity and eugenics, the basis of these lectures being Albert Edward Wiggam's deservedly popular book, The Fruit of the Family Tree.

Set your dials for 441 meters each Tuesday and Thursday evening at 8 o'clock and enjoy the "school of the air" from KLDS. Reports and questions from listeners will be appreciated and will receive proper attention.

ARTHUR B. CHURCH.

Splendid Response to Radio Reporters Request

KLDS is very much encouraged by the response to its call for radio reporters, made in the HERALD two weeks ago. The splendid interest shown promises success for the experiment. Following are extracts from a few of the letters thus far received:

Storm Lake, Iowa.—I read your article wanting radio reporters. I will do my best. I certainly enjoy every program.—Mrs. J. A. Halberg.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—Just noticed your appeal in current HERALD for reports on radio reception. Tickled to death to help you out this much. Just send me some of those blanks, and I will report as often as I hear you.—Fred V. Dreyer.

Holstein, Ontario.—We are very much interested in KLDS and will be glad to give you any assistance we can. We have not yet heard KLDS but hope to as soon as weather improves.—William P. Ellis.

Sun City, Kansas.—Your programs came in fine yesterday—all three of them. We enjoyed them very much. Please send me report blanks, as we listen to all your programs, which are the best ever.—Mrs. A. Dille.

Trinidad, Colorado.—Your station came in very clear last Sunday evening and last evening. We are isolated from church privileges. ... We also note (Continued on page 1158.)

Latest News From Lamoni Stake

A telephone message from Wilber Prall, president of the Lamoni Stake, received Monday morning, 11 o'clock, gives the following good news:

Chariton, Iowa, a small branch in the Lamoni Stake, only seventy-eight members, on Saturday afternoon pledged one thousand dollars. In this branch there are two Sunday school classes composed of boys and girls. Each boy and girl promised to earn five dollars and pay it to the endowment stewardship fund.

The Oland Branch of forty members in Lamoni Stake has already raised their quota of four hundred dollars and they are not through yet.

This certainly testifies to the loyalty of the Saints when the interests of the church are concerned.

A telegram from F. M. McDowell, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, attending the Michigan State young people's convention was received Monday morning, October 26th:

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN.

Bishop Carmichael: The following resolution unanimously adopted by Michigan State Young People's Convention: We hereby declare ourselves in favor of the entire church program, especially are we back of the Stewardship-College Endowment Drive. Count on Michigan. Two hundred-eighty pledged themselves to file inventories immediately.

F. M. McDowell.

A telegram from Nowata, Oklahoma, is typical of reports we are receiving daily:

NOWATA, OKLAHOMA, October 24, 1925.

Albert Carmichael: Nowata Branch of Spring River District over the top at 7 p. m. to-night.

A. J. Bly, Branch President.

A report from Nebraska:

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, October 24.

To the Presiding Bishopric: We have our work started in all the branches and groups in this district, and I feel sure it is going over strong. I will be in the field continuously November 1-15 and pledge myself to the limit to work for the campaign until it closes. Send me one hundred more pledge cards. Faithfully yours,

E. F. Robertson.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN, October 21.

Bishop A. Carmichael: Send one thousand college endowment fund pledge cards at once.

Bishop C. J. Hunt.

The above telegram was just received from Bishop Charles J. Hunt, which indicates that Michigan will again be heard from when the results of the endowment campaign are received. These pledge cards are evidently for the young people's convention which convenes in Grand Rapids October 24 and 25. Similar requests are being received daily.

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.

Presiding Bishopric: Kindly mail us additional supply of posters and campaign literature to be used for the College Endowment. I am one hundred per cent for the proposition.

V. B. Ettenhouzer.

President Oakland Branch.

BLACK RIVER FALLS, WISCONSIN.

Dear Brother Carmichael: We are now getting organized in this district and are planning to get the work well in hand at our district conference which meets this week. We think it a wise and profitable plan to help Graceland, and we are pleased to know that the church is getting the money to buy land to establish agricultural stewardships. Please send one hundred pledge cards.

Yours for success,

Horace Scape.

COFFEEVILLE, KANSAS, October 19.

Presiding Bishopric: The Saints in this district are glad to know that the endowment fund is to be used in purchasing land and establishing stewardships. I believe we are going over the top in subscribing our quota. My itinerary during the campaign will include a visit to eighteen branches, and the outlook is very encouraging.

Amos Hisdon.

GOOD RIVER, OREGON, October 6.

To the Presiding Bishopric: Our organization of districts and branches for the Graceland endowment campaign is well under way and things are running smoothly. We are receiving good response from most branches. I believe we should be able to raise our quota nicely. We are arranging the quotas for branches and will have this line-up in time for the opening day of the campaign.

Eli Bronson.

FANNING, KANSAS.

Bishop A. Carmichael: Just a line to let you know how our district organization for the Graceland endowment fund is coming along. I have been able to cover the entire district except one branch, preaching from two to four sermons in each. There seems to be a great deal of interest and earnest enthusiasm in regard to the endowment and stewardship campaign and I believe our district will raise the allotted quota.

Very sincerely, your brother,

Samuel Twombly.

HAMBURG, IOWA.

Dear Brother Carmichael: Our program for organizing the endowment campaign is well in hand, and practically all of the branches have reported their organization and commenced work. We will do all we can as a district. Brother N. H. Pierce, of Bartlett, Iowa, is the third member of the Fremont District committee. We are prepared to do our utmost for this campaign.

The Order of Enoch
BY A. CARMICHAEL
An article in three parts. This is Part 1.

1. Preface

"Glittering generalities" have their place in every constructive program, but there comes a time when further progress cannot be made unless the details are more fully determined.

We are dealing with a subject that is comparatively little understood even theoretically. So far as any practical demonstration in this day having been made, it has been had only in a few isolated cases. These limited efforts though have proved its workability.

The expression, "The Order of Enoch," is one having a prominent place in the literature of the believers of the Latter-day Restoration. It has about the same significance as is found in such expressions as "The social program" and "The brotherhood of man." It has preeminently to do with the relation of man to man, socially.

This explanation of the Order of Enoch is very elemental. It aims to give the reader the true idea of the organization as well as the functioning of this Order. The activities included in this Order are inseparably interwoven with those of stewardships. In connection with this, the reader should read the booklet, The Elements of Stewardship.

2. Its Membership, What Constitutes

The membership of this order or organization is composed of those who have not only signified their willingness to act as stewards but who have fully complied with the law governing the formation and management of stewardships, thus becoming stewards for God not only according to the letter of the law but also as to the spirit of the same.

3. The History of the Order

Four times in the history of God's dealings with his people, so far as we have any record of the same, we find that this high-water mark in spirituality was reached.

And the Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them.—Genesis 7: 23, Inspired Translation.

The result being fruit, "a hundredfold."

Enoch and all his people walked with God, and he dwelt in the midst of Zion. And it came to pass that Zion was not, for God received it up into his own bosom; and from thence went forth the saying, Zion is fled.—Genesis 7: 77, 78, Inspired Translation.

It took time and of necessity a thoroughly socialized and well-organized society to accomplish this.

The time and scene shift. Across the waters in Joseph's land, the Lord makes another attempt to "bring to pass his marvelous work and a wonder."

For about a century and a half before the Master came, we find that they did impart of their substance, every man according to that which he had, to the poor and the needy, and the sick and the afflicted. And they did not wear costly apparel, yet they were neat and comely. ... They did not send away any who were naked, or that were hungry, or that were athirst, or that were sick, or that had not been nourished; and they did not set their hearts upon riches; therefore they were liberal to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, whether out of the church or in the church, having no respect to persons as to those who stood in need.—Alma 1: 40-46.

This describes a glorious condition, but these have not yet arrived unto the "mark of their high calling in Jesus." They still have "poor" among them. God's plan eliminates poverty.

Then the Christ came, instituting his will in full, so we find the following:

And as many as were baptized in the name of Jesus were filled with the Holy Ghost.... And they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly, one with another.—3 Nephi 12: 10, 11.

And they had all things common among them. Therefore there were not rich and poor, bond or free, but they were all made free and partakers of the heavenly gift.—4 Nephi 1: 4.

Note the result of this condition of temporalities—no poor, no needy—complete freedom. This most desirable condition lasted for the space of about one hundred and sixty-five years; then there began to be among them those who were lifted up in pride, such as the wearing of costly apparel, and all manner of fine pearls, and of the fine things of the world. And from that time forth they did have their goods and their substance no more common among them, and they began to be divided into classes, etc.—4 Nephi 1: 27, 28.

How different this ending from that of Enoch!

About the same time we find the Lord making an effort to solve the problem among his people at Jerusalem. When filled with the Holy Ghost following the Pentecost, it is recorded of the Saints:

And all that believed were together and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.—Acts 2: 44, 45.

And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. ... Neither was there any among them that lacked, for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.—Acts 4: 32-35.
It had taken three and one half years of strenuous work on the part of the Master and his chosen servants to prepare the saints for this grave responsibility. The records show that this effort was short lived, and selfishness again held sway over the hearts of men. Darkness came, and silence.

4. The Restoration

The Lord walks in a straight path. So again when the angelic messenger comes, restoring “all things lost,” we may look for this same order of things to be established. Notice the unfolding of the plan, succinctly stated.

The Lord introduces the great theme by giving a brief history of Enoch and his achievements along temporal lines. Truly a fitting thing to do to beget faith. (Doctrine and Covenants 36.) He then commands the church to go to the Ohio to receive his law, “for your salvation,” “that you might escape the power of the enemy and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless.” (Doctrine and Covenants 38:7; January, 1831.)

The Lord then commanded the church to appoint certain men to look for “the poor and needy,” and administer to their relief, that they shall not suffer. (Doctrine and Covenants 38:7, 8, given January, 1831, at Fayette, New York.) This was a temporary arrangement only, as there was no bishop at this time.

In February, 1831, God speaks and calls Edward Partridge as the Bishop. (41:3.)

In the same month the will of God is revealed to the people assembled at the Ohio, as per his command. This section gives brief yet comprehensive instructions with reference to the consecrations of the Saints and stewardships to be given by the Bishop. (42:8, 9, 11, 14, 19.) This section is one of the most important, if not the most important, in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. It contains in a very brief form the fundamentals of every vital principle governing in our church. All other sections are but an enlargement or explanation of these principles.

In February, 1831, comes again the direction of the Lord, saying:

Behold, I say unto you, that you must visit the poor and the needy, and administer to their relief, that they may be kept until all things may be done according to my law.—Doctrine and Covenants 44:3, given February, 1831.

This again is but a temporary arrangement.

They still have the “poor and needy,” and they will continue to have “until all things may be done according to my law.”

The revelation of the law of temporalities is progressing. In May, 1831, more definite instructions were given. The Bishop now begins to receive advice as to how to proceed—to organize stewardships. (Section 51.) This section is an important one in the development of stewardships and the storehouse. It outlines in a few words the work to be done by the Bishopric as the business order of the church.

Let the reader read section 56, paragraph 3, to learn who should take the initiative in preparing for the poor by preparing a place for them. Here we have the Lord’s plan for a successful gathering.

In June, 1831 (56:5), the Lord warns both rich and poor as to their duty.

In August, 1831, in Zion, additional instruction was given with reference to the use of material things. (59:4, 5.)

In Doctrine and Covenants 63:12, given in Kirtland, the Lord instructs the Bishop as to the business of the storehouse. The same may be found in 64:5, 6.

Doctrine and Covenants 69:2 (November, 1831,) enlarges on stewardship.

Section 70 is another very important section, showing the progress of the temporal work of the church. This section refers to the publishing interests of the church. The organization here provided for is an order to aid the Bishopric in their work.

Doctrine and Covenants 72:4 contains further and very important directions as to the proper management of this organization; also 101:10, 11.

It is noteworthy that the Lord, after telling us how to organize this literary concern or order (101:11) and telling us how to manage it, says: “This is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship.” (70:3.) He here gives the form of procedure for the organizing and conducting of the business of all group stewardships. In the development of our church activities it would be but logical to provide immediately for the publication of our literature, therefore the giving of section 70 commanding a group of men to organize as a group stewardship.

Now comes instruction to organize an order in the groups constituting the Order of Enoch, for the help of the poor. (Doctrine and Covenants 77, given March, 1832.) This particular order provided for an order for both profit and service. “Regulating and establishing” comprises those functions necessary not only to build up the storehouse but also necessary for the use of the profits. It was an organization for both the creation of wealth and the distribution of wealth.

In section 81 (April, 1832,) we have further direction about organizing this order or group stewardship in the Order of Enoch, telling us how to organize. Sections 42 and 51 had authorized the organization of individual stewardship in temporal affairs.

In March, 1833, at Kirtland we find the Lord Redemption of the Poor

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

It may be an imprudent thing for me to undertake a subject involving so much as is included in the above caption, but I am going to excuse myself in an attempt at considering it upon the ground that there will be much to say after I get through. I hope to draw attention to a few fundamental principles that have a bearing, and if possible I will classify them so as to enable the reader to get a clearer idea of my understanding of the problem with which the world, and more particularly the church, has always been confronted, with the hope that it may stimulate thought and action on the part of all who are interested in the mutual uplift of mankind.

We are all more or less familiar with the scripture which says: “The poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low,” but I am just wondering how we have been interpreting this word of instruction. I am coming more and more to see that our greatest difficulty rests in our ability, or perhaps I had better say in our inability, to rightly interpret the things that have been written for our instruction. All are evidently agreed that there is need for the redemption of the poor, but we may not all be agreed upon the means and methods to be employed in this process. Much of the effort of the past has militated against rather than for the redemption of the poor, in that men have tried to use a means that is inadequate. I say men have tried to use a means that is inefficient, in that it merely prolongs the poverty of the class that we are now trying to consider. If the poor are to be redeemed, they are to be brought out of the state in which they are placed at present. Mere charity is insufficient, for that means is at best only a temporary aid in the case of emergency and not in the way of permanent uplift.

As we consider this matter, it at once presents itself to us under the following heads: How? When? Where? The how of it is the first thing to be considered by us. How can we redeem the poor is a question of grave importance! Surely we cannot redeem anyone until we have enabled him to get a new vision, and in order to do this we must change his mental attitude. To change means to convert, so it is just possible that the term convert may have a larger and broader meaning than we have sometimes thought it had. Our mental attitudes have much to do with our physical conditions, and I am convinced that there can be no such thing as redemption for the poor until we have succeeded in enriching their minds with the gospel. This at least involves the forming of the proper concepts, the cultivating of the right kind of responses, the inspiring of the right kind of ambitions. In a word, we must save the poor man from himself before he can ever be redeemed in the true sense of the word. We can redeem mankind, then, only by enabling him to get a clearer idea of life and its possibilities, and by fitting him to work in harmony with the laws of the universe, and by this means aiding him to find the secret of salvation.

When? This is a question that is very obvious if we study well the nature of the first one, for man will be redeemed when he has been developed intellectually, physically, spiritually, and socially for the carrying out of the program of life that will insure salvation for mankind. It is therefore very readily observed that education is one of the essential features. I say education, and I trust here that I shall be understood, for I know that often one is misunderstood when he uses the word education; but I wish here to convey the idea of that kind of training that shall supply the individual, and hence the community, with the necessary knowledge and ability to accomplish the tasks that are required of them. It provides that any means that shall produce this result is educational, and that the poor man cannot be redeemed until he is educated along these lines. Knowledge and ability to perform are among the necessary requirements.

Where? First of all man must be saved from himself. That is to say, he must be brought to that place where he is able to see and understand both the destructive and the constructive elements and forces of life. He must be brought to the place where he is both able and willing to choose in this matter, and then we have him to the place where his redemption begins. But we will not have this task completed until we have him built into that social and economic structure that provides for the mutual benefits of all; until he has reached the place that he becomes able to help himself; that is to say, until he becomes independent rather than dependent. When we have come to the place where we are willing to live the law of stewardships, we will be at the place where the redemption of the poor is virtually insured.

As we consider these problems, other details arise, and we are compelled to notice them. They may be classified as the program whereby this thing may be accomplished. We list them under four heads; viz, education, organization, cooperation, and coordination. If there is any one thing that this restored gospel is very pronounced upon, it is the principle of education. From the very inception of the work unto the present day the watchword has been, and still is, education! Education is the means of instruction and training whereby fitness and ability to perform are assured. It includes both the knowing of the thing to be done and the manner in which to do it. There are many processes of education, and any of them are valuable in so far as they do for us that which we stand in need of: qualify us for the service and activities of life.

Coupled with education we must have organization, for unless we have the proper organization we are going to fail of our purpose, however much we might know in the abstract sense. It is also very apparent that organization spells leadership. No one can long study the law of this church without being impressed with the idea and also the need of organization. How often the phrase occurs, "Organize yourselves," and in the instructions given to the church we find provision for the various quorums of the ministry, in both the Melchisedec and the Aaronic priesthoods. All of these things emphasize the importance and necessity of organization. As we pursue further the program that is outlined in the carrying into effect of the law of stewardships, we see the further need for organization. Organization provides for management, and management provides for the directing of certain departments by others. This direction is presumed to be beneficial, of course, but we must understand that organization provides for the oversight of departments by those who are placed at the head of departments, hence it provides for directional control.

Organization would be inefficient without the principle of cooperation; for unless the constituent parts of any organized body cooperate, there can be no progress within that body or organization. To cooperate means to work together in a common cause and to a common or given end. We might do well here to study carefully the rules and the practice of baseball, for therein we have one of the strongest lessons of what cooperation really means. In that game the batter often makes a sacrifice hit for the sake of putting his fellow player ahead in the game and thus advancing the interests of the team. To cooperate means to work together for the good of the whole, even though it may require a sacrifice hit once in a while; for it is much better that I sacrifice my own personal ambition than that I should permit that ambition to militate against the good of the group.

Coordination is an important factor in the development and carrying out of the ideals of the church as well. Coordination simply means the complete harmonious working of the body; the carrying out of the entire program by the entire membership; the functioning of the members of the body so as to conserve the best interests of the whole. Coordination is best expressed in the functioning of the human body with its various members that work together harmoniously. The hand never argues the question as to whether it shall perform its duty; it simply learns its duty and does it. The eye never questions whether it shall see; it simply fulfills its function of seeing, and the coordinate action of the whole body makes it complete. When the membership of the church have learned to function as they should; when each one learns his duty and labors in his own office; when that coordination that is so essential shall be maintained, then and not until then will we be able to redeem the poor and establish the more perfect social and economic conditions that the gospel law enjoins upon us. But it is our duty to begin where we are with the material at our disposal and work toward the desired end, that the day may be hastened and the way prepared for the complete accomplishment of the work that has been intrusted to all of us.

We are sometimes asked why there are so many poor people in the world; and once in a while, and sometimes oftener, we hear people accusing the Lord of making poor people. Personally I think this a very unbecoming accusation, for the Lord has made no man poor; it is the man that has made himself poor by failing to manage things as he should to become successful. In the first place, the poor man is kept poor by buying poor things; he is kept poor by reason of his doing things in a poor way; he is kept poor by reason of his failure to study to show himself approved; he is kept poor by reason of his lack of energy and initiative; he is kept poor by reason of his lack of application.

We might go on ad infinitum, but it is evident there are many good and sufficient reasons for the poverty of man without blaming the Lord for making him poor. The thing we are concerned about is the means of redeeming him from his unfortunate condition. This can be done only by enabling him to help himself. The poor man doesn’t need cold charity; he needs opportunity. He doesn’t need some one else to work for him or to give him that which he has not earned; he needs to be taught how to manage and work for himself, so as to be able to earn his own bread by the sweat of his brow and to make the very best possible out of himself. It is much better helping to aid another to bear his own burden than it is to take it off of his shoulders and bear it for him. It is far better for a poor man to be taught how to work and care for himself and family than it is to give him that which others have earned and for which he has bestowed no labor himself.

The poor, then, will be redeemed when they are made efficient; when they are able to care for themselves; when they are able to assist others; when they learn to conserve their own interests and the interests of others; when they have learned to accumulate through saving and industry. Yes, the poor will be fully redeemed when they have learned to do the best under every circumstance, and to make the best of their opportunities.

It is quite evident that no man is free until he has reached a state or condition of independence rather than dependence. By this I mean that we can never expect to have the poor wholly redeemed until we have in some way been able to get them to see that we are only rightly entitled to that for which we give an equivalent in value. In a word, he who is trying to get something for nothing is never redeemed until he is able to discover the error of his way and begins to amend his ways and his doings. Let me say it again: The redemption of the poor means the educating of the people to that state of efficiency where every man will become a helper to the extent of his ability. The law of the church doesn’t require the impossible; it simply requires that I do the best I can. It is not a matter as to whether my work is so great or so important as the work of some one else; it is a question as to whether I am doing the best I can do under the existing circumstances and whether I am trying to remedy the conditions. Am I a worker, or am I a drone?

The poor, then, shall be exalted in that they are to be helped to help themselves, and the rich shall be made low in that they become the servants of their less fortunate brothers until they shall have taught them how to care for and support themselves.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Get Great Joy From Home-Coming

TOLEDO, OHIO, October 13.—Our home-coming, held recently, is now history. Some time before the day set we had written the First Presidency requesting the services of Brother Gleazer as the principal speaker, informing them that Brother Halb, of the Seventy, had promised to be with us also. As the time for the celebration drew near with no confirmation from the President, our branch president became uneasy and wrote to Kirtland in an effort to secure Bishop Charles Fry, Brother Ebeling, Brother Patterson, or Brother Martin. A few days before the set time word came from Kirtland that we could not get any of these men. We didn’t know what to do, for we had announced good speakers and special music for the occasion.

Saturday afternoon found Brother Delbert Hardy and me in my old Buick on about a one hundred and twenty-five mile drive to secure speakers, with the result that we received a promise from our district president to be with us; but there were no other prospects, as Brother Halb had some baptisms to look after. We felt we had done our best, sending out cards and visiting in the interest of the affair, so left the matter in the Lord’s hands.

The priesthood meeting was very poorly attended, but as time for prayer service drew near people began to come, and by the time prayer meeting was over we had a full house. We had as good a meeting as Toledo has enjoyed for a long time. The prayers were earnest and short, followed by a series of testimonies and songs in which God surely poured out his Spirit abundantly.

We had many of the Saints present with us, as they closed their doors in our interest. Many of these Saints are former Toledans, and surely it was a home-coming for many. There were also quite a number of visitors from Sylvania, besides the faces of many of our own members who had not attended for some time. Truly our joy was great, but it could have been greater had the attendance been larger.

Brethren Lewis and Elwood of Columbus were also with us and spoke highly of the spirit present. As our district president missed his car from Fostoria, Brother Lewis spoke as emergency man at eleven o’clock and he did not disappoint us.

All visitors were taken home to dinner by the Toledo Saints, after which a round table discussion on Graceland College was held. This meeting was greatly enjoyed.

Owing to the distance, many of our visitors went home after the round table meeting.

Half past seven in the evening found District President Franklin Slye ready to give the evening sermon.

All went to their homes feeling that the time had been well occupied, glad for the association of those made near and dear to us because of gospel ties and for the blessings of the day.

The music in the morning was rendered by Sylvania
Saints, in the afternoon by Saints from Bradner and in the evening by Toledo and Bradner people. We had begun to feel that Toledo could not make a success of anything, but this occasion shows that we can still do things when we try hard enough, the Lord being our helper.

We wish the Graceland endowed drive a great success and hope that we may go over the top.

Detroit District Conference

The Detroit district conference convened at First Church, Detroit, Michigan, Saturday and Sunday, October 10, 11. The first service was a business session, opening at 10 a. m. with the district presidency in the chair. After the usual preliminaries, the conference settled down to business and was able to finish according to schedule. Outside of a parliamentary tangle or two, the conference went quite smoothly, and no serious trouble was had along any line.

Election of officers resulted practically in a sustaining of those occupying previously, with the possible exception of sec­ondary. The incumbent stating that he did not expect to be in the district; consequently a change was effected, resulting in the election of J. Stanley Parrish. Brother Parrish comes to us well qualified to fill the position, having served us in that capacity for several years until recently.

At 7.15 p. m. the Department of Women, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Charles H. Robertson of Flint entertained the conference; following which the Department of Recreation and Expression entertained conference visitors in the church basement with games for the active ones who desired to participate. Elder Matthew Liston, pastor of Port Huron Branch, had charge of this part of the entertainment and kept all busy in his characteristic manner. After the "play" hour the hospitality was satisfied—yes, we believe that's the word, because several of the hearty ones were seen re­turning for a second and sometimes a third helping of the ice cream and cake. It was a pleasant "social hour" indeed.

Sunday morning prayer service convened at 8.30 o'clock, with J. R. Grice, A. H. DuRose, and M. W. Liston in charge. This was one of the most remarkable prayer serv­ices it has been our privilege to attend for some time. We have witnessed greater demonstrations of the Spirit's out­pourings, but never have we seen a greater willingness to re­spond to leadership than we witnessed here. In 45 minutes there were 3 prayers, 59 testimonies, 7 parts of songs, and one gift of prophecy. Hard to beat, isn't it? This response to leadership, and its results, is, in the opinion of the writer, one gift of prophecy. Hard to beat, isn't it? This response to leadership is, in the opinion of the writer, one of the most remarkable prayer serv­ices it has been our privilege to attend for some time.

We had begun to feel that Toledo could not make a success of anything, but this occasion shows that we can still do things when we try hard enough, the Lord being our helper.

At 2.30 p. m., lecture and round table. Lecture on giftOWER­ships by J. C. Mottashed and round table in charge of Elder R. H. Coats, Bishop's agent of the district. A number of questions were asked and answered at this service, which will, no doubt, clear up some of the questions which perplex many of the Saints.

At 7.30 p. m. the sermon was by J. R. Grice, subject; "Our social program."

After thanking the people of Detroit for their hospitality, the conference adjourned subject to call, as per previous motion.

We are confident that many went away from the Sunday services with a greater determination to prove faithful to the trust imposed.

If we have any criticisms to offer on the conference they would be that we should not forget our opening service of prayer preceding the first business session, and many of us would do well to be more serious in matters of business, as we are conducting the same for the Lord and not for man, except that as we do it in the fear of God it is bound to benefit men. However, we are confident that we are mov­ing in forward. The work has a forward look, and we have every reason to keep on toward the "prize."

PRESS COMMITTEE.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA

During the winter months the Regio plans on presenting the North American Continent to its members on the screen. There are about six hundred slides in the series. Fifty will be shown at each sitting. We were very fortunate in getting these slides for the amount they are paying to the school system. When we learn how to run a "reel" machine we shall be given permission to rent it for a very small figure.

The rally day exercises were attended by about one hun­dred and fifty. The children did very well, considering the very few times they attended the rehearsals. Tags, consist­ing of "corners" and "key" cardboard were given to all present. The collections on rally day were over eighteen dollars. The day's activities closed with a wonderful ser­mon by the pastor on the endowment fund. We all have a clearer conception of our duties towards the goal set.

Pie, pie, and more pie—and, oh, how good! Whether the Temple Builders made them or had their mothers make them is of little concern. The pie social after the play Friday netted the young ladies ten dollars. We understand it has been turned over to the endowment fund. May God bless the donors and the purpose for which it was given.

Going, going, gone! The auctioneer, Ned Calhoun, "sold" twenty-nine men Monday evening the idea that it is better to have a real oyster stew than to attend prize fights. Each were given a "bachelor-button" flower to wear home. A number of songs were sung, business attended to, and the Men's Booster Club is a reality. More at the next writing.

A number of the Saints, who are interested in seeing Graceland College listed in later years as an institution of higher learning, met at the church to discuss ways of con­ducting a more spirited campaign for our quota, namely, $1,548. Subscriptions have been coming in from a number of sources. The "Rosebuds" class of the Sunday school has given their bit and have a receipt for two and one-half dollars.

The following telegram was received by Pastor W. W. Baker Saturday evening: "Number twenty-eight Pilot just received. Your interest in Graceland College Endowment Fund appreciated as indicated by your giving, and not for man, except that a little bit of the work and service. May God bless the work and the people for whom it was given."
The comedy, "How the story grew," presented by the Riverside Department of Women Friday evening was a big success. It was given in a half hour and was so interesting the time went by all too quickly. Over twenty dollars were realized from the sale of the five-and fifteen-cent tickets. The story was woven around a new family that had moved into the neighborhood, and, instead of a murderous, colored family, the new people were the minister and his family. Each actress played her particular part well. The players were: Mrs. George Neikirk, Mrs. Terrill, Mrs. Thelma Hinckley, Mrs. Eunice Welch, Mrs. Harbeck, Mrs. Susie Whitcher, Mrs. Alice Bower, and Mrs. Zitta Bower. When is the next?

A Busy Vacation

(Letter from Thomas Carr, missionary, recounting his activities during a visit home after a three-year mission in the Isle of Pines.)

TO THE QUORUM OF TWELVE,
Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brethren: I am glad to be able to report two things at this time: a good district conference where we were blessed in our meeting together, and the fact that we expect to be leaving for the South this week—the last depending on a letter from the bishop.

The time we have spent at home has passed very quickly, as we have been busy working during the entire time. Our plans had been to make a visit to all the branches of the district and there meet with all our friends and, if we could, help them by meetings. We have spent all our time right at home working with our own branch and families. We have been blessed to a great extent by the Spirit in our labors among these people, so have stayed with them. Our two visits to other places were a visit into Pennsylvania for two days to see Sister Carr's grandparents and a two-day visit among our friends, the Saints in Philadelphia. The month of September was spent in the regular branch meetings, with the addition of the class in stewardships that met twice a week. The last week of the month was filled in by a series of meetings for the church members. Elder G. W. Robley was with us and gave us some very wonderful sermons. September was the month in which we prepared for the district conference that convened in Elk Mills October 3 and 4. This meant quite a lot of work to so small a village. Every man, woman, and child of the church was called upon by the bishop. Some of the English Saints were seen in Elk Mills during the conference. The ones baptized were young men and women as well as children from Harford County, Maryland, and two of them from Elk Mills and Elkton, and, though I had not converted them, the privilege of baptism was given to me.

The Mobile conference convenes at Van Cleave, Mississippi, the last of this month, and we expect to be present at that conference to meet with the Saints of the Mobile District.

I wish you success in your labors and hope the time will soon be here when we can, as a whole church, enter into our work with such a spirit that the blessings of heaven may be upon us as a church, to the extent that we can go forth with greater power than ever before to the converting of the world.

English Saints Lose President of Leeds Branch

We feel sad to record that our dear and ever-loving president, Elder Herbert Harper of Thorpe near Wakefield, England, passed peacefully away August 27, 1925. He was born April 7, 1858; baptized January 14, 1888; ordained a priest April 28, 1895; elder, January 30, 1916. He was elected president of the Leeds Branch September 19, 1915, and occupied in that office continuously and faithfully until his death.

Brother Harper leaves a widow and a grown family. As a husband and father he was beloved, and they feel deeply bereaved. His life was a beautiful example of a true Saint, a life spent in trying to serve his Master to the best of his ability. The traits of his wonderful character were love, kindness, humbleness, and a sympathy for all. So outstanding were these features that all with whom he came in contact respected him as one whom they could trust, and honored him for the true hero he was. His whole purpose was to uplift his fellow men.

In the branch Brother Harper was always present at the meetings, although his home was about seven miles away. So regular was his attendance that the few times he was absent some concern was felt for him. It seems strange we shall not see him again in this life in his usual place, his smiling face no longer on the stand presiding over his flock.

The testimonies he gave in the fellowship meetings were always full of praise to our heavenly Father for his goodness and mercy, and the confident way he expressed that he knew his Redeemer lives had the true Latter Day Saint ring of sincerity which was an inspiration to all who heard him. We shall miss him, and we feel deeply for the family.

Brother Harper was a true pioneer in the Church. When the grandchildren were with him they were always delighted, and he enjoyed them too. When he had occasion to perform the ordinance of blessing children, it was truly a blessing that he bestowed upon them. His appeal to God to guard and protect them from all harm and danger and the evils of this life came from the very depths of his heart. Thus he lived, and his memory will always remain to be a source of inspiration. He brings to mind the parable of Jesus when he said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

About four years ago Brother Harper retired from active work as a railway engineer, having served with a spotless sheet some forty-seven years. We can imagine that many are the sermons he has preached for the glorious gospel to his firemen and work mates during that long period, and we feel it is not possible to record the amount of good seed that has been sown. What will the harvest be?

The cortege left our brother's home after a service conducted inside by his brother officer, Elder Thomas Taylor, for the interment in Lofthouse Cemetery, a beautiful little quiet spot. The procession was headed by about one hundred railway men, representing the various departments of the Ardsley Engine Sheds. Then followed the hearse, after which were five or six coaches bearing the relatives, followed by a number of Saints from the Leeds and Bradford Branches. He was laid to rest beside his son Fred, who died in London in 1913.

several years ago in very tragic circumstances. He is never to be forgotten for the good he did.

A memorial service was held in the Leeds Branch meeting room, and Elder Thomas Taylor preached to a full church Sunday, September 6, when the gospel that Brother Harper so firmly embraced was ably put forward.

Newton, Iowa

This branch was organized as the Newton group last fall. We now have a total enrollment of twenty-seven, and for the last three months we have had an average attendance of ninety-eight per cent of the total enrollment—a good mark for some of the bigger congregations to try for.

We are meeting at private homes now but expect to have a public meeting place before long.

We have had loyal support from Des Moines Branch and attribute a great deal of our success to our members wanting to hear the gospel. Also our Sunday-school teacher, Brother D. M. Hull, deserves credit for the work he has done.

Remember us in your prayers. Visiting Saints look us up when in Newton.

Building New Church, But Will Help Graceland

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, October 14.—This branch was favored recently by a visit from Elder D. S. Palmer, missionary supervisor, who was here in the interest of Graceland College. He preached both morning and evening. His morning theme was stewardships, which was indited by the Holy Spirit and was well received by the audience; and in the evening he spoke on the gathering and the importance of preparation on the part of the Saints, to be ready for the time when they will have to flee to Zion for safety.

Monday evening the Saints met for a rally meeting, with District President E. R. Miller in charge, assisted by Brother Palmer and Pastor T. J. Jett, Jr. This meeting was given for the purpose of organizing to put across the campaign for the Graceland endowment fund. A committee of three had previously been appointed to solicit funds from the San Antonio Branch, and as soon as the literature comes they expect to make a push on the campaign.

The Saints here are trying to build a new church. They sadly need the church, but they are willing to help Graceland, too.

The Sunday school has just sent a check to the Bishop for fifty dollars on this year's subscription, making sixty-two, including men, women, and children, we feel confident that we are doing our part. The financial results of their labors at $163.49 for the former building and $163.25 for the latter. However, the youngsters are not in the least discouraged but are still full of pep. Both organizations have a loyal group of boosters.

Brother and Sister Frandzen of Anderson worshiped with us last Sunday. Brethren Hawn and Charles H. Fish are busy with plans for assisting in the Graceland endowment drive, which we hope will be successful.

Many Move to Zion—Not Discouraged

MAGNOLIA, IOWA, October 16.—So many of our number have moved to Zion in recent years that our branch here is indeed small. However, we are striving to keep the good work alive and to strengthen one another. It seems that most churches have a large number of vacant seats these days, while the pleasure-mad crowd goes rushing by. Church is too slow for them.

I believe many people go to church with the wrong motive. Instead of hungering for righteousness and seeking after truth that they may be filled, they go to church expecting to be entertained, wanting the preacher to stage a one-character, one-act drama. I dislike hearing a sermon criticized, as I have never heard one that did not contain some truth, or some thought worthy of meditation.

I like the HERALD and receive strength by reading its pages. I enjoyed "Little Journeys with the editor in chief." What a busy man our leader is! I admire his courage in quietlyshouldering his great responsibility and going about his Father's business, disregarding criticism. I believe there are brighter days ahead for him.

Last night I awakened, and while lying there thought how wonderful it would be if when Jesus comes I, like Mary of old, might be permitted to sit at his feet and learn. Then the thought came, there are so many more worthy than I. I think of all the righteous dead that shall arise at his coming, and how can I expect such close association with Him? If I may just be one on the outer edge of that vast throng, I shall crown him Lord of all and be satisfied.

We believe the purpose of the millennial reign is to prepare a people for the presence of God. It will take a thousand years under the reign of Jesus to bring us to that condition.

I believe we must work in the hereafter and that each one will be appointed to some work, and I thought while lying there in bed that if I do that work well I will be allowed to do some more advanced work. If I am diligent and faithful and do that work in a way that is pleasing to Him, I will be given something bigger and better to do. Thus, step by step, I shall advance, until my work shall have become so important that I may be called into the presence of the King himself to consult him in regard to that work. Perhaps many have a different idea of the millennial reign, but I fell asleep with my soul thrilled with the thought that sometime, somewhere, I may sit at His feet.

FLORENCE ADAMS.

San Jose, California

On the evening of September 11, at the hospitable home of Brother and Sister Christopher, the Department of Women gave an entertainment in the way of a box social, in honor of the fathers of the San Jose Branch. An enjoyable time was had in conversation and playing games, some of which were a modern version of the 'amusing' the fathers ranged in age from twenty-six to eighty years, none of whom had forgotten the gladnessomeness of their youth. The eldest one present at this gathering was three years old—in his second childhood. He had with him an original puzzle that was not solved by any who tried it. The social closed by partaking of refreshments from the amply filled lunch boxes which were provided by the mothers.

Elder C. J. Cady was the speaker at eleven o'clock September 13, and Pastor B. R. Gilbert preached the sermon at the close of Religio in the evening. The adult class of the Religio put on the program.

The Department of Women, according to Mrs. Bartington, "never quits ceasing, but is always on the move." This time these sisters have installed a new heating stove in the church at a cost of about $90. There is no telling what they will do next. At the regular meeting they gave a shower for one of the young sisters who is soon to be married. The sister attempted to respond with a speech of gratitude and appreciation, but her heart was too full for utterance, and her tears of joy had to express her appreciation.

On September 20 Brother Robert Cowden, one of the branch priests, was the speaker at eleven o'clock. Brother Roy Harris, another of the priests, preached the sermon on the Religio in the evening. Brother Harris seems to be very much interested in the Boy Scout movement and the young people in general. He is the editor of the Palo Alto News. Sister Leah Harris, his youngest daughter, is one of our branch church workers. She graduated at the last term of the State Teachers' College and is now teaching at Sunny Vale only twelve miles from her home.

Sunday, September 27, Elder C. W. Hawkins was the speaker at eleven o'clock, his subject being stewardships and Zion building. He read two circular letters of instruction, one joint letter from the President and the Bishop in which they urge branch presidents not to forget the necessity of teaching members of their flock to give aid to the missionaries when they visit their branches; and one from the President of the church in regard to the study of stewardships during the month of October.

The sermonet in the evening was by Priest M. H. Fonda of Oakland, who is an employee of the P. G. and E. Company. He is visiting here on his vacation.

October 11 was an enjoyable day for the Saints. Elder W. H. Dawson, first vice president of the district, with his family and his brother, came over from Sacramento by automobile making the trip of one hundred miles in time for the Sunday school. At the eleven o'clock service Brother Dawson was the speaker, giving us a rousing sermon on stewardships which was a source of inspiration from start to finish. At the close of the sermon a high priest arose and verified by the Spirit that which the speaker had presented and admonished the Saints that the Lord had sent his servant to deliver the message to them. A further admonition was given, "Those that have ears to hear, let them hear!" and this sentence was repeated and emphasized. May we all pay heed to the message that was given. Brother H. V. Bates, one of the local priests, gave the sermonet at the close of Religio.

The branch has its committee appointed, and it is organizing for the Graceland endowment drive. The raising of this fund is not a question of Can we? but, Will we? Let each one pledge himself that he will, and then be sure to make his pledge good.

Progress at Tulsa

TULSA, OKLAHOMA—I have been a member of the Tulsa Branch since its organization and am familiar with many of its struggles. Now since my return after an absence of about two years, I want to tell of the improved condition I find among the Saints.

The reunion held near Skiatook this year was very much of a success in spiritual uplift. The presence of the Master's Spirit was felt by the Saints gathered there. I did not have the privilege of attending myself, as it was before my return, but I was told of their experiences by some who were there.

The midweek prayer meeting is increasing in attendance and is growing more spiritual. The eye seems to shine brighter, the voice more vibrant, the hand clasp brings a thrill, and one feels he is in an atmosphere of love, peace, and charity. What a privilege to be a Saint in these latter days! The members express their love for the new pastor, Brother James A. Thomas, and say he has done much for the spiritual growth and unity of labor in this branch. Brother Thomas and his family are away now, having lost a darling baby. They are missed by the entire membership in their bereavement. The Saints pray daily for the recovery of Sister Thomas and we hope their return will be soon, for we miss them.

We also miss other faces that were once familiar: Our Sister Carrie Brand, whom we all loved; Brother and Sister Brown, faithful in attendance; Brother Ben Lancaster, whose sudden and tragic death brought a shock to all. We knew him as a small lad, and remember him as an active worker in the Religio at Joplin, Missouri, when a promising young man. Later he was identified with the Tulsa Branch. His home was always open to the missionary. He was a tithe payer, always ready to help in donations of money or work in the church, always cheerful. He was a devoted husband, an indulgent father, a loyal son to his aged parents. He loved his mother with a sweet devotion peculiar to see, and the welfare of his parents was his constant care. He met the disappointments of life with an optimistic smile and was widely known through the business circles of worth-while men. We miss him all, but there are others we are pleased to see ready to step in and fill the vacancies.

This branch is very much interested in the stewardship move, and all seem anxious to study and become more familiar with the old idea of living, but which is new as to practice.

We enjoy reading the Herald and appreciated "Little journeys with the editor in chief"—not for myself alone, but for the comradeship and the closeness it seems to bring the www.LatterDayTruth.org
President to the membership of the whole church. There is a personal humanness about it that can be sensed by anyone. We hope Brother Smith will keep on writing these letters, for it does good in more ways than one.

We hope and pray that ere long harmony and unity of purpose will rule this people, to the exclusion of all personal desire. May the Lord give great wisdom and courage to the President of the church. (B. E. Brown)

San Francisco, California

October 14.—Very recently our priesthood held one of their regular priesthood meetings on a Sunday morning, instead of the usual service, and gave the laity of the branch an idea of just how they were conducted. It was an inspiring sight to see this body of men on the stand, and gave the branch a feeling that the priesthood in charge of their spiritual welfare were living up to their calling.

Our Religio meeting has been changed from Sunday evening until Friday evening. This was done with the idea that the deep interest for which it could function to its fullest extent on this evening. The first evening of the change was on October 2, and the entire evening was given over to a program. The parable of the “ten virgins” was dramatized; the story of this parable is undoubtedly known to every Latter Day Saint and to almost everyone who has read the Bible, but to some it rendered as we were privileged on this evening is to plant it in our minds in a manner that the lesson will never be forgotten. Our young people who were in this cast were trained under the able direction of Sister L. B. Shippy, and we are all hoping she will favor us with more descriptive lessons like this.

Our Department of Recreation and Expression officials have a program outlined for the winter that will provide something of interest for everyone in the branch.

We have had a number of newcomers in the branch recently, which we welcome very heartily. Our preaching has been taken care of by our local priesthood, and some very instructive talks have been given us.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

October 9.—Since last report this branch has had several added to its number by baptism.

On account of the poor health of Brother W. S. Simmons, the Saints here have been deprived, of recent months, of the pleasant association and spiritual uplift of this brother. However, other willing helpers are here, and the work is prospering.

The Saints are getting rested after running a dining hall at the state fair, which closed October 3.

Brother and Sister F. E. Dillon returned in time to take charge of the fair work here, after a trip in the interest of the church which extended as far as Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Rally Day at Denver

I came to Denver Saturday to attend the annual rally day which was held yesterday. There were services all day, which were well attended by the branch members and by those from near-by towns. We had a very enjoyable day. The services consisted of a session of Sunday school, which was followed by a short program, this being followed by a sermon by Myron A. McConley. The majority of the Saints took their dinners with them, which were spread in the basement.

Brother A. Carmichael arrived while we were eating dinner. At half past two we held a prayer and testimony meeting. Brother Carmichael, Brother McConley, and I presided. There was a fine spirit present. Brother Carmichael was the speaker at the evening hour. He preached a wonderful sermon, which was well received.

DENVER, COLORADO, October 12. (B. E. Brown)

Welcome to Apostle Curtis

WARKTON, ONTARIO, October 19.—Last Thursday evening we had the privilege of listening to Apostle J. F. Curtis, who preached one of his characteristic sermons that made us forget our troubles and see the bright side of life as well as the unpleasant. Since Brother Curtis has been one who has helped tide us over the stormy days of old, we can extend to him a royal welcome to these parts at any time.

Sunday, October 18, saw a carload of Saints from these parts journeying toward Central Valley to attend their special Sunday or anniversary. To say the least, we enjoyed the day very much, mingling with those of like faith and appreciating the privilege of attending services in their fine church. We trust this will not be our last visit of this kind.

Far West Stake

The second annual priesthood conference of the Far West Stake will convene at Cameron, Missouri, on Friday night, November 20, and will continue over Saturday and Sunday. President J. F. Smith and Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael are expected to be present on this occasion. Every member of the priesthood is urgently requested to attend this conference.

President O. Salisbury was with the Bedison Saints on October 11, speaking forenoon, afternoon, and evening, driving home after the evening service.

On the 16th Elder Salisbury revisited his old home, Council Bluffs, Iowa, where the Saints were celebrating their annual home-coming. Although hampered to some extent by a severe cold, Brother Salisbury reports, he enjoyed preaching to the Saints at the morning and evening hours.

It must be encouraging to our good bishop, Brother Milo Burnett, to note the steady increase in the payment of tithes throughout the stake. In many places there are indications that the Saints are becoming more and more conscious in their labors. Many have already expressed a willingness to enter in and occupy upon the stewardship basis.

The speakers at the First Saint Joseph Church on Sunday, October 18, were Bishop Burnett in the forenoon and Elder H. O. Barto in the evening. Both these brethren gave quite an interesting and beneficial discourse on the subject of stewardships.

Under the supervision of Brethren Cecil Schmid and Gilbert Bowser, the department of Sunday school for the First Church is arranging a special home-coming service to be held October 1. An interesting and edifying program is being prepared, and it is hoped that a record attendance will be established.

The work in the local branch at Trenton, Missouri, is on the upward trend. Committees for special visiting have been arranged under the supervision of Sisters Chappell and Lentell. As a result of the efforts of these committees, quite an increase was noted in the attendance at Sunday school on October 18. May this good work continue to yield such encouraging results.

Elder J. D. Proftit and wife, of Trenton, Missouri, have arranged to hold meetings at Galt, Missouri, twice a month. This is a new opening of much promise.

Elder John Lentell, who visited the Empickard Saints in the afternoon of October 18. He reports that a splendid interest was manifested in the study of stewardships.

On October 11 Darrell Fiddick and wife were forenoon visitors to Far West. Brother Fiddick addressed the local congregation before he left. Elder John. Constance of Cameron occupied the forenoon and the afternoon.

Overseer John L. Bear was the speaker at the Second Saint Joseph Church on Sunday morning, October 18. In his talk he stressed the necessity of the Saints adhering to the financial law as set out in the Doctrine and Covenants. Brother Bear also spoke at the Fourth Church in the evening.
In a letter to the stake president, Brother Carl Ruoff advises that he has preached his third sermon on stewardships. He says, “I have had more liberty on this subject than any other I have yet undertaken.”

Reports are coming in from many of our stake pastors, testifying to the gentle influence of the Spirit of God that has been assisting them in their labors. Such testimonies as these give us the assurance that the Lord will eventually lead his people through triumphant battles.

Pleasantview Branch

Troy, Nebraska, October 20.—The Sunday school work is on the move, though at times only a few attend. The cold weather and extra fall work may keep some away. We hope to see it grow until every Saint in the country will be attending.

Branch work is moving about as usual, but we hope something will turn up soon to increase the interest.

We miss Elder C. W. Prettyman, as he helped to get the work started here. He preached his last public sermon here last June. We sympathize with Sister Prettyman and her family in their hour of need.

Cadillac, Michigan

October 20.—The work here is tending upward under the leadership of Branch President Peter Price, who lives a life of unselfish devotion to his Master and through his faithful service here has inspired others to be more faithful. He is also at the head of a class formed to study stewardships, in which we have become interested through instructive sermons we have heard from our district missionary, Walter Wirebaugh, on his visits here.

We are proud of our young people. They have a fine choir and are also active in Relief Society and Sunday school work.

The Oriole Girls are purchasing a piano for the church. They gave a pie social the evening of October 16, which netted them a neat sum. They also gave a musical program which was enjoyed by all.

Deacon Decker is busy working on the finance problem. In all we feel we are coming to higher ground, and we look forward with one heart and mind to the redemption of Zion.

Enjoy “Herald”; Interested in Stewardships

Coldwater, Michigan, October 18.—This latter-day work, which was restored to earth by an angel in 1830, looks very good to me at the present time. We do not feel at all discouraged, except in the weakness of humanity. What frail creatures we are to devise so easily from the straight and narrow path marked out for us from the foundation of the world! Why listen to “lo here and lo there”? Is not the old, old path good enough?

I remember that, when I was a child, an old cow path led from the woods lot to my father’s barn. The dumb animals were able to keep in the narrow path. But we who are higher than the animal kingdom fall by the wayside. May God pity weak humanity and keep us faithful to the covenant we have made.

The Herald of September 30 was inspiring and gave us food for thought, as well as a greater desire to press forward. It is a great mistake for the Saints not to have the church papers in their homes. I wish all would awaken to a sense of this fact. If you are not a subscriber, you are surely missing many wonderful experiences as related by the members. You would thereby gain spiritual strength whereby you might know that this work is true. This one number of the Herald was worth all I have paid for my year’s subscription.

Coldwater Branch is very much interested in stewardships. We have the lesson for Religio study, and Brother Scott is giving us some fine sermons every Sunday morning.
and intelligent supporters of the effort I made to enlighten the Saints on this necessary step toward Zion's redemption.

The attendance at these six weeks' meetings was all that could be desired, seeing that no effort was made to extend the invitation beyond the respective groups. I reached over: five hundred people with one discourse and fully four hundred with the entire series. Interest was superior to anything I have ever before experienced, and if I may be allowed to be the judge in the matter of my own feelings, I never experienced more light, satisfaction of feeling, and what we commonly call joy of the Spirit, than when presenting these initial talks on Christian stewardship.

I was called to undertake a special work, and I went into it without reservation, excepting that I endeavored to let my intelligence control my heart impulses. There was no thought that social injustice would be dissolved in a moment; but the idealism of our program was held high, and its bright flag radiated the glory of God. The offer was made to all present that they might enter into copartnership with God, now for the redemption of Zion. I wish to leave to those friendly listeners, who caught a glimpse of the glory of the program, to witness what was said and what, in their estimation, was the good accomplished, the glory and honor belonging to God always and forever.

Zion will be redeemed—there is no other hope for the world!

RALPH W. FARRELL.

Chetek, Wisconsin

October 19.—The Northern Wisconsin district conference convened with the Porcupine Saints October 17 and 18, with God's Spirit present. Many of the Saints were present from all parts of the district.

Conference opened with District President S. E. Livingston in the chair, associated with W. A. McDowell and D. T. Williams. Officers were elected for the coming year as follows: L. O. Wildermuth, district president; S. E. Livingston, vice president; Mary Mair, secretary; Laura Clark, treasurer; F. A. Aitwood, president as the Speakers, and Marshall Sheldon, president of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister Frank Loomis, secretary of the Sunday school; George E. Clark, publicity agent; Mary Mair, leader of the Department of Women; Laura Clark, superintendent of the Health Department.

The Saints left for their homes with one view in mind—to grow as well as go in this great work, encouraged by the wonderful talks and sermons of Brothers W. A. McDowell, D. T. Williams, L. O. Wildermuth, and F. A. Aitwood.

All have a better understanding of the stewardship plan, and many spoke of entering actively into the plan with zeal.

So God's work is starting a new year with a better interest than has been noticed for some time.

Following the conference a two-day meeting will convene at Chetek October 23 and 24. At a quarter of eleven the church will be dedicated, the sermon to be by W. A. McDowell. Apostle D. T. Williams will assist in the service.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

October 19.—The Colorado Springs Branch is still up and doing, especially the Department of Women. The program which these women have put over between now and the first of the year indicates that they are entitled to praise and commendation.

Mrs. R. S. Salyards, jr., entertained at a linen shower in honor of Miss Doris Sade. The guest of honor received many pretty gifts. Doris is the youngest daughter of Mrs. O. E. Salyards. Her marriage to Mr. John Wylie of West Palm Beach, Florida, took place in Saint Petersburg, Florida. After a short honeymoon in Tampa the young couple will make their home in West Palm Beach. Sister Doris is one of our promising young women, and we regret to lose her. However, all extend their heartiest congratulations to the young couple.

Brother C. H. Rich is in Colorado Springs, having been called home on account of the illness of his youngest son, Robert. He is now greatly improved. Brother Rich was the speaker Sunday, giving two sermons that were very much enjoyed.

Brother R. S. Salyards, jr., is home to stay, for which we are all thankful.

Brother Bruce E. Brown is out in the district visiting the other branches in the interests of the work.

Our meetings of late have been of a very spiritual nature, and all are enduring a wonderful degree of the Spirit, thereby being fed and encouraged in the work. The spirit of unity is prevalent among the Saints, and all are working together for the good of the whole.

May God's blessings attend his church and the great program be put across. We wish the stewardship plan success, with the endowment fund to buck it and Graceland College. Thus will we be given a more definite goal to look forward to.

Bishop Becker Visits Eastern Iowa

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

The Eastern Iowa conference, October 17 and 18, closed yesterday. It was good and spiritual. Everybody satisfied. Those from a distance went home encouraged.

Bishop Becker attended and spoke at 11 a.m., at which time the church was dedicated. Brother Becker did fine. He also spoke several times on stewardships. The Saints were all glad he came.

The district is on the improve all the time. Have many more active members of the priesthood than there were two years ago. The Saints all stand for what the church stands for. Many earnest prayers were offered for the church and its faithful leaders during the three splendid prayer meetings of the conference.

No one man is entitled to the credit of the uplift in the district, but it belongs to the brethren of the different groups, for they have worked faithfully and with hope.

The Saints are pleased with the HERALD. So am I. It never was better. I feel the Spirit of God when reading it. I am more hopeful than ever of Zion.

E. A. DAVIS.

Fall River, Massachusetts

Church services were commenced September 15, after a vacation of two months. So many go to Onset in summer it was considered wise to close the church. Only the mid-week prayer service was held, with a small attendance.

Elder James W. Hep, pastor, Elder John E. Roberson, and Deacon Alma Coombs have been the speakers during the past month. September 11 the pastor visited in Attleboro.

Others had planned to go to Onset for the Columbus Day holiday, but the weather was too cold. The first snow fell September 10.

Brother John Jackson, deacon at Providence, was a recent visitor in Fall River, and we were privileged to listen to a beautiful solo by him, "Open the gates of the temple." Brother Everett and Sister Beatrice York and baby Ruth of Boston were also visitors. Beatrice played the piano at Sunday school and also taught a class. When our former members come back to visit us, there is always something for them to do. Sister Ruth Shoehy Baker and son of Boston have been recent visitors also.

Conference will be held in Attleboro Saturday and Sunday, October 24 and 25. It is expected that three men from Fall River will be ordained—Alma Coombs to the office of priest and Edward H. Green and Ralph Baldwin to the office of deacon.

The Department of Women is holding regular services again and will have a supper October 17.

Brother Joseph Cliff and wife have moved to New Bedford. He is assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, and she is a teacher, so they are missed. However, they come when possible. Sister Cliff was baptized at Onset this summer.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Sister Margaret Slater has moved to New London, Connecticut. Her two children have been very ill with whooping cough.

Sister Barbara Brindley, sr., has returned from a several months' trip abroad.

Brother John Whipple, of Groton, Connecticut, was a recent visitor here.

A member from each society has been appointed to collect for the Graceland endowment.

Independence

Stone Church

October 25 being the last Sunday in the month, the early morning social services were combined. Both old and young met in the upper auditorium, and a fair representation of each group was present. The theme of the meeting in general seemed to be the confidence felt in the present administration and program of the church.

Sunday school was not quite up to the average, possibly due to the cold snap that visited this city the night before. The collection was commendable when the attendance is considered.

The young people's church at the eleven o'clock hour had an unusually good attendance and interest. Brother Scott Cochran gave the address of the morning, on the subject, "Why both with church anyway?" He showed the part that religion must play in citizenship, in school life, in the home, and in business relationships. He supported his position by statements from our leading statesmen and thinkers.

Music was furnished in the form of a vocal solo and a violin and piano duet.

The Y. K. T. Class is still making improvements in the building east of the dining hall which they occupy during the Sunday school hour. They have an average attendance of seventy-five young people.

President Elbert A. Smith continued his series of sermons on practical and personal gospel themes. His subject was, "Your heart," the theme of the week before being, "Your tongue." The excellent audience of the preceding week was noticeably increased, by the addition of at least seventy-five.

The speaker said that the heart is the symbol of the emotions—it registers the emotions. Fear stops the heart beats for an instant; love quickens them. Our emotions are a very important part of our life. We are moved by our feelings much more than we realize or admit. Hence Solomon was right when he said, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." Joseph kept his heart when Potiphar's wife lured him. He repulsed her. The story she told sent him to prison. Modern secular philosophy would say he was a fool. But the Bible says God went to prison with him. Joseph ruled his own heart. Soon he was ruler of the prison, and so presently came forth to rule Egypt. He first learned to keep his own heart.

But King David, intrigued by Bathsheba's charms, forgot kingly honor and saintly duty. Uriah was his friend; but David forgot that, too, and presently was enmeshed in a very unkingly intrigue. One grave sin is the corner stone of an edifice of sin. The only way out seemed to David to be the murder of Uriah, and this he accomplished and took Bathsheba to be his wife. When his heart rose up in love, he should have said, "I will rule him," "I will rule him," "I will rule him," "I will rule him," "I will rule him," "I will rule him." But he failed to keep his heart with diligence, and so it ruled and ruined him.

The gospel is not merely repressive. The primitive desires and impulses of human nature will find expression. They must be controlled and guided in that expression. First, the heart must be regenerated, "Ye must be born again." Then its forces must be directed.

Zion is to be the pure in heart. We will have factories and farms and storehouses. These are the material outer shell, or machinery, necessary and proper in the functioning of Zion; but Zion must grow from the heart out, like a tree with a sound, clean heart. So the man who begins with the redemption and continues with the proper control and direction of his own heart is getting at the "heart" of the matter. He is beginning Zion building at the right place.

The speaker announced that he would continue his series the second Sunday in November under the theme, "Your hands." The first Sunday will be given over to the communication service.

A beautiful ordination meeting was held in the Stone Church at half past two. President E. A. Smith presided. Nine young men were ordained to the priesthood. Gomer T. Griffiths delivered the charge. C. Ed. Miller offered the prayer of consecration. The various assistant pastors in Zion occupied seats on the platform. After the ordinations had taken place, President Smith asked Elders William Fligg and Gomer T. Griffiths to occupy the balance of the time. They spoke encouragingly of experiences at a district conference and reunions.

Doctor Joseph Luff was the speaker Sunday evening. With his usual eloquence he pleaded for the Saints to climb the heights. The last verse of the "Admonition" came to mind as he was speaking:

"Get ye up, then, to your mountain! Zion of this closing day! For the glory of my coming Waits to break upon your way! Forth from thence your testimony Shall to trembling nations go, And the world confess that with you God has residence below."

For texts Brother Luff quoted, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it." "I will build my church." "Learn of me." "Every man perfect in Christ Jesus." "My ways are not your ways. As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways." He said a wise man always had something in view. Christ said, "I will build." He called men and women to be his coworkers. His objective, to develop perfect men and women. He alone can do that, but man's cooperation is necessary. He was the light of the world. After he left the earth his disciples in turn were to be the light of the world. They were to look like him and be like him, not physically, but they were to have the Christ characteristics. Christ is the foundation of the church. The superstructure must harmonize with the perfect foundation. The church must eventually be without spot or blemish. Human knowledge will not be sufficient to do this divine work. Be careful how you build. There is a lot of wood, hay, and stubble in the world. It is a glorious thing to be in partnership with God in building, but only divine material will stand the divine test.

Wednesday evening Evangelist Gomer T. Griffiths will meet with the young people in the Stone Church. Roy V. Hopkins will meet with Group 4, and C. Ed. Miller will meet with the young people of Walnut Park.

President Floyd McDowell attended the young people's convention at Chicago, Illinois, and the Detroit, Michigan, convention at Grand Rapids. This week he will attend the Mobile district conference. President F. M. Smith attended the young people's conventions at Spokane, Washington, and Seattle, Washington. This week he will be at Portland, Oregon.

Second Church

The choir gave an entertainment at the church on Thursday evening which was of such a fine variety and quality as to more than match the audience than was present. Those who were present were very appreciative, and more than one was heard to remark that surely the city of Zion can furnish elevating and refining entertainment. A silver collection was taken, and $15.50 was contributed for the purpose of applying on our church debt.

Sunday morning Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
and he gave much fatherly advice in his sermon. Elder William I. Fligg was the speaker in the evening and was heard in one of his characteristic sermons. Several of Brother Fligg's sermons are being published in Zion's Ensign during the next few months.

Elder Charles Edmunds has retired from his work as president in Group 31. A new presiding elder will be appointed soon. Brother Edmunds was respected and loved in his group, and they were loath to part with him.

Walnut Park

"Sunday School Day," the 25th, at Walnut Park began at eight o'clock with a prayer meeting, fully occupied for an hour and a quarter, with fifty-eight in attendance.

Sunday school followed, with two hundred ninety-four present, including thirty-two visitors. A talk by Brother Gard at the close gave the history of the school in this place from the time he first attended—when he found a school numbering six besides his own family—to the present time.

At eleven the little folks marched upstairs and occupied a short period preceding a sermon by Zion's pastor, C. Ed. Miller, a speaker who can, and did, adapt his sermon to both children and grown-ups.

At seven the departments of the school entertained an audience of three hundred and seventy-five for an hour, and Brother C. B. Woodstock followed with a sermon on the thought of Sunday school workers having a definite goal towards which to direct their efforts, checking up at regular times to learn of their actual accomplishments. Superintendent R. Barnhardt was in charge for the day and believes the support given him throughout by the entire school gives promise of some good, cooperative work in the future.

The speaker in Group 41 Sunday was Elder Delbert A. Whiting.

The women of Walnut Park extend their thanks to all who helped to make their chicken dinner and bazaar at the Stone Church dining hall a success. They netted about $250.

Liberty Street

Doctor G. Leonard Harrington preached Sunday morning, using for his text, "Am I my children's keeper?" The sermon was very fine and held the close attention of the audience from start to finish. In the evening Elder Alvin Knisley was the speaker.

A millinery class has been organized to meet at the Campus Church every Friday afternoon under the direction of Sister Walter Bullard. So far only Liberty Street women are in the class, but all who are interested are invited to join.

The night of October 22, Group 30 held a big get-together meeting at the home of Brother W. H. Stevenson, celebrating the sixth anniversary of the group. Brother Stevenson gave the history of the work of the group since its organization, and Sister Stevenson gave an account of all the work done by the Department of Women in the group. Following this, an interesting program was given by various members of the group. Refreshments of pumpkin pie, new cider, and ginger bread were served to the sixty-seven present. The rest of the evening was spent in singing from the Saints' Hymnal under the leadership of Sister Fred Koehler.

Sister Koehler is conducting a class for the Department of Women in Doctrine and Covenants.

East Independence

There were thirty present at the young people's meeting Sunday morning. The youngest member to take part in the services was eleven years old, and the oldest seventy-five, we believe. One of the young men testified of how the Lord had been directing him and had opened up the way for him to attend a class in stewardship at the Institute. God, who is the same now as in former days, will direct his people if they get themselves in the right attitude and exercise faith.

Brother J. W. Davis, who has been away visiting relatives and friends, has returned and will take charge of the work here again. Sunday morning he was the speaker, also in the evening. He had good liberty in presenting the needs of Graceland College. It was strengthening to hear some of the experiences that others have had in regard to the college. We hope every one who can will help in raising the endowment fund. Each one should have an earnest desire to help and have a part in this great work.

Englewood

At last real work has been begun on the new church. It has taken some time to do the excavating because of wet weather, but now the work of laying the stone work for the walls has begun. The Saints are hoping to have the building ready for occupancy by Christmas time, as their old building is so hard to heat and is so crowded that they feel meetings cannot be held there another winter.

Different classes and groups of workers are busy raising money for paint, nails, windows, doors, and steps of the church.

The women are to meet each Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock at the church for the study of mothercraft. The class is to be taught by Mrs. C. J. Hunt. The first lesson will be given October 28.

The Religio has changed its time of meeting from Friday night to Sunday night at seven o'clock. This service will be followed by preaching at eight o'clock. Attendance is increasing, and a great deal of interest is being shown in the study of stewardships.

The choir is beginning its winter work under the direction of Mrs. C. I. McConnell. It meets every Thursday night for practice. Special Christmas music is being planned, and the Sunday school also is planning a Christmas program.

Elder Alvin Knisley was the speaker Sunday morning, and Elder Lyman Fike in the evening.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Again the slogan for the young people's meetings to be held November 1 to 8 is, "Awake, put on thy strength." They have secured Elder Elbert A. Smith, of the First Presidency, as the speaker for the occasion, which insures the success of the effort. Extensive advertising has been done throughout the stake, so a good attendance is anticipated.

October is being observed as stewardship month in the stake, and reports show that the Saints are giving the subject more attention than ever, generally endorsing the decision of the joint council in regard to the stewardship plan, as outlined by the general officers of the church.

Fourth Church

The weekly Ivanhoe Pilot, their little paper, has a new departure in an added sheet setting forth an outline of the books of the Bible, and in explanation of the motive for the venture it has this to say: "Instead of devoting a large amount of space to critical matters dealing with the books of the Bible, it will be more serviceable to set forth their design and scope, and to discover in what manner and measure each book contributes to the plan and purpose of the Bible." A brief synopsis is then undertaken, which is quite scholarly.

Recent speakers have been Bishop F. B. Blair and his counselor, and Fred S. Anderson.

Malvern Church

Those who are interested in the week-day religious school will like to know that we now have an enrollment of three hundred and nine. We are quite proud of this number and of the teachers who are giving their loyal support. We could still use more help, however, for the classes are almost too big for the teacher to handle. Brother Floyd M. McDowell is giving us some invaluable help in securing textbooks of the proper kind and in getting material for handwork.

Sunday morning we were fortunate in having for our speaker President J. A. Tanner. Sunday evening the most of our little branch went to Central Church to hear Bishop Carmichael speak on stewardships. Every one of us profited by it.
Department of Women Hold Convention

COLUMBUS, OHIO, October 21.—Another event of the Southern Ohio District has passed into history, that of the convention of the Department of Women, held at the First Columbus Branch October 16, 17, and 18. We were very fortunate in securing Sister Blanche Edwards of Lamoni for our speaker.

The first meeting was held Friday night at half past seven. Brother James E. Bishop, district president, introduced Sister Edwards, he having known her in England while he was on a mission several years ago. Sister Edwards used as her subject, "Our goal," and her lecture was very helpful and enjoyable. Following this meeting a reception was held in the church basement. Sister Edwards was made to feel quite at home, as there were several of the Saints whose former homes were in England, and Brother Anderton, the pastor, was raised in the same city as Sister Edwards, Birmingham.

On Saturday three meetings were held, one at ten in the morning, one at half past two, and one at half past seven, with Sister Edwards as the speaker each time.

A general prayer service was held Sunday morning at eight o'clock, followed by Sunday school at half past nine. At eleven o'clock Sister Edwards again occupied, using as her theme, "The opportunity of the home." At half past two we had a problem meeting for women and a priesthood meeting for the men at the same hour. Apostle R. S. Budd occupied the pulpit at half past seven and was scheduled for a two-weeks series of meetings.

The convention was the first of its kind ever held in the district, and it was quite a success. Saints were present from all over the district.

Meals were served at the church by the local Department of Women, and several social functions were held in honor of Sisters Edwards. We were loath to part with her and truly felt we had been blessed in her coming among us.

This convention was made possible by the cooperation of the First and Second Columbus Branches, District President James E. Bishop, and Mrs. Gard Kirkendall, superintendent of the Department of Women.

Special music was arranged by the district chorister, Mrs. Hazel Gribben, and from start to finish it was a grand success.

We hope the convention caused the sisters to get a new vision of their work.

Modesto, California

October 20.—During the past six weeks the Saints at this place have been going along as usual. There is a constant increase in attendance at all meetings. The increase is small, but the church is a little more full every meeting.

Elder W. H. Dawson of Sacramento visited here recently, also Elder John Wilds. Both visits were enjoyed, and splendid advice was given. If the Saints will heed this advice the branch will prosper.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave its third quarterly banquet on September 26. There were nineteen guests, those having birthdays in the quarter. Sixty were served. A. E. Frazier was the master of ceremonies. An enjoyable time was had, and a good program was rendered. This department is under the direction of Sister Lottie B. Rose, who knows how to put things over. On October 30 this department will have a Halloween social, and a good time is expected.

The Sunday school is doing well under the leadership of Sister A. E. Frazier.

The Department of Women is busy getting ready for the winter bazaar.

The committee for the Graceland endowment drive is all ready to start activities on November 1, and we feel confident there will be no trouble in getting the required amount. We hope to go over the top.

Snow and Hail in Michigan

This morning I was awakened by the sound of what I thought was rain. On getting up a little later, I was astonished to find about an inch of snow on the ground. Then I was informed it was not rain I had heard, but was a heavy downfall of hail. No damage has been reported, only it will hold up the farmers in getting their fall work done, as many still have their beans in the fields, because of the heavy rains.

I came to the northern part of the district October 19. Located in the Bay Port vicinity, Bay Port is known for its fisheries. It is perhaps the largest fish port on Lake Huron. It lies just inside the entrance to Saginaw Bay, on what is known as "Wild Fowl Bay." It is the memorable scene of many of the early victories of Elder J. J. Cornish, he being among the first of the church missionaries to enter this neighborhood. The church is well located and well attended, and I am sure that sending its call clear and far to the surrounding country, brought many to hear us, as we discussed the vital issues of the church.

Last night (Wednesday) and to-night I will complete my swing of the northern part of the district, in the interest of Graceland endowment drive. The response thus far is very gratifying, and the outlook for its accomplishment is almost encouraged. I have the Southern Branch to visit next, but from the response from letters of the branch presidents, we are hoping to see it go over there in a big way. I believe the Eastern Michigan District can be depended upon, and will be well in front with an addition to its quota.

Work at Port Huron is progressing. The Mortonville mission is showing excellent progress. Hopes of a building there soon are very bright, and the interest shown by the outside is sure to develop good. Many have volunteered both money and labor for the erection of a church. Other organizations have started in this locality and have failed. But some years ago the work was opened up by our people, and its growth has been steady and sure, working its way into the hearts of the people and making for the better development of the community as a whole. The brothers and sisters are unity in a better location, bringing both into one meeting place, and thus strengthening their hold in that part of the city. This mission has been divided into two meeting places, and some time past we advised bringing them together. When this is accomplished it will give a better place for them to meet in, and increase their membership in a way that will develop a better working force in that locality.

The work of the young people of the district shows a very decided increase, and the prospects of Eastern District being well represented at the Second Annual State Convention at Grand Rapids bids well. Friday will see a caravan of cars passing from various parts of the district for Grand Rapids. They go, not for the fun of the trip, but for a clearer vision of the purpose of the church, and a better opportunity to learn their tasks, and to serve the church in carrying out its program, by building up the small branches, of which this district is made up.

CASEVILLE, MICHIGAN, October 22.
Eastern Iowa District Conference

OELWEIN, IOWA, October 22.—The Eastern Iowa district conference convened at Oelwein October 17 and 18. There was quite a good attendance, but it would have been better had not the value of Graceland, or a hall hired for a number of years, but about a year ago they purchased a church building and by earnest effort succeeded in getting it paid for a short time ago. Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service, during the conference, the dedicatory service was held, Brother Becker preaching the sermon. He presented many interesting and instructive thoughts.

At two o’clock in the afternoon the church was nearly full, a number of visiting Saints being in attendance. A very pleasant sacramental and social service was held. The conference voted to hold another conference at Oelwein in March, also one in June at Clinton. A committee was elected to arrange for a reunion again the coming year. The work seems to be moving forward in this district. A goodly number of young and middle-aged men in the district have fine prospects to become useful and earnest workers in the church. This we are glad to see, as there is much need of good local workers.

Many of the Saints were made sad to hear of the recent death of Brother C. C. Dykes who was president of the Muscatine Branch many years. He was also district president for a time, and one of the pioneer Saints in eastern Iowa.

The Clinton and Waterloo Branches are each planning to hold a rally day October 25. We are hoping for good attendance and a day of inspiration to all.

The work seems to be moving forward in Indiana. Brother Clarence H. Heide, who has been a very active and useful worker in the Fulton Branch since his boyhood, hopes to travel a little in the district during the winter and assist as one of the district presidency. The Saints will find in him a kindly man, earnest and devoted.

The Saints in eastern Iowa are interested in the forward movement of the church, and though many are not wealthy in earthly treasures and are among the toiling ones of earth, yet they are willing to try to do their small part in Zion’s redemption.

A number of the young Saints are attending the University of Iowa at Iowa City this year. Also some are attending the teacher training school at Cedar Falls, several having graduated from Graceland College.

A good reunion was held at Maquoketa in August.

LEONARD HOUGHTON.

Santa Ana, California

Santa Ana Saints were made glad on Sunday, October 4, when two of their little children entered the church by baptism. “Of such is the kingdom of heaven,” we are told; and yet how many hesitate to prepare their children for this important step when they have arrived at eight years, or accountability. Henry Robinson, ten years old, and Eileen Rhodes, just six days past her eighth birthday, were the ones baptized. May the Lord bless these two children in their covenants to serve him faithfully in life.

The Santa Ana Saints were recently assigned their quota of the college drive. How well they will do we cannot predict, but we know they will do the best they can in this as in all other demands upon them in behalf of the work. Surely the Saints have been blessed when the value of Graceland, or of an education, religious or otherwise, will be questioned by many in the church.

One of the finest events occurring in the branch recently was the carnival given by our Temple Builders for the benefit of the Christmas offering. Noisy and hilarious, yes; but a lot of innocent fun promoted by a fine group of vivacious young people, helping their elders to retain the godliness of youth. The more we play together the better we work together. The Christmas offering was offered nearly forty dollars; and is already ahead of what it was last year.

LEONARD S. RHODES.

Home-Coming Manifests Good Life

October 11 was a red-letter day in the history of Toledo Branch. On this date we held our home-coming day which was a success in every way. The committee whom I had appointed worked long and arduously to make it a success.

Early on Sunday morning the Saints began to gather by ones, twos, and by automobile loads, until it taxed the capacity of our church to hold them.

Priesthood meeting was held at eight o’clock, Brother Delbert Hardy in charge. Following this service was a prayer service in charge of the pastor and Brother-C. V. Holmes. This service will long be remembered by those attending, for God’s Spirit came among us in power at the opening and remained with us all through the service. This was a cause of rejoicing to the Saints, for sometimes in services of this kind the Spirit comes in waves, then recedes. But it was not so in this meeting. The Spirit came and baptized every soul assembled. When we looked out upon that assembly of people and failed to see one who was not shedding tears of joy, it brought to one the realization of the extent of God’s blessing.

There were none of the gifts of the Spirit given—what was the need?—each felt and knew that God was pleased with his offering.

Following prayer service we had preaching by Brother Lewis, of Columbus, Ohio. Brother Lewis has occupied very acceptably in some of our Sunday morning services of late.

At half past two we had what was called a round-talk service. This consisted of five-minute speeches on education, with the endowment of Graceland in mind. Talks were given by Brother Slye, district president; our pastor; Brother Harmes, Bishop’s agent, and others, each speaker answering questions on his phase of the subject. The Saints showed a lively interest in the subject as evidence by the questions asked.

Profitable and busy day was brought to a close with preaching service at half past seven, Brother Slye being the speaker. Everyone went home with a note of gladness in his heart.

The spiritual condition of Toledo Branch at present is healthy, although we wish it were better. Still, we are thankful for the improvement that has taken place during the past year.

Conditions are such that we anticipate additions to our number during the fall and winter months. I have baptized two in the past six months and will trouble the waters of regeneration again in a few days. Two of these are converts to the gospel, and one the young son of Brother and Sister Willmarth.

We hope to be able to report further progress for Toledo in the future. WILLIAM KEILL, Pastor.

Bookers Embark for Isle of Pines

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

Dear Brother:

My wife, daughter, and I will sail to-morrow for Grand Cayman, British West Indies, via Isle of Pines. Will make the entire trip on the Lady Antoinette, a small schooner. We hope, with good sailing, to reach our destination about the 28th. We are hopefully looking forward to our work on the islands. Our address will be Georgetown, Grand Cayman, British West Indies.

London Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary

LONDON, ONTARIO, October 19.—On October 4 the Saints of London celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the church in this city.

When the prayer and sacramental service convened at nine o'clock the large church was well filled with Saints and friends from home and abroad. Many and varied were the testimonies, and a splendid spirit prevailed throughout the meeting. Brother W. I. Fligg, who was for seventeen years a pastor, and who at present resides in Independence, Missouri, was present for the event and had charge of the prayer service.

A song service began at a quarter of eleven, and at eleven o'clock Elder J. C. Mottashed of Detroit, who was also a former pastor, preached a powerful sermon on Zion. He voiced many facts regarding stewardships in no uncertain terms. At the close we were thankful for the enlightenment we had received.

The afternoon hour was occupied by Elders Leaverton, Fligg, Mottashed, Gray, Winegarden, and Brother C. Insell. Each related interesting experiences of their church life. Brother Arthur Leaverton was pastor fifty years ago when the church was first organized, and his unique experiences of those early days of prejudice were varied and thrilling. We were made to sense once more how much was endured by the older Saints in order to carry on the work. Brother Insell's experiences were similar, and he related events which led up to the building of the old church.

The evening service was occupied by Brother Fligg. He, too, was blessed by the Spirit in his preaching, and at the close we felt we had enjoyed a wonderful day.

The choir, under the direction of Brother Fred Heddington and Sister Etta Ramsey sang together, "Watchman, what of the night?" Sister Dorothy Timbrell presided at the organ.

On Monday evening the banquet was held in the basement of the church. The Department of Women had charge of the banquet, and the Social Progressive Club took charge of the dining room, which looked very pretty with its decorations of fall flowers and crepe paper.

The main auditorium was beautifully decorated in the fall colors of red and yellow. Interspersed among the fall flowers were bunches of autumn leaves and sheaves of wheat. The branch was indebted to Brother John Judkins for decorations.

The fiftieth anniversary of London Branch will long live in the minds of the people.

A minister of another church whose membership numbers millions, said,

"If our church could put your stewardship doctrine into operation, we would in a few years be the richest church in the world, but—it's too big for us and it's too big for you folks."

The objective of the church is not to accumulate riches excepting as they serve the purposes set forth in the Book of Mormon:

"And after ye have obtained a hope in Christ, ye shall obtain riches, if ye seek them; and ye will seek them, for the intent to do good; to clothe the naked, and to feed the hungry, and to liberate the captive, and administer relief to the sick and the afflicted."—Jacob 2: 24.

This statement is a challenge
To the loyalty of all Latter Day Saints who believe in the "Stewardship Commandment."

Let's do our part to prove the word of the Lord to us.

from the HERALD that you want some one from each city to make regular reports on K L D S. We would be glad to render this service from our locality.—
Homer Shupe.

Union Furnace, Ohio.—Your station came in last night with excellent power, and the modulation was all that could be desired. Will be on regularly from now on. . . . We will make regular reports to you in accordance with wish expressed through HERALD.
When you are ready to make the station more powerful, will assist.—Gard H. Kirkendall.

Weyburn, Saskatchewan.—I am willing to report on your programs each week, and you may send me blanks for this purpose.—J. R. Dickson.

Iola, Kansas.—Regarding radio reporters in the last issue of the HERALD, I wish to say that I am perfectly willing to help you all I can in reporting on K L D S radio station. Your station is coming in fine here.—L. E. Clark.

Chadron, Nebraska.—I expect to be a regular listener and would be pleased to help by reporting on every program.—Marion G. Talcott.

Wilson, Oklahoma.—I would be glad to use your report blanks and help all I can in improving the service. We love to listen to the church programs.
The vespé r program last evening came in plain and with fair volume, except for fading at times, as with other stations.—E. R. Coldren.

Princeville, Illinois.—I am much disappointed in the reception from your station. . . . For some reason all the listeners here have trouble in getting you.
We get other stations in Kansas City and farther south without much difficulty, but I have received K L D S well only once, on morning test. Please send some blanks, and I will report reception from here.—W. M. Keck.

Toronto, Ontario.—I have enjoyed your programs many times this summer. Last night it would run a loudspeaker, but would fade at times. Brother H. O. Smith’s sermon came across fine. If you have regular report blanks, so much the better. If I can be of assistance to you—all right; if not, no harm done. Wish you success.—James I. Kirkpatrick.

Six report cards and an information blank have been mailed to each one who has signified willingness to report regularly on K L D S broadcasting.
The information blank contains questions on kind of country, type and make of receiving set, etc., and the report card contains descriptive words to be checked by listener, giving information on volume, quality of modulation, static, weather, fading, interference, etc.

The purpose of the experiment is to collect data from all parts of the country on K L D S transmission. Those in charge of the church station believe that such data will be valuable as a means for improving the church broadcasting and for learning peculiarities of the courses of radio waves sent out from Independence. In the vicinity of Sioux City, Iowa, and around Princeville, Illinois, it is reported that to date the new 441 meter wave has not been satisfactorily received. Do the waves from K L D S “jump over” such territories; are they deflected; or are they absorbed? Why is K L D S heard satisfactorily in the same directions at much greater distances, and at shorter distances? These are some of the questions those in charge of K L D S want to learn how to answer. As a result, some of the present problems may be solved. Such data would be of interest to all broadcasters. It is believed that the new reporting system will be of great value, not only in helping solve transmission problems, but also in revealing weaknesses in K L D S radio programs and their presentation.

Everyone with a radio receiving set who is able to hear K L D S at all is invited to send for report blanks. This invitation is extended to both near-by and distant listeners. The blanks for making reports are on self-addressed government postal cards, for the greatest possible convenience of those reporting.

It is not necessary that those desiring to offer their services listen to every program, although it is hoped that an effort will be made to listen and report regularly. For report blanks, address K L D S, Independence, Missouri.

K L D S Asked to Send Delegate to Radio Conference

A letter to the church radio department, signed by Herbert Hoover, personally, requests that a delegate be appointed to represent Station K L D S at the Washington Radio Conference, to begin November 9. Another letter, from Paul B. Klugh, executive chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters, announces a special meeting to be held at Washington, November 8. Mr. Klugh regards it as a “crucial meeting, which you are urged to attend.”

It is believed that arrangement will be made to enable K L D S to be represented at both meetings.
The matters to be considered at these meetings were enumerated in last week’s HERALD.

Request for Prayers

Mrs. Minnie Engstrom, Denmark, Kansas, an isolated Saint, asks the prayers of the Saints that her mother may be healed. She has been in poor health for two years and since September 1 has been bedfast most of the time. She has been administered to, and each time received a blessing, but she does not seem to regain her strength.

Mrs. O. E. Wheating, Longview, Washington, requests prayers for Gerald Hopkins, an eighteen-year-old man who is afflicted with heart trouble. Neither he nor his parents are members, but they have faith that God will bless.

Marriage Notices

HARRIS-SQUIRE.—George Harris and Gladys Squire, of Brooklyn, New York, were married in the church in Brooklyn Wednesday, October 14, 1925, before a large number of relatives and friends, Paul M. Hannan, minister, officiating.

Graceland Endowment Campaign Opens Auspiciously

Many weeks of preparation have been made for the campaign to raise $200,000 with which to endow Graceland College. Almost a quarter million pieces of literature containing information, history, plans, etc., have been distributed among the people of the church. Organization has been perfected in almost every district and branch and group of the church, and all was in readiness to open the campaign November 1 and to continue intensive work until all members of the church and interested friends could be given opportunity to subscribe the fund.

The time for raising the endowment is not for determining by officers of the church or of the college. The stipulation was made by the accrediting association dealing with schools and colleges of the north central section of the Nation. The plans of college and church officers must be made to conform to these requirements, and $200,000 tangible endowment must be raised before the opening of the 1926-1927 school year in order for Graceland College, or any other junior college of this section, to remain on the list of recognized and accredited schools.

Before the opening day of the fifteen days of November set apart to do the work of taking pledges, a number of branches had prepared themselves for the work, and they broke the leash and went over the top, oversubscribing their assigned quotas. Among these we must notice in this writing only unique examples, and very few of these.

Probably there has been no more outstanding instance than that of Des Moines, Iowa, where the people have been intensively engaged in providing themselves a church building to take the place of one destroyed by fire last winter. A telegram from Des Moines dated November 1 says that they have subscribed over $2,300, and the canvass is not finished. Their assignment is more than met.

Lamoni Stake was assigned a quota of $15,000. Town of Lamoni itself has already pledged at noon today $17,305.00. Total for entire Lamoni Stake at this time $21,020.00. Enthusiasm runs high and we are still going.

The Steward and His Living

A number of questions were presented at the round table at the close of the series of meetings held by the President and Bishop in Independence, and it has been suggested that the answers to many of those questions will be of interest and instructive to the readers of the HERALD. Hence from time to time we will present in this column some of the questions and answers presented at the meeting referred to.

Question: "Under stewardships is it intended that an individual should derive his livelihood from property or from industry?"

Answer: Either, or perhaps both. In the mind of the questioner may have been the question of a leisure class. If so, it must be answered positively that in Zion or under stewardships there will be no leisure class, for the idler shall have no place in Zion. Leisure is not necessarily idleness, and idleness is not necessarily leisure; for leisure may be found in pleasurable activity, and idleness may become indolence and improvidence. Leisure in Zion must be communized—distributed to all to the extent of its sum total. This must be determined by the general social welfare.

Of necessity there will be activities on which the welfare of the group will to an extent depend, yet which will not wholly or will only partially support the steward. Under such conditions the steward may derive his support from property. Otherwise he must get it from the common treasury. Industrious all must be; we cannot be idle. Support may come from property income; but it will not be surplus property—it will be needed.

Question: "Will a man who comes under the stewardship law be given an opportunity to advance in his labor?"

Answer: Yes. In fact, all will or should be encouraged to develop or advance to the topmost limit of his talents or capacity. Every man a laborer working at that for which he is best qualified by natural endowments and training not only calls for encouragement towards advancement but demands a system which insures early discovery of talent and guarantees maximum development of it and opportunity for its issuance into contribution towards social welfare.

Question: "A man working on a salary is saving about $500 a year with the expectation of starting in business for himself as soon as he has sufficient capital and experience. Has the man a right to hold each year's savings until he has enough to go into business on a stewardship basis; or is the $500 considered as surplus to be given to the Bishop. If so, how would he establish himself?"

Answer: With the ideal in mind that frugality, providence, and industriousness are to be encouraged and developed, the answer is obviously, Yes. The matter of saving towards stewardship use is covered by the phrase "according to circumstances." Savings where needed to establish a business on a stewardship basis are not surplus, but are classed under needs. The necessity for the savings and the wisdom of the proposed stewardship must of course be determined with the group needs as well as individual ones always in view.

Question: "Will the poor be cared for out of the tithing fund, consecration fund, or freewill offering fund?"

Answer: The "care of the poor" according to section 42 falls upon the fund created by stewardship surplus consecrations, or consecrations of the surplus of stewardship surplus. Oblations taken at sacramental services are also to be used for the benefit of the poor. Tithing is specifically for the support of the ministry in their work. Freewill offerings may also be specific, governed by the stipulations of the donors.

"Care of the poor" comprehends much more than the placing of money in their hands. It may mean opportunity to work. It is generally accepted that the best of help is by giving the opportunity to the needy one to help himself. This maintains self-respect and develops self-reliance. Another course may destroy both.

In the "care of the poor" or extending help, there are several factors to consider. Among them are worthiness, faithfulness, and wisdom. The "care of the poor," while one of the first obligations of the church, is a problem to the solution of which the church must bring clear thinking. Without doubt the church must soon develop various organizations of business men to whom shall be intrusted the "care of the poor"—organizations to help and guide the poor into better conditions. Remember, it must be said of us, as it was said of those of old among whom the gospel had its full development, "There is no poor among us, for every man has according to his needs." To bring this about is one of our objectives.

Question: "Will the penniless be given inheritances, or sold to them 'on time' (the rich buy theirs)?"

Answer: All will be permitted to earn the inheritance. If at any time the obligation of the group to the individual is such as to justify the giving of the inheritance, then it will be given. The best way will be to give every person opportunity to earn it, or, as suggested in the question, pay for it out of possessions. Whether it is sold "on time" or "given" must be determined by circumstances, worthiness, faithfulness, wisdom, etc.
Answer: Yes, if under such conditions the “authorities” after proper counsel (councils indicated in the law) considered it for the best interests of the work to do so.

Question: “With the tithing receipts of the general church large and surplus receipts small, should a portion of the tithing receipts be applied by the authorities to the promotion of stewardships?”

Answer: Yes.

Question: “Might not much money in the hands of members, not surplus, be gladly loaned without interest for stewardship use? And the authorities be justified in receiving and applying to such use?”

Answer: Yes.

Question: “What will you do with the man who cannot make a living when he has a stewardship with everything furnished?”

Answer: Failure of a stewardship to furnish a living and a surplus for the steward would indicate incompetency of the steward, if it were a stewardship established for that purpose. This would suggest the advisability of either a change of stewardship or putting the steward under the direction of those who are competent. Organization of groups of stewards are contemplated whose stewardship will consist in managing and directing the labors and activities of others who are willing and desirous to work but who are short in managerial ability.

Question: “If a man wants to go in business and has turned all his surplus into the church treasury, can he call on the common fund to go in business?”

Answer: Yes. All who have need have access to the common treasury. The demand, however, before being supplied must be duly and properly considered by those whose duty it is.

Question: “Can a group of stewards be organized outside of a stake? If so, where does the surplus go?”

Answer: Yes. To the general treasury.

Question: “Does all individual stewardship surplus go into the general church treasury, even though the persons may live in an organized branch, district, or in Zion?”

Answer: In Zion the surplus from individual stewardships goes into the general treasury, for the officials of Zion (Presidency, Bishopric, and High Council) are those of the general church. In stakes where presidency, bishopric, and high council are duly organized and hence in position or condition to properly administer the affairs of stewardships, the surplus from individual stewardships goes to the stake treasury. The stake surplus is in turn applied to local developments unless the need exists for its application to general affairs. When such need exists, the portion of the stake surplus to be sent to the general treasury is determined by interaction of proper general and local authorities.

Question: “If needs are supplied by the church to anyone who may apply, is that likely to develop shiftlessness and other than frugality?”

Answer: Yes. But the law has safeguarded this by providing that the factors of worthiness, faithfulness, and wisdom must be considered in cases where “needs” are to be supplied.

Question: “Can one put his savings into the church treasury to remain until one is ready to start a business?”

Answer: Yes. We suggest that placing money with the church as a loan, with or without interest, is one of the safest of investments, and if more generally done by the Saints would react advantageously to the church.

Question: “Do the ‘poor’ have claim on the church or the State for their support?”

Answer: They have claim on either the church or the State, or on both. As members of the church, if worthy, and wise, and faithful, the church is under obligation to supply needs. As citizens of the State they have equal claim with other poor on such resources of the State as are set aside for such purposes.

Withdrawal From the Church

Question: “Can a member withdraw from the church and unite with another without any official action? Does his declaration of withdrawal cancel his membership? Have we any arrangement with the ‘Church of Christ’ by which members may at will go from one to the other on their original baptism?”

Answer: Taking the last question first. It is true that articles of agreement between the committees of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the “Church of Christ” people on the Temple Lot were approved by the conferences of the two churches in 1919; but these articles contained no provisions for a transfer of membership. In 1919 the committees came into the conference with a recommendation providing for transfer of membership and stipulated terms of transfer; but the conference refused to approve the report and recommendations.

Coming now to your first question: General Conference Resolution 284, adopted in 1884, is as follows:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this council, no person’s name should be stricken from the church records until specific charges have been preferred against them, and lawful action had in the case, and that the cause or causes of action and expulsion should be stated upon the church record.

This resolution was somewhat modified by the actions of the 1903 General Conference (Resolution 529), the latest legislation on that subject.

This resolution denied the right of a member to merely say, “I am out of your church and into another.” A request to withdraw or declaration of withdrawal was declared as vitiating “good standing.” One desiring to sever fellowship could not be considered “in good standing.” Official action must be had to take the name from the record. It could not be taken from the record by the recorder, or others, merely on request. However, in case where no moral infraction or other complications existed, a request to withdraw with evidence of “persistent” desire to withdraw might be considered sufficient without charge of apostasy or other charge. This desire to withdraw, however, must be established before a church court, and action of the body permitting withdrawal must be had on the recommendation of such court.

The complete resolution follows, with pertinent points in italics:

Your committee to which was referred resolution of the Burlington, Iowa, Branch, touching conference resolution number 284, respectfully reports:

1. That in considering the same it is compelled to note the inconsistency in the statement of the alleged finding and report of the elders’ court referred to, in holding that the parties asking to dissolve their connection with the church were in “good standing” in the body. They may not have been in any open violation of any moral precept or rule of the body, but it cannot be properly held that a person who has interposed a demand that he be separated from, and wholly withdrawn from any and all connection with the church of Christ as we hold it, “still remains in good standing.” The act to separate himself, and his continued refusal to hear the officers who have labored with him to reclaim and convince of the error of such a step, would necessarily enter into the question of his good standing.

2. Your committee are of the opinion that much of the seeming trouble arising in cases where persons request to withdraw from the church is only from taking a one-sided view of the matter, and a failure to comprehend the action necessary under the law of Christ to effect the object of separation. There is no provision in the law of Christ whereby separation may be had by voluntary withdrawal alone. The body must act in order to make effective the separation, and when it acts, to use the language of the Savior, it “cuts off,” “severs” the individual from the body, as the branch is severed from the vine; and while in the case of persons it would be permissible for them to claim and say that they withdrew, yet when the body or church acted, they would in fact be cut off. There could be no alternative to this and give the party the benefit of his request.

Since the law of Christ does not provide for a separation except by act of the body, should a party simply make the claim to withdraw and move out, and the body not act, he would go out and continue a member in fact, notwithstanding the seeming separation. If, then, the provision for separation is one such a harsh one, it is the harshness imposed by the law, and not the church; and whereas other societies may have adopted more liberal methods, it must not be forgotten that they have also adopted more liberal methods for the receiving of members than is provided in the law. We are not, however, privileged as a church to change the law in either case.

3. In the matter of final action on the part of the body, it is advised as to the condition and state of its members through the findings of a properly constituted court. A branch in this way arrives at the place from which it may act. Your committee are of the opinion, however, that it is not necessary to formulate charges against a person who may wish to withdraw, either of apostasy or violation of the law in terms, in order to convene a court to hear such a case, but that the hearing should take place upon the act in question; viz: The persistent contention of the member to withdraw from the body, and should the court find that this claim is persisted in, and that due and diligent labor has been performed by the church officers to reclaim the member without effect, that the finding should be that the request be granted, and the member be severed from the body. This persistent claim to withdraw, in the opinion of the committee, is the only “specific charge” necessary, as referred to in Conference Resolution 284.—General Conference Resolution 529, adopted April 8, 1908.

Why Graceland Is Not Broadcasting

Many friends of Graceland and radio fans are wondering why K F F V has not gone on the air this fall. Several have asked why the former K F I X equipment has not been moved to Graceland and the power increased to 500 watts, as originally contemplated.

The answer is twofold: On 250 meters, K F F V’s wave length, so many stations are operating that it is impossible to receive any of them satisfactorily unless the listener is located within a few miles of the broadcasting station. It will be remembered that just before being assigned the Class B wave length, K L D S had so much interference on 268 meters that distant listeners could not hear the new church station except on rare occasions. More reports are now being received in one day on K L D S broadcasting than were received during the entire last month on 268 meters. Under present conditions a Class A station is good only for local use, regardless of whether the power is 10 watts or 500 watts.

The second reason that K F F V is not broadcasting is because the radio budget was cut down one third from the amount requested as necessary to maintain the two stations. It is questionable if the amount allowed is sufficient to operate K L D S during the conference year.

Those in charge of the church radio work feel that it is unwise to attempt to increase the power of the Graceland station and operate it unless a Class B wave length is employed. Getting a Class B license means the equipping of a station which meets all the stringent Government requirements for this type of radiocaster. Several thousand dollars would be required to put the Graceland station in condition to pass the Class B examination. Even then a Class B wave length would not be assured, the only present must be one of expressed sympathy with his erring fellow men, and not of harshness, even under pressure.

Subject Matter

As to those subjects which are best adapted to presentation on the street, we must be guided by the spirit of wisdom, taking into consideration always the existing conditions. Divine guidance must be sought, and lived for; otherwise we will largely fail of accomplishment.

I am persuaded, for instance, that many times we cannot do better than to use those principles of the church which distinguish us from others. Yet under certain conditions where we may not be favorably known, wisdom may direct us to use more familiar themes.

I have found that many things in connection with the Book of Mormon may be discussed with profit, provided tact is used. The teaching of that book in relation to polygamy should be emphasized, as so many mistakenly suppose it condones that vice.

Whenever it becomes necessary to explain that we do not stand for "Mormonism" in the ordinary acceptance of that term, be sure to state that we believe in the Book of Mormon, giving some good reasons.

Under conditions of excitement raised through paper controversy, or misrepresentation, we are often afforded an excellent opportunity of being heard to advantage on this subject. Yet it would not be wisdom to use that theme where the crowd was not stationary and attentive and, ordinarily, not until we are fairly well known as representatives of other more readily accepted principles.

Stewardships

In recent years I have found the doctrine of "stewardships" to be one of growing interest to the public and, having frequently used a chart illustrating that subject, have heard the remark many times that the doctrine is a beautiful one if it can only be carried out.

This involves, too, many other subjects, such as love of God and neighbor, and the relation thereto of the principles of the gospel: faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands.

The subject of stewardships is one which might also be used very profitably to captivate the respect of rationalists, skeptics, and infidels, and this brings us to the subject of

Dealing With the Crowd

It is to be remembered that while discretion on the part of the speaker will result in good interest for the church, indiscretion may result in a brawl and even injury to the cause.

Questions, if genuinely asked for information, should be carefully answered. Promiscuous questions and arguments of the infidel type, if meant to entrap or to hinder, should be wisely avoided, except as may be used to good advantage to the cause, and not merely to show the smartness of the speaker. Questions or arguments from religions should be answered with open Bible, as the public do not always know whether your quotations are scriptural or not.

If one should attempt to keep you on the defensive by persistent interjections, it may often prove wise to challenge him to hold up his faith on equal propositions for discussion. Your challenge will very rarely be accepted, but when it is, good will result for the truth if you are faithful. I have never known it otherwise. The Lord has given us that promise.

Literature

I have seen success come as a result of stopping early, before exhaustion of voice, to invite people to come forward for tracts. Almost invariably those who come forth will talk freely along some particular line of interest to them, and you will then have the desired opportunity of suiting your message to their needs, through conversation or literature.

At our last meeting in Adelaide, I talked for a considerable time to two young men who came forward in this way. I learned that they were nondrinkers, and nonsmokers; that they had not attended any church for a long period of time. They seemed particularly interested in our stewardship principles. The following Sunday evening they were out to our church, and said they would come again.

Charts

Charts are of great value in street work, and especially those so simple in style that a message is clearly conveyed without much explanation. They assist, too, in bringing together a nucleus for an audience before the meeting is opened.

Side Discussions

Care should be exercised to avoid side discussions which would detract interest from the main speaker. Our people should be advised in this matter, as side issues may easily arise, through questions being asked of our membership who stand by as to where we meet, and what in our belief distinguishes us from other religious bodies.

Announcements

It is well for each speaker to advertise our places and times of Sunday meetings, or other meetings of a special nature. He should also give the name of Concluding Remarks

Much more could be said re the advisability of trying out different methods of procedure in street meetings, but I realize that wisdom along these lines will come by experience to those who move out in this work, while that which seems necessary to be emphasized most is that we must educate the membership in regard to their responsibilities in helping the missionary cause, pointing out what an opportunity is theirs through street meetings and what a loss it means to them and to the church when their support is withheld.

In conclusion, let me suggest that street meetings, if enthusiastically supported, may become one of the best means of propaganda for the church. Let us not miss the good that our opportunities in this sphere afford.

The Unjust Steward

BY EDWARD RANNIE

The ethics of Jesus are taught by him in a very plain and simple manner by using the parable, and practically every precept of life is taught in that way. If we are students of his teachings and have a fair knowledge of the customs of living in his day, it is not difficult to understand them. In the sixteenth chapter of Luke, the parable of the unjust steward, Jesus is teaching the proper use of money and other material wealth and how it affects our present life and our life in the world to come. His teachings on the same subject in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants support that given in the New Testament. In this brief article, it is my purpose to try to explain what Jesus was trying to teach.

Steward: One who superintends another's affairs.—Webster.

A parable is a story told to make some truth plain. All stories have characters that play some important part in the story. In the parable of the unjust steward, there are four characters: 1. The steward; 2. The two debtors; 3. The lord, or landlord; 4. The children of this world. It will be well for the reader to keep in mind that Jesus is not one of the characters in the story; he is the one who is telling it. Another important thing to keep in mind is, the term lord in the eighth verse does not mean Jesus, because he is the one telling the story. The word lord represents one of the characters, the one who owned the farm, or, as we would call him in modern times, the landlord.

The Steward

The steward was having a gay time, spending his landlord’s money the same as fast young men do in our day, and some one of the landlord’s friends reported the matter. When the steward learned that he must lose his position, he began plotting with some of his friends as to how he could get some of his landlord’s wealth so he would not have to beg or work and might still lead a life of pleasure. He chose the method of making arrangements with his landlord’s debtors to reduce the amount of their bill, and for this he was to be favored by living with them, and in that way would get part of the money turned to him. If he had fifty or more such customers, he could have a life of leisure.

Landlord

The lord (landlord) commended the steward for his shrewdness. He had planned in a cunning manner to steal from him, and the landlord discerned what had been done, but he saw no way of escape from the trap he was in and so his words were commendation for his great skill in accomplishing his wickedness, but not in any way approving his conduct. A safe breaker was tried in one of our criminal courts, and the testimony showed that the man possessed great skill. The judge was somewhat amazed and spoke to the man in praise of his great skill, telling him he ought to be engaged in some more honorable occupation and that success would be with him. It was his skill he commended, and not his being a burglar. It is not Jesus that commends the steward, for he is the one that is telling the story, and he represents the lord, or landlord, as commending him.

The Lessons to Be Learned

There are two lessons to be learned from the parable, and Jesus tells them to us. “For the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.” The children of light are the Lord’s people, and those of the world are those who do not claim to be his disciples. The children of the world often do a great many things that the Lord told his people to do, and so the blessings promised for obedience come to them. The Lord often tells his children what to do that they might be blessed in temporal and spiritual things, and they disobey him and so lose the promised blessings which are to be received for obedience, and that is why Jesus says the children of “this world” are wiser than the children of light. The Lord told Latter Day Saints in 1831 (Doctrine and Covenants 57: 1; 58: 11) to purchase all the land that could be obtained in Jackson County. At that time it comprised what is now Jackson, Cass, and Bates Counties, and that commandment has not been revoked. As individuals and as a church we are disobedient to-day as they were in that early time. Our neighbors “of this world” are getting rich; they are wiser “than the children of light.” Land that a few years ago near Independence could have been purchased for three hundred dollars per acre is now selling for from six hundred to one thousand dollars per acre. Our friends of “this world” bought it, and “the children of light” purchase it from them. We find other ways to spend our money not approved by the Lord.

Jesus says, “Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.” What Jesus means, or advises, is to make proper use of their money and other material wealth, because it will have something to do with determining their future of their money and other material wealth, because we are unfaithful in little things we will also be in larger ones, and if we are unfaithful in little things we will be the same in larger ones. In the next verse (11) he informs us that if we are not faithful in the use of our material wealth we cannot be trusted with the “true riches.” What are the true riches? What else could they be except spiritual blessings in this life and eternal life in the world to come. When we are faithful and obedient children in this life, we have with us the Holy Spirit as an abiding comforter, and what greater blessing or riches could we have than the light, peace, and happiness that the Holy Spirit would bring to us?

In Doctrine and Covenants 70:3 the Lord informs us that if we do not use our material wealth in a proper way he will withhold from us “the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit.”

The Pharisees, who were a covetous class of people who robbed the widows and oppressed the poor, were present and heard his discourse. They “de­rided him,” because his teaching was a rebuke to them for their selfishness and covetousness.

Our Own Property

The Lord makes the matter of being stewards a very important part of our life work, and if we fail in that responsibility we come short of the highest attainment provided for in the gospel. Observe how definitely the Lord speaks in these latter days and in perfect harmony with what Jesus taught in the parable of the unjust steward. In the Book of Doctrine and Covenants (42:9) is found the following:

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, insasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family. [Emphasis mine.]

We have a title to our property, whether real estate or personal, as provided in the law of the country in which we live; but in our relationship to the Lord he claims it as his, and we are stewards held accountable to him for the manner in which we use it just as truly as we are to one who would put property in our care.

An illustration will help us to better understand the proposition. John Doe has been a successful merchant whose gross sales amount to thirty thousand dollars a year, and he concludes that he and his wife are entitled to a rest because they have stuck to their business for thirty years. So they hire a man to be their steward, to take charge of their business for several years, while they take a vacation. At the close of the year he enters the office and examines the books that contain the record of the year’s business and discovers that the expense has increased more than two thousand dollars. An expensive automobile was bought for the steward to use for the pleasure of himself and friends; another employee was added to the working force; the steward had moved into a home which would cost more to maintain. Mr. Doe’s friends told him that it was common talk that the steward and other employees were spending money in a lavish manner. When he had completed the examination of the books, he learned that there was no profit for the year’s business, and in the past the usual profits on the gross sales had been about twenty per cent.

Dear reader, if that was your place of business, what would you do with such a steward? Would you promote him and give him a greater responsibility, with an increase of salary? No, you would discharge him and find another! What will the Lord do with a Latter Day Saint who wastes the property over which he is a steward in wanton pleasure, in extravagant living and luxurious homes, useless automobiles, indulging in the fads and frivolities that the fashionable world demands. The Lord says he cannot trust such a person with the true riches. The Lord is not a bankrupt that he must have our material wealth in order to accomplish his purposes. He has a higher and nobler purpose. Paul says, “For the love of money is the root of all evil: while some coveted after, they have been seduced from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.” When we add to the love of money, covetousness and selfishness, the combination makes a poison that will destroy the spiritual life of all who come in contact with it—angels could not escape its corrupting influence. It is as destructive of spiritual life as the bite of a rattlesnake is of the physical body. He wants to translate us into his image, and it cannot be done without eliminating from our lives selfishness and covetousness. Being a faithful steward over our material wealth will accomplish that purpose; it will purge out the dross.
The Order of Enoch

BY A. CARMICHAEL

An article in three parts. This is Part 2

5. The Reorganization

In October, 1861, (section 114) the Lord again comes forth and reveals himself on the financial law, or the law of temporalities, beginning again to get ready for the bringing to pass of equality or the establishment of stewardships, thus providing for equal opportunity.

Further light on section 42 is given in 122: 5, 6, given March, 1894. The Lord reaffirms that what he has previously given is still in force. April 14, 1906, we received instructions with reference to the carrying on of our business affairs (127: 7), enlarging on our law of temporalities.

As a further aid, the Lord once more authorizes the Bishopric to provide for the necessary organizations to carry on this work of the church. (Given April, 1909, section 128.) This section was to do with the formation or organization of temporal group stewardships under the names of “colonizing” and “industrial.” Section 128 reaffirms the necessity of organizing as many of these orders as are needful in carrying on the temporal activities of the people of the church, and authorizes and commands this work to be done.

In 129: 8 still further instruction was given in April, 1909.

Again, in section 130, the Lord speaks and gives instructions on the finances of the church.

In 1916 admonition is again received to “consecrate of their talents, abilities, and substance for the prosecution of the work intrusted to us.” (132: 3.)

Added to this, the voice of the people in General Conference has spoken declaring the time has come to institute this social order and authorizes the church authorities to proceed.

Are we willing to undertake the work?

In our study of this order, it will be well to remember that there are four sections in the Doctrine and Covenants that have to do specifically with the organization of the orders comprising the Order of Enoch.

Section 77 was given to the high priesthood and is a command for them to organize the people of the church into an order. Section 81 was given to certain persons of the Order of Melchisedec, instructing them how to organize. Section 101 instructs the members of this order about the use of property belonging to the member of the order, telling us very briefly the right way to accumulate group surplus, also the right way to distribute this surplus. This organization here spoken of was an organization in the Order of Enoch.

Section 128 reaffirms the necessity of organizing as many of these orders or organizations as are needed in the carrying on of the temporal activities of the people of the church, also authorizes and commands this work to be done.

6. Order of Enoch—Authority to Organize

Whatever agency God uses must be necessary to aid in the redemption of the human race. The Order of Enoch being one of these agencies, it follows that it is necessary.

The gospel of Christ includes these three things, first, the law; second, authority to administer the law; third, an organization through which the law can function. The Order of Enoch as understood by us to-day has to do with the form of organization rather than authority to organize. The authority to organize is known as the Order of Melchisedec or the Melchisedec priesthood. This authority was first known under the name, the Order of the Son of God, and it seems to have continued to be known as the Order of the Son of God until the time of Melchisedec. After that it was called the Order of Melchisedec for obvious reasons. It was conferred upon Christ by the Father. Coming with this authority Christ gave the law needed and established a church or organization through which the law could function. This authority known as the Order of the Son of God was passed down from father to son, functioning with varying degrees of success. Its field of operation was divided into two parts, that known as spiritual work and that known as temporal, functioning in the spiritual directly and in the temporal indirectly through the Order of Enoch. Up to Enoch’s time, so far as we can learn from history, no perfect piece of work had been accomplished. This authority of the Order of the Son of God was conferred upon Enoch. History states that he made a complete success, the first real success. And how was this accomplished? By perfect law administered by men having the right to do so and functioning through a divinely appointed organization known as the Church of Jesus Christ. What was it Enoch did that brought success? He had the same authority or priesthood as his predecessors, and he was one of a group of men known as the Order of the Son of God. He had the same law or gospel as had his predecessors. His success was in the fact that he more fully applied the law because he perfected his organization or church. He not only fully organized the spiritual work of his people, but he fully organized their temporal activities also.

The record states that years before Enoch’s time men had become “carnal, selfish, and devilish.” (Genesis 4: 13, Inspired Translation.) They had departed from God both in their spiritual affairs and temporal or social activities. The object of the gospel was to bring them back to God—to help them to serve the Lord not only in their spiritual work, but also in their everyday work. Enoch had been taught of God, for the record says, “And Jared taught Enoch in all the ways of God.”—Genesis 6:22, Inspired Translation. Though but a lad and slow in speech (Genesis 6:32) Enoch was wonderfully blessed by God.

Behold, my spirit is upon you; wherefore all thy words will I justify, and the mountains shall flee before you, and the rivers shall turn from their course; and thou shalt abide in me, and I in you; therefore walk with me.—Genesis 6:36, Inspired Translation.

He stands out in sacred history as a man of great faith and power.

And so great was the faith of Enoch, that he led the people of God, and their enemies came to battle against them, and he spake the word of the Lord, and the earth trembled, and the mountains fled, even according to his command. And the rivers of water were turned out of their course, and the roar of the lions was heard out of the wilderness. And all nations feared greatly, so powerful was the word of Enoch, and so great was the power of the language which God had given him.—Genesis 7:15-17, Inspired Translation.

He could do this because he was a high priest after the Order of the Son of God. (Genesis 14:27, 28.) He was thus clothed with the authority of high heaven to do his work.

7. The Object of the Order—Making Labor Sacred

Enoch led his people to a very high degree of spirituality and made sacred every task undertaken by them. He sublimated toil. He made the labor of all classes sacred. He solved to perfection the “social program” of his people. The phrase “social program” is here used to mean the activities required to build Zion. He demonstrated both “the love of God” and “the love of man.” His work was not individualistic alone, but it was also social. He not only personally reached the pinnacle of true success but led his people to the same heights. He solved the problem of how to live together. He did all this so efficaciously that all his city was translated. Here we find the “finished product” of God’s social program—even Zion, the product of the gospel of the Son of God or of stewardships. Here is the answer to the question, “What made his dispensation stand out in the outlines of history as an isolated but a marvelous and a unique achievement?” If our latter-day philosophy is in “true succession” to this same gospel, and is complied with, the results must be the same. To accomplish our work we must have the Order of Enoch, for through it only can we make labor sacred. Clearly, then, the object of the Order of Enoch is to enable us to “spiritualize” every activity. With God all things and all law are spiritual. (Doctrine and Covenants 28:9.) If we expect to see as he sees, to think as he thinks, to speak as he speaks, and to DO as he does, we must change our attitude of mind and think and speak and do things in spiritual terms rather than temporal. Eternal life is God’s life, and God’s life consists in seeing, thinking, and doing things as God sees and thinks and acts. This order, then, is a means unto an end.

It is an organization instituted by God for the purpose of spiritualizing or making sacred every activity of his people.

We are told in Doctrine and Covenants 77:1 that it is:

First, “An order unto my church.” In section 76:5 this order is likened to the order of the Only Begotten Son. It is mentioned in connection with the Melchisedec Order and is put in the same class as to importance.

Here the three orders, the Melchisedec, the Order of Enoch, and the Order of the Only Begotten Son, are likened to each other. Their field of operation is the same—humanity; their motivation the same—service.

It is an order unto the church to aid the church in its legitimate work, being composed of the various individuals as stewards and group stewards. Among these group stewardships we may mention the Board of Publication, limited in its membership, to aid the church. The limitation of the membership of the Board of Publication is commensurate to the number of members needed to do the required work.

The same thing may be said of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College, also of the Children’s Home. All these are helping “orders” unto the church, all being orders within the Order of Enoch.

Another object of this order is to “advance the cause.” (Doctrine and Covenants 77:1.) This proves that the order is essential as one of the orders of the Order of Enoch.

A third object is given in Doctrine and Covenants 77:3: “To accomplish the commands given.” We might pertinently ask the question: “Can we accomplish the commands given without this specific order?” If so, God has made a mistake, which is unthinkable.

Fourth. “Regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people” (77:1), showing that this order is to help do the business of the church, therefore should number among its members capable business men as well as the Bishopric, whose duty is “to do the business of the church.”

Fifth. “To manage the affairs of the poor and all things pertaining to the Bishopric both in the land of Zion and in the land of Shinehah.”

The duties of this group organization, one of the groups of the Order of Enoch, are numerous. “To manage the affairs of the poor” means much, “and all things pertaining to the Bishopric in both the land of Zion and in the land of Shinehah” (a stake), means more. These expressions give us to understand that the Order of Bishops (the Bishopric) must have groups of organized efficient business men to help them to do the tasks assigned to them.

The Order of Enoch is the complement of the Order of Melchisedec. The Order of Melchisedec is the Order revealed by God to govern the activities of the priesthood of the church or entire group.

The Order of Enoch is the Order revealed of God to Enoch to govern the business or temporal activities of the members of the church or group. The motivation of both orders is the same, the Spirit of God. The objective of both orders is the same, the service of humanity, thus spiritualizing every activity of the group, making every legitimate activity in the business field as sacred as that in the work of the priesthood.

The Order of Enoch is composed of men who have for their motivation, both in the creation and distribution of wealth, the Spirit of the Master, and who have for their objective in both the creation and distribution of wealth the service of humanity. It is not so much that we would change the business activities of the worker, but that we would change the motivation from selfishness to altruism—from the desire to get profit to the desire to give service. To be not “conformed, but transformed by a renewing of our minds,” or in other words, “born again.” Here we have the only true solution of the correct creation of wealth and the correct distribution of wealth.

All the activities of the human race may be divided into two classes—

(A) Spiritual.
(B) Temporal.

No doubt during the dispensations that preceded Enoch, God had through his authorized servants, those holding the priesthood of the Son of God, tried to organize the people who had hearkened to his voice, both spiritually and temporally. Up to the Prophet Enoch’s time, all efforts (so far as we know from the history given) to organize the temporal affairs of the people of God had been more or less of a failure. And no doubt the people were not ready to receive this instruction. At last the time had come for God to reveal to his servant Enoch the order for organizing the social affairs of the children of God. We learn this important fact from modern revelation (Doctrine and Covenants 77): “The Lord spake unto Enoch saying,” etc., and then follows the command to organize our social activities. The time has come for a more complete “restoration of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.”

“The thought is father of the act.” Every act bringing apostasy was first thought out. Man first thought apostasy, then acted apostasy. The enter-hood; say an elder. (2) He casts about him, and by the spirit of wisdom and revelation he is satisfied that Brother X is the man needed and that he is called of God to do the work. He discerns by the true spirit that Brother X has “the gifts” needed to do the work; now (3) Brother X, by the spirit of revelation to himself, is satisfied as to his “calling.” Now (4) comes “the democracy” of the group. Brother X must receive the approval of the group before he can be set apart to his spiritual stewardship and officiate for the people.

Then finally comes the “setting apart” by the ones having the authority. Brother X now has an individual spiritual stewardship, and he is a member of the ORDER OF MELCHISEDEC.

Now note, in the same way are the temporal activities of the members of the group or church organized.

1st. The stake authorities see the need of a certain piece of work or labor to be done in the stake by men called to be stewards; we will say, for an example, carpenter work.

2d. They look about them, and by the spirit of wisdom and revelation they are satisfied that Brother Y is the man needed to do the work and that he is called. They discern by the spirit that Brother Y has the “gifts” needed to do the work of a carpenter.

3d. Brother Y by the Spirit of God or revelation to himself is satisfied as to his “calling.”

4th. Again comes “the democracy” of the group or church. Brother Y must receive the approval of the group or church before he can be set apart to his individual temporal stewardship—General Conference by unanimous votes several times has authorized those on whom rests the burden to organize stewardships. General Conference has called upon all church members, who are willing and capable to take stewardships, to do so.

5th. Now at last comes the setting apart, in a solemn way, of Brother Y to his individual temporal stewardship. This is the process of making labor as sacred an activity as any activity in the Melchisedec Order.

We now understand what the record means when it says, speaking of those who will be of the celestial order, “These are they who are after the Order of Melchisedec: which is after the Order of Enoch; which is after the Order of the Son of Man.”

The Order of Enoch lifts its beneficiary upon a high spiritual plane—along by the side of those occupying the Melchisedec Order. Labor, a crying “need” of humanity, is made sacred by saturating it with the Spirit of God; and the enmity between capital and labor is vanished, for they are one in Christ Jesus.

We have now shown you why a person is made a member of the Order of Enoch—because the work he does is needed to help build up Zion. We have also shown how a person is made a member of this Order of Enoch. First, by being called by revelation and wisdom according to the gifts of those called; second, by the one called having it made known unto him of his calling; third, by the approval of the group or church; fourth, by making a solemn covenant. Having complied with these requirements, the person is a member of the Order of Enoch. Let us make another parallel between these two orders, showing orders or groups within each order.

ORDER OF MELCHISEDEC
(Spiritual Activities Grouped)

(1) Let A, B, and C be persons who have been set apart to the high priesthood, thus becoming members of the Order of Melchisedec.

(2) Now let A, B, and C be further organized or set apart to some group or order or quorum needed to do special work in this Order of Melchisedec, say missionary work. This will constitute our Quorum of Twelve, or an order of men to do needed missionary work. Here we have an order within an order. Here A, B, and C have another spiritual stewardship besides that of an individual spiritual steward of the Melchisedec Order. They have a group spiritual stewardship. The same analysis may be made of any other needed group or order or quorum in this Melchisedec Order, such as The First Presidency, the Order of Bishops, the Order of Evangelists, etc.

ORDER OF Enoch
(Temporal Activities Grouped)

(1) Let A, B, and C be persons who have been set apart to their several stewardships, thus becoming members of the Order of Enoch.

(2) Now let A, B, and C be further organized or set apart to some group or order or association needed to do special work in this Order of Enoch, say agricultural work. This will be composed of our farmers or an order or association of men. Here we have an order within an order.

Now A, B, and C have a group temporal stewardship as well as an individual temporal stewardship or that as a member of the Order of Enoch. The same analysis may be made of any other needed group or order or quorum or association in this Order of Enoch. We might mention doctors, educational instructors, agriculturists, miners, etc. If thought best, association may be formed of two or more of these various kinds of activities.

The Order of Enoch, then, is composed of individual temporal stewards who may eventually be united into group temporal stewardships. The several stewards make a covenant, which covenant is in brief, that each member agrees so to live that he will be motivated by the Spirit of Christ and that his objective is that of serving his fellow man.

Men may join together in groups or orders in spiritual affairs and not be supervised, regulated, and controlled by the laws of the land. The laws of the land consider that any religious denomination has the right to organize its spiritual force without any regulation or control unless, of course, if in so doing, it violates good morals or statutory enactments of the State. But when any religious body or any other kind of group of men attempts to organize groups of men or orders or associations for the better carrying on of their temporal activities either for providing better service or for making more profits, the state and nation have the right to demand that these groups shall be organized and regulated according to established laws, consequently the orders or business associations constituting this Order of Enoch must be so organized as not to violate the state or national laws.

Now, the laws of the state in which we reside make a distinction between associations formed primarily for service and an association formed primarily for profit.

They cannot be organized the same way, for the laws of the land forbid it.

Here, no doubt, is where it makes it more difficult for us to organize our temporal activities than it was for Enoch to organize. History seems to warrant us in believing that during his time church and state were united. For a wise reason, God has decreed that church and state should be kept separate until he comes to reign whose right it is to reign, even Jesus Christ; so in our attempt to organize our temporal affairs we should in no way try to break the laws of the land. Every member of our church should be loyal to the country of which he is a citizen. Right here let us note carefully the difference between the viewpoint of the state and the individual as to these organizations. The state does not consider the religious motive which causes the individual or individuals to organize. It considers only as to what is done. If the group is organized for profit, the state compels the group to organize under the statute or laws, if any, governing such groups or associations for profit.

If the individual or individuals organize for service, then the state allows the group to organize under the laws governing such class of organization. If the individual takes part in either an organization for profit or for service with the primary desire to serve humanity directly through an association for service or indirectly by making profit and using this profit to help his fellow man, it is the same thing in the sight of God; therefore, we may expect to find both of these forms of organizations or orders in the Order of Enoch. Let us now further analyze the Order of Enoch:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>ORDER OF ENOCH</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Organization for Profit (Creation of Wealth)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Organization for Service (Distribution of Wealth)</td>
<td>There is no doubt but this kind of order or organization will furnish the greater number of group organizations in the Order of Enoch are the ones instituted by God for the proper distribution of wealth. They get the wealth to distribute from the organization for profit. This organization is the one that &quot;lifts the poor&quot; until there are no poor. Its task is very difficult—to search out the wise, worthy, and faithful. Its task is to take the &quot;surplus&quot; paid by the &quot;organization for profit&quot; into the Bishopric treasury and supply the needs and just wants of every member of the church who is wise, worthy, and faithful. This class of organization is the business eyes and ears of the Bishopric in helping them to distribute the surplus coming to their office.</td>

My House

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

Some day, I cannot tell how soon 'twill be, I must vacate this wondrous house of mine, Where I have dwelt, lo, all my living days. It is, at least it seems, my very own; Yet in my heart I know 'tis only loaned While I sojourn as mortal here on earth.

This house of mine, most dear and intimate, Wherewith my spirit dwells and freely rules And answers only to the One Supreme Owner, Builder, and Designer of my house; Who kindly works with me to keep repaired The waste and all the damage I have done By careless usage or by willful acts, In disregarding kindly rules laid down For its upkeep, sanitation, sweetness That I, the tenant might have joy and gladness And comfort, freedom, joy in carrying on.

O blessed Landlord! Every effort made Upon my part, to keep intact my house 'Gainst inroads of innumerable hurtful things, Thou hast cooperated graciously; And intimately made me know. Oh, Master Builder! Oh, Gracious One! Thou art indeed my Everlasting Friend, And will provide for me, in time thine own, A lasting house that shall not pass away, And lease extending through eternity.

Enthusiasm plus Consecration equals Success

It was a big campaign when it started, but it has grown tremendously bigger as it developed, and the Saints all over the world caught the vision of the possibilities in this undertaking. The members of this church now face a great opportunity—what will your decision be?

The Endowment Fund Will "Buy the Land"

But this means work and effort and sacrifice. It will take many substantial pledges to raise $200,000, which means that every one, members and ministry, should do their full share.

The big campaign has gained wonderful momentum during the four months of preparation, and the Saints are rallying to the call of Zion to "buy the land."

But this is to be expected; the Saints have ALWAYS proven equal to the task of sustaining the Church.

THE CAMPAIGN IS GOING OVER ARE YOU GOING WITH IT?

What WILL your contribution be?

News from Campaign Workers

WICHITA, KANSAS, October 26, 1925.
Last Sunday, following a sermon on the college-stewardships endowment, the priesthood were called together and organized into committees to canvass the branch for campaign pledges. The solicitors themselves made a very liberal contribution, and we believe that Wichita will oversubscribe their quota. A long-distance call from Winfield Branch informs me they have already $122 pledged on their quota of $200. I am quite sure this district will make their quota.

Very sincerely,
THOMAS S. WILLIAMS.

Good News From California

Our committee on the Graceland endowment is fully organized and hard at work. We fully expect to go away over the top, and with ease, too. I was the speaker at San Francisco yesterday morning, and to my surprise at the end of my sermon they got out their pledge cards and raised over eighty per cent of their allotment right then. I am frank to acknowledge that I am ‘sold out’ entirely to the proposition and had good liberty in encouraging the Saints to support the drive. Sincerely,
V. B. ETZENHOUSER.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.
Quota $1,800. Raised $3,000 in thirty minutes.

WILLFORD, ARKANSAS, October 28, 1925.
THE PRESIDENT BISHOPRIC,
Independence, Missouri.
Dear Brethren: Just a line to let you know we are making progress in our endowment drive, and we have hopes of being able to oversubscribe our quota in the Arkansas District. The spirit of the work seems to be taking hold of the Saints, and we are enjoying the work greatly. To-day I walked several miles over rocks and hills to get in touch with some of the members who did not get to the church last night, but I can assure you that the spirit that we enjoyed in explaining to them the program of the church more than compensates for the work we are doing. It may be interesting for you to know that one sister here tells me that she carried her babe on one arm while she picked blackberries to earn her money to make her contribution to the college at the time it was being built, and that she felt blessed in the effort. Many years have passed since then, and many changes have taken place, but she says she is still behind the college and is going to give her mite to raise the endowment fund at the present time. Consecration of this kind is what it takes to put over the work for the establishing of stewardships.
One branch in this district has already oversubscribed its quota, and others are asking how much they can do more than is asked of them, so I feel confident we will raise our quota here. We are going to put forth our best efforts until the last penny of it is subscribed. I am encouraged in the outlook and am hopeful of being able to give the people of this district a much better understanding of the law of stewardships than they have had up until this time.

Yours very truly,
J. E. VANDERWOOD.

PORTLAND, OREGON, October 26, 1925.
THE PRESIDENT BISHOPRIC,
Independence, Missouri.
Dear Brethren: Pledge cards were distributed among the congregation of the Hood River Branch, Hood River, Oregon, yesterday morning, following a sermon by the district president on the subject of “Zion,” and the quota for the branch was completely subscribed. Some who were unable to attend the service wish to subscribe and will have their cards in soon, which will oversubscribe their quota about 50 per cent.

This is the first branch in the district to be canvassed, and is, we trust, an indication of the attitude of the Portland District toward the endowment-stewardship drive.
Will report more later.
Yours for $200,000.
Eli Bronson.
172 East 76th Street North.

HAMILTON, INDIANA, October 28, 1925
Bishop A. Carlsmith: Our branch is very enthusiastic over the endowment campaign, and we are sure of going over the top. Yours for success, ROY W. SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, October 29.
Following is an extract from a letter written to us by Ralph W. Farrell, who has recently returned from Nauvoo:
“Of interest to all of us, Nauvoo went $440 on the endowment pledge. At least its entire quota will be met—$350.”

E. A. Smith.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLAHOMA November 1.

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,
Independence, Missouri.
Graceland endowment pledged over quota. Considerable cash paid. Twenty-three hundred eleven pledged.
RUTH MUSSELL.

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA, October 21.
The First Presidency: We had a splendid day in Oakland Sunday, crowding the house to its capacity. It was said that the program was “put over.” The people here say that as far as the endowment fund is concerned, it will be raised at once—probably the first day.
J. A. Gilhen.

GAYLORD, MICHIGAN, October 28.
BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL:
Independence, Missouri.
Gaylord's quota of four hundred raised to-day.

WEBSTER GROVE, MISSOURI, November 1.
ALBERT CARMICHAEL:
Breentwood going over strong. Two hundred and forty-five dollars subscribed. ROY REMINGTON.

TOPEKA, KANSAS, November 1, 1925.
ALBERT CARMICHAEL:
Topeka and Scranton over one hundred fifty per cent. Expect two hundred per cent.
JACK GARDNER AND BERT LEWIS.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, November 1, 1925.
FREDERICK M. SMITH:
First and Second Columbus Branches over the top.
A. E. ANDERTON,
President First Columbus Branch.

HITEMAN, IOWA, November 2, 1925.
BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL:
Hiteman Branch, with small membership, and hard hit on account of unemployment, raised $660 yesterday. Group Oriole Girls, in charge of Anne Morgan, pledged $50 of this amount.
WILBER E. PRALL.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, November 1.
ELBERT A. SMITH:
Lakewood quota assured. Wade Park already half pledged. Received $4,500 from East Saint Louis. Send additional pledge cards quickly.
J. A. BECKER.

SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI, November 2.
BISHOP CARMICHAEL:
Telephone reports from the following branches in the Far West Stake show splendid results: First Saint Joseph Branch $1,578; Third Saint Joseph Branch, $250; Fourth Saint Joseph Branch, $177; Fifth Saint Joseph Branch, $65; Maple Grove, $600; Delano, $107; Alma, $170; Cameron, $580; Trenton, $94.
O. SALISBURY.

ROME, INDIANA, October 19.
Presiding Bishopric: Please send me 250 more pledge cards. All the members in our branch are becoming vitally interested in raising the $200,000 endowment fund, and I believe we will go over the top.
Yours in gospel bonds,
LEONARD GLENN.

WEBB, SASKATCHEWAN, October 23.
Bishop Carmichael: I do not anticipate any difficulty in realizing the amount allotted to our district, the Southern Saskatchewan. I think we will go over the top easy. We are busy making ready for the drive, having organized the Bethune Branch, the Findlater, and at this writing I am with the Webb Saints. Hope to get to Viceroy, also Weyburn, in good time to do the work of organizing the branches.
Success to the drive for the college.
Sincerely yours,
OTIS L. D'ARCY.

NOW is the Time

When the outlook is hopeful and a wonderful beginning has been made, for us to make success secure Don't LET some other member do your share, for when the campaign is over and the final report made, you will be sorry if you do, but happy if you don't.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success

And if every member does his full share, it is actually within our reach NOW. The call of Zion to "buy land," to "gather," to "colonize in the regions round about," "to redeem the land by purchase," has pulled at the heartstrings of the Saints for years.

The Faith of Our Fathers

Do you realize that this campaign is actually a start in the redeeming process? Let us justify the "faith of our fathers," whose toil and sacrifice make possible the opportunity of this church to-day.

Integrity Counts

Deep-seated in the consciousness of every Latter Day Saint is the integrity of heart and purpose to help in the redemption of Zion. But do you realize that the prayers of a century are about to be answered?

A LIBERAL PLEDGE FROM EACH MEMBER IN THIS ENDOWMENT-STEWARDSHIP CAMPAIGN WILL MAKE SUCCESS ASSURED.

What WILL your contribution be?

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief
Being an account of a trip to the Great West.

When I am at home attending to office duties and giving what time I can to the affairs of Zion, quite frequently by letter and in conversation I am told that I should travel more and “visit all the branches,” so the Saints may become acquainted with their president. When I am away from home; traveling and visiting various branches, districts, conferences, conventions, etc., I am by letter, telegrams, special deliveries, air mail, and in conversation reminded that there are certain office and desk tasks which “go by the board” when I am away from the desk, and that department officers, Saints visiting Independence, business men, HERALD officials, and others have a right to find the president at his desk. So what is a poor president to do?

Shortly after the time mentioned in my last letter to the HERALD, I was at home again and at the routine of office and home duties. These are usually plenty in number and exacting of time and energy; but add to these the tasks contingent upon council sessions, and it is something different from “nothing to do till to-morrow.” The council of Presid­ency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric met on September 15 and held regular daily sessions till the 6th of October, the regular order being a session from ten o’clock to twelve each forenoon, and two o’clock to four o’clock, with an occasional night session, though the evenings were largely left free for committee work. Between the dates mentioned, the council of Presidency, Twelve, and Order of Bishops also held several sessions, and the Appropriations Committee met several times.

So it is little to be wondered at that when on the evening of the 7th of October I left Kansas City I found my portfolio (portfolios, in fact) bulging with papers demanding reading and writing and with the necessary writing materials and supplies to last over a somewhat extended itinerary.

As the first objective of this trip was connected with the financial department of the church, with me were Bishops Carmichael and Smith, the latter along to advise with us on legal matters. We were headed for Marble, Colorado, and to tell about this business I shall reserve for another letter. It is an interesting story, the outcome of which is at least in doubt.

The Burlington train on which we took passage, Number 15, left Kansas City about half past nine in the evening, and after a short chat we; three retired. To chase business matters away in the interests of sleep, I spent a few moments with the Scientific American and a book on steel, then turned out the light and sought Morpheus.

By daylight next morning the train was well into Ne­braska; and as the scenery along this route is a bit uniform, fine prairie farms and meadows, low-banked rivers, rolling swells, grazing cattle, and expansive wheat and cornfields, and as the route was familiar because of frequent passage, there was little to detract my attention from the papers on the table before me. So I read and wrote, wrote and read, while from the seats behind me I could, as my attention was momentarily directed to it, hear the conversation of the two bishops as they discussed at length the details of many church problems. In these discussions I at times joined, and at times they, too, were writing or reading.

We had expected to reach Denver in time to call on some railroad officials on transportation matters, but a change in schedule had lengthened the time of our trip by an hour and a half, so it was past five when Brother McConley met us. A brief council decided that I. A. would go on to Glen­wood that night and that Brother Carmichael and I would stay over till the next day. So Brother McConley took us to the home of Sister Mitchell, where we were hospitably cared for, and where we met and visited with Brother My­ron’s family, his father and mother, several relatives, and others.

The forenoon of the 9th was spent by Bishop Carmichael and me calling on the railroad men referred to, making reservations, buying tickets, etc., and in a visit to E. J. Wil­liamson’s mill, where we did not see hogs but saw progressive from business) but did see and have a short visit with Brother A. J. Keck, a one-time missionary and fellow labor­er with Brother Carmichael in former years. Then a third or four-mile walk “for exercise” back to the Mitchell home for lunch and further visiting. Among others met then was Doctor Moore (woman), a close friend of the McCon­ley’s, and her son James (an undertaker). A physician and an undertaker in the same family: Is that a fortuitous combination? Anyway, they are fine people and have been good friends to Myron and family, both in this country and in Hawaii. Mr. James Moore took us in his big car to the depot in ample time to get Train Number 3 on the D. & R. G. W. Railway, due out at four in the afternoon, and due in Glenwood Springs at six forty-two the next morning.

I said we were in ample time. We were. So, bags in the car, I did what I always like to do, walked to the front of the train, looked the locomotive over, and “inspected the train” on the way back. I have always been interested in the D. & R. G. engines. It is distinctly a mountain road, its entire mileage being at elevations of from about four thousand feet (Green River) to ten thousand eight hundred feet (Marshall Pass). Of course, motive power is designed accordingly—that is, for heavy grades, sharp curves, and safety in wild places. It happened that day that on the track next to the one on which our train was awaiting departure time, was a Union Pacific locomotive, standing near the D. & R. G. W. locomotive. The U. P. engine was of the type used by that road and other to pull their trains across the long prairie stretches of eastern Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, and Iowa. The contrast between the two locomotives was marked. It was like seeing a mastiff and a greyhound side by side.

The engine and train looked all right to me, so I went to the rear just in time to mount the steps of the car we were to ride in as the train got under way. I had intended getting a table and resuming writing; but as I went through the door into the coach, I saw a man who once met is easily forgotten) of several sons (just how many we have not) of George Q. Cannon are not easily mistaken for some one else. With him was a Shaffroth, son of former United States Senator Shaffroth. Mr. Shaffroth is a promi­nent lawyer (a former attorney general, and now a judge) politician as well. Mr. Cannon is probably quite well known to most HERALD readers. He is one (which one number we do not know) of several sons (just how many we have forgotten) of George Q. Cannon, who in turn was an associate of Brigham Young and was one of the statesmen of the “Mormon” Church, and who wrote a “Life of Joseph Smith,” said by Frank J. to be the best written. (Of that perhaps more later.) Frank J. Cannon, it will be recalled, was for many years quite prominent in “Mormon” circles and at one time served the State of Utah in the United States Senate, being at the time the youngest member of the Senate. Some twenty years or so ago he became somewhat rebellious and was excommunicated from the church in Utah and became an active foe of that organization by writing and lecturing against it and also fighting it po­litically. He was one of the organizers and founders of the American Party, meteoric in its career so far as time is concerned but quite effective while it lasted.

Mr. Cannon is well informed on many subjects, especially on “Mormon” history and the workings of the church in Utah. He is a very versatile conversationalist and unusually capable in linguistic expression. My presence usually had the effect of starting him on “Mormon” history. And so it did this time. Calling Bishop Carmichael, I introduced Mr. Cannon and Mr. Shaffroth to him, and he joined the party. Well, we talked or listened to Mr. Cannon till dinner time; then as his guests repaired to the diner where we ate and talked till late, then back to the coach and visited some more, or till bedtime. And again in the morning, for on an excursion by train I had found the kindness of Mr. Shaffroth and Mr. Shaffroth detaining at Glenwood Springs to drive to Aspen, while we were detaining at the same place to drive to Marble. I was glad to have seen Mr. Cannon again, to hear him talk, and to tell him a few things myself. And we found Mr. Shaffroth a congenial companion and a very interesting listener.

As Brother Carmichael and I alighted at the Glenwood Springs that morning (October 9), we were met by I. A., and a few minutes later by Eben Miller, jr.; and still a little later we were joined (while at the breakfast table in a small restaurant) by Mr. Hetherington, an attorney of Denver. This made up the party which a few minutes later started for Marble in a Dodge touring car which was neither new nor experienced, for it had been a prominent actor in one or two pretty serious accidents. Once or twice in the night I had been dimly conscious that it was raining. I became much more than dimly conscious of rain on that trip. From Glenwood Springs to Carbondale, about thirteen miles, the roads are fairly well graded and good to travel over. We made that in good time comfortably, through a drizzling rain. A stop there for gasoline, oil, and car and tire, and we were off again. Brother Eben Miller, jr., or “Eben, jr.,” as he is usually called, was at the wheel; and from observing him as I sat beside him on that trip up to Marble, and some days later down again, I can say he knows what mountain driving is, and can do it safely. Mountain roads are bad enough when dry, and rain does not improve them; but at that rain does not mean much or little in the way of improvement. Besides, the roads in some parts run barely wide enough for the car between rock on one side and top where trails of any kind were not to be seen.

The road to Marble from Carbondale varies from fairly good in places to distinctly bad in spots. Not much money is spent on its repair, and the money allowed each year by the various counties through which it runs barely suffices each spring to repair washouts and remove mud from rock slides. Most of the winter the road is closed, for few at all times dare to venture out more than a few miles with them that it does with Missouri or Iowa dirt roads.

I spoke of mountain roads. “Road” in the Rocky Mountains may mean much or little in the way of improvement. It may mean anything from a well-graded and paved highway to a mere passageway over and around rocks and through trees; but being a “road” it is supposed to be passable for horse-drawn or motor-driven vehicles. “Road” thus distinguishes this kind of passageway from “trail.” Trail is a passageway for man or beast (horse, deer, cattle, goat, or sheep) up slope, down hill, through glen and glade, round cliff, over passes, through “quakers,” or pine or other forest, varying from faintly seen (sometimes blazed) paths to some well-graded and carefully worked ones. On this trip to Colorado I’ve seen all kinds and even had the experience of trackling a long line on top of a mountain. It is much easier to notice the rain as they, with fine cow-puncher skill, worked among this drove of cattle which seemed unafraid of horse or automobile but would sooner get excited in the middle of a foot.

By half past ten or eleven o’clock Marble was reached, where we were greeted by Eben Miller, sr., Mrs. Eben Miller, jr., and Mr. H. L. Johnson. And I can assure you we found ourselves ready for the wholesome lunch we found spread before us at noon by Mrs. Miller and Miss Sauers, a niece of Mr. Johnson.

After lunch, Mr. Johnson, the two Millers, Mr. Hetherington, I. A., Bishop Carmichael, and I entered upon the conference for which we had made the long and not easy journey to Marble. This conference continued until after the sun had gone behind the high peaks to the west of the town. Then Brothers Carmichael and Smith and Mr. Hetherington were taken by Eben, jr., back towards Glenwood Springs in the eagle-eyed act of catching a train sometime near midnight for Denver. Of their experiences I cannot speak, except to say that next day I learned that tire trouble had necessitated some walking (still in the rain) and much delay, so that the train would have been missed except that it had been delayed by washouts, not tire trouble.

About the subject matter of the conference had that afternoon, the 10th, I hope to tell you sometime.

I expected to remain in Marble for two or three days, so I brought my bed by to the brethren. Besides, while they were returning to Denver and thence home, my plans called for me to go on westward from Glenwood.

I have spoken of the rain. It kept up, intermittently, all day Saturday, and the heavy clouds hovering around the mountain peaks surrounding the town indicated storms in the heights. When the storm clouds would at times momentarily break away and a high peak in the peaks, it was seen that they were white. It was snowing high up in the mountains. And as I expected to do some tramping and climbing in those mountains before leaving, I skirmished around for suitable clothing. Light shoes and usual business man’s suit were quite unfit for mountain rambles.

When it comes to finding clothing for emergencies, a big man in a small town is decidedly at a disadvantage. And so I found it there. Looking for "overalls," I visited all the stores (two) in Marble. At one I luckily found a pair of jeans trousers large enough (46), and at the other I found a jacket which would cover (50). About shoes? Well, a running mate of Mr. Johnson's, a young prospector and at present marshall of Marble, a raw-boned, big-footed, big-handed mountaineer, railroad engineer (and what not), had a pair of high-topped boots which he was not then using; and, much to my surprise, they fit. So that's that. This outfitting was done in the early evening. Afterwards we spent the evening chatting beside a warm (hot) stove in which a merry wood fire roared and smoldered as conditions seemed to demand. We talked of rugged big-footed, big-handed mountaineer, railroad engineer, and miner. What is more, he is an experienced and very capable photographer. And you may be sure we were never short of topics when we wanted to talk. When I thought to turn to my portfolio and its awaiting work, it seemed out of place there. But the evening was short, for we retired early; and in that crisp, fresh, clear mountain air I slept soundly and restfully. The next day was Sunday. We were up early, and after breakfast the time was spent in reading and chatting. For a while I wrote some letters to send back to the office; then I quit and when not chatting I read. But then, there was something else to do. The cottage we were in sits on the slope on the north side of the town. It is, as I said, about 8,000 feet above sea level. The summit of the mountain from which the cottage was almost on the top of the summit of the mountain from which the cottage was almost seen the top of the summit of the mountain from which the cottage was almost seen. The summit of the mountain from which the cottage was almost seen. From the cottage door one can look across the east end of the town, over the little lake, slightly to the east and see White House Mountain lifting its craggy peak high above the little village to a height of near fourteen thousand feet. It was covered with snow and was a glorious sight when the clouds would permit seeing it. It was close to two miles from the cottage to the top of White House Mountain, and one could hear the wind blow in a stone to it. Up past the base of White House, to the right or west, runs Yule Creek; and looking up the canyon of Yule Creek, away in the distance, behind White House, rises the glorious top of Treasury Mountain, a bit higher than White House. Straight across the valley was the Ragged Mountain Range, and far to the west can be caught through the trees glimpses of Chair Mountain, while behind, to the north, White House Mountain, though hidden by the foothills between, up to the east of Marble runs beautiful Crystal Canyon, through which come tumbling the waters of Crystal River, harnessed just east of the town and made to turn the wheels of dynamos which light the town and furnish power for its industries. What wonderful sights! I found myself going often to the door to watch the rain falling in valley and on slope and catch glimpses of snowstorms whirling around cliffs high up in the tops of the mountains; to see dense white clouds shroud the mountain from sight, then lift or roll away to afford entrancing vistas of snow-clad crags and pine-clothed slopes. Sometimes the sun, breaking through a rift, would momentarily bathe distant Treasury Mountain in a glow of silvery light, making it glint like the jewels one thinks of when its name is spoken. How quickly does the scene change! Up Whining is the Ragged Mountains dark clouds roll up, knott ing black and threatening. Over the peaks they come tumbling, and down the slope towards the town. The enchanting distant vistas are shut off, while rain falls on the town and snow in the mountains again. And so the day was one of charming change from quiet, brilliant vistas to rolling storm clouds. Which did I enjoy the most? I cannot say; for nature is ever wonderful. Is this the gift my nature that makes me love a storm? I always have. As a boy I used to run out into the thunder showers so common in Iowa. I loved to see the great black clouds mass and come stately and threateningly on ward, to sense the rush of the first wind of the coming storm, to feel the dash of the first great drops, and then hear the crash of thunder and the downpour of heavy rain. I visited the Highlands of Scotland once. Out from Glasgow to Sterling, then to a small town where we left the train to go up into the regions of Loch Katrine, made famous by Scott's Lady of the Lake. We hired a Ford and drove for the ride. It proved to be a wild day. The wind blew like a Kansas cyclone (almost). It would seize the car and shake it as though to say, "How dare you bring those Yanks here!" The small lakes we passed were lashed into angry bits of water, and the rain pelted the curtains of the car furiously. But it was a day after my heart, for it seemed to fit so perfectly into that wild and rugged country. We were finally stopped by a big tree blown across the road, and as the storm had ceased and the storm gauntlet passed, we walked the rest of the distance to Captain McKinnon's house. What a day that was! It stands out in my memory among all the days spent in Europe. I want to tell of that little journey sometime. Do you wonder that I kept going to the door of that little cottage on the mountain side to look, and even to stand in the rain to see the changes wild and mild, bright and dark, soft and rough, which nature was working that day? And the splendid isolation of it, too! It was restful. As I write these lines, I am in the midst of conditions quite in contrast. I am at the writing desk of a big hotel. Outside can be heard the rumbling and muffled roar of a growing, big, busy city. Within I have been listening, as I write, to the sweet strains of an orchestra playing, not jazz, but classical music, though it requires a battery of instruments to play. And side by side with the music one can hear faintly the strains of "Calling Mr. Silverberg," "Calling Mr. Cohen." I'm back in civilization! But even in writing I have enjoyed again (in memory) my visit to Marble.

Utah Experiences a Good Conference

Utah district conference, held in Salt Lake City October 17 and 18, opened with a business session Saturday at half past two with District President G. P. Levitt in the stand, associated with Apostle C. F. Ellis, Elder E. B. Hull acting as clerk. After the reading of reports, a letter coming from the district president was read. The letter contained some resolutions that were considered and adopted. These resolutions being adopted, places the departments of the district on a better working basis and thereby places our work in the Utah District on a more constructive working basis.

District officers were chosen. Brother Levitt received the unanimous vote of the conference that he be sustained as district president. E. B. Hull was chosen as vice president and to act as Sunday school superintendent of the district.

Sister Anna Coleman was sustained as district secretary; Brother R. F. Hewes as financial agent; Sister E. B. Hull as superintendent of the Department of Women and District chorister. Brother Herbert Bightman, a young man from the Ogden Branch, was chosen to act as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Saturday evening Brother Ellis was the speaker. He presented to his listeners in a most splendid manner the fact that they were stewards over their bodies, their spirits, and their minds. His sermon was filled with beautiful thoughts along this line.

Sunday at a quarter of ten, there was prayer service in charge of Brother Ellis, Levitt, and Leigh. A great degree of the Spirit was felt in this service. Testimonies were heard from the young as well as the old. At eleven Brother Ellis was the speaker, giving a most beautiful speech on stewardships. The service was in charge of Brother R. F. Hewes. The noon hour was cared for in a small town where we left the train to go up into the regions of Loch Katrine, made famous by Scott's Lady of the Lake. We hired a Ford and drove for the ride. It proved to be a wild day. The wind blew like a Kansas cyclone. It would seize the car and shake it as though to say, "How dare you bring those Yanks here!" plete were it not for the untiring efforts of the handmaidens of the church, and Salt Lake has those who are dependable.

At half past two Brother Levitt preached one of his splendid sermons on Zion and our responsibility. Following this service a round table was conducted by Brother Ellis. The evening meal was cared for in the parlors by the ladies.

At half past seven Brother Ellis, who spoke to us again, was greeted with a full house. His subject dealt with Grace.

He very forcibly portrayed the necessity of religious education in this age. We might say that the theme that was carried out in our conference was stewardships. The people appreciated it and expressed a willingness to learn more about the social philosophy of the gospel as revealed to the church.

Brother Ellis endeared himself to the people, and they wish him back. He and Brother Levitt had something in common. They are both a product of Michigan and seemed to be proud of Michigan as a Latter Day Saint State.

Conference over, and we go home with higher ideals and a greater desire to assist in the work of the church. Our work in the district has taken on a new outlook and this is encouraging.

We need the faith and prayers of the Saints, for our lot is different from what it is in other fields.

Wheeling District Holds Fine Conference

One of the best conferences held by the Wheeling District since its organization was that held at Wheeling September 5 and 6. We regret the delay in spreading the good news.

The first session was that occupied by the Sunday school business at 10 a.m. Saturday in which the progressive attitude was forecast by action being taken to arrange for a young people's convention to be held next year. Brother W. A. Schoenian was reelected district superintendent, Ingram McVey was elected assistant superintendent, and Anna Schoenian was reelected district chorister.

Brother Ellis, who spoke to us again, said sermons on Michigan as a Latter Day Saint State.

Oh, my people, can it be; Sayeth the voice of Him on high, After all with which I've blessed thee Some will yet my work deny?

Oh, my people, you will find Blessings great in store for thee, If with one united mind Ye will serve and worship me.

While before me ye have gathered And have prayed that I should speak, I would ask, Would ye be bettered Till my former laws ye keep?

Some to-day who've called upon me, Have found favor in my sight; But some as the barren fig tree, Have but leaves, and they show blight.

As of old I cursed the fig tree On which no fruitage did appear, But some as the barren fig tree, Have but leaves, and they show blight.

AGreat important business was transacted at this session. First, a resolution providing for investigating the advisability of forming a reunion association with the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Districts, our neighboring districts on the south and east, was defeated. Our district belongs to the Kirtland Reunion Association, as does the other two mentioned. Provision was made for a district two-day meeting to be held semiannually, each branch to take its turn; also for a special conference to be held at Wheeling, West Virginia, the first Saturday and Sunday in March, to elect delegates to the General Conference and to transact such other business as may seem advisable. A motion was adopted providing that each branch be requested to contribute $20 for the work of the district this year, except that those that contributed during the past year deduct the amount from their $20.

The election resulted in O. J. Tary being reelected district president, Willard Allen and L. A. Serig elected vice presidents, and Samuel Martin reelected secretary-treasurer. Anna Schoenian as district chorister, Oma Montgomery as pianist, and William Richards as Bishop's agent, were sustained by vote.

The Sunday morning priesthood meeting was attended by 27, with some others coming in before the close, and was featured by the ordination of Brother Fred Thornton of Wellsburg to the office of deacon and an address by Patriarch John F. Martin. Brother Martin's theme was "Life through death," and it was delivered under the melting influence of the Holy Spirit, felt by all, and was made to apply to our own peculiar conditions.

The Sunday school session at 10 o'clock was in charge of the district superintendent, assisted by the local superintendent, with 160 present, exclusive of those who came in near the close. The district offering amounted to $5.28 and the Christmas offering to $7.10. Instead of class work, splendid talks were given by James Bishop, J. D. Shower, and James S. Stock.

If any one part of the conference was better than the rest it was the sacramental and social service in the afternoon in charge of Brethren Tary, Martin, and Bishop. Following the communion the baby daughter of Sister Helen Dukeker was blessed. The number of testimonies was thirty; and Elder Thomas L. Clark related how, during the Sunday school session, he felt impelled to retire to his room in Brother Serig's home for prayer, during which he was directed by the Spirit to write as the words of the following song came to him, and he sang it to the tune of "Silver threads among the gold":

A beautiful gift was also delivered through Brother J. F. Martin in which the Lord told us he was pleased with our assembling together, and we were admonished to "consecrate material talents as well as spiritual," and we were promised there would be a great ingathering of souls in our district if we did our part. Consolation and admonition were directed to three of the Saints present.

Grand sermons were preached during the conference by Thomas L. Clark, John F. Martin, and James D. Bishop. Brother James McConnaughey was also among the visiting elders present. Meals were served free in the new basement room of the church four times during the conference, and an offering of $31.60 was taken at the Sunday afternoon service, to help pay for the foodstuff. It did not cover the expenses, but greatly lessened the burden on the local Saints. Many other features of the conference might be mentioned, but I fear that we have already imposed upon the valuable Herald space. May we have many more such conferences!

SAML A. MARTIN, District Secretary.

Lucasville, Ohio

October 21.—Those of our number who attended district conference at Middletown, Ohio, September 25, 26, and 27, were disappointed in the attendance. As conference was held in a city they counted on a large congregation, and the attendance instead was small. Brother Ed Wigget, of Middletown, Ohio, was pleased that this conference was held in their midst. We are having good crowds at all services except mid-week prayer meeting. The Saints here are trying harder to live their religion, and the Spirit of the Master has been in our midst at nearly every service.

Sacramental service was held October 4, and a goodly number were present, and we were blessed with the gift of tongues and the interpretation. We were pleased to have with us at this service Elder Ed Wigget and others.

Brother and Sister Edgar Bealor have a fine new daughter, and Brother and Sister William Cox have a fine baby boy. There has been some sickness among the Saints in the branch.

Brother Mark Crabtree left on the 18th for Buena Vista, Ohio, where he will preach for a couple of weeks. The true gospel has never yet been taken to these people, and we feel sure he will make friends and probably have good interest there. He will stay with Brother and Sister Relcro.

We are pleased to say the Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard are trying to move on and help build up Zion.

Artland, Saskatchewan

October 19.—A community supper held at the hall last Friday night to increase the Christmas offering fund was considered a decided success. The patrons were served in cafeteria style. There was a short program that was well received. There were not so many out as there would have been had there not been so many who were thrashing and doing other pressing work of the season. The proceeds amounted to $17.15. Others who could not attend sent contributions to the amount of $7, thus making a fair total of $24.15. Incidentally a good time was had. The committee to whom praise is due for this undertaking were Sister Beatrice Huggett, Sister E. Leslie Mogg, and Sister A. James Cornish. Perhaps a bazaar before Christmas will swell the Christmas offering fund still more.

Recently a very interesting speaker from Niagara Falls, Elder Samuel Tomlinson, preached for us. He has a gentle, kindly manner and discoursed so mildly yet convincingly on righteousness, judgment, and the beauties of Christian life that it seemed it must be so. In his second sermon he regaled us with his experiences in the gospel, some of which were indeed thrilling. From here he went to preach in Michigan Branch, and they also enjoyed his message.

Elder Roy Land from Shellbrook gave a discourse on character lately, which was timely and was taken to heart by the Saints.

Last Sunday evening Elder William J. Levitt of Michigan Branch addressed the Saints on the final destiny of man.

Sister J. J. Cornish has been entertaining her brother, James H. Stratton, and her niece, Sister Bessie Largent, of Kansas City. Brother Stratton was J. J. Cornish's first cousin many years.

Elder J. J. Cornish was chosen teacher of the senior class in Sunday school, to succeed Brother Joseph Bates who resigned to accept the presidency of Michigan Branch.

Sister Thomas Pentland expects to leave for Michigan to visit relatives and friends.

While mention has been made of the visitors to the branch who have been preaching here, we would also like to mention Brother J. H. Stratton who preached, laying great stress on the Word of Wisdom. Favorable comments were heard.

Not to forget our local men, we note that Elder E. Leslie Mogg has given some especially stirring sermons lately on evangelism and other themes, also Elder J. J., W. J., and A. J. Cornish.

A Missionary Writes of What Graceland Means

By Elder Eli Bronson, Hood River, Oregon

I take great pleasure in saying a word in the interest of Graceland, for in my book of remembrance there are several pages indelibly stamped with the happiest, most inspirational and beneficial memories of my experience; and as I recall them to-day they stand out prominently before a background of "Navy and Old Gold" and seem to be artistically interwoven with the graceful letters, G-R-A-C-E-L-A-N-D.

The variety of experiences that I recall depends upon the mood in which I find myself. During the hours of study and meditation, trying to prepare myself to tell the gospel story in a simple, forceful, and intelligent way, I feel to thank God for the days at Graceland where I actually learned how to study. Many of the lessons learned during those years of 1910, 1911, and 1912 can now be recalled only in a general way, or in the actual experiences of life which are richer and more intelligent because of them.

And again, when I find myself in the spirit of prayer or devotion I still feel the influence of the spiritual atmosphere of Graceland. The chapel service, the midweek prayer service, the Religio at the church, Athenian, Sunday school, and in fact every social activity under the direction of the college, carried with it a spirit that has helped me, and many others I am sure, to understand and appreciate more fully the "more abundant life" and to avoid many of the pitfalls and snares of this sinful generation. I say without the least degree of hesitation that there is no place in the world, outside of the home, where our young people will receive greater spiritual encouragement than in Graceland. Can you say some have fallen there? Yes; perhaps. Some have fallen from heaven. The agency of man is not taken away at Grace-land. In fact every social activity under the direction of the college, carried with it a spirit that has helped me, and many others I am sure, to understand and appreciate more fully the "more abundant life" and to avoid many of the pitfalls and snares of this sinful generation. I say without the least degree of hesitation that there is no place in the world, outside of the home, where our young people will receive greater spiritual encouragement than in Graceland. Can you say some have fallen there? Yes; perhaps. Some have fallen from heaven. The agency of man is not taken away at Graceland, but I declare, if he fails there it is not the fault of that institution.

When necessarily practicing economy, as missionaries sometimes do, I again feel thankful for the lessons learned at Graceland. There, in those days, a dime represented an hour of hard work, and that makes a boy think twice before he spends that dime. My regular job happened to be to fire the boiler from 4 o'clock in the morning until 8.45 a.m. That was a good job and taught me some good habits, but it was not quite enough to pay all expenses, so Saturdays were often spent washing windows, blacking stoves, mowing lawns, spading gardens, or whatever else could be found to do. Father and mother helped me all they could, but you know it was a wonderful thing for a boy to learn to help himself. That is one of the lessons taught at Graceland.

When I come in contact with good young people of the church, whose only associates are those of the world and whose social activities are of a worldly and often degrading nature, I would to God that we had a Graceland in every State of the Union and many of them throughout all the nations of the world. I cannot tell how thankful I am that wise parents, kind friends, and Providence made it possible for me to enjoy the association of Graceland students. and faculty during that very critical period of my life. As a member of the “rough-neck gang” along with Bob, Hutch, Eli, Kelley, and Worland, some “stunts” were pulled off which no doubt gave our good dean, Brother Berve, reason to believe that we did not fully appreciate our splendid opportunities, and he was right, but they were appreciated far more than it may have seemed at that time, and I often wonder what our lives might have been had it not been for Graceland. Oh, what a joy this life would be if our whole life could be spent in a world of society such as that! Thus I find myself intellectually, spiritually, economically, socially, and morally indebted to Graceland.

Activities in Owen Sound District

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO, October 25.—Our special day meetings throughout the district have been brought to a close. A number from here motored to Grand Valley last Sunday to attend their anniversary services. Reports are to the effect that all meetings were of a very high order.

We are pleased to have Apostles M. A. McConley and J. F. Curvis in our district, who have visited our branch here. We are grateful for their presence and wise counsel, and trust that the same will be greatly missed here. We extend our best regards to Brother and Sister Smith in their new home.

The sad news of the death of Brother Harvey Sagle, of Manitoulin Island, was received here this week. Quite a number here were acquainted with him, and we feel that we voice the sentiments of this branch in extending our deepest sympathy to his loved ones in their sad bereavement.

We are glad to report Sister Mortimer’s condition as greatly improved. It seemed an evidence of God’s love to note her smiling face in our assemblies last Sabbath.

The following resolutions were adopted at the last district conference, Providence Bay, Manitoulin Island, Ontario, July 4, 1925:

"To the Wife and Family of the Late James L. Mortimer, Owen Sound, Ontario:

“We, the district conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, assembled on this date, passed a unanimous resolution expressing our heartfelt sympathy with the widow and family of our dear departed brother, whose long and faithful service in the missionary field has brought many in this district to a saving knowledge of the truth as contained in the restored gospel.

"His later years of service in district work have been very cheering and encouraging to us, and his testimony of the power of God displayed on his behalf has had the effect of increasing our faith and confidence in God and has actuated us with desire to love God more and to serve him better.

"Thus we can sympathize with you in our mutual loss of his kindly presence and wise counsel, and trust that the same power that sustained him in hours of adversity and need may be with you to sustain and bless.

"Nevertheless, as his warefare is accomplished and we believe his victory won, we would not ask him back again to the pain and sorrow of this mortal state, but trust that his example of faith and loyalty to God and his cause may characterize you as well as us, so that in the glorious morn of the first resurrection we may be worthy of a happy reunion.

Signed by committee on behalf of conference,

"JOHN SHIELDS.

"J. H. TAYLOR.

"G. C. TOMLINSON, SR."

The weather here is now resembling fall. The trees look very beautiful with their changing tints of autumn verdure. Ere long the leaves will be scattered over the ground, and a few feet of snow will hide them from view.

Our prayer is for the advancement of the stewardship program and the final redemption of Zion.

Mallard, Iowa

October 20.—We are still letting our light shine in this small branch.

September 20) Brother and Sister Edwards were visitors here, and Brother Edwards was the morning speaker.

Brother William Batt and his son Robert, also his daughters Edna and Edith and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. William F. Batt, all of Armstrong, attended the morning service, after which the two daughters were baptized by Brother Moroni Traxler of Lamoni, who was also a visitor. We are glad to welcome these sisters into the faith.

In the afternoon a large delegation drove to Marathon, where services were held at the home of our aged Sister Harthorn, who is unable to go to any branch to attend services. She enjoyed the meeting very much. The speakers were Brother Edwards, Brother Traxler, and Brother Robert Fish. All were repaid for making the trip.

On October 18 we had four visitors at services, Mrs. T. Anderson and her daughter Vanda, Miss Florence Nelson of Salt Lake City, and Mr. Herman Olson and Mr. Tatt of South Dakota. None of them are members of the church, but they seemed to be very much interested in learning the difference between us and the Utah people.

How wonderful it would be if we could all be united, and the separation had never occurred! What a large band we would be! However, if we are only faithful to the end all will be well.

Five Baptisms and Much Activity

FARGO, NORTH DAKOTA, October 26.—The Saints here have had their spirits revived and faith renewed by a visit from Elder Swen Swenson on his way home from Washington. He preached several evenings and on Sunday, and his sermons were very spiritual.

Elder J. E. Wildermuth of Illinois and Brother Goldsmith of Montana have also visited the Saints and given many hours of good instruction and comfort.

On Sunday, October 4, Elder W. E. Shakespeare held services, baptizing five in the church font in the afternoon. Those baptized are: Roy Weddle, Doris Peterson, Ava Shackow, Irma Walker, and Avis Walker. They were confirmed the same evening by Brethren Shakespeare and Leitch.

The Department of Women held an open meeting at the church Wednesday evening, September 16. A short program was rendered, and refreshments were served.

Saints gathered at the home of Brother and Sister E. E. Weddle one evening recently for a social time in honor of Sister Emma Oakes. The evening was very pleasantly spent, with delicious refreshments served at the end.

Sister Florence Rife has undergone an operation for appendicitis and is getting along very well.

Brother and Sister John Rotaen are the proud parents of a baby boy born October 2 at Saint Luke’s Hospital. Mother and son are doing nicely.

Sister Barbara Thompson of Clifford has been spending several weeks with Saints here.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
On October 26 Brother and Sister M. Rasmussen, of Sykewton, North Dakota, stopped long enough to greet us, on their way to spend the winter in Florida. They expect to locate at Independence in the spring.

Sister Margaret Weddle has gone to Burlington, North Dakota, to spend the winter.

Brother N. C. Anderson, of Clifford, Sister Fetting and husband of Bezup, Minnesota, and Brother Jerome Stowell of Flasher, spent Sunday, October 11, rally day, here.

Sister Emma Oakes of Dunseith visited a few days with her daughter here, Mrs. Minnie Peterson, on her way to Independence to spend the winter with relatives. She was accompanied from Battle Lake, Minnesota, by her sister, Mrs. Orvis Abertson.

The young folks met at the home of Sister S. M. Brown and gave a farewell party in honor of Brother Frank Weddle before his departure for Lamoni where he is attending Graceland.

Sisters Naideen and Eleanor Moore, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, have returned to Fargo to make their home.

Sister F. J. Rotzen and husband, of Hazelton, North Dakota, have been visiting the home of Brother Rotzen.

Sister Worth Conley has gone to sherwood, North Dakota, for a short stay.

Several of the Saints have been suffering from colds, and with snow on the ground we are reminded that we are still in North Dakota.

Brother Charles Young of LaMoore spent Sunday, October 4, here.

Sister Roy Freeman of Arthur visited with Saints recently.

The classes in Religio are now taking up the study of stewardship and our social program.

Des Moines, Iowa

On October 2 the seven groups of the Department of Women of the Des Moines Branch met at the city library and were addressed by Sister M. A. Etzenhouser. There were sixty-five people present, and about sixteen of those were social workers of the city who were anxious to hear something that would benefit them in their work. To those who know Sister Etzenhouser, it is needless to say that no one was disappointed, for she always has her subject well in hand, and because of her practical ability and enthusiasm all were well paid by hearing her. We should be glad for her hand, and because of her practical ability and enthusiasm all who heard her appreciated the interesting manner in which she has helped us.

We still hope to be worshipping in our new church building by Thanksgiving Day. There has been considerable inclement weather in Des Moines during the last few weeks, which has retarded the progress of the building, but God has been with us and has blessed the efforts of his people who have the responsibility of the building, and we are now confident that it will continue to completion in a manner and time that will be pleasing to all.

Many of the Des Moines Saints attended the young people’s rally at Rhodes Saturday and Sunday, October 17 and 18. They have reported a good time and much interest.

Religio Rally at Rhodes a Success

Rhoedes, Iowa, October 22.—The district Religio rally held at Rhodes the 17th and 18th of this month was a decided success, both in point of attendance and in program work. The district was well represented, there being visitors from the following places: Porshing, Runnels, Newton, Baxter, Des Moines, Boone, Webster City, Nevada, Colo, State Center, Montour, Ames, and Lamoni. If there were others we did not learn of them. The townpeople turned out well to all the services, the Methodist minister dismissing his evening services to give his congregation an opportunity to attend our services, which they did, their choir assisting in the song service.

The community singing was ably directed by Elder W. D. Tordoff. The Rhodes high school orchestra, under the leadership of their instructor, Miss Coleman, gave two fine selections. The Pershing choir also gave two good selections under the leadership of Brother Box, their chorister.

The subjects, “How to improve our music,” by Katherine Welfo, and “Our program,” by Margaret Davis, were well handled, and many helpful suggestions were offered. There were other numbers which deserve special mention, but space forbids. We cannot forbear mentioning the reading by little Roy Richards. The length of it and the way it was delivered were truly wonderful for such a little boy. Both members and nonmembers were well pleased with Professor Lonzo Jones, and he felt the response he was receiving from the congregation.

It seems to be the general verdict that the rally was one of the best district gatherings that has been held, and we feel that Brother Stephen Robinson is responsible for it, very largely. He is the right man in the place.

Close Successful Religio Meetings at Burlington

Burlington, Iowa, October 28.—Sunday evening, October 18, ended our two weeks of revival services. Brother John F. Sheehy, of Cameron, Missouri, was the speaker. Brother Sheehy is a very able talker and presents the gospel story in a unique way. There was a good attendance throughout the services, and we feel that much good has been accomplished.

Brother Sheehy spoke also at the Sunday morning services. His talks then were principally for church members, giving encouragement and advice.

The Department of Women gave a chicken dinner and supper downtown on October 17. It took a lot of work, but all donated liberally of their services. All the pies, pickles, and jellies were donated, also some of the milk and butter. We feel that our efforts were well repaid, for we cleared a little over $160 for the day. The money will be used in paying the debt on our new church.

The young people’s prayer services have been very well attended the last few months. The spirit among the young people is good, and we hope it may continue.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a hard-time Halloween party in honor of Brother Sheehy. The evening was very enjoyably spent playing games. After the games refreshments were served. Before going home the young people gathered in a circle and sang, “The old, old path.”

Logan, Iowa

Since our last report we have been busy planning for the Graceland endowment campaign, and in finishing up the basement with the new furnace. We have been somewhat handicapped while these improvements have been going on, on account of the cold weather, but last Sunday we had things going again about normally.

We were all made happy Sunday; we christened the new baptismal font in the new basement by baptizing Thomas Chatburn. Brother Chatburn is a fine man, highly respected by everybody in this community; he once served this county in a splendid way as one of its commissioners. His good wife was baptized at our late reunion at Woodbine; thus the home is made more sacred and happy. A splendid spirit was present at this service, testifying that God was well pleased with the sacred step our brother was taking in the new life. We are assured he will be a loyal steward in the work of the Master.

Brother Jack Harding of Council Bluffs has worshiped with us the past two Sundays. We do not want to misjudge Brother Harding, but we think the big attraction was a newly arrived granddaughter at the home of his son, Lloyd Harding, surely a fine baby girl.

Northern Michigan District Reunion

The manuscript of this report was lost, and the reporter was under the necessity of reproducing the same for HERALD readers. We regret the delay caused by the loss. - EDITORS.

The fifth annual reunion of Northern Michigan District, held at Park of the Pines, near Boyne City, August 7 to 16, has written itself into history. The weather was fine from the beginning. There were over sixty tents and many Saints, and all spent their time very happily.

The general prayer meetings were well attended, as were the young people’s meetings on the banks of beautiful Pine Lake. The young people enjoyed a gift of prophecy and were urged to go on and render greater service in the work before them. Sermons by Bishop C. J. Hunt and Apostle D. T. Williams were enjoyed by Sister Blanche Edwards were so much enjoyed that we have not words to express our thankfulness in having the opportunity to have such noble men and women with us at our reunion.

Each day at half past eight the general prayer service was held. At half past ten and at two o’clock were preaching services. At four o’clock all were given the privilege of riding, swimming, playing ball, or engaging in other amusements until supper time, when all were called back to the dining hall for physical sustenance. All gathered at the spacious auditorium at a quarter of seven and listened to the song service that was kindly provided by the young people and the orchestra under the direction of Elder Arthur Stack. Then at seven o’clock some good elder who loves to tell the gospel story (and there were several of them: E. N. Burt, Thomas Hartnell, John Schreur, G. W. Burt, James Davis, Brother Guy, W. E. Alldread, Noel Stack, Allen Schreur, A. E. Stark, J. C. Goodman, A. M. Boomer, Henry Sheffer, Brother Blett, and Brother Ellis) was chosen to preach to us.

Sister Blanche Edwards had charge of the work one afternoon for the Department of Women, also several meetings for the children.

There were two priesthood meetings, and we feel the time was well spent in trying to teach the young as well as the old to render greater service in preparation for the redemption of Zion.

Some very pleasant entertainments were enjoyed at the close of the preaching services. The Lachine Oriole Girls demonstrated their work very nobly and at the conclusion sang, “Nearer, my God, to thee,” with impersonation and tableaux.

The last Friday night, after service, a general marshmallow roast was held on the hill. Brother Blett, from Grand Rapids, treated the crowd in honor of his birthday.

The district conference met Saturday morning at ten o’clock, with District President Allen Schreur in charge and Apostle D. T. Williams assisting. After the opening exercises reports from the different officers were read and approved.

The treasurer’s report showed $112.30 on hand. Bishop’s Agent Allen Schreur reported $7,888.74 in tithe and offerings for 1924. E. N. Burt, missionary, reported 275 sermons preached and 55 baptized. The conference voted to buy two large booklets for the district tent, and that the district pay the freight on the district tent when shipped. Brother R. D. Kleevel presented the district with a large tent to be used on the reunion ground. A rising vote of thanks was tendered the brother for this gift.

The ordination of E. L. Smith to the office of priest, Isaac Wood to the office of teacher, and Jessie Denio to the office of deacon was approved. The following officers were elected: Allen Schreur, president; R. D. Davis and Elmer Parks, counselors; Ada Alldread, secretary; Allen Schreur, treasurer; A. E. Stark, chorister; Jennie Nugent, pianist; Ada Alldread and Hector McKinnon, members of library board; Ada Alldread, chairman of auditing committee, with power to choose assistants. The present reunion committee was sustained. Sister Ada Alldread was chosen superintendent of the Department of Women and Hector McKinnon superintendent of the young people. The present Sunday school officers were sustained.

The following delegates to General Conference were chosen: Allen Schreur and wife, Dirk Schreur and wife, Hector McKinnon and wife, Wesley Alldread and wife, E. N. Burt, Milo Boomer.

There were thirteen baptisms during the reunion.

Ada Alldread, Secretary.

October 25.—Our news is somewhat short at this time, but we want to let the Saints know we are still striving to keep the glorious gospel before the world. Our services are well attended most of the time, and our priesthood endeavors to present the gospel in the best way possible at all services.

Our Sunday school is doing very well and has done a great deal of good in the branch. The children are showing great interest in all departments. The Christmas offering is growing nicely.

Brother Edwards of Pomeroy was the speaker the morning of the 18th. He is always a welcome visitor.

Sister Gladys Silsbee, who is a graduate of Graceland College, is instructor in music in our public schools this year and is succeeding in her work. She has organized a high school band of sixteen pieces, an orchestra of eighteen members, a girls’ glee club, and a boys’ glee club, besides her work in the grade schools.

The young people had a fine gathering at the home of Sisters Ellen and Julia Miller the evening of October 16. The evening was spent in making preparations for a Halloween entertainment and luncheon to be given in the church on the 30th. Sister Silsbee favored them with several readings and stories.

Brother Huntington, of Union Branch, Clitherae, Minnesota, who is here for medical treatment, was in attendance at services October 25.

Brother and Sister Vernon Spence were the only ones from here to attend district conference at Dow City October 24 and 25. They report a large attendance and great interest in the work. It was decided to hold a reunion in Gallands Grove District next spring.

Brother and Sister Haynes were visitors at Vail, Iowa, over Sunday, October 4. Brother and Sister Vernon Spence were in attendance at services in Omaha, Nebraska, the same day.

Word comes from J. E. Meredith in England that they had a successful reunion at Clay Cross, Derbyshire, in Midland District. Brother Abel Hall, of the Seventy, and Brother J. W. Foster were in attendance, and a time of spiritual peace and joy prevailed.

Lamoni Stake

November 1.—As a forerunner to the Graceland endowment drive, which commenced Monday morning, October 26, in Lamoni, a program was held at the Brick Church Sunday evening in charge of stake President W. E. Prall. Elder L. G. Holloway offered prayer. The Graceland-Lamoni Orchestra furnished four splendid numbers, including the "Greater Graceland March," composed by the leader, J. H. Anthony.

Six short talks setting forth the value of Graceland to the community and the church followed.

James Thomas, the first speaker, talked from the viewpoint of an alumnus, of the influence of the college on the individual and on the group, emphasizing the place of Graceland in the church, not only as an educator but as a character builder. "We must get the endowment," he said. "We cannot afford to do otherwise."

Mrs. Oscar Anderson discussed "The influence of the college community on family life." She mentioned the various activities wherein college students take the lead, or form an important part, the wholesome entertainment and recreation afforded by the college which makes the environment one desirable. "The college," she said, "which is the tangible result of generations of hope and ambition, is an endowment that enriches our present family life in all its various channels."

W. F. Fleet, a leading business man, very ably set forth "The place of the college in Lamoni business." He showed in cold figures what Graceland means to Lamoni financially. However, he emphasized the fact that this side of her worth was far below any other. From conversation with traveling salesmen, he had come to know what the world thought of Lamoni as a college town and to compare it with noncollege towns. What Graceland means to Lamoni in furnishing a wholesome, educational atmosphere, and what Lamoni means to the church as a home for the college cannot be overestimated.

"My college days" was the subject of a very pleasing recounting by Alta Belle Willard, from Spearfish, South Dakota, of her experiences during a two-year attendance at college. Her talk was very sincere and breathed loyalty and devotion, as she discussed the value of the institution from an academic, social, and spiritual standpoint as gleaned from personal experience.

Mrs. Anna King, local minister of the Methodist Church had as her theme, "The dollar value of a higher education." Mrs. King emphasized the fact that the dollar value was the least important of all, but since this was her theme she must stick to it. She read statistics showing the difference in the earning capacity of one with a high school education compared to the man or woman without such education, and the still greater difference as a result of a college education.

Last but not least, Roy Cheville discussed "Graceland's record of service to the church." He enumerated some of the various channels in which Graceland graduates were serving, compared the environment of the church college with that of other colleges, and summed up in a very interesting way the incentive offered which leads her students to give the best that is in them to humanity.

In closing, Brother Prall said that since Lamoni was the home of Graceland she should set the example in rallying to her cause in raising her quota of the endowment drive and announced a meeting of solicitors at nine o'clock Monday morning. They met, and by noon a good share of the $10,000 allotted to Lamoni was raised. The way in which almost everyone responded surprised even those in charge. Their work has been made additionally pleasant by an opportunity to meet the most favorably impressed, to help over their work and make report. The dining room at Herald Hall offered the place. Here dinner was served to the members of the committees by the home economics students of Graceland under the supervision of Mrs. N. R. Carmichael on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday; and on Friday by the Patronesses. The tables were very appropriately and beautifully decorated on each occasion, and splendid service accompanied most excellent meals.

By Wednesday noon, Lamoni had gone over the top. By the close of the week the amount had reached $17,905, more than the quota for the entire stake. Other branches in the stake are going well also, some having gone over the top.

Conference at Chariton

The stake conference convened with the Chariton Branch, the first session being a preaching service by Wilber E. Prall, stake president, his subject being "How can I help in the Lord's work?" The congregation was rather small, owing to the recent rains and consequent bad roads hindering those who planned to make the trip by auto.

Friday morning at nine the Saints gathered for prayer and testimony, and a very good meeting was enjoyed. The good Spirit was present in confirming power, giving cheer and comfort, and encouraging to better things and greater effort in the Lord's service.

At a quarter of eleven a discussion and round table was held in the interest of the Department of Recreation and Expression under the leadership of J. A. Gunson. The subject chosen was, "How can the Religio help in the redemption of Zion?" Much interest was shown in the discussion, and the impression was gained by those present that it is worth while to encourage and foster the work of this department, even if the results may be slow and effort and call for some inconvenience at times to do so.

Bishop A. B. Phillips conducted class study on the subject of stewardships at half past two. His lecture was full of good things, and he was able to make it very clear that the subject was worthy of close and careful study and consideration. Some discussion followed his lecture, showing a good and wholesome interest in this important subject.

The sermon in the evening was by Bishop Phillips on the subject, "The church, its ideals and its goal." This was handled in a very pleasing and impressive manner. The rain during the day permitted only those in and close to Chariton to attend.

Saturday sessions opened with social service at nine o'clock, followed at a quarter of eleven by another excellent lecture by Bishop Phillips on the subject, "Stewardship, its purpose and place in the church."

At half past two in the afternoon H. H. Gold, superintendent of the stake department of the Sunday school, addressed the conference in a very fine way on the subject, "Your problem and mine." Many profitable points were brought out, touching the problems encountered in the training of the young people. The session opened with social service at nine o'clock, followed at a quarter of eleven by another excellent lecture by Bishop Phillips on the subject, "Stewardship, its purpose and place in the church."

A short business session was held at a quarter of four, presided over by the stake presidency, W. E. Prall and Roy A. Cheville. The following business was transacted: The resignation of D. E. Dowker as a member of the presidency of the stake was presented and accepted. Evan A. Fry reappointed as assistant stake chorister, made necessary by his permanent removal from the stake. The vote was unanimous to accept the resignations in both cases. The name of David Blair, of the Creston Branch, was presented for ordination to the office of priest, being recommended by the president of the stake and having the concurrence of the stake high council and of the Creston Branch. The ordination was authorized. The stake presidency was authorized in connection with the stake chorister to supply the position of assistant stake chorister if found practicable and necessary.

The evening session of Saturday was given over to a program of recreation and expression under the leadership of Roy A. Cheville of the stake presidency. A three-act play was given by some of the young sisters of the Chariton Branch. The cast included Miss Velva Williamson, who is teaching in the Chariton public schools. This was entitled "That awful letter," and was a pleasing number, well rendered, to the entertainment and pleasure of a fairly full house. Following the play everybody repaired to the basement where a program of games and stunts was carried out under the leadership of Brother Cheville. The meeting

closed at a reasonable hour with the song “Good night, ladies.”

Sunday services were held as follows: Half past eight, social service, when a very good time was enjoyed by those who braved the mud and disagreeable weather. At a quarter of ten Sunday school under the supervision of the officers of the Chariton local. At eleven o'clock Roy A. Cheville preached an excellent sermon on the topic, “The Joy of creative activity.” This was a very inspiring sermon, pleasingly and impressively delivered. At half past two Sister Lydia Wight, stake superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, gave a talk on the Hetfield fire. This was followed by a reading by Sister Nelle Morgan, “The stick-together families.” The conference closed with a concert at half past seven, followed by a sermon by J. A. Gunselley, subject “Nephil prayer.”

The conference was presided over by the presidency of the stake by vote of the conference. A vote of thanks by the visiting Saints to the Chariton Saints for their hospitality and excellent entertainment was adopted by rising vote, and the conference formally adjourned by vote.

The thing that made this conference one of the most enjoyable, especially to the Saints of Chariton, was the work of the soliciting committee on the raising of the quota assigned the branch for the Grace and Amount committee amounting to one thousand dollars. During the day the committee might be seen interviewing first one and then another and securing their pledges, and when the evening meeting opened the president of the branch was happy to announce that the full amount had been subscribed. As a result, it was a happy congregation that greeted the speaker of the evening, resulting from the consciousness of having done well a very important piece of work with willingness, and this always brings happiness and satisfaction.

This report would be incomplete without mention being made of the very satisfactory way in which the ladies of the Chariton Branch handled the problem of feeding the attendants at conference. Meals, except the morning meals, were served in the basement of the church cafeteria style. The sisters and brethren, too, handled the situation in an admirable manner, and all were served for the trouble of marching up and helping themselves to what was generously offered.

First Chicago Branch

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, October 27.—The First Chicago Branch has been so busy of late with the good things and the spiritual, that it keeps your reporter busy trying to get all the news.

Our city missionary, Frank B. Almond, is giving some rousing good sermons every Sunday evening, with a full house to receive him. One is in danger of having to stand unless he comes early. Brother Almond has been well supported in his labors by the choir, which furnishes an anthem each Sunday morning and evening. Also a men’s chorus, mixed quartet, and solos have added much to the programs. It is said that all the Saints are so satisfied with these that they have asked the choir to continue until the end of the year. A very nice touch was added by the presence of Sister Adeline Ecklof who played the organ.

We were very much pleased to welcome into our midst Brother and Sister Edward J. Gleazer, special missionaries of Apostle E. J. Gleazer. They were with us of late.

A young people’s convention was held recently under the direction of Brother O. A. McDowell, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and it proved to be a wonderful success. Every local in the district was represented by several of its members. The convention opened Friday night with an entertainment given by members from each local.

At this convention, which was held Saturday evening in charge of Elder F. B. Almond and J. L. Cooper, three study classes were met at a quarter after ten as follows: Why the church has a social program; with Apostle E. J. Gleazer as the teacher; “Youth’s problems,” in charge of J. L. Cooper; Boy Scouts and scout work, with Charles Scrimer as teacher. After an hour of class work, some special music was furnished, followed by a general discussion of the subject, “What I have received from my class to-day,” which lasted about twenty-five minutes. The noon hour was given over to recreation and lunch, and at half past one President F. M. McDowell conducted a round table discussion on general and departmental problems. Further recreation was enjoyed at a quarter after three under the direction of Roy Healy.

Saturday night was local superintendents’ night, and an open meeting was held in honor of these people. The following program was before the Saints: Does our department contribute to the program of the church?” by William Keir; “How a local may assist a pastor in building up the work of a branch,” by S. C. Barrows; “The difficulties of a leader in a small branch,” by Mina Taylor; “Recreation—its purpose and its aim,” by Victor Ecklof; “Orioles and Temple Builders,” by Irene Cooper. A short general discussion followed each talk. Special numbers were a reading by Laura Atkins, a violin number by Harold Bueseth, a special number by Winifred Thorson, and a tenor solo by Marion Blakely, assisted by Everett Pettersson.

On Sunday, prayer service was held, beginning at nine o’clock, in charge of Patriarch W. A. McDowell and Elder H. P. W. Keir. A rousing song service under the direction of J. M. Blakely, special music by the West Side Choir, and a solo by Violet Bone preceded the sermon at eleven o’clock by President F. M. McDowell on “How Jesus would have us live together.” At two o’clock Brother O. A. McDowell had charge of a short song service that was followed by a short business session, after which Brothers P. F. Pement and A. McDowell told some of their interesting missionary experiences. Brother Almond sang a song in a foreign tongue, and the South Side choir gave a beautiful anthem. At three o’clock Brother F. M. McDowell preached on the subject, “The spirit of stewardship”; then Sister Pauline Kahler of Manteno sang a solo, accompanied by Irene Cooper of DeKalb, bringing to a beautiful close the first young people's convention in Northeastern Illinois District.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The week's special meetings under the auspices of the young people of the stake, with President Elbert A. Smith as speaker, had its opening Sunday at eight o'clock p.m., with a house full of eager listeners. The music is especially good and is under the direction of Brother Eugene Christy. The weather is all that could be expected for this time of year; sunny, with a brisk, chill air.

Quarterly stake conference will convene the 15th inst., with a business session at eight p.m., the 16th.

Grandview Church

"Podunk Special," a one-act play of thirty characters, was given by the Gleaners Class of the Sunday school October 22 and 23. A nice sum of money was cleared.

Elder Cyril E. Wight delivered a splendid massage to them October 25 at the evening service. The religious week-day school is progressing with a number of loyal workers in charge. They have an increase of about fifteen pupils over last year.

Independence

Stone Church

The beautiful Indian summer weather, combined with the many Sunday school attractions, drew a large attendance at the Sabbath school.

There was a splendid gathering at the sacramental service. The church seemed to be filled, with the exception of some seats on the choir platform, with devout worshipers.

At half past two the capacity of the assembly room in the Institute Building was taxed to accommodate the attendance at the regular priesthood meeting. Patriarch G. T. Griftiths gave an inspiring address on priesthood prerogatives and responsibilities. "He spoke as one having authority."

At four o'clock the various quorums closed their sessions, and solicitors who had previously been appointed to solicit funds in the various groups in Independence for the Graceland College endowment campaign met in the assembly room to listen to an address by Elder R. J. Lambert on ways and means of putting over the drive.

Brother Lambert said the Graceland endowment and stewardships were not regional or local affairs, but were of international concern to the church. While Lamoni was possibly more interested in the continuation of the college than any other one locality, yet the spirit which called her to go over the top in the present drive before the campaign had started was not selfish but was the manifestation of a genuine interest in the progress of the Lord's work.

Brother Lambert said that when the Auditorium drive was on, Lamoni's quota, with around 2,000 members, was the same as Independence's quota with a membership of 4,500, while the Auditorium was to be built here. Lamoni just barely missed reaching her objective.

Brother Lambert asked all of those present who were not "sold" to Graceland endowment fund to raise their hands. Not a hand was raised. He then asked all those who were not sold to stewardships to raise their hands. Not a hand was raised.

The solicitors were given the names of the membership in their groups, with their quota, and they left the meeting with a determination to do their best for the cause of Graceland and stewardships. So the campaign is on in Independence.

Pastor R. V. Hopkins spoke to the I. X. L Sunday school class, attended sacramental service at the Stone Church, was at the priesthood meeting at the Institute Building, and preached in the evening at Enoch Hill, but he is not yet able to attend to many of the duties at the office.

President E. A. Smith commenced a series of meetings at the Central Church in Kansas City Sunday night. These meetings will be held every night except Saturday during the coming week.

The Relief had an attendance of 325 and is still climbing. They are featuring expert teachers more than programs to get out the membership.

President F. M. McDowell was the speaker in the Stone Church Sunday evening. Having been a student at Graceland College, and later one of the faculty, he could speak with authority on Graceland. His address was listened to with interest, and it should bring forth fruit.

Commencing Sunday evening, November 8, Apostle John F. Garver will preach a series of sermons during the week on "The teaching of morals and hygiene in the home," Miss Nannie Ramsey, principal of the Columbian School, will be speaker. He will address the young people's meeting Wednesday evening in the Stone Church.

President Elbert A. Smith will continue his Sunday morning services, his subject for next Sunday being "The hands."

Mr. Joseph Sturgess, husband of Sister Margaret Sturgess, died in Enoch Hill, but he is not yet sold. Mr. Sturgess was not a member of the church, he always enjoyed the association of the Saints and welcomed them to his home. He left to his family and to the community a good name. Sister Sturgess was for many years president of the Laurel Club.

The Sanitarium has sent in a request for white rags, new or old, of any material. It is almost impossible to send too many, for they are always in demand. They can be mailed to the Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri, and all donations will be very much appreciated.

The regular monthly open meeting of the Department of Women will be held Friday, November 6, at half past two, in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. All are urged to be present. The following child hygiene programs will be given under the auspices of the child welfare chairman of the Columbian school: Talk, "The relation of school to the home," Mrs. Flo Whittemore, patron of the Columbian School. Paper, "School nutrition," Miss Ruby Williamson, teacher in the Columbian School. Talk, "The teaching of morals and hygiene in the home," Miss Nannie Ramsey, principal of the Columbian School.

A business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held preceding this meeting, at half past one.

"The Messiah" to Be Given

On next Sunday, November 8, the Messiah Choir, which is composed of singers from the choirs of the eight churches in town, and some from Kansas City Stake, will begin preparations for the annual rendition of "The Messiah," to be given during the Christmas holidays. Those in charge are expecting a bigger and better chorus than ever before. This is a good work, and we hope it will be well supported. Rehearsals will begin at four o'clock each Sunday afternoon.

Walnut Park

The campaign for endowment funds began at Walnut Park on November 1, with a talk at Sunday school by the pastor and an_concat in the evening by Brother Ralph W. Farrell. After the sermon a mass meeting of the district was called for the following evening.

Eight o'clock Monday evening found one hundred and ten at the church to answer the call, Pastors Glaud Smith and B. J. Scott in charge, Brother Nace with the orchestra furnishing music, and Sister Minnie Scott Dobson with the regular choir, augmented by the junior choir, in their places to add force to the congregational singing throughout the evening.

Brother Farrell and Bishop May were in the pulpit, and they and Brother Scott were the speakers leading up to the work of the evening—the raising of our quota of $1,250. Then the four group pastors distributed pledge cards, and as they were collected and carried to the stand Brother Scott called off the amounts and Brother Smith wrote them on the blackboard, adding them occasionally and announcing the total.

As the figures reached the $800 mark, Brother Scott beamed with satisfaction that so much had been raised before any house-to-house soliciting was done. When it reached $850 he expressed himself as abundantly pleased with what the one hundred and ten present had volunteered. And when it climbed to $1,000, $1,200, and $1,250, he broke forth in song, “Thank the Lord for the—” and the congregation joined him, singing on to the end, “And the hope of a portion in Zion, shall cheer us till trials are o’er,” etc. Then came the closing hymn, “Praise God, from whom all blessings flow,” and the successful meeting was over.

However, the Saints not present will be given an opportunity to increase the amount pledged as they may desire.

The community was shocked the evening of October 27 to learn of the accidental death of Brother A. N. Gore, aged seventy-four, he having been struck by an automobile while on his way to prayer meeting, and dying very soon afterward. His widow has the sympathy of her many friends.

Enoch Hill

The series of meetings being held at this church by Patriarch G. T. Griffiths has been well attended and made interesting by the use of his charts. The sermons have been strengthening to the priesthood, to whom they were especially adapted, as well as to others who were cordially urged to attend. The meetings close Tuesday of this week.

The prayer meetings at eight o’clock every Sunday morning, and at two in the afternoon except the first Sunday in the month, are being well attended, as is also the young people’s prayer meeting on Wednesday evenings. Some splendid testimonies were given at the Sunday sacramental service.

The evening sermon Sunday was by Brother R. V. Hopkins. He had a very interesting way of presenting the subject of the endowment, his personal knowledge of Graceland during the difficult experiences of her early days, when he canvassed successfully far and wide for $10 pledges for her benefit, making his talk very effective.

Brother Hopkins will meet with the Enoch Hill young people on the evening of November 11.

The Religious party Friday night, the 30th, at the home of Don Cox, and a good time was had.

Liberty Street

There was a large attendance at the sacramental service the morning of November 2. In the evening Elder W. D. Tordoff preached a rousing sermon on the Graceland College endowment.

Interest in the early morning prayer meetings seems to be increasing steadily.

On Saturday night the lower circle of Orioles entertained the Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders and the young men of the congregation, and there was a large crowd at the Moriarity home to enjoy the contests of various kinds, brewing the witches’ pot, and other games provided by their entertainers. Doctor Sargent, of Warrensburg, Missouri, told fortunes. Refreshments of pie and punch were served by the little girls themselves, and all went home at a quarter of eleven so they could get up in time to attend the early prayer meeting Sunday morning. And most of them succeeded.

East Independence

There was a good attendance at the sacramental service, and some good testimonies were given.

In the evening Brother R. J. Lambert was the speaker, his subject being the Graceland College endowment. Having been closely touch with the college for many years, he was able, we hope, to dispel some of the doubts regarding that institution, and show the need of each one doing all he can to become better educated and to help others do so. We desire to go “over the top.”

Branch Organization at Wagner, South Dakota

Some twenty-five years ago, Brother D. B. Coffman and family moved to Wagner, South Dakota, and homesteaded. This provided an opening for the missionary. Among the very first were Eli Allen and E. F. Robertson. Since then, time after time, others of the ministry have stopped off at Wagner and planted a few seed that, though seeming to lie dormant for many years, have at last sprung into life to the extent of a thriving branch. Among those with whom the writer is acquainted, we note Levi Gomets, who has grown and become one of the services; E. Ramin, who is acquainted with the blizzards of the North-west’s prairies; Amos Berve, and George M. Vandell.

We have sought only to advance the work which is built on the firm foundation laid by these brethren of former years. This foundation is solid, as the gradual growth will show.

Wagner is a thriving town of the prairies, surrounded by grain and stock raisers. Its population is about 1,500. It has good schools and churches, the churches being Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, German Lutheran, and Catholic.

We have had considerable opposition, but despite this fact a slow but steady growth has been made. We have used the help of the Saints for the services, the home of the old in Zion, shall cheer us till trials are o’er.

We thought it best to organize a branch for these worthy, faithful Saints, so took the matter up with the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve. As a result Brother J. F. Gaynor met us at Sioux City, and we proceeded on to Wagner for the purpose of organization. October 25 will be a memorable day for these Saints, as this was the date the formal organization was completed.

The organization was attended by a goodly degree of the Spirit of the Master. Three of the brethren were ordained, namely, full set of branch officers. Charles W. Hare, a Sioux Indian, was ordained to the office of priest; August Talberg was ordained to the office of teacher; and John T. Coffman to the office of deacon. Thus far it culminates the efforts of the different missionaries who have labored there.

Elmer Amos Lamsen is presiding over the new branch, and we have the utmost confidence in him and his ability to thus act. Associated with these brethren, Sister August Talberg was elected clerk of the branch.

Perhaps we have saved the best for the last. However, at the conclusion of the organization we set a quota to be pledged for the Graceland endowment fund, and the newly made members of the branch came forward and met the quota once and a half and are still going strong.

Such is Wagner’s start as a branch, and we trust an omen for the future.

possibility being the dividing of time between K L D S and K F F V, and this would require the sanction of W O S, with which station K L D S is already dividing time.

It has seemed that the ideal way out of the difficulty is to broadcast Graceland’s programs through K L D S by remote control. At present no suitable telephone lines are available, Lamoni not being on a main trunk line. Short wave rebroadcasting has been considered, and is possible, but entails an initial expense that is considerable for such an experiment. It would be worth while to try the rebroadcasting method if funds were available.

Why not a Graceland night from K L D S? It has been suggested to President Briggs and is doubtless now being considered by the college authorities, that one or two evenings each month be given over to Graceland College, and that Graceland artists and speakers make the trip to Independence and broadcast from the church 1000-watt station. Saturday nights are now open, but for that matter any time that would best suit the college could probably be arranged. An evening’s broadcasting from the new church station, on 441 meters, would be more effective than an entire month’s efforts from the Graceland station on the present 250-meter wave length. The transportation expense would not be great—not as much as the maintenance of a 500-watt station.

Radio friends, what do you think about it? Write your opinions and suggestions to President Briggs or to K L D S.

Notice to Washington, D. C., Saints

I plan to be in Washington for about one week, beginning November 7, to represent the church at the Government radio conference. I shall be glad to meet any who desire to see me about church broadcasting or technical problems. My stopping place will be the Washington Hotel.

Class B Wave Length Worth $75,000

Recently a Chicago lawyer, in behalf of a client, wrote K L D S asking quotation on the new church broadcasting station.

The demand for radiocasting wave lengths is so great that during the last six months twenty-seven transmitting stations have changed hands. Of interest to friends of Graceland should be the purchase by a sister junior college of K F R U, a 500-watt Western Electric station, formerly located at Bristow, Oklahoma. Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri, is the new owner.

The most recent noteworthy sale was that of the Fort Wayne College station to the Airplane Corporation of America, and the new owner plans to use the new station to pick up the college’s programs.

Radio Flashes

Liberty, Missouri.—I listened to K L D S last evening, October 6. I always enjoy your programs. One reason is that one never picks up sensuous jazz from K L D S; always the good clean type of music. Another reason is that one does not pick up a lot of propaganda. I am a Baptist, and I like the way the Latter Day Saints conduct K L D S.—J. E. Owen, 305 Sudharth Street.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—K L D S coming in very fine tonight. Clarity good, volume fine. A little static and some fading.—Fred V. Dryer, 863 Mineral Street.

Webster, Massachusetts.—I enjoyed the program by K L D S orchestra and the visiting soloist [Miss Christiana Waller], Thursday, October 1.—Clarence Lang, 50 Lincoln Street.

Santa Ana, California.—On Tuesday, September 29, I had the pleasure of listening to K L D S, broadcasting from the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. We received you with loudspeaker volume on a home-built 12-tube superheterodyne. We wish you the best success ever for your future.—John Wesley Hancock.

Waverly, Pennsylvania.—“Annie Laurie,” sung by Mrs. Cleo Salisbury, and the K L D S orchestra, came in clearly to-night (October 1), and the program was enjoyed.

Ravenwood, Missouri.—I have been listening to your programs and think it my duty to report once in a while. I especially enjoy the forenoon Sunday sermons. The modulation is almost perfect. The vesper service last night was just grand. During the talk, "About my Father's business," and the following songs I felt such a thrill go over me as I have at prayer meetings. I don't think you have enough of our good old songs which all the Saints are hungering to hear. With lots of love, and success for K L D S.—Mrs. J. D. Gates.

Hot Springs, Arkansas.—The trio singing Tuesday, September 22, was much enjoyed. This is the first time I have heard your station. The sample I had was certainly good, and I'll come back for more.—A. Frank Stauder, 117 Magnolia.

Akron, Ohio.—Dear K L D S: We are sending you a line to let you know we enjoyed the program Tuesday, October 6, and want to thank those rendering the program. The last half came in fine.—Mr. and Mrs. Roy C. Brown, 1215 Grant Street.

Baltimore, Maryland.—On October 1 I heard from your station Miss Christiana Waller singing, "Singe me to sleep" and "Good-by summer," and Mrs. Cleo Salisbury singing, "When I'm with you." Your volume great and modulation good. Congratulations on your success in reaching out so well.—Malory Dufur, 509 West Franklin Street.

Kansas City, Missouri.—We are members of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church, but for the past three years have been shut in. We have heard many good sermons from your church. The one yesterday, by Doctor Harrington, I would like to have a copy to give our doctor, who is so interested in children.—Mrs. George F. Peters, 2544 Charlotte Street.

Saint Joseph Missouri.—We have been listening in for about a year, and certainly enjoy all of the K L D S programs. Wonderful sermons and good class of music. We kindly thank you for the pleasure and comfort we get from them, and trust you will continue broadcasting.—Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Roonig, 2009 Highland.

Kansas City, Missouri.—Many thanks for the fine programs you are rendering. I have been listening to you more or less ever since January 1, 1925. Music, singing, talks, and sermons are the very best.—C. J. Philgreen, 4432 Wyoming Street.

Barnsdale, Oklahoma.—This is to express our appreciation of your wonderful programs of September 13. Both veep service and 9.15 service were greatly enjoyed, especially the addresses by Apostles Budd and McConley. We also enjoyed the violin numbers and Paul Craig's singing. As I am an isolated member the K L D S programs mean much to me. Thanks for all your wonderful broadcasting.—Mrs. Homer L. Wade.

Parkville, Missouri.—I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the wonderful musical treat received from your station Thursday evening (September 17). Especially beautiful were the baritone solos by Mr. George Arnold. Trust that we may hear from these same artists again at a not distant date. Your programs come in very distinctly over a small crystal set.—Mrs. Mary P. Larey.

Dowagiac, Michigan.—Not being able to pick up your station before to-night I must say I was happy to hear the announcer speak so plainly the call letters K L D S, and the beautiful singing on this Sunday evening vespers service. "The old, old path" and others were very fine. The sermon by Brother Roy S. Budd was also very plain and much appreciated.—James O. Best.

Kansas City, Missouri.—I am very well pleased with the character of the programs you are broadcasting. Reception is unusually good, notwithstanding the fact that there are four Kansas City stations to interfere. I have not learned whether you were able to purchase the piano wanted; if not, or if purchased and not fully paid, advise me and I will contribute $5.00 to the fund, providing contributions for that purpose are in order. Yours for success.—J. Cairns, Attorney at Law, Grand Avenue Temple Building.

Sherwood, North Dakota.—Heard your excellent program last night. You got over better than any other station that was on the air, clear, clean, strong through speaker, and without harshness. Shall look for you again. Have heard you only a few times before, and on much a lower wavelength.—E. L. Penn.

Regina, Saskatchewan.—I had great pleasure listening to your program last night, September 18. Music and singing very much enjoyed and quite clean, with little static. Trusting you will have equally good concerts in the future.—George Green, 1036 Agnew Street.

Troy, Kansas.—I wish to congratulate you on the many wonderful programs it has been our pleasure to hear over your station. I do not know of another station that comes in so perfect as K L D S. Your programs are always of the best and are greatly enjoyed in our home.—Mrs. J. E. Simmons.

Cherokee, Iowa.—This evening after meeting at the church a group of about twelve or more came to our home to hear Brother Frederick. The music was heard quite clearly and was enjoyed immensely. Brother Frederick's sermon was clear. I hope to be able to pick up all of your programs. I heard the sermon this morning clear and loud.—Harold Keeder.

Sedalia, Missouri.—Just a line of appreciation of all your broadcasting. Enjoy all of it very much. It is second to none in quality and interest.—R. G. Purvis, 909 South Monticello.

Kansas City, Missouri.—I had the good fortune to tune to your station this evening. The program was wonderful and the playing of "Caprice Espagnol" by Mrs. Neal Thomson was especially fine. I hope this artist will be a regular contributor. It is refreshing to get away from the ordinary.—William H. McCrum, 1443 West 61st Terrace.

Cameron, Texas.—Your program came in clear to-night. I have been tuning in on your station of late and like to hear you very much.—B. D. Stephens.

Bentonport, Iowa.—Have been hearing your programs fairly well on present wave length. Was unable to get you satisfactorily on short wave and heard Brother C. E. Wight's beautiful sermon on "The world's need of Jesus" this morning, and I felt like shouting for joy. We are isolated Saints. The prayers and singing are soul cheering. Your announcer has a fine rich voice well adapted to broadcasting. Success, and God bless you.—Fannie F. Seward.

Our Departed Ones

WORRELL — Mary L. Worrell was born May 2, 1847, at Hazel Green, Wisconsin. Baptized at Independence, Missouri, by Joseph Luff February 18, 1880, and she was the eldest daughter of a family of twelve, five of whom survive her. She was a lover of humanity, like Dorcas of old, and made many contributions for their relief. Died at the home of her son, George A. Worrell, Oak Park, Illinois, who brought her body to Independence where funeral services were held at Carson's Undertaking Chapel October 28 in charge of G. E. Harrington. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

JONES — Margaret Cockshott was born November 23, 1845, at Tuxedo, New York. Came to the west at the age of twenty-one and married Richard R. Jones January 1, 1879, and they were the parents of six children. Baptized August 10, 1858, and was a pioneer of the Higher, Missouri, Branch. Moved to Independence in 1914 and resided there until one week before her death, when she was taken to Hills. Died October 18, 1925. Stewardship-Endowment Campaign

The second and final week of the organized canvass of the membership of the church to raise not less than two hundred thousand dollars with which to endow Graceland College opened under strong momentum, the news of success in meeting the suggested quotas assigned having come to headquarters from many places in the church, far and near, and the largest church centers having met their quotas and in some instances passed them so far as to almost lose sight of what had been suggested as their portion of the work.

We mentioned Des Moines last week as having raised more than $2,300, oversubscribing their quota, and the first of the second week found the sum of their subscriptions reaching above the three thousand dollar mark. Lamoni had raised her contribution until they had passed the sum of twenty-two thousand dollars—more than eleven per cent of the entire sum asked of the whole church. This is done by about two per cent of the church membership.

We cannot fail to mention Burlington, Iowa, as an outstanding example of endeavor to do her part in the work attempted by the church. Burlington has a small membership, only about one hundred and seventy people. During the last year this little band has been struggling to build and pay for a good new church, costing them $20,000. But at the close of the opening day of the second week of this campaign this community had oversubscribed its quota of $700 and had not completed the work of soliciting.

What Will Independence Do In The Endowment Campaign?

Quota $15,000
Pledged in 5 days $13,000
Pledged in 7 days $16,000
Seven days more to go, and fourteen groups yet to make final report.

Independence Has Answered!

News from many points is contained elsewhere in this issue of the HERALD. There are many instances which command respectful attention. The church is at work—hard at work—for the purpose of placing funds in the hands of her officers to accomplish two laudable purposes, sustaining Graceland College and establishing agricultural stewardships.

Two questions enter into the consideration, and each is vital in the opinion of the great majority of the church membership.

Shall Graceland College be endowed?

Shall stewardships be established?

And in Independence, a point where it seems every man's hands are crowded with the regular church activities, the answer to these questions has been a strong affirmative. On Sunday evening it was clear that Independence had raised her quota of $15,000. Reports of the subscribing of more than $16,000 had come to the offices. The work in Independence is not yet finished. Undoubtedly the oversubscription will be of such proportions as to settle the minds of all that her people want the college sustained by an endowment as required by the standards of the educational world; and they want agricultural stewardships established wherever the church pleases. It is the best showing made by the people of Independence.

We confidently expect that enough information will be in hand at the close of the campaign to speak with no uncertain sound for the entire church—saying with a loud voice, "Let Graceland advance; Establish the stewards of God upon the land."

The campaign has brought to many church communities a united front exceeding that experienced in many months.
Questions and Answers

Life Insurance

Question: “There are those in the church who, for the protection of their families, carry life insurance. Do you advise that such persons drop their insurance to become affiliated with the stewardship order?”

Answer: Under conditions which will prevail when the law of stewardships becomes fully operative, life insurance will be a thing of the past, for life insurance is but a palliative and does not reach the root of the evil it purports to correct. But life insurance as a business proposition has won a place in modern life as society is now organized. Where policies have been taken out for business reasons, or for “family protection” under present conditions, such policies should not be lapsed or abrogated at a loss. It would be better to carry them until they can be properly converted or matured. A life insurance policy to any degree paid out has corresponding for the protection of their families, carry life insurance. Do you advise that such persons drop their insurance to become affiliated with the stewardship order?”

Answer: From a strictly “business” standpoint the answer would be that the business should either be reorganized and put on a paying basis or closed. But in viewing Zionistic matters, values other than monetary ones must have consideration. Human or social values must at times be set off against monetary ones, and monetary losses are at times justified; often so, when human values or social ones are enhanced. Thus a “business,” or work, or vocation may have such a distinct value to the community that even though run at a direct loss the indirect gain might be such as to justify the community in making up the loss in one way or another. The steward “has claim” on the common treasury under certain conditions. It should, of course, be the aim of every steward to support himself and family by his stewardship. But there must be stewardships which are not commercial or industrial. From some stew­ ardships there will be returns which are not measured in monetary terms, yet are essential to the interests of the group. Between such stewardship and the one at the other extreme which yields large and quick monetary returns, there are or will be various grades. The value of each must be measured by factors springing from community and human as well as property uses.

Stewardships in “the World”

Question: “How can one work on stewardship and spiritualize it when working for those of the world?”

Answer: In the same way one lives his religion and establishes a reputation as a righteous man, even when coming in contact with the world. “Keep yourselves unspotted from the world” applies in several directions. Whatever one’s work, if it is “within the law,” it may become a stewardship, and the work thus become consecrated or spiritualized. The consecration of the surplus accomplishes this for the steward just as the blessing of the sacrament is unto the souls of “those who partake of it.”

“Giving” Stewardships—Holding Title

Question: “If a person comes to the authorities and says he wants a farm, will the authorities give him a farm? or will the authorities let him pay for it and then give him title? or will the church always hold the title to the property?”

Answer: There is so much involved in this triple question that a short answer is difficult. In the first place, the person’s desire for a farm is not the sole criterion, for desire must be accompanied by ability and capacity to farm properly. In the second place, the ability to pay must have consideration. No worthy steward wants more given to him than the opportunity to do what he is qualified to do.

The church or community is vitally interested in having all capable farmers at work on agricultural stewardships, and ways and means must be found to supply such; and it seems to be contemplated in the law that groups of stewards shall be formed to help in founding and financing and even in managing such stewardships till they become more than self-sustaining and become contributors to the general surplus.

There remains the question of title to property. Between the one extreme of fee simple and the other of mere agency, there are many degrees of difference. Perhaps the degree of agency on the one hand or individual responsibility on the other may ultimately be determined by the degree of public utility. Agricultural stewardships contemplate the holding of only what can be used by the steward. And surplus is communized. This prohibits personal monopoly of land. Hence, under present conditions, at least title to land being operated as individual stewardship should be vested in the steward. Hence, title should be so passed when satisfactory payments have been made.

Profits and Trading Under Stewardship

Question: “When stewardships are established, will we continue to barter and trade as people do now, or will prices and wages be standardized?”

Answer: At least a partial answer to this question will be found in section 42 of Doctrine and Covenants, “Thou shalt not take thy brother’s garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse, that all things may be done according to that which I have said.” Here clearly is provision for trade, profits, etc. And doubtless the law of supply and demand will operate. Prices may not, probably will not, be standardized, but they will be stabilized, for subterfuge and deceit will be eliminated because surplus will flow to the common treasury. Much evil practice has crept into modern business because of inordinate desire to accumulate individual surplus. With all above needs and just wants returning to the group, incentive for sharp practice and crooked or shady business will be gone. Prices will thus be stabilized, and the law of supply and demand have freer play, and monopoly will exist only where the group interests demand it.

Wages, too, will be stabilized, for “the laborer is worthy of his hire.”

Coliseum at Lamoni Purchased

Lamoni’s community building, built several years ago at a cost of something like $18,000, has been purchased and will be operated by men chosen by the church officials, as an endowment for Graceland College.

The personnel of the committee which assumes control at the transfer of the possession to church authorities is: George W. Blair, W. E. Prall, W. E. Hayer, N. R. Carmichael, and A. Otis White, all of them well acquainted with the interests of the community, the church, and the college, in both business and social relationships.

The property was purchased out of stewardship funds received by the church in the sale a few months back, of the Lamoni Electric Company to the Iowa Southern Utilities Company, and it will be operated under the stewardship plan, as was the Lamoni Electric Company during the time of its existence. It is thought possible to operate the building at a substantial profit, which will go toward sus-

The Corn Show at Sedalia

Entries for the national corn show to be held in Sedalia, November 12, 13, and 14 have passed the 200 mark, with additional contestants sending in entry blanks each day from all sections of Missouri and the corn belt.

This first annual national corn classic, with its liberal prizes and program of agricultural experts selected from the Nation’s best, gives promise in its initial year of being the greatest corn festival of 1925.

Missouri corn growers are going after the big awards enthusiastically in both the national and special classes. In addition to large cash awards, many specials are being offered by Sedalia merchants, until the present schedule of premiums has been increased to such an extent that the prizes at Sedalia will top the premiums and awards at any other corn show in the United States.

Sedalia is starting out to create the greatest corn classic in the United States, and all indications are for a record show the first year. Every farmer who can possibly do so should attend this show.

NEWS FROM CAMPAIGN WORKERS

Berkeley, California, November 7
Bishop A. Carmichael: At a meeting in Portland Sunday, the quota for the district one half subscribed. Excess is expected. San Francisco has quota pledged and still going. Oakland has double quota and is going strong. Seattle will do her part. The fine response throughout the church is heartening.
FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Des Moines, Iowa, November 8
Bishop A. Carmichael: Des Moines quota ($2,300) now seven hundred and eight dollars over. Please announce at vesper service.
RUTH MUSSELL.

Wichita, Kansas, November 8
T. S. WILLIAMS AND F. C. POOLER.

Denver, Colorado, November 8
Bishop A. Carmichael: Denver over by one hundred and fifty per cent and more to come.
F. HENRY EDWARDS.

Cherokee, Iowa, November 8
Bishop A. Carmichael: Our quota four hundred. Pledged eight hundred, and still going.
W. W. REEDER.

Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 1
Publicity Department: We have just heard from Brother Percy Farrow, missionary for the Northern Indiana District, that the people are responding well to the endowment campaign. We are quite confident of success in Grand Rapids.
LEE HUTCHINS.

Jonesport, Maine, November 8
Presiding Bishopric: Eastern Maine quota is $1,200. We have $1,600 in pledges thus far, with approximately twenty-five per cent of this amount in cash. The response is most gratifying. We wish to emphasize the fact that the Saints who take the church papers have been well informed on this matter and are usually ready and waiting for us when we call. Much gratitude is due Brother Fisher and Brother Richard Baldwin for the splendid showing as thus far made.
H. A. CHELLINE.

Logan, Iowa, November 6
Bishop Carmichael: C. J. Smith and C. B. Woodstock are at work in this district with splendid success. The outlook is good, and our committee are all at work.
JOSEPH W. LANE.

Ogden, Utah, November 8
While we have no exception to large contributions in this district, yet most all of the Saints show a willingness to try to do their share. Good interest was shown at the Malad Branch last Sunday in behalf of the campaign. Classes in stewardship in this district show splendid interest.
Yours for success of the work,
G. P. LEVITT.

Miami, Oklahoma, November 5
First Presidency: The drive is getting along fine in this district, Nowata, Pleasantville, and Purcell report having reached their quota. Coffeyville, Kansas, $140 over; Independence, $90; Cherryvale, $90; Parsons, $26; Weir, $50; Miami, Oklahoma, $40; Webb City, Missouri, $50; Carthage, Missouri, $175. Last Sunday Pittsburgh in one day subscribed $300, or half of their quota, which was $600. Yesterday Joplin subscribed $520. This means only $280 yet to raise. The eleven places that have reached their quotas and oversubscribed are all happy. At the last accounting oversubscriptions have amounted to $601, and it is probably much more by this time. Robert Jones and George Lewis are in the field with me assisting in the campaign.
AMOS T. HIGDON.

Berkeley, California, November 2
On Sunday, November 1, we made our first effort to raise our quota of $1,079, with the result that we oversubscribed, the total pledges amounting to $1,700. Many of our congregation have not been solicited yet, and we confidently expect to oversubscribe at least one hundred per cent. The Saints here are much interested in the social program of the church, and we are very optimistic as to the outlook for the church.
VIRGIL B. ETZENHOUSER.

Carnesville, Michigan, November 4
Bishop Carmichael: Port Huron and Croswell have gone over the top, and we expect the same results at Appleton as soon as their campaign starts. We are happy in our work.
G. T. RICHARDS.

DeKalb, Illinois, November 5
Sandwich, Illinois: The smallest congregation in the district has gone over the top and is still going. Two young men, students from Graceland, Brethren Closson and Collins, are in the district working in the interest of the campaign, and their work is helping materially. Late word just came from Rockford, Illinois, that the congregation there is going over the top. Belvidere reports that they will make the grade. The outlook is most encouraging.
Sincerely yours,
JOHN L. COOPER.

Colorado Springs, Colorado, November 4
Publicity Department: This congregation has a quota of $300, and at the first meeting $301 in pledges and $135 in cash was subscribed. Contributions from other members who were not at this meeting will probably double our quota.
Floyd Engstrom, former Graceland student, gave $20. Before the meeting he told me that $10 was all he could possibly afford, but after the meeting he said, "I just couldn't let the old school down for $10, you know." A high school girl, who is paying her way by washing dishes, etc., which takes several hours before and after school hours, pledged $12. A man who had already given about $2,000 on various church projects during the past year gave us our first pledge of $100. We are on our way to Fort Collins, where we are hopeful of good results.
Sincerely,
F. HENRY EDWARDS.
Deer Lodge, Montana

We are getting along fine in this district and with but few exceptions the Saints are very much interested in reaching their quotas, and I think we will go over the top all right. I am going to the Eastern Montana District to help in the campaign there.

Sincerely, George W. Thorburn.

Sparks, Kansas, November 5

Publicity Department: The congregation at Fanning, Kansas, has oversubscribed their quota.

Samuel Twombly.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, November 1

To-day, November 1, we held our sacramental service in the afternoon. We opened our drive by reading the official announcement, and Brother Kuefler made a short talk. We then sang "Consecration," and passed out the pledge cards. I talked to them from the sermon outlines by F. Henry Edwards, and at the close of my talk we collected the cards.

Nearly everyone filled out a card except two or three families. The district officers gave us $400. Before we left the church this evening our pledge cards totaled $929.25. I am writing this to-night just to let you know we went over our quota.

914 Lottie Street.

Julian, California, November 8

Presiding Bishopric: Sterling, California, over the top. Four families pledged two hundred ninety-four dollars. Champion, Nebraska, coming strong. Scattered membership will go over strong.

Ward A. Hougas.

Pensacola, Florida, November 8

Presiding Bishopric: Coldwater Branch over the top in one meeting. Pensacola oversubscribed fifty per cent; still going. Will easily double quota. I go to Dixonville from here. Will write further results later.

F. M. McDowell.

Douglas, Arizona, October 31

Bishop A. Carmichael: It has been said that the campaign in Arizona could not be put over, but as a result of one or two days' work in the Douglas Branch I have received pledges for $108, and cash paid on the same amounting to $28. I expect to make a personal canvass in each branch in this district and will report the result of my work from day to day.

Sincerely yours,

S. D. Condit.

Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 2

Publicity Department: The good work of the endowment campaign is going forward in the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District. We will have more good news to send you shortly, and we expect that other localities will follow the pace that Lansing Branch has set.

Yours truly,

C. J. Hunt.

Fanning, Kansas, November 5

Bishop Carmichael: Fanning, Kansas, over the top.

Samuel Twombly.

Springfield, Missouri, November 1

President F. M. Smith: Our branch quota of $175 was oversubscribed before ten o'clock p. m., November 1, which was the beginning of the drive.

J. B. Ansley.

Akron, Ohio, November 1

Bishop A. Carmichael: The first day of our stewardship endowment fund campaign has come to its close, and we feel that it has been a success in every way. Our branch quota was $1,120. At the close of the morning services the branch had subscribed $1,485, and it took less than thirty minutes in which to do this. But the best part of it all was the spirit of the meeting. The amounts pledged were freely subscribed, and many expressed the wish that they could do more. At the evening service we received an additional hundred dollars, making our total for the day $1,585. We expect that our total subscription will reach two thousand dollars when all pledges are in. We feel good over the day's work and feel that the same generous response will be felt everywhere. May the good work go forward.

Sincerely yours,

W. J. Sherman.

Mobile, Alabama, November 2

Bishop Albert Carmichael: Sunday, the first day of the campaign drive, gave us a good start, and although there were only a few out we had little difficulty in getting $105.75 pledged, of which $31.75 was cash. The outlook to me is good, and I believe that the church at large will get the $200,000. Brother Carr is with us, and we are planning to organize a class in every branch to study stewardships, which to me is one of the biggest, best, and most interesting features of the church program. We have every reason to be encouraged.

Sincerely,

A. G. Miller.

Fulton, Iowa, November 1

Bishop Carmichael: We thought our supply of pledge cards was adequate but now find we need fifty more. Please send by return mail. Our campaign is now ready to start, and we have one subscription of a hundred dollars to begin with, which is one fourth of the quota expected from this branch. We have every reason to be encouraged.

John Heide.

Saint Joseph, Missouri, November 2

The First Presidency: The First Saint Joseph Branch, with a quota of $1,000, subscribed on the first day $1,578. The quota for the entire city of Saint Joseph, which includes several congregations, is $1,700, and we have already passed the two-thousand-dollar mark.

O. Salisbury.

Columbus, Ohio, November 2

Bishop Carmichael: The Second Columbus congregation, with a quota of $400, went over the top Sunday morning, the first day of the drive, and the final result will probably show that their subscription is fifty per cent over the quota. They are going to boost it just as high as they possibly can before the campaign closes. The membership of this group consists of about ninety members, many of whom are children not wage earners, and we are proud to know that our membership stands squarely behind you and the presiding quorums of the church in the establishment of stewardships.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. French.

Duluth, Minnesota, November 2

Bishop Carmichael: The congregation at Duluth, Minnesota, have pledged their quota and the committee expects they will oversubscribe at least fifty per cent.

George W. Day.

Deerfield, Missouri, November 8

Bishop A. Carmichael: Our quota was $300. At first we didn't think we could do it, but we did, and the campaign went over good and strong at the Fort Scott, Kansas, Branch. F. A. Hawley.

Duluth, Minnesota, November 3

Presiding Bishopric and First Presidency: We are glad we can report that the endowment fund was oversubscribed the first day of the drive. Our quota was $400. We had an all-day meeting November 1, and a splendid spirit of consecration was present. From the expressions of loyalty and support voluntarily made by the members in this congregation, you may be sure they are one hundred per cent with the church program. C. B. Freeman.

Mason City, Iowa, November 3

To the First Presidency: We are an isolated group of Saints located at Mason City, Iowa, and have been asked to raise fifty dollars toward the endowment fund. We are glad to be remembered in this effort, and you may be sure we are glad to help in any way we can. We shall do our bit with great joy.

Sincerely, Mrs. Henry Smith.

Deer Lodge, Montana, October 30

Bishop Albert Carmichael: The endowment campaign is progressing very well in the Western Montana District, and we feel confident we will go over the top in our quota. Please send us additional material to reach the scattered members here.

E. E. Eliason, District President.

Hearne, Texas, November 2

Bishop Carmichael: We have every confidence that the branches at Dallas and Houston, Texas, will reach their quotas. A part of Texas has been hard hit by drouth, and economic conditions in places are critical. However, the Saints in Texas will do their very best according to their ability and circumstances.

S. S. Smith.

Wells, Michigan, November 2

Bishop Albert Carmichael: We have received some substantial pledges, and we are making every effort to go over the top and make Graceland College bigger and better.

A. M. Boomer.

Fisher, Arkansas, November 2

Bishop Carmichael: To date we have raised $388.50 in cash and pledges, with two branches yet to report. We feel we will be successful in accomplishing the quota for this district, which is $600. In fact, we expect to go well over the top.

Charles H. Hardy.

Soldiers Grove, Wisconsin, November 2

Bishop Carmichael: At this place on November 1, the first day of the campaign, we raised $176 on our quota of $274. A wonderful spirit was present all day; and as we have several good substantial members of the branch yet to see, we feel confident we will go over the top. We appreciate the campaign news in the HERALD and hope you will keep it coming.

"Buy the land" for Agricultural Stewardships.
The Order of Enoch

BY A. CARMICHAEL

An article in three parts. This is Part 3

We now have come to the most important thing to be done by this order: the creation and distribution of wealth through stewardships composing the Order of Enoch. Here again let us follow the net gains or profits of the individual steward and the collective or group steward, remembering our definition before given of the classes of stewards.

First, the tithe, or the one tenth of the net profits of the individual or group steward, goes into the common treasury of the church to be used primarily for the good of the priesthood. “The tithe is the inheritance of Levi.”

Second, if the individual or group steward has any surplus, this surplus is to be used primarily to build up Zion—help the poor, establish the worthy, wise, and faithful Saints in their inheritance, build houses of worship, start industries, etc.

Now it is obvious that the Bishopric need help to do this work wisely. They need men of good business judgment. Therefore, as stated in section 77, “it must needs be that there be an organization of my people in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people.” Let us remember that by “the poor” is meant anyone who has need. There are different degrees of poverty. If a person needs $50, he is $50 poor. If he has $50 more than he has need, he is $50 rich. Let us keep this economic definition of poverty and riches in mind as we continue to discuss the question, that poverty is measured by the amount “needed” and riches by the amount had more than needed. The law of need is the true measuring stick for the supplying of every activity in life, whether spiritual or temporal.

The surplus by the law of God belongs to the society or group that helped to make it, and therefore should be distributed to the group. This distribution requires the highest degree of business acumen. Wisdom, justice, and mercy should characterize the division of the surplus; otherwise we cannot expect God’s blessings on our efforts. “Zion shall be redeemed by judgment” is applicable here.

This task needs competent groups of men, men who will supplement the work of the Bishopric. These various groups of men will constitute orders within the Order of Enoch.

8. When and Where to Organize These Orders

The time has come and is now at hand.—77: 1.

Both in this place [Kirtland—a stake] and the land of Zion.—77: 1.

These statements, coupled with that given to us in Doctrine and Covenants 122: 6, where the Lord tells us that “the law given to the church . . . is as if it were given to-day”; also in 128: 8 that “the bishop and his counselors . . . are authorized to devise the methods of procedure,” enable us to understand that these orders can be established now and in any place, granted that the people are willing so to do.

9. How to Organize the Order; Laws Governing

1. According to the laws of God. (51: 4; 81: 4.)
2. According to the laws of the land. (51: 1.)

This means that these orders when organized will be in harmony with both the laws of God and the laws of the land. Any other form of organization will not be acceptable to God.

Doctrine and Covenants 128 gives further direction as to how to organize these collective activities.

10. Who to Organize This Order

All the orders included in the Order of Enoch are “helping orders unto the church,” or stewardships, either “individual or group; for this reason they should be organized by the church authorities having jurisdiction.”

Section 51 gives command to organize individuals as stewards, the Presiding Bishop to take the initiative.

Section 70, as heretofore stated, is a command to organize group stewardships for the printing and distribution of church literature. Certain men of the Melchisedec Order are named to do this work.

Section 77 is another command given to the high priesthood to organize another group stewardship. Here the Melchisedec priesthood is authorized to do the organizing.

Again in section 128: 9 the Bishop is directed and authorized to proceed, of course by proper consultation with the general authorities of the church:

The bishop should be directed and authorized to proceed as soon as it shall be found practicable by consultation with the general authorities of the church who are made the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal things to carry out the provisions of the law of organization which are by the law made the duty of the bishop.

We are further given to understand that the Bishopric is the body to do the business of the church. As these orders are helping orders to the church, it follows that the general authorities, including the Bishopric, have the authority and are the proper bodies to organize these orders. Of course, any legislative body (General Assembly or General Conference) could authorize their organization; then they would proceed to organize the various orders constituting the Order of Enoch, being counseled in doing so by proper authorities.

Doctrine and Covenants 128:1, 2, 3, 6, 9 proves conclusively that the Bishopric is the body to do this work, under proper counsel.

Doctrine and Covenants 128:3 says that "the bishop and his counselors, together with the other bishops of the church, and other such officers as the bishop may call together, with whom he may confer in council, are authorized to devise methods of procedure."

11. The Necessity of These Various Orders in the Order of Enoch

We first call your attention to the 77th section of Doctrine and Covenants. Remember this section was given more particularly as a command to organize this group in the Order of Enoch which afforded an opportunity for both profit and service and whose primary field of operation was to help the needy.

As noted previously, section 70, given about four months before this, provided for a group stewardship for service, this service being the distribution of our church literature.

We quote from section 77:

The time has come, and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people.

This statement is ample proof of the necessity for an organization whose specific work was to aid the needy. The Lord says that "it must needs be"; not that we may, but that we must organize.

Doctrine and Covenants 128 relates the necessity of the work being done.

12. The Importance of This Order

We are told in section 77 that "this is the preparation wherewith I prepare you, and the foundation, and the example, which I give unto you, whereby you may accomplish the commandments which are given you."

This organization is the foundation given to latter-day Israel on which they must build their temporal affairs to enable them to accomplish the commandments. It is an example of other orders or organizations of our temporal affairs. Compare this with section 70 where the Lord starts a group stewardship (the Board of Publication) and then says:

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord’s storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things; he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship, to administer in temporal things; yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld.—Paragraph 3.

This order (Board of Publication) is an example for the organization of group stewardships composing the Order of Enoch.

After reading this, who can deny the importance of this Order of Enoch? It is the last link in the development of the law of temporalities. It is prophetical of what will finally obtain when humanity is living in full accord with the perfect law of liberty. It is the welding link between the spiritual and temporal, fusing them into one. Here is the real unity prayed for by the Master—the condition for which he prayed that would convince the world to believe in his mission.

13. The Incentive of the Order

The incentive of this order, then, is the same as that of the greater Order of Melchisedec—greater because the Order of Enoch comes into being through the authority of the Order of Melchisedec. The incentive of both orders is the love of humanity; the objective of both orders is the same—service to the human race.

We learn in the divine records that the only true motive governing our stewardships is that of love—purely altruistic. Read such quotations as 2 Nephi 11:106, 109; Doctrine and Covenants 38:5; 81:4; Matthew 7:12; Jacob 2:22-24; etc., and you will discover that God has not failed to tell us what the incentive should be in the lives of those numbered as members of any of these orders. Whatever is done by a member of this order should be done "for the benefit of the church of the living God—that every man may improve upon his talent," etc. (Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.) The same may be said of the Order of Melchisedec.

14. Certain Personnel of This Order, Why Chosen

It is worthy of note to know the names of those chosen by the Lord to become members of this order and why chosen. Section 77 names by revelation these three as members: Newel K. Whitney, Bishop; Joseph Smith, President of the church; Sidney Rigdon, counselor to the President of the church. Section 81 names the same three with the addition of Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, (Alam?), (Mahalel?), (Horah?), (Shalemansaess?). Section 101 adds the following to the list of members: John Johnson, F. G. Williams.

1. As leaders it was their duty to lead—to teach by example.
2. They were supposed to be men of the highest probity.

3. Such men would beget confidence in the Saints.

4. These men represented the two great divisions of our work, the spiritual and the temporal, thus fitly representing this holy order which fuses the spiritual and temporal into one.

5. As an additional precaution to safeguard the rights of the people, the Lord added for violation a penalty.

This order provided for in section 77 was for the especial work of aiding the Bishop "to establish and regulate" the storehouse; in other words, to provide the treasury of the church with the necessary means and also to help distribute this acquired means, therefore the personnel of this particular order.

15. Means or Capital to Start These Various Individual and Group Stewardships Constituting the Order of Enoch

All individual or group stewards are to furnish their own capital if they can; if not, then individual and group stewards are to be furnished the capital from the "common fund," or the surplus paid into the church.

16. Articles of Association of the Orders Composing the Order of Enoch; What to Include

1. Bond and covenant, agreeing not to break.

2. If violated, judgment follows immediately in the several stewardships composing the order. (81: 4; also 77: 2.)

3. Must further agree to be equal.

4. That they will use the benefits of their stewardships for the church.

5. That they will use according to their needs and just wants. (81: 4)

6. That all gains, little or much, will become the common property of the whole church. (81: 4)

7. They are to be called The United Order of——

8. And agree to do business in their own name——

9. Or in their own names——

10. They agree to be organized in their own name——

11. Also to be organized in their own names (101: 9)——

12. Provisions for a treasury——

13. Also for a treasurer——

14. Also for a seal (101: 12)——

15. Provisions to be made also for the providing for stewardships out of the property of the order by the order. (101: 2.)

16. All things to be done by the counsel, voice, and consent of the order. (101: 3.)

17. Every man is to be made accountable for his stewardship and give an account to the order of the same. (101: 2.)

17. Management of These Organizations

It should be obvious to all that in managing such organizations those so doing should be governed by the laws of God and the laws of the land. Altruism in its highest sense should be the governing force. Every member should be one of unquestionable integrity.

The same suggestions made to us about the various associations to be organized (section 128) will be necessary to observe in managing all the orders or groups whether for profit or for service.

18. Correlation and Coordination of the Various Individual Stewards and Group Stewards of the Order of Enoch Discussing this very important topic, we can only touch on the program lying before us as a church. The correlation and coordination of the various individual stewardships, also various group stewardships, will depend somewhat on the degree of organization of territory had as to church work. Up to the present time the general church work has been divided into four distinct classes so far as territory is concerned.

1st. Unorganized territory.

2d. Districts.

3d. Stakes.

4th. Zion.

It is obvious that these four divisions of territory represent different degrees of compactness of organized activities of the church members. The first is unorganized. In it we may find individual or group stewardships. The tithe and surplus and offerings from stewardships in this unorganized territory goes to the general church officers in Zion.

In districts we find attempts to organize our forces both spiritual and temporal. Here we have bishops or Bishop's agents to collect the tithe, etc., in addition to the organizing of individual stewards and group stewards. All tithes, surplus, and offerings from the districts go directly to the general church office in Zion.

In stakes we find a higher form of organization of our forces, both spiritual and financial, than we have in districts. Here we have bishops and other officers and orders enabling us to more closely coordinate all our activities and thus better solve the question of the proper creation of wealth as well as the proper distribution of wealth. In stakes the tithe goes to the general church office in Zion. The surplus may or may not go to the general church office in Zion. Here again the law of the need predominates. If the stake needs the surplus more than the general church needs it, then the stake should retain it; but if the needs of the general church are paramount, then the surplus should go to the general church in Zion.

Each stake is expected to have an order whose duty it is (Doctrine and Covenants 77) to aid the bishop of the stake “to regulate and establish” the storehouse.

These various helping orders will be coordinated in their work by the organization of a general helping order in Zion. No doubt other kinds of “helping orders,” such as agricultural and industrial, will also be coordinated by some general order in Zion of their kind.

19. Results to Be Obtained

Obtaining of equality. (77: 1.)
Church to be independent. (77: 3.)
Inherit all things. (77: 4.)
To receive their crown. (77: 3.)

20. Duration of the Organization

“An everlasting order.” (81: 5.)
“For a permanent and everlasting order.” (77: 1.)
An order then that is not a temporal one. If everlasting or permanent it must be spiritual.

21. Violation of Bond and Covenant—How to Be Tried

And the soul that sins against this covenant and hardeneth his heart against it shall be dealt with according to the laws of the church.—81: 5.

This means that members of this order will have the right to protection accorded them as members of the church.

22. The Penalty for Violating This Covenant

If not faithful—nigh unto cursing . . .
Breaking covenant by covetousness . . . with feigned words, they were cursed. . . .
Any man found a transgressor . . . break his covenant to be cursed in this life and shall be trodden down by whom the Lord will, . . .
To be cut off by transgression. . . . he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment. . . . (Section 101.)

It is worthy to note here that six of these men, namely, Joseph Smith, jr., Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, and W. W. Phelps, were chosen as members of the order for publishing the revelations, now known as the Board of Publication, another group or order to do business for the church whose primary duty was service to humanity, but who also expected to make a profit so as to increase the business as needed.

The law puts a severe penalty for the breaking of this bond and covenant.

The men engaged in this work should be men of the highest integrity. They are intrusted with a serious responsibility. After making such a solemn vow to do this work, failing to do so they will come under severe condemnation, as evidenced by the following:

1. He shall lose his office and standing in the church. (Doctrine and Covenants 77: 3.)
2. Judgment shall immediately follow in your several stewardships. (81: 4.)
3. Former sins return. (81: 2.)
4. To be cut off. (101: 1.)
5. With the wicked lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment. (101: 2.)

The Service of Love

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

The great Teacher always tried to enable the children of men to see that the highest principle in the universe is love, and so he constantly taught: “If you love me you will keep my commandments.” Surely all mankind will do the things they love to do, and will refrain from the thing that they hate. It therefore goes without argument that where love leads, duty becomes pleasant. Christ does not want to force the human mind; he does not wish to intimidate anyone; he simply seeks to appeal to the highest and the best there is in us, and asks that we make choice because we have come to have a love for the right and a hatred for the wrong. He wants us to see that the most noble thing in life is a service that is actuated by love; that is to say, that we learn to do the right and come to serve mankind because we have a love for the right and for the service of others; a desire to assist them to something better than they are already the possessors of, rather than an attempt to do something that the spirit of fear seems to impel us to do. Love is the quintessence of the Christian religion.

There is no one in the world who has the proper exercise of his faculties but will agree that Christ came to the world to serve mankind because he had a love for the race of mankind. The word of Scripture is, that God so loved that he gave his only begotten Son. It was love, then, that actuated the giving of Christ to the world. Surely no one will attempt to argue that love would do other than seek the best interests of those for whom it is exhibited. We can readily understand, therefore, that the Christ would not ask of mankind anything that was not intended for their best good. He said, “My Father gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is love everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I

In my last I told you of my visit to Marble. At least I told you a part of it. I was telling you about how I spent Sunday, the 11th of October. It was the first Sunday for some time that I had been without appointment, and I was enjoying the change.

About half past four that afternoon began an experience quite novel to me and one long to be remembered.

The Crystal River & San Juan Railroad is of about thirty miles length, reaching from Carbondale to Marble, though in width it equals most roads—it is of standard gauge. Its rolling stock is a bit varied, to meet the varied demands made for service. The motive power comprises one machine, a steam locomotive purchased some years ago from the D. & R. G. W. Railway, an “old style” ten-wheel passenger locomotive with low drivers. It is known on the rolls of the railroad company as Engine Number 1; but to the residents along the road it goes by the sobriquet of “Bull of the Woods.” The pilot of this utility craft at present is Cookman Chidester, a railroad engineer of considerable experience on mountain roads, and a rancher of somewhat varied and perhaps lengthy experience, if experience be not always measured chronologically. Besides being pilot for the well-known “Bull of the Woods,” and the railroad official is on the engine, and rancher, Mr. Chidester finds the call of the wild quite strong, and he has as a consequence established somewhat of a reputation as a hunter of big game. He had this year planned a camping-hunting trip during the four days of “open season” on deer, but demands for service on the road shortened up the hunt till only a day could be given to it. The result, however, greatly increased the chances for getting game. An invitation most unexpectedly given me to be one of the party on this one-day hunt was gladly accepted.

The Chidester ranch lies high “up in the hills” to the north and east of Marble, and his ranch house was to be the start of the hunt on Monday, the 12th. Eben, Jr., and I were to be his companions on the hunt, besides certain others I shall name later. So about half past four on the afternoon of the 11th, “Junior” came to the cabin, loading a saddled horse and carrying a rifle, and in a few moments we were on the trail up to Chidester’s. Beginning not far from the cabin where Mr. Johnson lives, that trail ascended rapidly to the ranch. I was mounted on the horse, a sturdy animal named Nancy, and with some grunting and puffing on her part and occasional stops to rest, the one mile and a half to the ranch was traversed easily, though in that distance the trail ascended a thousand feet, an average of a fourteen per cent grade. I thought it was pretty steep; but I had to learn next day that it was a very easy grade.

On the way we made more frequent stops than neces-

The Saints’ Herald for November 11, 1925

He constantly demonstrated that he loved to do his Father’s will. In doing this he sought to enable us to see that true joy came to us by, or through, doing the right thing.

Why not look this thing squarely in the face and meet the issues like men? The things that Christ has asked of us are for our own welfare; they are the requests that love would make of us; they are the things that will fit us for bigger and better things in the future; they are the things that will qualify us for a place in the kingdom of God. It is, therefore, very obvious that the message of Christ is one of life. If I love Christ, I will not seek to discredit his words, but I will try to bring myself to that place where I can have a strong desire, a growing love for the things that he has asked of us. His law requires us to be of assistance to others; it provides that I shall prove myself the child of God by demonstrating that I am the brother of men. If I love the Christ I will obey his laws in so far as I am able to understand them, and I will do better as I come to understand better.

We have long since taught faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands; but we have somehow failed to make the law of stewardship so prominent. This is not because stewardship is not so important, but because many of us have not properly understood the requirement of our Lord in this matter. I think now the time has come when we should awaken as we have never before awakened, and demonstrate our faith by our works in that we get behind the program of the church as one man, with the determination to do all the Lord has asked us to do in the way of assisting in the accomplishment of his work by building up Zion.

In the message to the church in these last days, the Lord has said: “Behold, the Lord requires the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land.” The willing and the obedient are always actuated by love; but the rebellious and the disobedient are actuated by quite the opposite spirit. The Lord has told us what is for our welfare, what is for the salvation of mankind, but has given us the right of choice in all things. If through love we are willing and obedient, we will be permitted to share in the good of the fruit of the land of Zion; but if we are rebellious and disobedient we will cut ourselves off from this privilege. If I love the Lord, I will love to do his will, and thereby I will bless mankind and bring the peace of the Spirit into my daily life.

No amount of sacrifice will enable me to gain the favor of God if I rebel against his word. I can gain the best only by accepting through the spirit of love the principles of the teaching of our Lord, and then, going out into the world among men, learn to render a loving service unto them as our Lord has shown me in his life of service among men. I can never reach the highest and best in life so long as I rebel against the word of God, and I would therefore like to be able to assist all men to see that real life comes to all of us through a willing mind and an obedient heart. Why not learn to render a loving service by first learning the will of God, and then through the spirit of love doing that which the gospel requires of all men?
sary, perhaps, for the scenery was fine, though the clouds obscured many a distant vista. The rain had ceased, and the air was clear. As we ascended, the whole of the town and much of the valley came into view more clearly. The clouds seemed disposed to confine themselves to any particular strata or level, and stray ones could be seen hanging low on the skyline. We were finally looking down upon some of them as they floated lazily against the dark green of the forests.

When we reached the ranch house, it was near sunset. We found the usual western welcome from both the Chidesters and were made to feel at home. A hearty, well-cooked and served supper was followed by a pleasant evening in the spacious living room, cheerfully warmed by a wood fire, with chatting and music from a good selection of records on the Brunswick, while Mr. Chiester was cleaning and oiling the Winchesters in preparation for the next day. Then, with the alarm clock set for "three o'clock in the morning," we sought our beds.

Three in the morning comes a bit early, but shortly after the alarm sounded all were astir. Mrs. Chiester did her part by starting "the hunters" off well fed and well provisioned, and while the stars were still brightly twinkling the party started out—three men, two horses, and two mules. In the lead was Mr. Chiester, riding Dart, one of his favorite mountain horses, leading Nancy, the sturdy animal I had ridden the day before. She carried a pack saddle and two panniers, in which the simple camping outfit and provisions were carried. I followed, mounted on a mule, which answered or not according to his fancy, to the name of Red.

Behind me came Eben, Jr., mounted on a quiet-mannered mule called Beck. Those four animals, I learned later, were well qualified for their work and, as mountain-trained animals, performed work that day which would have utterly exhausted some of our prairie-trained animals. Red is a big, stout "Missouri" mule and got his name from his color. As we started out, he emitted some "hearty" grunts which I supposed were correlated with my avoirdupois; but Mr. Chiester said, "Don't pay any attention to Red's grunts, Mr. Smith, for that's one of his accomplishments."

So I learned to enjoy even the grunts, for I learned Red was an adept.

From the barn across a "meadow," through a gate, and along a road to a dilapidated bridge across a mountain stream, reached in a few moments, and I made my first dismount. I slid off, and had occasion some hours later to recall the slide. Red was led around the dilapidated bridge while I made my way cautiously over it. Then, remounting, we swung out across the stream and up the hillside. If speed and rate; that is to say, the grade was steep though the gait was a walk. With stops every few moments to let the horses breathe, we kept steadily climbing. Soon the east began turning gray; and as the dawn came slowly on, the wild beauty of the mountains came into view. I carried a small aneroid barometer with me, and from the 9,100 feet at the ranch house it was not long before we had added another thousand feet to our elevation. The timber thinned out; and by the time it was fully daylight, we were above at the timber line and were zigzagging up a slope which became steeper as we approached the "pass," towards which we were making.

The growing rarity of the atmosphere necessitated more frequent stops, while the snow to which we had come at an elevation of 9,100 feet elevation, grew constantly deeper. And we were finally looking down upon the valley we had been so near as we ascended—rose sharply ahead. The thin ridge of the pass cut across our path a few hundred feet up and ahead of us. That brilliant white carpet, as it finally lay glistening in the morning sun as it arose over the mountain peaks behind us, threw the sky behind and up from the pass ahead into wonderful contrast. It was the deepest, richest blue I have ever seen in the sky. I have gazed into the limpid depths of the Mediterranean when from those depths was reflected a blue which seemed to have reached the limits of saturation, and I have seen the famous blue skies of Italy; but never have I seen such depths of blue as topped that slope of white as we looked up to and beyond the pass towards which we were making. The clear, pure, and rarified air, and the sharp contrast with the pure white snow, all combined to produce the wonderful effect.

Each stop put us nearer the top. I had given Red free rein, and he showed his experience in closely following the trail broken out by Dart and Nancy. As Red gruntingly made the last few yards upwards to the pass, Chiester with his two animals disappeared. I soon found why. He had gained the top, and had at once pitched down on the slope towards the west, down into a ravine or park, where we had expected to find deer. The ridge on the pass was narrow. As we had neared the top, the saddle under me had worked slowly backwards, and as we (Red and I) followed Chiester down, I experienced a sudden change, and for the time a bit painful one. I had become slightly accustomed to the angle at which Red was working—head up. When that angle was suddenly changed, an old-timer began working with head down. But no such change could have taken place. Red had to have learned some new tricks. Besides, the saddle suddenly shifted, and the loosened girths, together with Red's low withers, caused me almost to hold my breath in awe. And when the dawning day gave way to the direct rays of white, the glistering peaks of snow rising above the dark shadows of the canyons, peak behind peak, brought into view by the touch of the sun, I felt paid for the trip, even if nothing more new should be seen.

These views lay behind us; but up and ahead was something else. The evenly laid blanket of snow—deeper as we ascended—rose sharply ahead. The thin ridge of the pass cut across our path a few hundred feet up and ahead of us. That brilliant white carpet, as it finally lay glistening in the morning sun as it arose over the mountain peaks behind us, threw the sky behind and up from the pass ahead into wonderful contrast. It was the deepest, richest blue I have ever seen in the sky. I have gazed into the limpid depths of the Mediterranean when from those depths was reflected a blue which seemed to have reached the limits of saturation, and I have seen the famous blue skies of Italy; but never have I seen such depths of blue as topped that slope of white as we looked up to and beyond the pass towards which we were making. The clear, pure, and rarified air, and the sharp contrast with the pure white snow, all combined to produce the wonderful effect.

As we had ascended the pass, the saddle under me had worked slowly backwards, and as we (Red and I) followed Chiester down, I experienced a sudden change, and for the time a bit painful one. I had become slightly accustomed to the angle at which Red was working—head up. When that angle was suddenly changed, an old-timer began working with head down. But no such change could have taken place. Red had to have learned some new tricks. Besides, the saddle suddenly shifted, and the loosened girths, together with Red's low withers, caused me almost to hold my breath in awe. I dismounted again, and taking the reins as lead straps, walked along down the trail. At first I was afraid Red would slide down onto me sometime; but that sagacious beast seemed to know just where to set his feet! So I mounted again; and up and up, back and forth, we went in a trackless region, wild and primeval—what an experience for me! At times, telling me to wait a while, Chiester would go ahead scouting for a way out. Then on again. Finally, we came out, high up, well above 11,000 feet, onto a ridge, and what a sight met our eyes! or at least to me it was wonderful, though it seemed somewhat commonplace to my companions. We had crossed the top of Black Mountain, and sharply down from our feet sloped the ground to the west. Chair Mountain rose before us, and beyond that the Elk Mountains, while three hundred miles to the west could be seen the mountains of Utah. An endless succession of peaks, in every direction. To me it was marvelous! I was lost for a moment in wonder. But Chidester was looking far away down to the park some hundreds of feet below where he hoped to find deer near. “This is easy,” he said, as he started Dart down a slope which looked to me impassable. The clearness of the air made it seem worse; for the valley, thousands of feet below, and in reality several miles away, looked to be so close that it seemed one could roll into it; and it rather appeared to me that that would happen if we started down there. But down we went, zigzagging around between trees, over logs, around bowlders. I marveled at the alertness of that mountaineer in reading “sign,” finding ways through, etc.

Well, I alternately rode and led Red, or at times let Eben lead him. Once we stopped and tied the horses, while the other men searched for “sign,” for a way out. Then about eight o’clock we rode into a little park, which seemed to be the place Chidester had been seeking. Here the horses were tied, the panniers laid under a tree, and the other two men, riding with us, were mounted; and as we sought for “sign,” we found it—deer near. I was beginning to feel considerable lameness from riding, so I decided not to go with them, but would watch for whatever deer might be “scared up,” being told that the probabilities were strong that they would pass that way.

So I wandered about from one point of vantage to another, enjoying some splendid vistas, watching the graceful flight of a golden eagle or the antics of some chipmunks, and even catching glimpses of silently running snowshoe rabbits.

I began to wonder what the time was and felt for my watch. It was gone! Where had I lost it? I “back trailed” in memory, and thought of several places where it might have slipped from my pocket; and yet, it had been attached to a chain, while in another pocket I had carried, loose, the barometer, and it was still with me. Then I recalled the first distinction, at the broken bridge. I recalled how as I slid down from that high mule’s back my jacket had caught on the saddle horn. I calculated that my watch and chain lay somewhere near that bridge.

It was about half past twelve or one o’clock when Chidester and Eben returned, empty-handed. They had seen plenty of sign, but no deer. They found me warming my small fire I had built. Then we lunched on bread and butter, with a visit with Lamoni relatives and friends. And after I had gotten into his car, he stood no chance to find it at other places. We went, zigzagging, twisting around between trees, over logs, around bowlders. I marveled at the alertness of that mountaineer in reading “sign,” finding ways through, etc.

Back once more in Johnson’s snug cottage, after a warm supper which Miss Sowers had long kept warm for me, I looked back over the day’s experiences, and, lame though I was, I felt I had enjoyed a splendid day, even if we had no deer meat to show for all our efforts. I shall long remember that day’s experience. It was novel from start to finish. I had enjoyed Red, that stout-hearted and sturdy-limbed mule from Missouri, though for several days I carried the marks of that saddle he wore, for, I had developed a saddle bull that did not disappear till after I reached Spokane.

Altogether, to Chidester and his good wife, and to Eben, jr., I am indebted for one of the outstanding days of recent years, a day of novel recreation.

Inspiring Conference in Little Sioux District

Moorehead, Iowa, October 27.—The district conference convened here October 19th, and 21st, presented a program furnished by the local on the evening of the 9th. The attendance on Saturday was small, but many visiting Saints were present Sunday. The services throughout were of an inspiring nature and were appreciated by those permitted to attend.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elder Charles J. Smith were present and did the preaching and assisted in other services as circumstances demanded, much to the edification of the Saints.

Stewardships was the theme of the conference, and the same theme has been followed by the local priesthood during the remainder of the month. Brother C. B. Field is lecturing on stewardships Sunday morning at Pisgah and in our local on Thursday evenings, where the meeting is preceded by a short prayer service, as it is the regular weekly prayer meeting service. Saints are becoming quite interested, and we expect after these lectures that they will have a good understanding and be ready to take up this work and thus help the church in the redemption of Zion.

At the close of conference, District President J. W. Lane departed for Little Sioux. There he will join Brother Charles J. Smith and will assist him with church work at various places. We are pleased that his health permits him to do so much service for the church.

Brother Ivan Struble, son of Brother and Sister Ed. Struble, has been under the hand of affliction of late. He found relief through administration and at last report seemed to be improving.

Brother Charles Davis and family returned last week from a visit with Lemonly relatives and friends.

Brother John Boswell has been suffering with a lame back part of the last month but is much improved at present.

Sister Clara McDonald has accepted a position in Omaha and is missed from our services, but we are sure she will lend a helping hand and will be of service whenever she is located. The same can be said of her sister, Sister Nellie Larson, who has a position in the Logan school.

Sister Minnie Rawlings recently visited a few days among Moorhead relatives.

Brother Julius Monson, one of our faithful members, is a patient at the Independence Sanitarium at present. We trust that he may receive the necessary aid. He was accompanied to Independence by Brother T. O. Strand, our branch president.

Sister Ruby Inlow had three little folks departed for their home at Mason City, Iowa, last week after an extended visit at the home of her parents, Brother and sister T. O. Strand.

By C. Ed. Miller

While acting as pastor of the Toronto Branch, I frequently heard the Saints sing a hymn to the tune of “I will sing of my Redeemer,” and “Jesus, I my cross have taken,” but I was to lead the church back to the old path. Hundreds heard the hymn was published in the late R. C. Evans’ book of songs, poems, etc. There the history of the hymn is given as follows:

“On the evening of October 2, 1908, Brothers R. C. Evans and R. C. Longhurst bowed in prayer in their room. While praying, the Spirit came upon them, and they retired, but the Spirit continued to bless them until the power became so great that the bed on which they were reclining trembled.

“A sister in another part of the house, knowing nothing of the blessing under which the brethren were rejoicing, testified that the whole house shook.

“While under this power, Brother Evans said ‘I cannot remain in bed longer.’ On reaching the floor he was commanded to secure material and write, for the Lord had a message for his people. . . . Brother Evans, pale and trembling, wrote rapidly, without hesitation until the message was completed.”

A Message

O my people, hear the message,
That to you this day I give,
Cense your quarreling and contention,
For in me ye move and live.

By my power I have led you
Through the struggles of the past,
And, if faithful to your mission,
I will crown you at the last.

If ye love me, build my kingdom;
Work together, one and all.
If divided, ye shall suffer,
And the house ye build shall fall.

Harshness, jealousy, and envy
Hath wrought weakness and distress,
Human weakness calls for pity;
Love, repent, and find sweet rest.

Tear not down another’s structure,
Hoping thus to build thine own.
Each shall answer for his conduct
When he stands before the throne.

Tear not down another’s structure,
Hoping thus to build thine own.”

Eloquently he plead in the pulpits of Canada for the church to return to the good old path from which he said it had departed. He claimed the Lord showed him that he was to lead the church back to the old path. Hundreds believed in him and followed his leadership. Gradually, almost imperceptibly, he led away from the basic truths of the great latter-day work. In a sermon on the “Rights of man,” which is printed at the close of his book of poems, etc., from which the “Message” was taken, he said:

“In closing, permit me to say, I am convinced that we are on the verge of a great change. May we return to our first love, stand by the gospel as God has revealed it; let no man take our crown, nor abridge our right; but may we stand firm in the liberty wherein Christ has made us free, and so go on until the world is warned and Christ shall come in his glory is my prayer.”

His conviction that the church was on the verge of a great change was not borne out. He was on the verge of a great change. His exhortation to “return to our first love and stand by the gospel as God has revealed it,” did not result in his followers standing by the gospel and the church, for the spirit which was leading him eventually led him to write the following, which was published in his last book, printed in 1920:

“My earnest prayer for the many honest people of the church is, that they will abandon Joseph Smith, the Book of Mormon, the Book of Abraham, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the Book of Commandments, and all other fraudulent works of Mormonism and embrace Christ and the gospel as presented in the Word of God.”

His self-appointed leadership, claiming to lead back to the old paths, led to repudiating Joseph Smith as a prophet of God, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Covenants as divine records. How many more such tragedies will the church witness? Self-appointed leadership in this church is dangerous. It was dangerous in the courts of glory when one third of the hosts of heaven were led away. God’s house is a house of order.

The counsel given to “Tear not down another’s structure;

Hoping thus to build thine own”

is good counsel to-day. May we heed it.

West Virginia to Help

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

We are all very busy trying to get ready for the great work that lies before us, viz, the redemption of Zion, and the raising of the quota assigned us for the Graceland endowment. I am under no concern whatever but what we can raise our quota, as everyone is enthused with the proposition. I presented the pledge cards to two brethren on Tuesday evening, and they each signed up for $30, so I have already got a start of $60 towards our part, $275. I want to go over the top considerably so as to make doubly sure that the necessary funds will be forthcoming when needed.

I have already started a class for the study of the stewards’ proposition. The Saints are interested, and a goodly number were present at each session. I am sanguine that the time is not far distant when the Saints of Clarksburg, West Virginia, will be ready to enter the list as stewards of the most high God. This last month our preaching has been exclusively on the stewardship plan. I do not want to leave a stone unturned regarding this great duty, that the Saints may be fully informed as to what the Lord requires of them regarding this matter. I pray that God will crown our every effort in this direction with abundant success.

Very sincerely,

THOMAS NEWTON.

Nauvoo, Illinois

October 28.—Our pastor, Brother Berve, and his wife returned from a vacation of several weeks, where he had been visiting relatives and friends in the various fields in which he has labored in the past. His vacation was occasioned by ill health, but he has returned feeling equal to his winter's work in the branch and district. During his absence, his work was carried on by Brother R. W. Farrell. Brother Farrell's sermons, especially his studies in Christian stewardship, were very highly appreciated by the Nauvoo Saints. During his stay the Hancock Centennial Celebration was being carried on, and one evening's program was turned over to the Latter Day Saints. Brother Farrell made a very instructive talk on the history of Hancock County, which has since been published in the local paper; the orchestra furnished two numbers, and Sister Sanford and her two daughters gave a piano trio. Some very interesting relics were on display. These were especially interesting to the Saints, as the majority of them dated back to the days of the "Mormons" in Nauvoo.

Before Brother Farrell left for Independence, he was given a farewell party and donation, this taking place in the Nauvoo House. Tables were set in the dining room, and the entire branch sat down to a feast of good things prepared by the sisters. By way of entertainment, each was given a slip of paper containing the name of some one present and asked to tell something good about that person. This was not at all difficult to do.

Our branch entered very enthusiastically into raising their quota for Graceland—in fact, could not wait until November first—so on October 11, after a spirited talk by Brother Farrell, subscriptions were taken, which resulted in over-subscribing our quota by more than $100. This represents a real sacrifice on the part of the majority of the Saints here. A. L. Sanford was called to Ottumwa this week to preach the funeral sermon of Sister Angeline Shockley, who passed away last Monday morning at the age of eighty-four years. This sister was instrumental in having the gospel preached directly and indirectly in the community where she lived, for forty-six years.

It is said there is none so blind as he that will not see, and we are constrained to believe that there are some blind Latter Day Saints. We do not all see alike, but there is no reason why we should close our eyes to the truth. We understand that mistakes may be made by the best and most skillful men. Seemingly we can all run the other fellow's business better than he can; but why try to run his when we cannot run our own? I should feel very sorrowful if those trusted with the reins of this church were perfect. But I am reminded, that "To err is human," and must add, "to forgive, divine." We should wait until our own structures are perfect before we pull down the work of others, or even tell them how to build theirs. This is the most wonderful work the writer has been called upon to engage in, I am honored by that call. How can I sound a clear note with a battered trumpet and a half-hearted blast?

The Saints' Herald for November 11, 1925

Speak not of London's wealth and power, her population dense;
Long time she's had a nation's care and sums of gold im­mense.
Then why not be old England's pride? There's been no hostile foe
To check the progress of her growth. Not so fair Nauvoo.
Midst great oppression she has risen—the pride of all the land,
Built up by men who had been driven from all they could command.
Once nurtured on luxury's lap of ease, of toil they little knew;
But stripped of all, their hands they ply to rear the fair Nauvoo.
Nor deem they this a task severe; they fondly do believe That each and every suffering here, God surely will relieve.
Though men more fierce than savage beast, lions and tigers, too,
Have slain their prophet and assailed the beautiful Nauvoo.

Yet trusting still in Him who said, Their wrongs I will re­dress.
And fondly do they now believe that they, they are the best. And as you gaze upon that scene, their temple strikes your view,
And in the fulness of your heart you exclaim, O fair Nauvoo!

Though wild and visionary schemes their doctrine seems to me,
Yet on that temple when I gaze involuntarily,
Escaped my heart a prayer to God, sincere and fervent, too,
That he will bless the people of that young and fair Nauvoo.

Special Meetings at Saint Thomas, Ontario

October 30.—The Saints here were favored with a week's discourses from Apostle J. F. Curtis. His round face and jovial manner came to us like a ray of sunlight bursting through the clouds. Not that the clouds are over us, for we feel that a branch of people in those circumstances is like a can with a hole in it—there must be a leak somewhere. The talks received each night were of an uplifting character. We believe Apostle Curtis is, as other brothers on general church appointment, a good builder for the Great Master Builder. His talk on the authority of the presidency will be long remembered. We were taken back to the time of Moses and plainly shown how the children of Israel were organized with Moses and his two colleagues, then the twelve, and seventy.

It is said there is none so blind as he that will not see, and we are constrained to believe at times that there are some blind Latter Day Saints. We do not all see alike, but there is no reason why we should close our eyes to the truth. We understand that mistakes may be made by the best and most skillful men. Nauvoo

Through cities, towns, and countries, I've often found my way, Unnumbered joys attending, to bless each happy day.
Ten thousand, thousand beauties rare have often met my view
But lovelier still, and queen of all, is beautiful Nauvoo.

Oh, tell me not of ancient Rome, or Athens, or of Troy;
Gone, gone is all their greatness, without one gleam of Joy.
Nor speak ye yet more modern names, though fair and by lovely, too;
What is their beauty, what their fame, compared to fair Nauvoo?

Tell not of Egypt's ruined towns that showed splendors dome,
Though art and science ever fair once made that place their home;
For they have flown, have crossed the seas, and now bid fair to do
The honor of their presence sweet to beautiful Nauvoo.

Port Huron Convention of Young People

October 30.—The second annual convention of the young people of Michigan, bringing together young people is now history, but still remains the memory of the opportunity to attend at Grand Rapids through the convention. Many spent most of the night driving and were well taken care of by near hotels till church time.

The early arrivals began to gather in the city Friday evening. At the church a number of these gathered to hear Elder John R. Grice of Saint Clair, who had been the “fore-runner” to the convention, as he had been announced to speak every night in the week at the church. Perhaps it was the chicken dinner, or the arrival of the writer with Elders F. M. McDowell and E. J. Gleazer at the home of Brothers W. H. Bellisle, that scared him out, or the combination of both. At any rate he would not preach as had been announced, so the evening consisted of short talks by the above-mentioned speakers, and some good musical numbers made an enjoyable beginning of what was to be a successful convention.

Late comers on the evening trains were met at the union station by various ones, and congratulations were in order to Elder and Sister John Blackmore, who had survived uninjured the wreck of their train en route from Des Moines to Chicago. Their late arrival was due to the wreck, and they were soon made comfortable at the home of Brother and Sister Walter Ryder, who are known to all missionaries passing through Grand Rapids. Many spent most of the night driving and were well taken care of by near hotels till church time.

Nine o’clock found a good crowd assembled for prayer meeting. The spirit of this meeting presaged the future meetings and, with a wonderful degree of activity manifested, kept in our midst the calm, peaceful influence which brought blessings to each.

The class work opened at a quarter after ten with a lecture by Bishop A. Carmichael. Stewardship was his subject.

After a forty-five minute lecture, the class was divided into four groups, presided over by the Bishop, Elders F. M. McDowell, E. J. Gleazer, and John Blackmore. This was the schedule of the afternoon meeting also, after which a short business meeting was held relative to another convention next year. The expression of the body was taken, which showed a desire to make this convention an annual affair; and the committee, one representing each district of Michigan, was instructed to take steps in harmony with the wishes of the First Presidency of the church.

The committee, consisting of Carlisle Whitehead, Pontiac, chairman; Otto Bartlett, Midland, treasurer; M. W. Liston, Port Huron, publicity and song leader; H. A. Doty, Traverse City, orchestra and band director; Louise Evans, Grand Rapids; and Hector McKinnon, met during the morning session and outlined the work for another year. The many things coming out of this convention which can be improved on for another year, many additional things that can be done for the well-being of the young people, and the hearty support of the older ones, all went to put it over in a big way.

The sermons by Elder John Blackmore Saturday evening, Bishop Carmichael Sunday morning, F. M. McDowell and E. J. Gleazer in the afternoon and evening, were of an exceptionally high order. All made those present feel the necessity of going to work at once.

An expression was taken by those present at the morning preaching service as to whether they were willing to go to work and they were classified into those willing to make their inventory. Second, those who have made their inventory. Third, those who have made their inventory and kept it up to date. An audience which was estimated conservatively at three hundred and fifty brought an eighty per cent response, who signed cards signifying their willingness to proceed. Thus Michigan young people have taken the lead. What other States will keep us company? Who will be the first to match us?

The assistance of the business men of Grand Rapids was greatly appreciated by the convention. The fairness of the First Presidency of the church in carrying our announcements and giving write-ups of the convention was appreciated. The Association of Commerce contributed liberally to our expenses, and the Baxter Laundry and Dry Cleaning Company permitted the musicians in attendance to “go on the air” over their radio broadcasting station, WBI D C. The hotels assisted in caring for the visitors by cutting their rates, and—well, everything was given us that could be desired to make our stay a pleasant one.

It was estimated there were about six hundred in all who attended the sessions of the convention. Plans were suggested for “intersectional” conventions for the coming year, and carrying out the program of the church through these conventions, each bringing its contribution for the state convention in the full. The recognition of this convention is noticeable when three chambers of commerce sent invitations for the convention of 1926. Saginaw, Bay City, and Port Huron will be in for equal chance in committee meeting, and the city getting the next convention will have to hustle to go ahead of Grand Rapids.

The good-bys said, we were soon on our return home; many to more active work in the church; many just getting the first real vision of the responsibility of a Latter Day Saint; many to go to fields of labor, feeling their labor can be sanctified by the complete consecration of their time to the “ministry of material things.” Thus passes into history the second annual convention of the young people of Michigan, bringing them to more active service to the church, into greater contact with others, meeting the same problems, answering the same questions, and getting a touch of the same spirit to permit them to move forward and make their contribution for the establishment of Zion. This was expressed in a telegram sent to the church on behalf of the convention. Remember to get ready now for 1926, and we will all try to make it bigger and better if possible next year.
Stewardships Theme of Utah Conference

(Excerpt from letter of G. P. Levitt to the First Presidency, Ogden, Utah, October 20.)

Our Sunday sessions of the conference were well attended. The church was well filled each service, and a very splendid spirit prevailed. The theme of the conference was “Stewardship,” and it was a delight because of the consciousness of the presence of His Spirit to inspire us in our work. He drew himself near to us and said to Brother Harris, “I have much having Brother Ellis with us. He drew himself near to the people with his timely counsel and his sermons, which were uplifting. He occupied three times, and I occupied once.

We go forward from the conference with a desire to carry on in such a way as will merit the approval of God and the kindling touch of his Spirit to inspire us in our work.

Many called for volunteers to the stewardship and Graceland drive. The Des Moines Branch is moving forward under the leadership of Pastor H. A. Higgins. The new building will soon be finished, as the roof is now being constructed. The building is fire proof, with a number of classrooms, and is one of the best church buildings in Des Moines. Brother Higgins has indeed done some wonderful work on the new church.

We are strong for stewardship.

Stephen Robinson, For the Committee.

New Churches in South Seas

A little over a week ago I received two letters from two distant and widely separated parts of this mission, both of which were written on the 30th of September, each written by a missionary, and each telling of the completion of a new church building. Brother H. W. Savage wrote from Hikueru, about four hundred miles eastward, giving the information that the new church there had been completed and paid for, with a balance remaining in the building fund. This church will be used by hundreds of our members who gather for five or six months each year to dive for shells and pearls. There is no permanent branch organization at Hikueru, but the assembly is reorganized each year as a sort of temporary branch.

The other letter was written by Taruiarii a Terinohorai, from Tubuai, about four hundred miles southward from mission headquarters. Brother Taruiarii and family had a long and perilous voyage to reach Tubuai a few months ago. The trip usually takes from five to ten days, but on account of first calm weather, then head winds and storms, their sail boat was delayed, and sprang a leak which meant strenuous work bailing out water for many days, and finally food gave out, so it was a very tired and hungry band of voyagers that sighted Tubuai after seventeen days on the open ocean.

However, Brother Taruiarii is not easily discouraged and set quickly to work, not only preaching the gospel but also directing the work of building a new church at Mahu, Tubuai. Now comes his letter concerning the opening services held in the new church. I cannot do better, perhaps, than let him tell the story in his own words, or as nearly as his account written in Tahitian may be translated into English:

“"We have just entered the church at Mahu. This building is of limestone, with a stone floor and seats. It is beautifully finished. It was dedicated on the 24th of September. We constructed an eating pavilion ten fathoms in length. But all the people could not get in. This is the number of people who gathered, 320 people, at this church opening, Protestants, Catholics, Mormons, and others. I distributed the answers to the eighty questions of the Polybius, to all the people who desired to take part. The rejoicing was very great. I chose the name for this house. (Pasauna means birth.) This is the reason for the name: Because it was at this place that Addison Pratt (in 1844) began to establish the first foundation of the church in these islands of the sea. It was here also that the sacrament of the Lord’s supper was first administered, and it was here that baptism by immersion was begun in these ocean lands. There was no trouble of any kind at this church opening. I went to the governor and asked for the French flag for the opening service at eight o’clock in the morning. He lent it to me and the French flag was raised at the first service."

Subscribe 80 Per Cent of Quota in a Few Minutes

San Francisco, California, October 28.—On October 18 we were able to get Brother Virgil Etzelhouser, pastor of the Oakland Branch and a graduate of Graceland College, to tell us all about that institution. It was thought wise at this time, even though before the appointed time, to start the drive for the college endowment. After the pledges were taken up, it was found that inside of a few moments eighty per cent of our quota had been subscribed; this was, indeed, gratifying to the committee having the drive in charge.

On this same evening about thirty members of the San Francisco Branch journeyed to Oakland to hear Brother Gillen speak on stewardship. He has just come to us from the joint council, and his talk was encouraging and inspiring.

Our Department of Recreation and Expression is planning to devote this coming Friday night to a Halloween party.

Brother Joseph Lawn of Hollister is seriously ill. He was in a hospital at San Francisco, but it was thought best to take him back to his home in Hollister. We would request that all who know Brother Lawn will join us in praying for his recovery.

We are all looking forward to November 7 and 8, when we have been told President F. M. Smith will be at the Bay Cities for a series of meetings.

Des Moines Branch Over the Top on First Call

On Sunday, November 1, after the sacramental service, which was short, the Des Moines Branch sent out her first call for volunteers to the stewardship and Graceland drive. The campaign directors, Stephen Robinson and Henry Castings, had the able assistance of Roy Cheville of Graceland College.

The call for volunteers was preceded by inspiring short talks by Roy Cheville and Henry Castings. Brother Cheville spoke of Graceland College and her needs, and the most important thing in our church to-day—a practical demonstration of stewardships. We have been dreaming of stewardship and Zion for years, a dream and an ambition of every true Latter Day Saint. Brother Castings spoke of the loyalty and sacrifice of the Saints of Des Moines, as it was he who appeared before the Saints only a few weeks ago, and in one meeting the membership pledged $27,000 for a new church building, which is now almost complete. Brother Castings thanked the Saints for their loyalty and true devotion and for the splendid response financially and in labor and in ideas for the building of the new church.

In a few short statements he spoke of the need of stewardship and how the money would help to buy land.

The call for volunteers was then issued, and everybody was given a chance to volunteer to buy land. The call for land was met with such enthusiasm that while the quota for Des Moines, $5,295, was subscribed, the full quota and over was all subscribed in the first meeting, without previous solicitation, and the cards are all signed.

In the evening Roy Cheville, in an inspiring and forceful manner, spoke of the message of Christ, Graceland College, and stewardship. Another opportunity to respond was given the Saints to pass the plate for Des Moines over the quota, with other pledges to come. Our goal now is $3,000, and we feel sure it will be reached, as we need only $281 more.

You may read and tell of the loyalty, sacrifice, and devotion of days and periods and centuries of old, but can you compare them with the present period—now! “The Spirit of God like a fire is burning.”

The church opening was attended by the Governor, and may your task be a delight because of the consciousness of the presence of God’s Spirit to encourage and direct, is my prayer.

freely. He consented also to come himself and give dignity to this church opening among us. This church opening exceeded all others in Tubuai for good feeling and lack of difficulty. I have baptized two new members. There are still others to come. I have also blessed some Protestant infants. This is a sign that we are going ahead.

and with the blessing of the church buildings. I am intending to build a church at Houora for the Taahuala Branch. We are now gathering the stone, and we have distributed the burden of buying the roofing iron upon the members of the church. There is also the church for the Mataura Branch yet to be built. I would like to finish this work.

There are several other church buildings nearing completion. The Makatea Branch expects to dedicate their new church about Christmas. The Niau Branch is working on their building. The Tikehau Branch finished one church this year and is now building another. This will be the third church belonging to the Tikehau Branch. The principal church is at their city named Tuberahera, where they spend part of the year; the second at Maiai, where they spend several months each year and are now building another several months each year on their coconut plantations.

Yours sincerely,
R. J. FAIRTHING.

Educational Conference in New York District

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

The 17th and 18th of October were banner days for this part of the New York District. The occasion was an educational conference. The district presidency had prepared a program of interest and lasting profit to the members who were present, and those who did not avail themselves of the wonderful opportunity of being there were surely losers.

The business session of Saturday afternoon, the 17th, was characterized by a wonderful spirit of good will and unity. Whatever business was necessary to be done was done with dispatch.

The evening session was a success from the very start. The matter of the college endowment was placed before the people very plainly by our district president, P. L. Wergur, and also by Bishop's Agent F. C. Mesle. An illustrated dialogue, so to speak, was rendered, showing how nicely the two lines of activity blended to make for successful accomplishment of God's purpose, the spiritual and the financial, and the well-filled house was surely appreciative.

Sunday morning at nine o'clock prayer service in charge of A. E. Stone and Floyd H. Rathbun was really a spiritual feast, from the opening until the closing prayer. A wonderful feast was manifest, not in an outward manner that caused one to speak in tongues or to prophesy, but that divine power that mellows the heart and moistens the eyes and illuminates the mind and causes the Saints to sense the power of that blessed Spirit that binds the hearts in Christian love. The time was altogether too short.

The afternoon was spent in departmental work and was blessed by the same spirit that had prevailed at all other meetings. Here again was manifested that spirit of brotherly love which makes us feel as one great family of grown-up children. This meeting was an occasion which demonstrated what is just possible to be accomplished by this people when all are endowed by the Spirit of God. Again the friendly grip of the human heart was felt through the presence of that Spirit that causes us to bear each other's burdens, for in a substantial way the writer was remembered, and with the few carefully selected words uttered by Elder F. H. Rathbun at the presentation there was surely a hallowed feeling.

The Sunday school was in charge of the district superintendent, a little out of the ordinary line. An extemporaneous speech by Brother Frederick Whitehead, subject, "The benefits a young man obtains by attending Sunday school." (Subject to the critic.) Also talk by the district superintendent, also subject to critic. Everything of Sunday school work was nicely arranged by the district superintendent, Morris Whitehead.

The Department of Women was taken care of by Sister Morris Whitehead in the absence of the department head, Mrs. Brett.

Sister Elsie Elms, our sister of the Oneida tribe of Indians, was present and rendered excellent assistance with her vocal solos. She surely sings with the spirit which stirs the soul.

Fulton was well represented. The souls that desire and also love the truth were found at the early morning service Sunday, and by the very expressions of their countenances the day was a joyous one to them. Syracuse was also well represented and assisted in making the day a profitable one. Niagara Falls did well in tripping to Sherrill, and those who successfully reached the end of the journey were well repaid.

However, the joyous time had was in a way marred, owing to the knowledge of an accident that occurred to four members en route from Niagara Falls to the conference. Brother and Sister Alee Warren and another couple (the name I do not recall) met with an auto accident. The latter's name I do not recall, but it may be amended. It was told that Sister Warren was taken to the hospital at Avon, New York, both limbs injured; Brother Warren's chest hurt; the other male member of the company has four ribs broken, while the latter's wife was the most fortunate of the four. We all hope it was not as serious as reported.

Sister (Eleanor) Morris Whitehead was overcome by excitement or fatigue to such a degree that after boarding the car she fainted, and on arrival at their home town, Syracuse, she was taken to a hospital, but at this writing she has been taken to her home.

With all this the Sherrill conference has gone down in history as one of the most remarkable conferences ever held in this district. It was surely educational, spiritual, and a very profitable one, and we trust is an index to the future of good will and happiness.

The district committee for the drive consists of the district president, Bishop's agent, patriarch, and superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, all expressing themselves as being willing to push the matter of the college endowment and stewardships to the best of their ability.

The Fulton members have expressed themselves as desiring a two-day meeting. So wonderfully blessed were they by attending the conference that their hopes are brightened, and they desire to continue in the work of the church. They will arrange to care for the two-day feast of good things. So the work goes on.

A. E. STONE.

Dowagiac, Michigan

November 2.—Group meetings here are being held at Niles, Michigan, this being a central place for the scattered few of other towns and vicinity. Saints come to this point from as far as fifteen miles away, some coming in cars and others having the convenience of trolley cars.

The interest in the Sunday school work has been very encouraging, with Brother O. R. Curtis in charge.

The writer, assisted by Brother Paul Swain, of Buchanan, Michigan, officiated in the sacramental services Sunday, when there was a goodly number that partook of the Lord's supper. It proved to be a good meeting.

After the service I went to South Bend, Indiana, with Brother and Sister Port, where I was treated to a fine dinner. After dinner we went to River Park, to the home of Sister Scott, where we found a small group gathered for an afternoon sacramental service. The Saints of that place expressed their desire to do their bit toward the progress of the wonderful work that is taking place in the church.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
We are sorry to learn that Brother John Keeper of Buchanan is in very poor health. We hope he will soon be able to make a call to Niles.

Bishop C. J. Hunt spoke to the group two weeks ago, which was very much appreciated. Much was learned about the wonderful plan which is before the church.

A few from this vicinity attended the convention at Grand Rapids. It was of much worth, especially to young Latter Day Saints.

The stewardship plan is the topic of discussion, and it is meeting with the approval of the entire group.

We hope to have a branch organized here as soon as possible. Unity and much faith have been manifested, and we hope for God's blessings to continue with us.

JAMES O. BEST.

Stockton, California

Our sacramental service had about the usual attendance and was a very peaceable and enjoyable meeting. Two were spoken to through the Spirit and given words of comfort and cheer.

The Department of Women served an enchilada supper on the 15th. The proceeds went to help pay for the upper auditorium at a cost of about $300. It will take several more to finish paying for it, but it has long been needed and will prove a source of comfort and enjoyment for years to come.

At the present time, everything in a financial way is being put aside, and the Graceland College drive is on. This branch is determined to meet their quota, no matter how hard it may seem to do so.

The Sunday school rally, which was held on October 25, was quite a success. A good crowd was present, several of whom were visitors. A nice program was given by the various classes and enjoyed by all present. The decoration of flags and an abundance of flowers made a very pretty setting for the occasion. Brother S. E. Frazier of Modesto delivered the morning talk.

We hope much interest has been revived.

Battle Creek, Michigan

November 3.—The Saints here are striving to let the gospel banner float through the trial and discouragements encountered. Only a few attend church services, but as a rule we are blessed with the presence of the Spirit.

Elder Blett, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, was here a short time ago and gave us some fine sermons on Sunday. One remark he made has left a very strong impression on my mind. In speaking of the sifting time which is upon us, he said the Saints should hang onto the rim of the sieve. I for one want to hang to the rim. We are left without a shepherd in this branch, and all are trustees of the Lord will send us some one to lead us soon.

One night, just after returning from the reunion, I could not sleep well. I was thinking of the wonderful things I had heard, and while meditating I fell asleep for just a short time. I found myself in a crowd of Saints. I did not recognize who they were, as all their faces had a heavenly appearance. All were gathered at a long table, eating. After we had finished eating, we all went to a small church, and I wondered how so many were going to find room in that little building. But they managed to crowd in. After they had sung a song, a man came up to me with something in his hands which looked like a large calendar. He said to me, "Now, Sister Watson, I am going to lecture, and when I mention Brother Smith's name I want you to turn this leaf over."

I did so, but it has left a very strong impression on my mind. I have a stronger desire to live faithful to the end.

A. C. MARTIN.

The person who had spoken to me disappeared into a small room off the main auditorium where the crowd was gathered, and all at once I heard a voice say, "Brother Smith." I turned the page, just as he had shown me, and behold the same group was there, only Brother F. M. Smith was sitting in the place where Brother Joseph had sat.

I awoke after that, and the Spirit of God rested upon me. It seemed that I was spellbound, and I was made to know that Brother F. M. Smith is in the right place. I have a stronger desire to live faithful to the end.

Stewardships and Graceland Are the Themes

WOODBINE, IOWA, November 2.—A committee of several of our young brothers has been appointed to make the Graceland endowment drive, and they are earnestly and enthusiastically "on the job." To date nearly seven hundred dollars have been subscribed, with quite a percentage of it cash.

Brother C. B. Woodstock surprised us by calling over the phone Saturday evening that he would be with us Sunday all day, and Monday evening if we so desired. Of course we were pleased to have him come, as he always has so many new and good thoughts to present. His talk on the Graceland endowment was very much appreciated; also one on stewardships in the home, or a consecration of our homes and our lives that we may be worthy to assist in Zion's redemption to the full.

Stewardships have been the theme of the preaching services the past month, and speakers as well as hearers can testify that God's power was very noticeably manifested in the messages they brought, thus evidencing that this plan is in harmony with the divine will and mind.

The young people report a very enjoyable, yet spooky Halloween party in the church basement. There was an assembly of nearly fifty, with a number of regrets from others because of not being permitted to be present.

Seattle Young People in Convention

No doubt a little news of our convention in Seattle will be of interest. It was the first young people's convention for this district, and all were very anxious for it to be a success. Well, it certainly was a great feast of good things. The Seattle church was taxed to its capacity the first meeting, and every meeting through the convention was well attended.

We surely did make good use of President F. M. Smith while he was here, and he was ready for the job and certainly did do good for the cause in this district. I cannot say how much good he has done, for the future will tell better. Never have I heard the program of this church presented in clearer tones than he gave it to us. He just sent his message home so clear and forceful that all who would could see he is on the right track. Surely, he is the right man for the place and a true servant of God.

The question meeting Sunday afternoon lasted over two hours and ranged in questions from dance to centralization of power and endowments, and most of all along the line of stewardships. It was a fine meeting, and many puzzles were revealed that no longer trouble the children of God here.

My meeting that was to begin here Monday night was postponed until Tuesday evening to give the sisters a chance to rest. You see the sisters of this branch served the meals for the convention, and it was strenuous work for them, and we felt it best to grant their request to wait until the latter end of the week and then to get a good start for Sunday. So I am still here and will be busy getting ready for work. I had to be in the service and feel greatly helped by associating with Brother Fred. Always glad to be with the servants of God. Ever pressing onward,

W. W. B. WATSON.

Eastern Iowa District and the Endowment

WATERLOO, IOWA, November 4.—Elder Leonard Houghton, our district missionary, has been holding a series of meetings here in the interest of stewardships, presenting the need of all of us conforming our lives to Zionic principles. Much good advice and valuable information were given the members.

A goodly number of Saints from Oelwein Branch visited with us on October 25, our rally day for the Graceland endowment fund. The Saints here appreciate the efforts of our missionaries and visitors, and indorse the cause they represent. We extend our thanks accordingly.

We also enjoyed the presence of three field workers from Graceland College November 1, instructing us more fully in the work of the college in educating the young for greater usefulness in serving the church. Elder E. A. Davis, district president, and several of the Oelwein Saints also met with us at this time.

The Relief gave a Halloween entertainment Friday evening, October 30, at the home of Brother and Sister W. H. Hinds. A good attendance was had and a social time enjoyed.

The Saints here went over the top in their endowment pledges.

Minden City, Michigan

October 29.—The month of September was spent in gathering in the remnants of the summer’s grain and fruit into places of safety from Jack Frost. But through the turmoil of life and hard labor performed daily, all looked forward with glad hearts to the Sabbath Day set apart for rest, and assembled themselves in the house of God to receive strength and courage for the battles of another week.

The theme of our meetings for the month of October was stewardships. We believe it is not fully understood by all, and it will be necessary to make many things plain so that all may comprehend it as it should be. They will be able to fall in line. It is a wonderful plan, but until we become fully converted it will be impossible to see it operate successfully. There must be a whole-hearted service to God and man, and then all things will work together. Until these conditions are realized Zion can never be redeemed. All selfish and carnal natures must be crucified and our hearts filled with the pure love of God; then that condition will be reached where the commandments of the Lord will be obeyed.

I pray that we, a small handful of God’s children, will live so we can hear the welcome plaudit, “Well done.” Our branch president, Elder Willard Parks, is earnest and sincere in trying to help his flock to do right.

The Department of Women has undertaken a large work along with their study, and it has proved successful, as more of the sisters are becoming interested and active in the work. On October 8 they gave a harvest home supper, their first attempt along that line, and the proceeds netted something over $60. The money will be used for putting electric lights in the church and other necessary wants.

Good Conference at Dow City

DOW CITY, IOWA, November 2.—It is interesting to read the various contributions to the SAINTS’ HERALD, so I thought others might be glad to hear from this place.

We were pleased to entertain the conference of the Gallands Grove District October 24 and 25. There was a good attendance, seating room being at a premium Saturday night and at the Sunday meetings.

We were favored with a fine program Saturday night, and some inspiring sermons from Brother F. T. Mussell and Brother W. A. Smith.

Our Sunday school is presided over by Elder J. L. Butterworth, and our Relief by Brother E. B. Justice. We are blessed with a splendid group of young ladies, but most of them are teachers; consequently are very busy and are taken away from services, especially Sunday evenings, which makes it very difficult to keep up the Relief programs.

Brother F. T. Mussell was with us November 1 to render what assistance he could in helping to get the Graceland endowment drive under way. However, it was announced Sunday evening that one fourth of our quota had been subscribed.

Young People in Convention

CENTRALIA, WASHINGTON, October 25.—The young people’s convention of the Seattle and British Columbia District, held in Seattle October 23, 24, and 25, was attended by a good representation of members from Seattle, Everett, Pugetallup, Centralia, Hoquiam, Bellingham, Tacoma, Roslyn, Lynden, Enumclaw, Bremerton, Beach, Vancouver, and Olympia, Washington. The following Canadian branches were represented: New Westminster, Vancouver, Chilliwack, and Pemberton. We also had delegates registered from Portland and Silverton, Oregon; Spokane, Washington; Des Moines, Iowa; and Denver, Colorado.

The time was well occupied with preaching, lectures, study hours, question meetings, and prayer meetings, all of which were conducted by President F. M. Smith.

The convention opened with District President M. H. Cook in charge. Addresses of welcome were given by D. S. McDoole, president of Seattle Branch, and Medell Brown, president of the local Department of Recreation and Expression. Granville L. Swenson, superintendent in the district, presented to Chilliwack, British Columbia, and Hoquiam, Washington, locals two beautiful oil paintings by George H. Davis and Everett, entitled, “This year we sail Zionward—which is our course,” and “Onward and upward.” These were awarded as merits for prompt response by these locals in turning in their quota for convention expenses.

The first address by President Smith was crystallized in the expression, “Get thy spindle and thy distaff ready, and God will give thee flax,” which became the keynote of the convention. The interest of the convention was centered in the study of Zion, and more particularly in stewardships, as ably presented by President Smith. Because of his deep interest and broad understanding of his subject, it was presented in a way that was a revelation to most of those who heard, and inspired them with a desire to study and qualify for real service in Zion. The most interesting and concrete definition of Zion was given by Brother Smith in the following outline:

I. Zion—a people.
   a. Pure in heart.
   1. Based on spirituality and personal righteousness.
   b. Attainment of godliness.
   1. Logical reason for gathering.

II. Zion—a land.
   a. Consecrated and designated.
   b. Redeemed land.
   1. Made holy by use to God.
   2. Occupied by a righteous people.

III. Zion—the city.
   a. Center place of activities—perfection.
   b. A condition to which God may send his Son.
   c. System of rules or government.
   d. Liberty a result of obedience to law.
   e. The city was crystallized in which became the keynote of the convention.

We were favored with the presence of Elder Leonard Houghton, our district missionary, and Brother Willard Parks, district president, to make the convention a success.

MRS. A. GRENEISEN.
purpose. A tour of Seattle, led by Sister D. S. McDole, was a part of the program which was greatly enjoyed by all.

The first young people's convention of this district was a complete success in every way. The district also wishes to express appreciation of the work of Brother M. H. Cook, district president, and District Missionary A. C. Martin, who gave their time in making the convention a success. We feel if we can take to heart the admonition given at the convention, to be more humble in spirit and more earnest in prayer, we can hope to be a real factor in directing our ship Zionward.

Church Dedicated at Boone

BOONE, IOWA.—The Saints of Boone are still alive and striving to keep their shoulders to the wheel.

On Sunday, September 27, an all-day meeting was held, the main feature being the dedication of the church. Apostle J. F. Garver was the speaker.

The church was erected in 1915, at which time it seemed an impossible undertaking for such a few, as the church cost nearly $11,000. However, Branch President C. Malcor, with his colaborers, lost no opportunity in raising the necessary funds, though it meant sacrifice on the part of many. It was done cheerfully, and only those who have had like experiences can know the appreciation felt by Brother Malcor and the members when the building could be dedicated, free from debt.

The main part of the building was paid for some three years ago, but the basement was not finished until the spring of 1923, when Brother John A. Dowker came to hold a series of meetings and encouraged the Saints to finish the church. And everybody worked. Brother Dowker did carpenter work, wielded the paint brush, and preached every night. Many were baptized.

The Department of Women has assisted greatly in raising money to help pay for the church, holding bazaars, food sales, apron sales, taking subscriptions for McCall's Magazine, etc. They have also found friends among the nonmembers who have helped us.

The Saints now are preparing for the drive for the Grace­land College endowment fund and the home-coming on No­vember 8.

On October 25 Elder W. D. Tordoff, district missionary, closed a three-week series of meetings, during which time much interest was shown, both on the part of the members and the nonmembers. Four were baptized, and more were converted, but were hindered from being baptized because of existing circumstances. The attendance was very regular from night to night, even on the part of the young people, though there were many amusements to lure them elsewhere. This was especially gratifying to Brother Tordo.

Brother Tordoff is a good, all-around missionary, and is appreciative of the good in everybody. He is of a spiritual mind and is always ready to help in any way. His help in the music, by his good voice and his guitar, was more than he knew. Surely much good seed was sown, and the Saints of Boone are hoping for an early harvest and for his return soon.

Much good was accomplished by the many get-together times had during the meetings, the singing of old songs, etc. The many stunts made us think of our school days and forget the cares, hence put us more in tune to receive of the good given through the forceful sermons from night to night. To see three of the priesthood, with another brother, playing football with their noses and an English walnut, was enough to make us forget our cares, though Brother Malcor carried a sore nose for a day or so.

Brother Tordoff talked to the Temple Builders one evening before church, giving helpful suggestions. He also conducted a class in stewardships in the Department of Women on three different occasions.

The district Religio rally day and the Perry home-com­ ing broke into the Sunday services somewhat, but much good was accomplished there. Boone home-coming will be Sunday, November 8, and we feel that we are in better spirit to enjoy it from having had Brother Tordoff with us. A nonmember was heard to say, "That man made things plainer than I ever heard, and I believe every word he said."

The team chosen for the Des Moines District, to preach one night in each branch of the district on the Grace­land college endowment, is Elders W. D. Tordoff and Roy Che­ville. We expect them on Wednesday evening, the fourth of November.

Portland District Young People's Convention

PORTLAND, OREGON, November 3.—The Portland District young people's convention which convened here Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 25 to November 1, was a complete success from every angle.

It is estimated that nearly half of the members of the district were present. Some came, also, from the Seattle and British Columbia District.

President Frederick M. Smith was the speaker at all meetings, and his sermons and lectures were greatly appreciated by young and old. The convention voted unanimously to support the program of the church as adopted by last General Conference. They also decided by unanimous vote to hold a convention next year and expressed the hope that President Smith would be present.

Considerable prejudice was dispelled by his meeting with us at this time and many false conceptions were corrected.

The Grace­land stewardship-endowment fund drive is well under way here. The Bishop's agent informs us that over $1,200 have already been subscribed, and the work is barely started. We are going over the top and then some.

Saturday evening, October 17, a double wedding took place at the church. Miss Lila Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, was united in marriage to Albert Livingston, and Miss Eunice Smith to Henry L. Livingston. The Smith sisters were active workers in the departments of the local church and members of the Portland choir. The young men, brothers, hold the Aaronic priesthood and are active in church work also. The ceremony was quite an elaborate affair, and the church was filled with relatives and friends, the latter being many. We wish that their married life will be long and happy, and that they will remain active in church work and true to their covenants with God.

Enjoys Visit of Apostle Gillen

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA, November 3.—An opportunity to enter in and feast upon the "good things of the kingdom is the privilege of all Saints, but it is not often we have the pleasure of partaking of such divine food as was served us by Apostle J. A. Gillen last Sunday, and it is doubtful if there were any who attended the services who did not go home with a better understanding of the will of God and a greater determination to live according to the law.

We are also blessed with a splendid and efficient pastor in Brother Virgil B. Ettenhouser, who with his faithful assistants, is doing splendid work. We look forward to a profitable and spiritual development.

The attendance, while not what we would like it to be, is very good, and the interest manifested forecasts a successful future for Oakland.

MARK H. FONDA.

Correction

The HERALD for November 4 contained a letter from Owen Sound, Ontario, which stated that news had been received of the death of Brother Harvey Sagle, of Manitoulin Island. It was not Brother Sagle who was taken, but his child. The Saints extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Far West Stake

Members of the priesthood will please remember that the second annual priesthood conference will convene at Cameron, Missouri, on Friday night, November 20, and will continue over Saturday and Sunday. President F. M. Smith and Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael are expected to be present on this occasion.

First Saint Joseph

Under the supervision of Brethren Cecil Schmid and Gilbert Bowser the Department of Sunday School conducted a special home-coming service on Sunday, November 1. Quite a goodly number of people were in attendance, and an enjoyable time was had by all.

Immediately following the Sunday school, an excellent sacramental and prayer service was held in the upper auditorium of the church. The Spirit of the Master was present in great power. At the opening of the service Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley addressed the Saints, laying particular stress on the advantages and necessity of the endowment drive. Toward the close of the meeting the committee distributed pledge cards, and the result of the morning's efforts exceeded all expectations, the $1,000 mark being passed within a very few minutes. At the close of the evening services First Saint Joseph had exceeded its quota by some five hundred dollars, and are still going strong.

Second Saint Joseph

Elder J. A. Gunsolley preached to the Saints at the Second Church on Thursday and Friday, November 5 and 6. Quite an interesting audience turned out to greet him on each occasion.

Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths is to begin a series of meetings on Sunday, November 15, to last over a week. It is hoped that his efforts will inspire the Saints to a greater activity.

Third Saint Joseph

Sacrament was served on the morning of November 1, the branch pastor presiding. Bishop Milo Burnett was the speaker at the evening hour. This proved to be a very spiritual meeting; many eyes were dimmed with tears, so great was the power of the Spirit.

Kingston

A report from Kingston shows that the Saints there are enjoying the fruits of the Spirit in their little branch. The prayer meetings of late have been exceptionally good. This is a sure sign that they are on the upward move.

Several good sermons were delivered during the month of October by Brethren Charles Wood, James Dawson, Albert Place, and Charles Cravens.

The infant child of Brother and Sister Floyd Castleman was buried on October 5. The parents were permitted to enjoy its presence but a few days ere it was taken home to its Maker.

The Department of Women met at the homes of Sisters Gertie Bratcher and James Dawson during

Far West

On October 25 Branch President Giles Koger preached both morning and evening. In the evening a Religio program was provided by those whose names begin with "G"—George Peterson, Grace Shaw, and Giles Koger.

November 1 a good prayer and sacrament meeting was held in the forenoon in charge of Brother Hiram McKee, and an interesting sermon was delivered at night by Howard McKee. Those who attended Religio were entertained by a recitation from little Hiram Hale, a reading of some fine poetry by Howard McKee, and a good reading by Sister George Peterson.

Mrs. M. M. German is home from the Sanitarium. She is getting along fairly well, but is still very weak.

Sister Eva Peterson left for Independence recently where she expects to take nurse's training.

The Temple Builders gave a masked Halloween party on Friday night, October 30, at the home of their leader, Mrs. Mollie Gover. A pleasant time was had by all who attended.

Maple Grove

Maple Grove continues to move forward regardless of inclement weather. During October services were held each Sunday with a fair attendance, the preaching being by the local force composed of Brethren Hovenga, Hinders, Piepergerdes, and Hamann.

The Department of Women under the leadership of Sister E. O. Hinders has been very busy during the past month making useful articles to be used in the Independence Sanitarium. In addition to this they have been doing some local charity work. May rich blessings attend their endeavors.

Sister Asa Beers, who has been under the care of skilled physicians for some time past, is no better at present. Sister Beers needs the prayers of the Saints.

Oakdale

The frequent rains this fall have cut the attendance at services. Some Sundays the wagons and carriages and teams were the only "cars" that could get through the mud.

The interior of the church looks better since it has been newly decorated. The ladies' aid should receive most of the credit for raising the funds for this purpose. They meet as often as possible under the leadership of Sister J. W. Vermeulen.

Brother and Sister Hershey have recently moved to Independence, where they purchased a lot and are building a home. Brother Wallace Diem and family are living on the farm vacated by them.

Elders J. Hovenga and Moses Hinders of Stewartsville were the speakers on October 11. Two interesting services were held by them. On account of bad roads these brethren were compelled to return to Stewartsville before the evening service.

Sister Jane Pickering has been visiting her nieces, Mrs. Mabel Ford, and other relatives and friends.

Brother Alva Beckman has returned from a trip to Canada, where he has been visiting with relatives and friends.

The Oakdale Saints were invited to Kingston on Monday evening, November 2, to hear Elder H. L. Barto. Those who attended feel amply repaid for their efforts.

Brother and Sister Sam Harding of Cameron attended the sacramental service November 1.

Edgerton Junction

On October 25 Elder E. O. Hinders, in company with the stake president, O. Salisbury, met with the Saints at Edgerton Junction and conducted services at eleven a.m. and half past two in the afternoon. The regular evening service was abandoned on account of the weather. In the evening these two brethren busied themselves at the home of Brother and Sister G. W. Manney, where they discussed the subject of stewardships with a small but interested gathering.

Richmond

The last Sunday in October found Brethren J. E. Hovenga and Moses Hinders of the stake bishopric with the Saints at Richmond and other branches in the adjacent territory, where they preached and talked stewardships. They report an excellent interest.

Bedison

On October 4 sacrament was served under the supervision of Brethren R. Lorensen, E. S. Fannon, and Ed. Jensen.

Elder O. Salisbury visited Bedison on October 11 and conducted three services: preaching at eleven o'clock, round table at two o'clock for the purpose of discussing current church problems, and preaching again at night.

E. S. Pannin occupied at the morning hour on the 18th. No services were held in the evening.

Elder R. L. Loven was the speaker in the morning of October 25, and Brother Alec Jensen in the evening.

Guilford

The branch and entire community at Guilford was saddened by the death of Brother John R. Nelson who passed away on October 26. He leaves a wife and two children. Brother Nelson had been a member of the church for forty-one years.

The Methodist people held a series of services lasting over two weeks and closing on Sunday, November 1. The Reverend Mosley, of Kansas City, Missouri, officiated at these meetings. His sermons on morals and devotion were high, but they did not have the ring of the Old Jerusalem Gospel.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley visited Guilford on Sunday, November 1, in the interest of the Graceland College endowment campaign. All who were permitted to hear Brother Gunsolley expressed themselves as being determined to serve the church to the best of their understanding and ability.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Sunday, November 2, was a busy day at the Brick Church. The priesthood met in the lower auditorium at 8 o'clock in the morning for the monthly prayer service. An excellent spirit prevailed during the entire session. Sunday school was held at the usual hour, and at quarter of eleven the Saints gathered in the upper auditorium for the communion service.

A large audience was present, and an excellent meeting followed the work of the previous week, during which time the people of Lamoni had subscribed $17,305 for the endowment fund.

A number of visitors were present, among whom were F. M. McDowell of the First Presidency and M. H. Siegfried of the Presiding Bishopric, both of whom assisted in the service. F. B. Blair, bishop of Kansas City Stake, and Sister M. A. Atzenhouzer were in the audience and spoke during the service. Religion convened at quarter of seven, and at quarter of eight a special program was given in celebration of the successful culmination of the endowment drive in Lamoni.

The program was opened by a sacred concert by the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society under direction of Miss Mabel Carlile as follows: A number by the chorus, Miss Doris Gieselman taking the solo part, Mrs. Everett Bowser at the piano.

Ladies' quartet, Mrs. Walter Walden, Miss Mabel Carlile, Mrs. Arthur Derry, and Mrs. J. H. Anthony, accompanied by Fields Jones in a bass solo part, Rae Lysinger at the piano.

A violin solo by Emma Sneed, piano accompaniment by Gertrude White.

A number by the A Cappella Chorus. A duet by Mrs. Walter Walden and Miss Lena Wells with chorus.

The concert was of a very high order.

G. W. Blair had charge of the meeting, introducing as the first speaker, Oscar Anderson. Mr. Anderson talked on the success of the campaign from the viewpoint of the contributor. He told of the necessity of the endowment and of the pleasure of giving to a cause so universally in need. He emphasized the fact that the people of the town not members of the church had contributed as willingly as those inside. Graceland never saw a brighter day, he said.

At the close of this speech the choir sang, "Graceland, happy Graceland."

Blanche Edwards spoke from the standpoint of the church. From the beginning, she said, man has been instilled with a desire to help the Creator make men in his image. All other desires should be subservient to this one aim, the development of man and women. The stewardship plan as outlined by the church is an important means to this end, and for this reason Miss Edwards spoke in hearty support of the plan and rejoiced at the result of the drive, since it enabled the church to take a big step toward the establishment of stewardships: "The spirit with which the drive is progressing means much. To the branch it gives renewed hope; to the business men a demonstration that we are in earnest; to the general church an opportunity to carry out its program. It has united the smaller branches in a common cause; has offered all an opportunity to put away selfishness and petty jealousies, to learn to know each other better and to come closer to God."

The choir followed by singing "Graceland forever."

President Briggs then took up the subject of the endowment from the college angle. He read as an introduction the story of "The valley of the shriveled heart."

President Briggs said, "Education is not going to school, but rather education consists in making right choices. The church has chosen well in the establishment of Graceland and in subscribing the endowment fund." He read the following quotation from the oration of Graceland's first graduate, Frederick M. Smith, delivered at the commencement of 1898. The prophecy has received fulfillment in the response of the church to the college in the matter of the endowment.

The quotation follows:

"Graceland may be a failure; it may be none will help sustain her. It might, left to itself, like the sick, hunger-weakened person, who falls by the wayside and dies unfriended and alone, sink into the oblivion of memory and be buried 'neath the debris of frustrated hopes and shattered dreams of success. But no! it cannot be! Graceland cannot, must not fail! That beautiful building on the hill empty, or tenanted by others than Graceland students, would be an indelible blot on the history sheets of the people who founded it. She is not a pauper; she is the child of a people who will not desert her. Her support must be forthcoming. At her pinnacle must float still that glorious emblem. Behind her walls must be diffused the principles that will send from her hundreds who will rise in their gratitude and call her blessed. She must be the pride and joy of the hundreds who, recognizing the uniqueness of her mission, will generously support her in her noble work."

The meeting closed with congregational singing and benediction by J. A. Lane, who also offered the invocation.

Roy Cheville of the stake presidency has been in the Des Moines District the past week, helping them with the endowment campaign.

Elder Lonzo Jones spoke at Chariton last Sunday evening in the interest of Graceland College.

Hitenman

The Sunday school met at a quarter of ten, and at eleven o'clock the Saints gathered for the sacramental service. At seven p. m. a College Day program was held at the church, with Branch President William Wilson in charge. Hymn number 179 was sung for opening, and Brother M. M. Turpen offered prayer, after which the following program was given:

Graceland College Song, Ladies' chorus.

Piano solo, Miss Mary Jane Marshall.

Reading, Miss Nell Morgan.

College song, Group of girls.

Poem, Miss Edith Van Buskirk.

Whitney solo, Miss Charlotte Bateman.

Poem, Miss Elizabeth Allison.

Sermon, Elder W. E. Prall.

College song, Ladies' chorus.

Vocal duet, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wilkinson.

Song, Ladies' chorus.

Benediction, Elder M. M. Turpen.

Following this service the Saints put forth an effort to complete their part in the endowment campaign, and when they stopped to count the results they found they had oversubscribed their quota of $650 to the amount of $15. All went home very happy in the thought that Hitenman had succeeded in doing its full part in the campaign.

Central Chicago Branch

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.—The first item of interest this month was the midweek prayer service, which was a one hundred percent meeting—every person present taking part.

On the second Wednesday two were baptized, little Bruce Bell and Mrs. Anna Tobon, daughter of Sister Rachel Knox.

On the third Wednesday our beloved Sister Schram, mother of Sister Carpenter, passed to her reward. The Department of Women lost an ardent supporter, but we are glad our dear sister is beyond the suffering which was her portion at the last. Brother Christy conducted the funeral service; and all present, especially those not of our faith, seemed deeply impressed by the wonderful sermon which he preached.

On the 15th, a reception and pantry supper for Missionary Frank B. Almond and family was held in the church. They are to reside in Forest Park, 906 Thomas Street.

On the 16th, 17th, and 18th we closed our doors and attended the young people's convention of the district, receiving much strength and encouragement thereby.

Those not attending Religio are missing some very interesting discussions in the classes. The programs, too, are highly entertaining, the one given by Brother Ray Hurst last Friday night being especially worthy of mention.

On October 22 the Nautilus Club gave a box social, at which they cleared over fifty dollars for the building fund.

The women are working overtime for the bazaar, which is to be held the first week in December.

Little by little we are adding to the building fund, and we hope ever to have a next, clean little spot in which to worship our heavenly Father.

Holden Stake

Holden stake conference met in its thirty-first session at Grandview, Missouri, on October 17 and 18, 1925. The first service was devotional and seasoned with much of the Spirit. Brethren F. A. McWethy and J. D. Gault were in charge. This prayer service was fused into the business meeting which followed and was a splendid preparatory service.

The stake presidency were chosen to preside and make all arrangements for the conference, completing the organization of the same. Brethren J. A. Koehler, G. W. Beebe, and D. J. Krahl, committee on stake rules, asked more specific instructions as to what was expected of them. The conference instructed the committee as follows: "That this commission is entitled to publish and present to the conference a general outline of the workings of the stake and that they present rules for the government of local groups in harmony with our present stake organization, calling attention to the present rules which are now obsolete or need revision."

The stake presidency reported as follows: The presidency conducted business in a manner of good cheer, augmented by the hope of an early realization of the operation of Zion's laws for which we have long prayed.

"To every Saint who is really interested in the redemption, this should mean a brighter day. The endeavor of each Saint should be to lend a hand in bringing this about. The church has by conference action ordered us to move forward. Many of the Saints are prayerfully studying to make themselves wise, intelligent stewards. Every Saint should do so, that we may all understandingly enter in upon the work.

"This is the time of 'restitutions of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets since the world began.' Zion is one of the things spoken of which is to be restored. God has spoken in the celestial council. As in the days of the object lesson in the work of Enoch, which shows it can be accomplished. What more need we? Let us each go forward.

"There is a sifting time. It may be here now. The sieves of God in their shaking will prove whether we are of the true wheat.

"There will be difference of opinion until 'that which is perfect has come.' The Lord knew this and gave definite counsel along this line in section 122, paragraphs 16 and 17: 'And now I say unto you mine elders, apostles and high priests of my church, Continue ye in the ministry unto which you have been called; and if ye cannot fully agree on all points of the law, be patient and be not contentious; so far as you can agree work together without heat, confusion, or malice. Ye are equal in worth of position and place in the work of the church; and if in honor ye shall prefer one another, ye will not strive for precedence or place in duty or privilege, and shall be blessed of me. Yea verily, thus saith the Lord, unto the elders of the church; continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end. Amen.'

"By accepting this revelation we agreed to the advice given. May none of us so soon forget, but with our efforts centered against the common enemy of all souls move trustfully onward to the accomplishment of the work intrusted."

The stake presidency's report also gave a detailed report as to the present condition of the work in each of the congregations in the stake. Oral report was received from the stake bishopric. Also reports were read from the stakes Sunday school superintendent, elder's quorum, and the following brethren to the presidency: Brother Macrae, stake president; J. A. Koehler and C. F. Scariff, stake bishopric; Blanche Christenson, stake secretary; Lucille Kittinger, stake recorder; Lola A. Johnson, stake musical director; C. F. Scariff, stake Sunday school superintendent; R. F. Moorman, assistant; Sister D. J. Krahl, superintendent of the Department of Women; W. S. Macrae, stake historian; committee on dining hall, consisting of stake president and stake bishopric, were also sustained as committee of next year. Brother E. A. Curtis was chosen superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Saturday evening a program was given consisting of musical numbers and addresses by the superintendents of the departments, which were very well received. Address was also given Saturday evening by Sister Anna Friend Roberts, on cradle roll work.

Prayer meeting was held Sunday morning and was a splendid service. Brethren Macrae, McWethy, and Burgess were in charge. The stake Sunday school superintendent and local superintendent of Grandview had charge of the Sunday school hour. The department superintendents met the workers of their respective departments in classes.

Praying at the eleven o'clock by Bishop M. H. Siegfried. In the afternoon the following brethren were ordained: John Z. Linder of Grandview to the office of teacher, and the following brethren to the office of deacon: Charles A. Mills of Blue Springs; Ralph G. Baker of Holden; Oren Bowers of Holden. Brethren M. H. Siegfried, C. F. Scariff, W. S. Macrae, and D. J. Krahl officiating. Authorization was voted for the ordination of Brother Thomas L. McCormick of Marshall to the office of elder.

An address was given by Brother J. A. Koehler on the college endowment and stewardship program of the church. A round table was conducted at the close of his talk.

The Saints of Grandview provided meals for the conference visitors in the lower auditorium of the church in a very acceptable manner. The conference expressed their unanimous thanks for the entertainment extended. It was a splendid conference in which much of the Holy Spirit was enjoyed.

Knoboster

Pastor R. E. Burgess attended the stake conference held at Grandview October 17 and 18 and reports a very harmonious and spiritual conference.

Sister Earl Ross, who was recently operated on at the Independence Sanitarium, is slowly improving.

Sister Harriet Redfield of Independence has been visiting her daughters, Sister F. N. Mortimore and Sister Ernest Moorman, for the last two months. Brother and Sister Hugh Port are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl, and Brother and Sister Moorman report the birth of a baby boy in their home.

Brother and Sister Frank Weber have moved to Knoboster from Independence, and we are hopeful they will take up permanent residence.

Our meetings are attended by the good Spirit, which is very encouraging. The sacramental service November 1 was of an uplifting nature, the Lord being with us in power, speaking to us words of comfort; causing us to rejoice in the blessed gospel of the latter days. Brother Ammon White was with us. At noon a basket dinner was served. Brother White preached afternoon and evening.

We are busy raising our college endowment. Knoboster’s quota is $500.

Atherton

October 11, Elder E. A. Curtis, one of our missionaries, began a series of meetings at Atherton and continued until November 1, closing with the evening service.

In the afternoon of November 1 six were baptized: a mother and her two daughters, another lady, and two other children. Several visitors were present from Sibley, who brought their filled baskets to be placed along with the baskets of the Atherton Saints. Together they spread their dinner in an improvised table in the hall. Prior to this event we had our Sunday school and a very good sacramental service. After the baptism in the afternoon we again assembled in the hall and listened to a sermon by Brother E. T. Atwell. Special music by Brother Albert Brackenbury. At the close of this hour the confirmation took place.

All were greatly benefited by the meetings held by Brother Curtis. Sister Curtis and boys spent the week-end with the Saints and while here favored us with solos.

On Friday night an hour or so was spent in amusement followed by refreshments.

The sisters of Atherton have earned a reputation as "corn huskers." Brother D. R. Hughes offered the sisters a load of corn if they would husk it. They met on a certain day and husked a big load of corn, thirty-nine bushels, bringing them a little over thirty-one dollars. This amount is to be placed in the church building fund.

May God’s will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Bradner, Ohio

November 6.—At this time local Saints are planning ways and means to top the one they set last Christmas in the Graceland College endowment quota. It is the intention of several of our young people to attend Graceland when their school work is completed here.

We have had with us during the past week Brother Roy Budd, of Independence, Missouri. His presence has been an inspiration to us, and he has created a desire within us to be better servants and to follow closer God’s commands. His talks to the boys were particularly on stewardship and tithing. The message he brought to us will long be remembered. It can well be said of Brother Budd that he is truly a man sent of God. Our district president, Franklin Syle, and wife, of Fostoria, Ohio, arranged a Halloween party at their home for the pleasure of Brother Budd, and about thirty of the local Saints were in attendance. The evening was spent with music and games. At a late hour lunch was served, after which all departed for their homes happy, as all Saints are, or should be.

The Department of Women are busy these days making final preparation for their Christmas bazaar, to be held early in December.

The Sabbath school will enter a contest on January 1, 1926, with the other branches in the district competing. Object is to obtain if possible a banner now held by the Oak Harbor School. Attendance, punctuality, new scholars, lesson study, etc., give the desired credits. We hope to win.

Sister E. L. Ulrich has joined her husband in Decatur, Illinois, where she expects to remain during the winter months.

Brother Walter Wirebaugh is spending a few days with his family here, after which he will return to his missionary work in Northern Michigan.

Graceland Chats

Lamoni is always beautiful, but it seems that during the last few weeks she has been particularly lovely with the first snow of the season. As the Californians say, “It is most unusual”; yet unusual as it is this early fall makes the campus very beautiful. The ground has been covered to a depth of five inches; the dark trees are very picturesque against the blue sky.

Graceland is always busy, but certainly these last two weeks she has been busier than for a long time before. This has been on account of the work for the endowment fund and the home-coming of last week. Enthusiasm was mounting higher and higher at the committee meetings held every day, as we steadily crept nearer to the goal. But when the last committee meeting was held, and it was found that Lamoni Stake had raised $21,020, while her quota was $15,000, the joy of the people on the hill knew no bounds.

The Home-Coming

Because of the spirit of great rejoicing, the home-coming was a decided success. Of course the roads were bad, and this had a tendency to lessen the crowd. But those who were fortunate enough to come brought a splendid spirit with them and were greeted by equally fond expressions of the Graceland spirit which assured everyone that there was a good time from beginning to end. On Friday evening the boys from Herald Hall staged a musical comedy, "College days." It was ludicrous in the extreme, and the many funny situations will provide merriment for several months to come. In fact, it will be impossible to forget some parts of that thoroughly amusing burlesque. Saturday morning was devoted to the individual society gatherings. At nine o'clock each literary society gave programs in honor of its returning members. Each was typical of the society and thoroughly enjoyed by former and present members. At half past ten everyone gathered in the chapel for a mon­strous mass pep meeting. When we say that John Garver was there and that he talked about football from the point of view of an old-timer, telling of an early team to which he belonged, we are telling what kind of meeting it was. One significant thing that Brother Garver mentioned was that "Graceland has always won every game she has played. By this I do not mean that she has invariably carried off the high score, but she has played a clean game and put into it such splendid effort that every time she has been a winner." We realize that our boys richly deserve this. Football at Graceland is clean through and through.

This was followed by a series of speeches and stunts, all of which served to up the enthusiasm to the very high­est. The meeting was described as being the cleverest and most successful we have ever had.

Unfortunately from the point of view of scoring, Graceland lost the day, but both teams showed good sportsman­ship.
The Banquet

In the evening, students, alumni, faculty, and friends gathered in the basement of Zimmermann Hall to enjoy a formal dinner together. The boys and girls worked very hard indeed to make the room attractive; beyond doubt their efforts were crowned with success. Autumn leaves, foliage, cornstalks, etc., ably transformed the usually bare-looking basement into a very attractive dining room. The tables were most artistically arranged, and a delicious three-course dinner was served to over two hundred people. The old gold and tastefully decorated table. Candlelight was the only illumination allowed during the meal, and from its soft glow the beauty of the scene was made still more impressive.

The toasts of the evening were of the usual high order. The theme running through was that of spirit. “The spirit of my treasure box,” given by Mrs. Lena J. Graham, went straight to the hearts of her hearers, and we all realized how rich were her memories and dear was that treasure of my heart. The toast offered by Mr. Oscar Anderson was the theme of the toast offered by Mr. Oscar Anderson. Beneath his quiet humor ran a very strong appeal for us to be true to our best selves, the best self that Graceland is doing so much to develop. The final toast was offered by Mr. Morris E. Mortimore. The toast of The Society has proved its worth in the past and is sustaining with its worth-while reputation, and although on this occasion the composition of the當您 was beyond doubt, you still known him your self. The toast of The Graceland faculty. We were also happy to hear it and most sincerely hope that he will favor us again.

The house was not heated, so by this time we were pretty well frozen. In spite of the fact, our high enthusiasm and thorough enjoyment kept the blood tingling in our veins, so that at the conclusion of the toasts, the general move was much faster and the thoroughly enjoyable evening at the favorite gathering of Miss Mabel Carille was in charge, and everyone had a very jolly time. The guests dispersed at about ten o'clock, but that did not finish the activities of the home-coming, since midnight lunches, slumber parties, and such like were very much the order of the night in honor of visiting friends.

The play was extremely amusing, the game thrilling to a degree, and the dinner very enjoyable, but happiness as was each of the these occasions, the home-coming had not reached its climax. The really deepest enjoyment came to us on Sunday morning when alumni, faculty, students, and friends met together in the Brick Church for the sacrament. During the last few days it had been most enjoyable to meet with former students on the hill, but on Sunday morning this was increased and had almost doubled when we all met together to share in the communion.

A spirit of intense happiness was there. A feeling of deep thankfulness and rejoicing that Lamoni Stake had gone over the top with her quota, and hopes were high that the endowment fund would be raised and the future of Graceland secured. In these circumstances it is not to be wondered at that the meeting was of a very high order.

In the evening a special celebration service was arranged and held in the Brick Church. As usual, the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society gave its monthly concert from 7.45 until 8.15. This is a feature that is very much looked forward to by the whole of Lamoni. The society has proved its worth in the past and is sustaining with every appearance its worth-while reputation, and although on this occasion little could be said about the tone of the singing, they were not disheartened. The numbers were stored by all. Brother George W. Blair was in charge of the meeting, and he introduced as the first speaker Brother Oscar Anderson, who spoke from the contributor’s point of view on the subject, “What does it mean to the church to have the endowment fund go over?” He was followed by Miss Blanche Edwards from the church’s point of view on the same subject. While the third speaker, Brother George N. Briggs, spoke from the point of view of the college.

We hear a great deal about the good old days, but such an experience as that of the last few weeks, although it is hard work, its victory and the vision that it brought of a great work to be accomplished and the fact that all should be participants in the accomplishing of this work made one feel that these days of hope and achievement are infinitely preferable. In these days it is good to be young; it is good to be vigorous; good to have such a program before us; and good to be giving oneself unreservedly to the accomplishing of this program.

Some of our boys and girls are still out on the firing line, working for the raising of the endowment fund. William Collins and Eugene J. Glasson are in Northeastern Illinois District. Robert Jones and George Lewis are in Kansas in the Spring River District. Jack Gardner and Bertram Lewis are in Eastern Kansas. Mrs. Minor, Ada Roush, and Cornelius Clifford are in Eastern Iowa, and Roy A. Cheville is working in the Des Moines District.

Very encouraging reports are coming in from these people. One letter says, “Now that we are out in the thick of the fight, we are realizing that the proposition is much bigger than we had at first suspected, but you [Brother George N. Briggs] knew into what we were sending us. You have confidence in us that we will pull through. This makes us determined to do our best. We will work for Graceland forever. You can rely on our doing our best.” Such a spirit as this will our boys are carrying with them wherever they go, and with such spirit failure is impossible.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people of the Stone Church and the young people at Liberty Street combined in an early morning prayer meeting at Liberty Street. Brothers Cato, White, Roberts, and Criley were in charge. From various sources reports have come that this was one of the finest prayer meetings the young people have experienced for some time. One young sister at the meeting said it was the best she had ever attended.

At eleven o’clock President Elbert A. Smith continued his personal and practical gospel sermons, the subject being, “Your hands.” He said, “There is a certain fascination about the tongue as an instrument of speech. We are interested in current conversation, and books preserve for us the conversation of ages past. John the Beloved made speech a benediction. Paul made it seem divine. J. Danton used it as a flaming torch to lead the mob. Jesus made words life and light. Lucifer with speech made one third the angels sore at God and dissatisfied with heaven. Romance is associated with the heart. History is one long affair of the heart. But when we mention your hands, that may seem a dry subject. But is it?

The helpless hands of babyhood lay hold on love. The hands of old age speak of past toil. They have only strength to pull aside the curtains that conceal the other world. The mature hands of workers feed, clothe, and house the human race. They have wrought all the labors of the past and hold the promise of the future. They built the old Jerusalem and will build the new.

First of all, our hands should be given to constructive and productive labor. No thoughtful man could be content with work that does not help humanity. But the man who raises corn, or produces clothing, or builds houses, or does any one of thousands of tasks that serve men may take pride in his work. And under the gospel law of consecration he may be a colaborer with the minister in performing the work of God. Charles Lake was a missionary to the Society Islands. There he gave his life and was buried on a lonely coral island among the natives that he loved. We doubt not that their hands were not strengthened by their service. The same hands in Iowa and Missouri with chapped hands husked corn in the cold rain of autumn and sent their tithing to Bishop Kelley. Carpenters with calloused hands built houses for wages and sent their tithing. Bishop Kelley was thus able to support the Island mission. Think you not that these... men of toll with their hands took hold on eternal life and will share with Charles Lake in celestial glory!

The young people’s service in the basement was one of the most successful in several weeks. Elder J. C. Strachan gave the main talk of the morning, using his experience as chemist in water filtration plants as a background for the splendid talk. The students were musical numbers, and a story by Lillian Williams completed the program.

At the afternoon prayer service there was an attendance of about two hundred and fifty. Elder I. N. White, who has had charge of these meetings, could not preside on account of serious illness. His condition has been critical at times and has caused his host of friends great anxiety.

Religion was well attended considering the unfavorable weather conditions. The interest in the service as manifested by the collection, as well as by class work and program attention, shows a constant improvement that is most encouraging.

The church was filled for the evening service. A nice musical program had been prepared, and the congregational singing was in charge of Doctor Criley. Apostle John F. Garver was the speaker and delivered a real old-fashioned sermon about our Father. These sermons will be continued throughout the week. There was a splendid attendance of young people out in the audience, and the choir seats were filled with young Saints.

Pastor R. V. Hopkins has been giving a series of lectures to the I X L Sunday school class, which is composed of about seventy-five students. He is speaking on the subject of “The two powers.” Next Wednesday Brother Hopkins will meet with the Enoch Hill young people. On Saturday afternoon Brother Hopkins united in marriage at his home Jesse Willard West and Julia Pauline Koehler. Next Sunday morning at eleven o'clock Brother Hopkins will be the speaker at the Spring Branch rally day. It can well be a day of celebration also for Spring Branch as they have gone this week in the second week of their long term. From these various activities of Brother Hopkins, it is evident that he is gradually getting back in the harness.

Elder C. Ed. Miller preached at Holden, Missouri, at eleven, and at the Old Folks' Home at half past two last Sunday.

Elder F. G. Christie, in charge of Group 24, reports that Wednesday evening they had present of the priesthood three elders, one priest, one teacher, and one deacon. Christ said, “I will build.” The spirit of Christianity is eminently constructive. The Saints partook of that spirit when the church was organized in 1830. They erected a magnificent spiritual building, yet it was “not made with hands,” as we see in the stewardship class which is being led by Elder A. K. Diller.

Elder J. W. Davis preached both morning and evening, in the morning Bishop M. H. Siegbrecht and Apostle J. F. Garver worked with his sermon. In the evening Elder Fred A. Whiting, and many favorable comments are heard as to his sermon.

Elders Ira H. CUSHMAN, who is going strong for Grace­land College and stewardships, preached at Cool Street. Brother John F. Garver was the eleven o'clock speaker. His sermon on having “vision” should encourage us to keep

Liberty Street

There was a large attendance at the early prayer meeting, as many desired to hear Apostle J. F. Garver's opening sermon on the faith of our fathers.

The last reports which come in have raised the pledges to over $16,000. So Independence is going strong for Grace­land College and stewardships.

The Messiah Choir Begins Its Work

The Saints in Independence and vicinity will be glad to learn that as announced in this column last week, on Sunday afternoon the Messiah Choir met in the Stone Church for its first rehearsal, preparing to give the oratorio, The Messiah, during the Christmas holidays. The chorister and those responsible for the managing of the chorus, are very much encouraged by the start. One hundred and twenty-five were there on the opening day, many more being absent the first day for various reasons. The number is expected to reach at least one hundred and fifty, and if all goes well, which seems certain, this year’s performance will be the best ever.

Second Church

Three of the five groups composing Second Church congregation have subscribed or oversubscribed their quotas. Group 16 was the first group in Independence to send in report that her part was accomplished. The two remaining groups are not sanguine of meeting their assignments, but they are doing well and will come very close.

Elder J. M. Robinson has recently been assigned the charge of Group 14, and Elder S. H. Fields has been placed at the head of Group 31.

Sunday morning's young people's prayer service was very successful. The preacher at eleven o'clock was Elder D. A. Whiting, and many favorable comments are heard as to his sermon.

The sermon was by Elder Fred A. Cool on the subject of education. The audience was not normal in size, as many desired to hear Apostle J. F. Garver’s opening sermon on the faith of our fathers.

Walnut Park

Brother John F. Garver was the eleven o'clock speaker. His sermon on having “vision” should encourage us to keep our minds filled with the bright hope of a Zion redeemed and work steadily toward the goal, since, as he says, "The thing you see is the thing you'll be and the thing you'll accomplish."

Brother U. W. Greene preached in the evening on the social conditions of the world, making interesting comparisons between life in the eastern lands he has visited and in our own land.

Little Marion Willey was baptized at the close of the morning prayer meeting by Brother Gland Smith and confirmed at the eleven o'clock meeting.

Enoch Hill

At eleven o'clock Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker on the perilous conditions of the present time and the need of safeguarding ourselves against them.

In the evening Brother Ralph Farrell spoke on the joy of service, reminding us to "be not overanxious for to-morrow," but to be diligent in the work of to-day.

Although the drive is not yet completed for the Graceland endowment fund, the prospects are that Enoch Hill will go over the top.

East Independence

Brother Alma Friend and Sister Gladys Bailey were married October 24. They are now living in Independence at 1424 West Short Street. A number of their friends planned for them to come to Religio last Friday evening, and at the close of the program they were requested to come forward and meet their many friends. As they did so a table was uncovered disclosing several articles that the Saints wished to present to them. Brother Robert Smith made the presentation speech, and we trust that they may get as much happiness in using the various articles as we all did in planning the surprise.

Sunday morning Brother F. J. Lewis was the speaker. On account of the bad weather there was not such a good attendance. We heard some very favorable comments upon the sermon.

In the evening Brother F. C. Smith interested the Saints with a sermon on stewardships.

One of our groups has gone over the top in the Graceland endowment drive, and we trust that before the week is over the other two groups will do the same.

Englewood

The Department of Women will have a bazaar December 4 at the dining hall, and supper will be served in the evening. There was one baptism two weeks ago, Little Arlene Sutherland.

Sacramental services last week were well attended, the church being full. Bishop B. J. Scott preached in the evening.

On November 8 Elder John Ely preached in the morning on faith, and Lyman Fike in the evening on repentance. With a quota of $425, the two groups composing the Englewood congregation went well over the top, $780 having been pledged at last report.

Spring Branch

The Babylonian lion and nearly all the beasts and the image of Daniel's prophecies are now being painted on a large chart being made by Brother Weston for Elder Earl F. Hoisington, of Boise, Idaho.

Our Sunday school is running over in attendance, making it necessary to hold two classes at the home of Brother and Sister Rynolds, near the church. To either enlarge the old church or build a new one is being contemplated.

There is an increased attendance in all the prayer meetings of late, and an improvement spiritually is very noticeable.

Our choir was complimented by the speaker last night. Their earnest way of singing is such that we can all understand the inspiring words of our sacred hymns.

The local ministry are promised to have part in the public preaching.

Several nonmember families are being visited and kindly instructed in our work, and many seem to make these visits welcome.

Increased Attendance Gives Encouragement

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA, November 3.—The Saints here are enthusiastic over the Graceland endowment drive which is now on, and we hope the amount will be raised without any trouble. Most all are willing to do their part.

We are encouraged because the congregation is gradually increasing. Each Sunday it seems there are a few more present. There were fifty-six at Sunday school last Sunday, and more at Religio, and only a short time ago the number was only about half what it is now.

A Halloween social was enjoyed last Friday evening by forty-five people in costume. Pumpkin pie, doughnuts, and coffee were served. The time was spent in games. The basement was beautifully decorated in the season's colors, with lanterns, ghosts, and other things, so it was quite a success, and all had a good time.

The Saints here are generally in good health and spirit. The prayer meetings are fairly well attended.

One-Day Meeting at the Soo

SAULT, SAINTE MARIE, MICHIGAN, October 28.—On Sunday, October 4, a spiritual one-day meeting was held in our little branch. There were three carloads of visitors from Gladstone, Michigan; two from Gaylord including District President Allen Schreur, his daughter, and his brother; also Elder and Sister Dirk Schreur and son. There were several carloads from our neighboring city, Soo, Ontario. Elder Harvey VanDusen, branch president, and Elder R. D. Davis, with their families, were here from Dollar Settlement. Approximately one hundred Saints were present.

At half past nine a most uplifting prayer meeting was held, with Allen Schreur, Dirk Schreur, and R. D. Davis in charge. The spirit of the stewardship plan seemed to have dominion over the meeting, and we are made to feel more and more that the church is beginning to realize what this wonderful plan means to us in bringing about the perfect condition of Zion.

Elder A. M. Boomer, of Wells, Michigan, preached at half past eleven on courage. He showed very plainly that it takes courage to fight the battle of life and live up to the gospel.

After dinner we returned to the church and listened to an intensely interesting sermon on the stewardship plan and its principles by Elder Allen Schreur. He also mentioned the Graceland College endowment, which is before us at this time. Again, at half past four, we were privileged to listen to Elder R. D. Davis, who gave an impressive sermon.

At half past seven in the evening we enjoyed a "heart to heart talk" by Brother Dirk Schreur, and our day of meetings ended with "God be with you till we meet again."

A spiritual feast was enjoyed by all. Our desires were renewed and our faith strengthened. The stewardship plan was made plain, and each one seemed to be determined more fully than ever to strive to go onward. We hope we may have another such meeting in the near future.

Della English, Branch Clerk.

Accompanying a subscription to the Herald, J. E. Vanderwood writes from Little Rock, Arkansas: "The work is onward here, and we are glad to get the Herald in the hands of the membership. It never was better than it is at present, and it will stimulate life and faith in all who read it. We are going to oversubscribe our quota for the endowment fund in this district."

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

We received the resignation of Brother A. E. Tabor, Bishop's agent of the Eastern Colorado District. Brother Tabor has been a very faithful and efficient representative of the church for many years, being highly respected by the membership of his district and by all who have become acquainted with him. On behalf of the church we extend to Brother Tabor our sincere thanks for his many years of service.

We appoint Brother Ward A. Hougas, of Venango, Nebraska, as Bishop's agent for the Eastern Colorado District, his appointment to take effect at once, subject to the approval of the next district conference. Solicitors will please report to Brother Hougas promptly at the close of each month.

Brother Hougas is a young man well qualified for the work of Bishop's agent, and we speak for him the hearty support of the membership of the district.

Approved by the First Presidency.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

On October 25, 1925, the newly organized branch at Wagner, South Dakota, passed a resolution recommending that Brother Amos Lamson be appointed to act as Bishop's agent for their branch, which is in unorganized territory.

The Presiding Bishopric therefore has appointed Brother Amos Lamson, of Wagner, South Dakota, to act as their financial representative and trust that he will receive the hearty support and cooperation of the Saints in this branch.

The above appointment receives our ratification.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

By FREDERICK M. SMITH.

Homes Needed

There are now at the Children's Home some bright and capable children for adoption. Of these one boy is aged seven years, one ten, and one eleven years, and one girl nine years of age. One home where these two could be placed together would be fine for them.

To provide a home and a good education for any of these children would be a life work worth while.

Address inquiries to Mrs. Clara R. Stebbins, Secretary, Saints' Children's Home, Lamon, Iowa.

Marriage Notices

KEEN-ODLE.-Miss Velma Odle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Odle, was married to Frederick Keen on Sunday, November 1, at the home of the bride's parents, Goody's bluff, Oklahoma. Elder Lee Quick, of Mapleton, Kansas, officiated.

BILLINGS-KIDD.-Mrs. Aditha Billings and Mr. Hugh Kidd, both residents of Independence, Missouri, were married Sunday, November 1, by Richard J. Lambert, at his home, 1609 West Walnut Street. Their home will be in Independence.

Our Departed Ones

RODGERS.—Emily Jane Haines was born December 25, 1844, in Welland County, Ontario, married Abraham Rodgers in 1864, died in 1878. Married secondly Rodgers in 1884. Buried January 11, 1923, by John Shields. Died October 25, 1925, at her home near Hillsbury, Ontario. Leaves husband and daughter. Funeral services from the home in charge of John H. Taylor assisted by King Cooper and Reverend Platt. Interment in Huxley Cemetery.

ABER.—Harold William Aber, son of Arthur and Fern Aber, was born October 5, 1905, in Independence, Missouri. Died at the home in Independence November 2, 1925. Services at the home, G. E. Harrington officiating.

WHEELER.—Mrs. Emma Wheeler was born March 21, 1904. Baptized in 1896, and always was a firm believer in the gospel. Died at Columbus, Ohio, October 22, 1925. She leaves four sons and one daughter, two sisters, and three brothers. Funeral services from the First Chicago Church, in charge of Frank B. Almond. She will be remembered by many of the Saints as a true mother in Israel.

DAVIS.—Dinah Davis was born at Gravolte, Missouri, July 7, 1867. Baptized by John T. Phillips at Council太太, Iowa, June 15, 1885. Died at her home in Hibuco, Arizona, October 9, 1925, after more than a year's illness from paralysis. Leaves her husband, D. W. Davis, and five children. She is well known in the church, having been in the membership some twenty years. She was held in high esteem, and was a true and faithful Saint. Funeral services in charge of S. D. Condit. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery, Hibuco.

Radio Flashes

Inman, Nebraska.—We just got through listening to K L D S, which came through very good. The static was bad, but you came in so strong that we were able to tune out most of the static. There was some fading, but not bad; no interference from other stations. We enjoyed Brother H. O. Smith's talks the last two Sundays and would have known his voice if he had not been announced. Brother H. O. started the branch in Inman, and we were glad to hear his voice again. The programs last Sunday were enjoyed by several of the citizens of Inman, who expressed themselves as being very pleased. I believe that K L D S is doing a great work. Will be glad to report regularly.—J. H. Butler.

Columbus, Ohio.—I was much pleased with your radio program Tuesday evening, October 26. The program came in clear as a crystal and made me feel as though Sister I. A. Smith were playing on our own piano. 'I logged my chart and waited for Thursday evening. Brother Roy S. Bodd has been with us the past week, and after services he came over to my house to listen, but the program came in very faintly. I do not know the cause of interference. Will pray for the success of Station K L D S.—Homer Owen, 5259 Medary Avenue.

London, Ontario.—A bunch of young folks went to the house of Brother William Constable after church here last night (October 18) and listened to K L D S. The programs came in fine. The organ and the singing were very plain, as also Brother H. O. Smith's sermon. On the preceding Sunday night, October 11, K L D S came in so clear that several of the Saints who have phones were invited to listen in from Brother Constable's telephone, while he had the receiver off the hook. I am on my way home from some wonderful jubilee services here and will tell you more when I see you in Independence. Faithfully yours, William Flagg.

Cleburne, Nebraska.—Hearing your station to-night (October 25) for the first time in eight months. Very clear. No interference from other stations. Congratulate you on your program, on carrying power, your 1000-watt station; and clear enunciation of announcer.

Bartlett, Iowa.—Heard your station last Sunday evening, and the ladies' quartet songs brought tears to my eyes. I re-wife, daughter, and son, and one grandchild, besides many relatives and friends. He was fifty-one years, one month, and seven days old at the time of his death. Funeral services were partly in charge of the Odd Fellows, of which organization he was a member. Sermon by W. H. Dawson.

GRANT.—Mary Helen Grant was born December 27, 1831, in New York State, and became a member of the M. B. church, knowing the Martyrs in life and seeing them in death. Joined the Reorganization at the age of sixty-one. Passed through many hardships of early pioneer life but was faithful unto death. Sired one son and two daughters, fourteen grandchildren, twenty-six great-grandchildren, and nine great-great-grandchildren. Funeral sermon by W. H. Dawson. Interment in Rocklin Cemetery, beside her husband, who preceded her more than a quarter of a century.

member Sister Good when I was a little girl. . . Can get your station any time now since cold weather. . . . I can tell you more when I see you in Independence. I never heard better modulation. It seemed to me, however, that your volume was not quite what it should be, but at that it was better than Kansas City.—Henry Field (K F N P).

Parco, Wyoming.—We heard the opening and the entire service of the Stone Church last night, and it came in beautifully. I never heard better modulation. It seemed to me, however, that your volume was not quite what it should be, but at that it was better than Kansas City.—Henry Field (K F N P).

Westerly, Rhode Island.—We have a five-tube neodyne set which we picked up K L D S near the end of the program, Tuesday evening, October 20. We heard Mrs. L. A. Smith sing, Mr. Holsworth read, and Miss Flisson play the piano. . . . There was static and fading, especially when W A A was broadcasting the weather reports. . . . We are anticipating some good programs this winter, with some sermons by our old friends E. J. Gleazer, A. B. Phillips, J. A. Gillen, C. Ed. Miller, etc.—E. E. Wilkes.

Brawley, California.—We enjoyed your program last Sunday night very much indeed.—J. J. Stieby.

Barnsdall, Oklahoma.—Your programs came in wonder-tfully clear Sunday, October 18. We enjoyed all these programs and sermons, especially the sermon by U. W. Greene. The vesper quartet was also greatly enjoyed. The old-time songs were wonderful. I feel like congratulating K L D S and all artists again. Best wishes for K L D S.—Mrs. Homer L. Wade.

The Endowment-Stewardship Campaign

Sunday, November 15, was the day set for the completion of the work of taking pledges in the campaign to raise $200,000 with which to endow Graceland College, a work made necessary by the ruling of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It is expected that those communities which have been unable to complete their canvass will make report at once of the amount of work accomplished and that still to be done. No halt or hesitation should occur at any place where the work is not completed, for while the information is fresh, and the organization of workers is intact, the work may be completed to better advantage and with better success than at a future time. All workers should see that their task is completed now, before any disbanding of organization occurs.

Others are following this Example

There should be no anxiety as to how the oversubscription may be handled, for the problem is of such a nature as to make easy the handling of a liberal excess. The college needs much larger endowment fund than has been requested—the authorities have asked only for the minimum sum to accomplish the saving of the standing of Graceland College in the educational world. The church needs much more than the sum of the endowment with which to start the stewardship program. Let it be multiplied several times.

A Feeling of Satisfaction

There is prevalent in many communities a feeling of satisfaction that much has been accomplished by them. For this all should be grateful. But do not let satisfaction put an end to effort to achieve even greater ends. That which has been done has produced a better feeling; has brought concord; doing a good and necessary thing always does, and when this work is completed, when every member of the church has had a chance to subscribe, and to become a charter member of the stewardship circle, other lines of endeavor will succeed it, and work will proceed toward the development and final redemption of the land and the people of Zion.

The details of achievement by many communities of the church may be found under the heading, "News from campaign workers."

Some Movements in the Church

Bishop M. H. Siegfried made a visit to Burlington, Iowa, over Sunday, November 8, and returned to Independence enthusiastic over the achievements of that little branch of one hundred seventy members. Besides building a very commodious and beautiful church, which would do credit to many larger branches and which they greatly enjoy, they promptly have gone clear over the top by raising their quota of the Graceland endowment in one day. November 15 Bishop Siegfried was in Omaha, and he reports that the two branches of that city have oversubscribed their quotas, raising $1,500.

Apostles E. J. Gleazer and F. H. Edwards spoke briefly at a prayer meeting following the preaching service Wednesday evening. One reports success and enthusiasm for Graceland College and stewardships and oversubscription of quotas from the districts and branches of Michigan; and the other reports the same general results from Denver, Colorado Springs, and other points in the West.

Bishop Albert Carmichael addressed the same meeting briefly, saying he did not know much about the past or a great deal about the future, but he did know that the church now—today—"is going, moving. We feel encouraged."

Elder Benjamin F. Creel, working among the Indians of Nebraska, was in Independence over Sunday. The church which is under construction on one corner of the model farm will soon be inclosed, if the weather permits. A splendid barn, which will shelter stock, feed, and implements for the farm, has been erected; a nice drove of hogs is being fed; four valuable and beautiful horses are owned for work and breeding purposes; and a general appearance of thrift is noticed in the scenes depicted in photographs taken by Brother Creel.

Bishops Carmichael and Becker are again at their desks in the church offices, and President Frederick M. Smith will be at his desk this week.

It will be noticed that Lamoni Stake has raised pledges for the endowment of Graceland College and the establishing of stewardships amounting to more than twenty-three thousand dollars, and with their rather limited membership this is phenomenal. But news comes to the office of the Department of Publicity Tuesday morning which is evidence that some

Radio Conference Restricts Broadcasters

One of the most important resolutions passed at the Fourth Annual Radio Conference was that having to do with the reduction in number of broadcasting stations. No new stations will be licensed, except where construction permits have already been granted by the Government, or where a territory is not yet served by a station. Existing stations desiring a renewal of license (heretofore broadcasting licenses have been issued for a period of only three months) must prove to the Government that they are performing a recognized public service. New licenses will be for a period of five years, and a license fee of $25 to $5,000 per annum will be charged.

A more detailed report of the radio conference, at which K.L.D.S was represented, will be published in the HERALD, starting next week. Many resolutions of great importance to the radio industry were passed. They will be discussed in detail in a series of articles.

districts are going to surpass the wonderful effort of Lamoni Stake. Here is the news: "East Saint Louis, November 16; Bishop A. Carmichael; Lansdown Branch, East Saint Louis, Illinois, over. Quota $625. Subscription to-day, $17,764; more than twenty-eight times the allotment. Our aim, $18,000. G. F. Barraclough." At almost the same time we have evidence of the interest of English Saints in the following from Brother Meredith: "Midland District going five times over the top."

Has Your Pledge Been Counted?
NEWS FROM CAMPAIGN WORKERS

Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 5
Bishop A. Carmichael: Although only about one half the usual congregation was present, the quota was doubled in subscriptions. The special soliciting committee will continue the good work, and I am truly pleased to inform you that the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District is making a splendid record in support of the church in every way. Elders J. W. McKnight and P. E. Farrow are traveling in the southern part of the district in the interest of the endowment campaign.

Wichita, Kansas, November 8
Presiding Bishopric: Confirming the telegram sent you this afternoon by Brother Williams and myself, the Southwestern Kansas District has pledged so far a little over $1,230. Eight hundred thirty of this was pledged here at Wichita. Winfield has gone over the top with their quota of $200 and think they will be able to raise this amount to $225. We have received $200 from Saints of the district who do not live in branches or groups. We have not received word from Hutchinson, Eldorado, or Hartner, but feel sure they will go over the top.

Charles T. Pooler.

Kewanee, Illinois, November 8
The First Presidency: I have some good news to report. The Kewanee Branch has gone over the top and is still going strong. Only about seventeen pledges in yet, with several more to come. Brother John Stiege and I spent the day with Kewanee, and will make Moline and Savanna during the week and Rock Island next Sunday. We are glad to be able to report some good news from Kewanee District and hope to have some more good news by a week from to-night.

E. R. Davis.

Macon, Missouri, November 8
Bishop A. Carmichael: The Graceland drive is under way. We have all of our committees organized and working. The quota for Macon Branch is half subscribed. We are putting forth the best efforts possible and will raise all we can. The district is in accord with the movement, and we are doing our best to put it over.

S. J. Joyce, Bishop's Agent.

Enfield, England, October 28
Bishop A. Carmichael: I am pleased to say we have the matter of the endowment campaign well in hand in this district and believe we shall be able to show good results from our efforts. I trust that the larger sum of $300 will be reached by the church and that the efforts of all will be blessed. Will you please send me one dozen books of Graceland College, so that I may make use of them, especially to the scattered members. With prayers for your prosperity.

John A. Judd.

Brockton, Massachusetts, November 8
Bishop Albert Carmichael: You can count on us. We shall go over.

J. W. Roberts.
Branch President.

Warrington, England, October 29
Bishop A. Carmichael: The whole Northern District will respond favorably to the object in view. You can be assured we shall support the matter in every possible way, and we trust sincerely the church will accomplish the work of endowing the college. I have word from several branches that they have pledged their quota. W. H. Chandler, President.

Pittsburg, Kansas, November 9
Bishop A. Carmichael: This district went over the top yesterday. I phoned Brother Gardner that fact this morning. I think that by the time we have all reports in the district will have oversubscribed more than $560. I am very well pleased to say that we have reached the amount that was allotted to us and then some.

Amos T. Higgins.

Springfield, Missouri, November 8
Bishop Carmichael: Our committee met to-night, and we have $253 pledged to date. Our quota was $400. We have a few to see next week.

T. L. McCormick.

Fisher, Arkansas, November 6
Bishop A. Carmichael: Our district to date has raised over $464.50 in pledges, and we now hope to double our quota of $600. Glad to hear the encouraging reports from everywhere. May the good work go on.

Charles H. Hardy.

Arkansas City, Kansas, November 7
Presiding Bishopric: As chairman of the Graceland stewardship-endowment committee of the Winfield Branch, I am pleased to report the branch has oversubscribed its quota ($290). One hundred twenty-five dollars in cash is in hand. We plan to have more money by the fifteenth.

J. N. Madden, Chairman.

Independence, Missouri, November 10
Bishop A. Carmichael: The Laurel Club in their meeting to-day have voted to materially support the Graceland endowment campaign by pledging $500; $400 of this will be paid at once and the remaining $100 in March.

Mrs. Ellis Short, Sr.

Jonesport, Maine, November 2
Presiding Bishopric: You will be interested in our report of progress to date, although it is incomplete. Eastern Maine's quota is $1,200. We have $1,600 in pledges thus far, with approximately one fourth of this amount paid in. The response is most gratifying.

H. A. Chelline.

Shelby, Nebraska, November 6
Mr. Albert Carmichael: Hearing Graceland's call, we are inclosing herewith our check for $100 as our subscription to the endowment fund. We would kindly ask that you would give credit to the Wilbur, Nebraska, Branch for this amount, as we are members of that branch but isolated. We hope and trust that the fund may be oversubscribed.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Dunkle.

Full Acceptance of the Truth

BY BISHOP E. L. KELLEY

Sermon delivered at the General Conference, Independence, Missouri, Sunday, April 11, 1918, by E. L. Kelley. Subject, “Full acceptance of the truth of Christ, and holy reflection of this truth in the daily life, honors with perfection Zion’s children.”

I was asked to present a subject I would talk from. Possibly I selected one that is a little too extensive, but you can overlook that, providing we do not continue as long as the subject is. “Full acceptance of the truth of Christ, and holy reflection of this truth in the daily life, honors with perfection Zion’s children.” They cannot come to perfection without this, and I present it for the reason that the world is not preaching the truth of Christ as much as it should, and I fear that the Saints will think that it does not require a fulfillment of all of the work outlined in the gospel in order that they may reach the perfection that is necessary for the attainment of the promises of Christ.

I read first from the first chapter of the Apostle Peter’s letter, beginning at the twenty-second verse:

Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away. But the word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.

The thought is clearly brought out in the teaching of the Apostle Peter, of the great value, the inestimable value, the greatest value of anything in this world to the human family, the truth of the gospel, the message of Jesus Christ to the world that was brought to light more than eighteen hundred years ago. It was brought by him at that time, but that was not the first time the message was presented. It was presented long prior to that. It was presented to the Israelites, but the Israelites did not abide in it, and so they lost—fell far from what they could have attained had they abode in the word of the gospel, the law of our heavenly Father that is given unto his people to live by; and any individual in this world who does not live by this law, and who has it, that they may live by it, will fall far short in time that is to come. I am going to cite you a number of passages to show you how it was held in the time of Jesus and the apostles and had been held previous to this time.

It is said by the Apostle James that of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his creatures. (See James 1:18.) I know it is very common in the world to believe now that we can be the children of God without ever having accepted the word of truth, the gospel as it is in the scriptures of divine truth. Now, if any of you ever hear such a statement as that from the pulpit or otherwise, just consider how many contrary thoughts you will find in the teaching of Jesus and the apostles, and if their teaching is just contrary to that, why should we hold to it? Why not hold to the teaching that gives life—the only thing that is referred to in the entire gospel that gives life to his children and by which they may walk, and show in their walk and warfare that they have eternal life? It is further stated by the apostle, after the statement that I have just read: “Wherefore, lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engraven word, which is able to save your souls.” Receive with meekness the engraven word; lay aside all naughtiness; all of those things that we have with us in this world that tear us away from pure and holy thoughts, and let us bear up as never a people have since the time of Enoch, keeping in mind the faith that Jesus Christ brought to the world, and the truth that he gave to his apostles when he said to them, “Go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.”

Now we are standing in the time of the world’s history when we ought to be diligent in that that our heavenly Father has instructed us to be diligent. It is not a time that we can have too much of leisure—too much of the things the apostle speaks of that we should dismiss; in our habits filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, but we should in meekness receive the engraven word and thus move along in this life.

And after that we have received it, the other question comes up whether or not we are living it; not only that we may accept and say, “Why, yes; I am willing to be baptized; I am willing to enter the church”; but then after we come within the portals of it, after we have accepted, we do not give our lives and all that we have to the pushing of that gospel forward and living it, to the extent that the gospel will create within us that power that expands our thoughts, our minds, our hearts, gives us higher determination in mind, so that if an individual loves the gospel as it is here in the word of the Lord, that individual is an individual that loves God and is approved of him, and no individual according to the gospel teaching here loves God in fact, unless he keeps his commandments. That is the test of whether we love God or not, by keeping his commandments.

I know people oftentimes get up in the meetings and say, "I love the Lord. I love him. And it is the only way to eternal life in this world." You can hear that on every side, on every hand, and yet the parties do not keep the commandments at all. That has been the reason the world has turned against the truth, and you can see the result of people failing to live what they profess. And in the order of life known as law in civil matters in this world, instead of leading people to higher and better plains and better thoughts, it leads them to the crushing of each other in this world. No people who have lived in accordance with the law of Christ, as it is presented here in his word, would ever be brought to array themselves against another people who are striving along in this world to do good. That is the reason I believe we should gather all we can to the gospel and make it our life's work and the law by which we will live. If we make that the law by which we will live and live in accordance with that law, then by it we will be protected to the extent that we cannot be overcome by the foolishness of others, by the wrong things that others do, by the temptations that come to men and women in this life. We will discard them as easily and as faithfully as we will discard the worst things that are in this world.

"Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls." Able to save your souls. If ye are doers of the word and not hearers only. That is the statement made by the Apostle James. I am quoting from a number of the apostles for the reason that I want you to see that each and every one teaches the same thing. I do not agree with the thought that is sometimes presented in the world—that the Bible teaches different things. The Bible teaches all of these doctrines—the same thing. Some of them may teach with reference to the law that was given to Moses—that it was given and was not considered, at the time it was given, a perfect law; and when it was given or after it was given, it was said by the prophets that it should be superseded by the correct law; and afterwards Jesus Christ came, and that law was superseded, because it was not the true law. When it was given, it was given unto the Israelites because of the transgression of the people. They had the gospel law first, but they would not live it, and so they were given another law, and after that the gospel law. And that it is not necessary for us to follow it out in all of its directions, and yet that we can be approved by our heavenly Father! Such a thought is the most ridiculous thing that could be presented to Bible-loving and Bible-following people. We ought not to think of such a thing.

It is stated also by the apostle: "Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the word, this man shall be blest in his deeds," or in his doings, as you will notice from the marginal readings; and if we cannot look into the perfect law of liberty and live in accordance with the same, we are not to be blest—and we ought not to forget that. "Faith without works is dead." So we have in our work all that is possible to use in order to carry out the law as we find it here in the books; and it seems to me that if we as a people will arise to the situation, the redemption may be brought about; that there may be not only a location in promise, but the people of Zion—as there is a nation in promise for the Israelitish nation—will come and be what our heavenly Father has indicated they should be. And there may be a Zion—by us commonly termed redemption; there may be brought about the time that you and I and our children are now needing so much. There never was a time in the past fifty years when they needed so much as they do to-day divine direction and help and proper surroundings, that they will not be led in the ways of sin and of death.

It is taught by the apostle that whosoever is born of God does not commit sin, for His seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin because he is born of God. I want to call your attention in connection with this to the special thought that I believe should bear upon all the hearts and minds of God's children to-day, that the individual that is truly born of God does not commit sin. The time will come when the angels will gather up the wheat, and we will find out that we have simply entered the church but have not lived in accordance with the divine direction that our heavenly Father has given us, and it will have to be said to us: "You have failed; you have not kept my words—you will have to wait until a more proper time."

Jesus, when he began his preaching here in this world, presented the law in as direct a way as any other preacher we have any record of. He presented it in a way that, if men will live by it, if they will live in accordance with his teaching of it, they will see the necessity, if they want to attain to the spirituality that is possible under the gospel, of accepting and abiding in the doctrine of Christ.

I call attention to the statement that you will find. The way I will read it to you will be found in the Inspired Version:
In the beginning was the gospel preached through the Son. And the gospel was the Word, and the Word was with the Son, and the Son was with God, and the Son was of God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made which was made.—John 1:1, 2.

Why, in the beginning—in the beginning—the creation of the human family, the gospel was laid down as the Word and the law of life and salvation, and yet sometimes people think it is not necessary to live by it in order that we may have the life and salvation that is on the other side. Now just change your minds upon that, if there is any such thought in the minds of any individual, and change your minds upon it so that you will live closer than you have ever lived in the past, because we need to do that.

And I wish in a hurried way to call attention to a few other things in keeping with this. Jesus, in preaching this gospel in his time, used this language, which you will find in the 6th chapter of John: “The words I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.” The law that is given in order to direct men and women in this world in their homes, in the country in which they live, is a responsible thing for the salvation of those people. You show me a people who have not had a proper law to live under, and I will show you a people who have not gathered in wisdom, knowledge, and understanding. I point you to the Russian people to-day—as many again people as there are in the United States. The majority of that people scarcely comprehend or know anything. The reason is, they have not been under the law and have not understood that when they moved in accordance with it they would move higher and better. Our law is not that kind of a law—our law pertaining to the Government. The men and women in this Government move higher and better, too, as they move; they move in wisdom and understanding to the law of life as it is in the gospel; men and women who live by it are enabled to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, and to grow in wisdom. Their minds have developed, and I have heard some of the best educated men we have in the country speak of some of our people who have come under their observation in the schools of the country, saying they are brighter, they think better; they are more sure in their work than children generally are. One of the presidents of the State University of Iowa called my attention to this when a number of our children from Lamoni, Iowa, were in the university at the time. He said, “They are brighter. I think the reason they are brighter is that they have to meet the world. The world is against them, and the contention that is brought about makes them brighter and more ready.” If they were contending for the truth, it would help them, but suppose they were contending for error? The president did not comprehend the fact that the gospel of the kingdom of God is what develops men, and it develops them better than any other law that you can find in the school. There is nothing that can develop them like the law of the gospel of our blessed Lord, because that law brings with it the spirit that openeth the understanding and comprehension of the children of men. That is the reason.

Now Jesus said: “The words I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life.” And in John the 17th chapter he says: “For I have given unto them the words thou gavest me, and they have received them.” Why does he say this to his Father in the prayer? He wanted them to receive of the divine Spirit in that way that it would give them more of light and life in this world, and he was pleading with his Father that that spirit might be bestowed. He says:

For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.—John 17:8.

Why cannot they have the Spirit as he had the Spirit? The Lord begged of his Father that they should have that Holy Spirit, the Comforter, the divine help; and the Father granted it. Now I want all our people to get that holy and divine Spirit that the Lord of Life has. They receive the Word—that brings them into the gospel of Christ of our heavenly Father. Jesus, as recorded in the gospel of Luke, says: “Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed.” I quote it to show you how faithful we ought to be to the word of life as it is in the gospel. I meet Saints sometimes who say: “I hope they won’t preach very much about the gospel, because we have heard so much about that.” I have heard a great deal about it, and have heard preachers, I suppose, as many almost as you can find in your ranks to-day, but I have never got tired of hearing a minister who presents the Word of Life as it is in the gospel—have never been tired of that as yet, and hope I shall not.

I heard ministers of two churches in the past few months at the educational center of Iowa (you might say) present to their congregations the idea they had of the way of life and the presentation of faith, and they said it didn’t make any difference what you believe, just so you were determined that you were going to make heaven your home, instead of the bad place. It doesn’t make any difference what you believe? Is that true? Doesn’t it make a difference what you believe? And their explanation was that one individual might take one portion of the Scriptures and read it, and he would think that it means this, and another would think it means another thing. It doesn't make any difference, they could move right along just the same; if they are contrary it doesn't make any difference. Do you think that sort of a doctrine will be satisfactory to our blessed Lord bye the bye? That is the way to think that it means this, and another would think it means and feeling ourselves that we will change it our­have in the last three years, since the war began) contrary it doesn't make any another thing. could move right along just the same; if they are and be accepted of our heavenly Father.

The large denominations of this world are teaching the Scriptures, the Bible, the law of Christ as it is in the Bible. That to-day. And it is the same as any other book that we have ever read, understood, and comprehended. The Bible can be committed unto me, according to the command-ment of God, our Savior. . . . Holding fast the faithful word, as he hath been taught, that he may be able, by sound doctrine, both to exhort and convince the gainsayers.—Titus 1: 3, 9.

In our life's work, then, I hope we will move so there will be no question as to what we shall be at the end, when we have to render an account. “He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.” This is the language of Jesus. Now do not tell me that men and women cannot all see alike, cannot understand alike the word of God, when Jesus came to bring the light of truth so direct and so comprehensive to the minds of the human family that all of them can comprehend it, if they are to be judged by it at the last day. Would he judge men and women by that which they could not comprehend? That would be unjust on the part of the Master. The Bible can be comprehended the same as any other book that we have ever read, understood, and comprehended. The teaching of Jesus that you find in the New Testament is so clear and so comprehensive that unless we want to change it and make it look like what we have said and done ourselves, we can understand and comprehend it. We may be in such a state of mind and feeling ourselves that we will change it our­selves, but we should not do that. We cannot do that and be accepted of our heavenly Father.

“But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost.” That is the teaching here in the Scriptures, and yet sometimes people say it is not necessary. Why, I met a preacher on a boat once, and we began to ask each other what we believed, and I said: “I suppose you have been preaching the gospel?” “Oh, no,” he says, “I cannot say that. I don’t believe it is necessary to preach the gospel.” He couldn’t say why—he was just confused right along, and yet he was preaching; traveling at that time from San Francisco to Los Angeles, claiming to be preaching and converting the people to Christ, and not teaching the gospel. And if our gospel be not known, not understood, not comprehended by an individual, he is not saved; he is lost, he is in a lost condition. And if an individual has not had an opportunity to hear it in this world, our Father has arranged that he may have an opportunity in the time that is to come.

In speaking in reference to this gospel that gives life and salvation, the Apostle Paul, after that he had been changed from the Roman to the Christian, led and understood and comprehended why. He uses this language with reference to himself: “For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.” Here, before he was under the law of the gospel, he was under the law of Moses; he was preaching it; but after he had received the law of Christ Jesus, he says, “It has made me free from the law of sin and death.” And yet sometimes they say it is not necessary to follow the teachings of Jesus as they are laid down here in the Scriptures.

Let us move from such a line as that. Let us not only move in reference to that in our teachings and instruction, but let us move from it in the lives that we live in this world, and let it be said of each and every one of us that whatever other men do or other women do in this world, you may look at this people and every one of them is a reflection of the law of life as it is laid down in the Scriptures. If we can get to such a point as that, where none of us will turn out of the way, whether we have to go to the war or whatever we do, we will abide in the law of the cove­nant of grace. And if we will do that, then we will have life and salvation. We will have direct warn­ing with reference to the evil things that would come upon us in this life, and divine direction will be brought to our minds and understandings.

I remember it has not been one year since I was given to understand perfectly with reference to one of my boys going into the army. It was given to me to let him know that, since the Government was pressing him to go, if he walked and lived rightly he would be kept rightly and would return. I sent the message to him in Texas where he was laboring at the time, and in two hours I received his reply; he said: “I thank you for sending that, because two weeks ago I received the same thing.”

That shows it is not necessary for us, in order to fulfill the law of Christ, to come out and take up arms and fight our own Government; but if our Government is doing what it is doing to-day, let us move in helpfulness and do our part and our work. If we will do that, we will come back safe. We will get along and get through all right. I believe in that just as much as I believe that we can do right in anything else.

Christ came that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. Now if Christ had come to this world that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, as you will find in the teaching of the Roman letter, 8th chapter and 4th verse, it seems to me that we ought not to lay down and cast aside that law, but let it be fulfilled in us, so that whatever we are called on to perform in this world, it doesn’t make any difference what it is, we shall be faithful to the trust. That is reflecting the law of life, the law of Christ. That is reflecting the law of Christ, as about two hundred of our young men here did when they were called down on the Texas border some two years ago. Major Stayton told me right in his house before his wife and son: “I would rather have two hundred young men from your society than to have four hundred that have not been taught and directed as they have been taught.” Major Stayton was the one who was over them there and was directing our boys; they took a course under him, and I refer to it because the major is a friend. And he also made the statement to our Sunday School Association here, when he talked to the young men that were in the room. Now if those outside can see the lives of men and women when they are trying to move in accordance with the law of Christ, let us move in accordance with the law; and if we abide in that law, then we are in the life of Christ, we are abiding in the laws of our heavenly Father. And as we abide in his law and in his life, so we will be prepared for the time that is to come. May that peace be with us so that every one of us will walk in accordance with this, and not move to the contrary, but do always to others as we would like to have them do unto us, for this is the law and the prophets.

Men cannot harbor hatred for any of God’s creatures, and build competently for the church of Jesus Christ.
him I first learned that the young people's convention had been postponed till the first week in November. So that necessitated a change of program for me. "Jot" secured me a desk at the Athletic Club, where till noon I worked on mail matters, etc., then after a hand-ball game, was taken in hand by Jot and a friend, Mr. Flennor, and shown the city of Spokane, its parks and drives, schools and industries, and I was told just why that city for its size is the best and finest in the world. How distinctly western that is! These western men are all boosters for their home town. Well, you know how it is with a man from Missouri—always interested, always full of questions. And I got a lot of information. I didn't know before that the United States had such a remarkable country. I was shown up to the top of Cliff Rock, a strange freak of some formerly active volcano thereabouts which had left this black rock standing high in the air at almost the very center of what is now Spokane. It has been arranged for a look-out, a place from where Spokane and its surrounding country can be seen. And as we from its top looked out over this thriving, new, and busy city, and saw its picturesque surroundings of hills and mountains, valleys, and dales, its great luxuriant industrial plants, and its trunk railway bridge that traced the city its greatest asset—Spokane River—I couldn't blame my companions for being a bit proud of their "home town." Here are some of the things I learned about the wonderful "Spokane Country," of which the city is the hub. I learned later that some of this country is claimed by Seattle, and perhaps other towns, in making up statements of assets; but I'm not going to settle any boundary disputes here. This Spokane Country is sometimes termed the "Inland Empire," and is rich in natural resources and industrial development. "The best!" is an expression one hears continuously—of apples, cherries, wheat, lumber, etc. And it seems this country has a faculty of making their claims good. In this territory, covered by a radius of about one hundred and fifty miles from Spokane, there are five hundred and twenty-two towns and over ten thousand miles of improved automobile roads. The metropolis of this section is of course Spokane, claiming 115,000 population, but the Census Bureau of the United States crediting it with 103,000. This "Inland Empire" claims to produce more than one third of the Nation's lead, and one third of its magnesite. Gold, silver, copper, zinc, and other minerals total $55,000,000 per year. It produces one tenth the Nation's wheat, and the yearly total of farm products is one quarter the billion dollars. The fourth of the commercial products of the United States are produced here, the annual output of fruit being fifty million dollars. Its lumber industry totals $50,000,000 annually, and it is claimed that one third the annual output of lumber for the United States comes from Washington, Idaho, and Oregon, other minerals total $55,000,000, while one half the remaining timber in the United States stands in these three States. Some idea of the possible development of this Inland Empire is reflected in these figures: Within this territory are the sites for one fifth of the Nation's potential water power plants, or about 3,733,000 horse power available in this territory, about one half million now being developed. In a length of sixty-five miles on the Spokane River, at seven sites, 187,000 horse power is being developed. With the present highly developed high power transmission, this holds wonderful possibilities for Spokane to increase its manufacturing plants from the present 325 to any reasonable number, and the present output of $110,000,000 per year is almost any amount, and its 15,000 factory employed people to a much larger number.

Spokane, founded in 1872, lies at an elevation of 1,881 feet, in a mountainous country, with a remarkably fine climate for an inland town. It now covers near forty square miles and has an estimated wealth of about a quarter billion dollars; has a birth rate of 12.65 and a death rate of 8.55. Its spirituality is looked after by 148 churches, while its intellectual affairs are guided by two or three standard colleges, 38 public schools, 11 private, and 7 libraries of the public variety. If its 1,939 acres of public parks and playgrounds do not furnish recreation grounds enough, there are within a radius of fifty miles from the city seventy-six lakes large enough to be designated by name, while the city owns and controls a whole mountain, Spokane Mountain, some forty miles distant, reached and mounted by an automobile road, and reaching an elevation of a little above five thousand feet.

In the Spokane Valley there are now 29,000 acres of irrigated land, mostly with 6-9 inches of water. after a chat with the home folk in the Wood residence, was left by Brother Wood at Brother Bronson's home. With Brother and Sister Bronson I had supper and in their company spent the evening.

I had intended taking a late train for Seattle and had made the necessary reservations; but when I went to the Great Northern depot to get my baggage, I was locked out. So, going to a near-by hotel, the Cooper d'Alene, I took a room for the night and on the next day took an early train for Seattle.

In spite of the fact that I had worked as opportunity would permit on my writing, and worked all day at reading and writing on the train that day, yet when I reached Seattle late Tuesday evening there was so much unfinished work in my portfolio, and knowing the week-end from Friday to and including Sunday would be busy with convention work, I decided to take a hotel room for a couple of days and work. So I did, and Wednesday and Thursday were spent in almost constant writing and reading matters demanding my attention. Early Friday morning I called on the telephone the residence of Brother and Sister D. S. McDole and told them that I would be writing all forenoon but would be at their service that afternoon. So they arranged to call at three o'clock. At two in the afternoon I was visited by a reporter for the Post-Intelligencer; and at three I left the hotel in company with Brother A. C. Martin, Sister McDole, and Sister Mulvane in whose car we went. I was taken to the home of Brother McDole, my home for the rest of the stay in Seattle. A little later we went to the church, where supper was had, and in the evening the convention began.

I shall not here try to give a detailed account of the convention. Suffice it to say they kept me busy. From the evening Friday to and including the service Sunday night I was put on the program nine times for "talks," lectures, sermons, etc., from three quarters of an hour to two hours in length. It is needless for me to say that except when answering questions at the round table, and most of the time then, the talking was on Zion and her problems and the social program of the church. The attendance was good, exceeding the expectation, and the interest excellent. This, the first young people's convention of the district, was pronounced a complete success. All parts of the district were well represented, Saints coming from as far north as Westminster and Hammond, British Columbia, and from as far south as Portland. The capacity of the church building was taxed. No finer hospitality could be extended than did the Seattle Saints to the visitors. Meals were served at the church, and I'll venture the guess that Monday found many weary sisters who had worked long and faithfully to care for the visitors.

It had been sixteen years (1909) since Mrs. Smith, Lois (then six), and I had visited that part of the country, when the reunion was at Alki Point; and I was glad to see again many of the Saints we had then met, and to form new acquaintances with the young Saints and those who had moved in. Sunday noon I had the pleasure of dining with Brother and Sister Mulvane, he an assistant to the city editor of the Seattle Times, she a former Kansan and one of the first guests at the Order of Enoch House. Sunday night I supped with Brother and Sister C. E. Jones; and during the convention I was hospitably cared for at the home of Brother and Sister McDole. Brother McDole is the president of the Seattle Branch.

Brother A. C. Martin, the missionary to the district, and Brother M. H. Cook, the district president, were on hand doing their parts in assisting Brother Granville S. Swenson in handling the affairs of the convention. Brother Swenson is a grandson of Swen Swenson, known to many of the Saints as a faithful servant of the church for many years.

As the church gradually emptied after the close of the services that Sunday night, I thought of the expressions made by the many as they heartily shook my hand and as heartily wished me Godspeed and good-by, and I felt that perhaps my going among them had not been without some good to them and the "cause," and though tired yet I was happy; and as with the McDoles we went our way "home" to seek rest, I could not but exclaim, "God bless the Seattle and British Columbia Saints, in every way, and advance the work among them."

By C. Ed. Miller

While acting as pastor of the Toronto Branch, I frequently heard the Saints sing a hymn to the tune of "I will sing of my Redeemer," and "Jesus, I my cross have taken," but I was not familiar with the words. Upon inquiry I learned that the hymn was published in the late R. C. Evans' book of songs, poems, etc. There the history of the hymn is given as follows:

"On the evening of October 2, 1908, Brothers R. C. Evans and R. C. Longhurst bowed in prayer in their room. While praying, the Spirit came upon them, and they retired, but the Spirit continued to bless them until the power became so great that the bed on which they were reclining trembled. A sister in another part of the house, knowing nothing of the blessing under which the brethren were rejoicing, testified that the whole house shook.

"While under this power, Brother Evans said, 'I cannot remain in bed longer.' On reaching the floor he was commanded to secure material and write, for the Lord had a message for his people. . . . Brother Evans, pale and trembling, wrote rapidly, without hesitation until the message was completed."

A Message

O my people, hear the message,
That to you this day I give,
Cease your quarreling and contention,
For in me ye move and live.
By my power I have led you Through the struggles of the past, And, if faithful to your mission, I will crown you at the last.

If ye love me, build my kingdom; Work together, one and all.
If divided, ye shall suffer, And the house shall fall. Harshness, jealousy, and envy Hath wrought weakness and distress, Human weakness calls for pity; Love, repent, and find sweet rest.

Tear not down another's structure, Hoping thus to build thine own. Each shall answer for his conduct When he stands before the throne. Honor comes to those who honor, Faith to those who me obey, Keep the law that I have given, Soon will dawn Millennium's day.

Whether the source of the inspiration of this "message" was human or divine, it must be conceded that the counsel contained therein was wise and very timely, and subsequent events have demonstrated that it was a tragedy that R. C. Evans did not follow the admonition,

"Tear not down another's structure, Hoping thus to build thine own."

Eloquenty he pleaded in the pulpit of Canada for the church to return to the good old path from which he said it had departed. He claimed the Lord showed him that he was to lead the church back to the path. Hundreds believed in him and followed his leadership. Gradually, almost imperceptibly, he led away from the basic truths of the great latter-day work. In a sermon on the "Rights of man," which is printed at the close of his book of poems, etc., from which the "Message" was taken, he said:

"In closing, permit me to say, I am convinced that we are on the verge of a great change. May we return to our first love, stand by the gospel as God has revealed it; let no man take our crown, nor abridge our right; but may we stand firm in all that Heaven and Christ has made us free, and so go on until the world is warmed and Christ shall come in his glory is my prayer."

His conviction that the church was on the verge of a great change was not borne out. He was on the verge of a great change. His exhortation to "return to our first love and stand by the gospel as God has revealed it" did not result in his followers standing by the gospel and the church, for the spirit which was leading him eventually led him to write the following, which was published in his last book, printed in 1920:

"My earnest prayer for the many honest people of the church is, that they will abandon Joseph Smith, the Book of Mormon, the Book of Abraham, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the Book of Commandments, and all other fraudulent works of Mormonism and embrace Christ and the gospel as preserved in the Word of God."

His self-appointed leadership, claiming to lead back to the old paths, led to repudiating Joseph Smith as a prophet of God, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Covenants as divine records. How many more such tragedies will the church witness? Self-appointed leadership in this church is dangerous. It was dangerous in the courts of glory when one third of the hosts of heaven were led away. God's house is a house of order.

The counsel given to

"Tear not down another's structure, Hoping thus to build thine own"

is good counsel to-day. May we heed it.

Yours affectionately,

HORTENSIA MERCHANT.

Value of Our Church Papers

Shortly after becoming a member of the Reorganized Church, in the year 1889, at Oakland, California, I left for a visit with my family, to my native land, England. During my stay there, of several months in the Lake District, I was not near any branch of our church, nor any Latter Day Saint of whom I knew. Therefore I had to rely entirely for my spiritual food upon the church books and papers. At that time the church published only two papers, the Herald and Autumn Leaves, and it was through reading these publications that I gained much valuable and necessary information regarding the church and its work; and thus, though isolated and young in the faith, I was able to feed my soul and develop spiritually.

The church books and papers were my closest companions, and each week I looked forward with eagerness for the arrival of the Herald, the reading of which brought joy into my life, for in its pages I was privileged to read articles of inspired men, through whom God was feeding and directing the church. The light and knowledge received from the Herald editors were of inestimable value to me, inasmuch as they gave me an understanding of many matters I was ignorant of, and answered questions that presented themselves from time to time to one so young in the faith.

On different occasions it seemed to me that the Spirit was directing these writers to furnish information that I needed for my growth and development, for as questions would arise which I could not satisfactorily answer to myself, while meditating upon the same from day to day, there would come in a HERALD editorial the needed light and instruction. Other HERALD readers have no doubt had similar experiences.

Then again, through the HERALD I was informed of the progress of the work in different parts of the world, and of what was being done at church headquarters, and of the needs of the church, and thus placed in a position to avail myself of the opportunities to help where it was possible for me to do so.

The letters appearing in the HERALD from time to time also were very helpful, furnishing abundant evidence that obedience to the restored gospel was followed to-day as in apostolic times, by manifestations of God’s power—the signs following the believer.

Autumn Leaves coming monthly, telling of the experiences of faithful men who had gone forth in this dispensation to proclaim the gospel message, also played an important part in my spiritual life; and often as I read of the power of God accompanying his servants as they faithfully performed their duties, my soul was filled with joy, and I was confirmed in the faith and filled with an earnest desire to live a righteous life so that I might be able also to carry the gospel message to others.

Thus, while not enjoying the association of God’s children in a branch of the church, I became firmly established in the faith, so that the following year (1890) when I returned to Honolulu I was eager and anxious, and in a measure prepared, to assist in starting the work there.

During all the years that have passed since then, while acting as president of the Honolulu Branch and directing the affairs of the mission, again and again valuable knowledge has been obtained and help received from the church papers, especially the HERALD, through the inspired articles written by leading men of the church whom I am satisfied God uses to bring light and blessing to people in all parts of the world, in a way that otherwise would not be possible. Many times while conducting the Lord’s work on these islands of the sea, my faith has been strengthened and my soul encouraged and enthused through articles I have been privileged to read, many of which seemed to have been specially provided at the time needed. For instance, there have been occasions when the Spirit of God seemed to move upon me to speak upon certain questions and to urge the members forward in a certain line of work, and while thus engaged, as an individual isolated from the body of the church, there would come to my rescue the dear old HERALD, with an editorial giving the necessary light upon the matters in question. These articles gave me the assurance that I was being directed aright, inasmuch as the same Spirit was with those who wrote the articles as with me. While others, no doubt in different parts of the world, engaged in the Master’s work, have received the same help and assurance.

Then again, how many times have the Saints throughout the world been refreshed and strengthened and encouraged by the wonderful and inspired articles that have been furnished by Brother Elbert A. Smith. What food for thought, what knowledge, what joy these articles have brought to thousands of others beside myself, who were hungering for such food!

While I have mentioned the HERALD and also Autumn Leaves, I would not overlook the value of Zion’s Ensign as our church missionary paper.

When absent from Hawaii on business missions, which have taken me to far-off Australia or New Zealand, wherever I have been I have always endeavored to get hold of the HERALD, so as to keep in touch with church headquarters.

The value of the church papers to me in my ministerial work was brought home to me very remarkably in the year 1905, when our beloved Prophet Joseph visited Honolulu to dedicate our church. While speaking of my work, he said that while I had not had the privilege of close association with the Pastors of the church, still I had a right to be in line with the general church work and to conduct the work in harmony with the church laws and rules. In this connection I may also add that I have had the privilege, during the whole of my thirty-five years of ministerial work, of attending only one General Conference.

Of late I have been made glad as I have noticed and read some of the letters appearing in the HERALD from the pen of our worthy President Frederick M. Smith; glad because I know through these letters he is getting close to the members of the flock, who will learn in this way to know him better, and knowing him better will learn to love him as their prophet and leader.

In conclusion, my dear brothers and sisters, let me urge upon you the importance of reading the church publications, and if you have not in the past been subscribing to them, begin now. If you cannot take them all, then at least you should take the HERALD. No home in the church should be without the official organ of Christ’s kingdom on earth.

Women Surprise Church With Piano as Gift

DULUTH, MINNESOTA, November 2.—The young people’s prayer service held each Sunday at nine o’clock, except the first Sunday of each month, is still doing fine here, but there is yet plenty of ground for improvement, especially in regard to giving service in prayer and testimony. May the day come when each mind will be centered upon things above, that God may see fit to speak admonition, correction, and praise to all that assemble, and that the outward gifts of the gospel may be demonstrated by the youngest child in attendance, that even angels may be seen in the assembly.

On October 11 Brother W. C. Stauty occupied the morning and Pastor C. B. Freeman in the evening. Out-of-town visitors were Sister Johnson and Brother and Sister Jay Walters and daughters Mildred and Ruth of Carlton, Minnesota. Brother George W. Day, district president, was with us on the 18th and preached both at the morning and evening services. The Saints are always glad to welcome him, as he brings to them the gospel in plain and simple manner so that it can be understood by all.

Brother W. C. Stauty and Brother Robert Zuelzdorf motored to Two Harbors on the afternoon of the 18th. While there a number of the Saints gathered at the home of Brother Samuel Sloan, and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all. They went in the interest of the Graceland endowment fund drive and met with the other members of the committee there.

Out-of-town visitors on this date were George W. Day, district president, Vernie Tunnell, and Sister Susie Cravens of Two Harbors.

Pastor C. B. Freeman occupied at both preaching services the 25th. At the eleven o’clock service a special message was given to the young in regard to Graceland, that beacon light that shines on the hill.

A junior class, “The Busy Bees,” won the attendance contest for last quarter and were the guests of honor at a Halloween party given at the home of the Sunday school superintendent, Sister C. B. Freeman, the evening of October 30. A good time was enjoyed by all.

The new furnace for the church has arrived and has been installed. It promises to furnish sufficient heat for us during the long winter months. Work is still progressing in the basement and will give ample room for the different departments.

The Department of Women sprung a surprise on the branch by purchasing a piano for the church, and its tones were heard on the telephone. The new piano arrived, and has been installed. The Department of Women surprised the church with a piano as a gift.
spire us to greater heights within the gospel, that he may take us under his wing of protection and lead us aight? The meeting was in charge of George W. Day, assisted by W. C. Stauty.

Sunday school convened with Superintendent Vivian Freeman, wife of the pastor, in charge. All Sunday school officers were in attendance, and only one teacher was absent. At the eleven o'clock preaching service, District President George W. Day occupied, assisted by C. B. Freeman. Then problems meeting was held in charge of Brothers George W. Day, Samuel Sloan, and C. B. Freeman. Stewardships was the main topic.

Sacramental service was held at three o'clock in charge of Brother Day, assisted by Brothers Sloan and Freeman. A fine spirit was felt, and many earnest prayers and testimonies were offered, accompanied by the Spirit.

Brother Day again occupied at eight o'clock assisted by Brother Zuelsdorf. His subject was found in the 16th chapter of Matthew, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Out-of-town visitors were Brother and Sister Grant Byce, Brother and Sister Samuel Sloan, and Sister Catherine Hastings, of Two Harbors; and Brother J. P. Petting, of Port Huron, Michigan.

The finest part of the day was when it was announced by the Graceland endowment committee after the evening service that though there had not been many in attendance we had gone over the top the first day in raising our quota. Our quota was $400, and we had pledged $347, and some of the pledges were not yet in. Does not this show that Duluth Branch is in harmony with the program outlined by General Conference and by leading authorities in the church?

Brother William Sparling, of Minot, North Dakota, and Brother Swen Swenson were to have been with us, but disappointments was ours, as they did not arrive.

We are praying that the redemption of Zion may be a reality, that she may indeed demonstrate to the world the more abundant life. And may Graceland turn out from her doors righteous people that may go forth in every walk of life and bring light and truth to a dying world, that the gospel may be preached to all the world for a witness. Then shall the end come, and the Son of God shall come in glory. May each one that has made a covenant with his heavenly Father be inspired to greater heights, that he may be, not a member in name only, but a true and obedient child of God.

Our church is located at 302-304 Sixtith Avenue West, one block north from the Grand Avenue car line.

Home-Coming Profitable at Sandyville

Sandyville Branch near Des Moines, Iowa, is still numbered among the living. Neither are the Saints all asleep. On account of the branch being so widely scattered and the weather being unfavorable for our pastor to come down from Des Moines, we have not met for Sunday school or services for three or four months. As a result, the enemy has been very busy sowing the tares and trying to uproot the good spirit of unity that our little branch has had. We realized that the statement, "United we stand; divided we fall," is true, for where there is unity there is strength. We must work together and for the good of each, or the branch will fall.

We had a good and a profitable home-coming last Sunday. Brothers Anderson and McDonald were with us, and Brother McDonald preached in the morning and after the social service in the afternoon. His subjects were mainly on the theme that is arousing the interest of every true Latter Day Saint now, as the drive is on for the endowment fund. This branch went over the top in raising its quota, and we are sure of receiving quite a little sum from the members who were not at the home-coming services.

It does us good to hear how the Saints are responding so generously from every locality. It is evidence that the work is moving onward, and when the call comes for us to give our all, then we will move out with faith.

We had a good social and sacramental service, and each one present seemed to enjoy a portion of the Spirit. The testimonies were strengthening and encouraging, and the spirit of unity prevailed.

New London, Connecticut

November 6.—Bishop M. C. Fisher, of Somerville, Massachusetts, was the speaker here Sunday, October 18. In his talk, Brother Fisher gave an explanation of the college endowment fund and its uses. His talks on tithing, finances, etc., of the church, are very interesting and pleasingly said.

The Saints were also glad to see Sister Florence Fisher and Myron, jr., and Sister Ora Holmes, who accompanied Brother Fisher.

A few of the members of this branch attended the recent conference of the Southern New England District, convening at Attleboro, Massachusetts.

Mabel B. Whipple, wife of Brother John Whipple, is convalescing slowly from her serious illness. She was the mother of twins: namely Earl Wendell and Eunice Muriel, both of whom died. She has received administrations by the pastor, and the prayers of the Saints have been in her behalf.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party October 30, which was well attended and greatly enjoyed by old and young. Young Brother C. Douglas Alves was awarded a prize for the most unique costume.

Brother David Crouch has gone to Florida for the winter. The Saints miss him and will be glad to see him in the spring.

Ottumwa Loses Respected Sister

OTTUMWA, IOWA, November 5.—The Saints here have been made sad by the death of our aged sister, Angeline Shockley, who died October 26 after a short but painful sickness, though she had been a widow for thirty-three years. She was a member of the church for fifty-six years and was a widow for thirty-three years. She had lived in this city forty-six years and in that time had made many friends, to whom she endeavored to make known her religion. She always demonstrated her love for her church by the things she did. During her sickness she was patient, and asked only for administration and the prayers of her brothers and sisters in the gospel. She was cared for by Sister Nevin and Sister E. H. Lewis. While on her sick bed, she bore a wonderful testimony of the love of God to her many times in her life. The funeral service was held October 28 from her home, in charge of the pastor, with the sermon by Elder A. L. Sanford of Nauvoo. Under the divine Spirit he preached a wonderful sermon to her many friends who had come to pay their last tribute of respect. The singing by the church quartet was wonderful. Her husband and five children preceded her in death. She had been a good mother, and it can truly be said that she had fought a good fight and had kept the faith.

Eleven years ago this dear sister willed her home here to the church. As present we have our Sister Gunn and Brother George Lewis in the hospital, and Sister Annie Scott is in poor health.

During the month of October the Sunday school held a rally day program which was well attended. The program was good.

The Department of Women had a cooking sale, and gave $50 towards the Graceland endowment fund.

The sermons of October have been on stewardships and Graceland, and the speakers have had good liberty. We feel the Saints here will respond heartily.

At our communion service the first Sunday of the month, there was a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit, which found

www.LatterDayTruth.org
its expression in song. Some real testimonies were borne, and all felt well repaid.

The vision of the future work of the church has been caught, and with a larger vision we believe more will be done. The Saints have surely made true the words of the song, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love," both to those inside and outside the church. With all hands on deck we feel our drive for $200,000 will be successful.

London District Conference

LONDON, ONTARIO, November 3.—The annual conference of the London District convened at Stratford October 3 and 4, with District President George C. Tomlinson in charge, assisted by Apostle J. F. Curtis.

At ten o'clock Saturday morning the Saints met for organization, and at half past two for business. The order was changed from a delegate to a mass conference, and Brother Curtis was given charge. A resolution was passed sustaining the Presidency of the church in their present policies; then delegates to General Conference were chosen. It was later voted to give $50 from the district treasury to the Graceland endowment fund.

Saturday evening at eight o'clock Elder G. C. Tomlinson, jr., gave for the evening address, "Education as a factor in Zion's redemption." This was followed by a talk by Mrs. H. A. Koehler, "Getting the most out of life." Brother Curtis gave the closing remarks.

The Saints convened at nine o'clock Sunday morning for prayer service in charge of Patriarch John Shields and Elder W. I. Fligg. They were strengthened by the prayers and testimonies of those who had long been valiant in service.

At eleven o'clock there was preaching by Bishop Berger on "Temporalities." J. F. Curtis occupied at half past two in the afternoon, using the Graceland endowment for his subject. He left not one stone unturned, and anyone within hearing could not help being converted to the plan. Elder H. A. Koehler gave a sermon on "The affiliation of the churches" at half past seven.

At the close all felt it had been a most successful conference. It was enlivened by the jovial and peppy nature of Apostle Curtis. On Saturday we all held our breath when Brother Fligg was passed a telegram. Upon reading it he arose and announced, waving the telegram, "I'm a grandfather!"

Elder D. A. Withrow, district chorister, was in charge of the music, and Sister Withrow presided at the piano. We were favored during the conference by the Stratford orchestra.

Pioneer Saint Passes

Mary Helen Grant passed from earth life at nearly ninety-four years of age at Rocklin, California. She was born near the town of Moravia, New York, December 27, 1831, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church when sixty-one years of age. She died October 24, 1935.

She was one of the early pioneers to the west, driving an ox team, fording streams waist deep in her girlhood days in order to help her parents move a large family west.

It was her delight to talk of the gospel. She would relate experiences of events happening in the early church in her girlhood days, and would talk of Nauvoo, Kirtland, Winter Quarters, and Salt Lake City, as we now talk of the cities we know. She had a very active, intelligent mind during the twenty years she was known by the writer, retaining all her faculties up to the last.

During the "dark and cloudy days" of the church, she and her husband were re baptized and reconfirmed into the church Brigham Young started, her husband becoming a seventy in that organization and being once sent on a mission among the Indians, or Lamanites.

Our sister hated the doctrine of polygamy. Her mother felt as though she was "going to hell" because she was leaving Utah, and so warned her. But feeling sure the people in Salt Lake City under Brigham Young were without the Spirit of the Master, she was anxious to raise her family of girls at that time in a pure atmosphere, even if it took another series of hard pioneer trails and sufferings to do so.

She came on to California at the peril of her life. Her husband, while not joining the Reorganized Church, was a firm believer in the restoration of the gospel and was in full accord with his wife in getting out of Utah. She was held in high esteem by the Saints in this Northern California District, where she has resided the greater part of her very long life. We called her "Grandma Grant" and flooded her home with birthday postal cards which she delighted to receive from the Saints.

She received one hundred per cent care by her daughters in the last twenty years of her old age. But her health was nearly always the best for one of so many years.

The two daughters living are faithful members and uniting church workers. Mrs. Julia A. Crocker of Loomis has looked after a large home class for many years and assisted in many other ways.

Mrs. Ada M. Earle of Rocklin, where our sister made her home, was for many years secretary of the Rocklin Branch and has been helping in Sunday school work when circum­stances would permit. Sister Earle is the wife of Elder C. W. Earle. Grandma Grant was very fond of her son­in-law, and he showed no less affection.

Anyone interested in this genuine pioneer woman of the old church will find thirty-five pages of intensely interesting reading matter in the April, 1917, Journal of History.

She was buried beside her husband in Rocklin, California.

Tordoff and Cheville in Des Moines District

At the request of the Quorum of Twelve, I joined Brother Roy Cheville at Boone on November 4, to visit with him the branches of the district on behalf of the endowment fund.

He had visited Des Moines, Rhodes, and Nevada Branches before I reached the district. Too much cannot be said of the splendid response of the Des Moines Branch. They are now building a church which will reach the $50,000 mark before completion. When I think of Doctor F. G. Hull, Henry Castings, and Brother Higgins, and their work in connection with the building of the church, I am reminded of the spirit of 1834, when Sidney Rigdon would cry out night and day to God, while standing upon the incomplete walls of Kirtland Temple. These men, surely, have not lost the old-time spirit. With their congregations they have to date, in addition to the stupendous undertaking of building the church, raised $3,060 for the Graceland College endowment fund.

The Rhodes, Nevada, Boone, Runnells, and Perry Branches will go over the top easily, if their present subscriptions are anything to go by. The Pershing Branch, with a quota of $250, subscribed in fifteen minutes almost $400. Concord Branch, which meets at Sandviley, also went over the top.

Doctor Slocum of Webster City, after financing an expensive tent meeting, is paying more himself than the church is asking from the little group of Saints that he is in charge of. Yes! The Spirit of '34 can be found in the Des Moines District.

One brother said, "We have no room for cranks in this district; all must work shoulder to shoulder." Although all the groups of this district have not yet been visited, the Des Moines District is easily over the top.

It has been a pleasure to be once again associated with Brother Cheville. He carries with him the "spirit of Grace­land." We certainly had mutual enjoyment working together for the college and the stewardship plan, especially when we found the Saints ready and eager to do their part.

Backing under the wonderful spirit; working with such a progressive program; thinking of the statement of the Christ,
"Love thy neighbor as thyself," we immediately see that He had an idea. The greatness or value to the world of a man's ideas determines how large their names are written on history's pages. The idea of treating our fellow men as well as we expect to be treated by others is so big that Jesus' name still overshadows it. We are now grasping the significance of his teachings. We mean business, which means we are determined to build upon the foundation Christ laid. This is the spirit of the Des Moines District. Are you with us?

Sincerely, W. D. Tordoff.

Omaha, Nebraska

November 11.—During October we had the privilege, by arrangements of Pastor Whalley, to listen to a series of sermons on "Stewardship" presented by various brethren, Brother Carl Self opening as reported in our last letter. Brother Roland W. Scott, former branch president, followed on the 16th with an splendid sermon in which the social side of our responsibilities was stressed. The speaker quoting freely from various modern authorities, especially Doctor Charles A. Ellwood, who insists that the correction of our modern social evils can come only through religion. On the 25th Doctor Henry A. Merchant, district president, presented the thought that Christ's statement that he came to the world as a savior of souls, and therefore it is our chief source of study and information on that all-absorbing subject. Our group has about thirty dollars added to its treasury through Sister Rosa Adams; Brother R. W. Scott heads the committee having the work in charge and feels optimistic concerning it.

Sister Mabel Tousley, graduate from Graceland, spent Sunday, October 25, with us. She is teaching school at Peru, Iowa, her second year there, with encouraging success. She had a friend with her, Miss Hazel Copeland, of Logan, Iowa, a former associate in the Persia schools.

Brother Albert Merrick has been permitted to return to his home after four long months in the hospital. His condition is still very discouraging, but all must admire the plucky fight he is making to regain his health.

Brother Theodore Hicks is another member who is being mentioned in the prayers of the Saints at this time. He has been confined to his home for some weeks, suffering from nervous indigestion. He is always cheerful, however, and we trust will soon overcome his affliction.

Sister Mabel (Leach) Green is the mother of a baby boy, born at the Swedish Immanuel Hospital on November 4. With three big sisters, this little boy brings great delight to his family.

A number of our members have moved about of late, some leaving the city. It would be a great kindness and a matter of thoughtfulness, if members would acquaint the branch president with such moves and provide him with their new or contemplated addresses. The church does not wish to lose track of its members, and the work of branch secretaries would be greatly facilitated if everyone would cooperate in this matter. We are posting in our church this week, and also in that of the South Omaha Branch, a list of about forty-five of our members whom we are unable to locate at the present time.

Coffeyville, Kansas

November 7.—We are glad to say that the branch at this place is moving forward in the wonderful work. The weather this month has been very unfavorable. Much rain and some snow have been in evidence, but attendance has been good.

We were favored with a visit from District President Amos T. Higdon. He gave us two inspiring sermons on the Grace-land endowment fund. This has also been the theme for the sermons of Pastor Howard P. Anderson during the month of October. As a result of these endeavors, we were made to see the grandeur and far-reaching results of such a movement. The totals for this month were $126, and when the committee made a check of the pledges it was found that $250 had been subscribed. This was noble response from the Saints.

Last Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour, sacramental services were held. We were blessed with a goodly degree of the Spirit and felt encouraged to press on in our struggles.

A Halloween party was given by the Rigsby at the home of its president, Sister James Reynolds. All came in costumes, and games were played throughout the evening in which both old and young participated. Refreshments were served.

On October 18 Sister Elma Davis and Sister Ballinger, of Independence, Missouri, met with us in services. They were here visiting their sisters, Mrs. Charles and Elzie Biggerstaff.

Sunday School Convention, November 20, 21, 22

Purpose: Conferences of the teachers and officers of our Department of Religious Education for the consideration of the problems concerning each department in order that we may obtain

1. A deeper knowledge of our own powers and better methods of presentation and management.
2. A greater sympathy for and a better understanding of the pupil.
3. A closer walk with the Master Teacher of religion.

Results hoped for:

1. An enlarged vision of the service we should render.
2. Better ideas for reaching our youth, helping them to make right decisions in the everyday problems of living, leading them to the finding of themselves and the real service they should render the church.

A cordial invitation is extended. Officers and teachers engaged in the Sunday school or Religious Education are urged to be present. Come prepared to tell of the things you have accomplished and to present your problems for discussion.

Stone Church

The Sunday school attendance was about one hundred and thirty below the average. The snow-covered ground possibly had something to do with it. The eleven o'clock service showed a pleasing gain in attendance. President Elbert A. Smith continued his practical and personal sermons, this being the fourth of the series. The theme was, "Your home." He said there is a saying that a man's home is his castle. It may not be entered against his will excepting by due process of law. Yet society perhaps without a search warrant may direct a very searching gaze upon it, for out of it will come the future citizens of church and state. The church herself has an interest there and has been told to send her visiting officers into your home to help you with your problems. Why a home at all: First for shelter, and second for protection. This is fundamental and largely physical. But a house is not always a home. The body needs a house, but the soul needs a home.

Longfellow celebrated the founding of a home in his poem "The hanging of the crane."

"Oh fortunate, O happy day

When a new household finds its place

Among the myriad homes of earth,

Like a new star just sprung to birth,

And rolls on its harmonious way."

Will the new home, like a star in heaven, continue its harmonious way? If so, it must be based on unswerving loyalty. The wedding ring should be so big that if the exigencies of business or missionary work put the man in Australia and the woman in America the ring will reach around the earth and hold them together. But it should be so small that there is no room in it for any other man or woman. The home must be built on the gospel foundation.

Here is woman's chief work; to make homes out of the raw material. Zion will be a collection of homes. By night their lights as they cluster on Zion's hills will be like the stars of heaven. And we will see visualized the Master's statement about a city set upon a hill that cannot be hid. From such homes will come the future builders of the church.

One of the assistant pastors of the Stone Church suggested to President Elbert A. Smith that he deliver a series of Sabbath morning sermons. In harmony with this suggestion President Smith commenced the series four weeks ago, and they met with such favorable response that he has consented to continue these 11 o'clock meetings.

William E. Barton, D. D., writing in Colliers for October 17, says that people do not attend church services as they once did. And he states that the club, the political party, and the lodge are also suffering from lack of attendance. He gives as the reason the fact that to-day people wish to spend some time with their families.

Some doubt has been expressed as to the advisability of having a series of preaching services during the week. The Saints in Independence love to go to church and to be with their families also. So they all went together to the John Garver meetings which have just closed. There was a very fair attendance.

At the regular Sunday school hour the Y. K. T. Class held an opening program in honor of their new Sunday school room. The little house east of the church was turned over to them for their use. They have refinished the inside and have made a pleasant meeting room. The president of the class, Lyle McFarlane, formally presented the building to Bishop J. A. Becker for the use of the church, which was followed by a short talk by Brother Becker. After a solo by Miss Thelma Vincent, President Elbert A. Smith made the main speech of the hour, which was much enjoyed by the large crowd present. This room will be used for other church activities than the Y. K. T. Class—the choir, ladies’ aid, etc. These young people have reason to be proud of their achievement in making this building such a pleasant place for their meetings.

At eleven o’clock in the lower auditorium Sister Westwood was in charge of the young people’s church. Brother Sam Thiel was the speaker. At the same hour C. Ed. Miller addressed the juniors in the assembly room at the Institute Building.

In the evening service Apostle John F. Garver concluded a week’s series of meetings on “The faith of our fathers.” These sermons were reported and will be published later. Brother Garver demonstrated that he knew what the faith of our fathers was, and he considered it an honor to stand by that faith. It was the faith which will save the world. We shall continue to hold fast to it.

Many times as we have listened to the able men of the church preach in the Stone Church, as we have enjoyed the fine musical productions so frequently given, we have wished some of our scattered brothers and sisters, isolated from church privileges, could be present.

The radio makes it possible for some to get in touch with Zion, but we wish those isolated, and the Saints in the smaller branches where there is a limited amount of talent to draw from, could experience the personal touch and influence we have the privilege of enjoying. We have had some wondrous musical programs in the recent months given by our splendid musicians, soloists, and the choir. Some of our skilled musicians and singers, and many of our consecrated Saints have come from the isolated farm and the little village. This is the contribution of the small place to the center place.

Wednesday evening there was a large attendance to hear Brother Garver. After the preaching service a short prayer service was held for those who wished to stay. Only about one hundred people left. President Elbert A. Smith was in charge. The meeting was pervaded by such a splendid spirit it held for about an hour.

Pastor R. V. Hopkins preached at the rally day service Sunday at Spring Branch to a full house.

A priest in Group 37 makes the following interesting report of a visit: “Had a pleasant social visit, with some general talks on church problems. Then played the flute for the children and made a little pencil drawing for them.”

The annual bazaar for the Laurel Club will be held in the dining hall of the Stone Church November 19 and 20. The fancywork booth will have on sale handmade articles suitable for Christmas presents, also for your own use. The doll booths will furnish gifts suitable for the children. Homemade candy for everybody, young and old. The evening of the 19th an oyster supper will be served, as well as ice cream, homemade cake, pies, and other edibles. Come and get your supper and enjoy a social evening with your friends. We will be glad to serve and welcome all our friends. The proceeds always go to help the church.

The Independence Music Club held its second recital for the winter last Saturday night in the studio of Arthur H. Mills and Paul N. Craig. It had been postponed from the previous Saturday night because of bad weather. The weather was not much better this week, but the studio was filled with an enthusiastic audience. The program was given by four artists from Kansas City, Miss Mildred Spencer, soprano; Mr. Jack Lloyd Crouch, pianist; Mr. George C. Arnold, baritone; and Miss Amy Winning, accompanist. The program was very pleasing from start to finish. After the program Mrs. Stanley Green, hospitality chairman, assisted by Miss Ina Cockerton, served punch and wafers.

Thanksgiving Concert

The Saints of Independence are reminded that the Stone Church Choir will give its annual Thanksgiving Concert next Tuesday evening, November 24, at eight o’clock in the Stone Church. Besides several special choruses by the choir, there will be numbers by the men’s chorus. Also numbers by individual artists. It is expected to be a program that will interest the listeners. Admission is extended to all to be in attendance. This program will be broadcast as the regular Tuesday evening program from K L D S.

Second Church

Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker Sunday morning, and Bishop J. A. Becker delivered the sermon of the evening hour.

The funeral of Mrs. Ora G. Hedges, of 1111 South Noland Street, was conducted at Second Church Saturday afternoon, U. W. Greene being the speaker and minister in charge. Mrs. Hedges died at her home Thursday morning. She leaves her husband, James Hedges, two sons, and three daughters, one of whom is the wife of Donald Morgan, Mrs. Inez Morgan. The burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Walnut Park

Sunday speakers were Elder R. S. Salyards in the forenoon on the life of Paul, and Missionary W. A. Smith in the evening on the subject of God speaking to mankind in different ages of the world, as an evidence that he still speaks to us. The junior chorus sang at the evening service.

The families of Ervin Moorman and Orlando Naeve gave a musical program at Religio the night of the 13th. Brother and Sister Ervin Moorman are still faithfully keeping up the junior meetings every Sunday at eleven o’clock, except sacrament Sunday, securing some one each Sunday to tell a story and one of the priesthood to preach a short sermon. Brother and Sister Moorman frequently furnish these numbers themselves, besides acting as chorister and pianist. They have been faithful to their work in this department for several years, while using their talents also in various other places as needed.

Enoch Hill

Bishop A. Carmichael preached at Enoch Hill Sunday morning. After reading section 128 in Doctrine and Covenants, he explained how it was hoped to get church property into the control of the Order of Enoch, rather than into the hands of the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, making it plain that the leaders want the Saints to know how the tithing and surplus are used. Said they welcomed questions and constructive criticism, and asked questions himself of the audience to ascertain their understanding of the matters he discussed. They will thus make the meeting decidedly interesting and educational.

At seven o’clock R. S. Salyards preached from the first chapter of Paul’s letter to the Romans and told the life story of the Apostle Paul.

Liberty Street

Liberty Street has gone on the top in the Graceland endowment drive, and is still going.

Sunday morning we had a wonderful talk by Apostle John F. Garver. He used as a theme, “Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. But if it die it bringeth forth much fruit.” In the evening Richard Bulbard preached, using Isaiah 9: 6; 55: 4, and Jeremiah 9: 23, 24 as the basis for his remarks.

Sunday afternoon at half past two Thelma F. Williams, daughter of Brother and Sister W. H. Williams, was united in marriage to Milton C. Cox at the home of her parents in Ina Cockerton, served punch and wafers.
Independence. Elder W. A. Stevenson officiated. Only the immediate family were present.

The women of Group 35 have organized for what they call relief and service. So many mothers who have little folks to sew for do not have any time for study. These women have decided that on certain days they will go and help these mothers with their sewing so as to give them time to join classes and study to keep abreast with the progress of the church. The group met last week at the home of a sister who has a number of small children, and garments were cut out and completed that day.

Deselm Branch

MANTENO, ILLINOIS, November 10.—The Graceland team canvassing Northeastern Illinois District, Brothers Clossen and Connor, held a service here Friday evening, November 6. Their talks were interesting and straightforward. The “spirit of Graceland” was shining in their countenances. Sister Pauline Kahler sang a solo and Sisters Edith Rogers and Bernice Pement a duet, which added much to the service.

Brethren Reginald Jones and Paul Pement have charge of the Graceland endowment drive and are hopeful of reaching the quota.

Elder J. E. Wildermuth, district missionary, and Sister Wildermuth, district Sunday school superintendent, accompanied by their son Rolney and their daughter Avela, came for the service Friday evening and stayed until Sunday afternoon.

Sister Wildermuth gave a talk Sunday morning to the Sunday school workers, emphasizing the normal work. A number of our Saints have started the Book of Mormon outline so needed some prodding to keep us going. Sister Wildermuth discussed Sunday school problems with our superintendent, Sister Emma Studtman, Saturday afternoon.

Brother Wildermuth occupied the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning. His subject was stewardships. Our members are deeply interested in this subject and found food for thought in the sermon.

Brother and Sister Wildermuth visited this community some twenty years ago when they were newly married.

Sister Vivian Eklof is caring for her father, Seth Jones, who underwent two operations recently and is now able to sit up part of the time.

The regular sacramental service November 1 was quite well attended and was characterized by the Holy Spirit. An admonition was delivered, warning the Saints to cease contention over church affairs, as God has charge of the church and has his chosen leaders directing the work.

A Halloween party was held at the home of Erlan and Oliver Shreffler Saturday evening, October 31. The house was decorated with black and yellow, and owls, witches, and black cats were conspicuous. Games suitable for Halloween fun were enjoyed. Brother Paul Pement caused much merriment by his impersonation of “Rastus.” Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire, of Hammond, Indiana, attended the party, and the sacramental service the following morning.

The regular monthly service conducted by our priesthood with the Saints in the southern part of the district was held October 25 at the home of Aaron Ziegenhorn, near Fairbury, in charge of Elder Earl D. Rogers and Priest J. H. McGuire. A lively interest was manifested, and Mrs. Nettie Ziegenhorn was baptized by Brother Rogers. This makes two members of the Deselm home department to enter the church recently, as Mrs. Ruby Huette was baptized in August. These two sisters are in earnest and are doing valiant service.

Elder Victor Eklof and Priest Reginald Jones held a service at the home of Brother and Sister William King in Joliet Sunday afternoon, October 25.

A number of our Saints attended the young people’s convention in Chicago and were so much enthused that they all desire to attend the coming district conference, November 20, 21, and 22.

We are pleased that the district bishop’s agent, Elder Elmer L. Kahler, of Wilmington, Illinois, is a member of our branch. We appreciate his wise council. Brother Kahler and family attended services here November 8, and they were dinner guests of Brother and Sister Abe L. Rogers.

The New Group in Zion

INDIENDE, MISSOURI, November 12.—Group 41 is a newly organized group in the City of Zion, consisting of eighteen families, twelve of whom live in temporary shacks in the Cooper-Short Addition. The organization of the group was effected about six months ago, with Brother P. A. Sherman as pastor.

We have well attended prayer meetings each Wednesday night, Sunday school at half past nine on Sunday morning, and preaching at eleven o’clock. The Sunday school has an enrollment of forty, divided into five classes. Brother Clarence Martin is our Sunday school superintendent. Classes 1, 2, and 3 have regular lessons; and Class 4, the young men’s class, takes church history. Class 5, the adult class, studies stewardships.

The Department of Women, with a membership of seventeen, all workers, is in charge of Sister R. R. Sherman, and our meetings are held regularly. In the three months we have been organized we have paid our share on the general budget for Zion and given $6 to the Sunday school for much-needed supplies. A comfort was sold for $4.50 and the money applied on our pledge of $10 for the Walnut Park quota of the endowment fund. There are still several dollars in the reserve fund.

The biggest problem we have is providing a place to meet. Our houses are all too small for meetings. We rented a basement for two months; then it was sold. During the time we occupied the basement we accumulated considerable equipment. Brother Sherman donated benches, and we put backs on them and stained them. Some camp chairs were given us, also a stand. Sister Willard Atwell loaned us an organ. We could seat about one hundred. When the basement was sold, Brother Sherman came to our rescue and rented us his summer residence for the winter months. But we need very much a permanent meeting place.

We are moving out according to each ray of light we receive and try to make the best of our environment. The ladies are planning to help pay for a lot, and we have hopes of being organized into a branch in the near future. At present we are handicapped, having only a pastor and a deacon. We need a priest and teacher, and a place to hold meetings. We ask the prayers of the Saints that our needs may be supplied.

Our quota for the endowment drive was $100, and $241 has been raised to date, with more promised. We feel this is not so bad for a small group newly organized.

Sadie Burch, Secretary Department of Women.

From the Hoosier Capital

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, November 12.—Since our last letter Elder O. J. Hawn and Brother Charles Fish were in attendance at a two-day meeting at New Albany, Indiana, where a goodly number of Saints were gathered. The Spirit of the Lord was keenly felt. Much good was accomplished in preparation for the Graceland College endowment drive, and many were won over to a greater desire to help bring about the redemption of Zion.

We also visited the Saints at Marengo, where Brother Hawn delivered a very convincing discourse in favor of the endowment and the establishing of stewardships. His efforts were backed by the convincing power of the Spirit and will surely result in good to the cause.

Sister Walter Jones, of Bargersville, Indiana, was present at our sacramental service. She is an isolated member, and her testimony of blessings received should be an inspiration to faithfulness and service.

The Department of Women are continually busy in their efforts for good in the branch. Incidentally they are demonstrating the fact that they are "no mean cooks."

Our energetic young assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, Brother Clifford Krichbaum, who has been confined to his home by sickness the past month, is able to be out again. We shall be glad to see him occupying in his accustomed place.

Our branch has gone way over the top with its quota for the endowment fund and is still going. United effort always brings success.

We were glad to see Sister Powers, of Morgantown, Indiana, at our services Sunday morning after an enforced absence on account of sickness and death in her home. Our sympathy is with her family in their bereavement, and we welcome their presence at our services.

The glad hand of our branch is extended to the family of Brother L. Smallwood, formerly of Middletown, Ohio. May they find with us that true saintly fellowship, and may our associations together be mutually productive of good.

Apostle D. T. Williams dropped in on us the first of the week, and gave us some very interesting discourses, stewardships being the principal theme. He left with Brother Hawn the morning of the 11th for other points in the district to minister gospel blessings to other congregations. His labors were much appreciated, and we unhesitatingly say, "Come back again, Brother Danny."

Youngstown-Sharon Ministerial Conference

SHARON, PENNSYLVANIA, November 7.—The Youngstown-Sharon district ministerial conference was held recently in New Hamburg, Pennsylvania. Saturday afternoon was given over to recreation, the chief diversion being a mush ball game for visitors and members of the Hamburg Branch. Elder Joseph A. Jaques of Pittsburgh was in charge. He is famous for the work he has done in the recreational lines.

Saturday evening a mock radio entertainment was given. An improvised radio set was erected on the platform, and the entertainers stood behind a curtain. Their songs and speeches were supposed to be coming in over the radio. The Youngstown-Sharon district orchestra gave a few selections, and they deserve praise for the work done. Elder L. F. P. Curry, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, broadcasted "Uncle Wiggly bedtime stories" for the younger folk. If KDKA or KLD S had heard this they would surely sign up Brother Curry on their broadcasting program. And Brother Jaques was right there in entertaining the audience. Members of the Hamburg Branch sang songs. They are live wires when it comes to helping in anything that will aid the branch or the church in general. The Warren, Ohio, Branch, also contributed to the entertainment with some wonderful vocal selections by Mrs. L. M. Evans. The entertainment was a great success.

Friedens meeting was held Sunday morning at half past eight. The service was held in charge of Sister Emma B. Rydal, and at the same hour talks to the adults were made by Elder Joseph Jaques on "Looking out for the boy"; Elder Martin Ahlstrom, Sharon, Pennsylvania, district bishop's agent, on "Consecration"; and Dennis E. Benbow, Newton Falls, Ohio, district Sunday school superintendent, on "Stagnation."

The preaching hour was occupied by Elder L. F. P. Curry on stewardships. After outlining the need for the application of stewardships, the speaker emphasized a heart right with God as an essential qualification.

A picnic dinner was served on the lawn of Elder M. H. Headley, president of the New Hamburg Branch.

Social service in the afternoon was in charge of Elder Cecile Neville, district missionary, assisted by District President David H. Jones, Bishop's Agent Martin Ahlstrom, and Branch President M. H. Headley. The meeting was held in Brother Headley's grove. The Spirit was present, and several prophecies were given by Brother David H. Jones. The meeting was enjoyed by all present.

Preaching service was held in the evening in charge of Elder Cecile Neville. His sermon was on the need of stewardships, and it was very fine. He is a live wire in the district and is awakening the Saints to their duty to God and their fellow men.

E. B. JONES, District Secretary.

Denver, Colorado

November 10.—Winter has set in early this year. We have had more cold weather in October than the oldest inhabitant can remember.

Denver went over the top for Graceland Sunday, the 8th. Our quota was $1,000, and we raised $1,500 in less than thirty minutes.

The next move now will be an addition to our church building. We are badly in need of more room, and if we can do so much for an outside project in so short a time, there is no reason why we may not do as well for our building fund. We already have about $1,700 in the building fund, and the coming winter is a good time to do our building, for various reasons. At the priesthood meeting Sunday, the 8th, it was voted to appoint a committee to draft plans and estimate the cost of a new addition, to submit to the annual business meeting December 7.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was with us the 8th to help put over the drive for Graceland. In the evening he gave a fine talk on stewardships. He left on the evening train for other fields.

Brother Elder, who has been confined to the hospital for several weeks, is reported improving. Sister Emily Hamlin, one of the old-timers, is seriously ill at this writing. We pray for her speedy recovery. Your correspondent was laid up two weeks in October with sciatica, and he is satisfied that one experience is a plenty.

We notice that our church has been treated to a new carpet the past week.

Death has invaded our ranks twice within the last two weeks. The first was Brother Robert Sherman, grandson of Solomon Salisbury of Illinois. He had been ailing for some time. The other death was our young and faithful brother, Byron R. Shupe. He had been sick for over a year with what the doctors called Hodgkin's disease, for which there is no known cure. He was administered to many times, but only received temporary relief. He died Sunday morning, November 1. He was a patient sufferer, and till the last had a pleasant word and a sunny smile for all. His funeral was one of the largest ever held in the Saints' church, and the interment was in Littleton Cemetery. The schools dismissed for the occasion, and it was said by one of the teachers, that when the announcement of his death was made in the high school, there was scarcely a dry eye in the house. He had graduated from Littleton High last year.

To know him was to love him. He told Pastor E. J. Williams a few days before his death that he would like to live, but if it was God's will to take him he was ready to go. We have no fears of the future for him. Maybe the Lord has a greater work for him on the other side than he could have done here. Our hearts are wrung with grief, and we can only wonder why.

Lansing, Michigan, November 13

A club of young people, members of the congregation at Lansing, Michigan, gave a musical at the church and cleared a substantial amount for the Graceland College endowment fund. The news is sent in by Miss Donna Manning, publicity agent.

Carsonville, Michigan, November 9

Bishop A. Carmichael: One week of the campaign is over, and we have approximately reached our district quota, still having several branches ahead of us for this week. We had a very busy day yesterday (Sunday); started at Carsonville in the morning and with only thirteen present we raised $286 in about five minutes. Their quota was only $200, so they went over the top. At Sandusky last evening they went over nearly one hundred dollars, so you can see that we are going strong.

G. T. Richards.

Selma, Michigan, November 8

Bishop A. Carmichael: The Selma, Michigan Branch have oversubscribed their quota and I believe double that amount. Good news from many other branches indicate splendid faith and confidence in the Graceland College endowment and stewardship program of the church.

C. J. Hunt.

Kerman, California, November 6

Bishop A. Carmichael: I wish to notify you that the Fresno Branch is going to reach its quota in pledges and I believe will go over the top. Wednesday night at our regular business meeting they subscribed in a few minutes $390. The next day a $50 pledge came in, and there are others yet to see.

A. S. Votaw.

Niles, Ohio, November 8

Bishop Carmichael: Just a line to say that the Warren Branch of the Youngstown-Sharon District went “over the top” this morning in about twenty minutes. Our quota is oversubscribed and more to come. Yours for the greatest campaign we ever put over.

Paul Braman.

Denison, Iowa, November 15

Bishop A. Carmichael: Gallands Grove District’s full quota pledged.

F. T. Mussell.

Frieden, Oklahoma, November 6

Bishop A. Carmichael: The El Reno Branch has gone “over the top,” I think perhaps one third. All are not heard from yet.

H. K. Rowland.

Malvern Hill, Kansas City, Kansas, November 18

Bishop A. Carmichael: Malvern Hill oversubscribed her quota twenty per cent and is still going strong.

W. O. Hands.

Lincoln, Nebraska, November 9

Bishop A. Carmichael: The rural and isolated Saints I met last week rose to the occasion in a noble way, the results being eighty-six dollars cash paid in, and a total of more than two hundred and fifty pledged.

E. F. Robertson.

Marshall, Missouri, November 8

To the Presiding Bishopric: Our committee has just reported that up to to-night we have $323 pledged. Our quota was $400, and we still have a few members to see next week.

L. McCormick.

Indianapolis, Indiana, November 9

Bishop Carmichael: The Indianapolis Branch has gone over the top and is still going.

Charles H. Fish.

Columbus, Ohio, November 15

Bishop Albert Carmichael: The quota for Second Columbus Branch was four hundred dollars. We closed our drive to-day and are glad to report that our total subscriptions amount to one thousand and fifty dollars. Congratulations.

H. E. French.

Pontiac, Michigan, November 15

Albert Carmichael: Pontiac, Michigan, Branch has gone over the top to the extent of $230 per cent. Quote $900. Pledged $1,406.

Otto J. Bryant.

Mobile, Alabama, November 15

A. Carmichael: Mobile District over the top at $825. Mobile Branch quota $300; pledged $560 and still going. Congratulations on success of drive.

P. M. McDowell.

Sharon, Pennsylvania, November 16

Bishop A. Carmichael: Sharon quota four hundred. Subscribed to-day seven hundred. Hope district will meet quota.

M. H. Ahlstrom.

Brewton, Alabama, November 15

A. Carmichael: Every branch in district over the top. Best from thirty-five to fifty per cent over. Florida District is well over.

Port Huron, Michigan, November 13

Bishop Albert Carmichael: Eastern Michigan District is one thousand over. Six churches to report. Expect to reach six thousand when completed. Just closed tour of district.

Matthew W. Liston.

Lamoni, Iowa, November 9

The First Presidency: Just received a card from Elder L. W. Moffett, president of the Pleasanton Branch in Lamoni Stake, stating that at a meeting yesterday morning, with only twenty-one present, that they pledged the sum of $633 for the Graceland endowment fund. Their quota was $900.

Lamoni Stake has pledged to date the sum of $22,245.50, and we have five branches that have not completed their campaign.

Lamoni Stake Presidency,

By Wilber Prall.

Hayti, Missouri, November 7

Bishop Carmichael: Just received word from Springfield, Missouri, Branch that they have gone over the top. Their goal was $175, but they have subscribed over $200. Kennett and Thayer will make their allotment all right.

A. M. Baker.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, November 8

Dear Brother Carmichael: I am pleased to advise you that the work on Graceland endowment is completed for Cedar Rapids Branch, and a total pledge of $264 was offered. The quota for Cedar Rapids Branch was $136, which was nearly doubled, as you will note. Other branches in Eastern Iowa District are doing fine, and we hope for 100 per cent in the district.

R. B. Welday.
Radio Programs

K L D S

TUESDAY, November 24.—The program will be the annual Thanksgiving Concert by the Stone Church Choir. It will consist of numbers by the mixed chorus choir; numbers by the men’s chorus, also numbers by individual artists.

THURSDAY, November 26.—The Walnut Park Choir of thirty voices will render Maunzer’s “Song of Thanksgiving,” under the direction of Mrs. Minnie Scott Deaton. Solists: Mrs. Marian Campbell, soprano; Miss Margaret Gard, alto; Mr. Claud Smith, tenor; Mr. Kenneth Morford, bass. Mrs. Gladys Reynolds and Mrs. Cacketta Norman, accompanists.

SUNDAY, November 28.—Stone Church service. Chorus choir, anthem; Robert Miller, organ. Sermon, President Albert A. Smith. 6.30, vespers service: Lilly Belle Allen, soprano; Mrs. Artiste De Lo, alto, cantor, and cards. The Runnels twins, who presented the program, received 11,000 reports on a program they broadcast from WOS about a year ago.

Why should this program, furnished by nonmembers of our church, and with little advertising, elicit such a favorable response from radio listeners? We believe it is because they sang the good old-time hymns, the kind that tug at people’s heartstrings. Our own musicians can well get a lesson from this experience. The majority of our radio talent have much greater ability than these two earnest men who have clearly demonstrated to us what the people want.

We have been maintaining a high standard of broadcasting with no jazz or objectionable features, but we haven’t been reaching the great masses of people who are hungering for the good old-fashioned songs and sermons.

This one program has been a lesson to those in charge of K L D S and to many of our loyal musicians. Let us profit by it.

(Following are a few of the letters from listeners who appreciated the program presented by the Runnels twins and broadcast by K L D S).

Homewood, Kansas.—The program this afternoon by the Runnels twins was the best I have listened to, without exception. The songs were soul inspiring, and I believe the heavenly choir were listening to them, and surely God’s blessing will be poured out abundantly on them.—R. B. Gould.

Emporia, Kansas.—We receive the sermons, music, concerts, etc., broadcast by K L D S, and get you in fine shape, plain and clear. Enjoyed the sacred concert yesterday afternoon by the Runnels twins, Mrs., and daughter. Such broadcasting cannot help but do good.—F. K. Sims.

Caney, Kansas.—I want to thank the Runnels twins and the little daughter for their beautiful singing this afternoon. I have been a radio listener for nearly four years, receiving four hundred stations. I want to say that the songs rendered this evening by the Runnels twins were the best I have ever heard. Hope to hear them again soon.—George K. Keller, Route 1.

Oak Mills, Kansas.—I wish to express our most sincere appreciation for the program by the Runnels twins this afternoon. We love especially to listen to such songs as they rendered. Was very sorry when the program came to an end. I have enjoyed the various services and programs from your station of late. May God’s richest blessings ever attend you.—T. F. Hall and Family.

Hazard, Nebraska.—Our family thoroughly enjoyed the songs by the Runnels twins yesterday. Other radio fans in town were listening and called over the phone to tell us to tune you in, but we were already with you. Give us more music of this sort, and let the jazz hounds have the jazz. My father-in-law, seventy-eight years old, nearly blind and deaf, gets so much pleasure listening to the gospel songs.—J. C. Needels.

Corning, Iowa.—We wish to thank you for your appreciation of your old-time revival hymns as sung by the Runnels twins, and extend congratulations to them and to little Miss Harriet. Your station came in unusually clear. All of your programs are good, but this one was especially satisfying.—C. A. Haynes and Family.

Novata, Oklahoma.—We thank you for the music by the Runnels twins. They were great. If you are to be on with similar programs each Sunday, we certainly will be tuned in. Clear reception.—C. E. Gowdy.

Springfield, Missouri.—My family has been enjoying your program this afternoon. It was clear and fine. We are always glad to tune in on something real good, such as your programs. There’s entirely too much jazz on the air. I thank you for good music.—E. W. Gibson, 1189 Clay Avenue.

Boonville, Missouri.—No sermon of words could do more toward bringing souls to Christ than such beautiful voices singing to his praise. We appreciate the program by the Runnels twins. Their voices came in fine, every word distinct. We always expect a good program when we tune to K L D S and have never been disappointed yet. While I am writing I am listening to your vespers service. Your station is one of the best we get. This letter does not half express our appreciation of your efforts.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Stegner and son Charles, Route 4.

Eaton, Kansas.—Let me say that in the year we have had our radio we have never before enjoyed such music as came from your station this afternoon. To the Runnels twins—“Come again and stay longer.” To announcer F. A. C.—“Excellent! Your voice is so clear and distinct, it sounds as if you were right in our home. We enjoy the sermons from K L D S—Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Baldwin.

Wyacenda, Missouri.—We have tuned in your station for the first time and heard the wonderful singing by the Runnels twins. It was a spiritual uplift, and to say we enjoyed the program is putting it mildly. I can visualize the success of a meeting with two such singers. Such fine voices and wonderful expression. The gospel in song is just as potent as the preached word and will reach many that will seldom listen to a sermon.—Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Starbuck.

Fair Play, Missouri.—I am not a member of your church, but I listen often to your Sunday services. May God bless your church. The program by the Runnels twins yesterday afternoon especially appealed to me.—Marley O. Manuel.

Kingswell, Missouri.—The singing by the Runnels twins is the finest I have ever heard. As I sit here listening, my eyes are filled with tears.—Jasper Morris.

Keesanqua, Iowa.—Have had a radio about ten days; received you yesterday for the first time. We were giving a birthday dinner to our little three-year-old daughter, Norma Helen, and had quite a few in for dinner. The “Runnels twins” made a big hit with the party. Your station comes in with wonderful clearness and volume. Will listen for K L D S often, you may feel sure.—Doctor J. W. Rinhargrder.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND.—At Attleboro, Massachusetts, October 24, in charge of district presidency, Susan E. Sinclair, secretary; Harve Elefson, chancellor; Earl Bradshaw, organist; Attleboro deacons, warden; Raymond Bradshaw, press committee. Following department superintend­ents were elected: Lena Balch, Young People's; Harold Cash, Recreation and Express; Lucie Sears, Department of Women; Doctor W. A. Stoughton, Hymn Supervisor; Louise Houghton, district chairman, Music Department. Moved and carried that the following question be discussed at the next conference: Any matters may be legally handled in a departmental conference. Recommendations from Brockton and Fall River Branches were referred to elders' council. Council reported approval of recommendations and that ordinations be provided for. Moved that we sustain present treasurers of departments. Moved that next departmental conference be held at Brockton, Massachusetts, October 30 and 31, 1926. Saturday evening Attleboro Saints entertained the conference with a program, "The story of an Easter garden," at the close of which the conference was entertained with an exhibition of the most pleasing exhibition of service displayed in giving the program. Sunday at 9 a.m. was prayer service. A good spirit of consecration and desire for service manifested. Visions that had been given to the district president by inspiration were read by him, and at the close of the afternoon service it was planned to send these publications to the young people of the departments by Abram Law at 10.60, also health and the membership of Women by Doctor Stoughton. Religious Education was handled by Lena Baldwin; solos by Helen Coombs and Evelyn Elliott. Dinner was served in the vestry of the church by Attleboro Saints. The following or­bitations were made: J. A. Hansen, district president; W. A. Sinclair and T. J. Elliott ordinating; Harold F. Garfield, Brockton, priest; Edmund M. Roberts and Abram Law officiating; Alva Coombs, Fall River, priest, T. J. Elliott and W. A. Sinclair officiating; Donald E. Crowell, Brockton, priest, Abram law and Edmund Brown officiating; Edward Greene, Fall River, deacon, ordered provided for. Half hour song service conducted by James Houghton, Tallie. "Endowment-stewardship fund," by Doctor W. A. Sinclair, Collection for fund taken amounted to $52.60, Susan E. Sinclair, secretary, 166 Pearl Street, Winter Hill 45, Massachusetts.

WESTERN MAINE.—At Vinal Haven, October 10 and 11, with Elder Archibald Beggs in charge, associated with President Richard Baldwin and Bishop M. C. Fisher. Sister Alice Baldwin, clerk; Lewis Eaton, chorister; and Lizzie Young, organist. Statistical reports were read. Richard Bald­win was the speaker for the conference. On account of terrible gales not many Saints could come by boat. A fine conference was enjoyed by all. Louise J. Eaton, secretary.

EDITORIAL

Why a First Presidency in the Church?

Some propaganda is being carried on, intended to convince Latter Day Saints that there should be no First Presidency in the church. An effort to remove one or all of the members of the First Presidency might be lightly dismissed; they are but men, and in any event, time will bring a change. But an effort to destroy the office strikes at the organic structure of the church, discredits the church during all the time of its forward march under a First Presidency, and discounts and discredits the revelations given during many years past.

The church is not ready to abandon the Book of Doctrine and Covenants or any other one of the three standard books, having observed all too often that the man who repudiates the one presently proceeds to repudiate the others and to renounce the entire work of restoration with its glorious history and its splendid fruits. Gurley, Bays, Evans, there have been many tragedies of surrender, which began in a little slipping and ended in an avalanche, ruinous to individuals though not greatly injuring the church.

Modern Revelation

We are asked why the First Presidency is not more specifically named in the Book of Mormon and New Testament. We might ask in return why bishops and deacons are not mentioned at all in the Book of Mormon (at least not under those titles) and their work only vaguely indicated in the New Testament. Yet without question there were such important offices in the church that Christ founded, as the New Testament indicates.

As a matter of fact, modern revelation directed very largely in the restoration of the church:

Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father we proceeded (according to previous command) to call upon our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandments which we had received.—Joseph Smith in Times and Seasons, vol. 3, pp. 944, 945.

If the Bible and Book of Mormon had been perfectly clear and explicit on every point, modern revelation would not have been so greatly needed. The New Testament by no means contains all of Christ's words; the Book of Mormon is an "abridgment" of the things said and done. However, neither the Bible nor the Book of Mormon is silent on the subject of presidency, even though the modern English terms may not have been used to indicate the office.

The Work and Revelations of President Joseph Smith

Let us first scan recent revelations: Through the late President Joseph Smith the Lord clearly recognized the presence of a First Presidency in the constitutional organic structure of the church:

The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 2.

The quorums in respect to authority are designed to take precedence in office as follows: The presidency, the twelve, the seventy in all meetings and gatherings of the membership, where no previous organization has been effected. Where organization has been arranged and the officers have been ordained and set in order; the standing ministry in their order; high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons; the parallels are; in the presidency, the president and his counselors; in the second presidency, the twelve; in the missionary work, first the twelve; second, the seventy; in the standing ministry, the presidency, second, the high priests; third, the elders, then priests, teachers, and deacons in their order.—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 9.

Hearken unto me, O ye elders of my church. Lo! I have seen your efforts in my cause, and they are pleasing unto me. I declare unto you, It is my will that you ordain and set apart my servant William Marks to be a counselor to my servant Joseph, even the president of my church, that the first presidency of my church may be more perfectly filled.—Doctrine and Covenants 115: 1.

Wisdom in God to Establish the Presidency

Hearken to the voice of the Spirit, O ye elders of my church; the prayers of my people have prevailed with me. Behold, it is wisdom in me, and expedient in my church that the chief quorums should be more nearly filled, and their organization more nearly completed. Thus saith the Spirit. Let my servants, William W. Blair and David H. Smith, be chosen and ordained to be counselors to my servant Joseph, even the president of my church. Let them be set apart to this office by the laying on of hands by my servants whose duty it is to ordain and set in order the officers of my church; and let my servants, the president of the high priests' quorum... and the president of the lesser priesthood, also lay their hands upon these their brethren who are to be counselors, but let my servant of the twelve be the spokesmen.—Doctrine and Covenants 117: 1-3.

The foregoing is as good scripture as any that the church has. Thousands have received personal testimony that the late President Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God. He did not deceive the people in giving these revelations supporting a presidency and in occupying as president for fifty-four years. Neither did God compound a felony and wink at apostasy by recognizing him as president when there was no scriptural and rightful place for such office in the church.

Joseph Smith Neither a Dupe Nor a Deceiver

We are not ready to repudiate the splendid work of the Reorganization and put the stamp of “false prophet” on that good gray prophet who gave his life to the church as truly as his father gave his life at Carthage.

When he came to the First Presidency of the church in 1860 he said that he came in obedience to a power not his own. That power led him to that position. And thousands had evidence to the divinity of that call.

When he issued his wonderful First General Epistle in 1861, in the “name of the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob” calling upon the scattered Saints everywhere to return to their first love, and upon the inhabitants of the earth to repent, believe, and be baptized, other thousands said, “The man who wrote that epistle is a prophet of God.”

That God who led him to the office of President of the church never by whisper or hint conveyed to him the office upon him, and had given him the presidency, the right of presidency, presiding officers to preside and watch over the church.—Book of Alma 4:1.

Alma thereafter exercised presidential watchcare and direction over the whole church and set other officers to “preside” in local congregations:

And now it came to pass that after Alma had made an end of speaking unto the people of the church, which was established in the city of Zarahemla, he ordained priests and elders, by laying on his hands according to the order of God, to preside and watch over the church.—Book of Alma 4:1.

The very fact that they were to preside indicates presidency, the right of presidency, presiding officers in the church, etc; or as we have it in the Doctrine and Covenants: “Of necessity, there are presidents, or presiding offices, growing out of, or appointed of, or from among those who are ordained to the several offices in these two priesthoods.” (Doctrine and Covenants 104:11.)

In the Book of Mormon church Alma presided over the whole church and others were selected to preside over local churches. Note also the following from the standpoint of an opponent who did not believe in the “foolish traditions” of the true church:

Now Satan had gotten great hold upon the hearts of the people of the city of Ammonihah; therefore they would not hearken unto the words of Alma. . . . Nevertheless, they hardened their hearts, saying unto him, Behold, we know that thou art Alma; and we know that thou art high priest over the church which thou hast established in many parts of the land, according to your traditions; and we are not of thy church, and we do not believe in such foolish traditions.—Book of Alma 6:10-13.

The general supervisory character of Alma’s work is indicated by the following:

And it came to pass that Alma was appointed to be the chief judge; he being also the high priest; his father having conferred the office upon him, and had given him the charge concerning all the affairs of the church.—Mosiah 19:63.

This is strikingly in accord with modern revelation to the First Presidency:

And this shall be your business and mission in all your lives to preside in council and set in order all the affairs of this church and kingdom.—Doctrine and Covenants 87:5.

After the Order of Jesus Christ

If we go back to the Book of Mormon for a pattern, we find Alma as president of the church doing about what the president of the church is told to do in the revelations through Joseph Smith in Doctrine and Covenants. Alma presided and called other men to “preside.” The very word “preside” (Book of Alma 4:1) carries in it the variations, “president,” and “presidency.” (The president may officiate with or without counselors. Doctrine and Covenants 99:6.)

It may be argued that this was the Mosaic church over which Alma presided. But he says it was the church of Christ. He preached the gospel of Jesus Christ. His administration was after the order of Christ: “For I am called to speak after this manner, according to the holy order of God, which is in Christ Jesus.” (Book of Alma 3:73.) And lastly his church was called “the church of God or the church of Christ”:

And they were called the church of God, or the church of Christ, from that time forward.—Mosiah 9:49.

The above referred to the organization over which Alma presided. Those who would say it was the church of Moses rather than the Church of Jesus Christ may argue the matter with the Book of Mormon. The church generally will accept the latter. And since it was verily Christ’s church, why cavil if there be found to-day over Christ’s church a presiding high priest, even as Alma (a president, if you please); like Alma, to “have charge concerning all the affairs of the church.” Yea, verily, like Alma, “having been consecrated by his father” to occupy in that position.

Indeed, if the church of Christ to-day were not after that order, something would be very wrong, for Alma says that he worked after the order of Jesus Christ. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ does not need any man to “call it back to the Book of Mormon plan,” for the good reason that it has gone forward on that plan.

A Presidency, Twelve, and Seventy in Mosaic Church

The Mosaic economy itself was a “pattern” after which the Church of Jesus Christ was to be builded, a “schoolmaster to bring us to Christ” (Galatians 3:24); “a shadow of good things to come” (Hebrews 10:1). “Behold, I say unto you, all these things were types of things to come.”—Book of Mosiah 8:8. In its organic structure were found a presidency of three, a leading body of twelve, and another of seventy—all of which appear later in the New Testament regime and all of which are set forth in light as clear as noonday in modern revelations. The witnesses of these dispensations agree.

Note the following from the Old Testament scriptures:

And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But Moses’ hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.—Exodus 17:11, 12.

Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man: And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the Lord your God into the midst of Jordan, and take up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel.—Joshua 4:4, 5.

And the Lord said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee. And I will come down and talk with thee there; and I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.—Numbers 11:16, 17.

It was not just an accident that Aaron and Hur upheld the arms of Moses. That he was the leader and director (to use modern parlance, president) and they his associates (counselors) is very evident from the following:

And he [Moses] said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold, Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them. And Moses went up into the mount, and a cloud covered the mount.—Exodus 24:14, 15.

In the New Testament Church

Particularly as his ministry drew to a close, Jesus seemed to recognize three and prepare them for oversight of the church. This was after the pattern given in the Mosaic economy. We read:

And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.—Matthew 17:1-4.

As his departure drew very near, after he had taught all of the disciples in the upper room at the last supper, he took these three apart again into the Garden of Gethsemane:

Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.—Matthew 26:36-38.

After Christ’s departure these three appeared as in charge to speak for the church:

And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.—Galatians 2:9.

At a time of grave crisis one of these men, James, gave a decision “in council,” exactly as one member of the Presidency might speak for the entire quorum:

Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God.—Acts 15:19.

One of the three, Peter, is indicated in the Inspired Version of the Bible as holding the office of seer, which is significant in the light of revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants pertaining to the Presidency:

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Thou art Simon, the Son of Jona, thou shalt be called Cephas, which is, by interpretation, a seer, or a stone.—John 1: 42, Inspired Translation.

To Peter the Lord said:

I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.—Matthew 16: 19.

In section 7 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were given the language addressed to Peter concerning Peter, James, and John:

I will make thee [Peter] to minister for him [John] and for thy brother James; and upon you three I will give this power and the keys of this ministry until I come.—Doctrine and Covenants 7: 2.

The Three Carry Over Into the Restoration

These three carry over and officiate in "the great restoration," giving to Joseph Smith and his associates the authority and keys held by them:

The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist, in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us—and that I should be called the first elder, and he [Cowdery] the second. It was on the fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, that we were baptized and ordained under the hand of the messenger.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 36.

And again, what do we hear? Glad tidings from Cumorah! Moroni, an angel from heaven, declaring the fulfillment of the prophets—the book to be revealed. A voice of the Lord in the wilderness of Fayette, Seneca County, declaring the three witnesses to bear record of the book. The voice of Michael on the banks of the Susquehanna, detecting the Devil when he appeared as an angel of light. The voice of Peter, James, and John, in the wilderness between Harmony, Susquehanna County, and Colesville, Broome County, on the Susquehanna River, declaring themselves as possessing the keys of the kingdom, and of the dispensation of the fullness of times.—Doctrine and Covenants 110: 20.

Was Jesus playing three favorites among the Twelve all down the ages? Was this a secret order of three within the Quorum of Twelve? No; Jesus was carrying out the "pattern" of the Mosaic economy and in strict accord with the revelations which he later gave in the work of restoration. Why reject the revelations given to us and go back into the misty past to laud ancient revelation?

In the Latter-Day Dispensation

Under the glory which shone around Cumorah and the divine light which came with the angel's message Joseph Smith moved out in power to organize the church. Think you he made a dismal failure within the first two years? This is what we are sometimes asked to believe.

Joseph worked according to the will and commandment of God. And it was said:

For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good, and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard.—Doctrine and Covenants 19: 2. Book of Commandments 22: 8.

No suspicion here in the mind of Omniscience that within two years Joseph would be "moving the cause of Zion in mighty power for evil" by exalting himself to a position foreign to and incompatible with the kingdom of God. Who is wiser than our Lord in this matter, let him speak.

So early as March, 1882, the following was given by revelation:

Verily, verily I say unto you, my servant, Frederick G. Williams, Listen to the voice of him who speaketh, to the word of the Lord your God, and hearken to the calling whereby with you are called, even to be a high priest in my church, and a counselor unto my servant, Joseph Smith, jr., unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood. . . . Amen.—Doctrine and Covenants 80: 1.

Passing by other revelations, the principle "shadowed" forth in the Mosaic economy is clearly set forth in the following:

Of necessity, there are presidents, or presiding officers, growing out of, or appointed of, or from among those who are ordained to the several offices in these two priesthoods. Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 11.

And again, the duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom, yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 42.

The "Book of Commandments" ends, abruptly in the midst of a revelation given September 1831. We are now asked to believe that the prophets have been bogus and the seers spurious during the intervening years, to discard the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the work and vision and sacrifice of President Joseph Smith, and much of the work and revelation of his Father the Martyr, to go back to 1831 (or some other date) with those who are headed in the wrong direction.

This progressive discard of revelation knows not where to stop. One goes back to 1835, another to 1832, another to 1830. The Methodists go back to Patmos. The Christian Church ("Campbellites") go back to Pentecost. The Jews go back to Sinai. The atheist finds no stopping place even in Genesis. We like not this creeping blight of atheism. We do not believe that God started his work in glory and power and then went away and forgot about it. We see rather his moving hand with the early church and his light and power with the Reorganization. We believe that the Lord is still at work with his church.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
From the Man Who Cleaned a Brother's Boots

We believe that God set his hand to restore his church according to his own pattern in these last days. He selected Joseph Smith, jr., as the chief instrument and first elder in that work. We are not prepared to throw that work into the discard and follow some modern movement functioning under “government by committees” in the stead of the officers that “God set in the church.”

We believe that after the dark and cloudy day incident to the apostasy wrought by Brigham Young and his associates, the Lord moved in power and light and majesty to restore his work through the Reorganization under the leadership and presidency of “Young Joseph.”

Years ago on an occasion three people were in a room adjacent to the Kirtland Temple. Two of the three are gone to their reward. Elder C. Ed. Miller, then a silent witness, now reports the incident. It was between sessions of a General Conference. In one corner of the room a man of gigantic stature was laboring to remove mud from his huge boots. The third person entered and said cheerily, “Brother David, what are you doing?” The one addressed replied, “I am trying to remove some of this Kirtland mud from my boots.” The newcomer said, “Let me help you, David.”

And so President Joseph Smith kneeled down on the floor (unconscious of the presence of the silent witness, Brother Miller) and cleaned and polished David Dancer’s muddy boots. It was not an official or formal act; but it was as significant as the washing of the disciples’ feet.

Those hands that cleaned David Dancer’s boots were often lifted to the throne of grace in behalf of this church. The man who could humble himself to cleanse the boots of the disciples rose to the very throne of God and came back with this message:

I was, on the fifteenth day of the fourth month, of the year 1894, in fasting and prayer before the Lord, and being commanded of the Spirit I arose from my praying and wrote:

Thus saith the Spirit unto the elders and the church:
My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members.

The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.
—Doctrine and Covenants 122: 1, 2.

In Conclusion

Never willingly forfeiting friendship, with regret incurring any man’s enmity, not courting abuse or calumny, but refusing to shrink from it, we desire to go forward in the very path the great God has marked for our feet.

In that spirit we invite all Saints who love the restored gospel to go forward in “the work intrusted to us all.”

And to this church may we say:

We know what Master laid thy keel, What Workmen wrought thy ribs of steel, Who made each mast, and sail, and rope, What anvils rang, what hammers beat, In what a forge and what a heat Were shaped the anchors of thy hope! Fear not each sudden sound and shock, 'Tis of the wave and not the rock; 'Tis but the flapping of the sail, And not a rent made by the gale! In spite of rock and Tempest's roar, In spite of false lights on the shore, Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea! Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee, Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears, Our faith triumphant o'er our fears, Are all with thee—are all with thee! ELBERT A. SMITH.

Questions and Answers

What about the marble company in Colorado, and why isn't it developed as was first intended? Why is not this put on a stewardship basis?

In 1922 there was offered an investment which was thought at the time would not only secure a saving to the church of thousands of dollars. With this intent in mind, F. M. Smith, B. R. McGuire, and Israel Smith, representing the general church, used this opportunity and invested funds of the church which were held at that time admitting of investment.

During 1922 and 1923 some development work was done, but after that the work was delayed until June, 1925, when in order to protect the first investment of the church, already made, F. M. Smith and Albert Carmichael took active part in planning for the development of the quarry. Their official connection with the company is only temporary, until arrangements can be made with men who are qualified to operate the church interests of the enterprise as a stewardship.

Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness. They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.—From Psalm Sixty-five.
Nobility of Soul

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

Relatively speaking, we are prone to shrink from the true and great in life because the price of these things is too high for us. We are willing to content ourselves with commonplace things because they are easily obtained, and they require no sacrifices on our part, no extraordinary expenditures of means or energy, and no stemming of the currents of popular opinion. At best we are far short of the type of men we ought to be. We bow in reverence to the whims and notions of men, because to do otherwise may make us unpopular and bring the torrents of persecution upon us. We content ourselves to become followers and not leaders in the problems of life, because the price we must pay in order to become leaders is too great for us. We constantly ask the question, "What will they say about me if I should act thus?" Why is it that we are so constituted? and why do we not rather ask, "In what way may I be able to raise myself and my fellow men to a higher and better things?" Is it not because we lack the nobility of soul that is so essential to the forward movement of life?

Surely there is room for thought here, and I am going to ask you to go with me into a brief consideration of the things that are necessary to developing and unfolding a nobility of soul. It is evident that we can only evolve that which first has been involved; therefore, if we are to bring the best out of life, we must first put the best into life. I wish to use the term soul in the truest sense here so that it includes the whole man, his spirit and body.

We are so prone to take things as a matter of course that we often fail to think at all seriously about the things that present themselves to us. If we do think of them we usually ask for the common interpretation of men upon them, and then we carefully avoid any expression or idea beyond the common and generally accepted rituals of men. So long as we do this we are going to exclude ourselves from the truth, and we will surely stultify the soul and warp it in the groove of tradition. No one is able to enter into the larger realms of thought and action until he has come to have a profound love for truth. This love will cause him to search out truth for truth's sake, and he will therefore ask, What is truth? rather than, What do men think about it?

After reading Emerson's essay, "The over-soul," something like four years ago, I wrote the following paragraph which will be very fitting here. It reads:

A profound love for the universal and eternally beautiful things of the world will tend to stimulate the spirit of youth and loyalty in the soul of man. God will not, nor cannot, speak to, nor manifest himself through, a cowardly person. It requires strength of character to place man in correspondence with the divine One, so it becomes necessary for me to be able to say no to myself, and regardless of the opinions of men, take up my cross daily. If I was able to hear the voice of the Highest and translate it into terms of brotherly love. He, therefore, whose ear is attuned to the eternal harmonies, is he who will distribute benedictions to a world that would vigorously oppose, and ruthlessly destroy him. When once we are able to come to this place, we will be able to reveal a nobility of soul that will make us akin to the infinite God.

Nobility of soul, let it be remembered, must be revealed in the acts of life, in our generosity of spirit, and in our love for truth and virtue. The noble soul is the one who sees good in all men, and who seeks to appeal to that good and lead it on to higher and nobler purposes. The noble soul is clothed with the spirit of altruism, and in this spirit he goes forth among the children of men seeking to extend their vision and strengthen their spirits so they will come eventually to appreciate the things that make life worth the living.

David exhibited nobility of soul when he entered the camp of King Saul, when Saul was pursuing him, and set the spears in the earth by the head of the jealous king and then departed. He showed to Saul how easily he could have destroyed him if he had desired so to do, but his magnanimous spirit caused him to choose the royal pathway that leads men into the realms of celestial love, and his action shamed the jealous king and he confessed to David that David was superior to him. The youthful David here reveals to us a very striking example of nobility of soul, but there is even a stronger one portrayed in the life of his bosom friend, Jonathan. What an excellent thing it would be if we could learn the lesson that this story holds for us. Jonathan is the legal heir to the throne of Israel, but the prophet Samuel has anointed David to take his place. He knew full well that the earthly splendor he might have enjoyed was going to his friend, and that he would be required to submit to the direction and rule of David, but with the spirit of a hero he only hung the closer, and loved the stronger the man who had supplanted him in his right to the royal throne. Here we have a real exhibition of nobility of soul.

Stephen also gives us a very striking example when he submits to death with a prayer on his lips for those who are stoning the life out of him. No one but a truly noble soul can do this. But if we are to reach the height that is set for us in the example of Christ, this is the very thing we must do. It requires a brave, manly soul to be able to do this, and he who has so mastered himself as to be able to do this is able to walk with the Eternally Great, and to reflect the light of truth for his less enlightened brothers to follow.

We should remember that there are opportunities all around us for the exhibition of nobility of soul, but generally we miss the real thing because we hope to make a display of it. The noble deed must be done spontaneously; it must come naturally and not with a feigned purpose. The small man thinks of station and place as being great, but he who has entered into the divine harmonies realizes that true greatness arises within the soul of man and is revealed in services rendered for which he expects no returns. The privilege of performing the work and rendering the service is ample remuneration for him. Therefore, craving no paltry reward, he gains everything. But man must learn that he must act where he is, and he must be sure that he acts in harmony with the highest and best that is known to him; he must learn that it is best for him to be where he is, because there is so great need of his service in the place where he resides; that if he would enlarge his soul he must do it where he is and not some other place. Emerson says:

... You think paltry places, and the ear loves names of foreign and classic topography. But here we are; that is a great fact, and if we will tarry a little, we may come to learn that here is best. See to it only that thyself is here; and art and nature, hope and dread, friends, angels, and the Supreme Being, shall not be absent from the chamber where thou sittest.

The one thing above all else that should concern us is to be sure that we are here and that we have found ourselves, for he who has found himself has made a wonderful discovery. And he who mines well his own heart and mind will discover untold wealth; and he who does this will develop a strength surpassing his expectation.

Greatness does not consist of a place, nor does nobility consist of position, but both are to be found within the life that is properly developed and poised. Emerson says:

A great man illustrates his place, makes his climate genial in the imagination of men, and its air the beloved element of all delicate spirits. That country is fairest which is inhabited by the noblest minds.

I am sure we can well afford to reflect upon sentiments like this, for in so doing we will discover the pathways to true nobility of soul, and we will come thereby to share the constant communion of the Infinite verities. Herein we are reminded of the great field of opportunity that is opened for the children of men, and the possibilities that are theirs if they will only search out the pathway that will lead them into true nobility of soul.

It is therefore quite evident that the truly noble soul is a heroic soul, and the hero is the one who is not afraid to stand alone if need be, so long as he is assured that he is on the side of right. He is the one who will not stoop to petty and mean things, but who will manfully deport himself under any pressure, and who will grant to his fellow men every privilege that he claims for himself.

The hero is he who, regardless of self or selfish rewards, stands nobly for the right, and who with serene and manly courage will willingly, nobly, and sublimely face the cannon's fire, the gibbet, or the persecution of men, and who will never submit to wrong, nor stoop to do that which is base or ignoble. The true hero will swear to his own hurt, because he would rather suffer any penalty than to violate, in the slightest degree, the principles of absolute justice and equity. He who would be thus endowed must be true to the highest and best there is in him. He must be willing to be made the target for all kinds of abuse from little minds; he must be able to stand alone with God. Emerson says:

But when you have resolved to be great, abide by yourself, and do not try to weakly reconcile yourself to the world. The heroic cannot be the common, nor the common the heroic.

How excellent it would be if we could come to understand that truth and right are far more valuable to us and to the world of mankind in the midst of which we dwell than are position or place.

The noble soul will establish a means of communication between himself and the Infinite One, and he will thus daily acquaint himself with the purest and best methods of dealing with his fellow men, and day by day he will be found instructing them in the ways of peace and life. He will carry into effect the instruction given unto the church as recorded in the closing paragraph of section 38 of the Doctrine and Covenants, which reads: "And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness." What an excellent thing it would be if we could learn this instruction, for then might we well be recognized as being truly wise and noble souls.

May the giver of life and possessor of wisdom give us a clearer vision and enable us to approach more nearly to the realization of the task that is ours than we have been able heretofore to do. Courage, persistency, and patience, coupled with faith, humility, and love will qualify us for the work and make us finally what we ought to be, possessors of noble souls.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Heart of the Nation

The mother has at heart her child’s welfare, the father likewise has plans and dreams for his boy’s or his girl’s fitness for life. Why, then, is not the child the heart of the Nation—a center of thought as it were? From the heart come the good and bad impulses of all human beings. When such impulses are guided and the minds of our youth filled so full of good, noble, and constructive impulses—thoughts of kindness, mercy, and justice to all living creatures—there is little room for thoughts of a cruel or destructive nature. When this guidance is exercised, and only then can we hope to crowd out and eradicate cruelty and crime.

The often-quoted line from George T. Angell’s writings is as true now as ever. He says: “Nearly all the criminals of the future are in our public schools now, and we are educating them. We can mold them now if we will.” To instill into the hearts and minds of the coming generation, humane sentiment—the feeling of kindness and justice to every living creature—educating them in ways of mercy and thoughtfulness for the helpless in the world, will do more to decrease crime than punishment can ever be expected to do.

Doctor William O. Stillman, late president of the American Humane Association, referring to humane education, said: “The quality of the citizenship will certainly improve and eliminate a large percentage of the lawlessness which makes prisons and reformatories necessary and which increase so largely the cost of the maintenance of the Government. This is not an idle theory but a well-demonstrated fact.”

While there has been a steady increase in the growth of humane education all through the United States and its possessions, there is much more to be done in order to obtain the desired results. It is the vital and important duty of each and every one of us to do what we can to make humaneness a part of the regular teaching in the public schools of our country.

The Parent-Teachers Associations—fathers, mothers, and teachers—are a great extent alive to this need of training our children in ways of kindness, but it needs the concerted effort of every one of us to effectually raise the standard of the coming generations and eventually establish a more humane civilization.

“The great advancement of the world throughout all ages is to be measured by the increase of humanity and the decrease of crime.”—M. L. H., Humane Education Press Bureau, Box 144, Copley Square, Boston, Massachusetts.

Invents Wave Meter for Radio Broadcasting

Winfield W. Salisbury, S4 of Iowa City, is responsible for the invention of a new type of wave meter used for measuring waves sent out in radio broadcasting, which is more accurate and sensitive than any previously used, according to authorities. The wave meter used by the W S U I broadcasting station at the present time will measure to tenths of a meter and must be operated in the power room of the station.

The new wave meter is capable of measuring the university wave from the laboratory of the physics building, where it was discovered. It is estimated that it will be possible to measure waves to hundreds of a meter. This is accomplished by reducing the resistance of the meter to a value that seemed impossible a short time ago.

The old type of meter is used in the W S U I broadcasting station to enable the operators to keep the length of the waves at the number of meters which are assigned by the Government.—Daily Iowan.

Winfield W. Salisbury is a former Independence boy, the son of Brother and Sister H. S. Salisbury.

Man’s Condition Determines His Vision

“The state of mind and heart governs capacity to see God or anything else,” Doctor Burris A. Jenkins said in a sermon during the summer of 1925 in the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church.

“Most of us see in life only what we are fitted to see. A man cannot see God if he is a liar or a double crosser in business or fails to pay his debts. He must ring true, be thoroughly genuine, and as none of us is entirely free from dishonesty and insincerity, man can see God only in proportion as he is honest and genuine.

“Doubt exists in the world to-day as to the existence of God and a real order and purpose in this chaos we call life, but the source of this blurred vision lies in our hearts and minds.

“Argumentation will be useless. The existence of God cannot be demonstrated as a theorem in geometry. It is the greatest truths that require no proof. They are sensed, are a part of us, and require no evidence.

“When we purge our lives of dishonesty and insincerity, we will begin to see beauty and harmony all about us, which is God.”—Kansas City Journal, June 1, 1925.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief
On Board the Southern Pacific Train Number 53, en route to Oakland, California, November 5

My last letter to you closed with the young people's convention at Seattle, after a very strenuous week-end for me, and Monday, the 26th, found me as so many Mondays do, rather "let down," and with some lassitude. I sometimes wonder if Monday is so with all church workers. It is a bit likely to be, especially if one's speaking program be full on Sunday. So other than a bit of reading, that forenoon found me doing little, and quite ready to go with Brother A. C. Martin and Sister McDole to see a bit of the business part of Seattle, and up to the top of its skyscraper, the L. C. Smith Building, said to be the highest west of New York, forty-two stories.

Seattle has the reputation of being situated amidst some very picturesque and beautiful surroundings. I had seen little of this; for from the time of reaching Seattle till I left, the distant scenery was shrouded in fogs and mists, and at no time did I see the distant mountains. But that morning the fog had lifted somewhat, and from the Smith Building I saw the city quite advantageously and was quite astonished at the wonderful growth it had made since I had seen it last, both in size and in industry. Since its founding in 1851, it has steadily grown in size and importance. Located on one of the country's most wonderful inland seas, Puget Sound, it has become a port of prime importance to the Pacific Coast, being the gateway for much water transportation to Alaska and the Orient, its docks handling from four to seven million tons of cargo annually. In area it covers nearly a hundred square miles, about thirty-six of which are water—lakes, rivers, canals, sound, etc. Its present population is about 380,000, and it is "aimed that over forty-six per cent of its homes are owned by the occupants. Eighty-four grade schools, eight high schools, and the State University of Washington care for educational activities.

Of course Seattle citizens are boosters, and to them it is the "best in the country." The climate suits them; even the rains fail to bother them. Their parks, boulevards, churches, street railways, all are "the best," and their city water "is as pure as is ever found in natural state." Now what can a poor fellow from Kansas City say to all that? Think of the Mississippi River, the Union Stockyards, and say nothing, I guess.

Seattle claims to be America's healthiest city, with a death rate of 9.78 for 1911-1920, and 10.10 for 1924. The average winter temperature is 41 degrees, the average of summer 62 degrees, while the annual rainfall (precipitation) is 33 inches.

Now are you surprised that I heard some Seattle Saints saying that Zion was not located in the Puget Sound country? Again, for argument I referred them to some of the Colorado or Florida Saints. I propose sometime compiling statistical, political, social, geographical, agricultural, sanitary, industrial, and religious reasons why I think Zion was located in Missouri. It seems I shall have to do it in self-defense.

In any event, Seattle is a splendid, live, bustling city, and I look for good things from the Seattle Saints in the way of church work.

We three joined Brother McDole at Boldt's for lunch; then I was taken to the train, bound for Centralia.

Among others I had met at the young people's convention in Seattle were Brother Carl F. Crum and some others of the Saints at Centralia. And in talking over with them the conditions at Centralia, I decided to call there; so I arranged with Brother Crum to meet me at the depot there at four o'clock, which I did. When we arrived, Brother Crum said he took me to the home of the Wards, where we were for supper, and from where we went to the church, where most of the Saints of Centralia were assembled for the evening meeting.

Knowing that considerable trouble had been stirred up here by a man who for some time had been a malcontent, and after discussing briefly some recent happenings in church affairs, questions were permitted, and for some time "differences" were discussed. Madam Rumor had been doing some pretty work, following the spirit of those who saidism, as some from a distance wanted to hear Zion discussed, for some three fourths of an hour I spoke of Zion and section 42. It was near eleven o'clock when the meeting was dismissed after announcing my subject for the next night, "The social philosophy of Joseph Smith."

I was taken to the home of Brother and Sister John Bankey, where I found a hearty and yet unostentatious welcome, which made me feel quite at home.

The next day, Tuesday, was spent in writing, though at the noon hour, when Brethren Carl F. Crum and Willard Hartnell joined the Bankeys and me at lunch, we discussed for some time the local situation. At night a goodly sized audience greeted me, several of the city officials being present by invitation of and in deference to Sister Jessie Ward, who as city clerk of Centralia has made an enviable record for herself. I felt well in presenting the social philosophy of the Saints, and the attention given me attested the interest of the audience in a live subject.

The next day, Wednesday, the 28th, Brother Carl called for me about nine o'clock, and bidding good-by to my genial hosts, we left the Bankey home for a number of calls before train time: "Will" Boren and family, formerly of "San Barcado;" Brother Shee, an aged brother shut in with a broken leg; Brother Norris Headding and family; Brother Oppelt; and one or two we did not find at home, then to the Wardes just before going to the train. But I must not forget to say that about noon, while in Chehalis, we called at and somewhat hastily inspected the State Training School for Boys, and called upon a lad who was sojourning there for a time.

At the depot we found Sister Crum waiting to bid me good-speed. She will be remembered as the sister of Brother Emery Curtis. So I bade Carl, and Sister Crum, and Centralia good-by, and boarded the train for Portland, to be on hand for the young people's convention of the Portland District.

I was met at the train by Brother H. L. Livingston and taken by him to the home of his mother and himself for the night; and there I found a quiet, hospitable, and comfortable home for the week I spent in Portland.

Next day I found a treat in store for me—the chance to see a portion of the far-famed Columbia River Highway. Of this, more later.

Friday, the 30th, was spent in trying to get caught up with writing, while in the evening was held the first meeting of the convention. A "program" had been placed in my hands by Brother Eli Bronson on my arrival, and I discovered that my sojourn in Portland would be about as busy as had the one in Seattle. In fact from Friday night to Sunday night, or a little over forty-eight hours, I was scheduled for eight addresses or talks. This with visiting, answering questions, etc., quite kept time from dragging.

The convention was a decided success, the attendance throughout being such as to tax the capacity of the church building. It is quite likely that a complete report will be made to the Herald by local correspondents, so details here will be unnecessary. The convention was well organized and moved smoothly as planned, attesting to the close cooperation of local and district officials with department ones. The programs were well balanced, with music of good quality. I always appreciate the assistance given by choir, soloists, instrumentalists, and orchestra.

All day Sunday the space in the auditorium was crowded, while splendid attention was given me as I discoursed on Zion and her problems. Here as elsewhere I found the interest in the studies of 'Zion's Children' roused toward the land of promise. When after the close of the Sunday night service the usual good-bys were said, the general opinion of the tired but happy Saints seemed to be that “Eli” and Brother Barker and their corps of willing helpers and workers had planned and ably carried through so fine a program that “more” was wanted. This was expressed in the unanimous vote to have a young people’s convention next year. I found myself a bit weary; but the many expressions of appreciation made to me caused me to hope that I had encouraged and fortified some of the Saints, perhaps many, and I was happy, for the idea has been oft with me that perhaps one of my “jobs” is to encourage and enthuse the Saints with greater hopes for Zion redeemed and stewardships established. And I could not but believe that the young people’s convention of the Portland District had given distinct impetus to the cause, the Zionic movement among Latter Day Saints—a cause which lies close to the heart of all true Latter Day Saints.

Monday, especially a Monday following such a strenuous program as we had just participated in, is likely to be somewhat “blue”; but Monday, the 2d of November, did not prove to be so for me; for not long after breakfast Sister Livingston, answering a knock at the door, found a police sergeant there who said he was looking for Frederick M. Smith. And, of course, being one who-preaches obedience to properly constituted authority, I had to go with the officer. And it was nearly midnight when he finally released me. As he took me away from Sister Livingston’s in his car, he said that there were two others he wanted to “pick up” on the same charge, so he went to a certain house where he got Brother Murray and Brother Walter Dancer. Then he took us some miles farther to the building in which we were to be confined for the day. It was the building in which the Pacific International Livestock Exposition is held annually, and the show was on. The sergeant, Brother A. F. Clement, and Brother Murray, who, I afterwards learned is another policeman, took Walter (an early playmate of mine) and me in hand, and showed us “the show.” And we had a good time, too. We saw many “blue bloods” of the equine, bovine, swine, and sheep varieties (mules and goats, too), and chickens, doves, etc. I saw a well-known Kansas City horsewoman carry off some blue and red ribbons for driving horses; and we saw jumpers, and gaiters, and ponies, etc., to our hearts’ content. All these with county displays of produce and the usual exhibits of arts and industry, quite converted “blue Monday” into a day long to be remembered, and greatly enjoyed, even the ride back through the fog, with Mrs. Huntley at the wheel.

Rested by the change Monday’s experiences had afforded, Tuesday forenoon I again bent to the task of writing, and until about half past one in the afternoon, when I was called by Sister Verna Huntley of Beaverton, and the afternoon and evening were spent in riding and visiting with members of the family of Page Lyman, who was a brother (deceased) of Sister Alice E. Cobb, my wife’s mother and widely known in the church, as the family for the occasion gathered in the Beaverton home of Mr. and Sister Huntley. It was a pleasant occasion and much enjoyed, even the ride back through the fog, with Mrs. Huntley at the wheel, and the car almost saturated.

Fogs seem to be no novelty in Portland, any more than in Seattle; for most of the time I was there the fog was hanging near, sometimes quite thickly, and seldom high. And I also had opportunity to learn why Oregonians are supposed to grow webs between their toes.

Wednesday, the 4th, was spent largely in writing, but an hour or so in the afternoon in conference with Brother J. A. Gillen of the Twelve. He had just come from California on his way into the northern part of the field, and there were a number of things I had “saved up” for this conference. I had remained in Portland over Wednesday for the purpose of seeing him, and we had much to discuss. I found him happy in the work and greatly encouraged with the conditions he had found at the points where he had visited.

About half past five Wednesday afternoon, I bade good-bye to my genial hostess, her sons and daughters-in-law, and was taken by “Hank” to the home of Brother and Sister Young for dinner and a visit before going to the station to entrain for San Francisco. Brother Gillen was with me. In Brother Young I found a fellow “camera-nut.” You may be sure that in inspecting each of the other’s camera, discussing prints, negatives, slides, lenses, actinophotometers, and other photographic paraphernalia “Claud” and I found much to visit about. He and I had a good time, and the rest seemed to also, so it was a delightful evening.

About nine o’clock we left the Young home, as I thought, for the station; but it seems that Claud was under orders from Sergeant Clement to take us to the police station. He did so, and we enjoyed what to us was quite an unusual evening. Some years ago as a student in the sociological department of the University of Kansas I had taken a course in criminology, specializing in juvenile delinquency; and at that time and since I have visited jails when opportunity afforded. Under the direction of Brother Clement’s guidance we visited every department of the police station, from identification and records bureau to target range.

After meeting Brother Clement, he took us to the third floor, where we passed the “booking” desk. Around it was a group of placid-faced Orientals. The police had just raided some Chinese gambling dens, and they and their friends were arranging bail for the arrested ones. I learned that they always do, never permitting one of their number to remain in jail if bail is accepted. Passing the desk we took a look into the “hold over” where “drunks” are thrown in for the night. What a sight! Men in drunken stupor, huddled together, lying on the hard floor clothed just as they had been taken from the street—lying without pillows or covering. One, a young man, aroused by the switching on of the light and the grating of the heavy lock as we entered, raised on his elbow, and blinking at us babbled in the thick incoherence of the inebriate. In a bath and “dousing” room we saw two men, one old, one young, heavily sleeping in the hot room on the floor, with newspapers spread out under them and coats rolled up for pillows. These were homeless men who had come to the station seeking a place to sleep, and had been allowed to the “hold-over” as “privileges.”

Wednesday night was the family for the occasion gathered in the Beaverton home of Mr. and Sister Huntley.

As we passed the “booking desk” on our return, the silent Orientals had gone—back to their gambling, doubtless—and at the desk were two young men who looked strangely out of place there. They were, we learned later, college boys, who under a misguided sense of “fun” had created a disturbance at a moving picture theater and were having their first (and we hope last) experience at a police station. We passed into the “jail,” a two-decked arrangement of cells where a hundred and fifty prisoners can be kept at once, two in a cell. Here we saw a number of “well-to-do” young men who had come to grief by driving automobiles while intoxicated—a serious offense against the law in Oregon. Then we saw the padded cells for those undergoing mental aberrations and the specially arranged detention rooms for “hopheads,” or drug addicts.

“Is this class of criminals increasing?” we asked Sergeant Clement. He smiled.

“Yes,” said he, “especially among the young—high school students, etc.”

“How do they start on the road to becoming drug fiends?” was asked him.

“Usually through the cigarette habit,” said he. “Wanting to get more ‘kick’ out of smoking than the ordinary cigarette and they begin in that way. I have been treated with a mild form of opium. This forms the habit, and soon there is another ‘hop head,’ or drug addict, and sooner or later we get them.”

A visit to the female department of the jail and a short chat with the matron elicited the information that “bootlegging” was furnishing an increasing number of additions to the thin wallet.

We spent some minutes in the finger print and record department briefly having explained how criminals are identified, how stolen watches and autos are traced, etc. Then we started to leave; but the sergeant suggested we wait to see the “wagon” come in. He referred to the patrol wagon. We could hear its clanging bell. So we did, going to where it backs in to discharge its load. It had, besides an officer, two “forced” passengers; one a neatly dressed young man picked up as a “vag” (vagrant), and an eastern man who might be termed “gloriously drunk,” for he was grimacing, at least apparently happy, as he was dragged, his useless legs dangling, by the two officers and deposited in a limp heap on the elevator to be lifted up “to the third,” where he would be booked and thrown into the dark room where we had seen the other “drunks” wallowing.

The driver of the “wagon,” putting his head through a door said, “Wagon!” and repeated after some one on the inside, “Third and Ankeny.”

“Get in,” said Sergeant Clement, so Brothens Gillen and Young and I took our first ride in a police hurry-up wagon. In driving in various cities, I have frequently scurried to the curb to give clearance to the clanging, rushing patrol wagon, and I rather enjoyed the reverse sensation of seeing autos scurry out of our way as we rushed down upon them. We must have given one fellow quite a fright as we with grinding brakes stopped just short of hitting him, as he failed because of his speed to stop for us. But around corners and down streets we dashed, and at the “box” at Third and Ankeny found two officers waiting with two more “vags.” The sergeant took charge of the prisoners, the other officers resumed their beats, and we rushed clanging back to the station.

“One more job,” said the sergeant, so we went again with him “to the Third,” past the desk where the last two “vags” were booked, back to the cell where the two college boys were. They were taken out by the sergeant, and we all went into another room, where the sergeant gave those boys a kindly but severe “lecturing.” The boys were quite sure they had a serious blunder, and would profit by the lesson. And we had the satisfaction of seeing the two lads, quite penitent and humble, taken away by a good friend who had got up out of bed to help the boys out of trouble. As they made their way back to the cell, where the two college boys were, we were on taken by the sergeant, and we all went out in the clean and comfortable berth, pillows beneath it, a few moments walked as in a police hurry-up wagon. Perhaps we had made a serious blunder, who in a misguided search for pleasures had sought surcease from sorrow in the brief paralyzing of the senses which accompanies intoxication; and of those inscrutable Orientals packed into the dismal quarters in the vile building we had sought surcease, we all felt that we saw two lads going away from the station who were not likely to come back again.

We had seen already quite a bit of “how the other half lives,” but we were to have opportunity to see more in a few moments; for the sergeant said, “Would you like to see a joss house?”

Of course we would, so into a large, dismal-looking building across from the police station we went. I guess we must have been in the heart of Portland’s Chinatown. And I found that as we climbed a dingy, dark, and much worn stairs we were in quite different conditions from any I have previously been in. It was an experience so unusual that I am at a loss to describe it. Those walls through which we passed to go up the stairs seemed to be the border line of a strange country. How Brother Clement found his way around, I do not know; but we went through strange “community kitchens,” used in common by a large number of roomers or inhabitants of this strange building. The stoves were like the picnic stoves now found in so many parks, built of stone on stone foundations. The open stoves emitted smoke and soot, creating a dinginess and blackness in the “kitchen” quite in consonance with the rank, heavy, and to us strange odor, a composite of odors from several sources quite compelling. (Sergeant O’M.) But seemed to know who we were and we perched into strange-looking dishes, and “cupboards” alive with cockroaches and distinctly unappetizing. We saw solemn-faced Orientals cooking their “mulligan,” and passed long rows of doors into two-decked bedrooms, ventilated only by small “windows” or latticed openings in the hallway, many of them tightly closed. Behind those doors were Chinese; individuals and families.

We finally came to the place for which the sergeant was looking—a joss house. It is a sort of club room, social hall, and temple combined. An altarlike decoration, massive and elaborately carved and once bright with gilt decorations and coverings, but now dingily in keeping with the rest of the house, stood in one end of the room. High up to the ceiling in the other end was another gilt-covered, carved object like an inverted altar, from which hung some sallow-like drapes. Around this wall stood heavily carved chairs, and in them lounged some four or five Chinese. In front of the altar stood a long table on which we were stern newspapers. At least we took them for newspapers, for in shape and size they looked it. But the Chinese characters with which they were covered conveyed no news to us.

Back through the long, narrow hallway flanked by the silent tightly closed sleeping quarters and through several kitchens we made our way down two flights of dark stairways, and we were again on the streets, back, shall I say into civilization? Well, we were on the streets of Chinatown in Portland; and Portland, like other American towns, is supposed to be civilized. As we walked away from those grim walls, behind which we had for a few moments walked as in a strange world, and laughingly chatted of our short experiences there, I found myself wondering what weird tales those walls could tell us, permitted to speak, what tragedies develop behind them, what Chinese visions and unfoldings, and how much or how little of pleasure and higher ideals they see.

Saying “au revoir” to the genial sergeant, we three went on to the station, where Brother Gillen got his baggage to go back with Brother Young, and I to seek the sleeper for Oakland. I was soon in my bunk, meditating for a while and think over the novel experiences of the evening. I have often found myself disposed to grumble over the narrow quarters and cramped facilities of a Pullman berth; but as I lay there with electric lamp over my head and permitted to speak, what tragedies develop behind those walls, what Chinese visions and unfoldings, and how much or how little of pleasure and higher ideals they see. What a far leap from the scenes of the police station and the joss house to the ideals of Zion! And I feel that I can go to the next young people’s convention, at Oakland, whither I now am en route, with a deeper appreciation of the ideals I shall try to hold before the Saints once more—a people moving into better social relations because of being in better tune with God. May Zion soon be an accomplished fact, a realized ideal!

As I write I am somewhere near the boundary line between Oregon and California, on the scenic Shasta Route of the Southern Pacific, the “route of a thousand wonders,” with wooded hills and dales, and valleys through which the mountain rivers sing on their way to the sea, at times turning wheels for power development, at other times serving for irrigation purpose, with snow-capped peaks rising majestically above the horizon—a beautiful region, where Nature seems to work on a lavish scale; yet I find my heart turning towards Zion and her people, and my thoughts occupy themselves with the problems of our yet unfinished tasks, and I long to sweep aside for the moment the veil that drapes the future, and glimpse the developments of the morrow, to see how long before I may see her beauty unfolded. But perhaps it is better to work on with that veil unparted, stimulated by our ideals, responding with our best efforts to the call to liberate Zion so that she shall be able to put on her beautiful garments, from which shall radiate the glory of God. From contemplating our ideals we gather courage and labor on towards our goal.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.
Home-Coming Enjoyed at Runnels

Runnels, Iowa, November 15.—The home-coming at Runnels has been recorded on the pages of history as one of the best ever held in the branch. It came at the culmination of the Graceland endowment campaign, and we almost reached our goal, lacking only $28, which will yet be subscribed.

The day was cloudy, with a little snow falling and a cold northwest wind blowing. Inside the church, however, there was warmth and cheer, and everyone was happy.

District President Henry Castings was the speaker at eleven o'clock. He was suffering from a sore throat and influenza, but the Lord abundantly blessed him and manifested his power in a marvelous manner.

Brother Castings stated that this service meant much to him, because it was here that he first heard the gospel and obeyed it. It was here that he offered his first public prayer, gave his first testimony, preached his first sermon, and first took charge of a Sunday school. His first tithing was paid here, and he borrowed the money to pay it. He was in business in the town for several years and has many friends who are part of the faith. His sermon was based on the conditions in Enoch's day, in which he called the Saints to emulate the example set before us in their manner of living and thereby have Zion to-day.

He contrasted the conditions of Enoch's people with those in the Book of Mormon as recorded by Alma, showing that in the latter case there were poor among them, while in the first case there were none. The power of the Holy Spirit carried the message to the hearts of the people, both in commendation and in condemnation.

A sacramental service was held at half past two, after a sumptuous dinner at half past twelve had been served by the sisters of the branch.

The Spirit was enjoyed all during the sacramental service. One lady, a nonmember, said afterwards that she had never hardly kept her eyes on the minister. Her husband, also a nonmember, subscribed to the endowment fund, as did two other men, one giving $25.

At this meeting Brother Tordoff related that he could have been given a mission nearer home recently, on account of his wife's health, but because of his love for the Saints in the Des Moines District he had decided to remain with us. He stated that his work with the men of the district had been very pleasant and enjoyable. This brother has won our hearts.

The evening service was begun at seven o'clock so that all might reach home in good time. Doctor G. F. Hull was the speaker. His sermon was given in the power of the Holy Spirit, and the worthiness of the Saints was the matter under consideration. He spoke of the experiences that encouraged in any spot a minister, calling our attention to the experience of Moses on Mount Horeb; of Abraham and the offering of his son; of Joseph Smith and his vision in the New York woods, remarking that the spot upon which these experiences were had were dear in memory to those men.

He told the story of the painting entitled, "The last supper." How that the painter spent many years finding faces that would look the part. Finally, finding a young man whose face seemed to resemble his conception of the face of Christ, he put that into the picture. Then, after several years' search, he found in an Italian prison a face that would look the part of Judas. As he painted those features, one day the man said to him, "Have I not met you before somewhere?" But the painter said, "No, I do not know you." Finally the criminal told him that he was the young man who had furnished the face that was spent. In this story our brother depicted how one might work faithfully for a time, but finally do as the young man had done and lose the spirit of the work. He showed that being a member of the church of Jesus Christ and a Latter Day Saint were two different stages in individual development. We heard that selfishness was the principal factor that hindered that development, and that love for material things caused them to get in the way and defeat the end that is to be accomplished. His personal wish was that if anything came in his way that would defeat the purpose sought, he hoped God would take it away from him. His pathetic statement regarding those who had given in the endowment drive, "reaching way down beyond where there was anything," brought tears to the eyes and happiness to the hearts of his hearers who had made a similar contribution.

We were assured that when the temple is built there will be mixed with the mortar and stone of the building the tears and life blood of the people of this church.

This day will be long remembered by the Saints as one in which much wise counsel was given, and warning as well.

Brother Tordoff will begin a series of meetings Monday night. We are anticipating a good harvest.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

November 9.—On October 25 Brother Christensen preached here at eleven o'clock, and on her Heart Case preached in the evening. Brother Christensen preached Monday and Tuesday nights. Their sermons were pertaining to Zion and Graceland and were interesting.

District President F. E. Dillon is back home after a pretty thorough canvass of the district, and preached an interesting sermon at eleven o'clock yesterday. Brother Samuel Simmons preached in the evening.

A meeting on November 1 the Saints of this branch subscribed more than their quota on the Graceland endowment fund, and they are still working.

San Antonio, Texas

November 9.—The prayer and sacramental meeting on the first Sunday was well attended notwithstanding the inclement weather. A marked degree of the Spirit was felt in the prayers and testimonies. The committee which was appointed to look after the Graceland endowment fund have been very busy sending out letters and cards to the scattered members and distributing cards to the members in the city. They have announced a musical program to be given November 13, when a silver collection will be taken to swell the fund. The morning of the first Sunday, at the close of Sunday school, Sister Flossie Waite, chairman of the committee, gave a talk on the purpose of the endowment fund, explaining why everyone should lend his support to Graceland. The talk was to the point and well taken. She was followed by the pianist, who gave a musical number. In the evening hour Brother E. L. Henson was the speaker, Graceland being the theme. He made a forceful argument which I am sure had its weight with all who heard him.

Last Sunday the speakers were Pastor T. J. Jett, jr., and Brother R. E. Miller, the farmer occupying in the morning and the latter in the evening. The theme was stewardships. The speakers were each led by a great degree of the Holy Spirit, which was felt by those in attendance. We feel that we are fortunate in having such able defenders of the cause of Christ.

A Halloween party under the auspices of the Sunday school was given at the home of Sister Pauline Allnutt, where an enjoyable time was spent. The committee left nothing undone that would add to the entertainment of the guests. The house was beautifully decorated with yellow and black and jack o' lanterns and other symbols of Halloween that made the scene very effective. The refreshments consisted of ginger bread, pop, and apples.

The Relief Society has been revived, with Sister Stella Jackson as president and Brother Theodore Dorow as vice president. It has been discontinued through the summer months. The attendance is improving, and the programs are entertaining. Last week there was a mock trial by a kangaroo court, which was amusing and entertaining. This week there was a talk by Brother R. E. Miller, followed by a musical contest. The pianist played a line of ten different songs.
songs, and the one who gave the name of all the songs correctly was awarded a prize—a box of candy. Ione Lerow was the lucky one.

The Sunday school has improved in attendance since they have been putting on special features. Two of the boys, Gifford Edwards and Marshall Richardson, have been furnishing music. Last Sunday Miss Gracia Robinson's class gave a nice program. The school has gone over the top with the Christmas offering, the goal being $125.

The branch was to part with one of its staunch members, Brother James Johnson, who has gone Zionward. But we knew that our loss will be the gain of the branch where he locates.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

November 7.—The Saints here were fortunate in having Brothers B. E. Brown, M. A. McConley, C. H. Rich, and Curtis here the last month, or part of it.

We were glad to have with us also Brother F. Henry Edwards the first of the month in the interest of the Grace-land endowment fund. There were thirty-three present at the meeting, and we went over the top in our quota in about thirty minutes, showing we have a bunch of loyal Graceland supporters here. Many have expressed their desire to see the fund oversubscribed at least $50,000.

We take this means of thanking the Saints for the hearty cooperation in the drive in which we oversubscribed our quota of $300 by quite a little, and there are still several to hear from.

The night of October 12 I awoke in the middle of the night singing the following song to the tune of "Consecration":

Hark to the Spirit, oh my people,
Hear the words for you to-day.
Be not discouraged or disheartened
By what other people say.
Hark to my servant who is the leader
Of my church on earth to-day.
Hand the admission given,
And from my church turn not away.

This is to me but another confirmation of the work, and that God is pleased with his people and with the program into which we are entering.

May God continue to add his blessings to his people, that we may all be successful stewards, is our prayer.

W. E. ROGERS.

Kentucky-Tennessee District Conference

Semiannual conference of the Kentucky-Tennessee District was held at the High Hill Branch, near Lynnville, Kentucky, Saturday, October 31, and Sunday, November 1. By reason of the late rains and snow the roads were in very bad condition, and the attendance was not as large as had been expected at the opening session.

The conference was called to order by the district president, Curtis L. Ross. After song and prayer he was selected to preside over the conference, with Elder J. Charles May to act as his assistant. Brother P. B. Bowlin was selected to act as secretary, and Elder May as chorister. Branch and ministerial reports were called for and read, followed by the reading of the Bishop's agent's report.

Preaching Saturday night was by Elder J. Charles May. A very fine program was enjoyed Sunday morning, the good Spirit being enjoyed by all present. At the morning preaching service the subjects of consecration and stewardships were presented by Elders J. Charles May and Curtis L. Ross, after which several expressed loyalty to the program of the church by signing up pledge cards to assist in the great drive for the endowment funds.

"Why I am a Latter Day Saint" was the theme of the afternoon service, which was participated in by practically all present giving their reasons. The conference closed with the evening preaching service by Elder May, who remained with the High Hill Saints and friends to continue services throughout the week.

The spirit of unity prevailed in the business sessions, also in the prayer and preaching services, and a disposition was manifested on the part of all to work in harmony with the program of the church.

P. B. BOWLIN, Secretary.

Sacrifice Is Surely Sweet

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, November 12.—It has been some time since I wrote to the church papers, but I feel I am still in the faith of our fathers. Though we are tried as by fire, our faith put to the acid test, yet we rejoice in the gospel more as the years go by.

This is a time of sacrifice, but oh, the joy of that sacrifice! We give our surplus, but that is only the law of nature. All natural things give their surplus for the use of others. But when it comes to sacrifice, that is what brings joy to our hearts. For instance: One poor sister in Independence who gave all of her savings to the church to help toward the purchase of a new piano in the school, the next day many others did the same.

This is a time of sacrifice. Brothers Muceus and Ruch in Norway

(A letter to the Quorum of Twelve.)

Inclosed you will find my statistical report for the month of September. My work during the month has been divided between Porsgrund and Skien. Skien is a town of about 19,000 population and is about five miles from Porsgrund. There are good train connections as well as an auto-bus line between the two towns, which makes it comparatively easy for us living in Porsgrund to do missionary work in Skien and be at home every night, too.

I have often had a desire to hold meetings in Skien, but for some reason or other that desire has not been realized until recently. Two of our members (a young married couple) moved this summer from Kragero to Skien, and their home has been opened to us to hold meetings. We have been going there one night a week this month and inviting in neighbors and friends, endeavoring to get them interested in our message, but we find that at this place as well as elsewhere we are met with a great deal of prejudice, indifference, and lack of interest on the part of the people. However, we are going to continue our efforts for a while, and we hope that in the near future we may be able to rent a suitable hall there and advertise the meetings well and have a much better attendance than we could possibly hope to have in a private home.

Brother Mucenas was here the first ten or twelve days of the drive. He asked me to come to him and said in his New Testament address, as he expressed it, that he could give him the courtesy of doing all the preaching while he was here, as I knew he was planning on leaving for Bsn, to be gone some weeks holding meetings. That is one reason why my total of sermons for the month is as low as it is. Sometimes when we meet in private homes for meetings it is proposed that we have a conversation meeting instead of a preaching service. This gives all present the opportunity of asking questions and conversing on points that are not clear to them. These meetings often prove beneficial and interesting.

On the first day of September, Brother Mucenas baptized a man in Forsgren who has been attending our meetings more or less for about twenty years. He at last made up his mind to unite with us. A few others are manifesting some interest here, and we trust they, too, will soon be numbered among us.

V. FORSGREN, NORWAY, September 30.

The Work Moving in Eastern Kansas

BLUE RAPIDS, KANSAS, November 18.—Just a few lines to let you know I am busy about my Father's business. I began a series at this place October 15 and closed November 15, the night of the close of the drive. The work was represented here in the past by Heman C. Smith, I. N. Roberts, W. S. Fender, C. W. Prettyman, and Brother Shoot, all of whom have passed away. Other men of the ministry, too numerous to mention, have made their contributions to the spreading of the gospel. We were made to know that, all pulling together, there are brighter days ahead for this branch.

Last Sunday two were baptized. One is the superintendent of the Marshall county farm, and the other is the daughter of Brother and Sister Henry Schriner. Brother Schriner, or "Dutch," as he likes to be called, and is known by all in these parts, was surely made to rejoice. This makes all his children members of the church.

We were blessed to a marked degree in presenting our message and were loath to bring the services to a close. But we had promised Brother B. F. Jackson, who is the president of the branch, that we would return sometime after the first of January and hold follow-up meetings. We have some very faithful members here, and some who hope to win back to the fold. One sister paid $40 tithing, and her invalid husband tithed his potatoes and gave $2.50. Our branch has more than raised its quota for the endowment of Graceland College.

One sister who works at weaving carpets and rugs paid her pledge in cash, and after the Saturday evening services, when Brother Lewis of Graceland and Brother Twonibly were here, she was anxious to do all she could so doubled the amount paid at first.

Last Monday evening we met at the church for a farewell social, Saints and friends bringing well-filled baskets. We had singing and a general good time, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. I was called on to give some of my experiences as a minister and was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, which were sent to the loved ones at home. I shall always remember the kindness of the Saints and friends of this place. I sold one man, not of the church, ten dollars worth of books, the man who was baptized last Sunday. His name is David Donahue. The missionaries will remember him gladly.

Mrs. Donahue is not with us in name, but we think it will be only a short time until she, too, will take the step. These are good, honorable people, who will assist in the building up of Zion in these parts.

Brother Ward Johnson and wife are missed from here. They were known as good workers.

Anaconda, Montana

Elder George W. Thorburn, district missionary, visited this branch and held a series of meetings beginning October 3, on the subject of stewardships. The attendance was good, and many profited by the visit, as they were interested. Much good was done.

Pastor Helstrom and Brother Fred Kendall have, during the past month, been preaching on the social teachings of Christ, stewardships, and the Graceland College endowment. We believe the Saints have been aroused and are enthusiastic about the future social prospect of the church. To this date, November 3, donations given thus far for the Graceland endowment demonstrate that the willingness on the part of the Saints to give is whole hearted. Those who seem quite unable respond heartily.

All seem anxiously engaged in this great cause.

Port Huron, Michigan

November 17.—Again has been demonstrated to the church the real value of the proper functioning of the various departments of the church. The Department of Women in Port Huron have worked hard for the last several weeks, and the final accomplishment brought them a big return in the proceeds of a rummage sale. The sisters made a complete canvass of the stores of the business district, calling on the merchants, who rewarded their calls by making donations worth while. The week of the sale there were two other sales going on, and our women made $267 clear: a very worth-while accomplishment.

Following close on the heels of their seniors, the Temple Builders put on a celebrated "chicken" supper. The tickets were going very slowly, and prospects were for a small crowd till the hour for serving arrived, and then the crowd came in. When the "remnants" were gathered up, they lacked the twelve baskets, as they had been cleaned out of house and home. This adventure netted the circle $66, and gave rise to more confidence in being able to put over an undertaking of this kind by the junior department. Both of these departments are busy preparing for the annual bazaar, to be held during the early part of November.

Among the recent visitors to our church, we are pleased to note the visit of Elder William I. Fligg on October 21. His sermon was well received, and the comments made show its effect on his audience. Elder Fligg began his missionary work in this city and district, so Port Huron never has had a warm welcome for him, and he will ever be a member of the Port Huron family of Saints. Elders D. T. Williams and E. J. Gleazer, of the Twelve, visited us the 2d and 3d of the month, speaking at Croswell on the 2d and at Port Huron on the 3d in the interest of Graceland endowment. Their visit was well received, and with their help both of these places went "over the top" in a big way. With this starter, other branches could not help but do likewise.

During the first two weeks of the month, Elder G. T. Richards and myself made a complete tour of the district. We visited each branch and received a hearty response from them in the interest of the big task for Zion. This morning mail brings in the good news of the branches, reporting most of them over the top. Several branches have not made their final report, but when all is in it looks as though Eastern Michigan District will show close to $1,500 over. This in spite of the backward fall weather, as many of the farmers have not their beans and sugar been in. Thousands of bushels of potatoes have frozen in the ground.

Never in my experience of twenty-one years in the church have I seen the spirit of sacrifice as now. Most of the branches will go over their quota, and some of them will fall short because of not understanding their work. Many will make up these deficits, which will offset the shortages and put the district ahead. Many find excuses for not giving in, not being in sympathy with the program of the church. Sometimes I think our people have been converted to baptism only, and now we will have to start over and convert them to Zion. But as a whole we find many true, honest-hearted Saints, willing to sacrifice to the last dollar for the church.

The winter coming finds us busy on the basement of the new church at Mortonville. The Morton Salt Company has donated two lots for a church there, there being no church in that vicinity. We have several families in that part of the city, and all are hard at work in getting this started. The nonmembers are assisting in a big way, and prospects point to an early construction, “built with your hands.”

Matthew W. Liston.

Spokane, Washington

The young people’s convention has passed into history, and like all good things it has left a desire to have another. A recommendation was passed for another gathering next year.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was the principal speaker, and it is needless for me to report that we enjoyed each sermon. All who have heard our brother know we have heard some real preaching.

I want to say that stewardships will be on the increase in this district, if what you hear can be depended on, for about everyone was ready to go.

Spokane Branch has gone over the top about fifty per cent and is still going.

Brother Ellis is nursing a sprained knee, but expects to be on his way in a few days.

A short time back President Smith stopped long enough to say hello. He made a short talk at the Religio, bade us good-by and good luck, and was on his way to the western coast.

East Los Angeles Grows

The work is quite young, and the East Los Angeles Branch, like other new places, has had its trials and its ups and downs. But things now are moving in the right direction, and everyone is working for the advancement of the church. These faithful Saints that stood firm when things looked blue and discouraging are now made glad by the fruitage that has been gathered in the past few weeks, and in harmony with the promises of God their faith has been rewarded. This is only another testimony of the goodness of God and his promises to those who do his will.

About the middle of September the district missionary, Brother P. R. Burton, was invited to come with the large district tent and hold a series of missionary meetings, to which he agreed, and in due time the tent was located in a new part of town and made comfortable, with good seats for about one hundred and sixty-five people.

Brother T. W. Williams at this time was still in California, and because of the fact that he had been the one who first established the work in East Los Angeles and had many friends in that part of the city, Brother Burton invited him to assist in holding these meetings. The first night of the meetings will be long remembered by the people of that part of the city. Brother Williams was the speaker, and the tent was crowded with interested listeners, many of them nonmembers. At the close of the first week Brother Williams left for the East, and many felt that he had made a mistake in so doing.

Brother Burton continued preaching the plain principles of the gospel and visiting the homes of the Saints and also the nonmembers. The result was that the interest continued to grow, and several were baptized. But the best results were that the Saints were encouraged, and to-day are standing squarely behind the church and its program. Thus they are gathering the fruits of their labors.

As the work developed, it was decided to buy a lot and build a new church home. A splendid lot has been purchased, and plans are being drawn for a new church, and the work is moving forward according to the program of the general church.

Brother Lumm is the branch president and is a splendid spiritual man, well supported by the various departments. The Department of Women is under the supervision of Sister Furley and is doing some splendid work, several nonmembers taking an active part in the women’s work.

The branch has erected the tent on the back part of the church lot and is holding forth there till they have the new church ready to move into. As one sees the little tots gathering to the tent on Sunday morning for Sunday school, one is reminded of the saying: “Israel, to your tents,” and our hearts are made glad.

Saint Mary’s, Ohio

November 2.—The Saints here are in good spirits because of the fact that we have been fortunate in buying and paying for a lot in a favorable spot upon which to erect our church. This lot cost us approximately $350, $105 of which was donated by the Department of Women. The money coming through this department was earned through earnest prayer and effort, holding markets and bake sales and serving supper. The remainder came through the general church fund. Now we are looking forward to the time when we may see the foundation laid for our church home.

On October 29 and 30 we had with us Apostle Roy S. Budd. His presence was very much appreciated, but due to the inclement weather only a few were present the first night. The second night saw quite a mixed audience. This was the regular Religio night, with a drive on for attendance. The Religio has been divided into two parts, the winning side to be entertained by the losing side. After the representation for each side was counted, the time was given to Brother Budd, and we listened to a wonderful sermon. Many strangers expressed their appreciation of hearing him.

Prior to Brother Budd’s coming, Sister Blanche Edwards was with us for one night. Her lecture was very interesting to all.

Brother Halb came on sacrament Sunday and spent two nights helping prepare the Saints for stewardship.

We now have but one more night for the Religio contest, and all are working earnestly. Many strangers who never were in the hall before have come to these meetings. Last Friday night we had an attendance of ninety-three. We hope to work some good through this department.

Minnie Hager

Logan, Iowa

November 15.—I am truly elated over the good news that was in the last issue of the Herald, and I hope by the next issue that we will be able to give the Graceland College yell for a complete victory for Graceland and the endowment. We went over the goal line in nearly every instance. Good end runs, center smashes, and continuous over the top passes did the work. I have almost made up my mind to take a course in Graceland College yet. I wonder if there is any age limit. We have had bad weather nearly every Sunday since the program was announced, but it didn’t stop us. Brother C. J. Smith was with us last Sunday, and preached for us Monday evening, also Tuesday, and did some soliciting with the committee. Our quota of $1,524, for a small branch seemed large, but we are going to beat it.

We have at present $1,400, and quite a number to hear from, and some have agreed to give who did not want to sign a card. We have had financial troubles in this section of the country; had three bank failures in our little city, so it has made it hard for some, but there has been a splendid response in almost every instance. Then, too, we built our basement and other improvements, which will cost us in the neighborhood of $1,200. We are thankful for the loyalty of the Saints.
The Saints' Herald for November 25, 1925

Moral from bank failures: The church is the safest and best depository, after all.

In this campaign I mailed out over twenty letters to some of our numbers that are isolated, and I am just beginning to receive a response. I wrote to a good sister, a former member of our branch, but she had made her contribution to another branch near where she lives. She inclosed a card with one dollar for baby Arthur M. J. Baby Arthur says he wants to go to Graceland, where his mamma and "daddy" want; says his mamma wants him to be a preacher, but his "daddy" wants him to play football. It's agreed he can do both. He says he is twenty-seven inches tall and weighs twenty pounds and hopes some day to be a bigger preacher than I am. Here is hoping that he achieves, and we feel sure he will. If anyone can guess who this little "tot" is, I will add a dollar to his pledge so that he will be sure of Graceland. Who will be the first to guess? Am happy in this work, and the future never looked brighter for Zion's progress to me.

Gray's Harbor Branch

ABERDEEN, WASHINGTON, November 9.—The great work of our Master is receiving new life in this branch. All of the services are having increased interest and attention.

A number of our people attended the young people's convention at Seattle and had the pleasure of hearing President F. M. Smith. He gave the Saints of this part new life, or a new interest in the work.

The branch is losing a number of its members. Brother Paul Fishel is leaving for Florida. Brother and Sister J. E. Phillips and Sister Ina Silver are leaving for their home in Louisiana.

The Saints here pledged their quota for the Graceland endowment.

A missionary campaign by Brother A. C. Martin has been arranged here, and all are optimistic as to results.

Flint, Michigan

Of course, the all-important subject these days is the endowment fund drive, and it is pleasing to note that Flint, with a quota of $2,800, has gone over the top. Our total at this writing is over $23,500.

District Missionary John R. Grice spent one week with us, preaching two sermons in each of our churches, beginning at the Niles Avenue church on Monday and continuing at the Jane Street church Wednesday.

On Sunday, College Day, the endowment drive began, and at the close of a city-wide rally at the Newell Street church in the evening we were within five hundred dollars of our quota. Elder Grice gave us some wonderful sermons. On November 4 two of the quorum of twelve, E. J. Gleazer and D. T. Williams, were with us, at which time pledges were made putting us over the top. Pledges are still coming in, and we feel that the results are very gratifying in view of the fact that we have been carrying on an intensive campaign to raise money for the completion of the Niles Avenue church.

The young people's convention at Grand Rapids was a milestone in the lives of many of the young folks of Michigan. It surely was soul stirring to see a body of people raise their hands to witness that they were willing to take the first definite step in the establishment of stewardships. I am sure the Bishop's office was a joyful place when they received all those cards asking that inventory blanks be sent to about twenty hundred people. In spite of the disagreeable weather and the distance, one hundred and twenty people, there were twenty-six representatives from Flint.

On November 2, the closing night of Brother Grice's week here, Class 3 of the Newell Street Sunday school put on a chicken supper in the church basement and raised $28 to apply on the building fund.

During the past month there have been ten baptisms, making some exceptionally fine material for Zion building.

Coming events include "A curiosity night" after Relief Society November 15, put on by Class 6 of the Newell Street Sunday school; a chicken supper November 20 at the Knights of Pythias Hall; and a bazaar in one of the downtown stores November 20 and 21. The bazaar is under the direction of the Department of Women. All these activities are looking toward the raising of funds necessary for the completion of the Niles Avenue church.

The bi-monthly business meeting and annual election of officers will take place Monday, December 7.

Artland, Saskatchewan

November 12.—Elder John Tomlinson, by special request, preached his farewell sermon on the evening of November 1. He and his wife live near where he was born, but he has so often been requested to preach from this pulpit that the Saints feel he belongs to them also, as well as his own branch. They have sold their home and are moving to Indiana. They will surely be missed. A farewell reception was tendered them in their own branch a few evenings before their departure. Sister Thomas Pentland accompanied them as far as Winnipe. She was on route to Michigan to visit relatives.

Brother and Sister H. A. Hartshorn had a large sale yesterday. They are moving to Nauvoo, Illinois. May peace attend them and be with them in all their ways.

Elder W. J. Cornish started on November 7 to make a tour of the branches of the district, in his work as district president.

A letter received from him reports two baptisms, a little boy and a school-teacher. The teacher had one hand that was almost useless, but after administration she straightened out the fingers and even raised that arm above her head, which was not possible before. To our Father in heaven be all the praise.

We did so well for the Christmas offering with the community suppertime that a bazaar is being staged for the near future for the same purpose.

Preparations for the Christmas entertainment and tree are going merrily forward. The executives of the Sunday school are the committee; also Sister Margaret Allison, the organist of the Sunday school.

Elder William Osler, president of the Alberta District, has been preaching in the Michigan Branch for several evenings. He has preached for the Artland Branch on the subject of the Graceland endowment. In his preface he showed how each grade of animal, according to their species, acted and reacted in their own environment and were adapted to it. Warming up to his subject he led us higher to the human race and showed how men should act and react in their environment; that at the door of baptism each one was made a steward and should report daily to the Master, not only the good that had been accomplished, but also our failures and discouragements. Then he led up to the Graceland endowment.

We have the following bit of interesting information from the Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint Paul Railway:

Last month fourteen automobiles ran into Milwaukee trains on highway crossings. Among the reasons given for not stopping are:

Thought they could beat the trains.
Going too fast to stop.
Defective brakes.
Did not look.
Thought track was far away.

Under influence of liquor.

The Milwaukee Railroad in the same year carried almost 20 million passengers—rounding out a period of five years in which 69,279,000 passengers were carried without a fatality.

Stone Church

Only a small group were present at the eight o'clock prayer service Sunday morning. Possibly it was due to the fall in temperature and the overcast sky. "It being the union service of both old and young, it grated on my ear. I never have been a union auditorium. The theme suggested was that of the Sunday school and the recent convention. The subject was closely adhered to throughout the service, and a quiet, peaceful spirit was evident. Both old and young took part quite freely.

It is always an interesting sight to watch the Sabbath school in action. Brother Cooper and his splendid orchestra beguile the mind from the outside world with its noise and confusion and daily worry and lead it into channels of thought which bring a restful peace. While the pipe organ with its dignified and majestic tones is ideal for the more solemn services of the church, the orchestra with consecrated musicians is well adapted for the Sabbath school sessions.

After the lesson period is over, the big bell cheerilly rings out its musical command, and the ones appointed in each class to gather the books place them in a tin box and then file out in order and deposit the boxes in receptacles in a room in the lower auditorium. Again the bell rings out, and the classes rise, and in a marvelously short time the building is cleared. Young Zion, middle-aged Zion, the old Zion—the army, of the Lord on the march! It is always a beautiful sight. The attendance Sunday was 1,187; the collection $26.56.

We noticed the report from the Spring Branch Sunday school, which is as follows: All officers and teachers present, with but one exception. Only ten members absent. Seven perfect classes. Sadly in need of larger quarters.

The Sunday school convention was much in evidence Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. General Superintendent C. B. Woodstock was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Alice Covington, general superintendent in Zion. The various programs were carried out.

Elder R. V. Hopkins reports a good spiritual time at the early Sunday morning Sunday school convention prayer service, over which he presided; also excellent interest at his lecture, "The call to teach," delivered to the young people's section of teachers at the convention. He will preach at the Second Independent Church next Sunday evening in their new building.

Sunday was pleasant—cold but fair. The church was crowded at the eleven o'clock service. The sermon by Brother Elbert A. Smith was the beginning of a new series under the general theme, "Things that we verify believe to be true." The subject for the hour was, "In the beginning God created." Brother Elbert said that in the five words taken as a subject, there appears the vehicle of theSiege, the beginning of the creation. We are naturally curious. Children begin to ask questions as soon as they can use words. Every word followed by a question mark that they know they use. We continue through life to question.

But there is more than idle curiosity involved in our questions about our own origin. Our present and future hope is init. Our whole being is largely governed by the answer we accept. Neither science nor philosophy throw light on the question of our origin. Religion gives us this answer, "In the beginning God created." It is dogmatic, ex-cathedra. God does not argue with us about it. We can take it or leave it. But much depends on our decision. And there is only one alternative.

Either things came by design, creation, or they came by blind chance. Haecceit said they came by chance. Kelvin said there could be only the two theories of origin, and as a scientist he rejected blind chance and affirmed creative power.

When we see a fine painting on a canvas, we know that the painter did not just take a bucket and fling the paints on the canvas, the pigments by chance fall to make the picture. Cubists and impressionists may paint that way; their chromatics look like an accident; but in real art, pictures do not come that way.

Materialism, atheism, these ask us to believe that in the beginning blind chance threw a bucket of paint on the canvas of eternal time and infinite space, and the pigments fell by accident to form worlds pursuing their orderly course. They fell on this old earth so as to form green grass upon the hills and great trees in the valleys. They fell by chance to form flying birds, running horses, lovely flowers, laughing children, intelligent men and women.

We are asked to believe too much. It takes faith to believe that God created. It takes blind credulity to believe that things came by blind chance. The declaration that God created is the beginning of revelation. It is like a rising sun in its splendor, throwing new light all about us if we will receive it. Life itself, our own souls, duty, truth, immortality, virtue, eternity, all appear in a new light. "All things are becoming new." Thus truly life and immortality are brought to light.

Next Sunday morning Brother Elbert Smith will continue his series on the subject, "The personality of God."

A look-in at the Relief Society these days will demonstrate that the members are all from Missouri. They want to be shown. Possibly that department is now as seriously engaged in real study as at any time in its history. It has moved over the three-hundred mark in attendance.

The evening sermon by Cyril E. Wright was a masterful effort in which the audience saw again a forward-looking vision. His sermon was one of those splendid character-building thoughts which we are coming to expect when Brother Wight occupies the stand. He spoke of some of the things that hindered us in our realization of the dream of Zion, mentioning chiefly our failure to realize the importance of self-development. He told us very forcibly that the making of ourselves into a "people" in which the spirit of God might dwell was of vastly more importance to God than all the million-dollar buildings of stone and mortar we shall ever erect. His whole thought was condensed in his closing query, "You are the raw material from which God shall build his kingdom on earth. What will your answer be?"

The Laurel Club gave a bazaar and served meals Thursday and Friday evenings in the dining hall. They seem to have drawn considerable patronage for their way. The general mental attitude toward the sisters of this club is, "If you want to get anything done, ask the Laurels to do it."

The twenty-one groups of the Stone Church congregation have been invited to hold a joint Thanksgiving prayer service at the Stone Church Wednesday evening. There will be no services in the church on Thursday evening, and we noticed the following elders of the general ministry in Independence the past week: C. J. Smith, J. A. Robinson, James A. Thomas, H. O. Smith, J. D. Shower.

Elder J. M. Terry had a busy day Sunday. He preached twice, administered to the sick, and looked after his group work. He is the supervisor over Groups 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24.

Second Church

Group 16 was requested by the pastor in Zion to relinquish Elder C. A. Kress as group leader, to take charge of Group 20. Elder D. A. Whiting is taking the lead in this group as successor to Elder Kress. On Thursday evening a social of the group was held at the home of one of the Saints on South Cottage Street, Sister Rena Diefendorf, and was an occasion of splendid sainthood sociability.

The choir is preparing a Thanksgiving cantata, "The Lord of the harvest," which will be rendered Sunday evening at half past seven.

Superintendent Charles B. Woodstock was a Sunday school visitor Sunday morning.

Elder H. E. Winegar preached a good sermon Sunday morning, and was welcomed by his many old acquaintances of the former South Side Branch.

Sunday afternoon was enlivened for the priesthood by a study hour under the leadership of Elder A. K. Dillee, the subject being stewardship. The pastor, R. J. Lambert, spoke in the evening.

Elder R. V. Hopkins, pastor in Zion, will be the speaker.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. We predict a crowded house to greet him.

A poverty social, with several unique features, was held Tuesday evening under the auspices of Second Church Relief officers. We will report results later.

Enoch Hill

Speakers on the Hill Sunday were Elder J. M. Terry at eleven o'clock and Elder James A. Thomas at seven.

A double quartet from this church furnished two numbers at the convention at the Stone Church Sunday afternoon.

Group 33 North gave a chili and pie supper Tuesday evening in the church basement and were very successful, netting $20. This, with what the group had previously raised, made a total of $70, which they turned over to the deacon to apply on the local church debt.

The three groups at Enoch Hill will hold a union prayer service in the church Wednesday evening.

On Thanksgiving afternoon a six o'clock luncheon will be had in the church basement. Each family is asked to bring a basket of lunch sufficient for themselves and one sandwich extra. A program will follow at half past seven.

Walnut Park

The Thanksgiving sermon at Walnut Park was preached Sunday forenoon by Bishop J. A. Becker, and he was very successful in arousing the thanksgiving spirit.

A prayer service will be held at the church Thursday morning, nine o'clock to ten.

At half past seven Sunday evening the local choir of thirty voices presented Maunster's "Song of Thanksgiving," under the direction of their leader Mrs. Minnie Scott Dobson. The church was well filled, and a spirit of praise and thanksgiving was present. The invocation was by Bishop B. J. Scott and was inspiring to choir members and congregation alike. At the close of the service in a few well-chosen words, Pastor Gland Smith, on behalf of the choir presented Sister Dobson with a floral offering, to which she responded with feeling. The soloists were all members of the local choir. They were Mrs. Marian Campbell, soprano; Miss Margaret Gard, contralto; Mr. Gland Smith, tenor; and Mr. Kenneth Morford, bass. This cantata will be given over KLDS at eight o'clock Thanksgiving evening.

East Independence

Brother J. W. Davis was the speaker the morning of November 15, and Brother H. O. Smith was the evening speaker.

East Independence went over the top in the Graceland endowment fund drive.

Sunday, November 22, Brother J. W. Davis addressed the Saints at the eleven o'clock hour from the text, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

A committee consisting of Sister J. W. Davis, Sister Joseph Stowell, and Sister Beulah Teeter was appointed to arrange for a Christmas program.

The name of Roy Verdan, son of Brother and Sister Lloyd Minnix, was placed upon the cradle roll.

In the evening Brother W. H. Kelley was the speaker. He gave an interesting discourse on the subject of authority.

New Branch at Wagner, Nebraska

Wednesday night, November 11, the newly organized branch met in the capacity of prayer and testimony meeting, with the power of God manifested with power and much assurance. There was perfect harmony and unity among the little band, with Presiding Elder Ames Lamson, an Omaha Indian, in charge, assisted by Priest Charles W. Hare, a Yankton Sioux Indian, a newly ordained man in the work.

All the Saints present were active, and the Spirit of the Lord was felt with great encouragement. At the conclusion of the meeting, the Saints showed their appreciation of the service of Brother Lamson by presenting him with a new overcoat. The presentation was by Ralph Braidwood, not a member of the church. A short response was made by Brother Lamson, who voiced his appreciation of the much-needed gift.

Such deeds as these encourage men of the priesthood to do the will of God in every way, and give them new courage to try to serve their fellow men by presenting the gospel.

May God bless the Saints throughout the whole breadth of the earth.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Through various school and church activities last week Lamoni did her part to emphasize the value of education in the home, the school, and the church. As a fitting climax to the week's activities, the following program was given at the church on last Sunday evening:

Hymn.

Invocation, Elder Oscar Anderson.

Violin solo, Miss Emma Snead.

Talk, "Education in the home," Mrs. Lydia Wight.

Talk, "Education in the school," Elder George N. Briggs.

Duet, Misses Helen Anthony and Grace Lane.

Closing song.

 Benediction.

Thanksgiving week is being observed in the following manner: On last Sunday morning at eleven o'clock the service consisted of the following numbers:

Hymn.

Invocation, Elder Lonzo Jones.

Anthem, "The woods and every sweet-smelling tree," by West, Miss Doris Gieselman and the Oratorio Society.

Vocal solo, Mrs. Frances Norris.

Closing song.

© Benediction.

A union prayer service will be held in the main auditorium of the church on Thanksgiving morning at 9.45 with the stake presidency in charge.

Bishop Albert Carmichael was in Lamoni on Thursday and Friday, looking after church interests.

Creston

The sixth annual home-coming of the Creston Branch was held Sunday, November 15.

The day's program began with the prayer service at nine o'clock, and a good spirit prevailed.

The clouds, which were heavy early in the morning, broke away during the service, and the sunshine beamed in upon us, which, according to Brother Prall, seemed to augur to the Creston Branch the promise of the sunshine of God's love with us for the coming year. The crowd continued to gather during prayer service and Sunday school, people coming from Corning, Kent, Glenwood, Fontanelle, Winterset, Greenfield, and Bridgewater, until by time for the preaching service about one hundred were present.

Two carloads came over from Lamoni Saturday night, and the help they gave in making our home-coming a success was appreciated by us very much, and we hope they will come again. They also brought with them Sisters Elsie Hammer and Helen Franklin, who are attending Graceland and were happy for the privilege of spending the day with home folk.

At the eleven o'clock hour a very impressive service took place, one to which the Creston Saints have looked forward for some time, that in which Brother David Blair was ordained to the office of priest with Brother Wilber Prall as spokesman. Brother Blair is a splendid young man, loved by all, and no doubt will be able to do a good work in the church. One especially pleasing incident was the presence of Brother Blair's father from Chicago, who assisted in the ordination service.

Harold Franklin rendered a horn solo, and the Jolly Four Quartet of Lamoni sang.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
Brother Prall brought to us an inspiring message on Christian stewardships, from the text, “Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.” Well-filled baskets were brought by all, and at noon a bounteous dinner was served cafeteria style under the direction of the Department of Women with Sister Estella Franklin at charge.

Sister Thelma Lane of Lamoni is employed as grade school music instructor in our city. She is also acting as branch chorister, while Sister Elsie Hammer is attending Graceland. Sister Lane arranged the following program for the afternoon meeting:

Berceuse, stringed trio.
Prayer, Brother Hogan.
Violin solo, Ruth Hogan.
Talk, “Our heritage,” Thad Howland of Graceland College.
Quartet, A and B, Jolly Four of Lamoni.
Violin solos, A and B, Thad Howland.
Talk, Brother Will Prall.
Piano solos, A and B, Opal Hall.
Solas, C. J. Fiddick.
  a. “Just for to-day.”
  b. “Perfect day,” with cello obligato.
Benediction, Brother George Hall.
Everyone returned home declaring it had indeed been a perfect day.

Chariton

On Thursday evening, November 12, the choir work among the northern branches of Lamoni Stake was reorganized by Sister Mabel Carlile, our stake chorister. Two auto loads from Lamoni drove to Chariton to assist in this work. Owing to the bad condition of the roads, the choirs from Centerville, Lucas, and Creston were unable to attend the first meeting. Mrs. David Smith, Ruth Smith, Ann and Nell Morgan, and Handel Morgan represented the Hiteman choir on this occasion. The following from Lamoni were in attendance: Miss Mabel Carlile, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Prall, Mrs. Aileen Walden, Tess Morgan, Rae Lysinger, George Gates, Thad Howland, and some others.

These joint choirs, under the direction of Sister Carlile and with Miss Ruth Smith of Hiteman as pianist, are working on the oratorio, “Olivet to Calvary.” They are arranging to give concerts in Chariton, Creston, and Hiteman later in the season.

Sioux City, Iowa

November 18.—Brother Oran J. Barr had the misfortune of fracturing his hip in a fall one month ago. He is still in a local hospital, but is permitted to take daily exercise with the use of crutches. We feel that the Lord’s hand has had a major part in the reconstruction of the afflicted part.

The November meeting of the “Men’s Booster Club” admitted four new members to the organization. The men are becoming better acquainted, and a closer bond of fellowship is engendered. The meetings are held the first Monday evening of each month, but semimonthly meetings are being asked for.

Elder Charles B. Woodstock lectured to the Sioux City Saints November 5 and 6 on religious education and the Graceland endowment. We always appreciate Brother Woodstock’s kindly advice and his spirit of service.

Brother and Sister J. C. Keck, of Sherwood, North Dakota, stopped en route to Independence and visited in this city a few weeks. They expect to make Independence their home.

Mr. J. H. Lines of Luton became a member of the church November 8. Brother Lines handles Uncle Sam’s mail at Luton.

A little son came to make his home with Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Huff October 26.

Sixteen books have been added to our library. They were a gift of Brother and Sister J. C. Keck. The books are already in circulation amongst the Sunday school children.

Sister Priscilla Woracraft of Little Sioux visited her brother, William, this week. Sister Grace Bottomaly Hagan has gone to Des Moines. Sister Ella Smith and Sister Ester Woodruff and children have gone to Sacramento, California, to make their home. Relatives preceded them about five years ago.

One of the Parent-Teacher Associations have requested the Riverside Women’s Department to give their play, “How the story grew,” to its organization. They are not slow in noticing the ability of our “lady players.”

The annual election of officers of the Sunday school will take place November 25 at eight p. m.

A fine new “screen” has been ordered by the Religio for use in the slide pictures that are being shown. We are taking a trip over the United States and the world, with a thousand “slides.” They are the property of the Independent School District, which has kindly loaned them to us. Although we have not reached our quota in the Graceland College endowment fund drive, we are very optimistic and feel that we are going “over.” Through the Pilot we are informing the donors the total amounts from week to week.

Phenomenal Interest of East Saint Louis

November 19.—East Saint Louis Branch had a quota of $625 for the endowment drive. The total subscription was over $17,000. This was raised by several members giving real estate and a united effort by the branch as a whole. The young men’s class, named “The Stewards,” pledged $500. Many of the children gave small amounts to help swell the total. The priesthood preached many sermons on stewardships and Graceland College.

C. V. Dickens,
Secretary East Saint Louis Branch.

Topeka, Kansas

November 15.—Affairs have been moving along quietly in this part of the Lord’s vineyard. The pledging toward the Graceland endowment fund has progressed nicely, and nearly everyone pledged a reasonable sum. Much enthusiasm was shown over this particular item of the church’s program. It is estimated that the branch has considerably oversubscribed its quota, but definite figures are lacking to the writer. We all want to see this plan of stewardship carried out and placed in operation at an early date.

A good sacramental service was our privilege the first of the month. We had with us at that time Brothers Jack Gardner of Independence and Bert Lewis of Nauvoo, both Graceland students, who bore their testimonies and spoke in behalf of Graceland. Brother Samuel Twombly, district president, was also with us the night of November 1 and talked in behalf of the college fund and the stewardship plan.

We have had some out-of-town visitors the past month, notably Brother T. H. Malyas, formerly of Huron, Michigan; and Brother G. R. Kuykendall, a former missionary, who consented to preach for us Sunday night, November 8. He gave us a very able sermon entitled “Truth,” which was much enjoyed.

On November 15 Brother R. W. Hayes, of Kansas City, Kansas, was visiting in Topeka and occupied at the eleven o’clock hour. Brother Hayes meets with us every few months, as his parents live in Topeka. He was pastor of the Topeka Branch several years ago and is always a welcome visitor to the branch.

Local members of the priesthood have occupied the pulpit at other times in the past month. Brother B. F. Deller, district Sunday school superintendent, with his family, visited the Scranton Branch November 8 and report an enjoyable time.

Ask Yourself This Question

"Could there have been anything more opportune than this campaign at this particular time?"

Four months ago it was thought by some ill-timed and would over-tax the church finances. The results indicate that what this church needed was a big task to accomplish. Campaign pledges have been freely made, more inventories than ever are being filed, and tithes and offerings stimulated.

The Endowment campaign furnished the opportunity
Loyalty to the church inspired united support
The spirit of the gospel brought happiness and satisfaction

NEWS FROM CAMPAIGN WORKERS

Caseville, Michigan, November 16
I started a series of meetings at the Caseville Branch last evening and am glad to report to you that they went over the top with the endowment subscription.
G. T. RICHARDS.

Calgary, November 15
Gone over our quota! Our quota is $80, and we have to date $99 subscribed, with $29 paid up and more to hear from.
MELVIN HANNA.

Alberta District, Edmonton, November 16
I have returned from a boosting campaign of the district and have had good success. Word also coming in from outlying localities indicates that this district will yet make its quota. Many Saints are realizing that we must do our share now, or the burden will be harder for others. Alberta will be there.
WILLIAM OSLER.

Parkersburg, West Virginia, November 15
Parkersburg Branch of West Virginia District is over the top. Quota $150, and we have $190 and hope to go over $200. Have not heard from other branches in the district.
HARRY E. SMITH.

Detroit, Michigan, November 16
This is to let you know that East Side Church of Detroit Branch has gone over the top. Quota was $650, amount raised, $1,650.
R. HOLLAND.

McKenzie, Alabama, November 15
I hasten to report that Pleasant Hill Branch of Alabama District has oversubscribed its quota. Quota was $700, and we have pledged to-night $881, $540 of which is cash. This is not a complete report. We expect to reach $1,000.
E. C. SHELLY.

Saint Thomas, Canada, November 15
Our quota $500. Subscribed $511 and committee have several yet to see.
L. O. PEARSON.

Indianapolis, Indiana, November 22
Our branch gone over the top four times. Still going.
O. J. HAWN.

London, Ontario, November 22
London, Ontario, Branch has met their quota of twelve hundred dollars for Graceland College endowment fund and have ninety-eight dollars over, with a number yet to hear from.
FRANK GRAY, Secretary of Committee.

Clarksburg, West Virginia, November 16
I am glad to say that the Clarksburg Saints have already oversubscribed their quota. The amount given us to raise was $275. We have already $317, and quite a number have not been heard from. I think when all are heard from we will easily have $400, which is half the amount allotted to the whole district.
THOMAS NEWTON.

Mount Vernon, Illinois, November 9
I was with the Marion Branch yesterday. Their quota was $49. Yesterday at noon they had $127 and several of their number yet to hear from. Mount Vernon has gone over the top; others yet to hear from.
O. C. HENSON.

Madison, Wisconsin, November 16
I am very glad to report at the end of the drive at Madison that we oversubscribed our quota $100—not all in yet. May the good work move on.
H. W. WOODSTOCK.

Mobile, Alabama, November 17
Mobile District over the top; $1,198.60; doubled quota; can't stop them; all branches heard from will reach $1,500. Vanclave quota $200, raised $220.18; cash $100.33.
A. G. MILLER.

Clinton, Iowa, November 17
Clinton Branch, Eastern Iowa District, raised more than quota.
C. A. BEIL.

Birmingham, England, November 17
Midland District going five times over the top!
M. MEREDITH.

Gaylord, Michigan, November 17
ALLEN SCHEUR.

Barberton, Ohio, November 16
The Saints in Barberton are very much interested in the college. At last Sunday's service we went over the top in about twenty minutes, and closing this evening we have $524. Our quota was $835. We still have a number to hear from. Have about thirty per cent cash.
H. RHOSES.

East Saint Louis, Illinois, November 16
Lansdown Branch, East Saint Louis, Illinois, over. Quota $525. Subscription to-day, $17,764. More than twenty-eight times allotment. Our aim, $18,000.
G. F. BARRACLough.

Saint Thomas, Ontario, November 16
A. Carmichael: Three branches report quota raised and still going. Quite sure London District will go over.
J. L. BURGER.

Atherton, Missouri, November 15
A. Carmichael: Our quota of $350 oversubscribed.
E. F. BRACE.

Atherton, Missouri, November 15
A. Carmichael: Atherton with quota of $400 over the top.
NOBLE WILKINSON.

Requests for Prayers

Clarence Fisher, Bassett, Nebraska, a believer in the church, asks the prayers of the Saints for the restoration of his health. He is bothered with kidney trouble and seems to be getting worse. He depends upon daily labor for the support of his family and has not had steady work for some time. He says it is chiefly for this reason that he is asking for divine help.

Sister Mary Bates requests the prayers of the Saints for herself and her loved ones scattered abroad in the world, since she was taken to her bed with indigestion. This was followed by a stroke of paralysis. She asks that the Saints fast and pray for her that she may be healed.

Mrs. J. T. Dobbs, Glen Easton, West Virginia, asks the prayers of the Saints for her husband, who has been ill since July 6, when she was taken to her bed with acute indigestion. This was followed by a stroke of paralysis. She is up now most of the time but cannot use her hands. She asks that the Saints fast and pray for her that she may be healed.

Sister Mary Bates requests the prayers of the Saints for herself and her loved ones scattered abroad in the world, that they may be truly converted in the gospel. She asks that the Saints fast and pray for her that she may be healed.

Clarence Stewart, of Rosedale, Kansas, asks the prayers of the Saints in his behalf. He belongs to the church. Three months ago he was taken sick and has been bedfast for two months. His limbs are paralyzed from the knees down. The Lord has never yet turned them away, and they have faith in him at this time. Also pray for her daughter, who has a goiter.

Conference Notices

Eastern Michigan Priesthood

In planning for the ministerial conference, we have made provision for one at the north end and one at the south end of the district. The north end will meet at Shabonna, Saturday and Sunday, December 12, 13. The south end will meet at Port Huron, Saturday and Sunday, January 9, 10, 1925. First meeting, prayer service at 10 a.m. Programs will be mailed to each branch president in the near future. We ask each member plan on attending, and be prepared for the discussions of the many topics to be presented. These lectures will be duplicated at both sessions. Visiting brethren will be welcome.

We have several new families of Saints in Topeka, whom we are glad to welcome. We hope they will remain with us and help in the work. Among these are Brother and Sister Clarence Smith, formerly of Oklahoma City, and Brother and Sister D. A. McCord, of Holton, Kansas.

The Department of Women has been active in assisting to raise funds for the church. They held a rummage sale in October 16 and 17, clearing some sixty dollars. Considerable clothing that was left over was donated to the Salvation Army. The women also held a food sale October 24 and intend holding another soon. A bazaar is also contemplated by them, to be held in the near future. Their efforts are encouraging to all, and those who have assisted in these affairs are to be commended for their zeal.

A Halloween masquerade party was held at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Sheets and Brother and Sister Ord Lasley November 20. A good crowd was present and all had a good time in good weather.

Plans are being laid for a Thanksgiving dinner at the church. We hope all members in the vicinity, or any passing through, will be there. The last time it proved to be an enjoyable affair.

We are pleased to report an increased attendance and greater interest in the weekly prayer service, which is evidenced in the spiritual life of the branch.

JUST A LINE

"Just a line this morning to let you know we are doing nicely. Brothers Christensen and Dillon are here, and Sunday we had a very nice meeting. There were seven administrations to the sick. The Indians believe very strongly in this ordinance. We are starting on our church building."—Jonathan Koshiway, Red Rock, Oklahoma, November 2.

Which Would You Rather Have
One Savings Account       Ten Savings Accounts
with a balance of $100.00 each? of $1,000.00?

While the ten accounts would be more expensive to operate and thus the immediate profits to the bank less, yet the ten accounts would be worth more for these reasons:

1st. Anyone who has saved $100.00 has learned the great lesson of thrift if they but knew it, so you have ten potential $1,000.00 accounts because they are bound to grow.

2d. With ten accounts you would have TEN FRIENDS, and that's what counts the most.

I. YOUR TONGUE.—Part 1

Some years ago I had occasion to burn an immense amount of rubbish that had accumulated on the premises, and when the flames and smoke were rolling toward heaven a little nephew approached me and said, "Uncle Elbert, I want to ask you a question, Did you start all that fire with one match?" Yes; a very great conflagration can be started with one match.

James indicated that the tongue may be "set on fire of hell." (James 3: 6.) A man with his tongue set on fire of hell may burn his own home. A woman may do the same thing. I do not necessarily mean burn his house. I mean burn his home. A home may be burned out while the house is still standing in good condition.

The man with his tongue thus set on fire can set on fire the whole neighborhood. Old friendships make a sorry bonfire. Do not start such fires with careless or vicious conversation.

In the church, one with such a tongue may set on fire his own spirituality and burn the spiritual structure of others. A case came to my attention not long ago of a boy approaching young manhood who was much interested in the church, a worker in the Sunday school and Religio. Some older persons filled his ears with talk against and about the church. The boy had not yet reached the years of stability, where he could analyze as an older person can, and it literally set fire to his spiritual structure. He had not the background of experience to enable him to realize that his faith was founded on eternal principles which cannot be changed by anything that anyone may do or may not do. The result was that he became completely discouraged, dropped out of church, Sunday school, and Religio work, and even quit the day school. We ought not to jeopardize the faith of the young and the weak by careless and untimely assertions.

Isaiah, on the other hand, reminds us that the tongue may be set on fire from heaven. An angel appeared to him and took a live coal from the altar of the Lord and touched his lips with it.

Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: and he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged. Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me.—Isaiah 6: 5-8.

Isaiah went forth with his lips purged with divine fire. We are told that at Pentecost tongues of fire dwelt upon the disciples. The gospel fire should touch every Latter Day Saint’s lips, burning therefrom all that is obscene or false or vindictive.

We as Latter Day Saints baptize by immersion, which means that the whole man in all his parts is put under the water as a symbol that the whole man in all his being is regenerated and has risen up to new life.

We as Latter Day Saints believe that the gospel applies to the whole body. It applies to the hands, "Keep your hands off your neighbor's goods and off your neighbor's wife." That is negative. The affirmative would be, "Consecrate your hands to help your neighbor." The gospel applies to the heart. "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else," is the commandment contained in Doctrine and Covenants.

No man can be happy with two women in his heart, and no two women can be happy in one man's heart. The gospel law applies also to the tongue.

The hands are the symbol of service; the heart is the symbol of the emotions; the tongue is the symbol of speech. Certainly the gospel law ought to apply to the tongue, since speech is one of the most sublime and important functions that distinguish man from the dumb brute. By it he is enabled to rise to a plane just a little lower than the angels, and transmit his ideas and ideals to the minds of others; and is so honored that God has said to him, "Come, let us reason together."

Let us now consider the gospel law as it governs the use of the tongue: First, in the home. A man may beat his wife with a club, but if he does he is quite likely to be arrested. He may beat her with hard words until her heart is broken and her spirit is sore all over, and nothing happens. The law takes no notice, and the neighbors do not care to interfere. Many a man, when things go wrong in the office or at his work, "takes it out on his wife" or children.

On the other hand, while the woman may not be able literally to beat a man up with her tongue, she can terribly lacerate him. Solomon probably knew by experience. He made four hundred experiments, and among these four hundred experiments there seems to have been at least one woman who put this proverb into his mind. Paraphrasing in modern language, it might read, "It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop, than with a brawling woman in a wide house."

Solomon probably knew by experience. He made four hundred experiments, and among these four hundred experiments there seems to have been at least one woman who put this proverb into his mind. Paraphrasing in modern language, it might read, "It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop, than with a brawling woman in a wide house."

I was going down the street one day when I saw a big Saint Bernard dog come hastily down a front walk and rush down the street, and close upon his heels and making it very disagreeable for him was a maltese house cat. Poor dog! Have you ever when walking down the street seen some man come out the front door with his shoulders hunched up and his coat collar turned up about his ears, pursued by a shrill torrent of scolding which blew him up the street like a leaf before a cyclone? Poor man! Poor dog!

A certain amount of friction may be inevitable in the home. Many of our outbreaks are the result of frazzled nerves. We should learn to make due allowance for such, and when we offend to ask forgiveness. It is a splendid thing to be able to repent and ask forgiveness. Do not let the sun go down upon your wrath. If the sun never sets upon wrath in your home, it will never set upon a divorce in that home.

Among Solomon's four hundred wives there must have been at least one good woman, who inspired him to write the closing chapter of Proverbs in which he pays that splendid tribute to the virtuous woman. He says of her, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness." That is the gospel law governing in the home, "the law of kindness."

There are three magic words, words of very strong magic, two pronouns and one verb: "I love you." If husband and wife will learn to use these words often, they will settle many quarrels and make many days happy. ELBERT A. SMITH.

[NOTE.—These editorials contain the substance of a series of practical gospel sermons delivered in the Church, Independence, Missouri, on the following subjects: "Your tongue"; "Your heart"; "Your hands"; "Your home." The subjects indicated will follow in their order.]

Questions and Answers

In Connection With Stewardships

Question: To what extent can the principle of stewardship be engaged in outside of Zion?

Answer: To whatever extent willingness and preparation or ability will permit. The principles of the gospel can be made directing factors in our lives wherever we are, though it is recognized that it is easier to "live our religion" when we are among our own, where conditions cannot but be more favorable. So with the law of stewardships.

Question: How or by what means will the church determine the vocational adaptation of its members who take up stewardships?

Answer: By educational and inspirational methods. Our system of education must include processes of discovering early in the child's life what its chief talents or capabilities are, and then adapting the educational methods to the complete development of those talents, to be followed by the opportunity to exercise those talents to the fullest extent in promoting the welfare of the group.

Question: If I take a stewardship, how shall I save for my child?

Answer: The best possible way to save for a child is to equip him for self-dependence. This is found chiefly in educating his talents so he is capable of caring for himself, and developing whatever stewardship shall become his. The costs of educating our children are legitimate expenses. It should be our ambition to leave our children the heritage of adequate equipment for service. This may include both training and material equipment—a stewardship.

Question: Is it necessary to make out a financial statement if I do not owe any tithing?

Answer: Yes. It is the duty of all to make out such statements, in order to go on the stewardship basis.

Question: Did the persons spoken of in the second chapter of Acts give everything or "the surplus"?

Answer: Their surplus. Had a person given more, then he would have a need to be supplied by the redistribution. For it will be remembered that "distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." (Acts 4:37.)

Question: Will not stewardships make the able and industrious support the incompetent and indolent?
Answer: No. The idler shall have no place in Zion. Idleness is intolerable. The problem of incompetency due to lack of ability rather than laziness will be solved by management by those organized for such purpose.

Question: When God gives us our inheritance, will it be with a deed that cannot be broken, or shall we possess it without a deed (certificate of stewardship)?

Answer: Until the Master comes to reign upon his throne, our inheritance will be held by us with a deed that cannot be broken. Just what will obtain after the Master comes, or during the millennium, we do not know. Of this one thing we are assured, that all those who are fortunate enough to be there will be only too glad to hold their property in any form the Master of men says is right; so why worry how our inheritances are held when Christ reigns?

Question: What is meant by the expression trained men, etc., doing the work of having inventories, etc., perfected. Are those men yet to receive special training, or are there those of the bishopric of various localities already trained?

Answer: The term trained men means men who are able to teach the financial law, the law of stewardships which includes the making of financial statements, etc. The teaching of this law primarily falls upon the bishopric, and they are expected to be able or trained to do this work, and we believe that a large portion of the bishopric are so trained to-day. It further means that if we need more men than the present bishopric to teach the social program of the church we will have to give men special training. Briefly, whatever is needed to be done in this line, so far as training men is concerned to teach the financial law, will be done.

Question: Is the money loaned to the church to buy just the land, or is it to stock and equip the farms as well as buy the land?

Answer: Both, if needed.

Question: If there is more subscribed than the $200,000, what will be done with the extra amount and the interest?

Answer: Whatever is subscribed has been paid in by the subscriber for a specific purpose, the endowment of Graceland College and buying lands for the beginning of stewardships; therefore every dollar subscribed is what is known as a trust fund and must be used for what it is subscribed. It makes no difference whether it is undersubscribed or oversubscribed, it is a trust fund, and under the law of the land must be used for the thing for which it was subscribed.

Question: Why has the "all things common" plan that the Nephites lived under for 165 years been rejected and a stewardship plan been adopted?

Answer: The stewardship plan and that of "all things common" as taught and practiced by the saints both at Pentecost and on this continent for about 165 years are one and the same thing in principle. The only thing held "in common" by the former day saints was the surplus, or that amount which was not needed by the individual.

Question: Would stewardships eliminate rich and poor, or would there not be the same class distinction as there is at present?

Answer: A full compliance to the law of stewardships would eliminate both riches and poverty, keeping always in mind the two economical divisions of these two terms. That is, riches means that amount had above a person's needs and just wants. Thus if a person has $1,000 more than he needs or is required by his just wants, he is $1,000 rich. (b) If a man is in need of $100, he is that much poor. This is the very thing that stewardships accomplishes. No rich or poor; or in other words, equality, which is another way of saying, an equal opportunity for all.

Question: If I should go on the stewardship plan and turn over all my surplus to the church, and I found it necessary to enlarge my business to take care of my orders, would the church or group refund or loan (without interest) me the amount I needed?

Answer: The church or group would loan without interest in most cases, a person the amount needed.

Question: Will not the statement (that is made by all who have spoken on the subject) "equality according to their ability to use," be a loophole for the rich to say that the poor man has not the ability to use large sums or any more than he gets now?

Answer: We think not. That every man should have according to his ability is clearly taught in Matthew 25. The law governing stewardships will prevent any unfair advantage being taken by parties in the matter.

Question: Should a superannuated minister in good health draw from the treasury of the church? Should a widow of a missionary in good health, because of the past services of her deceased husband, draw upon the funds of the church?

Answer: Questions of this nature may be readily answered if two of the fundamental laws as enunciated by God are made operative. We here mean the "law of the need," or that every man should have his needs supplied; and the law of work, "Thou shalt earn thy bread by the sweat of thy face." Both laws should be operative in our philosophy, and one should not clash with the other.
This superannuated minister and this widow in good health, if able to, should continue to work. Do what they can toward supplying their needs by laboring according to their strength and ability. If, after doing their best, they still need, then they should be aided out of the church treasury to supply what they lack.

It is incumbent on every member of the kingdom of heaven to continue to do his part until incapacitated either by physical or mental illness. Happiness and contentment come through an active life—active until old age or sickness incapacitates.

Complying with the law of temporalities by paying one's tithe or by paying one's surplus or by making an offering does not entitle any member of the church, no matter what their services or the services of their husband or relatives have been, to draw from the church treasury. The law clearly states that the only ones who have the right are those who have need and who have been worthy, wise, and faithful.

Question: Will persons be made stewards through a ceremony in public assembly? Do stake officers have full authority to fulfill this appointment?

Answer: The law provides for every person to be made a steward both in the spirit as well as in the letter of the law. The letter of the law provided for a solemn setting apart of the steward, and as Christ says nothing is done in secret, this setting apart should be in a public assembly of the Saints.

Yes, we think the stake officers have the right. To confine the right to do this work to a few general officers would put so strict a construction on the law as would make the carrying out of this law almost inoperative. When we remember that untold thousands must be set apart to their stewardships, we must see the necessity of stake officers having the authority to do this work.

Pastor Blames Modern Home for Jazz Era

Bitterly denouncing the “jazz, razz, dazz” age of to-day, the Reverend Howland Hanson yesterday charged parents with dressing baby boys in long trousers and letting baby girls go barelegged to get them used to it.

Scoring the present generation and also modern parents in a sermon at the University Baptist church he said:

“We live in a jazz, razz, dazz age. These times indicate delirium. It is a state in which the thoughts, expressions, and actions are wild, irregular, and incoherent. It is movie, educated, artificial painted, and made up. Conventionalities are taboo. We enjoy without the pangs of conscience what gave our fathers sleepless nights of remorse. Our highest paid artists no longer paint masterpieces, compose oratorios, or write great poems; they are slap-stick comedians, ragtime musicians, and brazen affinities.”

Sees World of False Faces

“A quarter of a century of screen life has now graduated a generation of grinning false faces. Lips are painted red, noses are white, eyebrows and lashes are black, and makers of false faces and masks are no longer needed. Baby boys wear long trousers while baby girls go barelegged so as to get used to it.

“Although young folks to-day have the same native passions they have always had, the animal energies, once harnessed in drudgery, are now released in leisure. Material temptations have multiplied. Electricity has eliminated night. Automobiles make joy riding more possible than did ox carts. Thrills are now difficult. Our childhood is sophisticated. The blush of shame has disappeared.”

In discussing the solution of the problem the Reverend Mr. Hanson said:

“I have no knocks for young people. Elders have torn down family altars. Parents have broken away from old-time moral sanctions. Church members have left the churches. We have compromised moral ideals for mercenary gains. Dances have displaced devotions, and cards have superseded culture.”

Attacks High School Froats.

The Reverend Max Deweese in his sermon last night at the Highland Park Church of Christ attacked high school sororities and fraternities as dangerous to groups of high school ages:

“They are dangerous because they tend to cliques and snobishness in a democratic institution. This is the reason the state legislature passed the law against them. The boys and girls of that age still need supervision of a kind that they do not get in these organizations. They want to emulate their older brothers and sisters in college, or their parents in exclusive clubs, but haven’t the poise to stand the responsibility. The fact that the school board has outlawed them is sufficient for our urging our boys and girls to avoid them. No Christian should break the law of the land.”—Des Moines Register, November 16.

In transmitting the newspaper cutting to HERALD editors, Elder H. A. Higgins, pastor of the Latter Day Saints at Des Moines, Iowa, says in part: “On the same page, column 6, is the picture of Harlan (Gabe) Simons, who was hanged at Fort Madison, Iowa, for the murder of Orton Ferguson. In a letter written to his friend, he blames the bright lights, dance halls, and light beers for his downfall. It seems to me that the pastor strikes the true keynote in the warning he gave to his people.”

It behooves parents and ministers to consider carefully each act in dealing with their children or their parishioners, for nothing can give more joy to one come to full maturity or approaching advanced age than comment from the young to the effect that his example and teaching have saved from mistakes and a wrong direction of effort. Parents in Zion or her stakes have a charge which, if they fulfill, will tend toward insurance against many, if not all, the evils of the present day. It reads much like this: It shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion and of her organized stakes that parents shall teach their children to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ, the Son of the living God, of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost, to keep the Sabbath day holy, to pray and to walk uprightly before the Lord; for their children shall be baptized when eight years old.

If in addition a few such commandments and inhibitions as to take sleep in the hours set apart by God for the rebuilding and strengthening of the body and mind; to be found often in the house of prayer; to avoid idleness; to eschew such habits as the use of tobacco and intoxicating beverages; and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, are kept scrupulously, the inhabitants of Zion will be availing themselves of an insurance more dependable than the insurance companies of the world can furnish—upon which they may depend for peace and life in the present state, and life and peace in the world beyond the grave.

Let us hearken unto the Lord!

"Can We Do as We Please?"

New Radio Series by President F. M. McDowell
Begins December 8

The K L D S lecture course series, 8 o'clock Tuesday and Thursday evenings, have met the approval of radio listeners. Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser's talks on eugenics and heredity have brought many letters of applause. Her series, based on Wiggam's Fruits of the Family Tree, will be concluded this week.

President McDowell has chosen an interest-compelling subject for his series, which is next. Tune K L D S Tuesday evening, December 8, at 8 p. m., and learn the answer to the question, "Can we do as we please?"

A Thousand Reports on Midnight K L D S Program

Find the radio fan who will say it wasn't worth the sleep to stay up for the midnight test program.
Many wrote that they stayed with it until the playing of "The world is waiting for the sunrise," after 2 a. m. Nearly a hundred long distance telephone calls and telegrams from coast to coast were received during the program. A complete report on this very interesting program will appear in next week's HERALD.

Tune In for K L D S Morning Inspirational Service

Another "breakfast hour program" will be broadcast from K L D S 6.30 to 7.30, December 8. It will consist of sacred musical numbers, Bible lesson and morning devotional prayer, old-time melodies, and a short inspirational talk to help you start the day right. Brother Ralph W. Farrell will be the speaker.
If enough listeners like the morning programs well enough to demand them they will be made a regular K L D S feature, probably for Tuesday and Friday mornings.

THEY SAY—

Ruskin: "It's a good safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, speaking a true word, or making a friend."

Bryant:

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like a quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Kipling:

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too:
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;

If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;
If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim,
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools;

If you make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss:

Or talk too wise;

And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew.
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much:
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

Pascal: "Justice without force is powerless; force without justice is tyrannical."

The Spectator: "In trying to escape from our fears we sometimes increase our own perils."

Montegazza: "To feel is good, for much feeling means much stored-up material for the achievement of infinitely great work. To think is still better, for it means the grouping of the thousands of images gathered by our senses. But to will is the best of all.
NEWS FROM CAMPAIGN WORKERS

Holden, Missouri, November 24

Bishop A. Carmichael: You would be touched to see how the Aged People at the Home here are interested in the college endowment stewardship drive. While they have passed the time of their great activity, they are still intensely interested in the church and in assisting our young people to prepare for service and establish what they have so long prayed for—stewardships. Many have made their offerings from the meager funds which they have. The amounts range from three cents to one hundred dollars. The former giving his “all” and the latter, a widow of one of our departed patriarchs, giving from her life’s savings.

This morning I received an offering from the oldest member of the Home Family, Elder H. W. Pomeroy, who was at the Amboy conference when “Joseph came.” Brother Pomeroy was for the church then and is still with the church and wished to do “what he could” to maintain the college for our young people, and to be one of the “charter” members in the establishment of stewardships.

From reports received it is evident Holden Stake has gone over and is still going. Very sincerely,

D. J. Krahnl.

Harrisville, Michigan, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: The Saints here at Killmaster or Harrisville are not organized into a branch yet, as they are all new members except three besides myself. Our quota was $100, and we have gone over the top now and may go higher. We have $119.55 pledged.

Fall River, Massachusetts, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: I understand that you were to be informed how we stood on the endowment fund. We have $808 and expect to total $1,844 by July, 1926.

James W. Heap.

Lansing, Michigan, November 1

Bishop Carmichael: Branch at Lansing, Michigan, with quota of $377 oversubscribed four hundred per cent. Send more pledge cards.

Gleazer and Williams.

Springfield, Illinois, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: We have finished our drive and have sent you pledges amounting to $246. I am sending additional pledges amounting to $119, making a total of $365. Our quota was $365.

George Nowack.

Taylorville, Illinois, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: Just a line to say we are still going. D. T. Williams at his best. You know what that means. I reported last week $1,298. We have now $1,611, and I think we will get a little more by the end of this week. The Central Illinois District quota is $2,000, and we surely hope Taylorville will reach the district quota.

John J. Jenkins.

Clearwater, Nebraska, November 21

Bishop Carmichael: Reports have been a little slow coming in in this district, but I am sure we will raise our quota of one thousand dollars.

Charles M. Sodersten.

Grand Rapids, Michigan, November 22

Bishop Carmichael: Just to let you know Grand Rapids Branch went over the top in fine style. Our quota, $875; amount of pledges, $2,135—over three times our quota. The Saints of Grand Rapids are glad to do this, and we assure you that we are always ready to do our part to make Zion a reality. Hoping and praying for the success of the drive and for the success of the church in general and with every confidence in the church and its officers, I am

Walter F. Ryder, Pastor.

Thayer, Missouri, November 22

(B Souther Missouri District)

Bishop Carmichael: I am not in position to make a full report, but Thayer, Kennett, and Ellington have gone over the top in the campaign, and I have full confidence in the Saints at Springfield that they will go over the top.

G. A. Davis.

Puryear, Tennessee, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: I am glad to be able to report that though reports from the outlying points in the district are not yet all in, from the branches and groups already reporting the Kentucky-Tennessee District has gone well over the top and will more than reach the quota of $400.

J. Charles May.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, November 23

Bishop A. Carmichael: The amounts pledged to date in Pottawattamie District for the Graceland endowment fund are as follows: Council Bluffs Branch (quota $1,800) pledged $3,899; Boomer Branch, $165; Hazel Dell, $415. Other branches are not yet reported.

T. J. Smith, Bishop’s Agent.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, November 24

Bishop Carmichael: I am mailing today cards to the amount of $117 to Brother Earl Bailey. This brings our total up to $1,123.25, or $325.25 over our quota. I feel very proud of the way the Saints of our branch responded to the call.

E. L. Kemp.
Fostoria, Ohio, November 24

Bishop A. Carmichael: Just a line to inform you that the Northwest Ohio District has doubled her quota. I cannot give you the exact figures, but it will be from twelve to thirteen hundred.
R. F. Slye.

Sacramento, California, November 23

Dear Brother Carmichael: We are just a little slow, but our quota of $556 is all pledged but $23. We have a few more to see yet and think we shall go over. Am happy in the good work.
THOMAS J. LAWN.

Weyburn, Saskatchewan, November 24

Bishop A. Carmichael: You will be pleased to know that we have raised our quota for Graceland. We have to date two hundred and twenty-one dollars, with two branches yet to hear from. Webb group we asked for forty dollars and they gave us one hundred and nine dollars and fifty cents. If other groups do as well we will go over six hundred.
OTIS L. D'Arcy.

Duluth, Minnesota, November 18

The Presiding Bishopric: We were pleased to hear K L D S last night. The report on the endowment campaign sounded good to us. Our quota in Duluth Branch was $400. Our pledge cards total $785. We have enjoyed our work in this campaign and were glad to note the hearty response from the young people and children, each one seeming desirous of doing his part.
R. C. ZueIsDorF,
Chairman of Committee.

Ionia, Michigan, November 23

Presiding Bishopric: Please send some blanks for inventories. Our branch quota was $40. We have more than doubled it.
J. J. Rusnell.

Battle Lake, Minnesota, November 22

Dear Brother Carmichael: As president of Union Branch of Minnesota District I am able to report $304 toward the endowment, with more than half cash. Our membership is so widely scattered most of our soliciting has had to be done through correspondence, consequently only a comparatively few have responded. We may hear from others yet.
LESTER WHITING.

Honolulu, Hawaii, November 17

Bishop Carmichael: You will be pleased to know that this district has oversubscribed its quota to the Graceland College endowment fund. The amount pledged thus far is $1,040. The quota assigned to this mission was $1,000 and as we have several people yet to hear from we are hopeful that our oversubscription will be substantially more than the amount above named.
G. J. Waller.

The Graceland Endowment-Stewardship Campaign

Will the Church Respond?

The members have answered in terms of a big oversubscription, and again, as in every emergency in the past, the loyalty of the Saints to the program of the Church has more than met the test.

An unknown author:
I want to walk by the side of the man who has suffered, and seen and knows,
Who has measured his pace on the battle line and given and taken blows,
Who has never whined when the scheme went wrong, nor scoffed at the falling plan;
But taken his dose with a heart of trust and the faith of a gentleman;
Who has parried and struck and sought and given and scarred with a thousand spears;
Can lift his head to the stars of heaven and isn't ashamed of his tears.
I want to grasp the hand of the man who has been through it all and seen,
Who has walked with the night of an unseen dread and stuck to the world machine;
Who has bared his breast to the winds of dawn and thirsted and starved and felt
The sting and the bite of the bitter blasts that the mouths of the foul have dealt;
Who was tempted and fell and rose again, and has gone on trusty and true,
With God supreme in his manly heart and his courage burning anew.
I'd give my all—be it little or great—to walk by his side to-day,
To stand up there with the man who has known the bite of the burning fray,
Who has gritted his teeth and clinched his fist and gone on doing his best,
Because of the love for his fellow men and the faith in his manly breast.
I would love to walk with him, hand in hand, together journey along,
For the man who has fought and struggled and won is the man who can make men strong.

Longfellow:

Thou, too, sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O UNION, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what Master laid thy keel,
What Workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!

Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's rear,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee!

Carlyle: "Certainly, this is a fearful business; that of having your able man to seek, and not knowing in what manner to proceed about it. That is the world's sad predicament. We need the man of intellect at the top of affairs; this is the aim of all constitutions and revolutions, if they have any aim; for the man of true intellect is the noble-hearted man withal; the true, just, humane, and valiant man. Get him for a leader, all is got; fail to get him, though you had constitutions plentiful as blackberries, and a Parliament in every village, there is nothing yet got; we shall either learn to know our true leaders and statesmen somewhat better than we see them, or else go on to be forever governed by the unheroic. Had we ballot boxes clattering at every corner, there were no remedy in these."

Beck: "It is the attribute of genius that it is rarely discouraged."

Beck: "The life and death of a civilization depends upon its sense of values."

Macaulay: "I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilization, or both."

Matthews: "Conscience in many respectable people consists in denouncing the sins of other people."

Beck: "A race of individualists obey reluctantly, when they obey at all, any laws which they regard as unreasonable or vexatious. They are increasingly opposed to any law which affects their selfish interests."

Proverbs: "Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set."

Beck: "In all public bodies, there are two kinds of men: the first do all the talking, the others do the working."

?: "A jest's prosperity lies in the ear of him that hears it."

For books are more than books, they are life,
The very heart and core of ages past,
The reason why men lived, and worked, and died,
The essence and quintessence of their lives.

The Cause of and Remedy for Lawlessness

A sermon by Reverend Doctor Harry H. Mayer, Rabbi of the Linwood Boulevard Temple, Kansas City, Missouri; given at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, March 16, 1924. Introduced by President Elbert A. Smith.

My friends, the gracious introduction that I have just received touches me deeply. Brief though it was it comprehended many ideas that were new to me. I was surprised to learn how much like the Jews you people of the Latter Day Saint Church are. I imagined that it was only the Jews who flocked to hear speakers who attacked them and their religion. I can assure you that if anyone wishes to make an assault upon my religion he will be certain of finding among his hearers a large number of my people.

It was also news to me to learn that your church had been publicly persecuted. I confess that I do not know as much of your church as I should like. I realize that your people and my people are in the same boat in that we are a minority in that, and any minority if it does not threaten the overthrow of the majority is not heeded except to be persecuted. Knowing that there is ignorance, of which I confess myself to be a party, about your religion as there is ignorance about my religion, my sentiments toward you from the very inception were inclined to be sympathetic and friendly, and since I have heard the surprising statement that in the brief span of your history you have been subjected to persecution just as my people have been for centuries exposed to it, I feel a deeper sense of brotherhood and fraternity, a fellow feeling with you, greater than before I came to stand in your pulpit to address you.

I must say that in a general way I have known something from the American history of the vicissitudes of your church in the early days, but it takes a statement that is not decked with the ribbons of rhetoric, a plain statement coming from the heart, such as the statement that was made here concerning your persecutions, to convince one that after all we do not know half of what is going on in the lives of our neighbors nor half of the history that is familiar to them, but which is a book oftentimes sealed with seven seals to those not of their household.

I am not going to speak on mooted points of doctrine. I am not going to make a plea for better understanding of my people, though God knows that is needed. I am not going to try to convince you that we have not only sentiment and loyalty that holds us steadfast to our ancestral faith, but also what we believe to be reasonable grounds for thinking that this faith is rational as well as revealed. And after all, what is rational is in a sense identical with that which is revealed. Revelation and reason are in a sense, not entirely, of course, but in a sense, interchangeable expressions.

My subject is one that I deem to be of the utmost importance, of first importance to all Americans. It is a subject that was suggested to me by a committee having in charge the holding of a special service once a week in my church for our young people—not the children, but the young single men and women on the verge of citizenship and the young married men and women who had taken upon themselves recently the responsibilities of citizenship as fathers and mothers, as husbands and wives. The subject was, “Respect for law.” The committee believed that nothing could be more timely, that nothing could be more appropriate in this period of national and world crisis through which we are passing than a discussion of this subject of respect for the law.

If ever the law has been flouted, if ever the law has been trampled under foot, if ever the law has been held in contempt by high and by low, by office-holder and by citizen marching along as a private in the ranks, that time is the time in which we are living. It would be unnecessary to point out instances that will immediately suggest themselves to you of how the law has been ignored and despised and condemned.

A former senator of the United States, making a keynote speech in this State in the city of Saint Louis, crystallized a sentiment that is in the minds of many when he declared himself to be in favor of fewer laws and better enforcement. I, too, believe in fewer laws. I, too, believe in stricter enforcement. But I am not so certain that this slogan which met with wild applause when it was delivered, “Fewer laws and stricter enforcement,” covers the entire field. I think that there is more to be done than demanding of our officers a strict enforcement of the law, although it is right and prudent and necessary that we should make this demand upon them. I think it is more than necessary that we should comprehend that we have too many laws, but the knowledge that this is the case frequently makes us contemptuous of the law rather than respectful towards it. The multiplicity of laws that have been passed is confusing, not only to the mind of layman, but also to the minds of the expert. Not even a Philadelphia lawyer can tell us all the laws. Not even a Philadelphia lawyer knows all the laws without investigating, sometimes very laboriously and over a protracted period, the law books where:
the sources of our laws are to be found. We have so many laws because our congressmen and our members of the state legislatures imagine that it is incumbent upon them to demonstrate their fitness for office by offering and urging the passage of at least one law. Every new member of the House of Representatives of our Nation or our State, almost without exception, frames some new piece of legislation and then returns to his constituents proudly boasting of what he has done to improve the laws of our country.

New laws do not mean an improvement of our country's condition. Usually they mean adding further difficulties to the administering of our laws. If these new laws are not imperatively needed, they are pernicious instead of helpful. Some of our senators, some of our congressmen are kind-hearted men who have not the heart to say no to anybody asking a favor of them. When their friends or acquaintances come to them and request them to sponsor legislation, instead of refusing unless they are convinced that the legislation is imperatively needed, they yield complacently and present the law to the legislature, to the senate, and work indefatigably in order to see that it is passed.

All of these factors combine to give us here in America more laws than we need, and the consequence is that the people cry out, "We have too many laws. We cannot know them all, and not knowing them we cannot be expected to observe them."

Not only have we here in America too many laws, but the great number of laws that we have are indefinite. They have been so hastily framed that the meaning of the law is not clear. We do not know what the intention of a great number of the laws that we have is, so court decisions are necessary. And before we find out what the intention of the law is, and in a number of cases the courts conflict in their decisions, and through the dragging years while the people walk in a cloud of uncertainty, the law must be carried to the higher courts until it is brought to be tested to the Supreme Court of the United States.

When the people find that besides having too many laws they are vague and indefinite and uncertain, their respect for the law is diminished. Besides all this we have laws on the statute books that are dead letters, laws that are archaic, laws that are obsolete. I am informed that in Los Angeles there is a law to this day upon the statute books and ordinances of the city, that every house containing more than four rooms must burn a light at the entrance of the house every night—a law that comes down from the frontier days. And in the same city I am told there is an ordinance that horses and mules should not be driven at a furious pace through the streets. These illustrations are but a few of those that might be cited to indicate that not only have we a good many laws in this country, not only have we laws that are uncertain in their meaning, but also laws that are dead letters, that should be eliminated from the statutes.

With this feeling, this knowledge concerning the laws of our country in the mind of the general public, is it any wonder that respect for the law has been on the decrease? The great war, we all know, is held responsible for adding further contempt for the law. I deny the statement frequently made, I challenge the charge frequently heard, that our country's soldiers are the worst offenders, that having been under arms they learn to forget the dividing line between mine and thine; having been taught to slay, having been taught to confiscate property, having absorbed the teachings all too well, and returning to the walks of life, they decide to continue to pay no heed to the commandment not to slay and the commandment not to steal. I venture to say that this is a false accusation against the splendid young men who have been under arms in defense of their native country. I hope it will be heard less and less.

It is not at this moment my purpose to discuss this matter, but I wish to say merely that I abhor war as much as anyone, that I believe a time of universal peace will come, and that I know war creates the destruction of standards that are usually applied. Nevertheless, I challenge the statement that our country's soldiers are largely responsible for the lawlessness that is sweeping like a tidal wave over our country. That this wave has inundated America we cannot ignore. In Europe it is the same. In England, in France, in Germany, in Italy the same complaint is heard, that everywhere contempt for the law is rampant.

But, friends, the situation is serious. I am not speaking here in order to repeat facts that are familiar to you without suggesting what the root of the evil is, without offering a humble solution of the problem, without appealing to you, my fellow countrymen, to be on your guard lest the house in which you live come tumbling down around you. This idea was recognized when our Government sent a Federal officer of high standing in company with a church worker of national and international reputation to the different centers of population to make a plea on behalf of law and order. These men did not go out to plead with bandits. They did not make their speeches to dens of robbers. They did not go into the slums to convert sinners and criminals. They addressed respectable bodies of men and women, feeling that it was their duty to make a plea to the same kind of people as you are and as I believe my young people are who wish to have the subject of respect for law discussed from the pulpit.

Who make the laws? It is not the criminal classes that make the laws. Who make the standards of conduct by which a country rises or falls? It is not the criminal classes. If the so-called better element is at fault, the poison filters down. The viciousness, the criminality, the lawlessness that sometimes pervade and permeate our modern life do not come from the gutters, do not come from sewers. It is because at the top of the social scale the respectable men and women, like yourselves, and like the young people of my church believe themselves to be, are responsible. You and they have seriously enough considered that respect for law has been diminished and that therefore the vicious and the criminal flaunt their crime in the face of the world. If our standards of right are strictly maintained, if we are scrupulously careful to do nothing that is condemned by the law or in contravention of the laws of our country, what a regeneration will be brought about!

How speedily will our salvation from this skeleton hand of lawlessness be accomplished by us!

It is up to the respectable people, it is their duty, it is their unavoidable responsibility to understand that because they have lost their regard for the law, because they violate it, others are emboldened to do it and go still further and commit the crimes and atrocities from which our land and all civilized countries are suffering.

The remedy is only with the upper classes, the better element, the church people themselves. They must practice what they profess. I know there will be classes. I know we shall find ourselves unpopular in some places, and they will say that he or she is not a good fellow; but these are times that try men's souls. These are times when our morals are being tested in the gospel, and those that are for right and virtue and goodness and law observance must take their stand in the camp where they belong.

The whole world has been contaminated by disrespect for law. The Good Book is full of admonitions to hold the law in high esteem. In the book of Psalms, the preface which introduces it, known as Psalm One, contains the startling exhortation, “Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the wicked, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night.” In another wonderful exhortation in the book of Proverbs we read: “For I give you good doctrine, forsake ye not my law.” It is a tree of life to them that lay hold of it, and the supporters thereof are happy. “Its ways are ways of pleasantness and all its paths are peace.”

You may say that these words which I have quoted refer to the divine law and not to national law, to civil law. If such a thought be yours, let me remind you that in the Scriptures there is no distinction between divine law and civil law; ecclesiastical law and national law are promiscuously placed side by side in the Mosaic dispensation, and concerning all of them it is said, “Thus saith the Lord.”

The law of our land should be sacred in our sight. It is a law of God. If we object to it, if we regard it as being archaic or crazy or insane, the thing for us to do is not to violate it but to work for its repeal. But so long as it has been enacted and placed upon the books of the statutes of our country, it must be revered and respected by us. Oh, for that former, that Biblical respect for law that teaches us the glorious doctrine that every law is holy.

It is sometimes said that the religion which I profess and teach is not a religion of law, but I contend that it is. It teaches that a man must be just before he can be merciful, and that is the religion also of American citizenship.

Our Constitution has been more deeply venerated than the law of any land by the inhabitants thereof. Let us not lose this American, this Biblical virtue of veneration for the law of God and the law of man.

It is a good doctrine; it is a tree of life to them that lay hold of it, and the supporters thereof are happy. Its ways are ways of pleasantness, and all its paths are peace. God grant that the eyes of the people of America may be enlightened to see the stern necessity of observing punctiliously, faithfully, strictly every law of our country that is known; every law of our country, whether approved by our conscience; every law of our country, because it is the expression of the will of the people and therefore the expression of the will of God.

Physical necessity moves man to labor. Mental necessity moves him to reason. Spiritual necessity moves him to believe that life has a meaning, that the method of it is progress. The wind of destiny blows him ever toward a large hopefulness. It also drives him to see that his direction is upward. In terms of social advance this means that the method of social progress is not to equalize all men on the level of the lowest, but all men's freedom of ascent to the level of the highest. Equality by degradation has proved a failure; equality of ascending opportunity has lifted the world.—Dearborn Independent, November 7, page 9.
OF GENERAL INTEREST

Work of the Fourth National Radio Conference

By ARTHUR B. CHURCH

Secretary Hoover designated November 9 as the opening date of the conference, but the broadcasters, under the auspices of the National Association of Broadcasters, held an all-day preliminary meeting on the 8th. The Washington Hotel management had invited broadcasters to make its hostelry their headquarters, and extended the use of their beautiful sun parlor for assemblies and for a lounging room for the radio men.

Between two and three hundred representatives of broadcasting stations attended the special meeting of the National Association, the largest group of the kind ever assembled. Various matters of importance to broadcasters, known to come up during the conference, were systematically discussed, and several resolutions for presentation to the conference were passed. The organization, on whose directorate K L D S is represented, gained quite a number of new members as a result of the meetings, greatly adding to its strength. On a committee of broadcasting educational institutions and churches, I represented K L D S and K F F V. The majority of university and college men favored an exclusive band of wave lengths for their use in broadcasting educational features; the latter formed an organization and presented a resolution to the Hoover conference; in this I did not participate.

An undercurrent of suspicion and jealousy among a large group of Class A broadcasters was evident at the beginning of the meetings, and continued throughout the conference. There seemed to be a belief that Class B broadcasters were trying to edge out the smaller ones. If there was any such movement afoot it was poorly organized, and I did not come in contact with it. It is certain that a few of the so-called “super-power broadcasters” strongly “feel their eggs” and think that they should be given special consideration on account of their immense investments. However, a number of super-power station owners, unable to obtain Class B waves, are operating on Class A or low waves. The smaller Class A stations feel this an intrusion upon them.

The biggest thing accomplished at the meetings of the National Association was the unanimity of opinion reached concerning the copyright situation. It was agreed by ninety-five per cent of the members that action by Congress is necessary, if broadcasting is to become a permanent institution. Attempts to reach satisfactory agreements with copyright owners have failed, and under existing copyright laws probably every broadcasting station is subject to litigation by copyright owners. The resolution passed for presentation to the Hoover conference reviewed briefly the history of the situation, and recommended that Congress be petitioned to amend the present copyright laws fixing definite license or royalty fees on copyrighted production, thus protecting both broadcasters and copyright owners.

The Fourth National Radio Conference, by courtesy of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was held in their splendid new building. About six hundred delegates were in attendance, including representatives from neighboring countries. Secretary Hoover delivered the opening address, and it is believed that this address is of sufficient interest to our readers to merit reproduction here.

Secretary Hoover’s Address

Ladies and gentlemen, before I go forward with a final statement, I know I express your appreciation for the fine courtesy of the United States Chamber of Commerce in giving to us their facilities here in Washington. I regret to say that in one sense at least, they are superior to anything that the Department of Commerce can afford; but it is in your service, and to our mutual good that the Chamber of Commerce has been able, and seen fit, to provide Washington with an adequate meeting place for national conferences on important subjects, and I know I express your appreciation to the Chamber of Commerce and to the President of this Chamber, Mr. O’Leary, who is here with us on the platform, for their fine courtesy in giving to us the use of this hall, and their committee rooms for this session. (Applause.)

This is the fourth annual occasion upon which I have had the pleasure of calling together the National Radio Conference for consultation with the Department of Commerce in the solution of the ever-new problems which have developed in the growth of this astonishing industry.

We have great reason to be proud of the results of these conferences. From them have been established principles upon which our country has led the world in the development of this service. We have accomplished this by a large measure of self-government in an art and industry of unheard-of complexity, not only in its technical phases, but in its relations both to the government and the public. Four years ago we were dealing with a scientific toy, to-day we are dealing with a vital force in American life. We are, I believe, bringing this lusty child out of its swaddling clothes without any infant diseases, and that is more than can be said of any other invention or industry that has developed in this country. (Applause.) We have not only developed, in the conferences, traffic systems by which a vastly increasing number of messages are kept upon the air without destroying each other, but we have done much to establish the ethics of public service and the response of public confidence.

Some of our major decisions of policy have been of far-reaching importance and have justified themselves a thousand fold. The decision that the public, through the Government, must retain the ownership of the channels through the air with just as zealous care for open competition as we retain public ownership of our navigation channels, has given freedom and development in service that would have otherwise been lost in private monopolies. The decision that we should not imitate some of our foreign colleagues with governmentally controlled broadcasting supported by a tax upon the listener has secured for us a far greater variety of programs and excellence in service free of cost to the listener. This decision has avoided the pitfalls of political, religious, and social conflicts in the use of speech over the radio which no government could solve—it has preserved free speech through this medium.

While we have reason to congratulate ourselves on the success of past conferences and on the results that have come from them, we still have difficulties to face and overcome. But before I come to a discussion of them it seems proper to describe some of the progress in the various branches of radio during the twelve months past. We will thus logically arrive at existing conditions and present problems which now press for solution.

Telegraphic Radio

Expansion of international communication by radio telegraph.—The rapid extension in the international field by American radio telegraph companies, which has already given us a dominant position, has continued during the past year. Public service has been inaugurated with Colombia, Honduras, Costa Rica, and Nicaragua. We have reason to hope that connection with Guatemala will soon be effectuated, thus forging another link in the communication chain which binds us to our friends in Central America. Direct service with Sweden commenced last December, and other European, South American, and trans-Pacific services have continued their effectiveness. Enterprises have been undertaken in the Philippines and in China. Altogether we will, by another twelve months, have systematic radio telegraphic communication with nearly every important country in the world—a matter of vast importance, for it increases the movement of ideas as well as business. We have no pressing problems before us in this field.

Clearing the Broadcasting Band of Code Signals.—There has been a gratifying improvement in the character of equipment used in marine communication, which has tended somewhat to reduce annoying interference to broadcasting from this source and to improve that service itself. The recommendations made by the conference a year ago that ships and short stations should cease to use 300 and 450 watts have been carried out as to our own vessels. Private enterprises have been entered into with Great Britain, Canada, and New Newfoundland, by which the vessels of those countries will no longer use these troublesome channels in Morse code communication off our coasts. I am hopeful that like understandings may be reached with other nations whose ships visit our shores. A few months ago, we reached an informal agreement with Canada relating to radio telegraphic communication off our coasts. Experimental work in the high frequencies has recently carried on some rather extensive tests, to which the average set can depend upon getting clear, understandable, and enjoyable service from the station day or night, summer or winter. I do not include radio golf around the edge of these areas in our conception of public service—that game is an exercise of skill and the efficiency of your set plus a gamble on the radio weather. But we are not here concerned with anything of its kind. We are here concerned with the potential usefulness of high-powered stations that have proved advantageous in broadening the "complete service area," but this area is much more limited than many expected. Subjected to the test of positive and reliable service at all times and all weathers it will be found that the real effectiveness of a station falls within a comparatively small zone. The maximum areas of positive service are we do not yet know with any precision. The Bureau of Standards has recently carried on some rather extensive tests, and has accumulated some interesting information, though it is not yet ready to give us any definite figures. If, however, we set up the most rigid standard of any complete service in adverse atmospheric conditions and all times of day and year for the average crystal set, then the bureau's actual measurements would seem to indicate that this radius of the circle served by a 500-watt station will not exceed ten miles, and that a 5,000-watt station will cover about thirty miles, and 50,000-watt stations will not cover much over one hundred miles. Obviously more sensitive receiving sets, or better atmospheric conditions, at once greatly extend these distances. Some stretch to 500 miles.

For some reason or other, the area is not always a circle, and it varies in different parts of the country for the same power. The department is undertaking the important task of determining these service areas, and you will have an opportunity here of inspecting some of the equipment we are using for this purpose. I am in hopes we can secure the resources this year to continue the study farther. It will give us information on which to base much needed improvements in other allocations of power that have been made. In any event, it is obvious that barring revolutionary discoveries it is certain that the country must continue to be served with local stations, and this is the present main business.

Our experience during the past year has somewhat more clearly defined the geographical area within which a single broadcasting station can give complete service. And our experience has also indicated that the average set can depend on getting clear, understandable, and enjoyable service from the station day or night, summer or winter. We have no press-
Scientific Investigation

No discussion of progress in radio would be complete without an appreciation of the intense scientific and industrial research now in progress in our universities and in the great laboratories of our commercial concerns, notably the General Electric, Western Electric, Westinghouse, and others, and, I might add, in our own Bureau of Standards. The vast expenditure of money and which our manufacturers are placing at the disposal of scientific research in these directions, is the real impulse to the development of this power.

Problems for the Industry

The problems in broadcasting are, as ever before in these conferences, of two categories: Those on the one hand which the industry can and should solve for itself in order to safeguard the public service and its own interest, and, on the other hand, those which can be solved only in cooperation with the Government. And again, as before, we should find the solution of as many of our problems as we can in the first category. I have no hesitation in discussing these questions because, as I have said, the more the industry can solve for itself the less will be the burden on the Government, and the greater will be the freedom of the industry in its own development.

Interconnection.—One of the extraordinary problems which we considered at the last conference was that of interconnection. This has proceeded during the year in splendid fashion without any necessity of artificial stimulation. A year ago interconnection between stations was only occasional and was a great curiosity. Now it is commonplace. It is becoming more systematized, and the trend is toward the creation of long-linked systems which will finally give us universal broadcasting of nation-wide events. The number of people who thrilled with joys and sorrows at the dramatic presentation of minute-to-minute events of the world's series is one of the most astonishing developments in radio broadcasting. (Laughter.)

Advertising.—Another problem for solution by the industry itself, and which now rests prominently on the public mind, is that of advertising. There lies within it the possibility of grave harm and even vital danger to the entire broadcasting structure. The desire for publicity is the basic motive and the financial support for almost all the broadcasting in the country to-day. Publicity largely provides the cost of broadcasting, which is based upon the creation of artificial demand for the programme in the mind of the listener, who now pays nothing, much as the advertiser does in the case of the newspaper or magazine. Whether an individual accomplishes his purpose through the building and operating of his own station or by hiring time on one already built by somebody else makes little difference.

But the radio listener does not have the same option that the reader of publications has to ignore advertising in which he is not interested, and he may resent its invasion of his set. It has been pointed out over and over again in previous conferences, and it might well be reiterated by this one, that advertising in the intrusive sense will dull the interest of the listener, and will ultimately defeat the industry. Furthermore, it can bring disaster to the very purpose of advertising itself, if it creates resentment to the advertiser. If we can distinguish on one hand between unobtrusive publicity that is accompanied by a direct service and engaging entertainment to the listener and unobtrusive advertising on the other, we may find a solution. I believe the conference could well consider a definition of this distinction all along the line.

Removal of stations from congested areas by remote control.—Another problem that the industry could quite well study is the removal of stations from congested areas. Blanketing of reception is inevitable within some short range of every station, and if the station is in the midst of congested population it affects thousands of people. Remote control has developed to the point where city studios operate perfectly with the transmitters far outside the city limits. I look forward to the not-distant time when all stations of sufficient size to cause disturbance will be banished from the cities and when their blanketing annoyance will cease. The conference could render a definite service by formulating proposals to that end.

Problems for solution by cooperation with the Government.

—My major purpose to-day is to discuss those problems which must be solved in cooperation with the Government.

The air-to-day overcrowded.—Up to the present time, we have had a pace of growth to become overcrowded operation, a field open to all who wished to broadcast for whatever purpose desired. I am convinced that policy was sound. It resulted in a wonderfully extensive development which could have been obtained in no other way. We have to-day five hundred and seventy-eight stations, and as no more than four of them are under the same management, no one can say there is not plenty of competition. To-day every solitary channel in the ether is occupied by at least one broadcasting station and many of them by several. Of the 578 stations, 197 are using at least 500 watts of power, and there are now pending before the Department of Commerce over 175 applications for new licenses.

Higher power has greatly strengthened the service to listeners, but it has aggravated the problem of providing lanes for the traffic. The duplication of the radio highways is now greater. Heretofore, it has been possible to duplicate channels geographically to a large extent among those using five hundred watts; but with the increase of power, this system becomes more and more difficult, for the borderland of interference is wider spread. We must face the actualities frankly. We can no longer deal on the basis that there is room for everybody to crowd into the radio highways. There are more vehicles on the roads than can get by; and if they continue to jam, all will be stopped. It is a simply physical fact that we have no more channels. It is not possible to furnish them under the present state of technical development. It takes no argument to demonstrate that eighty-nine wave lengths (and no more are available), can be made to serve innumerable stations, no matter how ingenious we may be in arranging time divisions and geographical separations. It is not a question of what we would like to do, but what we must do. One alternative, which would only partly solve the problem, would be to increase the number of stations by further dividing the time of the present stations down to one or two days a week or one or two hours a day. From the listener's viewpoint, it is the one that is the most reasonable. He would get a much degenerated service if we were to do that. It is not a question of program, location, and efficiency of transmission that counts. None of these will be improved, and in most cases they will be ruined by introducing more stations to traverse the same channels. A half dozen good stations in any community, operating full time, will give as much service in quantity and a far better service in quality than eighteen, each on one third time.

As the art progresses, the capital investment in a good station has risen to upwards of $150,000; and to provide technical staff, good talent, and interconnection, the cost of operation has risen to as much as $100,000 per annum, and frequently even more. The costs are in large part the same, whether the station works one day in a week or seven. If we impose more division of time and geographical separation, we shall drive the best stations out of action, and the public will be more poorly served. The choice is between public interest and private desire, and we need not hesitate in making a decision. There are, of course, some stations of special character which can divide time, but they do not often lie in congested territory.

It has been suggested that the remedy lies in widening the broadcasting band, thus permitting more channels and making it possible to provide for more stations. The vast majority of receiving sets in the country will not cover a wide band. Nor could we extend it without invading the field assigned to the amateurs, of whom there are thousands and to whose constant experimentation radio development is so greatly indebted. Radio in this branch has found a part in the fine development of the American boy, and I do not believe anyone will wish to minimize his part in American life.

If we did absorb the upper amateur band from 150 to 200 meters, it would not even solve the immediate difficulties. All these things bring us face to face with the problem which we have all along dreaded and for which we have hoped the development of the art might give us a solution. But that appears to be far off, and we must now decide the issue of whether we shall have more stations in conflicting localities until the new discoveries in the air solve the problem.

We hear a great deal about the freedom of the air. But there are two parties to freedom of the air, and to freedom of speech for that matter. There is the speech maker and the listener. Certainly in radio I believe in freedom for the listener. He has much less option upon what he can reject, for the other fellow is occupying his receiving set. The listener's only option is to abandon his right to use his receiver. Freedom cannot mean a license to every person or corporation who wishes to broadcast his name or his wares and thus monopolize the listener's set.

We do not get much freedom of speech if fifty people speak at the same place at the same time, nor is there any freedom in a right to come into my sitting room to make a speech whether I like it or not. (Laughter and applause.)

So far as opportunity goes to explain one's views upon questions of controversy, political, religious, or social, it would seem that five hundred and seventy-eight independent stations, many competing for a specialty, might give ample opportunity for great latitude in remarks. And in any event, without trying out all this question, we can surely agree that no one can raise a cry of deprivation of free speech if he is compelled to prove that there is something more than naked commercial selfishness in his purpose.

The other is a public medium, and its use must be for public benefit. This is a public benefit situation. The dominant element for consideration in the radio field is, and always will be, the great body of the listening public, millions in number, country-wide in distribution. There is no proper line of conflict between the broadcaster and the listener, nor would I attempt to array one against the other. Their interests are mutual, for without the one the other could not exist.

There have been few developments in industrial history to equal the speed and efficiency with which genius and capital have joined to meet radio needs. The great majority of station owners today recognize the burden of service and gladly assume it. Whatever other motive may exist for broadcasting, the pleasing of the listeners is always the primary purpose. There is a certain analogy to our newspapers and periodicals, but the analogy is not complete. A newspaper survives upon the good will of its subscribers. It has intimate knowledge of their number, and there is a delicate and positive sensitiveness in the reflex of their good will or ill will.

But the broadcasting station has little knowledge of the number of its listeners and much less ability to judge their ill will or good will. There is no daily return of rise and fall in circulation. If some one could invent a method of accurately measuring our progress, for I am convinced that some stations are broadcasting, not to receiving sets, but only to the ether. (Laughter and applause.)

The greatest public interest must be the deciding factor. I presume that few will dissent as to the correctness of this principle, for all will agree that public good must overbalance private desire. But its acceptance leads to important and far-reaching, practical effects, as to which there may not be the same unanimity, but from which, nevertheless, there is no logical escape.

What are we to do? We simply must say that conditions absolutely preclude increasing the total number of stations in congested areas. It is a condition, not an emotion. But this implies a determination of who shall occupy these channels, in what manner, and under what test.

I can see no alternative to abandonment of the present system, which gives the broadcasting privilege to everyone who can raise the funds necessary to erect a station, irrespective of his motive, the service he proposes to render, or the number of others already serving his community. Moreover, we should not freeze the present users of wave lengths permanently in their favored positions irrespective of their service. That would confer a monopoly of a channel in the air and deprive us of public control over it. It would destroy the public assurance that it will be used for public benefit. There are, indeed, many difficult issues to be solved, but we have to face them just the same.

It seems to me we have in this development of governmental relations, two distinct problems: First is a question of traffic control. This must be a federal responsibility. From an interference point of view, every word broadcasted is an interstate word. Therefore, radio is a one hundred per cent interstate question. And there is not an individual who has the most rudimentary knowledge of the art who does not realize that there must be a traffic policeman in the ether, or all service will be lost in complete chaos of interference. This is an administrative job, and for good administration must lie in a single responsibility.

The second question is the determination of who shall use the traffic channels, and under what conditions. This is a very large discretionary or a semijudicial function which should not devolve entirely upon any single official, and, in fact, I believe that if matter in the matter in which I have pointed out that thebroadcasting station has little knowledge of the number of its listeners and much less ability to judge their ill will or good will.

I am seeking your view as to how far this can be made practicable, or what other basis may be found for handling the problem. I have no frozen views on radio—except that the public interest must dominate. As many of you know I am not one of those who seek to extend any sort of government regulation into any quarter that is not vital, and in that suggestion I am even endeavoring to create enlarged local responsibility.

Much work has been done in past sessions of Congress looking to radio legislation. I cannot speak too lightly of the constructive effort expended by Representative Wallace White and his committee associates in the study of radio needs and the preparation of measures to meet them. But until the present time I think we have all had some feeling of doubt as to the precise course which legislation should take, for changes have been so rapid and conditions so shifting that no one was ready to try to chart an exact course. I am glad that Congressman White and other members of the House and Senate Committees are with us in this conference. I am certain that they have a hearty sympathy with, and understanding of, the actual needs of the radio public.

To sum up, the major problems for consideration are, to my mind: (a) Is public interest paramount? (b) Shall we limit the total number of stations in each zone pending further development of the art? (c) What basis shall be established for determining who shall use the radio channels? (d) What administrative machinery shall we create to make the determination?

That, ladies and gentlemen, is all that I have to weary you with in a formal address. (Loud and continued applause.)

One great problem of all conferences is to secure an organization that will be effective and rapid in movement.
within the conference itself. Every representative here is here at the expense of both time and money, and I have felt that perhaps the chairman of these conferences is justified in taking a rather positive action in the matter of organization in order that the conferences might get under way with their work.

We, in the department, have therefore worked out what we feel is at least a preliminary classification of the problems before the conference, and we have drawn up suggestions as to the constitution of committees for the handling of these problems, and we will suggest to you the constitution of those committees in their preliminary membership, or the shifting of these problems can be carried out in the course of the conference, that by some rearranged and established method of this kind we can advance the work of the conference for one or two days that would otherwise be spent in milling around.

So in that direction we have enunciated nine divisions among the problems which the conference will need in our view to consider; and I may say that if you have in your minds further problems, we can establish the machinery for their consideration. What we are endeavoring to do is to get the final results, and the final five of these is the problems of wave length bands. That is one of our old problems in every one of the previous conferences. Second, the advertising question. Third, licenses and classification; that is, classification for stations, questions like permits in advance of construction; listening for distress signals; license fees; duration of licenses; the question of operators for classes of services; the necessity of knowledge of codes and methods; and in the fourth group of problems we have outlined here, operating regulations; power; time division; duplication of frequencies; rebroadcasting; removal from congested centers. The fifth classification refers to the Merchant Marine; general problems; assignment of frequencies to coastal stations; use of spark equipment and T-R reports.

The second group of problems relate to amateurs. The seventh, interference, that is, interference from radiating receiving sets; maintenance of assigned frequency; harmonies and non-radio electrical interference. Eight, is the problem of legislation, and, nine, copyright relations to broadcasting.

There are some of these groups of problems which are not directly matters of governmental regulation, such as the advertising and copyright relations, but we have been urged to introduce them to this conference, and we do so in the sense of appointing committees who might make constructive recommendations to the industry.

Now we have set up these committees, and I will read to you the names that we propose for their preliminary membership. As I have said before, members of the conference who desire to join these committees should communicate with the chairman, or the chairman of the committees or with the secretary of the conference. The committees obviously have all the authority in the world to add to their own membership. There has been no effort to limit the activities of the committees, but one general observation in their work I think is at least a preliminary classification of the problems in question. More particularly, more especially, that perhaps the chairman of these conferences is justified in taking rather positive action in order that the conferences might get under way with their work.
to formulate three questions which I would like to put to the conference and secure an opinion as the result of full and open debate, as a measure of instruction to the committee on legislation before that committee goes into such discussion. We will distribute these questions, mimeographed, to you in a few minutes, and merely, as I have said, in order to have something to debate and to hold the debate to two years in debate.

I have enumerated these three dominant questions of principle: The first is, Is it essential to limit the number of broadcasting stations in order to prevent further congestion? Second, If stations are to be limited in number, should the public interest, as represented by service to the listener, be the basis for the broadcasting privilege? And the third question is, Should regional committees, familiar with the situation and needs of their communities, be established as advisory to the Secretary of Commerce in passing upon applications for broadcasting licenses?

As I have suggested, we have outlined these few questions in order that we may have what I conceive to be the three phases of these problems for debate, and I would suggest to you in order that you may have a little time for general discussion and have consideration of this question, that we should adjourn the conference until two o'clock this afternoon. That will give you time to formulate somewhat your ideas on these questions, and to get better acquainted with the materials which we have laid before you to begin thinking out the changes which you wish to make in your organization set-up.

The Pollution of Our Streams
BY WILLIAM M. CHAUVENET

Every man who has learned to live decently has regard for the comfort of his neighbor. In the crowd it is no longer possible to keep the independence of solitude. Even if we are entirely selfish and are looking out for ourselves alone, there are certain laws of decency—certain sanitary and protective laws we must obey.

Rivers and streams, however small, are the natural arteries and veins of the land, supplying much of the life blood of vegetation. In addition to this, they support the fish life, a most important source of food.

Where there is no pure water, civilization becomes impossible. How vastly important it is, then, to protect our streams from pollution. Never should the smaller streams and rivers be used as sewers, nor as the dumping place for organic and vegetable waste. This practice is common in many parts of Missouri, where tomato canning factories are in the habit of dumping their refuse into the nearest stream. This should be stopped. The decomposing of such vegetable refuse gives rise to certain organic acids which are poisonous to fish as well as to plants, and are very dangerous to man.

Some of the worst epidemics of history have been due to polluted waters.

Civilization at its best might be defined as a decent consideration of the neighbor.

Sooner or later all these unclean dumping practices must be regulated by law. Why not be among the first to stop such carelessness and protect your own streams for your own good? Most men are willing to play fair and to work fair, but the man who dumps upon his neighbor the refuse which he is unwilling to care for himself is doing neither the one nor the other. Dig the vegetable waste from your canning factory back into your fields. It will enrich them and at the same time save our beautiful little rivers from poisonous pollution.

NEWS AND LETTERS
Among the Saints of England

When the literature came through from headquarters in reference to the representative of the local bishopric assisting the district presidencies to broadcast the matter of the Graceland College endowment fund, we felt somewhat concerned over the whole matter, and, as it had been requested that the mission supervisor also act in consort with these brethren, we were wondering how it could be made possible for us to have personal contact with the Saints, seeing that the funds of the treasury were very low, and we could not see any possible way of putting our desires into effect until the Lord opened the way for us.

Brother and Sister H. E. Walker of California had been over to this country on a visit and, to enable them to see the country more fully, had purchased a motor car. About this time they returned to the States and by arrangement left their car for our use; so on September 18, Brother Abel Hall, who had been lecturing in Leicester, came down to London to take hold of the car, and upon his suggestion Brother and Sister Foster journeyed along with him back to Leicester, where Brother Hall had still another week's lectures to deliver.

A plan was quickly drawn up to call at as many branches as possible in the mission by means of the car; so, leaving on Saturday, the 19th, we arrived in Leicester for tea about six p.m., where we were enthusiastically received by the Saints.

It was arranged that after the close of Brother Hall's lectures a social evening should be had on Saturday, September 26, with the understanding that during this social Brother Foster should be given time to speak upon the Graceland College endowment fund. Brother Foster spoke for thirty minutes, with the result that the Leicester Saints have made up their minds to meet not only their quota of £3, but to exceed it four, if not five times. We wish them every success.

We passed on from Leicester on September 28, making our way to Manchester. Here we attended the conference of the Northern District, which was held in the new church at Beresford Road, Manchester. These people entertained the conference right royally, and it was evident on the Sunday night that the Spirit of the Lord was present. This was the last business meeting attended by our deceased brother, Elder Joseph Dewanup, and as he sat behind us speaking to us upon the matters that were upon the floor of conference, we were not to know that this was the last time he would ever take part in the business assemblies of the church.

Sunday morning the Saints met at half past ten, when Brother Foster addressed the assembly upon the financial law of the church. In the afternoon at half past two a splendid fellowship meeting was held, and in the evening, at half past six, Brother Abel Hall spoke to a capacity house.

We were favored upon this occasion with two duets rendered by a lady and a gentleman from a neighboring church.

The catering at this conference was excellent, and it was noticeable that everything was done with order and respect. The tables had been laid in the new schoolroom adjoining the church, and all our services were free from noise and bustle. Immediately after each session was over we were asked to adjourn into the schoolroom; the church door was locked; we partook of our refreshments entering into the church about fifteen minutes before the time for service. This itself seemed to breathe peace into our souls.

By agreement with the presidency of the Northern District it had been arranged for us to visit the following branches: Warrington, Farnworth, and Wigan. We visited Warrington on Monday, Brother Foster being the speaker, and Brother Hall was the branch president, Elder W. H. Chandler, the meeting was brought to a successful climax, the Saints there commencing right away to give contributions. This itself seemed to breathe peace into our souls. After the meeting was over was taking pledges and subscriptions.

W. H. Chandler, the meeting was brought to a successful climax, the Saints there commencing right away to give contributions. Another success.

Not only did we feel that the Lord was with us, but also we felt the power of the opposing forces. It seemed that we were being prevented from doing our work, particularly when starting out for Farnworth on Tuesday. We had traveled two thirds of the way by electric tramcar from Manchester when suddenly we stopped. Something had gone wrong with the overhead wires, and sparks a foot long were dancing around; wires were spluttering fire as they met; and the whole tram became enveloped with electricity. So we decided to step out (we thought too much of ourselves to stay for electrocution).

The tram remained stationary for about fifteen minutes with no chance of its moving, so we decided that our best course was to walk the remaining three miles. Our time of meeting was 7:30 p.m., but we arrived eventually about 8 p.m. It was intended that Brother Foster should address the Saints, but he was overdone (his feet and disabled leg giving him pain after the walk), so the task fell upon Brother Hall instead. Brother Hall gave a fine address and afforded the church members a new opinion of the work of the church college. We believe we succeeded in convincing the Farnworth Saints of the responsibility resting upon the members in the British Isles.

Wigan was our next destination for the following day. Brother Foster was now feeling much better and talked to the Saints here along the lines of finances, introducing the topic of the Graceland College endowment fund. The Saints were enthused after Brother Hall and the branch president, Elder Arthur Smith, had also spoken along the lines of the college. Before we left, some of the Wigan Saints had already pledged two thirds of the branch quota. We were about to leave, when we remembered that the major portion of the Saints here are poor. We feel that their blessing will be all the greater.

On the following day we traveled by our motor car to Bradford, Yorkshire. By this time Brother Hall evidently seemed at home at the wheel and accelerator. The Saints met us with that same spirit which had been manifested by others on our trip. Brother and Sister Foster were pleased to meet these good folk, for they have heard much of them but never met before.

Success along our line of duty seemed to have followed us so far, and it did not fail us at Bradford. After both of us had talked on Graceland—its work in and out of the church—the branch president took hold of the situation and after the meeting was over was taking pledges and subscriptions.

We had arranged to leave early the following morning, but the chance was given us to have a peep inside a Yorkshire weaving mill, so we took the opportunity and were shown round a part of the mill where Sister Emily Aldridge, sister to the Bradford branch president, Elder G. H. Aldridge, was employed. Each worker has to attend two machines, and the noise was almost deafening. Quite a number of the machines we saw were making up stockings.

Arrangements had been made some weeks ahead for both of us to attend the Midland district reunion, which convened on Saturday and Sunday, October 10, 11. The district president, Elder J. E. Meredith, had invited us, so we set out from Manchester for Clay Cross on the Saturday morning, but circumstances were such that we did not arrive until 10:30 p.m. Everything seemed to prevent us from getting there. On the Sunday we had a program that had been arranged for the Saturday evening, so had to be content with the one day's Sunday services.

The Saints had been asked to fast from the morning meal, and those who were at the prayer service had obeyed this request. The meeting was a spiritual one—a good beginning for the day. The next was preaching service, and the district presidency had arranged for three preachers to address the Saints. We visited the Branch in Graceland, Clay Cross, to address the Saints. In the afternoon the local Sunday school met. We were not privileged to be present, having been called away to another meeting. A fellowship service followed, when quite a number of the assembly testified to the goodness of God. Brother Foster was scheduled to address the members at the evening service and speak on the financial law.

Upon our returning to Manchester, we learned from one of the brethren of the death of Elder Joseph Dewanup. As we were in Manchester we called upon the widow of our brother, and although suffering from this severe illness we found her keeping up bravely. The next day had been set aside for the interment, so we followed the mourners and sang to our brother laid in Mother Earth. Only thought we see was that the officiating minister at the burial of Elder William Spargo of Wigan, another stalwart in the army of the Lord; we little thought he would be the next one we should see laid in Mother Earth.

Our plans were to go on to Leicester the following day, making our way to Gloucester, then on to the Wales district conference, scheduled to convene in Llanelli. We had then planned to go on to Exeter, where Brother Hall had made arrangements to give three weeks' Book of Mormon lectures. Our plans were shattered for Brother Foster contracted a severe cold that compelled him to take to his bed for nearly two days. We were forced to change our itinerary, so decided to take a trip to Sheffield for the Sunday and visit the Saints. We did. We found Brother John Aust and a few others still holding fast to the rod of iron. This was the first time for seven years that Brother Hall had visited Sheffield, which place, by the way, is the home town of Brother Foster. We stayed the night at his mother's house.

Upon seeing us, Brother Austin invited both to take over the meeting. Brother Foster in the chair and Brother Hall the speaker. Brother Hall gave them some encouraging facts as to what the Lord is doing in the British Isles; he spoke to them of the little band of people in Bradford, Yorkshire, and how the Lord brought them into the fold; of his experiences in Wales particularly in regard to Cardiff, where, the Lord has said, there are some who will come into the kingdom. (At the time of writing we learn eleven souls have recently been baptized in Cardiff.) We believe the Sheffield Saints were encouraged to go on, and Brother Hall promised to visit them again with his three hundred lantern slides on the Book of Mormon.

After the meeting we learned of Sister Arber having damaged the ligaments of her leg through falling downstairs, and we were asked by Brother Arber to visit her. We were also requested by Sister Harrison to pay a visit to a cripple friend of hers, one who had been in bed no less than nine years with paralysis of the legs. Hands were laid upon her in the name of Jesus by Elders H. Sykes and Hall, and two other prayers were offered on her behalf.

We called upon Sister Arber the next morning and found her cheerful, although she had had to take to her bed. We spent a pleasant hour or more with her, her daughter Doris, and Brother Arber, and then had to return to the home of Brother Foster. We arrived back in Manchester after having traveled over the top of the Backbone of England; the car had to climb and keep on climbing up hill quite a number of miles over what is known as the "Snake," and truly it is. We had to give the car a rest near the top, and here it was Brother Hall had to go down into a deep ravine for water, clinging to the grass on the sides all the way. For miles we could see nothing but moorland.

Our trip was coming to an end sooner than we anticipated. We intended setting out on the Tuesday, making our way to Exeter, but correspondence from several sources, correspondence referred to was to be taken up by Brother Hall.

Thus ended our five weeks' trip amongst the Saints; the conclusion to an experience that we will never forget, for the associations of the Saints and the blessings attending our work have been such that we can truly say the Lord has been with us.

President F. M. Smith Visits Oakland

What has been said by old-timers to have been the best series of meetings ever held in the Oakland Branch was made possible by the recent visit of President Frederick M. Smith and the loyal cooperation of Saints from all over the district.

When the officers of the Oakland Branch learned that President Smith was to attend a number of young people's conventions in the Northwest, they wired him an earnest request asking that he include Oakland in his western itinerary. His reply that he was changing his plans in order to be with them was a source of great joy, and immediately invitations were sent out to all the branches asking them to share in the "feast of good things."

The committee having the matter in charge, anticipating the size of the crowds, not only increased the seating capacity of the church for the Friday and Saturday meetings, but they secured the ballroom of the Oakland Municipal Auditorium for the Sunday services. The committee judged well, as the houses were crowded to hear from our leader.

The President was at his best throughout the entire series, and he can never know the great good his sermons and visit have done in strengthening the work in this part of the vineyard. By his "straight from the shoulder" utterances on matters vital to the establishment and redemption of Zion, he has convinced even the most skeptical that he has the true vision necessary to bring about the culmination of all plans by the prophets of old and of latter days. Those who were in doubt as to his position on the imamcule conception, the resurrection, and atonement were pleased to learn that he stands with his illustrious predecessors in the prophetical office. His belief that true religion and true science go hand in hand was strengthening to others who have met some opposition in the study and exposition of certain true sciences, while acting in the capacity of ministers. His five sermons were truly food for thought, and questions asked in the afternoon meeting Sunday were evidence that the Saints are reacting splendidly to the social program of the church. The Saints are intensely in earnest and want to go forward, and under the leadership of such men as President Smith and his associates in the various quorums they will rally to the call of the church.

Many expressions of appreciation for his sermons have been heard, and it remains for us to show our gratitude to God and his servant by showing our faith by our works. If, as a result of this visit, the Saints here are not more zealous, more constant, and more fully consecrated, we shall be greatly disappointed. Time alone can tell the inestimable good which this advice and counsel has done us.

Sunday, the 8th, was truly a gala day, and Saints from almost every branch in the district were in attendance. Some who were not there expressed their disappointment by letter in being unable to be present. It was a blessed sight to look over that large audience and notice the excellent attention which the Prophet commanded of all. It was the first opportunity for some, and they were truly appreciative of it. Two professors of the University of California were present at the morning service, and they expressed great pleasure in hearing President Smith. Yes, the gospel appeals to all, be they men of learning or otherwise. A cafeteria lunch was served by the sisters at noon, and all were more than pleased with the service.

The local and visiting priesthood rendered valuable service in assisting according to their various callings. The work of our choirs was truly appreciated, and their special numbers added greatly to the success of the meetings. The Saints were very generous in their contributions toward defraying the expenses incident to the meetings.

November 6, 7, and 8 will long be remembered by the Saints of our community.

Bishop Carmichael Visits Chatham District

Bothwell, Ontario, November 17.—We have just passed through the Graceland endowment-stewardship drive, and although no definite reports have been handed in, we expect Chatham District to go over the top. Windsor is the first branch to pass their quota, and they are not done yet.

We have appreciated very much the visits of Apostle M. A. McConley and Bishop A. Carmichael to our district. Brother Carmichael visited Bothwell anniversary services, at which were quite a number from other branches of the district. Many kindly remarks have been made as to his efforts. He also visited Chatham, Windsor, and Sarnia, from each of which we have had good reports.

Good work has also been done throughout the district by Missionaries B. H. Doty and John F. Martin. It is good to see our men going out with something definite along the line of stewardships, all able to speak the same thing.

Things are moving quietly here, and we trust surely and sanely. There is a deal of work to do, and few feel disposed to give a great amount of time.

We have just had several anniversary services, but attendance has been affected by wet weather and bad roads.

The passing of Sister Thelma Anna Brown, of this district, on October 28, has been felt as a keen loss. About two weeks previous to her death she graduated as a nurse from the Sarnia General Hospital. She had suffered from diabetes for more than a year, and while her case seemed hopeless, she bore her trial so patiently and cheerfully that her death was unexpected so soon. She always had a smile for everyone and endeared herself to her acquaintances.

The matron of the hospital and a group of ten nurses attended her funeral, although it was held seventy-five miles away. Four of her graduating class acted as pallbearers.

Sister Brown was the daughter of the late Samuel Brown, who was for forty years a missionary. Her mother also passed over several years ago. She was laid to rest beside her father and mother in Blenheim Cemetery. She leaves four brothers and two sisters. The funeral sermon was by Bishop John C. Dent.

 Fifty-two of the one hundred and seventy-five pledge cards issued have been returned, with a total of eight hundred and sixty-three dollars, averaging sixteen dollars per contributor. We would like our readers to note carefully the above list, and if we have overlooked your name please call our attention to it. From week to week the Pilot will issue contributor's names as they are made known to us. All contributions are being turned to the treasurer, Oran J. Barr, who will handle in the designated manner as per instructions from the Presiding Bishopric. It is gratifying to note that friends of the Latter Day Saint Church are among the names listed this week. Others who have not yet been solicited please see the committee—Oran J. Barr, Ed. Lowe, jr., or Jay E. Keck. We expect a score of cards next Sunday from the Sunday school children.—Saints' Pilot, November 18.
Pensacola, Florida

The stewardship plan, plus the endowment fund, has been our theme for study. We have oversubscribed the quota assigned us, and more is coming in. If all the Saints could only catch the beautiful vision, surely we could hasten the redemption of Zion.

District conference was held here October 7, and a good representation was had from the different branches. On Sunday the church was dedicated, with the main sermon by President F. M. McDowell. Brother T. C. Kelley offered a beautiful prayer. A history of the church work in this part, from the time the gospel was first preached until the present time, was given by Sister L. J. McBride. The whole program was very good.

The dedicatory service was preceded by an early morning prayer meeting, and the sweet, peaceful influence of God's Spirit was felt by many. District President A. D. McCall was one who was deeply touched when Brother McDowell commended him for his humility and service, telling him God was pleased with his efforts. They pleaded their lives for more diligent service in the future.

A basket dinner was enjoyed by all, then the afternoon service was given over to raising the endowment fund. Two were baptized later in the evening.

The evening service was mostly for the young people, and Brother McDowell's interesting way of admonishing and encouraging the singing was well received. Brother McDowell entertained the young folks again Monday night at Sister McBride's home, where he had them playing games and thoroughly enjoying themselves until time to depart.

We have been greatly blessed in our efforts to serve the Lord, until it seemed that sunshine reigned supreme. But it developed into acute Bright's disease, and she died November 2. She had been very ill for several weeks and had just begun to sit up when they first noticed that their beautiful child, who had been the very picture of health, was suffering from kidney trouble. All was done for her that was possible, but it developed into acute Bright's disease, and she died November 2. She was five years old and was of such a lovely disposition that many called her a little beam of sunshine. We hope that the dark cloud of trouble that has been overhanging this home will show its silver lining, and that by all they are called upon to endure these dear people may be drawn closer to God.

Brother McDowell has promised that if we build a nice brick church he will come back to help dedicate it. We wish him to keep his promise in mind, for our work has grown to what it is, and we need it back of it now. We may need him again in a few years.

A character Halloween party was given at the home of Sister McBride to help increase the endowment fund.

An Appreciation From Palestine

JERUSALEM, PALESTINE, October 28.—I wish to express if possible some of the pleasure I have had in reading President F. M. Smith's letters in the HERALD. I was interested in all of the letters, so if I ever get to see any of the reunion grounds they will seem familiar. At least I shall not feel myself a stranger. These letters also show the busy, useful life our President is leading and make us feel to ask God's blessings upon him continually.

I begin to feel that I would like to get back so as to be able to attend some of the good gatherings of Saints. I am thankful to have the privilege of attending one General Conference and three reunions when in America, so I can better understand and enjoy the write-ups of such gatherings. I am glad to hear of the progress of the church and wish there could be an awakening over here. May God help us all to be faithful and diligent to the end.

Box 290. MARY J. FLOYD.

Fall River, Massachusetts

November 15.—During the past month the sermons have all been on the stewardship plan and the Graceland endowment. The local speakers have been Pastors James W. Heap, Elder John E. Rogerson, and Priest Alma M. Coombs.

November 1, Elder W. A. Sinclair, wife, and eldest son, of Boston, were present. After the sacramental service, which was well attended, Brother Sinclair spoke on the Graceland endowment, making the plan clear to all. Nearly all are willing to assist, and the church can count on Falmouth to do its part. The committee plans to hold a supper or entertainment each month. The first supper will be November 21, with a musical program following.

Wednesday evening, November 11, Apostle Paul M. Hanson and Patriarch Richard Baldwin talked on the Graceland endowment. A number of pledges were signed.

Brother William Baldwin, wife, and sons went to the dedication of the church at New London, Connecticut, November 8. Brother Paul M. Hanson was also there.

Elder Franklin S. Dobbs, of Jonesport, Maine, is in Fall River at the present time. He has preached once, and it is hoped he will speak often. Brother Dobbs is on what is known as the boat train running between Boston and Fall River, connecting with the New York boats.

Deacon Edward M. B. Taylor was ordained to the deaconate November 8 at the evening service, by Elders F. S. Dobbs and J. E. Rogerson. Deacon Alma Coombs was ordained to the Atteboro conference October 25.

Sister Margaret Slater and children of New London are at the home of her mother, Sister Brindley. It is expected that an operation will have to be performed on little Marion, who is suffering from an infection in the face around the eye, caused from the whooping cough. She has been administered to.

The Department of Women is busy making articles for the Christmas sale. The Christmas offering is never forgotten. Candy and calendars are being sold as one source of profit.

Sister Margaret Henderson, of the primary department, gave paper cameras to the children, in the back of which is a supply of pictures with verses. A prize will be given the child bringing in the most money from taking photographs of his friends.

New Westminster Branch

CENTRAL PARK, BRITISH COLUMBIA, November 11.—Since our last letter to the HERALD we have been very busy. Soon after arriving home from our district reunion the Department of Women was well occupied getting ready to have a dining tent at the fall festival which started September 7 and continued for one week, giving both the brothers and sisters who were willing an opportunity to work.

We were pleased to welcome Sister Sargent and Brother Stratton of Kansas City, who spent one Sunday with us, and all felt encouraged by their visit. We would have liked to have them stay longer.

As it is hard to locate Saints in the cities, we might say that in Vancouver the Saints meet in the hundred block on Broadway East. Prayer service is held Wednesday night at eight o'clock, Sunday school at ten Sunday morning, prayer meeting at eleven, Department of Recreation and Expression at six in the afternoon, with preaching at half past seven. The New Westminster hall is located at 715 Cunnamoo Street. They have prayer service Thursday at eight o'clock, Sunday school at one o'clock, prayer service at two, Department of Recreation and Expression at a quarter after six, and preaching at half past seven. I am sure the Saints of either branch will be pleased to welcome any visiting brothers or sisters.

District President M. Cook was with us for two weeks and held meetings each night. While the attendance was disappointing, those who did attend considered their time...

well spent and hope to hear some more of Brother Cook's good sermons.

Some of us also had the pleasure of attending the first young people's convention to be held in this district, at Seattle. We were fortunate in that we had Brother F. M. Smith with us. He certainly was kept busy while there, but many things were made plain by him, things that had troubled the Saints. All felt a greater determination to go forward and put into practice the laws God has given to govern his church.

MAR COBURN.

Vinal Haven, Maine

The Saints here are very much interested in the Graceland College endowment and have pledged liberally, feeling in their hearts that this movement is the door being opened for the establishment of Zion.

Brother Richard Baldwin was here and spoke in the interests of the drive for money, and there was a wonderful spirit present during his stay over the week-end. The Saints were wonderfully blessed. The reason is that Brother Baldwin was here and held a series of meetings one week before convention.

Brother Archie Beggs does the preaching Sunday nights, and Brother Floyd Young and William Cundage Sunday forenoons.

The Sunday school is progressing under the leadership of Sister Elizabeth Barton, and we have a junior Sunday school in the branch.

Conference was held here in Vinal Haven October 11 and 12, and there was a good attendance considering the bad weather. Richard Baldwin was the only missionary able to be present because of there being no means of transportation to Vinal Haven.

We hope the Saints are all interested in the Graceland movement and feel the spirit of the drive. We are wishing for Zion to become a reality.

P. R. Burton in Santa Ana

Lota of news this month. Santa Ana seems to be girding herself for greater things. On October 20 the Department of Women began meeting again under the direction of Sister Lottie Calkins. Sister Rosa Tier of Los Angeles, district superintendent, met with them to instruct and encourage them in their work. They are taking up the study of the care of the sick.

On the evening of October 20 the Saints, led by the young people, went in street car to a meeting at the home of Brother George Emery. They played games and had a good time. The meeting was held in the old church.

On October 27 the Saints held a very successful Sunday school meeting. The best attendance was at the eleven o'clock hour. There were forty-six present and the meeting was well conducted.

We hope and pray that the Saints will continue to work together for the establishment of Zion.

PARKERSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA

November 24.—Several from here attended our district conference at Clarksburg, West Virginia, September 12, 13. The conference was well attended, and we had a very good one. Some from this branch were elected to district offices again. Sister May Griffin was sustained as district superintendent of the Department of Women, also as publicity agent. Mabel Smith was re-elected district secretary-treasurer for both the Sunday school and church. Harry Smith was re-elected Sunday school superintendent and sustained as bishop's agent.

At our branch business meeting September 4, Elder Baronet Beall was elected branch president for the year. Sister Desde Beall was elected Sunday school superintendent. On September 27 all the new officers made a talk and expressed themselves about the work they were going to try to do while in office.

Elder C. W. Clark of the First Columbus (Ohio) Branch was here for prayer service September 16 and then preached for us the following night. It was his first visit with us, and we were very glad to have him with us.

Brother Carl Wirth, of Madison, Wisconsin, was in our city Sunday, October 11, attended our services and spoke for us at the eleven o'clock hour. He said it was his first attempt to speak, and we thought he did real well.

The Graceland College endowment fund campaign was observed in this branch November 1 to 15. The branch president was chairman of the committee, and the solicitor acted as secretary. Three other members were on the committee, and an effort was made to see every member. Our quota was $150, and to date we have $160 and hope to get $200.

Our Sunday school held a very successful Sunday school institute November 22. It resulted from a meeting held by the superintendent and teachers of the school. It was held to try to arouse interest among some who had not been active in the work. Members were visited or written to, informing them of what we were going to have and requesting to be present. We were fortunate in having our district treasurer, Elder W. G. Gurney, of Morgantown, West Virginia, and Elder Thomas Newton, conference appointee, with us that day.

Elder Germon came in time for our prayer service on Wednesday night, and arrangements were made to have preaching on Thursday and Friday nights, and a priesthood meeting on Saturday night. Brother Germon spent the day in visiting the members, especially those who have not been very active in the various meetings of the branch. I am sorry to say that we have several of them, but hope some will become more active as a result of our efforts to build up the work here.

We planned an all-day meeting for November 22, starting

with prayer service at half past eight with a goodly number out. The Saints had been asked to come fasting and praying that we might have a good spiritual service, and we did. Brother Germon spoke in the gift of prophecy to the Saints, admonishing them to come up higher and to banish from their lives some of the things that were not pleasing in His sight. We were told the old dilapidated walls of the hall we used were blessed because of our presence. We have used this hall since the work was opened up here, about this time of the year in 1917. We were told that there were many precious souls in this place to hear his gospel, and that his people should let their light shine, that it would attract people to his work. Five of the Saints present were spoken to, and two were designated to occupy in the priesthood if they would prepare themselves for the work. One of the brothers spoken to had all arrangements made to leave that day to go away to find work that would take him and family away from here. He was told that the Lord wanted him to remain here and help care for his work in this place. We do not have a full set of officers and for some time have lacked those holding the priesthood to care for the work. The brother before mentioned had been away for about a year and one half and had been directed to return to this place as he could be of great assistance in the work here.

Following the prayer service the Sunday school was called to order and the minutes prepared, and the session turned over to Harry Smith for institute. This was our first attempt to hold such in this branch. The standard of excellence adopted by the district for the schools calls for one session each quarter. We were trying to comply with it. About two hours were occupied by those taking part, and all had their parts in good shape, showing that they had studied and prepared. Sisters Mabel Smith and Dolores Bunner played two violin duets very nicely. The parts taken and discussed are as follows:

"The purpose or goal of the Sunday school," Harry Smith.
"The Sunday school a stepping-stone to the church and kingdom of God," Desie Beall.
"The aim of teaching," C. W. Germon.
"The Sunday school and missionary work," Thomas Newton.
"Teaching the beginners," May Griffin.
"The work of the secretary," Dolores Bunner.

Those taking part were well qualified to discuss their topics, as it was pertaining to the office they are filling in the work. We were very well pleased with our first effort and hope to have another next summer and invite the other schools of the district, as was done at the Clarksburg Sunday school in July.

Elder Germon preached again at night, using the ten point test of self-examination as to our standing in the work, as was suggested by Brother Floyd McDowell at Kirtland reunion this year. It made us stop and think seriously and realize that we have much improvement to make before we can qualify one hundred per cent. This was Brother Germon's first visit with us since being elected district president, and we feel that much good was accomplished. We hope that we can follow it up and profit by his visit among us. His work took him home Monday morning, but Elder Thomas Newton is going to stay with us this week.

"I have enjoyed reading the Herald the past year. It is now a pleasure to sit and read the articles of the brothers. Did I say sit? Well, sometimes I read standing in the subway or on the elevated trains, and enjoy their light so shine. After having gone over the top in war, it is inspiring to read of going over the top in peace. Let the motto for 1926 be "Every member a steward." Here in the East we long for Zion's establishment too."—Louis J. Ostertag, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Strong for Church Policies

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—We are glad to report at this time that this branch has exceeded its quota of the endowment fund by one hundred dollars. When the drive was first begun here, prospectors were furthered as to whether our quota of $1,008 would be realized. But one never knows what can be done or what can be accomplished until an effort is put forth. Thank God the endowment for Graceland shall be raised, and Zion shall be a reality.

Our branch is strong for the policy outlined by the general church. The spirit of progress is being felt here in all our activities. Surely this work is going on under the able direction of Brother F. M. Smith. The Saints here are praying fervently that the Lord will lead and direct him in his endeavors to do his duty.

Patriarch Richard Baldwin and Apostle Paul M. Hanson paid us a visit recently and explained the benefits of Graceland College to the church.

We sincerely hope and pray that the work in all parts of the land is going ahead in leaps and bounds.

Brother J. W. Roberts was recently ordained to the office of elder. Brothers Harold Garfield and Donald Crowell were ordained priests at the last district conference.

Brother Roberts was elected to be our pastor for the coming year, filling the position that was held so nobly and faithfully by Brother E. L. Baker, serving over a long period of years.

We feel that God is with us and has blessed us with everything we need. Let us pray that the spirit of consecration will awaken us to our responsibilities.

Sister Chase Busy in Hawaii

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

I am enjoying my work here among this people very much, especially with the Department of Women. We believe we see advancement. We are now in coordination with the branch for the first time. Our Sunday school, Religio, and all departments have the one treasurer and often do all their business in one general meeting. We are glad that while on the mainland we took advantage of the splendid recreational course offered by Graceland. This people greatly appreciate and are very active in sports, games, and anything on this order. We have, as yet, not been able to interest them in special study courses except as we give them Bible and Book of Mormon normal work, about fifteen minutes Bible normal just before closing Sunday school, and Book of Mormon normal same time in Religio. We present this latter with use of maps and blackboards furnished by our late dear friend, Lucy Resseguie, we all loved so much. I believe they, and all of us, are getting good from this as all seem to be interested. The fruit, flowers, and climate are delightful. Come and see.

Sincerely,

HILO, HAWAII, November 6.

Resumes Gospel Work With Good Spirit

During the past ten days I have been holding meetings in Springerton, Illinois, with good success. This is one of the places where I did some of my best missionary work when I was under general church appointment, and I was glad to feel the old spirit with me as I presented the truths of the gospel.

Before and immediately after the recent General Conference I was considerably troubled over the difficulties within the church, and since I could not agree with the document on church government which was adopted at the conference, I sent my name to be signed to the protest being made by certain of the brethren. However, further thought on this matter has convinced me that since I have accepted the commission to represent the Lord and the church I must preach an affirmative gospel, and must not seek to tear down that which has been adopted by the body. I am therefore determined to do all that I can to build the faith of the Saints in the work of God, and have asked that my name shall be taken from the protest signed at Independence.

The many stories which have been circulated against the President of the church have to some extent destroyed my confidence in him as an officer, although I always recognized his integrity as a man, but I have now determined that I will give him the assistance of my prayers and exercise that charity which thinketh no evil. It seems to me that it is this way I can help him to be strong for the tasks which come to him, instead of making his task harder to perform.

My faith in the ultimate triumph of the truth is as strong as ever, and I want to continue to do my part for the advance of the cause of Christ. Your brother in the gospel,

L. C. Moore.

SPRINGFORD, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 24.

Mallard, Iowa

November 19.—We have all been very much enthused over the Graceland College endowment drive and have been very anxious to raise our quota, as we do not want to see our college an uncredited one. We will also be pleased to see the stewardship plan move forward as it should, and we know it will take the help of every one of us. We pray earnestly that God will bless the leaders in-faith, wisdom, knowledge, courage, and strength, so they will be able to work as they should.

Seven members of our branch attended district conference at Dow City and were much strengthened by the spiritual help received. We all receive new light and courage to help this great work along, by attending such meetings.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a Halloween party at the home of Sister Kolarish the evening of October 30. Games were played and lunch was served, after which all returned home, feeling they had spent an enjoyable evening.

November 1, at eleven o'clock, we had a very fine Graceland College program. Brother and Sister Peterson and family, and Sister Person and family from Manhattan were visitors on that date.

Brother and Sister Edwards were visitors November 8, and Brother Edwards was the speaker at the morning service. November 10 and 11 Brother F. T. Mussell was here and gave some very fine talks on college and stewardships.

The juniors of the Religio gave a fine explanation of the Word of Wisdom by chart on November 13.

Nauvoo, Illinois

November 25.—Sister Ida Stevenson, wife of Frank Stevenson, passed away last Sunday evening, at her home near Adrian. The funeral was held at the Rock Creek Church, Brother Berve officiating, and the Nauvoo Saints assisted with the music.

A community Thanksgiving service is to be held at the Methodist church on Thursday morning, and Brother Berve will preach the sermon. Our pastor is a very busy man; he is holding a special series of meetings in Montrose and has assisted in installing a furnace in our little church.

This furnace was made possible by the Department of Women, who have largely financed it. A surprise donation party was given our pastor and wife by the branch soon after their return from their vacation.

The Wednesday night prayer meetings are being held in the home of Brother L. H. Lewis during the winter months.

Brother Heber C. Snively and family have located in the Nauvoo House temporarily. This active family is proving a valuable asset to our branch.

Sister Irene Layton is home from Graceland College for a two weeks' rest.

Our three Graceland boys, Oscar Ourtch, Gomer Snively, and Bertram Lewis, are home for Thanksgiving. A dinner is to be given in their honor at the Lewis home by the Lewises and Sanfords. The young people are planning to make the boys' stay as pleasant as possible.

The original program given in Religio on the theme of Graceland met with a splendid response. Brother Berve arose at the close and said he felt as though he were at Graceland for he sensed the same consecrated spirit, and under its inspiration confirmed again the promises that were made to the young people a short time ago. Sister Florence Sanford composed the words and music for a college song, which was sung by a group of girls as follows:

Graceland's Call
You can hear the voice from round the world As they answer Graceland's call;
When she asks for the help that we can give To keep open Graceland's hall.

Chorus:
Dear old Graceland's doors are open to-day, And they shall always open stay, For we all will give our help untold, For the Blue and Gold.

There is where we learn to work and play, And live the best we can;
That we all may be ready to do our share, To help in the stewardship plan.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

That which was apparently forbidding in way of weather was dispelled by a break in the clouds, and the sun began to shine along about eleven o'clock, when our thirty-sixth quarterly stake conference began. However, the weather had no dispelling effect upon those who attended the conference, as from the Sunday school at 9.30 to the close of the evening service, and also the business session which occurred the evening of the 16th, there was not a thing discordant during the entire period.

At the 11 o'clock preaching service, Stake Missionary William I. Flagg dispensed the word, using as a basis for his sermon, "What manner of love the father hath bestowed upon us." He had good liberty in his effort before an appreciative audience that filled the church. At the same hour a service was held for the junior members of the stake.

At 2.30 the young people's social service was held in the l. X. L. room and was reported to have been an interesting and lively meeting.

At the same hour the regular social service was held in the main auditorium and was replete in the manifestation of the Spirit in prayer, song, testimony, vision, and prophecy. Following these two meetings, the men of the stake were addressed by Cyril E. Wight on the importance of "preparation," which was well received. In the main auditorium the Department of Women were addressed by Sister J. O. Warden, and this was reported to be a very timely discourse.

At 7.45 Elder J. A. Tanner was the speaker, his effort very appropriately closing the day.

The business session held on Monday night was interesting from the standpoint of the character of business done. The presidency's report, which was quite lengthy, was full of splendid suggestions. The report of the bishop showed cash on hand April 1, $1,652.35; received since, $35,974.07, making a total of $37,626.42. His expenditures have been $32,408.74, leaving a balance of $5,222.68 on hand. Information was given that the auditing committee was no longer needed, as that work would be done hereafter by the general church auditor. The officials of the stake were sustained as follows: Stake presidency, Elders J. A. Tanner, S. S. Sandy, and C. D. Jellings; stake bishopric, F. B. Blair, John Tucker, and Fred S. Anderson; stake high council, C. A. Selbe, H. W. Goold, J. O. Warden, R. L. Bishop, R. E. Browne, J. A. Harrington, L. W. Hayes, E. N. Palmer, Harvey Sandy, A. R.
White, Robert Winning, and John J. Schimmell; stake secret­ary, recorder, historian, reporter, W. S. Brown.

The appointment of pastors as follows: Central Church, the presidency: Kansas City, F. A. Evans; Fourth Kansas City, J. O. Worden; Bennington Heights, H. W. Good, associate, James E. Cleveland; Mount Wash­ington, R. L. Bishop; Northeast, C. A. Selbe; Argentine, R. E. Browne; Armourdale, John Gross; Chelsea, J. A. Harr­ington, associate, A. W. Sears; Quindaro, E. N. Palmer; Heathwood, John Tucker, associate, A. W. Eskridge; Grandview, Mrs. T. Jellings, associate, L. W. Hays; Malvern Hill, W. O. Hands. Auxiliary officers appointed were for Sunday School, J. Ray Lloyd; Department of Women, Fern Lloyd; stake chorister, Bernice Griffin.

The appointment of local department heads were, for Central, Root, Heathwood, John Tucker, associate, A. W. Eskridge; Grand­

Meetings will be provided for the officers of each group.

Our meetings are fairly well attended, considering sickness and other things. During the time the special meetings were held at Central, we held no services except Sunday school, so that all might be able to take advantage of splendid services there.

We are doing well on the amount assigned us to raise for the Graceland endowment. Expect to raise our share and go over the top.

Sister Elizabeth Raw left us in September to attend the Kansas University at Lawrence. Brother Eugene Black­smith has taken her place as president of the Religio and is doing well. The older ones study the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, while other studies are arranged to interest and instruct the children and young peo­

dle. The Sunday school and Religio united in a Halloween party, which was well attended and enjoyed by all.

A letter from Holden Stake suggesting that we change the name of our Grandview Church because of confusion with a congregation by the same name in the Holden Stake was passed negatively, because the congregation felt they would be disturbed thereby.

A recommendation was introduced and passed which allows the serving of meals in the church dining room on conference Sundays.

We have tried to interest one and all and feel that we have been successful. Owing to the fact that the families are scattered, it has been hard to reach all, but where we could not go letters were sent out by the committee of sisters—Sisters Quick and Lundquist of Piper City.

We have gone over the top and did not send in a pledge card. All was paid in cash.

We feel that Graceland is here to stay. May the Lord bless all who have had a part in this work, as well as those who responded so generously to the cause we all love so well.

Mrs. D. W. Mais, of Tomahawk, Wisconsin, in renewing her subscription to the Herald, writes that they have no branch there, but they do enjoy the radio programs. Some people in the town are warning against listening to K L D S, saying listeners will be misled. Of course it does not bother those who belong to the church. Attacks are being made against the church, and this sister says it would be well if one of our men could be there to do constructive work.

At the eleven o’clock service President Elbert A. Smith continued his series of constructive sermons on “The things that we verily believe to be true.” The subject Sunday morning was, “The personality of God.” These sermons are being well received as is indicated by the fine attendance and splendid attention manifested.

Sunday evening the capacity of the upper auditorium was taxed to accommodate the audience which listened to Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths as he discoursed on the order of the priesthood as it descended through lineage from father to son through the ages, and finally upon the earth. He also by illustrations graphically pictured the necessity of following in the footsteps of the Master, and by actual demonstration of faith and works we may be able to claim we are “in the faith.” Brother Griffiths showed a picture of a Society Island pearl diver ready to descend one hundred feet to the floor of the seas in search of pearl shells. He said one of these divers sent him three golden pearls, one of which was quite large and almost perfect. He carelessly placed them in his grip and forgot about them for almost a year. After returning home he thought of them and gave one to a friend and the other two to his wife and daughter. The daughter took the pearls to a jeweler to have them mounted in a ring, and when he saw them he became very much excited and wanted to know where she had obtained them. He said they were very valuable golden pearls. Brother Griffiths drew a lesson from this experience and said sometimes we do not place the proper value upon the gospel “pearl of great price” and fail to appreciate its beauty.

Preceding the sermon by Brother Griffiths there was a half hour song service. An outstanding feature of this service was a solo by Mrs. F. A. Smith, “There is no death.” We have often wished we could vividly bring to our minds the words being sung by soloists and choruses. We could then enjoy both the spirit of the song and also the music. It seems almost impossible to always understand the words which are being sung, especially when they are not familiar to us. Sister Smith gave a reading of the words before she sang the solo. The combined reading and singing had a beneficial effect on the audience, and many favorable comments were heard regarding the rendition of the number. This is the last verse of the song:

“I tell you they have not died;
Their hands clasp yours and mine;
They are now but glorified,
They have become divine.
They live! They know! They see!
They shout with every breath:
“Life is eternity!
There is no death!”

Tuesday evening the choir gave their annual Thanksgiving concert. It consisted of a mixed program, concluding with a cantata of a solo and chorus entitled, “The Landing of the Pilgrims.” From the remarks made after the close of the splendid program, it met with an enthusiastic approval.

The Director of Music Paul N. Craig is training a chorus for the rendering of the “Messiah” which will be given December 27. Sunday afternoon one hundred and fifty sweet singers of Zion attended the rehearsals. This is a record attendance. Quite a number of the Saints slipped into the church to hear this fine chorus.

Wednesday evening President Floyd M. McDowell will be in attendance at the young people’s prayer meeting in the lower auditorium of the church, and at the close of the service he will give a ten-minute talk on the ideals of the church. President McDowell will be in attendance at these Wednesday evening meetings for some time to come. Sunday evening he will commence a series of sermons in the Stone Church.

President F. M. Smith returned to Independence on Tuesday afternoon of last week from an extended trip in various parts of the mission field. He renewed an invitation to J. W. A. Bailey and W. A. Smith, of the missionary force, in Independence last week.

The S. de V. Temple Builders of the Stone Church group, with their monitor, Sister Margaret McKevitt, gave a chili supper Tuesday evening in the dining hall for the benefit of the Graceland endowment fund, to which the girls pledged $50. The supper was more of a success than they had anticipated.

Last Monday afternoon, November 23, at Carson’s Undertaking Chapel, occurred the funeral of George Rabidou, of Kansas City. He was born in Kentucky November 25, 1846, the son of Isaiah and Barbara Minch Rabidou. His death occurred early the morning of November 23, and his brother Joseph, of Lamoni, passed away the same day. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

The Department of Women will hold its regular monthly open meeting Friday, December 4, at half past two in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. A very good program has been prepared. Mrs. H. A. Moriarity will tell a story, and Pastor C. Ed Miller will give an address. There will be special music. At half past one, preceding this meeting, there will be a business session of the W. C. T. U. This will be a very interesting and profitable meeting, and a good attendance is desired.

Second Church

Pastor R. V. Hopkins was the speaker at the eleven o’clock service, and the junior service was postponed that these young people also have a visit from him. Brother Hopkins is very grateful to be again contribute his effort to the good of the work, and he is being very kindly received in his visits to the various congregations.

The afternoon prayer meeting of Sunday was better attended than is usual, and was very active, and comforting to the Saints.

We noticed that after evening the choir rendered a beautiful classic, “The Lord of the harvest,” being assisted by Sisters Corinne French and Cleo Salisbury. Sister Frank Good directed and Sister J. A. Curtis was at the piano.

Monday evening Elder E. E. Fletcher, of Ottertail County, Minnesota, an elder of what is known to many as the Cutlerite faction, was the speaker to an audience from the various parts of Independence.

Walnut Park

Sunday was Religio day at Walnut Park, the local superintendent, Marion Schafer, having planned a day of special import to young people. The prayer meeting at eleven o’clock gave opportunity for expression on the results of Religio endeavors, and at Sunday school Orlanda Nace talked on the history of the local. This was organized in 1918 with seven-teen charter members. Brother Nace was the first president, continuing eight years, when the enrollment had reached one hundred and thirty-six.

The varied musical talent of our Religions was enjoyed in excellent numbers at Sunday school, also at the eleven o’clock meeting, and for a half hour preceding the evening sermon.

The speakers were Brother C. Ed Miller in the forenoon and President E. A. Smith in the evening. Brother Miller dwelt largely on the need of Latter Day Saint young people preparing themselves for leadership when in an environment tending to lead them from the straight way. Being strong to act independently where they know they are right, they will not only keep themselves pure but may oftentimes prove their brothers’ keeper also. His stories of known facts were such as will make his lesson to the youth one long to be remembered by them.

President Smith’s sermon on faith was equally good and plain, and is the first of a series on gospel principles to be given in this church on succeeding Sundays. He had a much larger audience than our speakers have had recently.

A Sunday-school teachers’ meeting at the home of Superintendent Barnhardt Tuesday evening was well attended,
The work on the new church progressed rapidly this week. Thanksgiving Day twenty men gave time to help get the work as far along as possible. This was a fine response, for the day was a dry day, dampening the hopes of the weather. It is hoped that the church will be ready for use by Christmas time.

The “trip around the world” that was held November 21 was quite a success. Almost fifty dollars was raised for the building fund.

A bazaar will be given in the dining hall at the Stone Church Friday, December 4, afternoon and evening. A light supper will be served, of which the main dish will be hot chicken sandwiches. There will be also candy, pie, cake, cocoa, and other catables for sale.

Recent speakers have been J. E. Warner, John Ely, and Lyman Fike.

Spring Branch

Thanksgiving evening the orchestra and the choir met at the home of Brother and Sister D. D. McClain, and the time was spent in playing games and enjoying music.

The Sunday morning prayer service at a quarter after eight was well attended and proved profitable and enjoyable to all present.

The eleven o’clock hour was occupied by D. D. and W. A. McClain, and in the evening G. F. Weston spoke, giving a very interesting talk.

Sunday school was well attended, with several perfect classes.

Monday night, December 7, business meeting will be held for election of officers in the branch, Sunday school, Relief Society, and Department of Women.

November 24—“It can’t be done,” was the general verdict when it was announced that our branch was expected to raise four hundred dollars for the Graceland endowment. Brothers F. T. Mussell and W. A. Smith were among the crowd, and the meeting was well attended and profited remarkably to all present.

Clinton District Conference

TAKERVILLE, MISSOURI, November 24.—Conference services opened on Friday with a nice representation of Saints from all over the district, and seemingly within each heart was the sweet spirit of consecration. The district felt very fortunate in having with them Brother Frank Edwards, one of the Quorum of Twelve, who came to represent the Bishops as well as the church in general.

The business session on Friday was seasoned with the Spirit of God, and each article was cared for with but little or no opposition. The Saturday morning session was filled with that same spirit, and the business was soon disposed of. A suggestion came from the chair that the remainder of the time be used in short talks from the young men of the priesthood. This suggestion, however, was overruled by a unanimous vote, asking Brother Edwards to speak on stewardships. This was Brother Edwards' first appearance in the stand, and truly we can say he enjoyed the endowment. It was a beautiful sight to see the Spirit of God filling the hearts of men and women, some who had never been touched before being melted to tears. The testimony has been given that while Brother Edwards was speaking a light encircled his body from his head to his feet. The sister who thus testified said at first she thought perhaps it was her eyes, but after rubbing them, she recognized that it was the Spirit of God.

Elder W. E. Haden, missionary in this district, says it was made known to him that under this Spirit the dress from our souls is being purged.

Sunday was equally enjoyed. At eight o'clock the young people gathered for prayer service, which was followed by Sunday school and preaching. At half past two the sacramental and ordination service was held. This meeting will long be remembered. While one of our young men was being ordained to the office of elder, we were made to realize that God was rarely in our midst.

Following this the Rev. Brother Edwards and Brother M. C. Martin were called to Fort Scott, Kansas, to occupy at the eight o'clock service in that city. There again we were made to rejoice under the inspiration of the Spirit of God.

The conference closed Sunday night with all rejoicing and with a determination in each heart to assist in the redemption of Zion.

In two days Brother Edwards spoke seven times, and all were blessed because of his efforts. The theme of each service was stewardships. Since conference, more than ever, the Saints are asking for assistance in filling out their inventories and are expressing themselves as being desirous of paying their tithing and going on the stewardship basis. We are happy to know the Saints are recognizing the importance of stewardship and the upward trend of the church.

A Good Conference at Wichita

WICHITA, KANSAS.—This branch was never in a better condition spiritually. Most of the members are awakening to a sense of their duty, and under the leadership of Pastor Thomas S. Williams are accomplishing a good work. Our pastor was a former Graceland student, and we sincerely trust that Graceland can send out many more such men as he, for with the work under the leadership of such men the church would advance.

Our quota for the Graceland endowment was more than doubled. Everyone seemed anxious and willing to respond to the call.

A goodly number of our people have made out their inventories, thus trying to comply with the law set forth by the church, and we feel our branch will show an increase in tithing this coming year. This is one evidence that the Saints are wide awake here.

Our quarterly conference was held October 1 at Wichita. Apostle M. A. McConley was here and gave some interesting and instructive points on stewardship which were of much interest to the Saints. Much good was derived from his visit. District Missionary H. V. Minton was also here and gave an illustrated lecture that was enjoyed by all. Brother Minton is a capable man, and we are glad to have him in our district. A good spirit prevailed throughout the conference.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Mrs. A. A. Buschow, is doing good work. They are studying volume one of Church History, and unity and interest are prevalent.

Brother Whipple, formerly of Topeka, has charge of the midweek prayer services. He is amply qualified for this work and is having much success. We appreciate having Brother Whipple and his family in our midst.

On October 5 Brother E. L. Barraclough and Doctor Minnie Gregson were married. Brother Barraclough was the first to establish the work in Wichita, and by his faithfulness he has endeared himself to the Saints. He is still doing his part for the advancement of the work. Sister Barraclough has lately been baptized, and we believe she will be a real helpmate for her husband.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, November 18.—The Sunday school is moving along slowly at present with the attendance not so large as it has been.

Recently a gospel team from Tryon came out to help. This is a group of young people not of our faith. They gave some good talks, and a lady played the organ for Sunday school, as our organist was absent. They also helped with the singing and talked on the questions asked in the senior quarterly. These young people go from place to place to cheer any who are trying to serve Christ.

We have sacramental and prayer service every first Sunday.

We miss very much the visits of Brother Prettyman, our faithful missionary. He planned to be here all he could, and many will not forget his teachings. However, we fear that some did not grasp what he had to present when he was last here. We hope God will send more help, and pray that his will may be done. We realize he knows what is best. We feel sometimes as the Macedonians did.

The publicity work is moving slowly yet surely, and we hope to see its work reach the goal that would be pleasing in the sight of God.

There is some sickness and some other causes that keep us busy, but it is hoped all will eventually come out well.

Beaumont, Texas

November 16.—It has fallen to my lot to do much traveling this year. Following our return from our long trip to the north last summer with the Steamer, I had occasion to make a trip to Wyoming.

More recently I have traveled to the Gulf Coast, where I am at this writing—way down south in the fields of cotton. Doors and windows are wide open, and Old Sol is pouring forth his splendor most effectively.

To-day I went through a cotton gin to observe the processes of the separation of the seed and the boling. I saw the happy darkies picking the fluffy stuff in a field I visited, and I, too, tried my hand.

The other day I went through a rice mill where the rice is hulled and the sorting and sacking is done. It is an immense plant. From here ships laden with this most nutritious diet, also with cotton bales, take clearance for distant and foreign ports. It was interesting to see them loading, and still more so to board the large freighters and admire the perfection to which marine and nautical evolution has carried mankind.

The vision of all this development, these many and varied conveniences and comforts, inclines one to wish for the day when Zion on the banks of the Missouri will not simply
The Work of the Church at Washington

WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—The Saints here meet at 1012 Ninth Street Northwest, on the second floor. Sunday school is held at half past ten.

We have been enjoying some splendid sermons by Brother Joseph Edwards, of Baltimore, Maryland, and Brother Adolphus Edwards, of Sparrows Point, Maryland. These brothers have been coming to Washington on alternate Sundays for the past two months. Brother Adolphus Edwards, jr., superintendent of the Baltimore Sunday school, was with us on November 15 and told us of the progress of their Sunday school that was organized a few months ago. The Washington Sunday school has missed the help of several members who are now with the Baltimore Sunday school, but we are trying valiantly to keep the home fires burning.

We are very glad to have with us again Sister Aura Fike Jones, who has been away for some time on account of the sickness of her mother. Sister Jones is an uniriting worker and was greatly missed during her absence.

MYRTLE L. CUMMINGS.

Hutchinson, Kansas

November 23.—The few Saints here feel much encouraged to report that they by the help of the Lord were able to overcome their Graceland endowment quota more than forty per cent, and there are still others to hear them. The quota of fifty dollars seems small, yet it looked rather large to the few active Saints here. We are pleased to make a good showing, however, and our prayers are that the Lord will assist us to be instrumental in spreading the gospel, to the end that our numbers may be materially increased.

There are so few here that we can only hold cottage services.

We have plenty of room for active young members of the priesthood, and opportunity for them to tell the angel message, but remunerative occupation is not so plentiful.

We long for the time when we can get as good a hearing as other churches.

E. E. MLYTLN.

Lucasville, Ohio

November 28.—Since our last news letter the Saints of this branch have been caused to mourn the death of Brother William Cox, also Sister Sarah Catherine Crabtree, wife of Brother Rufus Crabtree. Those who knew these Saints will miss them.

Work in the branch is going along nicely with fairly good attendance at all services, considering the heavy fall of rain and the condition of the roads.

Our last report stated that Brother Mark Crabtree was at Buena Vista holding a few meetings. We are glad to say he had the privilege of baptizing two promising young people, a man and his wife. They were confirmed by Elder Ed. Wiget of McDermott. Brother Mark expects to go back soon to hold a series of meetings.

Brother Henry Crabtree, who has been helpless with paralysis for nine months, is not expected to live very long. Also Sister Darius Crabtree and Sister Joan Crabtree are not well. Sister Lizzie Culp, the wife of Brother Charley Culp, has been poorly for some time.

A Christmas entertainment is being planned.

We were much glad recently to have with us District President James E. Bishop. He was most happy to give us some wonderful sermons on stewardships. He is a wonderful speaker, and we feel sure he will do his part to help redeem Zion.

Our wish is that every branch and every Saint will have a happy Christmas and New Year, and that they will begin the new year more earnestly and sincerely and be more prayerful and careful than before.

The Missionary Work

The Church of Christ is a missionary church and must continue so to be if it is to function as he would have it function. This idea at once brings us to a consciousness that there is something required of us individually and also collectively if we would be true to the spirit and the idea of his church. When we say a missionary church we mean that the church must be active in the spread of the gospel of life; it must carry on a campaign of aggressive and constructive proselyting. In order to do this, all must be helpers. It is one thing for us to talk about missionary work being conducted by those that are sent out under General Con­ference appointment, and it is another thing to support this missionary campaign by our means and our moral support. I am sure the membership are coming more and more to see the need of doing what we are able to do to advance the interests of the church.

This church is a divinely appointed institution, and as such it is the best-organized body in the world; if only we were willing to work our organization as fully as it should be worked, we would be able to rapidly advance the cause of Christ among men. I am sure our greatest need is to become active in the performance of duty and persistently pursue the course that is marked out for us by Jesus Christ our Lord. We have not learned so fully as we should that we are laborers together with him, and therefore we often wait for some one else to do our part of the work; and in this way we are not growing ourselves and our church. If we understood more fully, we would do better; but the source of knowledge is open for us, and it is our duty to gain that wisdom and knowledge that shall fit us for the service of life. If we are to maintain our place as a missionary church, we must exert every means available for the advancement of the work that is intrusted to us. God intends that we shall have a part in the salvation of mankind, and we cannot do our part the debt will be charged to our account; but if we do what we can, and prepare ourselves to the uttermost, we will stand justified before God. Surely we ought to try to do our best to enrich the world with the truth of the gospel, which means so much to us.

We are told in latter-day revelation that "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them." This at least insures us that there is a place for us in the work and that we should strive to find our respective places and then fill such places with honor to God and blessing to man. The highest tributes that we can pay to our beloved Lord was the tribute he paid Mary when he said, "She hath done what she could." Surely we can do as well if we try! God only requires of us that which we are able to do, but he is going to insist that we shall be held accountable for the things we are able to do. Are we considering this matter as we should? In what way are we helping in the spread of the gospel? Is what we are doing a blessing to man? Are we who are being missionaries and helping in the worthy cause of saving mankind? Are we permitting the widow to contribute her mite, and we who are able to do more excusing ourselves by saying, "If I could preach the gospel, I would be glad to help"? No, I am convinced there is no one in the Church of Christ who is not willing to do his part, and I feel that all are going to rally to the support of the work and that all will unrestrainedly use every means within their reach to forward the cause of life among mankind.

He who is warned should warn his neighbor, is the word of instruction to us, and there are many ways in which we can do this; but in its last analysis it is all summed up in the one grand idea of stewardships; and if we as workers together with him will get the true idea of stewardships we will be able to push the missionary work as it has never been pushed in the history of the church. The Lord will abundantly bless our labors, and the multitudes will come among us may become strong because we have not, then, have an awakening of activity such as we have required to sacrifice the comforts of home and the association of the family ties in order to carry the gospel to the perishing world. This they ought to be willing to do, but not until all the membership are willing to make an equal sacrifice will the work progress as it should. Surely we are able to forego a little selfish gratification that thereby we may be able to enlarge the souls of men and give them a hope with the sanctified.

Just a small effort on the part of all would lighten the burden; and if all would carry out to the fullest extent the idea of giving the best there is in them for the good of the work, it would only be a matter of a short time until the work of the church would be established everywhere, and the song of gladness and praise would resound to the ends of the earth. It seems to me, then, that our slogan could well be, "Every member a missionary." When this time is fully realized, the Lord will be able to pour out his Spirit upon his church in great power, and the spread of the work will be more pronounced.

There has never been a time in the work of the ministry that I have enjoyed the Spirit of God as I have done since the last conference, and I am sure that every active worker can bear the same testimony; therefore, we ought to see that as we move out in the discharge of duty, and the carrying into effect of the program of the church, all may become sharers in a far greater endowment of the Spirit of the living God. May God give courage so that the weakest ones among us may become strong in the work that is ours to perform in evangelizing the world and making ready a people prepared to meet our Lord when he shall come to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

What a privilege is ours! May we not use wisely this privilege and bring blessings more abundantly to our lives by losing ourselves in the service of our fellow beings. For only as we forget about ourselves and come to think of the welfare of the perishing multitudes will we be able to partake of the richness of God's love and share the presence of his Holy Spirit.

Surely if we would begin now and everyone would do what he can, we would find by the time of our next conference that we would have made such strides as would commend us to God, and the richness of our experiences would be adequate compensation for all the sacrifices we had made. I am hopeful in the work and feel sure that all who love truth and who have faith in our Lord Jesus Christ will unite their forces and push forward the program of stewardships. May we all renew our efforts and redouble our work and by this means redeem the time and speed the day of triumph! Surely there is much of joy connected with so noble an effort; therefore I would appeal unto all who love truth to share with us in the excellence of the Spirit that comes to those who are willing to become the stewards of God, and are willing to labor as those who have been placed in trust with the things that they possess. May the God of peace and love aid us is my earnest prayer.

J. E. Vanderwood.

Far West Stake

The Cameron priesthood conference is now in history. A good representation of the priesthood throughout the stake was present. The stake president reports the conference as being one of the best he ever attended. The special program before the church was discussed a great deal. Bishop A. Carmichael seemed to be at his best in handling the subjects. Standing under spiritual power, he delivered some splendid instructions to the Saints. Thirty of the brethren in the priesthood signed a resolution declaring that they are ready to enter into stewardship. Besides the Presiding Bishop, Bishop Mark H. Siegfried came in for Sunday, and President A. Garnett got in to do his part.

Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the speaker at the First Saint Joseph church on Sunday, November 22, occupying both morning and evening. His two sermons were much appreciated by all who heard him.

Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths held a series of meetings at the Second Saint Joseph Church beginning Sunday, November 15, and lasting over until the 22d. These meetings were well attended and beneficial to the Saints of this group.

On November 18 two little girls arrived at the home of Brother and Sister E. A. Gurwell.

Brother William Ruoff and Sister Hazel Miller were married at Independence, Missouri, on October 24, Brother Richard and D. Weaver being the officiating ministers.

The Department of Women of the Fourth Church held a miscellaneous sale on October 29; over twenty dollars were collected in this way. The efforts of the ladies in this group have proved to be very encouraging.

At the Far West Branch on November 3 the ladies spent the day by working for Sister M. M. German who recently returned from Layton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Bernett, Far West Branch, are the parents of a fine baby girl, born November 4.

Sunday, November 15, Elder O. Salisbury, was with the Trenton Branch, preaching in the morning and evening and conducting a round table in the afternoon. Though hampered to some extent by stormy weather, a good, spiritual time was had by all.

The usual quarterly business meeting for the First Saint Joseph Branch will be held at the brick church the first Monday evening in December. All Saints resident in Saint Joseph will please make an effort to attend.

Birmingham, Alabama.—Sunday evening, October 18, I heard the sermonet on "Happiness" very clearly, as well as other parts on the program. Enjoyed the services very much and shall try to hear you again next Sunday evening.—James H. Watkins, First National Bank.

Titusville, Pennsylvania.—On Tuesday evening, October 6, we had your station for the first time. Received practically the entire program clearly. Especially enjoyed the organ selections by Herbert Johnson. Again on October 18 we received part of the vesper service and 9 p. m. program. We are acquainted with Mrs. Pauline Becker Etzenhouser (organist), and U. W. Greene was a missionary in our district about twenty-five years ago. We are isolated members of the church, so radio means much to us. Hope to hear your fine programs often.—Mr. and Mrs. James M. Connell.

Hoppe, Washington.—You probably be interested to hear from my reports that Sunday, October 18, I tuned in to your station and listened, with much enjoyment and satisfaction, to the entire program. The reception was most excellent, and we never missed a word or a note. I think your announcer is as good as any in the land. There was still an hour and a half of bright day light here after I tuned your station in, and I had you on loud speaker all the time. Incidentally I might add that I have been a member of the church for about thirty years, although for the last half of that period I have lived where I could not attend church services. Few can realize the great thrill I received to hear the good old church songs so plainly over the radio, for it had been many years since I had heard them in any manner. I wish you the best of luck in the operation of your great station and believe that it is sure to aid in the accomplishing of much real good.—H. R. Rudd.

Chatham, Ontario.—Sunday night, October 18, the program from K L D S was received very plainly. Enjoyed the entire program, especially the sermonet by Elder H. O. Smith. We listened on set owned by W. J. Clark.—R. H. Jones, 84 Poplar Street.

Lawrence, Kansas.—I thought the piano portion of tonight's program particularly good. The "Dance Macabre," played as a duet, is very familiar, and I enjoyed it very much on that account. I also liked Mrs. Thomason's "Espanol," by Moszkowski. Kathryn Haberlein has improved wonderfully. I got a big "kick" out of hearing Albert (Brackenbury) sing, also largely for old time's sake, as he and I used to do a lot together at Graceland. Florence Campbell deserves praise for her splendid accompaniments. Reception in the main is A-1. You came in here much louder than W O A W or W H O, and I think with better modulation than the Kansas City stations. At times I notice a fuzziness or blur on certain notes or chords, especially on heavy piano chords. . . . For the first time in my life I'm "isolated," as far as church privileges are concerned, and the radio is my only relief. I enjoyed the sermonet by Brother Case last Sunday evening. It sounded like old times to hear him preach.—Evan A. Fry.

Our Departed Ones

SHUTE.—Raymon Ray Shupe was born May 24, 1907, at Denver, Colorado. With his parents he moved to Littleton in March, 1910; and with them spent a number of years in two parts of the family residing in eastern Oregon, this has been his home. During his three years in high school he entered whole-heartedly all school activities. Both faculty and students knew him as a dependable student, loyal to friend and school. In vacations he was never idle, working on the home ranch or for neighboring farmers who invariably called for his services again when in need of help. Beginning his junior year in high school in apparently perfect physical condition, he entered football, basketball, making his letter in each, debating team, and other school clubs. He took part in the central conflict of the nation's life on the radio, in the 18-19, 1920, and 1921 elections, and in the local conflict covered the school football and basketball games. He enjoyed the program clearly, as well as other parts on the program. Enjoyed the services very much and shall try to hear you again next Sunday evening.—James H. Watkins, First National Bank.

$1,000.00?

While the ten accounts would be more expensive to operate and thus the immediate profits to the bank less, yet the ten accounts would be worth more for these reasons:
1st. Anyone who has saved $100.00 has learned the great lesson of thrift if they but knew it, so you have ten potential $1,000.00 accounts because they are bound to grow.
2d. With ten accounts you would have TEN FRIENDS, and that's what counts the most.

I. YOUR TONGUE. Part 2

Let us now consider the application of the gospel law to the use of the tongue in the neighborhood, in the community. We have already said, Keep your hands off your neighbor's goods. We might add, Keep your tongue from spoiling your neighbor's good name. Shakespeare said, "Who steals my purse steals trash; but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed."

The man who steals my purse steals a soiled leather bag. There may be in it a few dirty bills—one-dollar bills ordinarily; but even so, with those he can buy himself something of value. But the man who steals my good name steals that which does not enrich him. He cannot possibly use it, while he leaves me poverty stricken. My credit at the bank may rest upon it, and what is more vital in some ways, if I walk up the street and meet my old friends who have previously had for me a smile and a cordial greeting, they now turn their heads and look the other way. My good name is gone. My friends are gone. I am poor indeed.

The thief who steals a man's good name is worse than the thieves among whom the man fell on the road to Jericho. They wounded only his body. My credit at the bank may rest upon it, and what is more vital, for from it they made the bread which sustained their lives. Incidental to the threshing there was also a great deal of chaff and some dust and dirt. The chaff was thrown into a heap and later fed to the dumb brutes. Men did not attempt to eat the chaff. In fact, such particles as they performed took into their systems became an irritant.

The church conveys to the people the bread of life. It brought me the bread of life. To thousands of you it brought the very bread of life. Pardon me, I wrote in the past tense. The church brings me the bread of life to-day. It brings you the bread of life to-day, if you will eat. In the prayer services, in the communion of the Lord's supper, in the spiritual sermon, and in the closet to which you have been taught to retire for prayer, it brings to you the very bread of life. But incidental to the operations of the church there is and always has been some chaff thrown into the air. Those who have attempted to eat it, to live upon it, in whose life it has become the main consideration, can never thrive spiritually.

In conclusion, words may be used like bludgeons.
An angry father may use words thus upon his children. Words may kill. Words killed President McKinley. It is true that the fatal shot may have been fired by one individual; but the rabid propaganda of radicals had created a volume of hatred against McKinley which inflamed the assassin’s mind to the point of murder. Words killed Joseph Smith. It may be true that some hundreds of men arrayed like Indians burst from the forest and surrounded Carthage jail and put him to death. But the constant stream of abuse and misrepresentation which had for years come from pulpit and press inspired those men with hatred so that they verily thought they were justified in that which they did.

Jeremiah said the people in his day conceived a conspiracy against him and said, “Come, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah; . . . let us smite him with the tongue.”

Words killed Abraham Lincoln. The abuse and misrepresentation which had been directed against him, both at home and abroad, filled with hatred the mind of a half-crazed actor who fired the fatal bullet. The celebrated British Journal, Punch, had been among those which had indulged in this propaganda of abuse. Following the tragedy Punch made this splendid apology in an editorial poem appearing in the number for May 6, 1865:

You lay a wreath on murdered Lincoln’s tomb,
You, who with mocking pencil went to trace,
Broad for the self-complaisant British sneer,
His length of shambling limb, his furrowed face.

You, whose smart pen backed up the pen’s laugh,
Judging each step, as though the way were plain;
Reckless, so it could point its paragraph,
Of Chief’s perplexity or people’s pain.

Beside this corpse, that bears for winding sheet
The Stars and Stripes he lived to rear anew,
Between the mourners at his head and feet,
Say, scurril jester, is there room for you?

Yes, he lived to shame me from my sneer,
To lame my pen and confuse my pen—
To make me own this kind of princes peer,
This rail splitter a true born king of men.

The apology came too late to save Lincoln’s life. Words had wrought his death.

Words killed Jesus. It is said that the common people received him gladly, but a few enemies, chiefly among the priests, constantly circulated propaganda against him; and finally when Pilate asked whom he should release, Barabbas or Jesus, the cry went up, Release Barabbas; crucify Jesus. Words drove the nails into his hands.

On the other hand, words may comfort; they may save; they may heal. Jesus said, “My words are life and they are light.” Paul remarked, “Our conversation is in heaven.” That is, our conversation is from heaven. It is such conversation as is inspired by the Spirit of God. Let us make our conversation constructive and healing, and if we will do this we may well heed Paul’s advice to think about those things which are lovely and of good report:

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Philippians 4: 8.

Questions and Answers

A Correction

We note in the late HERALD of December 2 issue that the answer to one of our questions is not correct, and we would like to have it corrected in the next issue.

Here is the question: “Should a superannuated minister in good health draw from the treasury of the church? Should a widow of a missionary in good health, because of the past services of her deceased husband, draw upon the funds of the church?”

Here is the part of the answer to which we object: “Complying with the law of temporalities by paying one’s tithe or by paying one’s surplus or by making an offering does not entitle any member of the church, no matter what their services nor the services of their husband or relatives have been, to draw from the church treasury. The law clearly states that the only ones who have the right are those who have need and who have been worthy, wise, and faithful.”

We would like to make the following correction: Insert the term per se between the words not and entitle, making the sentence read:

“Complying with the law of temporalities by paying one’s tithe or by paying one’s surplus or by making an offering does not per se entitle any member of the church, no matter what their services nor the services of their husband or relatives have been, to draw from the church treasury.”

We would like to have this correction made in the HERALD for this reason: We are accused of saying that the services that one renders the church have no bearing whatever on the supplying him with his needs. This is not our position.

Our position is that no one should have anything from the common treasury of the church except he

www.LatterDayTruth.org
or she needs, and coupled with this need must be shown that they have been “worthy, wise, and faithful.”

Sincerely yours,

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By A. CARMICHAEL.

About the Campaign

Reports are being received daily which make substantial additions to our report last week of $210,000 in pledges to the endowment fund. The final reports, of course, will come to us through the district bishops and Bishop's agents. Just as fast as these reports are received they are being tabulated, and it is our endeavor to show the total amount pledged at the earliest possible time. Everyone is anxious to know the final results, and we are urging that all branch committees immediately report their pledges and payments to their district bishop or Bishop's agent. If necessary, make a report each week to the district Bishop's agent in order to keep your work reported up to date.

All district bishops and Bishop's agents are asked to make special reports, as may be necessary from week to week, reporting the receipts of pledge cards and payments on them. Do not wait for your regular monthly report.

When you stop to think there are ninety-four districts, and seven hundred thirty-five branches of the church in the entire world to be heard from, you will realize the large amount of clerical work that the Bishop's office must do to correctly tabulate these reports in order to compile the final figures. Your cooperation will be very much appreciated, and if all will work to this end it is hoped that the final report can be made by January 1.

Very sincerely yours,

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By A. CARMICHAEL.

Bishop Albert Carmichael is on the church's business in Colorado and the West, but it is expected he will be at his desk in Independence at the close of the present week.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried made a trip to Oklahoma at the end of the week, spending Sunday at Tulsa. He reports a splendid experience with the Oklahoma Saints, and returned to Independence Monday morning in high spirits.

President Frederick M. Smith started for Colorado Monday evening on a business trip in connection with Bishop Albert Carmichael, expecting to be gone for about a week.

My Relation to the Church

A paper written by J. A. Gunsolley and read before a meeting of the priesthood of Lamoni Stake.

It might have begun with my physical birth, but it didn't. When I was born my parents were not members of the church. Had they been members, then my being presented to the Lord by the elders before the church would have resulted in my name being placed upon record in some form in the archives of the church. Our introduction into the family group and into the society group comes in the same way. We are born into them. It is purely involuntary, so far as we are concerned, and our relation to the group is entirely without our consent, and largely without our conscious knowledge, for a number of years.

Nevertheless our individual likes and dislikes, our inclinations, tendencies, and desires must be subservient to the interests of the group. At first this is done without our consent, but later with our consent, if possible, but if consent be not given, subservient, nevertheless. For only so could any group organization or association be perpetuated. Society, and organization, began just this way.

So far as the home, the most important of social groups, is concerned, a man and a woman decide to live in an association more exclusively with each other than with others. At once a group relationship is created that calls for more or less surrender of individuality. As children come to bless the home, and the number of individuals increases, new conditions arise, which are met by further harmonizing group interests and individual interests.

The size and complexity of the group increase when families unite into communities. The larger the community and the more numerous its membership the greater the necessity for restricting individual interests—so called—and granting greater freedom or latitude to the interests of the group. Being born into the community, I have no say as to how far my individual likes and dislikes may be indulged. Compared to my life, the community pre-existed. I have no choice until I become of legal age, and then I may either continue to yield to the will of the group or get out. Reaching legal age, I am no longer a passive unit in the group, but an active member, bearing a portion of the responsibility for what the group is and does.

This deciding what the relations are to be between the individual and the group, or society, and seeing... to it that both society and the individuals are permitted to enjoy the relations resulting from such decision, constitutes government. Hence, in just government the right to exercise control over the individual by the group comes from the consent of the governed; for if one decides to remain with the group upon reaching legal age, or the recognized right to act for himself rather than to sever his relation therewith, he by so doing consents to the governing power so exercised; and if he by continuing his association with the group is an active unit and responsible for what the group is and does, then his will enters into the combined will of the members, which is the law of the group, to which law all members must yield obedience.

The exercise of group control can be accomplished only through a system of law administration, which at once gives rise to officers and official functions.
The more numerous the units of the society, the more complex becomes the relations between the units with each other and between the units and the organization, greater variety of governing functions and officers to perform them. Variety of functions to be performed calls for numbers of officers whose functions are interrelated and must be regulated by discrimination well defined in the law, making necessary gradations, or ranks, among officers, depending upon the nature of their official duties.

Government naturally resolves itself into the following branches: Laws have to be formulated as a guide in the exercise of this control of society over its members. The making or formulating of laws comprises the legislative branch. Laws must be interpreted and applied to individual conduct, hence the judicial branch. Some degree of coercion must be exercised, prescribing and enforcing penalties for violation of law, and carrying into execution the provisions of the law; hence, the executive branch.

I have thus reviewed briefly government in general in order to give proper setting for the discussion of my subject proper, "My relation to the church." As stated, I was not born into the church by physical birth, but established relationship as a matter of choice after reaching legal age, as provided for in the law of God, being more than eight years old. It was purely voluntary with me, and hence I gave full assent to the laws governing in the church, which, compared to my life, preexisted.
I could have refrained from uniting with the church, and I can now withdraw, as a matter of choice; but so long as I consent to remain, I am consenting to the law governing. It does not affect the legal relationship whether I understand the law fully, nor can I justify a refusal to honor any requirement of the law and to give obedience thereto on the grounds that I do not understand it, or that I do not believe it or understand it as it is being administered. The law was before me, and it still is my privilege, and will ever be so, to withdraw fellowship. To consent to remain in fellowship is in effect giving consent to the law as administered in harmony with the provisions of the law.

An inquiry into the nature of my relationship to the church comes next logically in order. I joined the church, or was united to the church, by the law of adoption, the ordinances of baptism and confirmations being the formal outward sealing of the covenant of adoption. I then belonged to the church, just as I belonged to my earthly father's family by being born into it naturally, and just as one belongs to a family who has been adopted into it legally, but who is not a born member. The laws governing in the family, both as to controlling conduct and as to inheritance, apply alike to the naturally born and to the legally adopted child. I subscribed to the will of the church as expressed in the law just as I subscribed to the will of the family as expressed by the authority of my parents vested in them under the laws of the state, to which the family itself is subject.

We should note this important distinction, however: The family jurisdiction over me terminates upon my attaining legal age; but the jurisdiction of the church terminates only at death. I entered the church for life, and the covenant of adoption applies until death, if not beyond.

What is the significance of that covenant? I belong to the church. I am God's, the church's, since God expresses himself through the church. My secure. I have thus reviewed briefly government in general in order to give proper setting for the discussion of my subject proper, "My relation to the church." As stated, I was not born into the church by physical birth, but established relationship as a matter of choice after reaching legal age, as provided for in the law of God, being more than eight covenant is to serve God, and I can serve God only by serving his church, since God shows forth his works in his church.

The interests, relationships, and obligations between me and the church are mutual, just as those between any society or organization and its members are mutual. I owe to the church the best service of which I am capable. This implies that I not only honor, respect, and obey the will of the church represented by those authorities and will of the church represented by those who have been constituted under the law as administrators of the affairs of the church, whether as lawmakers, law interpreters, or law enforcers.

My time is not my own; my property is not my own; my talents are not my own. All belong to God.
He not only created me and endowed me with talents that enabled me to secure control of some earthly possessions, but he bought me with a price, the blood of his beloved and only begotten Son.
Hence, I am subject to the direction of the will of the church in all things that affect my life, as that

will may be expressed in the law, and as it may be administered by officials authorized by God through the church. Not only am I subject to the church in so far as my personal conduct is concerned, but I am subject to the church as it may determine what my life's work may be and where. The exercise of that God-given right—"free moral agency"—that was conferred upon man in the beginning, and which will never be taken from me, except with my consent, cannot be used to justify me in refusing to be subject to the church, so long as I am willing to give my consent to the authority of the church by remaining a member of it by choice; but through the exercise of my agency I may terminate my relationship by breaking my covenant, which was for life, and withdrawing from the association of the church.

The church in her jurisdiction over me also has grave responsibilities toward me as a member. The church should cherish and foster my individuality in matters of health, peace, and happiness, so far as possible. To this end the highest social order should be developed and maintained. She should guarantee equality of opportunity. To do this she should develop and maintain the highest possible economic order, dealing with industry and education. She should make possible the attainment unto the "measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." To do this she should make possible a full understanding of the law, and a perfect application of the law to the individual in the development of the Christ character.

When I joined the church I understood that the Lord had restored his gospel and authorized men to bring forth his church. That the will of God and the will of the church were expressed in the law of the church, and that the law was contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and in the revelations to the church; that the Lord would continue to give revelations of his law as the church advanced and it should become necessary; that in the carrying out of the law given of God the church might adopt rules and regulations providing means and methods of procedure where the law was not specific.

I understood that in order to administer the law and to promote harmony and efficiency, and to protect the members in the exercise of their prerogatives, and to promote the welfare of the church, officers were necessary according to functions to be performed, and that such officers are provided for in the law.

I expected to find certain blessings of a spiritual nature existent among the faithful, and have realized upon those expectations.

My conception was that to be an honored and respected member of the church of God, enjoying the confidence of the Saints and the favor of God, would be something to be desired above all things else in life. Time has only confirmed me in this, and made me more anxious, if possible, to answer to the call of the church, and more desirous of qualifying for efficient service in whatever field of activity the church might call me to serve.

Program for the Establishment of Zion

The General Conference of 1925 adopted the social program which was adopted by the Joint Council of April, 1924. It is as follows:

Be it resolved that we favor the immediate initiation of a program looking towards the establishment of Zion and the application of the law of stewardships, which program is as follows:

1. That the Bishopric secure completed financial statements by the selection of a corps of men qualified by special training (if possible) who shall be assigned territory with a view to securing these financial statements by personal contact.
2. That financial statements be provided which are especially designed to serve these purposes.
3. That the members of the church be requested to file their financial statements annually.
4. That arrangement for the payment of tithes due the church should be made at the time of filing of the inventory.
5. That all who are willing and desirous should be placed upon the stewardship basis, either individual or group, as they shall manifest the essential qualifications.
6. That books, tracts, etc., expressing the social ideals of the church should be published without delay.
7. That ministerial propaganda of the church include the presentation of the social ideals of the church with specific reference to the law of tithing and consecration, that they may cooperate in the education of the Saints, particularly young people and inquirers.
8. That the people of the church should be urged to gauge their expenditures in accordance with definite budgets to be formulated with the idea of maintaining an equitable standard of living consistent with the attainment and perpetuation of their maximum efficiency and the needs of the group.
9. That in looking to the completion of the surveys of man power, capital, markets, territories, etc., a bureau of research and service should be established.
10. That the determination of the order of economic development should be given immediate consideration.
11. That the surplus consecrated from stewardships in operation should be set aside for, or at once used in the establishment of other stewardships.
12. That in view of the extension of our social organization, there will be necessity for providing vocational guidance and training.

Respectfully submitted,
The First Presidency,
By Frederick M. Smith.

Baker-Dies Debate

Last August, Brother Baker held a two-week meeting at Bark Camp Schoolhouse. It was estimated that more than three hundred attended the services. A good interest was worked up, and others were baptized. Bark Camp is a Church of Christ stronghold.

They became alarmed at the success of the meeting and challenged Brother Baker for a debate. Brother Baker wrote out propositions. The “Christians” began to hunt for a man to hold up their side. Several were too busy to debate with the Latter Day Saints; but a Mr. Enix, from Chicago, appeared on the scene and offered to take the job. He posed as a great debater, boasting of his victories in debate.

Church propositions were signed by Brother Baker and Mr. Enix, and November 10 was set for the debate to commence. Mr. Enix lasted for three nights. His church would no longer sustain him. They begged Brother Baker to withdraw from Mr. Enix and meet a Mr. A. D. Dies. They claimed that Mr. Dies was a gentleman and courteous in debate.

Mr. Enix had the affirmative in the first proposition. He made a weak effort to establish the church on the monuments of Mr. Dies was a gentleman and courteous in debate. Brother Baker asked about their church papers. They were included at all and that Jesus Christ is the only one who performed miracles. Brother Baker called Mr. Enix to task; he called Brother Baker a liar. After Mr. Enix denied any knowledge of A. Campbell or his writings, Brother Baker asked about their church papers. They were willing to indorse the Gospel Advocate. Brother Baker then read from that paper that A. Campbell, Mr. Scott, and Mr. Stone were reformers and restorers of the gospel. Mr. Enix was overpowered by the evidence.

On the fourth night Mr. Dies took the affirmative. He made no effort to connect the Church of Christ with the one he attempted to set up on Pentecost.

Brother Baker proved by their own church histories that the Church of Christ was started by A. Campbell, Mr. Scott, Mr. Stone, and others. Mr. Enix’s only reply was that he knew nothing of Mr. Campbell or his books, but he did know that he was a member of the Church of the Lord Jesus. He denied the spiritual gifts, all miraculous manifestations, and stated that anyone who preached such things now preached “damnable damnation,” and challenged Brother Baker to prove that anyone outside of the apostles ever performed miracles. Brother Baker called Mr. Dies to connect the fifth message, and he replied that the only friends of Brother Baker pinned many yards of blue ribbon on him, and requests were made for him to get up on the table so the audience could see the ribbons.

At least five hundred people attended the debate.

Brother Baker had his picture taken with the blue ribbon on his coat. We propose to have a cut made and the poem published with the cut, and distribute it among the people, as Mr. Dies had his poem published and broadcast.

Brother Baker has made many friends to the cause. We believe lasting good has been accomplished.

Changes His Mind on Church Government

ZION, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 28.—I think the church papers are better since conference than they were before. I am glad the church has taken a forward step.

After reading the articles on the controversy last year I had decided in favor of those who opposed the declaration of the joint council, and when General Conference voted in favor of the document on church government I thought it had made a mistake. I was left in doubt and undecided what to do, but in May I had a dream that settled me in favor of the church.

I dreamed I was in a schoolhouse at a meeting. The people seemed to be enemies of the church, and a number of the women made fun of it and tried hard to persuade me to quit the church. I told them I would never quit the church, that I would never go back on my baptismal covenant. When I awoke I was decided that I would remain faithful to the church. I felt God would do all things well and take care of his church.

And now I see where God is pouring out his blessings on the church everywhere. This summer I had the privilege of attending the meeting at Elmhurst, Illinois, where Brother Wildermuth was preaching. The last Sunday, at the nine o’clock young people’s prayer meeting, I had the privilege of hearing the gift of tongues and interpretation for the first time. The young Saints and I stood beside the choir who spoke in tongues, and it seemed to melt me and made me rejoice that God is with his people. I had long desired to hear this gift manifested among us.

I am glad the church is on the upward move. I want to be worthy of God’s blessings. I have not lived as I should, but I ask you to pray for me that I may be able to over- come all things that hinder and be victorious over besetting sins.

Michigan Saints Enjoying Church Activities

ORION, MICHIGAN, November 27.—This branch is pleased to report that it went over the top in the endowment drive. Our quota was $800, and we have $685 subscribed to date. We have but sixty members and only about half of them are active, so we feel that we have done well, though we realize that many of the branches have done better.

Brother J. R. Grice was with us for ten days during the first of the month, and all enjoyed the services very much. We feel strengthened and encouraged in the great work of the redemption of Zion.

November 22 the priesthood of the Detroit District met with us. The meetings opened with a very good prayer service from half past eight to ten o'clock, followed by Sunday school and various quorum meetings. Dinnie was served at the home of Brother and Sister V. D. Schaer, as the lower part of our hall is being used for school purposes this year.

A splendid sermon was preached at two o'clock by Brother J. R. Grice, his subject being, “Forward to Zion.” This was followed by remarks by Brother Mattashed and Brother Arthur DuRose on the social program of the church, with a round table discussion following.

In the evening Brother Grice preached another of his soul-stirring sermons on the subject of the humanity of Jesus.

The branch is in a flourishing condition, with unity and love prevailing among all the Saints. We hope to make better progress in the next year than ever before.

Since the school board rented the lower room, the hall has been painted inside and out, new windows and doors added, and many other improvements. We hope in the near future to add to the comfort and beauty of the upper room where we have now meeting by papering the walls and adding more electric lights.

Pittsburg, Kansas

November 28.—Since our last news report a special business meeting was held, and a new branch secretary was elected. Sister Ellen Evans was chosen to take the place of Sister Vera Manning. We also had the sad experience of expelling a brother from the church.

District superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Chester Carter, of Joplin, Missouri, paid us a visit one Sunday evening recently and gave us a talk that gave encouragement to the work here.

Brother Ellsworth Gilbert, who is superintendent of the local Sunday school, also district superintendent, is visiting the schools in other branches. He reports favorably of the progress being made throughout the district.

Stewardships was the subject of discussion here during the month of October. The class was very ably conducted by Brother C. E. Wilson, of Joplin, Missouri. All enjoyed the lessons and appreciated very much his efforts in our behalf.

There has been added to our group of young people Sister Laura Isles, of Woodbine, Iowa, and Sister Bernice Hansen, of Logan, Iowa. These young girls came here to attend the teachers' college. They are proving themselves to be an asset to the branch by taking active part in the junior department and in other services. It is characteristically noticeable that those interested in their mental development are also interested in their spiritual development. However, this rule is violated with sufficient frequency to show that while education is an asset, it is not a requisite in the work of the Lord.

Brother Robert Jones and Brother Lewis were here a few weeks ago canvassing in the interest of the Graceland endowment fund. Their talks were very interesting and awakened a desire in each one to do his part in the project at hand. These young men are members of the religious education class at Graceland. Brother Lewis's peculiar Australian “twang” aroused pleasant memories of others who had labored here. Our quota of $600 was raised and a good-sized sum oversubscribed.

District conference assembled here the 29th and held over the 22d. President Floyd M. McDowell of the First Presidency was here Saturday and Sunday. His addresses were inspiring, and his presence created a fine feeling among the Saints. We all wish our “big brother,” as he calls himself, every success in his great work.

District President Amos T. Higdon was in charge of the conference, and everything moved along nicely under his administration. Brother Higdon has been holding services in the city hall since conference. His meetings have been quite well attended, and we are all sorry to see him close them to-morrow night, after which he will be leaving us.

Owen Sound, Ontario

November 17.—At present Apostle J. F. Curtis is with us, holding a series of meetings. Patriarch John Shields piloted him over from Wiarton last Sunday evening through a “blizzard” of snow. Apparently some difficulty was encountered because of the wet snow. However, “Uncle John” and his faithful old Ford were able to land our brother here safely in time for service. As announced, Elder Curtis gave us a talk on the Graceland endowment drive.

Brother Shields stayed over Monday, Sister Shields coming over from Wiarton that day to see her sister who recently underwent a serious operation. We are glad to report that Sister Farrow's condition is gradually improving.

Beginning Monday night Brother Curtis opened the series of meetings. Prayer service convened at half past seven and preaching at eight o'clock.

Up to the present, Brother Curtis has delivered three very fine sermons. His pleasing and appealing manner cannot help but be strengthening to Saints as well as convincing to nonmembers. Our sincere prayer is that we as God's children may rally to the support of our brother, and that as a result of our united effort he may be able to accomplish that for which he is so ardently working. More of his success later.

Eastern Montana Conference

FAIRVIEW, MONTANA, November 22.—The Eastern Montana semiannual conference convened at Fairview November 14, with District President A. R. Ritter and Counselor Stanley Fout in charge, assisted by Elder George W. Thorburn, missionary in charge of the State of Montana. An effort to have a speaker from headquarters was fruitless.

Delegates to General Conference were elected and other routine business transacted, including arrangements for next year's reunion. The time and place for the reunion were left to the committee.

Brother Thorburn arrived early in the week, in time to hold a few meetings in the hall before conference. He was the only speaker during the conference, which kept him quite busy.

The Fairview Branch went over the top by a large percentage in raising its quota for Graceland, and no doubt the whole district will do the same, though the returns are not all in. To understand what that means, consider the Andes Branch, which suffered in the exodus because of hard times to the extent of about thirty-five families, leaving only four families intact. The remaining families are farmers seriously affected by the same financial conditions that drove the others out of the country. Yet they raised $222. It is not surprising that these few who are staying and paying are the ones who keep the branch going. Surely the Lord will be with those who honor him and carry on in accordance with divine law, doing their best to establish Zion.
Success of Public Entertainments in Australia

Since we have from time to time considerable matter of a local nature published in the HERALD some of which has a bearing on social affairs, I thought something of that kind from this part of the world might not be out of place. Whether all Saints approve or not, there can be no doubt that social functions, whether they have a financial objective or not, have come to stay among Latter Day Saints; hence there is no use in clinging to the old-fashioned, parliamentary ideas of church affairs. In some parts of New Zealand, as well as America, there are people, both in and out of the church, who object to the modern trend, but I am not one of that number. I believe in having recreational and social diversions, providing they are kept within reasonable limits; and I further believe that such things may sometimes have financial objective.

Within the last two years we have had some very successful social affairs in Australia and New Zealand which is in the purpose of this writing to describe. In Victoria, where I have labored of late years, we were faced with the necessity of expansion in church building development, or lapse into a state of general stagnation. This was true of Melbourne especially, although there is at least one other place where a church building is needed. Just how to approach the question of church erection in a practical way was a problem.

We had no ready cash to begin with, hence, after skirmishing a time or two along the concert line, I hit upon that method as the means of raising money. I saw, of course, that in order to use that method effectively it must be developed to a state of extraordinary efficiency. We had some local talent, though not enough to cover our expenses if we should come out in a big way; but one of the Saints, Brother Norman Thorp, belonged to the world of entertainment, being himself a singer, hence he knew practically all the artists of Melbourne. He and Brother David Grayden and Brother George Dummett are the only ones of our folk who have sung for us, though more recently Brother George Squire, a very young man, has acted for us as an elocutionist. Not having enough talent to complete a program, we depended upon Brother Thorp to help us out, which he did very successfully; so we had some of the best talent in Melbourne, some of which was paid and some free.

In dealing with the financial side of these affairs, I shall convert the English pound into American money at the rate of 50¢ for every pound, so we might come out in a big way; but after the Saints, Brother Norman Thorp, belonged to the world of entertainment, being himself a singer, hence he knew practically all the artists of Melbourne. was not with us, except for a little while, on the first effort, but he came in strong on the second. Our exertions excited considerable interest in the church, since we had made preparations for a concert and purpose and had requested for literature. The people at a rule accepted our explanation of the difference between us and the Brighamites. We encountered some bigots with whom we could not reason.

In the main there was a widespread idea of there being two churches of Latter Day Saints. This knowledge, with some exceptions, was general, which I attribute to the street service we have so long maintained in the heart of Auckland, which at first was conducted by Elders A. V. Robinson and H. W. Savage, and by others since.

In promoting these affairs, one of our greatest handicaps has been the conservatism of our own people. Many Latter Day Saints have the idea that nothing is safe unless it is small and cheap. We must get rid of this view or we can never build up Zion. As a body we are shot through and through with parsimony; hence some of our people are alarmed when they hear of concert expenses reaching in one place $410, and net profits amounting to over one thousand dollars. To some the success of these concerts has been an objection. They would be quite willing for us to hold concerts and also sell tickets to outside people, if we would divide the proceeds with them and in such immense sales, and subsequently enough cash comes in to justify these reports, they think there must be something wrong about it.

We are living in the age of big things, hence we must do something or get off the map. Keeping on the safe side of five cents (or as the English would say, tuppence ha'penny), that is to say, the near side, is supposed to be the same thing, hence the opposition. It reminds me of what some town authorities said to me once about preaching on the street, namely: "This town is like every other town—you may preach on the street with the greatest of ease if you do not draw a crowd. If you do, somebody will raise objections to your procedure."

This conservative trend suggests what J. R. Lowell said re the public attitude toward Abraham Lincoln: "At first he was so slow that he exhausted the patience of those who think there is no progress save in blowing up the engine, but later he was so fast as to excite the fears of those who think there is no safety as long as there is a spark of fire in the boiler."

I returned from New Zealand by the T. S. S. Makemo, which left Auckland September 18. We encountered heavy seas both going and returning, on the New Zealand coast, especially returning home, hence I suffered from mal de mer more than on any previous voyage. Arrived at Sydney the 3rd and attended the marriage of my niece, Miss Annie Eileen Dixon, daughter of Charles and Annie Dixon, to Edgar Parkes, son of Joseph and Minnie Parkes and brother of Doctor Joseph A. Parkes, and grand-son of Professor Joseph Parkes. The wedding was celebrated in the Saints’ Church, Leichhardt, and passed off pleasantly.

The wedding breakfast, as it is called here, was served in a near-by hall, after which a gay social time was enjoyed by all present. There was a large crowd both at the church and the hall, especially the former. The happy pair hied themselves away at an early hour to the Sydney railway station, thence to the Blue Mountains for their bridal tour, while the writer repaired to his couch that night with a concourse of sweet sounds” ringing in his ears to the effect that they and all their near relatives, big and little, old and young, masculine and feminine, were all “olly good fellows,” as melodiously affirmed by “all of us.”

My best wishes to all the HERALD promoters and readers.

GLADESVILLE, SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, Cowell Street, October 26.

Des Moines, Iowa

November 27.—The Des Moines Branch is pressing forward, with nine o’clock prayer service which we held Wednesday, November 26, to hold our first service in the lower auditorium of our new church building. This was our Thanksgiving prayer service. The meeting was in charge of H. A. Higgins, branch president, who was assisted by District President Henry Castings. Brother F. T. Musuell gave the prayer of thanks. There were one hundred thirty-two present, with twenty-six abstaining, and all went away with a blessing because of having been there.

On next Sunday morning at nine fifteen o’clock, we will march from the building where we have worshiped since our old home burned last winter to our beautiful new home on the site where the old one stood.

Under the able leadership of Brother H. A. Higgins, wonderful progress has been made on our new home, and there is no doubt that Brother Higgins is entitled to much consideration and many compliments for the great sacrifice and hard work he is doing in an effort to complete this building. He, with other Saints who are striving with him, will surely find they have greatly endeared themselves to the hearts of the local membership.

President McDowell in the South

I am sending you a small report of the young people’s convention held in Mobile two weeks ago. I cannot put into words the spirit that we have enjoyed and are at this time enjoying because of this meeting.

The Saints of Mobile District and of Mobile more especially have had a spiritual treat that will not be forgotten. The convention was a success, though we did not have a good representation of the district, as very few people from the distant branches were present.

President F. M. McDowell arrived in Mobile shortly after noon, Friday the 13th, a lucky date it seems, and arrangements were formulated for services that were to be, though not many plans were made, as some of the services just grew. We began with a sing Friday night, followed by a sermon in which our speaker advised us to do it Christ’s way. We were told to make our choice, to choose our motive, to use our power Christ’s way. I believe Brother McDowell’s love for the people cannot be bottled up, especially his interest in the training of the young and the directing of their abilities in the ways of service. Needless to mention that his hearers were charmed by him, he was talking and desired to be doers when he finished.

Religious education was the subject of a two-hour service Saturday afternoon. The fact that each one has a task to accomplish and that the work of the church is carried on by each one working in the place he best fits was presented, with the thought that religious education means making up the mind for God.

Sunday was a busy day. A sacrament and young people’s prayer service at eight o’clock, a demonstration of the junior church during the Sunday school period that taught a big lesson to bigger people, followed by a sermon on stewardship at eleven o’clock, filled the morning. The prayer service was well attended and well conducted. The spirit manifested at this early part of the day continued with us during the rest of the services. The trend of the meeting was towards service and development, that better service might be rendered. This spirit helped all of the Saints to serve by being present during the other meetings of the day.

Mobile does not like to impose on anyone, or lose any good thing, but Brother McDowell was given plenty of opportunity to speak. His little sermon to the juniors was quite touching to some of the older ones. His big sermon on stewardship was filled with the onward urge that should cause us to vision Zion as she will be and to work for Zion until she is a reality.

The afternoon was a period of rest and relaxation, so was spent in an automobile trip around Mobile. Nine cars were in line at the beginning of the trip, but were lost one by one until but four were left. We saw a part of Mobile Bay, the Civil War Cemetery, the headquarters of General photoshop in the Spring Hill College, and the new high school, and all felt rather chilly as the thermometer started downward immediately after dinner.

The priesthood met in the church at five o'clock and listened to a lecture on their duties and development, as well as an outline of ways and means by which each one might magnify his office and calling. The evening service was a true Zion service of a young people's convention for the first time. His kindness, careful, and prayerful watch over the Mobile Branch, and his quiet deliberations helped to bring about peace and happiness in the work here. These brethren left us built up and encouraged to continue the work intrusted to our care, to unite our hearts in bringing out our Master's will in this part of his vineyard, and with the determination to allow nothing to separate us from this great work to which we have been called.

Elder T. C. Kelley arrived with Brother McDowell, but took his seat in the background, where he could observe the doings of a young people's convention for the first time. His kind, careful, and prayerful watch over the Mobile Branch, and his quiet deliberations helped to bring about peace and happiness in the work here. These brethren left us built up and encouraged to continue the work intrusted to our care, to unite our hearts in bringing out our Master's will in this part of his vineyard, and with the determination to allow nothing to separate us from this great work to which we have been called.

Sincerely,

MOBILE, ALABAMA, November 28. T. M. CARR.

Death Invades Church at Moorhead

MOORHEAD, IOWA, November 26.—Death has again invaded our ranks, and during the last month there have been three funerals in our house of worship. Brother Julius Monson, of whose illness we made mention in our previous items, passed away at the Independence Sanitarium on November 6, after bearing patiently a long siege of affliction. His remains were sent to Moorhead for burial.

Brother Monson led a very quiet, unassuming life, and was loved most by those who knew him best. He never married; he leaves a sister. He had been a member of the church but a few years but had believed in the truthfulness of the work, even at a time when he was solicited he gave three hundred dollars on the auditorium drive. We feel that a noble man has departed from our midst.

Brother Arthur Magnet was baptized several years ago by Joseph Lane, who also preached his funeral sermon on November 29, assisted by Reverend V. M. Elston of the Church of Christ. His death was the culmination of a lingering affliction, but he was able to be at his regular duties until about one week before his death, when he was suddenly stricken and was taken to Council Bluffs. He leaves a wife, several brothers, and other relatives.

Brother David Purcell passed away at Castana, Iowa, after being in poor health for months. He was buried in the Moorhead Cemetery November 25. The funeral sermon was by Brother T. O. Strand, assisted by Reverend V. M. Elston of the Church of Christ. Brother Purcell united with the church during the campaign of Daniel MacGregor at this place a few years ago. He was sixty-nine years of age.

Brother Ted Moore is recovering from the recent operation which was performed at the home of his brother. He leaves two sisters, one brother, and other relatives.

Brother Karlstrom is in a serious condition in a hospital at Nevada, Missouri. He got off the train when Brother Karlstrom did said he would walk out that way with him. Brother Karlstrom told him of his mission, and the young man said, "If you are on a mission of that kind, I'll go with you all the way." So he took him to the door. As the road was very dark and rugged, with a dangerous foot log to cross, we feel that God's hand was leading this young man to direct his servant.

Brother Karlstrom found the brother very sick, and after prayer and administration he sat up in bed while Brother Karlstrom talked the gospel and sang some of the songs of Zion.

The Department of Women has again taken up its activities with renewed efforts. All groups are now working.

Sister J. E. Leslie being in charge of groups three and four. Sisters J. L. Karlstrom and Sister J. A. Graves, the head of this department, is a very energetic worker and does all she can to bring about unity among the sisters. The relief and service department has been busy this fall with helping those in need. This work is in charge of Sister Sadie English.

Brother Oliver Hinkle is in a serious condition in a hospital at Nevada, Missouri.

Sister Eliza Wilson is spending the winter with her daughter in Decatur, Alabama.

The four-year-old son of Brother and Sister O. C. Karlstrom had the misfortune to fall and break his right arm this fall. He is now recovered nicely.

Sister A. W. Hadley has recently recovered from a severe illness. Sister Free has also been on the sick list.

Religious was omitted Friday on account of conference at Pittsburg, Kansas. Brother Chester Carter is superintendent of this department, also district superintendent. As quite a number of the Saints attended conference, services here were not so largely attended on Sunday. Brother Karlstrom was in charge of the Sunday school, and Brother Fred A. Graves occupied the eleven o'clock hour with a great degree of the Spirit. His small daughter, Helen, played the piano. The afternoon prayer meeting was in charge of Brother Karlstrom and Brother Graves, and the evening service was occupied by Elder J. S. Mackie, the sermon being very instructive.

Joplin, Missouri

During the month of October the theme of our meetings was stewardships. November 1 being the first day for the endowment drive, District President Amos T. Higdon occupied the eleven o'clock hour, preceded by an interesting talk by Sister Lois Henson, a former Graceland student. Brother Higdon also read a letter written by his son Earl, who is now a student at Graceland. The letter was very inspiring and had a spiritual influence over both old and young.

As the 15th of November was the last day of the drive, Pastor O. C. Karlstrom occupied both morning and evening on the subject of stewardships. While this plan is not fully understood by all, we pray they will soon understand. It is the greatest move toward the redemption of Zion.

Last Wednesday our pastor was called to administer to a brother near Anderson, Missouri, a distance of about forty-four miles. The brother was reported very low, and as the train was late in the evening, it was about ten o'clock when he arrived at Anderson. He then learned that they lived about one and one half miles from town. A young man who got off the train when Brother Karlstrom did said he would walk out that way with him. Brother Karlstrom told him of his mission, and the young man said, "If you are on a mission of that kind, I'll go with you all the way." So he took him to the door. As the road was very dark and rugged, with a dangerous foot log to cross, we feel that God's hand was leading this young man to direct his servant.

Brother Karlstrom found the brother very sick, and after prayer and administration he sat up in bed while Brother Karlstrom talked the gospel and sang some of the songs of Zion.

A Thanksgiving service was held in the church Thanksgiving evening. At the Wednesday night prayer service before Thanksgiving, each one was requested to bring an offering for the needy of the branch.

Brother C. E. Wilson has been kept busy teaching three classes on the stewardship plan.

The annual election of officers will be held December 1. We trust God’s Spirit will direct, that those who are placed in office will be instrumental in his hands in helping to advance the work.

The Department of Women gave a pie social Monday evening, the proceeds being given for branch expenses.

Superintendent Woodstock Abroad

After several weeks spent in the interest of Sunday school work in many localities, a brief account of conditions as I find them may be of interest and value to your readers.

Two weeks in October passed quickly in the Kewanee and Southern Wisconsin Districts. In the former, Brother E. A. Davis, the genial district president, drove with me in his Ford, and we were able to visit nearly every branch, beginning in an all-day service at Millersburg, meeting each night with a different branch, and closing Sunday, October 11, at Kewanee. It was a pleasure to meet with earnest workers at each place, to try to bring them a vital message, inspiring hope and giving a broader vision of the possibilities of training for old and young in our church schools. In most places we find the Saints anxious to progress, to keep pace with the developing program of the church. Some few there are who feel to withhold their best effort, and who allow their personal feelings and prejudiced views to stand between them and the flood of gospel light which should illumine their pathway, giving promise of success and ultimate victory. We feel sure that the Lord will prosper the concerted efforts of his people, that we may all labor with greater assurance.

The following week was occupied in meetings with the Saints, especially with Sunday school and Religio workers, at Beloit, Evansville, Madison, and Milwaukee, Wisconsin. It was unusually pleasant to meet with relatives and friends of former years who have long carried the burden of activity in church work in these places. We found much faithful work being done. We trust we were able to bring additional light and inspiration to their task. In every local in the church we visited it was a joy to see the trained young people and teachers. We must clearly understand and vision our task if we would accomplish it, and we must train ourselves in the most successful methods if we would expect the Lord’s blessing to attend our effort in greater measure. Love for God and devotion to his work are a wonderful asset, but even our zeal must be directed intelligently.

On Saturday Brother N. E. Field of Madison drove with us in his car to Chicago, making the long drive in time for the forenoon services of the young people’s convention. We spoke to the young people at the afternoon session and drove with them for the happy recreational period at Garfield Park late in the afternoon. A splendid spirit of unity and earnestness was manifest, though the attendance was not as large as one might have hoped. The church was filled in the evening for a rousing Religio superintendents’ meeting under the direction of the district superintendent, O. A. McDowell. Sunday morning I was with the little group of Saints at Milwaukee, speaking morning and afternoon.

Sunday, October 11, I assisted the Saints at Walnut Park in Independence in their rally day program, visiting their offices and branches in the morning. In the evening a large contingent of officers and teachers from the Stone Church at eleven, and speaking at Walnut Park in the evening. This new church has well-appointed Sunday school rooms and an enthusiastic corps of officers and teachers.

On Wednesday following we assisted in the large weekly religious education project undertaken by the five branches of the church in Kansas City, Kansas. Unusual opportunities are present here to take children from the grade schools one and one half hours each week for religious instruction. This is a splendid chance for us to teach real character building and the principles of the gospel in a systematic effort. Our churches are receiving a liberal number of these children. At present we have thirty-six volunteer teachers in charge of four hundred eighty-one pupils. Not over one third of these children come from Latter Day Saints. The annual election of officers is at Walnus City, Kansas. Over one hundred seven children are taught by fifteen teachers. Over ninety per cent of these do not belong to the church. Who can estimate the good that may be done if we can do justice to the task? Two sisters are going over from Independence and several from Kansas City, Missouri, to assist the local forces. This is one of the best opportunities we have seen to really demonstrate of the gospel to regenerate socially as well as spiritually the life of the community. It shall have its perfect work only when the weekly attendance is followed up by pastoral and missionary effort to vitally reach the children and parents with the gospel message. Undoubtedly the opening in Kansas City, Kansas, is the type of opportunity for which we must be making preparation. It is sure to come in other States.

November 1, I was with the Saints at their sacramental service in Woodbine, Iowa, speaking at night and again on Monday evening in the combined interests of the Graceland endowment fund and Sunday school work. We miss the enthusiasm of some of the loyal supporters of the church in past years but feel sure the Spirit of the Master will dispel the darkness and call to earnestly seek the light. We are convinced that a great period of joyful service awaits the Lord’s people. Those who have given to the endowment fund in the true spirit of stewardship and in order to make the social program of the church a reality, enjoy a great measure of reward in the sense of having done their duty in a time when the Lord opened the way. There comes an assurance of our condemnation quite unknown to those who give but grudgingly or choose to withhold one another when the Lord has prospered them to the end that they might be able to give. Giving of the surplus, or giving to make the stewardship program possible is but a divine means of blessing for the individual who learns to share gladly of what he may spare that others may be provided for under the divine economy. We found a noble response on the part of many in the branch. The young men of the committee were diligent in their campaign.

Two succeeding days were spent with the good Saints of Sioux City. Here we again divided time between the interests of the endowment and Sunday school work. We greatly enjoyed the privilege of three days in the public library in some special research work in religious education. It is gratifying to find the plans and methods of our department well to the front among similar efforts in other churches. Our great task is to make our teaching vital, not only to develop the beautiful ideal of the gospel in our lives and especially for our youth, but to inspire a love for that ideal and an enthusiasm for its attainment which shall carry it more immediately into effect. This surely can be done under the spirit of consecration and devotion anticipated in the former, and the response to the endowment drive in Sioux City.

Sunday morning, November 8, we were with the Sunday school at the new Central Church in Kansas City. The newly acquired buildings provide nicely for the classes and departments. Large adult and senior classes are popular. Each class has a comfortable, well-appointed room for meeting, and the atmosphere and spirit are certainly very encouraging and commendable.

Sunday afternoon we attended a meeting of the weekly teachers of our churches in Kansas City, Kansas, at the Grandview Church. With splendid courage and zeal these willing workers with their pastors are undertaking a great service in the true spirit of consecrated effort. In other churches a similar effort would cost hundreds of dollars. We hope to be able to assist these teachers to a clearer vision of their work; to place in their hands every available help that may contribute to their success. They deserve the whole-hearted cooperation of local, stake, and departmental officers. We wish them Godspeed.

A Dissertation on Wasted Effort

Elder Dallao, presiding elder at Flint, Michigan, puts out a neat folder with pithy comments and items of interest. In a recent one appeared the following:

WHICH ARE YOU?
Most forward movements or reforms are accomplished through organization. Whenever it becomes apparent that the time is ripe for the carrying out of some needed reform, a few enthusiastic individuals get together and start the society for this or that.

Church organization is a necessity to accomplish the work that lies before it, but what does it take to keep the organization going?

If a machine consumes 90 per cent of the power put into it to keep it going and uses only 10 per cent in productive work, one can easily see that we waste too much labor in our effort to keep the organization going and consequently have very little left to use on the actual productive business of the church: the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth.

How much effort does your pastor, your Sunday school superintendent, your Religio superintendent, your leader of Department of Women, your girl leader, have to expend to keep you interested in your job? Even though you may not have a specific job, is it not a fact that it takes considerable effort on the part of your leader to keep you in regular attendance at meetings?

Of course, there is one of the Lifters and not a Leamer. Can you imagine what it would mean to this church if every member should be an active worker, and instead of using 90 per cent of our efforts to keep the organization going, we were able to keep it at top speed with an expenditure of 10 per cent, leaving 90 per cent for the task of answering the Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come"?

WHICH ARE YOU? a Lifter or a Leamer?

DEDICATE CHURCH BUILDING IN WISCONSIN

CHETEK, WISCONSIN, November 29.—A two-day meeting was held here October 24 and 25, at which time our church was dedicated, Brother W. A. McDowell preaching the dedicatory sermon. The prayer was by Brother D. T. Williams. A good spirit was present.

It would be beyond the power of my pen to try to tell of the wonderful truths brought out by the brethren. Let it suffice to say that they were at their best and spoke to a full house whenever they were the speakers.

On the 25th, at two o'clock, Brother Williams spoke in regard to the sacety of President F. M. Smith being a true prophet of God, and brought out many facts confirming his position. He told how Brother Smith had called some of the brothers to his office in the church under the Spirit of God, and how the brothers had confirmed their calling by speaking of incidents in their lives where they were shown that they would occupy in the very office where they were called.

The dedication of the church had been looked forward to for many years, but something always seemed to come in the way so it wasn't until November 24 that the cornerstone was laid, F. A. Atwood, our branch president, and some of our tried and trusted sisters got down to business and put their hands and heads to work, that it became a reality.

While Brothers McDowell and Williams were with us they spoke much on the stewardship plan, which met with the approval of all present.

GEORGE CLARK.

The Stewardship Plan

Is it of God or man? Is it an old or new law? Let us see.

In the Doctrine and Covenants, section 101, is given a revelation to Enoch, telling him God's will to man on how he would have his children dispose of their worldly goods. He told Enoch he wanted no poor among them.

We find in the Book of Mormon, 3 Nephi 12:11: "And many of them saw and heard unspeakable things which are not lawful to be written: and they taught, and did minister one to another; and they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly, one with another." Also in 4 Nephi 1:4: "And they were not rich or poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gifts."

We find a very interesting account in the book of Popular Science, on page 1306, with their interpretation: "We find a class of Indians who have come to a realization of a Higher Being and have worked out themselves (?) a plan of the brotherhood of man that far excels anything of our modern civilization, which they call, "The High Type of Organized Government of South American Mountain Tribes."

On a space of two thousand miles along the coast of South America there lived at least one million people, each of whom had a fair amount of food and work apportioned to him by the state. Everything was taken care of by the central government—provisions, medicines, land, the exchange of commodities, irrigation works, splendid roads, magnificent cities, and help of every kind. All that was asked of the ordinary citizen was that he should do his fair share of work. An overseer was set over every ten families; a head man over every ten overseers; a chief over every ten head men; a lord over every ten chiefs. All the lords are ruled by an emporer.

The socialistic form of government produced a wonderful contentment among the people, and the entire machinery of the society worked with incomparable smoothness. The people were warlike and constantly extended their boundaries by conquest. The subjects were treated as equals and allowed all the privileges of citizens. And they remained content with their lot.

The empire of socialism thus founded on one of the bleakest spots of South America was destroyed by a small troop of Spanish adventurers under Pizarro, but there is a small percentage of them that meet secretly yet.

Let us each do our utmost to bring about this wonderful plan that God himself placed here on earth for the benefit of mankind, that Zion the beautiful might be redeemed and the Saints be indeed one great brotherhood of men. Let us unite in our prayers in behalf of our President and his counselors, the Bishop and his counselors, and all the priesthood, that they may be united in this great work.

And then we the lay members will also be in line for the great blessings that are promised us.

JAMES H. MADDEN.

November 29.—We were very much pleased to have with us during the week of November 15 Apostle M. A. McConley, and his visit was greatly appreciated. His sermons were inspiring and gave a greater vision and faith in this glorious gospel. After hearing his interesting talks on stewardship and the Graceland endowment, all were more enthusiastic than ever before in making it a success. Last Sunday evening the committee in charge of the campaign gave out the encouraging news that the London Branch exceeded its quota of $1,200 by about one hundred dollars.

Tuesday evening, November 17, the Swastika Dramatic Club put on a splendid morality play entitled "Every youth," written by Brother John Judkins of this branch. There wished was a splendid moral in it, and everyone present enjoyed the play very much, also the musical and elocutionary number.

The participants in the play and members of the dramatic club motored to Saint Thomas on Wednesday evening, November 25, and presented the play, with several additional numbers, in the church to an appreciative audience. The kind sisters there served an appetizing lunch before the party returned home. It is intended to put on this play in other parts of the city, with the idea of boosting our church work here.

The Sunday school is progressing very favorably under the able leadership of Elder L. Burnard. A primary department has been organized under the supervision of Sister Koehler and is proving a very great success. They are busy getting ready for the Christmas entertainment.

The Religion class has been organized for the ensuing year with Brother Roy Bicknell as president. The different teachers and committees are being appointed, and it is expected that that department will do a great work in advancing God’s work in this part of the vineyard.

We were made glad to see four children baptized Sunday afternoon before Sunday school, November 29. Mr. H. Lierch and his seventeen-piece orchestra were in attendance during the evening service and rendered some very fine numbers.

Writes of Recent Deaths of Ministers

I was made to feel very sad upon learning of the demise of Elder Joseph Dewsnup, England, whose acquaintance I formed on my first mission to Europe, thirty-three years ago; he was then quite a young man, in the prime of life. I was associated with him some six or seven times subsequently, on my later missions to that part of the vineyard.

In my association with Brother Dewsnup, I found him to be a stanch worker and a genuine Latter Day Saint, a man of integrity, and while seemingly very stern in his manner, as well as a stickler for order (this being due to his many, many years of service as a policeman and police inspector) he was, nevertheless, very sociable and kindly disposed toward all.

He will certainly be greatly missed by the officers and members of the Manchester District, over which district he had presided for many years. He also served in other capacities of responsibility with credit to himself as well as to the church. He endeavored to walk in the footsteps of his father, Joseph Dewsnup, sr., who for many years was one of the bright lights and a faithful minister in that mission.

Very few men in the church have surpassed his worthy father in point of executive ability or as a preacher. His death, too, was a great loss to the mission in the British Isles.

It is to be hoped that the son of the late Joseph Dewsnup (who was a student at Givral College) will continue to uphold the high standards set by his father and grandfather by carrying on the work of the Lord which was so valiantly upheld by them.

I was also grieved to learn of the death of Elder William Spargo, of Wigan, who, too, has been one of our valiant officers and a worthy Saint in that mission, being loved by all who knew him for his untold worth. He will not soon be forgotten by those who are left behind.

We also still have in remembrance our worthy brother, Elder Thomas Taylor, who passed on some time since to his reward. This brother was one of our most active workers and wielded a wonderful influence for good with all with whom he came in contact. From our close acquaintance and association with this brother, we can truthfully say he was a man of God.

The many happy hours spent in company with these three men very often come to mind as my mind travels to and fro in the places where I have performed ministerial labor in years that are now past and gone.

Just recently I have also noticed the passing of Elder John C. Foss, who rendered many years of service in mission work as an elder and later as seventy. Elder F. M. Cooper was another old-time faithful missionary and seventy. Elder Eli Wildermuth, one of the first missionaries of the Reorganization, also passed on a few months ago at the age of ninety. It was under his hands that I was ordained to the office of elder about forty-eight years ago.

These three brothers were standard bearers for the cause of Christ for a great many years and labored at a great sacrifice, enduring many hardships, as times were hard and money scarce. Therefore, they knew from practical experience the full meaning of the term sacrifice, but notwithstanding these unpleasant experiences through which they, as well as their families, had to go, it is consoling to know that they, with many others who worked faithfully and who have passed on before, did not turn their backs on the Lord and his church, but remained true to the trust imposed in them until their spirits were summoned to their well-earned rest in Paradise, there to await the coming of their blessed Lord, who called them into his service.

While these loved ones have gone on before and are sorely missed, there is much consolation from the words of Jesus wherein he tells us that they are not dead but live, and, as so beautifully expressed by the poet:

"I tell you they have not died; Their hands clasp yours and mine; They are now but glorified, They have become divine. They live! They know. They see! They shout with every breath: 'Life is eternity! There is no death!'"

I have been kept very busy for several weeks past traveling and preaching here and there in the interest of the Church of Jesus Christ. I have never felt better nor enjoyed myself so much. The Spirit of the Lord has been with me, and I have been able to help and to strengthen and encourage the Saints in their warfare.

Dear Saints, let those who are so disposed rage and imagine vain things, but let us be true to God and the covenant we made with him, not forgetting to exercise patience toward the erring ones, and to pray for them, for the Church of Jesus Christ will triumph in the end. Men and devils may seek to destroy it, but their efforts will be in vain and their end will be one of anguish and distress of mind.

I wish all a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Gomer T. Griffiths.

INDIENCE, MISSOURI, December 2.

First Chicago Branch

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS. This branch is still moving onward and upward. We believe our great progress is being made through the untiring efforts of City Missionary Frank B. Almond, as many are coming into the branch since his labors among us began. He is loved by all.

Saturday, October 30, Brother Butterworth was the morning speaker, and a solo was sung by Sister Hazel Randall.

Sunday evening, October 30, a Halloween party, called a foot and corn social, was given in the lower auditorium. A nice program was arranged, and a goodly number were present. A small admission fee was charged each one according to the size of feet and the number of corns and bunions each one possessed. This caused a great deal of merriment. The charges helped to defray the expenses for refreshments.

Sacrament was served November 2, and the gift of prophecy was present through Branch President Axel Edstrom. Brothér Barrows was called to the office of priest. Brother Frank Almond is continuing his series of Sunday evening services and is being well assisted by music by the choir.
Brothers Collins and Clossen, from Graceland College, were present November 7, being accompanied by District President John L. Cooper. They were working in the interest of the drive for the endowment fund for Graceland. At this time the branch has exceeded its quota.

Brother Ralph Everett was called home to Nebraska City to attend the funeral of his sister-in-law. We extend to him our sympathy.

We are glad to welcome into our midst Sister Alice Bulard of Independence, Missouri.

Recently, at our young people’s contest, a quartet contest was part of the program. Seven quartets participated, and the winners were each presented with a one half pound box of Fanny May’s candy.

Our little church is getting dressed up for Christmas. The floors are being varnished and a new carpet laid. It means much labor for a few, but we know all will appreciate the results.

The Sunday school, as usual, is preparing for a Christmas program. Watch for the date and be sure to attend.

November 22 the church was closed that all might attend the district conference which convened Friday, Saturday, and Sunday at South Side Branch.

Another Result of the Campaign

Bishop A. Carwischel: Sufficient time has elapsed since the beginning of our campaign for the endowment-stewardship fund to enable us to evaluate to some extent conditions which we have observed in the stake. This seemed like a real task when viewing it from the beginning end, but as we entered upon the work the reports from nearly every group of workers in the stake indicate that the Spirit witnessed to the validity of the approval, which of course made the work a pleasure. We can say that this is true of the presidency. We are quite sure the campaign of education and personal contact with the Saints has been a decided spiritual benefit to them. The call for this special fund will not interfere with the payment of tithes; in fact, we believe it will give increase in interest in this line.

We want to assure you as head of the financial department of the general church, that the Holden Stake is with you and back of you to “boost.” Your work is appreciated, confidence is increasing, and we look hopefully for the future for a forward move. May the Master abundantly assist you and your associates in the arduous task to which you are called. Our confidence, love, respect, and our prayers are with you.

HOLDEN STAKE PRESIDENCY, By W. S. MACRAE.

HOLDEN, MISSOURI, December 2.

The First Presidency: I am glad to report our drive for Graceland here has been more successful than it was thought it could be. Although few in number, great interest has been shown by the Saints in this branch.

At my first attempt to get pledges I went to one who does not belong to our church, and after explaining the object to be accomplished by this campaign I received forty dollars without a question. When nonmembers of the church do this much it shows what our people should do.

To feel that Graceland’s endowment will not affect the paying of tithing, but rather I feel it will increase interest in giving our one tenth to the Lord.

Our district president, C. J. Hunt, and Brother E. B. Blett of Grand Rapids were here over Sunday and gave the Saints good advice and counsel.

I feel sure that the branch has taken on new life and will go forward.

Sincerely,

DAVID A. YOUNG.

Patriarch White Has Departed

After an illness of five weeks, Patriarch Isaac N. White has gone to his reward. On the evening of December 3 he passed away without a struggle. During his illness his mind was bright, and his spirit was cheerful. The services were held in the Stone Church on Sunday at half past two. The choir sang, “Nearer, my God, to thee,” with solo and chorus. A quartet composed of Mrs. S. A. Burgess, Mrs. Israel Smith, George Anway, and Paul N. Craig, sang hymn number 270. Prayer was offered by the acting pastor, C. Ed. Miller, which was followed by an anthem by the choir, “In heavenly love abiding.” The obituary was read by Brother Miller, and Mrs. Foley sang a solo. President Elbert A. Smith delivered the sermon. The quartet then sang number 367. While the casket was being taken from the church, the choir sang number 207.

President Smith said Brother White’s life had flown in a straight, steady, consistent course. He had defended the church against such skilled polonies as Reverend Fox, Clark Braden, etc. He was loyal to God, loyal to the church, to his family, and to his country. President Smith, in an impressive manner, addressing the inanimate form before him said, “Brother White, the church you lived to defend, we pledge ourselves to continue to defend.”

When Napoleon and his army were before the great pyramids of Gizeh in Egypt, he sent out this ringing order, “Soldiers of France, bear your查陈, You have faced death for ten thousand years.” Something of this reverence for age rested upon us as we looked upon our dear, departed Brother White, the man of God. It can be said of him that he died in the harness. He was always willing to perform any duty required of him. The auditorium was filled with friends who came to pay a last tribute to one they loved. So passes another soldier of the Cross. For him it can be well said, “Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the great things God has prepared for those who love him and keep his commandments.”

Isaac N. White was born in Lawrence County, Ohio, December 27, 1840, being the second son of William Almon and Mary White. He was one of a large family, Alfred White, Mrs. Sarah McVay, Mrs. Mary Atwell, Samuel E. White, and Rufus T. White having preceded him to the future life, and Mrs. Lucinda Lour, Mrs. Eliza Maquailey, David Curtis White, and William A. O. White survive him.

During the Civil War his family lived in Missouri, in Grundy County. He was a member of the Federal Home Guard, having been refused entrance to the regular army by reason of his having lost one foot at the age of fourteen. He educated himself to the extent that was possible, teaching school for some time.

August 16, 1865, he married Miss Emily Trussel, and to them were born eleven children, five sons and six daughters. Helen and Bebbie passed away in childhood. Alfred Delbert, Mrs. Eva Eldora Custead, Mrs. Sara Elizabeth Tomahill, Ammon, Ola C., Mark Sherman, Isaac N., Jr., Mrs. Cordie Leona Hulmes, Mrs. Anna Jane Johnson, together with his wife, seventeen grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren are his living family.

He heard the gospel in Iowa, through Elder Gordon E. Dewell, and accepted it under the hands of Elder John X. Davis, at Newton, Iowa, March 2, 1868. Brother Davis ordained him a priest August 9, 1868, an elder October 23, 1870. He has served the church in the following callings: Priest, elder, seventy, president of seventy, apostle, and patriarch. During his lifetime he also served the local churches as branch president, and district president of Des Moines, Iowa, and Independence, Missouri, Districts. He was a member of the Twelve for sixteen years.

He moved to Independence, Missouri, in the spring of 1899 and made this place his home since that time.

Stone Church

The attendance at the sacramental service in the upper auditorium was about normal. In the lower auditorium there were one hundred and fifty young people, ranging from the ages of twelve to twenty. There was also another gathering of young people in the Institute Building, and out in the dining hall the sacrament was administered to the children.

On the platform in the upper auditorium were Doctor Criley, who was in charge of the song service; R. T. Cooper, President F. M. McDowell, Bishop A. Carmichael, Bishop Becker, Pastor R. V. Hopkins, and the acting pastor, C. Ed. Miller.

Bishop Carmichael offered the opening prayer. In humility he presented himself and the people to the service of the Lord. We could sense the Spirit of God in the prayer. President McDowell then made the opening remarks. He said it was not only useless but sinful to make a covenant with the Lord and keep his commandments which he has given to the Saints to the sentiments uttered in the prayer and in the opening remarks, and the seriousness of making a covenant with God: a covenant the Lord had invited us to make with him when he revealed the words to be used in the sacramental prayer: "... that they are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them." He exhorted them to enter into that covenant with all the earnestness of their souls; then he called on Brother Hopkins to bless the emblems. The congregation entered into the spirit of that service with reverent thoughtfulness and souls uplifted to God in prayer while the covenant was being voiced.

It was good to be in that service.

We noticed Elders Charles May, E. E. Long, Evan Davis, and George Jenkins, of the ministry here in Independence. President F. M. McDowell began a series of Sunday evening meetings last Sunday night, the subject being "Christ, the man." There was a very good attendance.

Pastor R. V. Hopkins will be the speaker next Sunday evening to the Milburn congregation, Milburn Road.

The evening of December 3, Brother S. A. Burgess was severely bruised and suffered a severe nervous shock when he was struck by a motor car in Independence. He was taken to the Sanitarium, where he remained until the next afternoon.

News was received in Independence this week of the death of Brother George Potts, the father of Sister B. R. McGuire, last Wednesday. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, December 6, with the sermon by Apostle Paul M. Hanson. Brother and Sister McGuire are now living in Brooklyn, New York.

Sister Leonard Hoisington arrived in Independence Friday, December 4. She has been with her husband for two years in Switzerland and Germany, where he is a missionary. Conditions became so bad in Germany that Mrs. Hoisington returned home with some of the children, while her husband remains for another year. The children use three languages indiscriminately, sometimes using all in one sentence. At times they become impatient because their mother cannot understand "plain English."

Second Church

The social held by the Religio Society in the dining hall at the Stone Church November 24 was a success from every standpoint. The humor of the crowd was one of good fellowship and enjoyment, the entertainers were efficient, and the menu served was all that could be desired. An attendance of more than two hundred gave a nice boost to the fund for liquidating the society's indebtedness.

Eight o'clock prayer meeting was dispensed with Sunday morning, and the young people went to the sacramental service and there bore their part of the responsibility for the meeting, being a source of great joy and encouragement to the entire congregation. The spirit of testimony was poured out on the people, and an average exceeding one direct, splendid testimony each minute was exceeded during the period given over to testimony.

Sunday evening Elder William H. Kelley spoke on the subject of the law of the Lord, using as his principal text, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." His effort was food for the good congregation present.

Thursday evening of this week the sisters of the five groups comprising Section 2 will serve a supper at the Stone Church dining hall, opening at five o'clock.

The charges for refreshments will be very reasonable, and the sisters are providing a good entertainment to follow the supper—one which will be worth many times over the cost to patrons of the supper purchased. The object is the raising of funds for the church expenses.

It has been announced that Religio will choose officers for the coming year at the regular session Friday evening. A full attendance of all interested in the society's success is desired.

On Monday evening, December 14, the Sunday school will meet at the church to choose its corps of officers for the coming year. Brother P. A. Sherman, who has been superintendent for several years, has given notice that he will not be available for service as the chief officer of the school for 1926, and it is hoped the interest in choosing one to take his place will augment the attendance at this business session. The congregation will meet to pass upon the nominations for pastor, caretaker, chorister, and other officers on Thursday evening, December 10. Let every member be in his seat at eight o'clock.

Liberty Street

Last week, after the prayer meeting was over, the Saints of Group 26 had an hour of social conversation and games, and refreshments. This was a get-together meeting for the group, and a good crowd was present. The meeting was held at the home of Sister Dora Cain.

There was a big crowd at sacramental service Sunday. Bro. F. A. Smith was in charge of the service. He talked to the Sunday school, besides making the very fine opening remarks in the sacramental service. In the evening he began a series of Sunday night meetings to last all through December. Last night his subject was taken from Matthew 22: 37-40: "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

On December 2 a son was born to Brother and Sister Carl Thompson, who has been named Donald Carl, Jr. Mrs. Thompson was Miss Grace Tignor before her marriage. This makes five babies in the Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders.

The annual business meeting for this congregation will be held Tuesday night, December 15.

Sister Amelia Cain was baptized Sunday afternoon, December 6 by Pastor J. M. Baker. She was confirmed under the hands of Elder J. B. Barrett.

Enoch Hill

The sacramental service at eleven o'clock was exceptionally interesting. It was well attended, and a large number of Saints present occupied the time with short, earnest testimonies.

Brother Evan Davis preached at seven o'clock with good liberty on the subject of "Inspiration."

Walnut Park

The eleven o'clock sacramental service was a spiritual one and was much enjoyed, the gift of prophecy bringing assurance and assurance.

President Elbert A. Smith continued his evening sermons to the young people—this time on baptism. The young people attend in goodly numbers, as well as older ones.
The Department of Women, under Sister F. R. Schafer, has arranged for the services of next Sunday. At eleven o'clock Supervisor Alice Cowan will speak on “Parents and the home,” and the department is especially anxious to have all Walnut Park parents present. In the evening the Bluebirds, Orioles, and Temple Builders will occupy the hour.

East Independence
November 29 Brother F. A. Smith, presiding patriarch, preached both morning and evening. He gave some good instruction.

December 6 there were not very many at the sacramental service.

Brother E. E. Long was the evening speaker.

Spring Branch
Prayer meeting at a quarter after eight Sunday morning was well attended, also Sunday school at a quarter of ten.

The communion service at eleven o’clock was a wonderful meeting, and encouraging words were given through prophecy.

Brother Alvin Knisley occupied the pulpit at half past seven.

Frank Crumm, one of our members, is very ill at the home of his daughter in Independence. We are hoping for his speedy recovery so he can meet with us again.

The Department of Women will meet next Thursday at the home of Sister Lloyd on the Dickinson Road.

Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society
One of the important agencies that contribute to the development of both the Lamoni Stake and branch is the Oratorio Chorus. Three years ago the glee club of the college and the choir of the townpeople were amalgamated into a single organization, thus relieving duplication of effort and making possible more efficient service. The choral society has set as its chief program the annual rendition of Mendelssohn’s Elijah, anticipating an ever-increasing chorus, as former singers rejoin in this yearly event; and also more perfected work with the years of singing. The theme and spirit of such music should become woven into the life of the community, and the appreciation of and participation in good music characterize the youth of Lamoni.

Miss Mabel Carille, head of the department of music at Graceland, is director: it has been largely her vision, initiative, and ability that have brought about the high standard and status of the present society. Mrs. Lucy White Bowser accompanies with the piano and Mrs. Clara Bell Lane with the organ.

When the reorganization was effected this fall with the incoming of new students, little solicitation was done, but the result in membership was most gratifying. At present about one hundred and forty are enrolled. From this larger body of singers are selected the twenty voices that comprise the A Capella Chorus, which specializes on unaccompanied music for local and concert work. Miss Carille also directs this group.

The years’ program of the Oratorio Society includes, in addition to the weekly anthems, a Christmas service of carols and anthems, a concert of secular numbers in February as a part of the community lyceum course, and the rendition of the Elijah in the spring.

A series of cottage meetings is being held every Sunday in Waterloo, Iowa, at three in the afternoon, at the home of W. H. Hinds, 1046 Kern Street. Elder Victor A. Hall is the speaker, and his theme is, “What did Jesus preach?” Each sermon bears on some phase of the gospel. The attendance has been fair so far. The Religio gave a literary program and supper the evening of November 20. There was a good attendance, and a social time was enjoyed. About twenty dollars was raised for branch supplies.

Topeka, Kansas
December 1—We are glad to report good attendance in all departments at this time, with a goodly degree of interest shown. Prayer meeting attendance is especially promising.

Sunday morning, November 29, Brother Silas Robinson, of Independence, preached an interesting sermon here, his subject being the goodness of God.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths and wife visited relatives in Topeka Thanksgiving week. Brother Griffiths preached three nights to attentive audiences, all who heard him being glad of the circumstances which brought him to Topeka.

A basket dinner was held at the church Thanksgiving Day, with an abundance of good things to eat in evidence. Our Thanksgiving dinners are always good, but this one was exceptionally good, being an occasion for joy and festivity. A short program was given in the afternoon, with a talk by Brother Griffiths on some of the other Thanksgivings he has experienced and what we have to be thankful for that others do not have—this country and our own people especially. About seventy-five people were present, including several from out of town. Brother and Sister Bailey and Brother and Sister Dave Little and family of Scranton were also present.

The Department of Women held a food sale November 21 with favorable results, meaning that everything was sold.

The Penwell Undertaking Company of Topeka has recently improved its facilities and has been conducting a plan of advertising that is rather unique. It has been paying a cash bonus to each church denomination whose members make a tour of inspection through the undertaking establishment on given dates. The bonus is fifty cents per adult. Our date was the night of November 26, and seventy-six members and friends took part in the inspection, which was a fairly creditable showing for our church, considering our membership. And a few dollars were added to our building fund.

Five of our members have been called and recommended for ordination to the priesthood, which matter will be taken care of at the district conference at Atchison, Kansas, December 14. Quite a number of Saints from Topeka expect to attend.

Trenton, Missouri
December 4—Since July 31, meetings have been continued monthly at Jamesport, and occasionally at Galt and Hickory Creek; also meetings have been held weekly at Spickard.

In Trenton there has been a large increase in attendance at all church services. The junior church service was organized the first of October. It has been well attended each Sunday morning at eleven o’clock, under the direction of Sister J. R. Lentell. This service is held in a room in the church separate from the regular church services.

We are happy to welcome to our midst Elder E. E. Gamet and family, of Cameron, Missouri; Brother William Gunlock, of Rock Island, Illinois; Brother J. E. Johnson, of San Antonio, Texas; and Brother Roughcorn, of Cameron, Missouri. We hope to welcome soon the families of these other brothers.

We were very successful in our drive for the Graceland endowment, going over the top with our quota, and closed with a rally day and basket dinner November 15. Brother O. Salisbury was with us and preached to a very large and attentive audience in the morning, afternoon, and evening. Four children were baptized in the afternoon.

Brother J. R. Lentell and Brother J. D. Profit attended the ministerial conference at Cameron November 20 to 22. Brother J. A. Place and family and Clyde Anson of Polo attended services at Trenton the 22d and were guests of Elder A. C. Anson and family.

Beginning October 1, the Sunday school was reorganized, forming classes for each department, also two captains were appointed by the Sunday school, and they chose lieutenants. These with the branch officers put on an extensive, organized visiting campaign. The result to date has been that the Sunday school has more than three times doubled itself in attendance. Under the direction of the captains the school is divided into two parts: namely, the Rustlers and Hustlers. The attendance is steadily increasing.

Our Department of Recreation and Expression has materially increased in attendance and interest, and is still growing. During Halloween season this department gave a party. Brother Archie Constance, stake superintendent, was with us November 29, talked at the program hour, and preached in the evening.

The Department of Women, under the leadership of Sister J. D. Proffit, has been holding meetings regularly with good attendance and interest. The membership of the home department in charge of Sister J. D. Proffit has increased to fifty-eight.

The Utopia Chapter of Temple Builders was organized in October, Sister J. R. Lentell being chosen leader. They meet weekly, having a large attendance. They have had two parties in addition to their regular work.

Recently the Orioles have been organized. They have held one meeting.

Lucas Branch

Elder L. G. Holloway, our stake missionary, has recently held services in this branch with fair attendance and good interest. Lucas is one of the oldest branches in the stake, and at one time was the home of some who have given much service to the church in the missionary field. The Saints of this place have just redecorated their church building by papering and painting, and now the ladies of the branch are raising funds with which to purchase a piano. There is some talk of moving the building to a more central location, where it could be more conveniently reached.

In the services just held, several were in attendance who had never been in our church before. All seemed pleased with the sermons, as they were of an affirmative character. While the gospel was clearly set forth by the speaker, no one could take offense because of any reflection on the faith of another.

Under the leadership of Elder W. B. Farley as branch president, we hope to see the work grow in this place.

Bradner, Ohio

December 3.—This is a busy season of the year for all the local Saints, especially so for the ladies, who are busily preparing for their bazaar, which is to be held on December 11 and 12. There will be several booths, displaying fancywork of every description, quilts, comforts, children's supplies, aprons, handkerchiefs, homemade candies, pop corn, baked goods, and refreshments.

Much interest is shown at Religio. We have a splendid attendance, and after a short study of the Book of Mormon, a program is given wherein both children of the Saints and their friends not of the church take part. The little folks enjoy giving the program no less than the older ones enjoy looking on. We have speakers as young as three years.

A splendid program was given on Thanksgiving evening, under the direction of Sister Nelly Shultz, who is very capable along the line of training children.

According to custom, a Christmas program will be given, also under the direction of Sister Shultz and Sister Franklin Slye.

Our prayer meetings are well attended, and the Spirit of God is manifested among us.

The Department of Women of this district will hold a convention in the local church sometime in January, 1926, when officers will be elected and general business will be transacted. There is a good work to be done in this department, and this convention is called to create a closer relationship one with the other, that the members of the department can work together in harmony for the good of the church in general.

The local Saints responded nobly when the call came to do their bit toward the college endowment fund. Considerably more than their quota was subscribed. The exact amount is not on file at this time.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Fostoria, Ohio, on Thanksgiving Day, when Miss Nellie Fruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fruth, of Alvada, Ohio, became the bride of Milo Smith, son of the local branch president, Mr. and Mrs. William Smith. They will reside in Bradner.

Ottumwa, Iowa

December 3.—The Saints were made happy with the results of the drive for Graceland. Our quota was $500, and $543 was raised. All things being considered, we have done well.

The services of November have been fairly well attended. The sermons have been to the point, and words of encouragement have been given.

The Department of Women has been busy preparing for the bazaar. The ladies also gave a baked ham supper at the Y. M. C. A. on November 28. The supper was fine, and the sisters did their best to please the public. It was a good advertisement for our branch. A cooking sale was also held during November, which was successful. We are happy to see the Department of Women alive and doing so much to help the good work along.

Some repairs have been made on the church, to make it comfortable for the winter.

Sister Green is home from the hospital but is still confined to her home. Sister L. N. Edwards is sick but, like a good soldier of the Master, is very patient, cheerful, and hopeful.

Gallands Grove District

DENISON, IOWA, December 3.—I am reminded this morning of a promise made some time ago to some of our membership that they would see some items from this part of the "vineyard" concerning the work we are all engaged in, so I will try and comply.

After writing of our experiences during the month of September in making a tour of the district in the interests of the theme of the hour, "Stewardships," as well as the "junior church" work, the next event of importance was the district conference held at Dow City October 24 and 25, which was one of the largest in point of numbers held in the recent past, and the interest was good from start to finish.

There are some signs of advancement along different lines as we observed them; one in particular was in the musical part of the work. Sister Eunice Johnson of Deloit, who has charge of that work, had worked hard and faithfully to have her part of the service what it should be, and she was rewarded by a more united effort than has been manifested for some time.

Another feature that is worthy of mention is the part taken by a group of young ladies of Dow City, who were prevailed upon to put on a playlet entitled, "The challenge of the cross," and while they were at a disadvantage to quite an extent in not being where they could give it the full amount of time they felt it should have (as several of them were teaching away from home except for the week-end), yet it was creditably presented and a valuable lesson was impressed on the large audience present. All felt well repaid for attending.

The preaching was well received and the speakers felt the enlightening influence of the Spirit as they endeavored to instruct the Saints in the things of the kingdom.

Immediately after the conference we renewed our efforts towards putting the "drive" over, as we had already had one branch over the top, and another well on the way; so when the time came to begin we felt that if we could help to enthusiasm some of the other places as they had seemed to catch the spirit of the work, that we would be successful in raising our allotment. Although we may confess that when the project was first divulged and the amount we were ex-

The time and theme of Thanksgiving found good expression in La Moure. The service of the Sunday morning preceding the holiday was observed as Thanksgiving Day. The junior church was held in the lower auditorium at 9.30. Decorations of fruit and foliage gave a setting for the service. A general good spirit prevailed, and all services are holding the usual attendance.

In the Ensign columns may be found a short letter from Sister Julia Jenkins, written from Hardtner, Kansas, relating some reasons for her conversion, and that of others, who were recently baptized at that place by Elder Harvey Minton. The spirit of this letter is refreshing. It will repay those who hunt it up and read it.

Radio Flashes

West Plains, Missouri.—Yours is the most perfectly modulated station of any heard during the day. The music was splendid, the voices clearly understood. Every spoken word was perfectly modulated, except for slight fading during twilight period. You are very much more effective here than your neighbor stations, W B B and W D A F.—H. Livingston.

Caldwell, Kansas.—I receive you just as plain as Kansas City Star, Omaha, Chicago, Denver, or New Orleans. Your program was very plain. I do not ask for better broadcasting. Would like to hear the K L D S ladies' quartet sing "In the garden."—O. E. Haubold.

Port Hope, Michigan, December 3.—We have had a radio for the past year and have tried many times to get K L D S, but never were successful until last Sunday evening. We enjoyed the sermons and program very much. Every word came in, distinct and clear. We hope to enjoy many more.—Mrs. Enoch Ledsworth, Box 76.

The Saints of Lansing, Michigan, express their heartfelt sympathy for Sister Core, Brundage Parks in her recent bereavement, as her husband, Wilie F. Parks, departed this life November 16 after an illness of three years. We feel to commend Sister Parks for her unwavering patience and service during his illness. Funeral services were conducted by Elder S. A. Barss. His consoling words, together with the solo by Mrs. Martha Luce, "My Father knows," were a source of comfort to those left to mourn the loss of their loved one.

MISCELLANEOUS

Notice to the Ministry

By arrangement with the clergy bureau, all applications by our ministry are signed by the Presidency. Applications should be sent to this office for indorsement in the space provided for clergyman's signature before mailing to the clergy bureau. It will save labor for all concerned if the ministry will kindly observe this request.

December 8, 1925.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Owen Sound District

To the Ministry and Members: Having secured from the church library at Independence the books quoted in many of the recent tracts and HERALD articles on stewardship, I can loan for a week each, any and all of them for study, and can highly recommend them to any who desire to be up with the times on what other churches and the world are saying on the matter of stewardships. We were very fortunate to be ahead of them in theory, both as to time and matter, but they may precede us in practice.

These may be secured from Brother John Hakada, 81 Arthur Street, Guelph, Ontario, Canada, and are for Ontario Saints only, and that for a short time, as they must be returned to the library in a reasonable time. Send postage and insurance. J. W. Peterson.

Conference Notices

Alabama, at McKenzie, December 19 and 20. Business session Saturday at 10 a. m. All invited to attend. H. H. Wiggins.

Correction

In the obituary notice of Daniel Joseph Lawn, appearing in the HERALD for December 2, the name of Eugene Hole appears as one of the directors of the funeral. The name should have been Elder Eugene Holt.

Addresses

Elder E. F. Robertson, 1758 M Street, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Request for Prayers

Sister John Gayer, of Port Elgin, Ontario, is suffering from a serious cancer and asks the Saints to pray for her December 13, that if it be the Lord's will she may be healed.

Brother George A. Elson and Mr. James M. Culbertson, of Norfolk, Nebraska, request the prayers of all Saints, that our Father may bless and strengthen them in their afflictions.

Mrs. Stephen Cooper, of Senlac, Saskatchewan, requests the Saints to fast and pray on December 13 for her husband, who is suffering from a severe nervous breakdown; also for her mother, Mrs. Lottie Land, of Shellbrook, who is sorely afflicted.

Our Departed Ones

ALLEN.—Willis H. Allen was born February 2, 1884, near Vales Mills, Ohio; Baptized forty years ago and remained true to the teachings of the gospel. Died November 22, 1925. Leaves his wife, two daughters, and five sons. Funeral at Saints' church at Vales Mills, Tuesday, November 24, with sermon by A. B. Kirkendall. Interment in Bourn Cemetery.

BALDWIN.—Dorothy Frances Baldwin was born June 29, 1906, at Niles, Ohio. Died November 24, 1925. Leaves her husband, three brothers, and three sisters, all of Niles, Ohio, except one sister who now resides in Denver, Colorado. Funeral at her father's home, with sermon by J. C. McConaghy.

While the ten accounts would be more expensive to operate and thus the immediate profits to the

for these reasons:

1st. Anyone who has saved $100.00 has learned the great lesson of thrift if they but knew it, so you have ten potential $1,000.00 accounts because they

2d. With ten accounts you would have TEN

II. YOUR HEART.—Part 1

I was my father's son, tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother. He taught me also, and said unto me, Let thine heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live. For the words of my mouth shall not depart from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding. Exalt her, and she shall bring thee to honor, when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee. Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings; and the years of thy life shall be many. . . . The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. The path of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what time they stumble. My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings. Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart. For they are life unto those that find them, and health to all their flesh. Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs 4: 3-23.

Note especially the closing verse of the foregoing scripture: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

That passage has been accepted for about three thousand years as good scripture. And Doctor G. Leonard Harrington has said that it is good medical science. I believe that it is both.

It may be that in taking up such subjects as "Your heart," "Your tongue," and "Your hands," we take a certain risk. An old colored preacher was asked what he usually preached about, and he replied: "Sometimes Ah preach on baptism; and sometimes Ah preach on heaven; and sometimes on the Millennium." His interrogator then asked him why he didn't preach on chicken stealing, to which he replied: "When Ah preach on chicken stealing there's a sort of a coldness comes ovah mah audience."

Perhaps he was not the only man to entertain the idea that the week is divided into seven compartments, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and that religion is poured into the first compartment while life is poured into the other six.

You cannot dam up religion in that way. Brother T. W. Chatburn used to say that the sea is not measured from the top of the highest wave nor from the depth of the deepest hollow; but rather from its dead level. And so God does not measure our religion from the crest of a deeply spiritual prayer meeting, and neither, thank God, does he measure it from the depths of the slough of despair into which we sometimes fall. He measures it from the level of our everyday living, and Sunday goes in with the other six days.

We have remarked that a man with his tongue "set on fire of hell," as James said, can burn his own home, set fire to the community, and burn old friendships; or with his tongue inspired from heaven he can speak words of comfort, of peace, of healing.

Physicians look at the tongue because it registers symptoms of deeper conditions, and Jesus, judging things spiritually, said that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. He looked into deeper causes. The use that we make of our tongue is simply an indication of an internal spiritual condition. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

The heart is the seat of the emotions. In fact, the ancients knew little about the brain. They thought that they thought with their kidneys; and the Babylonians thought that they thought with their livers. Among the very ancient the brain was considered simply as an organ through which vapors were secreted from the head, and these, passing through the pores, hardened and formed hair. That was a serious reflection on baldheaded men. I suppose their wives would say to them, as my wife has said to me and yours to you, "Where is your mind?"

Our fathers came nearer to the mark when they talked about the heart as the seat of the emotions. It is the symbol of the emotions. The heart registers the emotions. You will realize that fact if you have ever had an intense, sudden fright, perhaps without much cause, over some little incident in the dark, or a nightmare, or perhaps with a very real cause as when you drove onto the railway crossing and suddenly saw the enormous black bulk of an onrushing passenger locomotive looming above you. If so, you will know that fright clutches the heart with a chilly grip and causes it to stand still.

On the other hand, love quickens the heart. When Cupid steps on the accelerator the human motor almost shakes the body to pieces. Even a very old car may go up a steep hill in high when Cupid steps on the gas.

But when sorrow comes into the life, it puts a leaden load on the heart and we breathe with difficulty. The "long sigh of sorrow" has a physiological as well as a psychological cause.

When the Wise Man said, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life," he called attention to our emotional natures. And certainly it is difficult for us to overestimate the importance of the emotions in our lives.

We are powerfully moved by our feelings. The unstable man mentioned by James, who is "like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed," and who cannot hope to "receive anything of the Lord," is the man who is moved this moment by a good impulse and that moment by a bad one and who is so weak of will that he is swirled to and fro when he should be master of his own course.

We pride ourselves that we think things out to a conclusion and go according to our intellectual convictions. As a matter of fact, more than we think, we are moved by our feelings. If you wish to reach a man in any way, you will often have to reach him through the heart.

Our feelings prompt us to do little, mean, contemptible things, or they move us to the most sublime heights of sacrifice. They move us to insane follies and excesses, or they sustain us from day to day in the hard and arduous performance of daily duty. They are powerful but blind—they do not reason.

There is a statement in the Doctrine and Covenants which says that the "glory of God is intelligence." And so there comes home to us the lesson that we must keep our hearts with all diligence. We must decide, as the captain of our salvation, what emotion we shall give rein to and which direction we shall give to it.

On the other hand, we realize, of course, that reason itself is simply a cold, logical process. Intelligence alone would become something like a computing machine with which we would reach conclusions by processes of deduction or induction—simply press a button and let the wheels go around in our heads to grind out syllogisms.

The emotions, the imagination, the deep primal feelings of our hearts give color and vitality and power to the processes of our thoughts. It is not only written that the glory of God is intelligence, but it is also written, "God so loved . . ." We must have a proper balance in our life of reason and feeling.

The poet has said:

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not figures on a dial.
We should count the time by heart throbs, he most lives
Who thinks most, feels noblest, acts the best.

—Philip James Bailey.

Reason must decide, and the will must compel obedience, because in all of us there are powerful primitive impulses and passions. The best man and the most virtuous woman may find impulses rising up which must be controlled. The late President Joseph Smith often used a homely saying, like this, "I cannot prevent the crows from flying over my head, but I can prevent them making nests in my hair." I cannot prevent these impulses coming suddenly and unbidden into my heart, but I can refuse to let them take form in action. I need give them no asylum.

Tennyson said:

Where is one that, born of woman, altogether can escape
From the lower world within him, moods of tiger or of ape?

And so good a man as Whittier, a pious Quaker bachelor, confessed to "two voices," one calling him down into the mire, and the other bidding him to stand up and be a man. Paul, so great and consecrated a missionary as he was, confessed that within himself there was a warfare. And, we say it reverently, even the Son of God was tempted. Do not think for a moment that the temptation in the wilderness and on the mountain was a pageant or a play. Paul tells us that Christ was tempted in all things as we are. Any man thirty years of age knows what that means. Jesus was tempted in all things even as we are tempted, but was without sin.

We are not talking about a "pink tea party." That is not life. We are talking about the primitive, volcanic, powerful passions of the human soul, such passions as welled up in Herrin, Illinois, when they massacred strike-breakers in broad daylight; and when one of those men lay in the street dying and begged for a last drink of water, a woman with a babe in her arms, the very symbol of mercy, looking down upon him cursed him and refused the cooling draught.

We have many examples of men who yield to desires which should be governed: the murderer who in a fit of passion kills his fellow man, the drunkard in the gutter, the libertine, the drug addict, the gambler. On the other hand, we have many examples of men who direct and control themselves and keep their hearts with all diligence. These latter are the home builders, the honorable citizens of church and state.

Here are some contrasts. Such contrast runs all down the ages. Here are two men, young men. Both have the normal impulses of manhood. One of them goes where his fancy takes him. He subscribes to the old adage, “Always to court and never to wed.”
He goes through life plucking this lovely flower and throwing it in the mud, and that lovely flower and trampling it in the mire. And when at last, having left a trail of ruin behind him, having reached old age, he is sour, diseased, disillusioned; and when his soul merges into the other black shadows of death his name is a blot on the register of hell.

But here is another young man who keeps his heart with diligence. He keeps himself from all others that he may give himself to the one. He builds his home and he maintains his family. He goes down to an honorable old age, and it can well be said of him, It is good that he has lived. And though he may never have entered the church, on the book of remembrance his name is inscribed as one of the “honorable men of the earth,” and he will not lose his reward.

You remember the story of Joseph who was sold into Egypt? That Hebrew lad went into Egypt and was placed in the home of Potiphar. Potiphar came to trust Joseph so much that he gave him oversight of his house. He trusted him not only with his goods, but also with his family, and Joseph moved into that sacred trust. But Potiphar’s wife seems to have been a wayward soul, and when Potiphar was away she cast her eyes upon Joseph. She enticed him.

Do not think for a moment that the heart of Joseph did not respond. Hebrew boys were much like modern boys. But Joseph bethought him of his trusteeship, and no doubt of his early religious training, and so he fled away, leaving his garment in the hands of the woman. The story that she told to Potiphar put Joseph in prison. According to modern codes, Joseph was a fool. But the record shows that the Lord went with him to prison. The Lord loved Joseph. He kept his heart with all diligence, and because he could rule his own heart he had not been in prison long until he ruled the prison, and soon prison doors could not hold him. He came forth and ruled Egypt. “Iron bars do not a prison make.”

Going down just a little further in history we have the story of David, the proud, noble, wealthy king of Israel. The story says that one day he walked on the housetop of the palace, and looking over other housetops he saw the humble home of Uriah, and on the flat roof of the house in the cool of the day was Uriah’s wife, Bathsheba, at her ablu­ tions. The heart of David leaped within him in response to that stimulus, naturally so. Uriah was David’s friend, and every night lay at his door with his spear to protect David’s life and his home. But the proud king of Israel forgot all the obligations of friendship, love, and religion, and by devious ways sneaked into the home of Uriah, and presently found himself in a most unkingly intrigue, the only way out of which seemed to him through the death of Uriah. So murder came next. The first sin is only the corner stone of an edifice. He sent Uriah into the front of the battle, where he was killed.

Presently came the Prophet Nathan to David’s house and told the king a little story. He said that in a certain city dwelt two men, one rich and the other poor. The rich man had many flocks and herds, and the poor man had only one ewe lamb that he had raised with his own hands. It played with the children, it drank out of the master’s cup, and he loved it because it was all that he had. When the rich man wanted food for a banquet he passed by his own flocks and went and slew the ewe lamb that was all the poor man had. David listened to the story to that point, and then he leaped from his chair and said, “Who is that man? As sure as God lives he shall die!” Nathan pointed his finger at him and said, “Thou art the man!”

In the life of every man who does not keep his heart with all diligence sooner or later there arises a prophet of God to point the finger and say, “Thou art the man!” In the life of every woman who does not keep her heart with diligence sooner or later there arises a prophet of God to say, “Thou art the woman!” When David felt his heart rising up in response to a natural stimulus but to desire a forbidden, wrong, unethical, unsocial, ungodly deed, like the king that he was he should have said to it, “Lie down!” David did not keep his heart. He let his heart drive him. “Out of the heart are the issues of life.”

About the Campaign

Each mail brings to our office cheering reports, containing hundreds of dollars in pledges and substantial cash payments for the Graceland Endowment-Stewardship Fund.

From various districts and branches reports keep pouring in, and the totals are climbing higher and higher. The church is answering nobly to the call of this campaign, and of course the people are anxious to know what the final figure will be.

Branch committees should immediately make a complete report to the branch solicitor, of all pledges and payments. He should issue individual receipts to those paying cash in full or in part.

Branch solicitors should send all pledge cards and payments to the district bishop’s agent.

At the earliest possible time the district bishop’s agent should forward all pledge cards and payments

www.LatterDayTruth.org
to the Presiding Bishopric, at Independence, Missouri. Do not wait for your next monthly report to do this, but make weekly reports if necessary, so that the campaign work can be completed this month.

We are making every possible effort to make a complete report by January 1, but it depends on the branch solicitors and bishop's agents to get us the necessary information. Let everyone report promptly, so that work can be completed this year.

Very sincerely yours,
THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By A. CARMICHAEL.

Questions and Answers

Question: If a Saint who has complied with the financial law has a wife who is an unbeliever and opposes stewardships, should he go ahead as he understands the law? Should she be given any benefit through his obedience to it?

Answer: The law of God and the law of the land contemplate that the husband is the head of the family; being so, he should be the one to take the initial step toward complying with the law of stewardships. If the wife is not a member, we believe that the husband should go ahead and comply with the law as he understands it.

The benefit the wife would receive from this compliance with the law by her husband would be, no doubt, indirect. That is, the Lord would bless him for complying with the law and, as a result, she would partake indirectly of these blessings.

Did Christ Fail? If So, in What Sense?

Question: I have seen a statement to the effect that Bishop Carmichael declared in a speech in Independence that Christ failed. What is the basis of such a statement?

Answer: The one making the statement evidently with some care omitted a part of what Bishop Carmichael said; that part in fact which should not have been omitted fairly if he were to be reported at all, because the part omitted explained the meaning of the statement.

Evidently the speech referred to is the one briefly reviewed in the Independence items, HERALD for October 7, 1925, page 1073. Bishop Carmichael went on explicitly to point out the sense in which he meant that Christ failed, "Christ said, How often would I have gathered you, but ye would not."

Christ desired and evidently attempted to gather the people together in Jerusalem. The desire which he expressed (Matthew 23:37) to gather them together failed of realization because "they would not." Bishop Carmichael made that point very clear.

OFFICIAL

Midnight Test Program Reached Alaska

Over a thousand cards and letters, besides nearly a hundred telegrams and long distance phone calls, were received by KLDS on the midnight test program, November 24, 25. It was impossible to complete the report promised for last week's HERALD, and only a portion of the communications received, selected for publication, will be printed this week. More will be printed next week.

A great many reports were received from church members who have never been able to hear KLDS before, and many more from regular listeners commented on the exceptional clearness of the midnight transmission. Many stated that the modulation (clear quality of voice and music) was much better than ever before. These things were due, not to any difference in the transmission from KLDS, but to the comparative lack of interference from other stations at the hour of the test. Very few stations broadcast after midnight, while earlier in the evening hundreds of programs are on the air, and the consequent "mixing" of radio waves results in interference.

The great number of reports from Canada disclose an interesting fact. Canadian listeners who have complained of poor reception from KLDS have been greatly troubled with interference (sometimes not directly discernible) from the nearer Canadian broadcast stations.

Practically every State in the Union, all populated parts of Canada, several States in Mexico, and even far-away Alaska, tuned in to the midnight program. The great majority of listeners, of course, tuned in to KLDS by accident, but according to many of the reports received, these "accidental listeners" stayed with KLDS throughout the remainder of the program.

So many listeners, especially church members, requested that the midnight program be made a regular feature, that K L D S will take the air once each week at 11.58 p. m. for the time being at least, on Tuesday nights. Pacific coast radio fans can thus tune in at 9.59 p. m.

The nature of the midnight programs has not been fully determined. It is possible that it will be divided into two or three parts, including a devotional or sacred service. K L D S would like to have its listeners' suggestions for the new midnight schedule.

Following are a few of the reports received on the program November 24, 25. More will be printed next week.

Boise, Idaho.—Your test program received this morning at 12.50 mountain time. Pipe organ music very good; announcements clear. Reception on Crosley Tridyn.—Sampson Music Company, by R. G. Thompson.

Kennewick, Washington.—Your program came in with plenty of volume and clearness last night. You came in as well as K H J, Los Angeles, and better than I usually get Hastings, Nebraska. Unfavorable weather and strong wind with considerable static. K F I of Los Angeles usually comes in very fine here but didn't last night, so you may rest assured that your attempt for distance was well repaid.—O. A. Fisher.

East Hartford, Connecticut.—I have just had the pleasure of listening to your station for the first time. Your program came through very well on loudspeaker in spite of the fact that the static was very heavy. Hope to hear you many times in the future.—James A. Mitchell, 15 Greene Terrace.

LaGrande, Oregon.—We have been going to write to you for a long time and tell you how we enjoy your beautiful programs. Last night, with a large bunch of company, we listened to your midnight program. You came through as clear and perfect as could be. One would think the music were being played right here in the home, and the announcements were clear and perfect. We have a big ten-tube Zenith receiver, and I believe one could hear your pipe organ very well. I ran it into volume and clearness last night. You came in as strong as K L D S, Independence, Missouri usually comes in, and am very glad to report that it came in fine and with great volume. Sorry to have missed first of programs.—Neilson H. Turner, M. D., 200 East Franklin Street.

Radio News

Morning Radio Program Now Regular Feature

The Tuesday and Friday morning devotional services and inspirational programs from K L D S have met with such great favor that they have been included in the regular K L D S broadcast schedule. Some have asked for the "breakfast hour" programs every morning, but it is believed wise, for the present at least, to limit them to Tuesday and Friday.

On the October first morning program, about two hundred reports were received, including some from both coasts, many from Canada, and several from the Gulf section. The 6.30 to 7.30 hour is quite favorable, from a reception standpoint, for western listeners.

Next week, in the HERALD, will be published some of the comments on the morning programs. Tune in Tuesday and Friday mornings, and send your reports, criticisms, suggestions, and request numbers to K L D S.

Christmas Eve Radio Wedding at K L D S

Beginning at 9 o'clock during the regular 8 o'clock broadcasting schedule December 24, K L D S will broadcast the wedding ceremony of two young church people well known in Kansas City and Independence and to former Graceland students. The unique wedding announcements which have been mailed by the parents of the bride-to-be read: "Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tousley invite you to tune in for the wedding of their daughter, Mabel Agnes, to Mr. Robert Jackson Crayne, Christmas Eve, 1925, at 9 p. m., broadcasting station K L D S, Independence, Missouri, wave length 441 meters.

K L D S Broadcasting on Increased Schedule

Following the action taken by the recent radio conference that stations using exclusive wave channels employ them effectively, K L D S has already begun to increase its broadcast schedule. At present K L D S is on the air at the following hours: Sunday, 11 a. m., 3 p. m., 6.30 p. m., 9 p. m. Tuesday, 6.30 a. m., 8 p. m., 11.59 p. m. Thursday, 8 p. m. Friday, 6.30 a. m. Saturday, 8 p. m.

Other schedules contemplated include children's hour programs on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evenings at 7 p. m., afternoon matinee program on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, and perhaps additional morning broadcasting.

Let Every Member Be At Work

CLEVELAND, OHIO, December 7, 1925.

Bishop A. Carmichael: The College Endowment-Stewardship Campaign is just what we have needed for many years, and now it is completed we are all glad of the result accomplished. What I have personally been able to do for the endowment fund is freely given, and it will in no way interfere with my regular tithing and free-will offerings. I feel that this is largely the sentiment of the Lakewood Branch, and many will be willing to make a definite effort to this end.

We feel sure that the coming year will be a prosperous one in general church work.

Sincerely your cooperator,
R. MILLER.

WAR EAGLE, ARKANSAS, December 9, 1925.

Bishop A. Carmichael: There is a general feeling of happiness and satisfaction among the Saints in the Spring River District as to the outcome of the endowment campaign. All have been glad to do their share and have given as liberally as their circumstances would permit. From the expressions of the Saints I think the Endowment-Stewardship campaign is not going to lessen our tithes and offerings in the least. In fact, it seems there has been an awakening among the members, and they are going to see to it that their work—that is, the general work of the church—is going on to victory.

We are anxious in this part to see more tithes paid, because there are so many calls for missionaries, and we fully realize we cannot have missionaries if there are no funds to support their families.

At present I am visiting the scattered members in the district in various places.
Trusting that you may be guided in your work, I am Very sincerely yours,
A. T. HIGDON.
All the material herein presented is not intended to prove the Book of Mormon, but rather to show the scope of investigation one may indulge in the search of truth. Every month this year some magazine or other has run an article on the prehistoric inhabitants of the Americas, and almost without exception somewhere in the body of the articles there is a confirmation of some claim set forth in the Book of Mormon.

A direct statement of a certain condition does not always constitute proof of the book; sometimes a general knowledge of Book of Mormon history helps the student to see more clearly than the observer of to-day on the ground, surrounded by the ruins themselves. Following we submit some items of interest gathered this year from various sources.

Robert P. Crawford, in the Mentor for August, in an article entitled, “America’s mystery land,” dealing with a visit to New Mexico’s Pueblo ruins where wonderful relics of prehistoric life have been excavated, says:

Morning found me in the enchanted land. The night before, the express had thundered out of Kansas and Colorado, and under the black cover of midnight had deposited me in New Mexico. But I might as well have awakened in Italy or Spain or Egypt. . . . New Mexico is indeed the Egypt of America. There is more mystery, enchantment, and unusualness to the square foot of New Mexican soil than anywhere else. Egypt has been in the limelight of archaeology for the last two or three years, but here in our own country, in New Mexico, there is quite as much romance and mystery.

The same writer says:

There are a great many places in our own Southwest which have not been visited by more than a dozen or so white parties. At one schoolhouse in New Mexico the boys every Saturday go out and pick up archaeological specimens more than one thousand years old, which many a museum would be glad to obtain.

Many travelers who have seen one or more of these ruins have often speculated as to what strange prehistoric races once inhabited our Southwest. But now comes modern-day science and establishes the fact that the Pueblos of the present day and the prehistoric races are closely related. Briefly, it is now believed that the builders of the great communal dwellings of a thousand or two thousand years ago were simply the ancestors of the present-day tribes that remain.

How strange that the Book of Mormon should make this claim some ninety-five years ago and thereby be disproved. It is very strange that those who palmed the book off on others blinded with religious zeal were enabled to anticipate the findings of men of science by some ninety-five years. For the Book of Mormon in its conception claimed affinity with Egypt in that the forefathers of those who wrote it were descendants of the Joseph who was sold into Egypt.

Mr Crawford continues:

There are more than six hundred abandoned villages stretching from Colorado through New Mexico and into Utah, Arizona, and Mexico . . . . The Chaco Canyon, now a national monument, has offered one of the greatest fields for the archaeological explorer. . . . Of all the peoples of the ancient world whose achievements have survived the ages, none have more completely obtained oblivion. . . . It has long been the custom with historians and illustrators to picture the arduous task of erecting the pyramids of Egypt and the structures of ancient Greece and Rome. But here in the New World there was a problem equally as great. Long before the white man came to America, these prehistoric people of the Southwest were learning to build great communal structures. It is estimated that in the construction of Chetro Kettle, one of the ruins of Chaco Canyon, more than 50,000,000 pieces of stone were quarried, transported, shaped, and laid in walls. Thousands of logs for poles had to be hewn in distant forests and transported by hand to the building. This was only one of twelve large communities in the Chaco Canyon, besides a number of small villages in the seven miles of the canyon. It was no unwilling task under the lash of kingly taskmasters," declares Doctor Edgar L. Hewitt, the director of the museum of New Mexico; "the American Indians were never so ruled."

Here we must note that the Book of Mormon states that after a certain period there were no kings on the continent of America. And it was proclaimed by divine decree that there never would be.

On page 8 is an account of work done by the American Museum of Natural History at Aztec, New Mexico. This Aztec pueblo was built in the form of the letter "E," some 280 by 360 feet in size. Sandstone blocks, which with cobblestones, adobe, and iron concretions were used in the construction, were cut out and laid with a great deal of skill. These sandstone blocks were transported from the quarries two to five miles by human means, since the Pueblos did not use beasts of burden.

A room of strikingly beautiful design was uncovered a couple of years ago. The interior had been painted in white, surmounted with red borders in triangular design. In another room in the Aztec ruins the body of an individual with a broken arm was discovered. Here six splints of wood had been applied by the native doctors to hold it in place.

Regarding the age of the ruins, he says probably one thousand to two thousand years ago will include all of the oldest ruins which are generally known in Mexico. Civilization at the Mesa Verde cliff ruins in southern Colorado reached its height about 1300 A.D.

Mr. Crawford also speaks of Puye, a ruin that in its best days had somewhere around 1,600 rooms. And of another at Taos. This pueblo rises to a height of five stories and has been likened to a pyramid. Accompanying the article are numerous photographs of pottery, the cliffs, inscription rock at El Morrow, New Mexico; the ruins at Frijoles; the stone lions of Chichito, New Mexico (said to be the oldest stone sculpture in the United States). The article complete is worthy of the student's perusal.

In the same issue of Mentor is an article by Ray Frost on "The pits of Rancho La Brea," meaning Ranch of the Bar, which revealed to the scientific world an amazing assortment of prehistoric animal remains.

The writer states:

Gigantic beasts, of species long extinct, stumbled into these pits of crude oil and sank to a long oblivion during the period of the Quaternary or Pleistocene, supposed to have been some time between 50,000 and 600,000 years ago.

Unlike most fossil discoveries, here the actual bones were found, preserved complete in their original form, and not replaced by lime or other foreign substances; and such of the skeletons as have been reassembled have been set up without restored parts.

Among the ponderous quadrupeds to fall victims to these sticky traps of asphaltic oil were a number of great mammoths, or imperial elephants, some of them armed with curving tusks sixteen feet in length and standing three feet taller than Jumbo. There were found the remains of a score of American mastodons; curious short-legged ground sloths as big as oxen; and innumerable camels, horses, and bison; all of types that lived and disappeared before the period referred to by scientists as "recent times."

In this connection we cannot help but note that some writers have held the Book of Mormon up to ridicule because it states that the camel, the horse, and the elephant existed upon the continent in prehistoric times. It also mentions two other animals, namely "cureloms and cumoms."

On page 737, the Book of Mormon, speaking of some sixty-two years after the landing of the first colony, which would make it close to four thousand years ago, the writer mentions some of the animals that were useful unto men. He lists all manner of cattle, oxen, cows, sheep, swine, and goats; they had horses and asses, elephants, cureloms, and cumoms.

The Lord moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. Of a truth, out of the mouths of two or three witnesses is the word made plain. The command to study all good books and to seek learning even by study carries its own reward: "the power of discerning truth." Each succeeding year rounds out an avalanche of fact to the truth of Mormon's word. The testimony of man has long been proclaimed in defense of Mormon's record, and now the earth itself throws out the vindication.

While some writers have contended the Book of Mormon a fraud because it admitted these animals upon the American Continent, others have questioned it because it made man and these animals contemporaneous. Here again the Lord's footstool spits forth authentically.

In the above-mentioned article, on page 20, Mr. Frost says:

It would be interesting to know just what sort of looking woman she was in life whose bones were found ten or a dozen feet below the surface of the hardened asphalt in one of the newer pits. One wonders under what circumstance her fate overtook her, and if she and her companions lived in constant fear of ferocious animals that may still have prowled that part of the earth.

She carried utensils in the form of two wooden paddles, and some bits of bone and shell, neatly perforated, that must have been articles of personal adornment. The skull, rather small for that of an adult, is well formed.

Regarding the camel and the horse, Mr. Frost's conclusions will prove distracting to those who seek to deprecate the Book of Mormon. He says:

The well-preserved skeletons of about sixty camels and about an equal number of horses, all types older than those now living, were discovered in the pits. Both the camel and the horse are believed to have originated in this country and to have become extinct here after the species had migrated to other lands by ways or routes no longer existing.

In Capper's Magazine for September, 1925, page 29, is a report of one Doctor von Hauch, an Australian explorer, returning from the wilds of Peru, South America. He tells of finding a tribe of Indians of pronounced Jewish appearance and speaking a language similar to Hebrew. Solomon was a common name among the tribesmen. A gold-producing region on the River Hualla is known as Ophir, and a legend current in the tribe tells of white men coming many years ago to carry off large quantities of gold.

This reminds us of 1 Kings 10:27, where it states that Solomon built ships and Hiram sent a navy to man them, with a knowledge of the sea. And the ships came to Ophir and fetched from thence gold.

Just where this Ophir was located has long been a question, and the writer is not saying that Mr. von Hauch has settled it. The majority say that it was either in Arabia, India, or Africa, while one Spanish writer says it was in Peru. Baron Humboldt located it in Veragus, United States of Colombia. Fountain, in How the World Was Peopled, put it in Mexico and Central America. And the Bible says that the ships of Tarshish came once in three years laden with gold from Ophir.

The Book of Mormon claims that the second colony that came to America in the year 600 B.C. were Jews of the first water, being direct descendants of Joseph who was sold into Egypt. It also claims that they modified their language after coming here. Not strange that there would be a pronounced Jewish appearance and a language similar to Hebrew.

In the Wide World magazine for December, 1924, is an article by F. A. Mitchell-Hedges titled "In quest of the unknown," which is a relation of adventure among the Chucumque Indians by Mr. Mitchell Hedges and Lady Richmond Brown, who were the first whites to penetrate into the territory of the Chucumque. In a note at the head of the article it is stated that these people live to-day exactly as they did in the Stone Age.

It is claimed in the Book of Mormon that the second colony who came to these shores were white, but under the curse of God, by reason of their transgression, their skin was darkened. There is also a promise of their descendants becoming a white and delightsome people. On page 114 in this article we read, "In one of the Indian huts we found two women and a boy, all absolutely white-skinned, with palish, straw-colored hair." Now on page 110 the writer says, "As a result, the Chucumque Indians, by which name the tribe was known, had never been conquered by the white man, and were still living to-day in much the same conditions as prevailed hundreds, possibly thousands, of years ago."

In Asia for October, 1925, page 897, is a description of a book written by C. W. Domville Fife, Among Wild Tribes of the Amazons. Among the things described is the world's largest rock, a single stone as big as a modern office building, bearing inscriptions believed to date back to 600 B.C. An unknown tribe, differing in appearance, speech, and manners from the other tribes of the Amazonia; vampire Indians, who drink the blood of slain enemies, etc.

The date 600 B.C. is a date for one to conjure in connection with Book of Mormon history, and tribes that differ may be an avenue to a greater proof; while Indians who drink the blood of their enemies tend to prove the continuation of a fallen civilization. For the Book of Mormon states that there were certain ones among them who did that very thing.

In the Scientific Age for December, 1924, and January, 1925, is a map of the ocean currents, and it very plainly shows a current from southern Europe to the Antilles, following practically the course adopted by Mr. Hills in his book, New Light on American Archaeology.

In the Literary Digest for October 24, 1925, page 28, you will find the following:

The Prehistoric Mound Builders are in the news again. Near the town of Bainbridge, in southern Ohio, excavators have discovered what is probably the most remarkable tomb of this vanished race that has ever come to light.

Writes Doctor E. E. Frees, editor of the Scientific American, in the New York Times:

In it lie the skeletons of four persons, evidently nobles or chiefstains of distinction. Two of these skeletons wear helmets of hammered copper, among the most precious of all objects to the warriors of the Mound Builder days. Fragments of clothes also have been found in the tombs, an experience extremely rare in uncovering such burials. There are ornaments of silver and of tortoise shell. . . .
The Book of Mormon has claimed the use of cloth and silver and copper by the ancients these many years, and now scientists are elated over the finding of these very things.

He says further:

Racially the Mound Builders were merely Indians; but in some of their arts and customs the Mound Builders were very different from the Indians of Columbian days. These Indians built no mounds; they worked metals very crudely, if at all; they had no great liking either for gold or for pearls; they did not curve stone. The Mound Builders did, and liked all these things.

The Book of Mormon student can readily explain how there came to be two types of characteristics from or among a people racially one. He can explain why there were rulers and ruled. Nephite culture and civilization at certain periods superintended the welfare of the Lamanites.

The following will present to the student of the Book of Mormon a vision between the lines. In it he can read the prosperity explained in the times of Nephitic rule when peace and plenty were scattered over the land, when the arts and sciences flourished while the people were righteous and keeping God’s laws.

Mr. Frees says:

This power was won and held, we may believe, by what the Indians remembered as “magic.” We would call it science, or engineering. These mound-building rulers from outside the Indian country knew things—useful things—which their Indian subjects did not know. They knew, for example, how to predict the seasons; that is, they had a calendar which fitted the motions of the stars and of the sun. They knew of Indian corn and how to grow it best. They understood irrigation and the use of fertilizers. It is probable that they had knowledge of medicinal herbs and a rude kind of surgery.

From what country did these rulers come? In all probability, thinks Doctor Frees, they came from the great empire of the Mayas, once a highly civilized and well-organized power in what is now southern Mexico and Guatemala.

Why did they come? It is suspected, he says, that they came as adventurers, as mining engineers, as merchants. They were seeking gold, and copper, and turquoise, and mica, and pearls.

In the following paragraph, also taken from Doctor Frees’s article, note the use of pearls, gems, shipping industry, copper ore, smelted copper, hammered copper, the two helmets, and the cloth, all of which will throw into discard certain arguments presented in the past to disprove the truth of Mormon’s word.

In the following statement you will note the mention of books or records made and kept by the ancient peoples; also that the writer laments the fact that we have no record of some captain of the past.

One passing conversant upon the contents of the Book of Mormon can scarcely suppress a smile of pleasant elation on the knowledge of Mormon’s word, who was a Nephite prophet and general some sixteen hundred years ago. And in this knowledge we cannot refrain from uttering a prayer of thanksgiving to God for his universal watchfulness over the affairs of man.

Doctor Frees continues:

The Mayas then living in the country had books of their own, which they seemed to prize rather highly. The Spanish priest could not read these books, but that did not deter them. They burned up every one that they could find. Thus perished, in the fires of intolerance, some of the most valuable historical records ever made and ever lost; among them, it is quite possible, documents which would have enabled us to verify from actual histories the deductions made from the contents and character of the North American mounds. We might have had, in the words of some mound builder captain himself, an account of how he had civilized the Indians of the pearl rivers and had offered sacrifices to his Mayan gods on top of some sacred mound which we now know quite well.

Accompanying the article are two good photographs of the work of excavating in the mounds.

This by no means concludes the material gathered by the writer during the year, but it is believed to be sufficient to show just the nature of confirmation now coming forth by disinterested parties. Should this prove interesting or helpful, he will be glad to present more in continuation of this article. I have purposely refrained from complete analysis, relying upon the general knowledge of the readers regarding the trend in confirmation of the book.

My personal opinion is that we should proclaim to the world to-day the state of civilization attained by the Mound Builders, and the reason for the existence of the Cliff Dwellers, and the cause of so many apparent different peoples in America’s past, while at the same time, as Doctor Frees states, racially the Mound Builders were merely Indians.
A Thought of the Past Applied to the Present

BY S. W. L. SCOTT

(A synopsis of two discussions.)

The day for rigid examination, the reincarnation of Christly ideals resulting in the establishment of unshattered standards, is here. And as the Almighty has “set his hand” in these latter days to unloose from its palm the solution of problems growing out of the “distress of nations” world wide, we would not disassociate his wisdom from the adjudication.

Perplexity strikes lurid bolts upon the universal mass. Confusion is confused, while the compelling forces that surge and break all around us continually chant, “All things shall be in commotion.” Changes, radical in character, come overnight, and standards disappear. Before we can accustom ourselves to the new, it is old, and when we begin to adjust to rules and formulas of something good, we are told it is bad; and the exact opposite is also true.

The world seems to be wandering in a land of quick and vanishing dreams. But there is a royal standard unsusceptible to change, one of power, and perfect in all its parts. Everything that continues to “abide” its dominion must expand, grow, develop, and continue to expand unto the “metes and bounds” thereof. The man of Galilee, who represented the eternal and philosophical standard of all truth, called this expansive principle “the kingdom of God.” Thus:

For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not [will not abide], from him shall be taken even that which he hath. So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground: and should sleep, and rise, night and day, and the seed should spring [up] and grow up, he knoweth not how. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.—Mark 4: 25-28.

The end of the world is a period in which “sickles” are employed. What trained mind can suggest a more righteous and successful process of expansion? The standard does not change. The law of the kingdom is not susceptible to mutations. But the kingdom or government, “abiding the law” of its “being,” must expand with the dominion of the law, unto the “harvest,” or end of the operations of that law.

Plant the grain of corn and cultivate the tender plant until six or eighteen inches high. It grows, man knows not how. The chemical attractions and repulsions of nature have coaxed out certain percentages of starch, gluten, etc., and a law of transitive character has passed the percentages over into the new, and development goes on. After ninety days, shall I go out to the field expecting to see that same corn just six inches high and expanded no farther? My expectancy would be sublimely wise, yet no more sublime, no more wise, than the one who cannot find to-day the church or kingdom of fifty years ago.

Indeed! The infant of forty years ago is the full grown man of to-day and is scarcely recognized as the babe of forty years ago, except in organic structure.

If the Apostle Paul could term the “kingdom of God” represented in the church a “body”—the body of Christ—I may be pardoned if I call the human body or organism a “machine”—illustratively. A machine is an instrument for the application of power and not for its creation. Animal bodies are structures of this character and are admirably contrived, as we consider the number of offices they have to perform, for the purpose to which they are applied. But a body can do nothing without power, and that, as in the case of the locomotive, must be supplied from without. Nay, more, a comparison has been made between the work which can be done by burning a given amount of carbon in the machine, Man, and an equal amount in the machine, locomotive. The result derived from analysis of the food in one case, and of the weight of the fuel in the other, compared with the quantity of water raised by each to a known elevation, gives the relative working value of the two machines.

Experiments were made on soldiers in Germany and France, and it was found that the human machine, in consuming the same amount of carbon, performed four and one half times the amount of work of the best Cornish engine.

Again, the body has been called “the house we live in,” but it may truly be denominated the machine which we employ, which, furnished with power and all the appliances for its use, enables it to execute the intentions of intelligence. Now this view of the body is far removed from materialism: as it requires a separate thinking principle.

The locomotive engine, equipped with steam, water, fuel—in short, with the potential energy for the exhibition of immense mechanical power—the whole of it remains in a state of dynamic equilibrium, without motion, intelligence, or any other signs of life. But let the engineer now open a valve which is so poised as to move with the slightest touch, and almost with volition, to let on the power to the piston; the machine now awakes into new life. It rushes forward with tremendous power, it stops instantly, it returns again, at the command of the master of the train. It exhibits signs of life and intelligence. Its power is now controlled by mind. It has a soul within it. The appliances so capacious, evolve power. Such power is evoked by burning.

Applying this to the church, “the body of Christ,” we can see the aptness of the Apostle James: “The body apart from the spirit is dead." Also the "burning bush," as a type of the church with power, and the angel representing God within it—ever burning and never consumed. Saint Paul was imbued with this close relationship of God with his people—the church. Thus: "In whom [Christ Jesus] ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."—Ephesians 2: 22. "I in them, and thou in me."—John 17: 23. The church was thus empowered in Asia Minor, when Christ was seen walking amid the seven golden candlesticks—seven congregations—when John was prophet, seer, and revelator.

The church is intended for God to inhabit. If there are higher powers of man (and no one will deny this) and those powers exist in a latent state, then there are the higher powers of the church, existent in a latent state, as the church is composed of men and women who are members of the church, ostensibly so, who trust to the church for the development of those higher powers.

What particular part of the building has God, the inhabiter of the church, chosen through which to bring out the higher powers of the church? We read: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants, the prophets."—Amos 3: 7. There must come into the body an extra power to produce an extra effect. Such was the "miraculous" power when Jesus "stood over Simon's mother-in-law and rebuked the fever."

The power of calling out latent capabilities may involve the application of laws beyond and above those we have hitherto applied, but certainly not violative of them. A tree cannot uproot itself nor throw off its bark or branches. It cannot saw itself into planks. It cannot combine those into the hull of a ship or the floor of a dwelling house. Another power must operate upon it to achieve these results. Continually we see in the world around us lower laws held in restraint by higher, mechanic by dynamic, chemical by vital, physical by moral. Yet we do not say in any instance where the lower gives place to the higher, that there was any violation. Rather we acknowledge the law of a greater freedom swallowing up the law of a lesser. When you lift your arm, the law of gravitation is not denied; neither is it annihilated, as far as the arm is concerned. The law exists as much as ever, but it is held in suspense by the higher law of your will.

The "will" or agency was in the Man of Galilee when the otherwise quiescent law was applied to the "withered arm" of the afflicted man on the sabbath day. (See Matthew 12.)

With these thoughts before us, add to the foregoing the Bible record of the competition between God and Elijah on the one part, and the priests of Baal on the other, when the prophet left the decision of the moral contest, as to its reality of the Jehovah whom he proclaimed, to the displayed will of the God who sent him. Was it a sufficient body of electric fluid not at that moment present in an accumulated state, and the fiery stream came instantly from the parts where it was in quiescence, or diffusion, and was darted down in obedience to the divine mandate upon the altar which it was commissioned to inflame?

My, oh my! Here is something among the Israel of God for even the "seven hundred" who had not bowed the knee to Baal to "kick at." But we have no record of such a "kick." We do not understand the primary cause of anything without being in touch with "him who doeth all things after the counsel of his own will," and then our information is dealt out to us in the measure of necessity. We do not comprehend the cause of light by which we see, the elasticity of the air by which we hear, nor of the fire by which we are warmed. We cannot tell what first gave motion to our heart, nor what continues it, nor why its motion is less voluntary than the lungs, nor why we are able to move our arm to the right or left by simple volition. We cannot explain the cause of animal heat, nor comprehend the principle by which our bodies were formed nor by which they are sustained, nor by which they will be reduced to earth. Yet will we boast of knowing the omnipresence of the Deity! We leave his tabernacle where we say he was, and colonize and tranquillize, in a nook where we say he never was!

One thing is apparent. This is an age when law seems to be divested of authority, even the law of being. It is a settled and studied conviction on the part of the United States Government, and others, that this is an age of lawlessness growing out of ideals; that those ideals are the product of education, and this education based on boasting or brag-gadocio, that the present generation are better, morally, from the standpoint of pulpits and presses; that they are smarter from the standpoint of teachers and professors; that we have no God as creator, and hence no tribunal or authority higher than man, and no responsibility to "fear God nor regard man," from the standpoint of evolutionists.

This has sent forth the bitter waters from the springs of selfishness, sufficiently copious to inflame and press forward unholy ambitions to pursue the evil. Out of evil grows the unquiet pulse—a sleep that is not sound. It begets fear. Fear begets suspicion. Out of suspicion springs dislike. Out of dislike flashes hatred. And out of hatred dashes slaughter. Ah! These are the steps in the stairway down which nations pass to hell.

Human nature is not transformed overnight. It is the product of ages and of certain educations. Lawlessness invades both church and state. Sabotage in moral, political, and ecclesiastical circles, not content to abide the law which, says the apostles, is good—man's best friend—and dashing over the battlegrounds of right, abiding not the law, comes within the qualifications of inspired vision: "Presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities [although the dignities may be instituted by the sacred principle of 'common consent']. They despise government [even though God sets them in the church]."—2 Peter 2: 10. They are called "wandering stars" out of their orbits, lawlessly whirling through space. "They speak evil of those things which they know not."—Jude 10. Jesus says, they "know not how the kingdom of God grows," and hence this spirit invades the sanctuary.

But here we are again, up against human nature. We are all indurated with the heavy lines of the passing centuries. It is a physiological principle that the passions and racial prejudices and hatreds which have been transmitted from generation to generation affect the cellular structure of the brain. It has been demonstrated that "constantly recurring feelings wear channels in the brain." Hence the angry feeling, if it persists, eventuates, sooner or later, in the angry deed. The voluptuous images, accompanied by ever-recurring pleasure, will at last issue almost automatically in the lustful deed. I believe Jesus understood and taught the principles of regeneration from this standpoint, for no one can think evil habitually and act the good.

In this period of the world, "the harvest," the "hastening time," "the time of the end," when many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased, we have gone too far and too fast, in too short a time. Feverish spirit is generated, and patience ceases to be a virtue with many. We cannot concentrate. Our investigations are partial, shallow. We do not dig deep and lay foundations on a rock, and we may be moved by the "wave."

Doctor Joseph Eastman told the medical institute at its assembly at Mount Clemens in September that "western culture as typified by America is joy-riding to its fall." The doctor explored the fields of history, biology, and medicine to prove that the world is going to the "bowwows" to the intermingled sounds of the dance, jazz orchestra, a stock-ticker, and the hum of an airplane motor. He contended that as far as the race itself is concerned, retrogression and not progression was the result of the age of discovery. Whatever had been won through the conquest of the earth, the sea, and the air, barely compensated for the loss in racial physique and resistance to disease. "The trouble is," said he, "humanity is all tuckered out and hasn't got sense enough to sit down. Our civilization with its remorseless drive is our Frankenstein. Humanity is racking itself to pieces. We behave like men wearing new woolen underwear. What we need instead of all this talk of the "strenuous life," is more of the philosophy of Sancho Panza. After all, it is the slow man who is the hope of the race. This neurotic, psychopathic, speed-mad modernity is filling our insane asylums to bursting and is sending millions to their death from cancer, heart disease, goiter, and a dozen maladies all directly traceable to hypertension."

According to this doctor, it were better to get back to normal and cease the fast method that produces hypertension of the nervous system. Let us get sober. Perhaps our judgment would be sound, and our decisions would be more unanimous. And, too, our health would improve. It is possible that morals would not be shattered and temples would not be pulled down, nor God's image destroyed. It is under such fiery, impetuous, inconsiderate, and world-wide waves of passion that lawlessness makes the earth tremble with disordered hosts who "boycott" legitimate organization and "set up" for themselves.

Even before the Eighteenth Amendment was added to the Constitution by the combined sovereignty of the Union and its dependencies, this fatal weakness of "lawlessness" resulted in the formation of a half hundred maudlin agglutinations "becoming a law to themselves," determined to down the enactment or sink the old ship of state if they could. The fundamental of the Government resting in the care of the "chief executive," placed there by "common consent," was invaded, and propaganda was launched which broke pandemonium into sections and organized "antis" by the dozens. They set to one side the altruistic principle that the great purpose of the Constitution with its amendments should reconcile the authority of "government" with the rights of men. Not merely "rendering unto Cesar—the political state—the things that are Cesar's, but in safeguarding the rights of the individual, it "renders unto God the things [common consent included] that are God's."

But destruction seems to be the easiest thing in the world. Anyone on earth can destroy, but it requires labor, perseverance, ability, and brains to build up. The meanest mule in the neighborhood can kick a five hundred dollar piano to pieces in ten minutes, but that same mule could not build a hen coop in a hundred years.

The year 1776 was a time for visions and voices in the air. Appeals were made to the profoundest emotions of men, which are best reached by generous ideals, though sometimes unattainable. Eleven years later was the time for visions and voices to be crystallized into the concrete expression of unified government. The document, with 4,000 words, 89 sentences, and about 140 distinct provisions, was the concrete expression of inspired thought: “All governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed,” stood with no peer in all the world, since the days when the church adopted it, and “Asia turned to God.”

But in 1793, the same absurdities and incongruities which have ever inspired the lawless, when the Lord gave command to “move up,” came to try men’s souls. Multitudes which constituted the malcontents rallied to the arms of Citizen Genet, agent of the intoxicated French Republic, whose vessel carried the “bonnet rouge”—red cap—representing the ideas of liberty had in Paris, as well as the “blood” demanded by patriots. President Washington issued his proclamation of “neutrality.” Then the grim and ugly fun began. Throngs of the “disgruntled” invaded New York, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Charleston, and paraded in torchlight procession, marching long distances shouting for “liberty, fraternity, and equality of men.” Washington’s Birthday was met by bitter and enraged protest as savoring of monarchistic customs.

It was an upheaval not of the workmen or builders of the Republic. These were elbowed aside. It was a rivalry in monopolizing leadership and craving prominence in denouncing the legitimate Government and its policies. Philadelphia was a riot of joy over Genet, and of hate of President Washington. The name Republican was dropped quickly as suggesting too much of an organized, orderly, and established government, authority, and peace.

So far as can be gathered now, no one was to be accepted as leader or ruler. Anyone assuming to direct or lead was to be decapitated. Societies were organized, modeled after the Jacobin societies of Paris. The chief officers of these societies bore the conservative titles, “Rittenhouse, Biddle, and Sergeant.” New York was aroused, rang the church bells, packed the streets, welcomed Genet and his long parade by firing cannon in his honor. Boston fell in line, and the infection spread, exalting the representatives of liberty against their own government. It was this misguided faction which abolished, as far as they could, the terms Sir, Madam, and even mild Mister. These were remnant of aristocracy. No one was to subscribe himself as “Your humble servant,” or “Yours respectfully.” These were tokens of subserviency not to be tolerated by a free spirit.

They were so “free,” liberty so untrammeled, they even abolished politeness, courtesies, and proprieties. Washington had his “back to the wall.” He looked on it all with disgust. He had been charged with “attempting to set up a kingdom and putting himself upon the throne on this western domain. But he had an unwavering faith that beneath all the froth and trash, the real ballast and substance of the people lived and was ready to function when needed. So he brought the Government to its feet again, and the opposition, humiliated, dissolved and gathered into foreign alliances. We have only to go back to the turbulent period of ’61 and ’68 for parallels, when Lincoln, sad and pale-faced, was the lone champion of God, urging that “obedience to the law should become the religion of the land.” He was called an “autocrat,” a “buffoon at the other end of the Capitol,” “the most weak and imbecile man,” a monarch, and “absolute and irresponsible, uncontrollable government,” “a perfect despotism.” These terms were used against President Lincoln by Joel Parker, a former chief justice of the Supreme Court, and Benjamin R. Curtis, also a former justice of the Supreme Court. Sunset Cox accused Lincoln of “de­uDing the country with blood and creating a debt of four thousand millions of dollars, and sacrificing 2,000,000 human lives. At the November election we will down him with eternal infamy. Even Jefferson Davis is no greater enemy to the Constitution.”

A Congressman by the name of John Fuller asked, “Are you willing to follow in the footsteps of Abraham Lincoln, the perjured wretch who has violated the oath he took before high heaven to support the Constitution and preserve the liberties of the people?” In the midst of this stab at the basic principle, the “common consent,” which placed these men in the chair and filled their hands with the authority they exercised, the men who thus calumniated the Presidents were so blind in opposing that policy which they themselves, secondarily, put into the executive’s hands to carry out, they go to work like the indefensible serpent or wasp and sting themselves.

Both Lincoln and Washington knew it was “American” to abide the law. They knew if wrong was done redress was in the law—not leaving the ark containing the law, nor lampooning the administrations thereof. They knew it was impossible to reform a wrong in society by leaving that society. The best thing they could do would be to form a new one. They doubtless knew that “Protestantism has never reformed the Roman Catholic Church nor a single dogma within it. The best that has been done is the organizing of new and independent churches.

The heads of our Republic all know that when a Democratic President is elected by the sovereign vote of the people it is a stroke against the “common consent” principle—the sovereign power—and therefore against the legitimate Government itself, for the Republicans to crystallize a protest into an organized effort, and leave the legitimate body, the legitimate Government, that gave them the right of common consent, or the principle that “the majority rules.” What are we battling for? Liberty. Where is that liberty? In the law! Ah, well did the poet of latter-day Israel tune the harp:

Do you remember the game of ball
We played on the village green?
Assembled there by our comrades’ call,
We happier scarce have been.
We tossed the ball and swung the bat,
With many a gleeful call and shout,
But never forget, no, never forget
That over the fence is out.

Our neighbor’s ground lies over the fence,
And Satan is his name;
And it will be to our expense
To trespass on the same.
Our Liberty is in the Law,
And spades and chains are just without,
So never forget, no, never forget
That over the fence is out.

The apostle to the Gentiles affirmed: “The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.”—Romans 8: 2. “If the truth make you free, ye shall be free indeed.”—Jesus. We do not make divine law. We adopt divine laws for our guidance, as already made in the headquarters of the “kingdom which is not of this world.” We adopt the law as the paths over which our activities run. If the “law of the Lord” is “perfect,” it provides for “redress” or adjudication of wrongs, real or apparent, and if ignoring the provisions of redress and harmony, we become as much the transgressor as the one from whom we run.

The forces of disintegration are active. The forces of law should be and require an active executor. We seek not to pull down that for which we battle, unwise as it is to fight the basic principle of law. The forces of disintegration and the forces of law are the very principle I fought for defeats me. Oh, Consistency, thou art a circus! Jesus “magnified the law and made it honorable.” Christ may have a people, but an unorganized people is not the church. Otherwise Christ did not “build.” The church is a building, God’s building, supported by constitutional “bands and joints” and under the constitutional law, when fully organized, consists no more of sectarian, congregational, exclusive customs, and independency, than is the township, county, State, or congressional district independent of the general Government and each separate unit, the Government itself, with the Federal Constitution under foot. Let’s build. “When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory.”—Psalms 102.
to do, and flies about; but the honest truth is that she doesn't accomplish nearly so much as her quiet, systematic, and efficient sister who also gets better results, so 'Aim to get the maximum amount of result from the minimum amount of effort.'

"Our ultimate goal is the redemption of Zion and the preparation of a people, but this is so remote we must be careful that in our work we fail to see the things right beside us to do. What does it mean to me, and what difference is it going to make with my choice of a life work? What can I do now to redeem Zion? An immediate goal is the thing most needed for it has a twofold purpose. That ultimate goal very rarely changes, but the immediate goal must be changed. But do not think that in changing the aim of the music department you have forsaken the faith of your fathers. We must have progressive methods for efficiency."

"Progressive methods is apparent everywhere in the efficiency of the world. No matter what your job is, you must have progressive methods, you must change them and keep modern. Principles never change, but survival of the fittest is the rule with methods—keep alive, keep modern."

"(8) Starting Point. No matter how progressive or behind times you are, you must start from where you are. A pigpen isn't a very savory place for starting a work of reclamation, but the prodigal son there made up his mind to go back to his father. His first step was to get out of the pigpen. The ground on which thou standest is holy ground, there is no salvation for remaining where we are. How many times have we been pleased with to study and make ourselves workmen that need not be ashamed? There is no reason in the world why you cannot be the best teacher, the best home builder. You have been given to be the light of the world, but this will be the most neglected piece of real estate in the world if we neglect to progress.

"(4) Trained Leadership. At reunion time I am at a loss to find five women who are qualified, trained leaders, authorities in their subjects, and ready to go. If each district would cooperate and find one capable person who would train herself, with her help, I would have eighty-three trained leaders, and the same is true in every other department of the church.

"(5) Cooperation. A discussion of the aims of the pastor with the people of the branch, and a general outlined course of action, will bring the best possible results. Then they must give him the assurance that they are behind him with all his strength and money. Do you know what is in the mind of your Sunday school superintendent? Is your school one hundred per cent efficient?

"(6) Study. You will never be efficient unless you study, not only books, but men and women—watch them, and get to know their innermost thoughts. The price of success is eternal vigilance.

"(7) Finance is simply one of the tools with which we work; just as are books.

"(8) Love. Without this no one can assist in this work—crammed full of love and bubbling over, but not slopping over. It is something essential in a face, just as a muddle requires a certain kind of face, the kind which is ready to smile at the least thing that is funny or attractive. To everyone that we meet we should be just full of love.

"(9) Another view, a vision of your work, is essential. You must have knowledge—mere consecration, the mere devoted prayer won't do it. You must have knowledge and power; make it your own, a part of your own personality. You must be skillful, for skillful workers are always in demand in preference to the untrained. But no matter how great your power of personality, it will gain you nothing unless there is a good, splendid character behind it. Knowledge plus skill is enough to blow whole townships to atoms, and instead of making this earth a garden of Eden, they have wrecked it because there was no character behind it."

"Making up our minds for God" was the subject of the sermon given by Rev. Mr. McDougal Friday evening.

"Making up our minds for decency, for purity, for love, and for righteousness is making up our minds for God."

"Some men make up their minds to secure social esteem, and they have their names in social corners if children and home have to be sacrificed—even if church has to be sacrificed. They are the human butterflies, but they can't even get justice for their imitation of hell."

"What shall we do with our power? Men stand at the

www.LatterDayTruth.org
crossroads. Stewardships is the decision to use the power we have for the purposes of God, and that is the decision we must make to-day, and that is the decision we must help men make. With reservations we sing the song: 'I'll go where you want me to go, but don't ask me to go to prayer meetings; I'll go where you want me to work, but don't ask me to pay tithing.' Upon the choice that Christian people make, hangs the testimony of civilization and the welfare of humanity. They must choose to use their power for the establishment of God's kingdom.'

Sister Edwards gave a most delightful lecture on the subject of Personality. A few extracts to make the points:

"One of my college teachers, an old man, said that of all the things in the world, he wanted most to be loved. Money, ambition, and fame, not even popularity, moved him in the least, but that man demonstrated that if he wanted to be loved, he himself must first love other people; and as I have grown older, I have seen the deep significance of his choice. Money and fame and success in this world could just pass him by, but the worthwhileness of our message—without that absolute devotion to the worthwhileness of our message, regardless of the things surrounding it, if that devotion is not there, it means nothing."

"If your personality is going to be worth anything at all, you must learn to submerge yourself; strengthen the weak, and draw out the good, but keep yourself submerged. You are one of a group and you must not attempt to dominate that group by trying to get the best. You are entitled to your particular development, and you have no right to be the star performer and let those people belookers-on. We have gone past the day of individual accomplishment and star performers. The call for leadership is for every one of us, and the greatest help you can get for a charming personality will be for you to ally yourself to some noble cause."

Sister Edwards also gave us the following time chart in regard to our personal reading, which is very helpful: 50 per cent, development of your occupation; 20 per cent, recreation; 15 per cent, general culture; 15 per cent, prayer meetings, the events; 10 per cent, higher life.

Throughout all these services, including two excellent prayer meetings, the Spirit of God was present to a great degree. We cannot be grateful enough to those who labored so long in preparation that we might enjoy what we did; for having a pearl of great price to offer, they polished and brightened it as skillful workmen, that it was very beautiful to all, and the light which radiated from them has touched the innermost parts of our hearts, giving us new desires and a greater determination to carry on the torch of light and truth, bright and clear.

W. D.

Their New Church Opened

NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT, December 7.—The opening services at the new church on Lee Avenue took place Saturday evening and Sunday, November 7 and 8. The formal opening was on Sunday.

The services were well attended by Saints from throughout the district. Members of New London Branch opened their homes to those coming Saturday evening.

District President W. A. Sinclair gave a highly inspiring address at the Saturday evening service. Sister Suzan Sinclair acted as chorister on request and ably filled that capacity. The soloist, Sister Blanche Lanman, sang, "I came to thee."

Prayer and testimonial service convened at nine thirty Sunday, at which Patriarch Richard Baldwin and Apostle Paul M. Hanson presided.

Sister Blanche Lanman rendered a piano voluntary and followed it with the vocal, "How lovely are thy dwellings," so appropriately chosen for the occasion, at the eleven o'clock service. A brief history of the gospel work in this vicinity was given by Priest Thomas G. Whipple. Following was the selection, “O troubled heart, be still.” The presentation of the keys by the pastor, Elder Alma T. Whipple, to District Bishop M. C. Fisher, followed, and the keys were then formally presented to the deacon and treasurer, Charles Alves. A basket lunch was served in the basement at noon, and all took time for pleasant sociability.

Apostle Hanson delivered a discourse of highly spiritual order at the afternoon service.

Patriarch Baldwin was the speaker at six o'clock, and those present were well rewarded by his sermon.

Elder Fred Roberts was here Sunday, November 22. His sermon was as “meat in due season.” Elder Roberts was accompanied by his wife.

The Blastow family and Captain F. E. Griffin are wintering in Florida. Brother David N. Crouch has also gone southward—Florida. Brother and Sister Francis and Eleanor Whipple and family journeyed to Florida in November and have recently returned.

Sister Barbara Brindley has been a recent visitor at one of the prayer services. Sister Margaret Slater, formerly of Fall River, is an active attendant of the prayer services.

Plans are formulating for a Christmas program which promises something very interesting.

Central Chicago Branch

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.—The various departments of this branch, located at Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets, are active. The Sunday school, under Brother Steve Lester, was fully graded a short time ago, some new quarterlies introduced, and the work fully outlined for each class.

The Religion, under Brother William Keir, is having instructive class work and interesting programs. Brother C. B. Woodstock was with us last evening and gave us a splendid talk reminding us of the tremendous importance of our work.

The choir, under Sister Nina Campbell, in addition to furnishing the music, gave a pie social this last month in order to defray expenses and help be self-supporting.

The Department of Women will give its bazaar for the benefit of the building fund December 10 and 11. This is a worthy cause, for surely no place has more need of Latter Day Saint churches than the city of Chicago. The little band of women under Sister Bell Simmons is faithfully devoting itself to that end.

The young people conducted the services November 15. Sister Marie Keir took charge of the Sunday school. At the morning preaching service Brother George Kerr, Sister Froeda Bell, and Brother William Keir gave a symposium of the life of Christ, Sister Ruth Ortolbo presiding. Brother Leonard Lee was the speaker of the evening, Brother John Thoman presiding. The choir furnished the special music at both services. The smallest son of Brother and Sister F. A. Pement was blessed.

The evening of the day devoted to the raising of the college endowment fund, we had with us Brothers John L. Cooper, Eugene Blossom, and William Collins. The two latter divided the time, and they, with other former students of Graceland, now in Chicago, gave us the Graceland College song.

We are having some splendid prayer services. The one last Wednesday evening was a one hundred per cent meeting. The talks by Brothers Pement and Keir were very impressive.

Conference was held at our branch November 18, 19, and 20. Besides our regular missionaries we had with us President F. M. Smith and Apostle John F. Garver, both of whom were highly appreciated. The spirit of peace and assurance which came to us during the conference still lingers, and we trust many others have been the recipients of that blessing.

The burden of Brother Smith's message to us was the program of the church. Opportunity for questions was given, and the instruction resulting therefrom was gladly received.

Brothers Wildermuth, Cooper, and Almond were elected on the union committee, with power to select others, said reunion to be held August 10 to 20, 1926, with possibly a week of camp meeting previous to the reunion proper.

Brother Frank Almond continues to preach for us Sunday evenings. Brother Woodstock will preach to-morrow evening. All are cordially invited.

Woodbine, Iowa

December 4.—Among those who have visited their old home branch this fall were Sisters B. R. Amidon and Carrie Athey. We are always glad to welcome those who have so faithfully labored to build up the work; and the Department of Women tried to show their appreciation by giving them a little surprise. About twenty-five went to the home of Aunt Mary Houghton, where these sisters were domiciled, and announced their presence by singing “Blest be the tie that binds,” which was followed by prayer. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in singing hymns and relating past experiences. At half past four lunch was served by the invited guests; then good-byes were said with many wishes for a safe journey for these dear sisters to their California home.

But the heart of Sister Kibler was made sad shortly before leaving by a message from Whittier, California, stating that her only grandson had passed away following an operation for appendicitis. Our sympathy goes out to those in trouble.

On November 8 Elder S. C. Smith occupied our pulpit. At eleven o'clock the subject was, “As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man.” Both efforts were instructive and interesting. Brother Smith has recently moved with his family to Independence, and we trust that through this move what is Little Sioux District's loss will be Zion's gain.

Thanksgiving Day was appropriately observed with a spiritual prayer meeting at ten o'clock, an address at eleven by Brother Joseph Lane which was thoroughly enjoyed, and at noon a feast of the things which “perish,” yet “sustain” the physical man, was partaken of in the church basement. At half past two Pastor Fred A. Fry spoke encouragingly to the Saints. At this meeting it was resolved that as a branch we observe Thanksgiving Day annually.

November 27 Elder W. R. Adams united in marriage Clifford Brown and Adena Fry. We wish for these young people a home of usefulness in the Master's work, with the joy that God has promised should bless the homes of those who serve him.

We feel much encouraged by the interest shown by our young people in the Graceland endowment drive, and we rejoice to learn that Graceland's doors will remain open and stewardships be established.

From the Hoosier Capital

The Department of Women of this branch is still “carrying on.” Its members are planning a bazaar to be held in the near future.

Elder F. G. Pitt and wife were callers in our city recently en route to Florida for the winter.

Thanksgiving Day was very appropriately observed with a real Thanksgiving service, at which our pastor conducted three of our boys into the kingdom through baptism. This was our first Thanksgiving Day in our new church, and these the first baptisms in the new font. A good spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

We feel it a pleasure to note that our Gleaners' Club, which had become somewhat disorganized by reason of sickness, is again getting down to business, and we are looking for the young people's pep to crystallize into something worth while in the near future.

Sister Rose Davis Scruggs, of Hot Springs, Arkansas, has been visiting relatives and friends in our city the past two weeks. It seemed good to see her in our midst again, and we remember she was one of our workers when they could be numbered by a single figure. Her face is still set Zionward.

Elder H. W. Brunkhorst, of East Saint Louis, Illinois, attended our services last Sunday and was the speaker at the evening hour. Come again, Brother Brunkhorst.

We are pleased with the response accorded the endowment-stewardship drive as reported throughout the church and are happy to know that our branch was not slack in its contributions. May we ever have more forward.

Sister Coy Etta Drake, of the National Soldiers' Home, Danville, Illinois, was present at the services last Sunday. We were glad to have our young sister with us and to learn she is enjoying her labors in that institution.

It was our privilege last evening, in company with the priest of the branch, to visit Sister F. G. Cosey, who resides just east of the city. She was formerly a member of the branch at Jerusalem. While we found her somewhat crippled and afflicted in body, she is strong in spirit, and her faith in the Lord is good to behold. Our visit was ostensibly to administer comfort and blessing, but we felt we were the ones receiving the blessing, our faith and confidence in the Lord being strengthened and our desire to prove faith­ful to the end decidedly increased.

Omaha, Nebraska

Omaha Saints have been favored the past month by a number of sermons from general church officers. On November 16 Bishop Mark H. Siegfried delivered two splendid sermons, the first centering around the Graceland College endowment, and the second emphasizing the general duty of Saints in carrying on that which has been handed down to this generation by those who gave their all, in richest sacrifice and consecration, for the gospel as they understood it.

The following Sunday Apostle Edmund J. Gleazer began a week of services, all of which centered about the saying of Christ, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." In these sermons Brother Gleazer showed many angles of life which have been enriched by the message of love Christ brought to earth, and very successfully linked up the still unfulfilled mission of the Savior with the commission to the church to establish Zion condition, in order that every man, woman, and child shall have the "more abundant" life. The attendance through this series of splendid, vital, present-day sermons was fine and increased each evening. Brother Gleazer left the Omaha Saints with a decided desire for more, and all are hoping he may come again.

Thanksgiving morning, at nine o'clock, a prayer service was held at the church, which was a spiritual feast in very deed. The word of the Lord came through his servants in comforting measure; and the Saints, touched by the Spirit, from the first notes of the opening hymn, felt that whatever comes and goes, the gospel is true, and the concern of each should be to be found faithfully walking in its precepts.

Brother Minor N. Perkins recently returned from working on the new church at the Indian Mission. He related at prayer meeting a spiritual experience he had in connection with that labor, an experience which opened up to him vistas of God's purposes which are to be fulfilled, and the opportunity which was given him to assist therein. This experience has served to greatly strengthen and encourage the brotherhood at the church, young and old, many more. Thus the light which comes to one is diffused and becomes light to others, and the whole body is thereby edified.

The sacramental service on the morning of December 6 was also a very spiritual one. It was unique because of the great number of testimonies borne by very aged and very young Saints, the former looking backward over long lives blessed by the mercy and kindness of God and sustained by an abiding desire to live righteously, and the latter looking forward over fruitful years to come, expressing a yearning to be useful in God's kingdom, and to be able to bear faithful testimony when he may be called. Such meetings evidences the need we have, one of the other, that in unity we may find strength of purpose and unaltering desire to be valiant in service and devotion.

Sister C. M. Hollenbeck is in the Park Hospital trying to regain lost health. Brother T. A. Hicks, for two months confined to his home, was with us at the sacramental service Sunday, and very glad were the Saints to welcome him. Sister S. H. Service, of Estes Park, Colorado, and both were visiting their sister, Mrs. E. J. Magrare of this city. Other visitors have been Sister Toombs of Little Sioux; Brother Moroni Traxler of Lamoni; Sister Ora Schlichter, of Beatrice, Nebraska; Elder M. B. Williams of Independence, and daughter Nettie; Brother Duane Anderson from Kansas City, and Sister Rogene Anderson from Graceland, both of whom came home for the holidays.

Brother R. W. Scott spent one Saturday in Little Sioux, bringing his aged mother, Sister Maria Scott, home with him, where she will visit during the cold weather. Sister Scott is an intrepid Saint, valiant in testimony, and one whose experience in life has but strengthened her faith in God and charity for her fellow men.

Brother P. S. Whalley had the privilege on December 2 of addressing a large meeting of the parents and teachers of the Beale School of this city. His address was well received, and thus the good seed is sown.

In company with Brother Gleazer and Brother and Sister W. T. Wellman, Brother Whalley and wife went to the Indian Mission on Thursday, December 5. The day opened none too propitiously, but the going trip was made in two and a half hours, Sister Wellman at the wheel. However, before noon rain began to descend, accompanied by a gale which soon brought snow, and the travelers decided to hurry homeward. After five hours of travel, mud, snow, sleet, slipping, skidding, and escape from accident by narrow margins, Brother Gleazer was delivered at the Council Bluffs church just as his meeting opened in the evening. Although disheveled, with mud caked on shoes and clothing, and in other ways conscious of handicap, the young apostle rose to the occasion, and delivered his usual, straight-from-the-shoulder sermon, in no way diminished in power by his late harrowing experience. The four passengers agree that Sister Wellman is a wonderful and devoted Saint, full of blood courage and judgment; but we think perhaps if the male members of the crew were pressed for an honest answer they would confess they would have worried less had they been in the driver's seat. However, it is good to pass around the joys and thrills that hover about the back seat!

At present writing, Sister Gleazer has joined her husband, through the kind thoughtfulness of the Council Bluffs Saints

www.LatterDayTruth.org
who are recipients this second week of the ministry of this consecrated young missionary. Together they are enjoying the hospitality of the Saints on both sides of the river, and will have many happy memories to carry home with them, when the time of their leave-taking shall come.

New Life in Campaign at Rockford

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS, December 7.—On October 21 a meeting of the adult members of the branch and Sunday school was called at the suggestion of Brother C. C. Simpson, who had had a vision, as it were, of the magnitude of the work before the Saints here and felt it was needful that we organize and work out a definite and concise program to get the gospel before the people of this city.

Brother Simpson was chosen to take charge of this meeting, as it was his idea, and we wished a fuller knowledge of just what he had in mind. In his talk he suggested a definite program to send out notices of the Sunday services a week ahead to all Saints and friends in town, and as time went on to gradually increase the correspondence until we have been able to let the people of Rockford know we are here and here to stay. He also suggested having some special number at every service, and advocated working out a plan to increase Sunday school attendance, etc. Others were then called on to give their ideas.

District President J. L. Cooper, of DeKalb, Illinois, opened his talk with these words, “Where there is no vision the people perish.” He gave many words of encouragement for the plan.

Branch President J. A. Daer told how much he was encouraged to see this effort, as he had so often been discouraged with the lack of unity and the presence of indifference in the past.

A brother from Belvidore told of his wandering around from place to place, never satisfied until he heard and was convinced of the truthfulness of this gospel. He realized that there were many like him, seeking for the truth, and how shall they find it if we cover up our light? Brother Harold Carpenter spoke on behalf of the young people and their willingness to help wherever they had opportunity. Sister Nellie Ott spoke in behalf of the Sunday school, pleading for a plan to help build it up; then a committee was chosen to have charge of the work, and the meeting disbanded.

The campaign started with a rally day November 15. There were reports from all parts of the district. At ten o'clock the business meeting convened with F. M. McDowell in charge.

The speakers were District President J. L. Cooper, Elder O. A. McDowell, Missionary J. Wildermuth and wife, and Elder and Sister W. L. Christy. It would be hard to discriminate between these speakers, as each subject handled was equally interesting and instructive. Solos, duets, and readings were interspersed between the speeches.

At noon a cafeteria lunch was served by the sisters of the branch, which seemed to be enjoyed by all.

As we departed for our homes, we felt spiritually stronger to go out and meet life as we all have to meet it.

November 19 our annual business meetings of the branch and Sunday school were held, only a few changes being made in the officers.

Those of our number who were permitted to attend the district conference at Chicago came back bubbling over with the good things they had heard.

On December 1 Elder C. B. Woodstock gave us a very interesting talk on how to make our Sunday school more efficient. His talk was very much enjoyed by the large crowd who came out to see him. We wish to say to those who are acquainted with Brother W. L. Dennis that he seems to be getting along quite well now, although his sight is still bad. However, they think it will clear up soon and that he will be back at meetings again.

As we see the hustle and bustle for material things, with hardly any time for the work of the Master, we are reminded of these lines taken from the poem of Edgar A. Guest, entitled, “Out of this life”:

“What shall they find, and what shall they see,
In the soul that answers the call for me?

“Shall the great Judge learn, when my task is through,
That my spirit had gathered some riches, too?

“Or shall at the last, it be mine to find,
That all I had worked for I'd left behind?”

MRS. H. S. OTT.

Spring River District

The Spring River district conference convened at half past seven, November 20, at Pittsburg, Kansas, with District President Amos T. Higdon in charge.

The first thing in order was organization. This was taken care of; then followed a program under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. One of the impressive numbers on the program was a tableau, “The ten virgins,” given by some of the young people of Pittsburg. This demonstrated to us that we should keep our lamps trimmed and burning, for the bridegroom may come while we sleep, or are not prepared for him.

Saturday morning at nine o'clock was a prayer meeting, with Brothers F. M. McDowell, Amos T. Higdon, and George Bath in charge. This was a well-attended service, with a spirit and fervor that was not equalled in other parts of the district. At ten o'clock was a business session, with the district presidency and F. M. McDowell in charge. There were reports from nearly all the district officers and all the departmental heads. The quorum secretaries of elders and priests reported activities, but not so good as has been. The teachers did not report very much, but deacon's reports were good.

This business was over in a short time, and then we enjoyed a spiritual talk on stewardships by Brother McDowell. At two o'clock the business meeting convened with F. M. McDowell and district presidency in charge. It was voted and carried that we extend an invitation to Brother Charles B. Woodstock, general Sunday school superintendent, to visit our district. The recommendation was approved for the ordination of Brother Charles Bowman, of Weir City, Kansas, to the office of teacher. Delegates to General Conference were selected. The next conference will be held at Nowata, Oklahoma, May 21 to 23, 1926.

At half past seven a preaching service was held, with sermon by Brother McDowell, his subject being, “Keeping the faith.” This was indeed a wonderful sermon. Brother McDowell likened keeping the faith to a relay race, and to go on, and on, and on. Then when our time has come to run, to be ready and take the baton and run our race, and at the end like Paul we can say, “I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing.”

Sunday morning a young people's prayer service opened at eight o'clock with Brothers McDowell and Higdon in charge. The prayers, testimonies, and songs were of a very spiritual nature.

Sunday school convened at half past nine with district and local officers in charge. Special number, from different places, appeared. Alberta June Sheppard, Brother McDowell gave a lecture to the young people while Brother Higdon spoke to the older ones. Sister Esther Wilson was in charge of the primary and junior pupils.

Eleven o'clock sermon was by President F. M. McDowell, on stewardships; our social plan.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
A basket dinner at noon was served in the hall. General priesthood meeting was held at half past one, and at the same hour the Department of Women held a meeting with Sister Martha Evans and Pearl E. Jones in charge.

At quarter of three there was a prayer service, and the ordination of warrant Officers Charles B. Hoverman to the grade of teacher. The testimonies at this meeting were of moving forward and working toward the redemption of Zion.

Sermon by F. M. McDowell in the evening. There was not seating room in the hall for those attended conference and another room in the hall had to be opened to accommodate the crowd. We enjoyed the conference, and only wish it would be possible to keep ourselves realizing that Zion means something for them also and are working forward and working toward the redemption of Zion.

Duluth, Minnesota

December 3.—Good news is the watchword for us this time. The young people of the Minnesota District are realizing that Zion means something for them also and are banding together for greater service and striving to qualify themselves for the task which is confronting them, even to becoming children in Christ Jesus, that his teachings may radiate in them to the convincing of the truth of the gospel to the nations of the world.

On November 8 a young people's prayer service was held as usual with the regular attendance, and at the eleven o'clock preaching service Elder Leslie DeLapp of Minneapolis was the speaker, assisted by Brother Wesley Elvin, also of Minneapolis. His theme was "Zion, the builder of character."

In the afternoon a special prayer service for the young was held, with Brother Leslie DeLapp in charge, assisted by Brothers Wesley Elvin and Robert Zueldorff. Many young people from Two Harbors, Carlton, and Minneapolis were in attendance, and the whole afternoon service was a fine spiritual effort, and earnest prayers and testimonies were offered.

A quarter of four found the young people gathered to form a young people's organization, and they selected a president with power to select three as a committee to act with him in taking up the problems of the younger folks, with the goal that it may spread into all the Minnesota District, including the isolated ones, all with the final goal of a young people's convention in 1926.

This organization has a great task before it to lead the young in paths of righteousness. What is better than well-directed play? And God will be pleased as he looks upon his children that are made glad and joyous even in service. What seems a sacrifice now will be joyous to them. They will be willing workers in the vineyard of our Savior. The brothers of Minneapolis have promised that a like organization will be formed in Minneapolis and elsewhere.

Out-of-town young people and their elders for the day were Brother Jay Walters and daughter Ruth and Sister A. Johnson, of Carlton, Minnesota; Brother Leslie Delap, district president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, of Minneapolis; also Brother Wesley Elvin and Vernon Lundeen of the same place; Sisters Loretta and Susie Craven, Stella and Sadie Byce, of Two Harbors. We hope these young people will come again. The latchstring is on the outside always.

November 15 W. C. Stauty spoke in the morning on "Preparations for Zion." Pastor C. B. Freeman spoke in the evening.

In the afternoon a baptism was performed in the bay at Indian Point in open waters, while many skaters were whirling around on the ice near by. Does not this take faith? Brother Alonzo Hilton of Cloquet came of his own accord and asked baptism; the first time any of us had seen him. He had heard the gospel in other parts of the State, some of his family being members of the Utah Church. He realized he could not put off the duty he owed his God and himself. Another candidate was Lucille Blake, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Blake of Duluth. Brother Samuel Sloan officiated at the baptism, and they were confirmed by Elders Samuel Sloan and C. B. Freeman.

Out-of-town visitors November 15 were Brother and Sister Jay Walters, Brother and Sister J. A. Hastings, Brother and Sister Samuel Sloan, and Brother Grant Byce of Two Harbors.

The Department of Women is holding meetings every second Thursday afternoon at the homes of the members. A short study period is engaged in, after which a lunch is furnished by the hostess. These women are live wires under the able leadership of Sister Mollie Feathers.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is expected to revive now since the young people are striving to go forward. Of late it has not shown much life.

The Sunday school is forging ahead with fair attendance. They plan to have a Christmas entertainment, and the committee has already been selected.

The pastor spoke both morning and evening November 22. Out-of-town visitors were Brother A. S. Davis and family of Wrenshall, and Brother Alonzo Hilton of Cloquet. If there are any Saints in Cloquet, we would be glad to have them write Brother W. C. Stauty, 403 Seventy-Seventh Avenue, West, Duluth, Minnesota.

We have been made glad by the arrival of our Brother Arthur Bundy and family, who have moved here from Michigan. Brother Samuel Case of Pine River has purchased a house next door to the church and is remodeling it by putting a basement under it. He is also making other repairs, with the expectation of moving here in the spring.

On November 29 the Let's Do Something Club met in an all-day meeting. The first service was prayer meeting at nine o'clock, followed by preaching at eleven by Elder Leslie DeLapp, who took for his text, "We are waiting (for what)." The sermon was inspiring to all, and the spirit was felt in its deliverance. Sunday school convened at a quarter of ten, and in the afternoon, after a song service, there was preaching by Brother George Day. At a quarter of four the club assembled to further its work and authorized Brother DeLapp to confer with the general church authorities in regard to the foundation of the club, that it may not conflict with other organizations in any way. Also a committee was appointed to draft a constitution for ratification of the different chapters.

In the evening the singing school preceded the sermon by Wesley Elvin, who spoke on "What is our task?" He showed plainly a quantity of tasks that lie before us before we become perfect.

Sister R. C. Stauty has been seriously ill for some time, but thanks to our heavenly Father she is slowly recovering. We hope to see her out to meetings soon. The Lord is certainly kind to his children in their extremity, and many times his protecting hand hovers over us. May each one of us more fully realize his goodness and strive to fully serve him to the best of our ability, increasing our talents, whatever they may be.

November 30 the Saints gathered to bid farewell to Pastor C. B. Freeman, who has gone to Beulng, Michigan, to locate work for the winter. An enjoyable time was had, and a purse was given him for remembrance. May God's blessings be his to enjoy in his services, and may he enjoy the physical strength he needs.

Our full pledge for the endowment fund to date is $750, with other pledges still out. May Zion soon blossom as a rose and put on her beautiful garments, that Christ will soon come to reign.

In the Sioux City, Iowa, Branch eighty-eight pledge cards for the Graceland endowment fund show a total of $1,163.60 pledged. A fine showing.
Tulsa Saints Welcome Pastor's Return

A Letter to the First Presidency

Am glad to be able to say that there seems to be greater interest in the work here on the part of the Saints. Particularly do the midweek prayer meetings and the Department of Recreation and Expression show greater interest and improved attendance. The Women's Department are now adding needlework to their study class, and while it is not quite so easy to teach a class dividing its attention, I think the disadvantage is not so great as the gain. They are studying the history and development of stewardships in the Reorganization, which study had been interrupted ever since I went out to reunion work the first of July. Some of these women are also taking the study twice a month in Bishop Carmichael's booklet, with the class enlarged from the original priesthood study.

Sister Lillian Ewing, who came to Tulsa from Haskell Institute, and Sisters Nellie Curtis and Mary Gouldsmith of Independence, are making their coming felt for good in our music and young people's activities. Sister Ewing is the chorister and fills a long-felt need in that capacity. It might be interesting to you to know that I had her first inquiry and return the HERALD my letter of several months ago, in which I wrote of our great need for a qualified chorister.

The treatment accorded us by the Tulsa Saints has deeply touched both Sister Thomas and myself. During our absence in Iowa some of the sisters hung new curtains and draperies at the windows of three rooms of our house, and in other ways made the place as cheerful as possible for our return. On the third evening after we came home, a large number of them surprised us and left a large quantity and great variety of food stuffs and sixteen dollars in cash. But above all is the hearty welcome to the gatherings in our return. People who train and teach their children who will some day have the responsibility of carrying on this grand work.

May we as mothers be able, through prayerful care, to so guide the lives of our children that when they grow up they will be an honor to us, to the church, and to the state. I realize many of us have failed in trying to do this in the past, but we should be able to profit by our mistakes and in future strive to live so that our efforts may be crowned with success.

Elder Matthew Liston and Brother G. T. Richards visited this branch October 8 and gave some wonderful talks on stewardship and on what must be done to redeem Zion. The time has come when we can no longer be hearers of the word alone.

Brother Joseph O'Brien has been absent for some time. He went to seek employment for the winter months, but failed to find anything satisfactory. He returned home last week.

Branch President Willard Parks is in Florida looking after some business matters.

Brother Moore is spending a few months with his daughter here, Sister Putnam.

Remains in Faith of the Lord

A brother whom I baptized about 1894 recently made us a visit in company with his wife, who came into the church with him in the early days. In conversation he related that for years they had watched the church papers for some word from E. T. Atwell, and felt disappointed in not learning whether he was still in the faith or had grown cold.

Two or three years before, a Sister Bass whom I had baptized, with a number of others about 1893, called at our house to relieve the burden of her mind concerning the same question, and when I assured her that I had always tried to remain steadfast and was still in the faith, you can imagine the expression of satisfaction and joy which showed upon her countenance.

I was called by prophecy to the ministry in this church, through Emsley Curtis, and on April 17, 1883, was ordained by I. N. White and D. C. White. Since that day I have moved my home to different parts, but in every place I sought to introduce the gospel and have held a number of public debates in its defense. I have tried to be active in gospel work wherever located, when I deemed it opportune.

Because I have not written accounts of my work to the church papers I hope it will not be construed by any of my friends to mean that I have been backsliding or have fallen out with the administrative powers or policies of the church. I have always stood up for the same old preaching the old old gospel of Jericho throughout, remaining with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and firmly believing in the honor and dependability of the men at the head of the church.

By invitation I have repeatedly preached from nearly all of our pulpits in both Kansas Cities and the regions round about, and have seen but few weeks pass that I have not performed in my capacity as a minister of the gospel.

There has never been a time in my life when I have felt more impressed with events for the success of the church than now.

I have always been ambitious, but have never tried to exploit my personality or theories. I have always been prolific with ideas, and many times within myself have criticized others who have stood above me, but these complaints I kept to myself. By keeping silent I did no harm to the church and caused no one distress. Since we preach that Adam only is accountable for Adam's sins, I have felt satisfied that the responsibilities placed by the Lord on other individuals, were not affairs of mine, and if they failed to nobly do their work they only would be called to account for their misbehavior.

Reason and justice would condemn me if by act or word I became guilty of interfering with the free administration of a brother's duty as he understood it. I am happy in the thought that I am not held to account for what Brigham Young did, nor will I have to answer for deeds of any other apostate, unless it can be shown at the great judgment that I hampered or in some way effected a change for evil in the course of their lives.

I have never permitted disputed questions within the church to cause me concern. Problems upon which we cannot all agree carry their own indictment. In other words, they are not vital in our salvation, and involve only the things affecting our temporal state on earth.

The gospel is the "power of God into salvation," and we are all agreed on that. Purposefully, Jesus made it simple, so there could be no excuse for disputing. It is alike adequate for the fool and the wise, and Jesus, anticipating our disposition to debate and fall out over the definition of words and phrases, spending our time in disputations and quarrels, published the most simple set of principles, upon which rests all there is to be obtained through his sacrifice on the cross.

"The gospel is the power of God unto salvation."—Romans 1:16. If this be true, and we know what that is (Hebrews 1:3), and we have obeyed it, why should any of us be so foolish as to allow any sort of question to disturb us, or destroy our joy in the Lord?

Minden City, Michigan

December 7.—The work in general here is moving along slowly, and we fully believe that some of God's children here are striving to come up higher so as to be able to reach the responsibility of carrying on this grand work.

May we as mothers be able, through prayerful care, to so guide the lives of our children that when they grow up they will be an honor to us, to the church, and to the state. There are better men in this church than I, and the church is far in advance of where it would have been if all men in it were no better than I. Am I displeased because that is so? Would to God all we were illustrious and perfect!

There are others in this church who can sing better than I, and I have a passion for listening to them, and I act a little foolish sometimes in applauding them. Others sometimes carry me to heights of rapture and thrill my being perfect!

by prayers so splendidly constructed that I am sometimes to be held accountable for my own failures and two of us have lost. If I go about debating his short-comings, what have I profited? My time could have been employed to better advantage.

Of what significance to me is it whether the old church had a choir, used instruments in their services, or conducted them in the most formal manner? I feel no anxiety because we have in the church a Sunday school, Religion, radio, colleges, ball teams, publishing houses, business managers, official quorums, various organizations and a President and First Presidency, none of which are a part of the gospel, but only attachments devised by which the spreading of the gospel can be made more effective. Where you have one man who is authorized to preach and baptize, you have all the gospel: "The gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation."

Increasing membership in the church does not add to or take anything away from the gospel. Adding departments, building organizations, designations of officers to provide, can in no way add to or take away anything from the gospel, so I have been determined to stand up for the gospel, keep on preaching it, talking it, trying to live it, the kind of house I live in, the kind of car I own, the number of miles I drive, how much I pay in taxes, or send money to the church, are considerations left to our own choosing, and are independent of obedience to the gospel. What we eat, what we wear, where we work, at what we work, and the manner in which we do what we are assigned is also independent of obedience and our loyalty to the gospel.

The kind of house I live in, the kind of car I own, and the number of miles I travel in no way affects the saving power of the gospel in my life. Neither my salary nor the way I spend money is associated with the call, "Recoup and be baptized."

The acts of some brother or sister cannot deprive me of any privilege offered me through obedience to the gospel. The apostles of old disagreed (Acts 15: 39) till they sharply condemned and rebuked one another, but on the first principles still safely was anchored their salvation; so what did their disputes and disagreements amount to, so far as robbing them or adding anything to their eternal welfare? Nothing! Differences of opinion do and always will exist. They do in all the activities of life; in every phase of existence, every line of business, or undertaking, but the main principles are the things that are vital in every case, and not the attachments.

"Straight and narrow is the way," and if we expect to travel this narrow way and keep going ahead with any commendable speed, we must keep our eye on the road, our hand on the steering wheel, and our mind on sticking well to the highway. The highway is our salvation. Watch for obstructions and dodge them. An attraction that calls the eye or mind away from the way has sent many a competent driver into the ditch and left his companions bleeding, mangled, and dying.

Keeping in mind that I have obeyed the gospel, and that there cannot be possible advantage gained on time, eternity, (my future rewards) I am not concerned about what Adam, Noah, Abraham, David, Solomon, or John the Baptist did. Neither am I concerned about what Joseph Smith, Parley Pratt, Brigham Young, or any other person has done or may do. I have secured my title. Who or what can take it away from me? Do I not work out my own salvation? And does not my brother do likewise?

Why should I be made less happy and determined by knowing what he is doing? I am not required to answer for his sins, and what he chooses to do has no bearing on my salvation. I may feel provoked at his conduct or disapprove his manner of doing things, but if I allow his acts to cause me to slip, I will be held accountable for my own failures and two of us have lost. If I go about debating his short-comings, what have I profited? My time could have been employed to better advantage.

My Experience in the Gospel of Christ

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO, December 5.—It has been some time since I have contributed anything to the columns of the HERALD. I have been a member of the church nearly thirteen years and have been a faithful and regular reader of the HERALD during that time, and in my opinion it is by far a better paper than it has been any time during that period. It should be in the home of every member.

I was baptized on the fifteen day of February, 1913, by Otto Fetting, at Cash, Michigan. It is difficult to say whom I am indebted the most in having heard the "angel's message"; perhaps it is Brother and Sister Charles Scrivener, of Kansas City, Kansas, who then lived near Sandusky, Michigan, whom I spent many happy and young manhood days. I am also indebted to William Orice, Willard J. Smith, O. J. Hawn, and many others who lived in and around Sandusky and Cash.

I received my first ministerial experience in Detroit, Michigan. I was first ordained to the office of priest and served in that capacity for about two years. In my opinion this is one of the best offices in the church. What a wonderful privilege to teach the gospel in the homes of the Saints. I had some fine experiences while holding this office and was ordained to the office of elder in 1915. I never shall forget the first time I attempted to preach. It was in the little white church on the east side of the city. I read my text, looked the audience over, and sat down. An

The Department of Women under the leadership of Sister Cummins is still “carrying on.” In fact, we can say that all departments are progressing nicely.

Preparations are under way for a Christmas program to be given at the church Christmas Eve. A gayly decorated tree and sacks of nuts and candy are to be for the young and young old. A fine program is anticipated.

Some from here attended the district conference at Pittsburg. They reported fine sermons and spiritual prayer meetings. Although privileged to attend just the last Sunday, the writer felt well repaid for the trip.

An election of officers was held Friday, December 11, for the three departments, at which time the following officers were elected: Sunday school superintendent, Brother C. R. Wallace; assistant, Brother James Reynolds; secretary, Sister James Reynolds; pianist, Margie Pitcock; assistant pianist, Evelyn Yeubanks; chorister, Sister O. E. Pender.

Raymond Yeubanks was elected superintendent of Religio, with Thelma Walton assistant.

Brother Howard P. Anderson was reelected branch president, and Sister James Reynolds branch secretary.

Three Baptized After Gospel Series

BROCKTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—Patriarch Richard Baldwin opened a series of meetings here November 22 and continued until the 29th. There were preaching every evening at half past seven on some very fine subjects. Each service was preceded by some very instructive talks to the children and adults by Sister Lena Baldwin. Most of these talks were illustrated with pictures and drawings.

At the conclusion of the services three were baptized. One was an old gentleman who said he had been searching for the restored gospel for sixty-five years. The Lord is good and rewards them that diligently seek him.

Under the leadership of Elder J. W. Roberts, pastor, this branch is going forward. The priesthood is united and holds meetings every two weeks. All important items are gone over then. They have also started the study of the stewardship plan as outlined by Brother A. Carmichael. All in all, the Saints here are busily engaged in the Lord’s work.

All communications for the pastor of this branch should be mailed to J. W. Roberts, 26 Guild Road, Brockton, Massachusetts.

Reports a Successful Year

JENKS, OKLAHOMA, December 12.—The year has been the best of my life; the great power of the Good Spirit; the feeling of love and fellowship of all Saints who love the latter-day work has grown this year under the splendid spirit of stewardship; the first real step toward the building of Zion.

I have sent in seventy-five dollars worth of subscriptions to the church papers in sixty days. Most of it was for the HERALD. The Saints love the HERALD, as it is this year. Last year nearly ruined it. All Saints welcome the great change for the better.

The writer baptized eighteen in November. The good work moves forward towards its ultimate goal. Every new convert now comes with his face turned Zionward. The church program of this year is so filled with good omens for the Saints everywhere, that the season’s greetings assume a new significance as the old year closes and we are nearing the beginning of the new. We wish to congratulate the Saints for the loyalty, fidelity, fellowship, and the spirit of charity which we see growing among the members of this great family of God.

I am yours for Zion and the coming of the Lord.

old elder by the name of Monroe was in charge of the service. He went ahead and preached. Shortly after he got started I slid out of the rear door and went around to the front and went in and took a seat at the back of the room.

A few weeks later I was called upon to substitute at a street meeting. I did not decline, but to the contrary I stepped out as bold and fearless as any of God’s servants of the past, and for about thirty minutes I discussed the subject of “Baptism; how, when, and why?” W. A. Blair, who has gone to his reward, was a great help to me in those days. I served, in my humble way, in various positions in the church and its departments, in Detroit.

I received my first appointment in June, 1919, having been appointed to Springfield, Missouri. I left in August, full of zeal, and that is about all, to take up the work in the above mentioned place. I went to Lincoln, Nebraska, the next year, and did “tent work” with the southern. I did my first real missionary work there. I left in September for Graceland, having been selected, with Mary, to study in the religious education class. It was in Graceland that I received my first real vision of the work of the church. The nine months that I spent in Graceland are, in many ways, the greatest of my life. I shall ever boost and pray for our college.

We left Graceland in June, 1921, having previously been assigned to the Hawaiian Islands, but on account of Mary’s poor health our appointment was changed to Southeastern Illinois. We labored there until the General Conference of 1923. No one but a missionary can appreciate the feelings that come over one as he sits and hears the reading of the appointments at General Conference. The “powers that be” decided that I could better serve the church as a district president, so they appointed me to this district, Eastern Colorado, to serve in that capacity, with Colorado Springs as my objective. I have had some fine experiences in this wonderful district. It is wonderful in more than one way. The climate and scenery are great, and the people are progressive and unostentatious. I love to serve them.

I just returned from a trip through the southern parts of the district. I ate turkey with the Fletchers Thanksgiving Day, in the Wiley Branch. I went rabbit hunting in the afternoon. I never have heard Newt DeLong preach, but if he is as good at it as he is shooting rabbits, he is a good one. I carried John Fletcher’s single-shot shotgun. It is some gun; it works both ways. My shoulder is lame yet. We got sixteen cottontails and forty rabbits that morning. I never have heard Newt DeLong preach, but if he is as good at it as he is shooting rabbits, he is a good one. Some of the branches of this district fell down on their quotas but several, Colorado Springs included, went over the top in the recent Graceland College endowment campaign. F. Henry Edwards and I had some fine experiences while working together in the interest of the endowment.

Coffeyville, Kansas

December 12.—Pledges for the Graceland endowment fund continued to come in until 6312 had been subscribed. Our quota of $125 seemed large to our small number of Saints, but we are glad to make this splendid showing as we want to be instrumental in forwarding the gospel.

Thanksgiving morning at eleven o’clock the Saints gathered in service. The service was in keeping with the occasion. Among the things we have to be thankful for is the gospel and the plan of stewardship which gives us the privilege of serving our fellow man.

Sacramental services were held the first Sunday of this month. A goodly degree of the Spirit was felt, and we were glad of the opportunity of renewing our covenant once more.
Kansas City Stake
Of General Interest

All Kansas City is just now in the midst of the great Christmas festivity. It begins early here. Never before was there greater endeavor to anticipate the needs of the Christmas shoppers than this year. The suburban stores are causing great anxiety to the patrons in the city itself. They advertise free parking space to all patrons. The downtown store people must submit to the city ordinance, which forbids auto parking nearer than about six blocks. That doesn't have to tote his load and is not bid to move in so half mile walk doesn't appeal to him. So he buys where he doesn't have to change his load and is not bid to move in so many minutes. But the merchant association must get busy—he can't afford to lose his long-time customer. So they plan a plan and put it into execution. They place a row of evergreens on each side of the street, tenoned into bases of concrete; that gives security because of weight. Then they place brackets festooned with evergreen vines, etc., on the trolley poles, that part projecting over the walk forming a wreath. The puncher does the younger bow. On the principal cross street an arch is created by suspending greenery from the taller buildings a block in length. At night this is ablaze with electric lights, a beautiful scene to behold. Then Santa Claus has been invited and attends in person; comes from away up in the frozen north, brought hither by his trusty reindeer. Six of 'em—count 'em; six of 'em; and rest of them to the city; red with their red cap and scarf. His sleigh is hauled with a lot of things that boys and girls like. Drums and dolls and footballs and chocolate creams. In a previously announced parade, Santa proves to be a big drawing fellow, as nearly every boy and girl in town turns out to see him; why, the streets are simply filled with them; and the mammas and papas and grandpas and grandmas too. Of course, they buy up every gift from Santa's sleigh. And then he goes about town every day now, just where he pleases, reindeer and all. All this is planned to bring the buying public to their old buying places. And it works, too, in many cases. And the shopper is happy. He innocently forms his part in the program.

Grandview Church

The Women's Department, including the Temple Builders, under the direction of Sister P. J. Brose and C. D. Jel­lings, gave their annual bazaar and chicken dinner Thursday, December 3. They had splendid success, clearing near three hundred dollars.

Elder S. S. Smith was with them Sunday evening, De­cember 6, and imparted much food for thought.

"Religio" has been organized and is progressing splendidly, with Brother Joseph Cookley as president, assisted by other loyal workers. Only two classes have been organized, the Book of Mormon, and Church History, but the attendance and interest already demand a number of others.

Armourdale Church

Recent speakers have been Brethren Charles Strader, J. O. Worden, Frederick Cleveland, Henry Rushfelt, and E. P. Sanders, from whom they have heard good spiritual discourses.

The young men's class has a basket-ball team and challenges any church team in the stake to a game. Come on, you basket-ball players.

The Religio has a debating team and challenges any like team in the stake to a debate any time; subject to be decided upon. Those interested, get in communication with Clarence Woodhead, 835 South Eleventh Street, Kansas City, Kansas.

Elder John Gross has been appointed the pastor for the coming year and is promised to be sustained by his little congregation.

The week-day school is doing nicely, Sister E. P. Sanders, principal, supported by a good corps of teachers.

They raised $136 on the Graceland College endowment fund. Brother Henry Rushfelt is having success as president of the Religio, the meetings all being interesting because of his direction.

Malvern Hill Church

On the 29th Stake Missionary W. I. Fligg discoursed both morning and evening. In the evening special music was rendered by Roscoe and Henry Hampton, from Central Church, the effort being appreciated.

On the 10th they had a dinner and bazaar, with a grab bag for the children.

The Christmas program is being developed, and they are getting along fine with it. The young people's class is preparing a little play, which will be very effective.

The week-day religious school is having a pretty hard time now because of a lack of teachers. The work is therefore hard for those who have continued regularly, but the spirit of willingness has lightened the burden, as they seem to have caught a vision of the work.

Fourth Church

Elder James Bunt of Independence was the speaker the 22d of November at eleven o'clock, and Elder Ralph W. Far­rell, of radio sermon fame, occupied in the evening.

Elder Seth S. Sandy of the stake presidency, who has been so very ill on account of a serious operation, is improving rapidly, and thanks those for the prayers offered in his behalf.

A drummer boy who was ordered by his commander to beat a retreat, replied that he did not know how to beat a retreat, but could beat a charge. This they feel describes the Fourth Church spirit.

Fall River, Massachusetts

December 8.—At the last sacramental service of the year, there was a wonderful outpouring of God's Spirit, both by way of admonition and in encouragement. Many felt the peaceful influence of the Spirit as they listened to the remarks of the pastor, James W. Heap. Brother Heap had other counsel for his people, but time did not permit its full presentation, so all were invited to the evening service if they were interested. Words of encouragement were also spoken by Elder F. S. Dobbins.

Fall River has but a few faithful workers now, and it causes Brother Dobbins to wish that there were not so many empty seats. Yet he rejoices when he recalls how many of the finest workers in the district and elsewhere are products of Fall River. It would be well if all the members left could catch a vision of the work.

The words of prophecy were given through Priest Moses Sheehy He is failing in strength but assisted in serving the sacrament. Brother Alma Combs assisted for the first time. The pastor carried the sacrament to the sick in the afternoon. At six o'clock a priesthood meeting was held.

The same good spirit prevailed in the evening, and the pastor enjoyed much liberty in presenting his message to the Saints.

Local men have been the speakers for the past month, assisted by Elder F. S. Dobbins.

The endowment committee held its first supper November 21. Sometime in January the committee will have a chowder supper, prepared by Elder John E. Rogerson. He is noted throughout New England for his chowders.

The Department of Women will hold its Christmas sale and potato pie supper December 12.

The doctor reports improvement in the condition of little Marion Slater. Prayer and administration can accomplish much.

Sister Myra Cockcroft came to the sacramental service. She desired to attend, as she will soon go to Boston for treatment, and she has been unable to be out for a long time. Even attending this service proved to be too much of an effort for her.

Brother John C. Henderson, Sunday school superintendent, reports the calendars all sold for the Christmas offering, but he will secure more if they are wanted. There is much pleasant rivalry among the children as to which class will have the most money at bank-breaking time in January. Sister Margaret Henderson is busy as usual rehearsing the children for the Christmas cantata and the story and song service to be given the Sunday evening before Christmas, also for the Christmas carols.

Independence

Independence has enjoyed regular Florida-California-Hawaiian-and Land of the Southern Cross weather for nearly a month, but Sunday evening a cold rain started and made the streets like a cake of ice. But the trees are beautiful with their burden of countless diamonds.

Stone Church

President E. A. Smith's subject Sunday morning was, "God in the present tense." Next Sunday will be the last of this series of sermons.

Sister Frances Ellen Schweers, daughter of Charles M. Mills and wife of Frederick A. Schweers, died Friday, December 11. The funeral services were held in the Stone Church at half past one, Elder Delbert A. Whiting making the address; C. Ed. Miller assisting. The many beautiful floral emblems and the large attendance of the congregation are evidence of the high esteem in which Sister Schweers was held by the community.

Fourteen members of the Walnut Park orchestra rendered a splendid program at the 7:30 song service hour. There were several beautifully rendered vocal numbers also, making a soul-satisfying program.

President F. M. McDowell was the speaker for the evening, his subject being, "Christ as a teacher." He said as pupils our objective should be to try to understand Christ and open our souls to him and let purity, meekness, justice, love, and truth come in, while hatred, jealousy, and impurity are kept out.

Our mission is to carry out the religion of Jesus. Governments, institutions, nations rise and fall. The best thinkers to-day must appeal to Christ. He has the solution for all our problems. For permanency we must look to Christ, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." The great superiority of Christ over every other teacher was his spirituality. He demonstrated an actual victory of love over hatred; of life over death, of the spiritual over the temporal. He, the great teacher, showed mankind how to live.

His preparation: I have often thought we have underestimated the preparation Christ made for his life work. When he was twelve years of age he told his mother he must be about his Father's business. Eighteen years of that business was in preparing for his ministry, which he assumed when he was thirty years old. Young people are too much concerned with what their work is going to be and are not giving enough thought to preparation for that work. As a teacher Christ did constructive work. He learned lessons from many sources. In Joseph's workshop he learned to be a builder. He learned from nature. The tiny mustard seed contained a sermon for him. A lamb, a fox, and a hen with her chickens were subjects of his observation. He also obtained lessons from human nature. Christ knew all men, knew what was in men. Christ's mother was a large factor in his preparation. It is written that he was subject to his parents in all things, and he gained in wisdom and in favor with God and man. Finally God the Father was his teacher.

Man, to be a good teacher, must be conscious of a divine purpose. Agnosticism says you are a cosmic accident. Nothing could turn Christ aside from his God-given mission. He was supersensitive in his consciousness of a divine purpose. A teacher may have a string of college degrees, but if he is not conscious of a divine purpose he will never become a great teacher. Christ had a love for those he taught. His contact with them was a divine love touch, and he loved little children and said of them, "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." God loves Christ; Christ loves us; we must love each other as Christ loves us.

Christ's method of teaching: He observed the best method of teaching he knew. He knew the lesson began with and arose out of the problems of the pupils. He used simple language which the people could comprehend. His illustrations always pointed a means to an end. Christ kept in mind what he would teach, how he should teach, and who he was to teach. The story of the good Samaritan is applicable to all men of all ages.

Sunday evening was election of officers for the Religio. The following were selected as officers for the coming year: Francis Holm, president; C. A. Kress, first assistant; Mrs. Anna Vincent, second assistant; Fred Friend, chorister; Stewart Tandberg, secretary.

The annual Sunday school election of officers was held Monday evening, resulting in the choice of the following: C. B. Hartlaub, superintendent; C. O. White, first assistant; D. O. Cato, second assistant; Florence Pointer, secretary; G. W. Eastwood, treasurer; George Anway, chorister.

War Mothers Give Dinner

The following is copied from the Independence Examiner:

The dinner given Tuesday evening by the Independence Group of American War Mothers was followed by a splendid program of music and talks. The program, a part of which was broadcast from radio station K L D S, opened with "America," sung by the assembly. C. Ed. Miller gave the prayer, and Mayor Roger T. Sermon, who was an overseas service man, spoke. He commended the chapter for its organization.

Mrs. Margaret McClure, national war mother, addressed the meeting. She and Mrs. Florence Lathan, national corresponding secretary, were presented with baskets of chrysanthemums by the chapter.

We notice the following brothers of the ministry in Independence during the past week: John Sheehy, E. E. Long, F. Henry Edwards, J. W. Paxton, and Charles May.

Group 6 reported at their meeting, one elder, two priests, one teacher, and one deacon present.

Brother R. V. Hopkins was in his accustomed place in charge of the Stone Church services Sunday morning. He will be the speaker in Mount Washington next Sunday evening.

President F. M. McDowell will meet with the young people again next Wednesday evening at their prayer service in the Stone Church.

Plans are being formulated for arousing a Father and Son Day banquet to be held in the dining hall on January 15. We hope the fathers and sons of Zion will reserve this date for the banquet.

Second Church

On Wednesday evening of last week the Presidency called the Saints together for the purpose of selecting officers for the Second Section for 1926. Quite a unity of sentiment was apparent in the selection of Brother W. A. Welton as custodian of properties and R. J. Lambert as supervisor or pastor.

Thursday evening the women of the five groups composing the section gave a chili dinner at the Stone Church dining hall, following the dinner with a social hour and an impromptu entertainment. It was a time of good feeling, close association, and the sum realized for the purpose of helping liquidate the church debt was over $35.

Friday evening the Religio held its annual business meeting and chose Brothers Rawlings and Davis as president and vice president for 1926, and Dan Snider as their assistant. Sister Barmore was continued as secretary; Brother Lane Bolt as treasurer; Sister Mary Fields, chorister; and Sister Gladys Good, pianist.

The Religio is putting much effort into a Christmas carnival to be held December 18 in Curtis Hall, in which several nationalities will be impersonated as shopkeepers. All the initiative and energy of youth are being put into these preparations, and the sale of tickets for twenty-five cents each. Before the carnival is over an entertainment of high class musical and literary numbers will open in the church next to the hall, and the tickets will secure admittance here also. The money secured is to be placed in the church till, and half past seven. The church every Sunday of the past year during the eleven o’clock meeting, when she cares for an average of twenty little people, thus relieving the mothers during the hour and preventing any disturbance the babies might cause in the main service. Sister Delta Nace is her volunteer assistant.

Special services Sunday arranged by the Department of Women were held at eleven o’clock and at half past seven. The department was very sorry to learn that Supervisor Alice Cowan was ill and could not be present to speak at eleven, as announced. The local officers, Mrs. F. R. Schafer and Mrs. John Schwab, were in charge, and Brother C. Ed. Miller substituted as speaker. His talk on “the home” showed clearly his sincere love for that institution, and the congregation were easily led to share his reverence.

The decorations were indicative of the three girls’ organizations, one large arch fairly alive with bluebirds, one with orioles, and the center one a garland of white chrysanthemums and liberty blue ribbon, the last representing the Temple Builders. In the evening these local chapters, under their leader, Mrs. Roy Barnhardt, gave demonstrations of their work that were eye-openers to those who had never learned the aims and activities of the girls. Sister Nellie Sampson, in charge of the girls in Zion, was present to assist throughout the evening.

B. J. Scott was the speaker in Group 41 Sunday forenoon. He acknowledges having been granted great light and liberty, and the congregation were duly appreciative.

The time of Religio has been changed from Friday evening to Sunday evening at six o’clock.

Enoch Hill

Elder George Jenkins was the speaker at Enoch Hill both morning and evening of Sunday. People were interested in his discourses on “Watchman, what of the night?” and “The return of the Jews.”

A two-act Christmas cantata, entitled “Santa saves the day,” will be given next Tuesday night at 8 o’clock by members of the congregation, under the direction of Sister Charles S. Warren. The public is cordially invited to be present.

Monday evening the branch was called by the Presidency to select officers for the coming year. The Presidency nominated Elder W. J. Brewer, the incumbent, for the year 1926. The nomination was approved. Charles S. Warren was chosen as director of music and Sister Henry Hartman head of the Department of Women. The Sunday school officers elected were: R. E. Whitsett, superintendent; J. E. Swalley, assistant; Mrs. Amos E. Allen, primary superintendent, with Mrs. Willis Young as assistant; Mary Brewer, secretary; J. C. Alexander, treasurer; Dick Bullard, chorister; and Mae Chronister, pianist.

President Elbert A. Smith and Pastor C. Ed. Miller were in charge of the business meeting, and their work was enjoyed, President Smith making a splendid address and exhortation at the close of the election.

Spring Branch

Monday evening at eight o’clock the Saints of Spring Branch met in joint business meeting to elect officers for the branch and the various departments for the coming year. Peace and harmony prevailed throughout. Elders C. Ed. Miller and R. V. Hopkins, representing the pastor’s office in Zion, presided. Elder Frank Mussell was chosen as pastor; Alfred Tankard, superintendent of the Sunday school; J. C. Mabott, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and Mrs. D. D. McClain was made head of the Department of Women.

Wednesday evening a very fine prayer and testimony meeting was enjoyed, the Spirit being present in great power.

A pleasant social evening was had Thursday evening at the home of Brother and Sister W. F. Smith, the occasion being the birthday of Miss Winnogene, their eldest daughter.

The Religio is progressing nicely, both in attendance and interest.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
At the eleven o'clock service Sunday Elder Claud Kress was the speaker. He presented an urgent appeal for the fathers and mothers to do their duty as parents, centralizing his discourse around the quotation, “Here am I, Lord, use me.”

In the evening at half past seven Elder J. Charles May gave a regular missionary sermon, dealing with the fundamentals of this gospel.

Englewood

Work on the new church is going forward, and it is expected that the concrete floor will be run Wednesday if the weather permits. The Englewood Saints are grateful for the support they have received from Independence having come out to help them when they could.

The bazaar and chicken supper held in the Stone Church dining hall recently was quite a success. The weather was very disagreeable, but in spite of this they cleared more than one hundred dollars.

Sunday morning Pastor J. E. Warner was the speaker, and Elder A. F. Hyde addressed the Saints in the evening. There was a good crowd at sacrament service the first Sunday of the month, and a good meeting was had. Elder John Ely was the speaker the evening of December 6.

Death Claims Three at San Jose

Things that have occurred since my last communication, that are perhaps worthy of mention, are as follows:

On Sunday, October 18, the Religio, or Department of Recreation and Expression, had for their program for the evening, a lecture on physical culture, by a young Utah elder, using one of the male members for a "model" to lecture from. The lecture was quite entertaining and instructive, and the "model" seemed to enjoy it as well as the audience.

On Thursday, October 22, at half past eight in the evening, there was had a nice, quiet meeting at the church, at which time Brother Ivan Brown, of Oakland, California, and Sister Gertrude Allen, of Livermore, California, were united in the sacred bonds of wedlock. Elder C. W. Hawkins officiated; and he remarked that he felt the presence of the Spirit in a very marked degree in the pronouncement of this ceremony, and felt that "God" had truly joined them together. So may it be.

On October 29, the Saints met in the evening at the home of Brother and Sister Christopher, where they participated in a masked Halloween social. The writer was not there, but it was reported that they had a very enjoyable time.

On November 8, Brother D. J. Lawn, son of the late J. H. Lawn, a one-time missionary in the church, passed to his reward. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their sad loss. He was a member of the San Jose Branch. The high esteem with which he had in the community in which he lived was evidenced by the attendance of friends and relatives at the funeral. His home was in Hollister. Elder Eugene Holt officiated at the funeral.

On Tuesday, November 17, Brother Leland C. Hawkins, son of Elder C. W. Hawkins of San Jose passed from this earthly life, after four weeks of intense suffering, which began with the "flu" and ended with "acute pleurisy" and "bronchial pneumonia." He also was a member of the San Jose Branch, but his home was in Hollister. The attendance at the funeral, and the seventy-two floral pieces that decorated the grave, gave evidence of the respect and esteem with which he was also held in the same town and community in which Brother Joe Lawn lived. "Joe and Lee" were close friends all their lives. In death they were not long separated. He leaves a wife and four young children, Elder Eugene Holt officiated at this funeral also.

On the evening of November 29, the silent reaper again visited our San Jose Branch, and removed from our midst another beloved and faithful brother, Elder E. S. Chase. This brother has suffered for more than a year with a complication of diseases which at one time became so acute that he had to be taken to a hospital and undergo an operation in order to get relief. All was done that kind and loving relatives and friends could do for all three of these brethren in the way of administrations and medical aid, but the all-wise Creator thought best to take them unto himself. Brother Chase leaves a wife and four relatives, but no children, to mourn his departure. The funeral services were held at the Saints' church in San Jose; the interment was at Irvington. Elder C. W. Hawkins officiated at the funeral. Thus another kind and loving husband, an honorable, upright citizen, and faithful servant of the Lord, has passed to the beyond, into the "more abundant life."

On Sunday, November 29, the Saints met in the evening at the home of Elder J. Charles May, and the program was in order to get relief. All was done that kind and loving relatives and friends could do for all three of these brethren in the way of administrations and medical aid, but the all-wise Creator thought best to take them unto himself. Brother Chase leaves a wife and four relatives, but no children, to mourn his departure. The funeral services were held at the Saints' church in San Jose; the interment was at Irvington. Elder C. W. Hawkins officiated at the funeral. Thus another kind and loving husband, an honorable, upright citizen, and faithful servant of the Lord, has passed to the beyond, into the "more abundant life."

On December 6, Apostle Clyde F. Ellis met with the San Jose Saints in their sacramental service and preached for them morning and evening. His visit was very much appreciated by the Saints. He is a very lovable minister.

Far West Stake

Elders H. L. Barto and John F. Sheehy were in Saint Joseph on Sunday, November 29. Brother Barto spoke at the Second Church in the morning and at Fifth in the evening; much good was derived by those who attended these services. Elder Sheehy occupied at the First Church in the morning of the 29th, and at Second in the evening. His presence in Saint Joseph, and the service rendered while there, were much appreciated by the Saints.

Trenton

Since July 31 meetings have been continued monthly at Jamesport; and occasionally at Galt and Hickory Creek, Missouri. Meetings are held weekly at Spickard.

In Trenton there has been a large increase in attendance at all the church services. The junior church service was organized on the 1st of October, and has been well attended each Sunday morning, under the direction of Sister J. R. Lentell. This service is held in a room in the church separate from the regular church services.

Recent newcomers to Trenton are: Elder E. E. Gamet and family, late of Cameron, Missouri; Brother J. E. Johnson, of San Antonio, Texas; Brother William Gunlock, of Rock Island, Illinois, and Brother Roughcorn, of Cameron, Missouri.

Trenton exceeded its quota during the Graceband endowment drive, going over the top on the first day. A basket meeting is held on Saturday, and sister meetings are held on Thursday, and Friday night. President O. Salisbury was present on that date and preached to a large and attentive audience in the morning, afternoon, and evening. Four children were baptized in the afternoon.

Elders John R. Lentell and J. D. Profit attended the ministerial conference at Cameron on November 20, 21, and 22.

Brother J. A. Place and family, and Clyde Anson, of Polo, attended services at Trenton on November 22, and were the guests of Elder A. C. Anson and family.

The Sunday school was reorganized on October 1, and classes formed for each department; also two captains were appointed by the Sunday school, with power to choose lieutenants. These, together with the branch officers, put on an extensive and well-organized visiting campaign. The result to date has been that the Sunday school has more than three times doubled itself in attendance. Under the direction of the captains the school is divided into two parts; namely, the Rustlers and Hustlers. The attendance is steadily increasing.

Our Department of Recreation and Expression has materially increased in attendance and interest, and is still growing. During the Halloween season this department gave a party. Brother Archie Constance, stake superintendent, was at Trenton November 29. He gave an interesting talk at the program hour and preached in the evening.

The Women's Department, under the leadership of Sister
J. D. Proffit, has been holding meetings regularly with a good attendance and interest. The membership of the home department in charge of Sister J. D. Proffit has increased to fifty-eight.

The Utopia Chapter of Temple Builders was organized in October, Sister J. R. Lentell being chosen as its leader. The Temple Builders meet weekly and have a large attendance. They have held two parties in addition to their regular work. Recently the Orioles have been organized; so far they have held one meeting.

Oakdale
Fine weather and good roads have been appreciated during the last two weeks. The farmers are all busy trying to finish gathering corn while the weather is favorable.

Brother Julian Peterson, who spent nearly all fall in Canada, has returned home recently.

Elder Coleman Snider, pastor of Oakdale Branch, was taken sick suddenly, with acute appendicitis, and removed to the Sanitarium on November 12. The operation was delayed until November 21 on account of his weakened condition. He has been very ill, but is slowly improving. Sister Snider has been with her husband all the time. Their children motored down to Independence and spent a few days with them.

The regular Thanksgiving service was held on Wednesday evening this year, instead of on the Thursday forenoon. A special meeting was held in behalf of Brother Snider, and was well attended.

Brother Ed Jensen and wife, of Conception Junction, spent last Saturday with Sister Jensen's parents, Brother and Sister Hawley.

Sister Herman Diem was called to Kansas City Monday, November 23, on account of her daughter, Dora, and her husband, who were both injured in an automobile accident.

Bedison
During the first part of November the meetings were not so well attended on account of rain and mud. However, there was a sufficient attendance to keep the services going.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolsey made a short visit to Bedison on November 3 in the interests of the Graceland endowment fund.

Kingston
This branch is still on the upward move.

Several sermons were preached during the month of November dealing with the Graceland endowment. The speakers were Brethren H. L. Barto, Archie Constance, James Dawson, and Charles Wood. A splendid spirit accompanied these services.

The Women's Auxiliary met at the homes of Sisters Fred Cook and Sarah Wommach during November. Much good was derived from a study of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Several members of the priesthood attended the recent conference at Cameron, and were greatly benefited for their effort.

November 21 Brother Charles Holmes, of Breckenridge, visited with the Saints at Kingston. His parents, a daughter, and an aunt accompanied him.

Two additions were gained by baptism on November 22. They were Mrs. Arda Bascue and Mr. Charles Simpson.

The speakers on November 29 were Brethren Albert Place and Charles Wood.

The Sunday school has arranged to provide a program to be rendered on Christmas Eve.

Sister Gertie Bratcher and family expect to move to near Kidder, Missouri, in the near future.

Far West Branch
November 3—The Women's Department spent the day in working for Sister M. M. German, who recently returned from the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Burnett are the parents of a fine girl, born November 4.

The young people's social service on November 8 was excellent. The Saints surely enjoy these services which are held the second Sunday of each month, in charge of Howard McKee.

On the evening of Friday, November 13, a Religio social was held at the home of Elder Giles Koger, the branch president. About eighty were present and all enjoyed themselves by games and other amusements. Refreshments were served later in the evening.

Howard McKee was the speaker in the forenoon of November 15 and Elder Giles Koger at night.

The Religio program for the 15th was: Vocal duet by J. Day and John German; and a recitation by Jimmy Koger and John Gover.

Several officers and teachers in the Department of Sunday School were present on the 15th, with the exception of one who has moved to Independence.

The Saints were very glad to have Elder Sven Swenson preach for them again on Sunday, November 22. He had been absent for some time, visiting friends and relatives at distant places. Howard McKee preached an interesting sermon at night.

Several members from Far West Branch attended the services at Cameron, November 22.

November 29: Better attendance than usual. Bishop Milo Burnett preached both morning and evening, and conducted a round table in the afternoon. An interesting talk by Elder Thomas Fiddick preceded the morning service.

Brother Pane, of Cameron, and Brother W. H. Cryer, of Saint Joseph, were also visitors on November 29.

A Christmas Gift to the Sanitarium

MR. ALBERT CARMICHAEL,
Independence, Missouri.

Dear Sir: Inclosed you will find check which I want placed to the credit of the Sanitarium and used to install the signal system, which is so much needed. [Check for $1000.]

Kindly inform Miss Copeland that this is my Christmas donation to help her in the very efficient work that she is doing there. If there are any of the nurses there now that attended me while I was there a short time last April, this is to help them also to do away with the nerve-racking buzz, buzz, buzz, that they have to listen to all the time under the old system now in operation.

My kindest regards to them all for a very pleasant Christmas and Happy New Year.

Very truly yours, DANIEL F. JOY.

Request for Prayers

Sister Elizabeth I. Vickerstaff, 136 Third Avenue, Clinton, Iowa, is seriously afflicted and would like the prayers of the Saints in her behalf. She is one of the devoted mothers in Israel and is at present superintendent of the Department of Women in the Eastern Iowa District and is known and loved by many. She has raised a large family of bright sons and daughters and is now suffering from a cancer or tumor, being in pain almost every day.

If you were a banker—
Which Would You Rather Have

One Savings Account Ten Savings Accounts with a balance of $1,000.00 of $100.00 each?

While the ten accounts would be more expensive to operate and thus the immediate profits to the bank less, yet the ten accounts would be worth more for these reasons:

1st. Anyone who has saved $100.00 has learned the great lesson of thrift if they but knew it, so you have ten potential $1,000.00 accounts because they are bound to grow.

2d. With ten accounts you would have TEN FRIENDS, and that’s what counts the most.

AS A MATTER OF FACT
A small but GROWING account is a character in the making.

Christ; Savior of the World and Head of the Church

On the one hand Christ is the savior of the sinner; on the other hand he is the head of the church, the Shepherd of those who have come unto him. At this point it may be well to represent the church correctly. The charge has been made and is made that we have rejected Christ and put man in his stead. This is an unkind reflection upon a God-fearing people who love their Lord and have never put any man in his place.

Twenty-five years ago, when I was a young missionary distributing tracts from door to door, the remark was made to me, "I do not see how you people can put Joseph Smith in the place of Jesus Christ." The church has ever had men who were leaders and stood at the head of affairs, but that was in a human sense and in the church on earth; it has ever been recognized and is to-day recognized that over and above all men and officers is Jesus as head of the church of God both on earth and in heaven.

We may safely, in the name of the church, make this confession of faith: We believe in God the eternal Father. We believe in Jesus Christ the Son: conceived of the Holy Ghost; born of the Virgin Mary; crucified on Calvary's cross; through the power of the resurrection ascended upon high to reign with the Father; solemnly pledged to return again in person and in power.

"In the beginning God created." He looked upon his work and said that it was good, very good. But the story of the fall follows. Some people seem to think that the fall of man is but a bit of theology, a dogma or doctrine for theological experts to quibble over. It is a hard and ever obvious fact.

Abraham Lincoln, Florence Nightingale, John the Beloved, Jesus Christ, these and other personages in various ages witness the fact that man may live on a high plane. God put the possibilities there. He said they were good, and very good. That plane is within man's reach. Man was fitted to occupy thereon. The Psalmist said:

"The fall of man is not a theological dogma. It is a fact. It is not written alone in the Bible. It is written that it was good, very good. But the story of the fall follows. Some people seem to think that the fall of man is but a bit of theology, a dogma or doctrine for theological experts to quibble over. It is a hard and ever obvious fact.

Abraham Lincoln, Florence Nightingale, John the Beloved, Jesus Christ, these and other personages in various ages witness the fact that man may live on a high plane. God put the possibilities there. He said they were good, and very good. That plane is within man's reach. Man was fitted to occupy thereon. The Psalmist said:
written in human history and human life. Man has fallen. "It is written."

Jesus came in the meridian of time to save man from that fallen estate. He came to tell man how to live. Better than that, he came to show man how to live. He came to teach the law. But he did not give us a printed list of regulations such as we see on factory walls. He put the law into flesh and blood. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."

He came to lead us back to the plane on which we should live and may live. Man's need is great and real and obvious. The way of salvation is clear and adequate, and the Master of Salvation is powerful to save. It is truly said of him, that other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Christ Jesus. II. YOUR HEART.—Part 2

Keep your heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs.

We were considering certain contrasts. Such contrasts reappear in all ages. Joseph resisted temptation. He turned from Potiphar's wife, and in the hour of temptation kept his heart with diligence. He ruled himself and so was worthy to rule others. The opportunity to rule gave him the opportunity to serve. But David, when tempted by his glimpse of Bathsheba upon the housetop in her unguarded moment of fancied seclusion, forgot kingly dignity, religious obligations, and the trust of a friend. He did not keep his heart, but permitted it to drive him on to ruin.

Such contrasts are not confined to ancient history. There came to our office at one time a man in the deepest distress, seeking comfort, seeking reinforcement to his soul. He paced the floor for a long time before he could even begin to tell his story. His had been a happy home. He had a young and lovely wife that he loved and a dear friend that he trusted. That friend was also his spiritual adviser, his pastor. That friend had betrayed the sacred trust. That man walked to and fro in the office with the sweat upon his brow, and said, "I have had to pray God every day to keep me from killing that man. I have kept away from him lest I should kill him." There arose in his heart the volcanic fires of vengeance. If he had not kept his heart with all diligence, he would have killed the man who was at one time his friend. Such tragedies happen every day. The newspapers of every city report them.

What about the other man? He who was trusted with the freedom of the home? The man who was the trusted and admired spiritual adviser? The shepherd? He was thrown with this woman on the most intimate terms, and because she did trust him and because she did admire him, the door of her heart was opened to him. The greatest temptation that could come to any man came to him; the temptation that has dethroned kings and unfrocked ministers; the temptation that has spread throughout the world the social diseases, like a flame and a scourge. That man forgot his sacred trust. He betrayed his God, his church, and his friend.

The moral seems to be, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

I do not wish to present this theme wholly in a repressive light. The old idea of religion was that the impulses and forces of nature should be crushed down, that the individual should go into the desert or the monastery and deny himself expression of all of the God-given powers of the soul.

You cannot dam Niagara. It will go to the sea. But you can direct its waters into the turbines. You cannot dam up the forces of nature. Even in the monasteries they broke over and expressed themselves in shameful ways.

The first thing to do is to regenerate the heart; next to direct its natural forces. Jesus said, "You must be born again." Give your heart to God, and let his gospel cleanse it. But do not make the mistake when it is cleansed to leave it empty. Jesus told the parable of a man out of whom a devil had been cast. The devil came back and found the place empty, swept, and garnished; so he moved in with seven others worse than himself. Fill your heart with legitimate love for your husband or your wife, your brother, your sister, your children, your neighbor, your church, your God. Direct all the forces of your nature into constructive channels; then you will not need to worry so much about repression.

I have heard physicians talk about "substitution." A young man who has temptation goes out and throws himself into a football game and uses up his surplus energies in that manner. That is "substitution." From that idea has come the better idea of "sublimation." The young man may say, "Why work when I can have fun, if the only motive is to keep from doing evil?" But "sublimation" says, Use the forces of your natures in sublime channels; give them expression along splendid and legitimate lines. Do not only avoid evil; learn to do good; be conscious of a divine purpose in life. Make all things serve that purpose.

I cannot think of any institution on earth that comes to the young man or young woman, the older man and the older woman, with a more splendid appeal than that which is voiced by this church. Sublimate your lives. Bring all that you have of brain and heart and body and soul into constructive and legitimate channels. Build Zion! That is the divine purpose. Is there any appeal that can come to the heart of a man with greater power and possibilities?

You remember the words that we sometimes sing, "Unto honor I have called you, honor great as angels know." I have thought about that and wondered if it were an exaggeration. I have thought about Lucifer, the Son of the Morning—what honor was his at one time! I have thought about Gabriel, whose trumpet is to rouse the dead. What honor is to be his! Yet this song says, "Unto honor I have called you, honor great as angels know." Angels may come from the courts of glory on temporary missions of honor; but, friends, we have come here to live in the flesh and with the men and women about us build Zion. There can be no greater glory. That is the work that Christ gave himself to do. He came and lived among men and took upon himself flesh, and the statement is made that the word became flesh and dwelt among men, full of grace and truth. Can you think of anything finer or better to which we could give our lives and devote our energies?

The emotions, if we give them license, may reach up their hands and lay hold on the very throne of reason, the citadel of honor, the altar of religion, and pull everything down in ruins. Or, if we direct and control them and keep our hearts with diligence, they will lay broad the foundations of manhood and womanhood; they will sustain us not only in the big and crucial moments of life, but also in the everyday grind of duty. When we love, labor is sweet.

This admonition, "Keep your heart," has a very general application. It has a lesson for the nation. Roger Babson is a financial expert and a statistician of world-wide fame. Millionaires send their sons to his school to learn finances. His forecasts are read by the business world. Yet this man is more than a business prophet. In his book called The Fundamentals of Prosperity, he says that America has indeed built a very great superstructure of material things, but if she does not soon put under it a solid foundation of spiritual values the superstructure will fail. He says that we must put under that superstructure the old fundamental ideals of our fathers: honesty, industry, virtue, and love. In other words, the heart of America needs to be chastened and consecrated and its tremendous pulses directed into the channels of religion, duty, clean love, and home building.

I am very sure, indeed, that the text has an application to our Zionistic program. We are told in modern revelation that "Zion is the pure in heart," so we are getting at the root of the matter. A tree may appear strong, the bark may be clean, the branches vigorous, and the leaves green; yet if the heart is rotten it will some day fall. But if the heart of the tree is sound, then it can safely and surely grow and put on its external characteristics of strength and beauty.

Zion will need her banks, her farms, and her store-houses; but fundamentally Zion is the pure in heart, and from that pure heart we must build outward in all of our spiritual and material development. The individual who keeps his heart with diligence in Zion, who keeps it clean and directs its forces as God would have him, that individual is thus addressing himself to the primary project of building Zion.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Correct the Correction

The possession of a rich vocabulary of good English must indeed be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," and all readers of the Herald should gladly aim to attain perfection therein. A smattering of potent and common selections from the dead languages may also be a matter of some personal pride—to the owner; yet these should never be thrust into productions intended to clearly and quickly convey the writer's idea to the average reader. Plentiful occasion arises for confusion in the ordinary construction of sentences, in plain English, without burdening the lines with foreign words and terms which the reader may never before have seen, and has not time to institute a search for the translation or definition.

A case in point is a correction offered in your issue of December 9, where the writer of an answer to a question in the previous issue asks that his answer be "corrected" by the insertion of the term per se, with the avowed intent of clarifying his intended reply.

There are doubtless many of your readers who sense the meaning, but I fear there are many more, not equipped with a classical education, to whom this "correction" will appear somewhat akin to the Irish servant girl's attempt to keep the cat in the barn by inserting a stovepipe in the cat-hole in the door.

A suggestion is also respectfully offered: That the attention of the multitude be called to the persistent use of the word might instead of may, so universally prevalent in testimonies, and by so many better versed public speakers and writers. We are "sized-up" very largely by our choice of language.

Good Press Notice of Gospel Sermons

A copy of the Saint Marys Journal-Argus, December 10, 1925, comes to our desk, containing a good write-up of a sermon and mention of a series delivered by Apostle Myron A. McConley in that city of Ontario, Canada. We reproduce it:

"A Religion Worth Having" Was the Subject of the Closing Sermon of the Series on Sunday Night

Elder M. A. McConley, speaking on the above subject at the Saints' church on Sunday evening, stressed some of the things essential in religion to-day, as follows:

It must be more than a Sunday religion.
It will consist of something more than dead forms and ceremonies.
It must appeal to the intellect with which man has been endowed, and must warm the impulses of the heart at the same time.
It must be something practical, something that helps one solve the problems of the here and now.
It must be nonpartisan and must know no national or racial preferences.

Elaborating on the above points, Elder McConley showed how the religion of Jesus Christ meets all these essentials. How, under the enlightening and quickening influence of the Spirit of God, people become neighbors; men become better husbands and fathers; women become better wives and mothers; and the result is a higher type of children and better citizens of whatever land in which they live. These were but the necessary steps in the development of that much-desired condition when all men should become brothers. He showed how the religion of Christ is one to which men can safely turn in time of trouble, for it is not of human origin and has behind it the power of the universe.

At the close of the series of meetings, he offered the invitation given by the Master, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest," and assured the people that he knew by personal experience of many years in various lands among different races of people, English, Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiian, Filipino, and others, that where man did his part, God would always do His.

Radio Notes

To Broadcast Book of Mormon Series by R. V. Hopkins

Elder R. V. Hopkins, who for a number of years has been pastor of the Stone Church congregation at Independence, has been unable for many months to preach to his own flock or to the host of radio listeners who have wanted to hear him. He feels that he is now able to present a series of short sermons, and beginning Sunday, January 3, he will commence a series on the Book of Mormon. Tell your friends to tune in K L D S each Sunday night, at the nine o'clock hour, and hear the story of the Book of Mormon.

Morning Devotional Services Popular

The Tuesday and Friday morning devotional services and inspirational programs are bringing more reports to K L D S than any other regular schedule. The service, lasting one hour, begins at 6.30. The Bible reading, lesson, and prayer service are conducted by Elder Ralph W. Farrell. Make the morning service your breakfast-hour program.

"Songs of the Sea" Program to Be First of New Sunday 3 P. M. Schedule

So many people have requested a change in the radio vesper service hour, and so many have asked that it not be changed, K L D S will try to please all by continuing the 6.30 service and add an afternoon sacred program. Beginning December 27 K L D S will take the air each Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Elder U. W. Greene, known and loved by thousands of K L D S listeners, will preach the first sermons on the new schedule. He has prepared a most interesting program for next Sunday. Tune in for "Songs of the sea." If you like it, and you will, write Brother Greene, care of K L D S.

The Endowment-Stewardship Campaign

Each day's mail continues to bring us the best news as to the result of the campaign throughout the branches in the world. Pledge cards are being received by the hundred. In fact, one day's mail alone brought us over two thousand. Cash payments already received on the campaign pledges are over $45,000.

We are anxious to get all pledge cards in first. It is up to the branch solicitor to send all pledge cards to the district bishop's agent who will in turn forward them to the Presiding Bishopric. Do not wait for your regular monthly reports, but forward them just as soon as received.

We are daily receiving inquiries from all parts of the country asking what the net result of the campaign has been. We cannot answer these letters until we get all pledge cards.

If each will please consider it his first duty to do this, we can then close the campaign and make a final report on what has been received up to date. The pledge cards that are received later can be handled in the same way. The cooperation of all to this end will be appreciated.

Very sincerely yours,

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By A. CARMICHAEL.

OFFICIAL
The Location of the Colesville Branch

BY S. A. BURGESS

In the Sunday Journal-Post of November 29, 1925, there appears a very interesting article on the Jackson County location of the Colesville Branch. As is well known, the Colesville Branch located about twelve miles west of Independence, Missouri, and there erected the first school in Kansas City, Missouri, and one of the first, if not the first school in Jackson County, Missouri.

Mr. Rollin J. Britton, an attorney at law in Kansas City, has taken a great interest in this subject. He wrote "The early days on Grand River, and the Mormon War," in the Missouri Historical Review, and he also wrote an earlier article in which he expressed the opinion that the schoolhouse was near the big spring that forms Troost Lake. This was written up for the Missouri Valley Historical Association, but neither Mr. Britton nor Mr. Sears of the Journal-Post was quite satisfied with this location, and particularly were they anxious to locate the first meeting place of the church in Kansas City.

When we turn to volume 1 of the History of the Church we find that the first conference in Zion was held in the home of Joshua Lewis, but it was found difficult to locate where he resided. How this was done is shown in the following article, which we are publishing in full.

There are a few errors in this account, however. First, the Colesville settlement was made in 1831, not 1832. The first conference was held on August 4, 1831, not 1832, and the first log was carried August 2, 1831, not 1832. As to the location, it certainly appears much more probable that the settlement would be located very near to this old trail which became the Santa Fe Trail rather than a mile or so away. In the second place, it is more likely to be located at the junction of two trails, the road running south from the Missouri River landing.

It is true that the location at Troost Lake would have been on the Missouri River branch of the Santa Fe Trail. That is, it was near the Paseo, which it is stated was the Old Path from the Missouri River to the intersection of the Santa Fe Trail at Forty-sixth Street. But this new location would be first of all on the Santa Fe Trail, which would appear to be more natural when its distance is stated as being west from Independence. The distance was no doubt measured by road, not by surveying instruments. Coming from Independence it would seem somewhat more probable that location would be made there rather than north of the Old Path to the river. Also somewhat more probable that a branch would be selected near the intersection.

It is well known that the property was held in a community way for a short time, and that it was taken in the name of Bishop Edward Partridge. Yet researches by Bishops Carmichael and Siegfried some years ago showed that the holding of land in Independence was personal, and that evidently an effort was made to establish stewardships by deeds held in fee simple.

A point to which decided objection, of course, would be taken, is that Parley P. Pratt practiced polygamy in 1832. It is quite true that later he went into polygamy and that it caused him a great deal of trouble, but there is no evidence that we know of that a child has ever been produced that it was claimed was born in polygamy prior to the death of Joseph Smith. That Pratt was a many-famed man, or that the church people were guilty of that abomination (as it is called in the Book of Mormon on page 171), was not one of the accusations brought by the citizens of Jackson County. Their secret constitution states clearly the danger that they feared; that these people were sending out missionaries to New England and were bringing in many people, so that their settlement was growing rapidly. It was not the slow growth of children that was feared, but the proselyting efforts of the missionaries to the Eastern States. It is indeed unfortunate that as able an article as this should be marred by such an allegation, for which we do not believe there is the slightest historical justification. Of course, it may have been possible that such a false statement was circulated among the Southern Baptists near Westport, but it was not one of the reasons for the expulsion of the Saints, nor have we the evidence in hand to prove that such a false rumor was spread at that time. The bullet holes did not appear in that building because the schoolmaster had too many children.

The second reason was doubtless a good one. That is, that these people from New England held no slaves and were believed to be decidedly unfavorable to slavery. So here fell the first martyr for abolition.

Plan Suitable Marker for Site of Colesville, First Real Civic Settlement in Kansas City

Colesville, the first settlement with civic organization on what is now Kansas City, and the site of the first school building and church edifice here, will be marked with a permanent memorial of bronze or stone this centennial year of the Santa Fe Trail, which ran through Colesville, if the desire of Mrs. Nettie Thompson Grove, secretary of the Missouri Valley Historical Society, finds fruition.

The society for years has sought the exact site of the old village, which dates from 1832, a year before Westport was platted, a date when the French fur agencies along the Kansas City river front had no civic organization.
A suggestion from Mrs. Grove led to an eight-month search for the site of Colesville on the part of Kansas City historians, who, according to Rollin J. Britton, attorney and author of "Early days on Grand River and the Mormon War," 2808 the Paseo, identified the residence of F. F. Gimler, 1707 East Thirty-fifth Street, as occupying the site of the Colesville "foundation in Zion," a combinatoric of school and church, the first prominent outpost of the Independence Latter Day Saints. A conference of historical society members, looking to the marking of the site, is planned.

The search for the site of the building where Parley Parker Pratt taught the first school in Kansas City and Sidney Rigdon shepherded the first church flock in Kansas City, a building, the first log for which was carried August 2, 1832, by twelve Saints, one of whom was Joseph Smith, the prophet, was marked by difficulties.

Tradition in Error

Tradition, as often happens, had err'd. What it had handed down had persistently set forth Troost Park as the site of Colesville; and the spring which bubbled forth near Colesville, according to tradition, was declared to be one of the three Troost Lake springs.

The magazine of the Missouri Valley Historical Society, relying on the testimony of a pioneer able in the field of history, had published Colesville spring as a feeder of Troost Lake. Violette's History of Missouri had declared that Colesville "must have been in the suburbs of Kansas City."

Colesville in Heart of Kansas City

As a matter of fact, Colesville Spring flows south and feeds Brush Creek, is a mile or so from Troost Lake, and 1707 East Thirty-fifth Street is several miles from the suburban settlement of Kansas City. The truth is, Colesville is the heart of Kansas City.

The archives of the Utah Mormons, both at Salt Lake and at Independence, had indicated Colesville lay twelve miles from Independence, at the edge of a prairie in Kaw Township, and that was all.

The archives of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Independence had been searched without an additional clue to the site.

Without avail, inquiries had been written to leading Latter Day Saint historians from Eastern Canada to California. Letters had brought regrets that no additional light could be shed.

It was known that Joshua Lewis, with the possible exception of Andrew Barber, was the leading lay member of the Colesville church and that a conference had been at his home August 4, 1832. Why would the Independence court-house records not show the site of the Joshua Lewis home, and thus the site of Colesville? The records showed many tracts of land acquired from the Government by Bishop Edward Partridge of Colesville, but no land in the name of Joshua Lewis.

At this juncture, Hubert Howe Bancroft's History of Utah, loaned from T. O. Cramer's stock, shed a flood of light.

Practiced Communism

According to this eminent historian, Colesville had been a famous example of the practice of communism; all the land had been entered in the name of Bishop Partridge and had been held in common. The searchers then knew why Independence courthouse records were dumb as to the whereabouts of the Lewis farm.

Jesse Proctor Cram, vice president of the Kansas City Title and Trust Company, was appealed to. Mr. Crump, explorer of land titles as his great-great-grandfather, Daniel Boone, had been an explorer of wild lands, but with this difference, that the ancestor was the most careless man in the United States about titles, and the descendant is the most careful man in the United States about titles, could find no evidence that Lewis had entered land. He knew, however, that after the Mormon War the State of Missouri had sold various tracts of Latter Day Saint land for non-payment of taxes, and it occurred to him that possibly some of the land might have been purchased by an occupant prior to the expulsion of the Latter Day Saints from Jackson County, had been sold thus.

Studying the boundaries of the Lewis farm and seeing that it had a triangular approach to a spring that figures as a landmark in many a Kansas City deed, Mr. Crump took up a projector and drew a map of the Lewis farm, indicating the spring would be found in the 3500 block, Highland Avenue.

Mr. Britton discovered one side of the foundation of the spring house built by F. H. Gimler, father of F. F. Gimler, when he acquired the Lewis farm July 8, 1880. The site of the "foundation in Zion," the old church and school, he found in the block adjoining on the east.

The spring is directly in the rear of Mrs. Inez C. Gibson's residence, 3526 Highland Avenue.

The line between the Gibson lot and the Wayne Avenue lot, on the west, runs through the spring, no water of which is to be seen, for the spring runs underground by man's device to Brush Creek.

The site of the "foundation in Zion" is owned, according to Mr. Britton, by Mrs. Marie Gimler, mother of F. F. Gimler.

Many Once Used Spring

According to A. Q. Cox, barber, 1603 East Thirty-fifth Street, in the early days of Kansas City many persons came for several blocks to get water from the spring, among the number, William Wilkins, mail clerk, Fifty-eighth street and Woodland Avenue.

Water from the spring occasionally seeps into basements in the vicinity, according to Mrs. Ruth Blakely, 3523 Wayne Avenue.

After Colesville was abandoned by the Latter Day Saints, its site brought forth rich pasturage. A dairy was established near the spring. And at a later date corn was grown around the old log school building, which was burned June 26, 1913.

The old building, according to F. F. Gimler, born with a fondness for history and liking history dates better than the Arab likes palm tree dates, showed it had at some time been riddled with bullets.

Fred B. Wright, public librarian, who is constantly appealed to by puzzled citizens, was interrogated about the bullet holes.

A Utah Mormon book, as big as the old-time family Bible, was brought forth, and it revealed how the schoolhouse came by its bullet holes.

It appears the old schoolmaster at Colesville was a family man—somewhat. The big book shows in the ripe days of his family history he had twelve wives and forty-six children, and Rollin J. Britton says he is acquainted with one of the forty-six children.

Now in those days, when the Latter Day Saints were numbering 1,200 in Jackson County and sixty at Colesville and spreading like a prairie fire, the Jackson County Gilead enemies of the Saints wrote their census number as 5,400 but were not reporting nearly so fast as the Saints.

A report became circulated among the Southern Baptists dwelling near where Westport now is that one Parley Parker Pratt, school-teacher, was advocating that every Saint had the right to turn his home into an orange blossom bower and take in a new beauty every few months, if bacon and string beans did not play out, and that he was also advocating that cracking a blacksnake whip over cringing Negro was a heinous sin.

Joined Against Parley

And it came to pass that the Westport Methodists agreed with the Baptists. Then the Methodists and the Baptists joined friendly hands across the baptizing hole in Brush Creek and swore by Him who rules forever that Parley and all his kind should be banished from Colesville.

Accordingly, October 30, 1833, according to Mr. Wright's history, a band of Southern men came to Colesville and beat a number of the Saints brutally and destroyed ten dwellings around the big spring, thinking they would thus cow the spirits of those New York Saints from Colesville, Broome County.

But the Latter Day Saints refused to leave the big spring. Instead, they proceeded to mold a quantity of bullets.

November 4 the army of Gentiles came back, and this time the Saints put into practice the doctrine of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. A pitched battle ensued on the south side of the schoolhouse, and that was when the building became peck-marked with bullet holes.

Two of the Gentiles were slain and Andrew Barber of the Saint forces. The Civil War battle that claims the credit of being the first is Big Bethel, Virginia.

Somebody is all the time trying to snatch away Missouri's laurels of history. Twenty-eight years before Big Bethel's The men-folk may not think this is a suitable pa-sorial; it may be silk, satin, crepe, or any other material, but this is a monument higher than the lofty trees would have towered above his grave. As it is, there is uncertainty about the exact location of his unmarked grave.

He probably was buried in the Colesville cemetery by Old Lane, as what is now the Paseo was then called. His grave is somewhere near Thirty-sixth Street and the Paseo.

Saints Abandon Colesville

This time the Saints determined to abandon Colesville. Down the Paseo of that day, the Old Lane, that ran from the Missouri River and intersected the Santa Fe Trail at Thirty-sixth Street, virtually a Missouri River branch of the Santa Fe Trail, came the Saints, minus Andrew Barber, a forlorn band, and found refuge in Clay County, befriended by Colonel Alexander W. Doniphan, who when the great conflict came, threw in his lot with the Union and lost thousands of friends.

Not far from the time the Latter Day Saints got somewhat settled in Clay County—to be exact, the night of November 1, 1833—occurred what has gone down into history in many a State 'the falling of the stars.'

When the fiery meteors commenced streaking from the heavens, hymns of joy began to be chanted by the Saints, for they looked upon the stars as omens that the heavenly powers were with them.

At the same time, in Jackson County, consternation smote the Gentiles, who looked upon the phenomenon as an evidence of the anger of God against them on account of their destruction of the village by the big spring.

Colesville lay forgotten for three generations. But the old spring had a glorious history in its generation. Past it came an Indian trail one hundred fifty years ago, running from Arrow Rock, by way of Independence, away out into Kansas, on the other side of the Shawnee Mission.

The Santa Fe Trail followed the Indian trail closely. Near Colesville it was a black trench through the prairie. Past the big spring came Becknell, father of the trail, on his way to Santa Fe. Past the spring came Charles Joseph Latrobe, British author, gathering material for his two volumes, Rambles in North America.

Latrobe passed the quaint old schoolhouse in September before Colesville was destroyed by those who twenty-eight years later were to cast in their lot with the Stars and the Bars. Wonder if he noted the tiny dormer windows! Wonder if he saw the door and the window on the north, after glancing at the window on the east! Wonder if he noticed the door and the window on the south? Did he notice the west side had no door, no window, in the ground story, so as to exclude the afternoon heat? Those old Latter Day Saints were architects even when they built with logs.

Little did Latrobe think that within three months that school building would be riddled with balls and that a residence near Thirty-fifth Street and Agnes Avenue, if he saw it, would be pierced with bullets till it looked like a pepper-box.

Did Latrobe get off his horse and drink where the buffaloes for generations had quenched their thirst and where Indian mothers had scooped up water in the hollows of their hands for their wailing papooses?

Now the marker will recall Colesville from the dead, and it will have its rightful place in history, making a new chapter in the thrilling scroll.

Sowing—Sewing

BY OLIVE HEYWOOD

The men-folk may not think this is a suitable paper for them, but I think it is just as applicable to them as to women-folk.

Before we start sewing we must have the material; it may be silk, satin, crepe, or any other material, but they all have to be made first. First of all, there is seed to be sown, and the seed of the gospel has to be sown in every heart before we can grow in grace in the church of God. When the seed has been planted, God cares for it and nourishes it. Of course weeds come; there are enemies trying to choke the little plants and to stop their growth, but the weeds are plucked away, and the plants are allowed to grow. Again, heavy rains come and sweep over the little plants and try to drown them, and some are swept away, but those which have their roots firmly planted in the earth (or the gospel) cannot be swept away.

When the plant grows bigger, it bears fruit which is accepted by the gardener, or God, and put to much good use—is made into cloth. Now that the cloth is made, one would think everything would be plain sailing, but sometimes even after this everything is not just right; there are the cutting, sewing, and fashioning into shape before a complete article can be made.

This, I think, applies to us; we all get the seed planted, but not all of us bear fruit. Some of us get swept away almost before we have started to grow; on others the seed falls on hard ground and is not nurtured; others receive the seed, grow up, and bear fruit, but when it comes to the cutting get spoiled and are discarded or made into something smaller and that was not at first intended.

Now that we have the cloth all ready, only waiting to be made up into the garments it is suited for, sometimes we shirk the work and think it is too hard; or else do it, but not the way it should be done, and therefore it turns out wrong. But, thank goodness, there are those who persevere until they have accomplished what they have set out to do. These are the people who get on in the church and keep its banner flying.

Sometimes when we are sewing the articles, we do not keep the hem straight; it gets crooked, and we have to undo what we have done and start again where we left off. In our lives we start straight, but something comes along, and we stray away from the straight path, then find our mistake in time and have to try to retrace our steps and start again. We are not always willing to do this, but if we want to succeed, pride must not rule.

I have been thinking lately how much life is like "washing day." Probably you will trace a resemblance when I have finished. The clothes are made clean and pure, but they get soiled; some only very slightly, but others get frightfully dirty, and they all have to be washed. Some have to be scrubbed to get them to the required cleanliness; others get so very dirty that they cannot be washed any more, and they are spoiled. We also can get too dirty in sin to be washed, and then we are spoiled. When the clothes are washed, they are pegged upon the line to dry. The line has two supporters, one at each end. When we have had our sins forgiven, we have to take up our crosses again and salary forth into the world to do our bit; but we have two supports, God and the church, and whilst we are holding on to the line we are all right.

Perhaps you have never thought of it in this way, but next time the mothers are doing their washing, or any of us have time at home and can watch or help, we can think of the poor folks being launched on life's journey.

Then, to go back to the clothes, there are different articles on the line. We have handkerchiefs, serviettes, sheets, and blankets. The handkerchiefs are only little. They are just like the people who are plodding along but are still in the same old rut they were in when they started. It is the same as folks who have been in the church for twenty or thirty years, or even more. I have often heard them boast about it, but if they haven't got any farther than the first principles of the gospel and have done no more work than when they came into the church, there is surely nothing to boast about; and I am sure if they knew how it dampens beginners to hear them, when they think of what a few years' experience they have had, I am sure the older folks would save their words. Of course there are different kinds of handkerchiefs, such as the large, useful handkerchiefs that men and some women use, and there are those which are there just for adornment: a tiny bit of cambric and lace. Well, they have their replica in the people who just come to the meetings for the sake of showing off their new hats or costumes, but when asked to do some work look insulted and don't come again.

Next there are serviettes. These remind me of the young people, some of whom are a bit further advanced and do a bit more work than the older established folks; but even these may be lazy. Among these we would place tablecloths, those very useful articles. Not always handsome or beautiful, but oftener plain, good, and useful, which is far better. They remind me of folk who are very unobtrusive and reserved, but who do their work faithfully, or as the Bible puts it, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." But even these can get worn out and thin, and only then do we find out the good they have done.

The blankets remind me of the warm-hearted, reliable people; those who would do anything for their fellows, even at inconvenience to themselves. They are the ones we instinctively trust. They have grown big, not in self-importance, but by the good works they have done. Sometimes the weight of their responsibilities weighs them down, but there is always some one to help them up again and comfort them when they are sad.

All the illustrations are not of men, because I am beginning to see what there is for me to do. If it is only cheering those who are sad, sympathizing with those who need my sympathy, and trying to fulfill the law of Christ set down in the Bible, namely: "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." I shall be probably doing a little; it may not be directly working for the church, but if I help his people to keep up their spirits I am surely helping indirectly.

The Kiwanis Club and War Profits

The following is transmitted by Brother S. F. Carpenter, Los Angeles, California, a friend of the author, Mr. Alex Dentman. It is worth careful contemplation.

Free from the flimsy fallacies of the unhinging pacifist, the following resolution, striking directly at one of the basic influences which is an ever-present menace to world peace, was introduced by Alex Dentman, at the luncheon of the Kiwanis Club, September 28, and was unanimously passed by the club at the regular noon luncheon last Monday:

Whereas: According to section 1, article 11 of the Kiwanis Club By-Laws, the objects of the Kiwanis Club are:

"Section 1. The objects of this club shall be: To give primacy to the human and spiritual, rather than to the material values of life.

"To encourage the daily living of the golden rule in all human relationships.

"To promote the adoption and the application of higher social, business, and professional standards.

"To develop, by precept and example, a more intelligent, aggressive, and serviceable citizenship.

"To provide, through this club, a practical means to form enduring friendships, to render altruistic services, and to build a better community.

"To cooperate in creating and maintaining that sound public opinion and high idealism which make possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism, and good will."

And Whereas: War with all its attending results is diametrically opposed to all of these objects;

And Whereas: It is common knowledge that during all wars (the last one included) tremendous profits have resulted to certain individuals and corporations;

And Whereas: These war profits were in no wise disturbed by war taxation and have remained intact, thereby placing a premium upon war profiteering and consequently upon the activities of unscrupulous persons who may be in position of trust to jeopardize the peace of the Nation or the world;

Therefore: Be it resolved that this club is in favor of a law enacted forthwith whereby all profits exceeding $3,500 per annum accruing to any person, or six per cent on the actual cash paid-up capital stock of any corporation, no matter from what source they may be derived, shall be conscripted by the Government as a direct war tax, said tax to begin at the declaration of war and continue until the end of said war, thereby making each war self-supporting and causing the man who does not shoulder arms to bear his proportion of the burden of war, by compelling him to serve his country for the same financial compensation that his brother, who is serving under arms receives, and thus remove all financial incentive for war.

Be it further resolved, That the secretary of this club send a copy of this resolution to every club in this zone, with a request that it be presented to the club for consideration at the San Diego Convention in November next.

Although according to the printed objects of the club, it is the business of the club to "create and maintain sound public opinion and high idealism," it is a new undertaking for the club to consider a matter so far-reaching as is this resolution.

It is expected that this resolution will come up for consideration at the San Diego Convention on November 13 and 14, and, if passed, this will be proof positive that Kiwanis does stand for "giving primacy to the human and spiritual, rather than to the material values of life."—Eagle Rock Reporter and Sentinel, October 9, 1925.
improvements, instead of detracting from the natural beauty of the place, are enhancing its attractions. A dining hall 32 by 42 and a kitchen 24 by 24 constitute our main buildings, while, near by is a store 20 by 15, for the sale of provisions to those who provide for themselves. A considerable space has been cleared of undergrowth, only the shade trees having been spared. This has let the light in, and now nature is spreading her carpet of green over the ground. A number of coconuts have been planted (sent to us from Tahiti by Apostle Ellis), and we are awaiting their germination. Meanwhile the cabbage tree palms, so unbounded in the vicinity, give quite an island coloring to the scene.

From Tiona we went by car to Tuncurry, via Forster, four miles of sand being negotiated, mostly in top gear. The sandy portion of the road lost its terrors at the first crossing. Bishop Lewis and Brother Corbett spent the following day, Sunday, with the Nabia group under the direction of the district president, while Mrs. Haworth and I remained at Tuncurry. The morning was spent in a Sunday school session followed by a Bible class. In the afternoon I presided with the district president, Elder G. H. Parker, over a priesthood meeting in which the question of church government was freely discussed. I occupied the stand at night.

The following morning, with Elder S. W. Ballard, wife and I left for Nabia—fourteen miles—where we were joined by Brethren Lewis and Corbett, and shortly set out for the Nambucca River. We passed through much beautiful country, crossing a number of rivers, some of them by bridge and three by ferry, assisted to remove a forest giant, blown down by a heavy wind, from across the road, and arrived at Bowraville about 9 p.m. Brethren Corbett and Lewis were entertained for the night at the home of Sister L. R. Ballard, while Mrs. Haworth and I were the guests of Brother and Sister Lambert.

Next morning we journeyed to Argent's Hill where Brethren Corbett and Lewis made their home with Brother and Sister M. J. Ballard, and Mrs. Haworth and I were domiciled with Brother and Sister Robert Argent. The same night we attended a priesthood meeting which, so far as we are concerned, established a record, as it commenced at 7.30 p.m. and terminated at 2.15 the next morning. Church government, finances, and kindred subjects were discussed, and we feel confident that much good resulted from the exchange of thought. The remainder of the week was spent in visiting and in talking the affairs of the bishop's department to the people of the Argent's Hill Branch.

On Sunday, October 4, Brother Corbett met with the Saints of the Bowraville Branch and Broome Hill Branch and I went to the Hill Branch. We attended Sunday school sacrament meeting, and we each preached a sermon dealing with topics incident to the bishop's department.

Monday, October 5, we commenced the return journey, visiting the Saints at Kempsey that afternoon and reaching the home of Brother J. S. Rodger, at Port Macquarie about 8 p.m. It was a very pleasant visit with these good Saints, and next morning continued our journey as far as Laurieton, where for several days we visited among the Saints and where on Wednesday evening Brother Corbett preached a sermon on Zion and financial matters generally. While in this district Sister Haworth and I visited the home of Brother and Sister G. H. Parker and spent a very pleasant time with them. Spent the remainder of the week visiting the Saints at Taree, Wingham, Killawarra, Coopernook, and John's River. Held services on Sunday morning and afternoon at John's River, the bishop and the writer occupying and they journeying thirty-six miles to Killawarra where Brother Corbett preached. After the service the choir joined in a sing, which seemingly was much enjoyed by the local Saints.

Next morning we left for Newcastle, visiting the home of Brother and Sister R. G. Mather at Craven en route. These good Saints seldom see the missionaries and were very glad to receive us. We had intended staying only a few minutes, but they insisted upon our remaining until after lunch, a very enjoyable visit being made in the interim. The remainder of our homeward trip was made in a tornado, and very little petrol was used on that trip, the wind being behind us. We made good time to Newcastle, where we left, Brother Lewis and continued our journey to Sydney the next morning, arriving home without any serious mishap, although in one place we had to cut another tree through and roll the log off the road before we could proceed. Owing to the wind of the day before, many trees had fallen on the road; the majority, however, had been removed.

On October 22, a party consisting of Sisters Haworth, M. E. Robinson, E. F. Watson, Beryl and Flora Delofski, and the writer left for Gunnedah, two hundred fifty miles, at 11 p.m. We had intended starting earlier and reaching the vicinity of Lithgow by 10 p.m., but trouble with the electrical system of the car prevented a start until 11 p.m. We had intended going on to the mountains only, but when we reached there light rain was falling, making it impossible to camp in the open, and we were forced to go on to a point near Lithgow where there was a large convenimists who never knows defeat, whatever the difficulty they may be in, or under what they labor. In the last two or three years I have baptized six people at this point, largely through the efforts of my associates, and I think the work is far enough west to be pushed forward by the Reorganization west of Bathurst in Western New South Wales. We look for the work to be pushed at some time in the great west and for many souls to be gathered into the church garnet out there. Many Americans have smiled at the smallness of our farms, but we look forward to the time when some American evangelist will cross the Blue Mountains far enough west to find sheep and wheat country that will remind him of the open spaces of America's Middle West.

We returned to Sydney the following day, making the journey in twelve hours. It was a long trip to make for a week-end, but we did not mind because we were rendering service where it was needed greatly, and we came away with the assurance that we had cheered the hearts of the little group at Geurie.

Your brother in Christ,

WALTER J. HAWORTH.

A Good Report of Work in Madison

MADISON, WISCONSIN, December 17.—As a new year is about to dawn, our branch has had its election of officers and is getting organized to do greater things in the coming year. H. W. Woodstock was sustained as president of the branch. Sister Woodstock was chosen as branch clerk; Robert Brigham, treasurer and custodian; Thomas Johnson, librarian; and A. B. Colbert, publicity agent. Reports from the priesthood showed they had not been slothful but were filled with enthusiasm. The branch solicitor's report showed that tithing was being opened toward the redemption of Zion.

Sunday school business meeting was held Sunday morning at which time Judson Livingston was sustained as superintendent, and Lee Root as assistant. The officers elected for the Department of Recreation and Expression are: Lee Root, president; Floyd Griswold, vice-president.

We have enjoyed several visits from Brother and Sister Christy in the last month, Sister Christy giving valuable instruction to the women. Brother Christy preached some very spiritual sermons, admonishing the Saints to faithfulness and study. The outstanding thought was, Should some one assail the church and declare it to be false, would you be loyal to it and could you produce a good reason for it and not merely study to coincide with their views, but study to show ourselves approved workmen, rightly dividing the word of truth?

The Department of Women meets every two weeks under the leadership of Sister Brigham. They are studying the Doctrine and Covenants.

The young people are very busy preparing a Christmas program under the supervision of Lee Root, to be held the night of December 23.

Together E. J. Lenox and our new district president made a visit from Thursday until Monday of last week. On Friday night he called the priesthood together for a meeting at the home of Brother Floyd Carpenter. The priesthood is made up of zealous men who are ready and willing to learn how to render better service. Everyone attended this meeting. The theme for the evening was personal character.

Brother Lenox, although he is the only one among us who has been away from home, is always in the thoughts of the Saints while here. On Sunday he was given charge of both Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression business meeting.

Brother Charles Clark, sr., was ordained an elder Sunday morning under the hands of E. J. Lenox, H. W. Woodstock, and Floyd Griswold. We are glad to welcome Brother Clark back into our midst. He has been away since last March, and his services in the branch were greatly missed.

Brother Lenox preached Sunday morning to a large congregation, taking his sermon from Luke 14, Matthew 22, and Enoch's vision as portrayed in Doctrine and Covenants. Some of the thoughts brought out in the sermon were: The Lord's program is salvation for the whole world. The gospel is not limited to any class or nation but includes all people who will come. The purpose of God is to provide for the needy religious world, to put into operation a practical demonstration of the gospel. Brother Lenox also preached in the evening, sustaining his theme from a great sermon. At this time he showed that it was Christ's purpose to destroy death and bring about the restoration of all things. He also showed from Doctrine and Covenants that we are living in perplexing times, when men's hearts fail them for fear of the things that are coming upon the earth. The only organization that is safe is the one organized by God, and all should work together to obtain Zionic conditions.

Our hearts have been made sad by the death of Sister Dutton's son Virgil Johnson, who passed away at a Des Moines, Iowa, hospital. He was taken there from Graceland College with an infection in his head. Both Brother and Sister Dutton were with him when he passed away. He was a very promising young man.

The spiritual condition of this branch is good, and the Saints all work well together with a common aim—Zion.

Good Conference in Kansas

ATCHISON, KANSAS.—The Northeastern Kansas district conference, which was held at this place December 12 and 13, was one of the most successful ever held in the district. The business meeting began Saturday morning at ten o'clock and was well attended, visiting Saints arriving in good time for this session.

The business for the day was the reading and receiving of the various officers' reports and approving and providing for the ordination of six young men to the ministry. Delegates to the next General Conference were chosen.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards preached a very inspiring sermon Saturday evening, using the words of Nehemiah, "I am engaged in a great work," as a basis for his remarks.

Sunday morning service at half past eight was a spiritual feast for those who attended. After several prayers had been offered, Brother G. T. Griffiths arose and spoke in his kind, fatherly way for some time; then turning to the district president he said, "Brother Twombly, I feel impressed to lay my hands upon you to bestow a blessing on you." Then followed words of counsel, comfort, and advice, telling him that his work was not finished.

The Sunday school was in charge of district officers. The eleven o'clock hour was occupied by Patriarch Griffiths, who preached an inspirational sermon on Doctrine and Covenants 86. He held his audience spellbound while he told them what God said to do to keep well.

The prayer service at half past two was another spiritual feast. The ordinances provided for were taken care of at this session, the following being ordained: B. F. Deller, elder; Brother Little, elder; O. E. Lashley, priest; Clayton Crooker, priest; Brothers Spinnett and Anderson, both of Topeka, were not present but will be ordained later, Brother Spinnett to the office of teacher, and Brother Anderson to the office of deacon. The meeting closed after several had testified to the truthfulness of the gospel and the strength they had received at this conference.

Sunday, December 13, Charlestown, Harpe, district missionary, preached the closing sermon, after which we adjourned to meet with the Fanning, Kansas, Saints at the next conference.

The music for the conference was furnished by district and local talent. Sisters Lentz, Deller, and Gillespie presided at the piano, and Sister Edna Dittemore led the singing, as District Chorister Vera Twombly was unable to attend because of her school work at Lawrence, Kansas. Special numbers by Sisters Gillespie, Lentz, Gildehaus, Edna and Earl Dittemore, were enjoyed.

Many of the visiting Saints went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lentz to hear their daughter play her harp. Miss Anna plays beautifully, and many favorable comments were forthcoming from the visitors.

This conference stands as a living monument to what unity of purpose will do. May we have many more of them.

W. F. BOLINGER.

Sioux City, Iowa.

At the annual business meeting of the Sunday school, held the last Wednesday evening of November, C. Franklin Rich was elected superintendent. He will select his assistants. Other officers are: Raymond Smith, secretary; Irene Rich, treasurer; Alice Keck, librarian; Blanche Smith, chorister. The Sunday school will furnish the Christmas program but has asked the Religio to help with talent and finances.

The Men's Booster Club had a special program of motion pictures at its last meeting. The oyster supper was enjoyed by twenty, some being new members.

The Riverside Women's Department have given their play, "How the story grew," to five audiences, clearing near little sums in each community. Numbers consisting of readings and vocal and instrumental programs in addition to the tragic comedy.

The Live Wire Sunday School Class (the intermediate girls) gave a program and social December 11 at their teacher's home and boosted their Christmas offering. Their aim is twenty-five dollars, which is nearly reached.

Ninety-two contributors have returned their Graceland College endowment fund pledge cards for a total of twelve hundred dollars. There are over seventy-five cards being held until the summer months, when it will be easier to tell how much can be pledged without financial embarrassment.

Mrs. Ned Calhoun and Mrs. C. Franklin Rich are visiting in Independence at present. R. L. Sheets and son Richard have returned from points in Oklahoma. Sister Spence of Cherokee and the Alfon Amundson family, of Wagner, South Dakota, visited with friends and relatives here the first of the month.

Betty Jean Dickey and Frances Sheets each entertained at respective birthday parties to their little friends on November 21. They received many useful gifts and were wished many happy birthdays.

The following officers were elected as officers of the Religio at its annual meeting December 13: Frederick Vandel, superintendent; Nettie Calhoun, secretary; Bernice Miller, treasurer; Jay E. Keck, superintendent of boys and recreation; Beatrice Miller, chorister.

Orion Branch

OXFORD, MICHIGAN, December 14.—The annual business meeting for the election of officers was held December 13, and the following were chosen for the coming year: John L. Hall, branch president; Julia Hammond, clerk; Emma Schaaf, treasurer; Mona Schaaf, chorister; Olga Davis, librarian; Julia Hammond, publicity agent; Bruce Gonyon, Sunday school superintendent; Frank Davis, superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression; Mae Forbes, superintendent Department of Women.

Brother Hall gave a splendid address at the morning service, telling of the progress made by the branch during the year, of some of the things which had been overcome, also some things to overcome. He also had formulated a fine program for the branch, which if followed out cannot fail to bring us to a higher state both morally, financially, and spiritually.

Flint, Michigan

As this is the last letter of the year and possibly the last letter from the present writer as correspondent, a few facts of history regarding Flint may not come amiss.

The First Flint Branch was organized August 30, 1899, by Apostle E. C. Briggs, with twenty members. At this time O. J. Hawn was ordained an elder and W. H. Collins, now of Oakland, California, a priest. Elder Hawn was elected pastor of the newly organized branch. Through the untiring efforts of these men much good was accomplished. From its organization until the year 1910 regular services were held in the Loyal Guard Hall, then in the Odd Fellows Hall, and in 1909 a tent was purchased and used for meetings in various parts of the city.

In the summer of 1910, while the tent was in use on a vacant lot at the corner of Dort and Baker Streets, a lot was purchased and building operations begun. The basement was completed and used for services during the winter.

In 1911, under the supervision of Elder David Dowker, then pastor, the building was erected, of brick veneer construction, and used for services the same year. The church was incorporated in 1912.

In June, 1915, Elder Ralph A. Harder, now of Independence, was elected pastor and continued in that position until June, 1920. During his pastorate the branch grew both in numbers and in influence; his quiet, kindly disposition being in loving remembrance even to this day.

In the fall of 1916, Elder M. W. Liston came to Flint as city missionary and was with us in that capacity until about October, 1921.

In the spring of 1917 the Second Flint Branch was organized and a church was erected at the corner of Jane and Olive Streets. Elders Orton, McBride, Groombridge, Liston, and Smith have in turn presided over this church, the last named having occupied the last four years.

The Third Flint Branch was organized August 11, 1918, and a small temporary structure was built on Niles Avenue, which was later sold and a larger cement block structure was erected on a lot near by. This building is now in process of having the finishing work done inside. Elders F. Z. Harder, Winters, Pittsley, Duncan, and Anspaugh have in turn presided at this church.

December 23, 1921, the three Flint branches were disorganized, and under the direction of Elder Cyril E. Wight, acting for the First Presidency, the amalgamated Flint Branch was organized. Elder Arthur H. DuRose was chosen to preside and has continued in that office to the present time, having just recently been reelected for the year 1926.

The branch has, as noted above, three churches, each under the supervision of a pastor. We have a joint Department of Women, operating in nine groups, a Young People's Department which is a composite of the Departments of Recreation and Expression of the three churches under the direction of a supervisor. The priesthood work under the direction of the pastors. The branch has a unified finance system, the funds from all sources going into the hands of the branch treasurer.

Our statistician's report for eleven months of this year shows a gain in membership from 720 to 760. There have been 20 baptized, the majority of whom are under twenty years of age. Eight of our number have died during the year, and there have been five marriages.

During the past month the Flint Branch has made good on the college endowment. With a quota of $2,800, pledges to the extent of $3,617.50 were turned in by 165 subscribers.
Missionary Work in Michigan

CASEVILLE, MICHIGAN, December 8.—I have found this to be a wonderful year in church work. The real desire our people seem to have in this part of the Lord's vineyard is to see Zion redeemed and stewardships firmly established. They have shown this by an oversubscription to the endowment fund. I am thankful I have been called to labor among a band of people that wish to be their brothers' keepers in reality. That is, they have expressed their wishes in no uncertain terms, to witness the beginning of stewardships.

The month of October was a very busy one for me, as we were expected to preach stewardship throughout the district. With that also came our young people's campaign and convention, and all this there was an added responsibility of overcoming an attack of influenza that demanded about ten days of my time.

However, I felt at my best when the time came for Brother M. W. Liston and me to start out on the work of the endowment drive, and there followed two weeks of busy work, visiting approximately every branch in the district and closing our campaign at Harbor Beach.

The following Sunday, November 15, I opened up real missionary work again by starting special services at Caseville. These services have continued for four weeks, and I consider much has been done in the way of getting the gospel before the people of this place. I feel we have planted a foundation that others will be able to build upon later.

We have a branch here that is working in harmony with the church in general.

On November 29 we held a group meeting of the four branches of the northern part of our district, which was highly successful. We had with us R. H. Huston, Bishop's Agent William Davis, and Myron Carr of the district presidency; Earl Deim, superintendent of the Sunday schools; and William Day, recreation leader. Despite the fact that the day was very cold, the services were well attended and a splendid spirit prevailed all through the day.

This coming Saturday and Sunday, December 12 and 13, our district ministerial conference will be held at Shabbona Branch. We are looking forward to splendid results from this meeting.

As I am the only missionary laboring in this field this year, I find that my time is all taken up, and as the call comes to me from many branches for labor I am reminded of the words of our Master, "Truly the harvest is great but the laborers are few." Nevertheless, I wish to express my appreciation for the cooperation that has been given me by the local brethren, and wish to send all my best wishes for a prosperous new year.

Bazaar and Resale Successful

FANNING, KANSAS.—The work here is moving along about as usual. On November 20 the Department of Women held their annual bazaar and supper in the basement of the church here, and a neat sum was realized. The articles not sold at the bazaar were again submitted for sale.

Sister Hedrick's class of juniors gave an oyster supper on December 10 to raise money to buy the gold buttons they are entitled to; also for Christmas offering.

Several from here attended the district conference at Atchison December 12 and 13. A peaceful, profitable time was enjoyed. Brothers G. T. Griffiths and F. Henry Edwards were with us from headquarters, and the local and district ministry, which encouraged and strengthened all present.

The ordination of four young men to different offices in the church was very impressive during the conference.

All felt that it was good to be present at the prayer meeting Sunday afternoon, the 18th. Some had driven by automobile for many miles to be there for the Sunday meetings. It was voted to hold the next conference at Fanning at the time designated by the district officers. A rising vote of thanks by the visitors was tendered the Atchison Saints for their hospitality during the conference.

The usual preparations are being made for the Christmas entertainment and Christmas tree. All are expecting a treat of candy and nuts.

Spearfish, South Dakota

December 16.—Since our last news letter to the HERALD this branch has received a great shock which has left it paralyzed. This time our ranks have been invaded by death.

On November 7 our branch president, George W. Newton, was stricken by appendicitis. Suffering greatly, he was rushed to the hospital at Rapid City where he was operated on Sunday evening, the 8th. The operation revealed the fact that he had a ruptured appendix, which did not give very much hope to the anxious loved ones. However, he rallied from the operation fairly well, and for seven days appeared to be getting along as well as could be expected. Suddenly he began to sink, and in a few hours he passed away, November 15.

It is difficult to express the great personal loss we have sustained in the passing of this brother. Not only were he and the writer related as brothers-in-law, but he it was that twenty-six years ago taught me the gospel. It was through his teaching and influence that I became a member of the church, and for all these years he has been a constant companion, brother, and friend. We have worked together in business, and since the founding of the church at Spearfish have labored together for the cause of Christ.

He leaves a widow and two boys, aged nine and thirteen years. The branch has lost its leader and a faithful friend.

Sister Bertha Newton and the boys are contemplating moving to the land of Zion near Independence in a few days, and we commend them to the care of our heavenly Father.

The branch held a business meeting December 13, at which time Brother Cohrt was elected president of this branch.

The taking of Brother George, and the moving away of Sister Bertha and the boys will leave the branch here sadly crippled. For in addition to Brother Newton being our president, deacon, choister, bishop's agent, and all-round man, his faithful wife has been organist, secretary, Sunday school treasurer, Sunday school teacher and a faithful church worker from the inception of the work here in 1915.

In spite of all these discouragements we intend to go forward in faith, believing our heavenly Father will give us strength to carry on his work.

An Aged Sister Enjoys "Herald"

I received the dear HERALD. Please thank the church for kindness to an old 82-year-old lady. But the one HERALD more than paid for the $2. I will send the money after Christmas. My loved ones will send my Christmas in cash to do as I wish, and it is not my principle to use anything to worth anything to it is—is-her Father.

You can print this, dear brother, if it is worth anything to the church.

ABRAHOKKE, MONTANA, December 1.
Denver, Colorado

Sister Emily B. Hamlin has been in a sanitarium for some time and at present writing is in very poor health. Brother Arthur Elder, who has had several operations, is still very weak and not yet able to meet with the Saints. The young daughter of Brother Spillman was seriously injured Sunday afternoon, November 29, by being struck by an automobile. She is improving.

Friday evening, November 20, there was a fathers' and sons' banquet at the church, and it was one of the most enjoyable events in a long time. The sisters served the eats, and they were fine.

Sunday, November 22, Elder R. E. Davis of the Western Colorado District paid us a visit and was the speaker both morning and evening. The morning subject was the four horses of the apocalypse, and he brought out some new ideas that were very interesting. In the evening his subject was stewardships, and of course that subject is always interesting.

Thanksgiving morning at half past nine the Saints met for prayer and thanksgiving service, and a splendid meeting was the result. It was really an old-time prayer meeting.

The Department of Women held their bazaar December 3, 4, 5, the net proceeds of $407.77 to be added to the building fund.

Monday evening, the 7th, was the regular semiannual business meeting of the branch. The same officers were reelected. The question of building an addition to the church was discussed, but no affirmative action taken.

Sunday School Superintendent E. Leslie Mogg made a miniature ocean of wood, on which a toy ship is sailing. This represents the gospel boat and our missionary or Christmas offering. The ocean is covered with numbers, and as the year advances the ship is moved from number to number according to the amount of Christmas offering sent in. Any one can see by glancing at the ocean where the ship has anchored, and can thus tell how much offering has been paid to date. The first Sunday after the bazaar, when Brother Mogg moved the ship, all felt like cheering when it was realized that the ship had come near the end of its journey and we had gone over the top. Two hundred dollars was the goal set for our offering.

Elder J. J. Cornish, by request of the Presidency, has gone to Washington and British Columbia to engage in missionary work for the winter.

Elder A. J. Cornish expects to go out in the district to help in Sunday school work after Christmas. He has been installed in the homes of Brothers Howard Allison and William McMillan. There was great excitement among the Saints when they were told that these brothers had caught K. L. D. S. The sermon they heard was by Apostle U. W. Greene, and benediction was by Elder C. B. Hartford. Now it is a great temptation to neglect Sunday evening services in the church, while the Saints gather at those radio homes to listen in; and there are strange words on their lips, such as "amplification," "static," and "wave lengths." The remedy is to have a radio installed in the church so the congregation for night services be not divided.

At this season of the year at the home of Sister Jarvis, besides the usual preparations for the program and tree, but besides this, wedding bells are to ring joyously and long on December 28, as there is to be a wedding in the church. Sister Florence Bates of this branch, and Mr. Bier from near Saskatoon are the happy couple. Florence's brother, Elder Joseph Bates, is to be the officiating minister. All joys attend them.

San Antonio, Texas

December 12.—A banquet under the auspices of the Department of Women was given on Thanksgiving evening at the "Original Mexican Restaurant." Master and Mrs. T. J. Jett, Jr., were guests of honor for the evening. After an excellent program and refreshments, a Christmas offering from the Women was presented to the honored guests. The evening closed with singing, "Blest be the tie that binds," after which Brother Miller invited the crowd to the Woodman Hall to listen to another program. Our young people furnished several numbers on the program over there.

The first Thursday in December fourteen members of the Department of Women met at the home of Sister Jarvis to sew for one of the sisters who had undergone an operation and was unable to run her sewing machine. Each sister brought something to help out with the dinner, and Sister Jarvis had a nice chicken baked, with lots of dressing. Consequently they had a fine dinner. An enjoyable time was spent, and quite a number of garments were made. The evening of the same day the Religion gave a wiener roast at the Jackson farm, and those attending report a good time.

Elder and Mrs. R. E. Miller are the proud parents of a fine boy that came to their home December 6.

The young people of the Sunday school are preparing for their Christmas program. The juniors are to give a play under the direction of Sister Mary Barber.

Services on the first Sunday were well attended.

The Poor—God's Promises

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, December 18.—As the festive season of Christmas draws nigh the little folks look forward with delight to the coming of Santa Claus, and nothing would seem to dampen their young spirits or be so disappointing to them as to inform them that Santa would not come. Could we older ones picture to ourselves the discouraged look upon the children's faces upon rising Christmas morn to find only empty stockings, their look and attitude would surely draw sympathy from any loving parent or guardian.

But do we know that this very same thing does really happen, and has more than once come under the writer's notice in homes where poverty reigns? My heart has ached to know that I was not in a position to better the distressed conditions. And one would not think to see at this festive season the hustle and bustle to and fro with arms laden with Christmas gifts and presents to friends and loved ones, that poverty does really exist. But it does.

And did it not exist in the time of our blessed Savior, God's greatest gift to mankind? Was he not humbled by having a manger for his cradle? Do we as parents instruct our children as to the real meaning of this wonderful season?
We do not forget to tell them of Santa Claus. Then let us not forget to also tell them of the gift of our Lord and Savior. Nineteen hundred and twenty-five years ago the angelic heralds announced the glad tidings of great joy which brought you and me a fulfillment of God's holy prophesies.

Now we notice by the newspapers that many people are really starving for want of food, while the profiteers roll in luxury and juggle in prices. When the kingdom of God is established upon earth, these conditions will be changed. The Lord will bless his people so they will have plenty. Listen to what he says:

"And I will open the blind eyes; and will lead the crookedpaths into the straight; and the rough places into smooth ways; and the glory of Jacob shall be revealed, and the dominion of his people shall be established."—Isaiah 42:16.

We would like very much to get in touch with some of the elders so in case of a funeral we could be able to get them. Route 9.

Graceland Chats

The Christmaside

"Do your Christmas shopping early" was a phrase used at one of the prayer meetings at Graceland two weeks ago. The deep underlying message was made apparent and its appeal met with fervent response. Accordingly the spirit of Christmas has been more strongly in evidence this year, it is believed, than at any previous time. Surely this is as it should be. Every year ought to find us with an increasing appreciation of the significance of this season, and with a greater facility in expressing that appreciation to each other.

In Lomoni, the spirit of fellowship and good will is not limited, however, to the Christmaside. All the year round there are evidences of it, demonstrating to the seeing eye and the understanding heart that these people are alert to the needs of their fellows. And the goodness of their hearts is such that they share loyally their time, their sympathy, their homes, themselves, with those who, for a brief time, journey with them.

Accordingly, last Sunday all the girls from the dormitories were invited to dinner in the homes of the residents. In twos, threes, or even half dozens the girls were divided in congenial groups among the people. All had a happy time, both hostesses and guests alike; all were drawn nearer to each other, as faculty members and other hosts saw students under different conditions, in a totally new and delightful light; while the student body realized again that their instructors were indeed creatures of flesh and blood, with real, throbbing, sympathizing hearts, and minds devoted to their welfare. The experience rather reminded one of the coming of the Holy Grail to the Knights of the Round Table, when there fell on every man a light in which he looked nobler and fairer than ever before. Yet I wonder if the residents fully estimate all that it meant to the girls and into how many homes that kindness will spread!

In the afternoon all the hostesses and guests met in the Brick Church for a reading of Dickens's "Christmas Carol."

Graceland is the home of many beautiful services, and one of the simplest and yet most impressive was held last Wednesday evening. It took the form of a Christmas vesper service, this being the last Wednesday evening that the students would meet before Christmas.

Just before 7.30 the college chapel was opened and the students took their places. But the familiar chapel did not wear its usual appearance. The room was in darkness, save for the light from three branching candelabra. One of these, wreathed in evergreens and glowing against the dark velvet curtains, stood on the platform, the other two were immi-ately in front of the platform, amid a deep bank of pines among which the snow sparkled and shone. The beautiful dark blue curtains, released from their ties, hung in heavy, graceful folds. The whole scene was exquisite in the beauty and richness of its simplicity.

All felt the sacredness of the occasion, and as one by one the murmurs of appreciation died away, solemn and holy thoughts crept into the minds of the assembled people, until as Miss Rae Lysinger played Chopin's "Prelude" the congregation was deeply reverent.

Softly, in the distance, were heard the opening stanzas of the procession hymn, "While shepherds watched." Gradually, nearer the singers came, then slowly two by two, singing as they came, they walked down the aisle and took their places on the platform. Most of them were boys from Herald Hall, and looking into their earnest faces, listening to their strong, sweet voices and, remembering that we had met with them constantly in the weekly prayer meeting and knew the sincerity of their high ideals, was it any wonder that one caught his breath and that one's heart thrilled with gratitude to God for giving them to us, here on the hill, for just a little while? As an undercurrent to their voices, called forth by their devotion and reverence, ran an old familiar verse:

"Just as I am, young, strong, and free, To be the best that I can be For Truth, and Righteousness and Thee, Lord of my life, I come."

The procession was followed by a violin solo, Handel's Largo, played by Miss Emma Snead. Under the magic of her music, the meanness, pettiness, and selfishness dropped away, and instead each felt eager for the nobler things of life, for the spirit of the Christ-Child held sway in every heart.

Throughout the whole service, permeating the solo of Miss Elsie Milligan, shining through the responses, deepening the meaning of the prayers, and enriching the address of Brother D. T. Williams, was the same spirit of deep and joyful devotion.

Gradually the singing of "Holy Night" died away in the distance as the choir left the chapel. Then, pledging their lives anew to a more worthy service, praying for an increased vigilance, and bearing the spirit of the Christ-Child vibrant in their hearts, quietly the students returned to their rooms.

Defending the Faith of Our Fathers

The past summer and fall I have labored quite extensively around Kennett, Missouri. This is where the bunch from Louisiana have located. They have surely proved their loyalty to the church and have been an available asset to the gospel work. We held one series of meetings in connection with Brother J. F. Cunningham last August at the edge of the bottom in Mr. Gabrel's yard. The interest was splendid. From here we moved over to Senath, Arkansas and commenced in the open air, with the around all seated and lighted up. The people came for miles. Our crowds averaged all the way from 350 to 450 people every night. This Louisiana bunch came most every night with their singers. We continued here nearly three weeks.

Just as we were closing up, the Campbellites or "Church of Christ" challenged us for discussion. We accepted. The debate commenced November 11. The old schoolhouse was filled to overflowing from the start. My first opponent was Mr. Enix of Chicago. He lasted only three nights and was carried out mortally (?) wounded. Mr. Enix was anxious to continue the fight, but his brethren were not satisfied. They said they would no longer support him.

Under the circumstances I had to permit them to bring in another man to represent them. They told me he was a perfect gentleman. This man was A. D. Dies, of Senath, Arkansas, but he is everything but a gentleman. There were three nights yet to be devoted to the Campbell proposition. Mr. Dies thought he was going to stay off the origin of their church altogether, but I dug the little institution out, and we had a good look at it. He even objected to my reading from their own church paper, the Gospel Advocate, which declared that Mr. Dies and his friends had any thing to do with origin. When I took the floor I turned and read the definition of rests, and one statement said which declared that I. A. Campbell, Barton W. Stone, and Walter Scott started this reformation movement, and that they claimed to restore primitive Christianity. Mr. Dies became very aggressive and brought out Webster's dictionary and offered me five dollars to show that restore had anything to do with origin. I then ran over to Dies W. Stone, and Mr. Dies absolutely failed to prove any marks of resemblance between the church he was a member of and the one represented in the New Testament.

Six nights were spent on the Reorganized Church. I might here state that one Mr. Black moderated for Mr Dies and Elder James A. Phillips moderated for me. One Mr. Jackson acted as chairman. The last night of the debate the question was removed because of an absence of interest in favor of Mr Dies. He ruled that Lebanon was no part of Palestine. Although I proved that it was, by reading Joshua 13:1-6, I was not permitted to use this any more, although the Bible was the standard of evidence. So Mr. Jackson was fired and we proceeded without a chairman, and their organized effort was disorganized.

I made the usual arguments in favor of the Reorganization-origin, organization, name, doctrine, and practice. Dies is not a debater, just a mud-slinger and buzzard food extractor. He never did edge in on my affirmative arguments and try to weaken my points. He had a few old histories written by a bunch of "nigger slave drivers" and expected to cram all that down our throats. But the cramming process did not work; it came back on him like a "boomerang." I impeached Rader's school history of the United States and proved that it was biased and unreliable. I proved from Bancroft, Josiah Quincy, and the court decisions that the Saints were a good, law-abiding people and that polygamy never was a part of the doctrine of this church from 1830 to the present time.

Our proposition came last this time. But it happened to work out all right. In Dies' last speech he wanted to read some poetry. It was new matter. He objected. He was going to read it anyway. It looked for a while as though we might have a rough hour, but I finally let him read. If they would let me read a poem, I would let his poetry come in. It was granted. After Dies had concluded, a dozen mildly clapped their hands. I then arose and read my poem, entitled, "The Nonprogressive Campbellite mule." I thought the house never would get through applauding.

Immediately at the close the outsiders and a few of the Saints came up and pinned thirty yards of blue ribbon on my coat and then requested that I climb upon the desk so the people could see. I responded, and the people cheered and applauded for about five minutes. I never heard any cheers for my opponent. Then as the cars drove out of the yard down the road, you could hear them: "Hurrah for Baker." Do not think I was lifted up in vanity and took all this honor to myself. I realize it was through the prayers of the Saints that the victory was given.

It was a hard, nasty old fight, and I consider I was entitled to a little encouragement. Our crowds averaged around four hundred almost every night. This is in the neighborhood where Brother G. H. Bliss has labored the past twenty years or more, and he as always defended the work and has many friends. We feel that much prejudice has been removed and some good accomplished.

Yours for truth,

CAROL, MISSOURI, December 10. A. M. BAKER
Commends Work of Apostle Curtis

Owen Sound, Ontario, December 17.—Activities in our branch have taken on the appearance of "preparation" in order that the new year may find us ready for steady development along all lines.

We were loath to bid adieu to Apostle Curtis on Monday, December 7, after he had conducted a three-week series of services here. It is a number of years since Brother Curtis visited our branch, and he has again made many warm friends during his short stay. While no baptisms were added to his credit, yet several outsiders were made to see the gospel as never before, and we are expecting some will yet obey the call. The Saints were caused to realize their position and were able to view the great work which we are engaged in with a more clear and concise manner. Our prayer is that continued success may crown his efforts wherever he may go.

At our annual business session held December 6, the following officers were elected: Branch president, Elder Benson Belrose; Sunday school superintendent, R. J. Wilcox; superintendent of Religion, William Crawford; superintendent Department of Women, Sister J. Mortimer, Jr.

We were favored with an excellent sermon last Sunday evening by Elder Percy E. Farrow, missionary to Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District. He used for his subject, "Zion, the perfection of beauty." We were glad to be able to renew acquaintance with Brother Farrow. He is visiting friends and relatives in these parts over the Christmas season.

Happenings in Eastern Michigan

I have just returned from a trip to Shabbona, where the ministerial conference for the northern part of the district was held. The attendance was small, because of the bad weather, but the spirit manifested on the part of the men who attended was not to be discounted. Every man returned to his home branch with a greater determination than ever before to serve and do for the church. It was a success in every way. The priesthood are looking forward to the ministerial conference to be held at Port Huron, January 9, 10, for the south end of the district.

From Shabbona we were driven by Elder John Ledworth to Harbor Beach. Elder Ledworth is one of the men of the district who has the interest of the work at heart and is always looking for some place to serve. He is never found wanting when his car is needed for a long trip to call on some isolated family, or to preach. A fine crowd greeted us, made up of both members and nonmembers.

Announcement of the meeting for Monday evening was made, which was to be a business meeting, looking forward to the reorganization of a branch. Some thirty-five years ago a branch was organized six or seven miles south of Harbor Beach and for years was known as the Saint Thomas Branch. No meetings have been held for the last two years, and with several families living at Port Hope, a short distance north, the prospects for a flourishing branch are in sight.

From Shabbona we are very busy for the work of the winter season. The annual bazaar held by the Department of Women was a huge success. When all returns were in, the handsome sum of $266.42 was made. The use of the building, and several other things, were donated by the local business men and firms, which all went to swell the large total. Several things have been sold since, which will add a considerable amount.

The Mortonville Branch held their bazaar and supper earlier in the month and made over eighty dollars, which was put into their building fund. With the coming of spring we hope to find this "crew" hard at work at their building, which will be rushed to completion as soon as the weather will permit.

We are finding the calls for sickness very numerous. Typhoid fever has been raging in a community north of the city, in which several of our families live. Thus far only one family has been affected by it, and they have lost one of their children, a girl eighteen years old. The mother and younger daughter are in the hospital now. Others have been sickly with diseases which are called for medical attention, and most are on the road to recovery. Yet with it all, the Lord has been good and blessed his people through administration.

The outlook for 1926 is a very bright one, as well as a very busy one. The many calls of the district for special meetings will have to be met, and in this we will have to draft some of the local men. Yet with it all we find a great desire on the part of the men to do something worth while. The Eastern Michigan District extends to the church the season's greetings and well wishes for a successful and happy new year.

Matthew W. Liston.

With the Sunday School Superintendent

December 9.—From my diary I excerpt the following items and observations; if these may be of value by way of suggestion or interest, I am pleased to make the contribution.

Sunday, November 15, found me with the good Saints of Council Bluffs, Iowa. At the request of Brother R. A. Epperson, I was the guest of the three Sunday schools of the city for two days. We began the day with the Belmont Mission School, where we talked for a few minutes at the opening of the session. The attendance of some eighty-five, mostly children, is composed largely of the youth of the neighborhood whose families do not belong to the church. The school is ably presided over by Sister Weir Pennell, assisted by a willing corps of teachers, many of whom come from other parts of the city to help carry on the good work. As the classes were taking their places for study, we were driven to the Central Church, where we were privileged to see a splendidly organized school of some two hundred and fifty pupils closing an interesting study hour. Although cramped for room, Superintendent Epperson and his assistants have succeeded in developing a type of loyalty to the class work which seems almost phenomenal. Their records show a very high percentage of attendance, with many officers, teachers, and pupils having a perfect record for the year. We found the heartiest cooperation and good will between department officers and the priesthood of the branch. Especially do Brother George Beatty, president of the branch, and Brothers Frank Fulberg and O. A. Currie, pastors of the two missions, seem to value highly the work being done by the three Sunday schools in the city.

After visiting the departments, we talked to the whole school in the closing exercises. It was a pleasure to respond to the kindly words of welcome accorded a representative of the general department, and to try to bring them a greeting from the other eight hundred schools scattered over the world.

We are impressed with the possibility of a most important work being accomplished in the church in the immediate future if we may really sense keenly the opportunity which is ours to instruct and inspire the oncoming generation. It will require clear vision, earnest consecration, and an intelligent effort on the part of teachers and leaders of to-day if our task be accomplished. We must understand our job, teach in the Spirit of the Master, and set an example before the youth which is wholly worthy of emulation.

At eleven o'clock I spoke at the Riverside Mission on the nature of our Sunday school effort. We were not able to see this mission school in action, but we learn good things of Brother Philip Tice and his assistants in a school made up largely of children gathered in from the neighborhood. This seems a most profitable means of missionary effort. The children are taught the gospel under very favorable surroundings, and they with their parents are brought closely in touch with the church and its work.

At half past two I was privileged to address a gathering of fifty-four officers and teachers from the three schools. We trust we were able to supplement the splendid vision and inspiration already enjoyed in good measure by this band of willing workers. We feel sure the Master's benediction rests upon their earnest effort. I spoke at Central Church in the evening and again on Monday night.

The following three days were happily spent in attendance at the Missouri State Sunday School Convention at Kansas City. We may name only a few of the many attractive features. Doctor Walter Athearn, dean of the School of Religious Education, Boston University, gave two wonderfully instructive and inspirational addresses. It was gratifying to find this eminent student of religious education expounding faith in a personal God, the divinity of Christ, and in immortality. He urged that the solution of many present-day problems of crime and vice must come through the influence of a rational idealism of Christian virtue made effective by a love of God, reverence for things sacred, and loyalty to the standard set up by the Christ. He placed the recognition of our faith in a personal God, the divinity of Christ, and in immortality, first. Social achievement must come through common ideals, common skills, common attributes, and a common faith.

Among other interesting speakers, Doctor John L. Alexander appealed to us in the interests of the youth of to-day. He urged the need of a wholesome, happy, well-balanced life for American youth. He advocated the fourfold life for every child—physical, social, mental, and religious. He declared we keep our boys and girls from being their best by parental dominance. It is parental duty to instruct, to advise, to inspire, in a sense to control, but largely through the influence of our example and their faith in the validity of our advice. We do a child an irreparable harm when we continue to control by outside restraint. If he is to grow in the sense of personal integrity and responsibility, we must allow for the gradual development of self-restraint, born of loyalty to an ideal which we have helped to establish. In attempting the solution of any of the disciplinary problems of youth, the parent or teacher must seriously ask himself, "If I were the boy, how would I like the matter to be handled?"

The convention was attended by a few of our church people. We regret that many more could not have improved the opportunity to gain suggestion, information, and some additional inspiration for our own tasks. On Wednesday evening we visited the Stone Church at the Central Church in prayer service. They have a happy custom of serving a church supper on this evening at six o'clock, a most enjoyable social gathering, incidentally netting money for payment on the new church property. The prayer meeting following was spiritual, earnest, heartening. The room was filled, and the good Spirit of the Master bore witness of its presence.

The weekend was spent with the Sunday school workers of Zion, beginning with a happy reception on Friday evening with addresses, music by the Walnut Park Orchestra, and refreshments served by the Stone Church group. Saturday was occupied in prayer service, conferences, demonstrations, special music, and address. Sunday we were able to look in on the Second Church school, who have a unique provision for the junior department in a hall adjoining the church, with booths on either side of the central assembly space. The booths give a sense of seclusion splendidly adapted for intensive class work. We were also driven to the Campus, where were assembled some one hundred and fifty juniors from the Stone Church school. Here the well-equipped classrooms of the Institute serve well the needs of larger groups. Their assembly in the chapel on the third floor is certainly an inspiring experience where they have the privilege to conduct a regular junior church at the eleven o'clock hour.

On Sunday afternoon was held a very interesting general session of music and demonstration, followed by sectional conferences, some of which held up to the time of the Religion meeting. Sunday is a busy day at the Stone Church, but one is impressed with the dignity and order of the arrangements, the harmony and spirit of cooperation that is manifested. We are convinced that the largest unit of our church in the central gathering place is setting a beautiful example in many ways for other congregations. However, each branch has its peculiar problems, and each one is doubtless doing some things perhaps better than they are done elsewhere. The sermons of the day by Brother Elbert Smith and Brother Cyril Wight have been commended by others. It is needless to say they made a fitting contribution to the work of the convention.

Fairview, Montana

December 15.—The Fairview Branch continues persistent if not always noticeably efficient. The enrollment is small, but attendance is proportionately good. The Sunday school seems thriving and growing and is at present preparing a Christmas program.

The pastor has taken over the branch records for the purpose of hunting scattered, lost, and indifferent Saints, and has been busy tracing some, transferring some, and visiting others, making their first pastoral visit here two years ago.

Sister Margaret Thurston underwent an operation recently for appendicitis, and is now recovering after a sickness lasting seven months.

The pastor has taken over the branch records for the purpose of hunting scattered, lost, and indifferent Saints, and has been busy tracing some, transferring some, and visiting others, making their first pastoral visit in years. Several have been induced to subscribe for the Herald, which will be a definite influence towards building their spirituality, interest, and knowledge of the gospel. We would that every member of the church received and read the Herald, for its interesting sermons, editorials, and news letters.

On December 8 Sister Sarah A. Matthews passed on to her reward, having passed the age of seventy-three. She came to California when a baby of four years, and has lived in Santa Ana for forty years. She joined the church at the age of thirteen, and for sixty years has been faithful to her covenant with the Master. On Friday, the 11th, her funeral was held and attended by many friends and relatives, including Brother George Wixon and family from San Bernardino.

Santa Ana, California

Brother P. R. Burton recently completed a three-and-one-half week series of meetings in Santa Ana, preaching twenty-three sermons. The average attendance, after the first four nights, was fifty-seven. During the meetings nine were baptized, six of them from one fine family of Indian and Spanish descent, making thirteen baptized in the Santa Ana Branch this year. Other results of his sermons were an increase in tithing and collections, and renewed interest in the gospel and the church; the attendance at the sacramental service following Brother Burton's departure for San Bernardino was the largest, but one, since we came here two years ago.

Independence

Handel’s “Messiah” to Be Broadcast Next Sunday

The oratorio, “The Messiah,” will be given for the eighth time by singers of Independence next Sunday evening in the Stone Church. The Messiah Choir consists of about one hundred and fifty singers coming from all the various branches in Independence and a few from Kansas City Stake. Brother Paul N. Craig is the conductor; Brothers Robert and George Miller are the organist and pianist. The soloists this year will be: Mrs. I. A. Smith, soprano; Mrs. Frances White Norris, contralto; Mr. George Anway, tenor; and Mr. Albert Brackenbury, bass. By special arrangement with Station WOS at Jefferson City, with whom KDS divides time, the program will be broadcast, beginning at eight o’clock Sunday evening, December 27.

Stone Church

The group prayer meetings Wednesday evening were somewhat disorganized because of the advent of Santa Claus in Independence. He came from Kansas City. Santa had a very unusual experience. He and his team of six reindeer made the ten-mile journey on a flat-bottom street car which was gayly decorated and illuminated by many colored electric lights. A brass band heralded Santa’s advent. The children had their faith in Santa again restored. They saw him, and there were the real live reindeer before them.

There are always quite a number who enjoy going to the eight o’clock prayer service on Sunday morning. Once a month the young people and the older adults combine their meetings. At the service Sunday morning it was easy to discern a fine spirit of cooperation and consecration. The need of this age in government, in business, and in religion is teamwork.

The Sabbath school attendance was ten short of 1,100.

The morning preaching service was preceded by the rendition of the anthem, “O holy night,” by the choir, Miss Lilly Belle Allen singing the solo part. President Elbert A. Smith concluded his series of sermons on “The things we verily believe to be true,” by speaking on the subject of “Christ, the Savior of the world and the head of the church.” The subject was very appropriate for the Christmas spirit and was a splendid finale for the series. He said:

Christ saves the sinners, Christ leads the church. He uses human instruments to accomplish his work. Twenty-five years ago while delivering tracts from house to house the speaker said a woman asked him how he could reject Jesus Christ, and the church. The speaker then put in the church, Christ is the head of the church. He has men on the earth to represent him. Angels and archangels also do his work. We see all around us evidence of the fall of man. It was an actual event. God could have sent printed matter to the earth. He could have sent messengers from on high, but man required the personal touch of divinity, so Christ came, representing God, law, the gospel. The law became flesh and blood. Christ will eventually draw all men unto him.

Sunday evening, preceding the sermon by President F. M. McDowell, a program consisting of a duet by Mrs. S. A. Burgess and Mrs. Harold Burgess; two organ solos by Sister Pauline Becker Ettenhouzer; a reading, “The Christmas spirit,” by Mrs. I. A. Smith, accompanied by Miss Lillian Green with the violin and Mrs. Ettenhouzer at the organ; and vocal solos by Mrs. I. A. Smith and George Anway accompanied by the organ, violin, and piano, were given. President McDowell finished his series of Sunday evening sermons with the subject, “Christ, his message.”

Thursday evening the Sunday school will give its annual Christmas entertainment.

Brother Hopkins will be the speaker at Englewood next Sunday evening.

Second Church

The Christmas carnival developed by the young people of the Religio and enjoyed by all Religions and a number of visitors Friday night, December 26. In the basement of the church, took in more than forty dollars. The program of music which followed the carnival was given in the auditorium of the church and was deserving of the praise it received. Selections of beauty and refinement were rendered by young men and women, boys and girls, some of whom were visitors from other parts of Independence.

Sunday was a successful day at the church, from the early meeting of the young people forward. During the Sunday school session the primary department used the time for an entertaining program and the distribution of gifts and a treat for each.

The morning sermon was delivered by Elder W. D. Tordoff and met with a ready response of approval. Sunday evening Elder J. E. Vanderwood was the speaker, who is no stranger to attendants at Second Church, and is always welcomed.

The regular Christmas program has been preparing for several weeks, and will be rendered under the direction of Sister Alice McBride and assistants on Christmas Eve. Much work has been put on this entertainment.

Walnut Park

At the business meeting Wednesday evening these officers were sustained: Roy Barnhardt, Sunday school superintendent; Mrs. F. R. Schafer, superintendent of Department of Women; Orlando Nace, head of Department of Music. At Marion Schafer’s request, he was released as Religio superintendent and Kenneth Morford was elected. Two were, by vote, referred to the stake conference for ordination: W. T. Gard to the office of elder, and Glaud A. Smith to the office of high priest.

Sunday sermons were by R. J. Scott at eleven and President E. A. Smith in the evening. Both speakers conveyed the spirit of Christmas to their audiences, and with other efforts that have been made during the past weeks at Sunday school, Religio, and junior meetings, in the way of readings, stories, and talks, it is hoped the minds of Walnut Park Saints are prepared to really absorb the lesson of the Christmas program to be given at the church on the evening of the 24th at half past seven: “White gifts for the King.”

Liberty Street

The business meeting for the election of officers was held the evening of December 15. President Elbert A. Smith and Elders C. Ed. Miller and R. V. Hopkins were present. Brother Elbert had charge of the meeting at first, and Elder Leonard White was chosen as pastor; L. W. Ballinger, custodian; Mrs. Fred Koehler, chorister. Brother Miller had charge of the election of departmental officers. John Zion was chosen superintendent of the Sunday school, to be assisted by George Gould; Sister Carrie Ballinger, head of the Department of Women; Roy Settles, Religio president, with Everett Bowen as vice president.

Sister Ballinger gave a very fine report of the work of the Department of Women during the year. The following sums of money have been paid into the general treasury of the church: $1.96.81 from the separate groups, and the following from the district as a whole: $69.52 from bake sales, etc.; $55 to the endowment fund; $75.30 to the local expense budget. The Temple Builders have taken in $178, of which $105.57 was applied to local expense, paid into the general treasury. The rest has been used for miscellaneous purposes. The Orioles for the year have raised $68.20, and of this amount two thirds was turned into the general treasury. An excellent report was also given concerning the work of the cradle roll supervisor, Mrs. Virginia Cadwell.

Sunday morning the wee ones' Christmas program was given during the Sunday school hour, directed by Sister Victoria Blackburn, assisted by Sister Rhoda Bowen; also the junior choir under the direction of Sister Mabel Sellars contributed to the program. The program was very fine and served commendably.

At eleven o'clock Patriarch F. A. Smith preached on "The Christ," using for his lesson Luke 1:1-11. He explained the origin of giving and used the event of the three wise men bringing gifts to Jesus as the first example. He said the greatest of all gifts is charity. His sermon was on the signs of the second coming of Christ. Both sermons were exceptionally good.

East Independence
December 13 Brother J. M. Baker was the speaker both morning and evening. His subject was the home and our work there.

December 20 Brother U. W. Greene spoke both morning and evening. In his pleasing manner he described scenes in the Holy Land and in the evening gave an illustrated lecture. This was very much enjoyed, especially by the children. The Christmas spirit is in the air, so the services of the church were very fitting.

Group Forty-One
The Bethel Star Sunday School held its Christmas program Sunday evening, December 20. Our building was filled, seventy being present. A very enjoyable time was had by all.

A treat of candy and nuts was given the school. This is a new Sunday school in Zion, and we invite any members of the other schools to visit us. We also have preaching at eleven o'clock. Good speakers are provided.

Zion's Glory Has Begun to Shine
BY W. H. D.

The church of God was suffering;
Storm clouds were hovering low.
The hearts of the Saints were bleeding;
They feared an impending woe.

Zion groaned in dire distress;
Her rails were everywhere rife.
Torn and bleeding, her beauty marred
By turmoil, discord, and strife.

The church of God destroyed—no, no,
Its severance could not come;
The Hand which led it in the past
Is leading it on and on.

The church of God on earth to-day
Triumphantly stood the storm;
And loyal Saints unite to pray
That wanderers may come home.

Speak gently, then, to erring ones,
Who are blinded by the beam—
When their sight again is restored
Zion's rays to them will gleam.

The first three quorums stand to-day
Most complete in harmony;
 Held in confidence by all Saints,
Which Zion is pleased to see.

Zion, steeplestones—long a theme—
Has been made more than a song,
For Saints in a solid body
Unite to push it along.
Powell.—Mary Frances Osborn Powell was born July 24, 1871. Baptized about thirty-five years ago and remained true to the gospel. Married William Henry Powell October 17, 1886. Died December 1, 1925, at Glenwood, Iowa, leaving her husband; six children, all grown to maturity; eight grandchildren, an aged mother, one brother, and one sister. Her father and one brother and three sisters preceded her. Funeral services at Glenwood December 3, with sermon by B. S. Lambkh, assisted by H. N. Pierce. Interment in Galva Cemetery.

Lawson.—Louis Christenbro Lawson was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, June 18, 1835. Married Isador Alkön January 8, 1855, at Rock Creek, Illinois. Baptized at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1860, and he remained faithful to the end. Died at his home in Clarinda, Iowa, November 5, 1925. Leaves his wife, nine children, twenty-seven grandchildrend, eighteen great-grandchildren, one brother, and one sister in Denmark. Two children preceded him. Funeral services at Clarinda November 8, in charge of R. E. Pratt, of Shenandoah, Iowa, with singing by young people from the United Brethren Church of Clarinda. Interment in Charleston, Iowa, Cemetery, in which city most of his married life was spent.

Davison.—Arleen Rachel Davison, twin sister to Arlyn Clay Davison and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Davison, of Champion, Nebraska, was born April 16, 1925. Leaves her parents and her brother. Funeral service at the Grieve Schoolhouse, with sermon by Ward A. Hougan, of Vanango, Nebraska. Interment at Lakeview Cemetery, Champion, Nebraska.

King.—Julia Carpenter was born May 10, 1843, at Leon, Catsauga County, New York. Married Darius King October 4, 1860, to whom four children were born, three, with her aged husband, having preceded her. Moved with her family to Palo Alto County in 1911, where she has since resided, living the last twenty-four years at Mallard, Iowa. Baptized August 16, 1895. Died December 4, 1925, leaving two children, seven grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services in charge of W. T. Fish, with sermon by Robert Fish.

Sander.—Peter August Sander was born in Sweden about sixty-seven years ago. Died as the result of an accident November 14. Interment in Valhalla Cemetery November 17. He was a man remarkable for his quiet and unobtrusive life, in which he exhibited fidelity to his task, humble as it was. He left his meager belongings to some friends. The last twenty-four years at Mallard, Iowa. Baptized August 16, 1895. Died December 4, 1925, leaving two children, seven grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Funeral services in charge of W. T. Fish, with sermon by Robert Fish.

Cochran.—Hugh M. Cochran passed away at his home in Kansas City, Missouri, December 1, 1925, at the age of 71 years and 13 months. In 1899 he married Lizzie F. Demaree, to whom four children were born, three of whom, and his companion preceded him. One son, Clyde Cochran, and two brothers, remain. Married Edith M. Fifer June 9, 1907, who survives him. The body was taken to Saint Joseph for the funeral and burial. Sermon by J. M. Terry.

Hampson.—James Montagne Hampson was born in Manchester, England, but was brought to this country when an infant. He lived for some time in Kentucky, but afterwards moved to Saint Louis where he lived the rest of his life. Baptized fourteen years ago and was ordained an elder shortly afterwards, serving as assistant to several of the pastors in Saint Louis. He remained in this capacity when death claimed him the morning of December 1. He leaves two daughters, two sisters, and a brother. He was a man of unusual ability whose ministry his church has been a great blessing to all. A large funeral was held in the church. Interment in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

III. YOUR HANDS.—Part 1

It might seem at first thought that we have come to the least interesting of our themes. There is a certain fascination about the use of the tongue in human speech. We see a group of men across the street talking earnestly about something, and we are almost irresistibly drawn to cross over and learn what they are talking about. Books enable us to listen to the conversations of years gone by. Our shelves are crowded with books that bring to us the conversation of the ages. And in them we find a great deal that is exceedingly interesting.

Socrates made human speech seem profound; John the Beloved made it a benediction; Paul and Savonarola made it seem divine; Danton made it a flaming torch with which he led the mob from one excess to another. Mark Twain set human speech to laughter. Jesus made words live: “My words they are life, and they are light.” And Lucifer with speech made one third of the angels rebellious against God and dissatisfied with heaven.

With the heart there is even more romance and glamor than there is about the use of the tongue—in fact, the human history seems to be largely an affair of the heart. Our libraries are filled with books, mostly fiction, and through almost every one of them the compelling theme which never tires humanity is the theme of love.

So when we come to the hands, it might seem that we have passed from that which is very interesting, indeed, to that which is a dry subject. Just your hands, my brother, with which you stoke the furnace, dig in the dirt of the garden, or repair your exceedingly dirty and greasy automobile. Just your hands, my sister, with which you scrub the floor; with which you beat up “angels’ food”; with which you spank the baby; the hand that rules the cradle and sometimes rocks the world. And yet is it such a dry theme after all?

The little hands of the newest baby wave about aimlessly in the air. There is only one thing that they can lay hold of, and that is love; but they grasp that firmly, and they speak to us about the mysterious land of origin from which they came. The withered hands of the aged, how they speak to us about the long years of toil that are behind them! And they have only strength enough left to reach up and pull aside the curtains that hide the future.

And when we come to the hands of the toilers, they speak to us of the labor they have done. Such hands built the pyramids. Such hands built old Jerusalem. Such hands will build the new Jerusalem to which is to come down from above. Such hands cleared away the forests of the eastern side of the American Continent and made room for the New Republic to plant her feet; they broke up and planted the great plains of the Middle West; and they poured water on the arid deserts of the Far West and caused them to blossom like the rose. So, after all, it may be an exceedingly important subject that we have come upon.

Such hands built airplanes that give us the mastery of the air; such hands fashioned radio equipment, and developed all of the wonderful electrical machinery and apparatus that has been evolved since the day when Franklin, with his hands, reached up into the sky and pulled down the lightning and handed it to us for our use.

Such hands not only speak to us of the past, they hold entire promise of the future. Not only are they concerned in the development of this nation; but also the development of Zion in any sort of materialistic way, and the spiritual is usually expressed through the material.

Some people tell us that “stewardships” have nothing to do with anything except spiritual matters. They might as well tell us that the spiritual man has nothing to do with the body. Spirit flows through the body, uses the body, and expresses itself through the body; so stewardships will find expression through material Zion in farms, in factories, stores, and homes, where the affairs of life are carried on as God wants them to be, not one day in the week, but seven days in the week.

As a matter of fact, practically all of the designs of the human mind are executed through human hands. Speech may be the soul vocalized; but the human hands are the soul in service. The farmer... with his hands guides the plow; the sculptor shapes the marble. The designs of the human soul follow out through and are executed by the hands of man. They are properly the symbol and the implement of his dominion and his execution.

That may be true also of God. We have language in Habakkuk which I admit is poetical, and yet significant, as all good poetry is:

God came from Teman, and the Holy One from Mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand: and there was the hiding of his power.

Here we have the figurative picture that the hiding of God’s power is in the palms of his hands; and certainly that symbol is carried out in human experience. I do not wonder that in the gospel the laying on of hands is the symbol of power and authority.

So when we come to consider the use of these hands of ours and of our friends all banded together in a brotherhood called the church of Jesus Christ, we have come to a very interesting and very vital theme.

What use are you going to make of your hands? Are you going to use them constructively or destructively? Some years ago one of our American radicals, in making a speech in one of our eastern cities, said: “Here are our hands; they are strong hands; with them we propose to tear down your Government and take over your property and your wives.” We as Latter Day Saints believe that the Divine entered into the establishment of this Government and this Constitution. How do you purpose to use your hands in relation to government and church and society in general? Will you use them to pull down or build up?

Jesus said, “Seek ye first to build up the kingdom and establish his righteousness.” If we do not like some things we see in the Government, let us by orderly processes, availing ourselves of the ballot and legitimate legislative powers, seek to bring about a reform. We ought to be found like Aaron and Hur of old, upholding the Constitution and the Government, even as they upheld Moses in the time of struggle.

There is a growing menace among us, the increasing disrespect for all authority, contempt for the expression of any authority. Blind Samson, when he could not do anything else, with his hands pulled down the pillars of the temple and destroyed everything, including himself. But it takes vision and courage and labor to build up.

It is one thing to remember, and a better thing to do, To work with the construction gang, and not the wrecking crew.

I believe that the hands of Latter Day Saints should be found building up. “Seek ye first of all to build up.” They should be used constructively.

What will be the relationship of your hands, in a general way, to the work of the world? There is a tremendous amount of work that goes on in the world from day to day, each day, beginning with the rising sun. When from the Atlantic the sun comes up over the waves, the hum of industry that has never entirely died out during the night rises to a crescendo, and this wave of activity passes on over the continent, through the textile mills of the East, the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania, over the great agricultural regions of the Middle West, the cotton fields of the South, the wheat fields of Canada and the North, and so on to the great Pacific slope, until the sun goes over seas to rouse and awaken the yellow men of China and the brown men of Japan and set them to work. All around the earth his message to humanity seems to be: “Work while the day lasts.”

In every country where any decent level of living is maintained, it is maintained with toil. Man does not keep his high estate easily; but it is held up by the hands of labor. We may think sometimes that the nations are sustained by muskets and swords and by the hands of soldiers; but back of the soldier is the worker, and the level of living in any nation and its freedom and its integrity and the expression of its soul come through labor.

How much of this toil, think you, my friends, is consecrated? How much of it is intelligently directed towards a purpose? And in how much of it do the workers find any degree of satisfaction and joy?

Here is a group of workers building a great mansion that would rival the palaces of the ancient kings. What is it for? Why, a dissolute millionaire is building it for his mistress. What satisfaction can there be found in labor that has such issue?

Here is another group of men building a church edifice. You will say that is a fine enterprise. But what interests have the masons and the carpenters in that building? Often, so far as their interest is concerned, they might as well be building a brewery. Of course there are exceptions. When our people built the temple at Nauvoo men gave every tenth day of personal labor in the quarry and on the walls. They built themselves into the temple. And more recently, when we built the splendid new church in Los Angeles the work was done by our own people; and those men had joy in the thought that they were constructing a building that is approved of God. As a rule, it is not so. The interest is simply in the wage that comes at the end of the week. But even at that, the work is more or less constructive, while there are many, many hands turned to base uses—hands of bank robbers, and bandits, and pickpockets.

And there are a great many men who have their

An Explanation to Radio Fans

We folks at K L D S have been so busy with programs, engineering problems, and thousands of cards and letters, that we have let our work get the best of us for the time being. I owe an apology to hundreds of people who have kindly written us who have not yet had answer to their communications; also to HERALD readers who have been promised radio reports on the midnight test program, etc. We are going to do our best this week to get caught up and will try to see that you are not disappointed in the future.

The K L D S staff and artists greatly appreciate the good wishes of the season as expressed in many cards and letters from our listeners. It is hoped that K L D S will become indispensable in your daily home life.

hands in other people's pockets who would be insulted if they were called pickpockets. In the rather wonderful film called "The ten commandments," the young man who started out in life with the declaration that he was going to break every one of the ten commandments put his hands in others' pockets by indirect methods. He secured a contract to build a great church in the city in which he lived. He gave the workmen orders to hold out on the cement and to be generous with the sand. That was not original with him. He was no pioneer. I imagine that in many communities we have paid for a great deal of sand when we thought we were buying cement; our roads, at least, indicate as much.

This man had his hands in the pockets of other people. We do not see it so clearly, always in everyday life. When finally the church building was finished, and crumbled and fell on his own mother who came to admire the work of her son, he became a murderer, also.

But there are other ways of killing people than that. In a single day in New York City the supervis or of weights and measures appropriated and threw into the bay twenty tons of false weights. That practice is not confined to New York City, either. When there are thousands of people already living just a little below the level and a little bit is held out on the loaf of bread, the pint of milk, the ton of coal, that means murder in some cases, particularly when there are children. So sometimes men break one commandment when they think they are only breaking a lesser one.

The Correct History of the Book of Commandments and the Truthfulness and Authority of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants

BY J. F. MINTUN

Part 1.—The Correct History of the Book of Commandments

In every age and in every land where God has done a special work for the salvation of man, he has had inspired men through whom he has given revelations and commandments, they having spoken "as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." (2 Peter 1: 21.)

He has also made provisions that a record be kept of these revelations, or certain portions of them, associated with a history of the work done by the servants of God, for the benefit of mankind in that and coming generations and dispensations. Because of this divine provision we have records of the work done in the days of Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses, and Jesus Christ; also the work done on this continent as well as that done on the Eastern Continent.

From the beginning of the work of God in this "the dispensation of the fullness of times" (Ephesians 1: 10), God has been interested in gathering in one the record of his people and his work on this continent, and the record of the people on the Eastern Continent, that they might be one in the hands of his servants in the representation of the Christ-work, just before the second coming of the Lord from heaven. (See Ezekiel 37: 15-22.)

From 1828 some of the revelations have been preserved which were given relative to the work of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, or the record of the people who inhabited this continent, and the work God did among them. Instructions were given to the ones directly responsible for the coming forth of that record and its preservation, and the work of the restoration of the gospel.

From the beginning of the work of the Restoration, and the giving of revelations and commandments to govern the establishment and continuation of his work and the correct principles of doctrine and organization of that work, he has made provisions for the preservation of these inspired documents, to finally occupy a place in a book. It is godlike to preserve these revelations and commandments and to surround them with as much safety as possible. By this he gives assurance of the importance in which he wished his people to consider them. In this is demonstrated that he is unchangeable in what he has spoken.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
He says in that which occupies a place in the Book of Commandments and in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as the preface: “What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself.”—Doctrine and Covenants, 1835 edition, 1:6. (This is the edition I shall use in what I shall quote from the revelations of God.) To further prove that God had provided to have the revelations and commandments preserved, he says in this preface: “Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises in them shall all be fulfilled.”—Doctrine and Covenants 1:7.

To show more fully that he was deeply interested in the preservation of the “revelations and commandments which I have given unto them, and which I shall hereafter give unto them,” and to have them preserved correctly, he appointed by revelation, November, 1831, six men, and “ordained them to be stewards over the revelations and commandments.” This was about seven months before any of the revelations and commandments were in print, for while provision had been made for printing them in the Evening and Morning Star, yet this paper was not printed till June, 1832, when the first issue appeared. These six men were Joseph Smith, jr., Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, and William W. Phelps, and they were chosen “by way of commandment unto them.” To impress the sacredness and importance of this commandment by which they were to act as stewards, the Lord further says, in this same revelation:

And an account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment; wherefore I have appointed unto them, and this is their business in the church of God, to manage them and the concerns thereof; yea, the benefits thereof.—Doctrine and Covenants 28:1.

Some of the history of the events connected with the issuance of a book is given in the language of Joseph Smith, one of the appointed stewards, as follows:

The book of commandments and revelations was to be dedicated by prayer to the service of Almighty God, by me; and after I had done this, I inquired of the Lord concerning these things and received the following: (Doctrine and Covenants 28:1)

Then he says:

My time was occupied closely in receiving the commandments and sitting in conference, for nearly two weeks; for we held from the first to the twelfth of November, four special conferences. In the last, which was held at Brother Johnson’s in Hiram, after deliberate consideration, in consequence of the book of revelations, now to be printed, being the foundation of the church in these last days and a benefit to the world, showing that the keys of the mysteries of our Savior are again intrusted to man, and the riches of eternity within the compass of those who are willing to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, therefore the conference prized the revelations to be worth to the church the riches of the whole earth, speaking temporally. The great benefits to the world, which result from the Book of Mormon and the revelations, which the Lord has seen fit, in his infinite wisdom to grant unto us for the salvation of all that will believe, were duly appreciated, and, in answer to an inquiry, I received the following: (Doctrine and Covenants 26:1. Given November, 1831, appointing the stewards above referred to.)

You will note that Joseph Smith says that after the book that was to contain the revelations and commandments was dedicated, “in consequence of the book of revelations, now to be printed.” This agrees with the facts as previously stated, that is, that the Evening and Morning Star, in which these revelations were first to appear, did not begin its publication till about seven months after the dedication of the book to be printed. We further note that on account of the Saints and the conference prize these revelations that had been, were then being, and would be given, with the thought in view of the benefits to be received from them and the preservation of them in book form, a prayer was rendered to God relative to their preservation and correct appearance, and this revelation of “the appointment and ordination” of these six men as stewards over the revelations and commandments was given of God. I repeat, for emphasis, that although a book in which these revelations and commandments of the Lord already given, and to be given, was to appear had been dedicated, yet not for about seven months did any of them appear in print in any form. It was on the same date, the same month and year, that the revelation appointing stewards was given that the “preface” to the book to contain the revelations was given; and the preface was given before any one of the revelations then in existence was in print.

Since God had, in answer to prayer, “appointed and ordained” these six men as stewards over the revelations, it would seem unnatural and unreasonable to those who have faith in the wisdom of God, that any other man or set of men would prepare them as correctly as these men of God would; and certainly whatever they have certified in regard to the correctness or incorrectness of those that did appear in the original print of the Evening and Morning Star should be accepted and relied upon.

The history of the razing of the printing press by the mob in Independence, Missouri is:

On the 20th, the mob collected and demanded the discontinuance of the printing in Jackson County, a closing of the store, and a cessation of all mechanical labors. The brethren refused compliance, and the consequence was that the house of W. W. Phelps, which contained the printing establishment, was thrown down, the materials taken possession of by the mob, many papers destroyed, and the family and furniture thrown out of doors.—Times and Seasons 6:818. The history continues:

After the mob had ceased yelling, and retired, . . . there lay the printing office in a heap of ruins; Elder Phelps’ furniture strewed over the garden as common plunder, the revelations, book work, papers and press in the hands of the mob as the booty of highway robbers.—Times and Seasons 6:832.
There is further evidence that a book was to be printed containing the revelations and commandments of God, in the history of Joseph Smith. He says:

Our council was continued on the first of May, (1832.—J. F. M.) when it was ordered that three thousand copies of the Book of Commandments be printed the first edition.—Church History 1: 249.

Since the first issue of the Evening and Morning Star was printed June, 1832, it is evident to all thinking people that none of the revelations contemplated to be put in a book were as yet in print, when the council ordered the books in the first part of May, 1832. None of them being in print, they could not be proof read and revised by comparison with the originals, for the original copies of the revelations were in Kirtland. No one at that time had so little confidence in those men appointed by the Lord as stewards, as to think they would place before the Saints and the world a book containing matter so important as the revelations and commandments of God without being sure that they were correct and as given of God.

The Presidency seemed to have had no doubt but what the first edition would be properly prepared and printed, so that they say, in a letter addressed “To the Brethren in Zion, July 2, 1833,” “Consign the books of Commandments to N. K. Whitney & Co., Kirtland, Geauga County, Ohio; care of Kelley and Walworth, Cleveland, Cuyahoga County, Ohio.” When this letter was written no books were in existence, and not all of the revelations then in existence had been printed in the Evening and Morning Star, and those revelations that were gathered up after the mob had taken possession of the book work and the revelations and scattered them, and had them bound in a book, calling it The Book of Commandments, only gives them up to September, 1831, and does not give all of that as proven when compared with the original copy. Not one of the committee appointed of God as stewards testify to the correctness of the copies as they appeared in the Evening and Morning Star originally, nor as they now appear in the Book of Commandments. Seven revelations given in 1831 never were printed in the Evening and Morning Star in Missouri, and these are not found in the Book of Commandments, and there are fourteen revelations given in 1832 that are not in this book. Two of those given in 1831 were given before the preface was given by revelation, November 1, 1831.

Persecution began in Independence as early as April, 1833, which culminated in destroying the printing press and the book work already done, July 20, 1833.

On the 11th of September, 1833, soon after the arrival of Oliver Cowdery at Kirtland, Joseph Smith says:

The following members residing in Kirtland; viz, F. G. Williams, Sidney Rigdon, N. K. Whitney, with myself and Oliver Cowdery, . . . met in council to consider the expediency of establishing a printing press in Kirtland, when it was resolved, unanimously, that a press be established and conducted under the firm name of F. G. Williams & Co.

It was decided by resolutions that the Messenger and Advocate, and a continuance of the Star, formerly published in Independence, Missouri, by W. W. Phelps & Co., be published as soon as arrangements could be made, to be conducted by Oliver Cowdery,” who was one of the firm. (Church History, vol. 1, p. 372.)

There was no opportunity till 1834 for the committee to compare the revelations printed in the Evening and Morning Star, and others that had been given up to the year 1833, with the originals, and those of the committee who had to do with the reprint of the Star and were interested in preparing the copies of the revelations and commandments that were sent to Independence to be printed in the Evening and Morning Star, say they were not correct as they were originally printed. In volume 2, page 384, of the Evening and Morning Star as printed in Kirtland, Ohio, the editor, Oliver Cowdery, says:

There are many typographical errors in both volumes, and especially in the last, which we shall endeavor carefully to correct, as well as principle if we discover any. It is also proper for me to say that in the first fourteen numbers, in the revelations, are many errors, typographical and others, occasioned by transcribing manuscript; but as we have the originals we shall endeavor to make proper corrections.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 580.

The first fourteen numbers of the Evening and Morning Star were published at Independence, Missouri, and edited by W. W. Phelps and Co., and when Oliver Cowdery published the reprint at Kirtland, Ohio, it was found in the first issue of the original print, that section 2, of the 1835 edition, 17 of the last edition, is in that issue as it is in the Book of Commandments; but in the reprint it is, as corrected by the original copy by Oliver Cowdery, as it is in the Doctrine and Covenants in every edition since the first in 1835. Of this and other differences that Oliver Cowdery found when comparing the original print of the Evening and Morning Star with the originals of the revelations, he says:

On the revelations we merely say that we were not a little surprised to find the previous print so different from the original. We have given them a careful comparison, assisted by individuals whose known integrity and ability is uncensurable. Thus saying we cast no reflection upon those who were interested with the responsibility of publishing them in Missouri, as our own labors were included in that important service to the church, and it was our unceasing endeavor to have them correspond with the copy furnished us. We believe they are now correct. If not in every word, at least in principle. For the special good of the church, we have also added a few items from other revelations.—
Editor of the Latter Day Saints' Messenger and Advocate, Evening and Morning Star, vol. 1, p. 16.

Oliver Cowdery further says, as editor of the Evening and Morning Star at Kirtland:

We have again inserted the articles and covenants according to our promise in a previous number for the benefit of our brethren abroad, who have not the first number of the first volume. As there were some errors which had got into them by transcribing, we have since obtained the original copy and made the necessary corrections.—Vol. 2, p. 196.

The Book of Commandments was never indorsed by any of the leading men of the church, so far as the correctness of the printing of the revelations, and never had the indorsement of conference, quorum, council, assembly, or committee, much less the indorsement of the stewards appointed of God to look after and be responsible for the revelations and commandments of God.

When the reprinting of the Evening and Morning Star was done, W. W. Phelps was a part of the publish­ing company of F. G. Williams & Co., so that he with Oliver Cowdery, the editor, and F. G. Will­i­ams, one of the counselors of the President of the church, chosen of God by revelation, in 1832, would be careful that nothing would be printed in connec­tion with the revelations that was not correct, and that which they would not wish to be responsible for in the day of judgment. They all are committed to the fact that the original print of the revelations as they appeared in the Evening and Morning Star was not correct. Since these men who had something to do with the original print now had the original copy of the revelations, and say that the original print in the Evening and Morning Star is not cor­rect when compared together, we have an assurance what to conclude. The other man, and the only other man directly interested in the preparing of such copies of revelations as were sent to Independ­ence to be originally printed in the Evening and Morning Star, was John Whitmer. As he was about to close his work as editor of the Messenger and Ad­vocate, he says in that paper, for March, 1836, (vol.
2, p. 287):

I am about leaving the editorial department, therefore,
I desire to testify to all that will come to the knowledge of this address, that I have most assuredly seen the plates from whence the Book of Mormon was translated, and that I have handled these plates, and know of a surety that Joseph Smith, jr., has translated the Book of Mormon by the gift and power of God. . . . I would do injustice to my own feel­ings if I did not here notice still further the work of the Lord in these days; the revelations and commandments given to us are, in my estimation, equally true with the Book of Mormon, and equally necessary for salvation. It is neces­sary to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God; and I know that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants contain, the revealed will of heaven.

This was published about seven months after the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was put in circulation. This testimony, that the revelations as they appear in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants con­tain the will of heaven is but to assert that these revealing as they originally appeared in the Evening and Morning Star, and as they now appear in the Book of Commandments are not correct and do not correctly represent the revealed will of heaven.
While he made the copies that were sent to Missouri to be printed, now that he could compare the printing of the copies sent with the originals of the revela­tions he can now say with an assurance that they now represent the will of heaven as they appear in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. No one questioned the work of these stewards, then, but all ac­cepted of the work as it appears in the Book of Doc­trine and Covenants as correct, as it was certified to August 17, 1835, when the assembly met. Why should anything that can be said by men now disturb their testimony, or our faith in their testimony?

The preface to the book contemplated of God should contain the revelations and commandments, could not be consistently used for the Book of Com­mandments, because the revelations and command­ments are not correct as they appear in that book.
The copies sent to Missouri were not compared with the originals after they appeared in print by any of the stewards appointed of God, and the preface was given at the same time that the revelation appoint­ing the stewards was given, and not all the revela­tions and commandments that had been given up to this date, November 1, 1831, are in the Book of Commandments. Further, in the revelation ap­pointing the stewards, it was contemplated that other revelations would be given, as is evidenced by the following language found in that revelation:

I the Lord have appointed them and ordained them to be stewards over the revelations and commandments which I have given them, and which I shall hereafter give unto them.

The Book of Commandments makes no provision for any further revelations and commandments, after September, 1831, so that the above language and the language of the preface are silent witnesses against the Book of Commandments, for it is not the book God provided for, as is plainly seen by the foregoing.

Whoever brought the Book of Commandments into existence as a book was not authorized to do so by any of the stewards, or by those presiding over the church, or by any conference of the church; and the imperfections of the revelations as they appear in that book, and as they appear in the printing of them in the Evening and Morning Star in Missouri is testified to by all those who had anything to do with furnishing the copies of the revelations sent to be printed in the Evening and Morning Star, with the one who had charge of the printing there, and as they now appear in the Book of Commandments.
The title-page of the Book of Commandments was filed February 18, 1833, for the purpose of obtaining a copyright of it. This is proved by a certificate of the clerk in the "office of the United States District Court," as follows:

"Be it remembered that on this thirteenth day of February in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, W. W. Phelps & Co., have deposited in the office of the United States District Court for the Missouri District, the title of a book, the right whereof they claim as authors and proprietors in the words and figures following, to-wit:

A Book of Commandments for the government of the Church of Christ organized according to law on the 6th day of April, 1830.

A certificate is associated with this copy, signed by H. G. Geisberg, Edwin R. Durham, clerk, saying:

I, Edwin R. Durham, . . . do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true and correct copy of the Copy Right of the book therein mentioned, as the same remains on record in my office.—Zion's Advocate, vol. 2, number 6, pp. 6, 7.

From this we learn that the title-page of the book was filed, and that this is "a full, true, and correct copy of the Copy Right." Since the copies of the revelations printed in the Evening and Morning Star were incorrect, as testified to by all those who had to do with preparing and printing these copies as they thus appeared, the binding these same copies in a book, and having the title-page of that book copyrighted would not, nor does not, make them correct.

Had a book appeared, or been in existence, known to Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, and W. W. Phelps, three of the stewards appointed of God over the revelations and commandments, answering the provisions of God containing a correct rendition of the revelations and commandments satisfactory to them after they compared the copies published with the originals, would they have become parties to the compiling copies of these revelations with others in another book? This seems inconsistent in stewards and would prove their unfaithfulness. They knew of no such a book.

David Whitmer was faithful over the responsibility of bearing witness to the Book of Mormon, to which all others having the same knowledge agree. But these men, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, and W. W. Phelps, were responsible for the care they exercised over the revelations and commandments, and the testimony they bear to the truthfulness of these revelations, and their testimony to the truth of the book containing them, given August 17, 1835. Two of these three, Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer, were faithful witnesses of what they knew about the Book of Mormon, and so one doubted their faithfulness in caring for the revelations and commandments as they appeared in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. An article on The Truthfulness and Authority of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants will follow as Part II, in an early issue of the SAINTS’ HERALD. that dominated and laid the basis for the kingdom that is to be. Hymns and sermon combined in a unified theme. At the close of the service, as the congregation was leaving, the choir sang softly as a hymn postlude, "Holy night, silent night." In spite of the blustery weather, a good crowd was present.

The annual program of the Sunday school was given on Wednesday night. The departure of several of the public-school teachers, who were preparing parts of the program, necessitated the rendition at this time rather than on Thursday day evening. This found general assent with the membership in that it enabled families to celebrate at their own firesides. The coordination of public school, community, and church activities in Lamoni made possible an economizing of effort in the preparation of the Christmas program. A general committee consisting of Marcella Schenck, Mrs. Wallace Blair, and Lena Wells directed the work in collaboration with a corps of assistants. The traditional church program retains its rightful place in the community life, and this year the beautiful evening, such as is ideally pictured in Yuletide lore, assisted to gather a well-filled church.

The front of the church, with its large expanse of unbroken wall, provided a background for a silhouette portrayal of the familiar picture of the wise men on camels led by the star. The program, which included the children in the various departments, was the cantata, "The crowning of Christmas." If one may judge from the comment, the entertainment was successful both in plans and rendition. It was of suitable length, inclusive in participation, and Christmas in spirit. Thursday evening found groups of carol singers visiting the homes of the shut-ins and the aged.

Some change in the personnel of the congregation is noticed. The majority of college students have gone to their homes or to visit friends, while many old faces are found—those who have come back for the holidays, some from colleges, some from participation, and some from other vocational pursuits and general church activities. Lamoni folk often feel that their workers are developed to readiness for efficient service and are then drawn into other fields. It is good to see the home-comings at this season.

Graceland Echoes

"Why the Chimes Rang"

The first time for many years, possibly the first time in their history, the College Players gave a Christmas play. Their selection was, "Why the chimes rang," written by Elizabeth M'Fadden.

The tender, appealing little play is so familiar that it is unnecessary to repeat it here, but it is impossible to let the performance go by without a word of appreciation to all those concerned in its production.

It was given under tremendous difficulties, stage, lighting, costumes being altogether inadequate for the task imposed upon them; yet in spite of the very grievous limitations, the production was given very admirably. The whole cast did excellent work, there being very few weak places. It is impossible to name all participants, but special mention should be given to Miss Harriet Bdon, who certainly lived up to the spirit of Holger. Mr. Gephart made a good Stein, and George Gates a very fascinating Uncle Bertel, while Ormand Kimball portrayed a very dignified priest.

The beauty of the play was greatly enhanced by the singing of the A Cappella Chorus under the direction of Miss Mabel Carlile, as from time to time during the offering of the gifts, their voices rose and fell through the pantomime enacted. Perhaps the best compliment that can possibly be paid to the cast was the absolute silence in which their work was received. It bespeaks a true spirit of reverence and worship.

Special credit should be given to the coach, Miss Fisher, for her untiring work, her unflagging enthusiasm, and her concentration on her task. Stage manager Harold Brown proved a valuable asset, and much of the success of the work of the play is due to these people.

Independence

Stone Church

The thermometer had a sinking spell on Sunday morning; so did the attendance at Sunday school, which was down to 847.

Bro. George F. Henry Edwards spoke at the eleven o'clock hour on the subject, "Look backward into the future." Among other things he said: The great events of history have centered themselves around certain days wherein they are commemorated. We look back over the past to the particular thing which is commemorated, and the host of traditions and personal recollections which have been associated with these days, viewing the past in the light of the significance of each memorial. Christmas Day has such a significance. It is unique. On it individual Christians look over the past in the light of what the coming of Christ has meant to them. The church looks back over an age-long experience which includes the vision and the life of all those who have "sought a better country, even a heavenly." But more than all, it looks back with Christ, to find his way of life and what it has meant in history, so it can translate the things of the past into the values of the now. The church must always be youthful—forward looking. But looking back alone is futile. We need to know how. One of the world's tragedies is the ineffectiveness of some people to do the good they will to do. The great need of the world, as of the church, is peace. Peace is harmonious activity, not stagnation. As David said, such peace must be sought, not merely waited for. In national, civic, economic, and religious affairs we need peace, the purposeful and harmonious pursuit of worthy objectives. This must be constructive, the building of definitely peaceful structure, the chief of which shall be Zion. And as in the past, these must be centered in an organization to which is given the leadership of the world in things religious. This is the church.

Although it was zero weather we noticed a number of old-timers out: Bishop and Sister E. L. Kelley and Brother and Sister W. H. Garrett were among those present.

There was a fine, comforting, edifying, spirit at the after­noon prayer service. Among the splendid testimonies given, one by a sister from northern Minnesota was especially up­lifting. She was not located where there was a branch in the immediate neighborhood, but still her nine children are in the church. Such results could be obtained only by the mother taking a personal interest in the spiritual welfare of the children. After the sister had borne her testimony, Bishop C. J. Hunt arose and said this mother of Israel had often encouraged him in his ministerial labors in his younger days.

In the evening, at eight o'clock was the eighth annual annual rend­ition of "The Messiah" by the Messiah Choir of one hundred and fifty singers of Zion and vicinity, under the direction of Brother Paul N. Craig. The soloists were all our own people, which has not usually been the case heretofore. They were: Sister Israel A. Smith, soprano; Sister Frances White Norris, contralto; Brother George Anway, tenor; and Brother Albert Brackenbury, bass. In spite of the disagreeably cold wind, the church was comfortably filled. The program was broadcast by K L D S, and the large number of favorable reports received by telegram and telephone from all over the country leads to the conclusion that there was also a large radio audience. The night was ideal for broadcasting, and the program went out in splendid shape. This large group of singers is to be commended for the fine work they did and for the long and patient effort it takes to prepare a program of this kind.

Tuesday evening the Department of Recreation and Expression put on a program in the upper auditorium of the Stone Church, consisting of a playlet of four acts as the principal event of the evening. The first scene revealed shepherds by a camp fire in the fields of Judaea. A star appeared in the east, and while they were commenting on it an angel appeared telling them of the birth of the Christ Child in Bethlehem. They departed to find him. The second scene portrayed the court of Herod when news is brought of Christ, the King of the Jews. The third scene pictured the streets of Bethlehem with the shepherds and the Three Wise Men passing through in their search for the Christ. The fourth scene was the home of Mary and Joseph in the stable. The shepherds and wise men enter, bringing their gifts. Then old Simeon and Anna enter, Simeon taking up the child in his arms and saying in a most impressive manner, “Lord, now lettest thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten to the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.” Then all the actors in the play gathered on the platform and triumphantly sang, “Joy to the world.” The four scenes made a most effective and beautiful sermon.

Thursday evening the I X L Class, under the direction of Mrs. J. F. Frazier, sponsored a splendid program outlined by Mr. O. C. White, Miss Ella Jones, and Mrs. C. R. Smith. The program covered more territory than is customary in a Christmas entertainment, but it was so skillfully arranged that the parts blended perfectly. After the I X L Chorus had sung “Silent night,” there was a tableau of the Three Wise Men, Joseph and Mary, and Jesus in the manger. This tableau was a beautiful sermon for the children present. The audience could sense the spirit of reverence in those acting the parts. President Elbert A. Smith told the story of the church established by Christ, its entrance into the wilderness, the coming of the Church, and the wise men who brought gifts, the angel’s visit to Joseph Smith and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the mob’s work at Carthage jail, the church’s journey to Utah and its apostate condition, the call of young Joseph, the church asleep, the church awake, and an ideal picture of the city of Zion. As these various tableaux were being prepared behind the curtain the story was effectively outlined by Brother Elbert. Those taking part in the program displayed considerable talent, and not the least of the performances was the discourse delivered by Brother Smith. The program was made up of Christmas songs and readings by the little folks, and a playlet by girls and boys, and was given at the Stone Church, consisting of a playlet of four acts as the principal event of the evening. The first scene revealed shepherds by a camp fire in the fields of Judaea. A star appeared in the east, and while they were commenting on it an angel appeared telling them of the birth of the Christ Child in Bethlehem. They departed to find him. Second Church

The Christmas entertainment was rendered Thursday evening, the house being well filled, principally with children. The program was made up of Christmas songs and readings by the little folks, and a playlet by girls and boys, and was followed by the appearance of Santa Claus. Treats for the children were distributed at the Sunday school session December 20.

Sunday morning prayer meeting drew a very good attendance, and though the weather was very cold, the room was not warm.

Elder George Jenkins was the speaker at eleven o'clock, and presented one of his hopeful, faith-confirming sermons which was much enjoyed by the congregation. The evening sermon was a characteristic address by Elder Alvin Knisley, to a small but attentive gathering. “The Messiah” being given at the Stone Church had drawn heavily from the Second Church congregation.

Sister Mabel Bell Wiley, the youngest daughter of Brother J. W. Westwood, was married Sunday evening to Mr. John Ferrell, formerly of Omaha, Nebraska, at the home of the uncle and aunt of Sister Wiley, Brother and Sister W. J. Totty, 1024 South Pleasant Street. Relatives of the parties and a few friends witnessed the ceremony, which was pronounced by Elder A. K. Dilley. The home of the pair will be at 2410 Bates Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, for the present.

Walnut Park

Patriarch F. A. Smith preached Sunday morning on the Lord's prayer. The keynote of his sermon was, Have we prayed or received? and used as references in the Bible Ephesians 4:25-28; Book of Mormon, Mosiah 11:127; Mosiah 27:1; Ether 4:30; and Corinthians and used with Ephesians 6:4. The Christmas entertainment was rendered Thursday evening on the organization of the church was also very fine. In this sermon he told how the church came to be organized as it is, but the main part of the discourse was on the Reformation and the Restoration.

New Year’s Eve the Temple Builders and Orioles will have a watch party at the church. A prayer meeting will be held first, which will be followed by a program and a general good time.

East Independence

Brother R. D. Weaver was the speaker both morning and evening Sunday.

Brother Harvey Minton and family are spending the holidays with his folks.

The Christmas entertainment given at the church Christmas Eve was well attended, and we believe all enjoyed the program. The committee is to be commended for giving such a good program with so little time spent in practicing. As the children all had parts in a school entertainment given that afternoon, we feel that both children and committee did well. The young folks gave a play that was written by Sister Vida Smith, and each one did well.

Several musical numbers were given, which were appreciated by all.

Enoch Hill

A packed house greeted Santa Claus on the Hill Tuesday evening, the 22d, and listened to the cantata, “Santa saves the day.” It was thoroughly enjoyed, as was the treat which followed, distributed by Saint Nick and his Brownies to the children present. Some splendid musical numbers by a girls’ quartet were given preceding the play.

Sunday speakers were Paul M. Hanson at eleven o’clock and C. Ed. Miller at seven.

Women’s Department work will begin regularly again after the holidays.

Spring Branch

The usual services were held Sunday. The attendance at the early prayer meeting and Sunday school was not large, but there was a good crowd out to hear Brother J. W. Paxton’s excellent sermon at eleven o’clock. The attendance was good in the evening also, when Elder J. W. Metcalfe was the speaker.

On Christmas Eve an unusually fine program was given by the Sunday school, entitled “Wondrous night.” Many commendations have been received on this program.

New Year’s Eve the Religio will hold a watch party at the home of Brother and Sister D. D. McClain.

Mrs. Bertha Newton and sons, of Spearfish, South Dakota, are visiting at the home of J. C. MaBott and family. Sister Newton is expecting to locate in Independence.

Dorothy MaBott is spending her Christmas vacation at home, but will return to Graceland at the resuming of school.

Pastor Frank Mussell and family spent Christmas and a few days after with his parents, Brother and Sister F. T. Mussell, at Des Moines, Iowa.

Burlington, Iowa

December 23.—The holiday season is upon us, with genuine winter weather, plenty of snow and ice for coasting and skating, and weather conditions just right for a visit from Santa Claus.

As the year draws to a close, we can look back and see where the Lord has wonderfully blessed our branch. The work has been moving forward, and while there is a great deal to do and much work to be accomplished, we are thankful that we have willing workers, who are ever ready to do their part in helping promote the cause of Christ. Since the erection of our new church, which was completed last July, we realize that our opportunities and responsibilities are greater than ever before, and we are thankful to say that the results of which were very favorable.

The annual election of officers was held on December 2, the results of which were very favorable. We are looking forward to a good year and hope to reach a higher standard of perfection.

The Department of Women held a “covered-dish dinner” in the basement of the church on December 10, which proved very successful. They also held their annual Christmas bazaar on the 1st and 2d of the month and have been putting in a great deal of time getting out quilts for Christmas, the proceeds of which are to help swell the church building fund. They are certainly to be commended for their faithful and untiring efforts, and the credit of this department rightly belongs to their able president, Sister L. Rayn.

The Gleaners, an organized class of young boys and girls of the Sunday school, gave an oyster supper the latter part of November, followed by a play in which all the members of the class took part. Part of the proceeds of the evening was turned over to the Graceland endowment fund, part to our local church building fund, and the balance put in their class treasury.

The men’s organized class of the branch, called the “Brotherhood of Gideon,” had their monthly meeting in the church basement early in December, and were privileged to have with them Apostle D. T. Williams, who gave an interesting talk.

We enjoyed a week’s visit from Sister Ethel Lacey, of Lamon, who was formerly of Burlington and who is an active worker.

Brother William Orlieb, who has been a faithful and worthy example of a Christian in our branch, has been quite poorly of late, but we trust with the tender nursing of his devoted daughters, he will soon be restored to health and be privileged to again attend the church services. We feel sure he would appreciate the prayers of the Saints.

On December 21 the choir rendered a Christmas cantata, entitled “The Holy Nativity.” They had been practicing diligently under the direction of their able director, Sister G. Scott Daniel, and from the many favorable comments after the rendition we feel that their efforts were not in vain and that they bore the Christmas message in song to the hearts of their hearers.

The Christmas program in which the children as well as a few of the older ones will participate, will be held on Christmas Eve.

December 22 our pastor, G. S. Daniel, and his wife, entertained the members of the branch in the basement of the church, and everyone enjoyed the good things served. In the early part of the evening, a very interesting program was given, which consisted of four numbers by the M. E. male quartet, two duets by Gomer and Laverla Daniel, a Christmas solo by Sister Daniel, after which all took part in various games. In the course of the evening Santa Claus appeared and entertained the children for a time. Refreshments were then served, after which we all joined in a circle, and sang, “The old, old path.” Our pastor then assured us he appreciated the cooperation and “good will” of all the Saints of the branch, and wished us all a Merry Christmas.

We know we can speak for all the Saints that this feeling of “good will” is mutual, and we feel that Brother and Sister Daniel have been worthy examples of “earnest workers for the Master,” whose labors and prayers are for the advancement of his work, and we are glad we have the opportunity of associating and working with them.

The Saints of Burlington wish to extend to all the Saints their wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year, filled with God’s abundant blessings.

Through the Roughs of Arkansas

Bald Knob, Arkansas, December 21.—I am sure that the Herald readers have enjoyed reading the many travels with the Editor in Chief. It is not the desire of the writer to compare with him, but I wish to give an account of a travel with the “Big Indian chief of Arkansas,” Brother J. T. Riley.

Brother Seth Harbour and I accompanied Brother Riley to northwestern Arkansas, where it was reported that land could be secured very cheaply.

The distance was only one hundred and seventy-five miles, and we thought we could easily make it in one day, but as we began to get into the mountains we learned that we were going to miss our guess about thirty-five miles. We were compelled to stay at a hotel in the mountains on account of the fog, it being so dense we could not see ten feet ahead of us, and this on a mountain that had an elevation of about three thousand feet; so we welcomed the sight of the hotel.

We were the recipients of a nice warm meal, and after a chat with the hotel keeper we were shown our rooms, having to ascend a stairway about two hundred feet, where we laid our weary frames down to rest.

In conversation, Brother Riley told the hotel keeper we were on a mission to inspect a three-thousand-acre tract of land to see about the probability of buying it. Next morning Brother Riley proposed we cut wood to pay for our night’s lodging, but the hotel man thought if we could buy three thousand acres of land we could surely pay for our bed, so we separated ourselves from some coin.

Resuming our journey toward Mossville, which was our destination, we arrived about one o'clock in the afternoon, having gone about thirty-five miles through the roughs of Arkansas. However, our journey up to this time had been over the state highway. We soon found our man, Brother Balas, who proved to be a very kind-hearted old gentleman, and the land we were looking for. Brother Riley and I took a little walk over some of this land. While it is very uneven, the soil is fertile and will produce from twenty-five to fifty bushels of corn to the acre. It is covered with good white oak, red oak, and black hickory, two and three feet through, that would produce enough lumber to build many a house in Zion. There is also a good location for a hydro-electric dam. This land can be bought for $2.50 to $10 per acre, but the county in which the land is located is the only county in Arkansas that has no railroad.

Another feature about this part of Arkansas is Diamond Cave, where one can walk for a distance of twenty miles under the ground, I am told, and has electric lights for fifteen miles of the distance.

We left Brother Riley in the mountains, and Brother Harbour and I began our journey homeward. After a strenuous drive over about forty miles of almost impassable road, we reached the highway, where we had concrete and asphalt road the rest of the way.

We finally reached home, feeling that we had had the protection of almighty God on our journey, as we made the round trip, half of it being in the roughs of the Ozarks, without having even a puncture.

I am strong for stewardships and for Zion. May God's divine blessings be ours to enjoy and the time speedily come when the kingdom of this world shall have become the kingdom of God and Christ, is my prayer.

THOMAS W. EMDS.

In the Eastern Colorado District

Well, we're snowbound! Nothing out of the ordinary for Eastern Colorado District, to be sure, but then it's the first real offense this season. It gives one time to catch up a few of the duties that are always clamoring for attention.

This is a big district. It has lots of territory, more territory than Saints in many localities. If you don't believe it, just try living in the extreme corner of the district, work six days and come home on your head and you'll stand there twenty miles away with some branch or group, or a hundred or two miles away, preach a time or two, and get back in time to sweep out Monday morning. It just about tries the nerve of a very ordinary Ford to do it.

But, after all, it's worth all it takes, and more. The response of many of the branches in the recent drive is satisfaction enough to keep most anyone at work. The district is still a little behind on its quota, but it is still coming in.

Denver went over a thousand dollar quota by about eight hundred; Fort Collins cleared their seven hundred dollar quota by a safe margin; Wray and Liberty oversubscribed by about twenty-five per cent; Colorado Springs, the tourist city, raised the quota easily; even the scattered membership has raised over eight hundred.

Since our appointment as bishop's agent in October, we have been trying to meet as many of the branches as possible. Local conditions have made it very difficult, but we have succeeded in visiting a few.

Early in November we met with the group at Sterling on Sunday, November 8; the numericals were very fine, but their "peep" run high. Elder George E. McConley, father to Apostle McConley, is in charge of the work there. Conditions have been rather discouraging at times, most of the Saints having moved away. Apparently they are just beginning to see the light of a better day. Sterling should be a good place to work. Their answer that day to the endowment call was good and heartening.

The next Sunday being a cold one, we baptized Sister Della Ford, near Lamar, Nebraska. She will be a very good addition to that faithful group that meets there each Sunday. Two years ago they numbered about a dozen or less; to-day they number over thirty. Driving from five to twenty miles, they meet regularly, and, needless to say, they are getting results. Brother T. J. Fitzwater came driving through about October 1, and we prevailed on him to hold some meetings in that territory. For two weeks he preached in the little town of Champion to very good results; then for three weeks he preached in another little settlement near the post office of Best, Nebraska. This territory is all tributary to the Lamar group. He did some very fine pioneer work. Results will eventually follow, though it will probably be as Kipling wrote: They'll go back and do the talking; then be called the poems.

Otis, Colorado, claimed our attention on the 22d. Anyone who has ever been entertained by the Aucls and the Vincents at Otis will be sure to go back if he can. Two very nice meetings were held, and as we left we felt that with Brethren Reno Aucl and Ralph Vincent at the wheel the work there couldn't do otherwise than go ahead. If Ralph can be as successful in selling the gospel message as he is in selling Chevellets, they will soon have a large branch.

We were glad to have the chance of eating turkey with Brother and Sister Mark Fauene at Julesburg. They were old Graceland "pals" to wife and me back in those never-to-be-forgotten days. Mark is a chiropractic doctor and is meeting with good success. The day following we were called to North Platte, Nebraska, to preach, to conduct the funeral of Brother Ralph Coleman of Turkey. Brother Coleman was a very faithful worker and will be greatly missed by the wonderful little family he has left and by all who knew him.

The 29th being sacrament Sunday at Lamar, we met with them as our home group (if we have such a thing). A very profitable meeting was held, followed in the afternoon by the regular Sunday school and preaching service. Brother Ray Sales is handling the major part of work there when I am gone and is proving himself to be a real worker though he has been in the church less than two years and in the priesthood less than a year. A couple of days later he came for me one night just as we were closing the bank, saying that one of his grandchildren was very low. Hurrying over the forty miles of prairie about as fast as his Ford can hurry, we found the little girl, one of a pair of twins about eight months old, in a very serious condition. Here we stayed for two nights and a day, finally being forced to let her little spirit return to its Maker, not however until we had been permitted to see some wonderful manifestations of the spirit of peace and consolation.

South of Laird, Colorado, about six miles is the Liberty Branch. With these people we met the first Sunday in December. The schoolhouse was full, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Especially was this true of all the Browns. How many of them there are there I don't know, but for some reason or other there was a family gathering that day, and we helped out at the table. An early breakfast and eighty miles of "Fording," an attempt at a sermon, and all that comes by way of incidentals is enough to give any mortal my age a full-sized appetite. Brother John got me stopped in time, however, so I was able to get back to Wray for an after meeting. This being their regular sacrament meeting, we assisted Brother Paul Diefendorf and enjoyed a wonderful degree of the Spirit in our testimony.

Once a month we meet with the Wheatleys and the Curtisies in their schoolhouse about fifteen miles south of Holyoke. There aren't many of them, but they have the idea. A big bass drum is prepared each time, so they have a good crowd. Whether it's the "gospel of the grub" I'm not sure, but I'm inclined to think they may get a little of each.

Another call comes to-day to meet twice a month with another union Sunday school and preach for them. Never has our message been presented there. If anyone feels he does not have an opportunity to work at home, conditions must be different than they are here.

www.LatterDayTruth.org
The endowment results have put a new foundation under our faith, and we are going on. Already can I notice a big change in some places. The feeling of security is returning to many who were disturbed. May it continue so.

Sincerely yours,

WARD A. HOUGAS

Building Church Under Difficulties

SPRINGFIELD, MISSOURI, December 28.—The months of November and December have been full of activity for the branch here. Besides regular services some have been working almost every night, and those who can spare the time during the day, on our basement. And when we look back and consider that all the work (with the exception of raising the building) has been done by our own members and those friendly to our cause, we think we have done remarkably well.

Of course there has been some hardship and much sacrifice, but this only helped to draw us closer together. A few nights after the work was started a terrible storm came. The walls began to cave in and the situation became serious, as the ebbing, which supported the building, was partly resting on the outside wall. The men worked steadily until twelve o'clock that night, risking their own lives to save the building, which would surely have collapsed. Such work and loyalty will always remain in our memory. Pastor Ansley suffered a broken rib while working hard that night, and was unable to work for several days; but he was always there to encourage and cheer the rest as none other can do.

When a people start a work for the advancement of the kingdom of God it is sure to be accomplished. So far we can surely say God has blessed us. The work is now completed with the exception of the basement steps and ceiling, and can be used to take care of our growing congregation. It will also furnish a place for the activities of the young people.

Brother Keck of Saint Joseph was recently a visitor here and spoke at the Sunday evening service. Brother and Sister Henson and family of Joplin have moved to Springfield and are engaged in the grocery business here. Pastor Ansley received a letter last week from Sister Keith of Saint Louis, formerly of Springfield, thanking him and the branch for their interest in the recent sickness of her little daughter, Mary Alice. She added her testimony that God is still able to bless.

FRANCIS BISHOP

San Bernardino Enjoys Visit of Brother Burton

SAN BERNARDINO, California, December 21.—The members of the San Bernardino congregation have been greatly cheered and blessed by the encouraging sermons given by our district missionary, Elder P. R. Burton, who has just concluded a two-week series of preaching services. Two girls and two young men were baptized and confirmed members of the church and will take up active work in this branch.

On account of this being Christmas time and everyone being very busy with Christmas shopping and with making preparation for the coming of old Santa Claus, it was hard to attract their attention to the wonderful message of Jesus Christ, whose birthday we are about to commemorate, but we were pleased to see so many in attendance, and it was pleasing to note the splendid interest taken by the members of the branch and their friends.

We have a very fine crowd of young people in this branch and it was a real inspiration to Brother Burton to see the enthusiastic way in which they gave of their time and services.

While in the city Brother Burton was invited to speak before the Parent-Teachers Association and also before one of the schools here, and his message was well received. He also addressed the Pioneer Society, and his talk was enjoyed very much by these old people.

Our pastor, Brother George H. Wixom, in company with Brother Burton, was kept busy calling on the Saints in their homes and in looking up the aged ones and shut-ins in an endeavor to carry hope and sunshine to every home. They also visited the Serrano Indian Reservation where they received a very friendly greeting by the Indians and were invited to return. This Indian reservation is situated near, at a place called Highlands.

The Saints of this place were happy to note that Saints came to attend these services from San Jacinto, Beaumont, Redlands, Cucamonga, Pomona, Riverside, Colton, Ontario, and Highlands.

Brother Burton was much encouraged to see the earnestness of the Saints and their willingness to cooperate and do their part in any line they were called upon. Last Sunday morning the pastor announced there were several bills that should be paid off at once, amounting to about forty dollars and a collection was taken up to raise this amount. Something like seventy dollars was raised in a few minutes, and over fifty dollars was paid in at this service as tithing.

The future for the work in this place looks very bright, and we all are ready to enter into the new year with zest and earnestness and to advance the cause of Christ in this city as has never been done before.

We stand ready as a branch to support the program of the church and to do all in our power to let the light of Christ be reflected in our lives.

Not Waiting for New Year

BELLINGHAM, WASHINGTON, December 20.—The Bellingham Branch is not waiting for the New Year to come to start working. The Saints here intend to end the year with a bang and thus have something to back them for the coming New Year.

The ladies’ aid had a rummage sale the latter part of November. Now the ladies are working hard on stocking dolls, cats, and dogs, which are being sold for Christmas. Dreams of money badly needed are now being realized.

The young people, too, are busy. They give a social of some kind each month. A watch party is planned for New Year’s Eve and a play, “A proposal under difficulties,” is receiving much attention and hard work.

We are also having a visit from Santa Claus on Christmas night, and we hope to entertain him with a varied program.

This branch hopes to keep all hands busy for the coming year.

At the annual meeting of the Relief at Sioux City, IOWA, last Sunday evening, December 13, the following officers were elected: Frederick Vandel, superintendent; Nettie Calhoon, secretary; Bernice Milliner, treasurer; Beatrice Miller, chorister; J. E. Keck, superintendent of boys, and recreation. With the majority of its officers young people, the Department of Recreation and Expression for 1926 will indeed be a young people’s society and it will try to interest the younger group in recreation, expression, and perhaps a study of ancient America as written by Nephi, Alma, Mormon, et al. It will pay you to enroll in this service group. The Live Wires Sunday School Class increased their Christmas offering by six dollars as a result of a social and program they gave at Sister P. J. Zimmerman’s home. The program included singing, instrumental, readings and a short talk by Elder George M. Vandel.

“Your soul is a battery. When you neglect it, it gives no sign, but some day when you sadly need it, it is likely to fail you. Better have it looked after at regular intervals at the service station. A little of the water of life is needed once a week, to say the least.”—John Andrew Holmes.

Elder A. M. Baker writes a word of encouragement to the editors: “Your pages are getting better all the time. There is no religious magazine on the market as good as the Herald. It is well worth two dollars a year.”
EVERYONE REQUIRES RELIGION

in his life, but there are over 50,000,000 in this country who do not even attend church.

If You Were Selling Merchandise needed by 50,000,000 people who were not using it what bigger business opportunity could you wish?

Are You About Your Father's Business in the missionary matters of this church? According to your support, HIS business will show a profit or a loss this year.

How Much Are You Willing to Do to provide more missionaries for missionary work that the world might hear the Gospel? How many are both prepared and willing to conduct their affairs as stewards?

Have you paid your tithing that these two might be accomplished?

GREAT IS THE TASK, but WE HAVE FAITH and VISION

PORT HURON, MICHIGAN, December 17, 1925.

BISHOP A. CARMICHAEL,

Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother: Just thought you would be interested in the action of the ministerial conference at Shabbona for the northern part of the Eastern Michigan District last Sunday. The spirit present showed a desire to move Zionward, and I believe the men returned to their homes feeling better than they have felt for some time.

In a general discussion of the splendid results of the endowment drive, I called to their attention the big task now before us, that of keeping up the flow of funds into the church treasury to keep the work going for the next eight months. After this the following resolution was adopted:

"That we, as a priesthood, call to the attention of our members the task before us, and do all in our power to have them comply with the financial law of the church, especially regarding the paying of their tithes."

This was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Outlook for a good month here is excellent. Expect about six hundred dollars in tithing alone, saying nothing of the endowment money we will receive.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

FLINT, MICHIGAN.

PRESIDENT F. M. SMITH,

Dear Brother: You no doubt know our Branch at Flint, Michigan, went over the top in the recent endowment campaign.

We certainly are enthused over the success of the campaign and want you to know that we are heart and soul for the program of this church. It is just what we have needed and hoped for these many years, and we are very glad it has been started at last. We want you to know, Brother Smith, we are paying our pledges just as promptly as possible, and this is not going to interfere with our regular tithes either, for we realize we cannot let our tithing stop now or we will not accomplish what the church has set out to do. We are very busy as usual here in Flint, but you may count on us to do our best.

Kind regards to you and the other members of the Presidency. We are

Very sincerely yours,

MR. AND MRS. DEWEY McNAMARA.
