In the General Conference of 1925, held at Independence, Missouri, I cast my vote against sustaining Brother Frederick M. Smith as President of the church. I did so for what I then considered good and sufficient grounds to justify the vote, and for no other reasons. But since the close of that conference I have given considerable thought to this matter in particular and to the general condition which has obtained in the church. I have also made it a matter of earnest prayer. If there was any additional light to be thrown upon the little part that I performed in the conference, I was anxious to receive it.

In answer to my earnest petitions, I have become thoroughly satisfied that my vote against sustaining Brother Fred was a mistake. Therefore, without a word of advice from anyone I make this explanation and confession, hoping it will be satisfactory to all concerned and that it will place me properly before them and God.

J. R. LAMBERT.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, February 14, 1927.

Home-Coming at Holden

The Holden Saints observed a very successful home-coming Sunday. The church was well filled both morning and afternoon, and there were many visitors from Independence and other points who formerly lived in Holden and returned for the day.

The social contact and renewal of old ties of friendship, added to the good spirit present at the religious services, made the day very enjoyable. Lunch was served on the church lawn at noon. The warm spring sun tempered the sharp spring breeze and added a relish to the repast.

President Elbert A. Smith spoke at both forenoon and afternoon services. Letters were read from absent members, who formerly had lived and labored in Holden, including Elder A. H. Parsons, Bishop C. J. Hunt, and Sister Arthur Allen. Altogether the day was one of the best that Holden Saints have had for some time.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people's Wednesday night prayer service is held each week in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. Though considerable interest is taken in the prayer meetings by some, and the attendance averages some two hundred at each meeting, there are many young people, members of the church, in Independence who are not attending and not being reached by these meetings of prayer.

A week ago tonight, in the absence of Elder John F. Sheehy, Elder G. S. Trowbridge was in charge of the young people's meeting. With him in the stand was one of our young men, Roy McNeil, who offered the opening and closing prayers. During the hour many songs of spiritual appeal were sung, half a dozen prayers were voiced, and about fifteen testimonies of gratitude, faith, hope, and humility were borne.

Psalms 25: 1-8 was the scripture read by Brother G. S. Trowbridge in opening last Sunday's session of Sunday schools. For some unaccountable reason the attendance of the school slumped to one thousand seventy-one, composed of seven hundred and ninety-eight members, forty-four officers, ninety-six teachers, one hundred and thirty-three visitors. Five classes were perfect. The orchestra brightened the meeting with music; and officers and teachers went about their work with a zest born of the spirit of true consecration.

"Great God! attend, while Zion sings
The joy that from thy presence springs;
To spend one day with thee on earth,
Exceeds a thousand days of mirth."

These were the words sung by the congregation to begin the eleven o'clock preaching service, which K L D S broadcasts from the main auditorium. Humbly Elder C. E. Chapman spoke in prayer; and "Adoration," from "The Holy City," was played on the organ by Robert Miller. An attractive anthem, "By the waters of Babylon," was rendered by the choir, Miss Thelma Vincent taking the soprano solo.

As speaker for the hour, Evangelist Ammon White read 2 Corinthians 5: 17-21, and spoke on the necessity of men reconciling themselves to God's ways in order to accomplish the divine purposes. Paul wrote to the Corinthian saints, "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation," and he is particularly impressive in his statement, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ." When Paul became reconciled to God through Christ, he became an enthusiast in God's work, but first he had to right about face; indeed, he may have been speaking from his own experience when he wrote, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." Christ has given to the world a pattern—a standard of life—and it is for all people to come up to his standard to enjoy perfect life. Many have formed wrong habits, wrong appetites, and these must be given up before they can come up to the Christ sphere of life. For this reason we have education and a standardization of knowledge in the church, that teachers may know what they are teaching. God has commanded his people to come out from the world and be not partakers of her sins; we must needs prepare ourselves to live with Christ before we can expect to establish Zion. Love, unity, purity, cleanliness, honesty, consecration, truthfulness, faith, all these are the Christlike characteristics which must be found among the people of God. There is much to do; many have tasted only of the things of the surface of existence, not seeking to partake of the deeper things of life. Are we ready? Are we hopeful? Are we consecrated? Paul has left us these words: "We pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him."

Brother and Sister A. M. Chase gave an illustrated lecture on Hawaii at the Campus at the junior meeting Sunday morning, which will be long remembered. The pictures were interesting, and the lecture accompanying was very instructive. The promise to return was welcomed by the children.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a children's program, arranged by Mrs. Ethel Moorman, and presented by a boys' chorus, accompanied by Drexel Mollison, ten years old, began the day's radio activities. There was a cornet trio composed of Merle Smith, Leo Carpenter, and Drexel Mollison; cornet duet by Carlos Smith and Louis Herbst; a brass quartet composed of Eddie Lanpher, Robert Lowrey, John Walker, and Carlos Smith; piano solo, Drexel Mollison. Story.

Bible study hour was conducted by the K L D S radio pastor at nine o'clock, and two hours later the service from the main auditorium took the air.

The K L D S String Trio, assisted by Arthur D. Young, baritone, of Kansas City, Missouri, entertained radio listeners at two o'clock. Mr. Young was accompanied by Mrs. Young.

I. O. F. Home-coming program was broadcast by remote control from Liberty, Missouri, at three o'clock.

K L D S vesper service began at 6.30, and music was furnished by a quartet composed of Nina G. Smith, Lulu Tyrrell, Edward Brackenbury, and Frank Russell. Special numbers were given by Edward Brackenbury, tenor. Sermonet by Elder U. W. Greene.

At 9.15 in the evening, the Latter Day Saint Studio service featured a musical program arranged by Mr. Robert Miller, organist. He was assisted by Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, and Edwin E. Bowen, trombone soloist. Sermonet by President Elbert A. Smith.

Evening Services

Following the class study, the Religio decided upon the suggestion of President Frank Hershey by vote to send a representative to the Institute of Methods in Religious Education to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, June 2 to 12.

The program for this evening was brief and consisted of a vocal solo, by Irene Gindhart, accompanied by her sister, Frances Gindhart, and a violin selection by Frank White, accompanied by O. K. Fry.

The program for the "family" service, Sunday evening, started promptly at 7.30 with a ten-minute song service. This was followed by the introduction of Mr. Parker Shirley, representing the Boy Scout organization, who exhibited a number of lantern slides of the scouts on their vacation and explained the object of their organization.

This lecture closed with the singing of "America," from an illustrated slide. The words, "Thy woods and templed hills," were printed across a picture of the Kirtland Temple and its environment. The words are very appropriate for that setting.

The Glee Club then sang, "O praise my God and Savior." Miss Lilly Belle Allen sang, "Consider the lilies of the field."

Elder John F. Sheehy offered the invocation. Then Brother Orvar Swenson, one of our brilliant young men attending William Chrisman High School, introduced Mr. Wallace Palmer, who duplicated the oration he delivered in the great Convention Hall in Kansas City before 6,500 people, and for which he won a prize of $500.

Mr. Palmer is also attending the William Chrisman High School. He is one of thousands of other high school students who, after special study, wrote an oration on the Constitution of the United States. These students competed in their local schools. The winners were sent to the district try outs, and then competed in the national semi-final contest in Convention Hall. His oration was written on "America's contribution to Constitutional Government." In a clear, concise manner, which indicated that the speaker was sure of his facts and at ease with his audience, he sketched the history of the country, the steps leading up to the Constitutional Convention, the convention itself, and the signing of the document. In concluding Palmer paid eloquent tribute to the Constitution, stating that "Through 140 years it has weathered the stormy seas of bloody war. This same Constitution, as interpreted by John Marshall, was in later years the guiding light of Webster, when he plead for the Union. It is the greatest contribution to government that the world has ever known. Those in America today who enjoy the Constitution and who would tear its principles out of the Government can never understand its greatness. If it ever comes to pass that they shall gain such strength as to attempt an overthrow of this document, let every patriot be like Leonidas at the pass of Thermopylae, and be prepared to pay the last measure of his strength for the Government, that the American Constitution shall not perish from the earth."

This was followed by a reel of beautiful, colored moving pictures, entitled "The heritage of the Red Man." It illustrated, in natural color, "Beautiful America," and the Indian in his native haunts. This was followed by the song, "O Red Man, can you tell me?"

The church was more than filled for "seeing" capacity for old and young. It was truly a beautiful "family" service, something of a departure from our regular evening service, and was enjoyed, apparently, by the large congregation.

Interesting Personals

General church officers are fast going to their fields, taking business trips, going to conferences, and in general scattering over the face of the land. Now with reunion season soon to open, they find their time very much occupied. President Frederick M. Smith left last night en route to Toronto, to attend a young people's convention. President Floyd M. McDowell will spend this week-end at Stewartville, Missouri, where on Friday night he is to deliver a commencement address. Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael is away attending the Clinton, Missouri, district conference, held at Cross Timbers, Missouri, and Bishop J. A. Becker arrived yesterday from Pontiac, Michigan.

Of the Quorum of Twelve, E. J. Gleazer plans to spend this week-end with the Saints of Fanning, Kansas, in the conference of the Northeastern Kansas District. J. F. Curtis bids Independence good-by and starts to Colorado tomorrow. His family will accompany him to Colorado for the summer for the health of his youngest daughter, Flora. Paul M. Hanson left Friday, May 13, for New York City. He sails the 19th, for the European Mission. Myron A. McConley finds himself kept busy in Southern California, and D. T. Williams is at present in Lansing, Michigan. John F. Garver is in the vicinity of Lamoni, Iowa. Apostle James A. Gillen left today for Arizona, planning to stop at Phoenix and other places, then on to southern California and up along the coast, making short stops here and there. His rest-overs are necessarily brief for his first reunion begins at Spokane, Washington, June 17.

Sister Ida M. Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, reports a very pleasant trip and week-end stay in Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 6, 7, and 8. There she attended a mothers' and daughters' banquet, Friday evening; had charge of a round table discussion Saturday afternoon; and Sunday visited the two missions, speaking briefly at each during the Sunday school hour, as well as speaking both morning and evening hour at the Central Church. She also conducted a meeting for the women and girls in the afternoon.

Miss Ramona Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Grant, of Independence, and last year graduate of the Independence Sanitarium, and Amos Joe, of Kansas City, were married last Saturday afternoon at the home of Elder R. V. Hopkins, of Independence.

The funeral services of Mrs. Alice G. Lloyd, who died Sunday, May 15, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Crull, on North Willis Street, were held at the Stone Church Monday afternoon. Sister Lloyd was born in Rapids City, Illinois, June 5, 1860, and was baptized September 13, 1885, at Wheelers Grove, Iowa, by R. M. Elvin. She was confirmed a member of the church by J. W. Gillen. She leaves four daughters: Mrs. Crull, of Independence; Mrs. Grace L. Weber and Mrs. W. W. Richards, of Davenport, Iowa; and Mrs. H. H. Martin, of Quincy, Illinois; one son, D. E. Lloyd, of Atherton, Missouri; three brothers, H. S. Pruden and P. R. Pruden, of Davenport, Iowa; and W. A. Pruden of Omaha, Nebraska; two sisters, Mrs. Anna McElrath, of Westington, South Dakota; and Mrs. Edith Cockerton, of Saint Joseph, Missouri. The funeral service was in charge of Elder J. W. Davis. The body was taken to Davenport, Iowa, for burial.

Campus Base Ball League Opens Season

The four teams composing the Campus baseball league began activities last Saturday afternoon. These teams are the Independence Merchants, Wilson Lumber Company, Standard Oil, and Bar Gars, representing the Stone Church. The first game is scheduled to begin at two throughout the season, and the second at four. On Saturday the first game was played between Wilson Lumber Company and Independence Merchants, the former winning with a score of 20 to 8. The Standard Oil team played the Bar Gars for the second game, snatching away the honors at an 8 to 7 score.

To people living in the vicinity of the Campus, it is a sure sign of the return of summertime when the shouts of baseball fans are to be heard throughout Saturday afternoon.

Some clean-up work was done over the grounds on Saturday, and a corps of volunteer carpenters, under the direction of G. S. Trowbridge, were busy at the south end of the baseball field, erecting a new grandstand. These workmen are still at their task after five o'clock each evening this week.

There will be no show next Saturday night at the Campus.

Second Church

Evangelist Frederick A. Smith was the morning speaker at Second Church, treating in a broad way the subject of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. His effort was very satisfactory to a large number of attentive hearers.

The evening's sermon was delivered by Elder D. A. Whiting. He dwelt upon the thought he found in Doctrine and Covenants 1:8, that the promises and prophecies contained in the book shall all be fulfilled. He made a sharp criticism of the multitudes today who take no thought of the advice, counsel, or commandments of God.

A new roof covering has been purchased for the church building, and likely will be in place before another Sunday has come. Repairs to the steps by which one enters the main auditorium are much needed, and it is likely will be undertaken before the summer season has gone.

Monday evening Group 17 went to the home of Bishop and Sister Charles Fry, surprising them in a farewell gathering; the family is moving this week to Kirtland, Ohio. The evening was spent in speeches called for by Brother W. A. Welton, who acted as chairman. Speeches were made by J. S. Andes, A. K. Dillee, R. J. Lambert, Brother Fry, and Sister A. K. Dillee. A strong vein of love for the Fry family, and appreciation of their worth to group 17 and to the church ran through several of the speeches. Refreshments were served, cakes being baked by the sisters of the group, and ice cream furnished in abundant quantity.

Walnut Park

A union meeting of all the Walnut Park groups was held at the church Wednesday evening of last week. It proved that the purpose of the congregation was to make the meeting one for showing kindly regard for Brother and Sister Glau Smith. Music and song and prayers, with talks and refreshments and parting gifts, combined to make the short evening one that will be a pleasant memory for them to recall. More than two hundred and fifty friends united in thus wishing them Godspeed, ere they leave for Los Angeles.

The next evening a meeting was held to choose Brother Smith's successor as pastor. President E. A. Smith nominated Elder O. C. White. No other one was nominated. Brother White is a stranger to many here, although he has worshiped for years at the Stone Church. He was present at the meeting and addressed the Saints briefly by request of President Smith. His earnest, humble talk, together with the commendation of Brother Elbert, brought to him the hearty support of the Saints, the vote being unanimous to receive him as pastor. Time was given at the close of the service for the Saints to meet him and Sister White and their young son, Edmund, and welcome them to Walnut Park.

Bishop B. J. Scott, a former pastor and recent associate pastor, had been compelled by circumstances to refuse nomination to continue the work, but he valiantly volunteered to assist the new officer in every way possible to carry the work forward, and the Saints are truly grateful to still have him with them to preach, teach, and counsel them, and to visit them as formerly in times of sickness and trial.

Brother White began his duties on Sunday, having charge of the forenoon preaching service. Prayer was by Brother Charles E. Blair.

The anthem, "How beautiful upon the mountain," was sung by the choir, Mrs. R. D. Weaver and Mr. Fred Horn soloists.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McMillin, Wanda Lynn, was blessed by Elders C. K. Green and F. W. Lanpher.

The sermon was by Elder Glaud Smith. Brother Smith has evidently been thoughtfully recalling church experiences, many and varied, which have been his during twelve years' residence at Walnut Park. Coming when the first efforts were being made to secure a church location here and enlisting with the first choir movement, or music class, he has known every pastor and practically every other worker in the branch and has worked on with the rest wherever he has been called to serve. He briefly reviewed developments here which show how God's hand has been sustaining the various efforts and has increased his faith until he foresees greater work that can yet be done by consecrated cooperation with the new leader and God.

The Religio program, provided by Sister Elmer Pennell, included good music, vocal and instrumental, by the juniors whom Sister Ethel Moorman is training, and a talk on the value of Boy Scout work by Sister Laura Mann Batemen.

At 7.30 Pastor White was in charge; prayer by Brother John Taylor. The song "Throw out the life line," was requested and was sung as a solo by Glaud Smith with the congregation singing unitedly on the chorus.

Colored slides of "The heritage of the Red Man"—beauty spots in America which have been their haunts—were shown; then Bishop B. J. Scott, in his evening sermon continued the thought of the Red Man, bringing out his greater "heritage"—his claim on the promises of the Good Shepherd, who has called them his "other sheep" and who will gather them, with all scattered Israel, ere his work on earth is consummated.

Music lovers of Independence will be delighted to know that our talented young contralto, Miss Margaret Gard, will give a complimentary recital at Walnut Park Church, Tuesday, May 24, at 8 p. m. Margaret receives her teacher's certificate in voice from Horner Institute-Kansas City Conservatory this spring. She will be assisted by Miss Lois Burnett, violinist, Miss Roberta Berry, reader, also students at Horner, and by Annie Torrance Roberts of Independence, accompanist. All those who appreciate good music and wish to encourage our young people in its cultivation are extended a cordial invitation to attend.

Enoch Hill

Bishop G. W. Eastwood was the Sunday morning speaker at Enoch Hill, and was accorded good attention by the congregation throughout the hour. His discourse was one which, if heeded, will aid the Saints in the practical as well as spiritual things of life.

The body of Earl Stanley Frick, son of Brother and Sister George W. Frick, who was drowned Sunday, May 8, at the foot of Guinotte Dam in the Blue River between Kansas City and Independence, was recovered at five o'clock last Sunday evening, near the place where the body went down. A crew of men were busy all week searching the stream. The body was found by a searching party from the naval reserve force in charge of H. R. Thurman. Funeral services were conducted at the Stone Church at one o'clock Monday afternoon. Elder J. M. Terry opened the meeting with prayer, and Brother Joseph Luff preached the sermon. A large number of Saints and friends gathered to pay last respects to the dead, and show sympathy for the sorrowing parents and relatives.

Sunday evening the Silver Wing Temple Builders of Liberty Street District presented their pageant, "Have they lived in vain?" The pageant was directed by Mrs. Pearl W. Moriarty, the girls' leader, and brought to the audience which crowded the church a lesson of lasting instruction as well as pleasing entertainment. This was the final performance of the pageant, the first having been given at Liberty Street last November. Pastor Brewer thanked the girls for their effort in behalf of the people of Enoch Hill.

Spring Branch

A splendid prayer service at 8.15 a. m. was enjoyed by a few of the faithful attendants of the early morning meeting.

An even one hundred were in attendance at the Sunday school session, with five perfect classes.

Elder John F. Sheehy preached a sermon characteristic of himself from the good old text, "Faith without works is dead, being alone." Sister Rosamond Filson played a prelude to this service, and the choir sang "Praises to our God and King."

At the evening service the K L D S Mandolin Club gave a fine half hour program, preceding a splendid sermon from a chart of the dispensations by Evangelist Ammon White.

The first of the series of six plays by the Royal Players was rehearsed Sunday afternoon. From the report of those who saw it, there will be no disappointed purchasers of tickets. To those who have not availed themselves of season tickets, single admission will be given for twenty-five cents. Remember each Monday night for six weeks. "Barbara" was presented Monday night, and "The burglar" is second on the list. The others will be announced from the platform and by handbills.

East Independence

On May 8 an interesting program was given on Mothers' Day at the eleven o'clock hour. It was planned by some of the mothers of Group 40, and the children who took part reside in that group. The entertainment consisted of dialogues, songs, readings, and drills, as well as a talk by Pastor Carmichael.

In the evening Apostle F. Henry Edwards gave an address on the subject, "Motherhood." It was an inspiring talk and made one feel like trying harder to do the work which God has given us to do. He brought out the thought that as we grow and develop, the word mother means more to us. Our varied experiences lead us to understand more and more the real meaning of motherhood. As Mary, the mother of Jesus, treasured these things up in her heart, so all true mothers do, and this will be the making of the future for our boys and girls.

Last Sunday Elder J. M. Terry was the morning speaker. He devoted his attention at this time to a discourse of warning and exhortation, telling how the enemy has his forces marshaled. We must first beware of Camp Lukewarmness, then of Camp Calamity, then Camp of Despondency, and lastly Camp Do Nothing. All of this was brought out in such an interesting way that the lessons came right home. How often Camp Despondency leads us into Camp Do Nothing!

Brother David Spease was the speaker Sunday evening, giving us an interesting sermon on the inner and outer man, and stressing the need of our trying to build up the inner man, not paying so much attention to the outer man, which perishes.

Mrs. J. N. Sherwin, 1000 South Copper Street, Deming, New Mexico, would like to hear from any Saints in Deming or vicinity.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

On Friday evening a very entertaining musicale was given at the church under the auspices of the Plus Ultra Club. The program consisted of vocal and instrumental numbers rendered by very talented participants, assisted by the Sunday school orchestra, which rendered several pleasing numbers. The musicale met a hearty response in attendance, and following the entertainment ice cream and cake were served in the banquet room. Such social features as these are an asset to the church, as they are not only recreational and educational, but serve to increase the spirit of good fellowship among the people.

The dawning of a beautiful May Sabbath Day, with the air quite invigorating, brought out an attendance of 314 at Sunday school, with a collection of $14.09. The day was devoted to quarterly stake conference, and there were several out-of-town visitors present.

A new interesting feature of the Sunday school is a boat contest, which will start May 29. It will be a race between the men and boys and the women and girls, each side selecting a first mate to properly steer their boat; the race will start from New York and proceed to the Land of Palestine. There will be given a punctuality prize, as well as the prize of reaching Palestine first, i. e., having scored the highest mileage percentage. Each visitor present will count a certain number of miles ahead, while new scholars and increased collection will prove an asset. However, those not present on time will serve a hindrance to their classes in the chance of winning the punctuality cup. These contests have proved quite beneficial to the Sunday school and have increased the enrollment considerably.

Byrma Sandy, an intermediate member, has again placed Central Sunday School on the honor roll, she having been one of the five winners of Kansas City in the National Hymn Study Contest sponsored by the Kansas City Council of Churches in cooperation with the Missouri Federation of Music Clubs. The contest has been promoted in the United States the last two years by the National Federation of Music Clubs, with a prize of $100 offered to the State Federation conducting the largest number of contests. Missouri was awarded this prize at a recent meeting in Chicago. Byrma will receive her cup next Sunday evening at the Grand Avenue Temple.

Bennington Heights Church

On Mothers' Day the eleven o'clock hour was turned over to the mothers, who gave talks and sang songs which awakened our appreciation for mothers. Sister Emma Etzenhouser, of Independence, helped the mothers with the program by giving a talk and singing a song about mother, which was written by her son. In the evening Brother Ralph Farrell preached.

Three persons were baptized Sunday, May 8: Sister Iola Clark, who has been selected to lead the Blue Birds; Brother E. H. Agin, who has been very active in the Sunday school work; and Brother Herman H. Binninger, husband of Sister Georgia Binninger who was baptized in May of last year.

The children have lost another of their faithful leaders. Sister Ethel Jackson, wife of Brother John Jackson, jr., died last week. Sister Jackson was a member of the church for three years, and has been a faithful worker in the choir and the primary department of the Sunday school. She was well known and loved, and the news of her death came as a shock to all.

Sister William Beaman, after a prolonged spell of sickness, is again attending the church meetings.

Armourdale Church

On Friday evening, May 6, stake superintendent of Religious Education, Elder J. Ray Lloyd, and stake superintendent of the Women's Department, Sister Fern Lloyd, were with us and each gave a very fine talk in the Religio, after which the Temple Builders served pie and cocoa. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

On Sunday, the 8th, Mothers' Day was observed, Elder W. B. Richards, the pastor, preaching the sermon at 11 o'clock. At 7.45 the cantata "Resurrection" was presented to a crowded house. In addition to those of Armourdale, the cast was augmented by Saints from Grandview and Chelsea churches.

One of the most active departments is the Temple Builders, Mrs. William Powell, leader.

The Sunday school and Religio continue to grow.

Second Kansas City Church

Meetings have been well attended and are increasing in numbers and spirituality. Two weeks ago four were added to our number by baptism, Sister Anna Page and her two sons, Howard and Marvin, and daughter Helen, were baptized by Brother H. R. Higdon. They live quite a distance from our church but have shown their zeal and interest by attending regularly.

Among our conference visitors was Berwyn Lungwitz and Brother and Sister Homer Twaddel, of California; Brother and Sister H. A. Higgins, of Des Moines; Evan Davis and wife and R. D. Weaver. Brothers Weaver, Davis, and Higgins preached for us, and our visitors helped us on our Easter program by contributing several vocal numbers.

Mothers' Day the Excelsior Class of Central Church visited us and rendered a splendid program, which was enjoyed and very much appreciated.

Sunday school and Religio are doing well; attendance and interest are good. Programs by the younger members help them and the older members as well.

Since conference we all have a greater desire to accomplish more and be earnest workers for the Master. Peace and harmony prevail among us.

810 East Dale Street

We have been visited lately by the heaviest rains in the history of this section of the country, and some of the large wholesale companies in the lower part of the business district of the city have suffered considerable loss on account of water in the basements. Otherwise we have cause to be thankful, for we are living on top of the Heart of the Ozark Mountains, and it is said the water drains two ways from North Springfield; south to James River and on to the White River, and north to the Sac River and on to the Osage River.

Brother L. N. White, of the Liberty Street Branch in Independence, has been a regular attendant at our services the past two weeks while in Springfield on business. This is Brother White's second visit with us of late. Brother White preached for us three times, and we found him to be a real worker.

A program was given Sunday evening, May 1, by the young people; also a nice Easter program during the Sunday school hour by the children. On Sunday evening, May 8, a beautiful Mothers' Day program was presented by the Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders, and although the weather was very unfavorable, a large congregation was present to enjoy the program. By 7.30 every seat was occupied.

Pastor Ansley recently made a night trip to Lake Taney-como in answer to a call for administration to Brother Monroe, who was seriously injured.

Our church is located at 810 East Dale Street, and we wish to extend an invitation to all visiting Saints when in our city, to meet with us.

Post Conference Comments

plied, "That is fine, but I find that I must take some care of the Lord's man."

It is assumed that the Saints wish the ministry to be presentable in dress and to maintain physical and mental efficiency as may be necessary in each individual case, and cases differ. The resolution without doubt calls for wise and careful economy rather than for a penurious and shabby scale of existence.

With these considerations in mind, it is fair to conclude that the church has a right to ask of the ministry, and in fact does ask, through this resolution, that they shall be wisely careful in financial matters and deny "unnecessary wants." And though the discussion turned mostly upon the ministry, it is to be presumed that the resolution covers the membership as well, since the revelation is so specific in that regard.

The principle of economy set forth seems not to aim at necessities which maintain body and mind in condition to serve; but rather at those unnecessary wants, those luxuries that, unobserved, deplete our finances unless we are watchful. Some save on the staples of life that the table may be set with knickknacks. That is not economy. Some scrimp in durable and warm clothing to buy a shred of silk. That is not economy.

The very spirit of the gospel of stewardships is that real needs and just wants shall be supplied. The spirit of sacrifice and economy demands repression of unnecessary wants. The resolution contemplates a concerted action throughout the church to thus economize and not only meet the current expenses of the year, but also begin to create a reserve fund. We can do it easily and find joy in it if we will.

As was indicated in one speech at the conference, Wrigley lives at Avalon in medieval splendor and has thousands of dollars with which to buy spectacular channel swims or gratify other personal whims because a very great number of people are willing to spend a very small sum of money each on a commodity which briefly distorts the human countenance and later gums up the sole of the unwary traveler through this vale of tears. Just a few cents each of tribute from many people buying a luxury enables Mr. Wrigley to build and maintain his estate at Avalon. Many ten-cent purchases maintain the great army of Woolworth stores. Many small sums coming from people who are willing to forego unnecessary wants will greatly help the church to carry out her program. Will you be one to help?

Institute of Methods in Religious Education

Before it is too late, every department worker should carefully analyze his personal affairs to see if he can not find some way in which to spare ten days at the Institute of Methods in Lamoni, June 2 to 12.

Here is a real opportunity. Careful planning and counseling together extending over a long period of time have resulted in programing the institute in a way that will make it resultful in the future work of those who attend.

If by sacrificing some anticipated pleasure, some long-hoped-for "extra," you can arrange to attend, you will not regret it. That is, of course, if you are willing to work and work hard; not that you should get the idea that work is drudgery at the institute; it is not. You will find it the most fascinating, the most interesting, and the most absorbing kind of work that you ever attended. It is calculated to send you home with better equipment, more information, greater determination, and a vision of the forward-looking program of this church—all of which is calculated to make you a better servant for Christ.

For information and reservation address F. M. McDowell, Box 255, Independence, Missouri; or C. B. Woodstock, Lamoni, Iowa.

Education and Leadership

In the column devoted to matters "Of General Interest" will be found reproduced a short editorial taken from the Kansas City Star for Sunday, December 6. The writer is dealing with the problem of the abandoned country church, and accounting for it by presenting the fact that uneducated and untrained leaders are assigned the task of leading the church organizations in rural communities, which have advanced in these particulars to a point beyond the men designated to lead them.

By quotation from Doctor M. A. Dawber, of the Home Mission Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by calling attention to the advancement of the schools in rural districts, the editor reasons that community life has advanced materially. Now he points out that the church is as vital a factor as the school, and that where religious development does not keep pace with educational and other forms of progress, there is bound to come a separation, and leaves the reader to conclude that the church is dying because its leaders have been chosen from among the class who have neglected their opportunities to advance—the church has, therefore, failed to advance, and the cleavage is a natural result.

We are in sympathy with the editorial writer and believe that in large measure his conclusions, both stated and inferred, are correct. Inasmuch as Latter Day Saints are forced to meet conditions of weakening and death of rural and small-town congregations, it might be well to give the element of a trained leader a contemplative consideration.

No untrained leader can hope to build up and hold together a congregation which is far ahead of himself in either spiritual or mental equipment—and high mental equipment seldom consists in natural endowment alone, but almost universally in natural gifts and acquired training. It may be we will find a few men who have a goodly mental equipment who have not attended any school of higher education, but among these few it is safe to say the great majority have found a substitute for the school, and that substitute has taken a heavier toll of time and effort than would have been taken by the organized school. We can afford to give consideration to the solution offered.

Pastoral

To the Priesthood of Central Oklahoma District: The Seventy-second Annual Conference is over and has marked a period of progress never before attained since what is known as the period of the apostolic church. Inspiration, education, and unification were its earmarks; its apparent aims were to bring the priesthood to a oneness of thought and action, or to unify them upon things that pertain to life and godliness, that they might be one in their interpretation of the written word into terms of action, that contentions might cease, and that there might be no poor among us; and that we might be able to present to the world an actual working demonstration of what Jesus called the second commandment, Leviticus 19:18, Matthew 22:39. As a church this is our first goal; as individuals, our first duty is to delight in the law of the Lord; and according to a spiritual law we will do unto others as we would that they should do unto us, which is the keeping of the second commandment. Theories and ideals are fine and furnish splendid pictures for our imaginings, but God requires doings, action, a demonstration (be ye doers); they are the ones that are to be blessed in their deeds. It therefore follows that the one great burden upon the church is to furnish an actual working demonstration of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In the past, the church "labored" and did bring forth the kingdom of God and his Christ, and established them in the earth, and there were no poor among them, but the forces of the Adversary drove her into an unseen state, and in her stead appeared the Mother of Abominations, supplanting her, and making all nations drink of the wrath of her fornication.

But unto us, the priesthood of the holy order of the Son of God, have been committed the keys of that kingdom, which carry with them the right, privilege, and duty to act for and in the stead of Christ; to set up again his kingdom, that there may be prepared a peculiar people, and that his wife may make herself ready for his reappearing.

This is the work whereunto we have set our hands and dedicated our lives, brethren; therefore, let us not turn from the plow, but "go to" with our might, all that is at our command, for we surely have counted the cost, for it requires a total submerging of self, to the interest of the whole, and if the yoke is not easy, and the burden is not light, it is because of the roughness of the neck, and weakness of the back that is carrying them; so let's be strong in faith and courageous in the might of his power, and furnish the working together with God, that his purpose of bringing to pass his "marvelous work" upon the earth may be hastened in its time; for by what are we profited if we gather to ourselves the substance of the whole earth, and in the end lose our own souls? for the glory of man is as the flower of the grass. There must be equality of opportunity, and to bring about this condition we must not only be able and competent to give advice and counsel, but be willing to receive and put into execution the same.

These duties fall primarily upon the priesthood, as leaders and exemplars, for we are to see that the law is kept, and are called to a knowledge as husbandmen that have partaken of the fruit, that we of a surety may be able to recommend it to others. Having first complied with the law ourselves, we are the better fitted to see that others do so, as well as to direct them in the proper manner in which they should comply.

Harmony is the great unifying force that will remove friction, strife, contention, and bring us into a oneness with each other and into a perfect contact with God. So, brethren, let us work together to that end, for it will bring mankind back

Our Departed Ones

VAN PATTEN.—Lulu M. Van Patten was born Lulu Lockerby, daughter of James and Elsie Lockerby, in Butler Township, Branch County, Michigan, March 11, 1877. For several years she with the family resided in Quincy, where she prepared to become an educator in the schools of Branch County. She taught for a period of three years. Was baptized July 10, 1892, by S. W. L. Scott and led a devoted life. On February 7, 1899, she married Myron Van Patten, of Litchfield, Michigan, and to them five children were born: Myrtle, who preceded her in death in 1917, John, Arlyce, Mildred, and Geraldine. Sister Van Patten's illness dates back to some time before March 23, 1926, when she underwent an operation for goiter which did not result in the expected benefits. She passed up the shining way April 23, 1927, at Ann Arbor, leaving her husband, four children, one grandchild, one brother, Earl, of Vienna, and Virginia, and many friends. Funeral was from the farm home at Litchfield, Michigan, April 27, 1927. S. W. L. Scott officiated and was assisted by Reverend Birchfield, of the Litchfield Methodist Church.

FULLER.—F. M. Fuller was born in 1845. He was baptized in April, 1868, in Monroe County, Alabama, by Brother Isaac Beebe, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and has been a faithful member, loyal to the work, ever ready to defend it. He suffered many persecutions for the cause, even severe wounds of the flesh, but his faith never wavered. The wonderful testimonies left by him are numerous and spiritually uplifting. He passed away Thursday morning, April 28, at Eros, Louisiana. Surviving and active in the church are his six children, forty-one grandchildren, and fifty-six great-grandchildren. Brother Fuller was made to rejoice many times that all his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren who were old enough had embraced the latter-day gospel. The bereaved are his wife, of Eros, Louisiana; James A. Fuller, Eros; John A. Winfield, Louisiana; W. Heman, Nowata, Oklahoma; Mrs. Curtis Malone, Kennett, Missouri; Ed. Fuller, Kennett, Missouri, and Mrs. Emma Thornell, Al-leene, Arkansas.

RAWSON.—Mary E. Rawson, daughter of Joseph and Eleanor Barss, was born January 29, 1869, at Chelsea, Ontario. When sixteen years of age, she came with the family to Harbor Beach, where they settled on a farm, four miles south of the city. There she grew to womanhood, and was baptized August 10, 1885. On July 25, 1888, she married Thomas Rawson, and to them eleven children were given, eight daughters and three sons, nine of whom survive. One daughter died in infancy, and the eldest daughter, Mabel, passed away three years ago. For a number of years Sister Rawson has been in poor health, and on April 19 she was taken to Grace Hospital, where she underwent an operation for goiter on the 21st. She passed away Sunday, the 24th. Funeral services were held at the home the following Wednesday afternoon, Elder Willard Parks, of Sandusky, Michigan, conducting the meeting. Besides her family, she leaves five brothers and two sisters, other relatives, and many friends. Interment in Rock Falls Cemetery.

Omitting the preambles, we reprint the resolutions under discussion in last week's HERALD:

Be It Resolved: That the policy of the church respecting finances for the interconference period 1927-28 shall be

To provide funds for the care and expenses of General Conference appointees and their families, together with the general administrative expense;

To provide for the care of the poor and needy and expenses incident to the operation of the homes for the aged;

To supply the budget adopted by General Conference for Graceland College;

To provide for the building of a basement of a dormitory for Graceland College as fast as funds are available;

To provide for the continuance of the building of the Auditorium as fast as the observance of the foregoing shall release funds that were subscribed for that purpose which were utilized to supply past financial needs of the general church, or as may be provided otherwise by General Conference, or Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Order of Bishops.

And Be It Further Resolved That We Recommend: That the Christmas offering be used in support of the general missionary work of the church;

That stakes, districts, local congregations, and reunion associations be requested to make no local expenditures in any considerable sum or incur any local indebtedness except such as shall be approved by the First Presidency, and Presiding Bishopric or their representatives, and the member of the Twelve in charge of the respective field;

That the church through the Presiding Bishopric and the entire ministry of the church shall make special efforts to increase the church income through the divinely appointed channels of tithing, surplus, and offering.

The care of the ministerial force is first mentioned, as that force objectively represents the spiritual commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and the associated commission to care for those who respond to the gospel's call, under the injunction to Peter, "Lovest thou me? Then feed my sheep." Missionary and pastoral work are involved in the great commission to preach the gospel in all the world.

The second provision is made for the poor and needy. Thirdly, Graceland College is mentioned and later was provided for by the yearly budget approved by the conference. Fourthly comes the Auditorium.

A subsequent session of the conference authorized the placing of a loan to be secured by the building itself, that it may be completed to the point where it may be occupied by the General Conference something as the basement was this year.

One important point covered by the resolution and not yet commented on to any extent, is that referring to the incurring of debts by local congregations, districts, stakes, and reunions. At first glance some one might ask why the general church has aught to say about local expenses or indebtedness. The reply is found in the very nature of our work and organization.

Our work is presumed to have been given us of God, and the organization that is to do the work is authoritative. He designed it. And it so happens in the divine mind that the great and fundamental lines of the work given us to do are intrusted to the church as a whole. Local organizations support the whole church in its work and have part therein.

Our missionary work, our care of the aged and poor, our publishing interests, our educational institutions, all are sustained and administered by the general church—the whole church. It follows that from far-flung branches, districts, and stakes there must flow to the general church, constantly, moral, spiritual, and financial support, or the work of the church can not be done.

Branches or districts that assume an isolated attitude and feel that they are locally adequate and sufficient unto themselves and need not concern themselves in the general church program or support it, do not fit into the divine program. Such a course, generally followed, soon would be suicidal, for soon there would be no general organization, and it would shortly thereafter follow that there would be no local organizations.

Branches, districts, stakes are vitally concerned in the upkeep of the whole church. Only through it can they help in the greater work given to the church. They should be keenly alive to its interests, in touch through the church papers and their delegates and representatives with its affairs and work and ready to contribute financially to its needs.

There is a tendency, however, to become engrossed in the work immediately at hand; to see local needs big and distant needs small. A moment's thought, however, will reveal the fact that if all or even many local congregations and districts became involved heavily in building projects, purchase of reunion grounds, etc., the flow of revenue to the Presiding Bishopric would be sadly diminished and the work of the general church be hindered or crippled. To an extent that has already happened.

The resolution seeks to guard against that condition. It is recognized that the local people understand the local situation and its needs; but they can not always judge those needs in their relation to the needs of the whole field. Though living at one particular place, they do have a vital interest in the whole field. The general church officers have a view of the needs of the entire field as well as the local situation. By consultation with the Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and the members of the Twelve in a particular field, a better judgment should be reached as to the wisdom of local expenditures in large sums in relation to the needs of the whole church.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Questions and Answers

Question: What is the conception of the church, of members joining secret societies; such as I. O. O. F., and Masons?

Answer: This question was submitted to the Presiding Bishopric, whose answer in part is as follows: "Undoubtedly if the church was functioning as it should and made full preparations for the caring of the families left without financial income, on the death of the father, there would be very little if any incentive for joining these organizations. Until the church ceases the sin of omission, it would not be a wise policy to try to urge any of its members not to join such beneficiary societies."

This answer of the Bishop's was doubtless made from the viewpoint of fraternal insurance, charity, protection, etc. The attitude of the church, in the light of General Conference action had in 1907, is to discourage members joining secret orders. That action (General Conference Resolutions, Number 593) is as follows:

"That we discourage members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints from holding membership in any order which requires the taking of oaths or the entering into covenant or obligation to guard the secrets, purposes, or doings of its organization."

This is a bit at variance with the action of conference had in 1875 (Resolution number 175), which is as follows:

"That in the opinion of this body, this church has no right to subvert the liberties of its members by prohibiting their membership with what is known as 'a secret society,' unless such society shall first be condemned by either a decision of the General Assembly of the church, or by the law of the land."

F. M. S.

Question: Can you give me reference where it says that clothing should be tithed? I understand that clothing is our just needs.

Answer: There is no specific reference that we know of that mentions one's clothing as tithable. The law is that a person should pay one tenth of all he has more than his needs (see Inspired Translation Genesis 14: 22), or one tenth of his increase.

A person comes into this world owning nothing. He lives, say, until he is twenty-two years old, then joins the church. He should now determine just how much his net worth is in order to be able to tell what is his tithe. To do this intelligently, he should make his financial statement, showing what his assets are; also his liabilities. His assets consist of all he owns, which includes his clothing. After his clothing has been tithed once, he need not tithe it again. If he adds to the value of his clothing, this added value should be tithed.

Question: Why should we make arrangements such as giving notes, checks, etc., when we have tithing to pay? Why not pay it at once? I understand tithing is one tenth of the increase, and we would still have nine tenths left.

Answer: The tithe should be paid at once if possible. It is a debt we owe God. Checks are the equivalent of cash, or should be, so it is right to pay your tithe with a check. Notes should not be taken in payment of the tithe if the tithe can be paid in cash or its equivalent.

The giving of a note for the payment of the tithe or the surplus is primarily to protect the interest of the church in case of the death of the tithe payer before the tithe is paid. This enables the holder of the note (the church) to collect the tithe out of the estate of the deceased tithe payer, thus assuring the deceased tithe payer that his tithe will be paid. Some Saints feel that if they give a note for their tithe they will feel the obligation to pay the same greater than if they owed it on account.

Question: Why should we guess at the value of our material things, such as farms, live stock, etc., and pay one tenth of the guess when it states clearly we should pay one tenth of the increase?

Answer: We should not "guess" at the value of our assets or liabilities, if we mean by the word guess to form an opinion concerning values without knowledge or means of knowledge. Guessing as to values should be resorted to only when it is impossible for us to ascertain facts which will warrant us in placing a certain value on the thing under consideration. Sometimes we are required to tithe the cost of the thing owned, and sometimes the market value. Let us illustrate:

"A" joins the church. He proceeds to make out his first financial statement. He should value all of his holdings at a fair market value, not make a guess as to the value. By judicious inquiry, he can obtain information enabling him to approximately and fairly value his belongings, including land, live stock, etc.

"A" may know what this land and live stock cost him. It may have cost him a great deal more than the market value at the time he makes his inventory, but at the time he bought it he did not know of the law of tithing, and therefore is not responsible. His ignorance is his excuse, so he begins when he becomes awake to the fact that he is a steward of God; makes out his first financial statement.

Now "A" begins his year's work under the stewardship plan, keeping an account of various amounts paid out and received. If he buys a piece of land and pays $5,000 for it, his account should show that, and at the end of the year he should put it in his assets and show he paid $5,000 for it. The same is true of his live stock. If he should pay out $300 for a cow, he should assess the cow at the end of the year for $300. In this case the cow is tithed at cost.

In case he has some young calves which are growing up during the year, he will have to assess these calves at a certain value at the end of the year when he makes out his second statement. He must not "guess" as to the value of the calves. He should by judicious inquiry find out the market value of these growing calves and put this market value in his assets. Here the tithing is paid on the market value and not the cost, for it may be impossible in his case to determine the cost of this stock to him.

Condensed Radio Programs Weekly

Beginning next week, K L D S will try to furnish HERALD readers with more detailed information concerning K L D S programs than can be used by the various program magazines and newspaper syndicates. Amount of space required to print detailed programs prohibits their being printed, as was done several years ago when K L D S was employing about one fourth as much time on the air as at present. The programs in the HERALD hereafter will contain a more detailed list of names of people to appear on programs, as these names are of much interest to acquaintances throughout the church.

The regular weekly schedule of K L D S, revised to date, follows: Sundays: 8.30 a. m., 9 a. m., 11 a. m., 2 p. m., 3 p. m., 6.30 p. m., and 9.15 p. m. Tuesdays: 6.30 a. m., 7 a. m., 2.30 p. m., 7 p. m., and 8 p. m. Thursdays: 2.30 p. m., 7 p. m., and 8 p. m. Fridays: 6.30 a. m. and 7 a. m. Saturdays: 7 p. m. and 8 p. m.

William Jewell Closes Season's Broadcasting

The final program of the school year was broadcast by remote control from William Jewell College, Wednesday evening, May 25, at which time the College Glee Club presented the oratorio, "The Holy City." The soloists are frequently heard on K L D S studio programs: Louise Mason, soprano; Mrs. Grace Fritz, contralto; Archibald Todd, tenor; Kenneth Jarman, baritone.

K L D S has been broadcasting lectures and musical features from William Jewell College for several years, and next fall the college plans to use more regular schedules than in the past.

Mrs. S. A. Burgess to Present Radio English Study

Beginning May 31, at 7 a. m. Mrs. S. A. Burgess, also known by many HERALD readers as Alice Burgess, will present the regular weekly English radio lessons, which were instituted by Ralph W. Farrell. Sister Burgess has had a wealth of experience in the teaching of English, and radio listeners will be glad to learn of the opportunity to take her radio English course.

Brother Farrell, the K L D S radio pastor, is to take over the Sunday vesper hour sermonet, which has been delivered during the winter months by Elder U. W. Greene. Elder Greene finds it necessary to be in a cooler climate during the hot summer weather.

A New Radio Feature Next Week

A series of voice talks by Jessie Wilson Towner will be broadcast from K L D S, beginning Thursday, June 2, at 7.15 p. m. These five-minute talks on voice culture and singing will be continued each Thursday evening at the same period.

K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club in Last Program of Season

On Thursday evening, June 2, the K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club, under the direction of Brother Ralph G. Smith, of Independence, will present its last radio program until next fall. This organization, which includes members of the old Independence Mandolin and Guitar Club, has been broadcasting a program each month during the last winter season and has made many radio friends.

Fourteen Special Courses Are Offered at the Institute

The 1927 Institute of Methods in Religious Education, at Lamoni, Iowa, has been extensively advertised throughout the church, and a number of active departmental workers in districts and locals have already enrolled and asked for room reservations. That all may be informed of the exact nature of the courses offered, we submit the following brief statements. The time of each class is also given, so a student may select the courses it is possible for him to enter.

A minimum of four class hours carried for six days will entitle a student to a certificate equivalent to two units of the Teacher Training Course.

General enrollment for the Institute, including admission to all lectures and evening programs, $3.00. Local Assembly ticket entitling the holder to attend the assembly lectures and one class period daily, $1.00. Additional class periods for the week, fifty cents each.

For full information and for enrollment and reservation, write F. M. McDowell, Independence, Missouri, or C. B. Woodstock, Lamoni, Iowa. Enrollment Saturday, June 4; opening, June 5; classes begin Monday, June 6.

The Courses

Mrs. Overton.—Dramatization.

Mrs. Overton is a nationally recognized specialist in the use of the drama as a means of giving information and inspiration through the message of acted plays. Possessed of a charming personality and a command of the technique of her art, she has won success as a leader in the field of religious education. Her course will consist of six lectures, introducing her students to the possibilities of various types of dramatization as they may be used in Sunday school, young people's work, and in community activities. She will discuss methods of using the drama, acquaint her class with the rich resources from which material may be drawn, and demonstrate its use.

Mrs. Overton will open the Institute on Sunday evening, June 5, and have class sessions at 8.25 and 1.30 daily Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, also giving a popular assembly address on these days at 9.20.

Miss Vesta Towner.—Story-telling.

Miss Towner is an artist in the art of story-telling, as used in religious education. Her course will be of special interest to mothers and teachers of children, though her personality is so pleasing and her skill so unusual that her lectures will be popular. She will discuss and illustrate the principles of story-telling, the qualities of a good story, and methods of character building through the use of stories.

Miss Towner will occupy Mrs. Overton's class periods on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, having the assembly hour also on Friday.

F. M. McDowell.—Psychological Foundations—7.30.

This will be a continuation of Mr. McDowell's popular lecture course at former institutes. From his extensive study, his broad experience as a teacher, and his deep conviction as to the value of religious motives, habits, and attitudes, he brings a rich message to workers with children and young people. Upon the basic facts of human life and behavior, he will help his students lay the foundation for effective methods in religious education.

E. E. Closson.—Methods in Recreation—3.20.

Recreation will be treated in its relation to the physical, mental, and spiritual natures of the individual and of the group. This will be a laboratory course, in which a wide range of type recreational activities will be presented, discussed, and actively participated in by the students. It will be followed at 4.15 by a demonstrational play hour. This is essentially a course for the training of leaders of young people.

The Church's Program for Boys—11.10.

In this course an effort will be made to analyze the physical, mental, moral, social, and religious needs of boys and to determine the most efficient way of meeting that need. Advantages and disadvantages of available organizations will be freely discussed. The vital question is: How shall we lead our boys to build up a strong, healthy physique; an alert, clean, trained mind; a wholesome, helpful attitude toward others and toward life; and a normal, happy, spiritual experience giving tone, stability, and religious significance to the whole range of his activities.

Blanche Edwards.—The Women's Department Program—2.25.

In this course the superintendent will discuss the various needs of the women of the church and attempt the elaboration of a varied program of study and work which will challenge the best effort of all and develop those qualities and abilities making for the highest type of womanhood and efficiency in the church.

Laboratory Work in Dramatization—10.15.

This course is designed to follow Mrs. Overton's lecture course. A number of type dramatizations will be studied from the standpoint of production. A fair introduction and a working knowledge of several good plays should be obtained in the course.

A. M. Carmichael.—The New Manual Method—2.25.

For the first time the product of years of study, research, and compilation by a group of our own editors is to be available in printed form. Mr. Carmichael will personally explain and demonstrate the principles underlying the methods of the new manual. Through the normal activities of the child and in specially planned projects, the reactions of the children are studied, giving a key to his specific needs. In story, play, song, scripture reading, prayer, discussion, etc., the child is helped to evaluate his experiences and to choose those responses which shall develop habits and attitudes of true Christian character.

Lonzo Jones.—Parentcraft—11.10.

This course, listed under "Wight" in the program was to have been offered by Mrs. Lydia Wight, specialist in home management in the Department of Women. It is found impossible for her to be present, and Dean Lonzo Jones, of Graceland College, will conduct the course. He has been teaching a most unique and successful class in parents' problems in the Lamoni Sunday school during the past year. His institute course will sum up in an organized way the method and possible content of such a course. The following topics are assigned for discussion: "The task of parent-hood," the "Problems of obedience," "Sex," "Right and wrong," the "Use of time," and the "Use of money."

Mrs. C. B. Woodstock.—The Church's Program for Girls—11.10.

A program for the best development of our girls into healthy, happy, efficient Christian womanhood, with a clear consciousness of life's sacred responsibilities, with high ideals and noble purposes, motivated by a love of truth, purity, and beauty as revealed in the gospel of Christ, such is the subject matter of this course. The plan, purpose, and method of work with girls in the Blue Bird, Oriole, and Temple Builder organizations will be closely studied. The present manuals are being revised, to make all the activities as rich and valuable as possible. Each student is expected to help in a constructive way in this laboratory work.

C. B. Woodstock.—Administrative Problems—10.15.

Pertinent problems of organization and efficiency in man-

Mothers' Day Sermon

BY APOSTLE PAUL M. HANSON

At the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, May 8, 1927.

I invite your attention to a few words recorded in the 19th chapter of the book of John, 25th, 26th, and 27th verses:

Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

In 1913 the second Sunday of May was set apart in all civilized lands as a day to pay tribute to the mothers of men. What could be more in keeping with the dignity and the sacred purposes of the occasion than a tribute to them in the house of God. With this large congregation, we invite our larger radio audienct to join in the service.

Among the most beautiful and impressive words of our vocabulary are home, mother, love, God. The home, an institution of divine origin, was intended to be a heaven in miniature, a fixed place of abode, marked by companionship and peace; a congenial and law-abiding place. When rightly ordered, it is a place from which reluctant good-byes are spoken, and to which we joyfully return.

Three Important Factors of Life

The greatest factors, perhaps, entering into the molding of the life of man are the home, the church, and the school. Often the sentiment of these few lines finds residence in our hearts:

"How dear to my heart, wherever I roam,
Are the scenes of my childhood and home, sweet home."

In the home are expressed the qualities that are akin to the divine character. In it we learn as nowhere else the meaning and sense the value of sincerity, thrift, tenderness, forgiveness, honesty, love, forbearance, sacrifice, and faithfulness. What chance has a young man or young woman going out from a home where these qualities are not exemplified, in word and in example? I believe a large part of the world's crime can be traced to poorly equipped homes, and from these the young go out not fitted to fight the battles of life. They go out from these to an environment that is not good, with no true values of things that are eternal. There is a lack of acquaintance, therefore, with things that are essential and fundamental and, mark it, nothing can take the place of true home life, education, and training. The problems of crime and social distress, and those things that perplex us perhaps more than anything else, can not be settled, can not be prevented by public authority through the laws and courts and policemen.

The mother is acquainted with the life of her child as is no one else. No one can ever be so close to the child as its mother. From her the child hears the lullabys that bring it gradually into conscious contact with the external world. Harmony in the notes that go from the mother's voice into the child's soul give to it a sense of rhythm and harmony, and consequently early fortifies it against sin, which is the opposite of harmony.

At our mother's knee we learned our first prayer. How we prayed those simple words at her knee, with hands clasped, as they were repeated to us, and line by line we memorized them! The habit was formed, and then, even though mother might not be near, our conscience would not permit us to jump into bed without dropping down on the floor and saying:

"How I lay me down to sleep,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take."

And then with the feeling that somehow our little lives were in the custody of one whom we understood but little, but felt we did understand, there was a readiness to fall into slumber, feeling that all was secure.

The First Consciousness of God

I do not remember when there first came to me a consciousness of God. I doubt if very many do. I can go back and I can recall my mother talking about the things of God, his goodness, his love, what his will was in giving his Son, Jesus Christ, to the world; but I go back farther than that. I have heard her tell how she was healed by the power of God from a cancer when I was but a baby. Then farther back I go, and I find myself bowing at her knee and being taught to pray. Then farther back the lullabys come to mind, and back, back, I do not remember when, there came to me the first consciousness of the supreme Being.

A mother's admonitions give tone and character to our lives. Like begets like, and there in the home whenever she was present we found there was always a reverence for what was sacred, a love for the truth. And under her teachings our conscience was developed.

In tender solicitude for our success, she challenges all others. She never loses faith in us. She never told us we were stupid; she knew if we weren't it was false, and if it were true it was cruel. Her sacrifices were always before us: in the early days, doing little tasks that really and rightfully belonged to us that we might advance and prepare ourselves for life. When social events drew us, she took our place in a larger way, that seeking contacts. To be religious is to possess a passion for truth, an appreciation for goodness, and an eagerness to have the love and will of God expressed through our lives. It means to be sensitive to the spiritual above us, around us, and within us.

The loss is irreparable to the child if it has not had the care that includes the sum total of all these qualities that have been set forth. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God." And, being a spiritual being, how can he thrive without these qualities and these nourishing factors and influences that emanate from a true home? Not any more than the flower can bloom and thrive when deprived of sunshine and shower.

The Source of Noble Men

Noble sons are born of good mothers. Let us turn to one case wherein this can be demonstrated. Among the most distinguished of men stands Moses, and it is interesting to learn his history.

In the 11th chapter of the book of Hebrews are a few verses which I ask you to permit me to read. Note now the character of this man in his later years, in his manhood; then we shall turn and read of his childhood:

By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment. By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.—Verses 23-27.

Because the people of Israel would not follow him, he was able to bring them only to a partial state of development, and this Mosaic regime, as it has been called, was a shadow of good things to come. What was it that prompted him to want to go back and be with his brothers and suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season? What inspired him to make the decision that the reproach of Christ, as some esteemed it, was greater than all the riches of Egypt? What led to the development so that finally he endured as seeing him who is invisible? Day by day, always, it seemed to him that God was visible.

In the 2d chapter of the book of Exodus is recorded something of the childhood of Moses. His life did not dawn with auspicious promise. Pharaoh had decreed and given out the order that every male child should be thrown into the river and every daughter should be saved. A child was born we might attend them; and even on the farm and in the home she took our place to prepare the way that we might attend college.

She Taught Us Virtue and Religion

From mother perhaps has come the ability to understand the wondrous words of Jesus, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." We sensed life as she demonstrated it to us. We felt the marvelous and appealing power of forgiveness. She never punished us for telling the truth concerning a wrong. She taught us to resist temptations; to acquire good taste; to love the good and despise the evil; to sense that what is coarse is ugly; and to shun evil companionship and always shrink from falsehood and deception.

Mother taught us to be religious. What is it to be religious? It is the deepest thing in the world. It has to do with spiritual, yet practical, ideals. It is the reaching of the soul up into the divine, and into a family of the tribe of Levi. The parents looked upon him, and the mother said, as the record states, that he was a goodly child. What mother would not think that of her child? And she began to think, "Life, wondrous as it is, has found expression in a miraculous way, and here in my arms is a child with possibilities. Who can say what they are?" And she said in her heart, "I am not going to throw that boy into the river." And she hid him for three months. Then, no doubt, the child began to let others in his presence know that he was around, and the mother then made an ark and daubed it with pitch and slime, put him into it, and put it in the water of the river and let it float downstream while his sister stood afar off watching what might happen to him.

Pharaoh's daughter came along there to bathe, and she saw the ark and told her maids to get it. And when she opened the ark, there was the little baby. It began to weep, and she had compassion on it, for she saw it was a proper child. Moses' sister, who was standing afar off, now drew near and said to Pharaoh's daughter, "Would you like to have a nurse of the Hebrew women to nurse the child?" And Pharaoh's daughter said, "Yes; go and secure a nurse from the Hebrews." She went right to her mother and brought her, and then they talked about the wages. That part isn't in the Bible, but we know that was talked of without its being put there; for whoever saw a Hebrew who couldn't make a price? And Pharaoh's daughter promised her that she would pay her her wages.

Mother's Solicitude

When the child was grown up, Moses' mother took him to Pharaoh's daughter and he became her son, adopted. What else could that mother do? And in the eyes of Moses' mother were tears. Her pillow was wet many a night. I do not believe there are many sons who grow up from mothers who do not at some time wet their pillows with tears of anxiety for the welfare of the children, and I have no doubt that mother said, "Lord, you have given me the boy; I have done what I can to take care of him; I haven't feared the king's decree, and if you will take care of him you shall have him."

Do you suppose that mother ever lost sight of that boy? On state occasions, midst the royal pomp and splendor, do you suppose that mother was not on hand? What did she see—the pomp and all of that? No; her eyes were watching, and hers would be the first to see that boy. Did she ever fail to lose contact with him? Never. No mother such as Moses had could ever lose contact with her boy.

And when the days had passed, Moses began to assert himself. He would not be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. And then as he thought of the tears of his mother, the social injustice and the prayers answered, he became conscious of God, and there began to unfold in his mind a sense of justice and right of which his Egyptian mother was not acquainted.

God spoke through such a man as that. So one day when he was keeping the sheep off in the pastures, compelled to get out of Egypt, the Lord spake to him, and through Moses and the Mosaic system have come to us the highest known laws relating to the welfare of the home. Consider the ten commandments; consider the statutes and the judgments and the laws that have to do with right relationships between man and man.

In that which was accomplished through this man, we find the type of Zion, the kingdom of God, in operation in its fullness among men.

We could turn to other men who had noble mothers, but time will not permit. We could turn to Samuel, to John the Baptist, and to others.

Mother's Pattern Must Be Followed

In order for happiness to exist in any home, there must be an attitude of kindly recognition and appreciation on the part of the inmates of the home toward each other. In the pulpits throughout the land today, tributes are being paid to the devotion and loving character of our mothers. Let this good work not be confined to the pulpits. In the homes everywhere let there be an especial act of kindness and loving attention paid to the mothers. If she be absent, send words of cheer as an appreciation of what she has done. This will bring indescribable pleasure and happiness.

I will now read in conclusion an article that recently was published in one of the leading Kansas City papers, entitled, "A mother speaks":

A MOTHER SPEAKS

I hold aloft the torch and set it farther on.

I have gone down to the brink of dark waters and from the cold shadows brought back warm and precious life.

I am an inspiration and a victim.

I have known reverence and ingratitude, adoration and neglect.

I have drunk of joys that heaven will not make sweeter.

I have felt griefs that endless torment could not make more keen.

I have been borne aloft on wings softer than those of angels.

I have seen in loving eyes the light that never was on sea or land.

I have known the callous cruelty of indifference, the pain of being left behind on the path of life, the agony of "superiority."

I have known the joy of being told that my white hairs are the beauty of undying youth.

I have known the anguish of being told that I was never young.

I have known the gladness of sacrifice and its sweet appreciation.

I have known the happiness of remorse for unmeant indifference, of regret that "they did not realize."

I have slept on pillows softer than down, in which no unfilial hand had ever placed a thorn.

I have received tributes, nobler than any paid to kings and warriors, from those who testified that what they did and were they owed to me.

I have seen stalwart sons grow into the likeness of him I loved, and sweet daughters become what I longed to be.

I have known the glory of fulfillment, the fame of contented security, the humble renown of a completed mission, the overflowing repayment for having given myself.

I AM A MOTHER.

—Frank A. Marshall, in the Kansas City Journal.

Ritual in Worship.—Part 1

BY THOMAS S. WILLIAMS

Ritual is usually justified from its legal, theological, and historical aspects; little or no attention is given its social utility or its usefulness in meeting the operations and conditions of the human mind. It seems to the writer that its justification is not found in its conformity to a constitutional standard alone, or in its harmony with an ancient creed; neither in tracing it to its historical sources. The use of the ritual can best be vindicated if it be found to meet a human need; if it satisfies a real want in the lives of men.

The religious uplift of both individual and group must be the supreme purpose of ritual. The effort to make it conform to a legal strait-jacket must not stand in the way of its contribution to man's mental and social needs and wants. I would not depreciate the value of a legal and historical defense of ritual; it must have these to make it effective. But if the rite becomes merely the perpetuation of an antiquated custom, thus becoming an end in itself, it may with profit be dropped as a rite in the church.

Ritual as a Symbol

The real meaning of religious truth (any truth, in fact,) lies deep beneath the surface. "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing." The ritual is symbolic; a sign of something else. To be worth while it must be a truth clothing itself in a picture, appealing to the mind and the feelings through the imagination. The ritual may be (and to be worth while must be) the preserver and at the same time the transmitter of religious values, ideals, and standards. "The elusive contacts and subtle realities of the world of the spirit must wear something, if we are to grasp them at all. They must wear something easily recognized by the human eye and heart."

Men have bodies. They worship with their physical beings as well as in spirit. "The spirit and the body is the soul of man." In fact, the inner man can not be reached other than through the sense organs of the outer man. Religion, as all other of man's impulses, is rooted deep in his fleshly tabernacle. The mental life of the average individual is so wedded to the concrete that he can not grasp an abstract religion. The ritual gives man something of an objective nature to which he can tie.

So ritual must be the tool of religious teachers, for it is an aid to the soul to discover and recognize the truths of God. "In the symbol proper, . . . there is ever, more or less distinctly and directly, some embodiment and revelation of the Infinite; the Infinite is to blend itself with the Finite, to stand visible and, as it were, attainable there. By symbols accordingly man is guided and commanded, made happy, made wretched."—Thomas Carlyle.

The Danger in Ritual

That there is a danger in formal worship can not be denied. History is replete with evidences of it. We shall outline briefly some of the pits into which the ceremonial worshiper may fall.

Form may be substituted for spirit; worship may take on the form of a dress parade. The spiritual symbolism may be lost in the glamour and pomp of the ritual. Many rites conceived in purity have become gross because the truths which their symbolism originally conveyed have lost their primary meaning. Thus the ritual becomes the masquerade of religious truth rather than the means of its revelation.

The ritual may bewilder the mind of the worshiper by its intricacy and obscure symbolism. An imposing, mysterious, complex ceremony makes the congregation feel that their part is reduced to nothing, and removes the religious worship from the everyday tasks and problems of life. Since the ceremony fails to symbolize truths in terms the worshiper can understand, he is satisfied in watching the priest move and mumble.

The human tendency is toward the habitual. The exact reproduction of the ritual in inherited words and acts causes the worshiper to lose its real significance, and his religious response is half-hearted and habitual. The ceremony, too, may be regarded as having a magical power within itself to bring about certain mystical results; in this manner the real spiritual meaning of the rite is lost.

The ritual may also arouse deep emotions and not provide an outlet in action. If the religious program fails to furnish a means for a constructive expression for the emotional steam it has excited, it will explode destructively. Those whose worship is emotionally intense usually live on a lower moral and ethical plane than those whose devotion is more calm and restrained.

Ceremonial worship tends toward group exclusiveness. The worshiper may feel that those not participating are outside the favor of the Almighty. This is the outstanding weakness of this type of religious expression.

In brief, the great danger in ceremonial worship is that it may be substituted for religion rather than function as its aid. But the danger is not in the ritual itself, neither is it with the people. The responsibility for its rightful use or misuse rests with the priest and minister. The shepherd of the flock must be one who knows the meaning and value of ritual, if it finds its rightful place. In the words of Carlyle, he must be one who "sees through the heart of things." Formal worship in the hands of a man who fails to understand its meaning and its place in human nature, is indeed a dangerous thing. In the hands of a leader who recognizes its symbolism and the limitations and needs of his fellow worshipers, it is a power for good.

The Good in Ritual

Because there is danger in ritualistic worship is no reason its use should be avoided. There is danger also in the use of fire and water. Human living demands fire and water, but they must be used with judgment and skill. So it is with ritual.

Ceremony has always been associated with religious worship. Religion, as all other of man's impulses, must find expression in some form of action or ceremony. But ceremony must be regarded as the garment, the clothing of religion, and not the essence of it. It makes visible and palpable the unseen, the spiritual life.

Since the purpose of public worship is to learn the mind and will of God by communion with him, and to instruct, inspire, revive those whom the daily tasks and problems of life have left worn out and discouraged, it will clearly follow that ritual to be of benefit to worship must be effective in two ways: (1) as a factor in the teaching process; and (2) as an agent for the promotion of unity. "Some rituals are directive, as the map of our country, while others are emotional in their value, like the Flag." If ritual has no place in these two aspects of individual and group life, there is no excuse for its perpetuation.

As a Teaching Factor

Ritual to be of value to group worship (if group worship contributes to individual and social elevation) must be illustrative of something bigger. It should focus the attention upon some central Christian truth. Since man is an objective worshiper, ritual will recognize this tendency by presenting an abstract truth concretely, through a process recognized as one of the fundamental laws of teaching, i. e., proceeding from the known to the unknown.

There is a human tendency to mistake means for ends. One should take care that he does not lose sight of the lesson within the rite. The principle existed before the symbol. The principle involved in the baptismal and sacramental ceremonies existed before the institution of the rite. Therefore the symbol should present in the language of the worshiper the meaning of the principle. As long as the lesson and symbol are seen in their rightful relation, all will be well, but if the lesson is lost the symbol becomes an empty shell.

If the ritual is elevated to its divinely appointed place, it will do more than produce subjective satisfaction. It will be a guide and a help, giving a deeper meaning to life by illuminating the truths of the gospel. It should fix firmly in mind the new truth discovered and recall vividly to consciousness truth previously revealed.

Rightly used it will give each individual the opportunity to think, increase his capacity to recognize truth, and will clarify his religious thought. It will note man's limitations and furnish him with the concrete materials with which to think. Emphasized rightly, it will produce the stimulus for constructive religious thought. No man will engage in creative thinking unless given an incentive so to do.

Those who teach truth in its mere abstractness can never take much hold of the general mind, and success awaits a teaching which is intellectually sound (that is, consistent with the clearer thought of the day) and at the same time, able, by a wealth of fit symbols, to make itself at home in all sorts of plain minds. And it is just this that is apt to be painfully wanting in a time of intellectual and social change . . . —Cooley's Social Organization.

Ritual as a Social Agency

Participation in ritualistic worship produces a tie hard to sever. As a social agent for the unifying of groups, ceremony has been a powerful factor. The objective nature of this type of worship produces the mental state and the emotional tone necessary to social unity. The ceremony presents something visible upon which the minds of the group may be centered, thus producing a "common object of mental activity." It is the responsibility of the leader by the use of suitable songs, prayers, and exhortations to produce a "common mode of feeling" toward the rite. It is those who feel and act alike in the same situation that are driven together. This unison of response in the ceremonial service will create a reciprocal feeling between the members of the group.

The retrospective and prospective elements of the ritual should be helpful in the establishment of unity. The historical (retrospective) aspects of the ceremony now finds a place. The worshiper recognizes an ancient background to his ceremonial devotions. This gives him some assurance that it will continue as the center of worship for the future, thus bringing about a consciousness of the continuity of the group, which is one of the requisites to group unity. The ritual will link up the present with the past and future.

Ritual, if rightly used, will create and stimulate a desire to work with and share with others the product of our labors, and to recognize the common responsibility for social welfare. The ritualistic response of the Catholic worshiper is more effective for moral and spiritual uplift and a greater social agent for the promotion of unity than the spontaneous individualistic Holy Roller type. Thus ceremonial worship will have an important place in the redemption of Zion.

Not What We Think, But What We Do, Counts With God

BY W. A. SINCLAIR

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Corinthians 10: 12.

It is one of the traits of human nature to have confidence in our own ability to perform individual acts, and to arrive at personal conclusions independent of the forces of opposition that may surround us. This seems to be one of the ingrained characteristics that have come down to us from an untraceable source, which shows its possession in the earliest period of our infancy.

There is a possibility that the self-preservative instinct, with which all animal creation is endowed, creates an alertness, which we might term intuitiveness (the sense of disaster always surrounding us and the mental alarm seeking a way of escape), that brings this instinct to the front; this awakens and keeps on a keen edge the filaments of our nervous mechanism, so that perception and defense become the first law of nature.

Perception, or watchfulness, has more potency in the preservation of life than prayer and solitude. It was on this ground the Master of men volunteered the instruction and advice to his disciples which would make them useful in his cause: "Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. . . . And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."—Mark 13: 33-37.

The Lord, in the creation of man, gave him two eyes with which to see the things around him, and to assist him in the selection of those things he could appropriate to himself for comfort and gratification of the will. But behind these two eyes he also placed a substance capable of analyzing the things observed by the eye, that proper selection might be made of the things that would benefit, and not the reverse.

The eye has not the power to reason, but it has the power to attract, to observe, to crave; hence, a child viewing a thing, or substance, no matter how dangerous, minus the thinking power or monitor to differentiate, will reach out for it, though the thing attracting may mean harm to its being. There must be coordination between the different parts, that selection and uses may be adjusted to the intents and purposes for which everything was created.

There are times when we place too much emphasis on watchfulness, limiting that process to the principle of eyesight. This is more particularly emphasized when we are watching our neighbor, to catch him in a fault. Of course, we can not but admit it means the natural eyesight to a limited degree; but the significance of the phrase is of much more importance than the visual interpretation. It takes into consideration all the powers of reason, the avenues of education, and the determining factors of knowledge, that adjustment and utilization may be properly fitted. Then the use or abuse of those things appropriated determines the result of our actions.

If we have the mental intelligence to use everything according to its possibilities, we will reap the full results that its composition is capable of producing, and the returns to us in any degree will be measured proportionately with our knowledge and power to utilize its compounds.

Watchfulness comprises more than eye service; and sleep comprises more than periodic unconsciousness. Both have a deeper significance than the phraseology of English interpretation gives the bare statement in words.

Sleep is not only defined as that soothing unconsciousness in which the physical repair to the human body is generated, but there is a condition in which we retain all the faculties of wakefulness in this sense and yet are sound asleep to the interests of our spiritual welfare. Wakefulness in the significance of scriptural rendition comprehends: Meditation, investigation, utilization, and productivity, as well as visual attention, the latter being possibly the most insignificant of all the differentiations.

Visual is but the reception of the bulk without attention to its contents.

Meditation is the scrutiny and consent of the will to examine its contents.

Investigation is the handling of its component parts and analyzing its worth, determining its uses, and laying out the scope or field of its endeavors.

Utilization is the employment of that which we discover can be placed in an active field of operation and perform the purposes displayed in its composition.

Productivity is the result of all the agencies working together, both man and principle, until the ultimatum is reached. That means the employment of all the attributes, powers, and functions of the entire unit of the human soul.

All should occupy according to the nature of their calling. And our callings are according to our ability. Your calling may be of a different character than mine, and mine may be distinctly different than my brothers. I may not be the head, nor am I necessarily the foot, but I may be some supporting structure which sustains the head and makes the foot a useful appendage. It makes no difference what position I occupy in the body, so long as I perform the functions allotted to me. I must keep my compactness, responding in unison with the other departments; otherwise, being a part of the body, and it lacking my cooperation, the whole body is stagnated or incapacitated. I may not be the head, but if I afflict myself, hold back my department or contribution, I can make my illness affect the head, just as an injury to any part of my human body causes distinct retardation of every other part.

If, then, you and I, as a part of the body of Christ, can accelerate or retard the progress of that body by reason of our activities or dormancy, what is our responsibility? What is mine? Are we assisting Christ, or are we barnacles that deface and prostitute the principles of righteousness? How many of us are occupying as we should? Have we sought to know how, where, when to occupy? Are we contributing the full quota of our religious energies? and that with the assurance that we have spared no effort to qualify to produce the best?

There is a truism which says: "If you want anything badly enough, you can usually get it." And, "A man can not learn from experience what he should do, but only what he should not do." This thought is strongly borne out in relation to the development of the Christ-child. He did not learn the things he should do by experience, but the reverse, according to the Hebrew writer. Hebrews 5:8: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." It is the nature of man to investigate (that is, real, red-blooded man), and he never knows the worth of a thing until he has tested its potency. Many a man has sacrificed his life learning what he should not do, that you and I might benefit by his experience and steer clear of the breakers.

Life is experience, because we are continually getting into trouble. But it is only the fool who will continually get into the same trouble. That is not experience after the first venture; it is repetition. Repetition is going around in a ring. No progress is being made. No good accomplished. It soon becomes a public nuisance, not wanted, undesirable, and a hindrance to the progress of others.

It is not what we think we are that counts.

It is not what the world thinks we are.

Nor is it of much moment what the church thinks we are.

It is what we are that engraves our names on the rock of ages and secures our place among the select ones of the honorable inhabitants of the kingdom triumphant.

It is not talk or argument that measures a man's worth, but the employment of his time, his moments, his days, and the fruits of his mind and deeds of usefulness. Our minds are the storehouse of the gold of human impulses: and the gold is put into circulation with every worth-while deed we inaugurate; and every foolish deed is the circulation of spurious coin, which makes us fugitives as counterfeiters of the currency of God.

Foolish talk and foolish deeds are wasted opportunities which lower the standard of both the participants and the entertained. One has said that "The man who is entertained by the foolish, frivolous display of unprofitable pastime has the mind of a fool, the soul of a fool, and his goal of ambition is the fool's paradise." No man can rise above his intellectual conception of things, whether natural or spiritual. His level is determined by his understanding. His life is the exemplification of his knowledge; and his spiritual usefulness measures only to the proportion of his qualifications. Even God can not use him beyond his adaptability and willingness to serve.

A professor in any line, secular, mental, or any other division of human development, can not instruct beyond the scope of his own knowledge. He may pull one to his own level, but there they are equals, and superiority ceases; but should either or both come in contact with greater intelligence, they can again begin to ascend to higher altitudes of intellectual expansion, and thus go on until no higher instructor is attainable. However, no matter where they stop on the road in the line of development, the place where they cease to expand will mark their grade and possession so long as they are content with that standard. And this, of course, suggests grades and conditions from the base upwards, from the ignorant good, to the highest, noblest, godlike intellectual individual who has responded to the super-instructor of infinite wisdom.

It is bearing on this point that the instruction in Doctrine and Covenants 85:12 forecasts the stupendous attainment marked out for the righteous: "The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not; nevertheless, the day shall come when you shall comprehend even God; being quickened in him, and by him." The darkness comprehendeth it not, has reference to the mental condition of the world, the mind untrained to discern higher stratas than that it occupies. Ignorant of the light that shineth, it is darkness, incomprehensible, beyond the reach of their mentality.

But God has not designed that we should for ever occupy below the super-intelligence; that is, if we are not physically and mentally lazy. But that we should progress eternally towards the goal of possibility, which is: "You shall comprehend even God." And this comprehension is not the mere knowledge that God is, but comprehending God, his attributes, his power, the intents and purposes of his creation, and the infinitude of his dwelling place.

Our text says: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Take heed of what? Make sure that his thinking is harmonized with the facts of security. Our thinking may be faulty. It may be based on false representation, and that not necessarily of our own choosing, but through the confidence imposed in unwise instructors.

We may put our money in a weak bank through the persuasion of a confidential friend, and the friend may be honest in his advice; but neither your confidence nor his honesty will save you from disaster when the crash comes. Honesty is not intelligence, nor can it take the place of knowledge. Confidence is not a safeguard and will not secure you from plunder. Ignorance does not assuage the pain of affliction, the consequence of broken laws. Only one course is open to us: "Seek learning by study, and also by faith." Knowledge is the only safeguard, providing we use it after obtaining it. We may think we are standing and lull ourselves to sleep in the security of our thoughts, but there is no guarantee that our thoughts are right. If I glean anything from this text, it is this, that we should not be content with thinking we are standing, but apply the tests. Thinking won't do; we must know. Take heed, investigate, make sure, don't get so near the edge that a slip may put you over the precipice; make sure of your security; keep well within the safety zone.

God Almighty has made provision and delegated agencies to confirm the evidence of his acceptableness of his creatures, so that undeniable proof of their translation is communicated to them, and they are freed from the uncertainty of doubt, provided they have actually consecrated their souls to his service. Paul says the key to the situation is this: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

Have we had this witness? Have we passed through this experience? "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Are we only thinking we stand? or have we sought the knowledge at the source of intelligence? Are we employing our time as stewards over the treasure house of God? How are we measuring our advancement?

Have we applied the rule of measurement which ends with an ultimatum as the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? How much do we know of Christ? Do we know him at all? or is our belief fashioned by the definition of some one we think is in his favor? They may be as much mistaken as you are. There is only one way to be sure, and that is, obtain the knowledge for yourself. How are you to gain it? By earnest solicitation, and that means not only prayer, but doing the will of God: that is, having the same mind in you that was in Christ, that was to do the work of the Father: Thinking right; doing right; being right.

This is only brought about by every moment of our lives being devoted to service. We can not be straight today and crooked tomorrow. Be just today and unjust tomorrow.

It means we will see the good and not magnify the evil in our brother or sister. It means we will be slow to speak evil or bear evil tales of anybody and keep the admonition that: "So far as it is possible, live peaceably with all men."

Let us not be content by thinking a thing, but go after the evidence. Knowledge is power, and gives the one possessing it preeminence over doubt and suspicion, and makes him superior to all below his standard, and a savior to them, provided they will absorb his intelligence.

The truth is not always in the noise of the exhorter, but more often in the whisperings of the intelligent and humble man who has consecrated his mind and service to God.

Not in thinking a thing, but in knowing a thing, is security: But that security must be sought after; it is not in the superficial strata.

"Seek and ye shall find," but you must seek.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Every Man His Own Doctor

The growth of medical science is beginning to affect both the professional doctor and his patients.

Everybody is interested in his own health, and the more straightforward parts of therapeutic knowledge are now, with the spread of semi-technical books and periodicals, becoming common property to most educated men and women. Again, most doctors nowadays talk far more freely and frankly to their patients about their symptoms and what they mean than they did twenty years ago. The result is inevitable. People are beginning to watch their own bodies; to study their symptoms, estimate their tone and general fitness, and, consequently, to prescribe for themselves, if only by varying their habit of life in some fashion—by taking more exercise, drinking more water, eating less meat or more fruit, and so on.

Now there is obviously much to be said both for and against this tendency—if it be granted that it does exist. On the one hand, it is clear that if a man keeps scientific watch on himself, notes the varying efficiency at which his body is doing its work, just as a good chauffeur will listen to his engine, no matter how smoothly it is running, then he has, other things being equal, a far better chance of maintaining a high level of health than has the careless fellow who never gives his body a thought.

After all, we all know a great deal more about our own bodies than we do about anybody else's. The best of doctors has in many instances to rely on what the patient tells him. True, there are definite objective tests of health, such as the obvious ones of temperature, pulse, and complexion. Yet pain itself is the great indicator that something is wrong—the danger signal of the body—and his pain can be felt only by the patient himself.

Theoretically the patient is often his own best doctor. But experience has certainly shown that there are very serious objections indeed to this theory. The gravest objection is to be found in the very fact that everybody is really passionately interested in his own health. So passionately, in fact, that very few are able to study it scientifically. One can not bear to observe carefully and dispassionately the symptoms of one's own body lest one should detect the symptoms of disease. A fool's paradise, we most of us feel, in this matter is better than no paradise at all. Or, again, by a trick well known to the psychologists, we jump to the other extreme. We are so terrified of disease that we find symptoms where they do not really exist at all. So common is this neurosis that it has earned the special title of hypochondria. So prevalent has it been, so unable have been the majority of us to make a clear and accurate report of our own state of health, that doctors have come to the conclusion that the patient's own statements are the worst instead of the best guide to his physical condition.

From this has grown up the element of the mystery surrounding the doctor. The patient, it used to be held, must be excluded from all consideration of his own condition: blind trust in his physician should be his only preoccupation. The less he knows about his real state of health and what is necessary to it the better. This, no doubt, would be an admirable plan if doctors were infallible and omniscient. Unfortunately, however, they are neither. What is more, they are increasingly prone to admit it. The older generation of doctors, with their inscrutable air of wisdom, is passing away before a new generation of brisk young scientists who brutally inform their patients how little they, or anybody else, really know about pathology, and who demand the active and conscious cooperation of their patients in order to effect a cure.

The result has been, inevitably, the awakening in the "laity" of a far more active interest in their own health than they have ever been allowed to display before. Every second person one meets nowadays has some theory or precept of health. Again, the press is increasingly full of discussions on health, conducted by no means solely by doctors. A good example is the recent article in The Spectator on the dire effects of drinking tea and coffee. Why is it, the writer asks, that we are at our worst in the morning after eight hours of perfect rest, and at our best in the evening when we have been most active? Here is a fact which, the writer says, needs careful explanation and receives none. He thereupon ascribes it dogmatically to the fact that these stimulants have a bad effect upon us. Though why this effect should act particularly in the morning is hardly clear. Yet the problem posed is surely an interesting and genuine one, however inadequate and unproven the solution may be. Here, at any rate, is a layman thinking and thinking hard, and not altogether unscientifically, about the problems of health. He is symptomatic of his age.

More books on physiology and psychology, especially, of course, the latter, are being read than ever before. Whether the whole tendency is good or bad remains to be seen. It all depends on the degree of self-detachment and avoidance of neurosis which the average man and woman can develop in the study of their own minds and their own bodies.—E. J. S., in The Spectator, April 16.

The Jews in Palestine

[We are making copious extracts from an article in the Palestine Bulletin, January 23, 1927, written by Right Honorable Josiah C. Wedgwood, a regular contributor to the Bulletin columns.

If an Englishman, born and trained to landlordism, can see clearly the advantages he portrays, surely the viewpoint of an American would be interesting.—EDITORS.]

In Palestine the peasantry are free; nearly all the Arabs farm their own land; very few are the Jews who remain working for employers; they all want land of their own. And whether you go to the individualist at Nahalal, where each man farms his own land and has his own house and his own fields, his own vine and his own fig tree, or whether you go to Dagania, where twenty families live as one, working for each other in marvelous selflessness—in all these colonies the people make no complaints, the children do not beg, they are not even shy; they are so certain that they are all right that they do not even need to assert it.

It is quite possible that the great Kwuzoth will not endure. This virtue of unselfishness is almost too good to exist naturally without the enthusiasm of nationality and sudden freedom. But certainly the next generation, children now in these Kwuzoth, have the opportunity of acquiring a mentality so completely different from that of the agricultural classes in any other part of the world that he would be a rash man who would be certain that the Kwuzoth could not endure. The condition, appearance, and mind of the women and children are the best advertisement for the colonies of Palestine. The great family may be unnatural, but in its present stage the advantages must be patent to every visitor. Moreover, these Kwuzoth seem to have solved a problem which the labor parties of the west of Europe have been bothered about. Farming on a big scale, employing much capital, using experts, seems to be so obviously the most efficient way of using the land that we in the labor movement have always felt that we shall be driven to what the Americans call "bonanza" farming; that either the State or some rich corporation must farm, employ on a large and temporary scale, and turn agricultural production into one more branch of capitalist industry; and that the ideal which every reformer has at the back of his mind, of free men cultivating their own land for themselves, was an impractical Utopia. But the Kwuzoth seem to have solved the problem. There you have the large areas farmed, supplied with adequate capital, possessing in its family the expert on tractors, the expert on bees, the veterinary surgeon, the banana

THEY SAY--

Emerson: "Pythagoras was misunderstood, and Socrates, and Jesus, and Luther, and Copernicus, and Galileo, and Newton, and every pure and wise spirit that ever took flesh. To be great is to be misunderstood."

But to be misunderstood does not necessarily mean one is great. He may lack expression.

There is far less risk for the person who thinks without speaking than for the one who speaks without thinking. So think twice before speaking; but better still, just keep on thinking.

There are many persons who are waiting for their ships to come in who might better be hustling freight on the docks.

It is a better expression of religion to give smiles to the living than to give eulogies to the dead.

It frequently happens that men who desire praise do not deserve it, while men who deserve it do not want it.

man, the poultryman, and all the other experts needed for this great farming; but they were not working for a master; they, too, were working for themselves. . . .

It is fine to see that in all these villages of the new Jerusalem there are no rich and no poor. Of course, they have meat only once a month; but who needs meat in that climate! . . .

Each evening the village elders meet together and decide what work shall be done the next day. And the government is one of unanimity—government by consent. I suppose there must be selfish people; if they can't stand it, they go out—the cooperation is purely voluntary. No doubt they will make mistakes before they have paid back their debt and are really on their legs. But it is better that they should build up their own organizations, their own economic stability, and their own characters from the bottom rather than that they should have superimposed upon them the direction of a bureaucrat, telling them what to do; for the mere presence of an authority must destroy the joy of enterprise and adventure which has so much to do with the present happiness of the colonists. . . .

The only criticism left in me is that there are too few children in the colonies of Palestine, that the education is not good enough, and that more people do not go from this country to see what it is possible to make of the unemployed refugees and how the land hunger can survive even two thousand years of divorce from the soil.—The Palestine Bulletin, February 25, 1927.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officer and Teacher Meeting for June

In our May outline we discussed the subject matter of religious education. In this lesson we shall seek to learn the principles governing the organization of this material as a whole and the methods of handling a particular part of it in Sunday's lesson.

Theme: The Organization of Material.

Text: Betts; How to Teach Religion, Chapter VIII.

There are four types of organization, viz:

The Haphazard. This is a hit-or-miss procedure, with no definite plan or order, no thread of purpose or relationship uniting the parts of the lesson. It indicates poor teaching ability and spirit and is doomed to failure.

The Logical. This type gives first consideration to the subject matter, with little thought of the children of the class and their particular needs. It is likely to emphasize rules, principles, and definitions, while the child need calls for illustrations, real instances, actual cases. The child gains a vital comprehension of the plan of salvation through the presence and growing consciousness of divine forces which daily motivate, strengthen, and "redeem" his own life.

The Chronological. This follows events in the order of their time sequence, without regard to the utility of the material to the growing child. It may be good history, but it is poor teaching practice. The child is thinking in terms of his immediate experiences.

The Psychological. The first consideration of this method is the human mind and its training. It arouses interest; it appeals to the imagination; it makes study a pleasure and not a bore; it recognizes the good of the child first, and all other things, facts, dates, and schemes of thought, are of secondary importance, and instead of being ends to attain, are but means to secure religious training. Jesus plainly taught in parable and apt illustration.

There are three types of lesson material:

The Uniform Lessons, which presented the same topics and the same materials to all ages of students, though modified in method and extent. It is folly to expect a child to be interested and helped through a study of the same material as his parents. The plan is about discarded.

The Graded Lessons, which are adapted to the varying needs and capacities of the children of different ages both in method and material. This is the method attempted in our present regular system of quarterlies. The earlier graded lessons, however, often gave first consideration to the extent and classification of the subject matter to be taught. In recent years we prefer to consider first the child and his needs, and then search for subject matter to satisfy the need.

Real Textbooks of Religion, attractive, convenient, more worthy of care and preservation than a paper bound quarterly, well illustrated, printed on good paper, and more comprehensive in their treatment of subject matter. This seems to be our next step in Sunday school literature.

In whatever form we print our lessons, it is clear that they should start with matter adapted to the youngest child. It should present a continuous series adapted to each age, from childhood to maturity. Its order and arrangement should be decided at all times by the needs and development of the learner and should make constant point of contact with his life and experience.

The best teachers have a definite lesson plan for each Sunday, which is not so inflexible as to crush out valuable and interesting discussion. The lesson plan must decide two things: the range or scope of the lesson; and the amount of material. It must recognize three factors: the age of the children, the time for the lesson, and the nature of the subject. The material should be woven around a few strong points, and used together with good, thought-provoking questions that affect the lives of the students.

The value of a good strong review of the last lesson, of a snappy summary at the end of the lesson, and of definite assignments can not be overestimated.

Three major divisions are suggested: 1. Aims, in which you state definitely what you wish to accomplish in the minds of your students. 2. Materials, in which you bring together lesson subjects, stories, illustrations, etc. 3. Mode of procedure, in which you outline the steps in the course of the lesson, the points at which certain materials shall be introduced, and the manner of their introduction, also outside helps, such as pictures, stories, prayer themes, music, etc.

Suggested Topics for Oral or Written Discussion

1. Which of the types of organization of subject matter appears most desirable? Justify your choice.
2. Which method is used most under your observation? Explain why.
3. What is the relation between type of organization used and the interest response of the class?
4. Criticize our present quarterlies on the basis of subject organization. What changes are needed? How shall we use them to the best advantage?
5. Discuss the value of a prearranged lesson plan.
6. Discuss the specific value of a clearly defined aim for each lesson.
7. How will you prevent aimless wandering or side-tracking interruption or argument in a Sunday school class?
8. Analyze the lesson plan on Obedience as given in the text. Discuss its good points.

History—a Sonnet

By Minnie Eugenia Warnock

Written in answer to a question as to the meaning of the word history, asked by a little child.

All hist'ry is made in the fleeting "now."
The future presses ever hard and swift—
Between it and the past is just a rift—
'Tis gone before it comes, I do avow.
A record of the main events is kept;
The things important, people of account
That flare a moment, seem of prime amount,
Yet teeming millions are unsung, unwept.
But in that record just, that's kept on high
By angel scribes, who see though they're unseen,
No items will be missed, not e'en a sigh;
Not only what men do, but what they mean.
When that great Book is opened by and by,
Oh, that will be some history, I ween!

NEWS AND LETTERS

Social Service Worker Visits Council Bluffs

In response to an invitation from Mrs. Blanche Currie, superintendent of the Department of Women, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, the writer was a guest at a mothers' and daughters' social given May 6, and conducted round table discussions the afternoons of May 7 and 8 and gave addresses at eleven o'clock and eight o'clock Sunday, May 8.

There were about two hundred mothers and daughters present at the social. A very pleasing program of readings and music was given, and talks by Elder William I. Fligg and the writer. Ice cream and cake were served, and a very enjoyable evening was spent together.

The round table discussion held Saturday was confined to local problems, while the one held on Sunday afternoon for mothers and daughters was on "Preparation for parenthood."

Sunday morning Brother Currie, who has charge of departmental work, took the writer to visit the two mission Sunday schools, where good work is being done. One of the missions is composed of children of those living in the neighborhood who are not members of the church, and a splendid opportunity is being improved by the noble Saints in charge of the work there to lead them to a knowledge of the truth.

We then rushed back to the Central Church where a Mothers' Day address was given on the subject, "Mother as a molder of mental attitudes of her children." The subject for the Sunday evening address was "Social work as a part of the church program." The causes back of social maladjustment were presented, and suggestions were given as to how they may be prevented.

Besides the full program of church work, time was taken for social recreation. The writer was entertained at the home of Sister Hattie Hall and daughter Cosette, where one can really enjoy relaxation after the strenuous program of the day, and enjoy that "at home feeling" which is one of the charms that distinguishes a home from a house. We sat up until the "wee sma' hours," listening to Sister Hall tell childhood experiences in the home of our late President Joseph Smith and the good times enjoyed and the pranks played by Audentia, Frederick M., and herself. Though they were mischievous, I was assured that at least one of them was "always a little gentleman." This "little gentleman" whose pranks with those of his sister Audentia and Sister Hall I enjoyed so much, is now our President Frederick M. Smith, and can no longer be called "little" though we are pleased to say that he is still a "gentleman."

A very enjoyable part of the visit to Council Bluffs was the meeting of Sister Blanche Currie, superintendent of Department of Women, and her recounting of the work of her department. I was especially interested in the good work done in caring for those maladjusted, whether through poverty or illness. Many of the sisters of Council Bluffs have made splendid preparation by study for the good work which they are now doing. Courses have been completed in Child Welfare, Relief and Service, Home Nursing, and Parent and Teacher Problems. They cooperate with such agencies as the city affords, making use of every available means of doing not only curative work, but the better work of prevention. Many of them have taken advantage of the young people's convention and classes offered during General Conferences. They can therefore render intelligent service.

Sister Currie told the writer that they cooperate with the welfare worker of the schools, the county supervisor of the poor, the city relief societies, the Red Cross, and visiting nurses. With the help of these agencies, they study the causes back of the social maladjustment and assist those in need of their services to become independent rather than remain dependent. Since the first of the year, the women of Council Bluffs have made over and distributed 278 garments. In almost all cases the mothers of needy children worked with them, being supervised and taught how to make over the needed garments.

A committee of women visits those who are ill in hospitals, and another group sees to it that there are no lonesome Saints, as all new comers in the neighborhood are visited and made to feel at home. The young people of the branch are not neglected. The Temple Builders, Orioles, and Blue Birds organizations have 150 members, and under the supervision of those older, socials and other entertainments are given, to which the boys are sometimes invited.

An auto trip to Rainbow Point and Lincoln's lookout was enjoyed, and in imagination the writer could see the caravans of those who helped to make church history winding their way into the valley between the bluffs and camping by the roadside. The trip to Council Bluffs and the meeting of the Saints there will long be remembered.

Park Presidio Branch Organized at San Francisco

The Park Presidio Branch of San Francisco, California, was organized February 15, 1927, under the personal direction of Apostle James A. Gillen and High Priest G. J. Waller. Elder Edward W. Nelson was elected president of the branch and B. O. Lungwitz was elected secretary.

This branch opens up a new field of labor in the city of San Francisco and a great deal is expected of it. The following are the charter members: Elder Edward W. Nelson, Priest B. O. Lungwitz, A. L. Holling, C. L. Kreuter, Mary Caldwell, Ruth W. Clegg, Joy Chalmers, Emma Cooper, Lavinia Cunningham, Bessie B. Holling, Amelia Reese, Olive A. Sykes, Christiana Waller, and Romla Flood.

We started the new year by holding our first group meeting, which was a sacrament service, on January 2, 1927, and have continued to hold regular services since that time.

Since our organization, our secretary, Brother B. O. Lungwitz, has left for his home in Zion, to resume his studies at college, thereby creating a vacancy which is being filled by Sister Joy Chalmers. Sister Ruth Waller Clegg is our Sunday school superintendent, assisted by Wallace Lungwitz as secretary. Sister Bessie B. Holling has charge of the music and Sister Christiana Waller is our organist. Brother Charles Kreuter is superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and under his able leadership we have enjoyed interesting programs and social evenings.

The women of the branch have organized and an interesting report of their activities will be published later.

Brother A. L. Holling was elected treasurer and publicity agent and has kept the two district papers, The Richmond Banner and The Weekly Herald, well supplied with reading matter.

We are perhaps the farthest west of any branch in the States. The Park Presidio District lies between the Presidio Military Reservation and Golden Gate Park, bounded on the west by the Pacific Ocean, having a population of 100,000.

We have been exceedingly fortunate in always having a good surplus in our treasury; and the wonderful spirit of peace and harmony which prevails at all of the meetings has been an incentive for those attending, to look forward to the meetings to follow.

The regular prayer services are held on Wednesday evenings at the home of Brother and Sister Holling.

All of our meetings have been well attended, and with the publicity we are getting from week to week, the branch is moving to the fore, causing numberless persons to inquire who we are and what we stand for.

As we do not hold evening services, the branch voted to worship with Doctor W. A. Philips, of Saint John's Presbyterian Church, of our district, for the Easter evening service. We had a very good representation, and Doctor Philips was exceedingly pleased to have us with him.

During the past two years the Protestant churches of this district have held joint services on Good Friday, and next year we hope to have a representative speaker at their service.

We have had able speakers on all occasions and were exceedingly fortunate in having Brother W. D. Gillen with us several times and appreciate the assistance and counsel he rendered at the time of our organization, as well as those speakers from around the bay district.

The Saints of this new branch are looking forward to the time when the church will have a large membership and a fine church in which to meet. They are all active in the work and desirous of seeing the gospel of Jesus Christ move forward as it should.

For the present the Park Presidio Branch will meet in the Richmond Masonic Temple, Clement Street and Arguello Boulevard, and a cordial invitation is extended to all Saints visiting San Francisco to attend. You will be made most welcome.

A. L. HOLLING, Publicity Agent.

National Hospital Day at Sanitarium

Thursday, May 12, was observed as hospital day throughout the United States. The doors of sanitariums and hospitals were thrown open, and the public invited in to see and learn concerning the efficiency with which these institutions minister to the health of our nation.

On this day, from 2 to 4 p. m., the Patroness Society held open house at the Independence Sanitarium, in keeping with the national program. At 3 p. m. the K L D S Mothers' Quartet rendered a pleasing program.

As visitors gathered in the entrance hall, a patroness was ready to show a group of them over the entire building, explaining improvements added since last year. This was a great pleasure to those who are well acquainted with the "San" and its equipment, and we wondered what it meant to those visitors who had never before had such a privilege. The Patroness ladies grew eloquent in showing and explaining additional cupboards and closets for storing supplies, also the rooms and their furnishings that have been added where the court used to be. Formerly the "San" was U-shape; now it is built square with a very small part of the court left in the center.

In the dining hall, a member of the Patroness Society had charge of each table, and delightful refreshments were served as visitors passed through.

In the kitchen Miss Myrtle Grapes explained in detail the work the girls are required to do, and the careful training they receive; then she took us to a rear window and showed us a beautiful plot of ground where in vision, the Patroness Society, the nurses, and all who love the work of the Sanitarium can see a commodious nurses' home—a home with sufficient housing room, conveniences, classrooms, gymnasium, and adequate educational requirements, which are not now at their command. Other hospitals and sanitariums have them, and if we are going to educate and keep our own who desire to make nursing a life work, we must have them. May this help speedily come for our Sanitarium!

The alumnae of the institution are at present working to make up a fund to build a dressing and rest room for special duty nurses and the private nurses who come from other places. This is a much-needed addition and a worthy cause to assist.

The new operating room and dressing room for doctors and surgeons, with all the latest equipment, are considered among the finest in the State. In the laboratory Mrs. Mary Jones Ramsey is in charge and willingly and carefully explained the great value the work of this department is to the Sanitarium.

Doctor C. E. Nickson is head of the department of X ray. Miss Kate Hansen, technician, demonstrated how and for what the machinery in those rooms is used, showing a number of X-ray negatives and explaining how they are to help the surgeons.

The following record is from the Independence Examiner, for May 11:

"A recent report states that in a twelve months' period a total of 1,335 patients were admitted to the hospital; that the average number of physicians per month practicing at the Sanitarium was 22; and that the staff of nurses on duty day and night average 40 per month.

"The hospital has a maximum capacity for 76 patients. There are 21 private rooms; four 2-bed rooms; a women's surgical ward with 8 beds; a women's medical ward with 7 beds; a men's surgical ward with 7 beds; a men's medical ward with 6 beds; there are five beds in the women's maternity ward, and 12 beds in the nursery, and 2 porch beds. The Sanitarium has two operating rooms fully equipped, also X-ray room with complete apparatus and laboratory."

For our readers who are far more interested in the Sanitarium than nonmember newspaper readers, the writer, who has twice been a surgical patient there, would add that there is an atmosphere of love, humility, and prayer always present—an atmosphere that a mere paper report can not convey.

Early in the morning the nurses have assembly in the dining hall. Their fresh young voices float out in songs from Zion's Praises, bringing a peace that only a patient can appreciate. Often the voice of prayer is heard, and always there are elders available for administration. Some miraculous things have happened at our "San" under the administering hands of these men of God. Also this ordinance has had great effect upon the faith of other patients who are members of other churches.

Under the efficient direction of Miss Gertrude Copeland and her capable assistant, Miss Elizabeth Paxton, our Sanitarium has come to be an institution for which we may rise up and give thanks. I would pay tribute also to the efficient corps of doctors and surgeons who have their patients come to the Sanitarium; also to the nurses, our girls, who minister faithfully and lovingly to the patients given into their care.

All this week the Department of Women of Independence is busy at work on a drive for the Sanitarium. Saturday, May 21, is tag day for the free bed fund. By this means a bed is furnished, as well as care for patients who can not pay either doctor or hospital fees. For some years this fund has averaged five hundred dollars each tag day. All donations will be thankfully received.

Mapleton, Kansas

On Sunday evening, March 6, at seven o'clock occurred the wedding, uniting Miss Lula Needham and Mr. Nutil Myrick in marriage. The ceremony took place in the church, which was beautifully decorated in pink and white. While strains of Lohengrin's wedding march were played by Mrs. Hollie Dennis, the bridal party came up an aisle made by four ushers holding streamers of pink and white. Bessie Needham, little sister of the bride, led the procession, carrying the wedding ring, embedded in a large, white lily. Next came the bridesmaid and best man, Miss Nellie Dennis and Mr. Hubert Ellithorpe, who were followed by the bride and groom. Pastor Hollie Dennis said the words making the couple man and wife. Ushers were Wayne Jennings, Arthur Dennis, Alvin Needham, and Alpha Dennis. Preceding the ceremony Edna Clark and Orion Dennis sang "Where love leads the way," and following the ceremony our pastor gave a short talk on "Home." We all join in wishing them happiness and much success.

Brother Lee Quick has been holding meetings at Weir and Pittsburg, Kansas. He returned home a few days before General Conference, leaving shortly to attend it. We are glad he is with us again for a short stay.

Orion and Nellie Dennis also attended General Conference and enjoyed being there and feeling the spirit of the crowd manifested in the meetings. They are only sorry that others who wanted so badly to attend could not go. While there they visited with their relatives, Brother and Sister B. J. Scott.

Brother Thomas Ferguson, of Fort Collins, Colorado, is visiting Saints and friends in Mapleton. He and his family used to live here, and were always willing to do what they could for the church and community. We appreciate his visit.

We regret to report that Sister Herbert Atkins is very sick at this writing. We earnestly pray for a speedy recovery.

Owing to the bad weather and absence of some of our members at General Conference, the young people had to postpone the Easter picnic to a future date.

On the first Sunday of April, Brother and Sister Clark, of Iola, drove to Mapleton to attend services. They among many of the isolated Saints are always glad to get a "feed" of the gospel, and we appreciate their visits.

Miss Eva Powell, of Ravenwood, Missouri, has been visiting her sister, Sister Ward Wellington, and uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gunsolley.

On April 24, a crowd of isolated Saints from Girard and Walnut, Kansas, with well-filled baskets drove here to attend the Sunday services. They took dinner with Brother Lee Quick's family. In the afternoon two "get acquainted" meetings were planned, one for the older folks at Brother Quick's and one for the young people at the home of D. M. Dennis. We enjoyed their visit, and hope to see them often. The families were those of Brother and Sister McCormick and Brother and Sister Jones.

Sister Wellington and granddaughter, Lula, visited with relatives in Independence, Missouri, at the time of General Conference. They visited Brother and Sister Sarratt, Sister Sarratt being Sister Wellington's daughter.

Last Sunday being Mothers' Day, a program was given in honor of mother. It was prepared and rendered by the men at the eight o'clock hour. The color scheme of red and white was carried out in the decoration of the church. It was noticed that all who took part in the program wore red carnations. They are thankful that they are permitted to wear flowers of this hue. The committee for the program was composed of Wayne Jennings, Orion and Arthur Dennis.

Among some of the interesting sermons preached by the pastor was one given in the latter part of March on the subject, "Jesus Christ's wedding day and his bride." He showed that Christ is coming to take his bride, and specifically pointed out who his bride is to be. A description of the church (or bride) that went into the wilderness was given, and of course the church that came out must answer to the same description. One illustration used was that of the American Flag, being carried away by a little girl. Then, after a description of it was given, he signaled for it to be brought back (out of the wilderness). When a little girl came, bringing a flag that had no stars and but two or three stripes on it, it was turned down by the speaker with the suggestion that probably Christ would do the same with some of the churches which present themselves, being organized with only two or three officers, etc. The real Flag was then brought back and accepted because it measured up to the standard. Then the questions were asked: Is any flag the Flag of United States? Is any church the Church of Christ?

We are glad to have Brother and Sister W. A. Duncan able to again attend services. They have been shut in for most of the winter.

Beloit, Wisconsin

May 17.—Sunday last was a big day in Beloit. An all-day meeting was announced some days ago, and there gathered with us Saints and friends from Madison, Milwaukee, Evansville, Janesville, Wisconsin; and others from Rockford, Illinois.

Brother and Sister W. L. Christy, who spent some time in this district, were the drawing card of the occasion, for while everyone enjoys the association of our present missionaries, yet it is always a pleasant occasion when we can meet those who have formerly labored in our midst.

We started off the day with a prayer meeting at nine o'clock, and this lasted till almost eleven o'clock, and no wasted time.

During the Sunday school period, the children were entertained in the dining room of the church.

At eleven o'clock Brother Christy gave us a splendid sermon, one that was enjoyed by all. Dinner was then served in the dining room, and from the way the food disappeared most of the folks were enjoying themselves.

At 2.30 Brother E. J. Lenox spoke on the subject of consecration, dividing his theme and talking about the consecration of both members and priesthood.

At the close of this meeting, one brother who had been with the opposition requested to be reinstated, and by a rising vote he was unanimously taken back into the confidence of the Saints. God grant that this may be the step that will open the way where others will see their way to follow, that they again may enter the service of the Master, rather than being busy putting hindrances in the way of progress for the great work that we all love so well.

Brother E. R. Williams, of Burlington, Iowa, was given a standing vote of welcome here, and that doesn't mean Beloit alone, for the Southern Wisconsin District was well represented, and the manner in which the people expressed themselves could leave no room for doubt as to their sincerity. He has lately joined the Yates-American force here in Beloit.

At four o'clock we journeyed to the "Y" swimming pool, which had been very generously offered for the purpose, and Sister Dobbins and her daughter, Clara, were baptized by Brother Christy. This was a happy occasion for many, and especially as these sisters will be a great help here, as they are in earnest and willing workers.

At 6.30 a play was presented that depicted an old couple being ejected from their home because of failure to pay the mortgage. It ended more happily than is often the case, and after this play Brother L. G. Holloway talked on "Stewardship," and his talk fitted perfectly with the state of mind of the audience.

At about half past seven, an administration and confirmation meeting was held, and three were administered to, and the Sisters Dobbins were confirmed. It swells one's heart with pride and joy to see young women and their mothers step ahead and take the road that leads to happiness.

At the eight o'clock hour, Brother Christy was again the speaker, and a good crowd was in attendance, even though the hours of the day were filled. Thus ended a day that was full, full of joy that we could meet and renew old acquaintances; full of thankfulness that one of our former number listened to the divine counsel and was willing to again make a stand for right; full of happiness that others are taking up the cross, and that our numbers are on the increase.

Only those who have known the circumstances here can fully appreciate just what this day did mean.

We pledge anew our support to our work, and a growing loyalty to the men and women that make up our great organization, which leads us ever toward higher ambitions, and eventually to God.

W. L. HARTNELL.

Fairview, Montana

May 6.—Fairview Branch is alive but not kicking. All are happy and rejoicing in the restored gospel. The reports received through the church papers, of the General Conference, are certainly heartening.

Easter Sunday observances included a short program put on by the Sunday school, and a sermon by Elder Joseph Sandidge. Preparations are now being made for Mothers' Day.

Sister Ida Dore passed away at the home of Brother Vernon Ditton. The funeral was held at the Saints' hall in charge of Brother W. R. Hillman. Sermon was by Brother Sandidge.

Brother C. W. Trotter and family have moved to Chinook, Montana, to live.

Brother Sandidge, district missionary, has concluded his work here for the present and gone on his way westward.

"Unto the Least of These . . ."

By Ida Etzenhouser

The Social Worker sat at her desk one bright spring morning, listening to the monotonous voice of Mr. Burnham as he recounted the delinquencies of his foster son, Tommy. She was making notations as Mr. Burnham talked, which read: "Runs away from home;" "Has stolen small articles from the home and sold them;" "Quarrels with the children;" "Does not always tell the truth." Occasionally Mr. Burnham would raise his voice and speak vehemently, saying, "I tell you, I will not put up with it any longer. He is not my boy; I have not adopted him, and I am going to put him in an institution."

All the time the Social Worker was making notations of the delinquencies of the boy, she was seeing a vision. The vision was built from fragments of the history of ten-year-old Tommy as given by Mr. Burnham. The Burnhams had taken the child when he was a baby, his mother having died at his birth. When he was eight years old, they had given the child to a farmer in a neighboring State with the understanding that he was to work for his board and clothing, the farmer agreeing to send the child to school until he had completed the eighth grade. Tommy had run away from the farmer and returned to the Burnhams.

The vision that the Social Worker saw was of eight-year-old Tommy in ragged coveralls, barefooted, his tousled brown hair sticking through the torn crown of an old wide-brimmed hat, trudging wearily along the dusty country road. His thin brown body could be seen through the rents in his ragged clothing, and under his arm he carried a sack with a few apples and some bread in it. He had walked for several days, and after his food supply was exhausted he begged for something to eat from farmhouses along the way. He slept in barns or in the clean straw stacks by the side of the road. The first day he refused any advances made by passing strangers because he was afraid some one would find out he was running away and might return him to the farmer. After the first day he took advantage of any lift offered that would help him to get home.

The Social Worker could see the longing in the boy's eyes which nothing but the sight of home and loved ones could satisfy. Sometimes kind-hearted farm women invited him to stay and rest a while, but the lad pressed on, responding to the urge within him.

When he came in sight of familiar places, he was surprised that there were so few changes, for it seemed such a long, long time since he left home. He wondered if Mrs. Burnham and the children had changed much, and whether they would know him. Then he caught sight of the home, and forgetting aching muscles he ran with all his strength into the house. He was so glad to see his foster mother that he burst out crying and clung to her and could not speak. To be back home, to see the familiar things about the house, and to hear again the voices of those he loved—that was enough. He passed from room to room commenting on the familiar things and then went out to the barnyard to see the calves, colts, and young pigs that had been born during his absence. It was wonderful to be back home again!

In the evening of that first day, the Burnhams questioned Tommy. They asked him why he was so ragged, and where was the clothing that they had bought for him. They wanted to know how long he was going to visit them and when was he going back to the farmer. Tommy told them that he was never going back. He had been beaten and been worked too hard, and was not allowed to play. Mr. Burnham answered that he understood the farmer was a good man and Tommy must have been disobedient and lazy or he would not have been punished.

That night when the Burnhams visited the children's room before retiring, they noticed that Tommy's pillow was wet with tears and that his little body even in his sleep was convulsed with sobs.

So the iron entered Tommy's soul, and he felt that the Burnhams did not love him and that he was not wanted. He did not belong to the family as did the other children, and, after all, he had no home.

The Social Worker's vision was interrupted by the voice of Mr. Burnham saying, "I can't understand whatever came over the boy. He was one of the best lads you ever saw before he went away. He was dependable, truthful, and honest. He left us a plump, rollicking, fun-loving boy. He returned thin, dirty, quarrelsome, sneaking, and dishonest.

It was agreed that the matter of Tommy's delinquencies would be given consideration, and Mr. Burnham was persuaded to take no further steps to place Tommy in an institution until the Social Worker could make some plan for the boy.

"What Tommy needs is to feel that he really belongs to some one," thought the Social Worker. "A boy of such tender years who will walk for days to get home is the boy who with kind treatment and an attitude toward him that he was really loved for himself, will make good."

The Social Worker advertised through the church papers for a home for a boy of eleven. Several answers were received. One letter offered an ideal home. A large ranch with ponies and dogs, fishing and hunting, plenty of open space, and a consolidated school with a high school within a few miles of the ranch. There was one sentence in the letter that was discouraging. This sentence read, "We want a baby girl, under two years of age, with golden curls and blue eyes."

Could a boy of eleven, with dark, wavy hair, brown eyes, and who was shedding his first teeth be substituted for a baby girl with golden curls and blue eyes? "It is worth trying," said the Social Worker.

A letter was written with an appeal that must have touched the hearts of the childless couple, for an answer was received which read, "You may send the boy to us to spend the summer. We do not care to adopt a boy, but he can enjoy a wonderful vacation."

Tommy was sent with a prayer that he would win his way into the hearts of those to whom he was sent.

Two years have now passed away. Tommy has made good. There have been no charges of delinquencies. A letter was received a few days ago in which was stated, "We want to keep Tommy; we do not see how we could get along without him. He is so loving that I am afraid his mother will spoil him, and he is so helpful that I sometimes wonder how we got along so long without him. Yes, we will keep him; but remember, we want a baby girl. She must be under two years of age, with golden curls and blue eyes, for a sister for Tommy."

The Social Worker smiles, feeling sure that Tommy has found a real home. She knows that to them who have made this little lad happy will come the blessing promised by the Savior, who loved little children and said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

Sperry, Oklahoma

May 15.—The people of Sperry continue to manifest interest in the work of the church. At the midweek prayer service last week fifty-four members were present. That this group was actively interested is shown by the fact that twenty-one testimonies were offered and two verses of song were sung in fifteen minutes. In all there were thirty-two testimonies and four prayers offered. There were one hundred and ninety-one people present at the Sunday school today.

Brother Adamson, sr., of the Tulsa Branch, spoke to the Saints at eleven o'clock today. Brother Earl Bailey, also of Tulsa, addressed a large congregation this evening.

This good record is kept up in spite of the fact that a number of Saints have moved from Sperry. Recently Brother Johnnie Smith, a priest of the branch, moved from here to Seminole to take charge of business interests there. The young people of Sperry insist that they miss Brother Smith more than anyone else.

The Department of Women has been holding social meetings of late at the homes of members of this branch who have moved to other towns around Sperry. In the last two weeks they have visited with Mrs. Avant and Mrs. Thompson, both of Tulsa vicinity.

Brother Hubert Case will begin a series of meetings here on May 22. There will be no eleven o'clock service on that day, on account of the baccalaureate sermon at the high school building. Brother Case will preach at eight o'clock on May 22. Brother Case, district missionary in charge, is well known in this community, and it is believed that the meetings will be successful, if the prayers of the Saints will be offered fervently.

CLEO M. HANTHORN.

Fanning, Kansas

All departments of the work in the branch are functioning in a very satisfactory way. The attendance at all services has increased more than one hundred per cent in the past quarter. Pastor Hedrick has received hearty cooperation from the local priesthood. He has outlined a series of sermonets for Sunday evenings by the priesthood, and the congregation has responded very attentively to the efforts of the brethren.

Brother Roy L. Tilden was asked by the pastor to make the effort to revive an orchestra. In response to a meeting called by him, eighteen signed as willing to take some instrument. During the World War, Brothers Arthur H. Mills and Orlando Nace assisted us in organizing an orchestra, but so many of the members responded to the call of our country that the orchestra became disorganized. We hope for success in our effort to revive interest in the music department.

Five families, Charles Marsh, Will Marsh, Fred Marsh, Dan Marsh, and their father, W. S. Marsh, have recently located and purchased farms near Fanning. They joined the church six years ago, when Brother F. G. Hedrick made a missionary effort near Bern, Kansas. These families make a very active addition to our branch.

Brother Schmid, of the Troy group of our branch, baptized three members on May 15.

The Religio Department purchased a movie projector, and at least one film is put on the program of the society each evening.

The Department of Women has been very active during the past quarter.

The sisters supported the fund for redecorating the interior of the church and purchasing new folding tables for serving banquets.

Some of the regular attendants at our services drive a long distance. Brother Bean and family drive twenty-two miles from near Hiawatha, and Brother Ed. Jeschke and family drive ten miles from Bendena.

A number of our young sisters are making a fine record as teachers in the public school. Vera Twombly is a teacher in the Sparks School; Sylvia Chestnut is principal of the Bendena School; Marguerite Hopkins has signed for the coming year at Willow Springs; Frankie Marsh will teach the Fanning School.

Surrounding Fanning is a wonderful fruit country, and this is being highly developed. Land prices are reasonably low at present. The apple blossom festival put on each spring here brings people from all over the country. The parade this spring was viewed by twenty-five thousand people and was miles in extent. Not only is this a great fruit country, but it is well adapted to general farming. Certainly, our branch is well located for industrial purposes.

Brother Samuel Twombly preached the baccalaureate sermon at Doniphan, Kansas, Sunday night, the 15th. A quartet from Sparks assisted him and sang a few numbers. Sister Edna Williams, of Bendena, sang a solo.

The branch is making ready for the quarterly conference which convenes at Fanning, May 21.

William Twombly has been engaged to teach at the Chapple School the coming school year. This is three and one half miles south of Fanning.

Detroit District Conference

Saturday and Sunday, May 7 and 8 the Saints of the Detroit District met in the Highland Park Church, Detroit, Michigan. The conference opened with a business session Saturday morning at 10.30. Organization of the conference and reports of officers were the features of the meeting.

At 2.30 business session again convened. The regular conference business was taken care of. An item of special interest was the report of the reunion committee on the proposed tri-district reunion to be held at Indian Lake sometime this summer. The conference approved of the work of the committee and voted to support financially the future efforts of the committee in this direction.

The evening service was in charge of the Department of Women, Sister H. A. Koehler, district superintendent, directing. A very interesting program was rendered, suggesting the place and importance of the women's work in the church and home.

Sunday morning prayer meeting convened at 8 a. m., with A. H. DuRose and M. J. Crowley of the district presidency, Apostle D. T. Williams, and T. S. Williams in charge. "Consecration" was the theme of the service. The spirit and testimony of consecration was present throughout this meeting.

Apostle D. T. Williams addressed the mass priesthood at 9.30 in the upper auditorium of the church. The brethren who were not members of the ministry and the sisters were invited to "listen in." Brother Williams very forcefully presented the responsibility of the priesthood and the great need of the church today in a worthy and efficient ministry.

At eleven o'clock Brother Williams was the speaker. In this service he suggested that the devotion necessary to the establishment of Zion is exemplified in the sacrificial devotion manifest in motherhood. The speaker was blessed in the presentation of the word, and we all felt a desire to give more to the church.

Doctor W. D. Henderson, of the University of Michigan, lectured on "Modern science and the Bible," at 2.30 p. m. I shall not present a summary of his lecture, because some who took notes during the doctor's talk have promised to give them to me. With these and my own I hope to make a more or less complete report of this very interesting and instructive lecture.

Elder H. A. Koehler was the speaker for the evening service. Of this sermon I am unable to report, due to my preaching at another church.

Those attending the conference from outside the district were Brother and Sister Blett, from Grand Rapids, who came in the interest of the tri-district reunion, and Brother and Sister Bruce Brown, of Colorado Springs, who are visiting old-time friends and relatives in Detroit and other points in Michigan.

Amarillo, Texas

Southeast Corner, Main Floor of Courthouse

Amarillo Saints have been meeting under some disadvantage for the past few Sundays, because of the changing of the county court room, our meeting place, from 219 East Fifth Street to the southeast corner of the main floor of the courthouse, where we are meeting at present, due to the untiring efforts of Brother Moriarty. From now on we will have services at the regular time: Sunday school, 9.45 a. m.; preaching service, 11 a. m.; and 8 p. m.; prayer and study hour, Wednesday night at 8.

The group here continues to grow, and while some may find it necessary to leave, others are coming. Four new families have come to worship with us since our last letter.

Sister Raymond Miller, teacher of the recently organized young people's class, delightfully entertained six couples last Friday night, May 6, at her home. A good time was the unanimous report.

Sister Ruth Meehan Selzer directed the Easter program, which was very much enjoyed by all. She also provided a happy time for the children with an egg hunt after services. Our Mothers' Day program also was under the direction of Sister Selzer and proved very pleasing.

One particularly interesting experience was ours on Mothers' Day, when Sister Larsen, who has been in Amarillo thirty years, isolated from church privileges, came, accompanied by her husband, four sons, one daughter, two daughters-in-law, and two grandchildren—her whole family except one son who was unable to attend. Sister Larsen and her family are well and favorably known in Amarillo. It is the lives of such people as these that bring honor to the name Latter Day Saint and make the establishment of the work here easier than it might otherwise have been.

Several social events are being planned for the summer season, which of course will be reported later.

Detroit Promises a Good Year

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

This report finds me at my task, doing what I can for the work in this great city. I am pleased to report that, with the exception of a few ruffles, the work is moving along very well.

I am indeed encouraged in the good cause. We had our first meeting in the new River Rouge Church yesterday. We have a very nice little building there now and are looking forward to a bright future in that section of the city.

I am holding a week's series of meetings in the new church mentioned above. It is rather difficult for me to be doing this type of work just now, but it seemed the best thing to do.

I believe you can expect great things of Detroit the coming year.

Sincerely,

THOMAS S. WILLIAMS.

Brush Creek Branch

We are trying to keep the great latter-day work going here. Our faithful branch president, William Clements, though living four miles from church, has hardly missed a service all winter. If the roads were too bad to drive a team, he walked. This shows he is interested in the Lord's work, as he is sixty-two years old. I think if the rest of us were as deeply interested in the Master's work, the Lord would be much better pleased.

We rejoice to have Brother R. L. Fulk back in our district for another year. He can make the gospel so plain, that it seems as if everyone should understand it.

Although the roads have been uncommonly bad this winter we carried the Sunday school on, missing only three Sundays. At times it looked rather discouraging, but we did not give up. I think the Lord will reward us for our faithful work.

Brother F. L. Sawley is living in the dining hall again. He has charge of the junior church on the third Sundays, beside helping us in many other ways.

We have Brother R. L. Fulk with us at the present (May 9). He has preached some excellent sermons for us during the past week. There seems to be quite a bit of interest shown; people come through rain and mud to hear the gospel preached by one who is fully able to explain it.

On Sunday, May 8, we had an all-day meeting and basket dinner. Two long tables were set in the dining hall at noon with many good things to eat prepared by the sisters. It did not look quite fair, as it was Mothers' Day, for the men to eat at the first tables, but the ladies took pity on them. Perhaps we will have a fathers' and sons' banquet and the ladies will be favored then. The crowd gathered at the church about 2.30 for departmental work. At this time a choir was organized, also Temple Builder, Oriole, and Boy Scout organizations. Splendid talks were given by Brothers Fulk, Sawley, and Clements.

Brother Fulk intends to stay this week and preach to us, and make more definite plans for the coming reunion to be held here; also to assist the young people in recreation.

Makes Use of Church Literature

I have just read the letter of the Methodist friend in the SAINTS' HERALD of May 4. It confirms what I have believed for years. I almost always have Busy Man's Tracts in my purse and have handed out many of them and found willing readers. I also hand out many Angel Message tracts and loan my church books.

Only a few days ago I was talking to a man who called to see me on business, and showed him the Book of Mormon, calling attention to the witnesses in the front of the book. He asked me if I ever loaned the book, and at my reply that I did, he asked if I would loan it to him. This I gladly did. He went away with it and several tracts and Ensigns, which he said he would carefully read and return. He told me he had been a church member and Bible student all his life, but that this was the best thing he had ever heard. When he left, I said, "I am sorry my son was not here." He replied, "I am glad he was not. If he had been here, we would not have had this nice talk which I have enjoyed so much." He had never seen the Book of Mormon before.

I have met and talked with several in the last few weeks who have eagerly listened to my story of the restored gospel and taken books and tracts to read.

Several years ago I became acquainted with the wife of an officer at the Fulsom State Prison. She invited me to spend the day with her. She lived inside the prison walls. I asked her if she thought the prisoners would read church literature. "Indeed they would," she rejoined. So when I went, a friend went with me, and I took a large apple box full of HERALDS, Ensigns, and Sunday school quarterlies. When the box was carried in by the trusty, who was her house servant and cook, she knelt down beside it and exclaimed, "Thank God for this for these poor unfortunates!" Since then I have lost track of her; she did not answer my letters. But I have had a great desire to take more papers there, though I have been unable to do so. It is quite a long trip, and as I do not drive a car it is hard to get anyone sufficiently interested to take me over. I am sure it would do good to place our literature there and in other prisons, also in hotels and reading rooms. They are especially helpful if there is some one to call attention to them.

I have already taken up a great deal of valuable space, but I am interested in the work and I know it is true. My time to help here on earth is short, for I am an old woman. But I feel impelled to keep busy and help all I can to spread the gospel in the world where there are so many hungering and waiting for it. I am hoping and praying for the success of this glorious work.

Des Moines Branch Activities

The work in Des Moines, under the impetus gained during the past two years through the able leadership of our former pastor, Brother H. A. Higgins, is going rapidly forward, with the prospects of greater success growing brighter and brighter. We feel keenly the loss of Brother and Sister Higgins to Des Moines, and regret their departure, for they are loyal, capable workers for the Master, and we wish them happiness and success in their new field of endeavor.

We are happy to welcome Brother C. B. Hartshorn as the new pastor in Des Moines. His reputation for efficiency and ability has preceded him, and we pledge our loyal support to him in building up the kingdom of God. The Des Moines Ministerial Association elected him to membership at their first meeting after his arrival, thus continuing a worth-while connection established by Brother Higgins.

The teaching staff of our Sunday school and Religio is being augmented by the valuable training received in the School of Methods and Institute conducted by the Polk County Council of Religious Education last fall and winter. About twenty-four of our people were in regular attendance at these sessions and received certificates of credit, which may apply on their international certificate. During the week of May 8 to 15, an intensive course was offered in Daily Vacation Bible School methods and materials. About twelve, including Brother Hartshorn, took advantage of this opportunity to prepare for service in this field.

Brother C. B. Woodstock recently conducted an institute in Des Moines for the district departmental workers. These sessions were well attended, and proved to be valuable contributions to those who are seeking to qualify for more efficient service in the departments.

The Sunday school embarked last Sunday upon an eight weeks' membership and attendance campaign, under the enthusiastic leadership of Brother J. L. Parker. The goal has been set at four hundred. One of the special features of the campaign is the devotional and song service held each Sunday morning from 9 to 9.30 under the direction of Pastor Hartshorn, which serves to increase the spirit of fellowship and good will. We shall watch with interest the progress of this campaign.

The fruits of the efforts put forth by Brother Arthur H. Mills during the district musical institute held in Des Moines some time ago are now being made manifest in our musical department. Supporting the regular choir, we have a well-organized junior choir, an orchestra of eight or ten pieces, and a junior orchestra almost as large. We feel encouraged by the added interest taken in this phase of the work, and also the wonderfully improved quality of the music which we are permitted to enjoy.

At the monthly meeting of the Department of Women, the new officers were installed. Sister Mary Rudkin succeeded Sister Clarence Kirkwood as president. Sister Kirkwood enters upon her new activities as district president of the Department of Women, after two years of successful administration in the local council. The program for the year was outlined, and an inspirational talk by the new pastor was enjoyed. There were plans presented for the immediate organization of a new chapter of Blue Birds, also another chapter of Orioles, which gives Des Moines three chapters of Temple Builders, two circles of Orioles, and a Blue Bird circle.

The work in Des Moines is forward. We have a fine new church home, and our efforts are now being directed towards "strengthening the stakes" and improving the spiritual tone of the members; looking toward the future, "Beautiful Zion beckons us on."

Dallas, Texas

On Friday, May 13, our missionary, J. E. Vanderwood, arrived in the city, all filled with the spirit of the late General Conference. At the Religio that night he taught the stewardship class and brought out some very interesting and profitable ideas. Surely the instruction received will be a means of helping the Saints to better understand and discharge their duties.

Sunday, May 15, he preached both morning and evening, giving the Saints an idea of the forward-looking program adopted by the late conference. In the afternoon a prayer and sacrament meeting was held; and immediately after it dismissed, the priesthood met to lay plans for the missionary program that Brother Vanderwood is going to help them put over this summer. The plans were to get thoroughly organized for work and then advertise the meeting until the 29th, when our missionary is going to begin in dead earnest such a campaign as has not been conducted in Dallas for many a day.

Wednesday evening, May 18, Brother and Sister J. E. Nicoll celebrated their pearl wedding. There were at their commodious home at 5843 Vanderbilt Avenue, about fifty guests gathered, Saints and friends, to help them make the occasion a success. This I think was accomplished, for things went along as if worked by magic. The home was beautifully decorated in white and green, to be illustrative of the pearl wedding. Many valuable gifts were presented our worthy brother and his good wife by friends and relatives. When the guests were all assembled, Mrs. Neal, a friend of the family, played the wedding march, and the groom of thirty years, accompanied by the missionary, stepped in from the adjoining room and stood directly under the large wedding bell that was suspended from the ceiling. From the rear of the house on through the dining room and into the parlor came the ring bearer, Miss Venna, the younger daughter of Brother and Sister Nicoll; following her came the bride of thirty years on the arm of Mr. W. M. Trammell, an old-time friend of the family. He gave the bride, and our missionary then read the ceremony that he had just written in rhyme for the occasion.

The original wedding ring of thirty years ago was then placed on the finger of Sister Nicoll by her devoted companion, and the couple were presented to the assembled guests for their congratulations. The celebration throughout was very pretty, and a spirit of reverence for the sacredness of the marriage covenant was impressed upon all who were present. Brother and Sister Nicoll have the good will and hearty wishes of their many friends, that they may enjoy another thirty years of nuptial bliss.

Sisters Wells and Yarrington had charge of the serving, and after the ceremony light refreshments, consisting of punch, ice cream, and cake were served. The friends who were present were favorably impressed with our ideals of life and the sacred manner in which we hold the marriage vow. I am sure our work here will be able to take on a new impetus and the people of this city will be enabled to see as never before the beauty and excellence of the gospel message that has so graciously been committed unto us.

The Department of Women is rendering valuable service in helping to advertise the work here and get ready for the missionary campaign that we are intending to put on in this city in the near future. We have not burdened you with news from this part of the field, but if this escapes the waste basket you may expect to hear from us again, for the Saints of Dallas believe in doing constructive work.

CORRESPONDENT.

La Junta, Colorado

May 16.—Things are moving along here about as usual. Today has been very warm, registering ninety degrees in the shade; it is unusually warm for this time of the year in this climate.

To visiting Saints passing this way, we will say that our church building is located in North La Junta. As this part of town is not incorporated, we have no street numbers. The division line between North and South La Junta is the Arkansas River, over which is a long cement bridge. Just after crossing the bridge take the first street to the right and go one block. Ours is the only church building there; you will not be lost. Victor E. Willis, correspondent, lives in the first house east of the church, not more than thirty feet from the church door. They will welcome any and all visiting Saints. Look them up.

We feel the work is progressing and are very much encouraged to press onward and upward. May God continue to add his blessings to his church and his people.

The following is a copy of a letter mailed by our branch president to each family in the branch just prior to each sacramental service:

The La Junta Supplement to the "Saints' Herald"

The time has arrived for another letter. How the time flies! It seems as if it were only a few days since last sacrament. And yet we know it has been longer than that since we saw some of you, some one week, some two, and some even longer. Some have missed because of family sickness, some have body sickness, some mind sickness, and some have sickness of the soul. Which kind do you have? Let us know. Perhaps we can help. We will try at least. Those who have not attended the meetings of the last month have lost ground that is going to be hard to regain. The pre-Easter meetings held were all that could be expected of them, starting on Wednesday night before Easter with the sacramental meeting on Thursday night, all gathered around long tables instead of in the regular seats, and by candlelight, and closing Easter night with the play, "Easter dawn." We hope that much good will come of the effort that was put forth by all in making the meetings and play a success. Much credit is due those who worked so hard and faithfully to make them worth while and to be remembered.

Our sick list this month contains the names of Sister Seely and Brother Berry. Brother Berry has a bad case of blood poisoning, which took him to the hospital, and Sister Seely has the measles. Both are reported as doing fine at this time.

We are pleased to add to our record by baptism the following names: Jess Helton, Roy Helton, Richard Berry, Matty Belle Taylor, Ardell Taylor, Elmer Anderson, Pearl Anderson, Rachel Kessey, Allen Blair, Manford Ralston, and Chester Ralston. We welcome them to our ranks and pray the best of everything for them.

As General Conference is over, we now know what was done for us. They did not forget or neglect us. Brother Bruce E. Brown was sent back to us as our district president, and Brother Richard Weaver is missionary. Brother Weaver is not known to me, personally, but Brother Brown speaks of him as "Dick," so I suppose he will be all right.

When I got home from the meeting Easter night, I sat down and checked up on the work accomplished the last thirty days; here is a rough draft of it: Baptisms, eleven; confirmations, eleven; administrations, thirteen; meetings, forty-five; distance traveled in the interest of the church, eight hundred miles. One of these meetings was a sermon in the Baptist Church in Las Animas, one in a grade school, and three in the high school. I thought this was a pretty good record, so I started to do a little figuring on it. If those meetings lasted forty-five minutes each, then I put in thirty-three and three fourths hours in meetings, and if I traveled thirty miles an hour, it took me twenty-six and two thirds hours to make that eight hundred miles, or a total of sixty and one fourth hours in the thirty days. Now figure it out on a percentage basis: The sixty hours represent about eight per cent of the total hours in a month of thirty days; add to that eight hours a day for sleep, or another thirty-three per cent, and you have forty-one per cent, which left me fifty-nine per cent of my time to play and work at something else. That does not make it show up so well, does it? I guess I had better not say any more about it, or I will figure it out that I have not been at work at all, so I guess I will drop that subject and get to work.

You know, our year seems to start out at a different time than New Year's. At the close of General Conference and after Easter and when springtime has in reality come to us, it seems the best time to start our year with a rush, for the church business for the year has been taken care of, the Easter season has caused our minds to dwell on the eternal question, and the bursting buds of spring have proved to us that it is no question at all, but that the continuity of life is a proven reality. Why not start our year off as it should be started, with an attendance at the sacramental meeting on next Sunday, May 1? We all need each other, the church needs us, and the world needs the church; so let us lay our plans for a meeting that may be remembered, making the preparation that may be needful, fasting and praying that the Lord may bless and direct. Let us not be weary of our burdens, but only pray that the load may be made so heavy that it will challenge the best that is within us; and then, and then only, will we receive the strength to perform our labors and finish the work that has been left for us to do. So may we meet in the spirit of prayer and consecration, that each one may receive the blessing that he may need.

E. P. DARNELL.

Young People of the Upper Peninsula

On April 30, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the young people of the Upper Peninsula began to appear at Gladstone, and give prospect of a good young people's convention. At 7.30 we met at the church and went to Days River, where all enjoyed themselves roasting marshmallows and wieners. We were pleased to note that all the branches of the Upper Peninsula were represented, some coming from Soo, Michigan; Soo, Canada; Munising, and Whitehall, the longest distance driver being Elder Ernest Burt, from Onaway, in the Lower Peninsula.

At 8.30 a. m. May 1, we met in sacramental service, in charge of Elder Burt and Elder R. D. Davis, who taught us from the topic, "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and he gave the Saints good instruction concerning the sacrament. We were blessed with the gifts of the gospel through which the Lord saw fit to admonish his people through Elder Davis. During the service the young people sang "Onward, Christian soldiers."

Preaching service in charge of Elder Brearley, of Whitehall, began at 10.30. At this time there were sermonets given by members of the priesthood. Brother Percy Elliot, of Soo, Michigan, who is young in years and in the ministry, preached his first sermon. The Lord blessed Brother Elliot abundantly in his effort. He preached on baptism, taking the lesson from the third chapter of Saint John. Brother Warren Acker, of Munising, spoke for the good of the young people; then Elder Brearley took the stand and gave some very good instruction.

Another preaching service opened at 2.30 p. m., being in charge of Elder Brower, of Gladstone, and the sermon was by Elder R. D. Davis, of Soo, Michigan. He took his discourse from the twenty-sixth psalm. This service was of great benefit to the young, and was followed at 3.15 by a round table discussion, conducted by Elders Davis and Burt. At this time Brother Davis spoke on stewardships. We also had an interesting talk about Graceland College, from Sister Alma Denio. The next speaker was Brother Roy Denio, his subject being, "This year we sail Zionward." He also explained the Zionic chart. Special music was by Sister King and Brother Orval King; and Brother Brearley gave us a splendid solo. Numbers were also given by Sisters Alma, Selma, and Marguerite Laage, and Elnor Carmody.

At 7.30 we met with the Saints for the evening sermon. Brother Davis was in charge, and Elder Burt preached. His subject material was taken from Titus 2, and he gave much instruction to the young Saints as to how we should prepare ourselves for future years. His talk was a real inspiration and ended the day well.

Our goal is Zion. We never cease to think or to talk of it, and we pray God will bless us in our work. We are looking forward to our two-day meeting June 18 and 19. Everyone is cordially invited to visit us at that time.

GLADSTONE, MICHIGAN.

H. ROY DENIO.

Brentwood Branch

Our Sabbath school on May 1 reached its high mark for the year, when there were ninety-two souls in attendance. Good interest prevailed, and the children were enthused because they are nearing the half-year mark for the attendance rewards. One of the girls was awarded a copy of The Mormon Girl, and another child received a copy of The Indian Maiden and Her White Deer.

The communion service following was marked by a goodly portion of the Holy Spirit, there being a number of good testimonies offered. The theme of the service was brought from the General Conference, "Forward to 1930; my part."

Elder John Edwards was the speaker in the evening and took for his subject, "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." His discourse was very good, and his explanations plain and well taken.

Mothers' Day, May 8, dawned clear and bright. The eleven o'clock hour was given over to the special "Mothers' service." The mothers were invited to occupy space on the rostrum, and as they filed to take their places there, the Temple Builders pinned a pink carnation on each one. There were fifteen mothers taking part in this ceremony. Pastor C. J. Remington was blessed in his efforts, dwelling on the provision of motherhood, and how God sponsored this movement. The special prayer for the mothers was offered by Brother Roy Remington.

In the evening Brother Roy Remington was the speaker, using the Savior's thought, "Seek first to build up the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness," etc., giving us some very definite lines to which we must work if we wish to accomplish the Lord's purpose as a church.

The Temple Builders tendered the mothers and daughters of the branch a banquet on Monday evening, May 9. Covers were laid for forty-two, and a real time of "banqueting" was had. We have in our branch two instances where there is living a great-grandmother, grandmother, mother, and daughter, and another where the fourth generation offspring is a boy. The fathers acted the role of housewife and nursemaid for this occasion, so that the mothers could enjoy relaxation from the strenuous duties of their regular positions in life.

Our priesthood have again resumed meetings and are taking up a study of stewardships, having their lecture periods semimonthly. They follow their lectures with a general discussion of the topic presented, and much enlightenment is being derived therefrom. This is beginning to show itself, for our branch solicitor was issuing temporary receipts last Sunday, because his receipt book had been filled—in a surprisingly short time. He is ordering an extra book to handle the situation.

The branch now has regular representation in the Brentwood Owl, a local weekly paper, and we are reaching our community this way. The branch agent is working with some of the other newspapers, arranging for space therein so as to get more of our news before the people in this part of our county.

We are working hard, trying to learn the Lord's will and carry out the provisions of it in a manner that will fit us as a group to take our place in the great commonwealth of Zion.

Cherokee, Iowa

417 Clark Street

The results of General Conference were very gratifying to the Saints in general, and we believe all will be encouraged to move out and do more and better work in God's vineyard.

The sacramental service for this month was well attended and much enjoyed by the Saints. The presence of the Spirit was felt as we opened the door, and was with us throughout the service. The Saints were admonished by prophecy to be more humble and faithful and to move out with more zeal in the Master's work. Truly, we receive blessings when we come in the right spirit. Pastor A. R. Crippen was unable to be in attendance at this service. Brother Reeder was in charge of the services, assisted by J. T. Spence. Brother Reeder also filled Brother Crippen's appointment in the evening.

The elders have answered a number of calls for administration to the sick, and are glad to say the faith of those afflicted has been rewarded by healing or a degree of help in all cases.

A fine baby boy came to the home of our deacon, Alfred Ballantyne, and wife on May 4. It is needless to say he received a hearty welcome.

A reception was given for Sister Mary and Raymond Smith, newlyweds, on the evening of April 26.

Brother and Sister Lingard and Brother and Sister Kay White, of Manilla, Iowa, were attendants at services on May 1.

Grandma Larson, who spent the winter at Lamoni, has returned to Cherokee and is a regular attendant at services.

Brother and Sister Albert Haynes were at Dow City last Sunday to see Brother Charles Butterworth who suffered a stroke some time ago. Sister Haynes is a granddaughter of Brother Butterworth.

Summer is here, and Saints as well as others sometimes travel. We wish to extend an invitation to any Saints and friends who come our way to worship with us. The church is located at 417 Clark Street in the northeast part of the city. Pastor A. R. Crippen lives at 408 Sherman Avenue; Elder Reeder, 437 Clark Street, and Deacon Alfred Ballantyne, 420 Clark Street, across the street from the church. We are easily found, and a welcome awaits those who come to worship with us.

Our prayer services are very spiritual and much enjoyed by those who attend. Attendance at all services has been small on account of an epidemic of mumps among the little folks. However, conditions are better at the present.

Quite a number of our Saints will attend conference at Mallard, May 28 and 29. A good spiritual time is expected. Brother Garver and our newly appointed missionaries are expected to be present, as well as Brother Joseph Lane, president of Little Sioux District.

While some of the Saints are apparently cold and indifferent at times and fail to attend services, there are some who are investigating and seeking the truth with a good object in view. We believe God is with us and that the work here will be blessed in the future as it has been in the past.

Holden Stake

Atherton

We have been having some most interesting sermons of late. Rather than reiterating the weaknesses of the human race, and also of Saints, they have been portraying the beauties of life, of the gospel, and of things which are heavenly, creating within an incentive of onward and upward.

Brother J. A. Holsworth always has a message of communication of the divine.

Brother Wildermuth preached on the baptism of fire—a most wonderful sermon, showing the necessity of trials even as by fire, our dross to consume. It made us thank our heavenly Father to suffer us to be tried, that the dross within us might be consumed. He stated that at the day of judgment all evil within each will have been consumed, and we would be as big as the good left within—and asked the question, "How big will each one of us be with only the good left?" that determining the size of our glory.

Brother L. G. Holloway gave a sermon enjoyed by all, giving us a desire to hear him again.

Brother G. W. Thorburn preached on truth from every source, and that it would make us free.

Brother Crabb took as his subject, "Prayer and its application." He very beautifully portrayed the necessity of prayer in all things. He showed the value of rearing our children in prayer and teaching them, ever so young, to pray. Also that the parents were well paid to patiently encourage their children to attend the services in the house of the Lord.

Last Sunday morning twenty-five of our young folks met in the early prayer meeting. Brother Bogue is earnestly instructing the young folks in the necessity of prayer and attendance of these meetings.

Lexington

Since our last items appeared, many things have happened with the Saints at Lexington. The Lord has blessed us many times. Our meetings have been spiritual, and we have been made to feel and know that the Lord is working with his people to bring about his purpose through the church.

Our choir is working regularly under the new chorister, Sister J. A. Brendel. Brother Ivan Beebe has organized an orchestra of twelve members. Some of the members from Richmond, Missouri, are practicing with our orchestra.

Warrensburg

Brother F. A. McWethy, of the stake presidency, visits us occasionally. We are always glad to have him with us. He is a faithful and earnest steward in God's kingdom.

Brother C. F. Scarcliff, of the stake bishopric, is always welcome at Warrensburg. His talks are inspiring and instructive.

Brother James Duffey, of Post Oak, was with us at the last sacrament service. We are indeed glad that Brother Duffey is faithful and true to his trust.

Brother Amos Allen, general church auditor, gave us a good talk recently, giving us strength and encouragement. After the sermon, privilege was given to ask questions on the financial condition of the church. We were indeed glad to hear from one so thoroughly competent to know that the church is standing on a firm foundation financially; so we hope each will move out unhesitatingly and perform his financial duty towards the church.

Brother and Sister J. W. Hancock, of Mobile, Alabama, stopped on their way to General Conference to visit his brother, G. W. Hancock, and his sister, Mrs. Joe Ball. They were accompanied by Brother and Sister Thomas Carr, also of Mobile.

Brother and Sister George DeTray and their sons, D. E. and Robert, of Independence, Missouri, made us a very welcome call recently.

There were only a few from our local who were privileged to attend General Conference; but many who stayed home read the DAILY and so kept in touch with the proceedings of one of the most wonderful conferences ever held.

Anyone entering into the spirit of the work can not help but see that the church is progressing rapidly. May each one lay up a bank account for himself on the other side of the river of life by boosting the present program of the church, and thus hasten putting into action the stewardship plan and the redemption of Zion.

Holden

The promotion exercises of the Holden grade school were held at the city auditorium Thursday afternoon. An excellent program was presented, after which the twenty-nine pupils took their places on the rostrum. The address of the evening was made by Reverend Heaton, after which the honor roll was read by Professor Ryle. Six of our children were among the twenty-nine promotions, viz: Gladys Carr, Lee Shoemaker, Gertrude Sisk, Charles Kittinger, and Frank and Kenneth Barwise. The first three were on the honor roll.

From the Holden Progress: "Miss Lou Risse Dillon, who has been attending the Columbia University, New York, the past year, finished her work and was given her master's degree. She will be at home in a short time for a visit with her mother, Mrs. Georgia Dillon, after which she will go to Cedar Falls, Iowa, where she will teach in the State Teachers College during the summer session."

The home-coming May 15 was the first of the kind held here. Over four hundred were in attendance, and nearly all remained for the dinner served by the Department of Women, and the afternoon sermon by Brother Elbert A. Smith. Both sermons were the subject of many favorable remarks. We are sure these gatherings will be arranged for annually.

The following is from the local paper:

"With a well-filled church, the Holden Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints celebrated their home-coming Sunday. Many members and former members from far and near gathered for the services.

"The speaker both morning and afternoon was one of the distinguished heads of the church, President E. A. Smith, one of the First Presidency and grandson of Joseph Smith, who instituted the L. D. S. church.

"President Smith brought two strong messages, emphasizing the need of consecrated loyalty to the faith. In the morning he referred to the "legacy" left by Joseph Smith the Younger, who was head of the church for fifty years, outlining the heritage as a doctrinal treasury, an unremitting loyalty, and a call to sacrificial giving.

"In the afternoon he brought another strong message. To allow the distinguished guest to catch a train, the afternoon service was called earlier than had been anticipated.

"A bountiful dinner was served at noon, with hundreds of visitors and local members and friends participating.

"Taken all in all, members of the church declare it was one of the outstanding gatherings in the history of the local church."—Holden Enterprise.

Programs are out for a young people's convention, which meets at Holden June 17 to 19. President F. M. McDowell and Bishop J. A. Koehler have charge of the class work; Mrs. D. J. Krahl and Mrs. Edith Koehler, the children's activities. Amos E. Allen will conduct a junior church at the 11 a. m. hour Sunday. E. A. Curtis has charge of recreational activities, and Mrs. J. A. Brendel and R. F. Moorman the music. Meals will be furnished by the Holden Saints. At 1.30 p. m. Saturday, the 18th, all will be invited to make an auto trip to the stewardship farm at Kingsville, where an afternoon of fun will be provided, closing with a wiener roast at 5 p. m. The return trip to Holden—five miles—will be made in time for the evening service at the church. A get-together meeting will be held on the church lawn at the close of this service.

A 4H canning club has been organized, with Sister Bessie Ament, superintendent; Pearl Bixby, president; Bernice Kirkhart, secretary. This organization is supervised by the college of agriculture and expects to enter its products in county and state exhibits.

Elders W. S. Macrae and F. A. McWethy of the stake presidency and C. F. Scarcliff of the stake bishopric have filled appointments in the stake recently.

Elder and Mrs. C. F. Scarcliff were called to Eldorado Springs last Sunday on account of the death of Sister Scarcliff's father, Brother Schroeder. Brother Schroeder has been identified with the work for a number of years; for thirty years a resident of the vicinity of Eldorado Springs.

Elder H. O. Smith is at Holden this week visiting and officiating in the duties of his office. He will be the speaker at both services Sunday.

Elder and Mrs. Harvy V. Minton and two children have located at Warrensburg. We are very glad to have them in our midst. Brother Minton is a missionary to the Holden Stake and will spend most of his time away from Warrensburg. But Sister Minton will be a valuable asset to the work there.

Elder R. B. Cook, pastor at Buckner, visited the Courtney Group May 1 and assisted in the sacramental service. His place was filled at Buckner by Elder Amos E. Allen, pastor of the Blue Springs Group. On the same day Elders F. A. McWethy and B. P. Thompson, of Holden, worshiped with the Saints at Post Oak; and Elder James Duffey, pastor there, assisted in the sacramental service at Warrensburg. We would like to have the branches in the stake represented in the Holden Stake items.

Sedalia

Sedalia is striving to go forward, though it seems we are not moving very fast. We trust, however, we may work with one accord, that much may be accomplished.

Our pastor, R. E. Bozarth, has given us some splendid sermons of late, outlining our duty along various lines. We hope his efforts may bear fruit.

We have had a fairly good attendance at Sunday school. We had some interesting Religio sessions and some splendid programs.

The Women's Department rendered a good program Mothers' Day. This department meets every two weeks and studies "The child and his needs." They held a window sale recently, which netted a good sum.

Our Sunday school superintendent, Brother A. G. King, and wife, have been happy of late over the arrival of a baby boy. He was blessed Sunday, May 15, by Elders R. E. Bozarth and A. A. Weaver.

Brother G. W. Rodger and daughter Jean have gone to Indianapolis to get Mrs. Rodger, who was called there some time ago by the illness of her mother and grandmother.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fairview Avenue, West End

The past few weeks have found a number of the Saints sick, the pastor being among the sick ones, but only one Sunday did he fail to preach. We are happy that the sick ones are recovering.

The Department of Women has been busy with cooking sales, lunches, and their usual departmental work. The attendance at Sunday school keeps up well.

We had a very appropriate program on Mothers' Day and a sermon by the pastor on "Our debt to mother." A number of flowers and plants were used to decorate the church, the flowers being afterwards sent to the hospital to a sick mother.

Brother B. Kunz paid us a visit on April 10. He is assistant district superintendent of Sunday schools, and while here he preached morning and evening and was well received.

The pastor's sermons have been plain and to the point, putting the truths in such a way that all can understand.

Visiting Saints will find a welcome to our church. Our address is Fairview Avenue, West End. Take the West End street car. The pastor is to be found on 210 Grand Avenue; his phone number is Black 295-i.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Mothers' Day

The Brick Church was beautiful with large bouquets and baskets of flowers, arranged across the platform and around the pulpit. The bright spring morning brought out a good-sized congregation. At the eleven o'clock hour Mrs. Lydia Wight, superintendent of women's work, presided over the service. In her announcements she spoke of the ready response that the women of the community had made to the several projects undertaken, such as furnishing reunion tents, providing church properties, etc. The invocation was offered by Elder Lonzo Jones. A quartet of young men sang an old song, "Golden memories of mother," and Mrs. Frances Norris sang a contralto solo of the day's theme. Blanche Edwards gave the morning address, her first talk to the Lamoni Saints since her return. As usual, she found a responsive chord with her hearers.

In the lower auditorium, over a hundred children gathered for the junior service. Vaughn Bailey is the leader of these services, assisted by Grace Lane, musical director, and Verna Garver, dramatic director. The order and attention of these juniors was most gratifying to their leaders and indicative of the worthwhileness of the program, consisting of music, a story, and a sermon on Mothers' Day.

"The Elijah"

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society gave their fourth annual concert of "Elijah" Sunday evening, May 8, under the direction of Mabel Carlile. This year Loyal Philips Shawe, head of the voice department of Northwestern University, was the title soloist—a remarkable Elijah giving a rare artistic interpretation of the role. Through the majestic prophetic denunciations of Baal and the prophetic lament, "It is enough," Mr. Shawe carried his hearers with a dramatic appeal. He was equally at home in both.

Other soloists were Mary Louise Lloyd, of the music faculty of Graceland College, who in fine soprano voice did her best in "Hear ye Israel"; Frances Norris, with a rich, deep contralto voice; and George Anway, whose sympathetic tenor quality always appeals to Lamoni hearers.

The chorus of one hundred forty voices, under Miss Carlile's leadership, secured some excellent phrasing and dramatic effects besides the mere singing of notes. There was enthusiasm, spontaneity, and sense of meaning in the Baal choruses, so that with Mr. Shawe's responsive and thrilling portrayal of Elijah, a most vivid picture was created. In other places a confident handling of shading, fortissimos, and humming pianissimos, such as in "He watching over Israel" demonstrated that the chorus was doing more than amateur work. If there was a criticism, it was in a slight unbalance of parts at times and in the insufficiency of accompaniment for so large a chorus. These, however, were small in comparison with the commendable qualities. Virginia Wary was piano accompanist, and Mrs. Clara Lane was at the reed organ.

"The Elijah" has come to be a regular part of Lamoni's music and the motivating interest of choral activities. On former years it has been given as a concert on a week night as a part of the lyceum course. Appreciation of the oratorio is increasing among the general public. Several visitors from nearby towns were in the audience.

Visit of Patriarch Pitt

Brother and Sister F. G. Pitt spent a week in Lamoni visiting relatives and doing the pastoral work of a patriarch. On Tuesday evening he spoke in the church to several of his old friends; on Wednesday evening he gave the introductory talk at the students' meeting at the college; on Thursday night he preached at Bloomington, and Friday at the Saints' Home; and on the next Sunday filled the pulpit at the Brick Church. The visit of this old patriarch and his wife has been of mutual benefit, the Lamoni Saints being inspired by the fidelity and zeal of this experienced minister, and he in turn being refreshed by the vigor of the young people, especially at the college. The Pitts visited the chapel exercises at the college on Friday, both speaking of their travels and missionary experiences and closing with a hymn in the Tahitian language.

High School Baccalaureate

The baccalaureate exercises of the graduating class of the Lamoni High School were held at the Brick Church on the evening of May 15. At eight o'clock a duo-march on organ and piano was played by Mrs. Clara Lane and her daughter, Thelma, and the processional of the class and faculty opened the service. The oratorio society with A Capella Chorus sang Goul's "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy," and George Anway sang the tenor solo, "A voice crying in the wilderness." Elder W. E. Prall presided over the meeting, and the invocation was offered by Reverend Rose Hillhouse, of the Methodist Church. The sermon was delivered by Roy A. Cheville, who used the theme "The life of loyalty."

Elder Lonzo Jones gave the baccalaureate address at Hite-man, Iowa, on the same Sunday evening. In the morning Elder Cheville had given the address at the services of the high school at Pleasanton, which were held in the Christian Union Church.

Baptisms in the Stake

Prior to the General Conference, Elder Hubert Case held an extended missionary effort in Allendale, Missouri, and baptized twenty, most of whom were young adults. The field was promising, and he and Gomer Wells renewed the missionary work. Last Sunday they concluded a two-week series of sermons, baptizing and confirming thirteen more.

Two college students were baptized by Roy A. Cheville, and these were confirmed at the union prayer meeting.

Lamoni is now busy in the period of college commencement and pre-institute activities.

Cleveland, Ohio

It is some time since the Cleveland Branch has been heard from through the HERALD, but we are still going on in the narrow way; we feel that as a branch we have much to be thankful for, and with unity we will still endeavor to let our light shine in this large city.

We have had some fine services during the recent months. Besides the local brethren, we have had visits from Brothers Paul Hanson, F. A. Smith, William Patterson, and Hammond, the last named being with us a week ago for Mothers' Day; all these men left some good thoughts with us to help strengthen our faith.

All the departments are working well. The Sunday school has a pretty good attendance, and much interest is displayed in each class. The Religio classes also show great interest; the adult class is studying the first volume of the church history, and we have some very good discussions on the different subjects. We have a short program after the lesson study of musical numbers, solos, and recitations; also a social time about once a month. Brother E. A. Webbe, of Kirtland, brought his picture machine and gave us lectures on different subjects, which were enjoyed by all.

And last, but by no means least, is our Women's Department. The interest manifested in this department is very encouraging. We are all working hard to carry out our program. Besides our work around the branch, we have been going out to hospitals, homes for the aged, etc., putting on programs for the shut-ins, which are very much appreciated. We feel that we are blessed by trying to bring a little cheer into their lives.

This is a large city, and our responsibilities are large in proportion. We feel that we would ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers, that truly we may go forward and upward.

Independence

Stone Church

The reading of Psalms 5:1-7 began the session of Sunday school for May 22. "Send us showers of blessings," "Never alone," "The Savior at the door," were sung in the preliminary song service. A musical selection of especial interest was rendered by Mr. Stewart Tandberg, cello, and Mrs. Stewart Tandberg at the piano. The number was the original arrangement of "Ave Maria."

For the eleven o'clock service, the rostrum was decked in baskets of lovely white and pink peonies, lavender iris, and pink roses. The first three rows of seats in the center section were reserved for the officers and graduating class of the Independence Sanitarium, and the faculty and graduating class of the high school department of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

"O happy is the man who hears instruction's warning voice," was sung by the assembled congregation as the first number of the well-arranged program, and a humble, earnest prayer was offered by Evangelist T. C. Kelley. "Largo," was the organ offertory played by Robert Miller, and the Stone Church Choir directed by Brother Paul N. Craig sang, "The Lord brings back his own," Clarence Resch taking the baritone solo. Robert Miller presided at the organ and George Miller at the piano.

The sermon of the morning was a baccalaureate address for the graduating classes of the above mentioned two institutions, and was delivered by Brother John W. Rushton, of Saint Louis. For a text he read 1 Thessalonians 4:11, 12: "And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you; that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing." Reading the epistle of Paul to Philemon, the speaker made Onesimus, the slave who had fled from Philemon and cast himself upon Paul for care and protection, the incarnation of Christlike qualities. Paul had converted the slave and made him his own child in the gospel. Paul writes to Philemon: "I beseech thee for my son Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my bonds: which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me: whom I have sent again . . . whom I would have retained with me, that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel." At this time Paul was being held prisoner in his own house, and under the watch of a Roman soldier and the threat of death he had time to rationalize his religion and build up a hope for the future. He wrote to the saints in Ephesus and Galatia, giving them his conception of Christ and his teachings. Paul's letters clearly reveal his ideals of righteousness—intellectual, moral, and spiritual, the kind of mind he had, and his personality. Before the Christlike ideals and principles were given to him, Onesimus had been unprofitable to his master. Paul says, "Which in time past was to thee unprofitable," but with the new conception of life he was made "now profitable to thee and me." In love he was going back to do for his master that which he had before done in fear. Others have like Paul summoned all their powers to bring comfort to the distressed, to lend practical assistance to the needing, and in thus doing exemplify the Christ. They have taken religion from the cloisters and made of it a practical issue, a gospel of service. He mentioned as an example of this work, Florence Nightingale. Today the world needs a revelation of the divine words and teachings of Christ through deeds. It is our duty to take our business, no matter what it is, and make it come up to our ideals of service to humanity. If we can do this, being honest, true, consecrated, we can establish Zion, a center and starting place for the changes which shall include the whole world.

The closing song, sung by the congregation, was accompanied by Mrs. Louise Lewis at the organ. Brother Kelley gave the prayer of dismissal.

K L D S Sunday Activities

The children's program, arranged by Mrs. Bertha Burgess, and presented by the Bristol School children's orchestra, under the direction of Miss Trout, was begun at 8.30 Sunday morning. Miss Ella Jones told the story.

At 9 Elder Ralph W. Farrell conducted the Bible study hour.

The regular main auditorium service took the air at eleven. At two the K L D S String Trio entertained radio listeners with a good program.

K L D S Radio Church service was furnished by the First Presbyterian Church, Reverend Sears F. Riepma, pastor.

The musical program for the vesper hour was presented by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, composed of Mary Fields, Clara Curtis, Mrs. Frank Good, and Gladys Good. A mixed quartet composed of Clara Curtis, Gladys Good, Mr. George Willis, and Ed. Harrington also rendered some excellent numbers. Special numbers were by Mrs. Corinne Haines French, soprano, and Mrs. Clara Curtis, pianist. The sermon was by Elder U. W. Greene.

At 9.15 the Latter Day Saint studio service was broadcast, music being arranged by Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock, organist, of Kansas City. Elder R. S. Salyards preached the sermon.

Evening Services

Religio members were entertained during the program period by two effective readings by little Bernice Boyd. Miss Elizabeth Okerlind sang a pleasing solo and was accompanied by her sister, Mary Okerlind. Another number especially appreciated was a violin solo by John Owen, who was accompanied by Miss Melva Ward.

As is usually the case, the Sunday evening service crowd began to assemble early in order to get good seats. During the few minutes intervening, Brother John F. Sheehy led in a spiritual song service. Miss Ward was at the organ. While the audience was singing "Onward, Christian soldiers," some two score high school students marched up and occupied the first two or three rows of the main section. They were there to support their school comrades, who were to speak at this hour. The platform was decorated with flowers and the colors of the school—blue and gold.

The first song was "Nearer, my God, to thee," led by Brother Sheehy. Elder F. A. Cool offered the invocation, and the Chrisman High School Girls' Quartet sang a pleasing selection. Brother D. O. Cato was in charge and made this suggestion, "Let us smile back through the years and remember the joys which were ours when we were in the places of these our high school students." He introduced Reginald Julian, retiring student president of the high school, who addressed the Saints and friends on the subject, "The relationship of the parent and teacher to the child." He asserted that the child comes to the ward school with certain attitudes already formed by home training for which his parents are responsible. "The point of this talk is," he stated, "to impress upon you that we, the students, not only want but need the support; we need the understanding and confidence of our family; that is, we need the real, kind, thoughtful parent, not the too kind parent, for over-indulgent parents have meant the ruin of many students. For myself I am glad that I can say my mother was able to see the other person's side at least a part of the time. She thought me no better than any other fellow on the block." He outlined the machinery of class organization and student government of the high school, and then introduced Orvar Swenson, who has been chosen to act as student president for the first semester of next year.

Taking it for granted that there is no point of contention concerning the benefits of education among our people, Brother Swenson pointed out the attitude our people have always had toward education, how they have striven to carry it on. Their first endeavor in Jackson County was to establish a school, and about thirty-two years ago their desire for higher education crystallized in the establishing of Graceland College. He spoke in commendation of the achievements of the graduating class of this year, assuring them their schoolmates would miss them, but that they would endeavor to live up to the high standard established by the class of 1927.

The principal speaker of the evening was President Floyd M. McDowell, fourteen years a member of the faculty at Graceland. For a basis of his discourse he read Matthew 6:19-33, and chose as a theme, "The set of your soul." If the set of the souls of the thousands of graduates of this year could be controlled, the destiny of civilization could be controlled. The set of the soul determines the way each person will go. These questions will answer what is the set of your soul: What is your life's purpose? what is your life's work? what is to be your life's program? Christ came that he might do the will of the Father who sent him. That was his life purpose; to forget self that he might supply the needs of his fellow men. Brother McDowell forcefully impressed upon the minds of his hearers that education is a means of qualifying for service to humanity. He urged the young to "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Celebrate Sister Burton's Birthday

On May 20, 1927, Sister Dora Howlands and Sister Addie Matthews, assisted by their cousin, Sister O. W. Newcomb, entertained at Sister Matthews' home, corner of Walnut and River, in honor of the eighty-third birthday of their mother, our dear Sister Emma Burton.

From 2 to 4 p. m. a constant stream of life-long friends, those of fewer years' acquaintance, and those of only church paper acquaintance, passed quietly through the rooms paying loving tribute to the dear mother in Israel, who has been a blessing to many and whose name will go down in history as one of the stalwarts among missionary wives. Sister Burton was quite ill in the early spring and is very frail. She did not talk much, but through eyes that are scarcely dimmed by her years shone the indomitable spirit that carried her fearlessly and triumphantly through trials and hardships which would have conquered a less valiant soul.

Each guest was asked to write her name in a register which lay upon the refreshment table, that Sister Burton might have the joy of reading them and re-living a joyous birthday celebration.

Reception for Institute Seniors

The faculty reception for the senior class of the high school department of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, which occurred on Saturday evening, May 21, was a happy occasion for all who were present. As early as eight o'clock the guests began to meet on the main floor of the Institute Building to play games, act charades, and sing the school songs. It was a happy get-together time. Mrs. S. A. Burgess was in charge of the entertainment. Brother M. A. Etzenhouser interestingly spoke a few words. Two attractive features of the evening were the reading of the class prophecy by Miss Maurine Reed, and two Scotch songs sung by James W. Davis. Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. James W. Davis and Misses Ada Fallon and Ruth Bryant.

Second Church

On Friday evening the junior department of the Sunday school gave a moving picture of their classroom, Curtis Hall, charging admission for the purpose of raising funds for Sunday school equipment and expense. Brother Vance Eastwood assisted them with his picture machine. Two more will be given, on Friday evenings of this and next week. All are solicited to attend these picture entertainments and thus help the juniors.

Sunday evening the service began right at the close of his characteristic sermons, in which by word picture and Bible incident he riveted upon the consciousness of his hearers the fact that the gospel must be preached in spirit and in truth, else it is unattractive, lifeless, useless. His hearers will not forget this lesson.

Sunday evening the service began right at the close of Religio session, by a sacred concert rendered by the Spring Branch Choir under the leadership of Sister Corinne Haines French. The choir gave some seven numbers of attractive, acceptable sacred music which was appreciated by a houseful of listeners.

Following the concert, Pastor C. Ed. Miller gave the first of a series of three lectures on the subject of astronomy, illustrating a portion of his lecture by the help of the picture machine and screen. Brother Miller was successful in carrying his hearers with him to a contemplation of the works of God on earth, with man, and in the heavens. A large audience is assured for his next lecture on Sunday evening.

Group 31 is giving an ice cream social in Curtis Hall Thursday, May 26, at 6.30 to 9 p. m.

Liberty Street

One of the younger members of our local priesthood, Brother Glenn Davis, was the speaker at the morning service. His text was taken from Luke 10:25: "And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." In this discourse Brother Davis told in an interesting manner the story of the good Samaritan, emphasizing the necessity of our being good Samaritans in our daily life to those with whom we shall come in contact.

Evangelist U. W. Greene came to us in the evening with an interestingly instructive lesson, "The restoration." His talk was illustrated by many beautifully colored slides portraying scenes in church history. Little human incidents were brought in by the speaker to make the lesson more appealing, and certain doctrinal points were driven home with emphasis and thorough explanation. Young and old of this congregation appreciated Brother Greene's effort.

Walnut Park

Two young couples carried their baby girls to the altar on Sunday morning to receive a blessing. Little Patricia Lu, daughter of Brother Cecil Campbell and wife, was blessed by Elders Glaud Smith and C. K. Green; Wanda June, daughter of Brother and Sister Howard Crandall, by Brothers Green and Smith. In the primary and beginner room, at the Sunday school session, Austin Eugene, little son of Brother and Sister Oscar Story, was blessed by Elders W. W. Scott and Glaud Smith.

The forenoon speaker was Patriarch F. A. Smith, on an old but ever-satisfying subject, the unchangeability of God and God's word—the gospel. He emphasized the need of clinging closely to God's word, rather than accepting man's prevailing ideas that changing conditions call for a changed gospel. By thus doing we are assured God will be with us "always, even unto the end of the world," since his wonderful promise abides always to his obedient followers.

Sister Ada Fallon and her chorus of little girls led the 7.30 song service.

The evening sermon was by Elder James D. Gault on the command, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." He disclosed the beauties of unselfishness, as we strive to share each other's burdens in the home and in the community, as well as throughout the Nation in such times of disaster as are now overtaking our land. He illustrated how our own experiences enable us to appreciate the difficulties of others, and through trial and hardship we gain sympathetic understanding, which may help us to comply with this important demand of the Master. Brother F. R. Schafer chose as the closing song the simple though effective hymn, "Loving and serving each other."

Elder W. T. Gard has secured an exceptional speaker to talk to the young people at Sunday school on the 29th—Doctor T. B. Homan, from a teacher-training college in Kansas City.

Mallard, Iowa

May 10.—We have been called to mourn on two occasions during the past month. On Easter Sunday Brother Crippen, of Cherokee, assisted by Brother Robert Fish, conducted the funeral service of Sister Fish, who has been a faithful mother and worker in the church for many years. While we mourn the loss of our sister, we are thankful she was prepared to go to the heavenly home that has been prepared for her.

On April 27 the funeral of Mr. Grant Abbott, husband of Sister Abbott, was held in the church. Brother Robert Fish was in charge. We pray that God will give those who mourn strength to bear up under their sorrow.

Brother and Sister Barrows and children of Bradgate attended services on April 25.

Brother and Sister Peterson and Brother and Sister Pearson, of Albert City, attended services May 1.

Brother and Sister Merl Meyers, of Deloit, president and secretary of the Sunday School Department, visited our school on May 1. Brother Meyers gave us a short talk composed of words of encouragement.

Brothers C. J. Smith and M. K. Fry, our new missionaries of Gallands Grove and Little Sioux Districts, spent a few days last week with us and while here gave us some good sermons. They are anxious to do their duty, and we trust God will bless them in their work. We hope they will visit us again.

We wish Brother F. T. Mussell and Brother W. A. Smith success and happiness in their new fields of labor.

Allendale Branch Is Rebuilt

ALLENDALE, MISSOURI, May 16.—A few faithful Saints of the Allendale Branch have been struggling for a number of years to hold the organization together. We have tried to keep the gospel banner waving by holding Sunday school, and seeing that other meetings were continued. Sometimes we have been discouraged, feeling all the powers of darkness were against us. But the Lord of the harvest has answered our prayers and has sent us help in the time of need.

The latter part of last January Brother Hubert Case came to us with the wonderful gospel message, and he stayed with us for six weeks, preaching, lecturing on his chart and slides, and telling his experiences as a missionary. Each Sunday he brought four or five into the sheepfold until twenty were added to our number. He went away promising that he would return after General Conference, and about the first of May he did. This time he brought Brother Gomer R. Wells, of Lamoni, with him. They have preached and lectured and used slides for the last two weeks.

Yesterday, the 15th, was a beautiful Sabbath, and we had a basket dinner. At 2.30 we went to the river, and thirteen more entered the waters of baptism and were confirmed at the evening service. This makes a total of thirty-three, most of them young people and some of middle age, heads of families, who have united with us.

By this account you may know that little Allendale is still on the map, and the Saints are rejoicing in the gospel message and in the faithful labors of these servants of God. May the Lord of the harvest so bless us all with that abiding Comforter, the spirit of peace, that we may be able to continue in the straight and narrow path that leads to the tree of life. I am ever praying for the redemption of Zion and the accomplishment of our goal by 1930. WILLIAM BIRK.

agement will be discussed in the light of the richest experience from which we can draw. We shall discuss specific problems of class organization and teaching, grading and promotion, illustrative material, special exercises, certification and contracts for teachers. Training of officers and teachers in service, worship periods, and group projects are among the problems to be discussed. There are also problems of the interrelation of the departments, and the relation of each to the branch organization and its work, which deserve attention. The work of the religious educational council in districts and branches, and the possibility of age-group responsibility in supervision are vital problems of the departments. We shall stress discussion of actual problems presented by members of the class.

Junior Worship—3.20

The Junior Church serves as an introduction of the child to the meaning of the adult service and as a means of initiating him into the beauty and joy of Christian worship. Further, it should engage his interest in religious activities and challenge his energy in the adventure of noble, helpful living. As a laboratory course, various types of religious service will be evaluated in an endeavor to build up a program suited to the age, comprehension, interests, and needs of the children.

Miss Mabel Carillo—Leadership in Music—3.20.

In this course students will be given the rudiments of music and an introduction into the art of conducting choir or congregational singing. Constant emphasis will be laid on actual practice by students in conducting.

Mrs. Eunice Winn Smith—Primary Methods—7.30.

All teachers of beginner and primary children should study under Mrs. Smith the principles underlying primary method. Special methods in picture, story, handwork, music, dramatization, and sand table, etc., will be explained and illustrated.

Mrs. Nellie Blackmore—Junior Tent Work—4.15.

Typical reunion work with juniors will be conducted daily by an experienced worker with a volunteer group of Lamoni children. A variety of activities will be under way, representative of methods which have been found successful at reunions. This group will afford material for discussion and evaluation in many other institute classes.

Mrs. Alice H. Baldwin—Handwork Exhibit—4.15.

Mrs. Baldwin has been a primary teacher and has traveled extensively in the interests of Sunday school and other church work. She has made a large collection of handwork done in various States, in Canada, and in England. She has also secured samples of supplies from various houses and will have a most interesting and helpful display of work of this nature to be done with the younger children. Each day Mrs. Baldwin will demonstrate special types of handwork and discuss the religious significance of the activity and its place in the program.

He died in his home in Evansville, Wisconsin, April 29, 1927, aged seventy-nine years. Is survived by his wife, four daughters, eleven grandchildren, two brothers, other relatives, and many friends. He was a good man, and he has gone to his reward. Sermon by W. A. McDowell, assisted by E. J. Lenox.

ANDERSON.—Martha Elizabeth Anderson was born near Stavanger, Norway, February 24, 1848. Came to Illinois in 1855. On December 23, 1869, she was married to Andrew H. Anderson, and to them five children were born. Brother Anderson died December 8, 1926. Three daughters preceded them in death. Sister Anderson was baptized October 13, 1878, and remained a good, faithful member of the church up to the time of her death, which took place at her home in Sandwich, Illinois, May 8, 1927. Brother and Sister Anderson were members of the Mission Branch in LaSalle County, Illinois, for a great many years, and they were very devoted to the work there. After the death of Brother Anderson, Sister Anderson's name was placed on the records of the Sandwich Branch, where she lived at the time of her death. She greatly loved the latter-day work, and to the last she was interested in the late General Conference and was pleased to learn what took place there. She passed away strong in the faith. She was seventy-nine years, two months, and fourteen days old at the time of death. Those left to mourn are one daughter, one son, fourteen grandchildren, one great-grandchild, two brothers, and three sisters, also other relatives and many friends. She was loved by all who knew her. Sermon by W. A. McDowell, assisted by Henry Castings.

BROWN.—Victoria Alice, third daughter of John and Jane Buckingham, was born at Provo, Utah, August 8, 1858. Her parents joined the old church in England prior to the apostasy of Brigham Young. Migrating to Utah, they were dissatisfied with conditions there, and located in Idaho, and from thence went to Oregon. Learning later of the Reorganization and joining the church in 1881, the family came by covered wagon from Oregon to Lamoni, Iowa. Victoria Alice was married to George A. Truman September 18, 1884. To them were born three children, Leroy and Loren, of Wray, Colorado; and David Alfred, of Des Moines, Iowa. Widowed in early womanhood, she married George V. Brown in 1896. To this union were born three children: Lorena A. Ballantyne, LaJune, and Harold, of Lamoni. Besides her own children, she mothered the three children of Brother Brown by a former marriage: Hester George, of Pasco, Washington; Ralph, of Wray, Colorado; and Benjamin, of Lamoni. She departed this life at Lutheran Hospital, Des Moines, Iowa, February 8, 1927. Besides her children, the deceased is survived by her husband, George V. Brown, two sisters, Rebecca Krucker and Jane Buckingham, of Lamoni, and other relatives. Sister Brown was baptized at Prairie, Oregon, October 3, 1875, by J. C. Clapp. She was loyal to the church to the last and left to her family and friends an example and inspiration in this regard worthy of emulation. Services were from Lamoni church, in charge of A. J. Yarrington. Sermon by J. F. Garver. Interment in Rose Hill Cemetery, Lamoni.

DILLON.—Frank S. Dillon, son of James P. and Elizabeth Dillon, was born in Jackson County, Ohio, March 13, 1851; was baptized by Elder Horace Bartlett in 1863. Most of his life was spent in Iowa, where he was the main support of the family, lovingly caring for his widowed mother all the last years of her life. Some years ago he came to Independence, Missouri, with his sister, Ella Barrett and her family. Here death came to him April 23, 1927. He is survived by Sister Barrett, a half brother, Edward Shunway, of Oakland, California, and a number of other relatives. Uncle Frank was one of the faithful, dependable children of God, and although of late years he was too feeble to take active part or get out to services often, his joy was the work of the Lord. Services were held at Liberty Street Church in charge of Elder J. M. Baker. Sermon by Apostle J. A. Gillen. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

STILLWELL.—John Stillwell was born May 4, 1867, at Carsonville, Michigan. He has been a member of the church only a short time, being baptized by Elder E. N. Burt June 7, 1922, but he was one who received the word gladly. The only topic of conversation that interested him was the gospel work, and having a fine memory he was always ready to support his statements with a Bible quotation. He was respected by all; and his death, which occurred April 10, 1927, at Millersburg, Michigan, is a loss to the community. Surviving are his companion, a son, Harry, who has done everything possible for his father and is the support of his mother, and a daughter, Emily. Elder E. N. Burt preached the funeral sermon.

NEELY.—Francis Marion Neely, oldest son of Ephraim and Margarette Neely, was born in Duncan Township, Illinois, October 2, 1854. In June, 1895, he married Anna Harroun, who survives him. He united with the church at Millersburg, Illinois, September 25, 1895, and remained a faithful member of that branch until his death, which occurred April 30, 1927, at his home in Millersburg. He leaves his wife, one sister, Mrs. Elvira Felton, of Millersburg; one brother, Oliver Neely, of Joy, Illinois; four stepchildren: Bertha Bear, of Petersville; Mary Walls, Lowell and Joe Harroun, of Millersburg, besides numerous other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held in the Saints' church at Millersburg Sunday afternoon, May 1, Elder Leonard Houghton preaching the sermon, assisted by J. W. Dean. A large attendance of friends and neighbors was present interment in Millersburg Cemetery.

JONES.—John F. Jones was born at Conway, Carnarvonshire, North Wales, July 16, 1853. He came to this country at the age of twenty-one, and has since resided most of the time in or near Canton, Illinois. He was baptized September 6, 1891, and remained a faithful member and a true Saint until the day of his passing, though he was isolated from his church a number of years. Surviving him are four daughters: Mrs. McClellen Dibert and Mrs. Robert G. Reed, of Canton; Mrs. Anna J. Holmes, Buffalo Prairie, Illinois; Mrs. Harry Thompson, Pontiac, Illinois. Two sons, William, of San Francisco, California; and Edward, of Kewanee, Illinois; several grandchildren and a host of friends. Passed away at Canton, April 29, 1927, his wife having preceded him in November, 1922. The funeral was held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Reed, and interment was in Canton Cemetery. Sermon by E. R. Davis, of Moline.

MADER.—Jacob Mader, born August 15, 1840, at Answyl, Canton of Berne, Switzerland; died April 3, 1927, at Lamoni, Iowa, aged 86 years, 7 months, and 18 days. Came to America in November, 1854; enlisted in the Union Army August 13, 1862, serving until he was honorably discharged June 30, 1865; married Anna Marie Karli, at Wilton, Illinois, March 28, 1868, and to them were born twelve children, of whom four, Clara A., Laura L. (Mrs. Frank Mills), Lois Helen, and an infant son, have preceded him to the other side, he leaving to mourn the wife, six daughters, and two sons; namely, Mrs. Oliver Hayer, Minnie, Grace, and Lucille, of Lamoni; Mrs. Horace Hartshorn, Stroner, Wyoming; Mrs. R. H. Allen, Plainfield, Iowa; J. E. Mader, Independence, Missouri; W. E. Mader, Florence, Kansas; ten grandchildren, an aged sister, and other relatives and friends. While never becoming a member of the church, Mr. Mader was always a regular attendant at the services, all of his family being members. He lived a life of clean, honest, integrity which made him honored and respected by all who knew him. Funeral was held from the Brick Church, Lamoni, Iowa; sermon by F. A. Smith. The American Legion, Ralph A. Judson Post, served as pallbearers and military escort.

Just a little farther, brother,
Don't forsake the road;
Let me help a bit, brother,
With your heavy load.

Though the path be narrow, brother,
There is room for two;
You can help me, brother,
And I will help you.

You won the argument—did you win the man?

That was a good picture of C. Ed. Miller in Autumn Leaves, but it really takes a motion picture to do justice to C. Ed. Miller.

Economical elder: "I have just taken my old hat to the cleaner to be blocked."

More economical elder: "Why pay a dollar to a cleaner to put your hat on a block?"

Irish audacity, Swedish perseverance, and American contempt for distance seem to have been combined in Lindbergh.

The Pilgrim Fathers loaded their ships heavily with six months' provisions and sailed away over the seas.

The Pilgrim Sons take five sandwiches and a bottle of water and hop off from New York for Paris.

There is something austere and sacrificial as well as heroic in the risking of life in one supreme effort to reach a fixed goal. Lindbergh refused offers of liquor—even of coffee—and taking only water to drink and five sandwiches (of which he ate only one and a half) he put his whole life into the effort to fly from New York to Paris. Silent, sleepless, alone, fasting, he made his great effort and won. There is something religious about such consecration to a single purpose: "This one thing I do." It has a lesson for those who feel that they are engaged in a still greater enterprise.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Purchasing Land

Without doubt now, as in times passed, there will come to members of the church, even those already in Zion and the regions round about, opportunities and even tempting opportunities to buy land in places other than those to which our attention has been called by instruction and advice. It is well, therefore, that the Saints be alert to the objectives and purposes of the church and to the trend and conditions of the times, and be cautious in the matter of investments in lands, that they be not led into that which will be contrary to the dictates of wisdom. With the interests of the church and the church membership in mind, it is well to heed the oft-repeated admonitions, and seek counsel and advice in the matter referred to from those designated in the law.

Workers for Zion

Recently, after one of the very many councils held in the office, wherein general church affairs had been rather freely and fully discussed, one of our bishops in returning home meditated, as is his wont, upon the council, attempting to analyze the situation. He also follows another habit, that of reducing his deductions to writing. This he laid on my desk the next day, with the remark, "Here's the result of my thinking over yesterday's council. It may be bluntly put, but that's the way I feel about it."

I want the HERALD readers to see and sense the way he felt, so in another column, under the caption, "Righteousness and prosperity," we print his comments.

The success of our plan of stewardships will correspond to the degree to which we merge our individual selves into the common weal. It is a problem of self-control, a rising superior to our selfish claims, and being willing to work for the accomplishment of our purpose. We must have faith in God, faith in the plan, but we must vitalize that faith by working to vindicate our faith. We must become successful business men, masters of our jobs, for the sake of the community.

Read the terse article by one of the bishops, and think. And when you have thought, then do.

Independence Centennial Year—1927

The town of Independence has been in existence one hundred years. It contains many citizens today who have heard their parents and grandparents tell little bits of the history of this fair city which occurred many years ago, even back to the middle of the nineteenth century. It is surprisingly rich in historical lore, and is widely known because of having for many years been the hub of activity of the western frontier; the point of embarkation for those who traveled the great Oregon Trail to the west and northwest; the gateway to Kansas, Oklahoma (formerly Indian Territory, etc.), and always and ever an important place in its own right and because of vast natural resources and practical and picturesque beauty which has a strong drawing power and brings many return visits from those who once beheld her beauties, and those of the immediately surrounding territory.

Among historical events of early times which are chockful of drama and pathos are the mobbing and final expulsion from Jackson County of the early settlers (1830-33) of the Latter Day Saint faith, of transcendent interest and significance to the Saints of the present day. Later many of the same families, and others of later coming, suffered a like tragedy in the carrying out of Order Number Eleven, a Union wartime decree which dispossessed them of their homes and effects, and scattered them so widely that many never returned to the place they had loved and builded.

The city of Independence is organizing a celebration which it hopes will be worthy of the event it commemorates, such celebration to be carried out in the fall season at the one hundredth birth date of the city. Societies, clubs, and organizations of various character are planning to do their part toward an adequate season of festivity. Kansas City organizations, among them the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, have offered their unserved support.

New Radio Wave Lengths Delayed

The K L D S office has received instructions from the Federal Radio Commission to defer use of the new 238 meter wave length until June 15. No reason for this action was stated, but it is believed that the new radio commission is having much trouble putting its new regulations into effect. The great majority of broadcasters are dissatisfied with the new set-ups, and it is probable that many changes will be made.

The new K L D S license gives the church station unlimited hours, on a frequency of 1260 kilocycles—238 meters. The first wave length assigned to K F I X was 240 meters. This was later increased to 268 meters, and about two years ago arrangements were made for division of time with W O S on 440.9 meters—680 kilocycles.

The commission has not given explanation for the new assignments, other than the statement that the commission believed the new allocations would put broadcasting on a solid basis for the listening public. Virtually all stations will operate on new wave lengths beginning June 15, if the present orders go into effect.

The commission has urged broadcasters to give the new wave lengths a trial before making complaint. The present licenses are issued for a period of sixty days, in which time dissatisfied station owners will be given hearings before the new radio legislative body. It is understood the next licenses issued will be for a period of several years. Heretofore broadcasting station licenses have been issued for ninety-day periods.

Shakespeare Radio Features Near End

The Shakespeare features which have been presented for some weeks, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, will be concluded June 14. Ralph W. Farrell, who has presented this series, has pleased many lovers of Shakespeare with his analysis of the various Shakespeare plays and his readings from many of them. The series may be repeated next winter, during the most favorable radio season for long distance transmission and reception.

Extracts From Letters to Holden Presidency

Written in Recognition of Home-coming

From Elder A. H. Parsons, dated at Elk Mills, Maryland, April 27, there came, in addition to other matter, these sentiments:

I became a member of this church July 23, 1880, baptized at Guide Rock, Nebraska, and after spending my life and having worn myself almost out doing what little I could, I am still willing and indeed I want to do all I can to help forward the only church Jehovah has on this earth, with all that may be said for and against it. I know just where I found God, and while some things have occurred that I thought should not, yet, when the majority speaks, I have cultivated a disposition to say Amen, I am with you.

The beauty that charmed my soul when I found this church was that peaceful spirit that came into my being and helped me to adjust myself to act with the church as an integral part of that organization. And when I have said the last word that shall be my privilege to say on this plain of action, I want it to be, I love this church; because it is God's own planting, not man's.

I have a living testimony that we are living in the last days, and approaching near the end, and that the struggle will become more fierce, and his Satanic Majesty knows some things that but few Latter Day Saints have discovered. That he does not care how good, clean, happy, humble, and prayerful we become just so long as he can help us to miss the standard of perfection. He is a wonderful leader, and so sly that without the spirit of discernment one is apt to be influenced more or less by him and not know it. He loves the beautiful and good, if he can deface it enough so that it won't pass the rules of perfection.

As long as he can keep us loving, the worldly things that are not helpful to lead us to God, he is satisfied and happy. And he loves to act as our personal scapegoat—nothing pleases him better, for it gives him an opportunity for a closer association than is possible for him to obtain on short acquaintance. I want a better scapegoat, or to act as my own. I do not care to be found in his company, under any consideration; I would prefer to be alone. I pray that you may have the Spirit that belongs to the home-coming of God's children.

From Sister Jessie Allen, dated at Detroit, Michigan, came a beautiful letter. It reads:

I have not forgotten Holden and the good times I enjoyed in your midst. I came to Detroit a few days ago to visit what was left of my sisters; as time and changes are busy here, the silent reaper has taken one by one until few remain. This reminds me also that twenty-six years have brought many changes in Holden. Some have answered to the summons to come home. Others moved away, until there are few left of years ago, and I wonder how many will answer present if the roll were called. The song we sing so much comes forcibly to my mind:

"In this old, old path
Are my friends most dear,
And I walk with them
With the angels near."

Where today are all the little ones of years ago? I trust that many of them are filling the places of those departed and dropping their mite towards the final redemption of Zion.

Onward, Saints, onward! There is no time to loiter by the way. Time is short. Work while it is called today, for the night cometh when no one can work. God is watching over his church just as much as he ever did. Soon will come the great home-coming, when the Master himself shall call. May we be among that happy band that will answer, Here am I. May God's choicest blessings be with you.

From Bishop Charles J. Hunt, dated at Miami, Oklahoma, May 12, came a letter which reads:

I feel that same sweet, endearing Spirit that cheered my heart and gladdened my soul so many times during the years of labor and association at Holden with you. That true gospel love was often experienced whilst occupying in the pulpit, in social services, and in the homes where you gave me a hearty welcome. Often in our conversations the rich blessings of heaven came upon us, and our eyes were moist with tears of joyous foretaste of our assured triumph with the blessed Lord and all the redeemed of God.

Yes, dear Saints, this gospel is true; it is the power of God unto salvation—a reality. God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, angels from heaven, and thousands of tried and true men and women from many nations have borne testimony of its divinity. Let every member be of good cheer and of strong courage, and our hearts respond day by day to the inspiring words of the poet, "'Tis a glorious thing to be in the light."

To me, this church is my world, and in it I am trying to serve God by serving my fellow men. As a people we should greatly appreciate the slogan stated to the last General Conference by President Frederick M. Smith, namely, that every member should be "Carefully prayerful and prayerfully careful."

Righteousness and Prosperity

BY A BISHOP

The Latter Day Saints Church claims to be an institution of divine appointment, a special instrument in the hands of God for the salvation of the world; and as such, that it has special claim upon God for direction and the help that is necessary to enable it to do its work. This church God delights "to bless with the greatest blessings." (Doctrine and Covenants 41:1.)

One of the designs of God is that men should enjoy the good things of the earth "in abundance." (Doctrine and Covenants 49:3.) "That every man who has need may be amply supplied." (42:10.) With this declaration of purpose, there comes the promise that "the willing and obedient shall eat of the good of the land of Zion in these last days." (64:7.) This promise is to be relied upon because "the riches of the earth are mine to give." (38:9.)

God has put himself under an obligation to prosper the "church," the body of people as a whole, when they do what he directs. Through Malachi comes the challenge to "prove me," and "all nations shall call you blessed: for you shall be a delightful land." (Malachi 3:10-12.) And through Joseph, God again asserts his obligation: "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, you have no promise." (Doctrine and Covenants 81:3.)

One of the duties of men individually and of the church as a whole is to govern affairs of property in ways that are in themselves expressions of "justice, mercy, and faith." "I give unto you this commandment . . . [a commandment to organize for industrial purposes] you are to have equal claims upon the properties for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships." (Doctrine and Covenants 81:4.) A government designed to insure every man an opportunity equal with every other man "to improve upon his talent." A social system that conditions individual rights in social customs and social institutions. "That every man may be amply supplied." (Doctrine and Covenants 42:10.)

This order grows out of attitudes. It is the duty of each individual to discipline himself, not only to a final observance of social customs, but to a heart-felt obedience.

"Let every man esteem his brother as himself." (Doctrine and Covenants 38:5.) "And this not grudgingly." (70:3.) "Thou shalt not covet [even] thine own property." (18:3.) Out of such attitudes arises a "Zion" which is Zion, on the one hand "BECAUSE . . . they dwelt in righteousness"; and "because" they dwelt in righteousness "there was no poor among them." (36:2.) "Righteousness" arises from attitudes. There is no righteousness without personal appreciation. "Blessed are the poor in spirit."

Is conduct on a given level of righteousness for this church any more than for any other people? Is sin any less sin for us than for others? "But it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another; [not as an individual having greater private property rights.] Wherefore the world lieth in sin." (Doctrine and Covenants 49:3.)

Can universal equality of opportunity, opportunity for all men in all ages, and universal participation in the rewards of industry on the basis of needs and just wants be conceived as a possibility aside from a social "order" that insures these equalities? And is there a man who has the interests of his neighbor at heart in this manner who is unwilling to surrender the private advantages that the unrighteousness of the world gives some men over their fellows in order to promote a social order that will insure these equalities?

This church is "set to be a light to the world." (Doctrine and Covenants 100:2.) It has no other excuse for existence. And is "good for nothing but to be trodden under the foot of man" if it will not govern its affairs so that it will be in fact a "light of the world." It becomes the light of the world, which is "Zion," by "using the things of this world in the manner designed of God" (128:8); by possessing its lands (all its properties) "according to the laws of consecration." (102:8.) Not by the "possession" of property, but by the uses of property, the manner of possession.

The whole stewardship scheme of the church is one of "organization" of both man power and capital. "This people must needs be organized." (Doctrine and Covenants 51:1.) "A commandment I give unto you that you organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship." (101:2.) (Because every man is to have equal opportunity to improve upon his talent (81:4), and equal claim upon property for the purpose of this equality of expression.) You shall "be bound together . . . in your several stewardships." (81:4.) "There just needs be an organization of my people to ADVANCE THE CAUSE which you have espoused." (Zion) (77:1.)

And yet every attempt that is made to advance social organization in the church for stewardship purposes is resisted by influential men; men who under the world's scheme of property rights feel that they have advantages that they ought not to be asked to surrender; and upon whose willingness to make surrenders the ability of the church to move toward Zion depends. Not only do men of property interpose their objections to Zion's progress, but the poor of the church, who likewise are victims of a disordered society, who yearn for a freer expression, have eyes that be full of "greediness" and would lay "hold upon other men's goods." (Doctrine and Covenants 56:5.) And God looks upon the crowd and says: What's the use? Zion can not be built out of that kind of material. And the church is left to struggle under the weight of its poverty; and will be left to struggle until the people "learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." (Doctrine and Covenants 102:2.)

Suppose God prospered this church in the times of its disloyalty to the cause of Zion; when and how would it ever be aroused to the kind of action that grows out of an intelligent appreciation of the personal and the social qualities that constitute a people Zion?

"Not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom." A persistent exertion on the part of the members individually to hold the church down to the ways of the world. Why should God prosper the church until it is ready to organize its forces (man power and capital) for the purpose of expressing "the righteousness of the kingdom" in the things it does?

"Let the church repent, and I will own her, [and bless her] otherwise I will cut her off." (Doctrine and Covenants 63:15.) "Organize . . . otherwise they shall be cut off." (51:1.) But if she observe not to do whatsoever I have commanded her, I will visit her according to her works, with sore affliction, with pestilence, with plague, with sword, with vengeance, with devouring fire." (94:5.) "I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon." (64:5.)

What shall we say? Why the temporal distresses of this people? Is it because God is not true? or is it because the church is not true to her calling? Men live together by learning to live together. Why try to make ourselves believe that we are the children of God when we can not realize upon the promises of God to prosper the church in the times of its righteous endeavor? The temporal prosperity for which we yearn is conditioned in the prosperity of our souls. When the men of the church individually move toward God, the communal life of the church undergoes a reconstruction which, when accomplished, makes the church Zion, a blessed people, a delightful land!

BY THOMAS S. WILLIAMS

Nothing in this article should be construed to mean that the writer leaves God out of the religious experience found in ceremonial worship. Our point is that ritualistic response prepares the human heart for the entrance of God. It will arouse man's emotional nature, awaken an attitude of receptivity, generate a repentant spirit within his soul. It prepares and loosens the soil for the divine presence, and stimulates growth.

We are all agreed that God is limited in his effort to reveal himself to man because of the human attitude toward and concept of him. If stewardship is accepted and Zion is redeemed, the church must have a higher notion and a deeper consciousness of the Divine Being than it has had hitherto. Ritual, if rightly used, can occupy a powerful place in developing this state of mind and feeling. Used wrongfully it will hinder. Ritual is valuable only if it calls up the required feelings and ideas requisite to a higher concept of life and the birth of new spiritual light.

All Things in Order

Since ritual has been established to meet a human need, the laws of human nature must be recognized in its application. The ceremonial service, to be effective, must be free from distracting sights and sounds. The meeting should be in order and all arrangements made before time for the service. The details should be previously planned. Each man should know his part, so that no confusion in the service will detract the attention of the people from the rite. The writer recently presided over a communion service in which he omitted the sacramental prayer, the spiritual effect upon the people was decidedly noticeable, though we offered the prayer later before serving the emblems to the congregation. Where dignity and order reigns the worship is much more elevating and pleasing than where disorder and confusion prevails.

The Environment of the Service

The material things which surround the service should receive much consideration. The communion table, the arrangement of the men presiding, the condition and order of the church building go a long way in stimulating and sustaining an atmosphere of solemnity and reverence to the service. The writer once presided over a communion service in which the table covering, a worn-out affair covering but part of the table, was the only thing resembling linen belonging to the service. The women of the church were persuaded to prepare a more elaborate table linen, which decidedly removed the atmosphere of cheapness from the service. A ceremony which celebrates the most sacred and costly event in religious history should not have anything connected with its commemoration that smacks of cheapness, if it lies within the ability of the people to make it otherwise. If ritual is the clothing of religion, its garments must be clean and of the best.

On one of the principal streets of a western city stands a large signboard; its size decidedly out of harmony with its environment. In large, bold, black letters, with a white background, are the words: "Jesus is calling you; hear his message at the church of — today." It strikes me as an insult to the name of our Lord. On a roadside just outside the city some religious zealot has smeared on a rusty piece of tin, "God is love." Even those who profess to be his followers profane the name of Deity. Coming north and east out of Arkansas City, Kansas, on the slope of a rock-crested eminence, with hills of equal height to the right and left, inlaid in stone are the words: "Christ died for the ungodly." As I viewed this from a distance of perhaps two miles, I seemed to vision a deeper meaning in the crucifixion, and its lesson was indelibly impressed upon my consciousness. So nothing should be done that will remove dignity and solemnity from the service, and everything should be done to promote it.

Should not Be Stereotyped

We have said that the exact reproduction of the ritual in words and acts causes the worshiper to lose the significance of the rite. While there should be a degree of preciseness in the ceremony, yet it must not be too formal and stereotyped. Every group has its formalist who keeps his eye on the water level to see that every hair of the baptismal candidate is submerged, while apparently little thought he gives to the meaning of the rite.

There should be no place for a final interpretation of the rite. Lessons of additional truth should be brought out of the service. It should be an aid to higher concepts of divine and social relationship. The ritual, too, should be interpreted in present-day terms, ideals, and values. Its lessons should be a help in meeting present needs and future problems.

The Antiquity of the Rite

Man's inherent tendency to revere the past has an important place in ceremonial worship. Ritual must have the halo of the ancients to be effective in religious service. It must not be torn ruthlessly from its old garments. The Israelites in the wilderness found it hard to adjust themselves to a new form of worship. The attention of the people should not be directed toward the antiquity of the rite unless there is found a lesson for today. If men look backward, they should "Look backward into the future." The ritual should stand for moral and spiritual progress. It must be more than a copy of a bygone age. It must be a prototype for the present and future, a guide for the truthseeker today. It should reveal a fundamental truth of the gospel that will be helpful in meeting the conditions and solving problems of the time.

Mystery in the Service

While it is true that a mysterious complex ceremony removes worship from the actualities and duties of life, yet there must be a degree of strangeness or mystery in the rite in order to arouse curiosity and awaken a feeling of reverence within the breast of the worshiper. Strangeness will excite curiosity, and curiosity will stimulate interest, and interest will lead to thought and meditation. With no hidden meaning, the ceremony becomes commonplace and ordinary and consequently useless. The ritual should be the revelation of a truth through the symbolism of an outward act. The physical, which man to a degree understands, at least is able to see, must be made to serve as a means to reveal the spiritual.

Group Exclusiveness

We have pointed out that ceremonial worship tends toward group exclusiveness. Unless the lesson hidden in the ritual is emphasized, the congregation will be inclined to feel that they are God's favorites. In the mind of the writer I see no place in Christianity for an exaggerated group self-regard. The rituals of Christianity suggest the making or renewal of a world-wide social obligation.

The problem before the church is always to get the benefits of ritual without their abuse. The responsibility in this regard in a large measure lies with the shepherd of the flock. He must know human nature and apply the ritual in a way that meets its conditions and needs.

There is a suggestion about finding a career, and finding success. How does one know that the career he seeks and the success he desires is not in the job he has? How does he know he can not make it a career, and turn it into success? There is a field for invention. There is a chance to serve humanity down to the last working day of Time. Every new idea brings new jobs. Every time a job is improved, it breeds more of them, and by its influence makes better the jobs around it.—The Dearborn Independent, May 28, 1927.

Health

BY E. L. EDWARDS

Isaiah 65:25 reads: "The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock." Here is a condition of peace. What has caused this condition? Is it because of some power shed over them? or is it caused by what they eat?

Chronologically, from age to age; geographically, from land to land, the measure of civilization attained depends on the moral, mental, and spiritual development. Man's food has been an important part of his life. The food of the Romans and Greeks was almost entirely that of honey, milk, grains, and vegetables. Modern civilization has made little improvement upon the work of their philosophers, sculptors, artists, and statesmen.

The Gallic tribes of the north were warlike; their diet was mostly flesh. They made little advancement towards civilization; while the people of the south, with a diet almost exclusive of flesh, advanced with music, poetry, art, and literature. Their civilization was measured by the distance they traveled from the flesh pots of Egypt.

Advancement is not always an evidence of greatness. Man's achievements with his twentieth century habits have cost him more than sixty per cent of the natural period of his life. Man desires long life and happiness; but he has succeeded in attaining that which he spends most of his life trying to avoid.

Experiments made lately show that diet yields a powerful influence on animals. A test was made upon a cow. This animal was a gentle pet, a Jersey. All food was withheld for a period of about six days, until starvation forced her to accept a flesh diet of cooked meat. After a week she accepted the flesh diet readily and relished it. In less than thirty days a big change was noticed in her temperament, and in two months she became so vicious that she was regarded as dangerous by those who were formerly her best friends.

A cub cinnamon bear was raised on milk, honey, and succulent vegetables. He grew up very tame and gentle, showing affection towards children and his instinctive enemy, the dog. When full grown he accepted flesh with some reluctance; but after a while cooked meat was accepted, and then he was trained to eat raw meat. Within thirty days the bear became unfriendly and sulky and after a few months vicious and dangerous, like a wild bear.

People who keep watchdogs know that flesh makes them vicious, while a purely vegetable diet fed a long time produces a lack of the fighting instinct. Many dogs fed a vegetable diet play with rabbits and will not harm them.

The same effect of food is noticed in the nations of the earth. For example: England, with the national diet of the ruling classes composed largely of flesh foods and strong drink, has a highly developed war spirit. Mexico, the land of flesh and highly seasoned foods, is known as the fighting republic.

The people of India live almost wholly upon a vegetable diet. They are very peaceful and will not even war against those who hold them in bondage unless they are incited by their leaders, or are forced to fight. Look at the Swiss, with a diet of grains, vegetables, and dairy products. They stayed out of war while their flesh-eating neighbors killed each other.

Today it is said that France eats seven times the amount of flesh foods she did before the war. Watch her future.

We should be the healthiest people on earth. Are we? Just look about us and see as many sick Saints, comparatively speaking, as among the people of this world. Disease is the result of sin, the result of not obeying the laws of God in the body. Many ignorantly eat the foods that cause their sickness, then call for God through the laying on of hands to heal them. If relief comes they seldom change their eating habits, and if overtaken with disease again they call the elder. Should we help ourselves by heeding that which is written in Doctrine and Covenants 86, called the Word of Wisdom, and let the result be as stated therein, be healthy; or shall we continue to disobey God's laws and expect him to heal us of our infirmities?

If the priesthood will lead, the Saints will follow.

The wise hear the voice of the Lord and walk therein.

Thy Sea so Great

Thy sea, O God, so great,

My boat so small.

It can not be that any happy fate

Will me befall,

Save as thy goodness opens paths for me
Through the consuming vastness of the sea.

Thy winds, O God, so strong,

So slight my sail,

How could I curb and bit them on the long

And salty trail,

Unless thy love were mightier than the wrath
Of all the tempests that beset my path.

Thy world, O God, so fierce,

And I so frail.

Yet, though its arrows threaten oft to pierce

My fragile mail,

Cities of refuge rise where dangers cease,
Sweet silences abound, and all is peace.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

For English Speaking Unity

Magna Charta Sunday, June 19

"To help keep vibrant Anglo-Saxon international good will."

The greatest influence for world peace lies in a unity of the English speaking nations, so strong and so intelligent that it will defy all the evil forces in the world which seek to make our nations forget their great obligations to each other and to the world.

In behalf of this great need, English speaking unity, the International Magna Charta Day Association urges the observance by the churches and Sunday schools of our nations of one day annually in common—Magna Charta Sunday, June 19—dedicated to strengthening the consciousness of the ties which bind together the seven English speaking nations:

The United States, Canada, Newfoundland, the British Isles, Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand.

A day, but not a legal holiday, set aside for the annual commemoration of the source of their common liberties, their common legal system, their common language, and their common culture. Many people do not know that there are 200,000,000 people living under and enjoying Anglo-Saxon traditions, and that the need of uniting this English speaking world is pressing hard upon us.

Those traditions, laws, culture, and liberties are all directly traceable to one great document, Magna Charta, of which President Coolidge advised us: "It is the background of all that we have." It is in behalf of English speaking unity that the International Magna Charta Day Association urges our nations to annually commemorate the Common Charter of their liberties in the observance of June 15 as Magna Charta Day—"Inter-Dependence Day."

Among churches and Sunday schools, the third Sunday in June—Magna Charta Sunday, the fixed date—is thus observed. The support of the press has been and will be of the greatest help. Teachers are asked to impress upon their students the importance and significance of this day.

The movement was started in Saint Paul, Minnesota, many years ago, for the purpose of developing the essential unity of thought and purpose of our far-flung race, and is growing rapidly through the help of the press and pulpits of our world.

Our Great Heritage—Its Obligations

tage, although we often allow it to become tarnished. Just in these most critical times, it should be more than a landmark. It must be to ourselves and to all others—especially to those inimical and undermining forces that threaten the world today—a symbol and an ideal which we must strive not merely to maintain, but to develop and some day to perfect.

Let us establish a day—Inter-Dependence Day—consecrated to the fostering and the purifying of this ideal; a day wherein we may look not only backward over the centuries past, but forward to those coming years which shall bring a nobler and a more enlightening freedom—Law, Order, and Fellowship clasping encircling hands around the "Will to do right."

Its Growth and Influence

The movement is growing rapidly through the enthusiasm of people all over the English speaking world who feel the burden of a moral responsibility to do their share to defeat the powerful enemies who seek to cause trouble between England and the United States and to destroy all that our race stands for. It is this sense of moral responsibility which we seek to arouse everywhere, for our movement is a direct challenge to those evil forces.

REUNION NEWS

Tiona Reunion

The Tiona reunion for 1926 began on Sunday, December 19. The day happened to be the writer's spiritual birthday, he having seen the gospel light and been baptized on that day in the year 1887. I journeyed to the reunion grounds in company with Elder J. H. N. Jones, making the trip by train from Sydney to Taree on Friday, the 17th, and from Taree to Tuncurry by auto the same evening. Here we were the guests of Elder and Sister Ernest Wright, remaining with them over night. From Tuncurry we proceeded to Tiona on Saturday, the 18th.

There were the usual greetings and a considerable amount of social life by those on the grounds ere the gathering got under way. The first meeting was a prayer service at 8.30 a. m., in charge of Elder W. J. Haworth, mission president. Elder H. I. Velt addressed the throne of grace in a feeling prayer in which gratitude for past blessings and petitions for reunion blessings were beautifully blended.

Those who came brought a good spirit with them. All were feeling well. A number had been recently baptized in various parts of the mission, and there were indications of the work picking up in localities where there had been some discouragements. When the reports came in from the missionaries to the mission conference, which was held at a later stage, the general verdict was: "Highly satisfactory."

At 9.45 a. m. a Sunday school session was held in charge of Sister G. H. Parker, Elder A. C. Barmore being spokesman in supplication. This was the first of a series of institutes and general programs along departmental lines, all full of interest. The scripture reading was by Eileen Mather, and profitable addresses were delivered by Sisters D. Barkus, V. Burrows, and Elder G. H. Parker. Elder Velt manipulated the violin, which he did at various meetings all the way through, and Sister F. Delofski gave an excellent recitation.

At 11 a. m. the opening sermon of the reunion was preached by Elder J. H. N. Jones, his texts being Hebrew 6:1-3 and John 10:10. Elder H. E. Piesker was in charge. At 1.30 p. m. a priesthood meeting was held, Elders W. J. Haworth and G. H. Parker presiding. The audience was largely made up of missionaries, not many local men having as yet arrived. At 3 p. m. an open priesthood meeting was held, Elder J. H. N. Jones in charge. Elder H. E. Piesker spoke on "Loyalty" and Elder H. I. Velt on "The commandments of God possible." At 7 p. m. Elder A. C. Barmore was the preacher, Elder W. J. Haworth presiding. Text, Mark 9:50, the subject being, "The independence of the spiritual life." A song service was conducted by Elder W. J. Haworth at 6.30. He, Elder G. H. Parker, or Brother W. H. Gresty held such a service almost every day.

This day was the keynote of the entire reunion. The spirit with which it initiated the gathering was maintained all the way through.

Monday, the 20th.—Official organization resulted at 9.30 a. m., as follows: W. J. Haworth, J. H. N. Jones, and G. H. Parker, presidency; secretary, G. H. Parker; choristership in hands of presidency, subject to available material from time to time; pianist, Lily Parker; ushers, visiting deacons so far as such may be present, other appointees by the presidency in their absence; press committee, Elders G. H.

Parker, A. C. Barmore, and H. I. Velt; administration committee in hands of presidency.

The daily routine was about as follows: Surfing and life-saving exercises (Sister Lida Einsaar and Fred Spencer in charge), 5.30 to 6.30 a. m. and 4 to 5 p. m. Meals, 7.30 a. m. and 1 and 6.30 p. m. Prayer service, 8.30 a. m. Departmental and educational meetings, 9.45 a. m. Sermons, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Games were had after the evening services, occasionally in the large tent (in times of rain, which fell freely), but usually under the lights between the kitchen and store, or on the beach. It is evident that Tiona, for both Saints and others, is becoming a notable diversion and recreation center. The number of nonmembers went up by a mighty leap this time.

Prayer meetings not before mentioned were in charge of the following brethren: Monday, the 20th, J. H. N. Jones and S. W. Ballard; Tuesday, the 21st, A. C. Barmore and G. H. Parker; Wednesday, the 22d, H. I. Velt; Thursday, the 23d, W. J. Vaughan; Friday, the 24th, H. I. Velt; Saturday, the 25th, E. Wright; Sunday, the 26th, E. J. Haworth and C. Berglin (young people's prayer meeting, same hour, T. Ballard and G. Gillard); Monday, the 27th, F. Spencer; Tuesday, the 28th, C. Bowden; Wednesday, the 29th, A. C. Barmore; Thursday, the 30th, A. L. Loving (who arrived the day before); Friday, the 31st, H. I. Velt.

These services were exceptionally refreshing, better indeed than previous Tiona prayer meetings; that is, in my opinion, and I am quite sure others share it.

The sermon at 11 a. m. this day was by H. E. Piesker, S. W. Ballard in charge. An excellent presentation of the character and experiences of Job. Readings: 1 John 5 and Job 1, the subject being faith. The 7 p. m. sermon was by Elder G. H. Parker, J. H. N. Jones assisting. The subject was "Service." The following outline was presented and discussed: 1. Of God. 2. Of Humanity. 3. Of Self.

Tuesday, the 21st, the Temple Builders were in evidence at 9.45 a. m. Sister G. H. Parker was in charge. "Look for the beautiful" was sung by women and girls, and Sister V. Burrow offered prayer. Sister Ella Haworth read Psalms 111, and the following program ensued: "Orioles," an address by F. Delofski; pianoforte solo by Lily Parker; address, "Self-discovery," by Sister D. Barkus, which was followed by "Self-development" by Sister H. Piesker. Sister Gwen Wright sang, "Jesus, my Shepherd," after which Elder H. I. Velt spoke on "Service." Sister Parker encouraged the girls by her closing remarks, and "The world has need of sunshine as you go" proved a suitable closing hymn.

At 11 a. m. Elder H. I. Velt was the speaker. His text was "Pure and undefiled religion," the subject being, "Our social system." This was a masterly effort and was illustrated by a chart.

At 7 p. m. Elder A. C. Barmore was in charge, the sermon being by Elder W. J. Haworth. The speaker read Doctrine and Covenants 11:4 and 1 Corinthians 13, the text being, "Except a man be humble and full of love."

Wednesday, the 22d, at 9.45 a. m. there was a young people's program, Elder W. J. Haworth in charge. Sister F. Delofski prayed and Sister Ivy Clarke read the 23d Psalm. The following items ensued: "Learning and books," Lida Einsaar; sacred solo, Sister Marian Everingham; pianoforte solo, Ivy Clarke, and the following addresses: "The dispositions of children," by Ivy Parker (based mostly on her experience as a school-teacher); "Elevators," by Clyde Henricks (which of course was mechanical); and "The preparation of ferns," by Inez Wright (this being a talk on dyeing ferns for the purpose of increasing their ornamental value, which is a new industry).

At 11 a. m. Elder G. H. Parker presided and Elder W. J. Vaughan preached. His sermon was a contrast between Saul and the rich young man. He presented them in the light of our Savior's parable: "A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work today in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not: but afterward he repented, and went. And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not." He said that the former thought at first he would not obey Christ, but finally did; while the latter thought at first he would, but eventually did not.

At 7 p. m. Elder Vaughan was in charge, the preacher being Elder J. H. N. Jones. His texts were Matthew 6: 10 and Revelation 11: 15. the subject being: "The millennial kingdom."

Thursday, the 23d, was a free day, with the exception of the morning prayer service and evening preaching. At 7 p. m. Elder A. C. Barmore was the speaker. Reading: Hebrews 5: 8 to 6: 6; text: Proverbs 4: 18; subject: "The progressiveness of divine revelation." The sermon closed with an exposition of Doctor Newman's famous hymn, "Lead, kindly light," with apparent light and delight to the audience.

Friday, the 24th, at 9.45 a. m., the educational meeting was in charge of Elder J. H. N. Jones. Elders H. I. Velt and A. C. Barmore divided the time in their addresses on "The boy problem." The humorous element was prominent, and many favorable comments were heard.

At 11 a. m. Elder Barmore presided, while Elder Vaughan again addressed the congregation. Reading: 1 John 1; text: 1 John 1: 6, the substance and essence of Christianity, rather than its outward form, being the theme.

At 7 p. m. Elder Vaughan was in charge, Elder J. H. N. Jones being the speaker for the third and last time. The basis of his sermon was the questions propounded by the disciples to Christ: "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?"—Matthew 24: 3. I have often heard Elder Jones before, but in my judgment he surpassed himself in these sermons. Last year he shone as a lecturer, but this time he appeared in the role of a straight-out gospel preacher.

Christmas Eve found a happy band of carol singers on the job in the old-time way. Brother J. T. Gresty was not with us this time, but there were others who did their best to take his place. The portable organ hitherto in use was not there, but Brother Curtis Argent and Sister Nan Wright with their violins had joined Brother H. I. Velt in the various services, and the three were there. The instruments and voices blended in the tune of "Hark! the herald angels," etc., and the whole camp, fully awakened, responded to the Christmas spirit.

Saturday, the 25th. At 9.45 a. m. a Christmas program in charge of Elder Parker was enjoyed by all. A violin selection, "Largo," was well rendered by Curtis Argent. Miss Enid Lowenthal, a young Jewess, then addressed the audience on "Kindergarten work." (Miss Lowenthal received her training at the Kindergarten Training College, Sydney, and has been engaged at the Wentworth Park Free Kindergarten, Glebe, Sydney. Her daily work with the little ones at Tiona was much appreciated.) Sister F. Delofski effectively recited "The solitary way," while Sister D. Barkus gave a good talk on "The Christmas spirit." Sister Nan Wright played a lovely violin solo, accompanied by her sister, Wilga Wright, on the piano. "Should the story of Santa Claus be told to children?" was ably discussed by Ivy Parker. Her decision was that it should, for the sentiment is a good one.

At 11 a. m. Elder H. E. Piesker preached, assisted by E. Wright. The reading was Luke 2, while the text was Hebrews 1: 1, 2. I have never heard a better presentation of the divinity, deity, and mission work of Christ.

At 7 p. m. a Christmas tree was on, Elder Parker acting as Santa Claus. This program was the work of Brother Walter Engel and Sister D. Maybury, who trained the children, the performers having come from the Bulahdelah Sunday school. The program was supplemented by a mandolin solo by Mr. S. Hunt. The biggest thing of all, of course, was the bewhiskered man with his mythical reindeer and precious presents.

Sunday, the 26th, was perhaps the best day of the whole reunion. After two prayer meetings and a priesthood meeting had been held at the same time, 8.30 to 9.40 a. m., an interesting Sunday school session was conducted at 9.45, Sister G. H. Parker leading. Sister Lily Parker presented some good thoughts in her address on "Story-telling"; Brother Walter Engel sang a sacred solo, Miss Lowenthal resumed and completed her discussion on "Kindergarten work." This young lady impressed all by what she evidently is, as well as by what she said. Brother G. Gillard talked on "Departmental Work." He dealt mainly with the Department of Recreation and Expression, and was subsequently elected as superintendent of that department for Australasia.

At 11 a. m. Elder W. J. Haworth was the speaker, Elder J. H. Jenkins assistant. Reading: Romans 12; text: "Earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."

At 1.30 p. m. a good audience assembled on the jetty to witness some baptisms in Wallis Lake, Elder Parker in charge and Elder W. J. Haworth officiating, the candidates being Edward Gardiner (Tiona's baker last year and this), Elwin Ivers, Clyde Henricks, and Clarence Bignall. All adults, but young men.

At 2.45 the reunion presidency had charge of a confirmation and sacramental service. The confirmations were as follows: Brother Gardiner, by Elders Barmore and Piesker; Brother Ivers, by Elders Velt and E. J. Haworth; Brother Bignall, by Elders Vaughan and E. Wright; and Brother Henricks, by Elders Jenkins and Maybury. Elders Parker and S. W. Ballard blessed Fay Inez Wright, great-granddaughter of Patriarch Alexander H. Smith, and great-great-granddaughter of Joseph Smith the Seer. The emblems were dispensed by Priests Gillard, Anderson, Berglin, and J. Jones, and a long season of prayer and testimony followed.

At 7 p. m. Elder Dickinson was in charge and announced as the preacher Elder Velt. Reading: Acts 5: 17-42; texts, verses 38 and 39, combined with Doctrine and Covenants 2: 1, the topic being, "God's purposes can not be frustrated." Two charts were used, one to illustrate the fulfillment of prophecy, the other showing the God-appointed leaders of the latter-day dispensation, namely, Joseph Smith, the Martyr; his son, the late President Joseph Smith; and Frederick M. Smith, our present leader. These portraits were complimented by Sister Sydney Wright, granddaughter of Joseph Smith the Martyr, and cousin to President F. M. Smith.

Monday, the 27th. At 10 a. m. the Australasian mission conference convened, Elders W. J. Haworth, J. H. N. Jones, and H. E. Piesker presiding. Brother W. H. Gresty, who had recently arrived, was chosen as chorister. In other respects the organization remained the same as that of the reunion. Reports were read from the missionary in charge, the various missionaries, and the heads of the different departments of church work.

At 7.30 p. m. a play written by Elder W. J. Haworth was put on, the title being "The vanished American." Special music was composed for it by Evangelist J. T. Gresty, and Brother W. H. Gresty acted as accompanist for the occasion. This production will probably be played in the various church centers of Australia as a means of illustrating the Latter Day Saint faith in the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the missionary work of the Reorganized Church among the American Indians.

Tuesday, the 28th. At 10 a. m. conference business was resumed and finished. Two items transacted I will mention: The appointment of Elder G. H. Parker to arrange an educational system for Australasia consonant with the curriculum of Graceland College; also his selection as Australian correspondent for the American church papers.

At 2.15 p. m. missionary council convened. A concert was planned for 8 p. m., but because of heavy rain it was postponed, and games were indulged in its stead in the big tent.

Wednesday, the 29th. At 10 a. m. a Tiona shareholders' meeting was held, E. Wright in charge. At 8 p. m. the prorogued concert eventuated, Sister F. Delofski presiding. The program was as follows: Pianoforte solo by Wilga Wright; vocal solo by Ivy Clarke; humorous song by C. A. Dickinson; a violin solo by Miss Evans, accompanied by her father (encored). A song by little Joyce Wright, which was encored; a solo by Sister Eva Chapman; recitation, Sister Gwen Wright (encored); a duet, Sisters Velt and Burrows; a recitation by Joyce Unger, "Santa Claus and the mouse"; solo, W. J. Haworth; duet, Misses Wilga and Nan Wright (encored); humorous song by special request, C. A. Dickinson; recitation, G. Gillard (encored); duet, Sister H. I. Velt and W. J. Haworth; recitation, Sister Gladys Maybury; humorous song, Earl Maybury (encored); steel guitar selection, V. Alberts (encored); national anthem by the audience.

Thursday, the 30th, 10 a. m. Northern New South Wales conference convened. Because of an epidemic of sickness which had struck the camp, there was not a sufficient representation to do general business, hence the conference soon adjourned. The following, however, were elected as delegates to the next General Conference: G. G. Lewis, C. F. Ellis, M. A. McConley, J. Blackmore, and William Patterson.

At 7 p. m. Elder Loving was the speaker, C. Berglin in charge. The effort was a stirring appeal along the missionary line, the keynote being the words of Christ: "That your fruit should remain," thus stressing the permanent nature of true missionary work. He feelingly referred to the work done by the various missionaries who had visited the mission, and in closing told some of his New Zealand missionary experiences. He then invited as many as would to come up on to the platform and sing: "Take up thy cross and follow Me." A number of the sisters effectively responded.

Friday, the 31st. This was a free day, with the exception of the morning prayer service and the evening meeting. Impromptu speeches were the order at the latter. Humor abounded. Those who would not speak paid the forfeit penalty of one shilling each, one pound being raised by this means, which sum was given to the missionaries.

Thus ended the reunion proper, but since quite a number were still on the grounds services were held Sunday the 2d of January, as follows: 11 a. m., Sunday school in charge of C. Bowden and W. Engel; at 7 p. m. Elder W. J. Haworth preached, Elder Piesker in charge; the subject was "Faith." Elder Haworth's sermons mingled doctrine, church government, and spiritual experiences, without making any subdivision unduly prominent, dwelling especially in one sermon on his father's acceptance of the latter-day work and its impression on him as observed by the son, together with some of his own early experiences.

Bishop Lewis, who has always been largely absent from the services because of his duties in the dining hall, was wholly absent this time. He did not attend a single service. Elder S. W. Ballard, who has always been a hard, practical worker, was also strenuously engaged this time; too much so, I think, for his own spiritual good and that of the Saints. Tiona, like other reunions, rides the free horse rather hard. Elder Ballard had as his chief helper Elder Piesker. Sister Parker, Sister D. Maybury, and other faithful sisters were prominent among the assistants of Bishop Lewis.

Shakespeare says comparisons are odious, but we are going to make some. In 1924 (Tiona's second year) there were two service tents, eighty living tents, two flat boats, and one auto truck used for living purposes. Number of campers, 260. In 1925: two service tents, seventy-three living tents. Number of campers, 210. In 1926: two service tents, seventy-four living tents, and 2 autos used for living purposes. Number of campers: 234. This year our people fell off in attendance because of drought conditions on the north coast. The increase over last year was wholly due to nonmembers who came in among us. The attendance at the various services by those who came and went has been about the same each year. I have no figures for 1923, the first year, but from the above facts it will appear that 1924 was the red letter year.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Just Before Embarking for Foreign Shores Apostle Hanson Writes the "Herald"

On the evening of May 13 my departure from home was taken for my foreign mission.

A number of times before a preparation and breaking away from loved ones similar to the present occasion was gone through, but one does not become accustomed by usage to bid dear ones and friends "goodbye."

One of the features connected with a missionary assignment to a foreign field is that in having all things prepared, so many matters claim one's attention and time that especially in the closing days there is not much time available for meeting with friends.

At the union station in Kansas City, my loved one, a few relatives, and President F. M. Smith were with me just before I boarded the train.

As the train moved out of the station and soon into the dusk and dark, my mind engaged in deep and solemn reflection. In my memory was fastened the countenances of those I had left behind. What would the future bring forth? The mission ahead of me was an important one. The principle of Christ that his church in the carrying on of its work should pursue a policy, not of isolation, but of permeation, was sound. It was an honor to take part with others in crying aloud: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

Having been engaged in church work in the countries embraced in the European field, there was but little, if any, novelty in the trip impelling me on.

The next morning in Chicago, between trains, there was time for me only to call on a few friends by telephone. One I endeavored to reach, but unavailingly, was Elder Harry Passman, with whom Elder J. F. Curtis and myself were associated in labor in Palestine, and whose work there was marked by unusual resourcefulness.

The following morning I was met at Buffalo by my younger brother, with whom a short time was spent, he then accompanying me part way to New York and returning by another train.

In New York there was the usual looking after checking of luggage, viséing of passport, etc.

My steamer, the United States, of the Scandinavian-American line, is to sail the 19th, tomorrow at noon.

The first port of call will be Oslo, Norway, requiring eleven days.

My course of travel will be Scandinavia, Germany, and Holland; then to England. In Europe one can pass quickly through one country into another.

This time of year is more favorable for ocean travel than is the winter season. Such is an item of moment to me, being sensitive to the motion of the water. I have tried many remedies for seasickness, without success. A sure preventive of the malady is to sit in the shade of an outspreading tree. Helpful measures that I have found to be very valuable are to get as near amidship as possible, and have an outside cabin where the porthole can be kept open, except in stormy weather.

Yesterday I called at Philadelphia, returning this morning to New York. The assistance of Elder A. E. Stoff enabled me down there to meet a goodly number of Saints recently from Germany. Also the opportunity was mine to meet Bishop Zimmermann and wife, and his two sons, John and William. The hospitality of Brother Albert N. Hoxie's home was mine to enjoy.

In Brooklyn I made my headquarters with Brother Charles Harris.

Tonight the regular prayer meeting at the church was to have been held, but it was requested that I talk instead. A fine body of representative Saints was present. This gave to me the association of many friends. Their voices in greeting and in friendly concourse was music to my ears, and will linger with me.

The hour is late. Tomorrow I will be on the trackless deep.

PAUL M. HANSON.

Opening the Work at Ann Arbor

Perhaps a letter from Ann Arbor, Michigan, would be interesting to some who are acquainted with the Saints at this place, including the writer. About a year and a half ago, I came here as a housekeeper to work for a widower and a family of motherless children, and being an entire stranger in Ann Arbor I was very lonely at times; especially did I miss the association of Saints. There was no branch here and no other Saint that I knew of, but I tried to live a faithful life and as often as possible attended church in Detroit.

I tried to find out if there were any other Saints here, and at first it seemed that my effort was in vain. Then the thought came to me that if I could make my whereabouts known perhaps some Saints who come to the hospital here might notify me and I could go to see them and in this way be able to cheer some afflicted ones. I wrote and had my name and address published in the church papers, and although I have not made many visits to the hospital, yet I have been blessed in my effort to serve others.

Sister Rhode, who lives here, saw my letter in the HERALD, and she called on me. Through her I was enabled to locate several others who live in and near Ann Arbor. I learned from her that there were several students here attending the university.

During this time I had been longing for church privileges and praying that in some way the work might be opened up in Ann Arbor. I got in touch with one of the students, Sister Clarissa Olds, of Flint, and I found her to be a very energetic young lady, a real whole-hearted church worker. To her I suggested the idea of getting in touch with the different Saints who are here and trying to get them to organize a Sunday school. This interested her, and she wrote to our district president, Brother DuRose, of Flint, and through him we obtained the names and addresses of some Saints who he knew were here. We looked them up, calling on each one, and to our satisfaction found seventeen besides ourselves. Some of them were quite enthusiastic; others had grown indifferent and cold through isolation, but we found enough of them willing to work with us that we decided to make an attempt.

On April 3 they met at my home, and we organized a home class school, elected officers and began our Sunday school with a membership of twenty, ten of whom are members of the church. Most of the others are children.

For the benefit of readers who know the writer, will say that I have changed my position and am now the wife of the man for whom I came here to work. I am now trying to be a mother to his children. This caused me to feel the need of church privileges still more than before, for I realize the responsibility I have of teaching the gospel and explaining the way of life to those whom I have undertaken to mother. You may be sure I was thankful for the opportunity of having a Sunday school. We have meetings in my home every Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and so far are quite pleased with the success we have had. Some of our church members have not attended as yet, but we hope to be able to interest them and induce them to attend.

Among those whom we have found and who have been attending Sunday school are Sister Irene Summerfield, a university student from Tawas City, Michigan; Brother Gordon Brown, a student from Port Huron; Sister Fay Barrett, student from Flint; Sister Jennie Burt and her family; Sister Burt used to live at Boyne City and is very well acquainted there; Brother Fred Ellis, from South Boardman; and Sister

We have had meeting every Sunday thus far, and on April 24 we were favored with the presence of District President A. H. DuRose and his wife, from Flint; also our district Sunday school superintendent, Brother Vincent Schaar, and Sister Paulson, of Flint. Brother Schaar gave us an interesting and instructive talk, and we all enjoyed it very much. Brother DuRose promises to try to provide us with some member of the priesthood each sacramental Sunday, so we are looking forward to the privilege of partaking of the Lord's supper.

Last Sunday we were very much pleased to have two families of Saints, one from Dexter and the other from Ypsilanti, join our number. They were Saints who have lived in Ann Arbor, and their names were among the number furnished us by Brother DuRose. They had moved, but I wrote to them telling of the meetings here. Last Sunday both families were present, and they promised to be regular attendants, which adds eight more names to our membership roll.

Our membership is composed mostly of young people and children, and this is encouraging, for it speaks promisingly of future success. Sister Olds is acting as our superintendent and is doing all she can to make the school interesting to the children and at the same time instructive to all. She is planning a series of five minute talks on the program of the church for the benefit of those who have not been taking the church papers, of whom we find there are several. Your writer also tries to pass her church papers around among the different ones, giving all an opportunity to read and learn of the forward steps which the church is taking.

We are hoping and praying that God will bless our efforts here, and that it may be the means of opening up the work in Ann Arbor. We will gladly welcome any Saints who can visit us at any time. Our address is not hard to find. We invite your help and ask an interest in your prayers. May God's work roll onward is my prayer.

Modern Science and the Bible

Doctor W. D. Henderson, of the University of Michigan, delivered a lecture on the subject, "Modern science and the Bible," to the Detroit district conference in the Highland Park Church, Detroit, Michigan, Sunday, May 8. With the aid of some notes given me by Elder W. L. Shotwell, I am passing on to HERALD readers some of the good things we were able to glean from his lecture.

Doctor Henderson is a physicist at the University. This makes his lecture the more interesting, since his lecture surely belies the idea that men of science are atheists. It is clearly evident that he is a firm believer in God.

The doctor first pointed out that man is a many-sided creature.

1. He is an ethical being; a lover of the good.
2. He is an æsthetic being; a lover of the beautiful.
3. He is a scientific being; he is progressive and constructive.

4. He is also a religious being.

So we might go on indefinitely.

Man may be thrilled æsthetically and not be touched on his scientific side.

He referred to a debate advertized for that evening on the subject, "Is man a machine?" between Clarence Darrow and Professor Durant, in Detroit. His answer to this question was, Of course a man is a machine, and more than a machine. Some have said that man is an animal. They are right; he is an animal and more than an animal.

Some one has said science is truth. That is true. Another says it is classified knowledge. That, too, is true. But these in the opinion of Doctor Henderson did not satisfy.

He defined science thus: "Science is the most rational explanation of the universe, at any time, in terms of our experience." He then added, "But our experience is constantly changing."

Science can not be a fixed thing. Our conclusions are constantly changing and different. The science of today may not be the science of tomorrow. Some years ago I taught my classes that a heavier than air machine could not fly. The words were hardly out of my mouth before one came flying over the campus. I also taught them that the human voice could not be transmitted without wires; later the radio was discovered.

The more exact sciences are those that make the least presuppositions. Mathematics is considered the most exact because it is based on two assumptions; i. e., time and space can be measured. Other sciences have to assume these and more, and consequently are less exact.

The mathematician has always presumed his science secure until Einstein comes along and says that time and space are relative and can not be measured. The difficult thing of the whole matter is that we can not prove his theory untrue. The mathematician of today is not so sure his subject is an exact science.

Does science agree with the Bible? It does not! for the same reason that science does not agree with itself. What was regarded as truly scientific twenty years ago is not so considered today. Everything we know in this world is relative knowledge. If man knew in the absolute he would be a god and equal with the Infinite One. To see in part, to know in part, is scientific. No scientist can fold his arms and say, I have discovered the universe.

The Bible is the greatest of books. The first from the printing press and its greatest publication. It is a library containing orations, poetry, laws, etc. It contains an account of the most venerable people of the world history. Running through it like a golden thread is the plea that God is our Father and all men are brothers. If we could be made to realize this, the millennium would be here tomorrow.

What has science to say to Job? I believe, my friends, that man shall live forever. The universe is explicable only on the assumption that man shall live forever. T. S. W.

Spring River Conference

The spirit of the Master was enjoyed to a large degree in all the meetings of the Spring River district conference, which met in session at Joplin, Missouri, May 20, at 7.45 p. m. Friday night was given over to a program arranged by the Department of Recreation and Expression, including several solos, duets, and trios, both instrumental and vocal. Pictures of the Holy Land were shown and explained by Michael Johannides.

At the business session Saturday afternoon the following district officers were elected: Amos T. Higdon, Independence, president; E. E. Gilbert, of Pittsburg, Kansas, and Frank L. Freeman, Webb City, Missouri, counselors; Mrs. Charles A. Dooley, Mulberry, Kansas, secretary-treasurer; F. L. Freeman, sustained as bishop's agent; Andrew Jones, Columbus, Kansas, Sunday school superintendent; Lee Lamons, Vinita, Oklahoma, assistant Sunday school superintendent; Ellsworth Gilbert, Pittsburg, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. Pearl Jones, Cherokee, Kansas, superintendent of the Department of Women; S. G. Carrow, Joplin, chorister; and C. E. Wilson, Joplin, historian.

President Elbert A. Smith preached three sermons, one Saturday night and two Sunday at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. All of them were inspiring and enjoyed by all. Two hundred seventy-five attended the Sunday school Sunday morning, while at the eleven o'clock service the church was filled to its capacity. Brother Elbert Smith addressed the men at 1.30 Sunday afternoon, during which time the Department of Women met at the dining hall one block east. After the prayer meeting at 2.45 p. m. Sunday, at which four prayers and thirty testimonies were offered, the young people held a reception at McClellan Park, three miles south of the city. The conference adjourned at 9.15 p. m., Sunday, May 22, after preaching by President Elbert A. Smith.

The next conference will be held at Arma, Kansas, November 25 to 27. The Spring River District, Clinton district, and Southern Missouri District, will all unite in one big reunion, to be held at Cunningham Park, Joplin, Missouri, August 12 to 21.

C. E. Wilson, C. H. Hobart, Raymond Troyer, acted as press committee.

1521 Milburn Boulevard

Elder S. W. L. Scott met with the Saints of South Bend and Mishawaka Branch, April 24. He preached to an interested crowd at eleven in the morning, three in the afternoon, and again at eight in the evening, after which he left for Elkhart, where he had other engagements. Brother Scott's visit was greatly appreciated as he was the instrument in the Lord's hands in bringing the gospel to many of the Saints here, and was associated with many others in former years, who were glad to recount these experiences. One family of nonmembers drove several miles to be here. They had heard him preach at Knox many years ago. Their son and his family are among our active workers. Brother Scott presented the gospel in power, as he did in days of yore, and when Saints commented on the youthful appearance of some Saints, he said, "We feed on the everlasting gospel."

May 1, we appreciated the attendance of a carload of Saints from Elkhart at our regular sacramental service. Brother Walters, of that place, assisted in the service.

A week later we were again greeted with a nice crowd. Brother Lee Coonfare was the morning speaker, and he showed from the scriptures the difference between being right and thinking we are right. Again Brother and Sister M. Wilsey and Brother Walters met with us and spent the day with Sister Tappan, meeting with us in the evening.

At seven the Religio put on a nice Mothers' Day program, which was followed by a sermon by our pastor. He took his text from Revelation 19: 7, 8, and Revelation 17: 4, comparing the women of the world with the mothers in Israel and holding that the ideals of Zion and her weal depended upon the mothers in the church. A nice crowd was in attendance, among them being Brother and Sister Galloway, of our number, who had been quarantined with scarlet fever. They report that their children were not really sick, and three other children of the family did not contract the disease.

Two carloads of Saints from here met with the Elkhart Saints on Friday evening, May 13, at their regular study hour. A pleasant hour was enjoyed; the study was about the children of Israel crossing the Jordan into the promised land, and this drifted into the subject of latter-day Israel entering the promised land today. Questions were asked, some being those that have caused Saints to stumble; but we believe Brother Freeman was able to answer them satisfactorily.

We were glad to have Elder A. H. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio, with us May 15. Brother Nieman is a traveling salesman in this State. He was our morning speaker on this date, taking his subject from Hebrews 11. As he related experiences in the establishing of the work of the Lord and held forth hope of a splendid work being accomplished here, if we have faith in God and move forward, it gave the Saints encouragement. Brother Nieman believes in the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and though he does not claim to be a speaker, he does have the ability to inspire faith. The Saints hope he will stop with us whenever possible. In fact, they extend such an invitation to all Saints, for all are needed in the work that lies before us. In the evening we were expecting Brother Dennison Smith, of Hammond, with twenty-three players, who had promised a pageant, but owing to sickness the engagement was canceled. This was not called off in time to notify those invited. Fortunately Brother J. W. McKnight brought his congregation from Hibbard and preached to the largest crowd, I think, we have had in our little church. He took for his text Revelation 3:5, and it was not a disappointed crowd that left the church that night. Brother McKnight has been long associated with us and is always welcome.

Our attendance at Sunday school, Religio, and Wednesday evening prayer meeting has been very good throughout the month, and we are hoping arrangements can be made for a missionary effort in the near future. Friends meet and take part with us in all our meetings, and we hope some will be numbered with us, when the gospel is fully and carefully presented to them. But local men alone can not do this, as their time is occupied with daily toil.

The pastor's home is 817 Dale Avenue, Mishawaka. A South Side car from either Mishawaka or South Bend will find this address. Welcome Saints.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA.—The Sunday school will be continued although some of our members have moved away. Branch President J. F. Payne and family moved southwest of North Platte about April 1.

President Payne announced the branch general business meeting to be held at the all-day meeting, May 1. At this time a new branch president was elected in the person of Brother W. L. Sivits, of North Platte. The other officers were sustained in their offices. This meeting was well attended, and a goodly number were present from North Platte Branch. Two faithful families came thirty miles. They live west of our meeting place. These two brothers were at the late General Conference as delegates for the North Platte and Pleasantview Branches. During the course of the day, an enjoyable time was had. In our social meeting there were many good testimonies, and the peaceful spirit was present. Nonmembers as well as Saints who were there will long remember this occasion.

The Saints are faithful in keeping up the Sunday school. The rally day meetings will be continued. Rally, ye few, to the Sunday school, and other blessings will be added. God's people must not be discouraged if to the world they wish to show they have the gospel as taught in former days.

The all-day meeting will be held at North Platte, Nebraska, June 5, at the Advent Church on West Tenth Street.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Corner Main Street and Dufferin Avenue

May 17.—Our Easter services, which we mentioned in our last letter, were a splendid success, a large number being in attendance throughout the day. Brother and Sister Scott, of Laura, were with us. Brother Scott is one of the district presidency and is also president of the Grand Plain Branch. The day began with the sunrise prayer service, which prepared us spiritually for the meetings to follow. At the Sunday school held at ten, special musical numbers were rendered by the beginner class and also by the boys and girls of the intermediate grade. Elder C. E. Diggle was the speaker at eleven o'clock, and a very beautiful anthem was rendered by seven of our adult singers. In the evening Brother William Brant discoursed to a large gathering, taking for his subject, "The risen Christ."

Mothers' Day was most fittingly celebrated by a special program at ten o'clock under the auspices of the Sunday school. Readings, papers, solos, and a chorus by the children delighted the assembled Saints.

In the evening Brother Brant preached a typical Mothers' Day sermon, and also with Brother Paul Schmidt sang a duet. Both were much appreciated.

Sister Clara Piedt Winmill, for whom many prayers have been sent to the throne of grace during the past year, has developed tuberculosis of the lungs, and the superintendent of the sanitarium here holds out no hope for her recovery, but our faith is in that power above. The Great Physician can heal when those of the world fail. Sunday morning the Saints of this branch were requested to fast, and the largest gathering we have had in the church for some months met for prayer service at eleven in our sister's behalf. The Spirit of the Lord was surely in our midst, and we felt strengthened and cheered.

Brother C. J. Osler, Lester Beckman, and George Steves have rented a large garage down town and business is increasing every week, they report. Brother Beckman is moving his family into this city this week. Also Brother and Sister George Cruce have come into our midst recently from Shellbrook. As they have eight children, we anticipate they will be a real help in the Sunday school.

We were overjoyed to have our venerable Brother Van Eaton spend a night in our home last week. He has just returned from General Conference, and is spreading joyful tidings wherever he goes.

The women's local, under the able leadership of Sister Laurel Whiting, has been active during the past month. We are busily preparing a layette for a wee stranger, studying the Scriptures, and are soon to begin on home management.

Those Saints who may be visiting in Saskatoon will find our little church on the corner of Main Street and Dufferin Avenue.

Moorhead, Iowa

May 20.—Owing to the late spring and bad roads, Moorhead Saints did not get to attend the quarterly conference at Missouri Valley, as they would like to have done. Sister Mark Jensen and daughter, Aleta, also Brother Ellis Davis were in attendance, going on the train, and report a splendid conference. The spirit of service seemed to be uppermost in the minds of the Saints. The sermons by Brothers Garver and C. J. Smith were appreciated by those present.

Brother Mark Jensen occupied the pulpit at Pisgah on May 8, and delivered a Mothers' Day address. The Pisgah Saints also rendered a fine program in harmony with the occasion. Brother C. R. Hield had an appointment at the Jordan Church, and Brother T. O. Strand delivered the mothers' address at our local church.

The morning service was dismissed, that our people could unite with others in the W. C. T. U. mothers' program which was held in the Christian Church.

On May 1, our sacramental service was well attended, and a very profitable meeting enjoyed. Our visitors were mostly former Graceland students who had been invited to meet at the church and later to enjoy the remainder of the day at the home of Brother and Sister Arnold Adams in honor of Brother and Sister Paul Fischel, who were spending a week with them en route from Florida to Washington. Those present beside the Fischels and Adamses were Brother and Sister Charles Church and baby, Barton Kay, of Mapleton, Iowa; Sister Naomi Davis, of Mondamin; Sister Dorothy Emerson and Sister Gladys and Brother Bernam Silsbee, of Pisgah; Brother and Sister Fields Jones, of Orson; Sister Helen Stewart and Bernice Jackson, of Dunlap; Bill Rainey, of Kansas City; Brother and Sister C. R. Hield, and Shirley Jeane, Sister Ruby Inlow, Brother Lloyd McIntyre, Sisters Alice and Aleta Jensen, and Brother Cecil Burton, of Moorhead.

The time was spent in visiting and taking pictures. Of course there was the dinner, ice cream, angel food cake, etc., which had mostly been prepared the day before. The Graceland spirit entwines itself around the hearts of her pupils, and they love to get together and renew their friendship and use their influence to encourage others to attend "our beloved Graceland."

Sister Nettie Kesterson and daughters, of Sioux City, attended our Sunday school session on May 15. We always welcome our former members and wish they could meet with us oftener.

We are sorry to lose our superintendent, C. R. Hield, who has been in charge of our public schools for the last four years and was offered the position for the ensuing year, but he has decided to accept a position in a university in New York. Brother and Sister Hield and Shirley Jeane have endeared themselves in the hearts of Moorhead Saints, and we feel that again part of our family is stepping from the home nest to take its part of life in another field of labor. May peace and prosperity attend them.

Brother John F. Garver has been secured to deliver the baccalaureate sermon on the evening of May 22. The graduating class consists of eight members, Sister Alice Jensen being the only Latter Day Saint.

Little Arladine Bess, daughter of Brother and Sister Arnold Adams, was blessed at the sacramental service by Elders Mark Jensen and John Boswell.

Sister Helen McDonald, who teaches in the eastern part of the State, spent a week at home the first of the month, as also did Sister Nellie Larson, who teaches at Logan.

Elder Mark Jensen preached at a schoolhouse on the "Willows" Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied by Brother Arley Hoffman, who kindly "hauled" the preacher to the meeting place.

Sister Dena Mortensen and son, Dale, are preparing to spend their summer vacation at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cora Hearn, of Missouri Valley.

We are pleased to report that Brother Ira Wilson appears to be recovering from his recent illness and is feeling quite well again.

Sister Emma Lewis is still faithfully helping care for her afflicted friend, Mrs. Leora Woods, who has been ill for many months.

Sister Clara Crews, whose parents have again located at Moorhead, graduated the last week from the Pisgah high school, where the family was located before moving to this place.

Sister Frances Strand, who is attending college at Ames, visited over the week-end with home folks.

Brother William LaSeur is feeling much better these days. He is able to walk down town occasionally.

Sister La Vonne Johnson has charge of the music in the school at this place during the last few weeks.

Woodbine, Iowa

607 Weare Street

May 24.—Easter was observed with an appropriate program, the purity of the Easter lilies giving out their influence to higher conditions of living.

A splendid spirit attended the delivery of the Mothers' Day address by Elder Gerald Gunsolley. Special music was furnished by the Temple Builders, who also pinned a flower over the heart of each mother present and sent flowers to a number who could not be in attendance.

On last Sunday the priesthood in a body attended the ministerial conference held at Council Bluffs and reported a very spiritual meeting. The morning service at home was in charge of the Department of Women. A program along the lines of health was given. Other subjects touched upon were filing of inventories for children, moral development, and spiritual uplift. In short, some of the ideals for which the women of the church stand were advanced and explained.

Three more have passed through the door of baptism since our last writing. Elder F. A. Fry performed the rite. We welcome these brothers into the church and trust they may become "earnest workers for the Master."

Fargo, North Dakota

1421 First Avenue, South

Mothers' Day dawned with a heavy rain and wind. It was very chilly, but the Sunday school members, little and big, also visiting children, came out to Sunday school at ten o'clock. This was followed by an appropriate program in honor of the day. A fine spirit was felt, and the finishing touch to it all was a pleasing talk by Evangelist J. A. Gunsolley, who pleasantly surprised the Saints the evening previous and was very welcome among us. Otherwise no elder would have been present that day. Church decorations were in pink and white, and for sunshine we substituted electric lights. After the program a short prayer and testimony meeting was held, at which time the sweet Spirit of the Lord was felt in the hearts of all.

The evening preaching service was especially enjoyed. Elder Gunsolley spoke on "Parental responsibility." A few extracts are: "Don't criticize the misdeeds of youth too much. It is better to take your company to church and serve a cold lunch than to stay at home to prepare a big dinner. Parents should not threaten or lie to their children. Going to church is a business of a Latter Day Saint."

Brother Gunsolley spoke three other evenings during the week on the topics: "Foundations," "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God"; a round table discussion.

Sister Arthur Thompson, husband, and two children, of Fort Ransom, South Dakota, recently came to Fargo, where they now reside.

Brother and Sister William Shackow drove to Winnipeg, Canada, to visit Brother John Corliss, who is still helpless from his stroke. Brother Shackow planned to put in Brother Corliss's crop, but the fields out there are covered with water.

Elder Thomas Leitch, our pastor, has recently been called to New Salem, and Hope, North Dakota, to administer to sick ones. On Sunday evening, May 15, he preached a good sermon from Doctrine and Covenants 108:1-8. On Sunday, May 22, he took for his text: "If ye have faith, as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you."

The Saints are planning a rally day in the near future. A picnic dinner will be one event of the day. All visiting and local Saints are invited to bring baskets of eatables and partake of some of the good things of life together. A program will also be given by the children.

Sister Josephine Bullis, Brother Alfred Rife and daughter Mabel, spent Mothers' Day with Fargo Saints. Another of our visitors is Sister J. Muffle, of Straubville, who visited Mr. and Mrs. R. Walker a short time ago.

Sister Emma Oaks, of Dunseith, has been taken to a hospital at Bottineau. She is suffering from an injured spine, a result of a fall she had some time ago. The Saints hope the Lord will bless and comfort her and raise her up from her affliction.

Sister Barbara Thompson, of Clifford, has returned to Fargo to continue her treatments. She is also taking a diet course from Doctor Rensburg, of Independence, Missouri. The sisters in the Department of Women, who are studying Doctor Rensburg's book on diet, find it very good. Many helpful things are contained therein, and good health can be derived from proper food and combinations. The Lord was good to gave the Word of Wisdom, for he knows what is best for his children. Blessings will follow by paying heed to his teachings, eating, sleeping, and drinking properly.

The Saints were grieved to hear of the death of Brother Elmer D. Weddle, of Lamoni, Iowa, formerly of Fargo. Brother Elmer was a kind and thoughtful boy and tried to live his religion. The sympathy of the Saints in Fargo is extended to the bereaved family. His sister, Margaret, who has been employed in a dentist's office here, went home to attend the funeral.

It seems to be an annual affair in the Fargo Branch, to give a farewell party to some of our number who seek homes in other places and in the city of Zion. We regret to lose them one by one, but try to keep courage and faith, even though our number is decreased. We are happy that a few new families move here now and then, and hope more may come, that God's work in this city may grow and continue and other honest souls be gathered into the kingdom.

At this springtime we are sorry to find that Sister S. M. Brown and daughters, Elsie and Bernice, have decided to embark Zionward. We were glad, of course, that they could go to Independence, but we need them here. Sister Brown is always faithful and kind, and Sisters Elsie and Bernice are especially blessed with musical talent and have been a wonderful help here.

The Saints and friends, forty-three in number, gathered at the home of Sister John Konietzka on Wednesday evening, May 11, to give the Sisters Brown a farewell, and there they spent a peaceful, happy evening. Games were played until lunch time, and then lovely refreshments were served, after Elder Gunsolley offered grace. Professor Worth Couey gave the presentation speech of the gift purchased for them. It was a luncheon set and hand embroidered buffet set. For this occasion Brother Gunsolley made an appropriate talk. Then songs were sung, the last one being, "God will take care of you." Brother Gunsolley pronounced a very comforting closing prayer, and all went home feeling glad to have spent so happy an evening together under the influence of the fine spirit present. May God's richest blessings go with our sisters to their new home.

On May 1, Elder Thomas Leitch administered the Lord's Supper to the Saints, and some good prayers and testimonies were given. "Sweet hour of prayer that calls me from a world of care," are surely inspired words. How many hundred Saints sing this song and feel the thrill of God's Holy Spirit burning within their bosoms! Many have sung these good old hymns, lived faithful to the end, and gained their reward, while, sad to say, many have sung these hymns, felt happy in the work at the time, and later on departed from the faith and fallen by the way. It behooves us to be on our guard and pray much lest we drift and be lost.

Elder Leitch preached in the evening, reading from James 1:22-27. The leading thought was: Can we all look back on our lives and see that we have grown in knowledge and grace since we obeyed the gospel? He told us that we should not live to ourselves and forget how others are getting along. We should have pleasant words and smiles for all. It does not cost much to be kind, but it costs much to be unkind. We have to throw off the old man. We sometimes forget there is a God, but we should seek constantly to do good, and find out what there is in the word of God.

Spring is very late here, and there is plenty of rain and cool weather. Much of the seeding is not yet done, and gardens grow very slowly.

God wants his soldiers to be in the front, ready to serve at every opportunity and under any condition. We sometimes spend time and strength until the wee hours of the morning to finish that dress or frost a fancy cake in order to attend some social event, but what about that Sunday school lesson or the program we were asked to help in at the church, or the sick or discouraged ones to be visited, or the entertainment of the lone servant of the Lord who leaves home and loved ones to carry the bread of life to sinking souls? Do we have enough time for these things? Can excuses be found for not doing them? They are what develop the soul. I do not mean that we should not have a certain amount of recreation, but much wisdom is required. Time should be taken to wisely answer the little tots' questions and to play a game or two now and then to help keep their affection and interest, that they may more happily listen to the teachings of the "right way."

"Where wilt thou put thy trust?

In a frail form of clay,
That to its element of dust
Must soon resolve away."

The letter in a recent HERALD, written to Brother Elbert Smith by our Methodist friend, telling how the Busy Man's Tracts had affected him has rather enthused the publicity agent here to try and do more along this line. It is hoped we can get racks for our literature put up in the parks and depots for the summer. We must scatter good seed in word and in deed while yet it is day.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The forty-first quarterly conference of the Kansas City Stake was held at Central Church, 2917 Tracy Avenue, May 15 and 16, 1927.

All nature conspired to make an ideal May Day, and the Saints of the stake responded very liberally in their attendance and devotion. The Sunday school showed an attendance of 314, with an offering of $14.09. The sermon at 11 o'clock was by Elder Wilfred D. Tordoff, who predicated his remarks upon the subject, "At the foot of the cross." He said, paraphrasing from 1 Thessalonians, 5th chapter, that many were divided in their worship of God, which would indicate that they were not children of the light. We must have on the breastplate of faith, and helmet for protection. We must quench not the Spirit. If we do, we are without God. Despise not prophesyings! We have no right to despise these blessings. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. Many have never gone higher than the foot of the cross.

The elders' quorum meeting was held at 1.30, with a good attendance.

At 2.30 p. m., the general prayer meeting was held in charge of Elders F. B. Blair and F. S. Anderson, of the stake bishopric. A very uplifting service followed, there being crowded into the hour and a half 3 songs, 6 prayers, 19 testimonies, 1 prophecy, and 1 spiritual exultation. Several encouraging testimonies were borne.

At 4.15 the regular conference ministry meeting was held, at which there was a splendid attendance, and they were addressed by Elder Cyril E. Wight on the subject, "What actually constitutes our mission in the world." He said, "It is our business to make the doctrine into life; the greatest mistake in the world is for one to accept a call and think he is qualified for his office. God only anticipates the individual's possibilities. Religious education is a wonderful thing. Which is more important, being able to deliver a message, or to have a message to deliver? Creeds can not be changed. The inward regeneration must obtain. If we think of the external and not the internal, we have made a terrible mistake."

The Department of Women's meeting was held in the main auditorium at the same hour and was addressed by President Floyd M. McDowell, his effort being directed to the boys and girls of the adolescent age, a representative assembly filling the room, of those of that age, and older. He impressed them with this thought, that many had an aim in life but no goal to achieve. He emphasized the necessity for qualifying themselves for future usefulness in the church, stating that they must carry on if they expect to reach a goal eventually.

The 7.45 service was preceded by song service of fifteen minutes directed by Thomas B. Dunn, local chorister. President Floyd M. McDowell addressed the waiting congregation, using as a theme for his discourse, "Zion builders." He emphasized the necessity of purity, clean minds and clean hearts; of humility, which is a sign of strength, indicating a consciousness of task; and of oneness, which ideals shall be prevalent in Zion. He introduced a comparative table showing expenditure in various commodities per capita, as follows: Automobile, $2.40; candy, $1.30; patent medicine, 81 cents; lead pencils, 7 cents; religious education, .0007 of a cent. Real religion is 100 per cent.

The business session held on the 16th at 7.45 was very interesting in point of the earnestness with which it was undertaken and the amount of business disposed of. An encouraging report was read from the stake presidency, which showed the stake to be in a very good condition, with few exceptions. The financial report of the bishop was read, showing receipts of $15,693.01; with disbursements of $15,364.67, leaving a balance of $328.64. Reports from the secretary-historian, recorder-reporter, delegation to General Conference, stake elders' quorum, stake priests' quorum, stake teachers' quorum, Department of Women, Sunday school, were read, all showing the various departments to be in a healthful condition. The stake presidency, stake high council, stake bishopric, stake missionary, stake secretary-recorder-historian-reporter were by motion sustained for the ensuing year. A resolution prevailed requesting the stake presidency and Bishopric to keep on sale at the headquarters of the stake, photographs of themselves as Quorums and individuals.

A recommendation that Brother S. S. Armstrong be ordained to the office of deacon was by motion referred to the stake presidency, with power to act. A recommendation by the stake presidency favoring the acquiring of a moving picture machine for use of the Central Church and other churches of the stake was by motion adopted, with instructions to the bishop that immediate action be had.

The resolution introduced at previous conferences with reference to a survey of the stake and the installing of a directory of stewards and other business men in the church was by motion laid on the table.

The resolution introduced at former conference that no man be ordained to any office in the priesthood without first complying with the financial law of the church was also by motion laid on the table.

The young men of Central Church held a good-fellowship meeting at the Isis Cafeteria, where a banquet was served to about twenty-five of their number. The result, aside from partaking of an excellent feed, was the get-together spirit which prevailed. This probably will result in the organization of a young men's club, with the intention of inviting the young men of the stake to join with them. One of the objects is to create wholesome entertainment, which includes outdoor sports which will occupy their spare time, thus holding them together as church workers, rather than in a disorganized way finding their entertainment away from the influences of the church.

Fourth Church

On May 6 a banquet was given in honor of the fathers and sons of the church. Dinner was prepared and served by Sisters Grace Essex and Evelyn Worden, with decorations by Mrs. Wilber Fowler. An interesting program followed. May 8, Mothers' Day, a short program was given by the Sunday school children for the mothers. Prayer was offered by Sister Rebecca Brown, one of the senior mothers of their local, and the address was by Patriarch Ammon White, who briefly sketched the union of our foreparents, Adam and Eve, and the divine sanction of the same by our heavenly Father, the result of which union was the children of these first parents. We are their children, though far removed from the scene of this occurrence. As they were the author of the first home, so now the woman thinks first of making a home. The church is the Lamb's bride, the mother of the world. Those doing the will of Christ are the children. The earthly mother must bear the blame of the children's mistakes and likewise be lauded when the children are dutiful. Remember the grind of the mother's job.

At Religio, the Temple Builders rendered a Mothers' Day program, Sister Charles Allen in charge. Scenes representing, "The Sunday school mother," music to "Sabbath school" being played softly: "The young mother," holding babe in arms while poems are read; third, "The Oriole mother," music, the Oriole song; and fourth, "A young mother at bedtime," with children around her knee for good-night prayers, "Nearer, my God, to thee," being played softly. A candle service followed this, decorations were gold and white. Gold for our mothers, representing worth; white for our daughters, representing purity. Each mother of a Temple Builder was invited to the rostrum; then the girls stood behind these mothers, each having a candle. A pledge previously had been given the mothers to read. Sister Allen asked the mothers, if they could honestly do so, to repeat with her the pledge while holding the lighted candles. Each did so, "We, the mothers, here pledge our help to the Lord Jesus Christ in making girlhood more beautiful. To our daughters we pledge our love, our comradeship. To all other girls we pledge a helping hand and a kind word." The daughter's pledge was: "To my mother, I will be true and loving. To every mother I will be kind and thoughtful. To every girl with whom I come in contact, I will try to teach the nobler life. I will honor the name daughter."

The Religio programs are bringing out talent that has been hidden away, as each person is given an opportunity to be on the program. Apostle Clyde Ellis gave us a lecture, showing pictures of South Sea Islands. The natives are taking a great interest in the gospel.

May 9 a dinner was served in honor of mothers and daughters. Sisters Charles Allen and Eva Branham were in charge.

The Orioles and Temple Builders rendered a program entitled, "Then and now; now and then."

Independence

Stone Church

Elders U. W. Greene and John Sheehy presided over the young people's eight o'clock prayer meeting Wednesday evening, May 25. At this service Miss Marie Mitchell, of Santa Ana, California, was present and made the acquaintance of a good number of the young people of Independence. Miss Mitchell appeared in the "Who's who" column of a recent Autumn Leaves.

For the early Sunday morning prayer service of the young, Brothers D. O. Cato and Ed. Darmon were in the stand. Though the number in attendance was small, each one received strength and inspiration from the songs of Zion, the short, well-worded prayers, and the few fervent testimonies. In the opening remarks, Brother Darmon commented upon the fitness of beginning the memorial services of the day with a meeting of prayer. He aptly compared human life to that of a flower. Just as the flower by its sweet fragrance attracts the bees and is pleasing to us, so will our spiritual influence, if properly developed, attract others and be pleasing to God.

Upstairs at this hour the older people met in prayer, and an encouraging service is reported.

The eleven o'clock service was begun by a song sung by the congregation and choir, and prayer was offered by Brother J. W. Metcalf. Following the organ offertory, the Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, rendered "The Comforter," the duet being sung by Miss Thelma Vincent and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind. A soprano solo, "Great peace for they which love thy law," sung by Miss Lilly Belle Allen, was appreciated by the congregation.

Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith was then announced as the speaker, and took up his theme. Brother Smith had been requested to relate an incident in his earlier life, and preceded the narrative of the experience with a sermonet on "Prayer." In connection with his topic he quoted: "And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint" (Luke 18:1), and "Without faith it is impossible to please him" (Hebrews 11:6). Beginning with the assertion that prayer is the function of not only the Christian, but all mankind, the speaker asked the question: What is prayer? It is more than a supplication; it takes not only the form of supplication, appeal, praise, thanksgiving; it is the expression of those feelings and desires of the heart. We must not recite our prayers, but they should be voiced in sincerity. Brother Smith contrasted the prayers of the Pharisee and the publican, asking which was the real prayer. He gave a careful analysis of the prayer Jesus taught his disciples. Among other interesting things he told of the praying machine used in the East, in Thibet and other countries. Often people do not really pray unless in some extremity; then they seek heavenly aid in humility and earnestness. Here the speaker related the experience he had been asked to tell. It was concerning the divine assistance he was given when he preached his first sermon many years ago. The narrative touched the hearts of many in the audience, and renewed their courage with the assurance that God is always near to help us if we only seek him in faith and humility.

The K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club entertained the juniors at the Campus Sunday at the junior service. The program was very much enjoyed, and all are looking forward to another entertainment when the club reassembles next fall.

Evening Services

The Religio program Sunday evening was one rendered by talented boys of the Stone Church congregation. William Gould gave a pleasing reading. A cornet solo by Ralph Snively was enjoyed by all. Ralph was accompanied by Miss Melva Ward. Then there was a baritone solo by Orville Martin, accompanied by Paul Craig. Ralph Snively and Merrill Etzenhouser rendered a cornet-saxophone duet, and to conclude the program Gordon Kress contributed a vocal solo, being accompanied on the piano by Miss Nida Vincent. Next Sunday evening is the last Religio meeting of this season at the church, and the K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club will present the program.

By 7.30 the house was filled, and Brother Sheehy commenced the song service. The evening meeting began with the singing of "Stepping in the light," and Patriarch H. O. Smith gave the invocation. It had been announced that two short plays would be presented by the Religious Drama Class, under the direction of Sister Eunice Winn Smith. The first play, "Simon's wife's mother," written by Lydia M. Glover, was given by the following cast of characters: Nellie Mae Kramer, Julia Koehler West, Emma Jean Etzenhouser, Glen Fairbanks, Jesse West, Mamie Wilson, Jennie Lund, Vera Fairbanks. Solos were sung between scenes by Mrs. Alice Mae Burgess.

"Lydia, seller of purple," by Helen Wilcox was portrayed by the following: Mabel Higgins, Ruby Wilcox, Bertha Constance, Juanita Echternacht. Miss Dorothy Koehler played the organ between the scenes.

In both of these efforts the lighting effects, the pretty costumes, and the stage setting aided the students in interpreting their assigned parts. Some of those taking part were outstanding in their portrayal of the attitudes and emotions of biblical characters which in casual reading receive no more than a passing thought. Those who were privileged to see these two plays agree that Sister Smith's class has done well to be able to present so able a reproduction of bits of history after only one semester of study.

Nurses' Commencement Exercises

Tuesday night, May 24, the Stone Church was the scene of the commencement exercises for six girls of the church who have completed the nurses' training course offered by the Independence Sanitarium and are ready to start out in their chosen profession.

Those who participated in the program marched in and took places in the choir loft while Brother Robert Miller played the organ. On the west side of the loft about twenty undergraduates in white aprons and caps ranged themselves behind Miss Gertrude Copeland, superintendent of the Sanitarium, Miss Elizabeth Paxton, assistant superintendent, and Miss Myrtle Grapes. On the west side sat President F. M. Smith, Elder Cyril E. Wight, the speaker, and Pastor C. Ed. Miller. At the front of the rostrum were the graduates, and on the front row of the main center section were about a dozen alumnae of the institution. A pretty color scheme of red and white was carried out with flowers.

Voicing a simple, earnest prayer, Pastor Miller opened the meeting. There was a beautiful organ number by Robert Miller, and a vocal solo, "The Angelus," by Lieurance, was sung by Elbert Dempsey.

Elder Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, set forth in clear, concise language, the theme of his thought. He conclusively asserted that in order to be a success the individual must give more than mere learning to society; he must give a bit of his own soul. Knowledge must be interpreted with a view to the needs of the world. "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love," he quoted and then paraphrased: "And now abideth knowledge, skill, and appreciation, these three; but the greatest of these is appreciation."

Following the address, President Smith presented diplomas to these girls: Ella Peck, of Missouri; Edna Haviland, Iowa; Lola Rogers, Colorado; Gladys Heide, Iowa; Helen Douglas, Illinois. Miss Orpha Outhouse, of Missouri, a member of this class, was not present because of illness.

At this juncture three prizes were given to those proving the most efficient in certain lines and studies. For several years Doctor Charles Keown has offered first and second prizes for the two best essays on obstetrics. This year Miss Beulah Lytle received the first prize and Miss Helen Scott the second. Miss Lola Rogers received an award for ethics.

Then the long-anticipated pins bearing the initials I. S. (Independence Sanitarium) were pinned on by Miss Copeland. There was a prayer of benediction by Pastor Miller. The commencement exercises were over.

A reception was held at the nurses' home following the exercises, and the girls and their guests greatly enjoyed the short program presented.

Institute Commencement

On Friday evening, May 27, the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences presented its first class of high school graduates. This is the first class to receive diplomas in the high school department since the school has been accredited for articulation with the colleges. Members of the first graduating class are Nina Imogene Brooks, Chester Earl Constance, Lillie Ora Kelsey, Nina M. Morgan, Don Lee Alvin Pierson, Maurine Cooper Reed. Some of these graduates are married men and women who have faithfully attended the night school and now have their diplomas to show that even if one must work he can finish high school.

To begin the program Miss Gladys Goode played a march, and the faculty and class members took places on the platform in the assembly room. Bishop M. H. Siegfried gave the invocation. Two beautiful vocal solos by Sister S. A. Burgess preceded the brief commencement address by William Southern, jr., of the Independence Examiner. There was a piano solo by Ewart Ragan, and Maurine Reed presented the class gift, which was accepted by Brother F. M. McDowell, dean of the school. Brother M. A. Etzenhouser, principal of the high school department, presented the diplomas, and the program was concluded with prayer.

Following the program upstairs, the most interesting part of the evening began. The guests gathered in another room and heard the class prophecy. Then a clever reproduction of the evening's exercises amused and delighted everyone. Light refreshments were served to complete the evening.

Interesting Personals

At noon, Friday, May 27, in Graceland College chapel, at Lamoni occurred the wedding of Miss Blanche Edwards, general superintendent of the Department of Women, and Mr. George Mesley, of Lamoni, formerly of Australia. President Frederick M. Smith pronounced the ceremony. Wedding guests present from a distance were: Bishop Albert Carmichael, Apostle F. Henry Edwards and family, President

F. M. McDowell, and Miss Vera Redfield, of Independence; Brother and Sister F. B. Blair, of Kansas City; Brother and Sister B. M. Anderson, of Omaha, Nebraska.

Following the ceremony a reception for the family and friends was held at the home of N. Ray Carmichael; then the wedded couple departed to spend the week-end at Nauvoo, where they visited spots of historic interest.

At the Campus

Saturday, May 28, and Monday, Decoration Day, the Campus drew large crowds of those seeking amusement in the out-of-doors. Beginning at two o'clock both days, there were ball games. On Saturday, teams representing the Wilson Lumber Company and the Standard Oil were victorious over the Bar Gar Team of the Stone Church and the Independence Merchants' Team. On Monday afternoon two games were played, the first being between Independence Merchants and Englewood, the merchants winning at a score of 6 to 4; the second, between the Sixth Ward Democrats, of Kansas City, and the Crick Lumber Company, the former winning 8 to 1. The first moving picture of the season was shown on the outdoor screen Saturday night. It was "The quarterback," and in spite of the chilly air drew a large crowd. Monday evening, for the entertainment of the Decoration Day picnickers, the picture, "As no man has loved" (The man without a country) was enjoyed. Workers at the refreshment stand under the direction of Brother Mansel William, have been busy, but it has as yet been a little too cool for the best kind of business. They hope for warmer weather.

Liberty Street

At the morning service a pleasing duet, "List to the voice," was rendered by Mary Ethel Cool and Marcine Turner.

Brother George F. Bullard was the speaker and took his text from Philippians 2: "If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem others better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

From this scripture lesson, Brother Bullard drew many ideas and lessons which were well received by the congregation.

Elder J. W. Paxton spoke on present-day fulfillment of prophecies, using for the evening lesson Matthew 22: 34-40, also referring to Matthew 24. His discourse was a vivid portrayal of the infidelity upon the earth today, destruction, disaster on every hand, and the literal fulfillment of Christ's own words. Most of the world does not believe in the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. In some way the God of today is different. We of this latter-day belief, who know of the Restoration, have been schooled in the scripture, which teaches us, "I am God, I change not." Perhaps at no time in our history have the Saints had greater need of faith, prayer, and humility than at the present.

The sisters of Group 13 surprised Sister C. I. Wiggins with a dinner at the home of her daughter, Sister Pearl W. Moriarty, Friday, May 27. The occasion was Sister Wiggins's seventy-fourth birthday. About thirty were present, and the surprise was enjoyed by all.

The Independence Music Club will sponsor an evening's program at the Liberty Street Church, Tuesday, June 7. Mrs. A. L. Murphy, jr., will read "The famous Mrs. Fair." This play is the story of a mother who leaves her home and family for fame and popularity. It involves all the problems of home keeping versus a career. She returns to find her daughter doing and saying unheard-of things and her home in ruin, but is in time to retrieve what vestige of wholesome domesticity may be left.

The Independence Music Club has maintained a scholarship fund for several years with which a number of our young people have been permitted to continue their musical training who could not have done so otherwise. The Club has also purchased a Steinway piano, which has been in constant use by the students and members and Institute teachers for the past two years. They are sponsoring this reading by Mrs. Murphy for its great interest to all good and refined people, and to augment the scholarship fund—a worthy undertaking.

Enoch Hill

At the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, Elder A. K. Dillie, of Second Church Branch, preached to the Saints on Enoch Hill. His theme was "Learning to live," and he followed the text: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10:10. Contrasting the teachings of our Lord and Savior with the modern materialistic concept of life, he related many of the parables Christ told as a means of bringing home a lesson to those who followed him for the words of life.

Pastor Brewer spoke to his congregation in the evening. In review of early events in this district, he recalled his coming to this branch almost a decade ago and how he preached his first sermon here to an audience of seven souls. During these years the congregation has grown in numbers to more than three hundred. Taking up his topic of the evening, he read concerning the marriage supper, applying the parable to modern times. In a brief discussion of the signs of the times, he showed that the marriage feast of the Lamb is being prepared. The guests are being invited. Will they disregard the invitation? Shall others be invited in their places? The time is at hand, he declared, when peace shall soon be taken from the earth. The gathering will soon be called, and then the problems of Zion can be worked out. With a nucleus from which to work, our representatives may then take the gospel triumphant to the ends of the earth. Two questions left with his hearers and vital to our life as Saints were: What is our relationship to the church? and What are we going to do with it?

East Independence

On Sunday, May 22, the pastor, Brother N. Carmichael, was the speaker. His discourse was along the line of music, and he especially urged all to use the talent they have been given in the Lord's service. In the evening Brother Frank Minton gave an interesting discourse on the life of Christ and the effect his life should have upon his followers. He emphasized the need of our being about the Master's work and giving our best in his service.

The Religion from Liberty Street Branch gave the program Friday night. The entertainment consisted of readings, solos, a quartet, and a dialogue. Each number was so good that it would not be right to praise one above any other. We hope they will come again and trust that when they do there will be more of our members present.

Bishop B. J. Scott preached to us in the morning of Sunday, May 29, reading the ninety-fifth Psalm. He forcefully brought out the necessity of our showing by our actions if we are on the Lord's side. By our daily life we show the world what we believe and where we stand. Commenting upon some things which have in the past few years tried men's souls, he warned the Saints that right now there are things which are putting our faith to the test, and those who try to stop the progress of God's work must suffer loss spiritually and temporally.

In the evening Brother Amos Allen occupied the pulpit. His sermon was full of good thoughts, and these he took up from different angles of viewpoint, giving realistic illustrations. He read the marriage covenant, connecting with it the statement of the church being the Lamb's bride and admonished us to keep ourselves wholly for Christ.

All the services of the day seemed to harmonize into one great memorial service, and all were impressed of the necessity of being valiant soldiers for Christ, Saints true to our trust.

Graceland Chats

The Museum

Perhaps the most valuable collection ever presented to the Graceland Museum came this year from Sister Rachel Braddish, of South Parkersburg, West Virginia, widow of T. E. Braddish. It consists of a number of articles gathered together by Brother Braddish when visiting in the Orient. Sister Braddish was offered a considerable sum for the collection but preferred to present it to the church. Her gift is highly appreciated.

From China comes a charming little spirit lamp, hand carved from shale. The decorative design, which is carved in high relief, is beautifully done. In these lamps the Chinese burned incense on the altars of their gods. From the same place is a pair of men's slippers, the fore parts of which are solid beadwork of a very intricate pattern. A deck of playing cards, one inch by two and one half inches, and a large bamboo umbrella complete the contribution from China.

From Java are two serpent knives with poisoned blades. These are about one foot in length and are carried in sheaths of hardwood. By looking closely at the blades, one can discern serpents traced there. The skull and beak of a rhinoceros bird, commonly known as the hornbill, comes from the same place. The beak is fully a foot long and is sharply curved. The hornbill is one of the latest birds to be studied by man.

The most valuable part of the collection is its swords. A forty-inch sword of mahogany is reported to have been used by the Mohammedans in their conquest of the island of Sumatra during the 12th century. There is a superstition among the natives that if water is poured over this sword it will have the virtue of healing sore eyes. The sheaths of the other two swords, from Java, are of elephant tusks. Carved Oriental scenes inlaid with gold cover their entire surfaces. These swords are used for ceremonial purposes only.

Specimens in laced vines from the tropical jungles of Sumatra make a very interesting study in plant growth. In one case three varieties of vines have interlaced to form a perfect braid more than three feet in length. Brother Braddish is said to be the first white man to enter these jungles.

Smaller articles are a boar's tusk, the horn of a deer, a petrified oyster shell four inches in length, and a very large petrified clam.

"Traveling and Hotel Etiquette" in Friday Chapel

The chapel period Friday was spent in a very interesting and educational talk by Miss Carlile on "Traveling and hotel etiquette." She discussed in detail Pullman etiquette and etiquette in a hotel. She told us of several interesting illustrations she had experienced while in a large western hotel. In her discussion she said no one need be afraid of disclosing their inexperience, if he would think and observe. The two infallible rules for all occasions are, first, observe others; and second, be courteous. The modern etiquette adheres less strictly to codes, and a really courteous person is always welcomed. Miss Carlile's talk applies not only when traveling, but also in our social contacts here as students.

Slides of Wordsworth Are Shown

Slides illustrating Wordsworth's life and poetry were shown to the English literature classes last Tuesday noon. The birthplace of Wordsworth, the beautiful lakes and mountains surrounding it, and several places mentioned in his poems were exhibited. When Dove Cottage, the home to which Wordsworth took his bride, was shown, Marjorie Gamet read the poem, "She was a phantom of delight." The picture showing the host of golden daffodils was accompanied by the reading of Wordsworth's much-loved poem, "I wandered lonely as a cloud," by Louisa Shedd. These pictures have added to the students' appreciation of the greatest English nature poet.

A Cappella Gives Concert in Mount Ayr

The A Cappella choir gave its last public concert at the Mount Ayr Methodist church on Wednesday evening, May 4. The audience was large and appreciative.

The concert was opened by the well-known piece, "The miller's wooing." The soloists, Miss Lloyd and Mr. Anway, did exceptionally well, and by request Rae Lysinger played a piano solo and responded to an encore.

The best liked were, "The wreck of the Julia Plante," and the "Echo song," which was repeated. Other numbers were "The Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel, a Negro group, and a folk song group.

Those folks attending General Conference brought back such good news, and enlarged our vision concerning our work so that we have received new impetus and are energetically pressing forward.

We are happy indeed that Brother Cooper was not taken from us. His home was the scene of a beautiful wedding on May Day morning, when his daughter, Miss Irene, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Scribner, of Chicago, Illinois. Brother Cooper performed the ceremony. The attendants were Miss Bernice Thiehoff and Mr. Marion Cooper. The girls were beautifully gowned, the bride wearing white, the maid orchid. Nature was at her best, it being one of our most beautiful days this year, and seemed symbolic of the joy and peace which we are sure will prevail in this young couple's home, as its foundation will be the true love of God springing up in their hearts and its development based upon all the teachings of the church. We wish them happiness in their life together. They departed on an evening train for their home in Chicago.

Another wedding is that of our assistant superintendent of Sunday school, Brother Richard Wren, who returned to Omaha Sunday, May 22, with his bride who was formerly Miss Bertha Wiggins, of Sioux City, Iowa, where the marriage took place on May 21. The bride's immediate family and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony. We welcome Dick and his bride.

Miss Margaret Ione Sherwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.

J. L. Russell, slipped away to Papillion, Nebraska, with Mr. James Lewis Russell on April 30, where they were quietly married, a brother of each witnessing the ceremony. They returned to Omaha to make their home here. This wedding was somewhat hastened, owing to the departure of parents to California next week, and they wishing to see the young folks carry out the desire of their hearts before leaving them.

Our young people are taking an active part this year instructing us in religious education by way of the drama, Mr. Harold Kirkpatrick being an excellent leader. He is developing talent in our young people. An Easter play, "The resurrection," and a few weeks later "The wife of Judas," filled our auditorium with an appreciative audience. This latter play, written by our general church worker, Miss Blanche Edwards, was especially fine. The defects in the lighting for the stage were corrected following the first play—and this materially helped the beautiful scenes of the second play, also the action of the play was more smooth. We think that with the talent and enthusiasm of Brother Kirkpatrick, we will be assured of the drama from now on. The Sunday school has purchased curtains for a complete stage setting. They are not quite paid for but will be soon.

Our young people are working at present on song, and will be ready to render the sacred cantata "Daniel" sometime the latter part of June, when the day will be devoted especially to music. The cantata is under the direction of Brother Roland Scott, an able leader.

One of our young artists coming rapidly to the front is Billy Hill, jr., age thirteen, whose tones and technical skill on violin are marvelous. He, with Brother Harry Greenway, our sweet singer, were heard in recital at Schmoler Mueller Auditorium, Friday evening, May 20. Billy offered several selections in three groups, which he rendered like a veteran, having completely won his audience by his first number. "The trumpeter," by Dix, as sung by Brother Greenway, was his last of two groups of songs, and left us thrilled by the music of his voice. We never grow tired of listening to his beautiful solos. This recital brought to our brothers much praise, congratulations, and flowers, the last of which eventually decorated our church for the following Sunday services.

Our sister, Mrs. W. T. Wellman, proved her courage and heroism, when on May 21 she dashed into the street with no thought of self, to guide if possible, a runaway automobile careening down a steep incline, endangering the lives of two babes seated within. She was unable to gain a footing on the swiftly moving car, owing to its momentum, but grasped the steering wheel, to which she clung until she had turned the car into the curb, succeeding in her efforts to save the stranger's babies. She was thrown by the impact and was severely though not dangerously injured. The scene which followed presented a real contrast in the impulses of human nature. The mother, vainly pursuing her runaway car, gave a look at the unconscious form of Mrs. Wellman, jumped into her car with her unharmed babies, and drove rapidly away, and has not been heard from since. Mrs. Wellman, though not having completely recovered, is now at home, after spending several days in a hospital.

The study group of our Department of Women is active under a good leader, Mrs. Anna Kinney. We are studying "A woman's stewardship," meeting twice a month for lesson study. The entire department is active and we are proud of our grade "A."

We are spick and span with our interior decorating, finished with ivory and buff-colored walls and ceilings and a neat design stenciled in brown. Our lawn is beautiful, which is enhanced by the shrubbery which flanks the door. Our January letter contained item of the removal of B. M. Anderson and family to Lincoln, Nebraska. Andersons did not go, owing to a change in the business plans of Brother Anderson. Their address is the same, 5020 California Street. We are hoping for a complete recovery in the near future for Sister Audentia, who recently was very ill with an acute and dangerous infection of the throat. She is not quite herself yet and we miss her in her wonted places.

Our Sunday school, in charge of Mrs. Rose Adams, put on an impressive, appealing program on Mothers' Day, which began with prayer by Brother W. T. Wellman, followed with sermonet by Brother Cooper. Several beautiful solos and other offerings made up the program. There were 270 present, the eighty mothers each receiving their choice of either a red or white carnation from the hands of small girls, near the close of the service.

The banquet held in Brandies' Restaurant May 21, for the members of the priesthood of six districts who met in ministerial conference in Council Bluffs on Sunday, May 22, was attended by 71 members. Omaha profited by the visiting brethren being gathered so close to our city on Sunday, as our pulpit was occupied by Bishop Mark Siegfried in the morning, who gave us excellent instruction, and by Apostle F. Henry Edwards in the evening.

Our own priesthood are giving us some fine sermons and carrying on their work daily among us. They are meeting at regular intervals and have tentative plans for missionary work in the city.

We had a surprise on Rose Adams, our Sunday school superintendent, last Sunday. She had arranged for Brother Wellman to talk to us for a few minutes at the close of the lesson study. Imagine her surprise on announcing him as speaker and admonishing us to give close attention as she was sure we would hear something good, he began the little program, he had secretly arranged, of "Paying honor to our Sunday school superintendent." Surprise was the first emotion she registered, quickly followed by bewilderment and then resignation. However, she appreciated the words of confidence and praise, also the gift which was presented to her.

Duluth, Minnesota

Corner Sixtieth Avenue West and Bristol Street

May 25.—As we take up our pen to write this letter, our minds drift back to the organization of this branch on March 6, 1921, then holding meetings in Elder Samuel Sloan's hotel dining room at 31 South Fifty-third Avenue, West. Then we moved to 320-22 North Central Avenue in a hall over a department store, but now we are located at 302-4 North Sixtieth Avenue West, in a church building purchased by the members of the branch. Though part of it is mortgaged, it is a home to the Saints. Such men as Elders Leonard Houghton, William Sparling, J. E. Wildermuth, W. E. Shakespeare, C. A. Kress, C. B. Freeman, and others have helped us. While the work has not been done in a day, it has been ever going forward; not always in numbers, but it has shown progress in the lives of its members. Of course as the church is in similitude to a net cast into the sea which gathers all manner of fishes, the same is true in branches. Some run well for a time, and then their ardor gradually grows cold until they leave their first love, many drifting back to ways of the world. Some drift for only a time, until an awakening comes to them; others forget their covenant made at the water's edge. But as we look back and see the condition of our lives and what the gospel has done for those who are trying to live their religion, the progress made in Duluth has been wonderful, though the numbers may be few in comparison to population of our city. We have been able to a great extent to command the respect of others.

Much advertising has been done. Our church services are announced each week in two of the leading newspapers, with the church name properly placed in the city directory and also in the booklet entitled, "This week in Duluth," printed during the tourist season, and handed to our visitors. We have the four volumes of church history and the three standard books and Zion's Ensign in the Duluth Public Library. Our aim is to move forward with the help of God, regardless of the work of the adversary, to the goal of perfection, Zion the pure in heart. We desire to be fully converted, that the light and truth of the gospel may radiate from us to others. May God grant to us awakening from slumber and give us more zeal, that as we are warned we may warn others, for God's judgments are being poured out upon all nations.

Sacramental service on May 1 was in charge of Elder George W. Day, member of the district presidency. Pastor P. G. Schnuckle, being the speaker in the evening, read the lesson found in 1 Corinthians 15. His theme was "Resurrection."

On May 4 Brother J. P. Fetting, of Port Huron, Michigan, chief engineer of the steamer J. C. Morse which plies on the Great Lakes, met with us, assisting in our prayer service, bearing a strong testimony to the gospel. A week later, the 11th, another brother, second mate on the steamer, James McNoughton, met with us in prayer service. He brought with him some of his shipmates, Brother Earl Innes, Brother Hugh Ross, Elmer Innes, Elton Brabant, and Arthur Spencer.

On May 8, Mothers' Day, Elder Samuel Case, assistant pastor, spoke in the morning at 11 o'clock, reading Proverbs 31:10-31, showing the great work true mothers have accomplished with God for their helper.

The evening hour was devoted to a Mothers' Day program which consisted of a mixed program, each participant doing his part as a tribute to mother. There were songs by the congregation; duets, piano solos, choruses, recitations, solos; and prayers were offered as a tribute to the one which was designated as a helpmate to man for furthering the work of God and carrying out the plan of salvation.

Sister Marie White has been on the sick list considerable of late. We miss her presence at services and pray that God will watch over her and help all others who are on the bed of affliction.

We notice in the Barnum news of the Duluth paper that our sister, Opal Carlson, was married in Kansas City, and that her sister, Ada, journeyed down to the wedding. May happiness be theirs on the sea of matrimony, and may God direct their course through life.

Brother P. G. Schnuckle, Brother Samuel Case, and Brother W. C. Stauty motored to Two Harbors in Brother Case's Studebaker May 18, and met with the band of Saints residing there in a home prayer meeting. While there were only eleven in attendance, seven prayers and eight testimonies were offered in humility and meekness, expressing God's goodness to them and their desire to serve and bring others to God. Such prayer services are priceless, for they are profitable, strengthening, and bring God's Spirit to guide and inspire the Saints to greater service.

Elder Robert Gunlock, just back from General Conference, occupied at eleven o'clock and again at eight on May 22, bringing to us true manna from the storehouse of God. This was strengthening to us, showing the need of a revaluation of our work and what it means to us. In the evening he took John 1:14 for a text: "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth."

For the aid of traveling Saints and friends, we will say our place of worship is located at 302 Sixtieth Avenue, West, or corner of Sixtieth Avenue, West, and Bristol Street, one block north of Grand Avenue street car line. Any Gary New Duluth, number 9 on front, or Morgan Park, number 14 on front, or Fairmount Park, number 71 on front, going west on Grand Avenue, will leave you within one block of the church at Sixtieth Avenue, West. Coming in on Number 1 Highway, either drive down on Sixtieth when coming to avenue or down Fifty-ninth Avenue, West, to Bristol Street, going one block west to church. An invitation is extended to all to come and worship with us in the city where rail and water meet, and where you can enjoy cool evenings, the finest of drinking water, and a willing audience to listen to the preaching of the word by God's able ministers. Here you may hear their prayers and testimonies, which strengthen the Saints. Pastor P. G. Schnuckle's address is 213 North Sixty-first Avenue, West. Assistant Pastor Samuel Case, 306 North Sixtieth Avenue, West, one door north of church. Publicity Agent W. C. Stauty, 403 Seventy-seventh Avenue, West.

Marriages

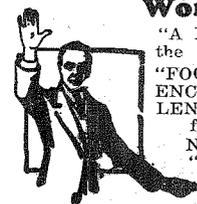

MATTES-PETERSON.—Sister Thelma I. Mattes, daughter of Brother and Sister Alfred Mattes, residing near Farragut, Iowa, and Mr. Melvin W. FAIRBANKS.—Rachael Alpherdine Fairbanks was born June 13, 1854, in Hamilton County, Indiana. She passed from this life April 25, 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Henderson, in Chicago, Illinois. She was baptized July 24, 1869, by Elijah Banta, at Sandwich, Illinois. On January 21, 1875, she was married to Perley Fairbanks, and to this union were born six sons and three daughters. Her husband, one son, and one daughter preceded her in death. There remain two daughters: Mrs. W. R. Henderson of Chicago, Illinois, Mrs. W. S. Trowbridge, of Oak Park, Illinois; and five sons: George A. and Lloyd J., of Chicago, Illinois, Frank T., J. Glen, and P. Guy, of Independence, Missouri; also one sister, twenty-two grandchildren, a number of other relatives, and a host of friends. Sister Fairbanks was a kind and devoted mother; she was loved and respected by all who knew her. She was strong in the faith of the latter-day work and was willing to do what her hands found to do for the work. She was laid at rest in Sandwich, Illinois. Sermon by W. A. McDowell.

Work of the Twelve

An Important Church Centennial

We are entering upon a period of important church centennials. The church should take notice of them and observe them with appropriate programs. The one most spoken of thus far is the hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church. "Forward to 1930" has become a sort of slogan. April 6, 1930, will be an important mile post in our history, and great plans are in course of formulation for the celebration, which will occur during the General Conference of that date. The restoration of the priesthood occurred May 15, 1829, and should be commemorated. This September comes the centennial of the recovery of the Book of Mormon plates from the Hill Cumorah.

The plates were first seen by Joseph Smith September 22, 1823, following the remarkable vision given to him in his home the preceding evening. Following the instruction of the angel, he visited the hill on the date mentioned and there beheld the plates. He was commanded to revisit the hill each year, and did so, being met each time by the angel and receiving further and detailed instructions regarding the coming forth of the book, the setting up of the church, and the way in which it should be administered. We may have overlooked the importance of this preliminary instruction.

At last, on September 22, 1827, he received the plates from the hands of the angel with a most solemn charge as to their safety. To commemorate that important event, districts and stakes may well meet this coming September in some convenient central place at the week-end nearest the date given, and celebrate the anniversary with an appropriate program. We trust that suggestive programs will appear a little later in the HERALD that will be helpful to those planning such gatherings. Branches not so situated that they can take part in the larger gatherings just suggested should plan to observe the centennial with suitable meetings and programs.

E. A. S.

The Presidency has suggested to the members of the Quorum of Twelve the advisability of making special effort this conference year to hold meetings of the members of the priesthood for study purposes, to stimulate among them (the priesthood) a desire to know more about the problems of the church and our methods of solving them. Two chief purposes are in view in this endeavor to develop and organize deeper study of our church literature: one is to broaden our common knowledge and beliefs; and the other is to create, encourage, and deepen the zeal to teach Saints and nonmembers.

It is fully expected that one outgrowth of this work will be eventually an increase of our missionary activity by stimulating the local priesthood, or those not under general appointment, to greater efforts in missionary endeavor.

I have believed, and do yet, that one of the secrets of the pronounced success of the early missionary efforts of the ministry of the church was the unity of presentation due to common comprehension of the ideals and philosophy of the church, developed by the frequency and thoroughness with which the ministry gathered for study purposes and to hear the lectures by the leaders of the church. Away from this ideal condition we drifted until in not a few instances our ministers, and some of them under appointment, too, seem to have been largely concerned with presenting their own personal views and discussing differences. This is wrong, and has borne results that we can well do without. The remedy lies in heeding the admonition, oft repeated, to study together and teach one another concerning the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

Our ideals and objectives when viewed in the large, are so attractive, so stimulating, that we can ill afford to lose sight of them in the dust raised by friction over incidentals and minor details. And yet how prone we have been to wrangle and contend while there were many waiting to hear our message and be told of the wonderful philosophy, religious in its dynamic, which can not but bring better conditions if we can but put it into practical operation and application. And we can.

To this end the Twelve are working. And it is to be hoped that the local officers, district and branch, will heartily and fraternally cooperate with the brothers of the Twelve in their efforts to organize the priesthood for closer study of our program. I can not but feel that it is laying the foundation for larger and more thorough missionary work, a missionary work which will include whole branches and even districts in its activities, which will unite our people in vigorous and prolonged efforts which will not only allay local contentions and trouble, but will surely lead us onward and upward to Zion.

This endeavor on the part of the Twelve, in addition to their usual activities, lays a heavier burden upon them. Let us help them bear it.

Much of our internal trouble and friction has arisen from inadequacy of conversion of members. Into our own church have thus been brought diversified and unconnected teachings out of place in our midst. To escape the deleterious effect we must unify our presentation, our teaching, and our methods. This is wisdom.

Shepherdless Flocks and Flockless Shepherds

I have often wondered if all peoples "move" as much as do Latter Day Saints. In many places there are remnants of branch organizations not functioning because of being inadequately officered, the officers having moved away. There are other places where groups of Saints have settled (moved), or where "itinerant" missionaries have baptized members and moved on without having had branch organization. We might mention other combinations of happenings which have resulted in leaving groups of Saints and even branches without the care of "shepherds."

In other places we have an overplus of ordained men, and mayhaps even instances where there are elders and no Saints. In an endeavor to solve the problem presented by these conditions, a survey is being made of the places needing the care of ministers, and of the men available for such work. It is hoped that we can then stimulate some "moving" which will be directed by the needs of the church work.

On this line we shall be glad to hear from Saints where "shepherds of the flock" are needed, and from those who know where qualified "shepherds" who are without flocks are located.

And here the thought presses into attention, When will the time come when all "moves" made by Latter Day Saints, especially the changing of domiciles, and more particularly from one town to another, will be influenced solely by the effects upon the affairs of the church? And the answer presses: The time is here when we should heed the admonition so frequently given of the Lord; for the gathering of God's people is taking place, and all our moves, all our energies, all our purposes should be bent in the direction of Zion and her cause.

EVE'S COMPLAINT

(Translated from the Adamic.)

When a woman has a husband,
Then she has a cross to bear;
When she wants him he is gone—
When she don't he's always there.

"I notice," said Deacon Goodentart, "that the little car generally makes the most noise."

First Elder (in General Conference dining room): "I am fond of fish. It is great brain food."

Second Elder: "I judge you must have eaten a minnow—some years ago."

Fellowship is a divine jewel in a very human setting. Because some men find a flaw in the setting, they throw the jewel away.

Receipt for theysay soup: Take one small fact. Peel it and take the heart out. Add one pound of imagination, two pounds of bad memory, one ounce of ill will, vinegar to taste. Strain through the first convenient set of ear drums.

"May we perform our tasks courageously, Lord, and be not faithless soldiers frightened from the post of duty."—Prayer by J. M. Terry.

The hardest thing to do—nothing.

"Easy money" is sometimes hard money.

A man one day found a gold piece in the dirt by the roadside. Always after that he kept his eyes on the dirt by the wayside, hoping to find more gold. The piece he found cost him more than the money he worked for. Men make a little "easy money" by dishonest and crooked methods—it seems clear gain. But soon the habit is formed to keep their eyes on such fields. They miss a lot, like the man who kept his eyes on the ground hoping to find another gold piece, and never lifted them to heaven.

Graceland Closes Successful Year

The Thirty-first Annual Commencement Graduates Fifty-five Students

The annual home-coming planned at the close of each school year brought to its graduating exercises this year a large number of alumni and friends of Graceland College.

In the Liberal Arts Department, 29 students were graduated, 20 of whom are eligible for state teachers' certificates. This is the largest class that has ever been graduated from the Liberal Arts Department.

The number of students graduated in the various departments of college work are as follows: Liberal Arts, 29; Teachers, 10; Engineers, 2; Diploma in voice, 1; Home economics, 6; Public school music, 5; Religious education (one year), 2.

At the Honors Chapel June 1, seven students were given gold seal awards in recognition of outstanding scholastic, literary, music, and public service work.

Lambda Delta Sigma, honorary scholarship society of Graceland College, received 14 students into its regular membership, which implies that for two successive years their grades in scholarship met exacting demands.

Nineteen members were received as associate members, which implies they are probationary prospects, their first year grades having been satisfactory.

The Crescent Club, whose members are chosen by popular vote from among all the women of the school, by reason of some outstanding qualification through which they have made a distinct contribution to the life of the college, added eight new members to its enrollment.

This year 11 students took honors in the various divisions of the department of forensics.

The commencement program was given June 1 in the Brick Church. President Briggs introduced President F. M. McDowell, who gave the commencement address entitled "The triumphing ideal."

President McDowell's address was well organized, clear in analysis, logical in its reasoning, and inspirational in its effect. It will doubtless be printed in full at a later date.

Institute of Methods in Religious Education

Beginning Saturday morning enrollment was begun for those arriving on every train to attend the institute. By train and car the new arrivals reached Lamoni, and the registrar was kept busy attending to details of enrollment, selection of classes, and assignment of quarters.

Lamoni at this time looks its best, and no one can visit Graceland College and its beautiful campus and breathe its pure atmosphere without receiving the inspirational urge and the Graceland spirit which somehow seems inseparably connected with the institutions, its surroundings, and its people.

Saturday was a day of good-byes. Many students were leaving for distant homes, separating many of the close friendships formed during college days, each, however, pledging himself to return as often as possible on the annual commencement day when, each year, Graceland sends its students back into the world, back to their homes, back to their church to give out and make worth while in actual practice the truths they have received.

Saturday night the Coliseum was crowded to its capacity when the College Players gave the time-honored Shakespearean classic, "Hamlet." The play was well presented and well received. The work of the players showed the effect of consistent study and training.

Excellent support was given the principal by Miss Catherine Skinner, of Council Bluffs, playing the part of Ophelia.

The part of Polonius was well played by Byron Jennings, whose interpretation of the part added life and color.

Sunday Exercises on the College Campus

The day began at 9.30, with a demonstration of the Junior Sunday School in action. A large number witnessed an hour of participation by the younger children, and many watched with care the methods employed.

At 11 o'clock a communion service was held in the gymnasium assembly room at the college. An excellent spirit prevailed, and practically all who participated were from the number of visitors from out of town.

At 2.30 in the afternoon in the gymnasium assembly room the dedicatory service was held when Zimmermann Hall, as the gymnasium is known, was formally dedicated to its purpose and turned over to the Board of Trustees of Graceland College by the officers of the church.

President George N. Briggs, of Graceland College, introduced W. A. Hopkins, who presided. Presentation of the building to the Board of Trustees was made. Responses came as follows: On behalf of the church donors, Bishop J. A. Becker; on behalf of the young people, President F. M. McDowell; acceptance, Bishop A. Carmichael, chairman of the Board of Trustees, following which Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley offered the dedicatory prayer. Miss Doris Gieselman sang, "How beautiful upon the mountain." The dedicatory address was by President F. M. Smith, the first graduating class of Graceland College.

President Smith said that there were two outstanding things he had done for Graceland College that meant more to him than anything else: First, he had voted to keep the college open at a time in its early history when many thought it should be closed. Second, he had prevailed upon George N. Briggs to accept the presidency of the college, and under his administration of approximately fifteen years the college has made distinct progress, developed its resources, and secured accredited recognition, all of which enables it to make a worthwhile gift to society at large, to the people in its immediate vicinity, and to the people of the church which founded it.

President Smith said:

This is one of the great days of Graceland College. We are here today to dedicate one building, a gymnasium, an assembly hall needed for many years, and to break ground for another building, a girls' dormitory, which has also been greatly needed for a number of years.

It is to be regretted that there is no one here to represent one of the families in our church that has always been a loyal supporter of Graceland College, but there is before us a telegram from our good friends, the Zimmermann family, for whom this building is most appropriately named, but after all it is quite in keeping with the quiet and unostentatious way through which these good friends of the college have always maintained their interest.

Lacking at the beginning a unified building program, later developments and growth of the college have emphasized the need of such, and the building which we dedicate today and the one for which we break ground today, will be units in a well-organized building program which looks ahead into the future years of Graceland College instead of meeting the expediency of today's emergency.

Ground Breaking for Girls' Dormitory

Across the road north from the old college building is the location for the new dormitory, to be considerably larger than the dimensions of Briggs Hall.

An enthusiastic crowd assembled at the site of the new building, which was presided over by George W. Blair, mayor of Lamoni. In a short address he spoke for the town of Lamoni and its appreciation of what Graceland College had meant to it and called for responses. President F. M. Smith spoke on behalf of the church and at the close of his remarks took the new spade which was decorated with the Graceland colors and lifted the first spade full of earth that marked the beginning of the building.

Following, Miss Edith Woods, president of the Student Council, responded on behalf of the student body. Then Miss Madeline Clark, of Maine, on behalf of the women students; and speaking in the interests of the citizens of Lamoni and of its business interests, Mr. A. W. Fleet made an appropriate response.

The day had brought to Lamoni one of its former students, Franklin Jones, now a practicing lawyer in Washington, and taking advantage of the situation Mayor Blair called Mr. Jones to the front and insisted that he speak. The response made by Mr. Jones indicated his deep-seated loyalty to the college when he said, "Not a single day passes but what in some way or other I think of Graceland College, the wonderful work it is doing, and what I can do as one of its alumni to help it forward."

Institute of Methods Opened Sunday Night at the Brick Church

The institute this year is fortunate in securing Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of the Chicago Training School, as one of its lecturers and faculty members.

Her first appearance in Lamoni easily won the hearts of the people there.

Taking for her subject "Youth and truth," she gave an address which was masterful in its conception of essentials, forceful and convincing from the clearness of its logical conclusions, and sympathetic in appreciation of the intimate personal problems of life. Her plea was for a sympathetic understanding of youth by those who assume to be leaders of youth.

Hardly moving a muscle during the forty minutes of her address, the audience gave undivided attention as with the guidance of the speaker they discovered the essential things that are dominant in the life of youth today. Her plea for a personal God that youth could take and keep through all the years in place of a god who must be continually re-fashioned, reshaped, and finally uprooted and discarded, brought many to a realization of one of the prime elements that is causing confusion among young folk today.

Institute Enrollment

At 10 o'clock Monday morning, June 6, the enrollment was 160, more than twice the number that were enrolled last year and representing 14 States. It will be a week of intense study, yet not the kind of hard work that becomes a burden, for the personnel of the faculty appreciate that they have a class of students who must make an adjustment from the cares of business and home life and take up student life for a week.

From past experience they are planning appropriate breaks in this week of hard work which will afford the needed relaxation, thus adding to the powers of reception on the part of the students.

Why Graceland College Is Distinctive

Graceland College was founded for a special purpose, and unless it fulfills that purpose there is no justification for its existence.

That purpose was to prepare young men and young women for useful service in the church. Not all of Graceland's graduates enter what is recognized as general church work, but the fact that many of them have done so and in some of the most important places the church has for avenues of service, is ample evidence that Graceland has in part met her responsibility.

By devoting the time to special needs of young men and young women who may become active in the interests of the church, it is possible to offset any apparent advantage a student may gain by going to any of the more widely known schools which are under the handicap of not fully appreciating or evaluating our special problems and needs, and necessarily can not and do not pay attention to their solution.

The faculty is well trained in the very best universities of the land and is equipped to accomplish the purpose of the college, as is evidenced by our official accrediting by the Dunn and Bradstreet educational standardizing agencies of the United States. The facilities in the way of equipment, library, and laboratory are standard, and fully meet all requirements laid down by those officials.

Young people in attendance at Graceland who will become active in different lines of church work may form there an acquaintance with large numbers of the leaders in all departments of church work, thus enabling them to have personal contact with the men who are developing the policies and activities of the church.

If the young people gain by attending Graceland, it is quite clear that the church suffers loss if they do not. Experience shows that a percentage of the college men who go elsewhere for their college work before they are thoroughly grounded in the things which they can secure at the church college during the early years of their course are lost, some of them permanently, to the activities of the church. Experience on the other hand shows that a large percentage of those who take all the work they can possibly secure at Graceland are so thoroughly impregnated with the spirit and genius of the church that they may with safety continue their work in higher institutions of learning.

"If our young people go elsewhere, the church is too often drained of many of her most able sons. In almost every case an equally good or even better career would be found within the folds of the church.

Will not Graceland be serving the interests of the church by inducing her young people to train thoroughly for home service?

A young person who has the courage it takes to invest four years—usually the only capital one has at that age—in getting a college education, in the belief that he is making a good investment, is entitled to the greatest admiration.

Given the right kind of a boy or girl, there is no better investment to be made. The early years are not very profitable as business years. Youth is a time when one earns least with the most effort, and learns most with the least effort. This is a safe rule. When in doubt about the wisdom of further study, keep on studying. Stop when you are sure you ought to stop.

The school or the college is not the only place in which one gets an education, but it offers the easiest and most economical education, gives the beginnings of education, and the beginnings are the really hard parts.

A college course may be worth while, even if it never gives a financial profit. However, statistics gathered over a long period of time show that every day spent in school is worth from fifteen to twenty-five dollars to the student. If he remains out of college to earn less than that, he is losing money, not making it.

It is a poor fellow indeed who gets through college without having caught something of the spirit of the great writers of all ages and having gathered some inspiration from the great sciences and scientists, who has not learned to know some of the great men of all times, who has not had some profit from four years spent under high-minded teachers and fellow students of pure and valiant adventure. The college man puts in four years as part of a community, the most unselfish, high-minded, and wholesome to be found in American life.

At Graceland one finds the spirit of service, enthusiasm, and loyalty as the highest ideals, and at the same time the most practical help.

The work of the classroom is serious and well organized, and the relation of teachers and students is most cordial and helpful.

Opportunities for wholesome fellowship are found in the various student activities, church association, athletics, and literary societies.

Every student is given opportunity for expression and growth along those lines for which he is best qualified.

The life at Graceland is designed for the building of a balanced personality, strong character and intellect, and resourcefulness in action.

A spirit of thrift prevails; students are judged not by what they have, but by what they are. Simplicity characterizes the dress and the social life, which are free from the extravagances that prevail at many colleges.

If Graceland is not distinctive and does not have a distinctive mission, there is not justification for its being.

The Coming Forth of the Book of Mormon

BY S. A. BURGESS

As September 22 is the centennial of the date on which Joseph Smith received the plates of the Book of Mormon, the urim and thummim and the breastplate, a brief review of the surrounding circumstances should prove of interest to the readers of the HERALD.

Joseph Smith was born December 23, 1805, at Sharon, Vermont, but at an early age his father removed to western New York, settling in the vicinity of Palmyra and Manchester in Seneca County. The family was poor, and opportunities for schooling were limited. Western New York was not the extreme west, but still was in a primitive condition.

Here at Manchester in the spring of 1820 a revival meeting was held. As is so frequently the case, there was a joint effort of the different churches of the vicinity, and converts were divided in accordance with their preference. As sometimes happens, this caused confusion, so it is not surprising that the boy Joseph Smith was left uncertain where was the church of Christ when he found men professing to be His followers so bitterly opposing one another. In this hour he turned to his Bible, and his reading brought him to the first chapter of James, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not." He thought surely if any man lack wisdom it was he, so he retired to the woods and prayed for divine direction.

It was then, when he was a boy only a little past fourteen years of age, that he received his first wonderful vision, and was told that none of the churches were right in the sight of God. Their creeds were an abomination and some of their professors were corrupt. This caused great opposition and persecution. The boy was honestly seeking to learn the truth. It is significant that all of these churches have changed their creeds since that day, and this in material respects.

The boy was left nothing to do but wait, as he received no definite instruction at that time. He tells us as a consequence that he was guilty of lightmindedness and light speech, which caused him considerable anxiety of mind, so that on the 21st of September, 1823, when he retired to his bed he prayed very earnestly that God would manifest his will concerning him and let him know how he stood before him.

The Vision of September, 1823

As a result he received his second great vision, which can perhaps best be told in his own words:

While I was thus in the act of calling upon God I discovered a light appearing in the room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so that I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Nephi. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil, among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people. He said there was a book deposited written upon gold plates, giving an account of the former inhabitants of this continent, and the source from whence they sprang. He also said that the fullness of the everlasting gospel was contained in it, as delivered by the Savior to the ancient inhabitants. Also that there were two stones in silver bows, and these stones fastened to a breastplate constituted what is called the Urim and Thummim, deposited with the plates, and the possession and use of these stones was what constituted seers in ancient or former times, and that God had prepared them for the purpose of translating the book. After telling me these things he commenced quoting the prophecies of the Old Testament. He first quoted part of the third chapter of Malachi; and he quoted also the fourth or last chapter of the same prophecy, though with a little variation from the way it reads in our Bibles. Instead of quoting the first verse as it reads in our books, he quoted it thus: "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble, for they that cometh shall burn them saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." And again he quoted the fifth verse thus: "Behold, I will reveal unto you the priesthood by the hand of Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." He also quoted the next verse differently: "And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers; if it were not so the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming." In addition to these he quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled. He quoted also the third chapter of Acts, twenty-second and twenty-third verses, precisely as they stand in our New Testament. He said that that prophet was Christ, but the day had not yet come when "they who would not hear his voice should be cut off from among the people," but soon would come.

He also quoted the second chapter of Joel from the twenty-eighth to the last verse. He also said that this was not yet fulfilled, but was soon to be. And he further stated the fullness of the Gentiles was soon to come in. He quoted many other passages of scripture and offered many explanations which can not be mentioned here. Again he told me that when I got those plates of which he had spoken (for the time that they should be obtained was not yet fulfilled) I should not show them to any person, neither the Breastplate with the Urim and Thummim, only to those to whom I should be commanded to show them, if I did I should be destroyed. While he was conversing with me about the plates the vision was opened to my mind that I could see the place where the plates were deposited, and that so clearly and distinctly that I knew the place again when I visited it.

After this communication I saw the light in the room begin to gather immediately around the person of him who had been speaking to me, and it continued to do so until the room was again left dark except just around him, when instantly I saw as it were a conduit open right up into heaven, and he ascended up till he entirely disappeared and the room was left as it had been before this heavenly light had made its appearance.

The same vision was repeated twice that same night and continued in fact until early the next morning. Then the following day, September 22, the messenger appeared to him a fourth time and repeated the same instruction, and again warned him of the great care he must take, whenever the plates should be given him.

Ritual in Worship.—Part 3

BY THOMAS S. WILLIAMS

Latter Day Saint Ritual

Formulas fashion themselves as paths do, as beaten highways, leading towards some sacred or high object, whither men are bent. . . . Formulas begin by being full of substance. . . . I hope none of us are ignorant withal of the true significance of true formulas: that they were, and will ever be, the indispensablest furniture of our habitation in this world.—T. Carlile.

In Catholicism ceremonialism is decidedly overdone. Man's approach to God is through formal words and ritualistic performance. Thus one may be careless in his moral and ethical conduct, since divine forgiveness may be had through this type of worship. In this manner, religion and life are placed in separate compartments. Protestantism is lacking in ritual, and, as a result, fails to get its solidifying influence and truth-revealing power. Ritual has had much to do with the solidarity of the Catholic Church, but it has failed to make the most of its opportunity to teach the underlying truths of the gospel. Ritual has been used as a means to promote loyalty to the institution.

Our church, I believe, has the right amount of ritual. The Latter Day Saint weakness is found in our failure, in many instances, to recognize its worth as an aid in religious education and as a means for social solidarity. Another outstanding weakness is that emphasis is given the wrong place in the rite. God's part in the service is overdone, and man's part in the rite is given but a minor place. My criticism on these points will be offered as we take up each ritual topically.

Baptism

Baptism, as all ritual, is a power for social unity. Common participation by individual members of a group in a ceremony like baptism creates a social bond that unites the group into one universal brotherhood. This social bond is best established if the ceremony be performed in the presence of the group. The candidate should be made conscious of the fact that he is making a vow in the presence of people who have made a like covenant at an earlier date. A brief statement concerning the meaning of the rite made in the presence of the church will be effective in creating within the consciousness of both candidate and the group the realization that each have made a common covenant with God. If our position on this point be true, then a baptismal service conducted in the absence of the group deserves criticism. When possible, a baptismal font should be placed in the main auditorium of the church, where every eye of the congregation can view it.

The rite of baptism represents the basic principle of the gospel of Christ. Around it the plan of salvation is centered. It is the rock foundation upon which the religious life of the true Christian must be builded. The death of the old man and the birth of the new is fundamental and basic in real religious growth and development. Old ideals, attitudes, and purposes must die that new and higher vision of things might be had. It is the giving of life (and all of life) to bigger and better things. It is the consecration of life to God and man. Thus it is the basic principle of the gospel and the fundamental to spiritual growth. The preacher of stewardship must emphasize baptismal consecration, and while baptismal forgiveness of sin will be preached it will receive secondary consideration. The real steward must be interested in what he can give, and what he can get will remain in the background. Doctrine and Covenants 55:1 advises us that forgiveness is conditional, and the condition prescribed is a consecrated heart. Time should be taken at each baptismal service to emphasize dedication of life. The stewardship of life should be impressed then and there.

The writer recently asked a group of average Latter Day Saints to set down in writing what baptism meant to them. Out of twenty-seven answers I received one that defined the rite as a consecration of life. One other defined the ceremony as a dedication of life, but evidently considered the "washing away of sin" of first importance, because the latter preceded the former in the written definition. A large number had to rely upon a scriptural quotation for their interpretation, indicating their inability to present in their own words its meaning. A small number of the answers might cause one to conclude that the germ of the idea was present, though after careful study it is clear the concept of consecration is obscure and uncertain. These were given as follows: "To change from wrong to right." "Burying old habits and making new." "Burying old man and starting new." Six of my respondents said the rite was for the "washing away of sins." The others were: "For the fulfillment of righteousness" (1); "An act of obedience" (4); "Rite through which one enters the church" (1); "Sign one wants to live a better life" (1); "Symbol of death and resurrection of Jesus" (1); "To be born of water and of the Spirit" (1); "Beginning of new life" (2); "Plan given by Jesus" (2); "A burial with Christ" (1); "To bury worldly spirit" (1); "Immersion by one having authority" (1).

The most that can be said of the answers of our respondents is that with one exception the thought of giving, if present at all, is decidedly in the background. The idea of getting seems to be uppermost with the majority. Being as liberal as I possibly can with my group, I might say that a more or less obscure idea of consecration was given in six of my answers. With that I would compare a like number who considered the forgiveness of sin of prime importance. With the balance the thought of consecration of life is decidedly absent. While each touched upon a fact or element of the rite, yet the majority overlooked the most vital feature of the ceremony.

The successful teaching of the doctrine of stewardship must have as its students consecrated baptized candidates. The soul-satisfied one, who sees the "washing away of sin" as the biggest thing in baptism, will be poor soil in which to plant the seed of stewardship. The religion of Jesus Christ calls for courageous, heroic, cross-bearing men. If there is one place above another in the religious experience of men that they should begin their life of cross-bearing, it must be in the waters of baptism.

Sacrament of the Lord's Supper

The sacramental service offers a place for the followers of Christ to renew their vow of consecration. They here rededicate their lives to cross-bearing. Consecration upon the suffering and agony of the Savior has caused men to overlook their own sacrificial offering. While attention must be directed to the offering of our Lord, yet his sacrificial devotion to his duty must be carried over to our lives.

The oblation presents a fine opportunity to bring this lesson home to the worshiper. We recently made an effort to bring this lesson home to one of our congregations, and we were glad to note some degree of success. Just before asking for the oblation, we called the attention of the people to the sacrifice the Lord had made for us and that in the oblation there was given us an opportunity to make a sacrificial return for the offering he made for us. When the oblation was taken, the deacons placed it in the hands of the presiding officer, who then offered a prayer of consecration, dedicating the offering to the work of the Lord. He then turned to the bishop's agent and presented the offering to him. Judging from the testimonies given later, the end sought was accomplished. A better comprehension of humanity's part in religion was had.

We have said that group exclusiveness is a fundamental weakness of ritualistic worship. This is more clearly demonstrated in the communion service than any other. The thought that I am participating in an act from which the people of the world are barred, will, unless wisely directed, cause me to feel that I am a special favorite of the Almighty. This tendency may well be overcome by calling attention to the fact that the sacrifice of Christ was a whole world offering and that the responsibility of the church is the salvation of every creature. A whole world obligation. This will tend to eliminate group exclusiveness. I am not criticizing close communion, because I believe it is necessary to church unity. The consecration and renewed dedication of life for the salvation of the whole world should be the lesson brought home to the follower of Christ in the baptismal and Lord's supper services if the doctrine of stewardship is fully practiced.

Laying on of Hands

Each Latter Day Saint participates in, and a greater number witness, the ceremonial laying on of hands than any other church ritual. Consequently it is most potent as an agent for the promotion of group solidarity and is at the same time of great importance as a means for teaching religious truths.

We have already suggested that all ritualistic worship is a powerful factor in producing "a consciousness of kind" in the minds of each participant. This the laying on of hands will do, and more; it will when administered by one of recognized authority bring into the religious experience of each individual a consciousness of God-nearness. The consciousness of the divine presence is vital in the religious experience of men.

This ceremony as a rite in confirming people into the church following baptism, is an act sealing, establishing, and ratifying the covenant made in baptism. It renders completeness to the religious vow by the candidate giving renewed assurance of his determination to faithfully keep his covenant and by the divine sanction or approval coming in the form of the Holy Ghost, thus placing the Lord's seal of approval upon the covenant.

Those who are called to officiate in the ordinance should keep in mind and suggest in the prayer of confirmation the full meaning of the baptismal and confirmational ceremonies. The opportunity to unite in spirit and purpose the life of the candidate to that of the group, and to present and vividly impress the hidden truths of the gospel should not be passed by unused. If this is done, it will help to prepare the lives of the Saints as habitations for the Holy Ghost.

In the blessing of children many times, I believe emphasis is given the wrong place. In this ceremony, dedication of the little one's life to God should be the central thought. The petition for divine favor should be that God would assist him to make his life worthy of consecration. The blessing and favor of heaven will follow the consecrated life. If parents consecrate the lives of their children, they will do all in their power to direct them to develop their God-given talent to the limit of their possibilities and then give them to the service of mankind. It will mean more than a mere promise.

Ritual in Worship

In this rite, too, the officiating minister should take advantage of the opportunity to direct attention to the responsibility of parenthood and, as well, the responsibility of the whole church toward the life of the child. All should be done that can be done to enhance the sacredness and solemnity of the occasion. In too many instances this ceremony is performed too hurriedly and without previous preparation on the part of both minister and people.

This ceremony for administration to the sick is one of vast importance to the church, not only as a means to petition God for restoration of health, but as well an instrument through which the spiritual level of the church might be elevated. The church would be greatly benefited, both physically and spiritually, if this rite were entered with greater forethought, prayer, and meditation. Not long since a certain sister asked for administration in a prayer meeting. Three other people who had evidently given the matter no previous thought also asked for the rite. Little good physically or spiritually can come from such an approach. I recently assisted in administering to a lady who had, some weeks previous, advised me of her desire for the rite and who also informed me that she intended to make preparation for it and requested that I do the same. If God would see fit to deny the physical blessing sought, great spiritual good will without doubt result to this sister. On another occasion, with another elder I had to wait until a number of well-meaning people in the sick room were through telling funny stories. Our church people have plenty of room to elevate the ritual of administration.

Of ordinations and patriarchal blessings, I have little criticism to offer. The prayers of ordination that I have been permitted to hear have been more to the point than any other ceremonial prayer that I have been privileged to hear. It is surely too bad that the patriarch can come but once into the individual life with a ceremonial blessing. Thirteen years ago I received my patriarchal blessing. While today it gives me some comfort, yet another given today would be of greater spiritual help. One patriarchal blessing is not enough.

Marriage

Marriage in the Catholic Church is held far more sacred than in any other Christian group. While the authoritative attitude of the church has had much to do with this, yet the fact that marriage is considered one of the sacraments has been a great factor in keeping down divorce in that church. Our own church has much to learn of the Catholic Church in regard to the marriage ceremony. There is too much divorce in our church. It is my opinion that this evil would in a large measure be eliminated from the church if all of our weddings took place in the church and not in the home of the pastor or even at the home of the bride. More sacredness and solemnity should surround the wedding ceremony.

Conclusion

We have already said that our outstanding weakness as a church is in our failure to discern the worth of ritual in religious worship. If Zion is redeemed and the doctrine of stewardship successfully taught and practiced, the ritual of the church will do much to accomplish the end desired. We will have to recognize the fundamentals of stewardship in the ceremony of the church. The basic principles upon which Zion shall be builded must be seen in our religious rites, and our ceremonial worship must be one of the most, if not the most, important means to present and teach those principles.

A Prayer

BY D. T. WILLIAMS

Oh Zion, with towers of splendor,
We look for thy coming today;
The shimmering light of thy triumph,
Waits ever to break on our way.

Give strength to thy people's endeavor,
O God of the kingdom to come;
Give spiritual power and vision
That all may, united, be one.

The kingdoms of earth are but ashes,
The kingdom of Christ, our concern.
O God of the heavens, unite us,
To one common purpose to turn.

Dubs Pueblo City Athens of Indians

Explorer Describes Architectural Glories of New Mexican Ruins

WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, April 26.—Pueblo Bonito, four-story apartment house settlement in New Mexico, was the Athens of the Southwest one thousand years ago. The artistry and skill of the Indians who made this masterpiece of primitive civil engineering were described today before the National Academy of Sciences by Neil M. Judd, curator of American archaeology at the United States Museum, who has directed excavations at Pueblo Bonito during the last six years.

The excavations, which have been conducted under the auspices of the National Geographic Society, have revealed that this Indian city went through four major periods of building activity, and two distinct groups of similar yet unrelated Indians were responsible for the prodigious construction projects, Mr. Judd said.

"Those of the first group," he said, "dwelt for several generations in their moon-shaped pueblo before the second group arrived, presumably by invitation, and introduced superior architectural and cultural practices that quickly won for Pueblo Bonito preeminence among all contemporaneous villages north of Mexico. All archæological evidence shows these two Indian peoples to have been entirely distinct and independent from each other. And yet they dwelt side by side and lived the same sort of life in the same terraced town."

The First Group Conservatives

The first residents of the community were conservatives and built small low-ceilinged rooms with rough sandstone slabs, adding on rooms as their families increased without any plans for regularity or design. The second group which came into the community set to work to build orderly dwellings, with the skill of master craftsmen, though they had no metal tools or beasts of burden. The newcomers first erected dwellings of hand-dressed stone, Mr. Judd explained, and filled the spaces between the stones with small chips or spalls. Later, however, they evolved a more artistic masonry by laying the large dressed blocks in horizontal bands. And, finally, they found that laminate sandstone with uniform, natural cleavage, required much less reshaping, and yet made more secure, equally attractive walls than did the softer, irregular blocks, which must be squared with stone hammers before placement.

While the late comers developed three outstanding types of masonry, the old original settlers continued to build in the crude and more hazardous fashion of piling up stone, bequeathed to them by their ancestors.

Pueblo Bonito had nearly eight hundred rooms and sheltered between 1,200 and 1,500 individuals, Mr. Judd states. Archæological evidence points to its abandonment more than one thousand years ago.

The last season's work at the prehistoric pueblo centered chiefly on the architecture of the structure. Mr. Judd expects to return to Pueblo Bonito within a few weeks, in order to complete his reports of the project.

A Gentleman

The most inclusive duty one owes to society and himself is to be a gentleman. Gentleman means noble man.

To be well born is an advantage not to be despised, but one's source is not the important factor. Personal worth is the criterion of this select group, as testified by acts. Lincoln was a noble man, a gentleman. His coat of arms will ever be an inspiration.

A gentleman labors with ceaseless vigilance to promptly. What he engages to do, he performs.

One can be neat in dress without becoming a fop. His personal appearance is a prime consideration to a gentleman; he appreciates the sensibilities of those whose vision he necessarily obstructs. A man can wear a necktie, brush his hair, shave daily, press his trousers, present a well-kept set of teeth, shine his shoes, can even wear spats, and still be democratic, be withal a friend of the farmer, even though he is not one himself.

A gentleman labors with ceaseless vigilance to offend no man. He knows the mutualities of living. To him the confidence of another is inviolate. He tenaciously holds to his own views but seeks to inflict them on no one. Moral courage does not imply importunity. Consideration for others is his rule of life. His tact prevents friction, making pleasant the existence of his environment.

Industry he loves; in hard work he revels.

A gentleman considers the possession of these attributes to be of prime importance—good manners, refined tastes, delicacy of feeling, respectability of a vigorous type, speech which, though it be gentle, is not timorous.

A gentleman is kind, charitable.

There is comfort in his modest presence, as he radiates his charm over the circle of which he is part of the area—not of the circumference.

A gentleman can express himself without profanity; if words fail, self-control maintains silence.

This type is raised above his fellows by his education—not his schooling—by his habits, and by the social esteem which these attributes occasion and foster.

Vulgarity to a gentleman is nauseous—he separates himself from its presence. His mildness invites approach—even temper puts to flight irritation and irascibility. He is well read, but not a human parrot. The weak he succors; the oppressive he restrains.

In physique he carries himself as being proud of his humanity; it is not too much trouble for him to stand and walk erect.

A friend of history, he accepts the conventions of society as the proof of the lessons of the life of the race and is the first to adopt the good new, the last to abandon the tried and true old. He plays the game according to the rules, depreciating the martinet.

He endeavors constantly to better his appreciative faculties, being satisfied only with the best in life, striving to leave life more edified for his having lived it.

Mutual happiness is a gentleman's ideal.

"His piercing eyes, erect, appear to view Superior worlds, and look all nature through."

A gentleman is an invaluable asset to his connections, enhancing by the reflection of his own qualities the regard in which these connections are held, shedding the lustre of his personality upon them, making for them steadfast friends, an endless chain of repeat producers.—American Mutual.

Tells What Moon Is Made Of

What the moon is made of, favorite mystery ever since the days when it was supposed to be made of green cheese, is more nearly being answered than ever before. The studies of Doctor F. E. Wright, of the geophysical laboratory of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, which he described today, indicate that the surface of the moon consists of such rock as pumice and granite, with no basalt. And as basalt is almost invariably associated with volcanic activity as far as we know, this is rather a jolt to the theory that the moon was once the scene of vast volcanic activity, producing the craters that are such a familiar feature of its surface.

Doctor Wright is a member of a joint committee of astronomers, geologists, and geophysicists of the Carnegie Institution of Washington that is investigating the moon.

NEWS AND LETTERS

A Visit to Caldwell, Davies, and Ray Counties

By S. A. Burgess

It is doubtless well to remind ourselves from time to time of the past history of the church, even though it includes some tragic aspects.

We have long desired to visit the early settlements of the church north of the Missouri River. April 30 we took advantage of an opportunity to go with Elder A. M. Chase to visit Mrs. Chase's sister, Mrs. J. T. Ford, at Hamilton, Caldwell County, Missouri. This offered a splendid opportunity to note the general situation in Ray County and to locate DeWitt in Carroll County, and note its position in reference to Caldwell County.

Going north we did not stop in Richmond, but passed through that city and Kingston without pause.

We reached Hamilton the forenoon of April 30. Immediately after lunch Elders A. M. Chase, J. T. Ford, Mrs. Burgess, and myself set out to visit Gallatin, as it was the county seat of Davies County and was the place of the beginning of serious trouble north of the Missouri River. At an election in the fall of 1838, an attempt was made to prevent the Latter Day Saints from voting. At this time it is of historical interest to recall that voting was done, not in the local precincts, but at the county seat. This sometimes made it inconvenient for those at a distance, but it also meant an unusual crowd at that place on election day and created conditions which more easily tended to riot.

We can well remember as late as 1888 the rowdy crowd gathered around the polling places in Saint Louis, Missouri, and how easy it would have been to start a fight. Men approaching the place even then were threatened, though they were no longer voting at one place, but at the various precincts in each ward. But the Australian secret ballot was yet to come.

Adam-on-di-Ahman is in Davies County. Gallatin was the county seat and the only possible voting place. These facts made Gallatin and its surroundings a place of interest to us. We did not stay there long, however, but followed a main trail north and soon reached Grand River and Wabash Crossing, at which point we turned and followed the railroad for a short distance.

Space forbids that we try to describe the exact route followed, as it was one of many twists and turns and followed at times each point of the compass in turn. The road in the main was not good, and often quite poor, but at last we reached our destination in a narrow valley between two hills, Adam-on-di-Ahman and Tower Hill. Ascending the first of these two hills, we noted the grove in which the stake was reported to have been organized. We were able to recognize it from a photo taken by Heman C. Smith twelve years ago.

We could see Wight's Crossing in the distance and the long, level plain between the hill and the bend of the river. As to the hill, Brother Chase remarked they might have organized a stake there, but it would be hard to drive one there, for both these hills were quite rocky. A great deal of broken rock was lying around in Adam-on-di-Ahman, which might have been part of the foundations of the houses.

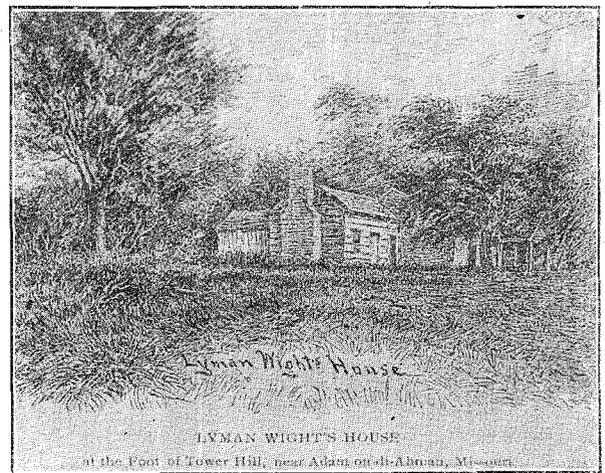

We then proceeded to Tower Hill. On a ledge about one half the way up, there is still standing Lyman Wight's house. It shows some deterioration in the past twelve years, but is still substantial and may stand for many years unless it is definitely torn down. When we remember that there were at least two hundred families established in homes at that place and forty more living in wagons, preparing to erect permanent homes; and when we remember that of all of the buildings at Far West, only this one is standing; in fact, that of all the habitations and buildings erected by members of the church in the thirties in these counties, this one building, the former home of Lyman Wight, is the only one that remains standing, it becomes a place of great interest.

When we remember also that under its roof Joseph Smith, jr., and other leading men of the church in those days were often cared for, it seems too bad that this building should be allowed to be used only as a cattle stable. It has been used as such now for many years, until the yard around is thick with barnyard accumulation, and this is also true of the lower floor of the building. Still it is not yet beyond possibility that it could be repaired and restored. The purchase of a small parcel of land would hardly be a great expenditure, and after the place was restored it could easily be beautified by planting the grounds with shrubbery.

The great logs remain. It evidently was built of virgin timber. The logs were fitted together and fastened with wooden pins six to eight inches in length. It appears improbable that any metal nails were used in its construction. Holes were bored with an auger and great wooden pins shaped to hold the large logs.

It is because of this construction it has endured the neglect and even abuse of the years since. It would seem that most of the original chinking between the logs is still remaining, though some of it is broken and has loosened and fallen out.

Lyman Wight's House Near Old Far West

From that place there is a splendid view of the hill across the narrow valley, and also the farm in the bottom land, reaching to Grand River.

Mrs. Inez Davis informs us that her grandmother as a girl stood in the door of that house with a pail ready to go to the spring for water, when she saw the mob crossing the river and ran to warn her mother and others of the family.

Passing up the hill, we came to the spot where there had once been an erection of stones referred to by Joseph Smith as a Nephite altar. It was for this reason that it was called Tower Hill.

Joseph Smith states that this erection was sixteen feet long and nine or ten feet wide, having its extent north and south. It was at each end two and one half feet above the surface of the ground, and the center was four to five feet high. For some mysterious reason it was afterwards called in the neighborhood Adam's grave, perhaps because of the manner of burial at this time, when an arched or flat stone was placed over the grave. It would seem, indeed, as though some one had taken this story seriously and dug into the supposed grave. Instead of an erection there is now a rounded hole, and at one end some one has placed some stones, and one stone standing erect, thus giving it the appearance of a small headstone to bear out the fictitious story of Adam's grave. How the story originated is not known, for it was not so considered by the church members at the time of their residence there.

It is certainly a place of marked interest and gives us a much clearer idea of conditions existing in 1838 and a better idea of that part of our church history.

The trip there and back from Hamilton occupied some five hours. On the spot we read the history of the place, including the song that was sung at that time of Adam-ondi-Ahman, and we read the story that they considered it the place where Adam would gather his people—or where he had gathered his early chosen saints. It made the experience one of great interest to all of us.

We had also taken a list of the holdings of members of the church, especially in Ray and Davies Counties, and noted that Joseph Smith held title to two hundred and eighty acres in Ray, Caldwell, and Davies Counties. Hyrum Smith held two hundred and forty acres. Lyman Wight had over one hundred and sixty acres. Bishop Partridge three hundred and sixty; while W. W. Phelps held nine hundred and sixty and John Whitmer twelve hundred acres. In fact, Caldwell County was settled very largely by members of the church, and many settled in the neighboring counties of Davies, Ray, and Carroll.

Sunday morning we started in good time for Far West, but had a little car trouble. We found the roads from the main highway south of Far West unusually bad. Three times it was necessary to move the car out of the heavy ruts and carry stones, lift, and push in order to get through at all. This made us unfortunately late for the sacramental service in the little church just across from the site of the temple lot at Far West. In spite of the lateness, we were permitted to partake and share the communion feast with those present, and then to our great surprise we were called upon to occupy the remaining time in an extemporaneous talk.

It seemed indeed a privilege to stand upon that ground where the early church had once worshiped and sought to establish an outpost of Zion. Here they had established a central meeting place and attempted to build a temple. Now not one rock stands upon another to indicate where one house of that little city had stood. The city in those days had been laid out on a somewhat generous plan. It was planned to cover four sections of ground, but there is nothing to mark its site at the present time.

After service we were glad to meet the Saints in that place and then attempted to locate a few of the historical spots, such as the site of the home of Joseph Smith. We went across the road and walked around the temple lot. We noted here that one of the corner stones appeared to have been moved, seven feet at least, for carefully surveying by foot, we found another corner stone slightly under the dirt.

There was but little to see at this point, but it was something to note the gently rolling character of the land, and how suitable a site it was for the building of a temple, on an eminence as usual, and also to note the beautiful character of the surrounding land.

We had planned to visit Haun's Mill, though we understood very clearly that nothing was left standing there, but there were one or two still living who could point out the site of the blacksmith shop, well, mill, and of course the creek, although its banks are hardly the same earth behind which some of the women and children stayed to escape massacre.

Our reason for not making the trip was because of the distance off the main roads, and the condition of the roads. We crossed the creek and passed within a few miles of the place and were able to visualize considerably the site and its surroundings.

Returning south, every mile was of new interest, for we were passing through the scenes where the people of God had abided.

At Richmond we met Elder J. A. Gillen, of the Twelve, and John A. Gardner and wife, of the Publicity Department, and a little later President McDowell and family. We here visited the old cemetery where the Utah Church has erected a large square monument to the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon. As one enters, the name is seen of Oliver Cowdery; on the remaining sides south and west are the names Martin Harris and David Whitmer, and on the east

Joseph Smith. The testimony of the Book of Mormon is here engraved in stone.

We searched over the graves, which are quite neglected, and found the stone of Jacob Whitmer and that of his daughter, and the graves of other Saints who had died around the fifties. We did not locate the grave of Oliver Cowdery or that of David Whitmer, but we note from other reports that David Whitmer was buried in the new cemetery west of Richmond. A later trip will no doubt locate the exact spot.

We were particularly interested in viewing the monument by the courthouse erected to General A. W. Doniphan. He stands high both as a lawyer and citizen.

The time allotted seemed short for such a trip. We plan to go to Liberty soon. These two days have given us a very much better idea of the situation of the people of the church in 1838, and therefore of the history of the Saints in North-western Missouri.

Stewardship Day at Lees Summit, Missouri

On March 27 the Lees Summit Group of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints voted to take the stewardship pledge and comply with the requirements of the church law together. In consummation of this resolution, a committee consisting of E. F. Brace, G. J. Harding, and C. W. Childers arranged a program, which was carried out at the Lees Summit church on May 29, 1927.

The first meeting of Stewardship Day was a prayer service at 8 a. m., in charge of F. A. McWethy, of the Holden Stake presidency, and C. V. Hopkins, one of the seven trustees of the Holden Development Trust Association. Near the close of this service, the inventories, about sixty in number, were presented by G. J. Harding, presiding elder at Lees Summit, to Bishop J. A. Koehler, of Holden Stake, and the bishop's acceptance was of congratulatory nature.

Sunday school at 9.45 was in charge of C. F. Scarcliff, the stake superintendent, and local officers. The eleven o'clock hour was devoted to preaching service; and as President Frederick M. Smith was the speaker, Brother Harding reversed the usual order of presenting the speaker to the congregation and introduced the Lees Summit Group to the president of the church, as a congregation which is one hundred per cent strong in support of the church program.

In his sermon Brother Smith dealt generally with the stewardship hopes and ideals of the church of which he is the head, and laid down the rule that we must know the ills from which the world suffers and which will be obviated by application of the doctrine of stewardships. Before we can remedy those ills, we must know what they are; in short, we must know the shape things are in before we can reshape or reform them. He also used as an illustration the subterfuge of some men of wealth who say that the acquisition of wealth is their "stewardship," and thus justify themselves in selfish uses of that wealth, contrasting with that the obligation all true Christians should espouse: "All that I am or ever hope to be, and all that I have or ever expect to have, I consecrate to God and the benefit of mankind." He suggested that while relief of the flood victims was laudable, in the last analysis it took a dire calamity to awaken most people to their responsibilities in the brotherhood of man, and ended with the question: "Can it (the practical carrying out of stewardships) be done?"

At noon a basket lunch was provided on the church lawn, where all regaled themselves with more or less apparent satisfaction. A couple of not insignificant old soldiers were apprehended in the act of going back to the base of supplies for "seconds" or even "thirds" or more. And, judging from their knowledge of mess line etiquette and tactics, there is reason to believe that some of the visiting officials have seen military service.

During the noon intermission, Brother Orlando Nace and his Walnut Park Orchestra, of Independence, arrived in their commodious bus and were hailed with delight, for they have been at Lees Summit before. The orchestra played some much-appreciated numbers before the two o'clock service, and Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker. He answered in part President Smith's question of the morning service, "Can it (the practical carrying out of stewardships) be done?" Also he devoted his discourse particularly to the necessity of proper stewardship in the activities of a redeemed soul, quoting the forceful passage from Doctrine and Covenants 101:2: "Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment."

At 4 p. m. an excellent program was given by the young people, in charge of Stake Religio Superintendent E. A. Curtis. Both before and during this program the Walnut Park Orchestra rendered several numbers, to the real enjoyment of all present. At 6.45 the regular Religio service was had, and at eight the sermon was by Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael.

Brother Carmichael depicted in sharp contrast the prevailing worldly theory of wealth and that of our church, showing that economists of the world give Man and Land as the joint foundation of wealth, while the true foundation consists, first, of God; secondly, of Christ; thirdly, of the Melchisedec priesthood; and fourthly, of Man and Land.

The church was beautifully decorated for Stewardship Day with flags and bunting in deference to Memorial Day; and with lovely potted plants, furnished for the occasion through the kindness and compliments of the Langsford Greenhouses of Lees Summit. Many visitors were present from Holden and other places in Holden Stake, also from Independence. Altogether the day was thoroughly enjoyed and will be long remembered by the Saints of Lees Summit.

Northeastern Kansas District Conference

FANNING, KANSAS, May 21, 22.—At ten o'clock Saturday morning was held the prayer service, the first meeting of the conference, with the proverbial six present at the beginning. Saints continued to arrive, and earnest prayers were offered for divine direction in the deliberations of the conference. Some interesting testimonies were borne, and the thought was suggested, "How much we believe the work is seen by our neighbor in what we do."

The preaching was done by Apostle E. J. Gleazer, Evangelist Samuel Twombly, and Missionary C. E. Harpe. Saturday morning Elder Twombly chose as his theme, "The assistance of the Gentiles in building up the waste places of Zion in and around Fanning." Are we as busily engaged in the spiritual things of the Lord as we should be considering the work being done by our colaborers, the Gentiles?

Apostle E. J. Gleazer preached three soul-refreshing sermons from a spiritual, educational, and a visionary viewpoint on the work of the church. His themes were, "Marvelous work and a wonder"; "The ensign; what is it and when is it to be set up?" and, "The extension of the kingdom of God." "Few have actually sensed the meaning of a marvelous work and a wonder. Religion is not theology. The forces that caused the downfall of Rome are in force today. Modern civilization is on the decline, and the kingdom of God is growing. There is a difference in time of church organization and setting up the ensign. Church must be organized before the ensign can be set up. God to recover the remnant of his people. Incidents are compelling Saints to think of the gathering. Place of ensign; the land shadowing with wings. The time for the setting up of the ensign is now. The gospel manifest in our lives is the ensign. We can only be seen as compared with goodness. Not, When is the church going to do it? but, When am I? The individual who loses faith in God is a menace. The Spirit of God builds up; does not tear down."

General talk to the Sunday school was given by W. F.

Bolinger. "How big is God? Just as big as our conception of him. God is a loving father. At one time there were two hundred eighty-two commandments given; at another time forty-two. Moses gave ten; Jesus gave two, and Latter Day Saint revelation one—Love God and man. Ideas change and will change before we die. I believe in God. Why do you believe in him? What does he mean to you? If a circle could speak it would say he is circular; a triangle would say he is triangular. Jesus was crucified, not because of what he taught about God, but what he taught about the wicked; the Good Samaritan and the wicked priest."

The talk to the Department of Women was by the district superintendent of the Department of Women on loyalty. She stressed the need of loyalty; loyalty to ourselves, our family, home, and church, by our contribution of energy, time, money, and prayer. The meeting was held in the same room in the Hopkins home where the Fanning local was previously organized. At the same time, 1.30 Sunday afternoon, a priesthood meeting was held at the church.

Missionary C. E. Harpe delivered a fine missionary sermon on Sunday evening. Some moving pictures were shown by Roy Tilden, of Glacier National Park, Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, and from the "Texas trail to the table," which were very interesting. And especially would we, who were fortunate enough to be present, like to show the bounty or fat of the land to our readers as was exhibited on this festal board in the Hopkins yard across the street from the church, when at noon those baskets were relieved of their contents of chicken cooked just right, dressing, noodles, salads of all kinds seasoned just so, pies and cakes baked perfectly, which those women know how to do. There was plenty and enough to spare; more than our just needs and wants.

The church has just been redecorated and seemed to silently extend a welcome within its walls. They have purchased a picture machine and have made provision for the pictures in that they have a space on the wall back of the pulpit papered with white paper, which saves time and trouble of a screen.

It was with earnestness of soul for the fine spirit that prevailed throughout the conference that "With thanks unfeigned" was sung as the closing number.

MRS. H. C. PITSEMBERGER, District Secretary.

Bellaire, Ohio

The first three months of the year, we were handicapped because of bad roads and the Saints being so far from church, but are now having Sunday school regularly, with a small attendance. We hope the weather will soon be such that others of our number will be permitted to "fall in line."

On the first Sunday in May, Brother H. M. Curtis and family met with us, assisting with the sacramental service. Brother Curtis also spoke at eleven o'clock.

We are glad to see the faces of Brother and Sister L. M. Edmunds and family in our midst again. Sister Nettie Edmunds is missed from services; she is caring for her aged mother.

We were made sad on February 13 to learn of the death of Elder S. J. Harris, who has been a faithful worker in the branch for nearly twenty years. He was baptized by F. M. Slover in the early work at this place and was ordained a priest and afterward an elder. In this office he served faithfully for years. He had a cheering word and sunny smile for all who came his way. Brother E. L. Ulrich preached the funeral sermon, and his body was laid to rest in the Bellaire Cemetery. He leaves a loving companion, two daughters, four sons, an aged mother, and many friends to mourn. The floral offerings were beautiful.

There is some sickness in the branch at present.

Sister Martha Harris, who has passed the ninetyeth milestone in life, is in poor health at this writing.

The Work at Lorain, Ohio

We are isolated from the church, our nearest meeting place being Lorain, Ohio, located about twenty-seven miles west of Cleveland. An unorganized body of forty-eight Saints meet there for Sunday services in a rented hall, as they have no meeting place of their own.

The priesthood is represented among them by one priest, W. F. Lathwell, whose efforts are supplemented by those of an elder at least once a month, presiding over the sacramental meeting. Brother George Lindsay, of Cleveland, has been serving in this capacity for the past seven months.

A talented group of young people form the bulk of the membership there, and a flourishing Sunday school and Religio are, we believe, preparing them for future usefulness in the work of the church.

On May 22 Patriarch A. E. Stone, of Kirtland, Ohio, had charge of the services, teaching the Senior Bible class and preaching morning and evening. During the Sunday school hour he dwelt particularly on the law of reconciliation, emphasizing the fact that as the observance of the sacrament is an expression of unity and fellowship among brethren, one can not partake of it worthily without first readjusting himself to anyone with whom he may be at variance, according to the law of the gospel, as set forth in Matthew 5: 25, 26, Inspired Version, as follows: "Therefore if ye shall come unto me, or shall desire to come unto me, or, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave thou thy gift before the altar, and first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." He pointed out that condemnation, instead of blessing, will result from the partaking of the emblems, if this law is ignored.

Some of the main thoughts to be gleaned from the morning sermon, and the ideas which they, in turn, suggested to the writer, are as follows:

God is subject to his own law. If he violated it, he would cease to be God, suggesting the idea that his laws are not arbitrarily imposed upon us, but are the result of his knowledge of what is best calculated to promote our well-being, both physically and spiritually.

Man should regard himself as an artist, and with the mallet in one hand and the chisel in the other he should strive to fashion himself, as the material, according to the pattern given us by Jesus Christ.

The character of the branch is determined by the homes of its members. The branch is a workshop in which its members are prepared for entrance into the larger group in Zion, its president being the mechanic. They must see that there are no poor among them and that the discordant elements of hatred, jealousy, and other anti-social tendencies are eradicated from their midst. In Zion, a people will be prepared to disseminate the genius and power of the gospel among the nations of the earth, ushering in the time when the kingdoms of this world shall have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. Thus we trace the growth of our social organization from the home to the branch, from the branch to Zion, and from Zion to an ever-widening circle of honest-hearted souls converted to our ideas.

In the magnitude of the task set before him, the President of our church is without a peer, even among the rulers of the world, for it is he who must have the insight to see, and the ability to effect, the things necessary to bring about the transformation of society into a state in which the will of God will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. The speaker alluded to his keen insight and penetration into the future, which enables him to see far ahead of his time.

Obedience is possible to all, and when we who have the law stand before God to be judged for the sins of omission or commission, a frank confession of willful disregard for his law will bring us more leniency than will excuses.

He concluded by an enumeration of some of the signs of the times which portend the coming of our Lord and Savior. The great increase in murders, robberies, and in general disregard for every law of God, of the land, and of common decency, indicates that we are living in the closing period of the world's history; and in order to escape the calamities which are coming upon the earth as the result of these things, the Saints must keep very near to God, through obedience to his laws.

In his evening sermon he endeavored to show that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation, and cited several instances from his own experience, and from that of others, in which its power had been made manifest in the healing of the sick, casting out of devils, and in putting to silence one who opposed the truth. Thus we see that no matter what other qualifications a minister for God may possess, he must be prepared to demonstrate the power of the Spirit in signs which follow the believer, in order to be a true representative of Christ.

HAZEL L. MINKLER.

WELLINGTON, OHIO, R. F. D. 2, May 26.

Minneapolis, Minnesota

One of the big features during the past month in Minneapolis was the bazaar and supper on May 19, sponsored by the Women's Department under the leadership of Sister Charles Lundeen. The meal was good, the decorations were attractive, the work offered for sale was of a high class order, and an appreciative and happy crowd gathered at the church that evening. The net proceeds from the supper and sale amounted to $51.40.

Another feature of note is the new type of evening service which was introduced three Sundays ago. After a sermon of from twenty to thirty minutes in length, opportunity for questions and contributions from the floor is offered, and the audience has the chance to take part in the service. The response has been very good, and discussions of the announced subjects have been interesting and educational. The first of the series was led by Bishop Leslie DeLapp, who spoke on "Faith." The second was by Pastor Ray Whiting, whose subject was "Repentance." Last Sunday Elder Charles Lundeen led in the discussion of "Baptism." This method has increased interest in the evening service, and this fact is reflected in the attendance.

The Sunday morning speakers during the last month have been Elders Leslie DeLapp, Ray Whiting, Carroll L. Olson, and Robert Gunlock. Brother and Sister Gunlock have decided to locate in Minneapolis, and the Saints are pleased to have them here. A surprise party in their honor is to be given after prayer meeting next Wednesday night. Everybody hopes that Sister Ruth will be happy and feel at home in Minneapolis. The Minnesota Saints also rejoice that Brother Gunlock is back as missionary in this district.

Wednesday evening prayer services have been held in the southern part of the city, as well as at the church, and have been very worth while, giving opportunity for many to attend and take part who could not otherwise do so, and thus increasing the spirituality of the branch. The meetings at the church are also very good. The young people are having special prayer services every Sunday morning at 8.30 and receiving much good from them. They provide the right way to start the Sabbath. Cottage missionary meetings are being held every week, either in the north or south part of the city. They are well supported, and a lively interest is shown. Brother Whiting has been doing most of the speaking.

Last Sunday Brother Whiting made a trip to Clitherall and had a very good meeting with the Saints.

A special feature of note in the Religio program Sunday was the memorial exercises participated in by children under the direction of Miss Alice Light. They were very well planned and executed, and credit should be given to the director and children for the creditable manner in which they performed.

Illness has been interfering with the activity of several families of Saints recently, particularly with Brother and Sister DeWayne Fisher. They were under quarantine for five weeks in April and May because June Fisher had the scarlet fever, and last week the other child, Kemman, came down with the disease. Brother Fisher is superintendent of the Sunday school, and his absence is regretted by all.

Brother and Sister Leslie Wight and family are moving to Minneapolis this month. Brother Wight's business calls him here from Lamoni, and the Minneapolis Saints are glad that it does, although their Lamoni brothers and sisters will undoubtedly regret to see them leave.

Preparations for reunion are now in full swing. It starts rather early this year, June 17, and lasts for ten days. A tentative program of daily activities has been drawn up, and efforts are being made to make the gathering one of the best that the Saints of this district have ever had. District President Ray Whiting has suggested the following theme for the reunion: "This church furnishes us God's way of serving the world."

The speakers have not been settled on definitely, but will undoubtedly include one of the apostles, probably John F. Garver, Patriarch Gunsolley, Missionary Gunlock, and others. Sister Lydia Wight has been selected to conduct classes in parentcraft. Sister Ardyce DeLapp will have charge of the junior members of the reunion and has planned many interesting things for them.

The first Friday evening has been set aside as a social gathering, as part of the young people's convention of June 17, 18. On Saturday evening the Alpha Nu Omega Society will give a play, adapted from the Book of Mormon, named "Other sheep have I."

Reservations for rooms during the reunion should be made with Brother Walter W. Tutty, 518 Morgan Avenue North, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Everybody should plan to come in order to make this a success.

Madison, Wisconsin

2119 Jackson Street

We are glad to again welcome L. G. Holloway to our district and branch. He arrived here in time to worship with us at our May sacramental service. This meeting was marked by a goodly portion of the Spirit.

Instead of the regular Book of Mormon study in the evening, a program was rendered. It consisted of readings, recitations, singing, and instrumental music. The Department of Recreation and Expression is progressing under the able leadership of Archie Root. We are glad when we see youth carrying out the work of responsible positions in our branch.

At eight o'clock we enjoyed one of Brother Holloway's good sermons, his subject being "Jesus came to redeem man." There are counterfeits in the world today as well as when Christ was here. In order not to be deceived, we must have knowledge of God, knowledge of salvation through Jesus Christ. Every plant which our Father has not planted shall be rooted up. It is necessary to prove the divinity of the work of Christ. Some of the greatest proof of the divinity of our work is the establishment of Zion and the development of human characters.

Brother and Sister Christy spent a few days in our city calling on friends. They were present on Wednesday evening, so instead of having prayer service, Brother Christy consented to preach to us. He told of some of the experiences he had in his new field last year and the wonderful blessings he had seen manifested by the power of God. He told of visiting Kirtland and Hill Cumorah and of the Spirit enjoyed while viewing these ancient landmarks. The outstanding theme of his discourse was, "We are builders together with God." Christ is the Master Builder. There are two classes of people in the world today, the builders and wreckers. The difference between them is that the wreckers begin at the top and tear down, and builders begin at the bottom and build up. Jesus built the highway through the superstition of the people and endeavored to keep that highway open. He opened it anew in 1830. He is looking for men and women who will make the effort, do the service, and help to bring about the redemption of Zion. One of the important things in constructive work is the material. The closer we get to Christ, the closer we come together. The best sermon preached is by example.

After Brother Christy's sermon, Sister Christy spoke to us briefly, which we enjoyed.

Brother Charles Clarke has again gone from us to take up his summer's work with Ringling's circus. Brother Jim Pratt, who has been out west for his health, has returned to his family. The doctors in examining him said he is an arrested case; he is able to be at work once more.

Brothers Woodstock and Carpenter have alternately occupied the pulpit on Sundays. Their sermons have given us much food for thought, such subjects as "Learning to live together," "How to partake of the divine nature," "Being doers of the word," "The law of the Lord is perfect," "God's ways higher than our ways," have been presented. Among the interesting sermons preached by the pastor was the one given on Mothers' Day, using for his text 1 Timothy 4: 14: "Neglect not the gift that is in thee." He showed that a mother's gift to us is parallel with God's gift to us. Talents which come to us through our parents are the gift of God through them to us. To polish our talents, we must study and develop them. Devoted parents may consecrate their children to the Lord, but the children themselves must choose if they will serve God. And they must receive training that will fit them for his service.

Brother Wirth took a carload of people to Beloit to the all-day meeting held there May 15. They reported a spiritual time.

The young people held a "Bunco" party at the home of Sister Walker, and an enjoyable evening was spent. Before they left for home, Sister Walker served chili-con-carne. Surly the Walkers know how to give the young people a good time.

At 1:30 p. m., May 25, Brother Woodstock united Sister Florence J. Matthews, of Ellenboro, and Virgil Tracy, in marriage at the Woodstock home.

Ministerial Conference at First Chicago Branch

On May 14 and 15 the priesthood of Northeastern Illinois were called together for a second ministerial conference this year, to receive instruction, encouragement, and spiritual food.

We were very fortunate in having Apostles J. F. Garver and F. Henry Edwards as our instructors, who at the same time made us feel that brotherly spirit, as they tried to help us understand and feel our responsibility. Brother Garver covered in his characteristic, thorough way "The meaning of priesthood," and "Study and preparation." While most of us were not acquainted with Brother Edwards before the conference, we felt we knew him well after listening to him speak on "Programming priesthood activities," "Immediate objectives of the church," and "The missionary responsibility of the priesthood." The one important thought ringing through the subjects discussed was, "Prepare and understand your duties as leaders, because your responsibilities are far greater than you realize."

The conference enjoyed the fine hospitality of the First Chicago Branch. On Saturday evening a very excellent banquet was served by the Priscilla Club, some members of the Department of Women assisting.

The only lamentable feature of the conference was its shortness. However, if all goes as expected, we of the Northeastern Illinois District will be together again in the not too distant future.

JEROME F. WILDERMUTH.

Union Branch at Clitherall

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, May 30.—The branch here is alive and living in unity, though not making much progress numerically. Sunday school is held every Sunday, with preaching and prayer meeting on alternate Sundays. The Religio sessions have been resumed, and every meeting is interesting.

May 29 was designated as rally day and several isolated ones who had not been able to attend for several months were present. District President Ray Whiting preached in the forenoon and again in the evening when there were several nonmembers present. His sermon was on "When you lengthen your ropes, strengthen your stakes," advising the young that when they extend their knowledge they should not forget to drive deeper their stakes which hold them to the gospel. His earnest, forceful testimony during the prayer meeting was strengthening and encouraging to all who were present.

Akron, Ohio

77 West Crosier Street

We feel to thank God for his many, many blessings; for his kind protection during the winter months, and for the privilege to see again the birth of another spring, when Mother Nature adorns the trees with foliage and from the earth the long slumbering flowers come "smilin' through."

A fine attendance and an unusual outpouring of the Spirit has been with our sacramental services, and on May 1, a very beautiful day, a prophecy was given, admonishing the Saints to be ever faithful, prayerful, and diligent in all things, and in times of need they should not stand in want.

Brother Gomer T. Griffiths was with us the evening of May 15 and gave an unusually impressive sermon, admonishing the Saints to observe the Word of Wisdom and in so doing receive health, strength to withstand the trials of life, and the blessing of God who gave them.

A record attendance in the history of the Akron Sunday school with 140 present, 123 on time, collection $11.28, was recorded May 21. A fine, enthusiastic spirit prevails each Sunday, due to a contest of the Reds and the Blues, the Reds being a little ahead now, Brother John Dildine being their leader and Brother Ira Kelsey leader for the Blues. The loser of this contest must supply the ice cream at the annual Sunday school picnic. Many new members have already been added to the roll, and several more will be added when they have attended three consecutive Sundays.

It was unanimously voted to send a radiogram to Brother Hanson, bearing the message "Bon voyage. Our prayers are with you. Akron Saints." We sincerely regret Brother Hanson's departure to distant shores, but anxiously await news of his progress through HERALD columns.

All departments of Akron Branch are reported actively engaged, and it is hoped the good work of all will continue.

Branch President Ernest Knight, along with several others, attended General Conference and was much impressed with the Auditorium and the beautiful churches and surroundings he was privileged to see.

Elder T. G. Neville, of Kirtland, Ohio, was with us the evening of May 1, and reviewed the vital points of General Conference, describing the progress of the Auditorium so vividly that a fine mental picture of this enormous undertaking was carried home by all who heard him.

Akron Branch commemorated the resurrection of Christ by a short program during the usual Sunday school time, followed by preaching by Brother Ernest Knight.

Through the medium of motion picture, we took a trip through and around Bethlehem, the birthplace of our Savior, on Friday, April 22, and also enjoyed another picture entitled, "As we forgive," based on Paul's letter to Philemon. About a month previous to this, a program of illustrated songs, readings, piano solo, and Hawaiian players was rendered under the auspices of the Religio.

On May 6 the Religio gave an original production program, composed entirely of original essays, poems, songs, and stories, at which time some very fine talent was discovered.

Friday evening, May 20, we enjoyed a youth program, given entirely by the young people of the branch. It consisted of recitations, readings, and two playlets by the Orioles. Following the entertainment, pie and ice cream were served in the basement. The proceeds from this will go toward promoting the new boy movement, under the head of Brother Hubert Mitchell.

The Oriole Girls, under the head of Sister Edna Rhoades, are meeting every two weeks and have added several new members. They have had one hike and have planned an ice cream social for early summer, the proceeds of which will enable the girls to attend Kirtland reunion.

Akron Branch is located at 77 West Crosier Street, and we will gladly welcome visiting Saints.

Nauvoo, Illinois

On Main Street, Close to the River

May 28.—The Saints were pleasantly surprised May 1, when they gathered at the Sunday school hour, to find Bishops Carmichael, Becker, and Siegfried present. The senior classes united and enjoyed a splendid lecture by Bishop Carmichael. Brother Siegfried was in charge of the sacramental service which followed, and Brother Carmichael, in the opening remarks, made a strong appeal that all who possibly could, give twenty-five cents a month, that this coming year be a banner year for the giving of our oblation to help our needy brethren.

In the afternoon, the entire branch assembled on the shore by the Nauvoo House and enjoyed a social time, visiting, asking questions, and seeking counsel from the bishops. In the evening, the Religio program was dispensed with, and Bishops Siegfried and Becker gave helpful talks. Bishop Carmichael occupied at the regular preaching hour which followed. All felt blessed and strengthened in having them meet with us.

The following week the engineering class of Graceland College, under the leadership of Roy Mortimore, the instructor, visited Nauvoo while on a trip to the Keokuk Dam. They camped out several days, making a search for geodes, with which this vicinity abounds, and sent back a collection to be placed among the geological specimens at the college. Their visit to Nauvoo was to be a side issue, but Brother Mortimore declared it had turned out to be the main feature and the one longest to be remembered. The boys were royally entertained at the Lewis home, with a picnic supper on Saturday evening to which the branch was invited, and a pleasant time was spent on their beautiful lawn on Sunday afternoon, when the boys entertained the young people by relating some of their college experiences. At the Religio hour, the boys willingly gave of their talents, and offered a violin solo, vocal solo, and quartet. The Laytons and Hendersons assisted in caring for the boys over night. In the group were Roy L. Goode, of Independence; Daniel Green, Carthage, Missouri; Robert McCormac, Savannah, Illinois; Bert Meyer, Holdenville, Oklahoma; W. E. Collins, Oakland, California; Frank Fry, Woodbine, Iowa; Bernard Hurshman, Independence, Missouri; and Ferren Bowman, Lenox, Iowa.

Elder William Patterson and wife were also Sunday visitors. They were on their way from the conference to their mission in Southern New England. Brother Patterson also loaned his talent to the Religio and gave an exhibition of his art in imitating birds, which was much enjoyed. He also gave an inspiring sermon during the service which followed. It was their first visit to Nauvoo, and they enjoyed visiting the historic spots.

Mothers' Day was observed with an enjoyable program at the eleven o'clock hour, in charge of Sisters Edward Grotts and T. J. Henderson. Sister J. W. Layton read "Mother love," by Alta Belle Willard, and A. L. Sanford read "Mothers of Israel," by Elbert A. Smith. These readings were interspersed with recitations and songs bearing on mother.

Miss Lewers and Gomer Snively, of Graceland College, were week-end visitors on May 13. Gomer Snively spent a happy time visiting home folks, and Miss Lewers was a guest of Irene Layton.

We are always glad to welcome visitors. The church property is located on Main Street, close to the river and tourist camp.

West Pullman, Chicago

11926 Parnell Avenue

Since our last letter to the HERALD, we have enjoyed seeing an increased interest in all departments of the branch. Our sacramental service on the first of May was a session of great enjoyment, as the Master poured out his Spirit in abundance. The session was in charge of our pastor, Brother E. O. Byrn, assisted by G. T. Richards, of Crosswell, Michigan, and Roy F. Healy. We were indeed glad to have Brother Richards with us again, as he always brings us comfort and cheer with his message.

At the evening service our pastor spoke to us, using as his text, "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

We learned at this time that two of our earnest workers had been united in marriage that morning at Council Bluffs, Iowa, when our hustling Superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Sister Irene Cooper, and our scoutmaster, Charles Scribner, jr., had decided to join their efforts for life. We extend congratulations to the young couple. Sister Scribner is the daughter of Brother and Sister John L. Cooper, former district president.

The morning of the 8th, Mothers' Day, the Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother John Wahlgren, gave a splendid program, the central thought being "mother," and all of the special songs were of her. Following this service, Brother Roy Healy gave an address on mother, using as a lesson the words penned by Solomon as found in Proverbs 31:10-31.

At the evening service our pastor again broke unto us the bread of life in no uncertain terms, when he pleaded with the members to come up higher and to forget the things in life that tend to draw us away from God and the church.

On the evening of the 10th, the Religio from Hammond put on an excellent entertainment for us, which was appreciated by all.

On the 11th Brother Robert Coats, of Detroit, Michigan, met with us and brought us a message of cheer and increased our desires to press forward in the Master's service.

A junior choir was organized during the week under the able direction of Sister Naomi West, and we expect to hear from them later.

On the morning of the 15th, while our priesthood were in attendance at the pastoral conference at the First Chicago Branch, Brother Charles Scribner spoke to us on Sunday school and scout work. The evening service was dismissed to allow members to attend the service at the Central Chicago Church and hear Apostle F. Henry Edwards in a masterful discourse.

On the morning of the 22d, Brother Healy again gave us an impressive lesson on faith, showing very clearly that we should cultivate the gift of faith or we must remain in spiritual darkness. At the evening service our Sunday school superintendent, Brother John Wahlgren, gave us an inspiring sermon on the "Duty of the Saints in the church of God," using as a lesson Matthew 10. Special musical numbers were rendered at both services, Brother Wahlgren contributing a beautiful solo at the morning service and Brother Scribner in the evening.

On the 25th of the month we met in our regular prayer service, and the Spirit of the Master was poured out in such abundance that all rejoiced, and everyone took part, making it a one hundred per cent testimony meeting. We are glad that the Lord blesses our efforts here in this place.

On the morning of the 28th, our pastor again addressed us, from John 9:28: "Thou art his disciple," leaving us food for thought. The evening service was dismissed to permit us to again join with the Central Branch in their series of meetings, and to listen to the words of the Master as explained in such a forceful manner by Brother John R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan.

Sister Scribner, the superintendent of Religio, is actively engaged in a campaign for additional members and has organized an "I'm a Booster" club, which is increasing its membership very rapidly, for the Saints and others here seem anxious to have their names appear on the roll. We look for our Religio to grow and develop under such enthusiastic leadership.

Our outlook for June from the standpoint of the branch is very encouraging. Our pastor, with his associate, Brother Healy, is visiting the Saints and encouraging them to press forward in the work. We are striving to have a one hundred per cent branch of tithe payers, with every home having its family worship at least once a day. We still keep our motto before us, "Only once a stranger." Come and worship with us.

Brush Creek Branch

Brother R. L. Fulk brought his three weeks' meeting at this place to a close Sunday night, May 22.

On Sunday, May 15, an all-day meeting and basket dinner was enjoyed by a large crowd. People from Mount Vernon, Centralia, Fairfield, and Xenia, Illinois, as well as many country people from distances were present to enjoy the day. We were very much pleased to have with us for the day the following district officers: Sister Bessie Burgess, superintendent of the Department of Women, also district librarian, from Centralia; Brother O. C. Henson, bishop's agent; Lewis D. E. Selms, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression; J. M. Henson and L. C. Moore, counselors of Brother Fulk, all of Mount Vernon, Illinois; and Sister Ruth Holman, of Xenia, district chorister.

L. C. Moore delivered the address at the eleven o'clock hour.

Immediately after dinner the crowd gathered at the creek where Brother Fulk baptized eight young people. They then returned to the church, where a splendid talk was given by Sister Burgess along the line of the work of the Department of Women. She also helped elect the Oriole and Temple Builder leaders.

The choir completed its organization by electing Doctor W. E. Phillips, president; F. L. Sawley, chorister; Flossie Clow, pianist; Eula Morris, secretary and treasurer.

A large crowd was present at the night service, where the confirmation of those baptized was held.

Brother Fulk stayed with us the following week, preaching some very spiritual and uplifting sermons. During his stay he organized and coached some volley ball teams among the young folks. These games seem to be very much enjoyed by all.

On Sunday, May 22, another all-day meeting and basket dinner was had; and although it rained, a goodly number were present.

Brother Fulk preached a wonderful sermon at eleven o'clock, and Brother Sawley addressed us at two o'clock.

About four o'clock the congregation assembled at the creek, where Brother Fulk led eleven more precious souls into the water for baptism. The confirmation took place at the evening service. After the confirmation, one of the young men (one baptized that day) was put in as Boy Scout leader.

The young people have decided to have prayer meeting every Tuesday night.

A contribution of something like seventy dollars was given Brother Fulk Sunday, for which he was very grateful. We are all hoping Brother Fulk and family will move to Brush Creek in the near future. He has had a new bungalow promised him for the summer free of charge. He left for his home at Mount Vernon, Monday.

Our new missionary, Brother J. R. Lentell, made a short call here on Sunday evening, May 15. Most of the crowd had gone home before he got here. We were sorry he could not remain with us for a time, but glad he was preaching the gospel somewhere.

We are expecting to see President Smith in our district for June conference.

EULA L. MORRIS.

JOHNSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.

Beloit, Wisconsin

May 30.—We are going forward. On Saturday night we had a special meeting in the interest of the Department of Recreation and Expression. With us we had Brother Healy, of Chicago; Brother Simpson, wife, daughter, and others, of Rockford; and Brother Harry Wasson, from Janesville. Brother Healy occupied the hour and gave us a discourse of real benefit. Many of the Saints rejoiced to have him with us. We extend to these Saints a hearty welcome to return at any time; our doors will always be open to them.

Brother E. J. Lenox, our district president, has been with us for several days and has been busy visiting and holding a few meetings. Yesterday we journeyed down to the river, and Brother Lenox baptized six. Among the candidates was Brother Martin. Sister Martin has been a member for several years, and her four daughters were baptized last summer. The Saints are happy to join with Sister Martin in the joy of having Brother Martin with us. It will mean much to the family. The other candidates were boys and girls who have been brought to the church chiefly through the Sunday school; one girl in her early teens whose parents belong to no church.

They were confirmed at the evening meeting by Brother Lenox, E. R. Williams, and W. L. Hartnell. This service was impressive, and a goodly degree of the Spirit was in attendance. All rejoiced to see these new souls coming forward to the assistance of the work.

The name of Brother Wilber Johnson was presented to the branch for ordination to the office of priest. After statements from Brother Johnson, Brother Lenox, and Brother Hartnell, the matter was favorably passed upon.

Looking forward to 1930 with more than a passing interest, we want to keep our hands on the plow.

Ministerial Conference at Providence

On Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15, the priesthood of the Southern New England District met in a series of sessions at the above place. The temporary organization was assumed by the district presidency, Doctor W. A. Sinclair, E. L. Travers, T. J. Elliott.

The permanent organization resulted as follows: presidency, the district presidency; secretary, Frank S. Dobbins; chorister, Beatrice York; organist, Susie Sinclair; ushers, local deacons; press, Frank S. Dobbins.

Minutes of May, 1926, conference were approved. The place of our next conference was left with the district officers, New London extending a cordial invitation.

Doctor W. A. Sinclair, aided by the new district projecting machine and assisted by Ralph Hardy, gave a lecture on our Auditorium and General Conference. We can already see a great field before us and could use more machines at once were they at our disposal. Let us all be boosters for this noble work of C. Ed. Miller and the Graphic Arts Bureau and bid them Godspeed all along the line.

Sunday morning at 8.15 a. m., Doctor W. A. Sinclair spoke to the priesthood, followed by a study period at 9 a. m. "Problems and duties of local officers" (deacon, teacher, and priest) were considered by W. A. Sinclair. The subject was presented in a masterly way, and the discussion following was of a high order.

At 10.30 we enjoyed a splendid and active prayer service in charge of the district presidency and Bishop M. C. Fisher. At this meeting the district indorsed the call of J. E. Megathlin to the office of elder through Doctor W. A. Sinclair, same to be ratified by the Brockton Branch.

At 2.30 p. m. occurred a song service, followed by a cornet solo by George Carter. There was a solo by Blanch Grimm. "Problems of industrial Zion" was E. L. Travers' subject, he being introduced by M. C. Fisher. Following the address John Jackson sang a solo. Have you heard our John sing? We think he must pray about that part of his service. Come and hear him sing. The above subject was one of the strongest parts of a splendid conference. A solo was sung by Beatrice York.

Truly, we have some fine and talented workers.

Preaching service at 7 p. m. was in charge of T. J. Elliott and Charles Corcroft. The sermon, "What is your mental attitude?" was delivered by F. S. Dobbins.

Fall River, Massachusetts

Clafin Street, near Pleasant Street

The May sacramental service was of a spiritual nature, and those who attended received encouragement to continue in the faith. Alma M. Coombs carried the sacrament to the sick, to enable Pastor James W. Heap to go out in the sunshine with his wife. Sister Heap is improving in health.

Mothers' Day, May 8, was pleasantly observed. In the morning there was a sermon about mother by Elder Herman A. Chelline. The thoughts of the sermon were beautiful and much enjoyed. The church was decorated with white, wild cherry blossoms and flowering plants sent by John Cross and Sons, florists. White carnations were placed on the altar in memory of Sister Susan Sheehy. At the Sunday school hour there was a concert by the children in honor of mother. This was supplemented by a sermonet by the pastor, readings by George Brindley and Gladys H. Coombs, and a solo by Alma Coombs. In the evening Elder Chelline was again the speaker.

No services were held May 15, as many desired to attend the ministerial conference at Providence, Rhode Island.

On May 24 a May basket party was held in honor of Sister Chelline. The Chelline family moved to Brockton May 25. All feel very sad at their leaving Fall River. Sister Chelline has done a good work here with the sisters. Everyone who has attended has been benefited by Elder Chelline's sermons. He also has done much good visiting in the homes. It is generally believed that he has done more visiting than any other elder who has been in our midst. It was a shock to Fall River to lose them.

Another is added to our sick list. Sister Alice Rogerson was taken to Truesdale's Hospital May 7, with appendicitis. She is still there and will be for some time yet. She is improving now, but is lonesome and anxious to get home to her family. Her services are missed at the church.

The primary department sent a beautiful May basket to Sister Myra Cockcroft.

A house social was held at Sister Sophia Brodie's home to gain money to furnish a room in the Sunday school for the kindergarten classes. The teachers are Sophia Brodie and Florence Wood. A sum of about seventeen dollars was realized, and those boosting the work will probably have another social. The attendance was good, and all had an enjoyable time.

On May 29 Pastor Heap was the speaker at Plymouth. Elder John E. Rogerson was to have gone, but because of Sister Rogerson's illness the pastor took his place.

At Fall River the speakers for this day were William Baldwin, teacher, in the morning and Alma M. Coombs, priest, in the evening. After Sunday school several families went to Onset over Memorial Day. Only about ten were present at the evening services. Some of the churches in the district were closed this day. Sister Norton, of Attleboro, called on Sister Rogerson at the hospital. Some of the Heap family, in Attleboro, called at the pastor's home on their way to Onset.

About seventy dollars was gained at the minstrel show given by the men, in April. The church was filled to capacity. Many came over from New Bedford, some from Providence and Brockton. The men did fine in their first attempt at minstrels.

The girls are now rehearsing a play to be given in the near future.

A sale of aprons and novelties with a bean supper was held recently by the Department of Women. This was not well attended, but those who came enjoyed the menu and the association together.

Two of our aged sisters were present at the Mothers' Day service. Sister Hargrave came in her own automobile, and Sister Halstead was able to come through the kindness of Edward Rogerson. Sometimes four generations of Sister Hargrave's family are present at church. Sister Halstead's children, Davis and Ruth, passed away many years ago, leaving her without companionship, but she lives close to her Lord and is ever ready to tell others of the gospel and God's loving-kindness and watchcare over her.

Sister Beatrice York and little daughter, Ruth, of Boston, came from the conference at Providence and stayed a week with her father, Brother Thomas McGuire. Others of our visitors have been Sister Ruth Sheehy Baker and son, Alpha, of Boston, who visited her father a few weeks ago.

The Saints here are always glad to welcome visitors. The church is located on Clafin Street, near Pleasant Street.

Santa Ana, California

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a farewell party in honor of Brother and Sister P. Roy Burton at the home of Brother and Sister Wilfred J. Burton. Brother Burton has been the missionary in this district for the past two years, and both he and Sister Burton will be keenly missed for their willing service here. We wish for them every success in their new field and hope it will be possible for them to return to this district at some future time.

On May Day the Book of Mormon class took about twenty May baskets, filled with flowers, jams, jellies, and candies, over to the county hospital, which were very much appreciated by the inmates there.

Mothers' Day was very fittingly observed in the Santa Ana Branch. The combined orchestras of Long Beach and Santa Ana, which under the leadership of Brother Bob Lacy have been faithfully practicing three and four times weekly, gave several selections during the morning services. We were very glad to note that the orchestra has grown since its last appearance. Sister Lola Melton sang a group of lovely songs following the Sunday school hour.

In the afternoon the Temple Builders gave a musical tea for their mothers at the home of Sister Marie Mitchell. About eighteen were present.

In the evening the Sunday school and Religio cooperated to present the pageant, "Mothers of the nations," written by Sister Olive Thurston and directed by Sister Dorothy Thurston. We appreciated very much the assistance of the choir with this pageant, and especially the vocal duets by Sister Phyllis Mitchell and Sister Garnet Sames.

Sister Leonard S. Rhodes has returned to this branch after an extended trip north. She and her two girls will be welcome additions to our services.

Ten of the Santa Ana young people were able to attend the district meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression at San Bernardino on May 22. Between the Sunday school and morning church hour a group went down to the railway station to give good wishes to Sister Lola Mitchell and Sister Marie Mitchell, who were on their way to the institute at Lamoni.

May 29 was the local church publication day, and a very excellent program was given under the direction of the local publicity agent, consisting of readings from the various church papers and a history of the Herald Publishing House. The musical numbers by Sister Audro Myers were very much appreciated.

Columbus, Ohio

Rinehard and Whittier Streets

The day was beautiful as we assembled for sacrament on the first Sunday of May, and the Spirit of the Master was present in power. The messages delivered were encouraging, and all felt greatly blessed. Visiting Saints present at this meeting were Brother and Sister W. J. Graham, of Middleport, Ohio; Sister Childers, Brother Stevens, and Brother and Sister W. E. Watson, of Dayton, Ohio.

At 7.30 Brother G. P. Myers started a series of sermons to last through the month of May on Sunday evenings. These sermons were interesting and especially instructive for those who do not belong to the church.

On Monday afternoon, the 2d of May, a group of our Department of Women ladies called on an old Polish lady at the Saint Anthony Hospital, who was one hundred years old that day. Our ladies became acquainted with her while our late Sister Mary Williams was confined in that hospital. They took ice cream and cake and had a real party for the ten old ladies who are in the same ward with the old Polish lady, the last being honor guest. Although she can not speak or understand a word of English, she did not fail to make them understand how very thankful and happy she was. She was also presented gifts of flowers, money, and a few needful things by the ladies. It was a very happy event for the old lady and filled the hearts of our sisters with joy to know they could bring happiness to a shut-in.

From the hospital the sisters went to call on our own Sister Morris, who has been confined to her home for some time with a complication of ailments. Again they spread a little lunch, and Sister Morris was very happy to be remembered as one of the shut-ins.

On May 5 the Tri Sigma Chapter of Temple Builders had as guests the mother of each member at a six o'clock dinner. The girls planned, prepared, and served the dinner without aid except from their leader. The meal was cooked at her home and served in the social room of the church, where the table beautifully decorated with rose candles and rosebuds for the mothers was set. The place cards were made by one of the girls, and little pink baskets with mints and pink favors having verses and caps were at each place. The menu was roast beef, potatoes, corn, perfection salad, home-made ice cream, and cake. Each one ate as much as possible, then humorous speeches were given by all. After the dishes, mothers and daughters played such games as "How do you like your neighbor?" etc., and riddles were told. All the mothers gave a toast to the daughters. Each one had a lovely time and agreed it was fun to all be girls together. There are eight girls in the chapter, and they meet each week for reading, studying, and discussion.

The Sunday school gave a short Mothers' Day program on May 8 which was very much appreciated. The Sunday school presented each mother a bouquet of sweet peas. At the morning service Pastor H. E. French preached a beautiful sermon and paid tribute to mothers both living and dead.

On May 12 the Department of Women met at the home of Edna Jackson, 430 North Monroe Avenue. A profitable meeting was had, and an interesting paper was read and discussed "On woman's place in the business world," by Sister Minnie Turvey.

May 15 at 10.30 G. H. Kirkendall read for a text John 5: 39: "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

Wednesday evening, May 18, our missionaries, Jacob Halb and E. L. Ulrich, met with us in prayer meeting. Sister Tessie Burman, of Shawnee, Ohio, spent the week-end with us. Other visitors were Brother and Sister O. J. Tary, of Wheeling, West Virginia, who motored to Columbus and met with us on the 29th.

Second Columbus Branch will dedicate its church June 19, and President F. M. Smith will be with us. Sermons will be preached at 10.30, 2.30, and 7.30 Sunday. The dedicatory service will probably be at 2.30 Sunday afternoon. The church is located at Rinehard and Whittier Streets. Take Whittier car; get off at Twenty-second Street; walk one square south.

The Saints of this branch are all well and rejoicing in the protection of the Lord. On the night of May 18, our city was visited by a tornado, with an electrical storm accompaniment, and when its fury was spent certain sections of the city presented a pitiable sight. Some buildings were entirely demolished, others had roofs torn off, sides blown out, corners ripped off, and were otherwise twisted and damaged; trees were uprooted, limbs snapped off; telephone and light poles were razed, the wires being converted into entanglements. Phone service was paralyzed; the lighting system and street car service in the stricken district were put out of commission. Many people were injured, many made temporarily homeless, but there has been only one casualty so far as we have been able to learn. The storm struck about 7.45, and three of our members were caught in it on the way to the church to attend the services being conducted by Brother Jasper O. Dutton. Deacon Davis was driving with his daughter in his Chevrolet, and said when the storm struck him it felt as if his car was running on air; then the motor stopped, and he steered to the side of the street to wait until conditions improved. The storm sounded like a giant locomotive roaring by at full speed. Brother Davis then proceeded to the church and found a prayer service in progress, but the lights had been extinguished, and candles had to be provided.

One brother was on the street car and got within about six blocks of the church when the power gave out. He said the rain fell first in big drops, accompanied by hailstones; then it poured down as if some one were tipping water out of a big tank on the roof of the car. He stayed on the car until the rain abated, when the conductor informed the passengers they were liable to be stalled until morning. Then he proceeded to the home of Sister Hamer, near the church, and found them all well and the meeting over. A sister also was on a street car en route to the church and had a similar experience, the car stalled, and after the storm she was taken down town by automobile and went home.

Our church building was protected; not a shingle was moved, not a pane of glass was broken. About half a block south of us, a house had its roof torn off and another its side blown out; a roof of a porch was lying in the middle of the street. Garages all around us were more or less damaged, but the Lord surely intervened for us, and none of us received any harm or suffered any loss to speak of, for which we are truly thankful to the kind Father.

Our missionary, Brother Dutton, is still holding services at the church and continuing his labors in the neighborhood; some interest is being manifested.

We are making preparations for a Children's Day program June 12, also a district Sunday school institute to be held at the church June 18 and 19, with an entertainment the night of the 17th. We hope this institute will be a success.

Remember the little church where Pratt Street crosses Chester Avenue.

Southern Indiana District

In accordance with the appointing powers of our late General Conference, I am here as a missionary. I find, as in every other field of labor, great opportunity for missionary work. I came to Indianapolis May 5 and have been busy here with a missionary effort in the branch ever since. The branch has now as its pastor, Elder J. A. Robinson, he being chosen to succeed Elder O. J. Hawn. Brother Robinson is giving a great amount of his time to the interests of the branch. The church is newly built and will seat, or would seat, two hundred, if we had the seats. At present it is seated with about seventy chairs. There is quite a debt on the church and the branch does not number over thirty-five, not all of them being very active, but we have some devoted Saints here, as good as I ever met. Elder A. W. Gage is an active man and lets no opportunity pass to advance the cause of the church. He is acting in several offices in the local church and district. Elder C. H. Fish also lives here and is active in the work and president of the district. Deacon W. H. Davis is very zealous in the duties of his office.

We immediately began house to house work with suitable tracts. Brother Robinson had never before done just this class of work, but he had favored such work being done, so I found in him a ready and willing worker. Brother Fish assisted some with the house to house work. Our aim is to get into the homes of the people by telling them we are ministers of the gospel and asking their time to hear what we have to say. Sometimes only a few minutes were used, and in other places sometimes our stay was over an hour. Some afternoons we did not make over four or six calls, but we try to make them count. Where real interest is shown we leave a bound set of the Angel Message tracts, taking the name and address with the understanding we may have a follow-up visit. We use the Busy Man's sets where less interest is manifested. In one home husband and wife were both present, and as we left, after spending over an hour, the lady remarked, "I have enjoyed every minute of your talk."

On the Sunday night of the second week, I had a dream: Brother Robinson and I were in a very large cornfield, and the corn was all shocked after being cut in bundles with a corn binder. We seemed to be there to load the corn shocks and haul them out of the field and stack it, corn and all. But just before we started the first load, I examined the corn, husking one ear, and remarked: It will never do to stack this corn; too damp. We then walked to the other side of the field and found corn dry enough to shell.

As a result of this dream, we went in a different direction from the church and found more interested people; the woman who stated she enjoyed our visit so much was on the other side of the field. We have seen some of these new acquaintances out at our services. However, we believe we have only started the stacking. It will take the continuous help of God, a long consistent effort, prayer, and wisdom from on high to finish. The Inspired Version says that Jesus so instructed his disciples to go from house to house and teach. A few manifested an unkind spirit, but as a rule this was not the case.

The recent tornado that visited the city laid waste many homes, some of them being in that portion of the field where the corn was still too damp. But I will say this: I never saw a finer cornfield than the one I saw in my dream! We have done our best to get the members to sense the responsibility resting on them; that is, getting in a proper condition of heart and mind, that the Lord can intrust the souls of men to their care. It is to my mind a responsibility not fully realized, that of the care of new members in the local branches. The best advertising we can have is for every member to live as the gospel requires. We have tried to get the Saints to be very prayerful and to set their homes in order by establishing their family altars as God has directed in all ages and especially in the time of the Restoration of the gospel. May the good Lord help the Saints while living in the world to not be of the world.

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, May 28.

J. O. DUTTON.

Home address: 418 South West 4th Street, Galva, Illinois.

Oelwein, Iowa

The month of May has been an unusually rainy one, and much like the time the writer wrote of when he said, "Some fields were watered while others were parched, and half the water ran wholly to waste." It seems as if much of the rain that fell this month was unneeded.

There has been considerable sickness among the Saints here, and that together with the bad weather has made our attendance at all meetings rather small, but there are always the faithful few who never fail to attend. There is an old saying about sugar and salt, that people would not attend if they were sugar or salt, as they might melt, but we are sure some of our most regular attendants are the salt of the earth, so great is their zeal and the effort they make to keep the gospel banner floating.

Our prayer meetings are still held, and the Holy Spirit seems very near at times, and our hearts often burn within us on listening to the earnest prayers and testimonies.

Brother and Sister Yarrington, of Cedar Rapids, visited our city week before last. He is a traveling man, and our branch is in his territory. He and his wife attended our weekly prayer meeting, held at the church, a week ago. The brother spoke most earnestly in testimony and said he wished to go on in the same path trod by his father and many other leading elders and Saints. The Yarringtons are a pleasing young couple, and we gladly welcome them, feeling it a pleasure to have them with us and to know that they are "earnest workers for the Master," and ready to "send the word along the line." Ah! we need them, all these young people, to help in the glorious work of redeeming Zion.

Our lesson in Doctrine and Covenants was section 108, which tells us how the good will be rewarded and the evil ones punished. When we think of how the Spirit is with us at times when we can not see anything, we sense what a privilege it will be to be among those who shall see the sky rent and the Savior coming back to earth with a host of angels and those who are caught up to meet him. To see and know the blessed Master will be worth all the trials and trouble we suffer here.

Brother Otho Clark, who is now on a stewardship farm in Missouri, is very much missed, for he was a faithful attendant at all meetings and was an excellent man in every office he held. He was always striving to come up higher, and every spare minute was devoted to the study of good church literature, and his sermons showed that he gave the study of the three books careful attention, and that the Holy Spirit was with him. Of such timber as this are faithful workers. Brother Otho's wife, Sister Emma Clark, was at one time church organist and a regular attendant at all church meetings. She took great interest in the meetings of the Women's Department, having a keen and active brain.

We also miss Brother E. E. Edwards, of Omaha, who was with us a year. He was quite a singer and musician and was of valuable assistance to our choir, also to the Religio where his ready musical numbers were much appreciated by all.

Sister Vesta Powers has been ill for some time, but has borne her sickness with much fortitude, having a naturally sunshiny disposition. In Bible times we know that the prophet, Elijah, left his mantle to Elisha. Vesta is the daughter of Sister Victoria McQueen, one of our older members who is noted for her sweet and uncomplaining disposition. She has been much afflicted for years and has always forgotten her own troubles in looking after others, and like the words of the old poem, so we think Sister McQueen's mantle is to fall on Vesta.

"A sweeter woman ne'er drew breath,"

Elder Claud Kress, of Waterloo, visited Pastor George McFarlane last Thursday. His visits to our branch are like angel's visits, few and far between, but we read a most interesting article written by him for the Ensign entitled, "Let us have faith." It denotes great faith on the part of the writer and an earnest desire to help in the gospel work. Our prayers are for all his efforts in any part of Zion.

We greatly miss two worthy brethren who used to visit us frequently some two or three years ago, Elders E. A. Davis and Leonard Houghton, district president and missionary. They were both excellent men in their office and were well able to carry out the Savior's command: "Feed my sheep." Brother Davis was such a philosopher, and I am always reminded when I think of his sermons of what Paul said about "a reasonable hope within us," because his sermons were always reasoned out so clearly and so concisely. He was an excellent judge of man, and his views on all subjects were clearly defined. Brother Houghton is like Nathaniel, the apostle of whom the Savior said: "In whom there is no guile." One felt instantly upon meeting him that he was the soul of honor and truth. He was ever kindly, genial, and cheerful, ready to visit the most humble cot in the city. His sermons were most earnest and carried conviction with them. Yes, we miss both these brothers, but we know some one else is gaining by their presence.

We have to thank our good deacon, Brother Ervy Waston, for good fires for all meetings and for faithful attendance at all meetings and taking active part, no matter what place he has to fill. The Lord will bless a willing worker. We also must praise the worthy mothers who get their little flocks ready for Sunday school. Sister Jessie Sims though living a long way from church has been very regular in getting her children to Sunday school. We feel that she will be blessed in her efforts. Years ago there was a mother who tried to keep her children in Sunday school. They grew up in the faith and are trying to do their part in redeeming Zion. God bless the earnest mothers! Nothing pays better in life than early training.

3522 South Flores Street

May 27.—Mothers' Day was observed in our branch with a splendid sermon by Pastor R. E. Miller, preceded by a vocal solo by Miss Mary Barber and a violin solo by Gifford Edwards. There were also several numbers given at the close of the Sunday school, appropriate for the occasion. The mothers were met at the door by Mrs. Katherine Eastham and Miss Willie Barber, who presented them with a bunch of sweet peas and a card with a few words of appreciation of "mother" inscribed thereon. The attendance was good, and everyone seemed to enjoy the service.

Brother T. J. Jett, jr., was the speaker at the evening hour, having good liberty and attendance.

Brother H. E. Winegar was the speaker last Sunday at both morning and evening services. We are glad to have Brother Winegar back in our district. He has his family with him and expects to remain in San Antonio till next General Conference.

On May 13 a program was given at our church in charge of Misses Mary Barber and Emma Jackson, for the benefit of the Mississippi flood sufferers. This netted more than twenty-one dollars.

Last evening Miss Emma Jackson presented a group of piano pupils in a recital. She was assisted by Gifford Edwards, violinist. The program was as follows: Piano duet, Lavon Jackson and Bonnie Bell Jett; piano solo, Florence Bishop; piano duet, Lavon Jackson and Neva Waite; piano solo, Bonnie Bell Jett; piano solo, Albert Holder; piano duet, Lavon Jackson and Bonnie Bell Jett; piano solo, Florence Barber; violin solos, Concert in D, Beriot; Hejoe Kati, Hubay; Waltz in A Major, Brahams-Hochstein, Gifford Edwards; piano solo, Lavon Jackson. These children, with the exception of one, have been taking lessons for only a few months, and they certainly do their teacher credit. She is giving them a good foundation on which to work, and if continued the effort will result in splendid musicians.

San Antonio Saints are looking forward with anticipation to the reunion to be held at Bandera, Texas, beginning July 15 and continuing to the 25th. We expect about a hundred members to be camped on the grounds. Let every member begin now preparing to attend. We feel that every Saint needs to be revived in this the greatest work that has ever been committed to man. Let us meet together, that we may receive strength to carry on our part of the work in the great vineyard of the Master.

Mothers' and Daughters' Banquet at Detroit, Michigan

The mothers' and daughters' banquet, which has become an important annual event in the Detroit Branch, was held May 10 in the Masonic Hall in Lathrop, as there is not seating capacity in our dining room at the church to accommodate the large number who patronized the banquet. There were young mothers and old mothers and mothers not so young and not so old; there were young daughters and old daughters and daughters just old enough, until we had to find seats for some two hundred and fifty of the fair sex at the tables, which have a "set-up" capacity for only two hundred and thirty. But they were all seated. Not one could be left out.

Many of them came early and waited patiently in the lobby and corridors; then when the dinner bell sounded they rushed in. In the rush the little ones got squeezed between the big ones, as they all tried to get through the door together—not that they have any indecorous tendencies, these ladies of ours, but it must have been the captivating and artistic decorations of the dining room that lured them forward at such peril. We could not blame them, for Harriet Bartlett, Mabel Brewster, Reva Grant, and Pearl Forbes did wonders with their delicate pink and white contribution for the occasion.

Finally the guests were seated, and the regular program began. It was in charge of Toastmistress T. S. Williams, who offered a few humorous suggestions, thus tactfully getting the guests in a receptive mental tone and otherwise very ably discharging the usual duties of this distinctive office.

The address of welcome by Mrs. W. L. Bennett, city superintendent of the Department of Women, covered the origin of the mother and daughter movement. Mrs. H. A. Koehler, district superintendent of the department, gave an address on "The ideal daughter," while a counter appeal, "The modern mother," was presented by Marjorie Rossiter.

Mrs. Henrietta Davis, city superintendent of the Department of Music, was official song leader and directed the ladies in several chorus selections in her usual capable manner.

A contingent of the orchestra, consisting of Mr. La Verne Frappier, violinist; Miss Ethel Bennett, pianist; Richard Gault, saxophone, and another musician, very efficiently furnished the soul with appropriate music for the occasion.

Other individual numbers were: Piano solos, by Mrs. McGargie, Ethel Bennett, Helen Barfield; elocutionists, Mrs. Bayington, Elizabeth Lynch, and Miss Wood; violin solo, DeLois Brown; vocal duet, Mina Townsend and May Connor; vocal solos, Harriet Bartlett and Mildred Fredricks.

Three prizes were provided: One for the oldest mother present, which was awarded to Sister Lucas, age seventy-four; one for the youngest mother present, to Sister Josephine Boyd, age twenty-one; one for the mother having the most daughters present, went to Sister Lydia Henderson, four daughters.

The banquet was the largest gathering of its kind the branch has ever had, and we are hopeful another year will see it double in proportion.

The ladies prepared the menu during the day, while the men-folks did the servicing, so the ladies could all partake in the actual banqueting. Brother B. H. Thomas was in charge of the dining room service and was assisted by a large aggregation of efficient waiters, who wore long white aprons, and, we are told, very gracefully attended the ladies.

W. L. Bennett, with another corps of capable kitchen mechanics, took care of the pots and pans end of the service, and when the last swop of the dishcloth swung around the kitchen sink, all were ready to "retire to thy bed early."

"A. LISTENERIN."

Midland District, England

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

Herewith please find a copy of my report to the Midland district conference.

Pleased to say we had a good spiritual time; less finding fault and contention than in years past. In place, were singing and rejoicing.

Brother Joseph Holmes, of 3 Devonshire Drive, Langwith Notts, was elected by a large majority Midland district president. He is a young man of ability and sound judgment, and I feel quite certain he will be able to serve well and carry the work on to a successful issue, along with the young folks selected and unanimously appointed who are qualified and capable for good service, and hope they will be encouraged in their labors.

Brother Joseph Holmes chose for his first counselor, High Priest John Schofield (a good choice), who is heart and soul in the gospel work and has confidence and great respect for the present district president.

The chorister is a promising young man, Brother E. Chapel, of Sutton-in-Ashfield. The same brother was chosen as Sunday school superintendent, with support and encouragement. I have no fear for these two departments.

Brother Franklin Schofield was chosen and elected unanimously as superintendent for Recreation and Expression Department. He is full of energy, well educated, and a good speaker. His aim in life is to create joy, peace, and happiness, and feel sure he will make a success of the position by getting around to the different branches in the district.

The Treasury and Health Departments are intrusted to Brother George Rollings, a very capable young man in both positions; passed many degrees in the latter and obtained award of merit certificate for his skill and service.

Our granddaughter, Mavis Meredith, has again been appointed as secretary, and we are proud of her for service and ability.

I am now looking forward to a good and profitable time and an advanced move in the next twelve months for the district.

Shall do all that is possible to support all those appointed for the district work.

The confidence, support, and respect shown to me during my three years as Midland district president by the majority of the Saints has been all that one could wish. Two of the branches in particular have sought my advice and counsel on certain matters and unanimously accepted my views and were pleased, and trouble was avoided.

Can see now where I might have done better. Still hope greater progress may now be made.

The Sunday meetings were all very spiritual and pleasant times.

The whole of the business session was finished very peacefully by noon on the Easter Monday.

The news of the General Conference coming to hand in the DAILY HERALD is very encouraging and brings much joy.

JOHN E. MEREDITH.

Sacramento, California

Corner Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

May 30.—Our Mothers' Day services were well attended, with flowers and music to add beauty, and two splendid addresses by our missionary and district president, Elder G. P. Levitt. The morning subject was "Mother" and the evening was "The General Conference." The latter was greatly appreciated and seemed to infuse a greater interest in all in the work. At the following Wednesday prayer service, Brother Levitt worshiped with us, and through him the gift of prophecy was given, with the spirit of approval and encouragement to the handmaidens of the branch and of sympathy and comfort to one anxious mother present. The young people were included in the exhortation to prayerfulness, and the unexpressed desires of all were acknowledged, with the promise that through continued faithfulness the Lord would not be our debtor but would send many blessings.

Our branch has inaugurated the half past eight Sunday morning hour of worship and prayer service. The meetings thus far have brought a goodly attendance and interest.

The Department of Women with Sister Geneva Beebe, superintendent, held its first bazaar uptown recently, and, with a food sale, raised over ninety-five dollars.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother James Lamprey, superintendent, recently held a lawn party at the home of Brother and Sister Ralph Ensley, in North Sacramento. Though a cool May evening, one hundred and twenty were present, and the buns, hot dogs, and home made ice cream soon disappeared, and the department treasury gained over twenty dollars.

Our branch clerk, Sister Ora Johnston, has resigned this office because of moving to Berkeley, California, and Sister Ella Dawson has taken up the work. Another one of our girls, Sister Mildred Curtis, also moved to Berkeley with her family some time ago. Both of these sisters were recent visitors here. Sister Curtis's little daughter is named Mary Helen for her great-great-grandmother, Sister Mary Helen Grant, who passed away about three years ago, knowing, however, her little namesake. Sister Grant was a member of the early church, and her picture and life's history appeared in the Journal of History of recent years.

Two babies were blessed on Mothers' Day, Brother Levitt officiating, one the little son of Mr. and Sister T. Rodseth, the other the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Healey. On the morning's program, a beautiful poem was read, written by Sister Naomi Hutchinson, in memory of her mother, Sister Christina W. Blair.

At the close of the regular choir practice last Monday evening, the chorister, Sister Birdie Clark, announced that the balance of the evening would be an informal reception for Sister Della Barker, one of the members, whose wedding to Brother George C. Price will be solemnized in the near future. After a few jolly songs, rounds, and poetry, composed for the occasion, all joined in a grand march; and then Sister Della was presented with an electric waffle iron, as a gift from the choir. Home-made ice cream and cake were enjoyed.

voted to raise $200 in the next twelve months, as a free-will offering to the general church, to assist in raising the extra sum required, as indicated by the appropriations committee. They have chosen to be among the 35,000 people of the church who are willing to give five cents each day, as suggested by Bishop J. A. Koehler in the Conference Daily of April 15, 1927. This is in addition to the $100 Christmas offering already pledged, and is not to interfere with their individual tithing nor sacrament oblation offerings. They chose the sum of $200 on the plan that 35,000 is one third of the church membership, and their group numbering thirty-three, eleven giving five cents a day would make this sum. It is to be raised by a second envelope collection in the class each Sunday, after the usual school collection. May this be an incentive to other groups, until we get on a complete stewardship basis.

A regional priesthood conference was called here for Sunday, the 29th, by District President G. P. Levitt. Fifteen members of the priesthood were visitors here. On Saturday evening, a priesthood banquet was served by the local Department of Women in a rented banquet hall, Sisters Amy Beebe and Bertha Austin in charge. With the after-dinner speeches, it was described as a feast for the body and the soul. The open prayer service at 8.30 a. m. Sunday, found eighty-eight present. The hour was a very spiritual and devotional one. Through the gift of prophecy, Brother Levitt spoke to Priest Earl Curry, of Lincoln, and missionaries Virgil Etzenhouser and Hinman Savage, of Oakland, indicating in a marvelous manner God's interest in each man's work in the church, with encouragement and counsel for each one's need. The congregation was also blessed and bidden to continue in faithfulness, with the promise of protection from the calamities coming and of future association with their Lord and Savior.

Bishop Edw. Ingham spoke at the 11.00 a. m. hour on Stewardships. At 2.30 p. m. Brother Etzenhouser read a paper on "The duties and responsibilities of a pastor." The interest was splendid, and a discussion followed, led by Pastor W. H. Dawson. Brother Levitt spoke in the evening on "The fundamentals of the church." The choir and orchestra added their part to the day's schedule.

Our Sunday school is planning a program for Children's Day, with a play, baptismal service, and basket dinner. Last Wednesday evening five were baptized by Brother Dawson, as they did not wish to wait until the above date. This included four, formerly members of the Utah Church, and one of our own young boys. Of the four, one was a lad of ten, with his mother and her sister, and their mother, bringing three generations into the fold at once. They were Leland Townley, Mrs. Dora Thompson, Mrs. Belle Moore, and Mrs. Emma Joseph. Our boy was Kenneth Honeychurch. The sisters dressed in white, and the service was very beautiful. The confirmations and prayer service following were soul-comforting.

Marion, Michigan

May 31.—Although we are few in number, the work is advancing here. We lately enjoyed the assistance of Missionary R. E. Jones, who is a great help to the young people.

Brother and Sister Davis just returned to their home in Boardman, where they will prepare for their work in the field. The Saints here miss them, for they have been the means of bringing us to a higher standard in the gospel work. Brother and Sister Davis have been here during the winter.

The Saints held a box social and entertainment last Wednesday evening. They raised almost fourteen dollars, which sum will be used to assist in building a church.

We were fortunate to have Brother and Sister Blett with us Sunday. We enjoyed his sermon, which was educational. His theme was "The stewardship of mothers."

There have been two ordinations here. Brother Charles Morrison was called to the office of deacon and Brother Murl Robison to the office of priest. So the work moves on. We hope to build it up here, for there are many faithful members of the faith at this place.
MRS. PETER PRICE.

Independence

Beginning next Sunday night, June 12, the congregations of the various districts in Independence will meet jointly at the Campus for the evening service. In keeping with the regular summer programs, special musical numbers will be furnished by musicians from the several districts. Pleasant and instructive services are being scheduled, and all are invited to come out and participate in these open-air meetings.

Stone Church

The service of the Lord's supper opened at fifteen minutes till eleven Sunday morning with the singing of a beloved hymn of the Saints, "Awake! ye saints of God, awake!" the last verse furnishing the theme for the opening remarks given by Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith:

"Awake to union and be one,
Or, saith the Lord, 'Ye are not mine';
Yea, like the Father and the son,
Let all the Saints in union join."

Brother Smith emphasized the necessity of effort before a desired result can be obtained, the unity of the Saints before Zion can be redeemed. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was in charge of the meeting, and the serving of the emblems of the sacrament was executed in dignity and order. Following the sacrament, the prayers of the Saints were asked for several who are suffering in body and mind. At this hour the congregation was reminded that June is the month in which eighty-three years ago the leaders of the church gave their lives for their communion. The communion service is unique, a meeting in which all can take part. When one prays or testifies, all may enter into the spirit of the prayer or testimony. At this meeting the few testimonies were strengthening, the songs inspired the heart, and a spirit of peace and calm reigned throughout the hour.

Summer vacations are beginning to lessen the attendance of the juniors at the Campus. But the ones who attended were made happy by the portion of the Holy Spirit present. Six prayers and twenty-nine testimonies were given in the short time allotted.

K L D S Activities

At 8.30 a. m. Sunday morning the children's program arranged by Mrs. C. A. Shoop, of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church, took the air. The musical program was presented by a junior chorus, Clement Rowe, tuba soloist; Lucile Langdon, violin soloist; Maxine Yale, vocal soloist. The story was given by Mrs. Shoop.

Bible study hour followed at 9 o'clock and was in charge of Elder Ralph W. Farrell.

The regular eleven o'clock studio service of the first Sunday of the month was heard by radio fans, and the music was given by a quartet composed of Thelma Vincent, Elizabeth Okerlind, Fred Friend, and Frank Russell. Mary Okerlind was accompanist. The sermonet was given by Elder Hyrum O. Smith.

K L D S String Trio, assisted by Herbert Fraher, baritone, gave the program at 2 p. m., and at 3, K L D S Radio Church was conducted by Mr. Zimmerman, of the International Bible Students.

Vesper music was furnished by a quartet consisting of Lilly Belle Allen, Edna Daniel, Alma Kearns, and Wingfield Lewis, assisted by Mrs. Paul M. Hanson, pianist; Clarence Erickson, bassoon soloist. Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell delivered the sermonet.

The last service of the day commenced at 9.15 and was a Latter Day Saint studio service. The Stone Church Choir sang, and there was organ music by Robert Miller, also solos by Grace Edwards, contralto, and numbers by a mixed quartet. The sermon was by Bishop J. A. Koehler.

Evening Service

At six o'clock the Religio began its last session of the season at the Stone Church. An encouraging number was present to hear the excellent program presented by the Mandolin and Guitar Club, directed by Brother Ralph G. Smith. This is the second time in the past few months that this club has presented the Religio program, and the Saints are very grateful for their effort.

"All hail the power of Jesus' name," was sung by the congregation and choir, led by Brother Paul N. Craig, preceding the evening sermon. Bishop J. A. Koehler offered prayer, and Robert Miller played a pleasing offertory. Due to the fact that this was the only choir service of the day, it was determined to present a program of pleasing variety. There were three anthems. The first, "The prayer of thanksgiving," was accompanied by Robert Miller at the organ; the second, "The twilight shadows fall," was unaccompanied. "Savior, again to thy dear name," was the third, and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind sang the contralto solo. A ladies' quartet, members of the Stone Church Choir, Miss Thelma Vincent, Mrs. Jeanette Kelley Craig, Mrs. Hazel Koehler Moler, and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind, sang a beautiful selection, "Shepherd of Israel."

President Elbert A. Smith had consented to occupy the pulpit and was introduced by Elder D. O. Cato. The scripture reading was Alma 16:219-223, the speaker choosing as the theme of his discourse, "Prayer." Christ commanded us to "Pray always." Paul taught the Saints to give thanks over all things. Brother Smith particularly emphasized the necessity of our praying over the little things as well as the big. All the time we are to be in the spiritual attitude of prayer. The old hymn says: "Prayer is the heart's sincere desire," and some of our desires may be small; but if we are sincere and make them a matter of prayer, God will answer us. Then the speaker related several incidents illustrating the truth of the statement that God will hear our prayers over apparently insignificant things. These incidents were drawn from his own experience and the experience of others, and proved to be an interesting feature of the evening. "If we have reached the stage of a people who are willing to trust God in things small and great, the redemption of Zion will not be delayed," he concluded, and closed his sermon by reading a recent poem of his own composition.

The moving picture was "The twenty-third psalm," of the Holy Land series.

Interesting Personals

Elder John F. Martin, wife and two children, of Kirtland, Ohio, arrived in Independence Monday on their way to Brother Martin's new mission field in California. They continued their journey yesterday evening. While here they were guests at the home of Sister Annie D. Vincent, 1520 West Walnut. On Monday evening a small social gathering was had in Brother Martin's honor. The guests were old friends and Kirtland acquaintances, and an enjoyable evening was spent. At the close of the evening, Bishop J. A. Becker presented him a loose-leaf notebook. Those present were President Elbert A. Smith and wife, Bishop J. A. Becker and wife, Pastor C. Ed. Miller and wife, Roy Redfield and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Logsdon, Elder D. O. Cato and wife, Sister C. A. Kress, and Miss Melva Ward, formerly of Centralia, Washington.

Miss Gladys Lucille Newton, daughter of Brother and Sister A. L. Yingling, 909 West Waldo, Independence, was married to Deal Six at 8.30 o'clock Saturday night, June 4, at the home of the bride's parents. President Frederick M. Smith pronounced the ceremony. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Wallace N. Robinson sang, "I love you truly" and "At dawning," being accompanied by Mrs. Neal O. Thomason, who also played the wedding march. A reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Six left for a honeymoon in Colorado. They will be at home after September 1, at Ford, Kansas.

Second Church

About two hundred and thirty young and old presented themselves at the church for the session of Sunday school at half past nine. A profitable session was had. The superintendency announced that Children's Day would be observed all day long on June 26. The regular session of the school would occur at 9.30 as usual. At 11 a. m. the session would be a special one, including one short address to the children of the school. A baptismal and confirmation service will be held in the afternoon, and will be well worked out with the thought in mind of making the ceremony one to be remembered by those who witness it, and especially by those who participate.

The sacramental service at eleven o'clock had a light attendance, not more than two hundred being present, but it was a splendid meeting, several humble prayers and numerous intellectual testimonies being uttered by the Saints.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller delivered his third lecture on Sunday evening, and a large congregation greeted him and listened attentively. These illustrated lectures on astronomy and science and their relationship to our religion have been profitable to the people of Second Church, who have gladly received them.

Our K L D S Ladies' Quartet accepted an invitation to visit Doctor Williamson's church, the Independence Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, on Sunday evening, and sing for that congregation. They responded with three sacred numbers of worth, which were well received by the minister and congregation. It would be hard to know how the people could have done more to make Sisters Mary Fields, Clara Curtis, Amelia Good, and Gladys Good feel that their work was enjoyed and appreciated. These sisters have gone to several of our own congregations out of town and in other parts of town, but never have they received as royal treatment as was given them Sunday evening by the Methodist people.

Brother Thomas Holdsworth, who died at Trinity Lutheran Hospital in Kansas City Friday, was brought to the Ott and Mitchell Funeral Home, and there a funeral service was held Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Elder R. J. Lambert being the speaker and Sisters Clara Curtis and Amelia Good, Brothers J. A. Dowker and E. C. Harrington furnishing the songs; Sister Hazel Smith, piano accompanist. A large assemblage attended, and a strong delegation from the Knights of Pythias showed great interest and did everything within their power to show respect to the departed one's memory. This Order conducted their regular service at Woodlawn Cemetery, where Brother Holdsworth's body was interred.

Several Second Church Saints are ill. Sister Moroni Sandage is convalescing after an operation, being at the Independence Sanitarium, and Brother Henry Moore Fields is making headway toward recovery after a bad accident which fractured his skull.

Liberty Street

Elder J. B. Barrett made the opening remarks at the sacramental service. His talk was chiefly concerning the testimony of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, which is given in Doctrine and Covenants 75. This service of the Lord's supper was inspiring and helpful to all those who attended.

Brother G. S. Trowbridge was the speaker at the evening service. His text was "Repentance," and he read Matthew 3:1-4: "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." Repentance is not only a state of being sorry for sins, but a ceasing to do evil and learning to do well; we must give evidence in our lives that we have received new light. The speaker gave the Apostle Paul as an example; after Paul found that he was wrong in his belief, he immediately changed his life and gave evidence of the new light that had come to him.

The people at Liberty Street have had the privilege of hearing Brother Trowbridge preach before, and are glad to welcome him.

On Thursday evening, June 2, an ice cream and strawberry social was given at the church. It was sponsored by the young married people's class. There was a large attendance, and young and old joined in the games that were played, enjoying themselves immensely.

Walnut Park

The forenoon service of May 29 was one of American patriotism, appropriate hymns preceding and following the sermon, this being given by an ardent student and lover of American history, Elder R. W. Farrell. The evening sermon was by President F. M. McDowell on the subject evidently nearest his heart—how to save the youth to the church. One of Brother McDowell's former schoolmates, not a member of the church, Doctor T. B. Homan from the Kansas City Teachers' College, had been present in the morning by invitation and addressed the young people during the Sunday school hour. Being well qualified for the task, he gave them a soul-searching, stimulating talk, for which they freely expressed appreciation. Later he addressed the entire school, and the benefit was evidently mutual, as he declared afterward that never in any assembly had he experienced the thrill of spiritual uplift that he had in this meeting of the Saints. He hopes to meet with us again.

Brother Orlando Nace, with the orchestra, assisted with the stewardship day exercises at Lees Summit that day, and on Monday Brother E. E. Moorman and the Walnut Park Band played in the memorial service at Woodlawn Cemetery.

On the evening of May 24 the main auditorium of the church was filled with music lovers and personal friends of Sister Margaret Gard, this being the evening of her graduating recital, she having successfully completed her work at Horner Institute-Kansas City Conservatory. The pleasing arrangement of the platform with its neat lattice work, green foliage, white peonies, and soft lighting is recalled with the sweet tones of our contralto soloist in her various groups of songs, interspersed with violin numbers and readings by assisting artists from the same school. Love and approval were shown in the presentation of several lovely bouquets, and only praise is heard of the evening's program as offered. Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, Margaret's ever helpful friend, had charge of everything, and Sister Annie Torrance Roberts was the very capable accompanist.

On June 5 both the eight o'clock prayer meeting, presided over by Brother John Taylor, and the eleven o'clock sacramental meeting, in charge of Bishop B. J. Scott, assisted by Pastor O. C. White and others, were occasions for gratitude, the Master being near to warn and bless through his human instruments.

The six o'clock Religio voted to meet at half past five through the summer. This will allow ample time afterward to reach the Campus for the Sunday evening preaching.

Elder E. T. Atwell was the evening speaker, with Pastor White in charge, prayer by Elder C. K. Green. Brother Atwell, who delights in preaching gospel sermons, discoursed on the power of the gospel to lift us over the great gulf that separates us, as sinners, from the state of perfection we must acquire.

The eleven o'clock hour next Sunday will be occupied by a children's service.

Sister F. R. Schafer, who has been missed from our services for more than a month, has returned from Dow City, Iowa, where she has been assisting in the care of her sick father. She remained with him until she could do no more—he was called to a better world—and after the funeral hastened home to her many home and church duties. She has the loving sympathy of everyone who knows her.

Two members will be missed from our choir this summer, Sisters Ruth Lanpher and Ruth Bryant, both teachers in Independence schools. They will attend summer school in Warrensburg.

Enoch Hill

Next Sunday morning the children will present programs in keeping with Children's Day. At 10.30 a. m. the beginners will give a brief program, and at 11 o'clock the primary department will be the center of attraction. In charge of these exercises are Sister Charles Warren, superintendent of the beginner and primary departments, Brother John Jones, assistant superintendent, and Sister Claude Gouldsmith.

After careful and prayerful consideration, Sister George Street has kindly consented to take the leadership of the Enoch Hill chapter of Temple Builders. Sister H. E. Winegar, former leader of the girls, has accompanied her husband, Missionary H. E. Winegar, on his mission to Texas.

The ladies of Group 33 North had a bake sale at the home of Sister Henry Hartman on last Saturday at which they cleared about ten dollars.

Spring Branch

The services for the last Sunday in May started auspiciously, with a fine spirit at the 8.15 a. m. prayer service, in charge of W. F. Smith and Henry Badder. About twenty-five took part in the service.

An even one hundred has attended the Sunday school for the last three Sundays. Brother John Soderstadt's class will soon finish the study of the Doctrine and Covenants and will take up the church history. Brother Brackenbury was present with his camera and after Sunday school took a picture of the school.

Brother C. Ed. Miller occupied the pulpit at the morning hour with a fine, uplifting sermon. Brother C. I. Carpenter preached at the evening service to a small but appreciative audience.

The choir has been paying back some debts. On Sunday night, May 29, our singers went to Bennington Heights, Kansas City, and the Sunday evening previous they were at Second Church.

The Royal Players have given two of their six plays. Their pleasing performances were well applauded by fair sized audiences. A week ago they gave way to the Decoration Day Campus picnic, but continued their entertainments Monday evening, June 6, with a photoplay. Single admittance twenty-five cents. There is room for you.

More like an old-time sized crowd was the one which attended prayer service last Wednesday night. About thirty were present. Brothers Snively and Mabbott were in charge.

The Sunday services started with an early prayer meeting for the young people.

The report of the Sunday school showed one hundred and fourteen present, with nine perfect classes. Nineteen perfect classes have gone on the records for the month of May.

A fine spirit prevailed throughout the sacramental service, after which two children of Brother and Sister Bilquest were blessed, and little Sister Scott was administered to.

This being the last Sunday evening service for the summer months, the program was changed somewhat from the regular routine of congregational singing and sermon, and was made a sort of musical festival. The program consisted of two congregational hymns, two anthems by the choir, two double numbers by the Liberty Street men's quartet. Two saw and piano duets by Brother and Sister Gibler, three selections by the "Trumpeter Boys," Ted and Ralph Snively and Carlos Smith, and a pianologue, "Yesterdays," by Sister Douglas. Altogether it was a pleasing and, we trust, a profitable day.

On Monday night the Royal Players presented the photoplay, "Tiger Rose," as an innovation, in their series of Monday night plays. Season tickets will still admit up to six admissions and will be punched according to number admitted at the door.

Far West, Missouri

May 28.—Brother T. T. Hinderks is in the Independence Sanitarium, where he recently underwent an operation for tumor on the eyelid. He is improving, and his host of friends wish him a rapid and complete recovery.

Sister Alta Hidy is leaving the first of the week for Maryville, where she intends to take a summer course at normal. She has been engaged to teach Crab Orchard School this coming term. Alta entertained her Sunday school class Tuesday evening at the home of S. J. Hines. A good time was reported by all present.

A number of Alta's friends surprised her Thursday evening. The time was spent in playing games. Delightful refreshments were served at a late hour, and all departed wishing Alta a pleasant and successful summer.

Mildred Powell and Marie Agenstein are others of our number who will attend summer school. We shall miss them from our ranks.

Sister Elizabeth Hinderks and orchestra gave a delightful musical program Sunday evening, May 1. Our superintendent informed us that these programs are to be a monthly event. We welcome them for they are always good.

A large number of our young people graduated from our high school. They were fortunate in securing Brother Floyd McDowell to deliver the commencement address.

Preston and Willard Hinderks were visiting Graceland one day this week. We understand they are planning to attend that college this fall. That is fine! We hope others may attend.

The big event of this month was the young people's convention, held at the church May 21 and 22. Brother Floyd McDowell was the principal speaker. Every branch in this stake was well represented, and a spirit of unity prevailed throughout the meeting.

The round table discussion led by Brothers McDowell and Blackmore during afternoon sessions dealt with wholesome recreation, its need, also the standards necessary to determine wholesome recreation.

After a musical prelude by orchestra, Brother McDowell talked to the entire Sunday school. He stressed forcefully the need of religious education for our youth if we would have a young people who can stem the tide and carry this church on to Zion. Strengthening the stakes of our youth through religious education as their ropes are being lengthened by higher education, increased wealth, etc., will make of them happy, healthy Zion builders. The neglect of this principle is making many of today's youth unbalanced, selfish, pleasure-seeking individuals who are treading the path to destruction. Let us remember our youth and carry out the social program of the church.

The eleven o'clock social service immediately following the Sunday school was a meeting radiating peace, harmony, and consecration. Brothers McDowell, Salisbury, and Barto were in charge.

After this service the congregation assembled on the lawn south of the church, where a group picture was taken.

Basket dinner was served at noon.

Most of the branches of the stake contributed some numbers to the evening program given during the Religio hour.

Brother Barto conducted the evening service. In all, this convention was considered quite the best in attendance, spirit, and fellowship. We hope each succeeding meeting will find a steady increase. This will be the result if each of us puts into practice the many good things which Brother McDowell gave us. Forward to May, 1928, and our next convention.

DELLA G. AULT.

Sister W. I. Tate, auxiliary reporter, writes from Davidson, Oklahoma, May 28: "The ladies of this branch met Wednesday, the 26th, to sew and pack a box to send to Kennett, Missouri, to help the flood sufferers."

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

It was quite gratifying to the officers of the Sunday school to see the results of the first Sunday of the contest in the journey to Palestine.

The women sailed on the Aquitania, with Sister Myrtle Wamsley as their captain, while the men sailed on the Mauve-tania, with Brother Arthur Hands for their captain. The women, as it was naturally expected, are in the lead, having gained in both attendance and collection, which amounted to $6.25, while that of the men was $5.36. The punctuality prize has also served to stimulate enthusiasm throughout the Sunday school, as there were 117 present on time, over the usual attendance of 60 or 70. Each woman wears a blue button, containing the portrait of the ship bearing her to her destination, while the men wear pink buttons, which likewise bear the portrait of the ship on which they are sailing—a gentle reminder throughout the week of the journey on which they have embarked. The contest will continue until August 1, and the losing ship is to entertain in some manner to be designated later.

At eleven o'clock the auditorium was filled to capacity for the sacramental service, which was blessed with a marked degree of the Spirit. The theme of the service was prayer, as there are a number of members who are on beds of affliction. Sister Gertrude Sandy, wife of Brother Seth S. Sandy, a member of the stake presidency, is still confined at Trinity Lutheran Hospital and is recovering her health very slowly.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Fred Furness was blessed at this service and given the name of Freda Janet.

At 6.15 the Zion Builders held their regular meeting, with Apostle F. Henry Edwards as the speaker.

The Central Orchestra, under the direction of Sister Johnson and Hazel Scott, pianist, rendered a very beautiful and pleasing program at the evening service at Grandview. While the orchestra consists mainly of Central members, there are several who attend other groups of the stake, who very graciously have given their assistance to make this orchestra worth while, and these young people are rendering a service that is far-reaching in the hearts of the people.

On Tuesday, June 21, the Plus Ultra Class will give a radio home-coming program over K L D S, in conjunction with their annual home-coming day to be held June 26. All Plus Ultra members and former members are invited to be present this day, as the entire services will be in charge of the class. One particularly interesting fete is the picnic luncheon, which will be served at Swope Park. Plus Ultra members and their friends are invited to attend.

Grandview

The pastor, Elder C. D. Jellings, on Sunday, May 22, at the eleven o'clock hour gave a short talk on the week-day religious school that has been conducted at this and other Kansas side churches for the past three or four years. Among many other good things, Brother Jellings mentioned as the school's aim, to give the pupils a basic, fundamental knowledge of God. As a result of the school, fourteen children have attended or become members of the Sunday school.

Brother E. E. Kinney is a believer in Waterman's "A rose to the living." Sunday, May 22, he gathered several baskets of roses from his yard and brought them to the Sunday school, where they were distributed, and everyone went away carrying a beautiful bouquet. A few Sundays ago, at lilac time, the same plan was carried out.

The Quindaro Dramatic Club, favored us the evening of May 22 with a religious play of Christ's crucifixion, "The alabaster box."

The Sunday school chorister, Sister D. L. White, arranges a "minute man" program each Sunday morning at the opening, in which many educational thoughts are expressed. On May 22, Sister Vera Curtis, a Junior College graduate, read an essay on "Home" which won her second place in a contest conducted by the Kansas City, Kansas, Chamber of Commerce.

Brother George W. Taylor, aged seventy years, died very suddenly of heart trouble April 28. Funeral services were conducted by Elder John Tucker from the church.

One of the outstanding features of the Grandview Nightingale Orchestra program for Sunday evening, June 26, at 7.30, will be the singing of their new song, "The stewardship plan." Brother Jellings, in his refined baritone style, will sing, "Jesus blessed the little children," tune to silver threads among the gold. The overture, "The Lawrence Hayes March," is an original selection and will depict Brother Hays in three separate periods. The orchestra has twenty-eight regular members. The ages of the children range from four to nineteen years, some of them being members of other churches, but they seem to be perfectly at home with the orchestra.

Bennington Heights Church

Alberta Marie Renninger and Marie Alberta Renninger, twin sisters, were blessed Sunday, May 22; Bettie Lou Renninger was blessed on Sunday, May 29. These little girls are daughters of Brother and Sister H. N. Renninger.

Sister Emma Rickman, daughter of Brother and Sister B. F. Wright, is very ill and expects to undergo an operation this week.

Sister Effie Stobaugh Hunter, of Dayton, Ohio, was a visitor at Bennington last Sunday. Brother Glenn Beaman, of Chicago, has joined his wife who has been visiting his parents, Brother and Sister William Beaman. Brother Robert P. Cross attended church this morning, after being absent for some time because of injuries received when he was run down by a motor car. Brother J. H. Tyrrell has returned from a business trip which took him to Detroit and Canada.

Last week the Blue Valley Y. M. C. A. held a track meet for the churches of Blue Valley. The Bennington Heights boys were successful in some of the contests. Cecil Wood, of the 70-pound class, won first place in the 50-yard dash and second place in the baseball throwing contest.

Robert Goold, of the 115-pound class, won second place in the 50-yard dash, second place in the high jump, and third place in the broad jump.

August Witte, of the 130-pound class, won first place in the 220-yard dash and fourth place in the 100-yard dash.

Paul Zimmerman won second place in the 440-yard dash in the unlimited weight class.

There were six churches which took part in this track meet, but Bennington Heights was the only Latter Day Saint Church.

Sunday evening, May 22, Elder W. O. Hands gave a program with picture slides in the Religio meeting.

Quindaro Church

On May 15 the Fedelia Chapter of Temple Builders served a May breakfast in the church basement. The promoters of this activity received many commendations for the quality of the meal and the satisfactory manner of serving. Sunday school was the only service at this place on this date, on account of the stake conference at the Central Church.

On the evening of May 22 Elder Daniel Hough spoke in his customary and logical manner to a large and appreciative congregation.

On May 24, Elder J. A. Tanner, stake president, addressed an audience of young people from Quindaro, Chelsea, and Grandview churches, his subject being, "What a man soweth, that shall he also reap." From this scripture the speaker drew many ideas and lessons that should warn and counsel his hearers on the necessity of using care in the selection of their activities of life.

On May 29 Elder Bruce E. Brown, of Colorado Springs, was the speaker at both morning and evening services. His text for the morning was from Nehemiah 13:11, "Why is the house of God forsaken?" He showed that this question that was asked thousands of years ago is a live issue now, and gave as the reason for asking it today, "Business, sports,

How to Tune in K L D S on the New Frequency

The Federal Radio Commission has assigned specified frequencies to broadcasting stations, instead of wave lengths as heretofore. For a short time this may result in some confusion to radio listeners, because of the peculiar relationship between frequencies and wave lengths. So far as the listener is concerned, either the term frequency or wave length has to do with dial setting, having nothing whatever to do with the power or distance range of the station. Most of the newer model receiving sets are calibrated either in wave lengths or kilocycles (measuring units for frequency). The great majority of sets in use, however, have dials with numeral graduations from 0 to 100, or from 0 to 180. Undoubtedly most of the radio sets in the future will be calibrated in kilocycles.

In general, receiving set users will pick up K L D S toward the opposite end of the dial from which the station was received heretofore. On the majority of receiving sets using dials calibrated from 0 to 100, the station will now be received on dial readings of approximately 10 to 15. On sets calibrated in kilocycles, the dials will be set at 1260.

The K L D S office will be glad to answer questions from any radio-set users who have trouble in picking up K L D S on the new frequency. In each case the newer type of receiving set used should be designated. The setting from K L D S at its old frequency of 680 kilocycles, or 440.9 meters, should also be given.

Listeners will note henceforth that stations will use the term frequency almost exclusively. The term wave length, with its puzzling decimal fractions, will be gradually eliminated. It is a peculiar fact that as the wave length lowers, the frequency increases; thus the wave length of K L D S has been reduced to 238 meters, but the frequency has been increased from 680 to 1260 kilocycles.

To Broadcast Test Program on New Frequency

Distant K L D S listeners will have opportunity to tune for K L D S on its new frequency of 1260 kilocycles at a time when there are few stations on the air. At 11 p. m., June 15, K L D S will take the air on 1260 kilocycles—238 meters. Listeners whose receiving sets are not calibrated in kilocycles or meters will find K L D S on approximately the same dial setting as has been used recently by K F V E, Saint Louis (1250 kilocycles); K F D X, Shreveport, Louisiana (1270 kilocycles), and W H T, Chicago (1260 kilocycles). The latter station has been doing its broadcasting on two wave lengths, one of which is 238 meters—1260 kilocycles.

The first program on the new frequency will likely continue until 1 o'clock the next morning. Listeners at considerable distance from K L D S should be sure to note that the time given for beginning the test program, 11 p. m., is Central Standard Time. This is 9 p. m., Pacific Time; 10 p. m., Mountain Time, and 12 o'clock, midnight, Eastern Time. Where daylight saving time is in effect, further allowances should be made.

The K L D S staff particularly urges friends of the station to listen for this first program on the new frequency and to report results obtained.

Dietitian for Sanitarium Needed

Without doubt there are many persons in the church who have had regular and accredited courses in dietetics, who might be qualified to take the position of dietitian in our Sanitarium. To maintain our credit, both as a hospital and a training school for nurses, certain standards are fixed by laws and by enactments of associations whose authority governs. It is necessary, therefore, that we install at the Sanitarium a dietitian. We can, of course, secure one from among those not members of the church; but we would prefer that a Latter Day Saint would fill the position. We would like to hear from those qualified to fill the position. F. M. S.

Sunday papers, shows, visiting, moral laxity, indifference, laziness, radios," etc. The theme of his evening sermon was, "Ye are the light of the world," and used as examples the different systems of illumination, and as it is necessary that energy be supplied that we may have light, so also must the disciple of Christ have energy supplied by the Holy Spirit, and that the use of this light must radiate from this source through the life of the disciple to other individuals. Special music at these services was an anthem by the choir under the direction of Sister Emily Foley, and a vocal duet, "The gates of gold," by Sister Emily Foley and Sister Marie Mier. Brother Brown visits this place every conference year, and on this occasion he expressed himself as being grateful for the splendid assistance given by the musicians of this group. We hope his visits may continue.

On Memorial Day the Sunday school held a picnic at Galvins Lake, located about four miles west. The use of the park was donated by the owner. About eighty persons were present. The day was spent in sports, which were enjoyed by all.

On the evening of May 31 Elder Brown addressed the Boys' Club. His subject, "Why are we here?" was such as to encourage young people with the idea of having an objective in life and working toward that end.

On the evening of June 1, Sister Irene Schuler was united in matrimony to Mr. Hugh L. Decker, Elder A. Wallace Eskridge officiating. They have the best wishes of their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Decker will spend their honeymoon in California.

On Saturday, June 11, 2 p. m., the marriage of Sister Alice Graham and Mr. Frank Wadhams will be solemnized at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Graham, 1519 Yecker Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas. Elder John Tucker will pronounce the ceremony, assisted by A. Wallace Eskridge. The young couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for Detroit, Michigan, and the lakes of Minnesota.

Resignation

By Joseph Luff

I can not understand just why
My plans should go awry,
And why the castle I had built
Should crumble, just as I
Was ready, in my ecstasy,
To rise and occupy.

I can not tell why the fond hope
I've cherished through the years
Should vanish and leave me to grope
Amid these blinding tears,
Just as fruition's blissful hand
Before my eye appears.

I can not sound the depths in which
A thousand prayers are here
Entombed—unanswered—Shall I say Ignored?—within this bier?
Just as my hand was stretched to grasp Anticipated cheer.

My soul had said, "The time is ripe—
The harvest now is white";
My eyes sought long-expected fruit,
But found, instead, this blight;
For leaden clouds obscure the sun
I sought, and it is night.

Night, where I looked for radiant day—
Grief where I hoped for joy—
A coffin where I thought to find
Delight without alloy.
Yet, e'en this raven drapery
Must not my faith destroy.

I pledged thee, Lord, unfaltering trust,
Though no enlightening ray
Should penetrate thy providence
To once explain thy way;
And though I can not understand
Or solve this mystery—

Though through thy curtained providence
There comes no gleam to me,
That covenant shall, undisturbed,
Remain, for well I know
That love like thine submits no test
To trusting souls below
Unsequelled by celestial good
Thy hand would fain bestow.

Yet my frame totters 'neath this stroke.
Dear Lord—forgive each wail,
Nor let my present agony
Thy lessening love entail.
But let my tear-drenched prayers for grace
Commensurate prevail.

Seize thou and stay my upraised hand—
My quivering lips endow
With strength to once again renew
My oft-repeated vow
To trust and love thee, and, to all
Thy providences bow.

Fulfill thy purpose and withhold
No ordeal or test
That for my perfecting, dear Lord,
Thou knowest will be best.
And then, if I thine image bear,
I'll know—sometime—somewhere.

Lines written for Sister Clara M. Frick and read at the funeral of her son, Earl Stanley, whose death by drowning occurred in his twenty-seventh year, on the eighth day of May, 1927.

The Church as Big Business

The Literary Digest recently quotes some figures from the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times relative to "the church as big business," the figures showing that the twenty-two million communicants of twenty-eight denominations last year contributed to "collections" in the total amount of nearly four hundred million dollars, or an average of a little more than seventeen dollars per member. Of this total the Methodists collected ninety-seven millions, and the Presbyterians fifty-seven millions. The highest average was reached by the United Presbyterians, thirty-nine dollars and twenty-six cents per member. The comments the Gazette-Times passes upon these figures may, according to the Digest be read by churchmen with pride. The Gazette-Times is quoted as follows:

Quite a bit has been spoken and written of the weakening grip of the churches. Reduction of the churches by a half has been advocated. This was followed by a proposal to reduce the ministers by a half. There are those who would do away with the churches entirely. Yet anything that has the ability to draw upward of a half billion of dollars annually in voluntary contributions appears to have a vast amount of vitality and not to have any serious trouble. Were not the churches felt to be returning value for the contributions, we may be sure that contributors would be less generous.

The churches being conducted by men are not perfect, but they supply something for which mankind longs. That is proved by their existence and growth. The enemies of religion have never been able to offer a satisfying substitute. It is easy to criticize, but suggesting a better course is something else.

The average contribution credited to the United Presbyterians is high and reflects a healthy financial condition of its members. That of the Methodists does not show so well. I wonder if either shows the average total of gifts or contribution to religious or church work and activities by the members of either denomination.

There have been a number of attempts to work out the average given by members of our own denomination; but I have always felt that our means of ascertaining the total given by Latter Day Saints to local and general church were inadequate. But of one thing we are quite sure, namely that the number of contributors has been far less than the total number of members; and it is felt that one of our chief efforts along financial lines should be to get every member's name on our books as a contributor, a tithe payer—a financial supporter in some amount; and this in the interests of the members.

There is an uplift and expansive effect of being a contributor to a cause, and especially the cause of the church. It may therefore be looked upon as a favor the church is bestowing upon its members in giving opportunity to make contribution in the amount that ability and condition will permit. And when we can and do reach the condition that all our members are tithe payers then there will be less need for collections, and we will be where the members will have full credit given for all they do in support of the church. As it is now, the amount paid in tithes and offerings does not reflect the real total.

That there is opportunity for all our church members to contribute to the church is indicated by some rather startling figures presented by a study among 308 pupils in the seventh grade of the junior high school, in a city where a large percentage of the pupils are Latter Day Saints. This survey showed money amounts spent as follows:

	Per year	Avg, per child per year
Candy	$2,201.68	$ 7.15
Chewing gum	668.72	2.17
Soft drinks and ice cream	2,179.32	7.08
Picture shows	2,631.72	8.54
Other amusements	6,854.64	22.28
Total	$14,536.08	$47.22

In addition to the above the report shows that 162 or 52 per cent earn some or all of their spending money.
129 or 42 per cent have a savings account.
3 or 1 per cent have building and loan.
154 or 50 per cent carry life insurance.
22 or 7 per cent do not carry any of the last three named items.

Compare these average expenditures per year for the various items mentioned, with the average "contributions" quoted above, and you will have "food for thought."

It would be interesting to know how these averages run for other ages. Assuming that for the ages between eight and twenty-five they run about the same, and taking the smallest item given, gum, and doing a bit of "calculating," it reveals the astonishing fact that if our people would quit chewing gum, and give their "gum money" to the church, in about fifteen years it would pay for the Auditorium, even if we should spend nearly a million on it. And gum has no food value at all, however much these facts may furnish food for thought.

Science a Helpful or Harmful Servant

"From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs"; or, "Every man a contributor to social weal and his reward his needs and just wants," is about the way we "crystalize" the doctrine of stewardship into a sentence. This is reading the "Golden Rule" into industry and economic endeavor. In public addresses, talks, conversations, and writings I have set up the doctrine of stewardship as cure for so many social ills that it is quite likely the belief is rampant that I hold it as a social panacea. And I come near believing just that. I recently saw a paragraph in The Spectator which quite struck my fancy, and I wanted to "paragraph it" editorially, and so I copied it into my notes. Here it is:

Science does not alter man's desires; it only enables him to gratify them; it does not cause him to want different things; it only helps him to get more of the things he wants. If the things he wants are good, this added capacity for achieving them is good; if they are harmful, it, too, is harmful, in that it brings them within his reach. Until, therefore, our knowledge of how to use our powers has increased in proportion as our powers have increased, each fresh advance in the application of science to practical affairs will be fraught with fresh danger to the race.—C. E. M. Joad, in The Spectator, for May 21 1927.

And all I want to say is: With "stewardship" operative, science may proceed as fast as it can in helping men obtain all the good things possible, for appropriating only for our needs and just wants, the balance remains unused or is set over to community assets.

How about it?

Fine Spirit for a Contributor

It is not always that contributors have the comprehension of the work of the editor which works to best advantage of all concerned. Most contributors have fallen into habits of writing and speech which, if faithfully reproduced, would do violence to their mental acumen or capacity, and knowing just what they mean to convey and reading their productions with this comprehension, they fail to note discrepancies, inconsistencies and like imperfections. Such are likely to resent any changes being made in their manuscripts by copy readers or editors. But here is an extract from the letter of an experienced contributor who is above the average in capability of expressing himself for the written page, and who also senses the fact that he may not notice his own faults. He therefore enlists the help of the office force handling his manuscripts in the following beautiful spirit:

If I should at any time get anything into my news letter that is irrelevant or incompetent, or if I should go too much into detail do not hesitate to censor it, or to correct it in any way: orthographically, grammatically, for punctuation or demeanor. Although I am only seventy-five years of age, senility is making itself very conspicuous in every part of my being. My perfections and longcomings are in the past, if I ever had any, and now I beg of you to kindly overlook my imperfections and shortcomings. Don't forget to give friendly criticism whenever it is needed; I shall surely appreciate it.

It is a joy to work with such spirits as that of our brother.

Harvest Home Festival

The annual Harvest Home Festival in Zion has come to be a very interesting event. Usually it is held the latter part of September or the first of October. Products of the soil are exhibited, flowers, fruits, vegetables, grains, and home-canned stuffs. At the close of the festival all products exhibited go to the Presiding Bishopric for the use of the church and are by them distributed to the Sanitarium, Saints' Homes, and to needy families. The exhibits thus become a free-will offering "paid in kind"; that is, the actual products of toil and the soil sent "in kind"; and the festival becomes a sort of storehouse; temporary, it is true, but one to which the Saints bring their offerings from orchard, garden, vineyard, and field.

This year the festival will be in the basement of the Auditorium, where there will be ample room for exhibits, attractive booths, etc. Stakes and outlying districts are invited to send exhibits, and if possible, to send some one in charge and arrange booths representing their locality. Even foreign fields, such as Australia, the islands, Europe, Great Britain, the Holy Land, can send exhibits of products not perishable, if they will act in time and allow time necessary for express. Such contributions will be doubly welcome in Zion, and may in time lead to a really fine and worth-while international festival or fair.

Brother Charles C. Koehler has been placed in charge as business manager. He has managed the festival in the past in association with others, and will no doubt make this one successful. Any inquiries may be directed to the First Presidency. This year the festival will be held the last week in September. Let us make it a very worth while event.

Southern Missouri District Makes a Record

Southern Missouri District is first among the eighty organized districts and stakes in the United States and Canada to pay its endowment pledges in full.

J. F. Cunningham is president and G. A. Davis bishop's agent. The district has seven organized branches, namely; Ava, Beaver, Logan Creek, Mill Springs, Naylor, Springfield, and Thayer, with a membership of 645. In addition there are 155 isolated members who are not included in the branch enrollment. This makes a total of 800 members for the district, which in November, 1925, pledged $433 to the Graceland College Endowment Stewardship campaign.

On May 29 a letter was received from Brother Davis, sending in the final amount which makes the district 100 per cent in completing its payments and being the first district in the entire church to finish its work. The Saints in this district are to be congratulated.

In other channels of giving, this district has done well. For the year ending June 30, 1926, 72 individual contributors paid in tithes and offerings, $615.17. For last year, three out of the six Sunday schools, with an enrollment of 310, gave $123.72 in Christmas offering.

In the Auditorium campaign seven years ago, this district with a quota of $1,500 pledged $1,658.65, and of this amount there only remains $199 unpaid.

This district has performed a fine piece of work. We are wondering what other districts will do.

American High Wages and Prosperity

In a London (England) weekly paper with an international circulation, there have appeared recently several letters by both British and American writers on the subject of American prosperity and industrial efficiency. Some of the British writers who evidently had visited America presented rather glowing pictures of the high wages of the American laborer and the plentitude of opportunities for employment. A recent issue of the paper contained a letter from an American college professor who called attention to two facts which can not be overlooked by one who would estimate America's prosperity and welfare: Comparing American conditions of unemployment with those of England, he pointed out that two years ago (probably latest figures available for such comparison) unemployment in America was 19.9 per 1,000, while in England it was 25 per 1,000. Unemployment in America is therefore far from a solved problem.

As to "high wages," he cited statistics to show that fifty per cent of wage earners in the United States receive an income less than is required for a standard of living which can be considered to be a "minimum health and decency" level. This indicates that the "living wage problem" is far from satisfactorily solved in America.

Saints, is there need for Zion and her law?

Blue Pencil Notes

The firmament God spread
Look up to his great throne.

The solid earth your feet
Support—'tis meet
You stand for him alone.

A good old brother in California used to argue quite seriously that in the last days there should be earthquakes in the sea. He predicated his argument on the prophecy that there should be earthquakes in diverse places (divers' places).

"I don't know one card from another," declared Deacon Goodentart, "and in my opinion the man who does has a heart as black as the ace of spades."

I had enjoyed a very pleasant hour with a certain brother, planning the details of a worth-while church enterprise. At the close I said, "I enjoy this sort of work much better than settling difficulties between two men who can not get on together." He looked up with a startled expression and said, "Repeat that, please." I said it over again, and he inquired, "How did you know about my fuss last night with Brother —?" The joke was that I did not know of his fuss of the night before.

In the chair car some seats ahead of me sat an aged grandmother, gray-haired and stoop-shouldered. Across the aisle sat a young girl of the most pronounced "flapper" type, dressed and powdered like a magazine cover girl. Elderly criticism would be very severe on the girl. Probably the aged grandmother, if she noticed her at all, did so with disapprobation. But presently the grandmother felt the need of a drink of water. With her glass in hand she struggled to her feet. But the swaying of the car threatened to throw her into the aisle. The first person to act was the girl. She sprang forward and very gently and efficiently got the grandmother seated, and taking her glass returned it full of cold water. It may not have been done "in the name of a disciple," so the girl may not have the biblical reward—but I think she will. As she sprang forward she dropped her compact, and it flew open on the floor and scattered pink and white powder all up and down the aisle. It must have been very embarrassing to the girl, but she gave it not the slightest notice. She just went ahead and did her task and then sat down and went on with her reading. But probably every thoughtful person in the car said: "Well, after all, back of that powdered face, back of that frivolous make-up, is a real woman—interested in others and ready to serve others."

I have seen our girls spring forward to serve the church. Some of our finest boys are as eager to help. The girls may drop a few compacts and dance programs and the boys a few cigaret cases. I hope they let the dance programs and cigarets lie where they fall. (The powder puffs do not matter so much, powder is not even skin deep.)

Elderly criticism may be very severe on youthful make-up and manners, but under the surface human nature is much the same as ever and human reactions to sublime appeals as generous as formerly. The finest and best of our young people will respond to the calls of service, and they will do it graciously and efficiently, and as was predicted in modern revelation concerning those called a generation ago, "They will become men and women of power and excellent wisdom." The little incident in the chair car just started a train of thought, and it proved to be a very wholesome and encouraging train of thought.

College Players Give "Hamlet"

The closing activity of the year at Graceland College was given over to the College Players. Incoming institute students and Lamoni people, as well as a large number of college students who remained over were given a treat when on Saturday night, June 4, the College Players gave the time honored Shakespearean classic, "Hamlet."

The Coliseum was crowded to its capacity. The play was well presented and well received. The work of the players showed the effect of consistent study and training. Hamlet, even when played by professional artists, makes heavy demands on the cast, and the work of the College Players is to be commended for a very creditable performance.

The part of Hamlet was excellently interpreted by Forest Roberts, who for some years past has been a member of the faculty of the college. Hamlet is easily the most prominent part when the play is produced by professionals, and in playing the part Mr. Roberts easily maintained its lead by his sustained and masterful concept and interpretation.

Every Hamlet must interpret the part as he feels it. Naturally everyone looks forward to the "soliloquy," wondering where the emphasis will be placed. It is not unjust to the part to say the interpretation was a "Roberts Hamlet." His splendid characterization and emotional moods brought out the depths of thought and reasoning that so well develop the fine passages deserving the treatment of a master.

Although the lines are given in a tempo that a bit accelerated, yet the audience knowing Mr. Roberts, was instantly sympathetic, appreciative, and impressed. While other passages in this part exact equal imaginative and emotional interpretation, yet in the minds of many the player is measured by his interpretation of the "soliloquy."

Miss Catherine Skinner, of Council Bluffs, playing the part of Ophelia, gave the principal splendid support in the second act, but more especially in the fourth act when she arose to the exacting demands of the "mad scene," and the close attention of everyone in the audience evidenced her successful interpretation of those highly emotional parts which are a tax on the best actors.

Bryan Jennings, playing the part of Polonius, added life, color, and humor. His action and emphasis were especially good.

James Briggs and Monte Parrish in the fifth act enacted the grave diggers' scene, which is always popular, and brought an appreciative response from the audience.

Harriet Bolen as queen, mother of Hamlet, gave to the part beauty and dignity, which produced an appeal that easily went across the footlights. While perhaps a bit reserved in situations which would permit of a more emotional response, yet her characterization added a pleasing and agreeable poise.

Those who have heard the College Players in the years past will remember the outstanding pieces of work they have performed, but of them all, perhaps Hamlet is their greatest undertaking. It was very well done.

The Passing of Columbus Scott

On May 31, in Lamoni, Iowa, which had been his home nearly half his lifetime, there passed from earth life Elder Columbus Scott, a man widely and favorably known in the church, who had been an officer of it for more than fifty years. Death came as a culmination of a sickness of less than two weeks, a part of which had been very distressing.

Brother Scott was a native of the State of Indiana, having been born August 2, 1850, near Scottsville, Floyd County, the son of John and Miriam Scott. In 1878 he was married to Flora L. Bass, then a resident of Lawrence, Michigan, with whom he walked happily and faithfully the remainder of his life.

They came to Lamoni more than thirty-five years ago.

Brother Columbus Scott became a member of the church when twenty-one years of age, being baptized by Apostle T. W. Smith, and only three years after baptism he was ordained an elder, in which office he began an earnest ministerial career. In 1880 he was ordained a member of the Quorum of Seventy, after having been in the missionary field for three years. Later he was ordained president of the Second Quorum of Seventy, and still later president of the Council of Presidents of Seventy.

Elder S. W. L. Scott, another lifelong missionary, who survives, is a younger brother of Columbus Scott, and he has two surviving sisters, Sister T. M. Smith, 814 West White Oak, Independence, Missouri, and Mrs. Elizabeth Fisher, of Centralia, Washington. One son, Raymond, and a daughter, Mrs. Leo Dehner, remain to comfort the mother. Both children are residents of Kansas City, Missouri.

The missionary activities of this man of God extended into sixteen States of the American Union, and into Canada. He was an earnest, careful, pleasing speaker, a pleasant companion wherever found, an accomplished and experienced debater, a wholesome influence. The church on earth has lost another valuable contender for its faith, who has earned an abundant entrance into eternal life.

Institute of Methods in Religious Education

The latest report from the institute held at Lamoni, June 5 to 12, shows an enrollment of 201. While most of the attendants are from the Central and Middle Western States, yet the distant States are well represented, and include Florida, California, Washington, Massachusetts, and Alabama.

Intense interest is centered in each of the classes being conducted, and the instructors are gratified at the eagerness with which each course is being studied. Those attending the institute are using the college classrooms and dormitories, and the environment is conducive to concentration of thought and earnest study.

Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of the fine arts department of the Chicago Training School, was in Lamoni from Saturday, June 4 to Wednesday June 8. During her stay at the institute, she delivered a public address on "Youth and truth"; six lectures on "Dramatization in religious education"; and conducted three chapel services, one being a lecture on "The conducting of worship in the church school." This was followed by a demonstration and a round table discussion on the same subject. Wednesday afternoon two carloads of institute faculty members and students accompanied Mrs. Overton to Osceola, where she took her train to Chicago. At the close of her last lecture the student body presented her with a rose corsage and large bouquet of peonies, her favorite flower. Everyone seems enthusiastic over her work. She has promised she will help us in any way she can in the future and has already given very many valuable suggestions and has been the means of putting us in touch with the great religious education movements of the country.

Miss Towner, from Kansas City, arrived Wednesday evening and is conducting a very successful course in story-telling as a method of teaching religion. The students are unanimous in reporting that her material is most practical and helpful.

"The Servant in the House"

On Thursday evening the faculty and students of the institute attended a presentation of Kennedy Rann's excellent play, "The servant in the house," sponsored by the Department of Women of Lamoni, and directed by Miss Florence Thompson. The personnel of the cast is significant of the universal love of acting, for it was made up of ministers, business men, college students, and housewives. The role of servant was taken by Roy Cheville, and his excellent portrayal was ably assisted by every other member of the cast. It was unusually well played, and in spite of the fact that the lights were put out by a sudden storm, and during several minutes it was played in complete darkness, it carried its message to the audience and sent them away with their faith in the goodness of men revived.

Comments by Those Attending the Institute

"I think the institute is one of the finest movements started in the church, and I look forward to the time when every district and branch will be represented at the annual institute."—Bertie Gould.

"By attending the institute many have been able to catch the spirit of Zion building."—Mae Price.

"I believe the institute is one valuable method of getting people to catch the vision of the redemption program of this church, by which we can learn how to help put it over."—Vada Trask.

"May this institute not be the end, but the promise for greater things in the future, that the great goal of this church might be achieved and Zion made a realization."—R. E. Davey.

"The institute has meant four outstanding things to me: An inspiration to greater effort toward qualification; a source of spiritual renewal; a means of receiving new ideas and knowledge; and a period of social enjoyment in the association of those like interested."—Glenna Clow.

"This is the first institute of its kind I have ever attended in the many, many years I have belonged to the church. I am not only reminded how much I have missed, but how much harder I must work to promote the 'onward to Zion movement.'"—Mrs. Ada Koehler.

"I think the institute is one of the most important steps toward the redemption of Zion; because, in addition to the training given, it creates a spirit of love and fellowship."—Gertrude Keeble.

"My life can not but be better for having known the ones who have taught me at this institute. Whatever my task is to be, it will be accomplished better because of my experience here."—Nell J. Kennedy.

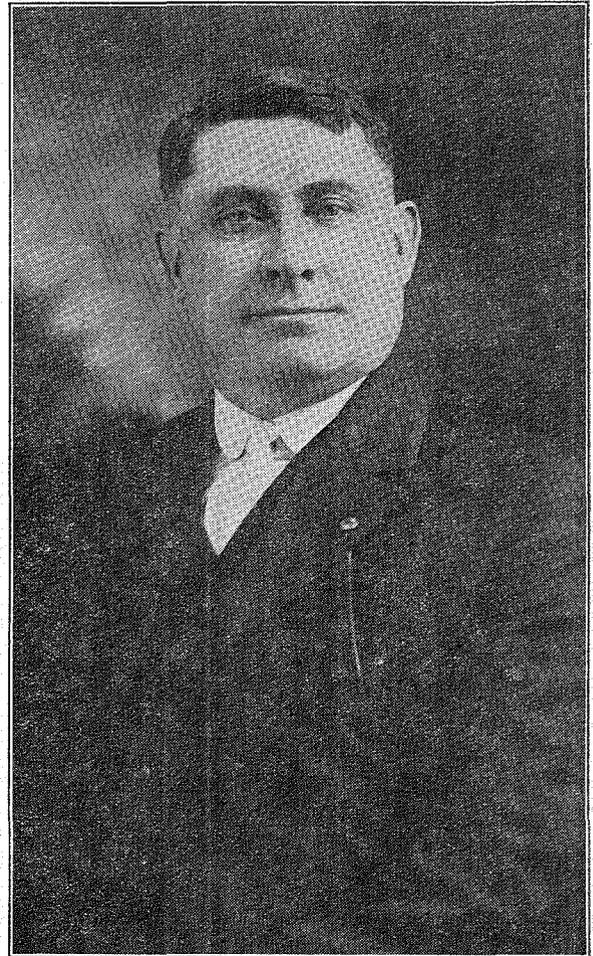

"It is difficult to find just the right words that exactly express my appreciation of the institute, just what its educational and spiritual gains are, and just how much I have gained educationally and spiritually. Everyone, both old and young, has received much to take home with him and apply."—Floyd J. Quick.

"The institute has been a spiritual uplift for me and is a good advertisement for Graceland College. The effect will be seen in the various branches who are represented at the institute."—Dean Gough.

"The class work has been of a high order and very instructive, and I can go from here with a broader conception of our work and a greater determination to do my part."—R. L. Macrae.

"We have been given a broader view of the church program and a new determination to carry it out, and from this I sense more fully the sincerity of the church in its purpose and the extent of its influence. It has been a wonderful institute."—W. E. Haden.

The institute at Graceland has opened before us a large field of information and available material along the various lines of each one's particular church work. The association of workers in so many districts, far and near, and the beautiful environment has added much to the joy of being here."—Mrs. Hazel Blohn.

Budgeting and Financing

BY BISHOP J. A. BECKER

Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost.—Luke 14: 28.

Budgeting

Budget defined.—From Latin bulga—ordinary language, a little bag. Technical language, annual statement relative to finances showing actual income and expenditures for past year and estimate for coming year.

A budget is the bridge that spans the gap between the theory of frugality and the practice of frugality.

It is a statement forecasting the approximate cost for a certain period in a certain business or home.

A study of the budget idea is not a new one, as is evidenced by the statement of the Savior, quoted above.

When we decide to build a house we

1. Study locations and neighborhoods in light of our family tastes and requirements.
2. Consider carefully
 - a. Our financial conditions.
 - b. Our reserve funds.
 - c. Our income.
 - d. Our normal expenditures.
 We thus arrive at our limit of expenditure.
3. We list our cherished desires for a home and call in the architect and tell him our wants, which include
 - a. Playroom for children.
 - b. A sunny breakfast room.
 - c. A commodious living room.
 - d. A quiet library with fireplace.

Every want is made known to the architect. He prepares the preliminary sketches. Alas, the cost is too great. We are forced to choose which of our wants can be spared.

Something like this happens with organized budgets.

Value of Budgeting.—Budget making and budget using have been called a phase of business statesmanship.

With a soundly built budget as a guide, an organization does not run on week after week in uncertainty. The directors are able to limit their expenditures to their income, because they know how much of their allotted funds they are spending over allotted periods.

The United States Government adopted the budget system in 1921. We are told that it has been the means of an annual saving to the Government of millions of dollars.

Our Federal Government in adopting the budget system created a Bureau of Budget, with the President of the United States at the head. Previous to this forty-one expenditure bureaus operated. These were all consolidated under one head, known as the Federal Purchasing Board. Each expending department is represented on the board. The President presents the budget to Congress at the beginning of the regular session each year. He tells Congress what the revenues and expenditures are to be, and the state of the public debt. He must give details of expenditures for the year past. He must make recommendations for increasing or decreasing the revenues.

The church also has been impressed with the value of budgeting, adopting resolution 805 on April 18, 1919, which reads:

That each department of the church (general and stake) submit to the Presiding Bishopric a budget of their office and administration expenses for the year beginning July 1, 1919, not later than April 30 for this year, and by January 31 for each year thereafter."

Under this rule the church is moving forward and being established on a more efficient business basis.

The Budget Committee.—Directing our thoughts to the work within branches, the committee should consist of one member from the branch and one member from each of the departments functioning in the branch, with the branch president or pastor as chairman.

If a bishop is available, he should be selected to represent the branch as a member of the committee. But few of the branches are so situated. Where no bishop is available, the deacon should be called upon to represent the branch, all other things being equal. Each department should select the best member available in making its appointment.

What the Budget Should Include.—The committee should give careful consideration to the needs of the branch and departments, setting forth the needs under various heads, such as

|---------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. Janitor service. | 7. Religious education. |
| 2. Fuel. | a. Quarterlies. |
| 3. Lights. | b. Stepping Stones . |
| 4. Water. | c. Miscellaneous. |
| 5. Music. | 8. Recreational activities. |
| 6. Library. | |

9. Repairs.
10. Building.
 - a. Payments on indebtedness.
 - b. Cost of repairs.
 - c. Cost of improvements.
11. Interest.
12. Miscellaneous.

The work of the committee should be presented to the branch for approval, thus giving the membership an opportunity to determine the extent to which they will finance the work of the branch.

Paying Power of Group Must Be Considered.—In every case there is the question as to whether the size of the membership is adequate in view of the character of the work to be undertaken.

New Building.—In each branch there arises sooner or later the question of a new building, or the improving of the present building. In this connection we might with profit call attention to General Conference Resolution No. 785, which says:

That . . . no church site be chosen or edifice erected by any branch without first conferring with the Presiding Bishop and the Church Architect.

We can also with profit give careful consideration to resolution adopted by the late conference on April 14, 1927, from which we quote:

Be it further resolved . . . that stakes, districts, local congregations, and reunion associations be requested to make no local expenditures in any considerable sum or incur any local indebtedness except such as shall be approved by the First Presidency, and Presiding Bishopric or their representatives, and the member of the Twelve in charge of the respective field.

When the building of a new church is under contemplation, the need of a comprehensive survey in addition to a well-planned budget is imperative. The survey should furnish the following information:

1. Name of branch.
2. Membership in branch.
3. Average attendance at meetings.
4. Number of wage-earners in branch.
5. Approximate annual income of wage earners.
6. Population of city.
7. Location of lot.
8. Size of lot.
9. Purchase price of lot.
10. Amount paid on lot.
11. Dimensions and arrangement of proposed building.
12. Seating capacity.
13. Cost of building.
14. Amount available toward cost of building.
15. Method contemplated for financing remainder of cost of building.

The budget for the new building should receive much more serious consideration than is usually given it, before the construction of the building is begun. Too frequently the extent of the planning does not go beyond the purchasing of the lot and the borrowing of enough to construct the building. As a result, in many instances, the branch is overburdened with debt and unable to meet its obligations. Members become discouraged and begin to look for causes to justify them in moving away, and leaving the already too heavy burden rest upon a still smaller group. No branch should undertake to build and assume an obligation that can not be fully met within ten years at the most, and even then there will be many failures.

Location.—In many instances a lot is purchased because the purchase price is small, overlooking entirely the question of the suitability of the lot for the location of a church building.

In selecting the site, the following questions should have careful consideration:

1. Is the lot in a location that a building erected thereon will be a credit to the church?
2. Is it located where it will be the most convenient for the membership of the branch?
3. If in residence section, is it where the members can establish their homes?
4. Will it be a good investment?

Financing

Avenue.—The Lord has not left us in the dark in regard to the manner in which his work should be supported.

In section 129, paragraph 8, the Lord informs us that funds in support of his work come "under the terms of tithing, surplus, free-will offerings, and consecrations." And just here it will be well to emphasize the need of observing the order as given.

The tithe is primarily for the support of the ministry. The inheritance for the Levites. Greater consideration should be given to the instruction of the Lord. In every instance in financing the work in the branch or in the building of a new church home, it should be emphasized not to permit such financing to interfere with the flow of the tithes into the general fund to enable the church to continue its missionary work. No pastor has performed his full task who has neglected to instruct his flock to render an accounting of their stewardships. Every member should feel it a pleasure to file his inventory, pay his tithe, pay his surplus, and thereafter determine the amount he will have to give as an offering in support of the local budget.

Method.—The method to be used in securing the support of the members in behalf of the budget will depend in a large measure upon local conditions. In Independence, with the membership divided into groups fully officered, the deacon of each group is expected to secure pledges from the membership in his group to cover the quota assigned to his group. Then it becomes his duty to collect the pledges according to the terms thereof, which in many instances requires monthly visits to the homes of the members.

In some of the smaller congregations, where the membership is scattered over large territories, the envelope system is used to a good advantage. But with any system used in collecting, it will be found very profitable to secure pledges to cover the budget. Whatever method is used, it must be worked to prove a success.

The Approach.—Incorrect approach:

The appeal made in support of the budget is in vain in many cases because of the manner in which it is approached.

The apologetic approach has been the undoing of many a promising financial call.

If the deacon informs the member, when calling on him, he is back begging for more money for the branch, he has no right to expect a favorable hearing.

A member of a certain committee approached a gentleman and introduced his subject with considerable enthusiasm. The man began to look amused and said there is a hundred dollars awaiting you. And then he told the committeeman that he had already been approached by a lady from his organization who began to apologize as she came through the door for disturbing him, and how much she hated to beg for money, but it was needed badly. He had already decided he would give the society one hundred and twenty-five dollars; but he gave her only twenty-five, as she did not expect to get any more.

Correct approach:

It should be emphasized the members are given an opportunity to make an investment.

- a. In the training of minds and hands.
- b. In the cleansing of souls.
- c. In the development of character.

These are not small things to offer some one to share in. How many would want to live in a city without churches? Contributing in support of church work is not charity, but an investment which brings rich returns to the giver. It helps to reduce the cost of government and at the same time insures additional security and protection to the citizenship. But best of all, it is making an investment in the souls of men.

The Approach from Salesmanship Viewpoint.—Salesmanship carried to success is revealed in the story of Tom Sawyer.

One fine summer morning Tom Sawyer found himself with a long-handled brush and a bucket of white wash before a thirty-yard board fence. At this dark moment Ben Rogers, whose ridicule he dreaded, came in sight. An inspiration burst upon Tom. He went on with his whitewashing, surveying his work with the eye of an artist. He seemed to be enjoying his task. Ben watched every move, becoming more and more interested. To work soon became a privilege. Ben wanted to be in on it. Dickering began, and the opportunity was purchased with the core of the apple Ben had been eating. More observers arrived. They came to jeer but remained to whitewash. Alluring offers were made—marbles, apples, a knife handle, and a jews harp; pockets were emptied. The fence had three coats of white wash, and if Tom had not run out of white wash he would have bankrupt every boy in the village.

Make friends: If we make enough friends, we shall get enough money.

Have faith in your task.

Graceland's Credits—Educational Legal Tender

In these days of standardization and classification when our educated young people are so dependent upon official recognition of their college credits for teachers' certificates and admission to advanced and professional courses in the universities of the land, it was early determined by the Board of Trustees of Graceland that our church college should be placed on the very highest plane of efficiency and accrediting.

The American Gold Certificate is legal tender throughout the universe; it is worth its face value in the money markets of the world. College credit means academic legal tender; it is the basis for recognition on the part of the educational world of the academic standing of the institution, and because of the very fine support of the church Graceland's credits are full legal tender in the State and Nation. At the time of the organization of Graceland on a junior college basis, the Iowa State Superintendent of Public Instruction wrote as follows:

Dear Mr. Briggs: Permit me to congratulate you upon your junior college achievement. I am pleased to know that you have entered this field of education as a pioneer in Iowa, and now you are leading in a movement which I believe will accomplish much good in your locality and set a new ideal and a new standard in Iowa education.

The junior college in Iowa is yet in its infancy, but it fills a place in local educational systems, where it can accomplish much good. It is confined to a field only half as broad as the standard college, but this place in our system has been neglected. The junior college, with its new course of study, with its revival of interest in freshman and sophomore years of college work, with its special emphasis upon a modern educational ideal, with its attention to vocational education, comes to fill an educational need.

A man who has the right ideals and lives up to them fulfills his mission in this world; and in your college you are receiving young men and women and are helping them to form the right habits and to follow ideals that will make them better and happier in the future.

I have been personally interested in this movement for several years past and am glad that you have a chance to start the work in Iowa. Your broad experience, coupled with your executive ability and scholarly attainments, make you an excellent leader in this new junior college movement.

I have been fortunate in knowing some members of your faculty, and if all the faculty are as thorough, and well grounded in educational work as those I have known, you are indeed fortunate to work with such a group of educators, and the education of your pupils will be of the highest type.

Again permit me to congratulate you and to wish you and your college success and to assure you that you have my heartiest cooperation and sympathy in the great educational work that you are doing.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) P. E. McCLENAHAN.

These hopes and good wishes expressed years ago by one of the leading educators of the State have been more than realized.

As the first junior college in the State, Graceland has set the standard and is now one of the leading institutions of this class in the Middle West; and if we are to accept the judgment of one of the principal college inspectors, we are one of the three highest type junior colleges in the country.

Standardizing and accrediting associations are organized for the purpose of passing upon the matter of the faculty, buildings, equipment, library, laboratories, and financial support of colleges asking for official standing. They determine whether or not colleges are qualified to give instruction along the lines recognized as being within the province of the institutions asking for recognition.

In Iowa there are two authorities to pass upon the official standing of the Iowa colleges.

First the Iowa Intercollegiate Standing Committee, consisting of the registrars and three other members from the faculties of the three State Institutions of Higher Learning in Iowa. This committee accorded to Graceland recognition as a three-year college because of our extended program of studies. This recognition enables our students to complete their undergraduate course and receive their degree in one year's further study in the university. This very fine standing is in line with the decision of the general church a few years ago to expand the college into a full four-year institution at an early date.

The second standardizing agency is the Iowa State Board of Educational Examiners which has to do with the matter of the official recognition of colleges for the purpose of granting State teachers' certificates to graduates.

For many years Graceland has been so recognized, and her graduates have received the Iowa State teachers' certificate. Because of the standing of Iowa among the States of the Nation, Iowa State certificates are recognized in many States. In some States certificates are issued to Graceland graduates based on the certificate of credits from the college rather than on the transfer of the Iowa certificate. There is no uniform practice—the law, rules, and regulations being different in different States.

The third agency to pass upon the standing of Graceland College is the North Central Association of Colleges, which embraces the north central portion of the United States, some twenty States.

This association includes more territory and embraces a larger number of institutions than any other single regional association in the country. It probably ranks first in prestige in the entire United States. Recognition by the North Central Association means, therefore, in the educational world, the same as high ranking by Dunn or Bradstreet in the field of finance and business.

For many years Graceland has enjoyed this high rating, so that our students are received at other institutions with a standing which enables them to carry on their work with marked credit to themselves and the establishing of a fine reputation for Graceland.

The dean of one of our great universities where many Graceland graduates go for advanced work was recently asked by two Graceland students for some special consideration in connection with their courses. He was quite reluctant to grant the request, but on learning they were Graceland graduates said, "Well, I will take a chance on you boys. I have been here thirteen years and have only missed on one Graceland student."

The fourth basis for official standing is by the American Association of Junior Colleges, of which Graceland was a charter member. Having been the first and leading junior college in Iowa, it was but natural that we should be looked to in the matter of joining forces with other leading junior colleges of the country to bring about the organization of a national association having to do with the standardizing of junior colleges. This association gives Graceland national recognition.

International recognition has more recently been accorded us by the United States Department of Immigration in accordance with the late immigration law which makes it the duty of a member of the President's Cabinet to designate those colleges and universities in the United States to which students from abroad may be admitted for study.

Graceland has been officially recognized by the United States Government for this purpose, and we already have a number of students admitted to the completed. He begged repeatedly to be able to show the manuscript to some of his family. Finally Joseph Smith gave consent upon his promise that he should show it only to immediate members of his family, his brother, his wife, his father and mother, and a Mrs. Cobb, his sister-in-law. But Martin Harris, though he solemnly promised, broke this promise, and both he and Joseph Smith were rebuked; Joseph Smith because he had listened to the importunity of Martin Harris after he had once submitted the matter to the Lord and received a negative answer, yet still continued to importune. As a result he lost his gift, the urim and thummim, and also the plates. Two revelations included in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants were then received, namely sections two and three.

After a time he again received the plates, and with the specific instruction that the Lord had prepared for this event. The enemies had taken the first transcription and changed it, and hoped to work his confusion; but he was now told that there was a second account, the smaller plates of Nephi, with a more particular account from the time of Lehi down to the time of King Benjamin, and he was directed to transcribe this more particular account, which is what we now have in the Book of Mormon. These plates had been especially prepared for this purpose.

Still his secular work made progress slow. His poverty made it necessary that he secure employment, so he purchased a farm and went to work; and it was not until April, 1829, when Oliver Cowdery came as a scribe, that he was able to make much progress. Those who worked as scribes were Emma Smith, Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, and David Whitmer, but the bulk of the work was done by Oliver Cowdery. When he came their joint time was devoted to the task before them, and between April 7 and the month of June the translation was largely completed. In June, 1829, David Whitmer came with a team and removed Joseph Smith and his family to the home of David Whitmer's family, Peter Whitmer, sr., and it was here that the translation was completed, the Book of Mormon published, and the copyright taken out on the title-page of the Book of Mormon. It is interesting to note that this copyright was taken out on the 11th of June, 1829, yet the manuscript was not placed in the hands of the printer until August of that year, and the book was not completed until March, 1830.

This is of passing interest because of the persistent claim that the Book of Commandments must have been completed because the copyright had been taken out. This is not the case. In both instances the copyright was taken out on the title-page, and the book was afterwards completed. In the case of the Book of Mormon, the printing was completed and copy duly filed, but only after some nine months. We know of no evidence the Book of Commandments was likewise completed and copy filed.

As soon as the translation was completed, the messenger again came and retook the plates and the urim and thummim. There are some who urge that if they could see the plates they would believe. But this is not the case. Spiritual conversion does not follow simply from material facts. The book promises that he who reads with a sincere desire shall receive the evidence, and many have received the testimony and do know. The possession of the plates would have been a continual temptation to others, for since they were of gold, they possessed considerable intrinsic value.

Furthermore, only part of the plates were translated. A portion were under seal and are held until a later time, when, the promise is made, they will come forth. That time will be when there is a people prepared to receive them; a people who have kept the law, as set forth in the Holy Scriptures, in the Book of Mormon and the revelations of God in this day and age; a people who have purified themselves.

After the plates had been retaken, Oliver Cowdery made a complete recopy for the use of the printer, so that one copy was always safely retained. Then in August this manuscript was taken to the printer, E. B. Grandin, of Palmyra, New York.

From the May number of the Kansas City Banker, the organ of the American Institute of Banking published at Kansas City, Missouri, we quote:

"Doctor Frederick M. Smith, President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, delivered a short but pertinent message on our future responsibility of fostering education with the ultimate that man might find himself and learn to do the thing he is individually best fitted by endowment to do. Doctor Smith said in part: Man is being educated from birth to the grave. Education is not just schooling, but a process of drawing from the inner sources of man his real potentialities and talent which will enable him to find himself and his place in life, that he may enjoy the art of work.

"'Are you in the banking business by accident? The majority of workers today, in every vocation, are just holding down jobs. If you are to make a success of life, one with which you will be satisfied, you must find "that you," uncover your talents, and work in the joy of accomplishment. Education is to get rid of our misfits.'"

This address was delivered at the annual spring banquet, occurring at the end of the school year.

BOOK REVIEW

Zionism and the Future of Palestine: Morris Jastrow

Reviewed by Louise Evans

Zionism has been moved into the foreground of publicity. The movement, which seeks the reorganization of Palestine as a Jewish state, is of interest not only to Jews but to Christians and Mohammedans, for Palestine is a country equally sacred to the three great religions.

A writer to the Century magazine stated that the world is now going through the greatest reformation in its history. Comparatively few have recognized this—it has so stealthily crept upon us, yet who would question the verity of this statement? All the world's work is being transformed—a struggle between the new and the old. This book shows a combat between religious Zionism and political Zionism. Professor Jastrow apparently is well informed regarding this problem, but in my opinion the religious psychology of the orthodox Jew is the most interesting part of the book. We regret that he is misinformed regarding the history of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The author gives an interesting history of the rise of political Zionism, showing it to be an outgrowth of all manner of oppression in such countries as Russia and Roumania—simply an organization for "self-emancipation" for the Jews, in an effort to "secure a home in some soil where they might live safely and develop freely without the pressure of the unequal struggle imposed upon them . . . had Zionism confined itself to the purely economic aspect of providing an outlet for the overflow of the Jewish population in Russia, there would never have arisen any differences of opinion as to the beneficial character" of such a movement, but the orthodox Jews object to it when it enters the religious field, claiming that it is contrary to prophecy.

Religious Zionism is an integral part of the orthodox Jewish faith, and its followers believe that the fulfillment of divine prophecy is not to be brought about through ordinary human agencies, but by God himself in his own way and in his own time, consequently from this premise Zionism is a doctrine hardly capable of being translated into an active political movement.

Too, the creating of a Jewish state, which is one of the objectives of political Zionism, would distinguish them as a distinct nation, to which they strenuously object. Through years of persecution their religious conception grew from a tribal deity to a belief in a God of universal scope. They survived the extinction of national life and their dispersion through the world because they had to become something more than a nation, that the world might be redeemed. At present their national bond has a merely theoretical force until the time for the restoration arrives. This is an outgrowth of their belief in the fulfillment of divine prophecy, which asserts that Jehovah will gather his chosen people, restore the temple service, and reestablish both the ancient priesthood and the Jewish kingdom.

The word nationality expresses a common ethnic descent; the word nation represents a political entity which may consist of a single nationality, but more common, for several nationalities to be represented in the nation which is safer for all peoples. Zionism strikes at the heart of this and endangers rather than protects the Jew. The author states: "how difficult it is in these days of close intercourse between countries to settle problems of sovereignty on the basis of nationality alone . . . another danger involved in laying too strong an emphasis on a single nationality as the basis of national life is that it engenders chauvinism and false patriotism," and refers his readers to modern Germany as a significant and disastrous example of a state which collapsed by its overemphasis on the single nationality which predominated in Germany. However, he does favor the creation of a Palestinian state based on all the nationalities there congregated, but not a Jewish state.

The author claims that the wars in which the Hebrews were forced to take part were not because of political disagreements, but rather that their religion was endangered. The national life was simply tacked on to the religious mission, although as every people is bound by the weight of tradition, the Jews could not entirely divorce their religion from their nationality.

The process which changed the Jews from a nation to something more than a nation reached its climax in the final struggle with the Roman power. It was then the Jews split into two groups, those who followed the teachings of the apostles and those who remained a separate group with only a religious bond. Had the Jews remained a nation they would have disappeared, as so many other nations of antiquity. Previous to the dispersion they had made no contribution to science, art, or commerce. It was after the creation of the new type of religion made its appearance that they gave lavishly to the world.

In the face of all this the Zionists propose to make the attempt to turn the hands of time backward two thousand years in order to set up the Jews as a separate political entity.

Palestine has become an intra-national possession. To set up in the face of so momentous a fact the claim of a single group, is to ignore other peoples, which will result in war.

"Under modern conditions of life mixture of nationalities is a normal condition—isolation, the abnormal that leads to sterility. It is by a constant crossing of currents and countercurrents that modern progress and culture proceed. A Jewish state would necessarily emphasize isolation, and if it did not it would cease to be a Jewish state. The fundamental principle underlying the plan for the formation of a Jewish state is thus in contradiction not only to the testimony borne by the past history of the Jews, it runs not only contrary to the trend of Jewish history during the past two thousand years, it not only ignores the changes that have come over Palestine during this period, . . . but it is also contrary to the general trend and spirit of the age. . . . why all this agitation for the satisfaction of a sentiment which, though impressive from the romantic aspect, is fraught with such great dangers when the attempt is made to convert it into a reality."

"The world, storm tossed by the disasters of the last few years, longs for peace. Where is that peace to come from if we throw new apples of contention into the ring?"

"What a happy destiny it would be for Palestine to be reorganized in such a manner as to present a prospect at least of that peace of which one of the ancient prophets gave us so impressive a description, a country 'in which swords shall be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks,' and where nation shall not lift sword against nation, where there shall be no need for drilling men for war, and in which everyone shall sit under his vine and his fig tree and there will be none to make him afraid."

Lowly Ones

" . . . the Lord hath need of them."—Matthew 21:3

Only an ass, and foal of an ass,
But the Lord had need of them.
Flowers and palms they trod that day,
And carried a King upon his way,
In high Jerusalem.

Only a shed, with the cattle nigh,
In little Bethlehem,
But alike in death and alike in birth
He honored the lowly ones of earth,
For the Lord had need of them.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Council Bluffs, Iowa

Mothers' Day was appropriately observed in this place, and all are made better by considerably thinking of mother, and getting a proper estimate of how much of a return we have made for the contribution mother has made for us.

Many are now out of work or threatened with a lay off. The Saints, as a rule, are favored in many ways. There are many evidences growing out of social and economic or commercial conditions that give evidence that the scriptural instruction to "Owe no man anything, but to love one another," if heeded, would advance our interests as a church and as individual members of that church. A lack of observing this rule brings hardships to many, and hinders the accomplishment of the good we might otherwise do, and what God wishes us to do.

Nearly every day we learn of Saints having moved into the city, and others have changed their addresses, and no information of it for weeks has come to the officials of the branch. Much work would be saved if the members when changing their address, would let the clerk of the branch know of it. It would be a great advantage to the visiting officers.

On the 21st of May, the special conference held for the perfecting of the organization of the Southwestern Iowa District out of the territory of what formerly was the Pottawattamie and Fremont Districts was held at Central Church in Council Bluffs, Iowa, at 2 p. m. and a complete organization perfected with H. H. Hand, president; John A. Hanson and N. Mortimore, associates; Mrs. Elsie Butler, secretary; T. J. Smith, treasurer; J. F. Mintun, historian, with Charles Forney assistant; O. A. Currie, superintendent of Sunday school; W. E. Brown, superintendent of Religio; Sister Bessie Mattison, superintendent of Department of Women, and Roy C. Murphy, superintendent of Department of Music. Bishop C. A. Skinner was sustained for the new district. Apostles John F. Garver, F. Henry Edwards, and Roy Budd assisted in this organization. M. H. Siegfried, of the Presiding Bishopric, was present.

Preparatory to the gathering of the priesthood for quorum organization, there was held a banquet of the priesthood of the Gallands Grove, Little Sioux, and Southwestern Iowa Districts, with the Southern and Northeastern Nebraska District, at 6.30 p. m. in Omaha, Nebraska, on the 21st. On the 22d the priesthood met in a prayer service, fasting, at Central Church, Council Bluffs, at 8 a. m.; after which they adjourned to the Danish Hall, where the organization of quorums was perfected under the supervision of Apostles Garver, Edwards, Budd, and Bishop Siegfried, the latter giving a timely talk to the priesthood as to the needs of the church that should be considered by the priesthood. Besides the organization of quorums from the lesser priesthood and the elders, the seventy and high priests formed groups for the purpose of rendering each other help in perfecting themselves in their office and callings. At 2 p. m. the priesthood met at the Central Church for an ordination and dedication meeting, setting apart those who had been chosen as presidents and counselors to the quorums organized, with a special prayer of blessing to the brethren present. The Spirit of God was felt in confirming the work done, and all seemed to go out from these services with a new determination to serve.

It is a sad thing to know that a few of those who should be more Christlike have yielded to disobeying the national and local laws governing the use of intoxicants—the names of such having appeared in public print—which brings reproach on the good name of the church as well as the individuals transgressing. When it is so generally known that we believe that we should observe every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, and that we believe that the Lord has said to us that we have no need to break the laws of the land to obey the laws of God, not so much harm is done to the church. Under the present effort of those who would desire to nullify the constitutional law against the use of intoxicants as a beverage, we should emphasize again and again what this church has many times emphasized in favor of temperance.

Several severe cases of sickness of late. Some have recovered partially, and some are lingering, still having faith in God who through Jesus Christ has made provision for their blessing; so that whether they live they live unto the Lord, and whether they die they die unto the Lord.

Sunday evening, the 5th, a charter was presented by one of the officials of the Boy Scout organization in this part of the State to a troop of Boy Scouts organized in the branch, known as troop No. 19, with Brother J. S. Garner as scoutmaster, assisted by Lester Merle Spence.

On the same evening Brother Walter M. Self, of Independence, gave us a very encouraging sermon.

It is noted that during the last month the prayer meetings in Central Church and the missions have enjoyed more of the Spirit of God, and a better attendance is observed. There is still room for improvement in the line of attendance, and the greater activity of those attending.

Some of the students of Graceland have returned, bringing with them the spirit of cheer, and expressing in no uncertain way their joy to be at home and mingle with the Saints of the branch in worship.

We only know of one from the branch in attendance at the religious institute at Lamoni, but there may be others. Many had a desire to go, but have been hindered. It is a poor time to expect the Saints to have much money left after graduation exercises. This is one of the unnecessary expenses forced upon the Saints because of custom.

The work is slowly forging ahead; each service seems to increase in spirituality. Attendance has increased during this last month, even though the weather has been somewhat against us, cold and rain seeming to be here to stay. Preaching services of late have been of an unusually high type, and we have received much instruction of worth. Our young people are holding prayer services every Sunday morning at eight o'clock, and we have reports from those in charge that assure us these services are very spiritual. Our Wednesday evening services are slowly being built up, and we trust the time will soon come when the Saints will appreciate the great benefit the prayer services are to them. Sometimes our people are slow to appreciate the benefits to be derived from meetings of testimony and prayer.

Our missionary services are being held every week. Last week we conducted three meetings at the home of Elder William Woods. Two of these were held on the lawn, and Brother Woods' neighbors were privileged to hear the gospel story. Brother Claude Kress was the speaker on Monday and Tuesday evenings. On Wednesday no prayer service was had, for it had been planned and agreed that a preaching service on the lawn would be more beneficial. But the weather turned cold (as it has a habit of doing lately), so Brother Guy Haynes talked to those assembled in Brother Woods' home, where it was warmer.

We are not yet able to determine the result of these services, but if the weather turns warm we plan to have outdoor services all summer. We held our service again this week in Brother Woods' home, it being too cold to have it outside. At this time Elder Haynes was privileged to talk to a houseful, and he enjoyed the Spirit in presenting the truth. Elder Woods is assisting Brother Haynes at the present time in these meetings, as Elder Fisher's health is of such a nature as to prohibit his going out much at night. We are sorry, because Elder Fisher is a fine spiritual man and gives us some very clear-cut sermons.

Nearly everyone here has something to do in some line of church work, and we find that the more we do the more there is to do. We have a branch newspaper. The first edition was read some time ago and was splendid. We shall try to send a copy of our next in our next letter.

A couple of our young people stole quite a march on us by being secretly married some time in March. We understand that even the bride's father did not know until last week. Brother Ben Gerdes, "Big Ben," has changed the name of Sister Hazel Jackson to Hazel Gerdes. We extend to them our best wishes. Sister Gerdes is the daughter of Brother and Sister F. F. Jackson.

Our Sunday school is planning a picnic some time this month. We are not yet certain of the date.

Brother Claude Kress is busy somewhere in the district, we don't know just where, but we know he is busy. If we were all busy with the Lord's work the Devil's work would not prosper as it does, and the Lord's would prosper more.

Our church is located at 405 West Parker, on the Litchfield car line. All Saints passing through this city are invited to attend services.

Topeka, Kansas

June 7.—Elder W. L. Chapman, a former pastor of Topeka, was present at the sacramental service the first Sunday in May and gave the introductory remarks. After reading the fifty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, he stated that the sacrament was not only a privilege, but a challenge, and a responsibility for us to enjoy a more wonderful privilege in the future. It is not an obligation of God to us, but us to God. The last verse was stressed, and is: "As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; my Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and forever." Brother Chapman was accompanied by his wife and son. This service was in charge of C. H. Smith, assisted by A. P. Crooker and B. F. Deller.

On the 8th of May a Mothers' Day service was held in charge of the fathers and sons. Following the address of F. O. Kelley at the 11 o'clock hour on the beauty, origin and significance of the day in our country, George Barsoml, a Babylonian of Constantinople, was present and gave another talk in contradiction, showing that it was impossible for women to be revered in the Mohammedan faith as they are under the Christian religion, "for," said he, "if a woman should enter the sacred temple, she would be destroyed (not considered worthy of entrance), and when she dies that is the end of her." The conversion of these people to the Christian religion is a hard problem because of ignorance. There are forty million Mohammedans, and ninety-eight per cent of them are unable to read or write. Yet with faith in God their conversion is possible. A priest has a more abundant entrance into the paradise of God, according to their faith and practice, because of the Christians he kills if they refuse to accept the priest's teachings.

Truly, after listening to this last talk, we were made to appreciate the gospel and its uplifting influences to both sexes alike. A donation of ten dollars was sent by the branch for the education of one pupil to the Christian religion.

The evening sermon was by A. P. Crooker. His scripture lesson was from Luke, and the theme, "Mary kept these things and pondered them in her heart," was instructive and interesting. "A mother would not be a mother if like Mary she did not keep the great truths and ponder them in her heart," he asserted. The story of Hannah of old was related, and a beautiful tribute paid to our own beloved Emma Smith, and others of our church women.

The Wednesday evening prayer service on the evening of the 11th was a spiritual session, and the spirit of the General Conference seemed to remain with those in attendance.

On the morning of May 12 our hearts were saddened at the news that Brother A. P. Crooker had been stricken with apoplexy. The prayers of the Saints went up in his behalf, and on the following Sunday a special prayer service was held at the morning hour. Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, Kansas, assisted by F. O. Kelley and C. C. Graham had charge of the service. Before the close of the meeting Apostle E. J. Gleazer and son came in and accompanied the members of the priesthood to administer to Brother Crooker. He recovered strength enough to be up and around the house by the end of the week.

Brother Gleazer preached in the evening, stating in the beginning that it was a pleasure he seldom had to drop in on an audience unannounced and where no one, as he thought knew him, but evidently some one did. His theme was the heavenly vision in Paul's day and in our day, and he urged the necessity of obedience. We must not measure our activities by that of man but by Jesus Christ.

For several weeks the son of Brother John Copp and grandson of the late Elder Menzie, of Scranton, Kansas, has been afflicted with some kind of paralysis. He has been remembered for some time in our prayers, and we trust soon will be restored to health. He is a bright boy, full of ambition and ideals and has the promise of being useful in the church. Saints, let us remember him.

District missionary C. E. Harpe came to Topeka from the district conference recently held at Fanning, Kansas, and has been rendering service, preaching, visiting the Saints and nonmembers, and administering to our afflicted ones. On May 29 he preached both morning and evening. Brother Crooker was present in the morning and offered the closing prayer. We had hoped he would be fully restored to health again, but on Saturday, June 4, he was stricken early in the morning and again at eleven o'clock. He never regained consciousness and passed away at 4.20 in the afternoon. All the members of his family were at his bedside, also Brother Harpe and Saints and friends. It was indeed a blessing to have Brother Harpe in this hour of need, and in accord with the wish of our brother he preached the funeral sermon.

Brother Crooker was a native of Canada and after his marriage moved to Detroit, Michigan. While there he was baptized by Elder Natt Lydia and confirmed a member of the church under the hands of the late Joseph Smith. Then he moved to Toledo, Ohio, where he was ordained an elder by Richard Baldwin. Later he came to Des Moines, Iowa, where he wrote insurance and was State manager. On January 1, 1917, he came to Topeka. During this time he has served seven years as pastor of the Topeka Branch. He was loyal to the best interest of the members and the promotion of the work as he understood it. The weather was never too warm or too cold, nor he too tired or the night too dark for him to administer to the sick or relieve the distressed. The statement, "He was a brother, or a father to me," falls from the lips of both members and nonmembers.

His vocation in life was that of a traveling salesman, and the major portion of life was spent in that way. As he related in the prayer service not long ago, he was privileged to visit Cumorah's Hill and the spot on the Susquehanna River of interest to all Saints, and he had slept in Kirtland Temple. He has preached in all the branches in New York and in branches in sixteen different States. When possible in his travels as salesman, he was at the midweek prayer service in his own organization, or that of another. He was not afraid to reprove the erring, encourage those who came to him in distress, counsel and advise those who came to him in the daily walks of life, and when opportunity presented the weak were led to the true source of strength.

Brother Crooker was a member of the Fraternal Aid Union, Knights of Pythias, Equitable Fraternal Union, American Insurance Union, and great Sachem for the Improved Order of Redmen. He represented the Gates Rubber Company in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, and South Dakota, and for two years was State manager; then he worked with the Schick Manufacturing Company in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. At the time of his death he was State manager and secretary for the Sunflower Silver Fox Company, of Topeka. In his passing, the city loses a worthy citizen, the church a loyal supporter, and the family a loving father and husband. A beautiful poem in memoriam of the departed one was written by George I. Brown, an ex-police-man, and given the family upon the news of Brother Crooker's death.

The results of the General Conference were very encouraging to the Saints in general, and we believe all should move forward with a greater determination to accomplish God's purposes than ever before.

Preceding General Conference our former pastor, T. S. Williams, was in this city for a few days, visiting relatives and friends.

The Department of Women will not meet during the summer months for class study, but will be busy getting things ready for the bazaar which will be held early in the fall.

Brother Goodfellow and family have moved to Bethany, Kansas. Our branch suffers by the removal of this family, as Brother Goodfellow was our Sunday school superintendent and Sister Goodfellow our chorister; both were members of the choir. We regret to lose such faithful workers.

Mrs. Kate Brockway was called to Phoenix, Arizona, by the serious illness of her mother, Sister Weed.

The work here under the supervision of Pastor Whalley is moving along nicely, and though our attendance at services during the summer will no doubt be smaller, many of our people leaving for vacations, the work will be carried on, for there is always the faithful few.

Brother and Sister George Miller are leaving to take up residence in San Antonio, Texas.

Mothers' Day was observed with a program by the choir, and in the morning Pastor Whalley gave a most appropriate sermon.

Our junior department is getting ready for Children's Day. There will be a program on that day and baptismal services will be held.

The organization of Bluebirds under the leadership of Sister Whalley is a band of busy little workers. They have first the spirit of sacrifice, and from the small allowances given them at home are putting their mites together and give a liberal donation to branch expense monthly. Sometimes children set the example for the older ones. Sister Whalley took the Bluebirds on a picnic which they all hugely enjoyed.

Decoration Day was a day of leisure for most of our young people; so, to get away from the noise of our busy city, Brother and Sister Whalley acted as chaperons, and at 6 a. m. they started on a hike, seeking a place of quiet. After some distance travel, they made camp, built a fire, and toasted wieners and marshmallows, returning later in the day somewhat weary from their travel. All had an enjoyable time.

Our young people's prayer meetings are well attended, and the spirit of prayer and testimony prevails among the younger members when they meet for prayer. They sense this meeting is their own and take advantage of the time allotted them.

The Dramatic Club will give a play at the church Sunday night and also furnish music for the evening.

The midweek prayer services are fine, the spirit of love and peace being among us. Our attendance is good. In fact, the various departments of the branch are all moving along nicely. With a united effort, we are desirous of accomplishing a great work this year.

The month of May was ushered in with a soul-cheering spiritual sacramental service. There were only about half a hundred present at the meeting, but those enjoyed a good spiritual feast at the table of the Lord. Encouragement and admonition were given by the Spirit. The time was well occupied with prayers, testimonies, and songs. The Spirit's presence was felt in power, and many were moved to tears under its influence.

Visitors present were Brother Myron R. Schall and his mother, from Stanford University (Palo Alto); Brother and Sister Therin Walker, Oakland; Brother and Sister A. R. Lawn, Watsonville. Brother and Sister Lawn are both doctors in chiropractic. Brother Lawn expressed himself as ready and willing to go and to work for the Master wherever the Lord called.

Four afflicted ones asked for administration at this meeting. Sister Hunda Shinn, from Monterey, was also a visitor and one of those seeking administration.

On Wednesday evening, May 4, we had one of our one hundred per cent prayer meetings. Every member present offered a vocal prayer and nearly everyone gave a testimony. There was a splendid degree of the Spirit present. The Spirit spoke through one of the elders, giving words of recognition, commendation, and encouragement. The substance of this message was: As we have been made to rejoice, so also have the angels been made to rejoice; and our prayers and testimonies with our names have been recorded in heaven.

Sunday, May 8, was Mothers' Day, and the services of all the departments of the church were in honor of the mothers. Brother Robert Cowden, pastor, preached the Mothers' Day sermon, which was well received.

The prayer meeting on May 11 also was recorded a one hundred per cent service. Needless to say that this meeting was good; all one hundred per cent meetings are a joy to the heart.

May 13 and 14 were the hottest days of the month, the mercury going to 97 degrees.

On Sunday, the 15th, Pastor Cowden was the speaker at the morning hour, giving us a forceful sermon on the theme, "Priesthood." He showed plainly that without priesthood and the power by which it worked there could be no church of God. There was no service in the evening, the branch deciding by vote to hold no evening meetings during the fruit season.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has changed its time of meeting from Sunday to Friday evening, and only on the first and third Fridays of each month.

On the evening of May 18 the Organ Booster Club gave an operetta, "The gypsy rover," out in the country at the Palla Schoolhouse. They cleared about eleven dollars for their fund.

On Friday evening, the 20th, the Religio held its first Friday night meeting, consisting of a lesson on stewardships, and a short program. After dismissal the members retired to the Sunday school room in the back of the church, where they played games and partook of light refreshments. All seemed to enjoy the evening.

On Sunday, May 29, the branch held memorial services in honor of the country's dead.

Sister E. S. Chase met with a very painful accident since our last report. She got one of her fingers into an electric clothes wringer and mashed the nail off. The wound seems to be healing all right, and a new nail is growing. Sister Chase was at the prayer meeting tonight.

Our young sister, Mabel Gilbert, daughter of Brother and Sister B. R. Gilbert, who has passed through a severe siege of appendicitis and chicken pox, is convalescing nicely and is able to be out again. When she was operated upon it was found that the appendix had burst. This made her case very serious, but through the success of the operation, the skill of the physicians, the administrations of the elders, the prayers of the Saints, and good nursing, she is being restored to health. For this we feel to thank the Lord.

Brother Meeder Smith, who has been confined to his bed for some length of time, is slowly improving.

Sister C. W. Hawkins, known as "Aunt Sarah," has been away from her home for nearly two weeks nursing Sister Bertha Morden who has been confined to her bed with afflictions—tonsilitis, erysipelas, high blood pressure, etc., during that time. Sister Morden is better now and seems to be on a fair way to recovery. Sister Minnie Wilcox is still in the hospital and does not seem to get any permanent relief from her suffering.

Brother Roy Harris, one of our branch priests, who had such a serious accident some time ago, is able to be around and look after his business again and has lately organized a troop of Boy Scouts in the vicinity of the branch, registered as San Jose Troup No. 23, of which he is scoutmaster. Brother Harris is a Spanish-American War veteran. He is meeting with his troop at the church.

The San Jose Saints are looking forward to the coming reunion which convenes at Irvington, Friday, July 15, at which time and place will also be held our district conference.

Boone, Iowa

June 5.—We are glad that Brother and Sister D'Arcy were returned to us for another conference year. They are efficient and faithful workers and a great strength to the Boone Saints.

Brother D'Arcy delivered the Mothers' Day address with a splendid spirit. The Sunday school furnished carnations for each mother present.

The branch held its quarterly business meeting May 27, and in spite of wind and rain a goodly number were present and a good spirit prevailed.

The midweek prayer meetings have been of good interest, and a Mrs. Laign was baptized by Brother D'Arcy at prayer service on May 24. Sister Samuel Smiley bears her testimony of being healed of gall trouble when doctors declared an operation the only relief of severe pain suffered. Sister Smiley, who is perfectly well and attends all the preaching services, is now in her seventy-sixth year.

Sister John Hall who has been ill so long still suffers. She is now bedfast and asks to be remembered by the Saints. She also is in her seventies.

Elder E. G. Beye, of Rhodes, is an ever-welcome visitor. He occupied the pulpit May 29.

Elder D'Arcy is conducting interesting meetings at Newton, Iowa, this month.

The men being the losers in the Sunday school contest showed their culinary accomplishments in serving a banquet to the women one evening in May. Plates were laid for about sixty. All men need a "little bossing" and Sister D'Arcy proved to be a very good one at this time. Fine food was had.

A nursery has been added to the Sunday school, the little tots being nicely cared for during the Sunday school hour.

An all-day picnic has been planned for June 17.

An ice cream social was given by the Department of Recreation and Expression last month at which time the Temple Builders gave a short play for the entertainment. This department meets each Tuesday evening. They play volley ball in the way of recreation.

Sister D'Arcy conducts the Department of Women, holding regular meetings in the study of stewardships. The sisters have been busy in striving to assist in a financial way.

An Oriole circle has been organized, and an effort is being made to care for the interests of all. The Temple Builders presented the Sunday school an attractive register board. They also hold weekly meetings and are striving to assist in the work. They have been studying "Tests of character," "Personal influence," etc.

The branch president is making every effort to increase the interest and general good of the branch.

No service was held Sunday evening, June 5, in order that all might hear the baccalaureate sermon. Two of our young men are among the graduates.

A Wonderful Surprise

Columbus discovered America and died ignorant of the fact, thinking he had only reached the western environment of India.

Ponce De Leon, after a lifetime spent in vain search for the "fountain of youth," to the day of his death maintained that somewhere in the State of Florida "waters of rejuvenation" would spring from the ground.

I am much in sympathy with such men, for I, too, have all my life suffered the urge to locate the "storehouse of truth," and, like them, have missed the goal hidden from wavering eyes.

Often in the company of some group of truth seekers, a crumb from heaven would fall for me, and I would consider the invitation to launch out with them. Then the mirage formed by the emotional intensity of my own heart hunger would fade away, disclosing the barnacles of trivialities and man-made precepts that incrust their hull.

Two years ago, at the suggestion of my wife, I glanced through the pages of the Book of Mormon, then put it aside. It seemed rather dry reading and unprofitable to me in my search.

It is said somewhere that "when the pupil is ready the instructor appears." So, out of pure friendship for Elder A. T. Gray, I consented two weeks ago to read the Book of Mormon through and look to the "Spirit of all truth" for verification.

What a wonderful surprise it had in store for me! I was taken captive and bound with golden cords as soon as I crossed the borders of this record of God's dealing with his people.

All the flowers of Spirit I had ever found were here in profusion, and each one named for me.

All the beautiful thoughts that had ever rewarded my meditations were intensified and classified while in Nephi's company.

All the faith, hope, and charity I had ever experienced were multiplied and stayed with me throughout the book.

When I parted with Nephi he gave me, as a token of his stewardship, a new faith, greater love and clearer realization; and I was one great stride closer to Zion.

My next instructor was Abinadi, as he stood prophesying, unaffected by the licking flames kindled by his enemies to consume his flesh.

I learned from him that God does not remove the burdens during our proving time, but gives the submissive ones added strength that they may be easily carried, that we may be exercised thereby and not remain weaklings.

I stood beside Jared's brother, when in answer to his sublime faith God touched the molten stones and imparted to them the quality of illumination, and then as faith grew to realization God appeared in the image he made man.

Later I found myself in the crowd listening to the wonderful oration of Benjamin. I could see the hurrying couriers as they delivered his message in written form to those out of reach of his voice.

I see lonely Moroni who has just finished the burial of the records so carefully encased in a casket of stone where they were to remain for fourteen hundred years; I hear the voice of the Spirit saying to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thy brethren, for whom thou dost grieve, are safe in my hands, and in mine own time I will commission thee to cause these records to be uncovered, and faithful hearts and hands shall be raised up in that age to distribute under thy supervision the treasures of mine house."

Just a mere fraction of the impression this "Book" made on me can be written at this time. But surely God's ways are unsearchable.

To a simple boy, in a small town a few miles from where I was born, he gave the grace to uncover the real "fountain of youth," and as its waters came forth to endow those who would drink, brought to light the real discovery of America and its true history.

The Book of Mormon is peculiar. Its words are not dead words, but to the reader of honest heart they live and breathe out the witness of the spirit of all truth. One reading was enough to bring about the baptism and confirmation of myself and my wife, and I believe all my children will soon follow—very likely on Children's Day. It is too great a subject for me to write about in connection with this article.

Even now I see this little church crowded in the near future to the standing room capacity. I can see the people coming back and forth like bees to the hive, bringing in the tithes, and coming forth laden with honey from the "Rock."

Spirit Calls

Spirit called, no yielding came;
I tossed in chaos whirling.
Spirit called, I sought for fame,
On mortal plane alluring.

Spirit called, Arise! Awake!
Gird thy loins and follow me.
Spirit called, My strength partake;
Knowest thou my love for thee?

Spirit called; at last I see Lights on path of Destiny.
Spirit called, anointed me
To walk with him eternally.

Kewanee Conference at Savanna, Illinois

Our second annual district conference was held the last Saturday and Sunday in May, at the smallest branch in the district. In some respects it resembled a young people's convention, for the unfavorable conditions of roads and weather made it impossible for many to attend, which we regretted very much, especially the absence of our district president, E. R. Davis, who has recently undergone an operation at the Sanitarium. Several other district officers and earnest workers were unable to be present, for various reasons.

We did, however, enjoy having Patriarch Ammon White and Missionary Leonard Houghton with us. They are still fresh with the spirit of youth and ambition to urge us onward, ever higher and nearer the mark we have set to attain, and from them we ever receive the stimulus that we as young people need. There were visitors from nearly all the branches of the district and also several from Clinton, Iowa, our nearest neighbor. The spirit of fellowship and good will was very pleasant to experience throughout the conference.

We assembled for prayer service at 8.30 Saturday morning, with Brother Leonard Houghton and Brother John Williams in charge. The sweet Spirit was present in a number of devoted prayers and testimonies, particularly in contrasting the joys we find in the church with the artificial glamour of worldly pleasures. Truly we have been favored with our heritage of the "Pearl of great price."

Our conference reports showed a total membership of 826, with a gain of 11 for the three-month period. The financial report listed receipts of $719.37 as tithing, etc., and $37.17 for district funds during the period. We have a balance of $258.15 on hand at date. The budget committee have set the annual budget total at $700, all expenses included.

We have appointed a committee of three to have charge of the soliciting of funds to purchase a suitable monument for Missionary O. E. Sade, who labored so long in our district and whose grave has been neglected for some time.

We also wish to express our deep sympathy to Sister Nealy, of Millersburg; Doctor Stephens, of Matherville; Mrs. Elva Thompson, of Pontiac; Mrs. Anna Holmes, of Joy; Mrs. Elizabeth Dibert and Mrs. Mary Reed, of Canton, and Brother William Jones, of San Francisco, California, in their recent bereavements. We take this means of extending our sincere condolence in their hour of grief and sorrow in the loss of near relatives.

Our district officers were elected as follows: district president, E. R. Davis; first counselor, Edward Jones; second counselor, B. E. Sartwell; treasurer and bishop's agent, Edward Jones; secretary, Winifred Douglas; historian Mary E. Gillin; Department of Sunday school, Marjorie Holmes, of Joy; Department of Recreation and Expression, William F. Stiegel, jr.; Department of Women, Jessie Sultz; chorister, Orpha Holmes; orchestra leader, William Keck.

Saturday evening we were entertained with a program by the local branch, to which several interesting numbers were contributed by the visitors. Brother Howard Grayless and James Gagnon each gave us a violin solo, with Nola Epperly and Wilma Sartwell as accompanists, rendering delightful piano solos also. Some of the younger members of the Sunday school gave readings and vocal solos, while a group of girls in true spook-story fashion, with the lights out, gave the musical reading, "Little Orphan Annie." Mrs. Rose Lister told us all about her "Aunt Tabitha," while Harry Jones and David Williams, of Kewanee, prepared the "Cream puffs" for our amusement, although B. E. Sartwell, the tailor, protests that he is not satisfied with them. Wilma Sartwell, in the play, "Home from college," gave us an idea of the delightful ecstasy of a profuse college vocabulary, but her "superlative" pa, James Gagnon, and her "lovely" and "consummate" ma, Frances Phillips, were not so poetically appreciative as she anticipated. Then Georgia Robinson, from Clinton, and Ruth Hegwood, of Moline, proceeded to criticize everyone in the audience by pretending to read from their home paper, The Wasp. As a fitting climax to the program, Brother Ammon White told us the Book of Mormon story of Alma and the sons of Mosiah so dramatically that the large audience was held spellbound.

After the program, all the young folks assembled at one of the homes for an evening of fun and merriment, in which none were disappointed. Light refreshments were served, and all retired in time to be on the dot for prayer service the next morning.

At 8.30 the prayer service was in charge of Brothers Leonard Houghton and Ammon White, with a goodly degree of the Spirit present. To the tender words of exhortation and advice that fell from the lips of our spiritual leaders, our hearts responded loyally. It is an inspiration to sit at their feet and learn from their own personal experiences the great lessons of life.

Brother Ammon White addressed us at eleven on the subject of "Preparing to meet Christ." He reminded us of the promise that he should return in like manner as he ascended, but would we be clothed in the wedding garments to receive the bridegroom? Will we be accustomed to the simple but perfect food that shall be served at his table, or will it be distasteful to us because we have indulged so far in the manna of the world that we shall not be able to enjoy his food? Will we be so used to the company and revelry of the world that we shall feel out of place among the venerable patriarchs of old? Will we yearn for the things that are harmful for us of which we have never learned to deny ourselves in order to merit his approval? Zion can not be a place of joy and peace to those who are not worthy and prepared to live therein, for that ever-present feeling of guilt and remorse would cause them to desire to be removed from that atmosphere of disapprobation even unto a condition of punishment. He spoke of a dream that was given him as to having charity with those who are slow in giving up tobacco, for it was given him to feel the pangs of one who is addicted to that habit so strongly that he would have given even his last possession to buy one smoke. We should indeed exercise great patience and love with those who are unable to overcome this habit.

In the afternoon Brother Leonard Houghton presented the young rich man in his theme of consecration. Even though this man had been of good moral habits he was unwilling to crown his life with the consecration of his worldly goods. To him his earthly riches were of more value than eternal life. Is it so with us? However, consecration means far more than the dedication of our possessions—it means the offering of our lives upon that altar of service and sacrifice, for if a man would find eternal life he must be willing to lose it here on earth. Many instances of such consecration may be cited in our church, such as that of Charles Lake, who laid down his life on a lonely South Sea Island that the poor natives might not lose their hope in the gospel. We may not be called upon to leave our homes, but should our sacrifice be less than theirs if we seek the same reward?

"A peculiar religion" was the subject of Brother Ammon White's discourse in the evening. Truly, in the time in which our gospel was restored it was most peculiar in comparison with the creeds then taught. To believe that God could and would speak today, to believe that he would send his angels to converse with men, and that prophecy and tongues should be restored, were beyond credulity. No wonder it met with opposition and persecution, when it undermined the very core of their religion. But is it so unreasonable to think that God is unchangeable, and the same for ever? Shall we be content to eat from the scraps of the great spiritual feast they had thousands of years ago without receiving fresh food for ourselves? Since God is a God of love, his blessings shall be ours if we merit them, and his divine mercy and patience shall extend even beyond the grave, to the redeeming of those repentant souls in hell, that Satan shall not be prince of the world for ever. WINIFRED DOUGLAS.

President Smith at Toronto

The outstanding feature of the third annual young people's convention was the presence of President F. M. Smith, and we used him to good advantage. He addressed the assemblage five times. Never before did President Smith receive such a sympathetic hearing; never before was he heard to better advantage in Toronto. His message was clear, practical, and inspiring, and won favorable comment from all sides—we have yet to hear an adverse criticism. It is readily apparent that he is whole-hearted in the work. His sincerity and enthusiasm were an inspiration to all who heard him. We feel that we were highly favored in having him with us and can assure him of the good will and support of the Toronto young people, and older ones as well. Another feature of the convention was the opportunity of meeting our new district missionary, Elder B. H. Doty.

There was a splendid attendance, especially on Sunday, from all over the district and from Guelph, London, Windsor, Niagara Falls, and Buffalo.

On Friday night, May 20, the convention was opened by a banquet, and an enjoyable time was had by all present. Several toasts were proposed and responded to by different speakers, chief of whom was Brother Smith, who responded to the toast "Our church."

Saturday evening was devoted to the reading and discussion of a report of a committee appointed at the convention of 1926, on "Recreation of the young people of the church." As this is to be published in the HERALD, further comment on it is superfluous.

The young people assembled at 9 o'clock Sunday morning for prayer meeting, with President Smith in charge, and at 10 o'clock general prayer meeting was convened, with Bishop A. F. McLean in charge. A good spirit was present at both meetings.

In a sympathetic manner Brother Smith delivered an inspiring address to the young people at 11 o'clock, pointing out the difficulties and trials our young people have to encounter. He pointed out a better way than that commonly followed by the youth of the world. "Let us sublimate our passions," was his advice. At 3 and 7 the President again spoke to interested audiences. The topic at 3 o'clock was the "Social program of the church." He handled his theme in such a practical way and so enthusiastically that the large audience got a new and a clearer vision of Zion. At the conclusion of his remarks questions were permitted, and many difficult points were straightened out. He continued his topic at the evening session along general lines, and this brought the convention to a close. It was a red letter day for Toronto, but it must have been a tiresome day for Brother Smith. In the afternoon and evening the Toronto Choir, under the direction of Brother C. G. McCormick, rendered pleasing music. The Department of Women cafeteria service was much appreciated. B. H. HEWITT.

Coffeyville, Kansas

The Coffeyville Branch is still moving onward, holding regular Sunday services and the weekly prayer meetings with a goodly number in attendance.

Brother G. G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, was a branch visitor recently.

A number from here attended the district conference at Joplin, Missouri, May 20, 21, and 22.

An election of officers was held Friday night, June 3, resulting in the selection of the following staff of officers: Sunday school superintendent, Lois Henson; assistant, O. E. Pender; secretary, Sister James Reynolds; Religio superintendent, Thelma Walton; assistant, Evelyn Yeubanks. As branch president, Brother Howard Anderson was sustained; secretary, Sister James Reynolds; pianist, Margie Pitcock; chorister, Lois Henson; publicity agent, Evelyn Yeubanks.

Last Sunday being sacrament, the service was held at the 11 o'clock hour. Many prayers and testimonies were offered, expressing hope and courage.

We hope the summer months will not make any marked difference in our attendance and interest, and with the start that we have we are sure this will not be noticed.

Wiley, Colorado

May 24.—Another half year is almost gone, and the work of the church here continues to go onward. The artistic decoration of the church continues to be a source of pleasure to those who attend and helps to create the right spirit in our meetings.

The Sunday school had an attendance contest the past three months in which the Lions and Tigers tried to see which could get the most new members, and this was one instance in which Lions and Tigers associated very amicably. The Lions won the most points, and the Tigers are furnishing the "eats" for a lively social this week, when they propose to feed the Lions straw; as the Bible says the time will come when the lions shall eat straw like the ox and our Lions have become so amiable that time has surely come.

Several things might be pointed out as indicative of a greater degree of progress in the work here. The punctuality of the Sunday school is improved to a marked degree, as well as the interest of those attending. One lad who went to Sunday school on a certain Sunday morning with a resolve to be reverent and attentive made the remark later, "We had a real Sunday school this morning," has found at an early age that the spirit that we put into our service to the Master determines the inspiration that we receive.

A start has been made toward having a good, live Religio, with Brother Felix Hacker as superintendent. A number of the young people are taking a renewed interest in several phases of the local work, which always is a source of encouragement to those older in the work.

Several changes have been made in various offices in branch and Sunday school offices which promise greater efficiency. Wiley Branch believes in giving the work to those who like to do it, and whenever a change promises to be beneficial it is made.

The office of publicity agent being left vacant by the absence of Brother Leslie Allen, N. E. Berry, of Lamar, was elected last Sunday. Brother Berry is a very capable man for this office, and his interest and desire for the progress of this gospel makes him especially qualified for this office.

A splendid teacher training course has been carried on under the direction of our branch president, Brother C. A. Ralston, for several months. Brother Ralston is doing all in his power for the work here, and a general spirit of encouragement prevails among the workers.

Our young brother, Arthur Ralston, had the misfortune to suffer a very badly injured and broken leg a short time ago, but is recovering as rapidly as could be expected. Brother Elmer Fletcher is suffering from a sore hand that threatens to go into blood poison.

Sister Augusta Ralston left for an extended visit with relatives in California, and is missed very much from her accustomed place in the services.

Young People's Banquet at Runnells

RUNNELLS, IOWA, June 7.—The Runnells Department of Recreation and Expression gave a banquet in the church basement on the last night of May. This was well attended and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. Young people were present from Des Moines and Pershing. Many of the townspeople also purchased tickets, the banquet hall being filled to overflowing.

The dinner was prepared by the Department of Women under the direction of Sister McDonald, and was served in four courses. Everyone pronounced it good.

The program was arranged by Grace Tingle, department superintendent, and Lola Harvey, assistant.

At a little past seven o'clock dinner was announced, and we were "off" on the first event of the kind ever held in this town. The machinery was new and there was some "creaking" heard as Branch President Clyde McDonald made his first attempt acting as toastmaster. His embarrassment was overcome after everyone laughed at him in his attempts to tell jokes. Three special numbers were rendered by the young people from Des Moines. Vern Deskin played a solo on his violin; Misses Eva Cook and Gladys Barr sang, accompanied by Miss Vivian Casting, and Bertha Robinson Deskin gave a reading. Miss Faye Heiny gave a musical reading and Ione Miller a piano solo. Sister Lola Harvey responded to the toast, "I would be true"; Sister Nora Park, "I would be pure"; and Sister Grace Tingle, "I would be brave." Mrs. Helen Jarvis Barnes, wife of Superintendent Barnes of the Runnells schools, gave some readings.

The slogan for the evening was "Live clean," "Live so you may enjoy clean play." Brother "Steve" Robinson spoke on the subject of clean play, giving a splendid address. Brother C. B. Hartshorn, Des Moines pastor, spoke on the theme, "Clean lives." Both brethren "put it across" in fine shape.

Reverend Waudby of the Congregational Church was present, offering the invocation and benediction. He also made a short talk.

The fellowship that was enjoyed upon this occasion was wonderful. The subjects discussed were vital, and those taking part on the program are to be commended.

Practically all of the business men of the town were there, and the banquet is now "town talk."

Sister Maud Heiny is convalescing after her operation at the Lutheran hospital. She had a carbuncle on her shoulder.

Brother McDonald baptized three people from Newton in the fount of the Des Moines Church, Sunday, June 5. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Finley and Mrs. Margaret Benson are the new members. Mrs. Finley was a member of the Baptist Church and Mrs. Benson of the Methodist Church.

Brother D'Arcy is continuing the meetings in Newton this week.

Gallands Grove District Conference

The district conference for Gallands Grove met at Mallard, Iowa, May 28 and 29, and opened in charge of District President F. T. Mussell, assisted by Apostle John F. Garver.

Rain and cold interfered somewhat with Saturday's session, but the good Spirit was manifested, and all services were much enjoyed by those present.

At the business meeting new officers were elected as follows: president, E. L. Bedwell; secretary, W. W. Reeder; treasurer, E. L. Edwards; superintendent of Sunday School Department, Murl Meyers; secretary of Sunday school Department, Mrs. Murl Meyers; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Lacy Meyers; superintendent of Department of Women, Christina Crippen. The district president is authorized to choose two counselors. E. L. Edwards was chosen, and the other will be selected later.

Only about one half the priesthood reported, but those reporting have not been entirely idle.

The question of joint reunion with Little Sioux District for this year was defeated, and it was decided to hold our reunion at Sac City, August 26 to September 4. Our reunion committee will meet with the Little Sioux committee and if possible arrange for joint reunion in 1928.

Robert Fish, A. R. Crippen, and W. W. Reeder were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions of condolence for Brother Charles E. Butterworth, also resolutions of thanks to Brother F. T. Mussell who goes to Kansas to labor after three years excellent service with us.

Sunday opened with a social service. The morning sermon was by Apostle Garver. Afternoon speakers were F. T. Mussell and E. L. Bedwell, and in the evening our new missionary, M. K. Fry, occupied the hour.

On Saturday evening Charles J. Smith gave a fine talk about the Auditorium, using his picture machine and many views.

Our new missionaries were able to meet many of the Saints of the district, and being men of God they made a favorable impression. We are sorry to lose Brother Mussell, but we know our loss will be the gain of Saints elsewhere.

The next conference will be at Cherokee late in October.
W. W. REEDER, District Secretary.

Webb City, Missouri

Conditions in the Webb City, Missouri, Branch are moving along very satisfactorily and we are hopeful here of continuing to progress and grow in all departments in order that we may be more efficient workers.

During the month of February, Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith made us a visit, during which time he gave thirteen of our members their blessings, some of whom were unable to secure them while Brother Smith was at Joplin during the Spring River reunion last August, and he also preached for us during the week. His visit was followed by one from District President A. T. Higdon, who also was with us for a period of a week. The counsel and advice from both was well received by their hearers.

The first part of May, Bishop C. J. Hunt passed through the district and was with us for one night service; we always are glad to have him with us. Prior to the semiannual district conference at Joplin, May 20 to 22, Brothers Higdon and Lee Quick were with us and held two meetings. We try to always welcome those of our missionary force whenever they come into our midst. Our Sunday services for May 22 were dismissed in order to permit those from here to attend the sessions of the conference at Joplin.

Brother Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, held a musical institute at Joplin during the latter part of March and the sessions were appreciated by those who were in attendance from this place.

We are looking forward to the annual district reunion at Joplin in August when the Spring River District Saints combine their efforts with those of the Clinton District and the Southern Missouri District.

Exhorts to Devotion and Humility

PROVO, UTAH, June 1.—The work at Provo in every department is on the decline at this writing, owing to the various excuses that poor, frail mortals try to hide behind and fool themselves. I am astounded when I look around and see how we are neglecting ourselves and loved ones, even while we think we are struggling to the limit of our strength for the best good of all concerned. Oh, that we would drink often at the fountain of wisdom! that we might better serve ourselves and those about us in the things that are really worth while!

I enjoy reading the SAINTS' HERALD. There is so much food that serves to strengthen me in this grand and glorious gospel, and those things to bring about the redemption of the honest and faithful. We must seek inspiration that will bring us up, make us shining lights to those about us.

I am concerned as never before in our women, for by "our example in word and deed" will future men and women be blessed or condemned. Sisters, let us wake up and take greater notice of the little things which are really large and cease to think the smaller things are so much, when in reality they are very insignificant. Let us lay aside false pride, our cosmetics and finery, a little at first, then a little more, until we are cleansed so that we can better serve our cause spiritually and financially. This is the hope and prayer of a sister of the faith.

Stockton, California

Corner Sutter and Clay

After a long spell of cold and stormy weather the call of out-of-doors seemed to permeate all, and the Sunday school and branch officers together planned an outdoor service. On April 24 all gathered at the church at 9.30, bringing basket lunches. The waiting machines were soon on their way to the hills, where the peaceful atmosphere made the service seem more impressive, and all felt a benefit. The lunch was also thoroughly enjoyed.

The orchestra and choir have combined and named themselves the Musical Club. To celebrate their merging, they gave a banquet on May 2, which also was for the purpose of raising money to purchase music. Fifty tickets were sold at fifty cents each. The decorations, both table and overhead, were white and pink, making a very pretty sight. A pleasing program, musical and otherwise, was given during the sumptuous repast, and all present declared they received their money's worth. About ten dollars was cleared.

On Mothers' Day the Sunday school gave a short program which merged into the preaching service. On the following Thursday the Department of Women, after their regular meeting, gave their beloved leader, Sister Orr, a little surprise in honor of Mothers' Day. The surprise included a program, after which refreshments were served. She was presented with a bouquet of flowers. A poem composed for the occasion by our branch poet, Sister Mardel Holden, was read and presented to her, which in terms of affection reflected her worth to the Saints of Stockton, and her seeming indispensability.

At the last business meeting the branch voted to replace the old windows with new at the cost of nearly two hundred dollars. They will have modern glass, which will do away with the old shades and also open in a manner to give better ventilation.

The women served the regular cafeteria supper May 24, clearing about fifteen dollars. The attendance at meetings is as usual. All are cheerfully laboring together for this cause.

Sioux City, Iowa

Pastor G. Scott Daniel, 1606 Villa Avenue; Telephone 56387

June 8.—The organization meeting of the priesthood of the Little Sioux and the adjoining districts held at Council Bluffs and Omaha Saturday and Sunday, May 21 and 22, was attended by a number of the priesthood from Sioux City. Those attending were C. J. Smith, G. Scott Daniel, N. O. Calhoon, George M. Vandel, W. J. Smith, R. L. Sheetz. The talks by the general church officials present were very helpful and will stimulate us to greater activity.

Sunday morning, May 22, Elder C. Streeter was the speaker at Sioux City, while in the evening J. E. Keck presented some interesting thoughts gathered while attending the late General Conference.

Pastor G. Scott Daniel was the speaker both morning and evening, May 29, the morning sermon being in the nature of a Memorial Day address.

The sacramental service, Sunday, June 5, was presided over by the pastor and Elder G. M. Vandel. After the emblems were served little Frederick Stevens Pace, the infant son of Sister Elva Pace, was brought to the altar by the mother and blessed by the officers in charge. The Saints were active in testimony to the extent that there were twenty-eight testimonies and two hymns in thirty-five minutes. There appeared to be a blending of thought and feeling in the testimonies, which were characterized by the expressions of thankfulness for God's goodness as expressed in the unity and peace that prevailed and which seemed to be on the increase.

The Sioux City Saints are proud to have among the 1927 graduates from the high school two of our own young people, Frederick Vandel with the class from the East High School, and Genevieve DeHarty of the Central High School. These two young folks are preparing for work in the church, and as they continue their work of preparation in institutions of higher learning, we wish them continued success. The Sunday evening service was in honor of our high school graduates, they occupying seats on the platform. Special music was furnished by the choir, while the sermon by the pastor was in keeping with the occasion. Life was compared with the great national game of baseball, where safe hits, home runs, scores, and frequently sacrifice hits, along with outs, are the natural order. The high school graduate was compared with the player who was safe at first, with the responsibility of going on to second, third, and home with a score of a useful life.

An energetic group of the sisters met at the home of Sister Raymond Haycox and spent the evening making costumes for the children who will take part in the children's day program, June 12. The Sunday school has had its committee busily working for sometime in training the children, so we are looking forward to an interesting program.

Sister Streeter, wife of Elder C. Streeter, recently submitted to an operation for cataract, at the Saint Joseph Hospital, and the Saints rejoice with Brother and Sister Streeter in the recovery of her sight. Being able to see again after living in total darkness for eighteen months is certainly a blessing.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a wiener roast at Stone Park last Thursday evening. We all met at the church and went out in a body, most of the young folks going in a huge truck. The attendance was splendid, and the evening was spent playing games, roasting wieners, and toasting marshmallows. The activities closed by all joining hands in a large circle and singing some of the songs of Zion, closing with one verse of "I need thee every hour," along with cheers led by Frederick Vandell for the Department of Recreation and Expression and Latter Day Saints.

New York District Conference

The New York district conference was held at Niagara Falls, New York, June 4 and 5. We feel that we have an occasion of great rejoicing in the fact that this was one of the most spiritual and educational sessions of the Saints ever held in the district.

The attendance was excellent. Besides the numbers of Saints from our own district, there was a number from Niagara Falls, Hamilton, and Toronto, Ontario. Surely it was good to have this group of faithful children of the kingdom of Christ with us! Their presence lent much of cheer and blessing to the sessions of the conference.

There was arranged an extended program, and every effort was made to secure the attendance of those to whom parts had been assigned, and it was gratifying to have every number before the close of the conference.

The district president, Doctor P. L. Weegar, was untiring and persistent in his endeavors to give the people the best that it was possible to secure, and it was a real pleasure to witness the gratification evidenced in his countenance as he gradually succeeded in putting across every item of the tentative program previously arranged.

The first session was held at 10 o'clock a. m. Saturday. This being an innovation, former conferences having for years failed to secure a crowd for a forenoon session, but at the opening of the first session there was a fine audience present; and as the session was opened, there was in evidence a great measure of the spirit of peace and intelligence.

The first number was given by Mrs. L. Lenor Christy, her subject being: "Youth: their place in the church," and she was blessed with a wonderful spirit.

Professor B. B. Holland, of Port Alleghany, Pennsylvania, was with us and gave us some splendid service, his first effort being a nature talk; and in the evening his subject was, "The church in scouting," which lecture was illustrated, and proved interesting and helpful to all, especially to the young.

Most excellent talks were given by Ralph Weegar, William Landes, Duncan Clatworthy, William Shea, F. C. Mesley, and George Landes, covering a variety of subjects, given in a snappy, forceful manner that was convincing to all. Most excellent papers were prepared and read by Sisters John Kennedy, Catherine Lambert, Mrs. P. L. Weegar, Mrs. H. L. Ecker, and Mrs. A. Richardson. These papers were of such high order and so well appreciated that by motion they are to be passed on to the HERALD for use as they see fit.

The preaching was by Ward L. Christy, district missionary, and it will not be amiss to state that the Spirit of the Lord was in evidence with the speaker and people.

Last, but not least, we mention with pride the excellent work of our district chorister, Mrs. G. L. Davidson. She gave herself with unstinting energy and effort to give the conference the best in the way of music, and surely succeeded in presenting the conference the best musical program we have listened to for many years. Talent with untiring effort brings its reward, and if Sister Davidson continues her work, in a few years she will be able to develop a district musical organization second to none in the church.

The prayer and sacrament service was held at 8.30 a. m. and was well attended and very spiritual, and to the closing service the church was filled to its capacity, and the Saints are surely encouraged to press forward to 1930 and beyond.

The thing of greatest import and gratification to us was the Spirit that came out of the conference; the spirit of determination and service was witnessed in young and old. Everyone seemed to be anxious to press forward and to enlist his energies and talents to do something worth while in the future.

Northern California

Our work in the Northern California District is moving forward.

After the General Conference we were privileged to spend two weeks in Michigan, visiting relatives and friends. We then returned to our appointed field to take up the work, feeling our responsibility very keenly.

There were some minor things which we attended to and then went to the Chico Branch to hold a ten-day series of services. We are concerned over this place because of the interest that was shown in a series of services we held there last November, with splendid interest, resulting in thirteen baptisms. We feel that God again blessed our work, for we led three more precious souls into the waters of regeneration. This branch is presided over by Brother H. A. Hintz, who is a man devoted to the cause and loved by his people. A fine people make up the church here, and they are highly respected by the citizens of this city.

Leaving there Saturday morning, we came to Sacramento to carry out the plans we had made for a regional priesthood conference. The conference took in four of our thirteen branches, and twenty members of the priesthood were present. A banquet was served Saturday evening by the ladies of the Sacramento Branch. It was splendidly arranged and made a fine event. The writer read a paper entitled, "The stewardship of priesthood," and Brother Earl Curry, of the Lincoln Branch, led in the discussion.

Sunday was a busy day. Prayer service was held at half past eight. This was a spiritual feast for all. At eleven o'clock Bishop Edw. Ingham was the speaker. His subject was, "The priesthood and the financial law." The discussion was led by Brother H. A. Hintz. Brother V. B. Etzenhouser read a splendid paper on the subject, "The pastor's responsibility," at half past two; Brother W. H. Dawson led in the discussion. A deep interest was shown in all of these subjects, and the meetings Sunday were well attended by the membership, proving that they are demanding an efficient ministry today. Sunday evening the writer spoke to a splendid crowd on the subject, "The church; its function."

Sunday, June 5, was rally day for the Irvington Branch. A large crowd of Saints gathered on the reunion grounds and enjoyed the services of the day. It was a glorious day for all. These grounds are sacred to the Saints of the district, and one feels as he enters the place that he is standing on holy ground. The Lord has surely met with and blessed his people whenever they have met here. We have a splendid group of Saints in this place, presided over by Brother Emery Parks, who makes the trip from San Francisco twice a month to meet with them and give of his service. Our reunion grounds this year are being cared for by Brother and Sister Harder. With their willing hands co-operating with the great laws of God, they are making the place beautiful with flowers and shrubbery.

We find ourselves busy with the work at hand. Programs for our reunion, to be held July 15 to 24, are about complete. We anticipate the largest reunion ever held in this district. A splendid corps of workers is going to be on the job. Some have gone to Lamoni to attend the convention so that they will be better equipped. Sister Blohm, of the Sacramento Branch, and Ethel Christensen and her sister, of the Oakland Branch, are those who have gone from our district.

Looking forward to the growth and development of our church work, not only in our respective fields, but in the whole world, we endeavor to carry on in God's own way.

Corner Edwards and Peterson Streets

June 9.—How easy it is to write to the HERALD! and how eager we are to tell the news when something extraordinary has happened in the branch—when a series of meetings has been held and many have been gathered into the fold. But when things have been moving along in the same old fashion for weeks; when the same dependable few work on, and nothing of importance occurs; when even the attendance at church seems to be growing slightly less in spite of the untiring efforts of the few, then there seems to be nothing worth while to tell, the letter is neglected day after day.

"Is this the condition of affairs in Fort Collins?" one asks. Well, perhaps not altogether, but for one reason or another the attendance at church services is not what it should be, for even among the church members is an idea prevailing, at least it seems apparent, that there are other things considered of more importance than attending church services.

The church property is on the corner of Edwards and Peterson Streets. The building is on the end of the lot, leaving a fine vacant corner for a nice new church to be build in the future, just two blocks from the new high school building.

Two weeks ago the Boy Scouts of the Long's Peak Area held a Camporee at the edge of town, near Sheldon Lake. Six of our boys were in the newest troupe of the area, the troupe that took fourth place in number of points of the various contests. We are proud of the boys and glad that in their scout activities they can be under the leadership of a well-grounded Latter Day Saint, C. C. Cable. The assistant scout master, too, is a fine young man, Brother Dale Fritz.

The Boy Scouts have given some fine programs at the Religio of late, some interesting demonstrations which show they are getting very helpful schooling along that line. The Sunday school must show, too, that it is capable of giving the youth just as important instruction, yes, even more vitally important though along a different line of life work, or it is not keeping up to its privileges.

The Blue Birds are also doing good program work at Religio. They gave a very nice pre-Easter program. Mothers' Day they gave a play entitled "Mother's flowers," written by Gail Hildebrandt, a little girl not yet ten years old. The play was good and very well given—exceptionally good for girls of that age.

May 15, the Blue Birds went on a little tour around town and sang for some sick ones, shut-ins, and elderly people. The girls left a bouquet of flowers at each place they stopped. Such work is very commendable and was thoroughly enjoyed by both the girls and the shut-ins. The Mother bird enjoyed the work too.

Elder C. L. Bruno and family were in Fort Collins over the week-end at Easter time, and Brother Bruno gave the Easter sermon. The choir sang several special numbers.

Quite a number from Denver were in Fort Collins, Memorial Day. Brother Bruno preached at eleven o'clock; a seven piece orchestra of the Denver Sunday school gave several numbers at the Sunday school hour and also at Religio in the evening; Brother A. E. Bullard, district superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, gave a talk along that especial line of church work; and Sister L. Fishburn, superintendent of Sunday school work of the district, occupied at the 8 o'clock hour. "Adolescence" was her theme.

On Monday, Decoration Day, most of the Denver guests and some of the Fort Collins Saints took their dinners and drove up in the canyon. Mrs. Fishburn remained through the day with Mrs. M. P. Tilton, and it should not be necessary to say that they had a busy time talking over the work of the Sunday school, the Women's Department, and other church interests.

The Saints appreciate these visits from the district workers. They feel encouraged to go on, and desire to keep step with the church in its onward march of "Forward to 1930."

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO, June 7.—We are still busy, and the Master's Spirit is with us. We have good attendance at our Sunday school and prayer services. Owing to rainy weather and bad roads, we have not had our midweek prayer services for some time. But for the convenience of some who live farther away we will begin meetings on Saturday night, June 11. This makes it quite convenient for the McDermott Saints who hold Wednesday night prayer meeting, and in this way both branches can meet and work together.

Our priesthood met Sunday, May 29, at which time some of the members of the priesthood at McDermott were present.

Brother Mark S. Crabtree, who was ordained priest in our branch some few years ago, has been in Morgantown, West Virginia district, preaching during the past year, but was called home on account of injuries his mother received from a fall. He has preached some good sermons here, and we were glad to see him with us again. The Lord spoke to him through one of his faithful servants, telling him there was a work for him to do at this place.

We are looking forward to Sunday, June 12, Children's Day, which we feel will be a success. Elder F. May, of Dayton, Ohio, will be with us on this occasion. There is one who requests baptism on that day.

Invites Saints to Visit Him

I have been a reader of the HERALD for some few years, and enjoy the many excellent sermons and instructions.

Now I feel that we are as sheep strayed from the flock. We have recently moved here from Delhi, Ontario, and do not know of any Saints in this place or near here. We are twenty-three miles from Guelph, thirty-four or thirty-five miles from Toronto. Should any Saints be passing this way, or should any be readers of your paper, will they please write or call? We are living on the north side of the highway near the United Church. Some of the Saints may go this way to Toronto, and we would be much pleased to have them stop.

June 7.—Our sacramental service the first Sunday in May was well attended, and a good portion of the Lord's Spirit was present. Elder Henry W. Brunkhorst was the speaker at the evening service.

On Sunday, May 8, at the eleven o'clock hour the young men's Sunday school class had charge of the Mothers' Day program. The entire class was on the rostrum, and each one had some part in the service. Elder Russell Archibald, of the Saint Louis Branch, made a short talk at the close of the meeting. At eight o'clock in the evening the young women's class had a program which was very good.

At our branch business meeting on May 16 Elder George F. Barraclough resigned as president of the branch, on account of his duties as district president taking so much of his time. Elder Henry W. Brunkhorst was elected in his stead. The new president asked that all members fast on Wednesday, May 25, and come to prayer meeting and ask God to bless us in our district conference Sunday, May 29. This request was generally complied with, and God surely answered our prayers. The conference was one of the most spiritual we have attended in years. It opened with business meeting Saturday evening at six o'clock, after which Apostle Edwards talked on the Book of Mormon.

Sunday began with Sunday school at 9.30; preaching at 11 o'clock was by Apostle Edwards. There was an open priesthood meeting at 1 o'clock. Prayer meeting and Elders' Quorum meeting convened at 3 o'clock, and preaching again by Brother Edwards at 5.45.

A cantata was presented by the Landsdowne (East Saint Louis) Choir at 7 o'clock.

Almost everybody stayed for the entire day, and there was no sign of tiresomeness.

Sunday, June 5, we again had a spiritual sacramental meeting. Brother Brunkhorst was the evening speaker.

We will be glad to welcome any visiting Saints at any time. Our church is at the corner of Thirty-eighth Street and Forest Boulevard.

Lamoni Stake

Lone Rock

On Sunday, May 29, the Saints of Lone Rock neighborhood celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the branch. Sunday school was conducted at the usual hour under the supervision of the local officers.

The eleven o'clock service was presided over by Elder E. Dewey White, who served as president of the branch for a number of years. W. E. Prall, president of the stake, was the speaker, and took as his theme "The early ideals of the church." First he pointed out some of the more important early ideals, then proceeded to show that the church was a pioneer in the introduction of many of these into the religious world. During the discussion it was clearly shown that these ideals, even though introduced nearly one hundred years ago, are of the utmost practical value in the development of a Christian character in this modern age.

An excellent basket dinner was served at twelve o'clock under the supervision of the ladies of the branch.

Elder L. G. Holloway, whose boyhood days were spent in the Lone Rock community, was the speaker at half past two, and presented the history of the branch in an interesting manner. From his account we learned that the branch was organized on the 8th day of April, 1877, with a membership of twelve. Some years later a church building was started, but was not completed for dedication until 1894. On the 14th day of October of that year the building was dedicated. The opening prayer for this service was offered by Elder H. A. Stebbins, the dedicatory prayer by Elder R. M. Elvin, and the sermon by Elder Columbus Scott. All of the ministers who officiated on that occasion have passed from this field of activity. Brother Holloway not only gave the history of the branch, but his many years of residence in the community, together with his acquaintance, made it possible for him to tell many incidents which made the historical sketch more interesting.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley was the speaker of the evening, taking as his subject "What of the future?" He pointed out conduct is the result of ideals. The present is what the past has made us. The future of the church will be what we are making it today. The ideals of the church have not materially changed. We are building the church of tomorrow by creating and maintaining the ideals of today. He stressed the importance of training in every department of the church, so that the men and women in the church of tomorrow will be qualified to practice the principles of Zion building. He said that not only is the hope of the church in her young people, but that the hope of the church is also in those who are responsible for the ideals of the young. It is therefore highly important that we support and foster all proper educational efforts in the church.

Special musical numbers were furnished for each of the services by people from Lamoni and Oland. The Saints from the latter branch dispensed with their services during the day and joined the Lone Rock congregation for this special occasion.

The services of the day were of such a nature as to be very helpful to the Saints of the Lone Rock Branch, and we are certain that this day will long be remembered by them.

New Zealand Attack on Faith

(A letter to President Smith.)

In my last letter I wrote to you regarding the Reverend Kemp, of the Baptist Tabernacle, making an attack on Mormonism, and of my intended reply in the Town hall; also copy of my letter to him.

I received a reply thanking me, a copy of which I will forward with an account of my meeting. I only have time to catch the mail with this note; in fact, I am writing in the post office.

Six hundred people turned out to hear my reply, and a splendid meeting was had. Frequent applause was given. I spoke for two and one-half hours for questions. On concluding I received a great ovation. A large number of leading business men attended and manifested keen interest. One business man, a Baptist, arose and thanked me, publicly stating that my discourse was a revelation to him and had completely changed his views. A schoolmaster this morning told me he was astonished at the evidence I produced. Another man jumped on the train that I had boarded to return home and said that he would not have missed it for worlds. Many others have since thanked me, and I was told last evening that one of the Reverend Kemp's folk had sent him a white feather, because he was afraid to meet the issue. I have yet to hear one unfavorable comment. There were several present that began to interject, wanting to know how many wives Joe Smith had, etc. I said, "You will know in good time, when I am dealing with polygamy," and when I did I said, "Well, what of Joseph Smith and polygamy? While the world is trying to hound him down, he alone is responsible for placing in the world's hands the only weapon that can successfully combat the evil of polygamy, the Book of Mormon." When I showed the teaching from this book, along with the Doctrine and Covenants, I said the man Joseph Smith was responsible for these teachings. A roar of applause filled the hall, which was kept up for some time, to the utter confusion of the man that wanted to know so much. I referred to the bogus revelation and took a general view of the work.

We hope God will add his benediction and give us honest souls. Some have since attended our meetings. Thus we see the manifestation of its effect.

Apostle Curtis in Colorado

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

My family and I left Independence May 18 for Colorado, and we made the trip to Wray in two days.

We visited some Saints on the way and Sunday I preached twice, once in the country southeast of Wray and at Wray at night. Some of the Saints came eighteen to twenty-five miles by car. I had a good crowd at night and found the Saints feeling well.

By invitation of Brother Ward Hougas I am to speak tonight at Lamar, Nebraska, where there is a branch of Saints.

Tomorrow we plan on going to Colorado Springs, where I will locate the family for the summer.

Rain is needed here. The hot winds have been unusual. Wheat is burning up, and the land is too dry for corn.

Our daughter's health has improved some already.

My address will be Peyton, Colorado, M. R. "A."

A great deal of the joy of life consists in doing perfectly, or at least to the best of one's ability, everything which he attempts to do. There is a sense of satisfaction, a pride in surveying such a work—a work which is rounded, full, exact, complete in all its part which the superficial man, who leaves his work in a slovenly, slipshod, half-finished condition, can never know. It is this conscientious completeness which turns work into art. The smallest thing, well done, becomes artistic.—William Mathews.

Independence

Stone Church

Almost eleven hundred Saints found their way to Sunday school on Sunday morning, in spite of the gloomy weather. One encouraging feature of the session was the statement made by Superintendent Trowbridge that the list of visitors was "too long" to take the time to read. The secretary's report gave the number of visitors as two hundred and five.

Brother Glenn Sinclair, a cornetist of the orchestra, contributed to the enjoyment of the hour with a cornet solo, "Calvary." He was accompanied by Mrs. Stewart Tandberg, orchestra pianist.

Before eleven o'clock arrived the house was filled with those desiring to hear and see the Children's Day program scheduled for the morning hour. And while they waited Bishop R. T. Cooper led them in song.

To the strains of "Onward, Christian soldiers," the primary department marched up and took places in the choir loft, the overflow being seated in the first sections of the gallery. The beginners were seated in the west wing, under the gallery, and to the intermediates was assigned the main section of the auditorium. The juniors held their own Children's Day exercises at the Campus and were not present at the general exercises.

"Stepping in the light," was the opening song, and the prayer was given by Pastor C. Ed. Miller. The program had been arranged in order to have at least one number from each department. First, the primaries in charge of Miss Ruby Williamson gave a chorus number, a pleasing song. They were directed by Mrs. J. T. Westwood, and Miss Evelyn Barto presided at the piano. A violin solo by Comer Moore, of the intermediate department, was well executed. Then the beginners, in charge of Sister Tessie Smith, contributed their number. Three mothers clad in white robes, with scarfs and sashes of pink, stood in the background, their babies in their arms. They were Mrs. James Gault, Mrs. Sam Thiel, and Mrs. Gladys Welch, who held her twins. Beside them was also a large reproduction of the famous painting of Christ blessing the little children. The tiny members of this department, about twenty in number, dressed in white, sang a song after Mrs. E. G. Haberlein had read from the Scriptures where Christ bade his disciples: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The children were led by Sister S. A. Burgess, and Sister H. W. Harder played the piano.

The junior department at the Campus sent a representative to be on the general program Willa Mae Redfield, who rendered a much appreciated piano solo. Then the primaries in a chorus of sixty strong sang, and another pleasing number was given by twelve primary girls. Misses Emma Fern and Verna Kelsey, of the intermediate department, played a pleasing duet on the piano, which concluded the children's part of the program.

The contribution of the church to the morning's enjoyment was a sermon by Pastor C. Ed. Miller, who at the beginning of his talk stated that he was rich; he had been gathering something for years and yet it was not his, but he was rich—rich in the smiles of boys and girls. He reminded the children of the blessings of home and pictured the comforts and beauties of a heavenly home, giving baptism as a means of entrance to this heavenly home. The mode of baptism was simply explained, and then he told the children a story of a boy who was not baptized.

The Sunbeam song was the closing musical number, and the congregation was dismissed by Elder J. E. Kelsey, superintendent of the intermediate department of the Sunday school.

Children's Day was observed in the junior department at the Campus with a short, interesting talk on baptism, the subject of the day, by Brother Samuel A. Thiel. The seven who were to be baptized were honored by being seated on the platform. A group of girls of the junior choir gave the cantata, "God's flower garden," under the direction of Mrs. H. C. Burgess and Mrs. Lillian Cross. Little Thelma Betts, of the primary department, gave a reading that was very much enjoyed by the children.

Baptizing on Children's Day

In keeping with the general custom of making Children's Day a time for the children to enter the kingdom of God, baptismal services were held at the Campus at half past two Sunday afternoon. Under the trees on the southern slope of the green lawn a tank was banked with foliage and roses, red, pink, and white. There the people gathered.

Pastor C. Ed. Miller was in charge of the exercises. The music was led by Sister George H. Hulmes, and Superintendent Sam A. Thiel prayed a fervent petition for the little ones who during this hour would make a covenant with their God. Children from all the nine districts were gathered to enter the waters, and the ceremony was carried out in reverence and harmony. Forty were baptized, and all were confirmed at the Institute Building later in the afternoon. Those who were made members of the church are: Elbert C. Austin, jr., George A. Bartholomew, jr., Margaret J. Scott, Evelyn May Scott, Orie Stephen Coil, Edith Thelma Savage, Alice Bain, Robert Joseph Brown, Donald Carl Moore, Elnora Louise Short, Madge Shull, Pansy Fay Weir, Richard Eugene Peck, Mary Eloise Erter, Marion Lavaun Kramer, Clarence Arthur Bruner, William David Bruner, Helen Philamene Stark, Loretta Genevieve Crawl, Everett Lynn Kelley, Wilbur Ralph Smith, Audrie Myrtle Andes, Rudolph Ellison Richter, Ardyce Rogene Brown, Inez Bernice Hagen, Clara Elizabeth Feldmeth, Myrtle May Ross, Carl Gooch, Katherine Louise Warnock, Ollie Elizabeth Harrison, Gladys Angeline Harrison, Joseph Edwin Beck, Donald Charles Linville, Ruby May Linville, Mildred Maxine Winchell, Margaret Anna Winchell, Anna Lois Maness, Muriel Bain, Thelma Lee Nelson, Irene Catherine Bath.

Evening Meetings

Though weather like early April prevailed Sunday evening, a large crowd of Saints and friends gathered at the Campus for the first outdoor preaching service of the season. The Walnut Park band was on hand, and under the direction of Brother E. E. Moorman began the musical program at half past seven. Band numbers were interspersed with songs by the congregation, led by Brother Paul N. Craig.

The meeting opened in charge of Elder D. O. Cato, and "My faith looks up to thee," was sung. The invocation was offered by Pastor C. Ed. Miller, and the band rendered an excellent number while the collection was being taken. A beautiful number was given by the K L D S Ladies' Quartet composed of Mary Fields, Clara Curtis, Amelia Good, and Gladys Good.

President Frederick M. Smith occupied the hour, telling in simple, earnest language his hopes of changes to be brought about by associations and meetings at the Campus. In these Sunday night meetings and through the work of the Institute of Arts and Sciences he hopes to see a stimulation of the faith of the Saints, in God, in man, and in the church. He desires that the determination to study on the part of the individual shall be encouraged; that each person shall endeavor to better himself, his home, and the community; that the Campus shall constantly foster better citizenship for the community, the State, the Nation, and for God. The time is at hand, he hopes, when the souls of each participant in these meetings will receive stimulation; when better understanding shall be had; better sociability shall exist; better appreciation of the forces making for good within and without the church shall abound; when the mind, conscience, and soul of each man shall work with the mind, conscience, and soul of his brother toward a common goal; when a common goal will be a necessity for the people of God; and all shall appreciate the methods by which we shall reach Zion. "We need stimulation in mutual as well as reciprocal helpfulness," he declared. "Dare I say, To help somebody in need is the very essence of religion?" As another result of the meetings at the Campus, he expects to see a closer bond between the workers against sin and error. This means we must present a more solid front against evil inside and outside of the church. We must join hands with other institutions against evil. Especially stressed was the hope that through association together we shall learn to appreciate the virtues of others; that suspicion shall be destroyed. By this means we shall have a greater and more active consciousness of the brotherhood of man. All of these things will go to make our religion broader; they will strengthen our comprehension of fundamental things, and galvanize us into activity. They will make Zion possible. He concluded with two questions: What does your religion mean to you? What does your church mean to you?

In closing the doxology was sung, and Brother Miller dismissed the throng.

Interesting Personals

On June 9, at half past eight in the evening occurred a double wedding at the Liberty Street Church. The two young couples are well known to church circles in Independence and Lamoni. They are Miss LeVon MacFarlane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. MacFarlane, who became the bride of J. Vance Eastwood, son of Bishop and Sister G. W. Eastwood, and Ethel Verne Eastwood, daughter of Bishop Eastwood, who was married to Enos Needham, son of Sister Annie Needham, of Lamoni, Iowa. President Frederick M. Smith pronounced the double ring ceremonies. Preceding the wedding service Mrs. Lillian Schlichting sang "At dawning," and "I love you truly." George Miller played the wedding march, and during the ceremony "Annie Laurie," was softly played on the violin by John Owen. Miss Alice Streeter and Miss Violet McFarlane, were maids of honor. Ethel Edwards and Nadine Inouye were the tiny ring bearers, and the flower girls were Wilma Clow and Berenice Boyd. Arthur Clow acted as best man for Mr. Eastwood and Wilbur Long for Mr. Needham.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the parents of the young people in the church Sunday schoolroom. Both couples left Friday morning for a short honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Eastwood will be at home after July 1 on South Main Street, Independence, and Mr. and Mrs. Needham will reside at 1719 Wayne Avenue, Englewood, Missouri.

Evangelist and Sister U. W. Greene, accompanied by his little grandson, Arthur Nunn, jr., left Independence June 3, en route to Maine and other New England States, where they will spend the summer and fall, returning November 1. Brother Greene will be missed in Independence this summer, for his faithful service in the church has made him many friends. He has been a source of inspiration and comfort to patients at the Sanitarium through administration, and is known to K L D S radio fans throughout the country by his many instructive sermons.

At the Campus

In the Campus League Saturday evening, June 4, the Wilson Lumber Company and Standard Oil clubs were victorious, keeping the slate clean for the Wilsons and giving the Standards a record of only one defeat in their four starts. Later in the evening a large crowd of people presented themselves to see the show "Laddie," which was thoroughly enjoyed.

Tuesday night, June 7, marked the beginning of the activities of the Department of Recreation and Expression on the Campus. Liberty Street and Walnut Park volley ball teams were announced to meet and contest for honors. The boys' teams played five games, Walnut Park winning three; the girls thrice met on the ball court, Liberty Street snatching two games. Throughout the games spectators noted the good sportsmanship shown by all teams, and the evening passed all too quickly for players and rooters alike.

On last Saturday afternoon the Wilson Lumber Company team continued to push up its score, hanging a 9 to 0 count on the Standard Oil players. The second game was between the Bar-Gars and Independence Merchants, the Bar-Gars taking the honors 9 to 1.

On account of threatening weather the picture, "The vanishing American," was run about half way through to a rapidly diminishing crowd.

Liberty Street

Brother Elbert A. Smith was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service. He read from Galatians 5:19-26: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like: of the which I tell you before as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law. And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another." He also read from Doctrine and Covenants 85:8: "And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still." From these two readings he drew many constructive ideas and lessons of profit.

Seven of our children, raised in the gospel and nurtured in the branch Sunday school, entered the waters of baptism Sunday in the Children's Day baptismal service at the Campus. Elders from Liberty Street performing the rite were Pastor Leonard White and Brother J. B. Barrett.

Though the evening was chilly a goodly number of Liberty Street people found their way to the Campus Sunday evening to hear President Frederick M. Smith deliver an excellent discourse.

The Silver Wing Temple Builders of this district are a busy happy crowd of girls. Quite recently in the study of mothercraft Miss Faye Franklin, public health nurse, who works from our Sanitarium, gave a demonstration to the girls and any mother who cared to come, of the treatment and care of a newborn babe. The subject for the demonstration was Edna Ruth, the tiny daughter of Sister Mabel Pashal, one of our charter members.

The chapter is putting in every available evening at work on decorative home art which is taught by Miss Estella Bly, one of our members and a student for three years at the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Last week Sister Dace, from Wichita, Kansas, and Sister Anthony Robinson, of the Liberty Street District, visited the chapter at its regular meeting, observing the girls at their work and learning of the things accomplished in the past.

Walnut Park

The early Sunday morning prayer meeting was well attended by the young, and a spirit of comfort and instruction directed the course of the meeting, bringing out short, earnest prayers, inspired songs, and fervent testimonies.

Between the hours of nine and ten the primary department presented a well-planned and well-executed program. The church was beautifully decorated with lovely flowers, and the program and story were based upon the theme that happiness comes through service to mankind, through administering to the comfort of others.

The spirit of Children's Day was accentuated in the afternoon by a chorus of some fifty little girls who, under the direction of Margaret Gard and Ada Fallon with the assistance of sympathetic owners of cars, toured the city singing carols at the Sanitarium and at the homes of shut-ins of our congregation. The beautiful floral decorations at the church had been converted into bouquets, one being presented at each home visited and many at the Sanitarium. The faces of these happy kiddies beamed with the joy of their service and those whom they visited were heartened by the sweet simplicity of their messages of good cheer. "Let the little ones come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

At eleven in the morning members of the junior department presented a program which was both interesting and instructive.

Baptismal exercises were had at two o'clock, at which time seven children were baptized at the font by Samuel Smith and Arthur Cox. This was a beautiful service, and the spirit of solemnity pervaded the room which was crowded with parents.

Walnut Park Saints have made arrangements with a Mr. Myers to come to the church at 6.30 Sunday evenings and take a load in his bus to the Campus.

Enoch Hill

Children's Day was fittingly observed on Enoch Hill. At 10.30 the beginners presented an attractive little program, being directed by Sister Charles Warren superintendent of the beginner and primary departments, and Sister J. Jones assistant superintendent. These exercises were followed by a longer program given by the members of the primary department. There were songs, drills, and a short play, bringing out the theme, the purpose of Sunday school in the lives of the children and Children's Day, a day set aside for Sunday school children.

For this day the church was beautifully decorated with pink roses and green leaves, and every seat in the house was filled, some spectators standing in the hall and doorway.

Four of our Sunday school children entered the waters of baptism Sunday afternoon with children of the other districts of the center place. Saints of Enoch Hill welcome them into the fold and hope they will grow up to be earnest helpers in God's work.

Gudgell Park

Our building is almost finished, except for the need of more paint and paper. We have held regular services each Sunday and prayer meeting each Wednesday evening. Attendance at the various meetings is good. We have some fine preaching services. As yet we have no priest and no teacher, two officers we need very much.

On Friday evening, June 10, the Department of Women held an ice cream social, the proceeds to be used to help pay for our lots and new building.

We are glad to report that most of our number are in good health. Grandma Hickman, eighty-eight years old, mother of Sister J. W. Wolf, is quite poorly at present. And Sister Lowery, mother of Sister Willard Atwell, has been ill.

We witnessed our first wedding in the new church on Saturday night, June 11. Brother Floyd Sutherland and Miss Mary Katherine Michael were the principals. Floyd's mother was our first leader in the Department of Women. She now lives near Lone Jack, Missouri. The young people thought to slip quietly into the church and as quietly slip away. But they were surprised upon reaching the church to find the house filled with young and old to greet the wedding party. The building had been decorated with flowers, and an arch and wedding bell of roses had been prepared by the women of the group. And best of all, Sister Sutherland, who had been sent for by Sister Ada Boone, sister of the groom, arrived just in time to witness the marriage of her youngest son. Pastor Sherman pronounced the ceremony. After an impressive talk and prayer, Sister Irene Barnhard sang, "Dawning" and every heart was thrilled with the beautiful song. The group gave the couple a little shower of gifts at the altar and a shower of rice as they ran for the waiting car.

Sunday Elder A. K. Dillee, from Second Church, was our speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. His sermon was greatly enjoyed.

East Independence

A good spirit prevailed at the sacramental service June 5. Many good testimonies were borne, but as is often the case, much time was lost in the beginning of the service.

In the evening of the first Sunday in June Elder George A. Gould was the speaker, presenting what he had to say in so pleasing a way that we shall remember the truths he wished to bring home to us. He formed an acrostic and by taking the first letters of the words he presented and reading them backwards, he spelled "stewardship." He earnestly presented the truths these letters represented, applying them to our lives.

Brother Albert Thatcher, jr., was the Sunday morning speaker on the 12th. He devoted a few minutes to a discourse about the Holy Land, having a map drawn on the board and sketching the work the normal class is trying to accomplish. Then he presented the gospel ladder in a most interesting way.

Elder J. B. Barrett, of Liberty Street District, was the preacher in the evening. His sermon was a good, practical discourse, one we can apply to daily life.

Spring Branch

A Children's Day program, given by the primary department was the special feature of Sunday services. There was a good attendance at this program and also at the prayer meeting and Sunday school preceding it.

Four candidates for baptism from Spring Branch were inducted into the kingdom at the 2.30 baptismal service at the Campus.

Besides cooperating with the other Religios in Zion in their Tuesday night activities on the Campus, the Spring Branch society will continue to hold regular Friday night meetings at the church during the present month.

Englewood

The Saints of Englewood regret very much that it is necessary for Pastor C. F. Davis to be absent so much. Brother Almon Hougas is in charge of the work until his return. Upon a return trip a short time ago, he complimented the Saints upon their forward movements. Many things are being done along different lines at this place. Improvements on the building are being accomplished from time to time. The yards are being prepared for games, and grass and flowers are planted.

The Religio voted to continue the meetings here all summer and organize the recreational activities in such a way that they can meet the other teams of the center place in play. Brother Joseph Farrow is a live president.

Brother Lee Moore is doing a fine work with the Sunday school. It is still growing.

On Sunday, June 12, the children gave a program at the eleven o'clock hour. Three tiny babes were blessed at this time.

The sacramental service of June 5 was not so well attended as usual. Elder J. E. Warne was in charge.

A chicken dinner was given at the church, June 7, by Group 36. It was a splendid success. Over twenty dollars were cleared. We are so crowded in the basement that all who attend know the upper auditorium is very necessary. Watch for announcements of future suppers, and help us make this addition possible.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Notwithstanding that it was a damp and chilly day and Old Sol refused to shine and do his part to make the Children's Day one of sunshine and happiness, on entering the church we forgot the gloom as the grandeur and beauty that our eyes beheld made us stop in reverence to the Giver of all good gifts. The rostrum was a bower of daisies and roses, interspersed with ferns and shrubbery, which gave it the appearance of a beautiful garden. Therein could be heard sweet music of a little canary bird that tossed his head high in ecstasy and performed his part in the exercises well, sending out a message of joy to those present, thus adding to this garden that divine touch of the workmanship of our Creator.

At eleven o'clock the children of the primary and junior and intermediate departments entered this garden, as this was their day of days. The primary department represented birds, bees, and butterflies, and their costumes were designed to this effect. They fluttered about, and the bees sipped honey from the flowers, proceeding on their onward course, leaving the juniors and intermediates to present a most colorful pageant in the "Language of flowers," a reminder of the joy and beauty we derive from the buttercup, the green grass, the bluebell, the tall and stately sunflower with his golden hue, the dainty little pansy in her colors of purple and yellow, the beautiful white lily, the emblem of purity, the tiny violet, the ever-mindful tulip, the thorny thistle, the barberry, chrysanthemum, passion flower, and the snowdrop, while the pretty little daisies and ever-blooming roses were clustered about, each taking its part to make up this beautiful garden which indeed was a most spectacular and colorful sight. The message that was given by these flowers, we shall ever cherish in our memories.

Following the exercises, the children very orderly marched to seats reserved in front of the font, which had been decorated so as to appear as a lake in the woods, and witnessed the baptism by Pastor J. A. Tanner of eight of their comrades, viz: Milba Showalter, Jeanette Dun, Marguerite Hooper, Valerie Taylor, Iris Rush, Dorothy Pease, Donald Tanner, and Dee Faler.

At 6.15 the young people held their regular monthly prayer meeting, which was filled with interest and enthusiasm.

The 7.45 service was in charge of the Semper Fidelis Class of the Sunday school, a class of young women with Sister Fred Blair as teacher. The choir, composed of members of this class, assisted by the Young Men's Progressive Bible Class, rendered the anthem, "The earth is the Lord's," directed by Brother Clayton Wolfe, with Sister Marcenine Murphy, soprano soloist. Brother Roscoe and Henry Hampton sang a duet, "My faith looks up to thee," which was highly appreciated.

The speaker of the evening was Apostle F. Henry Edwards, taking for his text, "I am the way, the truth, and the light; no man cometh unto the Father but by me," and directing his remarks more particularly to the young people. He stated that Christianity has always had to battle against the attractions of other gods, and we should learn to take the straight road. We are building our roads and have to constantly repair and rebuild because we change; and because we change, and detour, we move into the tomorrow repenting.

At the close of his remarks, Blanche and Lucille Milholand, very promising young women of this class who have endeared themselves by their undying devotion and their desire to be of service in this work, embarked on the waters of baptism and were united with us through this ordinance which makes us of one fold and undivided. They kindle a joy in the hearts of their many friends in reaching this great decision. Likewise Melvin and Merrill Sebree, twin brothers of Rich Hill, Missouri, were administered this ordinance, and it was gratifying to see these young people answer the call and summons to follow in the pathway of our Lord and Savior, the Christ.

Thus another Children's Day has gone down into history, a day which we will remember in the years that are to come, a day that brought much joy to our hearts despite the fact that outside all seemed sad and dreary.

Second Church

Since last report one more has been added to our number. George Kinnaman was baptized by our pastor, Brother F. A. Evans. Brother Kinnaman had been investigating for a long time, and we rejoice because he decided to unite with us.

Meetings are all well attended, having between twenty-five and thirty out to the Wednesday evening prayer meeting, and we are cheered by the presence of the Spirit, often in the outward manifestations.

Sunday school is doing well and is increasing in numbers and interest. Last month Brother Thomas Newton spent Sunday with them, preached both morning and evening, exhorting the Saints to be faithful, diligent, and keep the law. Brother Newton is always welcome here. Many years ago he started a Sunday school in his home, from which developed what later became the Second Kansas City Branch. There was at that time no branch of our church in that part of the city. He is glad to find the church there still alive and working and glad he has been and is active in the mission field. Brother W. O. Hands entertained with lantern and slides, and last Sunday our pastor occupied for the first time in many weeks, as his health has been poor; he is out when it is at all possible.

The women and girls under the leadership of Sister Raw meet once each month and are planning to visit the shut-ins and otherwise help in church work during the summer. The Blue Birds, with Sister Zink as their leader, gave an entertainment and social last week in order to secure money for their uniforms, as they, too, expect to accomplish much.

Religio is doing well, interest good. Programs are furnished by the children, principally, which consist of many new and original numbers which are entertaining and instructive. Have but very little sickness; peace and harmony prevail.

Argentine Church

Recent speakers have been L. W. Hays, A. R. White, and D. J. Kennedy, each with an understandable message, full of hope and comfort for all who attended. Children's Day will be observed on next Sunday evening. The attendance at the various meetings is good, all departments being represented. A "thing of beauty is a joy forever," Brother Ralph Goold demonstrated to the congregation when he placed on the rostrum a very fine pulpit which is a splendid specimen of the craftsman's art, being commodious, hence of utility and the finish betokens a master's touch.

Bennington Heights Church

Instead of having regular Sunday school lessons last Sunday, the time was used for the Children's Day program. The program was furnished by the classes of the school. At the conclusion of the program, the pastor presented the boys with the ribbons which they won in the athletic contest of the Sunday schools of the Blue Valley District. The contest was arranged by the Blue Valley Y. M. C. A.

Richard Owen Barham, the infant son of Brother and Sister William Barham, was blessed during the eleven o'clock hour.

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker of the morning hour. He was assisted in his discourse by two sisters, who sang a song that he had selected. Unusual as this procedure was, it blended well with the sermon and made the lesson more impressive; and, as Brother Scott said, it shows how the handmaidens can assist with the preaching.

Ruth Hastings, Cleo Renninger, Wanda May Edwards, Dorothy Helm, Walter Carpenter, John Mawhiny, and Robert Agin were baptized in the afternoon at the Mount Washington church font. Josephine Warnock was baptized in the morning at Independence. These boys and girls are all members of the primary department of the Bennington Heights Sunday school.

Bishop F. B. Blair was the speaker in the evening.

Sister Ella Repine, of New York City, is visiting her sister, Sister John Walburn.

Work on the Auditorium Starts Again

From the day when ground was broken, in February, 1926, work has continued on the Auditorium without a break, except on account of the weather, until March 31, 1927. Fourteen months brought the Auditorium to a stage in its construction witnessed by those who attended the last conference and as shown in a series of pictures, carried in the HERALD.

In the conference a resolution was introduced, approving a proposed loan of $300,000 to further complete the building. This resolution passed the conference unanimously. Acting on this authority the Presiding Bishopric had thought to open negotiations with bond houses to secure the loan, but initiative on the part of the Bishopric was not required, for as soon as the press carried the news of the authorization of the loan, some of the largest financial houses in Kansas City and vicinity opened negotiations to furnish the money.

Favorable negotiations have been considered with four firms in Kansas City, one each in Saint Louis, New York, New Orleans, and Quincy, Illinois.

During the first week in June a deal was finally closed with a Kansas City institution which will furnish the money as needed. The fact that any one of the financial institutions indicated above would have been glad to secure this business proves that a thorough investigation of the financial condition of the church made by these bankers and bond companies was entirely satisfactory to them. This should be a matter of satisfaction to the members of this church.

The security given for this loan will cover the Auditorium Building and the site on which it is being built. No other piece of church property will be included in this mortgage.

Excepting for delays in delivery of material or on account of inclement weather, those in charge of construction see no reason why progress should not go steadily forward until the superstructure is inclosed.

There are several thousands of dollars of unpaid pledges which are due, and it is hoped that the Saints will appreciate the responsibility of the church to complete the building authorized by the General Conference.

The $300,000 which is borrowed will be used to rehabilitate the Auditorium Fund as far as possible. Inasmuch as the Auditorium is a general church project which the General Conference has repeatedly urged be completed, it is believed that every active member of the church can be counted on for his full share of financial support to the general church finances.

Stone masons were put to work last week building up the inner stone walls of the southeast corner of the building. Steel has been set for the ramps in this section, and concrete will be poured as soon as forms can be completed. Steel is also in position in the northwest and southwest corners, and the completion of ramps at these places will be next in order.

The order for the rest of the steel has been in the mill for some months, and delivery is expected in August. The steel superstructure will rest on the concrete pillars which form the ellipse as indicated by the outer edge of the first floor slab and can be easily distinguished in the pictures shown in the HERALD in recent months. The steel will run up to an appropriate height on which will rest the arched dome which will span the main auditorium floor.

As work goes on pictures will be shown at intervals.

Notice of Release From Active Missionary Appointment

Owing to the condition of his health at the time of the sitting of the joint council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, Elder A. M. Chase was referred to the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric for later appointment. Eventually they settled upon appointment to the Central Nebraska District, and word so went out to members of the Twelve. However, subsequently it was learned that on account of certain financial obligations Brother Chase had purchased a farm in the Lamoni Stake and was to move on and take possession June 10. This will remove him for the time being from active missionary appointment. However, he has expressed a commendable desire and determination to assist locally in the Stake as he may have opportunity, on a self-supporting basis.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHWESTERN IOWA.—District business meeting was called to order at 2.30 p. m. by J. F. Garver. Two secretaries, C. W. Forney, Elsie E. Butler, were chosen by J. F. Garver. Following the opening song, prayer was offered by F. Henry Edwards. A resolution signed by the former district presidents, H. H. Hand and N. L. Mortimore, was offered and read: "Resolved, that we concur in the action of the General Conference of 1927 by which the territory heretofore contained in the Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts is combined to form the Southwestern Iowa District." A motion to adopt the resolution was seconded and carried. The election of district officers was taken up. H. H. Hand was the only nominee and was elected by a large majority, as district president. Brother Hand asked that J. A. Hanson and N. L. Mortimore act as his associates or counselors; it was so moved, seconded, and carried. A motion that we sustain Bishop Clarence Skinner as the district bishop, prevailed. For district secretary Sister Elsie E. Butler was chosen by a unanimous vote. The district bishopric was chosen to serve as district treasurer. Roy C. Murphey was chosen as district chorister. Acting upon a recommendation from Brother Burgess, church historian, that J. F. Mintun act as district historian, he was so elected. O. A. Currie was elected as district superintendent of Sunday schools. W. E. Brown was chosen as head of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Sister Mattison was chosen head of the Department of Women. Brother Mintun here made request that C. W. Forney act as his assistant in district historian work. A motion to concur in the request of Brother Mintun, resulted in Brother Forney being so elected. A motion that we authorize those in the various departments, who have not already done so, to be permitted to choose their own associates, prevailed. The following resolution, signed by H. H. Hand and C. A. Skinner, was offered: "Resolved, that we authorize the district historian to order one of the books containing the biography and genealogy of Joseph Smith, to be placed in the district library; the funds to be solicited by the district treasurer for the price of said book, ten ($10.00) dollars, and that the district secretary draw an order on the district treasurer for said amount in favor of the historian." The resolution was moved, seconded, and adopted. The following was then presented: "Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 21, 1927: To the District Conference: We, your district presidency, recommend the disorganization of the Boomer Branch and the transferring of the membership to Hazel Dell Branch. Signed, H. H. Hand; J. A. Hanson." The matter was discussed and amendments were offered. It was then moved that further action in the matter of disorganization of the Boomer Branch be deferred until the next district conference. The motion carried. Brother Mintun made request that the secretary of each branch act as local historian. It was moved that the district presidency set the time and place for holding the next district conference, subject to the approval of the general church authorities. The motion prevailed. Adjourned.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—District Conference held May 21 and 22 at Fanning was presided over by the district presidency, with whom was associated Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Ministerial reports were read from Topeka, Atchison, Fanning, Blue Rapids, Scranton, and Troy, which showed seventy-eight sermons, seventy-seven administrations to sick, forty-five priesthood visits, three baptisms, one marriage, and one child blessed. Bishop's agent's report showed $105.61 collected for February and March. Grand total for time served as bishop's agent, $1,732.81. February, 1927, was the least month, and January was the largest. Reports were read from superintendents of Department of Recreation and Expression and Women's Department. A motion prevailed that branch presidents receive ministerial reports, summarize them, and forward to district president. By action of the conference the reunion to be held at Netawaka August 12 to 19 was annulled, and the district conference is to be held instead August 13 and 14. All Saints who can are urged to attend the Stewartsville reunion. A new reunion committee was appointed, consisting of C. E. Harpe and William Twombly, with Dave Little as chairman, to communicate with Stewartsville committee in the matter of joining with them; said committee to report back at the fall conference. This action was had in order to assist the general church from an economic point of view, and that the church may better serve in reunion capacity. By vote the reunion fund will be kept in the hands of the reunion treasurer for reunion purposes. Out of respect for Elder F. T. Mussell, who had been appointed to the district as a local man by the general church, Dave Little offered his resignation as district president, which the conference unanimously declined to accept. The committee, consisting of C. E. Harpe, Frank G. Hedrick, and W. F. Bolinger, appointed by the chair to communicate to the First Presidency the action of the conference, reported as follows: "We the undersigned, as a committee appointed by the conference of the Northeastern Kansas District in conference assembled, beg to report the following regarding the request coming from this district a year ago to your office, concerning the appointment of a man free to devote his entire time to presiding over our district. At the time of our request we were in need of experienced help in the office of district president. Since that time Elder Little has demonstrated to us that he is equal to the task of caring for the needs of our district as president. Yesterday Elder Little presented his resignation in order to permit the conference to express itself regarding the selection of Elder Mussell as district president. The resignation was refused by a unanimous vote. This must not be interpreted as a refusal upon the part of this district to accept the labors of those appointed by the general authorities to our district. We regret that the Presidency were not advised concerning the change in the need of our district for presiding help during the year. We trust that our action will not be regarded as reflecting in any way upon Elder Mussell." A resolution of sympathy in his affliction, to A. F. Crooker and family, of Topeka, was sent from the conference. A vote of thanks was extended to Fanning Saints and friends for hospitality and contributions on programs. Adjourned to meet at Netawaka, August 13 and 14.

The Old Agricultural Problem

The Sheffield (England) Independent for May 28, carried an article under the caption, "An old story," which is of interest to our readers as indicating that the agricultural problem is occupying the attention of English legislators as well as American. It is of further interest in that it calls attention to the fact that at bottom the agricultural problem in its solution is not one of legislation, but is social and economic.

I wonder if any of our readers can see and point out how stewardships will solve the problem.

The Independent's article is as follows:

An Old Story

There is a pathetic side to the persistent demand of agriculture for protection. Agriculturists have every cause for a feeling of resentment against the Conservative Party. Ever since the Corn Laws were abolished there have been periodical promises, sometimes vague, sometimes more definite, of Conservative efforts to protect the farmers against foreign competition. No doubt they believed that the Conservative Party would in due course make this a firm plank in the party platform—just as Liberalism stuck to Home Rule through storm and stress, in season and out of season.

The minister for agriculture yesterday announced to the council of agriculture for England that he had the authority of the government to say they could not give assistance to agriculture by means of protective duties. The members of the government, it seems, realize that a protective system which does not raise prices would be of no use to the farmer, and they are convinced that no party can get the sanction of the electorate to a policy of dear food. The Conservative Party, therefore, declines to commit political suicide. Apparently the farmers are not convinced yet, for they passed a resolution in favor of protective duties, and they will go on hoping—as a large proportion of people will go on suspecting—that the Conservative Party would still adopt protection if and when by the fortunes of political warfare they happened to find themselves in an overwhelming majority.

The saddest part about all this is that it diverts attention from those real reforms by which alone agriculture can be made a profitable business. Had agriculture given up all faith in political favoritism years ago and made up its mind, that like other industries, it must work out its own salvation, we should not have been so far behind some of those smaller countries where the natural opportunities are less favorable than they are with us. It is difficult to know how agriculturists are going to be convinced after all the alternating promises, delays, and rebuffs. Possibly they never will be convinced till the Conservative Party, boldly and convincingly, adopts free trade as a principle, not as a matter of expediency—and that day seems to be a long way off.

Have You Rules Like These?

I recently saw some rules which a railroad office passed to the employees of the road to "keep in mind in selling transportation to the public." I am wondering how many of our priesthood members can see the applicability of those rules to their own work? I particularly commend the rules to those who are under appointment. The rules can be summed up in the words, Serve, and boost. Here they are:

A. Know your subject. Before you can sell our service to the public, you must sell it to yourself. If you don't, you can not convey confidence to the traveler.

B. Study your customer and adapt yourself to his personality and frame of mind.

C. State facts about your service. The passenger will find out sooner or later.

D. Don't "knock" your competitor. A boomerang always swings back to its starting point.

Missouri Vital Statistics for 1926

Recently Doctor James Stewart, secretary of the Missouri State Board of Health, issued statements giving the figures on births and deaths in Missouri for 1926, which show that the birth rate per 1,000 inhabitants dropped from 19.60 in 1925 to 18.96 in 1926. The trend for the last decade has been downward, though the Missouri rate is higher than that of the surrounding States. Normal birth rate should be 22 per 1,000. Apostle D. T. Williams was in Independence and solemnized the marriage of Howard Andersen (a son of the late Apostle Peter Andersen) and Carol Williams (daughter of Elder Mansel T. and Lottie Williams) which occurred at the Stone Church Wednesday evening. The following day Brother Williams departed for his field.

Apostle Myron A. McConley writes from Los Angeles that he has resigned his temporary oversight of the Los Angeles Branch, which was taken on an emergency, and that the conference appointee to that place, Elder Glaud A. Smith, was unanimously elected pastor. Brother McConley will help Brother Smith get acquainted and started in his job and will then resume missionary work on the Pacific coast.

Apostle Garver has been laboring in Iowa, the last point of report being Council Bluffs, where conferences with district, branch, and missionary forces were held, looking to concerted forward movements in that part of the field.

Apostle J. F. Curtis recently drove with his family to Colorado, holding meetings en route, and going in the old Apostolic Ford. He held services in Colorado Springs and other points and then pressed on to the Northwest, where he is to attend reunions.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards is in Independence engaged in his work as secretary of the quorum. He was the speaker at the Sunday night open-air service on the Campus.

A letter received from Apostle Paul M. Hanson was written at Porsgrund, Norway. From there he was to go to Bon. He was feeling excellent in the work and inclosed important recommendations regarding that field.

At last report Apostle J. A. Gillen was in San Francisco. He was to go from there to attend the Spokane reunion.

President Frederick M. Smith was in Columbus, Ohio, Sunday, attending to the dedication of a church.

Floyd M. McDowell was in Holden for the Sunday in charge of the young peoples' convention at that place.

Elbert A. Smith met with the Saints of Omaha, Sunday, speaking morning and evening.

Church Mergers

There seems to be a strong movement among Congregational Churches toward a merging of the congregations into an organization having a central governing body. Seven of the big corporate bodies have already united, and a board of thirty-six directors had been selected. At the same time there is also a movement toward the merger, or at least closer affiliation, of the Congregational Churches with other denominations of "congregational type." A commission of the Congregational Church on "interchurch relations" indicates in its report a willingness "to surrender their historic name" for the sake of promoting the large unities which we all desire." The report states:

The practical obstacle today to such unification as seems fairly practical, is not so much our diffusing creeds or policies, or plans for demonstrating the powers of the Christian message, as matters of sentiment—specifically our unwillingness to forego familiar and historic terminology. The commission believes that we and all other denominations which are truly working for unity must be prepared to go as far as our sister denominations have gone in Canada. In the opinion of the commission, we as a group of the Lord's disciples, should go as far in the promotion of unity as we may.

The Baptists Have Their Problems

The Association of Toronto Baptist Churches held convention the latter part of May. On the morning of May 27 Thomas Urquhart introduced for adoption a set of resolutions charging "worldliness in the church," according to the Evening Telegram, Toronto, of May 27. His motion to adopt was seconded by Reverend W. Frank Mesley.

Introduction of the resolutions served as a signal for an acrimonious discussion, during which disorder prevailed to a considerable degree. Our readers will be interested in the resolutions, which we reproduce for their perusal:

That this Baptist Association deplores the growth of worldliness in church life evidenced by the many professing Christians who attend the theater, moving picture shows, dance halls, and card playing parties, and evidenced further by others who carry on dances and card parties in the home, thus in many cases demoralizing the spiritual life of those who attend; and we further deplore the fact that many professing Christians use their automobiles on the Lord's Day for pleasure, thus taking themselves and their families away from the Lord's House and making the Lord's Day a day of pleasure instead of a day of rest and worship, and further, we deplore the increasing tendency among our young people (girls as well as boys) to use the cigaret and other forms of tobacco, thus weakening the body as well as the mind and clouding the spirit and perception of the youth; and we regret to say that some pastors and others are setting an unworthy example to the young people by the use of tobacco in various forms.

And further be it resolved that we call upon all our pastors from the pulpit and in the prayer meetings and young people's societies to strongly teach and point out the evils of these things and that the continuous practice thereof will ruin the spiritual life of our churches and bring about conditions which will to a great degree increase the difficulties at present surrounding a truly evangelical message and further emphasizing the necessity on the part of every Christian to separate himself entirely from all these worldly habits, pleasures, and amusements.

In supporting his resolution Mr. Urquhart spoke eloquently. He said some practical and evidently true things, among which are: "The great sin of the church is the admission of worldly things in our lives. . . . It is high time we call a halt and speak to ourselves." He was horrified at dancing and card parties conducted in Christian homes, and looked with disfavor upon the recommendation of a missionary that indorsed a moving picture show in the theater. He told with disapproval of a pastor who played cards, attended the theater, and dances.

The discussion developed the fact that there was a strong undercurrent consistently opposed to such worldliness as is spoken against in the resolutions offered, and a number of speakers could easily come under the list (if they had been Latter Day Saints) of those who observe the Word of Wisdom, and the instruction of latter-day revelation as to the preservation of our bodies and the formation of our physical habits.

The document was returned to the resolutions committee for redrafting after sharp discussion of considerable duration.

All-Weather Road From Independence to Lamoni

A recent number of the Saint Joseph News-Press says that the twelve miles near Clarksdale which are now the only miles of dirt road between Independence and Lamoni with the exception of the six or seven miles just south of Lamoni, will soon be regraded and oiled, thus making it of all-weather type. This improvement is to begin very soon, late this month or early in July, and will be a short piece of work. Money to pave this twelve miles is not available now, but it is such an important traffic road that the State will place it in condition for travel in all kinds of weather.

Hope is held out that Decatur County, Iowa, may be successful in getting the Jefferson Highway in that county graveled during the season. The people of Lamoni and Decatur County are working hard to accomplish this end, and they have high hopes of success. So it is quite possible that not only will church officers be able to get into communication with Lamoni Stake any day in the year by hard surfaced road with the one break of twelve miles which is soon to be oiled, but every stake in the church may soon reach every other stake on hard surfaced road! What a wonderful and speedy development has been made since the World War!

From a copy of the Palestine Bulletin for March 4, 1927, we extract the following resolutions passed by a conference of rabbis "recently called in Jerusalem to strengthen religious life among the Jews of the country":

- (1) The establishment of committees to watch over the observance of Sabbath in all towns and colonies;
- (2) the issue of a prohibition on football matches on Saturday;
- (3) the taking of measures against violation of Sabbath at the "Nesher" factory in Haifa;
- (4) the submission of a demand to the Government that Jewish officials should be free from their work on Saturday;
- (5) the submission of a demand to the Zionist Executive, Keren Hayesod, Jewish National Fund and American Jewry, that they adopt strong measures against the violation of Sabbath in Palestine. The conference has proclaimed as a duty of all Jews to employ Jewish labor and use land production for all needs.

According to the Palestine Bulletin for May 4, Rabbis Sonnenfeld and Kliatzkin, and other leaders of the extreme orthodox Jewish party, posted an appeal in the streets forbidding all right Jews to visit the Jewish National and Hebrew University Library because there are, among other things, heretic books.

THEY SAY---

George Washington: "Every action in company ought to be with some sign of respect to those present."

It is better to have a strong and consistent enemy than a lukewarm and vacillating friend.

The source of men's actions too frequently lies in personal ambition.

Washington: "Let your recreations be manful, not sinful."

Weep and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth;
It has troubles enough of its own."

Roosevelt: "An ounce of performance is worth a ton of complaint."

Washington: "Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any."

A scarcity of worms does not cause a hen to quit scratching.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox: "The test of the heart is trouble."

Might as well forget your present troubles, for there are more coming.

Lincoln: "Speak so that the lowest may understand, and the rest will have no trouble."

Frank A. Marshall: "Religion and patriotism are inextricable. There is no religion worth the name which does not support the nation whose flag insures religious freedom, and no nation is worthy of the name which does not grant this freedom."

Roselle M. Montgomery, in the "Forum":

The essence of me will elude the line
That retails merely such things as I did.
From my historians much will be hid
Of what was deeply, intimately mine.
When I am dead some faithful chronicler
Perhaps may tell how I did thus, or so—
What I refrained from doing, who will know?
These will escape my best biographer:
The beckoning paths on which I never fared,
The secret ways down which I stole a look,
The longed-for journeys that I never took,
The bright strange things I dreamed
—but never dared!
Deep in the grave my dust will stir and laugh
At what is written in my epitaph.

Some One:

"If you your lips
Would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care,
Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where."

Douglas:

"Today alone, I count my own—
For God alone doth know
Where I shall be, when o'er the lea, Tomorrow's sun doth glow."

The Wealth of the Dead Sea

Mr. L. A. Pinck in a letter to the editor of The New Palestine, New York, states as follows:

Sir, I wish to call to the attention of the readers of The New Palestine that technologists and financiers have their eyes focused on the storehouse of wealth that is at present peacefully resting in the Dead Sea.

The following information is a résumé of two letters, one by Jerome Alexander and the other by C. E. Waters, printed in the news edition of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

In a report issued by His Majesty's Stationary Office for the Government of Palestine, there is given the following estimate in metric tons of the contents of the Dead Sea:

Potassium chloride	2,000,000,000
Magnesium bromide	980,000,000
Magnesium chloride	22,000,000,000
Sodium chloride	11,900,000,000
Calcium chloride	6,000,000,000

On the basis of the present rate of consumption, it has been estimated that the bromide in the Dead Sea is sufficient to supply the world for 35,000 years.

It is believed that the potash of the Dead Sea will not only be the most valuable and important product of Palestine, but will also be one of the world's largest and most available supplies.

New Openings

BY J. W. PETERSON

Place, People, and Preacher

There are no hard and fast rules to observe when first introducing our faith in a new place. Every locality has its dominant idea, just as do individuals. Each one has to be considered upon its merits. A failure to make this observation may result in eternal failure. Only eternity will reveal the results of a neighborhood lost to God. There are thousands of such places which stand as monuments to our folly. What an awful (I use the word advisedly) responsibility rests on the missionary who seeks to present our faith to a prejudiced and doubtful world. After nearly forty years of missionary experience in most of the States of the Union and in foreign fields, I unhesitatingly assert that our mistakes have outnumbered our successes. The number of the few starving branches compared with the missionary effort proves my assertion. This fact needs to sink deep into the consciousness of every missionary, especially the beginners. Perhaps we can profit by our mistakes and the labor be not entirely in vain. After all, it has not been the fault of the missionary altogether. They knew not how to labor, and conditions were altogether different than now. The church must bear its share of the blame. A few lectures, a set of tracts or a small book of instruction would have greatly aided the new missionary. Such information is very badly needed even now, hence this writing.

The Location

The permanent success of an initial effort depends first on the location. An infrequented place is a poor one to get a good hearing. Why spend effort there when the same amount of energy in a better place would accomplish much more. A cheap place will attract cheap people. A better place would invite all classes. It should also be near a selective center, where the interest can be continued by the branch. Many a far-off opening has been left to die out for want of care, even where a good interest has been aroused. Even a far-off branch, which is not in communication with the main body, is apt to develop a kind of provincialism which is hard to change afterwards.

The People

The neighborhood matters much. One where nearly all are self-satisfied is not the best location, unless the missionary has the faculty (which should be cultivated) to preach the truth they already believe in a more convincing way than they have ever heard it before, making them, of course, see their need of additional truth. Naturally they will want the remainder. A plunger or an iconoclast ought to be kept out of such places.

But there are other places where less effort would accomplish quicker results than in a strict Catholic or Protestant neighborhood. A mixed one is better, and one where there are no church services at all is the best. There are sufficient of such places to engage the attention of our ministry for some time to come. In this way, too, we are honorably respecting the rights which other churches think they possess. There are exceptions to all these rules, the difficulty being that nearly every missionary thinks he has an exception in most places where he labors. Wisdom should direct, the difficulty now being that one without wisdom thinks he possesses a great store of it. He mistakes knowledge for wisdom, and has not too much of the former. This is not an arraignment of the majority of our ministry. It applies to those who are guilty, and the reader will not have hard work to locate them.

Other churches are doing a great amount of good in the world. It is both honorable and right that we freely acknowledge that fact. We ought to help them do more good, or at least lay no straw in the way of their helpfulness, but make it imperative that they should take a forward step. A few forward steps would land thousands in the kingdom of God. The Lord when speaking to Sidney Rigdon concerning his work in a Protestant church before the fullness of the gospel came to him, said:

Behold thou wast sent forth even as John, to prepare the way before me, and before Elijah which should come, and thou knew it not. Thou didst baptize by water unto repentance, but they received not the Holy Ghost; but now I give unto you a commandment, that thou shalt baptize by water, and they shall receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands.—Doctrine and Covenants 34: 2.

We can easily accept the work of the reformers as a preparatory work: the dawn before the day. Their work, if not directly authorized of God, was at least permitted as a schoolmaster to bring thousands on the road toward Christ. Woe unto him that tries to tear up the road others have thus far traveled toward God. I can not, therefore, be too positive in saying that we ought to acknowledge the good of other churches, and as the Lord has directed us to do, "Contend against no church but the church of the Devil." We can know them by their fruits. Our country would be a dreadful place were it not for the influence of both Catholicism and Protestantism.

Taking a radical course in a new place we could easily lose it to the church for all time. We ought to follow the commandments still further and make friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, the world, and even with our enemies, if at all possible.

It might even be well, in really new places to avoid the points of our faith that offend unless they can be presented as matters of history; and not then, unless the simple and more universal principles of Christianity be first accepted. What is the good of presenting Christ on America if he be not accepted as having visited Asia. To first preach on faith in God more convincingly than any Protestant or Catholic clergyman has ever presented that subject in that neighborhood, would do more to establish confidence in one than forty sermons on present revelation or church organization. At any rate, what good would it do to convince people of the mere possibility of present revelation until they had first implicit and never-diminishing faith in the God of the past. One convinced of the fact of present revelation but who does not fully believe in the things already written is quite likely to be led about by every kind of revelation.

There is no better plan than to preach first things first, and follow with the epitome of faith. Say nothing but repentance to this generation is good advice and should be followed. Without repentance other steps are absolutely useless. The broken link renders useless the rest of the chain.

The message for this generation is of course the most important thing. But it must rest on the messages of other ages. Without this foundation one is likely to be carried about with every wind of doctrine. If one does not whole-heartedly accept the messages of other ages he is not likely to accept the message of latter days. It would be more wise to avoid presenting our distinctive features to such persons, but, instead, hammer on the messages of the past until they are well driven in.

Many missionaries have made it very hard for others to follow them, if indeed that can be done at all. Effectual doors have been opened to ripening fields, only to be forever afterward closed by unwise missionaries. What a tragedy! Such a missionary has done more harm than good. His efforts have retarded the progress of the church, and so far as that neighborhood is concerned, the very name of the church is obnoxious until a new generation arises. What if one or two are baptized, or even enough for a small branch—these to be forever ostracised by their neighbors. The influence of the branch is destroyed. A barrier has been raised against the new converts which is seldom broken down. How much better if the new missionary could have left a host of good friends and the name of the church honored!

Nearly everything depends on the right kind of a start. Above all else a good and friendly impression should be left, even if the neighborhood will only accept faith and repentance. One who has repented is in a good state of mind for further truth.

The mind of man is the most delicate instrument in all creation. A very little thing may turn it far; one wrong word; one wrong act; a haughty mien; a lack of interest and sympathy, could easily ruin our interest for all time. Truly "No one can assist in this work except he be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity."

And Then

When the proper time comes to present our distinctive features, one may utterly fail and be the means of driving a thousand souls into everlasting darkness by a wrong presentation of the truths we have. Our work is not to stir up strife and division, but to establish peace and create confidence among the children of men. Leave a new convert a friend if he can not at first be wholly converted. If he can not be helped to secure celestial glory, how excellent to help him secure the terrestrial one. Anyone who succeeds in making enemies for the church belongs in the camp of the enemies. We should have the most careful men in the church to open up new places. Men with tact and sympathy.

Then, too, scattered members who are the nucleus for a new opening have frequently closed the hearts of their neighbors by crowding their faith onto others and have made both themselves and the faith obnoxious. What a terrible sin it is to do that! Some think it smart to bear testimony against others. They feel almost as if they would be condemned if they failed to tell the newly found listener that Joseph Smith was a prophet and the Book of Mormon is the Bible of the Western Continent. Why mention those things at all until they are fully convinced that the Bible is true and all three of the Godhead unchangeable? It might be better to first convince them that Christianity in general was the best thing ever come to man, and the Bible the best book in the world. If they already believe it, they will rejoice to accept you as a brother and a noble defender of the faith so dear to them. Then they may listen while they are being shown that we are truly orthodox and the Book of Mormon provided for in the Bible.

The Preacher

The preacher, more than all other factors, is important. For that reason God reserves to himself the right to say who shall represent him, and he himself proposes to qualify them. After receiving this divine foundation and call, then the church can help, and we can also help each other; hence this paper.

As to the qualifications of a representative of God; it is very evident that he should not represent some one else. He should, however, be whole-hearted and loyal to others whom God has called, equally as true as himself. Such a loyal soul will not be a knocker. Any knocker should be kept from new openings. In fact, a good place for such a one is in his own garden. The true servant of God will have the good of the other servants at heart, as well as his own. But above it all he will have the glory of God and the good of his work always in view.

Sympathy and kindness are winning attributes, while the knocker easily drives people away. These qualities should be natural, however, or acquired in the new birth. They can not be assumed without detection. Those attained by education are only a veneer and mostly transparent at that. Good as far as they go, but not deep enough for God, hence the need of the divine call and equipment. With this solid timber, solid to the core, what a good foundation for a good educative polish! What a splendid worker, helpful to high and low alike, and just the one for a new opening! But the man with the veneer can not deeply impress others.

Selective Centers

It is much better to work out from established branches, for several reasons. First, the prestige of the branch, and next the assistance of it in various ways, chiefest of which is perhaps, the singing. Then, too, they help to make up a larger congregation. Very often some of the Saints have friends there. Sometimes the branch itself may be used as a nucleus and all the Saints drafted to help.

I have tried all kinds of advertising, and there is none to equal the personal invitation of the Saints to their friends. He is a poor member indeed who does not have some friends outside of the church. He has more influence with them than anyone else. A mere acquaintanceship is of value in asking people to church. This is inexpensive, but most effectual. Even to strangers, a personal call and invitation is worth many times more than a handbill, a tract, or a notice in the town paper.

When a missionary effort is on, the energy of the whole branch should be employed to put it across. Not many branches put forth the effort they could. Some effort is needed to arouse the Saints themselves, in many places, to their responsibility along this line.

The personal visit and invitation are better than a tract. God's way of personally proclaiming the word is most effectual to arouse interest and beget faith. Truly faith comes by hearing much more than by reading. Tracts and books are best after one becomes interested. One may get the theory by reading, but not the spirit of the work; in fact, they are not entitled to the Holy Ghost until after the laying on of hands. Yet there is more or less the influence of the Spirit flowing from the speaker to the hearer. The word made flesh is the most potent power for good anywhere in the world.

Various Editions of the Book of Mormon

BY S. A. BURGESS

The Manuscript

When the Book of Mormon was printed, Joseph Smith retained one complete manuscript, and Oliver Cowdery the other. Joseph Smith later placed his manuscript in the corner stone of the Nauvoo House, but unfortunately work was discontinued on this building in the spring of 1844, when the brick-work had just reached the second-story window.

It was left for sometime uncompleted. When finally Lewis C. Bidamon desired to finish the corner of the L and tore down the remaining two wings to do this, and the corner stone was opened, the manuscript was found quite thoroughly water-soaked and decayed. Some of the best of the sheets were sent to Joseph Smith, late President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and some were sent to Joseph Fielding Smith, late President of the Utah Church. It is believed that only one sheet has been preserved, and that is kept behind glass in Salt Lake City.

The manuscript in the possession of Oliver Cowdery, was, however, quite carefully preserved. At his death in 1850, it passed into the hands of David Whitmer. David Whitmer refused repeated offers of purchase, but after his death it was turned over by Jacob Schweich to the Reorganized Church. This manuscript is complete and well preserved.

It was long kept wrapped in paper, but between the conferences of 1922 and 1923, E. H. Tordoff, of Berkeley, California, prepared a special container in three parts which protects the manuscript from damage by fire or the elements.

First Edition

The first edition of the Book of Mormon was published by E. B. Grandin, at Palmyra, New York, in 1830. The second edition was published by Oliver Cowdery and Company, at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1837. The third edition was published at Nauvoo, Illinois, by John Taylor, in 1840. The fourth American edition was printed at Nauvoo, Illinois, by Joseph Smith, in 1842. This is probably the rarest edition now in existence, and after that the 1837 or Kirtland edition is most rare. These two are even more rare than is the first, or Palmyra edition. The third and fourth editions were stereotyped.

The edition of 1842, though it was the fourth American edition, was really the fifth edition of the book, as the first European edition was printed from the second American or Kirtland edition in Liverpool in 1841.

Liverpool Editions

The death of Joseph Smith prevented a further edition in the next few years. In fact it appears that several years elapsed before another edition was published in America. In the meantime the second European edition was published by Orson Pratt at Liverpool in 1849. The third European edition, which was also stereotyped, was published at Liverpool by F. B. Richards in 1852. The fourth European edition was published by Orson Pratt in 1854. The fifth European edition was published by F. B. Richards, also in 1854. The sixth was published at Liverpool in 1866; the third to sixth European editions were stereotyped. The 1869 (seventh) edition was also published at Liverpool and was electrotyped. Of further Liverpool editions we note the third electrotyped edition was in 1883; the fourth in 1886; fifth in 1889; and the ninth in 1906. (The ninth electrotyped would doubtless be the fifteenth Liverpool edition.)

An edition was printed by James O. Wright and Company about 1859, which was signed by Zadoc Brook. This is sometimes called the Brook's edition and sometimes the Huntley edition. About the same time another edition was brought out from the same plates by James O. Wright and Company, as a literary curiosity. These two editions are closely associated. There is some dispute as to which was printed first. The paging leads to an inference that the Wright edition was published first as a curiosity. On the other hand the statement has been made that in advertising the Wright edition, credit was given to the Huntley-Brook edition, as the advertisement stated the same plates were being used. This we have not been able to verify.

Reorganized Church Editions

This edition is of great interest to us, because of the four thousand copies published, many were purchased by members of the Reorganized Church. These were the earliest books used after the Reorganization, so that it was not until 1874 that an edition was published for and on behalf of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This was published from the third American edition, at Plano, Illinois. Also an 1874 Lamoni edition exists, though its real date must be after 1881.

Various uses were made from these same plates with different dates. These are all dated Lamoni. Beginning about 1900 the number of the edition was indicated. Thus 1900 was the 22d edition; 1902 the 26th edition, 1905 the 30th edition, 1906 the 31st edition, 1907 the 33d edition.

In the meantime the large type edition was published in 1892, and is still being held in stock for those desiring the large print. The 12th edition of this work was issued in 1908. The 13th edition, which is still in stock, was published in 1916.

Having secured the manuscript of the Book of Mormon from the heirs of David Whitmer a careful comparison was made and a new edition was issued in 1908, the "Authorized Edition." Of this we have located copies of 1908, 1911, 1913, 1917, and 1919, published in Lamoni, Iowa; and at Independence, Missouri, in 1921, 1923, 1925, and 1926. The number of the edition is not indicated in these various issues of the authorized edition, but we have in our possession nine different copies bearing nine different dates, as indicated above.

Salt Lake Editions

As to the Utah Church, the first edition published in Salt Lake City appeared in 1871, another in 1874, a third in 1877. In 1879 an edition was published divided into verses and chapters by Orson Pratt, sr., carrying footnotes and other helps. This issue was copyrighted. We find differently dated copies after 1879 published at Salt Lake City in 1881, 1882, 1883, 1885, 1888, 1891, 1900, 1905, 1907, 1914. From Liverpool for these dates (1879-1920) there is a similar arrangement of text and paging.

In 1920 another copyright was taken out, and additional notes and helps were added so as to provide the basis for a new copyright by Heber J. Grant. Of this, copies were issued in 1920 and 1923.

Chicago and Independence Editions

Other issues in English have also been made. Beginning in 1905 large editions were published at Chicago. These were marked for the Northeastern States Mission and the Central States Mission. The fifth edition was in 1908. A Kansas City electrotype edition was published in 1902. Then there have been published in Independence at least eight editions. We have not checked up on later publications.

The Utah Church also published a large type edition in 1888, and their Sunday School Union has published a very small vest pocket edition.

We present the above data to give some idea how widely this book has been published in the English language. It is only fair to add that the Nephite Record was published by the Church of Christ, Whitmerite, about 1899. The Utah Church had an edition printed in the Deseret Cipher about 1869.

Translations

But in foreign languages probably the first was the Mormons Bog in Scandinavian, which was published in 1851. The second edition was published at Copenhagen in 1858. A Swedish edition was published at the same place in 1878. Peter Anderson and Peter Muceus published for the Reorganized Church at Portsgrund, Norway, an edition in 1903.

The following year, after the first Scandanavian edition, the Llyfr Mormons was printed by John Davis in Merthyr, Tydfil, Wales, in 1852. This of course is the Welch edition. And in the same year Le Livre de Mormon, the French edition, was published by John Taylor.

The same year, 1852, an edition was published in Italian, Il Libro di Mormon. It was not, however, until 1886, that the Book of Mormon was published in Spanish by the Deseret News. A second edition was brought out by the Utah Church in 1920.

The Book of Mormon was also published in German in Hamburg in 1852, Das Buch Mormon. A further edition was published in 1873 in Bern. In 1893 an edition was published in Salt Lake City, Utah, and in 1902 an edition was published at Berlin. There are doubtless other editions in German which have been printed.

We are particularly interested in the edition prepared by Alexander Kippe and printed at Berlin in 1911. This is a reprint in German of the authorized 1908 edition, and is published by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Het Boek Van Mormon (Dutch) was printed in Amsterdam in 1890.

The first edition in Hawaiian was probably that by George Q. Cannon, published at San Francisco in 1855. Shortly after the Reorganized Church had opened a mission in Honolulu under the direction of Elder G. J. Waller, a translation was prepared in Hawaiian by G. M. Poepoe and G. M. Kameakua. This was printed in 1898 in Honolulu.

The Utah Church has also printed an edition in Armenian in 1906 and a Japanese edition in 1908.

In Tahitian, an edition was published in 1904, and the Book of Mormon has also been published in Hindostanee and Maori.

So we find the Book of Mormon published at least in one dozen languages, and many editions, totalling millions of copies. Here is a partial list of the editions in foreign languages:

Welch: Llyfr Mormon (1851)
 French: Le Livre de Mormon (1852)
 German: Das Buch Mormon (1852)
 Dutch: Het Boek van Mormon Danish: Mormons Bog
 Swedish: Mormons Bok
 Spanish: Libro de Mormon
 Italian: Il libro di Mormon

Hawaiian: Ka Buke a Moramma
 Tahitian: Te Buke a Moromona
 (Japanese, Armenian, Deseret Cipher not figured out yet.)

The early editions in 1851 and 1852 of the Book of Mormon in foreign languages are of considerable importance. This was after the death of Joseph Smith. It was before the time that the abominable doctrine of polygamy had been spread abroad. Since the reorganization of the original church, from Plano, Lamoni, and Independence, many editions have been issued in English. Not so much has been done as to translation into foreign languages, but the book has been studied more closely by members of the Reorganization in the last thirty years than is the case with any other faction.

It is remarkable to think of the possibilities of this book going forth in so many different languages to the people of the earth. We wish it were possible to state how many books have been printed, but that would be purely guess work.

Graceland—an Industrial Institution

The industrial activities at Graceland are continuous, night and day, twelve months of the year. There is always something to do, and ninety-six per cent of the individuals to carry on this work are students.

The morning watchman calls the fireman at 4.30 a. m. He hurries to the heating plant and livens the fires that steam heat the six buildings. Soon after the fireman is well at work, the morning cooks begin their duties in the Commissary Department. Down at the farm the boys are getting the Jersey cows in their stanchions, and some one is busy in order to get twenty-four gallons of milk to the kitchen to start breakfast. The making of toast, frying of eggs, preparing cereal, or whatever the menu may be for one hundred and fifty hungry boys and girls is just a starter for the day's work, not to mention the dishes that are to be washed and dried.

There are chairs to mend, broken windows to glaze, doors to repair, electric lights to fix, plumbing to look after, roof leaks to stop, furniture to move, apples to pick, trees to prune, flowers to take care of, garden to plant; tomatoes, beets, and beans to can; cucumbers to pickle, corn to plant, hogs to feed, halls to scrub, rooms to sweep, freight to haul, filing to do, letters to write, books to keep, and buildings to build—all by young men and women who are "earning while they learn." Seventy per cent of the students at Graceland this year are working and helping to meet their expenses. This means that seven of every ten boys or girls one meets are working. These young people come to Graceland from one hundred and twenty-five homes scattered through twenty-five States and several foreign countries and in the Industrial Department carry on the institutional duties of the college.

Viewed from the financial standpoint, student labor is expensive. The college could hire more efficient regular employees and have the work more economically, but such a method would preclude the opportunity of an education for seventy per cent of the student body who have to work to earn a part of their living while going to school.

Many ambitious young men and women who have funds or could secure assistance somewhere else are anxious to work to help meet expenses. Giving assignments to such individuals keeps some one away who has no other source from which to secure funds and whose education depends on a job at Graceland.

A Garden Scene at Graceland Farm.

This problem of assigning work to worthy and needy young people is one of the greatest problems of administration in the Industrial Department. There are a number of applications already on file for assignments in the Industrial Department for the coming school year. Every individual who applies for work is required to fill out a questionnaire which shows the age of the applicant, church membership, amount of money he or she will have at the beginning of the school year, his or her education and working experience. The types of work these boys and girls have been doing is of special interest and very important, and, in fact, it is essential to determine whether or not they know how to work at all. The names of three responsible people who can recommend them with respect to their working ability and financial standing is required. These applications are studied in detail, and sometimes during the summer the applicants are advised whether or not there is a possibility for them to secure work at Graceland.

Classes are so arranged that one group of students can work in the morning and go to class in the afternoon. The other group have their classes in the morning and work in the afternoon, thus attempting to give available workers both in the morning and afternoon.

It has been found through the experience of those who have conducted the Industrial Department at Graceland and in other institutions, that a student can do his best class work if he does not work more than three hours a day. Regular college courses are designed to keep the average boy or girl busy and do not take into consideration the necessity for his working for a part of his living. In addition to regular class work, there are activities which are very worth while, such as debating, dramatics, journalism, oratory, and athletics. Although this work does not come in the regular college curriculum, it is a very important part of a student's education. Students are not barred from participation in athletics and other student activities because of the necessity of their having to work. However, it is a real job to carry a regular college course, earn part of one's expenses, and enter into student activities. There have been boys and girls who have stood at the head of their classes at Graceland, accomplishing all three of these things and doing them well. The social standing of a working student is equal to that of the students who do not work. Money is not a determiner—many a boy has gone through Graceland with not more than ten dollars a year for spending money.

The young people who take these jobs are advised and become conscious of their responsibility to the church and college. Every tool, every animal, every piece of equipment, and building that is placed in the hands of a boy or girl is done so with the understanding that he will preserve and make the most of what is given to his care. By fostering the Industrial Department, Graceland and the church provide the means by which a greater number of young people can continue their education. The growth and expansion of this department depends largely on the available funds and the men and women who are willing to assist in its administration.

Whenever you try to understand the world through the intellect, you are a scientist . . . but after we have discovered what life means to a scientist, after we have read the heavens, after we have pored through the geologic history of the earth from the beginning; after we have all this knowledge, still the heart cries out, and the answer to the great question of the heart and soul is given to us by art, especially by poetry.—Edwin Markham.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Good Word From Eastern Michigan Conference

The annual conference of Eastern Michigan District convened at Sandusky, Michigan, May 21 and 22 with a fair representation attending Saturday sessions, and on Sunday the crowds were so large that services were held in the auditorium. The membership was very much pleased to have present Apostle D. T. Williams and Elder Bruce Brown and wife, of Colorado Springs, Colorado, formerly of Eastern Michigan District.

After the Saturday morning prayer service, the usual business sessions were held, which resulted in the unanimous vote of the conference for Elder David Pycock, of Toronto, Ontario, as district president for the coming year. Brother Pycock has been sent here to labor in the district, and we hope as a people we will show our appreciation of his coming by cooperation with him in his work among us. There were not many changes in the other district officers, most of last year's officials being chosen for the coming year.

On Saturday evening Brother Pycock was the speaker, Apostle D. T. Williams Sunday afternoon, and Sunday evening Elder Bruce Brown. We are sure that the many valuable thoughts dropped by the different speakers can not help but bring forth fruit in the lives of those who attended.

The service of installation of district president convened after the Sunday morning prayer service, and the auditorium was filled to its capacity. Apostle Williams spoke in a very impressive manner on behalf of the church and its purpose in sending Brother Pycock to our district.

Elder Matthew Liston, retiring district president, then spoke in a general way of his work as district president, and assured Brother Pycock of his hearty support and cooperation and also that of the membership among whom he would be called to labor. In his closing remarks he presented the district gavel to Elder Pycock with best wishes and prayers for success in his work. Brother Pycock, in response, pledged himself to do the best he could, stating that he came to Eastern Michigan District because it was the wish of the church and that he wanted to be worthy of the confidence and prayers of its membership in his work.

Elder L. E. Grice spoke concisely on "The needs of Eastern Michigan District," at which time he brought out the needs of the district and how best they could be taken care of, especially in the work of the young people. Brother Grice made several suggestions, which we hope can be carried out and thus develop and bring the work up to the standard it should occupy.

One could not help but feel the calm, peaceful spirit; also the earnestness and zeal that accompanied the different speakers.

Previous to the Sunday afternoon service, the Sandusky band entertained the conference with a concert. The members showed wonderful development and, to say the least, it was enjoyed by all. We were pleased to notice that several of the members of the band were our own church members, which shows their interest in the development of talents.

The musical numbers were furnished by the Women's Chorus, of Port Huron, the Saint Clair Choir, and Sister Marie Dollinger, soloist, and the Diem Brothers, famous for their wonderful duets. The numbers were well rendered and a credit to the Department of Music.

Prospects for Eastern Michigan District were never brighter than now. We hope to take advantage of the opportunities as they present themselves, to advance the work in our district, that the objectives of the church may be made a reality.

Joplin, Missouri

Twenty-first Street and Annie Baxter Avenue

A very delightful Children's Day program was given at the eleven o'clock hour on Sunday, June 12. Several numbers were given by the children, after which the pastor, Brother C. T. Sheppard, gave a short talk.

Joy seemed to reign supreme throughout the day. There were half a dozen families, all former members of the Joplin Branch, here from distant places to enjoy the day with us. At noon a basket dinner was held on the banks of Shoal Creek. This was enjoyed by all, but the dessert was eaten in a hurry because of the approaching rain. Before the tablecloths had been taken from the ground it began to rain and continued until time for baptizing at 2 p. m. There were eight children who entered the waters of baptism. Brother Virgil E. Sheppard, who is taking the missionary field this week, officiated.

The orchestra which was recently organized here has been steadily growing better until now we have a real musical group to play for us every Sunday morning. Frequently they give a special number at the night service, and when they do it seems to liven the meeting up, and a greater interest is taken in the service. At one time this orchestra made a special trip to a nearby town where one of the brothers is holding meetings, and played for them. Several of the members of the priesthood from Joplin have been visiting nearby towns and holding meetings with a good response.

Saint Louis District Conference

Conference convened with the Lansdowne Branch, of East Saint Louis, Illinois, on Saturday and Sunday, May 28 and 29. Quite a little excitement and hundreds of dollars of damage were occasioned on the Saturday evening about an hour before meeting time, by the most severe hailstorm in the memory of the natives. Hailstones weighing as much as nine ounces, pounded windows, roofs, and auto tops for fifteen minutes, until they resembled sieves. After lying for an hour, hailstones as large as an ordinary hen egg were to be picked up in the streets or on lawns where they had fallen. This storm delayed a number of conference members for the early meeting at 6 p. m.

The usual routine business was disposed of, however, by 7.15 p. m., and the visiting member, Brother F. H. Edwards, of the quorum of twelve, conducted a class for a period of one hour, much to the edification of those present. His theme was the "Centennial series."

The Sabbath services were well attended, some 175 being the average attendance at the mass meetings. There were representations from nearly every branch in the district, a thing uncommon in the district, owing to the wide expanse of territory covered.

Brother Lee Wehrheim was ordained to the office of elder at the elders' quorum meeting. Brother Wehrheim has had active charge of the Ava, Illinois, Branch for some months, and has the good wishes of all his friends in the district to carry on in God's way.

The social service on Sunday afternoon was the most spiritual held in the Saint Louis District in many years. The young people were very active in their work at this meeting, and thus served to help the older folks to their testimonies. During the two hours of this session more than seventy-five took part. There was at this time a manifestation and a work and a word of admonition to the young folks through District President G. F. Barraclough.

Apostle Edwards addressed the congregation at 11 a. m. and 5.45 p. m.

Brother Edwards was one of the busiest men at the conference. He either had charge or assisted at most of the sessions, and between meetings he could be seen "button-holed" by this group, or this individual, seeking advice or information on subjects of varied nature and kind. He seemed patient, and tried to advise all properly.

The Lansdowne Choir very ably closed the day's busy life with a sacred cantata. Under the leadership of Sister Elsie Barraclough, they proved that we are yet a "singing church."

Branches represented at the conference were Alton, Illinois; Ava, Illinois; Belleville, Illinois; Brentwood, Missouri; Lansdowne, Illinois; Nebo, Illinois; Maryland Heights, Missouri; Saint Charles, Missouri; Saint Louis, Missouri; Esther, Missouri; Sawyerville, Illinois; O'Fallon, Illinois; and some visitors from the East Alton and Wood River, Illinois, mission of the Alton Branch.

We are all glad to hear that Elder A. M. Baker is coming to the Saint Louis District, and send him a "warning" that he is going to have his hands full, for the whole district seems to be set on a missionary effort this year.

We are sorry that Brother J. E. Lancaster could not labor among us, and extend to him our best wishes for success in his field.

We are authorized to state that the conference of the Saint Louis district, held on May 28 and 29, was the "best ever" in the district.

Brentwood, Missouri

The communion service of June 5 was marked by the activity of those present in prayer, song, and testimony, some thirty taking part. The theme of the meeting was one of admonition to come up higher, in answer to the Spirit's call. Towards the close of the service, a message of admonition and encouragement was given through one of the elders.

Elder John Edwards was the speaker at the evening hour, his thought being taken from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, "A marvelous work and a wonder." His points were well taken.

The prayer service on Wednesday evening, the 8th, was very well attended. Grandpa Peat is still in a very helpless condition, due to the infirmities of age, and we miss him at these services.

On Monday evening, June 6, the Temple Builders gave a regular "Old tyme strawberrie social." The strawberries, home grown on Brother Struebing's farm, were very palatable on top of the good ice cream, and cakes were on deck for eating. We are told they made a neat sum in their effort, to be placed towards improvements on the church building. Quite a number of visitors from Lansdowne, Maryland Heights, and Saint Louis Branches were present, and added to the zest of the evening.

The morning sessions of June 12 were combined, the Sabbath school furnishing a program after lesson study. Each class was represented. The babies under four years of age were "lined up" on the rostrum, and the "nose count" showed nine. There were present twenty-two children under the age of eight years. A peculiar thing about the program was that the expected "babies' chorus" was very much absent, even though they were being placed on display. The closing number was a boys' and girls' story by the pastor, who cleverly told the stories of Daniel and Ruth, much to the edification of the eighty-four present. Our assistant superintendent, Brother Struebing, had charge of the session, Superintendent Nills Nelson having taken Elder John Edwards to the Maryland Heights Branch to assist with their work there.

Elder Roy Remington was the speaker at the evening hour, and based his thought on 1 Nephi 1: 46-49, giving us an earnest exhortation to seek for a clearer understanding of God's law and orders, and to grasp today's opportunity to lay the foundation for tomorrow's superstructure. The attention accorded him was of the best, and comments were to the effect that "Roy was at his best tonight."

The little son of Brother and Sister Robert Miles was taken to the hospital on June 9, suffering from infection due to poisoned water in which he had waded some time ago. He is undergoing electric treatments for this, and latest reports are that he is doing nicely. The whole branch unites in prayer for the stricken one. The little lad has great faith in the ordinance of administration, and received relief to a great extent, under the hands of Elders C. J. Remington and John Edwards, for which we all give thanks.

The priesthood continue their discussions on the "Elements of stewardship," etc., holding two sessions per month for this purpose.

Persia, Iowa

The church is located in the center of the city of Persia.

June 16.—It is now two months since our last news was written to the HERALD. The branch is still in existence, although it has its drawback—attendance is not what it should be. Still, we have many things to be thankful for. One of these is that we have a place where we may go and worship God unmolested, or as under our own vine and fig tree.

The branch is presided over by Elder W. J. Chambers. We are having Sunday school under the superintendency of Sister Mary Chambers. The attendance might be better, but we are glad that we are having a place for the young people to go on the Sabbath and spend part of the time in church service. Our Sunday school opens at 9.45 a. m.; preaching is at 11, and the evening service at 8.

District President Joseph Lane comes over occasionally, or sees that some one comes. Last Sunday Elder George Hansen preached for us. This brother has moved into this neighborhood. He is a farmer. We hope he will be able to render service in this part.

We have had two sacramental meetings since last writing; in these we were encouraged in the work of the Master and took renewed interest to continue as long as our time will last.

We have a Book of Mormon class in which the older ones take part. In this study we get some of the reasons why the Book of Mormon was sent to this church and what are the blessings it brings, not forgetting to hold up what we must accomplish in learning the law and fulfilling it before these blessings are ours. It is a study of deep interest to know what God did for the early Saints in this country of America.

New London, Connecticut

June 14.—Brother John E. Blastow has again left us for the summer. A farewell party was given him at his home recently, which was attended by most of the Saints here. All enjoyed a very pleasant time. Brother Blastow will be greatly missed. His activity in the branch musical program was enjoyed, also his whole-hearted devotions.

The Department of Women has been progressive of late. A good sum has been netted by the sale of candy. Our sweet tooth has been generously nurtured as a result. Preparations are formulating for a sale of handwork in linens and various domestic goods. A strawberry festival is another feature of the near future.

Children's Day was observed by recitations, readings, singing, etc.

At the evening service solos were rendered by Sisters Margaret Slater and Willamina Maynard. A baby boy, Ralph Dennis, son of Brother Dennis, was blessed by the pastor, Elder Alma T. Whipple. Brother William Dennis and wife and daughter, Dorothy, from Wisconsin, were present. The Saints were glad to see them and hope they will make their vacation an extended one.

Mrs. Laura Steele, of Providence, Rhode Island, gave the branch a large Bible. The lovely gift is deeply appreciated.

Far West Stake

Far West Branch

June 14.—Far West Branch is still trying to do its little bit. The smallpox has been through here, so we could not have services for two or three weeks, and our Mothers' Day program was delayed. Nevertheless we had it on May 29, which served for both Mothers' Day and Decoration Day. The mothers took part, as well as others, all evincing a good spirit, honoring their mothers.

Our union service and basket dinner at this place on June 12 was a partial disappointment, members from other branches not coming because of heavy rains and bad roads. About seventy were present, and we enjoyed the dinner and the sermon by Brother Samuel Twombly. We appreciate his discourses. Our program was omitted because most of the members could not be present.

Brother J. W. Peterson came through here at night on his way to Kingston, and gave us a fine sermon on the last days.

Our little church looks nicer now on the outside; we have just finished having it painted.

Pastor G. B. Koger had a painful accident happen to his ankle and foot and has been unable to use it for a week or two. We hope and pray that it will soon be all right and he will again be permitted to meet with us.

Missionary J. W. Peterson Visits the Stake

For most of the last six weeks I have been laboring around my old home where I spent my youth, Stewartsville, Hamilton, and Kingston in the Far West Stake. I left Stewartsville on my first mission in June 1889. And though I have preached in most of the States of the Union, in most of the Dominion of Canada, and on the South Sea Island, this is the first time to be appointed to my home district. I have only made two flying visits here in all that time. Always making new friends and leaving them, it now seems strange to meet people with whom one has been acquainted from boyhood. To talk over old times and boyhood pranks seems quite out of my line. After being for nearly forty years among strangers, one really feels strange to be among old acquaintances. And I rather imagine that many still look upon me as the mischievous boy they once knew, rather than an experienced missionary. My advice and instruction, it seems to me, by some is more easily rejected because of their still looking upon me as the boy of years ago. Perhaps I notice it more in the "Johnnie" than in anything else.

Then, too, I meet here Saints from various States and countries whom I knew elsewhere, and rejoice in a way to think I was able to tell them of this wonderful country, and now see them enjoying it. Last week as I was passing through nearly the whole length of this stake, I could not but think that here is room for the entire church now scattered in all the world. There are enough people anxious to sell, so that our people could buy at a good advantage and settle in the country the Lord pointed out to them—their promised land. I could imagine that many in Egypt decided to remain in bondage, perhaps because of a married son or daughter or a good home, rather than gather to Canaan, but we never heard of those who remained, and they were not numbered among God's people when the census was taken.

What a fine thing it would be if the whole church could be together, so that our young people could form associates among their own faith, and together we could help to benefit each other and our neighbors.

Every year this church is paying two millions of dollars in profits into the hands of nonmembers who do not care enough for us to even once step inside of our church buildings. With the whole church assembled in the four stakes, one industrial and three pastoral, we could soon have our own factories and wholesale businesses, with an Order of Enoch and store business in every branch to trade among ourselves, as far as agreeable with our neighbors, and sell to them better goods and at a more fair price, and in this way benefit both them and ourselves. But we can only have a small beginning until most of the church obeys the commandment to gather into the "regions round about." We could have our own insurance companies and save many thousands and perhaps a million of dollars, which now go to enrich others who have no interest in the kingdom of God.

The church is composed of about twenty thousand families. If we figure twenty-five dollars a year for fire insurance and the same amount for life insurance (I am sure that is a very low estimate, to say nothing of car insurance and union dues,) that means a million dollars sent out of the church while the church of the living God languishes and pants for its very life. And yet there are many who can not see the sin of it. They lightly regard the gathering and seem to regard the institutions of the world too great and the church too little, and all the time there are homes and fields in God's appointed country ready to receive them. He has prospered them where they are and most of them could easily transfer their holdings and benefit both themselves and the church. And yet many can not see the sin of it.

The bishop of every stake would gladly correspond with all whom the Lord will put it in their hearts to gather, and gladly give them advice, and help them to make the transfer. Why delay? Of course those with means should come first and make it possible for the others, as the Lord has said. Surely the Lord's work is being delayed by the hesitancy of the Saints. And it is being starved because so many are spending their money elsewhere. Oh, the sin of it all!

KINGSTON, MISSOURI, June 14.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana

Sunday, June 5, was a day of activity. The Clear Lake Group of Saints staged an all-day service, and the newly carpeted and decorated church on the south shore of the beautiful sheet of water and popular resort of Northern Indiana was a sanctuary of gathering difficult to abandon. It appeared that God was beautiful in nature also. Forests were robed in dense green; fields were veritable gardens where bursting masses of spring and summer colors struggled to assert themselves. Languorous perfumes were wafted on the soft air, while even the feathered tenants rejoiced and recognized the fact that spring housekeeping had begun.

Services of church work were systematic and accompanied by a fine spirit. The Sunday school opened at 9.30 under direct charge of Brother Ross Worthington. Sacrament was administered at 10.45, followed by a sermon at 11. The subject was "The ten virgins." At this time the oil, lamps, vessels, and coming Bridegroom, with concomitants, were discussed. In the basement the tables groaned under their burden of delicacies, and dinner was served at 12.30 to the satisfaction of a large crowd of guests.

At 2.30 p. m. the assembly was in charge of Brother Melvin Johnson, who presented the speaker. The sermon was "Glad tidings of great joy," "Good news from a far country," "The shadow of a great rock," and "A covert from storms." Some administrations were in order at the conclusion of this service, and at 5.45 supper was served, and a duplicate of the good things had at the noon hour was again enjoyed. Human critics could say, "Everything was appropriate."

A fine audience convened for Religio work at 7.30. Here was the exhibition of the young people's strength, as well as the older ones. Sister Ella Davis, of former experience in this line of work, presides with dignity. Sister Fern Smith, as teacher of the larger class, was wonderful in her adaptability of questions to the different grades of age and experience, and Sister Worthington handled the program in a fine way. There were twelve to fifteen young people participating in this program and with great credit. Even the president of the Religio and Brother Casswell could not keep themselves out of it.

In the midst of a great deal of "Noise," the group is silently and without much ostentation gathering light and force. They are in the position of a traveler during a storm, as related by the martyred President, Abraham Lincoln. This traveler in the midst of thunder and lightning was afforded a clew to his way by flashes, and he prayed: "O Lord, if it is all the same to you, give me a little more light and a little less noise." The "noise" has concentrated in a schoolhouse south of Fremont and passes in paper announcement under the title of "Saints" for their service.

Study classes throughout the southern belt of this district set in motion by District President Harrington are growing in faith, interest, and enthusiasm. South Bend Branch presents the appearance of a busy beehive. In the midst of industrial clamor, with its many obligations of Sabbath day, the Saints at that point are forging along. Brother and Sister Freeman are very spirited in leadership and manifest interest in humanity by heart, head, and hand. The Saints at Hibbard are reaching out for the goal and trying to be active and faithful in their trust. Some afflictions are in their midst.

By report from Jackson we learn the group is enjoying its study gathering and endeavoring to secure a hall from the busy mart of the city for preaching campaigns.

From all posts of outlook, the faith of Saints is bursting forth in high endeavor to do something for the marvelous work following the revelation of the "sealed book." The signs of the present day indicate a limited time for work. Even some of the colleges of the country are teaching as their religious feature that these are the latter days, and the events, crowdings, fillings of its measures, herald the return of Christ to receive accountings for the goods he has delivered unto us, every man according to his stewardship. The world is full of opportunity. There is no need of waiting for something to turn up. Christ threw himself under the burdens of the world, before his church was organized, and it is yet a part of the divine law of compensation that in order to do much legitimately for himself, man must do immensely more for others. Exceptions to this rule only go to prove it. Here is the conclusion:

"I am but a cog in life's vast wheel.
That daily makes the same old trip;
But, oh, what joy it is to feel
That but for me the wheel might slip!
'Tis something after all to jog
Along and be a first-class cog."

Southern Ohio Ministerial Conference

The ministerial conference held at Nelsonville, Ohio, May 21 and 22, was well attended by Saints from this part of Southern Ohio District. Missionaries Ulrich and Halb arrived on Friday, and a very interesting talk was given that evening by Brother Ulrich.

On Saturday evening District Vice President A. E. Anderson, of Columbus, was the speaker.

Sunday morning 8.30 prayer service was in charge of Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. The Spirit was present in power, and although the gifts were not manifested, that sweet, peaceful influence reigned throughout the prayer service, lingering during the remainder of the day.

At 9.15 Sunday school began, in charge of local officers. At 11 there was a sermon by Bishop H. E. French, of Columbus.

Following this service all were invited to remain, and a sumptuous dinner was served from baskets brought by the Saints.

At 2.30 preaching by William Grice, of Crosswell, Michigan, was the attraction. Brother Grice stated that he had come to this district to help lift the load, and stressed the fact that the team which pulls together is the one which moves the load.

At 7.30 Sunday evening Apostle Ellis gave an illustrated lecture on the Hawaiian Islands. This proved very interesting, for Brother Ellis has spent several years as a missionary among these people.

At least eight of the fifteen branches in Southern Ohio District were represented, besides isolated Saints. A good spirit was enjoyed throughout the meeting, and the Saints feel encouraged to go forward. May we have more such gatherings.

SARAH E. BATCHELDER.

Is Blessed in Paying Her Tithes

We take the HERALD, Autumn Leaves, and Ensign, and find much to comfort and strengthen us in the news they bring. We are isolated from Sunday school and church privileges, but my prayer and desire is for the redemption of Zion. I often ask myself, What am I doing to help redeem Zion? I am striving daily to understand all the law of Zion and to do all I can to keep that law. I pray that God will help us all to love our neighbors as ourselves and to always do unto others as we would like to have others do unto us. I pray God to help us who bear the name of Latter Day Saint to get the right understanding of the statement that we are to be the salt of the earth, that we may always have the interest of the whole group at heart, and not be so selfish as to work only for our own special interest, for we read in God's word: "Greater love hath no man than that he lay down his life for his friends." I, for one, believe if we keep the whole law of God, we are working for the whole group and not for ourselves or a few.

I feel sure we are living in the hastening time, when it behooves each and everyone of us to learn our whole duty to God and our fellow men. My daily prayers are for those at the head of the church, that we as members of Christ's church may be made to realize more fully our duty toward them, that we may honor them by keeping the whole law of God and thereby be prepared for celestial glory, for there is no other way we shall be able to obtain the celestial kingdom.

It seems to me the Saints are not united in their understanding as much as they should be on the law of tithing. I believe we had better pay one tenth of every dollar we possess as our tithe, rather than make a mistake in understanding just what is our increase. It comes to me like this sometimes, that when we came into the world we had nothing of increase, and that all we get is increase. We may live up our increase and have nothing above our living if we do not watch ourselves very carefully; but I believe we should make every sacrifice we can and know how to have every dollar we can to pay the tithe on, not live it all up as we go along. I have paid my tithing ever since I was a small girl, and feel blessed in it, in the observance of the law. I only wish all my loved ones could see the necessity for paying the tenth of all they possess. My heart goes out to God in mighty prayer to quicken our understandings in all things that are right and just.

I am striving to live and help others to live so that we may all be counted worthy to be in the thousand years' reign here on earth with our blessed Savior, when he comes to claim his own. I would love to receive letters from the Saints scattered here and there throughout the world. I love to write letters to the Saints and do write many.

I would like to know the full meaning of the statement that every man is to eat under his own vine and fig tree throughout the millennium. Does it mean every family will have their own home? that every family will have a permanent abiding place? that they will not have to rent homes as they do now? And how about the taxes? Are people going to have to pay taxes on their own homes throughout the millennium?

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

On Wednesday, June 1, about seventy-five of the Lamoni young people who attend the young people's prayer meeting at the Brick Church met at five o'clock, according to previous arrangements, and from there went to the reunion grounds for a picnic supper, games, and prayer service.

Upon arriving at the grounds, group games were entered into by the young people until supper was called about 6.30. After supper they played in smaller groups for about thirty minutes, and at eight o'clock all gathered for the prayer service. In some ways this was a very remarkable meeting. Quite a number of the older young people, upon whom the presiding officers usually depend to carry the meeting, were helping with the college banquet, and they had some misgivings as to the activity of the meeting. However, immediately following the opening remarks some of the older ones took part, and they were followed by some who had never participated in a prayer service before. Among these were several who do not belong to the church. During the hour spent together, in addition to the songs and prayers offered, thirty-two testimonies were borne. At the close of the meeting it was voted unanimously that another meeting should be held on the reunion grounds during the early part of July.

The Lamoni Department of Recreation and Expression began last week its summer program of meeting on Thursday evening. The matter of changing from Sunday evening has been discussed for some time; in fact, over a period of several months. Meetings of departmental workers canvassed the situation and outlined a tentative program. Several factors entered in. The schedule of services on Sunday makes a rather full day for those attempting to attend all. The expression department is unable to do many things anticipated if meetings are conducted on Sunday.

The arrangement is for the summer only, as the reconvening of the public school and college will occupy most of the week nights with study and school activities. Consequently all activities, classes and recreation, have been outlined for a quarter period.

Class work of study and expression is continued, giving stability to the department. The boys and girls meet in their group organizations, thus forming a provision for all ages with the following leaders:

- Children, taking up stories and plays, Mrs. Dona Haden.
 - Cubs, boys 8 to 12, Lyle Flynn.
 - Scouts, Marion Woodstock.
 - Blue Birds and Moentitas, Mrs. C. B. Woodstock with a corps of assistants.
 - S. C. I. C. Class, high school age, Lyda Elefson.
 - Recreation leadership, young people, Hazel Jones and Byron Roberts.
- The adults carry on study classes with courses outlined for a period of three months.
- History of the Reorganization, W. E. Prall.
 - Zionic problems, A. J. Yarrington.
 - Book of Mormon, Mrs. Flora Scott.
 - General Church History, J. E. Anderson.

The study period is shortened so as to allow for the program and expression work. On the opening night some of the young people and adults were recruited, and the children were the hearers. Judging from the sociability and hearty response, old and young alike enjoyed this feature. The numbers were as follows:

- Male quartet of college young men, singing a group of college airs.
- Reading, "A telephone romance," Verlyn Stevenson.
- Discussion, Resolved that music of today is preferable to that of thirty-five years ago. Affirmative, Verna Garver and Roy Cheville. Negative, Mrs. Evaline Burgess and George W. Blair.

The criticism, which like the debate, was humorous, was given by Mrs. Lena Graham. The deciding factor was the demonstration of vocal music of the periods by Brother Blair, giving the decision to the negative.

Mixed quartet of old-time melodies, Mrs. W. E. Prall, Mrs. John Garver, Roy Derry, and Oscar Anderson.

Tonight the expression period will be devoted to group games led by the class in recreational leadership.

Pleasanton

On Tuesday evening, May 31, the Saints of the Pleasanton Branch gathered at the church in honor of Elder M. M. Turpen who was leaving in a few days to engage in church work. Brother Turpen was for many years a faithful worker for the church and engaged in both missionary and local work. He spent a number of years in missionary work in the Southland and some few years ago, on account of the encroachments of age and ill health at the time, was superannuated. His health is improved and the spirit within him is young, so it is his desire to do all he can in church work, and with the concurrence of the proper church officials, he is to make a rather prolonged stay in the South, where we feel sure he will be a strength to the work and where his old-time friends will be glad to greet him.

Elder W. L. Morey, president of the branch, took charge of the program, and after the audience had sung several of the old-time hymns, prayer was offered by Brother Morey. This was followed by a duet by two of the young ladies of the branch. Talks were made by W. E. Prall, president of Lamoni Stake, Elder L. G. Holloway, who has spent a number of years in the stake as a missionary, Elder W. L. Morey, and Elder M. M. Turpen.

Immediately following the program the ladies of the branch served ice cream and cake.

At a late hour the Saints with whom Brother Turpen has been associated and for whom he has labored for many years gathered about him, wishing him success in his new undertaking and assuring him that he would be remembered by them in their prayers.

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Holloway, Mrs. J. F. Garver, and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Prall drove over from Lamoni to attend the farewell party.

Blessed by Faith

ANAMOSA, IOWA, June 14.—Sunday, June 12, was a big day for Anamosa Saints and those from other places, who gathered at "High Bluff," near the "old Wapsy River." Saints, numbering between fifty and sixty, brought well-filled baskets of good things for a picnic dinner. After the meal three candidates were baptized and two children blessed by Elder C. A. Kress, also sacrament of the Lord's supper was given.

At one time this branch was strong and active, but owing to some of the more active ones being called to answer the final summons, and others having moved away, the branch was weakened until only a few faithful held together. These kept a little spark of faith glowing, always trusting and praying for a time when God in his wisdom would bring forth again some one who could revive and strengthen those who have seemingly given up the faith and carelessly thrown from themselves the care of their different offices they so willingly filled at one time.

On the next Sabbath, June 19, Brother Kress will organize a Sunday school at Fairview. The church there, also the schoolhouse being denied the Saints, the Sunday school will be held in the home of one who is outside of the church. This is a place where Brother Kress has been holding meetings with good interest manifested, the entire village turning out to hear him. Some who have been indifferent have offered their homes, and the Spirit of God is moving those in this work, we feel sure. May the awakening go on until all are again revived into useful, active workers for the Master; on and on, into the glorious work, never to lay it aside for power of wealth or pleasure, only as God directs us, in the wealth and power of a restored gospel.

The Anamosa Branch is in need of a "live wire" like Elder Kress. We believe he has the true missionary spirit, and may God bless his efforts!

Priesthood Conference at Sacramento

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

I am sure that you will be interested in hearing of the outcome of our priesthood conference that we held in the Sacramento Branch for the priesthood from four branches near here.

There were twenty members of the priesthood in attendance. A splendid interest was shown, and we feel that it was a very profitable gathering.

At the banquet Saturday evening I read a paper entitled "The stewardship of priesthood." The paper was the subject for discussion by the men. Some interesting and worthwhile statements were made during the discussion. Sunday the services were open for all who wished to attend, and each service was attended by a large crowd of Saints and friends. This proved to us that they were interested in the working of the priesthood. We held a prayer service at half past eight in the morning, and this was a spiritual feast for all. Sunday school was a quarter of ten, and at eleven Bishop Ingham gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "The priesthood and the financial law." At half past two Brother V. B. Etzenhouser read a splendid paper on the subject, "The duties of a pastor." This paper was freely discussed by different members of the priesthood. At half past seven I was the speaker on the subject, "The church; its function." We were greeted with a full house again.

It was a busy day, but was enjoyed by all. The brethren repeatedly congratulated us on arranging for such a meeting. This was encouraging. We feel that a great deal of good will come out of these meetings. Our next conference will be held in San Francisco, for the Bay Cities, June 12. Then we will hold one in the southern part of our district at Fresno the 19th of June.

I might report that I just closed a ten-day series of services in the Chico Branch, baptizing three very fine people.

Our work is moving forward in our district, and the favors of God are being enjoyed. We trust that we will be able to carry on so as to merit these blessings.

God bless you in your noble work is my prayer.

Evangelist Shields Writes of Work

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

The first found me at Orillia, where I had been called from Harriston to administer to isolated Saints. I will quote from letter received from Brother Roy Vickers at Fenelon Falls, May 5.

"We are glad to let you know that the sick ones are much better. The doctor could scarcely believe his own eyes on Monday when he saw Sarah. I did not know that he did not expect her to see morning. According to what the doctor says it would be impossible for her heart to be so much better in such a short time. Baby is quite a lot better, at least the lump has gone down some. The nurse is quite surprised at results, and it has made quite an impression on her."

On the second I came to Fenelon Falls and labored there and at Cameron and Lindsay till the 20th, then went to Toronto conventions where President F. M. Smith left a splendid impression for good with the Saints of this part who were privileged to attend. The 23d I returned to Fenelon Falls and the 24th came back here, forty-five miles, where I have labored since. This is my first visit here in twelve years, and it is eleven and one half years since I visited Cameron and Lindsay. I find a number have died, some have moved away, others have gone to the world, and the few are still trying to keep the faith and carry on the work. I had as many to meeting last night as the united church had at their service on Sunday, while the large majority of the young people (not of our church) were playing ball in the mill yard. Have been made welcome and well cared for.

Good Meeting at Traverse City

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

One of my dreams was partly fulfilled yesterday when at a one-day meeting held at Traverse City, Michigan, we met at nine o'clock Sunday morning in a general sacramental service; and after the family had partaken of the sacrament of the Lord's supper, while the adults sang, "God is marshaling his army," the children marched out to a junior church service, and we summed up the meaning of the sacrament to the children in two words, keeping promises, and around this theme we sang songs, told stories, prayed, and had object lessons; then we learned a song and went back to the eleven o'clock service and made our contribution to the family meeting.

After dinner we had a Religio Department service, taking one of the qualifications of a leader. We put on a biblical drama to bring out that truth to the minds of the Saints, following it with talk on the qualities of leadership.

Following this service we had the Department of Sunday School review one of the ten books they ask the teachers and officers to read. It was the book, How to Teach Religion, and in the summing up after, we had the best opportunity I have seen for some time to bring out many truths of life in the gospel.

Work at Kirtland Temple

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

In connection with my report I want to say that last Sunday morning I visited the mission at Painesville, which is under the care of Elder Wautters. We have about thirty members in and around that town now, and those who attend meetings are fine people and in the zeal that is common to new membership. I think the prospects are good there, and there is the possibility of those people assisting in making openings in their homes in the case where they live out from Painesville.

On the afternoon of Sunday I spent about two hours conducting people through the Temple. It is a very enjoyable work. One has a good opportunity to avoid being stereotyped since the situation is almost compelling to tell the same story; good opportunity to develop public speaking powers, since one talks constantly; splendid field for the study of folks, since such a variety come. Here is an example: Saturday a party of eight Manxman, one of whom was the Mayor of Douglass, Isle of Man (they were attending Manxman convention at Cleveland); next, two lady missionaries returning from the East to Salt Lake City. If one shows courtesy and kindness and is watchful, much gospel can be presented. More than one has remarked, "Well, that is the first time I knew there were two bodies of Latter Day Saints." Several have expressed appreciation for service before leaving.

I presume the time that I can devote to the Temple is limited since the needs of the district call. I have about decided with Bishop Fry to remain another two weeks, so that he can get some work out of the way, and then work in the district. While I am here I will visit points on Sunday as Brother Fry will try to arrange with some local brethren to look after the work on Sundays.

Independence

Stone Church

"Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves with bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth."—Luke 12: 30-33. This was the scripture reading selected by Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge for the Sunday school. Through other biblical references he emphasized Father's Day, impressing upon the minds of children and adults the great privilege we enjoy in having one great and common heavenly Father.

Among other features of interest of this session was an excellent number rendered by the orchestra and the interesting account of the recent Institute in Methods of Religious Education, held at Lamoni, by Associate Sunday School Superintendent Glenn Fairbanks. The course of study, the personnel of the teaching staff, the daily lesson program, the representative gathering of students, etc., were phases of the institute touched upon by Brother Fairbanks. He was enthusiastic over the accomplishment and ambitions of the institute and succeeded in imparting his enthusiasm to his hearers.

Almost twelve hundred students and visitors took part in the Sunday school. Visitors from at least a dozen widely separated States were registered, some of whom attended the institute and came to Independence to spend the weekend.

Doctor Abe C. Jones, Kansas City superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, was the speaker of the morning hour. His discourse was mainly concerned with the hopes and aims of the organization of which he is a member and officer. He recalled the work and the influence of the league and how it has helped in the struggle to free the United States from the clutches of drunkenness. Recounting current events connected with the liquor question in the United States, he mentioned certain assertions of wet propaganda, concerning the impossibility of enforcing the prohibition laws, and refuted their arguments with the forceful declaration: "We have made progress, and shall make progress just as fast as men not influenced by the wets can be put into offices to enforce the laws." The responsibility is the citizens, he argued; they must express themselves through the ballot, in conversation in their homes, and in public. They must support law-abiding officers.

During this hour the Stone Church Choir occupied the choir loft, and preceding the lecture rendered an effective anthem, "The Lord our governor," under the direction of Brother Paul N. Craig. The invocation and benediction were offered by Bishop M. H. Siegfried, and Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the service.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. the children's program arranged by Mrs. E. E. Moorman took the air. It was presented by Lavina Long and Thelma Schwab, pianists; Bethene Barnhardt and Mary Jane Davis, readers; duet numbers were given by Thyra and Elwood Moorman. The story was told by Margaret Chapman.

Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell conducted the nine o'clock Bible study hour. At eleven the auditorium service of the Stone Church was heard by radio listeners.

Fry's K L D S Instrumental Ensemble, assisted by Adeline Bourg, contralto, of Kansas City, gave the program at two in the afternoon.

K L D S Radio Church, conducted by Reverend John W. Bradbury, of the Bales Baptist Church, Kansas City, took the air at three o'clock. Music was furnished by Mrs. C. F. Richardson, organist; Mr. Morris Beeman, bass; and a male quartet consisting of C. F. Richardson, R. M. Smith, Morris Beeman, and Ammon Barclay.

The radio vesper service was arranged by Nina Grenawalt

Smith, and presented by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Smith, Lulu Tyrrell, Elbert Dempsey, and Frank Russell. Sermonet was by Ralph W. Farrell.

The 9.15 studio service consisted of music arranged by Robert Miller, organist, assisted by Lilly Belle Allen, soprano; George Miller, pianist; Edwin Bowen, trombone soloist. And Apostle F. Henry Edwards delivered the sermonet.

At the Campus

Promptly at 7.30 Sunday evening the Walnut Park Band of young people, conducted by Brother E. E. Moorman, began the evening program. As well as rendering several numbers, they assisted Brother J. F. Sheehy, who led the gathering congregation in several hymns. It truly seemed a great privilege to sit out enjoying the evening's coolness, joining in songs such as "We're marching to Zion," "He leadeth me," and "Onward Christian soldiers."

To begin the regular eight o'clock service the congregation sang, "My faith looks up to thee," and Elder D. R. Snively voiced the opening prayer. A beautiful overture was then played by the band, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards was introduced as the speaker.

Quoting an old philosopher who said, "The only ultimate thing is change," Brother Edwards proceeded to prove that there is nothing so continuous as the flow of things; the coming in of some new thing and going out of the old. "Today things are in a state of flux," he asserted. Almost overnight entire situations are changed. A recent magazine contained this declaration: "Business needs a new bag of tricks." In the old days things were set, more fixed, but the world is moving very quickly today. Years ago sailboats were used to cross the waters; today we have liners; not many years hence, some declare, we shall be crossing in the air. The changes of today are such that their ramifications tomorrow can not be measured. Specific instances of change were cited, then the speaker established the fact that underneath these changes are certain operative laws so dependable that reliable forecasts of conditions in the future can be made. Behind these laws there is an even greater stability, the stability which spiritual minded men and women recognize as God. Through the influence of this greater Mind which is full of justice, mercy, righteousness, truth, and love, prophets and seers have prophesied concerning the future. They have made for the spiritual growth of the people; they have aided in bringing to pass God's purposes, which are one eternal round. We can not begin to measure the Infinite and his laws; our minds can not fathom his purposes. But if we can realize the fundamental things of life, spiritual and temporal, we shall build tomorrow; we shall move into new fields of revelation. If we ignore these laws, we shall have confusion and chaos; we shall suffer. We must understand that God is true, and despite changes continue in righteousness, aiding the carrying out of divine purposes. Let us ally ourselves with his will, and build!

The hour of eight Tuesday evening, June 14, marked the opening of the first program of the season, rendered at the Campus by the Department of Recreation and Expression. Seated on the platform were Elder John F. Sheehy; Brother Francis Holm, superintendent of Religios in Independence; Sister Annie D. Vincent, chairman of the program committee; Brother Kenneth Morford, superintendent of Walnut Park Religio; Glen Davis, superintendent of Liberty Street Religio; and Brother Rathburn, leader of young people at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Brother Sheehy led the singing, and Brother Holm presided at the piano. The audience was small because of the chill and dampness of the evening, but all happily took part in the singing. The invocation was offered by Brother Rathburn.

The program had been planned to present a representative from each district, and the first was a vocal solo by Mrs.

Irene Barnhard, from Gudgeon Park. She was accompanied by Mrs. Clara Curtis. An attractive vocal duet, "Bonnie Doon," was sung by Miss Mary Field and Mrs. Amelia Good, from Second Church, Mrs. Clara Curtis accompanying. Englewood was represented by little Cora May Farrow, who gave a clever reading. Then, fired with a desire to see their district take part, William Hedges and Frederick Bailey pleased the audience with a harmonica duet. There was a clarinet solo by Alfred Waters, accompanied by Ruby Johnson, of Enoch Hill, and the concluding feature was by Frank White and Martin Mills, who favored the hearers with a piano duet, and responded to a hearty encore.

Brother Holm announced that Brother Eugene Closson, general superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, will be present at the next meeting, and urged all who are interested to come and participate in the games on the lawn and ball court.

Brother Glen Davis dismissed the audience.

Campus Summer School Begins

Monday morning the Institute Building on the Campus was the scene of the enrollment and opening of the summer school for children, which is to continue until July 22. The doors opened at nine o'clock, and many children accompanied by their parents straightway enrolled. Others found their way to the assembly room on the third floor, where they were led in a song fest by Elder John F. Sheehy, assisted by Brother Eugene Closson, General Superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. When Brother Closson was introduced to the children, they enthusiastically decided to call him, "Gene."

The corps of volunteer workers, directed by Elder John F. Sheehy, principal, and Miss Bertha Constance (admitted by everyone to be the one really in charge at the Institute), carried out their work with efficiency and dispatch, enrolling children in religious education, grade school work, and fine arts.

In religious education course the moral, social, physical, spiritual, intellectual, and temporal development of the individual will be stressed. Instruction in handcraft and manual training will include basketry, photography, electrical work, sewing, cooking, millinery, etc.

The afternoons will be devoted to the children who have failed in two or three subjects or have made "I." For the teaching of these subjects, experienced, qualified teachers have been selected.

In fine arts the following subjects are offered, and each pupil will be required to take at least one unless lessons are being taken elsewhere: Dramatics, public speaking, expression, story-telling, art, piano, band, orchestra, guitar, ukelele, and swimming.

In the morning there is a class of high school students making up work, taught by Brother Wayne Smith.

Morning studies in religious education will last from nine to twelve, and tuition is three dollars. The tuition is also three dollars for those attending the afternoon grade school, which begins at one and continues until three. Both of these courses will be given for five dollars. Fine arts and swimming come once a week, tuition extra.

A feature of unusual attraction and advantage is the selection of Brother A. H. Mills by the Kansas City Star to give a ten-week course in piano lessons to all children wishing to learn piano, free of charge. This is a generous offer, and Brother Mills expects to be busy, anticipating some three hundred pupils. Classes began in this course this afternoon, twenty pupils in a class, the lesson period lasting one hour. He will teach every afternoon. The summer school faculty, friends, and citizens of Independence are grateful to the Star.

Real class work began yesterday morning, though many new enrollments were had, making the total enrolled about three hundred, and still climbing. People are interested; the children are happy. They study and work with their teachers, and play with "Gene," who supervises all playground recreation and activities.

Interesting Personals

In festal dress the Stone Church, on last Thursday evening awaited the coming of a June bridal party. Pink roses and white daisies, against their dark green background of asparagus and ferns, were massed about the altar and festooned over altar and balcony railings, making its interior one of color and brightness. Two large golden harps and six tall candles added their share of beauty and impressiveness to the scene.

An unusually large audience gathered to witness this marriage of Miss Carol Williams to Mr. Howard Andersen. Before the bridal party arrived Robert Miller played several organ selections. Albert Brackenbury sang "Oh, promise me." The Misses Elizabeth and Eleanor Smith played two harp selections, "Amarillos," and "Believe me if all those endearing young charms." Mr. Brackenbury sang "When." Mr. Miller played the Lohengrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches, accompanied by the Smith sisters at their harps.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Elder Mansel T. Williams, and was attended by her sister, Miss Lillian Williams, as maid of honor, and bridesmaids, Miss Ferne Gould and Miss Thelma Vincent. Little Lois Jeane Williams, sister of the bride, and Lorraine Watkins were flower girls, while Donald and Dorothy Dee Gould, cousins of the bride, carried the wedding rings. Mr. Andersen was attended by George Danielson, best man, and Kenneth Fligg and Roland Flanders, groomsmen. The ceremony was pronounced by Apostle D. T. Williams, of Lamon.

A reception for immediate relatives and friends was held at the home of the bride's parents after the ceremony, and then Mr. and Mrs. Andersen left for a short wedding trip to the Ozarks. They will make their home in Independence. The bride has for six years been bookkeeper at the Independence Sanitarium. The groom is a son of Sister Beana Andersen, and of the late Apostle Peter Andersen.

Reunions, quarterly conferences, special gatherings, and business trips are demanding the attention and presence of the members of the higher quorums of the church. President Frederick M. Smith is in the East. Last Sunday he dedicated the new church of the branch at Columbus, Ohio. This week he is attending to some business in Washington, and next Sunday will dedicate the church at Mount Vernon, Illinois, on his return trip. Last Sunday President Elbert A. Smith spent in Omaha, Nebraska, returning to Independence the first of this week. Brother Floyd McDowell is back in Independence at his numerous duties after attendance at the International Council of Religious Education, held in Chicago, and a recent trip to Holden, Missouri.

Two members of the Presiding Bishopric are out of town. Brother Carmichael is attending the Minneapolis reunion and does not expect to be back in the office until the middle of July. In the meantime he plans to be present at several reunions. Western Nebraska is claiming Bishop Becker's attention on a short business trip.

Apostle D. T. Williams finds every minute of his time occupied at the Minnesota reunion, held at Minneapolis. Brother Budd is going from one conference to another in the South. Apostles Gillen and Curtis are in reunion at Spokane, Washington. The rest are afield and about their work.

Miss Lillie May Slover and Cecil Ray Bills were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. F. M. Slover, South Chrysler Street, Saturday evening at 8.30. About one hundred relatives and friends were present at the ceremony and witnessed the taking of the marriage vows by these two young people, Elder W. D. Bullard officiating. Before the service, "Until" was sung by Sister Corrine French, who during the bridal march sang "Faithful and true," from the Lohengrin bridal chorus, accompanied by Miss Rosamond Filson. "Love's old sweet song," was played softly on the violin by Gomer Cool through the ceremony.

Miss Mabel Bills, sister of the groom, attended the bride as bridesmaid. Little Eleanor Faunce and Jimmie Piersee carried the rings in baskets of sweet peas and daisies tied with streamers of pink tulle. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John S. Slover, of Chicago, who also acted as best man for Mr. Bills. Mr. and Mrs. Bills will make their home in Independence.

W. C. T. U. Institute

The W. C. T. U. organizations of Independence opened their institute on Monday morning, at the Stone Church, Mrs. W. H. Johnson, president of the Jackson County W. C. T. U. presiding. During the morning short talks were given by officers of the various unions in the county, the first being delivered by Mrs. Johnson. This institute was conducted under the auspices of the Department of Women, and the principal speaker was Miss Graccio Houlder, of Australia. Miss Houlder, according to schedule, spoke at ten in the morning, at the 12.15 luncheon in the Stone Church dining hall, and again at two o'clock in the lower auditorium. In the evening she gave an illustrated lecture on Australia and America at the First Presbyterian Church.

Present at the luncheon in the Dining Hall, Monday, June 20, were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Johnson (Mrs. Johnson is president of the Jackson County W. C. T. U.); Mayor Sermon, William Southern, Editor of the Independence Examiner; Mrs. Frances Eubank Biskey, of Colorado; Elder J. F. Sheehy; and the guest of honor, Miss Graccio Leggo Houlder, of Perth, Australia; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Miller, Brother Miller acting as chairman, and about fifty others.

In his speech, Mayor Sermon spoke of the difficulty they had in enforcing the prohibition laws, but asserting he was in favor of the Eighteenth Amendment and in favor of enforcing it. He assured the members of the W. C. T. U. and their friends present that the city administration was trying to honor the law.

Mr. Southern spoke of deplorable conditions which existed in Independence before the Eighteenth Amendment was written into the Constitution. He made many telling points in favor of present conditions and of the benefit prohibition had been to the city.

Mrs. Biskey made a short address in reference to the ideals of the W. C. T. U. and what it has been able to accomplish.

Brother Sheehy deplored the commercializing of Mothers' Day and said he thought instead of having the mottoes which frequently appeared, "Motherhood is partnership with God," they should read "Parenthood is partnership with God." The Eighteenth Amendment has been written in the Constitution, but the work of the friends of prohibition is not finished. The fight is still on and must continue.

Miss Houlder is a very eloquent, fluent speaker, and paid a fine tribute to America in writing the Eighteenth Amendment in the Constitution. She said America was leading the world in this movement. She said the best womanhood of the world had three altars before which they worshiped. The altar which is represented by the church, the home altar, and the discharging of civic responsibility—the civic altar. Australia has made a wonderful contribution to the cause of prohibition in sending over to this country the "million horse-power" orator of the land of the Southern Cross. She is possibly one of the most wonderful women speakers ever heard in Independence. Miss Houlder also addressed the Department of Women and W. C. T. U. at 2.30 in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church.

Second Church

About thirty Saints enjoyed the 8.15 prayer meeting last Sunday. A very good meeting marked the hour. On next Sunday morning the entire congregation is invited to meet for prayer and worship.

All fathers attending Sunday school and preaching service at eleven o'clock were decorated by a rose, pinned on by a member of the committee of three grandmothers. At this time we were favored by special music, two much-appreciated numbers by the male quartet. D. A. Whiting offered a beautiful and appropriate prayer for the congregation and their minister.

The new pastor, A. K. Dillee, read Doctrine and Covenants 119, stressing the part, "All are called . . . to the work intrusted to all." His urgings for all to work were earnest and compelling.

In the afternoon the usual prayer service was held, being enjoyed by a goodly number.

Liberty Street

Sister Merrill Salisbury died suddenly at her home on South Osage Street, Friday night, June 17. She came to Independence with her husband from Keokuk, Iowa, in 1921. Before her marriage, she was Lillian Pearl Bailey. She was baptized by Harvey Minton October 9, 1921. She leaves her husband, two children, Florence Evelyn, ten years old, and Merrill Joel, three, of the home address; her father, Joel B. Bailey; one sister, Mrs. Maude Snyder, of Adrian, Illinois; and two brothers, William F. Bailey, of Adrian, and Leonard Bailey, Webster, Illinois. Funeral services were conducted at the Latta Funeral Home, Independence, Monday afternoon, Bishop B. J. Scott taking the theme of his sermon from the words of Jesus: "Ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you." Musical numbers were given by a quartet of Liberty Street people. Interment was in Mound Grove.

Brother F. A. Smith was the speaker at the morning service, and read from the twentieth chapter of Exodus, "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." He also selected for reading Ephesians 6: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honor thy father and mother, (which is the first commandment with promise); that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth. And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." This being Fathers' Day, the sermon was especially dedicated to the fathers.

Enoch Hill

Miss Rachel Brunson and Mr. Fritz Osier were married by Pastor W. J. Brewer at eight o'clock Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's parents on South Spring Street. The color scheme of pink and white was prettily carried out. The young couple received many beautiful and useful gifts. The ceremony was witnessed by the immediate family and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Osier left Sunday on a wedding trip to Illinois, being accompanied by the bride's mother.

The Enoch Hill Temple Builder Chapter entertained on Tuesday evening at the home of their leader, Mrs. George Street, on South Liberty Street, with a surprise shower of linens in honor of Miss Rachel Brunson whose wedding took place Saturday evening. Each girl invited her mother as a guest for the evening. An attractive feature of the program was a pretty mock wedding, arranged and carried out by the girls. Refreshments of cake and punch were served. Miss Brunson was the very much surprised recipient of many nice and useful presents.

Pastor Brewer occupied the pulpit at the morning hour Sunday, continuing his discourse of Sunday, May 29, in which he compared the marriage supper of the Lamb, given in parable by the Savior, to Zion. Through numerous references and citations in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, he sought to establish the fact that when we fully comprehend the kingdom of God we shall know what God is. We must seek first the kingdom of God and then establish it in its righteousness. Zion is to be the kingdom of God on earth, and it must necessarily be established and redeemed by power from him. In the fifteenth psalm David describes a citizen of Zion, one who shall abide in the Lord's tabernacle, with these words: "He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor." The speaker emphasized the statement "speaketh the truth in his heart," advising the Saints to beware of backbiting. The one we favor is our neighbor, and we should accept no evil report of him. Brother Brewer's counsel concerning what to tell and not to tell was sound and earnest. He concluded with this question: Are we going to allow the opportunity to slip by, and fail to be worthy a place at the marriage supper of the Lamb? and asserted, We are commanded to wait for the redemption of Zion, but that does not mean to sit down and idle time away; rather we should seek to occupy our time in constructive work, so that when the time for Zion's redemption comes we shall be ready.

Vinal Haven, Maine

June 5.—The Saints here today enjoyed a wonderful sacramental service with a good spirit present. All were greatly blessed.

The work at Vinal Haven is progressing in all the different departments, and with the arrival of Evangelist U. W. Greene and wife to occupy the church parsonage for the summer, the Saints expect to do great work and make it a banner summer for the spread of the gospel.

House-to-house services will be held in town outside of regular church services. The Saints feel greatly blessed in having Brother Greene with whom to daily cooperate in the gospel work.

We regret the departure of Sister Calla Dickey, wife of Norman Dickey, for she was much loved and highly appreciated in the branch. She was twenty-three years of age and had been married to Brother Dickey only about seven months when death came.

The Sunday school is planning a big Fourth of July picnic, and exercises will include program of the day with an oration by Evangelist U. W. Greene.

This is only a short news letter to let the Saints everywhere know we are continuing to hold to the rod of iron in western Maine and are desirous of going ahead.

High Water and Discouraging Conditions

(A letter to the First Presidency.)

I inclose my report, which is made from memory, as I lost my record on a trip I just returned from of four hundred miles drive, calling on isolated Saints, preaching where possible, otherwise discussing the problems and program of the church, answering questions, administering to the sick, and encouraging as best I could those who were in need.

I also visited the berry fields, saw the harvest of the strawberries, which is a light crop, and of a poor grade, so are bringing a price hardly covering the expenses.

I found people of the church and the world all eager to talk on temporal affairs, and looking for some possible means of getting from under their bondage of debt. The berry fields and grape vineyards are hard hit by the frost, so they are discouraged in that section. Going through the poultry and dairy sections, I found the same discouraged condition from decreasing prices of eggs, poultry, and cream. And in crossing the corn and hog growing section was the same cry, and farmers pushing their hogs to market under weight and unfinished, prices of feed going up and hogs down, and very poor prospects for a corn crop this year.

Many of all classes are wanting to sell their lands at a sacrifice and try something else. Such unrest is deplorable.

Water continues to do its deadly work. I had to turn back when forty miles from home because of high water on leaving, and had I been five hours later on my return I would have been blocked again, and at that three times I risked my life in crossing where it was extremely dangerous. Today I can not get fifty miles from home in any direction. Brother Murdock and family came this far from the berry fields and are waiting for water to go down so they can make Rich Hill.

One of the Saints five miles from here told me yesterday his corn was fifteen feet under water, but few of our people are so flooded. The upland is so wet no work can be done, and the weeds and burs are taking the crop. Fruit is almost a failure here. Gardens are but fair, pastures are good, hay is fair, while wheat and oats will be a light crop, and no one is in danger of life or property, other than crops on these small streams.

Church work is going fine, so far as liberty in presenting the gospel, and opportunities are open on every hand. One hardly knows what to do next as so many calls seem of equal importance.

Brother Carmichael's visit here was a great blessing to this young branch, and outsiders that heard him can't quit talking about him.

We have two here that were to start yesterday for Lamon to the institute, but can't get out for water. We are not discouraged but are learning to meet adverse conditions without losing faith.

BIRCH WHITING.

CROSS TIMBERS, MISSOURI, June 3.

Bradner, Ohio

June 14.—We are trying to move forward in this place, to make each department just what it ought to be, ambitious and full of interest.

The Sunday school teachers' and parents' meetings held the last Sunday morning of each month are proving beneficial to the Sunday school. We have cut our lesson period fifteen minutes for special work. We agreed that a good lesson could be taught in half an hour, even in the adult class. This special work after the lesson can be made very interesting. We use the blackboard for illustrations. We sing, we study what we sing; we have a part for the children. Each Sunday we plan to have some new feature. We can make our Sunday school interesting by planning our work, then working our plans.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has been having some very interesting programs of late, and we enjoy splendid attendance as a rule. The book sent out by the heads of this department to the locals we find are a great help.

Sunday, June 12, was an all-day district meeting here at Bradner. The morning session began with Sunday school, followed by preaching by Elder E. L. Ulrich, who is home for a few days this week. In the afternoon at two o'clock a musical program was given. Numbers included were a quartet selection, "Come where the lilies bloom"; this was Bradner talent. There were three numbers by the Toledo Orchestra. Brother Ulrich and son, Herbert, sang, "Faith of our fathers," the one published in Autumn Leaves, closing with the words, "Forward to 1930."

After this program, Brother Slye suggested that we enter into a round table discussion, that he or Brother Ulrich would try to answer any questions pertaining to the work of the church. Brother Ulrich introduced the question, "What makes a bad boy bad?" This led to many other questions, and two hours of very interesting debate followed.

Sylvania, Oak Harbor, and Toledo were represented, and we hope all enjoyed themselves, as it appeared they did.

The next district meeting was announced for July 10 at Sylvania.

On Monday night, May 9, a very quiet little wedding took place at our church. William H. Cadd and Grace Doran, of Bay City, Michigan, were united in marriage by Brother Ulrich. Those present were Brother and Sister William Smith, Brother and Sister Slye, Herbert, and Sister Ulrich. After the ceremony the Saints of Bradner extended their best wishes and served a little rice. Then the couple returned home.

One of our families, that of Brother Harms, has moved to Bowling Green. We shall miss them especially in the Sunday school, but we wish them success.

The Department of Women is swelling its bazaar box with lots of pretty things. Three weeks are given to study and one for bazaar work; this program works very nicely and at our last meeting fourteen were present. We think this pretty good for a small branch.

The next district conference will be held in September at Oak Harbor, and we would like a good attendance.

Trenton's Home-coming Celebration

TRENTON, MISSOURI.—It has been the custom of the Trenton Branch to set apart one day each year as a home-coming or rally day. This year, Sunday, June 5, was observed. The day's services began with Sunday school at 9.30, followed by prayer and sacramental meeting at 10.45. About sixty were present at the communion meeting. Brother J. W. Peterson had charge and was assisted by Brother Thomas Fiddick and Brother F. L. Hinderks. At 2.30 p. m. a round table meeting was enjoyed. The meeting was in charge of Brother J. R. Lentell. The subjects discussed were our financial program, tithing, etc. This meeting proved to be interesting and instructive. Brother Peterson preached at eight in the evening and continued to preach each evening during the week.

About one half our membership are scattered over territory some ten to twenty-five miles distant, and so we were pleased to see Saints from Jamesport and Spickardville, Missouri, and from Centerville, Iowa. We were also glad to have with us Brothers Fiddick and Hinderks, who with their wives spent the day with us. They reside in Cameron. All seemed to enjoy the sumptuous basket dinner served in the church basement. We would that the spirit of good will and fellowship enjoyed this day might continue throughout the years to come.

The attendance at Brother Peterson's meetings was not what it should have been, yet we feel his efforts were appreciated by those who had the pleasure of hearing him. Among the subjects treated were evolution, apostacy, restoration, stewardships. We were pleased to note the courtesy extended us by the local paper, the Republican-Tribune, which not only at the present but for sometime past has willingly printed our church news items, as well as the synopsis of all sermons of special interest.

Not only was our home-coming day a rally day for the branch and a welcome for Brother Peterson, but it was regarded as a farewell to Brother and Sister J. R. Lentell. We feel that these good people, who have gone to their new field of labor in Illinois, cherish unlimited devotion to the Master's cause, and their efforts to do good will not be forgotten by the people of this community. We wish for them success in their new location. E. E. GAMET, Branch President.

Decatur, Illinois

June 13.—We are still doing our little bit toward building Zion. We have just closed another six months of service, and elected officers for the next half year.

We have done a good work, we feel, since building our little church about one year ago. We held our first service there the Fourth of July, I believe, with Brother E. L. Ulrich in charge. Brother Ulrich held a fine interest throughout his entire six weeks of services. He worked night after night until his efforts were crowned with wonderful success, baptizing at the close twenty-one or twenty-two into the kingdom of God. This almost tripled our number. We want to say a word of praise and encouragement to Brother Ulrich and those whom he may be serving this year. He is a man of wonderful personality. All he demands in the field is cooperation of the Saints and new material to work on. I assure HERALD readers he will show results. He has the prayers of all the Decatur Saints.

Also we must not forget Brother Dutton's work here. His good advice to the Saints, those good words of admonition, are like the words of a loving father when linked with the Spirit of God. We hope to increase our number again this year.

The Sunday school has made a good record, starting out with only one class. Now there are five classes and the attendance is most encouraging. There exists a fine spirit of cooperation between teachers, officers, and pupils. Some new teachers are at present taking up the work.

Our prayer meetings also deserve favorable mention. It is good to hear our new Saints bear their testimonies.

For the coming months we reelected our president, in this way showing appreciation of his services.

We are planning to advertise our work more through the influence and cooperation of the general church officers, particularly the publicity agent. We need help to get our work before the public.

There are many things of interest in the gospel work at this place, but our main slogan is, "Onward to 1930. Build up the kingdom of God." Stewardship is the word. Service and finance are what we need. DAVID C. MOORE.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

June 10.—Our church is better equipped for Sunday school work for we now have curtains and blackboards.

After a long dry spell, we are now having plenty of rain.

Brother D. W. Sherman was called to Gulf Port to administer to Brother Forehand, who has been quite ill for some time.

Brother Andrew Nyman and children recently visited relatives in Lucedale.

Sister Mamie Gill spent several days in Mobile, where she went for medical treatment.

Sister Delia Davis spent last week in Vancleave with her daughter, Sister Sadie Barlow, and attended commencement exercises while there.

Brother James Parker spent last week with relatives in Mobile.

Brother and Sister D. W. Sherman and children spent Sunday with their daughter at Cedar Lake.

The July Autumn Leaves

The cover for the July Autumn Leaves is a very fine, patriotic one, done by George Bartholomew.

There are two war stories, one a true story of the Philippine War, written by Charles Arven, of Anamosa, Iowa; the other a story of the World War, written by Irene Engstrom, a student nurse at the Independence Sanitarium.

Other contributors are Evangelist F. G. Pitt, with "Recollections of the Civil War"; S. A. Burgess, on "The Book of Mormon centennial"; Myrtle Grapes, of the Sanitarium; Doctor John R. Green, of the Sanitarium surgical staff; P. R. Burton, missionary; Bishop A. Carmichael with his regular round table on stewardships; "The livable home," a series done by Frank and Louise Jennings, experienced home decorators; Elbert A. Smith with his monthly message, and the first of a travel series entitled, "The Maine road." "This year at Graceland" is the second installment of a series by James Briggs.

Then there are the regular features, Circus Tales, Who's Who, Puzzle Page, Our Girls, and "Into the Latter Day Light," by J. J. Cornish. Irene Layton furnishes a graphic description of her trip through Belgium.

Notice of Appointment

Branch solicitors will please take notice and forward their reports to Brother Smallwood hereafter.

Brother Smallwood was appointed a missionary to the Eastern Oklahoma District by the late General Conference. This will give him an opportunity to visit the various branches and scattered membership. We ask for him the hearty cooperation of the Saints, remembering that only to the extent that the Saints pay their tithing can the church move forward to carry into effect the will of the Master as the same has been revealed to us from time to time.

Approved by the First Presidency.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By J. A. BECKER.

Assisting the Creator

Recently there came under my observation literature, telling of the propagandizing methods of organized atheists and agnostics in efforts to unseat in the minds of the youth of this country belief in God and the Bible. I have observed how the specious arguments of the non-religious evolutionists are seized upon and distorted, in efforts to hold the Bible up to ridicule.

I have always believed that harmony must exist between true religion and true science, that man can be a religious scientist or a scientific religionist. As a theo-evolutionist I have always felt that God's hand will guide the destinies of man and nature. This permits me to be even a believer in a personal God, while appreciating the advancement of science.

I confess to a bit of perturbation in seeing the zeal and effectiveness in places of the atheists and agnostics in propagating their doctrines, and I have wondered how the religious press and the church man can combat the irreligious forces and literature. And so I found encouragement in an editorial I saw in the secular press. I was at the time reading a copy of The Enquirer, of Cincinnati, for June 25, which I had bought at the depot news stand while the train stopped for a few minutes. That editorial afforded me so much pleasure that I have clipped it so the HERALD readers may enjoy it, too. Here it is:

Modern science recognizes no limitations within the field of its aspirations. For centuries it has been a dream of delvers into the mystery of things to discover the physical basis of life—or to create the life principle itself.

So in the day of Huxley we explored the deep sea ooze, because it was believed that man came out of the ocean and because in his body were to be found certain elements (potassium, magnesium, calcium, and so forth) in equal proportion as they appeared in the water of the precambrian period.

But the British ship Challenger brought back to the scientists' laboratories little but mud, ooze, with traces of organic life—life that had its origin in some dim, incomprehensible beginning coexistent with the foundation of the world.

However, Sir Oliver Lodge, nothing dismayed, predicts the possibility of breathing the breath of life upon the inorganic and thrilling it with the being of the organic. Haeckel began things after something of this fashion—spontaneous generation, or some other comfortable process, but he defined no formula.

But Sir Oliver suggests no challenge of the conception of God. He says so. He points to the Scriptural account of creation of earth and man: The Spirit of God brooded first upon "the face of the waters" and in the fullness of time God "formed man of the dust of the ground." And that far progenitor was father of the aspiring chemists and biologists of today who are knocking at the door of constructive creation.

Well, they may succeed. Nothing is impossible but the impossible, as a wise man once said. And it can not certainly be known that the creation of life is impossible.

There was a time when organic life could not have existed on the earth. But life somehow appeared. What matter how it realized being? Most of us prefer to believe that it came as a result of initiating power. Just how—what the formula—is of little importance. In some way stars and suns and systems blazed into being. We prefer to believe that they came at the will of Sovereign, Beneficent Intelligence.

Man may in time be able to touch the springs of life to sentient being. But the fact could only prove that man had become worthy to play with a new secret of the Infinite. There never can be any diminution of the Eternal Spirit or of its power. Synthetic protoplasm will never rank higher than the breath of Divinity, from which it only can have birth. What is of more importance than all this is what man shall do with the life he possesses. Will he build it to the measure of the stars, or will he permit it to become of lesser worth than the inorganic atom which hides in the fringes of cosmic space?

Respect for Law

I have on many occasions in addressing the public stressed a danger which is threatening, the growing disrespect for law, urging it as our duty as ministers to impress the idea continually that our safety and liberty lie in obedience to law, and that our safety is found in respecting properly instituted and constituted authority. Many of the prominent attorneys and legislators of the United States are now alert to the danger, and are trying to meet the issue by pleading for law and order. Mr. Bech, a former Attorney General, in a book published some time ago on the American Constitution, devoted a chapter to a discussion of the danger. A few days ago the present Attorney General of the United States Mr. Sargent, in addressing the Pennsylvania Bar Association again called attention to the danger, and his address called forth an editorial from the Public Ledger of Philadelphia, which we here reproduce and urge its careful scrutiny by our readers:

The doctrine of respect for law enunciated before the Pennsylvania Bar Association by Attorney General Sargent is as old as civilization. It is, in fact, the foundation of all civilization. Our early statesmen saw in it the basis not of liberty only but of the permanent development of the Nation. It was stressed by Washington in his Farewell Address. Lincoln's advice in this direction is familiar.

But in these days it is, unfortunately, one of those fundamentals which, commonly accepted in principle, are neglected in action. It is generally known that the law—or some particular laws—is evaded with a dangerous complacency, and not evaded only but ridiculed, as Mr. Sargent pointed out.

It must be recognized as a serious condition when the Nation's chief law officer is forced to admit to the lawyers of a great State that "day by day, because some one pays for it and because the great body of law-abiding citizens is complaisant," the law is "jeered and mocked by flippant writers and cabaret performers."

The Attorney General may possibly have been referring to the prohibition laws. But his counsel of respect for the law may well be accepted in general sense. He and others of his profession know that disrespect for one law breeds disrespect for all.

Summer Vacation School at Independence

"Three hundred and forty pupils enrolled, and they're still enrolling," says Miss Bertha Constance, assistant principal of the summer vacation school now going on at the Institute Building located on the Campus. Brother Arthur H. Mills reports more than five hundred pupils in his special course of piano lessons offered by the Kansas City Star, adding "That's as far as I've counted yet."

Classes in the fine arts department began Monday and Tuesday of this week. In this department Brother Mills instructs in piano; Orlando Nace directs band and orchestra; Fred Mollison, brass and wood-wind instruments; Alfred Waters, wood-wind; Mrs. H. M. Murray, violin; Ralph Smith, tenor banjo, mandolin, and guitar; Lillian Williams, storytelling; Mrs. F. M. McDowell, Mrs. C. B. Taylor, and Beatrice McNamara, expression; Mrs. Grace Moore, art. Here the children are helped to develop their talents the year round, and they are required to take one of these courses if not studying some fine art elsewhere.

Officers and teachers hold before the children the fact that they are building Zion, not far in the dim and distant future, but right now, by preparing themselves for greater service. The purpose of the school is threefold: they are learning to do for God, their fellow men, and for themselves. Their purpose is excellently expressed in these lines:

"Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,— Himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me."

Taking the definition of Zion given by President Smith: Zion is a beautiful people in a beautiful place working out beautiful ideals, those in charge of the school have planned the study course to embrace all the various phases of Zion building and Zion living, temporal, physical, social, and spiritual. From the kindergarten children up, each group has its own projects to work out. They are learning many things, helping in many problems. The field of study is too comprehensive to cover in one summer; but faculty and officers of the school do not plan to limit this great undertaking to one summer. They know the school is going to grow from year to year, to increase its enrollment, its equipment, its teaching staff, until it shall become a vital factor in making for Zion conditions, and its influence shall be felt far and wide among God's people.

"And," Miss Constance explains, "another attractive thing about it is the school is not denominational; it is not strictly Latter Day Saint. We have children of other churches attending, and for that reason in our courses of religious education we do not teach doctrinal beliefs peculiar to ourselves. They get those in the Sunday school. For instance, we have our own children file their inventories and pay their tithing and offering. Most of the other children's churches believe in tithing, too, so we say to them, 'We'll help you to earn the money, and then you take it and pay it to your church, as it believes.'"

For the summer's work a splendid corps of teachers has been enlisted for service, and each one gives every school-day morning for five weeks to this work. Some of these are experienced Sunday school teachers, some Graceland students, some from the high school, and many who took special courses at the Institute last winter, preparing themselves for this work. These teachers and helpers are showing the spirit of real consecration. They are: Floyd M. McDowell, dean of Institute; John F. Sheehy, principal; Bertha Constance, assistant principal; Eunice Winn Smith, director of religious education and dramatization; Helen Hawley Booker, registrar; Faye Stonger, bookkeeper and transportation manager; Glenna Clow, principal vacation grade school; Mrs. Harry Blake, superintendent of supplies; Eugene Closson, director of recreational activities and supervisor of intermediate boys; Ralph W. Farrell, supervisor junior boys; Mrs. Lentell, supervisor intermediate girls; Vada Trask, supervisor junior girls; Bessie Constance, supervisor primary department; Jane Simmons, supervisor beginner department; Helen Hawley Booker, supervisor of nursery;

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hands, directors of landscape gardening; Mrs. Gertrude Budd Bailey, sewing; John Sheehy, Eugene Closson, swimming (boys); Mrs. R. W. Wilkie, and Pauline Siegfried, swimming (girls); Mrs. Emma B. Benson, school nurse. Grade school teachers, Iva Robinson, Margaret Murdock, and Hazel Constance. Nursery department, Mrs. J. M. Peck, Mrs. Edith Roberts, Vaughny Reese. Beginner department, Helen Layton, Wilma Criley, Helen Louise Hulmes. Primary department, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Willee, Phyllis Dobson, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. G. L. Cook, Mrs. D. O. Cato, Katherine Haberlien, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. W. L. Young, Mrs. Glen Fairbanks, Gertrude Thomas, Mrs. Fred Cool, Mrs. C. R. Wilcox, Mrs. W. I. Betts, Mrs. R. S. Budd, Mrs. J. M. Higgins, Mrs. Delsa Hershey. Junior department, Mrs. Thatcher, Delta Nace, Mrs. Carrie Ballinger, Mrs. Fred Austin, Mrs. Dora Howland, Mrs. Newcome, Mrs. E. E. Moorman, Ernestine Moorman, Milton Carpenter, Mrs. Snead, Kathleen Snead, Mrs. Kennicutt, Mrs. Pooler, Mrs. Luther Simpson, Mrs. Stowell, Marie Hobbs, Mrs. Gerber, Dorothy Mabott, Pauline Sheldon, Mrs. A. J. Paris, Evelyn Barto, Mrs. J. W. Paxton, Mrs. Earl Whetstone. Intermediate department, Mrs. Will Gard, Mrs. W. A. Page, Mrs. Clara Sheldon, Walter M. Self, Mrs. M. Eugenia Warnock, Arthur Mills, jr., Mrs. Pierson, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Fred Koehler, Mrs. J. F. Sheehy, Mrs. D. R. Snively, Bessie Howland, Mrs. C. I. McConnell, Mrs. G. S. Trowbridge, Mrs. R. H. Reed, Mrs. Ralph Harder, Mrs. Ada Cochran. Fara Butler Brewer is the free play supervisor.

The drivers donating their service also deserve special mention. They come from the various districts. Those whose names we have are Mrs. Roy Hilliard, Liberty Street; Mrs. Inman, Gudgell Park; Mrs. Coleman, Spring Branch; Mrs. Stowell, East Independence.

Indian Prayers

Those who have been among the American Indians in their religious ceremonies or have seen them in their private devotions, have frequently observed the eloquence and earnestness of their petitions, even if the native tongue in which it was uttered could not be understood. But what is not so often understood is the simplicity of the prayers and songs. Directness of appeal and repetition of ideas is characteristic.

In a recent number of a Cincinnati paper, I saw a "Navajo prayer" which had been versified by some one whose name was not given. Here it is. It will be of interest to some of our readers:

NAVAJO PRAYER

Blue wind, beautiful chieftess,
Send out a rainbow, by which let me walk,
Blue clouds, blue clouds,
With your shoes let me walk,
Blue clouds, with your leggings make me walk,
Blue clouds, with your shirt let me walk,
Blue clouds, with your hat let me walk,
Blue clouds, make it dark behind me,
Blue wind, make it light before me,
Earth Woman, let it rain much for me,
By which let the green corn ripen,
Make all peaceful with me.

Reunion Season and Its Changes

Reference to our reunion calendar discloses the fact that the Reorganized Church has entered another season when outdoor meetings of the Saints are occurring in various parts of the country. July and August are well taken up, every week witnessing one or several reunions taking place in the various localities of the United States and Canada.

The reunion movement really began with the cessation of the semi-annual General Conferences of the church, which was in 1882, the last conference of this kind being held at Lamoni, Iowa, and the first real reunion followed in 1883.

It is worth while to notice the progress which has been made in the conducting of reunions during the past twenty or twenty-five years. As to number we have no sure way to determine, but the best we have is the publicity given in the columns of the church papers. In HERALD for 1900 we find letters or other reports from five reunions, widely separated districts participating. Possibly there were as many more meetings held and which did not report their doings. For the sake of comparison, let us say there may have been ten reunions held in the year 1900. Twenty-five years later there were fifty reunions, or an increase of five hundred per cent. This is surely a satisfactory increase in number.

But the most important change has not been in the number of meetings held each year, but in the providing of proper meeting places, the assignment of a good corps of workers by a committee having in hand the needs of the entire work, and the systematic organization and program of the ten days or two weeks over which the meetings extend.

In our next we will canvass the difference between the character and conduct of the meetings of the nineteenth century, and of the closing years of the first quarter of the twentieth century.

The strong man is the man with the gift of method, of faithfulness, of valor.—Carlyle.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officers' and Teachers' Meeting for July

Theme: The technique, or special means of efficiency in the teaching process.

Lesson Assignment: Betts, How to Teach Religion, Chapter IX.

That teaching is successful which produces the desired experience or change in the pupil. The impression we make, the total effect of our teaching effort depends very largely upon our knowledge of the learning process and upon our skill in controlling the conditions under which we teach.

One of the first laws of the learning process is that the things we remember best are the things to which we gave our fullest attention when we learned them. Attention is the focusing of the mental powers upon the lesson to be learned or the experience to be gained. The teacher's chief duty is to gain and hold the highest possible degree of attention during the recitation.

According to the means used to secure this concentration of thought, attention may be classed as:

Involuntary attention when it is demanded by some sudden or startling stimulus, as the tapping of a bell, a sharp command, or a sudden noise. It has but slight value in education, unless in the moment of attention the interest is caught and held.

Non-voluntary, or spontaneous attention, is easy and natural, and follows the lead of interest. The child mind is so constituted that its full power is not exercised except under the stimulus and compulsion of real interest. Under the direction of interest our experiences make the most deep and lasting impressions upon the mind and character. This type of attention is the one we wish most to use.

Voluntary attention is compelled by the effort and power of one's will when the pull of one's mind or desire is in another direction. This has value chiefly as a directing force to secure the concentration necessary to hold the attention on the task at hand. Through the exercise of voluntary attention, the child learns self-direction, self-compulsion, and self-control.

Interest is natural to every normal child. During one's working hours there is always interest in something. Our effort is to so present the lesson that we appeal to these natural interests of the members of the class and lead them out to fruitful thought and endeavor. When our class is uninterested we may look for the cause in ourselves, in our method, in the subject matter we would teach.

To be of interest there must be some point of contact with the child life. The lesson must be sufficiently close to the things the children know and care about that there is a basis for understanding and interest. It is what the child feels is of value that enlists his interest and attention.

Children are more interested in action, dress, and events than in abstract reasons and explanations. Lofty sermonizing is entirely wasted on them. Words are empty except as they suggest ideas already somewhat familiar to the child through his experience.

Stories have great value because they deal with living people or animals and are concerned with scenes and activities the children can understand. The Master's great teachings were in parable-stories which the people could understand.

The child "learns to do by doing" because he is vitally interested in his own self-activity.

Since novelty and variety have special appeal to interest, we should plan frequent changes in our method of class procedure with an occasional surprise for the class when this may be done without lowering the value of instruction.

The teacher's interest and enthusiasm is contagious. It must be genuine and enduring if it is to serve as a pattern and stimulus for the class.

Distractions of any nature which divert the attention and break in upon the interest of the class reduce the power and efficiency of class work and may destroy it altogether. Good work can be done only in classes as free as possible from the distracting sights and sounds of other classes and from the intrusion of visitors or the interruption by officers during the progress of the lesson.

Restlessness, mischief, and inattention on the part of a class often result from a lack of proper planning of the lesson by the teacher or from a lack of tact and skill. A teacher must secure the interest and loyalty of every member of the class. He must be master of the situation. There is no place for the spirit of irreverence or boisterousness in the Sunday school.

The teacher, himself, may be a source of serious distraction if he has a striking or peculiar mannerism in dress, or voice, or speech, or posture, or action. The children may be either amused or annoyed by the peculiarity and fail to be interested in the lesson.

The physical conditions of the class space, seating, heating, lighting, ventilation, and the pleasantness and comfort of the surroundings all contribute to the ease with which interest in the lesson may be maintained, and to the effectiveness of the teaching.

In the conduct of a class the teacher should organize lesson material and direct activities with a definite purpose in mind. The lesson should carry through to a clear understanding of its ideas and to an application of its principles in the daily life of the class.

In all teaching there must be a clear sensing of relative values with a stressing of the more important ideas and incidents. There must be a definite movement from one high point to the next without monotony of unimportant details or meaningless waste of time in idle discussion.

High attainment in class work can come only as high standards of preparation and class response are generally accepted. Every teacher gets from his class what he reasonably and consistently demands. There is no excuse for low standards and slipshod methods.

Topics for Thought and Discussion

1. In what ways may we obtain the attention of a class of junior boys? What will determine our method?
2. Discuss the problem of the inattentive class, the mischievous pupil. What causes? What remedies?
3. What means may we use in training our pupils in the power of voluntary attention?
4. What means are you using to maintain a continuous live interest in the work of your class?
5. What distractions in your own class or school are hindering your best work? In what ways may this be remedied?
6. What do you consider our chief danger points in teaching? Suggest the solution.

What Have You Paid?

During 1926 the members of the twenty-eight denominations composing the Federal Council of Churches of America, paid nearly $400,000,000 for the work of their organizations. There are more than 22,000,000 members of these denominations, which means that the per capita contribution for the entire membership was about $17.14.

The membership of our own church is approximately 100,000, and our annual average contributions (including payments on the Auditorium and on the College Endowment Stewardship Fund) for the last seven years has been $646,000; or an average per capita of about $6.46.

Has the average of your branch or district been more or less than this? An examination may help you analyze your relations with the church. See your bishop or bishop's agent for figures.

Should not our love for the gospel as evidenced by our contributions be as good as that of other churches?

What will your answer be for 1927-1928?

Character as Related to Incentives

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

Of outstanding importance among all our possible possessions is character, for it is composed of the collective attributes or qualities that make us what we are. It determines the incentives which move us to act and which give direction to our growth. It is therefore the real basis of personality. Character must be expressed, and its power is a ruling power—the rulership over one's lower self. Its central features are justice and judgment, enthroned and made divine by truth and love, and vitalized by purposeful action. The Scriptures declare that "He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Real character is found in the depths of human sentiment and purpose, and not in the superficial or capricious. The nature of the thought is reflected in the act, hence one's character determines what sort of things will motivate him and what will be sufficiently strong incentives to action. Those who are filled with the narrow and inferior things of life do not make immortal names, to be revered by generations to come; but great characters are remembered and honored through the ages. Concentration and high resolve do not abide in one who is actuated by inferior incentives, but he who is strong and resolute is not to be swerved from his purpose by trifles. For a worth-while character holds the mastery over inferior impulses.

A strong character is superior to the ordinary influences of life, and helps to mold its surroundings and create its atmosphere. On the other hand, a weak character reflects its atmosphere only, at best, and sinks to the lower strata of its surroundings. Character can not be successfully simulated. A superior character defies adequate description and analysis, because the acts which are its expression do not fully reveal it. It is like a deep well of pure water that is never exhausted by time or change.

Character Revealed By Incentives

An incentive is a stimulus, influence, incitement, or inducement to action, purpose, or attitude. It is that which motivates to performance. For our present purpose we may classify them as incentives to do right or to do wrong, to great achievement or to petty acts, to noble or to ignoble deeds, to steadfastness or to vacillation, to philanthropy or to selfishness, to kindness or to cruelty. Many incentives, such as desire for power, honor, or money, may singly or in association with others lead to either good or bad, according to the character of the individual.

It is when acts are understood from the incentives inducing them that the character of the one performing them is revealed. The history of the world is largely a history of character as revealed by incentives. The reasons for an act are always vital to our estimate of the person. If we are to evaluate his deeds, we must know the reason for their performance. If you love certain flowers or fruits you may be induced to grow them, but you would not grow gourds for food if you knew them to be worthless. In any event, there must be a motive for the act. Ignoble incentives will not prevail with a noble mind.

In the building of character, evaluation is constantly going on, for it can not be produced without an evaluation of that which forms it. Incentives to do wrong could never have existed in the life of Christ. His great soul was filled with purposes that were pure, lofty, and productive of good. The progress of the world has been its response to right incentives; its evils have resulted from its response to wrong incentives.

In character building both the quality of incentives and the degree of one's response to them are deciding factors. An incentive is that which makes a thing seem desirable, and must relate to an objective in order to show its place in the individual's consciousness. Simple incentives go into the making of simple characters, and suggestion may be followed by action without due judgment. Great characters contemplate many factors in determining resultant action, unless only incidental matters are concerned.

Marks of a Strong Character

One of the benefits of a good reflective judgment and will is the mastery of weak emotions. This is sometimes called the mastery of self, or self-discipline. The person of indecision more readily follows the lead of stronger minds, and is more fully subject to the influences of emotion, fear, desire, or momentary pleasure. In this fact lies one of the grave dangers confronting a weak character.

Insignificant thoughts will not be harbored by one of strong character. They are undermining, and vitiate vigor and scope of purpose. He who succumbs to inferior obstacles indicates weakness and a failure to sufficiently respond to incentives. This is a defect common to many in every age. Such persons usually spend their energies on the incidentals of life, and thus have little left for great achievements. Vain and frantic effort when resources are exhausted also mark the weak character, but yielding in resignation to the inevitable may be and often is a sign of strength.

Incentives hold a definite relationship to accomplishment, both of quality and kind, hence the character of the incentives motivating one should be brought to judgment. Emerson says: "Men of character are the conscience of the society to which they belong." We are constantly using comparatives in estimating the character of others. Our concepts of character are represented in the things they have adhered to and fought for, or normally done. This principle governs also in the estimating of our own worth.

Incentives Assist Growth

The things in which we maintain interest and activity indicate both what we are and what we are likely to become. If we are to become what is supremely desirable, the right sort of incentives must be both chosen and cultivated. If we think only noble, true, great, and worthy purposes we shall be moved to become noble, true, great, and worthy. To cultivate ideal and practical qualities is to grow strong in character, hence in the power of worthy accomplishment. The wise man does not ignore his surroundings, but proceeds to utilize them.

To think more on obstacles than on means of accomplishment is to invite failure by a weakening of purpose. To seek incentives that strengthen the will is to develop a stronger equipment for the tasks of life and for the building of character. Incentives also motivate aptness, by which growth is facilitated.

Through educational agencies, incentives are given direction and are made stronger for accomplishment. Education also increases incentive to activity in specific directions and enables one to more effectively do the things that become desirable. Furthermore, it enables him to evaluate the influences in his life and to better choose his course. In this connection we can not too highly commend the spirit and purpose of those who have made Graceland College the splendid influence it is today in the lives of our young people. One must come in contact with this institution in operation if he would fully appreciate the value of this influence to the church, though many expressions of it are in evidence elsewhere.

In the life of one who is progressing, new incentives are constantly being added to those of the past, and in his unfoldment of life, scope and power are increasing. Thus his field is so enlarged that spiritual, mental, social, and economic influences co-ordinate for worthy ends. These are the things that build for life and make it worth while. They are the things that bring God into the life, and hence into the world, and that make for the security and permanence of all that is worth striving for and cherishing.

Getting Something for Nothing

It has been estimated that approximately one billion dollars are annually taken out of the pockets of the American public by unscrupulous swindlers and promoters of wildcat schemes. They trade on that firmly ingrained delusion so common to thousands of citizens, that it is possible to get something for nothing.

Æsop's time-honored fable of the dog who lost its bone in an effort to snap at the shadow seems to have lost its application or to have been allowed to drop into obscurity. There are people who are chasing shadows and losing sight of their substance.

Day by day new schemes are being devised for extracting hard cash from the bank accounts of the frugal-minded who wish to better themselves. When will the people learn that honest industry is the surest road to independence? Getting something for nothing is against all natural laws and against the promptings of common sense.—Dearborn Independent, June 4, 1927.

The Gospel of Consecrated Service

BY JOHN W. RUSHTON

Baccalaureate sermon, Independence Sanitarium Nurses Training School, Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, May 22, 1927.

The lesson this morning is the Epistle of Paul to Philemon:

Paul, a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, to Philemon our beloved, and fellow-worker, and to Apphia, our sister, and to Archippus, our fellow-soldier, and to the church in thine house: Grace to you, and peace, from God the Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God always, making mention of thee in my prayers, hearing of thy love and thy faith which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus Christ, and toward all the Saints; that the fellowship of thy faith may become effectual in the knowledge of every good thing which is in you unto Christ, for I have much joy and comfort in thy love because the hearts of the Saints have been refreshed through thee. Wherefore, though I have all boldness in Christ to enjoin thee that which is befitting, yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged, and now a prisoner also of Christ Jesus. I beseech thee for my child Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my bond, who was aforetime unprofitable unto thee, and who is now profitable to thee and to me: whom I have sent back to thee in mine own person, whom I would even have kept with me that in my behalf he might minister unto me in the bonds of the gospel, but without thy mind I would do nothing, that thy goodness should not be of necessity, but of free will. For perhaps he therefore departed for a season that thou shouldest have him forever; no longer as a slave, but more than a slave, a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more rather to thee, both in the flesh and in the Lord? If thou countest me a partner, receive him as myself; but if he hath wronged thee at all, or oweth thee ought, put that to my account. I, Paul, write it with my own hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest to me thine own self besides. Yea, rather let me have joy in thee in the Lord, refresh my heart in Christ. Having confidence in thy obedience I write unto thee, knowing that thou wilt prepare to do even beyond what I say; but withal preparing me also a lodging, for I hope that through your prayers I shall be granted unto you. Epaphras, my fellow-servant in Christ Jesus, salutes you, as do also Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, my fellow-workers. The grace of my Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

But we exhort you, brethren, that ye are bound moreover, and that ye study to be quiet and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, even as we charged you; that you might walk honestly toward them that are without and may have need of nothing.—1 Thessalonians 4: 11, 12.

It is always a great joy to stand before youth on the threshold of life, with its adventures and romance, to speak a word of cheer and encouragement, to breathe a prayer for the success of those who stand at the doorway of a new world. So this morning, in the spirit of the occasion, we hold the hand of these friends who, having equipped themselves through study, and through the initiatory practices of apprenticeship, go forward into the realm of service for which these preparatory exercises have prepared them, and bid them Godspeed.

It is customary on such an occasion as this to speak words of advice and counsel, and to pass on the torch of life to their hands as they move forward to plant that torch upon higher peaks that a wider circle of radiance might be distributed to the whole of human endeavor.

We are happy this morning that it is not at all necessary to present any argument to show there must not be any line of demarkation between business and religion, between the factory and the church, between holiness and secular affairs. At least, there is one benefit coming to us through the introduction of "evolution," that despite our feelings toward evolution from the standpoint of religion, it at least does signify the unity of the whole of life and enables us to see that these distinctions are born of artificiality and unreality; and are not at all justified in the fact of God or in the facts of human experience. In all things, living or not living, there is one purpose, one meaning, and one controlling power.

This morning we shall discuss business and religion in the sense of wholeness and not in the sense of artificial distinctions. The text, therefore, will be appreciated, and we paraphrase it: "That we shall study to be dignified, to mind our own business, and present with all the power and ability we have the work of our hands to the glory of God and the benefit of our fellows."

I shall not discuss the text particularly, but use it merely as a point of departure, as preachers are privileged to do. I am particularly interested in the lesson which I read, the letter of Paul to Philemon about his one-time slave, Onesimus.

The art of letter writing seems to be gradually falling into desuetude. There was a time when letter writing was considered a necessary adjunct to our culture and our social standing; and there are many letters preserved to us, written by different people, which show how intimately the letters bound soul to soul, and are, more or less, the revelation of the spirit and genius of the writer and also of the one to whom the letter is written, as well as conveying information.

A letter always makes this three-fold revelation. It reveals the ideals and qualities (intellectual, moral, and spiritual) of the writer, and then the things which are written reveal the kind of mind, morals, and spirituality which exist in the one to whom the letter is addressed. And then the subject matter of the letter itself is the interpretation of the personality of the writer and the personality of the one to whom the letter is written— personality of author and recipient, and the truth which the letter contains.

We have three portraits in this letter of the Apostle Paul to Philemon: Saint Paul, the writer; Philemon, to whom the letter was written; and Onesimus, about whom the letter was written.

I would like to call your attention to one or two obvious things with reference to this letter. It was written by Saint Paul at the conclusion of two years imprisonment. He was imprisoned, it is true, in his own house, for which he paid the rent; and he was chained to and under the surveillance of one of the Roman soldiers, always. But he left his door open, and through that open door many guests came in to converse with the Apostle Paul; and during the two years of his imprisonment, in this prison of his own hiring, in the immediate presence of death, always imminent, his life depending largely upon the capriciousness of the Roman emperor, he had time to sublimate his experiences, to rationalize his religion, and lay the foundations of his hope.

The letter from which the text is taken (1 Thessalonians 4:11) is the first of Paul's letters, while the letter to Philemon belongs to the group which is the last thing that Paul wrote. During his imprisonment the Apostle Paul composed the two famous letters in which is gathered up all of his understanding of Jesus Christ, the letter to the Ephesians and the letter to the Colossians. In these two letters his Christology, his philosophy about Christ, is presented and made concrete in marvelous expression. And under the consciousness of what Christ means to the Apostle Paul, and the immediate pressure of the worth of Jesus Christ in his life, and while working out his explanation of Christ and his redemption, he produces this literary gem which meets every requirement of letter writing, addressed to his personal friend, Philemon, his friend's wife and their child, a son; then to the household, which happened to be a church or an assembly of Christianized men and women.

What is the burden of that letter? It may be easily understood as you will read the letter for yourselves. One day while Paul was in this prison, there came in through the wide-open door a slave who had run away from his master. Probably he had gone through all of his possessions, and being in desperate need he reminded himself that Paul, the friend of his master, was in Rome. Under the alchemy of this singular meeting a slave becomes converted, and out of love makes himself a much more efficient slave for love's sake than he ever was under the threat of fear or the lure of wages.

Then the time comes when Paul is going to send his letters, the one to Ephesus and the one to Colossæ. He calls Tychicus, and sends them by his hand. Also he decides to send Onesimus back to Philemon. In the presentation of Onesimus to Philemon the concrete meaning of Christ as expressed in the language and literary arrangement of the letters to Ephesus and Colossæ is manifested. The slave Onesimus is made the incarnation of life in Christ, with its liberty, character, and glory spelled out in facts. The scheme is magnificent. The range of faith, the romance of the Christian spirit, the almost unbelievable transmutation of character: that is the simple statement of superficial facts in the letter.

Paul draws two pictures of Onesimus. There is the picture of the man as Philemon knew him; then there is the portrait of the Onesimus whom Philemon had never seen or known. He gives the likenesses of the one-time slave and the man who was now so precious as Paul's friend; and he does it in two words. "Here," he says, "is the man who once was unprofitable unto thee; but now he is the child of my love, and I return him to thee as being profitable to thee and to me." I will not expound this because I put the emphasis upon the application.

Let me call your attention to these two words, unprofitable and profitable. The word unprofitable in Greek is ar kreston, which means useless, worthless, no good. That word appropriately describes Onesimus as Philemon knew him. "Now," he said, "I return him to you. He is eu kreston; that is, he is fully, completely profitable, or useful to you and me. He is of great and complete worth to both of us." What a transformation!

Let us consider: All value is the result of social reactions to our life to the individual activities of life. Our word value comes from the Latin valere, meaning that which avails. It has two distinct currents of meaning. This word valere, if applied to things, is translated into English as value, that which is desirable and of worth. But if the word valere is descriptive of living beings, then the word is translated valorous or valiant, strong, brave, courageous. The meaning of both of the words is this: If the word valere describes a thing, it means that which because of worth avails for life; if it is applied to a living being, as a valorous knight, then the word means he whose life is availing in strong and courageous actions. Ruskin said that wealth means the possession of things of worth by the brave, the valiant, and the noble, used for the welfare of others.

Notice, now, the relationship between religion and social life. Observe the fundamentals of a social program. Get your meaning of man's real worth in the inner reaction to the external stimuli, whether to God, or to humanity, or to things. Every Christian man who under the sovereignty of Jesus Christ claims the right of going into the kingdom makes that claim upon the ground of his profitability to man and to God himself in his use of things for the good of others.

Onesimus, once the slave, worthless; Onesimus, the Christian knight of great value to "us"; not to "me" alone—to us. And were it not for my love to thee I fain would keep him for myself, for he is the child of my soul, he is born of my love. "But," says Paul, "because you need him, and because Onesimus needs you, I return him to you. Take him as the gift of my own heart. And remember if Onesimus owes you anything, do not charge it up against him; but because he is my child, chalk the debt up to me, and I will pay thee when I see thee. I do not do this because I am Paul, the apostle, and have the power to enjoin and command. No; I beseech you as Paul, the aged." Not triumphant, majestic, and apostolic authority that draws a circle and shuts him out; but because of love that, drawing a circle, takes in Onesimus "and all thy household, the church which is in thine own home."

There in this short, human, concrete expression of what is recognized as the deepest, highest, and most profound of the apostles' mysticism in the Christological letters to the Ephesians and Colossians, is the meaning worked out in terms of behavior.

There is no need for us to make any mistake as to the real meaning of Christianity. It is not theories about Jesus Christ; it is fidelity to the life of Christ. It is not discussions about theological, ecclesiastical, or mystical questions; it is the devotion to principle and loyalty to the revelation of God in the noblest life of availing service. That is what Christianity means, the "life of God in the soul of man," the revelation of God in human experience.

"So," said Paul, "I send back to you the child of my own heart, once thy slave because of fear, now our slave because of love. Treat him, therefore, as my very self. He is my representative, and what you would do for me do to him, and what you do to him you do to me." That is Christianity. It is life in loving service. It is our concept of God and our duty to him expressed in terms of human service. It is the socialization of God and all the resources of his grace. That is the last word that Paul has to say before the cruel light ignited by Nero sent him down the long, long trail to the valley of shadows.

Have not our hearts been thrilled as we read the news of the almost miraculous success of Lindbergh, who, going out from the shores of this country in solitariness, and challenging the powers of heaven and earth and sea, has courageously blazed the trail and finally landed at his goal—Paris, of France. Once more the fact that a human soul with knowledge and intrepidity and power can master the elements and make nature the servant of his will, has been established. His bravery, victory, and modesty only illustrate what has always been characteristic of the human mind, heart, and soul. And as we look over the history of the past, we discover that all values which have been accumulated and spoken of in the philosophy of history deal only with those men and women who have immortalized themselves in their service for their fellows without reference to self-interest or personal gain in money, or place, or privilege.

That is the story in Paul's letter to Philemon. It is the meaning of his interest in Onesimus, as he pleads with his friend, that once more the slave of the long ago shall become the free man of the spirit, the voluntary slave of love within the environment of his own home. It is the story of all immortal heroisms.

Before I was born (I have heard my father speak of it) there was a terrible war waged in the Far East. The forces of Britain and Turkey and France and Russia were all arrayed against each other. In those days the soldiers not only were victims of wounds which became poisoned, but also the diseases, which took a heavier toll of life than the bullets and bayonets of the enemy. And when the news came to England of the soldiers being helpless in disease with no one to care for them, a number of women went out from England, many of them of gentle and noble blood, and carried to the Far East the succor which was the beginning of the nursing profession, and established in that great act of self-sacrifice what we now have represented in the hospitals and infirmaries and nursing schools throughout the length and breadth of civilization.

Florence Nightingale led the van in this work which reduced deaths in war through disease to almost a minimum; for, according to statistics of the late war, not more than two per cent of all the deaths were the result of disease. Through the endeavors of Simpson, who gave us chloroform, and of Lister, who introduced antiseptics for the disinfecting and cleansing of the wounds, and the efficient nursing staff joining with men of pathological and surgical skill, the horrors of war have been reduced, and many dangers even in times of peace have been lessened. In the United States of America, Clara Barton, catching the spirit of Florence Nightingale, has done the same service for our country.

With reverence we remember women like Frances E. Willard, and Carrie Chapman Catt, and Jane Addams, and others who, on every hand have endeavored to make the world a better and safer place in which to live. And they have taken with one great stroke the discussion of religion from the cloister, and from the seminary, and from the study, and made it an incarnation of God in terms of human life and service.

That is the sort of thing we believe ought to be fundamental in our religion; and if the terminology so familiar to us in this church and other churches has any meaning at all, it means that in every way, in all ways, men who know the Lord Jesus Christ shall create values in which the talents and all other possessions are consecrated for the good of the whole of society.

That is the meaning of our religion, and men and women so serving stand as valiant witnesses to the cause of Christ at every turn of the road. Today we greet them as brothers and sisters in the common cause making for the kingdom of God.

Perhaps you have visited the Tate Art Gallery in London. There, in juxtaposition, you will find two pictures. One is the product of the genius of Millais, and the other by Sir Luke Fildes. The picture by Millais shows a maiden who has been stripped and tied to a tree in the forest. A young knight after his all-night vigil leaves the cathedral, sees the distressed lady, and going behind her and covering her nakedness with his cloak he rescues her. It is symbolical of the understanding men and women have of knightly chivalry and romance. It represents what many think of churches and religion even today.

The other picture, by Sir Luke Fildes, is one of which you have often seen copies, since there is one in almost every home in town. There is the interior of a country cottage. The cold light of dawn steals through the windows. The mother is stretched across the table in unutterable despair. The husband stands by her side, his face all lined and seamed with care and grief, and he places his hand upon the shoulder of his wife as though to comfort and sustain. And stretched out upon the improvised bed of two chairs with pillows on them is the emaciated form of a child. A paraffin oil lamp sheds its yellow light over the form of this little child, and the doctor, who has sat there all night long in that vigil, giving his skill and patience and tenderness until the crisis comes and life is going to be triumphant.

In these two pictures by these great artists you have the romance of Christian service which is doing for others in need what we are able to do until life and health and wealth result. It is the same meaning in Paul's letter to Philemon. One appeals to our imagination and awakens dreams of romance more or less imaginary. The village doctor in humble, vigilant service is the Good Samaritan whose religion heals, comforts, and saves.

I do not know what your business is, but in conclusion let me say: It is our duty to conduct our business, no matter what that business is, so that we shall make it the highway along which the reinforcing powers of God shall march. We shall make our business the sacramental service through which shall be revealed our response to the call of Christ and God.

It may be that your real business does not match your dreams and expectations, but at least you can idealize your real if the real is not ideal. That is the meaning of it. A slave in the household of Philemon, Onesimus becomes the incarnation of Paul's glorious concept of Christ. And when you read and think of the letter to the Colossians and the letter to the Ephesians, please remember that a slave incarnates the glory of Christ as understood by Paul. And you here today in the limitations of your life, with all the impediments that may surround you, may you become the revelation of divine glory in thought and word and deed. The majestic mystery of the spiritual forces which make for neutralizing sin and vice and crime is within your grasp. The torch of life within your hands may be carried to higher heights to shed its brilliant radiance over vaster empires than have yet been conceived.

If we will keep in mind this splendid revelation of Paul's concept of practical religion, there is yet hope that Independence may become the germinal starting point of a new humanity and give to the world a new geography whose longitudinal and latitudinal lines will be of the spirit rather than of time and space, of spirit rather than material measurement.

And as you do that, remember that this calls out of us our best, our noblest, our holiest. High resolves and noble endeavor mean:

Because you love me I will strive to be
A noble woman, loving, sweet, and true;
Upholding justice, truth, and righteousness
In all things. Lest my very love for you Should hurt. Lest if I were not true,
You should to the least part of a degree
Lower your standard of the right and good
And be less noble for love of me.

Successful Motherhood

BY RUTH M. KIRBY

Being a mother myself, I am particularly interested in their problems. To my mind, successful motherhood is one of the most difficult, complicated tasks ever intrusted to the human race.

I have been trying to conjure up, for some time, a mental picture of truly successful motherhood. I have asked myself the question: What are the attributes of a successful mother? In finding my answer I have used both observation and personal experience. I have weighed and balanced the facts, and I hope and believe that I have come to an honest conclusion.

In the first place, a successful mother must be a success as a wife and home manager, but most of all as a human being. Have you ever noticed the woman who has reared the large family—the skeleton of what she used to be, the ghost of what she might have been? A bundle of humanity, helpless except for the thought of her family; bound, hand, foot, body, and soul, to the daily routine of housework. All else is apparently beyond her ken. She has narrowed her interests wholly to her family circle. She has never found time to keep up to date. She seldom reads and seldom meditates. I believe this woman has failed as a mother, perhaps through no fault of her own, but she has failed, because she has failed as a human being. She has failed to develop the powers God has given to her; she has lost her individuality.

Not all mothers of large families make a complete failure in this way, but it is the usual thing, for who has time to be human when laboring under a burden that is too heavy to be borne? I do not believe successful motherhood can be counted in the size of the family, whether large or small, but the mother of a large family has too great a handicap. I do not believe it to be humanly possible for one woman to give six or eight children, or more, the care they need, and at the same time do justice to herself. I have never seen it done. Some one suffers.

The mothers of today are giving their small families of two or three children as much of their time as our grandmothers gave to their families of ten. The reason women today have more time for outside interests is not because of their smaller families, but because of modern conveniences such as electric appliances, automobiles, and the many other time-saving inventions. The children of good mothers nowadays are getting scientific, intelligent care. This requires more time and effort per child than the old haphazard methods. But the result is rosy, blooming, happy children, whose natures are being developed to the best advantage, instead of the old-fashioned sickly type of child that used to be so common. A certain percentage, sometimes an appallingly large percentage, of our grandmothers' families usually died. It was to be expected. It doesn't have to be expected any more. One test of a successful mother, then, is that she gives her children the kind of care that modern physicians and child experts recommend.

A woman is giving to the world a far better gift in a couple of well-trained, well-nourished individuals, than her sister gives to it in her dozen half-developed, come-up-as-best-you-can youngsters, some of which later on may succeed, and some of them are almost sure of becoming a burden to themselves, their families, or their communities. No one can give the large family all the personal attention necessary to all-around development, helping them through their individual problems, and guiding each one carefully, according to his own individual needs. One-sided development is the result. The mother of the large family is too busy with the physical needs of her family to devote much of her time to the mental and spiritual phases. Her children have outgrown her as soon as they pass the stage of physical helplessness. They have passed beyond her reach and out of her control. We can never hope for a race of superhumans until we give our children the spiritual and mental nourishment they need, as well as the physical. This means small families.

But even with the smaller families and the modern inventions, how many times I see mothers laying their all on the altar of motherhood. I see them lay down, one by one, all their priceless possessions, upon the sacred altar—their health, their youth, their talents, their dreams, even their lives, sacrificed upon the altar of motherhood! Is it necessary? Is it unavoidable? Is it right? Does motherhood demand this staggering price? I do not believe that it does. I have proved my belief to myself, as far as I have gone. It is, to a large degree, unnecessary; it is avoidable; and therefore it is not right!

As far as health and youth are concerned, if we comply with the Word of Wisdom and carefully follow the health rules that should be well known by everyone today; if we limit ourselves to small families, and keep our minds occupied with happy, useful, constructive thoughts, our health and our youth will take care of themselves.

It is taken for granted by many that we must sacrifice our talents and our dreams. They tell us we can not eat our cake and keep it. The trouble is, we are not eating all of our cake; we are wasting a lot of crumbs. Talents are a God-given trust and were never intended to be cast aside for any reason. We are stewards over the talents that God has given us. Even motherhood has not the right to deny us the development of God-given qualities. Motherhood, unless we take upon ourselves more responsibility in this regard than we can bear, does not deny us the right to this development. We deny ourselves and use motherhood as an excuse.

This is a hard statement to make, I know, but why not face the truth? Of course it is difficult to find time for personal development when one has such a full-time job as motherhood. We occupy not only our hands, but our minds, continually in our work. We have our menu to plan, which, if we give it the amount of attention that is needed, is not so small a job. We have our work to plan and to execute. We have our children to care for, to teach, and to correct when necessary. Innumerable little things are constantly coming to our attention. It keeps us busy meeting the little problems of each day. Tomorrow we seem to be nothing ahead. We have it all to do over. It is difficult for mothers to take time for personal development, but it is possible!

How is it possible? I have tried to solve this problem for myself, and you will have to solve it for yourselves, but I have a few suggestions that may help. I once heard one of the leading men of the church say that the problem of life is not so much how to live on a certain number of dollars a week, as how to live on twenty-four hours a day. This is what we must learn to do. We plan carefully how we shall spend our money, but do we plan so carefully how we shall spend our time, which is even more valuable? We must learn how to manage and to use our time. In the first place, we must stop the little leaks that are letting so much time go to waste. We must learn to be efficient in our work; learn how to do it the best in the shortest space of time. We should make out a time budget and live up to it religiously. We must avoid unnecessary duties, such as rocking the baby to sleep. We can show our love for him in a far more intelligent, useful way. It is best for the baby not to be rocked. Discoveries of recent years show that a baby needs very little handling. He is healthier and stronger without it.

A change of work will often rest us when we are tired, as much as a nap, or we may rest ourselves by sitting down and reading something beneficial. Too many women, left to their own devices during the day, allow themselves too much time for resting. The woman who is not well, or who has a young baby to care for, usually requires an afternoon nap, but for a normal, healthy individual, a nap that exceeds a half hour or so is a luxury and should be treated as such. God intended that we should get our proper rest at night, if possible.

If we might only, at all times, consider future development before present comfort! If we can only catch the spirit of progress, we shall be willing to sacrifice present comfort to future development! We shall solve our problems. We shall consider them merely incidental. We shall have our minds on something higher. We shall make, not only the development of our talents possible, as individuals, but we shall make Zion a reality, as a group.

I know of women who are considered industrious who literally throw away their afternoons, their spare time. Did you ever hear the statement that the way one uses his spare time is the greatest factor in determining what one will be in a few years? I believe it. If I study art in my spare time I will one day become an artist. If I study the life of Christ, I will gradually grow to be like him. If I read good books, I will, in time, become educated. On the other hand, if I waste those few precious moments of spare time, what have I laid up for mental food for tomorrow?

Our minds must have food to grow, the same as our bodies. If we would develop wonderful minds, if we would think wonderful thoughts, we must feed our minds by reading good books. Then we have something to meditate upon, a foundation upon which to build a structure of beautiful thoughts. If we are to be successful in our motherhood I am convinced that we must study. We must strive at all times to become more efficient, highly developed beings.

Many times we see women completely submerge their individualities in the family group. They make of themselves servants to their families instead of mothers. A mother's service to her family implies all that is spiritual and ideal in life, and in comparison to the position of a mere housekeeper is an exalted place indeed. But how many women, every day, are neglecting their development to such an extent that they are incapable of rendering a mother's service! They are contenting themselves to be menial slaves to their families. They may have the love of their families, in a passive way—they may even have their family's sympathy, but they haven't the one thing which is rightfully theirs; they haven't their family's respect.

How pitiful is this type of mother when compared with the mother who has the love and respect of her family, because they are proud of her; who has developed, through the years, something to command respect—something she can do, something she can be! The first type has not studied. The second type has studied. The latter type has filled the role of a mother; the former type the role of a nursemaid and housekeeper.

How much better mothers we can be if we try to be something beside just mothers! If we try to succeed first as individuals and next as home managers, we will not have to fear for our success as wives and mothers. Shall we study? Shall we strive to develop our latent powers? Shall we cultivate our talents, or shall we bury them? Let us not take refuge in motherhood. Motherhood was never intended for a stumblingblock, but for a stepping-stone.

Eternal Power

BY JAMES E. BISHOP. A SERMON.

Text: For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness; because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so they are without excuse.—Romans 1: 18, 19, 20.

Human or natural ethics fail, for a lack of spiritual objectivity. They do not have faith in anything outside of self, to enforce, to execute, or to reward. Paul is more logical. He connects with an indefectible blending, righteousness and eternal power.

There are many things that tend to destroy faith in eternal power, and not the least is indifference to moral issues. Again, the philosophy of change disturbs many. We are taught that all things are in a state of flux. "Hurry up and change." "Change, for all things change."

There are limits to change. A long graduation of change has taken place from the building and the use of the Santa Maria to the building and the use of the Spirit of Saint Louis. The changes have been so many and varied that they would have been inexplicable to Columbus unless one had a moving picture of all the processes involved, and this would have been impossible except as a miraculous vision. But, who had the most grit? Columbus or Lindbergh? This raises the moral issue. And honesty and integrity are eternal. With anæsthetics and hospitals and flying machines the good Samaritan would not be a better man, without his ass and oil. He would be a more efficient man. Goodness is goodness. It is also intelligent and will use all of the up-to-date devices for expression, fuller expression.

In this text Paul also conflicts with human unwillingness. He tells us that man is responsible for his degradation. Man has the power of an inner vision. He should be true to it. "That which may be known of God is manifest in them." Wordsworth has it in blank verse:

MY VOICE PROCLAIMS

How exquisitely the individual mind (And the progressive powers perhaps no less of the whole species) to the external world
Is fitted:—And how exquisitely too—
Theme this little heard among men—
The external world is fitted to the mind;
And the creation (by no lower name Can it be called) which they with blended might accomplish.

The mind manifests three functions: the powers to know, to feel, and to will. Knowledge is proud of reason. Faith and reason are man's guides. Reason loves sequence. It also loves order and regularity. It does not like chance occurrence. It seeks for causes. It is at home in the universe, for in the universe it finds reason. The universe is rational. Huxley believed that, at least, as one may read his own words:

As for the strong conviction that the cosmic order is rational, and the faith that throughout all duration, unbroken order has reigned in the universe, I not only accept it, but I am disposed to think it the most important of all truths.

Man's mind, with its power to reason, is at home among the manifestations of a universal reason. The art of a great Knower is manifest in all of the vast reaches that have been disclosed by telescope and microscope. And in the vaster regions untouched, men have faith that the order, sequence, and regularity that they have finitized still reigns on in the infinite.

To feel is to be sensitive. Some few see only a machine in the universe. But, "if nature is working as a machine, it is sleeping as a picture." Some others try to account for the beauty of the animal kingdom on the basis of survival value, but it is impossible to account for the wondrous beauty of inorganic nature on such a basis. We note the glory of the sea and the majesty of the mountain, the fleeciness and varied color of the clouds, the splendor of the sunset, the rare beauty of nature's lines, sounds filled with music and motion and color, and forms that fascinate. Such things are objective. They knock and would enter. As our acquaintance improves they become grander. Do not such things bear testimony to the heart of an almighty Artist? Surely the world was made beautiful. And the prophet said the whole earth is filled with the glory of God. Again Wordsworth helps:

The joy of elevated thought, A sense sublime
Of something far more deeply interfused,
Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns
And the round ocean and living air

And the blue skies, and in the mind of men—
 A motion and a spirit which impels
 All thinking things, all objects of all thoughts
 And rolls through all things.

Human interaction is significant for morality. Will is back of this. We have seen evidences of knowledge and feeling in the universe. Can not also we see the manifestation of a Will? Are there not manifestations of ceaseless activity? But does such activity have a moral purpose? Has history revealed commendation for right and condemnation for wrong? Evidence is replete. Some one has said that "History is a vindicator that the ways of God to man are right." God has warned man of the sad consequences of certain conduct. "They that commit such things are worthy of death." (Romans 1: 32.) A ripened iniquity is destruction.

The basis of morality has been sought in human nature. The Utilitarians thought they found it in pleasure and pain and the public will. But this only accounts for a portion of human reactions. It is true that human organism expands to pleasure and retracts to pain. But to say that this accounts for all reactions would exclude such behaviorism as is suggested here, "Who for the joy that is set before him endured the Cross." The love of pleasure does not explain learning to play the piano, parsing sentences, studying logic, preparing a brief, hoeing the garden, or milking the cow.

Morality has its basis in the sense of oughtness. "I ought to do the right. I ought to seek the good." Any normal being can find his conscience working in this way. The sense of oughtness can not be explained. It is a necessary and ultimate fact. It is inexplicable on any other grounds. It is the last residual of human nature. It is the basis of God's judgment. It is that which is God within us. It is that element for which man is a steward as much or more than any other thing. Brilliancy, that tries to ignore it, is humbug.

Men find within themselves reason and in the universe universal reason; men find within themselves admiration for beauty and in the universe the intention of being beautiful; men find within themselves the sense of oughtness and in the universe the sustaining power of righteousness. There is therefore no excuse for ungodliness and unrighteousness.

These matters find support in modern revelation. We may expect that a knowledge of eternal power would be revealed with the coming of a modern prophet. We are not disappointed.

The concept of law is implied in Huxley's statement concerning his faith in unbroken order, continuing throughout unbroken duration. Henry

Wood, in the Arena, January, 1892, asks this question:

What is the most important question of modern times? Some would say the art of printing . . . others would mention the wonderful utilization of steam. . . . Still others would point to the unnumbered applications of electricity. No; it is none of these. Of vaster moment than all these great achievements is the growing recognition that law is universal.

Long before this "growing recognition" had put off its swaddling clothes, Joseph Smith proclaimed the universality of law in 1832. In the revelation enumerated as section 85 there is matter of great moment, and while it is not a scientific treatise, it is an impressionistic picture—a picture of many colors and lights and shades, with a meaning that is almost inexhaustible. "All kingdoms have a law given," and to "every law there are certain bounds and conditions." That contains a caution. Man may witness the operation of law, he may have, in comparison with other men, a marked insight into that law, but he may miss the bounds (limits) of that law. Thus a man may say that the law of procreation demands male intervention and lay it down as inflexible—and thus deny the immaculate conception. However, science teaches us to be careful about designating the impossible, and the last utterance of a great scientist is negative. His frontal attack is positive and an expression of faith in the prevalence of law. With time, concepts of law change, proving law has bounds and conditions.

The universality of law is carried over into man's moral and spiritual nature:

And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; they must remain filthy still.

I think Stanley Jevons wrote his text on logic quite some time after the forties. In this text he says that logic is the foundation of Science, and that geology is the logic of the earth and all ologies are logic. He points out the probable limits of science and suggests that a science of human character is impossible because of fluidity and instability of human life; when we think of applying observation and experiment to life and systematizing knowledge. However, this did not discourage anyone in particular, for a lot of work has been done to reduce the complications of human nature to a science. The basis of such science is the conviction that law is universal. Revelation tells us that such is the case, and we are invited as students to discover such laws and apply them.

Some one has said that science only gives us the

"how" of things—tells us how things work, and not the "why" of the things—the reason for things working that particular way. This is where religion and philosophy come to our aid. We are told in this wonderful section of the book containing the revelation given through Joseph Smith, that all beings (persons) who abide not the conditions of abiding by law are not justified. The reason for condemnation is given in the following:

For intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraceth truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light; mercy hath compassion on mercy, and claimeth her own; justice continueth its course and claimeth its own.

Man is made with intelligence potential in him; the love of light, of wisdom, of justice, of mercy is deeply imbedded in his soul. The history of the good men of the world is the history of seeking a fuller expression of intelligence, wisdom, mercy, and justice. God made man instinct with the love of truth and beauty. Jesus reached a full growth. "He was full of grace [beauty, moral and spiritual] and truth," and thank God, men "beheld his glory" and understood it to that degree that they were willing to die for its universalization, or the opportunity of its universalization, in human life. God will judge man for his reactions to the influence of intelligence and mercy and wisdom and justice that will play on the music of his soul. Under such influences (and they fill the world) men feel the impulsion to open their souls, to lift up their heads, to fight the fight of faith, to "lay hold on eternal life." How sad it is that some grow indifferent to the play of such elevating influences, and how terrible it is that some actually fight them and have taught their children to do likewise. And here is the condemnation of man, in that he may seek "to become a law unto himself [himself], and willeth [will] to abide in sin, [and he] can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment, they must remain filthy still."

The beautiful and the good go together. Prettiness and evil may associate, but evil is never beautiful. In many ways Latter Day Saints have established their appreciation of the beautiful. We find it expressed in their choice of location for settlements. Who that has been in Kirtland has not remarked the beauty of the spot! Who does not notice the rugged beauty of Kirtland Temple, with its beauty of line, of simplicity and mass. The other day I heard an intelligent gentleman remark, as he was viewing the lower auditorium of the Kirtland Temple, "This is the most impressive room I have ever been in." Nauvoo (probably a corruption of the Hebrew word Naweh) means beautiful. It is too bad that the beauty that began there was ever blighted. But the Greeks believed that a beautiful thing (abstract beauty) could never be destroyed. Can we resuscitate that beauty, revealed in the hymns, the doctrines, and in some of the lives of the early workers of the church?

What of the consequences of the operation of the social program of the church? It will reveal law, order, and beauty, and a willing activity in the lives of the people. The tabernacle of God will be among men. Paul's theology was social in its manifestation. He regards Christ as saying, "What I have individualized you shall socialize." For what Christ did in manifesting the goodness and the righteousness of God, he expected to see revealed in his church.

The eternal power of God is revealed explicitly in the universe. It is implicit in man. It must grow. It must be universalized among men. God will be revealed in such way. The people of the world will yet say, "Let us go up to Zion and learn of her ways," for "out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

The foundation of God standeth sure, and

Judgment goeth before the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and governeth and executeth all things: he comprehendeth all things, and all things are before him, and all things are round about him; and he is above all things, and in all things, and is through all things, and is round about all things: and all things are by him, and of him; even God, for ever and ever.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 10.

Herein is described the personality and supremacy of God. It is man's supreme task to find the evidences of this wonderful truth in his own life and then risk his all in the attempt to universalize such truth. To find the gospel is great joy and a high privilege. To dedicate one's life for the realization of its purposes in the building of Zion and its spreading abroad is the great challenge to those who catch the vision of God's eternal power.

The hopeful aspect is that America has thousands of noble men and women of many races and climes who are bigger than sects and parties, and who are honestly and optimistically endeavoring to put down prejudice and to set up broad and kindly policies. Such men look for the good in all races; seek to bring together opposing religious groups; frown upon class consciousness; cement labor and capital; vote for the best man in either political party; support good men and oppose evil men everywhere. This way lies hope. The truly large man lives above all envy, prejudice, and hate. He loves men.—John R. Ewers.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Cabbages and Consciousness

It seems to be one of the inevitable penalties of progress that the wider our range of knowledge grows the less certain we are of anything. There was a time when we were quite sure that clear, defined lines could be drawn between the human race, the animal kingdom, and the vegetable world in matters of intelligence and consciousness. We said that human beings were actuated by reason, that animal activities were controlled wholly by arbitrary instincts, and that vegetables simply grew. But we find it very hard now to defend these dogmas, for various reasons.

The writer has recently been reading some literature concerning the late Luther Burbank, covering his sixteen years of experimental work, which were devoted to the endeavor to produce a spineless cactus, which would have all the advantages of prickly pear as a fodder plant, without the disadvantage of its thorny defence. The story is a most interesting one, alike from an economic and a philosophical standpoint.

The Evolution of the Prickly Pear

Burbank started out to investigate the life history of the prickly pear, and came to the following conclusion:

He said that plants of the cactus type survived certain climatic changes of portions of the earth's surface, from zones of moisture to areas of aridity, by developing the habit of storing up moisture in their fleshy leaves. From that he went on to demonstrate that a plant which remains in a succulent condition in an arid locality would have been speedily exterminated by grazing animals unless it could develop some method of protecting itself, and, therefore, the cactus developed prickles.

In confirmation of that theory Burbank found, as a result of painstaking investigations, that certain types of cactus plant which grew in inaccessible localities, such as narrow crevices in rocky formation, had not developed prickles, because they had no need of such a means of defence.

From that discovery Burbank started on his experimental work. His idea was to cross-fertilize the spineless and thorny varieties of cactus so as to develop a plant with the luxuriant growth of the prickly pear but without its thorns. Up to a certain point, he succeeded, for he produced an edible cactus which, under intense cultivation and on a small area, gave a fodder yield equal to three hundred tons to the acre.

Burbank was, naturally, very much pleased with this result; his hopes ran high, but he was doomed to a bitter disappointment. When cuttings from his spineless cactus plant were set out in dry localities and exposed to all the vicissitudes of the ordinary prickly pear, the cherished spineless cactus reverted to its old habit of growing prickles. As the result of these and many other experiments, Burbank came to the conclusion that a certain degree of conscious intelligence existed in all forms of life, and that no hard and fast line could be drawn between the highest and the lowest types in this respect.

The Origin of Species

This may seem to many people a very startling statement, but if Burbank was mistaken in his conclusions, all the theories of present-day evolutionists stand on a very unstable foundation.

The widely accepted theory of the origin of species, for instance, is based upon what is called "The law of conformity to environment." Now, if it be true that the determining factor concerning the survival or extermination of various forms of life in past crises in the history of this planet was the question of the capacity of any form of life to adapt itself to new conditions, that power of adaptability surely implies something more than a blind obedience to fixed instincts. The very fact of any organism changing its habits in order to survive in a new environment seems to point to the conclusion that conscious intelligence had something to do with the matter.

The Testimony of the Naturalist

Turning from the story of the vegetable world to the domain of the naturalist, we find countless illustrations of various types of animal and insect life adopting such devices as "protective coloring" to shield them from the attacks of their natural enemies. All these illustrations seem to indicate that Burbank's theory that life and consciousness have always been inextricably combined has, at any rate, an air of probability about it.

Is Man a Reasoning Creature?

Just as it is very hard in the face of the facts of science, to prove that what we call the lower forms of life have no intelligent consciousness, so it is equally hard to prove that the actions of man, "the heir of all the ages," are not still very largely instinctive. Again, we are confronted by facts which seem to run counter to the theory that man is a reasoning creature. For instance, if mankind in the mass, even in civilized countries, had been reasoning creatures, a world war, which resulted in the loss of ten million lives and accomplished nothing, would have been an impossibility. The absolute divorce between militarism and reason can be illustrated in countless ways, but the following two quotations from our own literature, which are as familiar as household words, will suffice:

Theirs not to make reply;
Theirs not to reason why.

What quarrel had these people? Busy as the Devil is, not the smallest. Their rulers had fallen out; that was all.

It is a curious and interesting psychological fact that the poet who celebrated the "Charge of the light brigade," and the philosopher whose moralizing is quoted above, both, consciously or unconsciously, accepted the idea of the utter unreasonableness of war. Doubtless the "Charge of the light brigade" was a classical instance of military discipline and martial heroism, but was it any more heroic than the charge of the Zulus at the Battle of Isandula, when native regiments, armed only with hunting spears, charged entrenchments guarded by machine guns, and were mowed down to the last man, ten thousand being killed in ten minutes?

Whether we turn to the annals of history or to the chronicles of present-day happenings, it is equally impossible to overlook the factor of "mob psychology" in human affairs. Whether the particular mob in question is arrayed in loin cloths, or in purple and fine linen does not seem to make much difference when reason is dethroned and primitive instincts get the upper hand.

This may seem a digression from the question as to whether cabbages are endowed with consciousness, but it serves to illustrate the point that, while instinct undoubtedly plays an important part in the affairs of the lower forms of life, as reason does amongst human beings, it is exceedingly difficult to demonstrate that either instinct or reason is the sole factor in either case.

A Very Homely Illustration

When we plant a seed in the ground, that seed contains the germs of both the root and leaf systems of the future plant. If we carefully examined every seed before planting, we could place it in such a position that the root shoot would go straight down and the leaf shoot straight up. In practice we never trouble to do anything of this kind, for we know that it does not matter. If the root shoot happens to be uppermost it will curve round until it points downwards, and if the leaf germ is underneath it will in like manner curve round until it becomes straight up. Without thinking anything about the matter, we confidently expect the seed to get over any initial disadvantage of its position in the soil, and our confidence is not misplaced.

The writer is not disposed to dogmatize on this subject, or to draw any hard and fast conclusions about the theory of the universality of consciousness in all living organisms. He finds it very difficult to believe that humanity in the mass has yet attained to an age of reason, because the facts of life and history do not seem to bear out that conclusion. On the other hand, he finds it just as difficult to reject the idea that some form of conscious intelligence does not play a very important part in organic life in all its manifestations. He, therefore, simply leaves his readers to think this matter out for themselves, after having done his best to supply them with something to think about.—World's News, Sydney, Australia.

The Test

By B. H. Doty

When adversity arises
And men's hearts are full of fear,
Then I always find there's solace,
For God's promises I hear:

How he told us if we'd follow
His commands, his will obey,
We should ne'er be overtaken
By the Devil's cunning way.

Now the hopes of men are shaken;
Some are falling by the way;
Don't forget your testimony;
Keep your birthright, come what may.

Soon the ones who now are leaving
God's own church will come to grief.
Wretched souls will cry for comfort,
But, alas! there's no relief

For the ones who've known God's teachings
And through lust have gone astray.
Why not stop, and look, and ponder,
Ere you get too far away.

God is waiting with his blessings,
Till his church shall humble be,
Then he'll send them without number,
And relieve anxiety.

Will you stand true, as he wants you,
To the cause you've learned to love?
Or will you turn and be a traitor
And his counsel disapprove?

"Choose this day," says God our Father,
Whom you wish to serve on earth.
For, 'tis here your life is spendied,
Showing God and man your worth.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

A Day in a Tug Boat

In the last of these "journeys" addressed to the readers of the HERALD the story was of things in Maine, in the latter part of January. On the 3d of February I was at the home of Brother Henry Eaton, at Stonington, where I had been for several days, writing, etc. Quite early that morning I was aroused by Sister Eaton calling to me that Captain Knowlton was about ready to sail for Rockland. I had been expecting that announcement for two or three days, for the captain had told me he would let me know when he was ordered to Rockland so I could make the trip with him. Hurriedly dressing I found Sister Eaton had arranged for a car to take me to the boat landing. And it was not long before I was climbing aboard the Eugenie Spofford, the tug boat of which Captain Knowlton is master. I was made to feel at home.

Captain George Knowlton is known to many HERALD readers. Some years ago he was under General Conference appointment and labored in the Eastern field, particularly in Maine. From his boyhood he has been a seaman, and master of a ship while a mere "kid." On leaving the field he took up again the activities of a seaman in the coast trade of the East.

The Eugenie Spofford is a trim tug boat owned and used by the Goss Corporation, who operate the Great Granite Quarry, of which I spoke, on Goss's Island. Besides her work for the Goss Corporation, the Spofford by contract docks the barges for certain lines operating along the coast, and it was for this contract that the trip was now being made to Rockland, to dock a coal barge which would be in the harbor by the time we reached there.

Leaving the wharf in Stonington about 8.20 a. m., we were in about two hours in Rockland harbor, nosing up to a huge barge, which under the skillful manipulation of Captain Knowlton and his crew was soon alongside the wharf, and the tug had cast off and tied up at another pier.

I shall not attempt to describe the trip over, for I've just about exhausted my vocabulary trying to tell of the beauties of the Maine coast. I enjoyed every minute of it. There is an advantage, too, seeing things from the pilot house. My chief interest in the trip lay in watching the operation of the boat and hearing Captain Knowlton talk. He is a master of his job, one who likes to talk about his work. His comments on the location of concealed rocks nearby, the run of currents, flow of the tide, drift due to winds, meaning of buoys, towers, lights, etc. All kept me interested—and perhaps I asked a few questions. I'm quite likely to, even if they display my ignorance. But Captain Knowlton was gracious enough not to laugh very much at the "land-lubber's" lack of knowledge of sea lore.

The tug tied up to the dock, I had the new experience of going to mess with the crew, not a large one, five or six, I think. And say, if that meal is a fair sample of the fare on that boat, the crew need not go hungry long, unless, as I had that morning, they missed a meal while on shore. Maybe it was my keen appetite, or maybe it was the cooking, more probably both, but I have enjoyed few meals more.

Lunch over, while Captain Knowlton went ashore to do some shopping, I saw a bit of the town and made a couple of small purchases, and we were back to the boat and soon under way for Stonington on the way to Rockland. Mr. Marcus, a merchant of Stonington and Rockland, was with us; but on the return trip the captain and I fell to talking church matters, and we kept at it. Knowing my interest in machinery generally, the captain asked if I wanted to try steering. I did, so he turned the wheel over to me. It was a steam steering boat and it was my first experience of that kind. Got along fairly well, though a time or two Brother Knowlton looked out and laughed at the wake I was making.

The usual course followed, we were duly at the wharf in Stonington again; but by the time we had docked the snow was falling rather steadily.

I went home with the captain that night, on Tea Hill, and spent a pleasant evening with his family, and discussing the points of two fine miniature vessels on which Brother Knowlton had worked many hours, one a full-rigged sailing ship, the other a detailed replica of the Eugenie Spofford.

The next morning was a real wintry one. Through the night a storm had raged, and when Brother Knowlton took me to the wharf, the snow lay deep on the ground, with more of it coming. Not a good prospect for the trip to Rockland on the Governor Bodwell. The wind being from the north, most of the trip to Rockland was made running in the trough of the sea and rolling over the crest of the waves. Rough? Some! But only an hour or so late the stanch steamer landed us safely at Rockland. There I was met by Brother Pearl Billings, formerly of Little Deer Isle, and by him taken to his home for lunch. Brother Pearl, a ship owner and builder, follows the sea in the spring, summer, and fall months, but ties his vessel up during the winter.

Brother Billings told me the names of his children as he introduced them, but I've failed to remember them. But of this I am sure, he has several fine sons and daughters, and I enjoyed my brief sojourn with them. Upon Brother Pearl has fallen the task of keeping the branch work going in Rockland. May he and they be blessed.

Leaving Rockland about 1 p. m. with a change at Portland, I was in Boston about 9 p. m., where I was met by Brother Traver and taken to his home.

Over Sunday was enjoyed with the Boston Saints. I started west on Monday, the 7th, stopping a day at Worcester, and one or two in New York, with a short trip to Philadelphia. I had expected to go to Washington, but a telegram received at Boston indicated the wisdom of going to Independence and home, so on the 12th I left New York on the Lackawanna, bound for home.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

The Skiatook Branch is progressing nicely. After unavoidable delays the work on the church building is going forward. Unity in the branch is better than ever before.

Our Department of Women is ever busy, working hard and grasping every opportunity to help finance the church building. They have been the backbone of the branch. The Temple Builders made waxed flower wreaths for Decoration Day, which brought fair returns.

Brother C. J. Hunt made us a visit as also did Brother Hubert Case. Brother Case hopes to return before the summer is over and hold services in our new church.

Our branch president, Evan P. Hopkins, and family are leaving. Our dinners were taken to the banks of Quapaw, where eight were baptized by Brother Hopkins. One confirmation was taken care of on the banks, the others at the church in the evening.

On Thursday night a large number of the branch motored to Collinsville and gave a surprise party to the Hopkins family at the home of Brother and Sister H. C. Hill.

Brother Haskins who has been carpenter, plumber, electrician, cement worker, and cabinet maker, is still on the job. Beside holding his position on an oil lease, he has found time to put in a good part of every day for the past year and a half on the church building; this has been very much appreciated by the branch, as it has saved us hundreds of dollars in labor.

We are looking forward to a splendid reunion at Tulsa in August.

Testifies of Interest in the Church

MAGAZINE, ARKANSAS, June 21.—The HERALD seems to be growing steadily better. I especially enjoy the spiritual food in the special articles written by capable men, the "Little journeys with the editor," and the experiences related by other Saints in their letters.

The HERALD is all I have to keep me in touch with the church, as with the exception of two short visits to Independence, I have been isolated for over sixteen years. But I was brought up in the church and hope and expect to stay with it, even should it be my lot to remain isolated the remainder of my life. The Lord sends his Spirit to aid, guide, and teach the isolated ones, as well as those more fortunately situated, that we will not lose hold of the rod of iron if we have faith.

This is a wonderful period in which to live. Such a variety of events are following each other so rapidly that it can not help but arouse the interest, wonder, and awe of anyone who thinks. May all the honest-hearted be aroused before it is too late.

ALTA VEDDER BLEND.

The Work in Wisconsin

During the month of May the writer held meetings in Sparta, Wyeville, and Wisconsin Rapids.

At Sparta I was called to officiate at the marriage of Brother Samuel Brookman and Sister Lecta Shaw, fine young people who are a credit to the church. Brother Brookman is a son of Delia Brookman, a relative of Brother Silas P. and Bishop Israel Rogers, of Illinois, therefore of faithful Latter Day Saint heritage. Widowed some years ago by the passing away of her faithful companion, Sister Brookman has reared up a large family of boys and girls to maturity. They are strong in the belief and faith of the church. Some of them are well-known business men and farmers and are honored far and wide because of their honesty and integrity of character. Surely the children as well as friends and the church can rise up and call her blessed of the Lord, a mother in Israel indeed.

At Wyeville we had good attendance of the few Saints left there, and also of nonmembers, and I am hopeful that conditions may improve there in the future, that the work may prosper.

After leaving there I was shocked to hear of the death of Sister Minnie Fuller, wife of Brother Al. Fuller, old-time Latter Day Saints. Surely she has passed away to the reward of the faithful. How many times the writer as well as others has enjoyed the hospitality of this fine old couple! May the Lord comfort the brother and his loved ones in their sorrow.

Near here, at Tomah, live Brother and Sister J. H. Thompson, more than eighty years old, strong in the faith, and their son, Orville Thompson, and companion, who always have the latchstring out for the missionary. Both families are steadfast in keeping the Sunday school at Wyeville, ten miles away.

We are glad to know of the removal of Brother Tay Pratt and wife back to Wyeville, as their attendance and interest at Sunday school will be a benefit to themselves as well as others.

We were also very glad to see at our services here the smiling faces of Brother and Sister James Pratt, of Madison, and rejoiced to learn of the prospect of their living here during the summer months. We know the Saints and friends will be glad for their help and presence among them.

At Wisconsin Rapids I was called on June 1 to officiate at the marriage of Sister Thelma Lowe and Mr. Curtis Turner. Mr. Turner is an excellent young man of respected and well-known parents, brought up on a farm some miles from town. Sister Lowe is a daughter of Brother and Sister Leon Lowe, living near Wisconsin Rapids, who with their son, Clyde Lowe and wife, and Brother George Gibson and wife (who was formerly Sister Peoples, of Eastern Iowa District), moved to Wisconsin several years ago.

Elder Leonard Houghton and the writer have held meetings in the vicinity several times in the last few years, a number having been baptized there are yet some much interested who will obey the gospel.

The Saints there are zealous in the faith and appreciate the visits and work of missionaries among them, as do the Saints and friends in other parts of the district.

Some remarkable cases of healing and blessing have occurred lately. Brother and Sister Jerome are thankful because of the recovery of their son, Robert, also the wife of Ernest Jerome; both seem on the road to complete recovery, and the loved ones of each give the honor and glory to the Lord.

The writer has enjoyed more of the endowment of God's Spirit since last General Conference than ever before, in preaching, visiting, and building up the work. In doing this there is peace and joy in the work of the Master.

We hope to meet many of the Saints and workers during our reunion, July 1 to 10, at Chetek, Wisconsin. And surely we expect a spiritual feast with such helpers as Apostle D. T. Williams, Patriarch W. A. McDowell, Elder L. G. Holloway, and others with us.

LESTER O. WILDERMUTH.

SPARTA, WISCONSIN, June 11.

Dow City, Iowa

Mothers' Day was observed. Special musical numbers were given by the young senior choir. The sermon in the morning was by Brother Leonard Butterworth, and Brother Fred Baber, of Orion, Iowa, was the evening speaker; each sermon being very appropriate.

On the following Sunday Brother Ward Johnson, of Denison, Iowa, delivered an interesting and instructive sermon.

Announcement was made that Brother F. T. Mussell would be here Monday evening, May 23, and speak at the church. His talk was based on some of the good meetings that were held at the late General Conference. Some of us took the DAILY HERALD and kept posted on the proceedings, but to hear Brother Mussell tell in his interesting manner how he enjoyed it and that this was one of the most wonderful conferences that has ever been held, made it more impressive. He was still filled with the conference spirit, which enabled him to give us a clear vision of some of the meetings and the wonderful spirit which prevailed through the conference.

His coming here was a sort of farewell to Dow City before going to his new missionary field. His talk was very much enjoyed by all present.

The morning service of May 29 was dispensed with on account of all the churches' uniting for memorial service. Brother Virgil Butterworth, of Chicago, was the speaker at the evening hour. His text was, "Christ so loved the church that he gave his life for it." And he brought out clearly that Christ began his work very early in life for he had much to do. He impressed upon our memories that through service we develop a stronger personality.

Brother Virgil was called here by the death of his father, Brother Charles E. Butterworth, which occurred May 24. Brother Butterworth will be greatly missed, for he was always present at all meetings, church, Sunday school, and Religio, also occupying the pulpit frequently. Although he was past eighty years he was active in the service, defending the faith. It can well be said of him, He has finished his work; he has kept the faith, and has earned an abundant entrance into eternal life.

Sunday school has a fair attendance.

It has been suggested that the Religio hour be changed from Sunday to Friday evening with a view to having better attendance.

The Department of Women is busy in its line of work.

"As a Man Thinketh . . ."

By Ida Etzenhouser

Mrs. Green sat in the office of the Social Worker, discussing the illness of her daughter. "Helen's husband has spent over a thousand dollars for medical care for her," she said, "and no good has come of it. The last physician to whom he took Helen told him that there was nothing organically wrong with her, but that she was functionally ill.

"Things can not go on as they are," continued Mrs. Green. "Both John and I are worn out, and if there is nothing wrong with Helen, we would like to know about it and see that this foolishness stops."

"In what way is your daughter's illness manifested?" asked the Social Worker.

"Why, she faints almost every time her husband starts out anywhere! Apparently she will be reasonably well until she sees John put on his hat to go to work and then she swoons. If John stays home and soothes and pets her she rallies and hangs onto him as though she were a little child.

"What did the doctor mean when he said that Helen was organically all right but was functionally ill?" asked Mrs. Green.

"He means that the organs of her body are not diseased, but that they do not function properly because of some emotional disturbance," answered the Social Worker.

"The Bible states, 'As a man thinketh, so is he.' Modern psychologists agree with that statement, as they know that wrong thinking causes physical ills," continued the Social Worker. "There are many people who enjoy ill health because of the pampering that accompanies it. Usually they are the type who, because of wrong training in childhood, are not prepared to meet the issues of life squarely. They evade difficult situations by feigning illness, carrying over into adulthood the childish habit of which we have all been guilty, viz., having a terrible stomach ache when it was time to wash the dishes, or when we did not want to go to school. It was a wise mother who saw through our little scheme and nipped this bad mental habit in the bud.

"If Helen has been thoroughly examined by a reputable physician who diagnosed her case as a functional illness caused from wrong mental attitudes, the next step will be for us to take her to a psychiatrist for treatment," said the Social Worker. "We must remember that the Bible quotation, 'As a man thinketh, so is he,' has a wonderful healing value. In Helen's case we will hope that the bad mental habit will be substituted by a good mental habit of thinking along lines of health. In other words, she will 'put away childish things' and meet life's issues as an adult."

Mrs. Green gave the Social Worker a history of her daughter's mental habits. Helen was badly spoiled; a daughter of a widowed mother who determined that she should have her every wish granted if at all possible. From babyhood Helen knew that if she made enough fuss she could get anything from her mother. When very small she would scream and bump her head on the floor until the distracted mother would give in to her for fear Helen would hurt herself. When she got too old for that, she would be taken suddenly ill whenever she was faced with a disagreeable situation, and her mother would excuse her.

Helen reached young womanhood a disagreeable, pampered girl, who expected the whole program of the home to revolve around her as its center. Then she fell in love and later married. The young man whom she married was a devoted lover, but his business demanded a good deal of his attention. Helen became dissatisfied and unhappy, and developed the idea that John was more devoted to his business than he was to her.

One day Helen met with a slight accident and fainted. John was present and was so disturbed over the matter that he hovered over her, declaring his undying affection. This was the beginning of the fainting spells which at first occurred only at times when Helen would feel that John did not love her as he used to do; but now had become so frequent that she fainted whenever he would attempt to leave her. Her heart does not function properly whenever she becomes emotionally disturbed.

Mrs. Green has agreed to take Helen to a psychiatrist for treatment. We do not know what the result will be, but we are hoping for the best. Helen is young, only twenty-five, yet a mental habit of twenty-five years standing is not easily broken. It will be an uphill struggle, and in Helen's case the healing process will have to be from within. All the psychiatrist can do will be stimulate right thinking for, 'As a man thinketh, so is he.'

Spokane Receives Missionaries

When we received our appointment to the Spokane District, we were well pleased with the new field and felt sure we would be blessed in our labor there. At once we began preparation for our trip north. First, we had to repair the little Ford (christened the "Mountain Goat" by Brother F. Henry Edwards) and get it ready for the long, hard trip. The Mountain Goat is a dependable car, for we came all the way from Nebraska to California two years ago in it, and like a good Latter Day Saint, it did its duty well and faithfully.

We had a splendid two years in Southern California District and made many friends there, both in and out of the church. We were loath to leave these splendid people, for they were very kind and good to us. Real Saints they are, everyone of them, and may God bless them and keep them!

At last we bade them farewell and made our first stop at Tulare, at the home of Brother and Sister Jack Damron. While there we made two trips to the Indian painted rocks. One group is on the Tule River and the Great Lizard Rock on Corrizo Plains. Some day we will tell you more about these wonderful paintings. Another place we visited was the Sequoia National Park, and had lunch beside "General Sherman," the largest tree in the world. Scientists say this was a good-sized tree when Moses was born. While we were eating our lunch a deer walked out of the timber and ate the potato chips given it by Sister Damron and Sister Burton. All too soon I found myself under the wheel of Brother Damron's Nash and headed down the mountain for home. Those wonderful mountains, with their rocks and trees and cold, clear streams of pure water speak always of the love, goodness, and mighty majesty of God! To me they have always been an ideal, strong and rugged, capped with the white snows of purity always beckoning mankind on to a higher and purer life. From my boyhood I have looked on them as God's masterpieces.

While at Brother Damron's I baptized Brother Collis Renand and wife, two splendid young people. They are farmers and some day will add their part to the redemption of Zion. He did some more work on the Mountain Goat, putting on the finishing touches. The Saints of Tulare and Fresno were very kind to us, and before we could account for the flight of time we had to say good-bye and continue our way north. The hard part of missionary work is parting with friends.

We had a wonderful trip, resting a day at Bear Valley and a half day at Oakland. Space will not permit a description of all the wonderful sights along the way, but we will mention a few. Mount Shasta, covered with perpetual snow, stands as a giant sentinel guarding California, and near her is her sister, Mount Lassen, the smoke and fires of her volcano ready to burst forth at any time in support if needs be. Then a long steady climb up the Siskiyou Mountains gave a splendid test of the work done by "Brother Huff" on the Mountain Goat, which proved the work well done.

Dropping down the Siskiyou soon brought us to the Rogue River near Grant's Pass, Oregon, where we camped for the night. Here we saw our first salmon. We do not want to tell a fish story, and so will say there were salmon and salmon and salmon. From there we went on to Portland and up the Columbia River Highway, which is beautiful and grand almost beyond description. The river is on the left, and on the right the well-timbered mountains and beautiful waterfalls added to the grandeur of the scene. Sometimes we passed groups of Indians camped along the river. This lent color to the picture and reminded us that the children of Laman have their part in Zion and her redemption.

At last, on the forenoon of the seventh day, we arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Oscar Case, Spokane, Washington, tired but happy. These good people made us welcome. Sister Case prepared an excellent lunch for us, and Brother Case looked us square in the eyes and said, "You folks are welcome in our district, and we are mighty glad you have come."

We rested that afternoon and the next morning began hunting a location. In our search we were successful and are permanently located at 111 North Magnolia Street, Spokane. Any of our friends or church officers passing this way are always welcome.

Spokane has a fine branch of live Saints and is well located in the center of the district. Brother Oscar Case is branch president and also district president. He is a good, efficient officer and has the support of a splendid group of young people. They have a nice church home, and last Sunday night it was well filled with interested listeners. Brother Reuben Porter is superintendent of the Sunday school and a fine young man with bright prospects. Under his management the Sunday school is doing good work.

We met Brother and Sister Crum. He is a brother of Fred and Damon Crum, of Los Angeles, and at once they seemed like old friends and home folks. Last week we visited the Saints of the Valley Branch at Vay, Idaho. We have a nice group of Saints there who are doing all they can for the advancement of the work.

I desire to mention in particular one brother living in Spokane, Brother Leach. He at one time was a great hunter and fisherman of the north woods and for many years ran logging camps there. While there he first heard the gospel and obeyed. Several years ago he had the misfortune to lose his eyesight, and for some eight years has been totally blind. His hair is as white as it will ever be, and he is old. Many men would sit by and do nothing were they in his condition, but not so with Brother Leach. While his natural eyes are darkened, within his soul the everlasting fire and blessed light of the gospel is constantly burning, and fires his soul to active work all the time. He gets some child to lead him, and he goes from house to house, giving out tracts and telling the story of the Restoration day after day. He has given out thousands of tracts in this city and has brought many people into the kingdom as a result. This is a splendid example of what can be done if we only trust in God and move out in spite of misfortune.

Last Monday evening some seventy-five of the Saints gave us a surprise party and a rousing welcome to the district. We noticed as each one came in he had "queer bundles" well wrapped in paper. These were carried to the kitchen. Song were sung, and Brother Case made a very fitting speech of welcome. This was responded to by the missionaries. Games were played and refreshments served, and after a splendid social evening our friends departed, but not the "queer bundles." Sister Burton and I unwrapped them, and they proved to be all kinds of groceries, some seventy articles, and among them a nice ham and many good things. After they were all unwrapped and placed around the room, Sister Burton remarked that our kitchen resembled a Piggly Wiggly store.

Yes, we like our district, and we have a wonderful group of good Latter Day Saints who are square behind the church and her program.

"THE BURTONS."

A Topical Talk

General Conference

Two months ago the world's conference of this church was in session, and at times thousands of happy, hopeful, friendly members greeted each other, before and after meetings in the new, unfinished Auditorium basement. They joined in congregational singing with spiritual foresight, visioning the building as it will be when fully completed and the gatherings much larger, representing nations and people soon to hear and obey the angel's message. In my travels and association with the Saints I hear these statements: "The conference was an educational one; a spiritual feast of great worth to the church." Of the business sessions a member said: "There will always be discussions, but the quality should be better year by year."

Faith in the Church

It is true that a man's interest in a business is determined by what he puts into it, labor or capital or both. It is also true that as a church our only earthly asset is the confidence of the Saints expressed in talents used. Have we carefully considered that by and by we are to be in the presence of the Lord and the writers of our sacred books? Can we say to the Master and the prophets, "Your words comforted us—we obeyed them." Or will we say, "We did not heed your instructions—we turned you down." The following lines by a poet may encourage a faltering soul:

"For right is right since God is God,
And right—the day will win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

Dear fellow laborer, have you filed your inventory, paid your tithing, or made provision for payments by a will or otherwise?

"Is your name written there,
On a page white and fair," (on the Bishop's book?)

Unity and Preaching

It is reported of Ralph Parlette, the noted humorist, that he said he had delivered his famous lecture, "Are you shaking up, or shaking down?" so many times that he can now set his mouth going, and go off and leave it.

Have our church representatives, general and local, come to that blessed unity of understanding of the faith and program of the church, so well that all can, in substance, speak the same thing, if not now, I trust we are making splendid progress towards it.

In certain localities where a bishop had preached and a second visit was announced, a few members were reported to have said, "I am not going to hear him, for he will, of course, say something about church finances, and we have heard enough about that."

Could those members have an "at home feeling" in any series of sermons by a member of the ministerial force to-day? Perhaps the difficulty in the church now is not a lack in understanding of the temporal law, but an unwillingness to live in accordance with the knowledge we have of it.

Appreciating Others

In a certain place in Arkansas I preached with fairly good liberty. After the closing sermon a man in a farewell conversation said, "Your sermons have been very interesting, but have you ever heard Elder J. T. Riley? He is a great talker." After preaching a number of times in a branch in Oklahoma, and as I thought, with some success, a brother comforted me, saying: "The people gave you good attention. Brother Hubert Case held a series of meetings here. You should have heard him." In a Southern State I endeavored to interest a fine group of young people in a sermon talk and thought I had fair success. At the close an observing mother remarked: "Elder H. E. Winegar can certainly hold the interest of young people; he is their favorite preacher."

May continued and unlimited success crown their efforts; also the labors of all God's servants.

Missionary Work

Since conference the most of my labors have been in Oklahoma. It is a large field, many branches and thousands of members. I have learned to appreciate their faith and continued interest in the Master's cause. At one of the branches I spoke of the need of money to complete the Auditorium Building. A young man said, "I was on the deep, blue sea when subscriptions were taken a few years ago, but will help now." He subscribed two hundred dollars. I believe hundreds who have united with the church of recent years, would, if given an opportunity subscribe liberally to that fund.

Elder F. E. Dillon, president of the Central Oklahoma District, joined me with his auto, and we spent about two weeks together, visiting, preaching, and encouraging the Saints. He is thoughtful for all lines of church work. We held a meeting with the Iowa Indians near Perkins, Oklahoma, being assisted by Brother and Sister C. W. Gray. Although those Lamanites feel that they have been neglected, they expressed strong faith in the gospel. Four were administered to, one being a nonmember.

Reunion season is here, and I have been assigned to five: Hearne, Bandera, in Texas; Eagle City, Oklahoma; Winfield, Kansas; and Joplin, Missouri. I sincerely hope the blessed Spirit that brings peace, strengthens the members, adds precious souls to the church, and helps the cause financially, will be manifest in every gathering held in all districts this year.

Nauvoo Conference at Rock Creek Branch

The Nauvoo district conference was held at Rock Creek Branch, near Adrian, Illinois. It was opened with a prayer service, the district president and Elder D. Sorden in charge. A good spirit prevailed; some fine testimonies were borne, and the response to the theme suggested, "What can I do to make this work more successful?" was good.

The preaching was by Apostle J. F. Garver and Elder D. Sorden, pastor of Burlington Branch. Saturday morning Brother Sorden's theme was, "The need of letting our light shine." The earnestness with which he presented his message and the thoughts expressed were well received.

Apostle J. F. Garver preached three soul-stirring sermons, placing before us the need of the hour and the part we should play in the great work intrusted to us. His messages were plain and to the point; he expressed his confidence in Zion being established, and his confidence in the Saints. "We feel the expression of his ideals and ambitions make us more keenly sense the responsibilities we have as servants of God, members of his church. There is only one Brother Garver, we have learned, and we thank God for him; he is one whose presence warms our hearts, whose message insures us progress.

The attendance at the conference was very good, considering the heavy rain we had on Saturday night. Visiting Saints were given a royal welcome by the Saints of Rock Creek Branch, and a basket lunch was served Sunday on the church lawn.

At the afternoon service Sunday Brother Strange, of Montrose, was ordained to the office of elder under the hands of Brothers Garver and Layton; and Brother A. Ourth, of Nauvoo, was ordained a priest. We feel in these men we have two good workers.

The Saints of the district are now looking forward to the reunion to be held August 19 to 28, at Nauvoo, Illinois.

Southern Wisconsin District Conference

This district held its conference at Soldiers Grove the 18th and 19th. Nearly every branch in the district was represented. They have a neat little church where the Saints from the hills and valleys far and near come to worship God. A large representation was present on Friday evening. The time on this first night was spent in games, recreation, singing, and getting acquainted. Even the gray-haired had not forgotten the gladness of their youth, and participated in the games with the young people.

On Saturday at 9 a. m. a prayer service was held in charge of District President E. J. Lenox and Brother L. G. Holloway. The time of this service was mostly given to prayer, since only thirty minutes were allotted for the meeting. At 9.30 the Sunday school session began. There was a talk on "What the church expects of the Sunday school, and the goals the officers and teachers should hold before them," by Leda Colbert. Brother Lenox spoke concerning trained officers and teachers and along practical lines. Very good interest was shown, and we feel in the coming year a greater good will be accomplished.

Business session began at 10.45, the district president presiding, assisted by his associate, Brother G. E. Noble. Brother Lenox gave a short address, in regard to better educational conferences instead of so much legislation and having some special objective in mind. The district treasurer's report showed receipts as follows: from November 1, 1926, to June 1, 1927, tithing, $1,144.64; endowment fund, $42.70; offering, $152.83; Auditorium funds, $274.30; oblation, $103.65; college offering, $34.79; church bonds, $22.50; total receipts, $1,808.26. Very good reports were had from departmental heads; also district president and missionary. A good spirit characterized the business meeting, and the business was expedited, getting through with all of it before noon.

At 2.30 departmental meetings were held. Sister Effie Hield, superintendent of the Department of Women, talked to the women on the mission of the department. The men had talks from Brother Lenox on "Consecrated ministry"; Brother Holloway, "Responsibility of priesthood"; Brother McDowell, "Representing Christ." Sister Leda Colbert, district superintendent of Sunday schools, had charge of the children, entertaining them with stories and games.

At 8 in the evening a wonderful sermon was enjoyed from Patriarch W. A. McDowell, who used for the foundation of his sermon Doctrine and Covenants 77, latter part of the first verse: "If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and require of you."

Sunday morning prayer service was held at 9.30, Brother McDowell and Brother Holloway in charge. A beautiful spirit was enjoyed at the prayer service. The Saints were prompt in testimony. A good record was made: in forty-five minutes there were four prayers, seven songs, and fifty testimonies. Before the close of the service, Brother McDowell in his fatherly way spoke words of commendation and exhortation, which were edifying. Also words of the Lord were spoken through him to a dear sister who needed comfort.

At the same hour Brother Lenox had charge of junior worship in the basement. He reported some wonderful testimonies borne by the children, and their desire to work for the Lord showed that they had been taught the gospel and the joy of service.

At eleven o'clock preaching was by Brother McDowell on "Zionic conditions." At this hour the primary department was holding Sunday school in the basement in charge of District Superintendent Leda Colbert and Brother Wesley Davenport, superintendent of the Soldiers Grove Sunday school. The collection taken at the morning service amounted to thirty-eight dollars, which paid the expense of the conference and added some to the district treasury.

A picnic dinner was held in the basement. The Soldier Grove Saints surely know how to feed the outer man.

Elder Holloway was the speaker in the afternoon. The afternoon is a hard time for a speaker to hold the interest of his congregation, but Brother Holloway enjoyed good liberty, and his sermon was so interesting that it kept everyone with his eyes and ears wide open.

Junior church was conducted simultaneously, presided over by Sister Hield.

At 3.30 we gathered at the water's edge, where Viola E. Marsh, of Rochester, Minnesota, was laid in the watery grave to arise in newness of life. She was baptized by Brother Arthur Davenport. We are glad to see the young people come out from the world and have their lives transformed. This sister is a promising girl; she is entering nurses' training at Rochester.

The evening hour found Brother Lenox as speaker, and we are sure his sermon, along with the rest, was one that will lead people Zionward if obedience thereto is observed.

From this conference the Saints returned to their homes, I am sure, with greater zeal and determination to press onward in the work, feeling more the necessity of qualification and study, that all may be able to keep in pace with the program of the church and our faces Zionward.

News From British Columbia

It has been some time since I saw anything in the HERALD from this part of the world. I suppose it is because there is nothing of interest to tell; but thinking that is not a good policy to pursue, I feel inclined to write. We are still trying to keep the gospel before the people and ourselves alive in the latter-day work. It seems to be an uphill work, but still I think we are progressing a little.

We came here from Vancouver, British Columbia, about four years ago, just when the work was at low ebb on account of the sudden illness of Elder Henry Stade, who had been president of Chilliwack Branch for some time. It was fortunate we arrived in time to rekindle the dying embers, which burst into flame, and now, I believe, we are quite alive. Also help comes sometimes in visits from Brothers A. C. Martin, M. H. Cook, J. J. Cornish, and H. A. Sprague.

We have been meeting in what is known as the Orange Hall, Rosedale, for quite a while, and this has been fairly satisfactory until the last year, when it was converted into an athletic hall, and kept in a condition which was very discouraging. This goaded us to do something. We called a meeting and decided to build a church on a lot we had owned for some time. It is almost completed now, and we expect to move in about the second week of July. It is twenty by forty, with a ten-foot ceiling. It is a frame building on a cement foundation, lathed and plastered, a porch on the front, also a belfry. It is a neat little church.

Our branch has just suffered the loss of Elder Henry Stade, who passed away May 21, after a lingering illness of almost six years. Brother Stade was a staunch Saint and a good presiding elder, taking care of the work almost from its beginning in 1899. He was the first to be baptized in Western Canada, along with the writer and a number of others who accepted the work through the effort of Daniel Macgregor. The branch—the first in British Columbia—was organized by R. C. Evans. Brother Stade was ordained a priest November 7, 1900, by R. C. Evans, and an elder October 30, 1904, by G. T. Griffiths. He was elected president of the branch in September, 1903, and each year until stricken down April, 1921. In 1902 Brother Stade attended General Conference. On his return trip, he visited his brother in Mass City, Michigan, and talked gospel to him; and when the latter visited a branch in Chicago, at the first meeting he attended he asked for baptism. He is now an elder at Harrison, Ontario. Brother Stade also visited his father at Elwood, Ontario, presenting the work to him, but he did not obey, and in 1909 the son was called to his father's bedside. The doctors had given the sick man up, but he called for administration, got better, and lived for twelve years. Brother Stade was the means of bringing a number into the church. He has now passed over to his reward, leaving his wife and son, Walter, to mourn his departure. His funeral was largely attended, a number of Saints coming from Vancouver, New Westminster, and Everett, Washington. The funeral service was conducted at the home, by Elder James E. Johnston and the writer. Six of the priesthood acted as pallbearers.

We hope to continue in the faith, overcome all temptations, and win the crown.

ISAAC McMULLEN.

CHILLIWACK, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO.—Sunday, June 12, was a very busy day at this place. At 9.30, Sunday school convened with one hundred and forty-nine present. Among this number were Elder Ed. Wigget and wife and family; Brother and Sister Thomas Crabtree and family; Brother and Sister Richard Shopes and family; Brother and Sister William Culp and family; Brother and Sister Kindall Crabtree and family; Sister Margaret Shopes, and others of McDermott Branch; Elder F. May and wife and others, of Dayton, Ohio.

At 10.30 Brother May and Brother Wigget took the pulpit. Brother Wigget was in charge, and Brother May preached a wonderful sermon, taking for his lesson the first psalm. During the hour the house was filled to seating capacity. Two persons were administered to.

At twelve o'clock the ladies spread a most delectable dinner, which was enjoyed by about two hundred.

We gathered around the water's edge at one o'clock to see little Edith Culp, eight years old, take her covenant. Edith is the daughter of Brother and Sister Roy Culp. We feel glad to know the parents are raising their little ones so that when they come to the age of responsibility they will come into the church. Brother Mark S. Crabtree was God's servant in inducting the child into the kingdom.

Half an hour later found the congregation again in the church, and an entertaining and instructive program was presented in honor of Children's Day. Superintendent Luther Crabtree was in charge. The children did well in songs and recitations, and several musical numbers were given by Sister Trece Scalindes. Two small girls, of McDermott, gave solos, one on the violin, the other on the clarinet. These were much enjoyed. Brother and Sister O. E. Rexroad, of West Portsmouth, sang a hymn, Sister Rexroad picking the guitar.

It was estimated that two hundred and seventy were at the program; not only was the seating capacity used, but all standing spaces were filled and many were outside who could not get in.

The little sister baptized that afternoon was confirmed under the hands of Elder Wigget, Elder May, and Elder Pyles, the last named being spokesman. Two more Saints received administration.

One of the happiest events of this gathering happened as the result of our advertising in our daily paper concerning the meeting. Brother and Sister Smith, two of our isolated Saints, read the notice, and though they live near Stockdale, Ohio, found a way to partake of the good things of the day with us. They say they will come often. On this day many from Bear Creek, Lucasville, and Buck Rim were present. And all were grateful to Sisters Rosa Pollock and Verna Crabtree, who trained the children in their part of the day's blessings. We thank them for their effort; also all those who took part and all those who came.

Through the influence of this meeting came wonderful peace, encouragement, and more obedience. We hope by next year that we may be able to surpass this effort.

From a Refugee Camp in Louisiana

I am writing you a few lines while I am at the refugee camp, visiting my family. It grieves my heart when I hear preachers of other churches preaching, but do not have the opportunity of hearing the elders of our faith. I love the gospel. There are thousands of people here in camp led about by every wind of doctrine, without being taught how to live. I would be glad to see the gospel taught in this country. At present there is a family of good people interested in our belief, and I think my wife will accept the way of truth. I should like to hear from any of the Saints who care to write; particularly should I be glad to hear from Brother Riley. It has been some time since I heard from him. If he sees this, please write me.

We are flood sufferers, but I am working at Melville now. My family is in the refugee camp, for there is no place at Melville, and the water is still very high there. The town is ruined with sand. There is plenty of work, and wages are good at present.

I ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of my family. I pray for God's people and wish I could be with those of like faith. I intend to enter in on the stewardship plan and begin by paying my tenth. I have lost my crop and hogs and chickens, but God has helped me to get plenty of work, and for that I am thankful to him. He is merciful.

My family consists of my wife and four foster children. My wife was a Catholic, but she is interested in the gospel. I am doing my best to rear the children aright. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Kimball, of whom I wrote before, are at Opelousas at the refugee camp. They have nine children, from three to seventeen years.

MELVILLE, LOUISIANA, June 18. JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

Mallard, Iowa

Sister Hill and family, of Ayrshire, and niece, Miss Cook, of Missouri; Sister Will Moline, of Manson; and Brother and Sister Edwards and children, of Pomeroy, were visitors May 15. Brother Edwards was the morning speaker. He gave us an old-time gospel sermon which fit us very well. We heard one visitor not of the faith remark that she had heard many things she had never before heard.

On Wednesday evening, May 18, Brother Mussell and Brother and Sister Edwards were in attendance at prayer service, and we enjoyed their presence very much.

Sister Hill and family, of Ayrshire, and Brother and Sister Barrows, of Bradgate, were visitors May 22. Brother Barrows has accepted a position in the high school at Lamoni for next year. We are glad to hear of Brother Barrows' advancement, but sorry they will not visit us again.

Elder Robert Fish and wife drove to Deloit to preach the funeral sermon for Sister Streeter, of that place.

We were very much pleased with our district conference; the attendance was good in spite of rainy, cold weather. A fine spiritual time was enjoyed by all, and we were indeed thankful that so many were permitted to attend. From the Mallard daily paper we clip the following account:

"The conference held Friday evening, Saturday, and Sunday at the L. D. S. Church was a success from every standpoint.

"The local congregation was present throughout the exercises, and approximately one hundred out-of-town church members were entertained.

"Lamoni was represented by two speakers, Dow City had two delegates, Sioux City one, Missouri Valley one, Council Bluffs three, Denison five, Deloit five, Sac City four, Glidden five, Fort Dodge eleven, Pomeroy four, Des Moines one, Cherokee eleven, Ayrshire six, Whittemore six, and Albert City thirteen.

"The principal speakers were Elder C. J. Smith, of Sioux City; District President E. L. Bedwell, of Lamoni; Apostle

John Garver, Lamoni; F. T. Mussell, Des Moines; and M. K. Fry, of Missouri Valley.

"The next district conference will be held in October at Cherokee."

Brother M. K. Fry and Brother Charles Smith remained a week after conference and preached for us. We received a great amount of light on the stewardship plan, and feel we all got a great blessing by their being with us.

Tuesday, May 31, we had a surprise in honor of Brothers Smith and Fry. The evening was spent in singing and playing games, followed by light refreshments.

June 5 was marked by a nice sacramental service. Brother Peterson and Brother Pearson with their families were visitors from Albert City.

Sister Robert Fish and Sister William Trong attended the institute at Lamoni.

Brother and Sister Batt, of Algona, were glad to worship with us June 12. They are isolated members and only permitted to attend services once in a while. We trust it will be so they can move close to us where they can worship with us.

We are encouraged to move forward in the work, and work while it is day, for the night will come when no man can work.

Far West Stake

Cameron Branch

During the last two months the activities in Cameron have been progressing nicely. The junior church and Sunday school departments have given several special day programs which have increased attendance and have been very beneficial to the children as well as to the older people.

On Mothers' Day the juniors met in the basement for their regular junior church service. When the choir marched to their places the juniors followed, marched down the aisle until they found their mothers, and then sat by them. The older junior girls had prepared a white flower for each person in the audience. These were put on the collection plates with some pins, and were passed to the people. This was a very impressive little service for the children to perform, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed it. A few special numbers were given by the children, after which Brother John Blackmore preached. When the sermon was completed, the children marched to the front of the church and sang a tribute to mother.

The children also participated in a Children's Day program. Five children were baptized in the morning. In the evening seats were reserved for all the children in the front of the church. The children who were baptized were confirmed. After the confirmation a beautiful program was given by the children.

Our basement is filled to overflowing every Sunday morning at the Sunday school and junior church hours, and we feel that Sister Blackmore and her helpers are doing a wonderful work.

Another little service of last month was a program given by the seven young people in our branch who graduated from the Cameron high school. Attired in their caps and gowns, they sat on the platform and gave a fine program. Brother Blackmore and Brother Frank Hinderks gave inspiring talks. Such services as these encourage the young people to finish school and fill them with a desire to enter college in order that they may be better prepared for service in the church.

Brother Blackmore delivered the baccalaureate sermon for Cameron high school this year. He gave to the crowd a forceful lecture which was carefully listened to and much enjoyed.

Patriarch Samuel Twombly conducted a week's meetings at Cameron the last week in May. His sermons were splendid, and all who heard them felt repaid for having attended.

Cameron sent five people to the Graceland Institute. We desire to send more next year, for every branch needs trained and prepared workers in the great task of teaching children, as well as in other branches of the work.

Kingston Branch

Our sacramental service May 2 was largely attended. Several from a distance were able to be out.

Brother Guy Hawley and wife, Sister Alma Hawley and mother, Sister Eppard and family, Sister Gertie Bratcher and family, and Sister Mabel Ford all partook of the sacred emblems with us on this day.

We were fortunate in having Elder R. D. Weaver for our evening speaker. All enjoyed the good sermon.

Brothers Samuel Simmons and Ben Constance were with us May 15. A nice collection was taken on this day in behalf of the Trenton church fund.

The evening services were dispensed with in order to attend the baccalaureate sermon at the Federation Church.

Brother Earl Craven and family passed through a siege of scarlet fever in April. Elder Charles Craven at the same time was suffering severely from an attack of the shingles.

Those attending the young people's convention at Stewartsville May 22 were Sister Charles Wood, Ernest Wood, Raymond Wood, Verla Legg, Ethel Legg, Ruby Nelson, and Josephine Eppard. All reported a good convention.

Brother Fred Cook was the morning speaker May 22. He gave another one of his splendid talks.

Sister Sarah Wommack and grandson, Densil Legg, are visiting in Kansas City at this time.

We enjoyed a fine prayer service Wednesday evening, May 25. Elder Charles Craven and son Earl presided. A goodly number were present.

Bedison Branch

On Sunday, May 1, our branch was quite well represented at our monthly sacramental service, which was in charge of Elders Ras Lorensen, Alec Jensen, and E. S. Fannon.

On May 8 Edward Jensen was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour.

May 15 Elder W. B. Torrance from Guilford Branch motored up to visit in the old home branch which was the cradle of his religious life, and while here occupied the eleven o'clock hour on the subject of "Life."

Elder O. W. Okerlind came through here on his way to Torquay, Saskatchewan, Canada, his mission field. He gave us a good sermon at the home of Brother and Sister E. S. Fannon. He reports that the snow is not all gone yet.

On the 29th Elder Alec Jensen was the speaker, subject Acts 3, bringing out clearly Peter's exhortation to faith in the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Oakdale Branch

Sunday evening, May 15, we had Brother B. J. Constance and Brother Samuel Simmons, of Cameron, with us. Brother Simmons preached a good sermon that evening, telling us more about the conference.

Only a few got to attend the young people's convention at Stewartsville May 22. The rain that morning spoiled the roads.

Miss Ava Quitmeyer returned from her school in northern Iowa May 22.

Sunday, May 29, we had for visitors Brother and Sister Schrivner, Brother and Sister Frank Murfey, and his mother and sister, Brother Ed Bergoon and daughter Edith, and Miss Lua Murrah and Russell Schoff, all of Kansas City, Kansas. They gave several musical numbers, which were much appreciated. While here they were guests of Brother and Sister Herman Diem, Brother and Sister Richard Schoff, and Brother Guy Hawley and wife.

Brother J. W. Peterson, of Independence, preached Sunday morning and evening, and Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings. His sermons were interesting and gave us many new thoughts and ideas. He went to Trenton Saturday morning to preach there June 5.

June 2 Brother Homer Snider and Sister Ava Quitmeyer were united in marriage by Elder R. S. Salyards, at his home in Independence. Their home will be on a farm near the Oakdale Church. We wish them happiness in their life together, and are sure peace and joy will prevail in their home, as its foundation will be the true love of God springing up in their hearts, and its development will be based upon the teachings of the church.

J. C. Harrington and wife drove to Lamoni and back June 5. Their daughter Margaret, who has been attending Graceland this year, came home with them.

Sister Grace Kearnes and children, of Council Bluffs, and her mother, Sister Harrington, of Tabor, Iowa, are visiting at the home of J. C. Harrington and family.

Charles Vernon has returned from Lamoni, where he has been a Graceland student the past year.

By action of their late district conference the Saints of the northeastern Kansas territory are planning to reunion with the Far West Stake at Stewartsville, Missouri, this year. This reunion convenes August 18 to 29 inclusive. More data on this will be furnished later.

Missionary Activities

A letter from Elder J. Charles May speaks very favorably of the work in the immediate vicinity of Richmond. A number of people were baptized recently, and prospects for future growth of the Richmond Branch are bright.

Elder J. W. Peterson has been busily-engaged at Stewartsville and Oakdale branches for the past several weeks, and has accomplished much good. He is now centering his activities at Kingston.

Patriarch Samuel Twombly held a successful week's meetings in the Cameron Branch during the latter part of May. Wherever Brother Twombly goes he is warmly welcomed on account of his experience in the work and his ability to revive those who may be disheartened.

Holden Stake Convention

The second annual young people's convention of the Holden Stake held here Sunday was, in point of attendance and excellence of lectures, very gratifying. The devotional services at 8 a. m. of both days were characterized by a fervor which indicated the young are not lacking in deep religious convictions. Six lectures were delivered by Brother F. M. McDowell, devoted to the need and value of purity of thought, clean living, the sanctity of the home, and the place of the church in leading and maintaining this high standard.

These lectures were inclusive enough to be of benefit to all ages. This was the first visit of Brother McDowell to Holden, but his humility, clearness, earnestness, and the deep spiritual significance of his message soon endeared him to his audiences. He deals directly with present-day problems and offers the philosophy of Christ, applied to our lives, as the remedy.

Bishop J. A. Koehler delivered two lectures on "The social philosophy of Christ." These dealt primarily with the problems arising from our social relations, and offered Christian stewardship as the solution.

Mrs. J. A. Koehler and Mrs. D. J. Krahl conducted exercises for the children. Amos E. Allen, church auditor and former Holden boy, had charge of junior church work. E. A. Curtis was in charge of the recreational activities.

At 1.30 Saturday afternoon an auto trip was made to the Stewardship farm at Kingsville. A portion of the afternoon was spent in supervised vigorous recreational activities consisting of volley ball, indoor base ball, etc.

At 4 p. m. Bishop J. A. Koehler delivered a spicy lecture on "Christian stewardship." At 5.30 a wiener roast concluded a pleasant and profitable afternoon. This gathering was held on the beautiful grassy lawn of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Beebe. At 6 p. m. a tired but happy bunch returned to Holden where, after a refreshing ride and a season of relaxation they entered into a spirited song service at 7.30, led by Miss Louise Haas, of Lees Summit, Miss Ella Marie Haas at the piano. A juvenile orchestra from the Lexington church, led by Ivan Beebe, contributed several numbers during the convention.

Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Home auditorium the Holden Dramatic Club presented a comedy to an audience which taxed its capacity. Under the supervision of Mrs. Edith Carr and Carrie, six meals were served the visitors in the rest room.

The local reunion committee are getting everything in readiness for the coming reunion which will be held on the Home Grounds, Holden, Missouri, July 22-31. The following workers will be present: Apostle F. H. Edwards, Mrs. D. J. Krahl, Bishop and Mrs. J. A. Koehler, Elder and Mrs. J. B. Blackmore, Elder H. V. Minton, Evangelist H. O. Smith, and Elder R. S. Salyards. Tents and cots may be secured of C. F. Scarcliff, Holden, Missouri. Meals will be served on the grounds at small cost.

The dramatic club of the Holden church will give a three-act comedy in the city hall at Knobnoster Thursday, June 30. Four were baptized on Children's Day by Elder Clyde F. Baker. Sister C. F. Scarcliff is making an extended visit to her children at Parsons and Syracuse, Kansas, and other relatives at Denver, Colorado.

Activities in road circles give promise of two all-weather highways through Holden in the near future. The Ozark Short Line from "Lakes to Gulf" and Number 58, from Pleasant Hill to Number 50, east of Centerview.

Brother Roscoe F. Moorman, conductor on the Missouri Pacific out of Sedalia, Missouri, in a recent railroad examination at Saint Louis was given 570 questions and answered each one correctly. The examination lasted two and one half hours.

Miss Lucille Burroughs, who teaches at Schell City, Missouri, is at home for the summer vacation.

Miss Bernice Hampton was called to Sedalia, Missouri, Thursday to furnish some musical numbers at a celebration given by the employees of the Missouri Pacific.

Marshall

The beauty and verdure of nature at this season causes our hearts to rise in grateful devotion to God for the multitude of his mercies. The favorable spring weather gives promise of a bountiful crop of fruit, vegetables, and grain.

The Stake Bishopric worshiped with us at the sacramental service recently. Brother C. F. Scarcliff also visited us and gave us a good sermon at the eleven o'clock hour.

Sunday, May 1, was a red letter day in our branch. The attendance at both services was very encouraging. Quite a number of Saints from a distance were with us.

Brother and Sister House and son Harold, of Houstonia, were with us. Brother and Sister Hagg, of Marion, Kansas; Brother and Sister Wright and family, of Nelson; and Brother and Sister F. N. Danielson and children, of Boonville, Missouri, attended the Sunday services. Brother House spoke at night.

Brother Ralph Ridge and Miss Madge Day were married on Monday, May 16, at the home of the groom.

Brother McCormick, pastor of our branch, enjoyed a much-needed rest with his family in Marshall. He left Monday on a business trip for Nevada, Missouri.

Sister Lillian McDoughney and son Junior attended the sacramental service Sunday. Although she lives quite a distance, she makes an effort to be home on the first Sunday in each month.

Brother Cecil Walton and family, of Coffeyville, Kansas, have decided to locate here, for the summer at least. We certainly welcome them in our midst. The young ladies and young men of the Religio have been conducting a contest for several weeks. The young men being the victors, were entertained by the young ladies at a banquet on Thursday, the 17th. The tables were beautifully decorated with pink and white flowers and tiny pink baskets of mints. The banquet was served in the lower auditorium of the church, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Needless to say, the men were highly pleased with the entertainment.

Brother McCormick's wife and two smaller boys started to Jefferson City Sunday morning to fill an appointment. But several miles east of Columbia they found that very unsightly card, "Detour," and had gone only a short distance when their car skidded into a ditch. When they got out it was too late to reach their destination in time for the service. Returning by way of Booneville, they visited with Brother and Sister Lloyd Danielson, who were more than glad to have them call as they have always lived in a branch, and there are none of our church people there.

Knobnoster

Brother and Sister S. F. Clark, of Tabor, Iowa, visited Brother and Sister W. J. Weston recently. Brother Clark gave us a very encouraging discourse while here. Sister Clark is Brother Weston's sister.

Brother and Sister Ammon Norman have been confined to their home for several weeks with an attack of the mumps.

Sister Hattie Enfield and family returned to their home in this place after a stay of several months in Kansas City.

Sister Florence Moorman Ward and husband have moved here from Independence.

The hearts of all the Saints were saddened at the tragic death of little Freddie Morgan, who was drowned in a coal pit on the farm of Brother J. F. Petre, Friday, May 20. Freddie was the youngest son of Brother and Sister Ed. Morgan, and was a lovable child. He was eleven years of age. The funeral was held in Knobnoster, Pastor J. T. Nutt in charge, sermon by W. S. Macrae. Interment was at Independence. The sympathy of the branch is with the bereaved family.

We are pleased to report a very successful series of meetings, commencing June 5 and closing the 19th. Elders E. A. Curtis and H. V. Minton were the speakers, and we were favored to have with us such able exponents of the truth. The first week's effort was directed principally to the Saints, and many beautiful truths were presented, among which we note the following: "The world needs thinkers; don't let the preacher do your thinking for you. We can not shift our responsibility; the gospel will help us solve all the problems of life; we should keep looking up and reaching up to God." The last week the principles of the gospel were discussed, and many helpful and inspiring thoughts were presented. The brethren endeared themselves to the Saints, and especially to the young people, with whom they joined in some recreational activities.

Several auto loads of Saints went to Holden and enjoyed the young people's convention which commenced the 17th. After listening to President F. M. McDowell's lectures and sermons, we were led to thank God for such leaders. The prospects are brighter here than for some years; some who have stood in the way of the Lord's work are moving out of the way, and the work is moving forward.

Atherton

Some of our recent speakers have been Brothers Rasmussen and Houston, each giving some valuable lessons. Brother F. A. Smith gave us a very inspiring sermon. Brother L. Bogue, leader of the young people's prayer meeting, has taken a large number of our young folks to Brother F. A. Smith's to receive their patriarchal blessings, which will be a great help in their spiritual awakening. Brother Cleland, from Independence, sponsored what he termed a foodless banquet. It was a foodless banquet, physically, but spiritually it was a feast on spiritual food. Three brethren occupied. Brother William Self spoke of the power of Satan and his cunning attacks upon the human race, and told of some of his experiences with the forces of evil. Brother J. A. Holsworth next told of the love of God. How God comes to the rescue of those attacked by the powers of evil when complying with his laws and ordinances. Brother Francis M. Smith next spoke on the gospel as a marvelous work and a wonder. These talks were interspersed with song, and by a brother who played sacred songs on a saw.

May 29 Brother Frank Veenstra preached both morning and evening. He gave a lengthy discourse on the tongue and that which proceeds from the mouth. He advised us to take time to repeat the Lord's prayer before we spoke evil of one another. There is an old saying, never to repeat anything about anyone until we can answer yes to these questions, "Is it kind? Is it true? Is it needful?"

June 12 was Children's Day. Brother William Ware was the morning speaker; and in the evening a very impressive program was rendered.

June 19 Brother George Blackmore was the morning speaker, and W. M. Self spoke in the evening. In the afternoon eight souls were inducted in the kingdom of God. One mother and her five children and two other children. Confirmations were by Brother George Blackmore, Brother Baughman, and Brother Self.

Warrensburg

Our stake missionary, Brother Harvey V. Minton, and family, formerly of Winfield, Kansas, have located in Warrensburg. Brother and Sister Minton are already showing an active interest in the work here. Brother Minton has preached several sermons of a very high order. Last Sunday night his subject was "The three resurrections."

First, we should die to sin, that we may rise to righteousness. Second, die to self, that we may rise in service. Third, rise in glory from the grave to enjoy life eternal.

"We must live our religion or our actions will speak so loud that our words can not be heard. It will do no good to talk of the glorious gospel unless we are living it, for people will pay no attention to us."

He also said, "We must learn to deny ourselves that we may be able to enjoy the promised blessings. We should be willing to assist each other to overcome faults."

"He who would be of the greatest service must prepare and develop through sacrifice."

Those who obtain an education do so by hard work, close application, and much denial. The same is true of one who develops musical or business talents.

Brother and Sister Minton are planning recreational activities for all.

We are truly glad to have them with us, and hope to respond willingly and efficiently to their kind and willing efforts to assist us in our development. May they be greatly blessed in their work here.

Brother Robert Burgess, of Knobnoster, was a welcome visitor here lately. He occupied the eleven o'clock hour, notwithstanding he was late on account of car trouble.

Brother DeTray, of Independence, representative of the Wearever Aluminum Company, gave a very interesting and instructive lecture lately. His subject was, "Natural foods and their relation to health."

Brother DeTray said that ninety per cent of preventable disease can be traced to improper selection and cooking of foods; therefore, in order to prevent disease, we should know how to select and prepare foods. The body contains twelve mineral elements and four gasses, all of which are obtained from the food we eat, the water we drink, and the air we breathe. Chlorine, magnesium, iron, and iodine are among the most essential mineral elements in the body. Chlorine foods are needed to prevent or cure diseases of the stomach. They are especially needed by fat people. Chlorine is needed for internal cleanliness. The best chlorine foods are carrots, goat cheese, spinach, radishes, egg yolk, lettuce, and asparagus. In constipation, we need magnesium, and as constipation is one of the causes of the rapidly increasing and dreadful disease of cancer, we would be wise to eliminate fried foods and pork from our diet, both of which promote cancer, and eat foods rich in magnesium, such as whole wheat, lemons, grapefruit, spinach, lettuce, asparagus, gooseberries, peaches, figs, and almonds. Foods rich in iron, such as red cabbage, blackberries, loganberries, cherries, lettuce, spinach, carrots, onions, raisins, olives, cucumbers, and beets are especially needed by pale and ænemic people. The lack of iodine in the body causes nervousness and worry and goiter. To obtain iodine in the body, we should eat lobster, shrimp, crabs, oysters, salmon, onions, pineapple, tomatoes, string beans, spinach, and beets. Brother DeTray is doing a great service to mankind in teaching how to cure and prevent disease through the use of proper foods, and we hope he will specialize in this.

The Department of Women gave an ice cream and strawberry social from which they realized enough to undertake cleaning and painting the inside of our church. Besides, we believe there was social benefit derived.

Brother W. S. Macrae, our stake president, gave an interesting and instructive discourse on how to determine values. Following are a few extracts from his lecture:

We are able to determine values by our experience. Experience is a good teacher, but it is an expensive one. We may, if we are watchful, learn by the experience of others. Brother Macrae told the story of Franklin and the whistle, then he said: "Do not pay too much for those things which will not be of permanent value. Determine value wisely. "What does it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul." Lazarus was not in heaven because he was poor, but because he had learned to determine values, and chose that which would benefit him in after life. The rich man was not in a place of torment because he was rich, but because he had not learned how to determine values, and used that over which he was steward for his own selfish purposes instead of using it in service to others.

Brother C. F. Scarcliff was a visitor here recently. Come often, Brother Scarcliff; you are indeed very welcome.

Independence

Stone Church

Patriarch F. A. Smith consented to speak in the Stone Church pulpit at the eleven o'clock hour, and found a goodly number of Saints eager to hear his discourse. He chose a short scripture reading from the fifth chapter of Matthew, verses thirteen to eighteen, also reading from Matthew 11 and Ephesians 4. The text and basis of the sermon was, "Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden underfoot of men. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill can not be hid."—Matthew 5: 13, 14. Carefully analyzing this scripture, he propounded the question: What is the relationship of the church to us? Is it a social order, a benefit to us financially, or is it in the truest sense the medium of relationship between us and God? In the church, if it is functioning properly, the divine influence is brought to man—that influence so necessary to his development and growth. "We are the salt of the earth," he declared; "are we going to bring into the church those properties detrimental to our influence? If so, if we partake of worldly things, then we shall be of the world; we shall have lost our savor and be fit only to be trodden under the feet of men!" Christ has commanded us: "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly." "It is one of the hardest things there is," the speaker continued, "for us to learn to be meek and lowly. We are given to pride; yes, worldly pride, that kind of pride the Apostle Paul said we must put away from us." Our paramount goal should be to build within ourselves the characteristics which will harmonize with those characteristics Christ showed during his earthly life. When we do this, it will be an easy matter for us to consummate all our other objects. We need an about face to the principles laid down by Christ; we need to recognize our responsibility to him, Brother Smith concluded his sermon with an earnest plea to the Saints to come out of the world, to keep the Sabbath a holy day unto the Lord, and lose themselves in the struggle to live uprightly before the world, resisting all temptations.

The program before the morning discourse was one of more than usual attraction and artistry. Miss Melva Ward presided at the organ, playing several selections, and the choir besides joining in the congregational singing, rendered an anthem, "Glorious forever." The singers were led in this composition by Mrs. George Hulmes. "Thanks be to God," a contralto solo, was sung by Mrs. Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri. The invocation and benediction were offered by Elder Jasper O. Dutton, missionary to Southern Indiana District.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. the children's program, arranged by Mrs. Bertha Burgess, was presented by Mary Ethel Cool, vocalist; Thelma Betts, reader; Frances Rannie, pianist; Eunice Porter, violinist; Mildred Crick, reader; Robert Burgess, pianist; and Marcine Turner, vocalist. The story was by Miss Ella Jones.

Bible study hour began at nine, and was followed by the auditorium service at eleven.

At two in the afternoon Fry's Instrumental Ensemble was assisted by Miss Madge Nesbitt, soprano.

K L D S radio church began at three, and the program at that hour was given by the Immanuel Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Reverend Samuel Harkness, pastor. Music was by a boys' choir of twenty voices; Miss Mary Ingram accompanist.

The K L D S Ladies' Quartet gave the musical program for vesper service, and there were organ numbers by Mrs. Clara Curtis. Radio Pastor Farrell delivered the sermon.

Music arranged by Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock was presented by a quartet composed of Mrs. Paul Murphy, Miss Melva Blankenship, Mr. Henry Hampton, and Mr. Roscoe Hampton at the Latter Day Saint service commencing at 9.30. The quartet was assisted by Maude Evans, organist and accompanist. Sermon by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis.

At the Campus

Since the weather has turned warm the Campus with its spacious lawns and cool shade trees is a popular resort for Saints and townspeople. Big crowds gather at the various meetings, particularly are they encouragingly large on Sunday evenings. Last Sunday evening the band players from the Stone Church and Walnut Park, directed by Brother Orlando Nace, were at their post and assisted Elder John F. Sheehy, who led the song service. The song fest was of unusual merit. Everyone sang and enjoyed it.

As the speaker of the evening Patriarch Ammon White began his sermon with the statement that he had often thought it would be a trial to men today to undergo the tests which some of the characters of the Old Testament underwent. Among these personalities, he mentioned Daniel, the three Hebrews, and Job. "But," he assured his hearers, "no matter what the Lord may permit to come to us, the Lord's work is true. We have known it; we know it now. God is the same yesterday, today, and forever." The most of the hour Brother White devoted to narrating interesting personal experiences of spiritual significance in his ministry. The Saints responded to these narratives with deep attention. Brother White will be welcome to speak another time.

Immediately following the discourse the pageant, "The ten virgins," directed by Sister Eunice Winn Smith, was presented by members of the Stone Church Choir. Elder D. O. Cato read the parable from the scripture while the pageant was given with its effective lighting, its sweet song, and its spotless white costumes. The congregation appreciated this effort.

The reel, "The Garden of Gethsemane," from the Palestine series, was then flashed upon the screen before the crowd dispersed.

Second Church

On Thursday evening, June 16, the members of Section 2, comprised of Groups 14, 15, 16, 17, and 31, met at the call of the First Presidency, in the church at eight o'clock. Pastor C. Ed. Miller was in attendance representing the First Presidency. He stated the object of the meeting to be the choice of a pastor to act for the remainder of the year, 1927, and read a letter from President F. M. Smith which stated that for a long time Brother R. J. Lambert, who had served as pastor since 1922, had been requesting that he be relieved of the charge, or of some other branch of work in which he was occupying. Brother Lambert had renewed his request quite insistently on June 15, and had asked the Presidency to accept his resignation of his pastorate. This request had been granted, and upon consideration the Presidency had determined to nominate Elder A. K. Dillee for pastor. Privilege was extended for nomination of other candidates by the people, but no other name was brought out and Elder Dillee was the unanimous choice of the people. He immediately took up the work of pastor and is pushing the work forward.

The Second Church Choir, which for the past years has been doing splendid work under the presidency of Elder J. S. Andes and the leadership of Sister Clara Curtis, working in the finest of fellowship and Christian harmony, went to the home of the retiring pastor Thursday evening, June 23, and spent the time in profitable visiting. During the evening President Andes spoke of the joy of the work in this branch and asked Brother Lambert if he desired to say anything. Brother Lambert responded with his deepest expression of gratitude for the support given, and his desire to see the work go on, if possible faster and better than ever, to the accomplishment of much good in the church services. Pastor A. K. Dillee spoke in approval of what had been said and anticipated the work of the choir for the future, insisting on the value and necessity of its activities. Refreshments were served and the best of feeling attended.

Children's Day was celebrated June 26, all day long. Forty or fifty Saints gathered at the early morning prayer meeting, which was directed by the pastor and Superintendents Heman H. Davis and William Inman.

The Sunday school session was closed a little early in order to give time for preparing the house to render the beginners and primaries program at eleven o'clock. The entertainment had been worked out by these department heads, led by Sister Agnes Thomas Edmunds, who is an adept in handling children along these lines. It was an hour of complete enjoyment.

At two o'clock the lower auditorium was well filled with those who were interested in the baptism of the twelve candidates who offered themselves for entrance into the church, these were: Nellie Pollard and Berniece Wisemore, baptized by Elder D. A. Whiting; Charles Eugene Bailey, Eva Juanita Smalley, Walsie Ellen Burroughs, Stanley Alma Lamb, Della Fay Wagener, Thelma Marie Butler, Chester Ray Curtis, Marion June Davis, Nadine Inman, Thomas Bain, baptized by Elder R. J. Lambert. These were confirmed by Elders A. K. Dillee, D. A. Whiting, J. S. Andes, Floyd Mortimore, and R. J. Lambert.

The final service of the Children's Day was at eight o'clock in the evening, when the older pupils of the Sunday school rendered special numbers and Elder R. J. Lambert gave a fifteen-minute address to the young people.

The day's services were enjoyed very greatly and the attendance was large.

Enoch Hill

The young people of our district were pleased to have with them on last Wednesday night President F. M. McDowell. The meeting was held at the church, and Brother McDowell occupied the time discussing the human impulses and instincts, asking the question: Shall we allow our impulses to rule us; or are we going to rule our impulses? Brother Joe Martin was in charge of the meeting, which was instructive and enjoyable to all. Sister McDowell accompanied her husband to Enoch Hill and was welcomed.

Sunday morning at the preaching hour Elder Ralph W. Farrell spoke, basing part of his sermon on the song, "I would be true," carefully and clearly giving the meaning of each phrase of the song. He urged that it is time for the Saints to turn their attention from doctrinal differences between our church and other churches and to agree upon the great fundamental principles of life, bringing out the necessity of broadmindedness among us, giving credit where credit is due. Pointing out that Christ in his Sermon on the Mount did not mention one of the six doctrinal principles, but told them simply the way to live in unity, love, and peace; he plead for a broader concept of our church work on the part of each member of the church. "We must get together to put over our great program, designed of God," he said.

This district has lost two of our older brethren this week, and deeply sympathizes with the bereaved families. Brother George W. Frick, age seventy-six years, died early Saturday morning at the Independence Sanitarium. Brother Frick was the father of Earl S. Frick, who was drowned about a month ago in the Blue River. His illness has been of several months' duration. Left to mourn are his widow, Mrs. Clara Frick, of the home; two daughters, Mrs. Bertha Lucas, Mapleton, Kansas, and Mrs. Helen Gard, Independence; one son, R. W. Frick, of Kansas City; and a sister, Mrs. Mollie Eldridge, Eugene, Oregon. The funeral was conducted at 10.30 Monday morning at the church. Burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

And again at 3.30 p. m. another sorrowing group met at the church for the funeral of Brother Richard Y. Martin, age seventy-four years, who died Friday afternoon at his home on South Pleasant Street after an extended illness. Elder William Flig was in charge of the service, and burial was in Mound Grove.

Brother Martin was born in Simcoe, Ontario, and came to Independence in 1919. He served in the English and Canadian armies and received a medal of Honor and Long Service. He is also a veteran of the Zulu War, fought in South America. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mary Martin, of the home; and a brother, A. E. Martin, of Simcoe, Ontario.

Englewood

The Saints at Englewood are well pleased with the new playground they have equipped for tennis and volley ball. It is located just south of the church. Every night last week groups of boys and girls, as well as men and women, were seen playing and practicing for the game they had with Spring Branch on last Friday night. It was a complete success; all report a splendid time. Ice cream, cake, and pop were sold, and a good social time had by all. The Walnut Park Band furnished the music.

On Sunday morning, June 19, Elder Atwell was the speaker. Elder John Ely was the morning speaker June 26.

We are glad to report a large increase in attendance at the church for Wednesday night prayer service.

The record attendance at Sunday school is one hundred and seventy-five. We certainly need added room for this service. We hope all will realize this and support it. We have some debt on our present building and if we can all work together, we will soon be adding more room and diminishing our indebtedness.

Spring Branch

The beautiful Sabbath morning brought out a good crowd to the morning prayer service. A splendid spirit prevailed throughout the meeting.

At the Sunday school hour a change was made in the disposition of the classes. The primary and junior departments were brought upstairs, and the adults occupied the two rooms in the sub-basement.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried occupied the pulpit at eleven o'clock. His fine discourse was built upon the Savior's answer to the young man that offered to follow him wherever he went: "The foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay his head."

Our volley ball teams, both boys and girls, met their Waterloo at the hands of Englewood's aggregations last Friday night on the Englewood grounds. A court is being prepared at the home of Joe Farrow, where in the near future our players expect to defend their title (that is, if they get it,) against all comers. Wait and see what we shall see!

Our choir force has recently been augmented by the assistance of Sister Katharine Haberlein, pianist, taking the place of Rosamond Filson, who has rendered faithful and efficient service for the last several months, but whose duties elsewhere have made it impossible for her to continue. Brother and Sister Rudolph Richter are assisting in the tenor and alto sections, and Sister Scott in the soprano. We appreciate these new members.

A junior choir has been organized, with Dorothy Mabbott in charge. All children between the ages of nine and fifteen should report at 7 p. m. Thursday night at the church.

This Monday night concluded the series of plays given by the Royal Players. Some excellent programs have been given by these young people. The last performance was a double-header, one two-act drama and a one-act play. A large crowd greeted them.

East Independence

Children's Day was observed June 19. For this occasion the church was prettily decorated, and an interesting program was presented. Sister Jennie Friend and Sister Roberta Collins composed the committee in charge, and in this work were ably assisted by Sister Addie Thatcher. At the close of the program Alwyn Curtis, the little son of Brother and Sister Harold C. Edwards, was blessed by J. J. Teeter and N. Carmichael.

Following the program a picnic dinner was had in Brother Collin's grove, being greatly enjoyed by everyone.

We then returned to the church to listen to Pastor C. Ed. Miller tell the story of Joseph. This is a good story for Children's Day, and we only wish more children had been present to hear it.

In the evening Elder E. T. Atwell was the speaker, and interested his audience by telling about the Jews and their return to their native land.

Brother W. J. Sherman was the speaker last Sunday, basing his sermon on the text, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

Brother G. S. Trowbridge was the evening speaker, and he impressed upon us the thought that we should be prepared for whatsoever work we shall be called to do, and in doing this work take not the honor to ourselves.

Our church has recently had some improvements in furnishings. Curtains have been provided for the platform, also a pulpit lamp, which is a great help to the speaker when he wishes to read. For these blessings we are thankful.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

In keeping with the action of the last quarterly conference with regard to the purchasing of a moving picture machine, the first of the Sunday evening series was given on June 19, the picture being entitled, "The heritage of the Red Man." A good enthusiasm of the people was manifested, and there was a very good attendance, notwithstanding the fact that the service was held indoors owing to the extreme dampness on the Campus.

We were very much pleased to have a noted guest at this service, Edwin Markham, Esquire. No doubt many readers of the HERALD have read his beautiful poems. Mr. Markham, whose home is in New York, was a guest of Sister B. F. Moats and her husband. He was very much interested in the subject of the evening, and discussed it considerably with Brother J. A. Tanner at the close of the meeting.

Sunday was a beautiful June day, with an attendance of 280 at Sunday school, and a collection of $16.64. The drop in attendance is due to a number being away on vacations, but those attending Latter Day Saints Sunday schools are counted present and have an opportunity of boosting their side in the race to Palestine. The women are still in the lead and feel sure they will reach Palestine long before their brothers.

Miss Helen Mills rendered a very beautiful violin solo at this service, accompanied by Miss Marion Young at the piano.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of the Plus Ultra Class, it being their annual home-coming day. "From Greenland's icy mountains" was the opening song, and was sung with a marked degree of the missionary spirit. Prayer was offered by the class teacher, Brother Fred Anderson. The anthem of the morning was, "Fear not, O Israel," by Specker, Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock singing the soprano solo and Messrs. Clayton Wolfe and Roscoe Hampton the tenor and bass. It was very much enjoyed by those present, and the soprano solo of Sister Elizabeth, "Give thanks and sing," accompanied by Sister Mildred Connelly, served as a keynote for the sermon that followed by Elder Cyril E. Wight. He based his remarks on "Love" and stated that by no means had its purpose been fulfilled. The purpose was that we might all become one; one in purpose and one in interpretation of the love of Jesus Christ. Four times in his prayer in the 17th chapter of John did Jesus plead that his disciples might become one, even as he and his Father are one. Why? So as to be able to prove that Jesus is the Christ and that through that there might come a glorification of his heavenly Father. The end of love is that we might gain life eternal.

At the conclusion of this service, Plus Ultras and their friends drove to Swope Park, where they enjoyed a picnic luncheon and spent the remainder of the afternoon playing games and enjoying the association of former members.

At 7.30 the Saints gathered on the campus back of the church for a song service, which was followed by the sermon delivered by Brother Tanner. The picture was "Bethany of Judea," and was very educational. It was an ideal night for such a service, and the attendance was very gratifying, there being about two hundred present.

Fourth Church

Sunday, June 5, the attendance at sacrament was 107, and 30 were in attendance at the evening prayer service, the Wednesday evening meeting was also well attended—all very spiritual.

Sister Josephine Raveill attended young people's convention at Lamoni and as she is leader of the department, they will especially be benefited by her experience there.

June 12, Children's Day, Brother J. W. Wolfe, director of music, suggested that we observe Flag Day. Charline Allen, carrying the flag, led the choir to their places, then stood while the choir sang the "Star Spangled Banner." The speaker for the morning hour was Elder J. M. Terry; at 2 p. m. two of the younger girls were baptized, Lorie Alshafer and Catherine McNiece. At 8 p. m. the children rendered the program, under direction of Evelyn Worden, Grace Essex, and Charles Allen. The church was prettily decorated with flowers, and the program consisted of recitations, songs, and drills, by the children. The evening of the 13th, the monthly group social was given. A six o'clock dinner was served to help raise funds for the girls' camp this year. About seventy-five enjoyed the dinner, followed by a program by the girls; piano solos, etc., by the Orioles; a pantomime by Temple Builders, representing the foolish virgins; a song by the Blue Birds, who have been organized only a short time and are making an excellent showing. Brother Golfe gave readings; Brother Gale Short, of Topeka, entertained with a number of tumbling stunts, and Brother Wolfe sang two solos. As usual, those having birthdays during the month were honored.

Bennington Heights

Tuesday evening, June 14, Bennington Heights held a June birthday party, a social gathering for the Saints and their friends. Sister Margaret Agin, who was sent by Bennington to attend the institute meetings at Lamoni, told about her trip.

Elder C. A. Selbe, a former pastor of Bennington, was the speaker Sunday morning, June 19. He admonished us to study. While we are baptized for the remission of our sins, we learn that the way is opened for us to develop and grow.

Katherine Warnock was confirmed at the eleven o'clock hour. Brother E. P. Sanders, president of the priests' quorum, was a visitor at the morning meetings.

To replace officers of the Religio who have resigned, Brother

E. H. Agin was selected for superintendent and Brother Orville Helm for assistant superintendent.

The speaker of the evening was Elder F. C. Smith.

The attendance at Bennington has not yet declined noticeably on account of the hot weather. Vacations have caused some to be missed in the activities. Brother S. S. Armstrong, the Sunday school superintendent, and his family, have returned after being away on a vacation trip. The Sunday school attendance June 26 was 124.

Several are on the sick list. Brother J. D. Jackson has been having trouble with his eyes. Sister H. M. Renninger was unable to be present to teach her Sunday school class last Sunday. Sister Emma Wright Rickman, who is in the hospital where she underwent an operation, is getting along very well and expects to be home soon. Harry Conway, the little son of Sister William McCarrison, is quite sick with a fever.

Ralph Cleveland, son of Brother and Sister James E. Cleveland, met with an accident while riding a bicycle. His face was painfully injured. At the time of this writing, it is not known just how the accident occurred, as Ralph is not conscious enough to talk clearly.

Patriarch H. O. Smith was the speaker last Sunday morning and evening.

Chelsea Church

The Department of Recreation and Expression was reorganized this year and shows renewed vigor. A unique plan is being used to provide interesting programs, which has proved very successful. Each family in turn has charge of and renders its own program.

The Boy Scouts are very active, several having won honors at the joint field meet held at scout camp. These scouts were of much assistance at a bake sale held by the local Women's Department. The proceeds from the colored and southern program given by the senior Temple Builders in May was for the benefit of the Independence Sanitarium.

Second Kansas City

June 12, Brother H. A. Higgins occupied the evening hour, during which he preached a splendid sermon, using for a text John 17:3: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God." Sister Higgins sang a solo and taught the Book of Mormon class during the Religio hour.

Children's Day the program was in charge of Sisters Zink and Payne; the children did well, and the older ones could easily learn a lesson from them, as they willingly and gladly took the parts assigned them.

June 19 Brother A. T. Higdon was with us all day, occupying both morning and evening. We were cheered and helped by his sermons, as he brought to us the glad news that the church was going forward and urged each member to greater activity and a closer walk with God, to use our time and talents in His service.

Our Sunday school is increasing in interest and attendance. Last Sunday we had 80 present. A short Fathers' Day program was put on during the Sunday school hour. We were glad to have with us Sister Myrtle Robertson Palmer, who sang a solo during the program and again for the morning service.

Last week Earl Fugate and wife were baptized by Brother E. W. Lloyd and met with us Sunday. We welcome this young couple. A new mission has been opened by Brother Zink in the home of Brother Davis, 1806 Washington, where meetings will be held each Friday evening. Only one meeting has been held so far, but those who attended expressed themselves as pleased with the sermon and desired to hear more. Brother H. R. Higdon has been holding meetings in Rosedale at the home of Sister Page for some time, and good reports come from there. The Women's Department meets each week for study of the church books. Interest and attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer meetings continue to increase.

Malvern Hill Church

The first wedding in the new church was June 7, when Sister Mabel Grabske was united in marriage to Mr. Clarence White, Elder H. J. Bootman officiating, using the simple service of the church, with ring ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with roses, hydrangeas, and ferns. The

Faith

Faith in God and his cause must ever be the dynamic of the Latter Day Saint. Only that will hold one in the line of duty in the midst of adversity from without and unfair and unkind criticism from within our ranks. Only that will keep us in line of duty within the church when, our talents recognized by institutions and persons outside, there come to us tempting offers to give our services where the monetary remuneration will be large and our own selfish ends the better satisfied.

"Oh, for a faith that will not shrink!"

Rockefeller and Schooling

Some time ago the junior Rockefeller caused much editorial comment in the press by advocating the idea that our colleges and universities should be more nearly self-supporting, that students who can afford to pay the cost of education should do so, and that those who can not should be helped by long term loans. He pointed out that less than one half of our college and university operating expenses are now provided by tuition fees. This means of course that there is a deficit to be made up by interest on endowment funds, by gifts, or in the case of publicly owned institutions, by taxes. He called attention to the fact that colleges and universities when established were designed to educate for the professions, and hence it was logical to put them on a charitable basis as the personal returns were small and the community gain large.

"Today," says Rockefeller, "the majority of the students go to college for a good time, for social considerations, or to fit themselves to earn money. The idea of service to the community is no longer the chief consideration. It would seem, therefore, that under these changed conditions that the student might properly be expected to pay for the benefits he receives."

I wonder if he is not right when he says that the "idea of service" is no longer the chief consideration.

But is that not the fault of our present order? and is it not a lowering of our ideals to hold that the purposes of educational activities are personal advancement? If this last be true, then each student should pay the price of his schooling. But surely the activities of colleges and universities are more socially purposive than that! We fear Mr. Rockefeller has taken too short a perspective of the subject. Where one is "schooling" himself for selfish purposes it is not right to ask charity. But when one (and this should include all) is studying for his proper place in society, with the welfare of the group in mind, the group can well afford to bear the costs, or at least a portion of them. "All for each and each for all," has a great bearing on educational work, while social telenesis will justify even heavy taxes in bringing the best educational possibilities to all our youth.

Stewardships demands the best possible educational opportunities to all our young, for the good of Zion.

The Changes in Reunions

The reunion, or camp meeting, was instituted in the church because of a need for a congregating of the church membership with the express purpose of the enjoyment of the spiritual forces to be found and expressed among us. The fall General Conference had been abandoned. This conference had been a combination of legislative, educational, and social and spiritual activities. The daily program would run something like this:

1. Morning prayer meeting.
2. Forenoon preaching service.
3. Afternoon business session.
4. Evening preaching service.

One of these meetings leaned strongly to the social and spiritual activities and expression; two were a combination of the spiritual and educational. One was almost wholly legislative. The menu was quite satisfactory, especially when we consider the indisputable fact that only about six hours of an active period of at least fifteen hours of each unit are thus accounted for or appropriated, and that another six or eight hours were spent together in unorganized ways—amusement, study, profitable or trifling conversation, and various other activities, among which were camp building and family cares.

The program was lacking in play, organized amusement, in the special care of junior Saints and children with the provision of spiritual food convenient for "babes and sucklings," in organized and systematic study. The movement was handicapped because there were few, if any, properties owned by organizations of Saints, located at strategic or convenient and desirable places; in permanent buildings; equipment for the enjoyment, convenience, and protection of health of the Saints who came to camp, or to enjoy the reunion for a day or two.

But if lacking in these respects, the gatherings were not lacking in good preaching, educational pulpit work, or in plenty to eat, good fellowship, and like factors. Such men as Presidents Joseph Smith and William W. Blair, Heman C. Smith, Joseph Luff, Joseph R. Lambert, James W. Gillen, Gomer T. Griffiths, Columbus and S. W. L. Scott, Bishops E. L. Kelley and George H. Hilliard, and other powerful preachers were in demand, and answered as far as they could the invitations sent them from the various districts holding reunions.

Thus the reunion movement in the church began to take form and become of widespread service to its people.

Western Iowa had been the principal meeting place, possibly, of the fall conference, and the Saints of that section, old-time members of the Reorganization, organized a strong reunion movement at once and for years conducted the leading meetings of this nature in the entire church. Only a couple of years back we visited reunions in that section, at Glenwood, Dow City, Council Bluffs, Woodbine, and found the reunion spirit still strong, virile, precious to the Saints, and of interest to and commanding the respect of the friends of the church. Not so many tents are pitched, possibly, as were once needed to furnish the abodes of attendants at these gatherings, but the automobile and reasonably good roads have had much to do with this change. The congregations are still large and are deeply interested in whatever activity is carried forward by the officers.

Another reason for slightly smaller gatherings lies in the dividing of reunion districts. In western Iowa this year there will be three or four reunions whereas formerly for many years there was one, or at times two. It is quite likely that many more Saints attend reunions regularly, year after year, even in western Iowa, than ever before in the history of the church.

Next week the HERALD will have a word to say about the development of the reunion program, or about the acquisition and improvement of permanent meeting places.

Happenings in Building Zion

The Reorganized Church believes itself to be engaged in the construction of that much-talked-of and superficially considered desideratum of the Christian religion, Zion.

It is idle to dispute over which is to precede in the work, the construction of the physical city, of houses and farms, of hall and church; or the purification and standardizing of the inhabitants of the city by the law of Christ. Surely it is clear that there is work to be done in many lives, and of varying character; and again, surely the physical building needs are in evidence. We find ourselves at different points of development. May it not be possible that for one the initial endeavor shall be the standardizing of his character, and for another the immediate future activity shall be the construction of the Auditorium? And is it an unlikely thing that the entire membership of the church, engaged at these various tasks, may so advance that they shall be ready in an amazingly short period of time to attempt a work which is surely both physical and spiritual, the building of the Temple for the occupancy of the Spirit of God and for the use and refinement of God's people?

With this general understanding, or comprehension of the task of Zion building, I have been a denizen of Independence, the future real Zion as I verily believe, for a period of nearly ten years. During this time I have witnessed the partial or complete building of at least five small and medium-sized churches in Zion, and the commencement of that wonderful construction, the General Conference Auditorium.

In at least two cases of church construction I have repeatedly heard the criticism, "They are building too far ahead of their necessities. They will not need such a building for many years." In the case of the Auditorium it is not unusual to hear, "The work is twenty years ahead of the demand"; "It is a premature movement. Tell me what prospect there is that we will need anything of such proportion within the next fifty years."

I have been compelled to satisfy the inquiry for myself by the contemplation of a little past history. The first thing which occurs to me is the building of the old Brick Church in Lamoni in the early eighties of the last century. Much the same criticism was made when that building was determined. Later developments have justified the judgment of the then authorities who said that it was not in their opinion building too far ahead, for "Lamoni will need a place in which to entertain General Conference, and if Lamoni Saints believe they can build it, let them proceed with the good work."

The Stone Church at Independence came next in the major building enterprises of the church, and the same objections were voiced. Independence Saints were looking too far ahead, and they should not expect the general church membership to contribute toward the construction of this building which was not at that time in demand. But again the general authorities, consisting of at least the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, approved the conception, and the people of Independence pressed forward in the work. It was not completed before it had become inadequate in size and accommodation. The judgment of the leading men of the church was again vindicated, as it had been at Lamoni.

At least twice in the past ten years it has been a popular thing to say, "Such and such a congregation in Independence is over-reaching itself; it will never need such a church house as it is constructing or purchasing." But in this short period adjustments and growths have occurred until there is not now one church of the Reorganization which is too commodious for its congregation, and some are far too small and inadequate in appointments.

The people of Lamoni wanted to enlarge their church about sixty to seventy-five per cent a few years back, and the general authorities had trouble in restraining the movement; I know, for I was one of those who wanted to enlarge, and I wanted it exceedingly. It has been said the "general authorities don't discourage overbuilding; they always foster it." But they were the controlling factors in restraining Lamoni Saints from building according to some very attractive plans prepared by Brother Charles F. Church at the direction of a building committee of their number.

We now come to the conception of the General Conference Auditorium, its planning and construction, of which we shall speak in an early number of the HERALD.

K L D S NEWS

New Wave Length Unsatisfactory

After using the new frequency of 1260 kilocycles, corresponding to 238 meters, assigned it by the Federal Radio Commission, K L D S has been found to reach only a small proportion of the listeners who were able to receive the station's programs and services quite dependably. The trouble is largely due to interference which results from over-crowding of stations on the lower wave lengths, or higher frequencies. Listeners' difficulties are intensified by the fact that the great majority of receiving sets in use today were not designed for efficient operation on the lower wave lengths.

A protest has already been filed with the Federal Radio Commission, and a hearing requesting a higher wave length will soon be asked. Unless a more favorable wave length is obtained, the work of the church broadcasting station will be very seriously hindered, at least for several years. Listeners who have not already reported to K L D S since the change in wave length are urged to do so, giving in detail the ability or inability to receive K L D S on 238 meters, comparing reception with that on the 441 meter wave length formerly used. These communications should be mailed promptly to K L D S, Independence, Missouri.

K L D S Sunday School Lessons Temporarily Discontinued

The lessons broadcast last Saturday evening from seven until eight o'clock are the last until early fall. So little response has been had during the summer, thus far, that those giving the lessons decided it best to discontinue them until fall. Much credit is due the people who have been presenting these lessons every Saturday evening. Those presenting the lessons most recently were Eunice Winn Smith, Beginners and Primaries; Hazel Koehler Moler (Cousin Hazel of K L D S), Juniors; Elder John Sheehy (Uncle John of K L D S), Intermediates; and Mrs. R. S. Salyards, Seniors.

Change in K L D S Matinee Hour

The schedule of the K L D S matinee programs, which are broadcast each Tuesday and Thursday, now begin at four o'clock instead of 2.30 as heretofore. With a change recently made in schedule by one of the Kansas City stations, the change by K L D S will enable radio listeners to hear musical entertainment which has not been available between four and five o'clock.

Who Can Tell?

We have been preaching stewardships, tithes, surplus, etc., for nearly a century. How has it affected us?

Last year the Presbyterian Church throughout the United States made a consistent drive for what they called Christian stewardship and set up in some of their literature (of which they distributed thousands of pieces) a program for living. Here it is:

Income for one Month including Receipts from all Sources	$100	$150	$150	$200	$200	$200	$200	$250	$300	$400
Number of Persons in Family	1	1	2	1	2	3	4	4	4	4
Giving	10	20	15	25	20	20	20	25	30	50
Saving	6	17	10	45	30	25	17	22	30	50
Food	42	45	47	45	48	50	55	58	60	70
Shelter	20	30	40	35	45	50	50	55	70	80
Clothing	12	15	18	20	26	22	28	35	35	40
Operating	7	10	12	14	18	20	25	35	50	70
Advancement	3	13	8	16	13	13	5	20	25	40
Total Income	$100	$150	$150	$200	$200	$200	$200	$250	$300	$400

While this is not entirely in keeping with our idea of stewardship, still, who shall say they have not been affected by the spiritual, inductive teaching of Latter Day Saintism for the last century? "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." If a little teaching by us is so effective, how much more so, much practicing?

Last year the average gift by the membership of the Presbyterian Church was $39.26—the highest per capita average of any church in America. Shall we say the teaching of the doctrine of stewardship was responsible for this fine showing? Our average for seven years has been about $6.50. Shall it not be more during 1927-1928?

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

Value of Research

"Truths have sometimes been discovered by accident, but most truth has come to light only after painstaking search and investigation guided by scientific methods," said the Bureau of Education in explaining the value of scientific research. The ultimate purpose of educational research, according to the bureau, is the discovery of procedures, rules, and principles relating to the various aspects of education. Critical, reflective thinking is required, in which discovered facts and principles may be utilized as well as original data.—Exchange.

Branch Visitation

BY JOHN F. GARVER

In the law and the experience of the church, the visiting of the Saints is declared and known as a duty of the local ministry. The meaning and potential power of this high calling is, however, not always appreciated. It is with a view to opening a bit more widely our vision leading to this far-flung field of opportunity that the pleasant assignment to prepare this paper is undertaken.

And let it be said in the very beginning, that in the opinion of the writer, after fifteen years of practical experience in an executive capacity as one of the presidency of one of our stakes, and near five years' experience now as a general officer of the church, there is upon the local ministry no more sacred charge, no work promising more in results than that of visiting the families and Saints of the church.

Why Shall We Visit?

To "visit the house of each member" is the command of God.

Why does God so command? He commands nothing without reason.

What is the reason here?

There is but one answer, and it is always well that the visiting officers keep this in mind: it is for the development of the people visited.

To feed the flock, to protect them, to lead them along unto perfection, this is the work of shepherding enjoined upon the ministry of every age; and this in particular is the work of the standing ministry of the church. (See John 21:15-17; 1 Peter 5:1-4; Acts 20:28; Doctrine and Covenants 120:3, etc.)

Who Shall Visit?

In Doctrine and Covenants 17:8-11 it is clearly set forth that the standing ministry, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, including of course the high priests, share in the calling to teach the Saints. Indeed, in the case of each officer it is said he shall teach, expound, and exhort.

Go teach, was the command of Christ to the apostles of old. Go teach, is the command of Christ to the apostles of today. Go teach, is the command of Christ to every minister; and to the standing minister of whatever order it means specifically, go teach my Saints.

It is considered not too much to say just here, the teaching function is the fundamental function of the ministry of Christ. To preach on occasion is a ministerial duty, yes. And to expound and to exhort. These, however, always and of necessity partake of the nature of teaching. They are furthermore only the occasional obligation of the minister, as necessity imposes or opportunity offers. While to teach is every hour of every day in every place the privilege of every minister.

Teaching comes before ordinances, that people may be brought to desire them.

Teaching comes after ordinances, that people may be helped to see and to observe and to profit by their fullest significance.

Teaching, so far as our earth ministry goes, begins at the cradle, and ends at the grave.

Whatever else he may be, unless the minister for Christ is a teacher, unless he shall cause men to know the way of God, and how to keep it, he is not all he should be.

To teach is the fundamental and common function of the ministry of Christ.

That the pastor or presiding elder is one to teach by visiting is understood by all. The reasons are so apparent they need not be enumerated here in detail. His it is to know the flock severally as well as collectively, and in the light of that knowledge to minister to them severally as well as collectively. And most certainly he can know the flock and minister severally, only as he mingles with them in an intimate way to discover both their needs, and the way to supply them. Yes, the presiding elder is a visiting officer.

We recall in this connection the saying of Jesus, The good shepherd calleth his sheep by name. The good shepherd knows his sheep, and calls on each according to his need.

I say we need not urge the visiting obligation upon the presiding elder. We may need to observe, however, for some other elders, the obligation Paul imposed upon the pastorate of Ephesus Branch (Acts 20) was not on the presiding elder alone, but upon the elders. Nor is there any distinction made in the Doctrine and Covenants. The remaining elders as standing ministers rest under the pastoral function as much as do the presiding elders. The only difference is one of necessity—some one must preside. Yes, the elders in the obligation to visit share and share alike.

The priest shall "visit the house of each member" (Doctrine and Covenants 17: 10), will suffice to send him forth in this important work.

The teacher also is to "be with" and "strengthen" the church, as well as lead away from iniquity; and in these duties he is to be assisted by the deacon. It is a foregone conclusion, if he is to be with some saints, so called, the teacher, and the deacon, too, must meet them at places other than at the church, for some do not frequent that place.

It is furthermore inconceivable that the church has officers whose duties are corrective only, and who find themselves out of work once the Saints are presumed to be doing well their duty as understood.

Yes, the teacher, and the deacon also, is to visit and labor among the Saints in the effort of the church to carry them forward unto perfection, teaching and inspiring them to new and ever new life and service one for the other.

Whom Shall We Visit?

It is clear that every family and every member is to be visited. And that too with consideration for the needs of the particular family, and member.

When Shall We Visit?

There are occasions when one must visit. Such are occasions of misfortune, or sickness, or death, when individual and family, if without words, calls appealingly for sympathy, and comfort, and service.

There are also those occasions of achievement, of success, of ambitions reached, when the minister finds a ready approach for congratulations, for commendation, and for stimulation to further effort, for further achievement, in school, in church, and in community life.

These may be classified as the irregular, now and then ministrations, in homes, at the house of God, on the streets, across the garden fences, anywhere and everywhere when and where the minister may best commune with, serve, and stimulate his people.

But these do not suffice, for visiting must be done with some degree of regularity, and to some definite end.

This brings us to another and vital consideration. It is that some of our visiting is to be done after careful preparation.

There is a preparation that is general. The storing of the mind with the meaning of the law. The stimulating of the spirit with testimony, one's own and that of another. The general acquainting of oneself with the people to be visited, with the conditions under which they live and labor, with their particular needs; and possibilities, etc., etc.

Then there is the specific preparation necessary to meet the particular need of a particular hour in the life and experience of a particular family or individual. In this one must know the man in particular. For one's work of visiting is not different in method from his other work. In this as in his other duties, the minister is to study to show himself approved—to study before time, so as to be able to do his work of visiting in a way to meet the approval of his brother visited, of himself, and of his God.

It is well, too, in very many instances, perhaps in most, especially where a family is visited, to visit after arrangement, so that the family may arrange to be together and in a mood to receive best the visitor and his effort.

How Shall We Visit?

There can be no set rule given for visiting. No two occasions are alike. There are some general rules it is well to keep in mind; to be applied as varying situations may require or allow.

Yes, we visit as occasion requires, or allows. Some occasions may not allow just now all we may feel may ultimately be required. There is just here a need sometimes for a fine discrimination.

Remember, we are not laboring with machines, but with men. We can make machines do our bidding. Men are to be led to do the will of God. What will lead one will not lead another. What will lead one on one occasion may cause him to balk on another.

We are to visit as occasion may require or allow.

We are to do our work of visiting with regard to particular, immediate needs. For the sake of results today. To move people to do today the thing for today.

This, however, does not suffice. We are also to visit for the long future. With regard to more general, and it may be more remote needs—needs of both the individual and the church.

We are to have regard for the needs of individual, family, church, and community; and to labor that all these from our visiting shall be benefited, if not now to the full, then by and by to the full.

Indeed, we are to relate our visiting effort to the entire field of individual, and family, and church, and community activity and possibility. Visiting is a part and only a part of our human experience. Therefore we must relate it to every other part, in a way to help the whole for today, for tomorrow, and for every day thereafter.

And when we have done all in our strength, let us not forget there is a strength and a wisdom beyond that of man, to which we have access, and which seeks to express itself in our visiting work. It is the wisdom and the strength of God who sends us forth to labor.

What Functions of Life Does Visiting Essay to Touch?

The church is intended to function in every phase of human life, in the spiritual, the mental, and the physical. The pastoral is the arm of church service which comes in direct, nurturing touch with the Saints to these ends. That God's people may arise as fully as may be to the physical, the mental, and the spiritual stature that was the Christ—to this end is the church. To this end the church labors through all its ministers. And especially through its local ministers.

The visiting officers of the church, then, have it devolving upon them to qualify to be of service in all the fields of human experience, physical and mental as well as spiritual. And to be of service to every man, to the strongest man as well as to weakest.

Not every minister can qualify in every field to serve every man in the measure of his every need. There should be, however, among our visiting officers the knowledge and experience and virility to serve in the fields open to them, and to cite the needy to those who can serve them in every other field.

To be well born, physically and mentally, well reared, and well equipped for life is the right of every man. And to be spiritualized so as to devote these heritages and powers to right purposes is a need of every man. In very great measure these are functions gathered up in the term family duties. However the family can not do them all, as every wise and experienced priest knows. The church and the community must come forward, each with its part for the added religious atmosphere and social opportunities necessary. And just here is the place of the ministry of the church; to stimulate both church and community each to its part, as well as the family to its and the individual to his; this latter work in behalf of family and individual devolving particularly and specifically on the priesthood as visiting officers.

Yes, the work of the visiting officer carries him most vitally into every phase of human life, on and on till Zion shall have come in every man. And Zion shall have come in every man when every man in Zion shall have reached his highest possible development of body, mind, and spirit, and the devotion of all these to the best good of his fellows.

What Is the Importance of Visiting as Related to the Remaining Pastoral Duties?

As we have seen, visiting is a function common to all standing ministers.

It is basic to our Zionic achievement.

It is the pastoral function of greatest possibility.

It is the function bringing the minister into personal and intimate contact with community, family, and individual.

It is therefore the function most readily revealing to him conditions, needs and powers of community, family, and individual.

It is the function stimulating to timely and constructive preaching.

It is the function bringing into full play that other and most fundamental of ministerial functions, the function of teaching.

It is the function revealing the need of the adaptation of the whole of the machinery of our religious education program to conditions and needs of our people as they actually are, with a view to most rapid expansion into what we desire them to become.

It is the function through which flows the divine means of grace in a continuous, priestly, and increasingly more effectual survey and first-aid treatment of the human element in our struggle as a people toward God.

It is the function that shall finally lead to the co-ordination of our efforts to the perfection of the Saints.

It is basic to our Zionie achievement.

How Answer You?

In the call to visit is combined the voice of God and the voice of the people for a service in their behalf second to none in devotion and in effectualness.

Brethren, how answer ye this call?

Book of Mormon and the Bible

BY S. A. BURGESS

The early ministers of the church rejoiced to find within the Old Testament prophetic statements which pointed to the love of God for all people, and the coming forth of a new record.

It is true that not all Bible students interpret these passages in the same way. If they did they would be brought to believe the Book of Mormon and would join this church. A Bible passage pointing beyond Palestine and possibly to America is:

Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall. The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him: But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel.) Even by the God of thy Father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breasts and of the womb: The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.—Genesis 49: 22-25.

Joseph's branches run over the wall; in other words, over the sea. He is blessed with the blessings of heaven above and the deep which lies under. America is a land of great resources.

"The blessings of thy father have extended to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills" would indicate a land afar off.

The people who came to America were Lehi and his family, descendants of Manasseh. As for Ishmael and his family, their lineage is not so clearly stated. The people of Zarahemla were evidently of Judah.

Woe to the land shadowed with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled! All ye inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye. For so the Lord said unto me, I will take my rest, and I will consider in my dwelling place like a clear heat upon herbs, and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest. For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning-hooks, and take away and cut down the branches. They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth: and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them. In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion.—Isaiah 18.

America has been represented many times as giant wings in different advertisements. It is beyond Ethiopia, and so is beyond its rivers. Its ambassadors travel by sea in swift vessels. From there goes the message. There is the ensign lifted.

Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin. I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing.—Hosea 8: 11, 12.

The twelfth verse, "the great things of my law," is taken to refer to the Book of Mormon. It came forth in the hands of Ephraim, as Joseph Smith's lineage is given in that tribe.

Perhaps more stress is placed upon the 29th chapter of Isaiah than upon any other one chapter. It is worth reading as a whole, and then rereading in the Inspired Version. Referring, however, to the King James Version, we note:

Woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices. Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel. And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee. And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust. Moreover the multitude of thy strangers shall be like small dust; and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away; yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.—Verses 1-5.

"Thou shalt be brought down, and shall speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust." This thought is repeated several times. It shows that it comes from the dead. We are not justified in seeking for familiar spirits, but we are justified in seeking unto God. (See Isaiah 8: 19.) In this case this is meant for the Book of Mormon—a record of the dead, given of God.

"Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hosts with thunder, and with earthquakes, and great noise, with storm and tempest, and the flame of devouring fire."—Isaiah 29: 6. The Lord of hosts did visit

America, according to the Book of Mormon, and before his coming there were severe earthquakes, tempests, and storms. Cities were sunk, and others were burned. It was a time of severe trial. (See 3 Nephi, chapters 4 and 5.)

Stay yourselves, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I can not; for it is sealed: And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.—Isaiah 29: 9-12.

It is a time when the people had no prophet; the seers were covered. There comes forth a vision, as the words of the book that is sealed. These words are directed to one that is learned, and he says he can not read any sealed book. This corresponds to Martin Harris talking to Professor Anthon. (See Church History, vol. 1, p. 19.)

We note also that the book is sealed. Much of the Book of Mormon is sealed and is yet to come forth when there is a people prepared to receive it. The book itself was delivered to the unlearned. He could not read it because he was unlearned. (See 2 Nephi 11: 125.)

Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.—Isaiah 29: 13, 14.

It was a time when the people worshiped God with their lips, but not in spirit or in truth. They were told of the precepts of man; therefore, since the man was unlearned, the people realized that the Lord would do a marvelous work and a wonder.

Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?—Verse 17.

In ancient times Palestine and Assyria were the granary of the world. After the crucifixion, the land was overrun, the Jews were driven out of Palestine, and the territory became almost a desert. It is said that Palestine will again become a fruitful field and that the Jews will return there. Since 1830, when the Book of Mormon came forth, has been but a comparatively short time. It has been a time of the increasing of the Jews, and of their return to their own land.

And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.—Isaiah 29: 18, 19.

The deaf and the blind shall be healed, and those who are spiritually deaf and blind will have ears and eyes opened. The poor among men shall rejoice and shout in joy to the Lord. The past one hundred years has been a time of exceptionally good prosperity, as said in the Book.

Therefore thus saith the Lord, who redeemed Abraham, concerning the house of Jacob, Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale.—Verse 22.

As above pointed out, it is a time of the blessing of Israel, but also in a further sense. Beginning in England and the United States, the Jews have raised up their heads; their rights have been recognized. When Disraeli became Prime Minister of England, the feeling seemed to spread out through western Europe. There has been a time of growing relationship in every way.

Another chapter frequently quoted is Ezekiel 37:

Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, . . . and shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it and performed it, saith the Lord. The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land. And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all. Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them out of all their dwelling places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.—Verses 11-23.

In ancient times the Jews, as well as other people, did not have libraries of bound books as we have today. The law was written on rolls of parchment. This parchment was then rolled around two sticks; when one was unrolled, the other was rolled up until the proper passage was found. The books were therefore referred to as "sticks." The stick of the law, or the book of the law, a metonymy, the use of a part for the whole.

So he commands that one stick be written upon for Judah, and for the children of Israel, his companions. This is the stick of the law and the Old Testament, to which later was added the New Testament.

Upon another stick was written for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for his companions. This refers, evidently, to the record of Joseph written upon this continent. The books have been brought together in one; they have been held up together many times as one by the ministers of the church of Jesus Christ. The stick of Joseph is found in the hands of Ephraim, or of descendants of the tribe of Ephraim, as ministers of the church who receive patriarchal blessings find that the greatest majority have their lineage placed in Ephraim. Then in the twenty-first verse it is repeated that the gathering of Israel would begin after the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. It is true that it is not complete, nor has the time entirely come, but a beginning has been made of the gathering.

These last two are of especial importance, as they refer to the Book of Mormon. The earlier passage, referring to the extending of the people to a land beyond Ethiopia, is the coming to America.

As we stated, there were two colonies that came to America about the same time. Ezekiel 17 is often quoted as referring to the second colony, as it was led by a son of a king of Judah:

Thus saith the Lord God; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent: In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.—Ezekiel 17: 22, 23.

If the preceding verses be read, it will be noticed that the chapter refers to the taking of Jerusalem by the king of Babylonia; that is, the taking of the king and the punishment. The third verse refers to the taking of the highest branch of the cedar and of replanting it. The highest branch of the royal cedar, Mulok, a son of the king, came at the head of this second colony. (See Omni 1: 24-27; Mosiah 11: 78.)

Another text which was once often used is to be found in Nahum 2: 1-5:

He that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face: keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily. For the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Israel: for the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine branches. The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings. He shall recount his worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defense shall be prepared.

Note that it says in the days of his preparation the chariots shall be with flaming torches, and the trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots rage in the streets; they justle amongst themselves in the broad way; they run like the lightning. This was taken to refer to the railroads, but is likely to mean also the automobiles.

These passages are not used so much today, nor do we have the same argument whether the mighty men of red are the Rothchilds or the British Army in their scarlet coats. To some this would be sufficient evidence from the Bible that part of Israel was taken together to another land but was not forsaken by the heavenly Father, and that the record of these people would come forth out of the dust.

The teaching of the Book of Mormon is that the early inhabitants of America were the descendants of Lehi, of Zoram, and Ishmael, all of whom were of the house of Israel.

(NOTE: Referring to note on page 721, HERALD of June 22, 1927, we can not read the Japanese or Armenian title-page. But the Deseret cipher is not difficult. It is an arbitrary cipher adopted out west and does not modify the English, merely substitutes other characters for those ordinarily used. Hence, substituting the usual letters gives simply—Book of Mormon.)

Millennium

BY VALENTINE WALKER

Coming, I am coming; Jesus' voice is saying,
Coming to reign in glory; with my Saints below.
And yet while here above with God I'm tarrying
My Saints below their lives should be preparing To dwell in purity with me on earth,
In Zion, fairest city of our God.
So work and watch and pray my blessed people,
And give of all your goods to spread my gospel.
Give thanks to God above as you are blessed
And help to succor those who are distressed.

Jesus, blessed Savior; Saints are answering gladly,
We are looking for you, in your shining cloud.
And when the watchman says go forth to meet you,
Then with our lamps all burning bright we'll greet you,
And hallelujahs sing to God above.
Then with our blessed Savior dwell in love,
And those of our dear ones whom you are bringing Shall with the Saints below join in the singing
Of praises, joy, and gladness evermore,
And swell the echoes sweet from shore to shore.

Who and Where Is This Salvation Army Girl?

In a letter in The Mentor, addressed to a Salvation Army girl of forty years ago, William G. Shepherd recites for her the good work that came out of a simple appeal by her to "give one tenth to God." The letter in part follows:

Dear Madame: You stood in the rain and wind on the sidewalk that night, in the city of Seattle, Washington—almost forty years ago. You must be gray by now. You were young and pretty then, with the blue of your red-trimmed bonnet framing your smile.

A young man came around the corner and almost bumped into you. You rattled your tambourine at him and smiled. Maybe down through the years you have remembered what occurred; more likely you have forgotten. But he has told me about it.

You two young folks talked a moment together, on that sidewalk, in the midst of the night life of that western city and then went your ways. But I want to tell you how much every one of those words weighed in God's scales.

"But I'm broke," he told you. "I have only $1.15 left."

You laughed and said to him, "But don't you tithe?"

"What does that mean—tithe?" asked the boy.

"Why, it means to give God one tenth of all you earn. It means making God your partner."

And then you said, "I don't think anyone can go broke who does that."

Do you remember what the young fellow did then? He laughed, dug down into his pocket, pulled out a big silver dollar, a nickel, and a dime, and said:

"I'll do better than give one tenth."

And he threw the fifteen cents into the tambourine. You said, "Thanks! Good luck!" and he went away with nothing in his pocket to rattle his dollar against.

I'm writing this to tell you, whoever you are and wherever you are, that Charlie Page died a while ago in the little city of Sand Springs, Oklahoma. He followed your advice all his life. You'd have liked him as a grown man. He was big and broad. Some folks at first sight might have called him rough and grim. His voice was heavy, but how he could laugh when he was playing with the children! There were lines in his face and about his eyes, but the winds of the oil fields put them there—not greed nor meanness; and the lines always danced and waved when he smiled. It couldn't have been a cruel mouth that his drooping mustache hid, because he was always kind. He could fight, though, when he had to. Everyone in the oil fields knew that. To hold his own there, and get his share, a man must have a fighter's reputation. You'd have liked him, as a man of sixty, at the end of his road.

There wasn't any city of Sand Springs forty years ago when you talked to him. He built the town years later. And when he died he left a fortune of about $30,000,000. He was a good oil man. He always said that his fabulous luck at "hitting oil" came from following your advice.

"I split with the 'Big Fellow,' and He made Geology," is how Charlie Page, in his gruff voice and western manner, once explained his success in the oil fields. He never claimed to be religious; he always somewhat laughingly made believe that he had taken God into his business because it paid him to do so. But he always advised all men who came to him not only to believe in God but also to prove this belief by "dividing with God." He passed on to hundreds of men the advice you gave him that rainy night.

Perhaps you wonder how this boy you once talked to passed on to God, God's share. Well, he himself spent what he called God's part of the money. He was puzzled how to do it at first. He helped out broken men and women, fresh from prisons, drug victims, and wrecked humans. But at last he decided, as he put it, in gist, that:

"If God had to spend money to help us poor humans He'd spend it on children."

What happened in Page's life after he had made that decision was mystic and almost miraculous. He married a Tulsa girl after much wandering, built a home in the country outside of Tulsa, and began to adopt orphan children to add to his family.

He adopted hundreds of children during twenty years, who grew into young reliant manhood and womanhood. One young man is a high official of a railroad today. But there are always children in trouble somewhere. The source of the children who are born into sadness such as happy childhood shouldn't know never runs dry in this world. Charlie Page always could find enough children to keep at least one hundred of them happy in his home. When he died, there were one hundred and fifteen there, from year-old babies in the nursery to high school boys and girls. Schools and a high school became part of Sand Springs. Charlie Page was planning a university for his children when he died.

Thirty million dollars he left when he died. And all of it, except enough thousands to keep his blood relatives in comfort, is today vested for ever in that home for his other relatives, who called him "Daddy Page."

That's all there is to tell you, girl of the blue bonnet. You can see for yourself what you did without knowing it.

Bible Contest Produces Rare Old Volumes

[The A. J. Fisher who is here mentioned as one of the winners in the Bible Contest at Waterloo, Iowa, is an active elder in the branch of the Reorganized Church at that place.]

The first prize of $40 for the most historical Bible in the contest sponsored by the Waterloo Thrift and Loan Company was divided between A. J. Fisher and Matthew Nemecek yesterday, when the contest ended. Sixty Bibles were entered in the contest, the people who entered them representing twenty-eight different churches.

The Bible in the possession of Mr. Fisher was hidden in a cave in Ireland during the burning of the Bibles, and the one owned by Mr. Nemecek was hidden in a loaf of bread when a Czecho-Slovakia home was once searched for Bibles by invading Austrians. The latter looked in the oven, where the bread was baking with the Bible in it.

Reverend O. M. Yaggy, pastor of the First Evangelical church, entered the oldest complete Bible, winning $5. This was finished on March 16, 1536, by Christopher Froschoerof, Zurich, Switzerland, well within the first century of printing. The hand-tooled pigskin leather binding mounted on real board covers, the hand-wrought brass clasps and corners, with the beauty of the type and fine quality of paper are still evident after 391 years, nearly four centuries, and speak highly in praise of the skill and craftsmanship of the workmen who produced the volume.

One may secure a better idea of its age in comparison with other dates. William Tyndale's New Testament was first printed in English only ten years prior to the publishing of this Bible, and it was printed a full four score of years before the publication of the King James Version of 1611, which is now in use by the American Bible Society.

The third prize, \$20, went to Mrs. A. G. Horn, 120 South Barclay, for the largest Bible. Her volume measured 17 by 11 by 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches. It was a German edition published in 1708. The fourth prize for the smallest Bible was divided between Mrs. Charles Bailes and Leslie Schrubbe, both books measuring 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ by 13 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches.

The judges of the contest were the Reverend C. L. Kenagy, of the First Baptist Church, the Reverend E. B. Mounsey, of the Christ Episcopal Church, and Harry Shaw. The money won by the winners will not go to them but to whatever churches they name.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Nauvoo, Illinois

June 28.—The district conference convened at Rock Creek on June 12, but owing to the stormy weather few were able to attend. Apostle J. F. Garver and Elders F. C. Bevan and D. B. Sorden were present. Apostle Garver was the principal speaker.

A bountiful dinner was provided by the Rock Creek Saints, and spread upon the church lawn.

Brother Strange, of Montrose, was ordained to the office of elder, and Arnold Ourth, of Nauvoo, to the office of priest.

The weather conditions were a disappointment to many, as the trip to Rock Creek is usually a very enjoyable one. The farmers this year are a month behind in their planting, and instead of the beautiful fields of waving grain usually seen at this time of year, much of the land was under water and presented a sorry spectacle. However, the farmers are still hopeful; planting is going steadily forward, and a good harvest may yet be secured.

Brothers J. F. Garver and F. C. Bevan drove to Nauvoo in the evening, and Brother Garver was the speaker at the evening service.

The eighth grade graduation exercises were held May 27, with Reverend W. D. S. Lamont, of Keokuk, as the speaker. Those of our number receiving diplomas were Paul Fusselman, David Lee, and Albert Sanford, jr.

The following week the high school graduation took place, with Doctor Congor, of Knox College, as the speaker. Myron Wood, Eleonor Snively, and Flora Stevenson were among the graduates. Myron and Eleonor plan to enter Graceland in the fall. Flora Stevenson was married to Carl Wilson, of Sonora, June 27.

Florence and Mildred Sanford are attending summer school at the Illinois State Normal. Florence will teach another year in the town school, and Mildred will begin her first year of teaching at the Ogden School. Irene Layton will also teach another year in the high school here.

As the district conference convened on Children's Day, the regular exercises for that day were held the following Sunday, with a junior service in charge of A. L. Sanford in the morning and a short program by the children of the Sunday school in the evening.

The Laytons had the honor of entertaining the bride and groom, George Mesley and Blanche Edwards Mesley, during their honeymoon. A picnic supper was held on the shore in their honor on Saturday evening. Sister Mesley found that she was unable to shake off her responsibilities, even during her honeymoon, and was called upon to speak during the eleven o'clock hour on Sunday morning. Her subject was, "Discovering God," and her talk was inspirational to all present.

Irene Layton attended the institute at Lamoni and then visited friends in Independence, Kansas City, and Warrensburg before returning home.

George Anway, George Lewis, Irwin Gunlock, Hilliard Cox, and Harry Lorange visited Nauvoo on their way from Lamoni to Flint, Michigan. They were entertained by Sister L. H. Lewis and Sister A. L. Sanford at the Lewis home.

Elder G. T. Richards and family also stopped off at Nauvoo on their way to Far West, where Brother Richards has been assigned. Elder Richards was in charge of the Wednesday night meeting, and he gave much encouragement to the Saints.

The Laytons report that 206 visitors registered during the month of June. This is the beginning of the busy season for them. Their callers one Sunday numbered thirty-seven, coming from all parts of the country.

We are looking forward to the reunion which is to be held here from the 19th to the 28th of August. We believe we have one of the finest, if not the finest, reunion grounds in the country. Almost surrounded by the Father of Waters, it is indeed a beautiful spot, and those desiring a peaceful, restful time would do well to consider spending their vacation in Nauvoo.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Tuesday, June 14, we were favored with a visit from Apostle J. F. Garver, at which time he preached for us a sermon full of food for thought, delivering it with an earnestness which should inspire his hearers.

The Department of Women has been on the job. Its members were entertained at the home of Sister Freburg, the first Thursday in the month, at which time our pastor met with us and gave us a very timely talk. On Thursday evening, the 16th, the ladies of the West End Presbyterian Church put on a play in the church through the efforts of Sister E. Hughes. There was a good attendance. Some money was raised for our local Department of Women.

We had our Children's Day program the third Sunday, at which time there was good attendance. The committee in charge of this program was composed of Sister Epperly and the rest of the Sunday school teachers.

Sermons during the past month have been by Brother Glen McMickle, and the pastor, Brother LaPoint.

We are very sorry that at this time Sister A. Scott and Sister Hendra are sick.

Some of the Saints are looking forward to our reunion, which is to be held at beautiful Nauvoo, an ideal place for it.

Moorhead, Iowa

June 22.—The priesthood of our branch was well represented at the ministerial conference at Council Bluffs last month and felt well repaid for their efforts to attend. Those attending were Brother C. R. Hield, Mark Jensen, T. O. Strand, John Boswell, Irvin Clark, and Chester Davis.

The usual Sunday school service was held at Moorhead on that day, but the morning preaching service was dispensed with, owing to the absence of most of the preachers.

Apostle John F. Garver accompanied Brother Hield home and delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class at the Christian Church in the evening. The address was well received and appreciated by the class as well as others in attendance. We were sorry Brother Garver could not be with us longer, but duties called him elsewhere the following morning.

On June 5 Brother and Sister C. R. Hield and little daughter, Shirley Jean, bade us farewell before departing for Lamoni, where they expect to spend a few days. They will be greatly missed by Moorhead Saints, as they have spent the last four school years among us and have endeared themselves to us as well as many other warm friends. Several farewell socials were held in their honor shortly before their departure. We wish them success in their new home and undertaking.

Brother and Sister John Boswell and family recently enjoyed a visit from Sister Boswell's brother, Elder Amos Higdon, and family, of Independence, Missouri. We were sorry they could not have stayed over Sunday and met with the Saints.

Brother and Sister D. Blair Jensen and little daughter, Carol, of Glendale, Ontario, arrived Thursday morning, June 16, for a few weeks' visit with home folks. They are accompanied by Sister Jensen's brother, Brother Dirk Schreur, jr., of Gaylord, Michigan.

Sister Nellie Larson is spending her vacation at home. She taught school in Logan last year and has been hired for the same position next year. Sister Fern Wilson has returned from Graceland, where she was a junior graduate; and Sister Frances Strand from Ames, where she was a student. They are vacationing at home.

Near the first of the month, Sister Helen McDonald was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Buckendahl, at the home of Mr. George Moorhead, where her mother has been housekeeper for several years. Brother T. O. Strand performed the ceremony. Soon after the ceremony and a wedding breakfast, the young couple departed by auto for Wisconsin, where Mr. Buckendahl has employment. While the groom is a stranger to most of us, we understand he is a young man of high ideals, and we congratulate him in the choice he has made. Sister Helen has grown to womanhood among us, has taught school the last few years, and we are disappointed that she is not to spend this vacation as usual among us, but we hope she will be happy in her new home. Moorhead Saints extend their well wishes.

Brother Claude Mann and family, of Missouri Valley, attended services and visited home folks during memorial vacation.

The social sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Expression will be held at the home of Brother and Sister Will Millard.

Elder T. O. Strand and Mark Jensen were in Sioux City May 29 in church interests.

Oyen, Alberta

The Saints are enjoying the visit of the district president, Elder William Osler, and his uplift series of pastoral meetings. Loyalty to the church and its need is their token of friendship indeed.

At the recent business meeting of the branch, Elder Charles McLean was unanimously elected president, and our reliable sister, Victoria Shaw, was chosen secretary. Brother James Hardie is at the helm of the Sunday school ship, while our young brother, Blake McLean, makes his debut in Sunday school official work as secretary-treasurer.

Sacramental prayer service was a source of strength to the faithful band and an opportunity of renewing covenants.

Weather conditions are ideal for an excellent crop, giving cheer to all, as the source of wealth in this locality is purely agricultural, and the Saints hope to be enabled to send more tithing to the bishop's agent for Alberta District, Elder William H. Roy, of Innisfree, Alberta.

Altogether the folks here are encouraged and resolved not to be weary in well doing, but to affirm the gospel life. May the Master continue to bless the work of the church.

Modesto, California

The Modesto Saints enjoyed a splendid meeting on the first Sunday of May and of June, and the Wednesday evening prayer meetings are a feast of good things. The attendance is good.

A short Mothers' Day program was given on the second Sunday of May. On Children's Day an entertainment was given at the Sunday school hour. "The language of the flowers" was beautifully rendered, the junior choir acting as the rose chorus. This program was in charge of Mrs. Daisy Frazier.

The Sunday school and Religio are getting along splendidly. The Religio and adult Sunday school quarterlies are certainly fine. There are two classes in the adult quarterly. Brother Adolphus Pierce, who had a very severe accident about four months ago, is still in the hospital, but his leg, after several operations on it, is mending very rapidly, and he hopes soon to be able to be out.

Sister M. E. Whitenack, who has been in the hospital for some time, is improving and expects soon to be able to return to her home.

The reunion will shortly be here, and all are looking forward to a feast of the good Spirit that generally attends a gathering of God's people.

The summer has been wonderfully cool, most too much so for the good of the fruit, which is much later than usual.

Edmonton, Alberta

June 22.—Our semiannual business meeting was held on June 16. For the year just ending, we have a net gain of four members, three by baptism and one by transfer. Our branch now numbers sixty-four. They are scattered over a radius of nearly sixty miles, this being the nearest branch. Those living out of the city seldom have the pleasure of meeting with the branch. At this meeting the following officers were elected: president, Elder H. B. Seaman; clerk, deacon, and publicity agent, L. R. Allen; librarian, W. A. Cooper; auditor, A. L. Nuckles. We are glad to report that the meeting saw fit to dispense with the formality of singing the doxology before each preaching service, something which has been in vogue for years and was a copy of sectarianism. A motion was carried, requesting our branch president to interview our district president, the desire being to have a series of meetings held in Edmonton by Brother Paxton; these services to be of a pastoral nature.

Our Sunday school has been active since our last letter. It put on an Easter program, which was good, but on account of a severe snowstorm was poorly attended.

Our Mothers' Day weather conditions were at their best, and a full house enjoyed the program of high order. Two numbers are worthy special mention, a playlet entitled, "The whole world pays homage to mother," and a musical reading, "The wanderer." The innermost feelings of many present were touched, causing the tear of affection to show.

We are striving to exceed our last year's Christmas offering. The first Sunday of each month is known in our school as Christmas offering Sunday, and a special envelope so marked is given to each class.

Vacation time is here, but we hope our average will hold good.

Mishawaka, Indiana

1321 Milburn Boulevard

On May 29 the attendance at services was not as large as usual, for a few took advantage of the holiday, May 30, and made week-end trips. The usual services were held, the pastor preaching morning and evening. In the evening at Religio, eight children rendered a play, "Playing flowers," which was very good.

Saturday evening, June 4, an ice cream social was given on the lawn of Brother and Sister Coonfare's home. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed; it was, as some termed it, a real reunion. Many nonmembers joined with us in the recreation, and we were pleased to have also a large car load from Elkhart.

Sunday, June 5, was a banner day in Sunday school attendance. Fifty-five were there. Thirty-eight remained for sacramental service. Among those attending were Brothers Willsey, Walter, and Emerich and families, of Elkhart, and Mrs. Fox, of Wisconsin, mother of Sister Clair Galloway. Mrs. Fox spent about two weeks here visiting Sister Galloway and family.

"Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven," was the text taken by the pastor for the evening sermon.

Several cars of Saints from this place met with the Saints at Elkhart for an all-day meeting, Sunday, June 9. Brother S. W. L. Scott was the advertised speaker, but was called for a funeral sermon to Hibbard, so Brother C. B. Freeman filled the appointment. The first service was a prayer meeting, with a splendid Spirit present. This was followed by a basket dinner. In the afternoon Brother Freeman preached from Isaiah, the eleventh chapter, and in the evening he based his theme on Zechariah 2: 1-5.

On the 19th, Sunday, we again took the cars and met with the Hibbard Saints. Owing to so much sickness in the branch, not nearly so many attended. Sister Orpha Coon-fare lay near death's portals, but the Lord saw fit to spare her, and now she seems on the road to recovery. Sisters Stephenson, Myers, and others have been suffering, but all seem better at this writing.

Sister Myrtle Perry spent a week with relatives at Coldwater, Michigan, but met with us again last evening (June 22).

There is quite a wave of unemployment in South Bend at present, but we are trusting conditions will be better soon. We feel our regular services have been well attended considering the sickness and prevailing conditions. Our prayer meetings have not dropped below twenty, and the desires to press forward in service are good to hear.

Western Maine Meets in Conference

The Saints of Western Maine District met at Stonington, June 18 and 19, for the annual two-day conference, in charge of Elder Amos Berve.

All visitors were made to feel welcome by the hospitable way in which the Stonington Saints provided for their comfort.

The services were well attended, all feeling blessed in their efforts to attend; some said they believed it to be the most peaceful and spiritual conference held there for years. The spiritual sermons preached by Patriarch U. W. Greene, of Independence, Missouri, and Brother Newman Wilson, of Jonesport, were exceptionally fine, while the prayer services were made more enjoyable by the gifts being manifested.

Sunday at 2 p. m. the service was given over to the departments: the Sunday school and junior church, represented by Sister Elizabeth Bartow; the Department of Women, by Sister Freeda Bartow; and the Department of Recreation and Expression by Elder Archie Begg, all of Vinal Haven, each doing full justice to his department.

The confirmation of two children, baptized earlier in the day, took place at the close of the talk on Sunday school and junior church work, which seemed very appropriate.

Many spoke of the enjoyable time they experienced and are looking forward to meeting in October at Vinal Haven for the fall conference.

Now is the time for vacations, and when making plans don't forget the reunion at Brooksville, August 5 to 14. Sloping green fields are surrounded by natural hedges which inclose the reunion grounds. The larger field, which is used for the small village of tents, has for its boundary on one side the gradually sloping shore of Walker's Pond, making an ideal place for bathing for small children as well as the most experienced swimmer.

When one takes into consideration the ideal camping grounds, the splendid service of the dining hall, the privilege of water sports, added to those of the land, and with all this the association of those of like faith, the prayers and preaching services, round table talks, departmental meetings, etc., what better vacation can one plan?

Get in Touch With This Inquirer

I want to attend a Latter Day Saint meeting some place this summer, and would be grateful if some one living near the church near Paris, Tennessee, would write me, stating what time they will have their meeting this season. I am not a member of the church, but believe in the latter-day gospel and have faith in the work. I have been healed a few times and wonderfully blessed in other ways. And I have a desire to unite with the church. For these reasons I would very much like to hear from some Saint near Paris, Tennessee.

B. T. RUSH.

LAVINIA, TENNESSEE, June 12.

Why You Should Attend Nauvoo Reunion

There is no place more interesting to Latter Day Saints from a historical standpoint than Nauvoo, the Saints having settled there in 1838. Nauvoo was known at that time as Commerce, and consisted of a small village of about a dozen families. In 1838 Joseph Smith came there from Jackson County, Missouri, and purchased forty acres of ground, with a small log house upon it, on the banks of the great Mississippi. Soon after, a new charter was secured, and the town was named Nauvoo.

Nauvoo grew from a handful in 1838 to a city of twenty-five thousand in 1844, when Joseph and Hyrum were killed by a mob. The Saints were soon after driven out and many of their homes destroyed, until at the present time it is a village of only about one thousand.

The general church owns at present what is known as the Old Homestead, the Mansion House, and the Nauvoo House. The Nauvoo House and the Homestead are located just a few feet from the sandy banks of the great Mississippi, which is about two miles wide at this point.

There are also many other places of interest to tourists, such as David's Chamber, and many other substantial brick buildings that were erected by the Saints during the period between 1838 and 1844.

You can get first-hand information regarding one of the most interesting historical spots connected with our church. The experience of crossing the river on the ferryboat that plies back and forth between Montrose, Iowa, and Nauvoo, Illinois, will be worth the trip to Nauvoo if you have never had such an experience. At this beautiful historical spot we will have a reunion, August 19 to 23, which offers the Saints a wonderful opportunity to visit this place.

F. C. BEVAN, District President.

Good Conditions Reported at Richmond

Since the middle of last January, after the closing of the ministerial institute in Independence, I have spent about nine weeks in Richmond, Missouri, and vicinity.

The work is advancing nicely at this point, which has been selected as a center of the missionary activities for the regions round about. No mistake has been made in selecting Richmond as an objective, as it is surrounded by many openings for our work which are proving quite successful as to both interest and attendance. Meetings have been held at Russellville and at Millville, where we have found the interest such as to justify other efforts being made there again soon. Our next effort will most likely be made at Excelsior Springs, beginning June 25.

The work of the Sunday school and Religio, and of the local ministry, under the supervision of the pastor at Richmond, Elder W. G. Hamann, together with the three missionary efforts put forth there this year, is beginning to bear fruit. Nine were baptized recently, and others have expressed a desire to unite with the church. The general condition of the work in Richmond is much better than it has ever been.

The cottage, which stands upon the two lots in a very desirable location, which has been purchased for the building of a church, has been arranged as the present meeting place. Another partition has been removed recently, to accommodate the increase in attendance, until now one hundred and twenty-five at least can be seated. A volley ball court has been built on the adjoining lot, for the use of the young people, and much interest is being shown in recreational activities.

We are very much encouraged to see the progress that is being made. The local ministry is organized so as to take care of the five or six openings surrounding Richmond, which, if properly cared for, bids fair to become one of the strongholds for our work in the Far West Stake.

The Saints and friends of Richmond appreciate visits of any of the ministry or Saints. It is only about forty miles from Independence, Missouri, by way of Lexington, with paved roads all the way. Its historical setting is of much interest. Joseph the Martyr and a number of the early-day Saints were imprisoned here. The graves of Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer are of interest. The courthouse is a beautiful structure, upon all four sides of which is to be found the inscription, "Obedience to law is liberty." The monument of General Alexander Doniphan, who so many times befriended the Saints in the early days, stands majestically facing the west in the courthouse square.

May God continue to bless this faithful band of Saints, who are accomplishing much in the interest of his cause.

J. CHARLES TAYLOR

Fresno, California

May 8 to 15, Mothers' and Daughters' Week, was truly a busy one in Fresno. On Mothers' Day the branch visited Tulare in a body and all were highly entertained, not only by a program by the Tulare Sunday school, but by a sermon by Brother Roy Burton.

On Tuesday evening Brother Burton came to Fresno with several Tulare Saints and gave us an interesting talk on the Book of Mormon, exhibiting several relics and curios of the Indian people among whom he has been doing missionary work.

On Thursday evening a mothers' and daughters' program was rendered, under the auspices of the Temple Builders, and Saturday evening the Department of Women served a cafeteria supper, which netted them, after all expenses were paid, fifteen dollars, which was a very good sum considering only five cents was charged for each article of food, and lemonade was free.

Brother Levitt will return to Fresno June 8 to hold a ten-day meeting for which time we are anxiously awaiting and preparing.

Another very promising young lady was added to our number by baptism during the month of May.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Corner Main Street and Dufferin Avenue

June 22.—The members of the Saskatoon Branch are busily preparing for our annual conference, which will be held in the church here. The date has not yet been officially announced, although that of the Southern Saskatchewan District is scheduled for July 14 to 17. In all probability ours will be the week following. We hope to have with us Brother J. W. Davis, our missionary, Patriarch Gunsolley and his companion, and Brother J. J. Cornish. These, with our district ministry, insure us a worth-while conference.

A basement floor is required in our church and also a front porch. It is hoped that all will be completed in time for the conference. Donations continue to come in for the building fund.

The best news of all is in regard to our choir, which has recently been organized. We are studying three anthems for conference, the music having been kindly loaned us by the conductor of Saint James Anglican Church Choir. The choir is also sending us two soloists. A member of the Disciple Church is one of our basses, and already we have been invited to sing with the massed choirs of the city on Confederation Day and the following Sunday.

Our dear sister, Clara Piedt Winmill, was called home a few weeks ago, after a lingering illness of more than a year. We feel the deepest sympathy for her young husband, Brother Ross Cleveland Winmill, and for Brother and Sister Piedt and their family. The Saints of the district held a number of prayer services in her behalf throughout the year, but for some reason, too deep for us to understand, our petitions could not be granted. Sister Clara had an unusually gentle disposition and was ever forgetful of self. Her passing has drawn us closer in our branch, and we notice a more consecrated brotherly spirit than ever before. The Saints are ready to do whatever task lies nearest, and the Lord's work is progressing here as a consequence.

We culled the following inspiring lines from the church paper of our Saskatoon Daily:

"Work is devout, and service is divine,
Who stoops to scrub the floor
May worship more,
Than he who kneels before a holy shrine;
Who crushes stubborn ore
More worthily adore
Than he who crushes sacramental wine."
—Ronald Campbell Macfie.

Pleasantview Branch

TRYON, NEBRASKA, June 21.—News is scarce this month. We have discontinued Sunday school at the suggestion of the president, because some of our most active and faithful members have moved away and some of those left lack interest to attend and take part.

The rally day for July will be held at the Newberry Schoolhouse, July 3. It may be the last of the rally days here, though this has not been definitely decided. On that day North Platte Branch will meet with Pleasantview Branch, and Saints from thirty miles west are expected.

Home-Coming at Orion, Michigan

The annual home-coming of the Orion Branch was held at their chapel on June 5, 1927. The morning exercises were as follows: Sunday school at 9.45, in charge of local officers. V. D. Schaar, superintendent of Detroit District, had charge of the senior classes, while the juniors were taken care of by the local teachers.

Eleven o'clock sacramental service was held in the upper room, while the younger people were taken care of by Sister Verna Schaar. A very spiritual time was had, many speaking of the joy it gave them to once more meet with those with whom they had worshiped in former days. The service was in charge of A. H. DuRose, district president, and H. A. Koehler, Central Michigan missionary, assisted by the local brethren.

A basket lunch at noon was enjoyed after which all repaired to the banks of beautiful Lake Orion, where three precious souls were buried in the waters of baptism by Brother Koehler, and were later confirmed by Brothers Koehler and DuRose. Those baptized were Mrs. Audrey Gilmore, and Zelda and Kenneth Davis, the latter two being the children of Brother and Sister Frank Davis.

At two o'clock a splendid Children's Day program was given by the young people and children, under the management of the branch chorister, Sister Mona Schaar. Too much praise can not be given for the way in which Sister Mona trains the choir and the children.

At half past three o'clock Professor Huggett, superintendent of the Orion high school, gave a fine lecture, the subject being, "The relation of the school to the church." Professor Huggett thought the Bible should have some place in the school, but said that so far they had failed to find a way which would be of interest as well as value to the different church societies, and thought perhaps the only way would be to have a stated time for Bible instruction given at the school building by the clergy of the different denominations.

In the evening a large crowd gathered to listen to Missionary H. A. Koehler. His sermon was much enjoyed by all present.

A pleasant day was spent in meeting and conversing with old friends and former members of Orion Branch, and many who were present who had never been members, but who like to visit us occasionally.

Our home-coming is always held on the first Sunday in June, and everyone is welcome to come and enjoy a good time with us.

JULIA HAMMOND, Branch Clerk.

Lincoln, Nebraska

Corner Twenty-sixth and H Streets

June 24.—During the first part of March, several carloads of people went to Nebraska City to the district conference. We all had a very good time and were treated royally by the folks there. At this time, Brother Lawrence Brockway, of Kansas, who is attending the University in Lincoln, was ordained an elder. We are all glad for Lawrence, as we feel that he is very capable.

Early in the spring we were fortunate in having Brother Edwards here to hold a week's services which were sponsored by the young people.

On the Friday night after Mothers' Day, the Temple Builder girls gave their mothers a banquet in the basement of the church. All had a good time, and each mother and daughter felt nearer to one another.

On June 5 a goodly number of the Lincoln Saints went to Union, Nebraska, to the Everett Grove for an all-day meeting. Others from over the district were there and heard two very good talks from Brother Gleazer. Brother Gleazer spent a few days in Lincoln and preached two very interesting sermons. He and Brother Robertson then went on over the district.

The summer without the university students is beginning rather slowly, but we know that next winter, when they come back we shall be ready to move onward again.

We wish to extend a hearty invitation and welcome to all those who feel that they would like to come to the university to come out to church. We will receive you into our midst with open arms. If you come to Lincoln be sure and find the church at the corner of Twenty-sixth and H Streets.

Rupert, Idaho

We extend greetings from the Saints of Rupert Branch, Southern Idaho District. I am glad to be able to report our branch as still faithful, and while we have had a period of depression reaching back over quite a time, we are still laboring to regain our standing and are undoubtedly gaining spiritually.

We were thankful for a visit of several days from Patriarch Richard Bullard, who was the source of much comfort while here. He gave several Saints their blessings, and by kind and wise counsel has greatly encouraged us. Brother Bullard was seventy-five years old on June 13 of this year, and upon that evening the Saints came together, some forty or fifty strong, at the home of Brother and Sister A. V. Moore, and surprised him with a birthday party. If you don't think he was surprised, just ask him. The evening was spent in games on the lawn for the young people and music and singing indoors for the older ones. Then the ladies served ice cream and cake. Altogether a pleasant time was had. Our pleasure was further increased by the presence of our beloved district president and missionary, J. Arthur Davis, who is an ever-ready source of help to the poor in spirit. His presence in our midst is always a time of rejoicing, and I do not feel that we can too highly recommend the labor of this able soldier of the Master.

The time for our reunion is drawing near, August 12 to 21, at Hagerman, Idaho, about one hundred miles west of here. And with Brother Davis and Brother Bullard already here and other excellent speakers on the program, we are expecting a revival surpassing all previous events.

We have many Saints in our branch who are deeply interested in the stewardship plan, and are looking forward to the time when we can join our loved ones in the Land of Promise. May God in his loving wisdom prepare the way, and may all the Saints join with us in a prayer for each other and for Christ's victory.

MRS. A. V. MOORE.

An Original Religio Program

Our correspondent at Akron, Ohio, recently reported the production of an original program of poems, songs, stories, and essays, by the putting on of which some good talent has been discovered in the branch. The report was rather exceptional and engendered interest and we wrote for a fuller account of the occurrence, which we have received. Our correspondent must have been at considerable expense of time and energy to send us what she has, a copy of each song, poem, story, paper, and so forth, which was rendered.

We believe the Religio must surely have enjoyed this demonstration of what its members could do, and their success will likely cause future endeavor along similar lines. The editors are thankful for the opportunity of scanning the work done, and are sorry they have not space to spare for their publication.

The account in the news columns will be found on page 665 of the HERALD. We are here appending the detail of the program:

Wants to See Auditorium Speedily Completed

I note with pleasure the article in the last issue of the HERALD entitled "Beginning work on the Auditorium again." I feel the need of this building is imperative; that we can not meet the issue of building up Zion without it. If I am not mistaken, it is the first building under construction in Zion, being built according to the Zion program. And I do not think I am far wrong in saying this is the house referred to so often in the eighty-fifth section of the current edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

I have not known much, and perhaps never shall, and I have earned my living by hardships, yet I feel a firm determination to see one more thing accomplished for the benefit of this work, and that is the building of the Auditorium. I would like to see President Smith issue another call to complete the building. I have heard many Saints say they would double their former offering if used for that purpose. If the call comes, I shall do the same. May God bless us and help us to make the building program of Zion a success.

HANNIBAL, MISSOURI, June 22.

WILLARD A. ATWELL.

Brockton, Massachusetts

15 Appleton Street, off Wyman Street

Elder H. A. Chelline, pastor, resides at 83½ Cary Street.

No doubt our friends will be glad to know Elder H. A. Chelline and family have taken up their residence in our city, thereby adding to our strength. Brockton has been most unfortunate in losing many members by transfer. The priesthood have only a few active officers left to do the work necessary. They are as follows: Elder H. A. Chelline; Priest H. L. Reynolds; Priest D. E. Crowell. One dear old brother, John Hoxie, has been off our active list for some time. He has reached the ripe old age of eighty-six years, yet his thoughts and desires are always centered around the gospel of Christ. He has been in the church for over half a century. Harold Garfield, a priest of the branch, has gone to Bridgeport, Connecticut, to work. Brother Garfield will soon claim as his bride Miss Muriel Ridley, of London, Ontario, a very prominent church worker there.

There have been several opportunities for the Saints to get together and hold services at the homes of isolated brethren. One visit in particular was with Brother Reed, of Beachwood, Massachusetts. Brother Reed is a faithful defender of the faith who with his companion has spent many years in this work. We are sure they can well be remembered for their good works.

Brother Ernest Megathlin has been called to the office of elder and will shortly be ordained. Brother Megathlin's support will be truly appreciated by all.

The departments are enjoying a good season, and everyone seems to appreciate his part in the work.

During the months of July and August, there will be no Sunday evening services of any description. The morning service at 10.30 will continue, followed by the Sunday school service at 11.45 (excepting Sunday, July 24 and 31 and August 7; during this period the annual reunion will hold session at Onset, Massachusetts). There will continue to be held the midweek prayer services on Wednesday evening, 7.30.

Cherokee, Iowa

The work here is progressing, perhaps not as fast as we would like to have it, but there is a good spirit present, and a large percentage of the Saints are trying to work while it is day, realizing the night will soon come, when no man can work.

Our prayer services are always a great help and strength to the few who attend. Knowing the blessings we receive from the Spirit in the prayer service, we can not understand why so many Saints let a golden opportunity to both give and receive pass by. However, the Master said we would fail to see many things, and surely this is true in our time.

Eleven Saints from here attended district conference at Mallard and report a grand spiritual time. Brother Garver's talk was worth going many miles to hear. The Spirit blessed him and his hearers greatly. We truly feel to thank God for such men to teach us.

Brothers M. K. Fry and C. J. Smith passed through on their way to conference at Mallard. We are expecting them to visit us soon.

Brother and Sister Murl Meyers, district Sunday school president and secretary, visited our school June 12. Brother Meyers was the speaker at the morning service, and his effort was a spiritual blessing for all.

Sister Leonard, wife of our priest, has been very ill, but through God's assistance and power is somewhat better.

Little Bobbie Shove has been very ill and underwent an operation at the hospital. Through administration and the faith of God's people, he is recovering rapidly. Surely God will bless us if we come in faith believing.

Teacher Albert Haynes and wife were visitors at Denison last Sunday.

Pastor A. R. Crippen is trying to keep the priesthood in service by having each take his turn in the pulpit as well as doing his other duties. Deacon Alfred Ballantyne gave his first sermon last Sunday evening and through his humble submission to God's Spirit was able to give a very creditable talk.

Brother Frank Sheldon and family have returned from a trip to Independence, and now have gone on another trip through eastern Iowa and parts of Illinois.

Brother and Sister W. H. Leese and daughter, Pearl, were attendants at morning services today. They come from Denison.

Our district president, E. L. Bedwell, came to visit us in his first trip around the district and was the speaker at both morning and evening services today, June 26. He is young and willing to work for his Master, and we predict he will be successful in his work in this field.

Independence

Stone Church

The July sacramental service at the Stone Church proved to be one of unusual profit and attraction. A large crowd participated, feelingly joining in the songs led by Brother Paul N. Craig, reverently bowing in prayer, and joyously offering testimonies of gratitude and praise. Bishop M. H. Siegfried was called upon by Pastor Miller, who was in charge of the meeting, to give the preliminary remarks. Explaining the purpose of the oblation, he impressed upon the minds of his hearers that we can serve God only by serving our fellow men, and drew a pleasing mental picture of God, the merciful heavenly Parent. His words were solace to anguished hearts and minds worried with care. The testimonies offered in the twenty-five-minute period following the partaking of the Lord's supper were of particularly high order. Saints from distant places spoke of the hope members of their home branch cherish. Older members, whom the Saints have already called blessed, rose to their feet and expressed words of thankfulness, hope, and satisfaction with the gospel, showing their faith unwavering after many years of trial, their courage undaunted, their trust in God's promises unshaken.

At the same hour the juniors met in sacramental service in the lower auditorium. There were one hundred and twenty-five present, and Elders J. W. Peterson, J. A. Koehler, W. L. Chapman, and James L. Gray were in charge. The young people responded quickly, and in fifteen minutes seven testimonies were borne, five prayers were voiced, and several songs sung. A new feature of these meetings is the spiritual experience related by one of the priesthood in charge at the commencement of the meeting. Those participating in the meeting seem to enjoy these experiences, comparing them with their own and deriving good therefrom.

Elders James Strachan and Jasper O. Dutton had charge of the junior service at the Campus. Four prayers and thirty-seven testimonies were given. Teachers and pupils regret that Brother A. K. Dillee is not permitted to meet with them any more, for they had grown to love him for his kind instruction and quiet ways.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. a children's program arranged by Mrs. C. A. Shoop, of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church, was presented by the Boy Scouts of Troop 228, S. A. Yale, scoutmaster. The program included piano solos by George Marquis; cornet solos by Alfred Yale; story by Benjamin McGuire, and scout numbers by the troop.

Bible study hour commenced at nine o'clock and was conducted by Elder Farrell. At eleven studio service music was furnished by a quartet composed of Thelma Vincent, Elizabeth Okerlind, Fred Friend, and Frank Russell; instrumental trio: Frank White, violinist; Martin Mills, flutist; Emma Tandberg, pianist. Sermonet, Elder John F. Sheehy.

K L D S Radio Church service was presented by the Mount Washington Baptist Church, with music furnished by the choir; Mrs. J. C. Monroe, soprano, Mrs. D. L. Phillips, accompanist. The sermonet was delivered by the Reverend A. F. Pearson, who for more than five years has been actively engaged in ministerial work and is exceedingly well known throughout Missouri.

Vesper service consisted of musical numbers arranged by Miss Lilly Belle Allen, and was presented by a mixed quartet composed of Miss Allen, soprano; Edna Daniel, contralto; Alma Kearns, tenor; Wingfield Lewis, bass. Sermonet, Ralph W. Farrell.

Elder R. S. Salyards delivered the sermonet for the Latter Day Saint studio service commencing at 9.15. The sermonet was preceded by music furnished by the Stone Church Choir; Robert Miller, organist; Margaret Gard, contralto; Mrs. Pauline Short Bailey, soprano.

At the Campus

"Social tests of Christian discipleship" was the theme upon which Bishop J. A. Koehler spoke Sunday evening at the Campus. He reminded his hearers of the two theories of a religious life. One theory is that the church with its beliefs, practices, and rites is a device for turning away from secular matters and interests. This theory had its perfect expression in the monastic life of several centuries ago. It is a drawing away from one's fellow men for the selfish purpose of saving one's own soul. This proved not to be the Christian religion. God hated it. We have yet to learn the reward of one duty is power to fulfill another.

The second theory is expressed in the purpose of a church to release personal energy in the very places where the souls of men are being damned by unrighteous practices God will not hear the prayers of a church that is unwilling to devote itself to the task of giving men better moral training and physical well-being as well as spiritual development. This second theory will have its perfect expression in the establishment of Zion.

Taking for his text, "Behold, how beautiful and how pleasant it is for men to dwell together in unity! . . . for there the Lord commanded the blessing," Brother Koehler carefully analyzed and explained its meaning, applying it to present-day needs. "This involves three ideas," he stated; "first, God has put upon us the obligation to learn to live together; second, only by working at our 'live together' problem can we express righteousness to God; and third, our willingness to work at our 'live together' problem is the price of divine favor. This unity idea was taught by Paul." The speaker cited several instances where this principle was expounded. "The time of the church's greatest spiritual prosperity," he went on, "was when it was putting across what some people call a secular enterprise. We can not sidestep our duty." The job of evangelizing the world is a social affair; our work can not be done by separate action. The world must be socialized before it can be Christianized. We are commanded, "Bear ye one another's burdens." One of the great tests of Christian discipleship is the willingness to be spent for the good of others, to be possessed of love of God and our fellow men. Zion building involves every kind of living together problem, and a people can not be religiously clean that is socially unclean; righteous in religion that is unrighteous in morals. It is imperative for us to socialize ourselves and our resources. As an example of Christian love and discipleship, Abraham Lincoln was given.

Preceding this sermon, music was contributed by the combined Stone Church and Walnut Park Orchestras, directed by Bishop R. T. Cooper. A special musical selection was "Forgotten perfumes," a piece contributed by J. W. Jenkins Music Company. Elder John Sheehy led the singing, and the opening song was "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord," being followed by prayer by Elder William I. Fligg.

The concluding feature of the evening's program was a reel of Pathe News of scenes in China and beautiful American parks, also a reel, "The prodigal son."

According to previous announcement, Sunday night saw the beginning of junior church services in charge of Elder Sheehy. The children were assembled in a tent north of the Institute Building, and a good meeting is reported.

All day Monday, the 4th, the Campus was the scene of activity. Picnickers came early and late and enjoyed the green lawns and big shade trees. The refreshment stand was open all day, and many kinds of food were to be bought there. Ball games were the order of the afternoon, beginning at two.

Music for the evening was furnished by the Independence Boys' Band, attractive in white uniforms and caps; and amusement was afforded by a colored quartet, two banjos, a saxophone, and a bass viol. In the evening, the picture, "The new Klondike," was enjoyed by a very large crowd of people.

Interesting Personals

It is not always easy to report the exact places members of higher quorums are at work. We do not know definitely where they are. President Floyd M. McDowell returned Tuesday from attending a young people's convention in Windsor, Ontario. Bishop Albert Carmichael finds himself engrossed in the reunion at Chetek, Wisconsin, and Bishop J. A. Becker left Sunday night en route for Texas. He later intends to be present at several western reunions. The apostles are scattered near and far, some at reunions, some at special meetings, and others carrying on in the usual missionary work. Brother Roy S. Budd is at the reunion at Owen Sound, Ontario; Edmund J. Gleazer finds himself about missionary duties in San Antonio, Texas. Brother F. Henry Edwards spent the Fourth in Des Moines. Apostle Ellis has recently been operated upon for appendicitis and is now in the Independence Sanitarium. The Andes, Montana, reunion is occupying Brother J. F. Curtis's attention. Others workers in Independence will soon be on their way to reunions to which they are assigned.

Second Church

There was a light attendance at the regular session of the Sunday school, but it was an interesting meeting.

In the sacramental service at eleven o'clock, the Saints were made to rejoice because of the abundance of the good Spirit which was given them. The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Frank Leaverton was blessed during this meeting.

Numbers of the Saints have been out of town over Sunday and the Fourth of July, making this two- or three-day period the occasion for a short vacation.

Saturday evening, at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Street, there occurred the marriage of their daughter, Sister Alice Street, to Brother Guy Mintun. They returned to Independence Monday evening after a short trip and vacation.

Walnut Park

Vacation time has interfered with the correspondent's work recently. June 19 our new pastor, O. C. White, preached in strongest terms the idea of there being something for everyone to do. Even the ten-year-old child can be given a part in Zion building. Brother White takes up the pastorate with great zeal and as though he had years of experience in that line of work.

The speaker on June 26 was a former pastor, Elder J. A. Dowker. We shall be pleased to have him meeting with us again regularly.

Instead of the various groups meeting in their appointed places, a union prayer meeting was called at the church on June 29. Our old veteran, Elder W. H. Kelley, made the opening remarks. His theme was faith, and he spoke feelingly of the experiences of the Saints of long ago in Independence and vicinity. One interesting story told was of the time when Joseph the Seer and seven other brethren were confined in the Liberty Jail, together with a band of drunken ruffians. Joseph called for the brethren to join him in singing, "Awake, my soul, in joyful lays." This quelled the rabble, and they apologized for their rudeness. Sister Herbst who has been ill for many weary months was able to meet with us in this service. She expressed her gratitude for this privilege and her appreciation of the many kind deeds performed by the Saints and neighbors. If there is sufficient demand, a union meeting will be called once a month.

Others among our seriously sick ones are also better—Sister J. W. Adams, Sister Lurett Whiting, and Sister B. J. Scott.

Sunday, July 3, found a good attendance at the early morning meeting, and this hour as well as the time for sacramental meeting, presided over by Pastor White, was all too short for those who would have occupied.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Bishop B. J. Scott, 1015 South Dodgeon, Independence, Tuesday evening, June 28, when Donabell Stephens and Ralph W. Rohrs were married by Bishop Scott. The couple will be at home in Independence July 1.

Gudgell Park

Gudgell Park Sunday school went in a body to Blue Springs Sunday, June 26, where they enjoyed a visit with the Saints, hearing a well-rendered program. Following the services, Gudgell Park and Blue Springs Saints motored to Woods Chapel, where they were again joined by a band of Saints. Then all three groups went over a very rough, rocky road through a picturesque country to a beautiful wood, where cafeteria lunch was enjoyed.

After lunch we were lined up for a picture, taken by Brother Brackenbury. And last, but also important, we witnessed the induction of nineteen precious souls into the church through the waters of baptism. Confirmations followed in the shade, and sweet were the songs sung.

A short Children's Day program was given by Gudgell Park children. Everyone seemed to enjoy the day immensely, but please don't ask us how we got there or how we got back, as only the leader and drivers can tell that.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-Sixth and Honore Streets

Central Chicago Branch has just closed a very profitable two weeks' service. Brother John R. Grice gave us some splendid discourses, which were made more impressive by his beautiful solos. The song services preceding the sermons were heartily enjoyed, too, Brother Grice being a very capable conductor.

The Wednesday evening prayer meetings were especially good. The sacramental service on the last day was one apart, as the testimonies were different from the ordinary and very interesting.

The tendency to linger and visit after the services each night developed into a social on the last Friday evening of the meetings, the service having been held earlier than the other evening services. Ice cream and cake were served, and a pleasant evening spent.

Brother David Dowker preached the Mothers' Day sermon, arousing within our hearts the tenderest of emotions. Special music was rendered, and each mother received a rose.

On the third Sunday of last month the adult service gave way to the junior church under Sister Bell's management, the sermon being preached by Brother H. P. W. Keir.

One of the pleasant evenings recently enjoyed was furnished us by the Hammond Branch. One Friday evening they visited our Department of Recreation and Expression and enacted for our benefit, "The Questioner," which was both instructive and entertaining. This was greatly appreciated by the Chicago Branch.

Enthused with the Spirit engendered during the special meetings, the choir renewed their efforts to be of service. The result was a musical, consisting of sacred anthems, solos, quartets, trios, etc. It was a very splendid performance and well worth the price of admission.

The Sunday school has decided to have a Fourth of July picnic. All are invited to join us in our good times.

Resolutions of Respect and Condolence

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved Patriarch Charles E. Butterworth, who has labored in Gallands Grove for over forty years;

Be it resolved: That we, the Saints of Gallands Grove District, assembled in conference, at Mallard, Iowa, May 28, 1927, do extend the bereaved wife and family of our departed brother our heartfelt thanks for his wonderful service, and our deepest sympathy and sorrow for their loss of a kind, loving husband and father.

Be it further resolved, That we will remember our brother by the life he lived and the example he set for us.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved widow, and also to the SAINTS' HERALD for publication.

THE COMMITTEE,

W. W. REEDER.

ROBERT FISH.

A. R. CRIPPEN.

Joplin, Missouri

Twenty-first Street and Annie Baxter Avenue

An ice cream social held on the lawn of the church, Monday night, June 27, was well attended. The proceeds will be used by the Women's Department in their work at this place. This was the first social of the season, and as it was a success several more will be planned in the near future. The orchestra gave us several selections, which helped to keep things going until a late hour.

Eleven persons from the Joplin Branch attended the institute conducted by Eugene Closson at Columbus, Kansas, on Sunday, June 26. They were headed by Chester Carter, the local superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Brooklyn, New York

July 1.—During the past two months we have been made to feel the directing power of the Master, and his love has been enjoyed in various ways, especially in our two group prayer services, held every Wednesday evening. Some of our members have been sick, but all are well on their way to recovery, also our church services have been blessed with greater numbers.

We welcome to our church any visiting members in the city. Information will be given as to the best route to the Brooklyn church by calling Phone Decatur 101-04, or Virginia 8527.

Many special events have been held in the church since our last letter. The choir and orchestra gave two banquets, one being a surprise party to their leader; also a number of musicals have been held. At some of these specials their forces have been augmented by outside talent, friends of our members. In every case these have been artists in their line. Much praise can be given to our young musical leader, E. Leroy Squire, who has been untiring in his endeavors to create greater interest in the Sunday services.

The Department of Women are always ready to help in every event held in the church. Their last feature was a strawberry festival, which included a concert by the Kitchen Canaries. This latter organization is composed of members of the department who play on instruments made from kitchen utensils. They are uniformed in white with a drum major in a big red coat. The whole affair was a big success, socially and otherwise.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. E. B. Hull suffered a painful accident on one of her visits to a neighboring branch. She fell and broke a bone in her leg and sprained the ankle.

It was necessary to have the limb placed in a plaster cast for a few weeks. Our sister, who also is the district superintendent, intended visiting all the locals in the district, but this accident has retarded her endeavors for the present.

Mothers' Day was observed with appropriate services, also Children's Day with special features by the Sunday school primary and junior departments. Pastor E. B. Hull baptized three of our Sunday school members at this time. Two were children and one an adult young man.

On the 25th of June, our pastor and Elder J. A. Jaques went to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to take part in a ministerial conference. They report the meetings well attended, when one takes into consideration that this is the time of the year when many are taking vacations. We are now looking forward to our annual district reunion at Deer Park, Pennsylvania, August 12-28. A good time is expected there.

Neligh, Nebraska

Each and every one of the members here is looking forward to the coming reunion, which is to be held on July 14 at the Riverside Park.

A picnic was held at the "Yellow Banks," which is about twenty-six miles from here, on June 26. All near-by schools were invited, but as the notice was so short, only a few were represented. There were between eighty and ninety people present, and all enjoyed themselves to the greatest extent.

Sunday school was held in the morning, after which a picnic dinner was served. Many games were played, although it was very hot and many people got sunburned. Near the middle of the afternoon, we were favored by a short talk concerning Graceland, from Herbert Atwood, who attended Graceland the past year. Many songs were sung to answer the requests. Games were again played, and much interest and clean sportsmanship were shown.

Although all were tired when they got home, they did not forget the Religio, which was held immediately on the return. Those who did not attend the picnic have much to regret, although this number is very small.

We know this same spirit will be present at the reunion to be held here July 14, and we urge everyone to be here who possibly can.

EZRA OEHRING.

Rally Day at Hibbard, Indiana

Sunday, June 19, was our annual rally day at Hibbard, and the branch president was sacrificing in his anxiety to stage the best for our humble branch.

The heavens had been obscured so much by clouds and "much water," for the season had been in evidence, it was no wonder some misgivings were manifested. All season long the showers had rattled like the tattoo of a corps of snare drums on forest, roof, and field. But on Saturday night, the opening service, a fervent prayer ascended from our presiding officer to which the assembled Saints responded "Amen."

The following day was ideal. Sunshine and shower had wrapped the billowy greens with a mantle of living verdure. Hill and valley robed in exquisite bloom. The sun from a cornucopia of gold poured gems into the lap of June. What an inspiration to Saints gathering for the worship and honor of the kind Father, the author of beauty and joy! Carloads of Saints were early on hand from a distance, Elkhart, Mishawaka, South Bend, Laporte, North Judson, and Fort Wayne. And even far-off California was enabled to have representatives present.

Counting the big dinner, six services were enthusiastically conducted during the day as follows: sermon, 10.30 a. m.; big dinner in the apple grove at noon; sermon at 2.30 p. m.; sacrament, 3.30; song service, 6; and sermon, at 8 p. m. Elder S. W. L. Scott did all the speaking and dropped many valuable thoughts. One could not help but feel the peaceful spirit and earnestness that accompanied the speaker. In the sacramental service, Brother Scott and Elder Freeman, of South Bend were in charge, assisted by Priests Walter, of Elkhart, and Listenberger, of Hibbard. A fine spirit prevailed during the day. Sister Dolly Reed presided at the keyboard the entire day. Solos, duets, and quartet numbers were rendered by Sisters Myers and Freeman and Brothers Friese and Scott, while Mr. Rector, of Culver, contributed a violin solo.

The congregational music was supported by three violins under technic of Brothers H. C. Listenberger and Wilsey, of Elkhart, and Mr. Rector.

We shall remember the blessings of the Lord accompanying the day's work.

The sisters were whole-hearted, as they always are, in making the gathering successful. The Lord was very near his people, notwithstanding sickness hindered some from gathering.

Sister Kendall recently passed on to a better condition, we feel, dying from the effects of measles and pneumonia. Services were conducted from the United Brethern Church of Burr Oak, Elder S. W. L. Scott officiating. She was a good, true woman, one loved by all, as was manifested by the large number of floral offerings.

Sister Wise, who has been visiting her daughter at Phoenix, Arizona, starts back home July 1.

All-Day Meeting in Spring River District

An all-day meeting was held for the members of Spring River District Sunday schools, June 26, at Columbus, Kansas, city park. Our day was an enjoyable one, and I hope a profitable one. The day dawned with a few scattered clouds, but they soon vanished, as the sun rose bright and beautiful, promising us a clear day. For this we were thankful.

I was up at five o'clock and off to Webb City, Missouri, to help Sister Devers and her junior choir, so they might all be with us, and I was well repaid for this effort. As I looked upon these children whom I have known since they were babies, and as they sang, I thanked God for such leaders as Sister Devers for the children as yet unspotted by the sins of this world. My prayer is that they may continue to be cared for until they develop into useful men and women for Christ and his church.

The crowd gathered early. The first meeting, called at 10 a. m., had for its speaker, Brother Eugene Closson, who talked on the topic, "Methods of teaching." His discourse was well received. At eleven Brother Lee Quick spoke on the subject of "love." He said we must love our neighbors, our companions, our children, our homes, the church, and the Nation. He spoke of the time when he and his wife drove nine miles and back every night in a two-wheeled cart to attend church, declaring they were the happiest days of his life, because he loved his wife and the church.

At noon we spread out our basket lunches, and needless to say we enjoyed it. An hour and a half later we were back in the park pavilion for a round table discussion on the subject: "What shall we do with our young people on Sunday afternoons?" I can not tell all that was said at this time. Our aims were the same, but our methods differed. It was suggested that we be careful and not go to extremes, always directing our children instead of giving them too many "don'ts."

Our program started at three o'clock. It was as follows: Song, by Webb City Junior Choir; two readings, Naydem Herndon, Miami, Oklahoma; cornet solo, Jimmie Evans, Pittsburg, Kansas; solo, Junior Butler, Weir, Kansas; piano solo, Ruth Laymons, Vinita, Oklahoma; two solos by Job Negeim, Pittsburg, Kansas; reading, Mildred Freeman, Webb City, Missouri; piano solo, Hazel Rook, Miami, Oklahoma; song, Webb City Junior Choir; piano duet, the little Misses Freeman and Moddet, Webb City; solo, Miss Hobert, Webb City.

From 7.15 to 8.30 District President Amos T. Higdon spoke for us. His counsel was to look for the beautiful and keep love within. This impressed us that we should watch our own lives instead of talking about our neighbors.

During the following hour, Brother Gilbert, of Pittsburg, Kansas, put his pictures of the Holy Land on the canvas. The lecture was given by our Arabian brother, Job Negeim, and was well received by Columbus people. Job is getting to be quite a lecturer, as well as a good singer.

Our day ended with prayer by Brother Higdon.

I want to take this opportunity to thank all the Saints in this district for their splendid response and help in making our day a success.

ANDREW J. JONES,

Sunday School Superintendent, Spring River District.

COLUMBUS, KANSAS, Route 2.

Lamoni Stake

Oland

Children's Day was observed at Oland Sunday evening, June 19. The program consisted of exercises by the children and young people, recitations and a reading, two quartets and songs, and an anthem by the choir. All the numbers were well rendered and received by an appreciative audience which filled the building to capacity. Quite a number of non-members were present. The house was beautifully decorated with roses, ferns, and crepe paper.

The regular monthly socials held by the Department of Recreation and Expression continue to maintain their popularity. A program is given each time, followed by recreational activities and refreshments. Quite a friendly atmosphere is manifest, and many friends outside the church come to these socials who would not come to any other service, and in this way much prejudice is broken down.

Our branch is small, so the attendance at regular services is not large, but there is an interest and feeling of oneness noticeable which augurs well for our future growth.

Nauvoo District

The work is moving along as well as can be expected. We are happy to have Brother D. Sorden in our district. He is pastor of the Burlington Branch, and arrived here in May.

After the district conference Apostle J. F. Garver visited the following branches: Nauvoo, Illinois; Fort Madison and Ottumwa, Iowa. At each place he was well received and preached a forceful message, stressing in a constructive way the abiding realities of our faith. He would like to have visited all the branches, but time would not permit.

The district was sorry to lose Elder E. R. Williams, who has moved out of Burlington to take up a better position. Brother Williams was the branch president there for a time; he was also in charge of recreational features in district meets.

It is a true saying, as one door closes another opens. We have had two elders move into our district, Brother John Jenkins to Burlington, and Brother O. T. Hayer to Carthage, Illinois. We are very much pleased indeed to have these two in our district and welcome them and their families.

Saints of Nauvoo District are looking forward to their reunion which will be held in the historic city, Nauvoo, August 19 to 28.

"Chetek reunion is in its third day's session," writes Elder L. O. Wildermuth from Chetek, Wisconsin, July 3, "with splendid attendance and fine spirit present. Apostle D. T. Williams, Patriarch W. A. McDowell, and Elder L. G. Holloway are with us. Bishop Carmichael is expected today. The weather is fine. We expect a very successful reunion."

MISCELLANEOUS

Pastoral

To the Membership of Central Illinois District; Greeting: As the appointing powers have assigned me to labor in this field, I am desirous of getting in touch with you as soon as I can. We desire your cooperation to help us get acquainted with the work and its needs.

The first thing of importance is the coming reunion at Edinburgh, July 29 to August 7, at which time we hope to be able to meet a goodly number. Are you planning on being there? If so, please write Brother F. O. Pritchett, 2361 South Thirteenth Street, Springfield, Illinois, giving him your order for what equipment you may need.

Brethren Gleazer, Stone, and Phillips have been assigned to us for speakers and workers. Others also will no doubt be present, so come and enjoy this time together.

Owing to the situation in the mining regions this year, why can we not have a large gathering from each branch of its membership, coming and camping to enjoy the blessings that such gatherings are expected to give? Brother J. A. Williams, of Taylorville, will gladly give you any information you desire if you will write him concerning the same.

We would appreciate hearing from any of our membership who may be isolated as to their needs and desires for helping their respective localities, and will try to render what assistance we can where mostly needed.

For the present, mail addressed to us at 822 Bidwell Street, Taylorville, Illinois, will reach us in due time, and we shall be pleased to hear from any and all of you with reference to how we may be able to help you. F. T. MUSSELL.

Growing Old

Many of the Saints will recall hearing President Joseph Smith say, both in public address and in private conversation, "I desire to grow old gracefully." And it must be admitted that he was successful to more than a small degree. His success therein was largely due to knowing his limitations. In fact, success generally, or in all things, is in knowing that. Self-knowledge and close self-scrutiny are constantly necessary, to observe the effects of the slowing up processes of senescence, as well as the effects of the ripening forces.

Thus growing old is an art which anyone may acquire or cultivate. And all should endeavor to do so; for only so may one maintain the interest in life which will furnish the keen enjoyment of "beautiful old age." To fail to learn the art of graceful senescence may convert one's evening of life into a tragedy; for there is nothing more pitiful than one who because he has failed to adjust himself to the changing powers of his physical life, has become a misfit and in the way. The zest of life need not be lost because old age comes on apace, and even an old heart may thrill at the radiance of nature.

Fear largely underlies the dread of life's evening. Once replace or rather displace that fear by faith—in God, in humanity, in self, in life itself—and the road to happiness "e'en down to old age" is open, and that which allays such fear is man's greatest boon.

To have lived usefully and well, to have been clean in act and in thought will be the best assurance that people will be interested in one who has become silvered in service; and when people are interested in a person, that person will not find life bare or weighty with sorrow. Even the refinement of sorrow, of griefs overcome and converted, lends charm to those entering the evening of a well-spent life. To have been "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief" was a Christly attribute. But grief paraded and sorrow whined turns friends away, while the "smile that shines through tears" has an irresistible attraction.

To grow old gracefully there must have been left behind a record of action which is replete with memories pleasant to recall, for it is at once characteristic and right for the ripening mind to recall the pleasures of the past and even to decorate them with the bright colors which the experiences of the passing years have taken from the realities of life.

But above all, to go down to old age happily, beautifully, there must always be retained an interest in life and things. And that must center about a great objective. The man who has lived for nothing is likely to find old age sere; but he who has ever wrought to make an ideal real can carry to the verge of the grave an interest which will shed living light on his every day.

Happy are we, then, if when the time comes to grow old gracefully we can see about us the structures our ideals and faith have wrought for the good of man.

Stewardships and Dress

As most Latter Day Saints know by this time, I am thoroughly wrapped up in the doctrine of stewardship and the movement of the church to put it into practice. It's "on my mind" much of the time, and I connect it up with many of the problems with which the church is confronted, both these which are peculiar to us and those we share with other people; and frequently "memos" or notes are made when reading or meditating on these problems. Recently I was thinking of the problem of dress in connection with the stratification of society into classes and the social phenomenon of imitation wherein one class imitates the class above, especially in display, outcropping in dress, home decoration and equipment, automobiles, etc.; and as I meditated I made a "note" which I here pass on to the readers of the HERALD:

"So long as criterion of success in our society is the accumulation of wealth (bank account, property, etc.) rather than services rendered or work accomplished, there is and will be a quite natural inclination or disposition to display evidences of that "success" in fineness of garment, richness of personal adornment, luxury of home, and extravagance of equipment. But when surplus is consecrated it will automatically solve the dress problem (along with many others), for vogue will not be determined by desire to imitate, but will be determined by need and just want."

Permanent Homes for Reunions

Almost as soon as the fall reunions of the Saints became established, the spirit of progress made itself felt, and some leading men were quick to see a splendid chance to organize reunion associations which would exist for longer periods than the few weeks needed for physical preparation of the reunion, the inviting of a number of special preachers, and matters of like import.

But there was the element of change of grounds from year to year which interfered with better organization and permanency, but which bid fair to control the situation and made of the sectional or district reunion a loosely organized transient affair, of little value in an educational way, but primarily a place where Saints would gather for a week or ten days of association, to hear their favorite gospel preachers and to sing and pray together.

It is likely that several sections in which reunions were being held saw at approximately the same time the necessity for permanent locations in order that there be done away the eternal question as to where the next reunion should be held. Also that necessary improvements, such as buildings to suit their needs, sanitation of the grounds necessary for the dwelling of a large number of people in close proximity for periods of more than a week, accumulation of utensils, tools, educational equipment, etc., be made possible.

In Lamoni Stake conditions were more favorable to the permanent location than in many other places, for Lamoni was by far the largest branch of the stake and was accessible to the large majority of its membership, then numbering around four thousand souls. Sister Anna Dancer, a public-spirited Saint, owned a tract of land just outside Lamoni, and she was quick to respond to the wish of the Saints that they be permitted to gather there, using about twenty acres for the purpose, and the permanent location propaganda became entrenched.

It was likely under the administration of John Smith as president of the stake, and William Anderson as its bishop, that the movement to buy twenty acres of wooded land from Sister Dancer was instituted. A permanent reunion organization was formed, the committee in charge of the various activities being continuous from year to year, much as a board of trustees, their terms of office ending at different periods.

Lamoni Stake became the outstanding example of reunion building in many ways:

1. Permanent grounds.
2. Orderly selection of camping sites for individual or family.
3. Program development.
4. Educational features.
5. Supervised amusements.

Without the acquisition of permanent grounds, the development of the items here enumerated would have been so much more difficult that it is likely never to have occurred to an appreciable extent. One of these features rapidly followed another until Lamoni became the leader in reunion development. Several permanent buildings were erected, good water was provided in abundance, trees and shrubs were changed, trimmed, or removed, but were not so altered as to mar the natural beauty of the ensemble, and the location problem was solved. Later on another fifteen-acre tract was acquired, thus enlarging the grounds to about thirty-five acres, which is a beautiful natural park that has many of the elements of a shrine to hundreds of Saints in Lamoni Stake and in other parts of the church.

Several other localities were quick to see the development which followed the acquisition of grounds. Other districts began to buy locations. Several districts have been fortunate, having been able to secure plots of ground with valuable natural advantages, and in practically all instances the progress of the reunion has been marked.

Some districts are building much more elaborately than Lamoni has done; some have cottages and permanent family sites; some have given a prominent place to recreation; some have paid no attention to recreation, but are emphasizing education. Who is to say but that the reunion activities of a district are largely determined by the life of Saints of the district, each district striving to supply that element or those elements most needed, most useful, or that are not elsewhere supplied in the lives of Saints of that district? It is quite possible that what would be wise in one place would be unwise in another; that where Saints largely leading sedentary or indoor lives congregate, there recreation is needed in order to balance the yearly ration. Let us closely observe, that we may accurately judge, if judge we must.

Do you know that the 1927 Harvest Festival is not the product of a man or a committee of men? That it is the evidence of the cooperation of man and God in the making and among men in gathering together that all may behold and exclaim, "How good is the Lord!"

Book of Mormon Would Help Them

One of the HERALD readers sending in two dollars for renewal of subscription sends a newspaper cutting which reads:

AN INTERESTING HUNT

The Smithsonian Institution is now engaged in trying to trace the origin of the American Indian. It has a hunch that this country was first settled by immigrants who came by the Bering Straits, and it wants to find out if this hunch is right.

It's an interesting problem. The unknown history of the red men on this continent would make an absorbing tale if it could be brought out. There are mysteries enough in it, we suspect, to keep the institution's investigators busy for a long time. Here's hoping they can unravel a few of them.—Superior, Wisconsin, Evening Telegram.

Isn't it just a little wonderful that men will go far afield for information which lies close at hand? The Book of Mormon will yield its information for workers out of the Smithsonian Institute just as quickly as it will inform any other being, but it is so modest about its gems of truth that men often look over or beyond it at glittering but spurious sources, from an examination of which they return empty handed.

We wonder if the rank and file of the church really understands how completely this populating of America is accounted for in the pages of the book which is given for another witness that Jesus is the Christ!

Southern Missouri's Splendid Record

In the HERALD for June 15, page 683, is to be found a communication from the Presiding Bishopric which places the Southern Missouri District in a splendid light, the Saints there having paid the Graceland College Endowment pledges in full, the while they carried on other church support very efficiently. Auditorium pledges of that district are about ninety per cent paid in. Tithes and offerings are not forgotten. Christmas offerings are considerable.

We have just received a note from the Presiding Bishopric which seeks to give a faithful missionary credit for a part in these accomplishments. The note contains this: "Full credit can not be given to the district without mentioning the untiring and faithful efforts of Elder A. M. Baker, who was president of the district during 1925 and 1926, when the endowment campaign was being promoted. Brother Baker's influence has been a substantial factor in making it the first district of the church to make full payment of its pledges. His work is appreciated."

An Enlightening Discussion

We trust every HERALD reader is interested not only in rural or home city politics which affect his life so directly, in state and national politics, which affect deeply his progress and comfort, but in international politics also, for from these may come such events as may divert from their present course, the entire world, much as the recent World War has changed the direction of thought and development in government and commerce. Just recently the activities of the so-called Soviet have resumed new dimensions and importance. An article in a Canadian newspaper of national standing, is reproduced in another column, which throws what we believe to be correct light on the attitude and activities of the Soviet.

Obedience to law is liberty. And those who are violators of time-tested conventionalities which have their roots deep in the protection of society, are law-breakers no less than infractors of statutes.

Indifference is often mistaken for tolerance. Tolerance is a virtue of great social value; but it must have as a factor or concomitant sympathy; there must be understanding. To be indifferent to the other man's religious beliefs is quite different from having the sympathetic understanding which makes us tolerant. Many persons who pride themselves in being tolerant "towards all religions" are simply indifferent.

Do you know that the Harvest Festival of 1927 is in the making right now? Are you saving the choice fruits of your harvest to bring to the Lord's house, that his work may be glorified and your tasks accomplished?

Where is the man who at some time in his life has not stood at the forking of the road where he must choose between one which leads to emolument and preferment, and the one along which he must carry the heavy burdens of duty and service?

This paragraph from a report of District President C. W. Tischer, of the Southwestern Texas District, is interesting: "I can assure you that spiritually this district is in much better shape than it has been for years, and from a financial standpoint is also improving. However, in the past the folks have not been able to do much on account of crop failures, but all indications are for a year of prosperity, and if these people have a good year you can expect them to help as never before, for I believe in them and can understand their hearts and know that they desire to do the Lord's will. Watch us produce fruit."

The Book of Mormon and the Bible

BY S. A. BURGESS

The Book of Mormon was never intended to take the place of the Holy Scriptures, the Bible. The Old Testament is a collection of booklets prepared and preserved by the Hebrew people. Its various books were written and preserved by the Hebrews during a long period of time, some fifteen hundred years. One thousand years after Moses, the earlier books of Moses and the Prophets were rewritten at the time of Ezra.

To the Old Testament have been added the twenty-seven books of the New Testament, written at different times, but all in the last half of the first century of the Christian Era. The New Testament reports the life of Jesus and the works of the early ministers of the gospel. Truly, holy men of God wrote as they were moved upon by the Spirit of God, "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."—2 Peter 1:21. That was always the test, both of the Old Testament and of the New Testament. It was the recognition of the moving power of God. It was the inspiration which determined canonicity.

The Bible has always had primary consideration and, as our readers will at once agree, is the basis of nearly all of our sermons. The Book of Mormon tells of God being with a people of the Hebrew race who left Jerusalem just before the Babylonian captivity, and of another group which left at the time of the beginning of that captivity. Both of these groups came and settled upon the west coast of America. The first colony was soon divided into Nephites and Lamanites. After a few hundred years the Nephites discovered the people of the other colony in Zarahemla, and these two latter groups were united. This history covers one thousand years. It was written by Mormon about 400 A. D.

The Book of Mormon also includes the story of a people which left at the time of the tower of Babel and probably wandered westward through Europe and thence across the sea. The account of this people is very much more limited.

The Book of Mormon can in no sense take the place of the Bible. It is an added witness of the goodness of God and that his love extends to his people everywhere. It is true that they, Lehi and his family, possessed a record of the Jews up to 600 B. C., the time they left Jerusalem. But God continued to extend to them his loving guidance, and communicated with them as they were willing to receive.

According to the record, there is yet another book to come forth, which tells of God's dealings with the people of the earth from the earliest times to the end of the earth. This book will come forth only when there is a people fit to receive it. It was the sealed part of the plates.

Many students of religion attempt to find in the Old Testament a proof of tribal worship or henotheism. He was truly the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the God of the Hebrews, but only as they were called to be ministers, to do the work as priests unto God for all peoples.

It is true that in the Bible we find continual mention He was the Father of all living. But even in the New Testament there is the assumption of a superiority of the Jews, as a chosen people, and only upon the rejection of the gospel by the Jews may it go to the Gentiles.

This is an important point in regard to the Hebrews. They were to be a race of kings and of priests, but this meant, not their exaltation, not that they should take all things to themselves, but that they as a chosen people should minister to others, to help other nations to come also to the one Everlasting and Eternal God. That this idea was right may be seen from the fact that proselytes were received and baptized at the time of Jesus, and before his coming.

The Book of Mormon brings this added testimony, that God is not a God of the Jews only, but the Father of all humanity, and that his love is everlasting. It clearly states that he will come, not only to the people of Jerusalem, and of America, but to other people, and that he revealed himself to one people as to another. It is true that Lehi was of the tribe of Manasseh and himself Hebrew, but provision is alike to all people.

"Other people I have who are not of this fold; they also shall hear my voice." (See John 10:16.) It seems that there is another branch of Hebrew people who would be visited. The Book of Mormon relates that Jesus, immediately after his crucifixion, visited the people of this continent, but there he told them that he had another people, not of the fold here, nor of the fold at Jerusalem, and that they should be visited also.

The Book of Mormon stands as a further proof of the everlasting love of God which reaches after the people of the earth regardless of where they live or who they may be, if so be they will serve him.

That is a great concept, and the more remarkable to be brought forth by a young man a hundred years ago. There is nothing in his environment nor his personal education to give him so broad a concept of God as a universal Father.

Atheists and agnostics have rejected the Bible on this ground, that all people were condemned except the Jews, and that if the Christian religion is the only true form of salvation, God left his people a long time without salvation. Such a concept ignores the Scriptures themselves. "And did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank the spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ."—1 Corinthians 10:4. Also chapters 2, 3, and 4 of Hebrews. This teaching concerns Jesus as the Son of God. Nebuchadnezzar also knew of the Son of God.

The Book of Mormon also agrees that the gospel was preached in the early days and only taken from the earth when the Hebrews rejected it. God is merciful and all loving and helps people wherever they are. So he went to the Jews, and to the people on this continent, and was to go to still another people.

God has not left the people without a witness, but even to those who have rejected him he gives another chance. So he sent Jesus to bring the Hebrew people back to Christ. When a people are ready to receive him, he will not reject them.

This fact, which the Book of Mormon reaffirms, is indeed one of the clearest and greatest in all religious history. God does not mean to separate us from other people. The work of the elect is not for their own glory, but for the glory of God. His chosen people are priests and ministers, servants, to help humanity.

If any man love me, he will keep my commandments, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and abide with him.—John 14.

The Book of Mormon is a witness that God loves all people and that he is not a tribal God, but the Universal Father.

Out of empire building and exile, out of political dependence and contact with people of many lands, there are gathered those insights into the meaning of God and the relationships of men, which with some vast and divine impulse from within become the glorious Old Testament revelation.—Lynn Harold Hough.

A Salt Land

Did Brigham Young and his followers fulfill Jeremiah 17: 5, 6?

BY C. J. HUNT

The Apostle Peter on Pentecost Day fearlessly advocated that prophecy in the time of fulfillment could be safely referred to, and in strongly expressed words, "But this is that." (Acts 2:16.) He also compared prophecy to "a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." (2 Peter 1:19-21.)

The purpose of this article is to prove that the prophetic words by Jeremiah (17: 5, 6) were fulfilled in the life work of Brigham Young and his followers in Utah and adjoining States; and that their faith and works did not bring to the world a blessing in "this is that" and a "day star" of righteousness, but the opposite. The verses read, "Thus saith the Lord, Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord: For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited."

Of these strong, emphatic words, note carefully the following, "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord." Blinded to his fate and that of his followers, as foretold in the above quotation, Mr. Young did, in a public sermon in Salt Lake City, assure the world that his "heart" had now "departed from the Lord" and was set on Adam, emphatically claiming to represent his church people, using the words our and we in support of his degrading theory. The special paragraph by Mr. Young reads: "Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, Saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is Michael, the archangel, the Ancient of Days! about whom holy men have written and spoken. He is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 50. (April 9, 1852.)

In the above sermon Brigham Young has unmistakably identified and convicted himself as "the man" of verse five; hence verse six continues, prophetically and descriptive of the same "man," the country, the people, etc. The prophet continues, "For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh." the word heath is stated by Webster to mean, "A kind of desert plant," also "a tract of waste land." The prophecy of Jeremiah again asserts, "but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited." To "inhabit," Webster says, is "to live in; occupy." The word heath of verse six is further defined in the Popular and Critical Bible Encyclopedia and Scriptural Dictionary (1913), volume 2, as "The most sterile and desolate parts of the desert, . . ." and that, "gives great force to the contrast suggested by the prophet between him that trusteth in man, naked and destitute, and the man that trusted in the Lord, flourishing as a tree planted by the waters." The encyclopedia also defines "the parched places" as "dry, arid," "a most wretched and destitute condition." Speaking of "the wilderness," the same learned author declares it to be "uncultivated and destitute of wood, . . ."

The reader is surely becoming more and more interested in the subject matter under consideration, hence additional historical items proving that Brigham Young and his followers fulfilled the Prophet Jeremiah's writings referred to, will be presented.

Emigration From Nauvoo, Illinois

It was on February 15, 1846, that Brigham Young crossed the Mississippi River at Nauvoo for the West with about two thousand Saints, arriving in Salt Lake Valley at Salt Lake July 24, 1847. He returned to Winter Quarters, near what is now known as Omaha, Nebraska, October, 1847. At that place he organized a second colony for the West in May, 1848. One writer said Mr. Young "ruled every action of his people," and that he practiced openly, in defiance of any law, whatever he chose.

Speaking of Utah territorially, the Revised Encyclopedia Britannica (1890 edition) says, "The area of Utah was acquired by the United States from Mexico in 1848, under the provisions of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. It was organized as a territory in 1850, and at that time it comprised all the country lying between the eastern boundary of California and the western border of the Great Plains. The subsequent creation of Nevada, Colorado, and Wyoming reduced it (Utah) to its present limits."

The population of all that vast area in 1850 was only eleven thousand and three hundred and eighty. The President of the United States appointed Brigham Young as Utah Territory's first governor, which position he held for about eight consecutive years, which does emphasize the fact that he and his people did literally and truly "inhabit" that "salt land" and "desert," he being both political and religious leader in Utah for that period, then continued to be their church head and dictator for over twenty years longer, until his death, August 29, 1877.

Utah as now constituted was admitted to statehood January 4, 1896. From 1850 to January, 1896, Utah Territory had fourteen appointed governors, only the first one a "Mormon." From 1896 to 1925 six governors had been elected by popular vote, resulting in four of "Mormon" faith, which can well be interpreted to mean that Mr. Young's people are still strong enough numerically to "inhabit" the "salt land" by use of the ballot box as well as otherwise.

As has been quoted, the Prophet Jeremiah speaks of "a salt land," and it is known in all the civilized world that Utah has a Great Salt Lake, also that miles of that country are underlaid with great beds of rock salt. Our claims will be quite fully sustained by the following from The Pathfinder, Washington, District of Columbia, July 4, 1925:

Road on Salt

For many years salt beds in the Great Salt Lake desert proved an obstacle to travelers by wagon and auto. Now, after five years of work, a road has been cut across these wastes. Known as the Wendover cut-off, it is over forty miles long and opens the way for transcontinental and interstate travel between Utah and California through northern Nevada. "To build a road on a bed of salt soluble in fresh water which drains through this area seemed hazardous in the beginning," remarked Secretary of Agriculture Jardine at the dedication of the new road. "But the engineers discovered that the salt bed was insoluble in the residuum solution in which it lies after the spring evaporation. Consequently, a part of the road is built upon a solid layer of salt, and the layer is permanently protected from disintegration by a clay cut-off wall."

The road cost nearly $400,000, three-fourths of which was appropriated by the government. In the construction work, horses were employed only with the greatest difficulty; fresh water had to be hauled many miles, and parts of the road-bed were submerged in brine for months at a time.

The Great American Desert

Concerning that "desert," the Standard Dictionary of Facts, Edition of 1922, page 718, says of Brigham Young, his followers, the pioneers, entering the Salt Lake Valley, July 24, 1847:

With remarkable energy in the face of great hardship and sacrifice, these zealous religionists transformed the desert into fertile fields, and each year witnessed the steady growth of the church. The commonwealth thus established in the center of the Great American Desert has made practically uninterrupted progress.

In a history of the United States, by John Fiske, New York, page 329, we read:

. . . a company of these Mormons, led by Brigham Young, made their solitary way out to the Salt Lake Valley, where, by skilled irrigation, they converted a desert spot into a garden.

Also in a physical geography, by D. M. Warren, Philadelphia, published in three series, primary, common school, college, etc., the revised edition, June 1, 1859, we quote from pages 16 and 81:

The Great Basin of Utah, this basin . . . extends from the forty-fourth to the thirty-seventh parallel latitude, is bounded on all sides by mountain chains. It is for the most part a desolate region. . . This basin embraces most of the Territory of Utah and a small part of California, Oregon, Washington, and New Mexico. . . It is a dreary, desolate region, abounding in salt lakes; a few of the valleys on its eastern side are made fertile by irrigation, and these alone are inhabited (in 1859) by civilized man.

The New International Encyclopedia (1917 edition), volume 10, records the following:

Great American Desert. This designation for the arid parts of the West, once familiar by its inscription on the maps, has practically dropped out of use except in historical reference. . . . By irrigation of the waste lands, the region as a whole has lost much of the character of a desolate wilderness. There are, however, important stretches of absolute desert, as destitute of water and vegetation as any of the Sahara (in Africa) and great acres that can never be reclaimed. . . . The boundaries of the Great American Desert can be indicated only in a very general way. . . . The wildest areas of unbroken desert are included within the Great Basin, an area of two hundred ten thousand square miles that comprises most of Nevada, and part of California, Utah, Idaho, and Oregon.

The same encyclopedia, volume 22, says:

The beginning of irrigation in the United States by Americans is usually attributed to Brigham Young and the Mormon pioneers who settled in Salt Lake Valley in 1847. . . . They were . . . compelled to use irrigation in order to subsist.

During the year 1909 there were in the West nineteen thousand and seven hundred farms, comprising seven hundred and nine thousand seven hundred acres irrigated, using seven thousand seven hundred miles of irrigating ditches in 1910.

In Woodbridge and Willard's geography, page 226, also Goodrich's geography of 1826, "The Great American Desert" is also spoken of. Very much of interest on "the desert" question is found in a book of 432 pages published in 1888 by William Barrows, D. D., entitled, "The United States of yesterday and tomorrow." On page 112 we read, Westminster Review for July, 1867:

As the neighboring State of Minnesota fills up, American emigrants will throng more and more over the boundary into the Fertile Belt (Canada). They can not spread westward within the limits of the United States, for the Great American Desert forbids it.

On another page, Doctor Barrows wrote:

General W. B. Hazen passes in review fifteen States and territories. They aggregate about one billion seven hundred and sixty million square miles, of which he estimates about . . . one fifth of the whole as arable—fit for plowing.

The writer says on page 136 that:

Tradition ascribes a remarkable act to Benjamin Franklin. In one of those courtly halls and gatherings in Europe, where nobility and statesmanship and diplomacy were toying with the young republic, there hung a map of the United States, . . . inscription curving from the Texan to the British borders, "The Great American Desert." Franklin took a pen and drew a broad erasing line through the title. Was it not a prophetic pen that Benjamin Franklin then used?

History states that Mr. Franklin made four visits from the United States to Europe, part of the time as an official representative. His last labors in Europe were from 1779 to 1785. That arid country, the Great American Desert, was a familiar name at that early time to Europe as well as to America; however, the proud heart of Mr. Franklin did not enjoy seeing the inscription on a map suspended on the walls in a foreign court, hence he proposed to cancel the objectional name.

It will be remembered that the Lord directed Jeremiah to write of the "salt land" people that they "shall not see when good cometh," meaning that their religious leaders would be so blinded by evil indulgences and corrupt doctrinal instructions to their followers that the beautiful light of the pure gospel would be rejected by the great majority of them. It was with courage and faith, during the early history of the Reorganized Church, that the three sons of the martyred prophet, namely, Joseph, Alexander, and David, visited Utah and endeavored to turn that deceived people from their evil ways, but only a few accepted the pure teachings of those noble young God-appointed shepherds of latter-day Israel. In later years their sons, Frederick M., Frederick A., and Elbert A. Smith, also God-appointed men, sought diligently to teach that blinded people the beauty of right living and the true church in succession from 1830, but with limited success. Many other talented, faithful, loyal missionaries of the Reorganization have also from pulpit and by printed word given those deceived ones an opportunity to "see" and to accept the "good," but with small success thus far.

We now believe we have fully explained and carefully proved every prophetic statement in the foregoing article on Jeremiah 17: 5, 6, and that it does refer to Brigham Young's church and that region of country. The article being so plainly written, we hope that members of the Utah Church who read it will have the courage to admit that Mr. Young and his followers to the West made a sad mistake in their teaching and practices.

It may be well to remind the reader that God made choice of the posterity of Isaac and Jacob to become prophetic leaders of his people, as well as spiritual lawgivers to benefit the whole world, but it seems from scriptural and historical records that the posterity of Ishmael and Esau, their brethren, strongly resented heaven's choice and became very jealous, hence many wars, religious and political, during the past thousands of years are traceable to a large extent to that continued jealousy. However, that feeling of hatred is subsiding. That being true, it is only fair to presume that there has been, to some extent, a jealous feeling, not for war, but a religious jealousy within the Utah Church against the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, because the Lord chose the posterity of Joseph Smith, the seer, as the prophetic line through whom continued Presidency of the church and di-

Health Hints

BY A. B. KLAR

I have been impressed at various times that some of the knowledge I have obtained in the last thirty years on the care of the body should be conveyed to the Saints of the church; therefore I am giving you a little information which I hope will prove of great benefit.

There is so much sickness throughout this land of ours, and it is not only with the people of the world but with the Saints likewise, that I feel my efforts should first be among God's chosen people. A great many Saints have never read the Word of Wisdom, and some have read it but do not grasp the wonderful promise the Lord has made his people. You will find in the 86th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants where the Lord makes the statement that if you will refrain from the use of meat and use it only in the time of cold or famine, the Lord will be pleased with you. If you disobey, the Lord certainly will not be pleased with you. God knows how we are constructed, and he knows whether we are of a carnivorous nature or are herbivorous frugivorous.

I have studied the body for about forty years, and up to the present time I have found nothing that indicates we are of a carnivorous nature. The very first chapter in Genesis gives us the information as to the kind of food we should eat. There is nothing that we can find in that chapter that tells vine communications should be given, for place in Doctrine and Covenants. The Utah Church has many of the descendants of Hyrum Smith, but none of the posterity of Joseph the Martyr. It has been over half a century since a revelation has been received and recorded in the Utah books, hence their continued jealousy because the Reorganized Church is favored from heaven and they are not. Very often missionaries of Utah are heard to say that it is a sure sign that the Catholic Church has apostatized, rejected of God, because they have had hundreds of so-called successors to Saint Peter but no revelation from the Lord. That being true, how about the Utah Church that has had several presidents, men called prophets, yet their church continues in darkness so far as light from heaven is concerned? Has it also apostatized, been rejected of God?

us we should kill the animal and eat it. It even tells us what kind of food the animal should eat.

When the elders of the church are called to administer to the sick, as a rule the individual is blessed, and so are the elders, but if the individual continues to partake of things that will disarrange cell matter, God will not make anyone fire proof against disease or sickness. Natural foods are very apt to create a natural body. In order for you to be natural, it is quite necessary that you eat naturally, drink naturally, and breathe naturally; but when you violate these laws it is almost impossible for you to enjoy the great blessings of health and strength. God wants his people to be cheerful, helpful, and active. He has advised us to retire early and arise early. He has given us all the information that is necessary, but we are much like the children of Israel in the wilderness, we are always dissatisfied and want to go back to our old ways and habits. There is a vast difference between what the system needs and the mouth wants.

In my lectures I have talked against the use of coffee. Many people say that as soon as they do not get their coffee they suffer with headache and are unable to work. This is proof to you that this is not a food. The real fluid is water, and that should be used only between meals. No animal except man eats and drinks at the same time.

I wish every Latter Day Saint had a card with "Plant Life" printed on it and placed above the pantry door. I wish they would take the frying pan, the grease pot, and the flesh pot, place them on the wall and place a card on them marked, "Relics."

I am going to give you a little boiled-down advice, such as I give to thousands of physicians and individuals throughout the States and foreign countries. Eat as little meat as possible and dispense with old beef, pork, and all by-products entirely. Guard against white flour, white sugar, tea, coffee, vinegar, and spices. See that you get plenty of water between meals, one or two quarts. See that you get at least one or two raw vegetables daily, and be sure to masticate your food thoroughly. Do a great deal of deep breathing in the open air, as this eliminates a deadly poison in the form of carbon dioxide. See that the pores of the skin are kept clean, and get as much sunlight as possible.

I wish every Saint would heed this advice. How quickly they could increase, physically, mentally, and spiritually! You would be surprised how many Saints could give more freely to the bishops when they need money so badly and for such good results. If every Latter Day Saint would use wisdom only in the use of food, sufficient money could be sent to

Bribery and Its Prevention

Bribery and corruption are evils which undermine society. Like dry rot, they are unseen; and like it, they insidiously contaminate and destroy. Many states have been ruined by bribery and corruption, for in the past these were universal. Bacon, as Lord Chancellor, was fined 40,000 pounds for taking bribes, and his punishment was thought to be an injustice, because it was an everyday event. In the days of Talleyrand and Metternich, statesmen and diplomats often received fixed salaries from foreign countries.

Today the vice is widespread in the economic sphere: managers, agents, commercial travelers, tradesmen, servants are affected by it. Many a great contract has been lost by an honest firm to an unscrupulous one offering bribes.

Commission business is general, of course, and is unobjectionable as long as it is open. But the taking or giving of a commission is highly objectionable if it is done in secret, for the secrecy shows that there is something wrong about the transaction. It need scarcely be stated that corruption and bribery are an enormous tax on legitimate business and on everyday life; indeed, it is not unlikely that the nation misspends on secret commissions as much as 100,000,000 pounds a year. Moreover, secret com-the bishop to liquidate all debts in less than twelve months' time. It is not how much we eat, but what we eat, when we eat, and how we eat it.

I am very much interested in this beautiful gospel, as it contains everything that is necessary. I am desirous to be helpful to this people, as we should be the light of the world, the salt of the earth; and our eating, in fact, our entire life should be different from that of the people of the world. If we would live the Word of Wisdom, think of the blessings that are promised! The death angel will be stayed, our days will be prolonged, and I am sure we will enjoy a greater degree of God's Holy Spirit, as the Spirit has more happiness in a clean temple than in one that is diseased. The Lord has told us we are living temples, therefore we should make every effort to keep the body in the pink of health.

My prayer is that you may all come to that higher stage of life and that we may unitedly work to accomplish those tasks that lie before us. You can scarcely realize the great help we can be to this great work if everyone will use wisdom in his mode of eating and in the care of the body.

missions, like dry rot, tend to spread. If a dealer in motor cars or in pianos, or a butcher, finds that his rival is doing business by giving secret commissions of a certain amount, he will try to go one better by offering a larger secret commission.

Many years ago Sir Edward Fry drafted a Prevention of Corruption Bill, which was introduced by Lord Russell of Killowen, "to check inequitable and illegal payments." It became law in 1906. About the same time the Bribery and Secret Commissions Prevention League was formed. For the last twenty years the law courts and the society mentioned have attacked bribery and corruption. Yet, the other day, Lord Lambourne, as president of the league, sorrowfully confessed: "Despite our efforts, bribery is worse than it was—not worse perhaps than in pre-war days, but worse than in the boom period which followed the war."

Business men and the general public are not aware that bribery and corruption are punishable offenses, and suffer in silence instead of taking action. The league mentioned above advises and helps those who are suffering from secret commissions, and it publishes from time to time a record of its activities. A statement of the league before me enumerates some of the penalties which have been inflicted of late. Among them are fines up to 150 pounds, and imprisonment up to twelve months. One hundred and fifty persons have been criminally convicted and heavily fined or sent to prison for attempting to bribe the police. An adequate number of prosecutions will rapidly convince corruptors and corruptees that secret commissions are dangerous.

Many years ago Benjamin Franklin said that men are more heavily taxed by their own folly than by the state. We suffer in character and in cash by the wide prevalence of this damnable custom, which was more excusable in the far-off past, when cut-throat competition and starvation wages forced business men and wage earners into devious courses, often against their will. Public opinion can perhaps more successfully abolish secret commissions than any existing, or possible, laws. Public opinion has restrained drunkenness and spitting in public. It is also minimizing cruelty to animals. It can do the same with this all-too-prevalent vice.—Charles Bright, in Spectator of March 26, 1927.

An item in a recent issue of the Palestine Bulletin reads like a midsummer news item from some inland city of the United States. It tells of "death from heat" of five persons at "Jericho and Al Zarka," and states that eighteen persons ill from the heat were taken to the hospital at Jericho, while "in Jerusalem a Bucharian Jew and several pupils of the Evelina de Rothschild School fainted."

Young Men Are Committing Suicide—Why?

Life is so interesting—so full of wonderful and beautiful things—that the eyes of youth should be looking forward to it with eager expectancy; and yet young men, sixteen to eighteen years of age, with all the glowing prospect of life's great adventure before them, are committing suicide!

Many of them are young students, and they leave behind them the message that they have found life "utterly futile."

They find life futile at eighteen years of age! What is the answer to this?

It can not be that "much learning hath made them mad," for they have only just begun to learn.

Then what have they begun to learn that they should desperately toss their chances away at so early a day?

We find that some of them have steeped themselves in the philosophy of the hour—served fresh from present-day laboratories and lecture rooms.

Have they been fed with meat too strong for them? I have been wondering—and while wondering I have been reading.

Life, so I read, is simply a "transitory illusion," and "man is a mere accident." A teacher of thousands of students tells them that "religion is a defense mechanism," "a fiction for an inner feeling of inferiority," which man has built just to keep up his courage. Another teacher tells us life is merely a "little luminous meteor in an infinite abyss of nothingness." This and more—much more of it, all proclaiming the utter futility of the old faiths and of spiritual ideals.

The inscription over these Doors of Knowledge might well be: "Abandon hope, all ye that enter here."

Must we destroy the germs of spirituality in youth while revealing science? Is it a logical necessity? It is a question many of us are asking.

If our young men are fed on "utter futility" and other formulas of pessimism, what wonder that some of them give up the game? We seek happiness in life—especially the joy and satisfaction of achievement. If happiness is "our being's end and aim"—as some philosophers have told us—if service of the spirit is a fine aspiration; if life is really to be a high and splendid adventure, how are young men to realize it by being told that life is nothing but a "transitory illusion" and that they are simply a "mere accident" in "an abyss of nothingness"? If life holds out no prospect of spiritual satisfaction, what then is the dayspring that can lift us up and lighten the way for us? If there is nobody home when we come to the end of the lane, what is the use of making the journey?

I do not believe the human race has been cursed with a faith that has no fulfillment.—W. D. Moffat, in The Mentor.

The "Indefinite Soviet"

The Toronto Star seeks to justify its tender sympathies for the downtrodden and much-abused radicals by the simple process of saying that it is right. "In an editorial this morning," it says, "The Globe refers to the editorial in The Star of Saturday in which we pointed out that if war should result from recent happenings (referring to the raid on the premises of Arcos, Limited, in London) the war would be with Russia, not with some indefinite shape called the 'Soviet.' This statement of fact leads our morning contemporary to suggest that The Star means 'hands off communism.'"

"The people have a right to be given a chance to understand what they read," declares The Star. "The quarrel is not with an indefinite shape called 'Soviet.' It is with Russia. It is Russia that is talked about and meant."

If The Star has an honest desire to give the people a chance to understand, why does it go to such trouble to refer to "an indefinite shape called 'Soviet,'" to intimate that it is something unreal, the product of a fantastic imagination, when anyone who has made a casual study of current history knows that it is a vital and established force with an organization reaching round the world and dedicated to a world revolution?

This "indefinite shape called 'Soviet'" is so indefinite that the official title of Russia, as Moscow proclaims it, is not Russia, but the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and what is to be gained by trying to make the people understand that it is anything else? In the U. S. S. R. severe penalties are imposed for calling it Russia; mail addressed otherwise is rejected; and this "indefinite shape called 'Soviet'" has a way of making its will felt both at home and abroad.

Perhaps the Soviet would like the idea to prevail in such countries as this that it is an indefinite shape, but it is, nevertheless, very real, and something which "the people have a right to be given a chance to understand." The Polit-Bureau of the Russian Communist party is the Soviet, and it carries the brains which dictate to Communists the world around. Under it are the Central Executive Committee, which controls the State Departments of the Government, and the Executive Committee of the Communist International, which is composed of representatives from all countries directing the activities of affiliated Communist parties. It also holds the strings of the Red International of Labor Unions, which maintains control over the Red Trade Unions of the world. The Communist International has such offshoots as the Young Communist League. It suits the opportunist philosophy of the Soviet to deny that it exercises this control, to disclaim responsibility when it is brought home, and to pose as the offended government of an innocent nation when such attitude seems to meet its purpose; but it does not deceive the British Government or those of other watchful countries, which know only too well its aims and its methods.

Writing in The Nineteenth Century for April, Mr. Meredith Atkinson exposes, for the benefit of the reading public, something of the Soviet's policy as directed against Great Britain. He quotes the following extract from the proclamation by the First Communist Oriental Congress at Baku, September, 1920, to show that even then the Soviet was fomenting the present trouble in China:

What has England made of China? Hand in hand with her accomplice, Japan, she has turned this immense country into a British colony; she exploits the population of 300,000,000 and poisons them with opium. With the aid of her own and the Japanese troops she suppresses with incredible cruelty the revolutionary tendencies which have begun to manifest themselves. She reinstates the old despotic rulers in office and honors, though they were overthrown by the people, and she uses every effort to keep the many millions of people under the yoke of despotism, in poverty and distress, in order to exploit them more successfully.

This proclamation was issued to the nations of the Orient. It was designed to appeal to the Oriental temperament as other proclamations have been couched in language supposed to be effective upon the people addressed. Here are other extracts from it:

Many a time you have heard from your governments the call to a holy war. Many a time you took the field under the green flag of the Prophet. But all these so-called holy wars were only lies and frauds; they only served the interests of your egotistical rulers. You peasants and workers, however, were left after these wars in slavery and misery; for others you conquered the wealth of the earth, but you received nothing for yourselves.

Now we call you up for the first genuine Holy War under the Red Flag of the Communist International.

We call you to the Holy War for your own welfare, for your liberty, your life.

England, the last powerful Imperialistic bird of prey who survives in Europe, has spread her black wings over the Musulman lands of the Orient, and tries to make eastern nations her slaves and her prey.

Slavery, intolerable slavery, ruin, oppression, and exploitation—these are the gifts of England for the nations of the East.

Save yourselves, nations of the Orient! Rise for the fight against the robber.

Arise like one man for the Holy War against the British conqueror.

Arise, thou Indian, who hast collapsed of starvation and superhuman slavery.

Arise, thou peasant of Anatolia, whom the taxes crush, whom the usurers exploit.

Arise, thou Persian rajat, who are being throttled by the Mulkadores.

Arise, thou worker of Armenia, who hast been driven into the arid mountains; you Arabs and Afghans, who are lost in your sandy deserts, whom the British are cutting off from the whole world.

Arise, all of you, for the fight against the common enemy, for the fight against Imperialistic Great Britain.

High waves the Red Flag of the Holy War. It is a Holy War for the liberation of the nations of the Orient, a war to end the division of the human race into oppressing and oppressed peoples, a war to make all peoples and tribes equal, no matter what language they speak, what color their skin, and what faith they confess.

What trouble this "indefinite shape called 'Soviet'" has made for Great Britain in the Orient is unknown outside of official circles, but it is certain that the British Government did not assume its present attitude in China without knowledge of the background of events and of their possibilities. Nor can the raid on Soviet House be treated lightly, and passed off as treading without warrant on the toes of Russia. The trade agreement entered into between the British and Soviet Governments contained this clause:

That each party refrains from hostile action or undertakings against the other, and from conducting outside its own borders any official propaganda, direct or indirect, against the institutions of the British Empire or the Russian Soviet Republic, respectively, and more particularly that the Russian Soviet Government refrains from any attempt, by military or diplomatic, or any other form of action or propaganda, to encourage any of the peoples of Asia in any form of hostile action against British interests or the British Empire, especially in India and in the independent State of Afghanistan.

The Soviet has ruthlessly and treacherously trampled this agreement underfoot. It deliberately fomented and supported the coal strike and the general strike in Britain—industrial outbreaks which appeared to have the sympathy of The Toronto Star. It has steadily spread its devastating propaganda in the Orient. It is still calling: "Forward to the Holy War against Britain"—and The Toronto Star assures its readers that "the quarrel is not with an indefinite shape called 'Soviet.'"

The situation is too serious—for Britain and for all civilization—to camouflage the Soviet and its revolutionary activities. The Soviet is no "indefinite shape." It is a definite, powerful, fanatical, unscrupulous organization, of which Mr. Atkinson—Mr. Atkinson of The Nineteenth Century, who has visited Russia and studied the actual situation; not Mr. Atkinson of The Toronto Star—says: "Its deity is Lenin, its devil Great Britain."

REUNION NEWS

Spokane Reunion

On June 17 the eleventh reunion of the Spokane District convened at Upper Twin Lakes in Idaho, which are forty miles northeast of Spokane. The surroundings were all that could be desired. A lovely lake, nice cabins for some, and others brought their tents. For speakers we had Apostles Gillen and Curtis, and our district missionary, Brother P. R. Burton. We also had Brother Eli Bronson, of Portland, Oregon, with us for a few days.

The speaking at this reunion was of a very high order. It was all that could be desired and suited to our needs as members and priesthood as well.

The calisthenics at 6.30 a. m., were in charge of Brother Burton, ably assisted by Brother Amos Tomlinson.

At seven o'clock we had breakfast.

The arrangements for feeding the crowd were in charge of Brother Bert E. Hart, who succeeded in keeping everyone well filled and happy.

At eight o'clock there was a lecture by Brother Curtis in the reunion tent. At the same time Brother Burton delivered a Book of Mormon lecture in the club room, giving us an interesting history of the Lamanite people. The only trouble with the lectures was that the writer couldn't be in both places at once and get the benefit of both lectures.

At nine o'clock each morning we had general prayer meeting in the reunion tent, and young people's prayer service in the club room; or, if the weather permitted, in the woods.

The general prayer services were certainly long to be remembered, for their spirituality and words of comfort and cheer, given by the Spirit to the assembled; and it was said by those who attended the young people's services that they were very splendid.

We were grateful indeed to have with us Brother Robert McDole, from Sagle, Idaho, who has been very ill for many months. His friends, who are all who know him, were glad to feel he was once more able to be with us in the meetings.

We feel that the officers of the various departments in the district are to be commended for their work in the past. I am sure this is what made our reunion such a gratifying success.

To Sister Edith M. Wood is due the credit for the very splendid program the Religio put on on Saturday night, which was conceded by all to be very much above the average.

The musical program was conducted under the able direction of Sister Clara Van Eaton, assisted on the piano by Sister Nutley and Grace Wood.

On Friday we were made sad by the news of the death of Brother Charles C. Crabb. We felt that it was a great loss to the church, as well as to his family, and our heartfelt sympathies are with them. W. W. WOOD.

The Minnesota District Reunion

The 1927 reunion has just closed, after ten days of spiritual and educational activity. The theme of the reunion was, "This church offers us God's way of serving the world." From the first prayer service to the last preaching service, this theme was touched upon directly or indirectly, and those who attended were made to feel in a much greater degree than ever before the opportunity offered in the gospel plan of rendering service to mankind.

Preparations for the reunion were made several weeks ahead, and the Saints of Minneapolis were busy with various meetings, choir, and play practices, etc. A special pre-reunion prayer meeting on June 15 was attended by thirty-five, and many expressed their desires to make the coming reunion a success.

On the morning of Friday, June 17, at 8.30, the 1927 reunion season of the Reorganized Church was officially opened in Minneapolis. This was exactly one hour ahead of the Spokane reunion, which was scheduled for the same day, but because of being in Mountain Time, was necessarily later.

From the first the prayer meetings were of a high order, permeated more by the spirit of intelligence than of emotion. They showed that the Saints are keenly alive to problems ahead of this church, and to the need of a complete consecration to God in order to solve them in a satisfactory way.

A general get-together was held Friday night, in a party sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Expression. On Saturday night, the Alpha Nu Omega Society presented a play taken from events recorded in the Book of Mormon, at the time of Christ's visit to this continent. The play, "Other sheep have I," was presented in a manner to give credit to the actors, the director, and those who fixed up the scenery. All who saw the play enjoyed it. Brother Gunsolley made the remark that it was more effective than a sermon.

The regular program of events during each day of the reunion was as follows: 8.30 a. m., prayer meeting; 9.45, lecture; 11, sermon; 2.30 p. m., round table discussion; 4, recreation; 7.30, song fest; and 8, preaching service. This program was slightly altered on Sundays and a few other times, but was quite generally followed.

The apostle in charge was D. T. Williams. Bishop Albert Carmichael, Patriarch Gunsolley, Missionary Robert Gunlock, and Elders Swen Swenson, L. G. Holloway, Leslie Wight, and Ray Whiting were also present and spoke at various times.

In the morning lectures, Bishop Carmichael started with a discussion of fundamentals of economics, and continued the theme with an elaboration of the economics of stewardship. Sister Lydia Wight lectured on parentcraft on two successive days. Apostle D. T. Williams also gave two lectures in the mornings. The round table discussions were in charge of these three leaders also. On each Sunday afternoon special lectures to the priesthood were given in which members were also permitted to listen in and hear what was expected of their leaders. This type of educational work was much appreciated by the Saints, and all received much good from it. The lectures on stewardship especially were given with a power that greatly affected the hearers and made them rejoice in the wonderful possibilities of the gospel.

An important feature this year was the junior reunion, under the direction of Sister Ardyce DeLapp. She was assisted in various activities with the children from infancy to adolescence by Alta Mae Olson, Alice Light, Jeanette Johnson, Grace Perkins, and Ruth Gunlock. On Saturday mornings, of the 18th and 25th, special children's prayer meetings were held at Glenwood Park, about three fourths mile from the church. These were well participated in and enjoyed by the children. During the week the children were taken care of both morning and afternoon with junior church services, sermonets, stories, handwork and basket weaving, candy making, and hikes and auto rides. They seemed to enjoy this very much and realized that a reunion could mean as much to them as to the adults. The babies were cared for in a special nursery so the mothers and congregation might be freed from annoyance during the church services.

The district librarian, Alta Olson, has a special display of books useful to parents in child-training and of interest to children. Some pamphlets dealing with various phases of health were on display and available to those who were interested. This activity was rather unique and deserves special mention.

The Alpha Nu Omega Society held its district meeting on Saturday, June 18. Wesley Elvin was elected president and also editor of the Alpha Nu's, the organization's bi-monthly paper. Robert Gunlock was made vice president and Alta Olson, secretary-treasurer.

The district conference was held on Saturday, June 25. An important item of business was a resolution which passed by a unanimous vote after considerable discussion and which requires that in order to safeguard the priesthood of the Minnesota District from unworthy men, not properly called of God, all prospective ordinations shall be presented to the district conference for action, and that they should previously have been presented to the district president and apostle in charge of the district. An amendment was passed stating that in case of emergency, the apostle and district president should be empowered to act.

Another important decision of the Minnesota Saints was that involving the invitation made by the president of the Northern Wisconsin District that a joint reunion be held next year at Chetek, Wisconsin. After discussion, the invitation was accepted unanimously. The district officers for the coming year are: district president, Elder Ray Whiting; secretary, Wesley Elvin; treasurer and bishop, Leslie DeLapp; Sunday school superintendent, Sister Charles Johnson; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Carroll Olson; head of the Women's Department, Sister Lydia Wight; librarian, Sister Alta Olson; and Sunday school secretary-treasurer, Sister Ruth Gunlock.

The last day of the reunion was the biggest day of all. A larger number were present at the morning sacramental service than at any other meeting, and it was a spiritual feast indeed. The theme of the meeting was "Consecration." A rapid fire of short and fervent testimonies followed the serving of the emblems and prayer. In the afternoon, Bishop Carmichael preached and lectured to the priesthood. Apostle Williams gave the closing sermon, the subject of which was, "I would be true."

The reunion closed with a feeling of deeper consecration and devotion to the cause of establishing Zion and the program of stewardships than has even before been evidenced. Although the meetings were not as well supported by the district as they might have been, those who attended found themselves well repaid for their efforts. Mention should also be made of the meals served in the basement of the church by the local Women's Department, and which were of their usual high-class order. The sisters worked faithfully in the kitchen in order to supply the temporal wants of reunion visitors.

CARROLL OLSON.

Announcement of Michigan Reunion

The seventh annual reunion of the Northern and Western Michigan Districts will convene at the Park of the Pines, five miles north of Boyne City, August 12 to 21. The Michigan State Convention of Young People meets with us this year. General church representatives to attend are: President Floyd M. McDowell, Apostle J. F. Garver, Mrs. Blanche Edwards Mesley, Elder O. A. McDowell, B. H. Doty, E. N. Jones, E. N. Burt. They will be assisted by a corps of local workers who will carry out the daily program of class work, junior church, lectures to the priesthood, and Department of Women, and other programs. We extend a cordial invitation to all. We have very comfortable grounds for camping on the shore of a beautiful lake. This reunion promises to be very instructive and enjoyable to all, young as well as old. Those desiring tents should place orders with Mrs. Ada Allread, of Boyne City, before August 1. The prices of tents are as follows: 7 by 9, $4.25; 9 by 9, $4.75; 10 by 12, $5.50; 12 by 14, $6.50; 12 by 16, $7. Campers are expected to bring their own bedding. Meals will be served at the dining hall, adults, 20c, children 10c. Allen Schreur, for the committee.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Apostle Hanson in Foreign Fields

Though it was a rainy day, a fairly large number of Saints were present at the departure of my steamer from New York harbor, wishing me "bon voyage."

Such an experience never fails to thrill—the letting down of the gangways, loosing of cables, vessel slowly heaving from the wharf, band on board playing, parting words spoken, and then, until obscured by distance, handkerchiefs waving farewells.

For a time I walked about the steamer somewhat restlessly. I went to my cabin; there greeting me was a large bundle of letters, including telegrams, and nearby were sweets and fruits—tokens of kindly remembrance from generous hearts. I seemed to hear again the music of voices of friends! I found myself in precious association with them.

Soon after getting out of sight of land, a little girl cried out: "Mamma, the world is all gone!"

My place in the dining saloon was at the captain's table. The tables at mealtime nearly all the way were banked with most beautiful roses, snap dragons, and carnations.

The majority of the passengers were of Scandinavian descent, many returning during their vacation to the land of their birth for a visit with relatives.

The time was chiefly spent by those on board playing games on the deck, reading, smoking, writing, dancing, and occasionally being treated to movies.

The first part of the voyage the sea was fairly smooth; the latter part, a little rainy and rather rough.

At my side at the dining table was a dear old American couple, a doctor and his wife, from Boston. When the sea was not smooth, she took an almost filial interest in my distress. One day she confided to me that brown paper worn over the chest next to the body would prevent seasickness, and asked if I would try it. I answered I had tried many remedies and would experiment with one more. What effect could paper have on my throbbing head? what virtue was in brown? and why wear it on the chest? passed through my mind. With the paper, fashioned with care, were two "necessity" pins. I was sorry I could not report benefit—the sea happened immediately afterward not to be smooth.

On the way we passed in sight of the northern shore of Scotland. There is always a stir among passengers when after seeing nothing but water for many days, some one calls out, "Land is in sight!"

Soon after seeing Norway's rugged waste, Christiansand was reached, a town picturesquely sequestered—mountains and islands round about. While a few passengers with their baggage were taken off on a boat which came out in the harbor to meet our steamer, numerous small launches whisked about, some containing students wearing bright red caps. In such a rugged country and so far north, where unusual powers of survival are necessary, one is not surprised to meet a sturdy race.

Passing along the pine-clad shores of Christiania fjord, here and there enlivened by villages, Oslo, the capital of Norway, is soon reached. Here many passengers disembarked, intending to resume their journey by a later steamer, or by train to Copenhagen.

Elder Peter Muceus, though not in the city, had arranged for a brother of our faith to meet me at the steamer. A cousin of mine living in Oslo, a linotype operator working on one of the leading papers, also met me, and at his home I stayed.

In the city a few Saints were invited, in company with Brother Muceus.

Again I was attracted to the rugged, good-looking, rosy-cheeked class of people, whose natural complexion would be the envy of many in the States.

Before reaching Norway, when out at sea, I found difficulty in sleeping. I awakened one morning at two o'clock. I thought the electric light was on. In looking out of the porthole, the day was seen fast approaching. In half an hour, without artificial aid, I could read in my cabin.

The sun is now setting after nine and rising at three. Twilight and dawn merge. There is no real darkness.

A custom of long standing is not easily set aside—it seems all the while I should wait for darkness before going to bed.

It is not an uncommon sight at this time of year to see the sky at midnight tinged with rose. The sun sets nearly in the northwest and rises nearly in the northeast.

Until late in the night throngs of people are seen in the streets.

In Kragero a two-day meeting was held June 5 and 6. A number of Saints, including the writer, went from Porsgrund by bus. The trip of thirty miles is full of interest, every turn opening up new scenes of mountainous beauty.

The meetings were held in the hall which was purchased about a year ago. It is well located, and the assembly room presents a very attractive appearance. Three flags, representative of all the Scandinavian countries, stood on a table in front of the pulpit, also the Stars and Stripes.

Elder P. T. Andersen, Edward Larsen, and Anthon Nielsen were present from Denmark. Sweden was represented, and Saints from various places in Norway were in attendance. The weather was cool and delightful. All were happy.

The time was spent in profitable, friendly association, and in preaching, sacramental, and priesthood meetings.

In the sacramental service Edward Larsen was ordained to the office of priest, and Anthon Nielson a teacher. This means needed local help for Denmark.

It is hoped that negotiations now in progress will result in Brother Larsen, twenty-three years of age, entering Graceland this coming fall, and that in due time he shall perform a good work as a missionary in his native land.

Many nonmembers were in attendance. It was pleasing to note the remaining of nearly all after preaching to hear the sweet and inspiring singing of Sister Ruch.

Elder Peter Muceus, who has labored many years in this mission, and Elder V. D. Ruch, and his wife, and daughter, Velma, who have spent nearly five years in Norway, are to sail July 12 on the Leviathan from Southampton. The farewell partings I saw and words uttered showed they will be missed by many.

In Porsgrund services were held in the home of Brother W. Carlsen and in Good Templars Hall.

On Sunday afternoon, June 12, Brother Carl Carlsen, twenty-seven years of age, was ordained to the office of priest. Our hearts were made to rejoice in this provision by the Lord of one to minister to the needs of his covenant people in this place.

Authorization has been made for the ordination of Brother N. O. Nielsen, of Kragero, to the office of elder. This means one available there in administering spiritual blessings among the people. These brethren are the only ones in their respective places holding priesthood.

I hope the day may come when officers of many ranks shall occupy in the church in this northern field.

Sandhedens Banner, i. e., Banner of Truth, the Scandinavian mission paper of former years, is needed. It should be revived. The Saints in these countries can not read any of the regular church publications, and are thereby deprived of keeping in touch with what is occurring in the church. This ought not to continue. The Danish and Nowegian languages are much the same, practically alike in print. The members in Sweden can learn to read this with little difficulty. One paper could, therefore, meet the needs of all for the present. Such a paper, containing matter from the ablest minds in the church, would prove of inestimable worth.

In Bøn, where I am now writing, I have spent five days, preaching in our church and helping in other ways to establish more fully the Lord's work. Here Brother Arthur Iversen, twenty-six years of age, was ordained yesterday, (June 19) to the office of priest.

In various places the interpreting for me was by Elders Muceus and Ruch.

To me a visit to a museum is always an educational privilege, highly valued.

The Gokstad Viking ship at Oslo, and Osberg Viking ship at Bygdog, across the bay from Oslo, are well worth seeing. The former was such as was used for crossing the ocean, is of the ninth century, and was found in 1889 at Gogstad. It is seventy-seven feet long and about sixteen feet wide. The latter was built, it is asserted, about the year 800, and was discovered in 1903 in a mound near a river. With it were found two skeletons, a peculiar four-wheeled wagon, with large wooden wheels and carved body, three sledges, carved, a great bed, and other relics.

In each ship, running along the sides below the top are rowlocks, holes with slits through which the oars were inserted. To the mast in the center, originally a large square sail was attached. The rudder is seen placed on the right side near the stern.

It is also interesting to visit the Historical Museum in Oslo, or the National Museum at Copenhagen, or at Stockholm, and see numerous relics from Scandinavia, belonging to the prehistoric eras, tools, implements, and weapons of stone, bone, and wood, a period reaching down to about 1500 B. C.; also relics from the Bronze Period (1500 to 500 B. C.); and arms, utensils, etc., from the Iron Period (500 B. C. to A. D. 1000).

I would be pleased to see a museum of admirable proportions built up under the auspices of the church; enlarged by objects and relics of special interest from members and friends of the church throughout the world—open to the public. This would place within the enlightening reach of many what would otherwise be reserved for private view.

My field of effort includes Stockholm. It was my intention to proceed there directly from Oslo, but have concluded to pursue a northern course. Taking advantage of a rerouting of an unused portion of my steamer ticket and what the fare would be direct to Stockholm, I found that though the journey would be longer the expense would be about the same.

This means going via Trondhjem, and into the Arctic Circle to Bodo, Svolvaer, Narvik, and Abiskojoekk; thence by train to the capital of Sweden.

My departure from here will be taken early in the morning.

Pensacola, Florida

Corner Jackson and F Streets

June 28.—We are glad that we can still say, We are moving forward in Pensacola, though not so rapidly as we might like to see. We trust the growth of our branch will be like that of the sturdy oak, one that will be lasting and firm.

Last Sunday passed very busily and peacefully, the pulpit being filled at the morning hour by Brother W. L. Roby, at the evening hour by Brother J. E. Row. The latter used Hebrews 13 as a scriptural reading, calling attention to the sixth verse, "So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." Linking together other helpful scriptures, he proved to the congregation that it must be a courageous people who would carry this gospel work on to victory. It seems at the present the work here rests entirely upon the shoulders of these two brothers, and we feel that they will surely need the prayers and cooperation of the Saints.

Brother E. C. Shelley has left us, moving his family back to McKenzie, Alabama. We miss them. We had hoped they would locate here. Also Brother Adams and family, who came here from Eustis, Florida, have gone away. We regret to have so many leave us; we would much rather have more people like them move in.

Pensacola Saints are looking forward to reunion season as a time when all can feast their souls upon the bread of life, and we can hardly wait for this gathering. Some real live services are expected if we are to have those whom we have heard will be there. Florida Saints are not at all glad over the fact that Brother A. D. McCall and Sister Helen are to leave us. Mobile District may need them, but we can hardly let them go. Brother McCall is our district president and Sister Helen district chorister, and we feel they fill these offices perfectly. We don't want to give them up.

The usual monthly Religio social was held at Bay View Park Friday evening, and in spite of the rain and heavy clouds we had a fair attendance. The time passed very pleasantly with lots of switches and a great bonfire penned up with big logs. We had wieners, and everyone tried to roast one at the same time. No one wanted the smoky side.

We are glad that we at last have the Department of Women organized here, and are hoping to soon get right into the spirit of it and do some real work. We can see where it will fill in some vacancies that we have so much needed to fill. Sister S. G. Allen, our district superintendent, came over from Milton and organized our local department. Sister Bessie Row was chosen local superintendent, and Sister Claudia McBride secretary, while Sister Rena Joseph is treasurer. Other officers will soon be chosen to complete the organization.

We recently had the pleasure of claiming a visit from Brother and Sister J. A. Bishop, of Dixonville, Alabama. They seem like members of our church family, having lived here for quite awhile last year.

We are glad to have Brother Rudd out to church again after suffering for some time with bronchial asthma, also Sister Kelley was able to be out with us Wednesday evening at prayer meeting for the first time in six months. It made our hearts rejoice to hear her bear her testimony once again of more than fifty-two years in this gospel. It is helpful to others to see those who have gone through years of trials and testing still clinging to the rod of iron, leading to the tree of life. It makes us aware that there is something worth while in it and helps us to resolve to go on.

The shower of measles has blown over. Many of our number had to have them, especially our little folks. For a time we were made very anxious about Sister Nellie Stantron, for they came very near proving fatal to her. She is now out again.

Any visiting Saints passing this way will always find a welcome at our little church, which is located at the corner of Jackson and F Streets, west side of town. They can get in touch with the work here by writing Branch President J. E. Row, Route 13, Box 267a, Pensacola, Florida.

Sunday School Institute of Spring River District

The Sunday school workers and Saints of Spring River District held a Sunday school institute at Columbus, Kansas, last Sunday, June 26.

The day was well filled, beginning at ten in the morning with an address by Eugene Closson, followed at eleven by Brother Lee Quick. Then basket dinner was had in the park. At half past one we had round table conducted by Brother Closson, which included a discussion of the question of Sunday afternoon recreations. This was followed by a musical and literary program, which held us until about half past four. Music was furnished by the Webb City Junior Choir under the leadership of Sister Deaver. We gathered again at a quarter after seven in song service, and at half past seven Elder Amos T. Rigdon, our district president, gave us an excellent sermon.

At half past eight we enjoyed the illustrated lecture, "The Holy Land," which was given by Brother Job Negeim.

PITTSBURG, KANSAS, June 28.

Cleveland, Ohio, Celebrates Fathers' Day

The sisters of our branch felt that as the "fathers" of our branch had always tried to instruct us in God's plan and help us in every way to be useful in God's kingdom here on earth, we would try in our weak way to show our thankfulness and appreciation to them by paying tribute to them on Fathers' Day.

We feel, first, to render thanks to our heavenly Father for everything we enjoy; above all, that the glorious gospel has been permitted to come into our lives, that we may have the pleasure of obeying the same, and, as his handmaidens, help carry its mission to the people of this earth.

We are grateful for the father of our church, too, Joseph Smith the Martyr, who even as a mere lad so prepared his life that God chose him from this great world to be the instrument in his hands for bringing to light this glorious gospel, which is to save mankind, and that you and I today have the privilege of obeying.

That in his earnestness of heart and in his early youth he sought God in prayer in a lonely spot where he knew he could be alone with One who understands all; we all know the story of how God manifested himself to Joseph and intrusted to him the key to this latter-day gospel, the pearl of great price, and who not only was the one to bring it forth but went to a martyr's grave in defense of the same; so may we never cease thanking God for such a father to this church, and a true prophet to mankind. May we be true and loyal soldiers in the army of the Lord, and may we ever prove ourselves worthy to carry on this great latter-day message and of his noble death, that it might be established.

Truly, was he not a father in every respect? Even inasmuch as he gave his life that we, his followers, may have what we have today. May we not all pull together to send forth this gospel message, as if we were of that same strain of sincerity of heart, integrity of purpose, and filled with consecrated service and determination to finish that which he started and for which he so willingly died.

May we not as fathers, mothers, and children say and put into effect, "We sail Zionward, which is our course, and arrive at our goal?" And may God's blessings be ours to this end.

There was a tribute to the father of our Nation, George Washington. Many things could be well spoken to his praise, but we will render our tribute to him for his fatherly love for his men at the battle of Valley Forge. Through this love his men kept up the fight when their feet were bare, their uniforms ragged, and they were very hungry; but his love for them kept them together, and at this time he was seen in the woods, kneeling in the snow, praying to God for guidance that he might lead aright this Nation. Because he was willing to suffer with his men, he endeared himself to all of them, and the way he commanded them, he proved the favor of his country and was elected to the honorable position as father of our country, America, which office he filled and served his people in for eight years.

A tribute to the fathers of our community, our branch, and our homes. We are truly grateful for their teachings, their guidance and the council they try to instruct us with; it is the fathers with whom God intrusted the holy priesthood, that they may be shepherds of flocks, feeding God's lambs; and what a noble calling it is! May all of them prove worthy of it, and not only be called to fill such an honorable position on earth, but by the lives they live may they be worthy to be chosen in the hereafter to work in a like capacity.

To those fathers who have that home tie to perform, who stand between the world and its bitter foes, the hunger and cold; and whether it be a strong arm, or a keen brain, the true heart holds them tireless while life lasts; he emblazons the path "his boy" must tread; for him it is not the question of the "easier way" or "shorter journey," but every force of body, mind, and soul must answer to his need who feels, "This way comes my son."

He is the sentinel that must stand between his daughter and unhappiness, his presence or his memory warning her against the unclean, the untrue, and the weak; and for her sake he strains his manhood to the uttermost and sets his mark so high that he who measures up to it must be, indeed, "a man"; and may we, too, be able to say of him:

"Mid splendid pomp of stately halls and dome,
He labors best who builds a righteous dome."

"Fathers as we find them" was the title of a paper requested of the newly-elected member of a women's club at the first meeting of the section on "The Family."

"The family begins with the father. He isn't just a factor; he's the head," whispered a protestor to her neighbor, who replied indignantly: "He's not a factor; he's partner, I suppose you mean. We don't say 'head' any more, you know. Hush."

The new member came forward with her paper, looked at it for a moment, then with a sudden impulsive movement laid it down. Her cheeks were pink with confusion, her lovely eyes on them all as she said with the simplicity of a child: "I just can't do it, you know. I tried; but I can't dissect fathers as a whole, when my own father is so unutterably dear—has been ever since I could speak his name—that I would far rather tell what made him so beyond all other fathers that I knew. But they hadn't been taught. You say that men and women know naturally. I say they don't! Fatherhood and motherhood are not learned out of printed books nor in set lessons. It is life that teaches—life that is love itself.

"My father was a busy lawyer, young still when I was born, but wise in love, in child knowledge, so that a bad child, as we call little unfortunates, loved and obeyed him. I thought when I first learned the Lord's prayer that it must mean my own father, and even now I have hardly yet learned to separate him from my thought of the heavenly Father. My father was a child with us in our plays, yet the father whose verdict on all our methods meant a justice, a wisdom, and a sweetness that I pray my own children may in some measure find in me. In time I grew certain that it is mothers who must teach their sons to be such fathers in the homes they might be and will be when love is the law. Many a father whom we regard simply as a provider and wage earner has another power, and women know that this power is the very height and sum of tenderness lying mute, perhaps, till the woman brings it out, shaping his life and with the same ideal. These fathers could never be pushed into the background, nor turned into mere bill-paying machines. We know that every man child might be taught the meaning of fatherhood as every woman child knows and feels motherhood.

"I am far sorer for the men who do not know this than I am for the women who learn it perhaps only through motherhood, but do not know how to create the missing thing in the father. Earner, protector, defender—the strength of the home—that is the real father, never to be shoved into the background, and many a mother feels his arms about her as if she were still a child, and knows that only God himself could be tenderer or truer. That is father, and we women with our children may put that thought into every child born to us, and pray 'Our Father' with fuller heart and deeper longing that love may rule in it."

When speaking of fathers, it seem we are bound to think of mothers, children, and home as well; so I hope the fathers will pardon me and not feel that I'm taking away any tribute which is due them, but rather trying to make theirs sweeter by coupling it with the following thoughts; not that I would not give you your tribute alone, but when speaking of father it seems that we also see a vision of mother, and "Honor thy father and thy mother" is the one commandment to which rewarding consequence is attached; and truly they are, to the mind of your reader, inseparable. There is a close connection between the honor to father and mother, and lives honorable in all other respects. In honor for parenthood honoring itself, we have an indispensable beginning, for the true-heartedness and right-mindedness that honor love and truth, justice and right; one is not truly honored without the other.

Does the mother bear alone the responsibility of properly building the character of the children and of making home happy, or should the father share these privileges with her? Is not the home (or should be) a type of heaven on earth, and is not home just what father and mother both make it? Does not the father stand in need of helpful aid as does the mother? It is said that mothers working through their organizations have been instrumental in bringing about wonderful reforms in educational methods. If mothers working by themselves have been able to do so much, what might they not accomplish if supported by the aid and counsel of the fathers? Would there not be a greater strength in a parent congress than in a mothers' congress? I love to think of the musings of Hiawatha, which speak so beautifully of the nearness of man and woman, husband and wife:

"As unto the bow the arrow is,
So unto man is woman,
Though she bends him, she obeys him,
Though she draws him, yet she follows,
Useless each without the other!"

So can we not as people consisting of father and mother and children, fired with the knowledge of this latter-day gospel, show to the world, through our lives, God's great plan of salvation to the human race.

In closing I would like last, but not least, to pay just a small tribute to the memory of my beloved departed father, who was not only an honored father to me but a father to many of God's children here on earth and to some who are my hearers today. It was ever sacrificing, unselfish love that he manifested for all people as well as his own; and though when I was just nine years old he left home to carry the gospel message wherever his Master called, he never failed to play the father's part to me, his offspring; and to try to instill within my young mind a knowledge of the gospel, and that if faithful to the same there would come the time in our lives when we could be together with God in our midst in a place where all should gather who had been faithful to their God-given trust in this life.

That council has truly been a lamp to my feet and light to my pathway all through my walks in life; and I do hope and pray, God being my helper, to live faithfully to the end of my life so as to be able and worthy to instruct those that our kind heavenly Father has intrusted to our care and that they may have a blessed memory of my efforts for their welfare when I have passed from this life.

BESSIE TALBOT.

Harshaw, Wisconsin

The Goodnow Branch has been rather dormant throughout the winter months, but has picked up in attendance and activities since spring. Sunday school has been held regularly since the first of April.

Brother and Sister R. E. Simons were blessed with a wee daughter March 19. On May 18 Brother and Sister Frank Loomis announced the arrival of Audrey Ann. Brother and Sister Steele received a tiny daughter on June 3, but God saw fit to recall her to the land of the angels. After eight days of suffering she was taken to the land where no pain is ever known. "Budded on earth to blossom in heaven."

Brother Lester Wildermuth held meetings on June 19 and 20. A picnic dinner was enjoyed Sunday at the home of Brother Frank Loomis. Monday evening it rained very hard, but there was fine attendance.

Sister Allen and Sister Hansen and her husband, of Tomahawk, were here Sunday.

Baby Audrey Ann Loomis and Catheryn Joyce Simons were blessed by Brother Wildermuth.

Sister Ruth Toothman has been here visiting relatives, but has gone on to Chetek. Plans are being made to attend Chetek reunion.

MRS. GEORGE STEELE.

Ministerial Conference at Philadelphia

The New York Philadelphia District ministerial conference was held in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 25 and 26. Conditions were idealistic; the weather was cool and nearly everyone was fairly comfortable.

Saturday evening at six o'clock twenty-one men sat at one table in the basement of the church to partake nourishment for the physical man. It was there that we renewed acquaintances that had not been forgotten, and everyone was sincerely glad to see his brothers. At eight we had our first priesthood meeting.

Under the direction of Brother George Robley, who was elected chairman of this conference, a musical program was given and a paper read. Brother E. B. Hull, pastor of the Brooklyn Branch, read a paper on "Priesthood," which was written by E. K. Evans, now deceased, but the spirit is still very much alive. The paper covered very ably many phases of priesthood; and the short discussion that followed cleared up many misunderstandings that had been in our minds. It was a profitable evening, and it helped to prepare us for Sunday.

A day well started has more chances to be a perfect day than any other, and so at eight o'clock Sunday morning, many young and older people assembled for prayer meeting. Brothers A. H. Parsons and Herbert Cunningham officiated, and for an hour and twenty minutes we had a peaceful and strengthening meeting. We remembered our sick and afflicted ones, especially our pastor, Brother A. E. Stoff, who at the time was in the Independence Sanitarium. Brother A. Edwards, of Baltimore, related one of his visions in which he saw a beautiful piece of mechanism. Men came around it to try to operate it; one moved a lever here and one moved a lever there with no success. Then a stately man came and opened a valve, and the machine began to operate. That same man threw on switches here and there until our brother felt an energy that was produced and thrown by that machine in all directions. The mechanism was the church of Christ and the energy the Spirit of God.

At half past nine we entered the Sunday school session, and at eleven preaching service was held. At that time the children of Brother and Sister Claude Hull, son of Brother E. B. Hull, were blessed. That is one of the most beautiful ordinances in the church. Then Brother J. A. Jacques, former president of Pittsburgh District, addressed us. He spoke about business methods in the church, showing that not any special part in an automobile is most important, but all the parts working harmoniously make the automobile worth while. He stated that the church is nothing more than the enlargement of the family group; and finally made the analogy that some of the water at Niagara Falls, like some folks, simply goes with the rapids to be lost over the brinks, while some of the water passes through the turbines and generates the power necessary to illuminate and run machines for many miles around.

In the afternoon at three o'clock three papers were read and discussed. First, "Church decorum," by A. H. Parsons; second, "Home visiting by the priesthood," by Herbert Cunningham, of Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania; third, "Personal conduct of the priesthood," by Richard Hawkins, of Scranton, and read by Brother George Robley.

After such a day what better climax could be offered than a sermon by Brother George Robley with this text, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron"? Yes, indeed, that was the end of a perfect day; and as each one departed for home, he could not help but feel as one of the poets wrote:

"Our friends on earth we meet with pleasure,
While swift the moments fly;
Yet, ever comes the thought of sadness
That we must say good-by.

"We'll never say good-by in heav'n,
We'll never say good-by;
For in that land of joy and song
We'll never say good-by."

My prayer is that the time may come when we will not say good-by.

LOUIS J. OSTERTAG, Reporter.

Fresno, California

2412 Clay Street

June 24.—With the closing of the series of meetings held by Elder G. P. Levitt, our district president and missionary, from June 8 to 19, Fresno must go back to regular routine of branch work, which we do reluctantly after being privileged to listen to the unusual for ten days. On Saturday evening and Sunday, June 18 and 19, Brother Levitt conducted a regional priesthood conference, as had been done in Sacramento and San Francisco. Members of the priesthood from this end of the district were in attendance, including Brother A. J. Damron, of Tulare, one of the district presidency.

On Saturday evening Brother Virgil Etzenhouser, of Oakland, read his interesting paper, "The duties and responsibilities of a pastor," the discussion following being led by Pastor A. S. Votaw.

Sunday morning at half past eight found a large number present for a prayer service, followed by the regular Sunday school services, and at eleven Brother J. B. Carmichael, of Oakland, representing the bishopric, spoke for us on "Stewardships." Brother Carmichael is a former pastor of Fresno Branch and was heartily welcomed to our midst, all thoroughly enjoying his interesting and inspiring sermon. Then the Saints took basket dinners and drove to beautiful Rolding Park for lunch.

Back to the church at 2.30, at which time Brother Levitt read a paper concerning priesthoods, with a discussion led by Brother Frazier, pastor of Modesto Branch. This closed the regional conference, which had been not only a very interesting but an educational session and an inspiration to all.

Immediately following the afternoon services, Brother Levitt baptized three persons, a man and two young girls, who were confirmed at the evening meeting. Brother Levitt then spoke on the topic, "Roll the stone away," this being the closing service of the ten-day meetings. The last was a wonderful sermon, but taking them all together it would be hard to say which was the best.

The Ensign posters, sent out by the general Publicity Department, seemed to be an inspiration to him, and he gave a strong appeal to the Saints to subscribe to the church publications. The local publicity agent is hoping that an interest may have been stirred. This has seemingly been impossible for her to do.

There is no limit to the benefit and inspiration we received from these services, which can not help but leave a lasting influence with us. It was with deep regret that we parted with Brother Levitt, as he left us on the 12.25 train that night. We can only hope for his return to us as often as his busy hours will permit.

Saturday evening, June 11, the Department of Women served a banquet in the church, clearing about seventeen dollars, which will help pay off the bonds on the street work.

One thing which we forgot to mention in our last letter was the visit from Sister Hence, of Chico, our district Sunday school superintendent. From this visit the Sunday school derived much help.

We fully expected a visit from Bishop Carmichael while he was in our district. It seems a slight to Fresno Saints when these men come this way and do not visit us; we feel we are missing something we need as well as Oakland, Sacramento, and San Francisco, who have the missionaries, the bishop, the district president, and others in their midst all the time.

To inform any of the other brethren who happen to come this way, that we may be blessed with a call at least, our church is located at 2412 Clay Street, one half block west of Fresno Street car line, or phone 26564 for the pastor, Brother A. S. Votaw, 402 Shasta Avenue.

Second Columbus Branch

Rinehard and Whittier Streets

July 2.—As we met on June 5 in sacramental service, a peaceful spirit prevailed throughout the meeting, and many beautiful testimonies were given.

Again the work of the Sunday school is shown by the baptism of three on Sunday evening, by Elder Kirkendall. Those who were baptized are Junior Kirkendall, Harold McKee, and Dorothy McKee. Their confirmations took place at the evening service.

Our Children's Day program was given June 12. The Rose Chorus by the Oriole Girls was beautiful, each girl being dressed to represent a rose, which made a very pleasing effect. The Blue Birds gave a dialogue and song; they were dressed to represent different flowers. The recitations and songs were appropriate for the occasion and enjoyed by all. Sister Ethel Kirkendall arranged the program, and we appreciate her work in helping the children develop their talents.

Saturday evening, June 18, our missionary, E. L. Ulrich, preached a very interesting sermon.

On the 19th our day started with Sunday school at 9.15. We are glad to report one hundred and forty-five visitors present at this service.

At 10.30 President F. M. Smith preached a very forceful sermon, taking for a theme, "Zion." The Spirit of the Master was present to help us to better appreciate the work the church is doing and the part we should have in establishing Zion.

At 2.30 dedicatory services opened with song, "Consecration," prayer by C. W. Clark. There was an anthem, "Onward to Zion," by a quartet. Insurance papers, abstract, and keys were presented to Bishop H. E. French, and a short history of the branch was given. The dedicatory prayer was by Patriarch J. E. Matthews. Then followed a tenor solo, "My task," by Robert Willison, and the dedicatory sermon by President F. M. Smith. We hope to long remember the beautiful thoughts presented by our Prophet. Especially do we hope not only to dedicate our building to God, but our lives, that we may be of greater service to the Master. After the sermon Mamie Kirkendall sang a beautiful solo, "My Redeemer."

Again at 7.30 President Smith addressed us, taking for a theme "Stewardship." This proved to be a very interesting and instructive sermon.

Words can not express the joy that filled our hearts this day. God has truly richly repaid us for any sacrifice made in the erection and paying for our building. We hope to merit his continued favor by doing all we can to get the gospel before the people and by living lives that will be acceptable to him.

Brother and Sister J. E. Matthews and Brother A. H. Nieman were privileged to be here for the dedication. They each worked hard that we might accomplish the task before us. We were glad it was possible for them to be present to rejoice with us.

We were glad to see so many present to hear President Smith. Each branch in the Southern Ohio District was represented, as well as many in the Kirtland and North-western Ohio Districts. Two bus loads came from Akron and Barberton, Ohio. We feel they were repaid for their trip when they heard the wonderful sermons by our President.

Monday evening, June 20, Elder A. B. Klar, Dover, Ohio, gave a health lecture which was appreciated by all who heard it. Other speakers for the month were Elders A. E. Anderson, G. H. Kirkendall, and A. H. Nieman.

The Department of Women had a birthday surprise on Sister Morris June 27. A cake was baked with sixty-two roses on it, and in each rose a candle was placed. Our sister has been sick for some time, but is better at this writing. She was presented a beautiful bouquet of flowers and a gift of money from the department to show appreciation for her faithful service. We wish her many more happy birthdays.

This department also had a picnic at the Storage Dam on June 30. All had a good time, especially when it came time to eat. We hope this will be an annual affair with our women.

Stewartsville, Missouri

July 6.—The morning service of June 5 was given over to observance of Fathers' Day. The program was delightful. Mrs. Annie McCord gave us one of her pleasing and educational talks. She spoke of the great fathers of history, and in conclusion paid tribute to all fathers, pointing out the many ways in which father sacrifices for his loved ones. Several musical numbers and readings were rendered, then President Zenas Lewis concluded the morning program with an equally wonderful tribute. The service was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The evening service was poorly attended, as many of our members attended Maple Grove's Children's Day program. It was a very fine entertainment. All teachers and pupils are to be highly commended.

Brother B. J. Dice was speaker for the evening of June 12. He is one of Stewartsville's faithful pioneers, and his sermons are always helpful.

Brother S. J. Hines, another veteran, was speaker for the evening of June 19. The attendance was good and the sermon enjoyed by all.

The services of June 26 deserve special comment, as the speakers both morning and evening are promising young men just recently ordained teachers.

Brother Gordon Hidy spoke at the eleven o'clock hour. Stewartsville Branch is indeed proud of him. His first effort was wonderful, and we know that with continued effort and study he can be an instrument in God's hands for much good.

Brother Curlis Vernon, who has recently graduated from Palmer School of Chiropractic, was speaker for the evening. He has taken an active part in Davenport Branch, and it was while there that he was ordained a teacher. His sermon was very good, showing that his greatest interest is in the church and its advancement. This helps us to appreciate the many good things he said. His life is truly an example of Christian character. We know success will be his, for he pays the price of success.

Now we are ready to report on the big contest. The Blues certainly surprised the Reds by winning, but they forgot to stop their airplane in Jerusalem. We think they must be trying to outdistance Lindbergh in a non-stop flight. If they don't run out of gasoline and will return home safely, the Reds will be ready to give them the big "feed" and entertainment they deserve. They truly merit it, for their collection the last Sunday was over seventeen dollars. I am not telling what the Reds gave, but will tell you all about the entertainment next time.

I have no energy to write any more news after making this confession, for I am one of the Reds. But I will add in conclusion that the contest has certainly helped our Sunday school in every respect—attendance, interest, lessons studied, and collections, to say nothing of new members. If your Sunday school drags, try a contest to gain new enthusiasm.

Corner 60th Avenue West, and Bristol Street

June 29.—Brother W. C. Stauty was in Bemidji May 29 and met with the Saints there in their Sunday activities, speaking to them at eleven o'clock on the theme, "The gospel of love." It makes one's heart warm to the great latter-day work (which of itself implies service) when meeting with people of like faith, and to feel that brotherly love which exists among God's people that one does not feel as a stranger, but that we are indeed one large family with God the Father and Jesus Christ the elder brother. But how much more warmth will radiate from us when we more thoroughly demonstrate the life of Christ in our every walk of life! May we each in this the hastening time buckle on the full gospel armor, preparing to take part in the redemption of Zion, leaving our petty differences to be righted in the Lord's own due time, that each one of us may be found laboring with God for the accomplishment of the great task that lies before us, that we may not be sifted as wheat and bound with the tares for burning.

June 5 sacramental service was held at 11 a. m. with Elder Sam Case in charge, Elder George W. Day assisting. Brother Day was the evening speaker, using as a text Matthew 16: 19, 20.

Elder Ray Whiting, of Minneapolis, district president, and pastor of the Minneapolis Branch, was the speaker Sunday morning, June 12. He came from Minneapolis to administer to Sister Bertha Eckley, of Barnum, who was in Saint Luke's Hospital to undergo an operation and who from a fall sustained a broken hip. Our prayers ascend to God for this sister and her companion, that the Father may bless her and that her faith in him shall be rewarded. We realize that God does all things well and that those who are obedient are in his keeping. His will be done.

Elder George W. Day was the speaker in the evening, using Acts 3: 20, 21: "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." The theme of his discourse was the literal coming of Christ.

The junior church gathered after Sunday school and journeyed to Lincoln Park at Twenty-fifth Avenue West and Third Street and held their meeting under the canopy of heaven, eating their dinner at the park.

Brother W. C. Stauty was speaker in the morning of June 19, discussing the topic, "Our individual task." Pastor P. G. Schnuckle, speaking in the evening, took for a text 1 Timothy 4: 29. Brother and Sister S. A. Davis and family, of Wrenshall, and Mr. E. W. Senna and Sister Senna, from Fairmont, were present at the morning service, and Brother Earl Innes and Brother Hugh Ross, members of the crew of Saint James McNaughton, were welcomed in the evening.

Elders P. G. Schnuckle and Samuel Case with Brother Stauty went Tuesday evening, June 21, to the home of Brother and Sister S. A. Davis, at Wrenshall, to officiate in the blessing of an infant son of Sister Leons Marie Senna and Elmer W. Senna, of Fairmont, Minnesota, who were there visiting, and upon returning these brethren found a Buick car will not run without gas.

A goodly number of Saints from here were in attendance at the reunion. They are as follows: Sisters R. C. Stauty, Mollie Feathers, C. E. Silverthorn, Lottie Zuelsdorf, Mahala Bundy, Julia Case, Marie White, and Susie Cravens, of Two Harbors, and Brothers Robert Zuelsdorf, A. C. Bundy, Samuel Case, George W. Day, and Robert White.

Those that attended the prayer meeting on the 29th, on returning from reunion, testify of the desire within them of going forward as never before, having received a greater knowledge of the work in which they are engaged, testifying of the Spirit of the Master, as his servants brought manna from the Lord's storehouse. Brother Carmichael, Presiding Bishop, brought to them a clearer understanding of stewardship under the holy unction from on high. May this clearer understanding also awake in us the knowledge of a greater responsibility. May unity come to us, that we can move forward in the great work before us, that the great sacrifice Christ has made for us may not be in vain, but that light and truth may shine from us!

Topeka, Kansas

July 4.—At a meeting of the Department of Women June 9 talks were given by District Missionary C. E. Harpe and Sister R. D. Weaver, of Independence, Missouri. Both were enjoyed by those present. Sister Weaver was the guest of Sister A. P. Crooker.

On the morning of June 12 a round table was held at the preaching hour. Subject for discussion was the good of the branch, resulting in a renewal of the pledge of those present in their efforts to further the best interest by their faith, prayers, and efforts. The service was in charge of the pastor, C. C. Graham. Brother Graham also occupied at the evening preaching hour.

Two special programs were given on June 19. The Fathers' Day program was rendered at eleven, in charge of the mothers. The fathers were each given a red rose by the reception committee at the beginning of the service. With other appropriate numbers the responsive service by Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley for Mothers' Day was used, the fathers singing instead of the mothers. A talk on the life work of the first father of the church, with mention of the grandson, Joseph Smith, in the beginning of the Reorganization was given. Elder James Baillie, of Scranton, Kansas, was guest of honor, he being the father of this branch, and occupied a seat on the rostrum. As a token of the love and esteem with which he is regarded by members of the branch, he was presented a beautiful basket of flowers. This basket of flowers was first the gift of Sister Mary O'Brien to the branch to be used on this special occasion in honor of her father, John Cairns, and was then to go to Sister A. P. Crooker, who out of the love and gratitude of her heart asked to have it presented to our beloved brother, James Baillie, in behalf of the branch.

As a tribute to the memory of the late A. P. Crooker, the poem, "Away," was read. "Faith of our fathers" was sung, and Brother Baillie, after expressing appreciation of the gift and pleasure of being in the service, invoked the Father's blessing.

The Children's Day program was given at eight o'clock in the evening. Decorations were pink and white. Back of the stand pink paper was draped on a white background, and an artificial wall of rock and flowers extended across the front. Much credit is due the committee for the splendid arrangement, which truly made it look like June time. The program consisted of songs, readings, solos, and dialogues. The dialogue, "Children's Day in Dog-leg Alley," was written by Sister Grim. A vocal solo was contributed by Miss Lena Buell, Lawton, Oklahoma, and a reading by Mrs. Mildred Kelley, Englewood, Missouri. The presentation of the cradle roll certificates was by the superintendent of the department, Sister A. P. Crooker. Two special programs in one day mean work, but all felt repaid for the extra effort.

Brother Berwin Lungwitz, of Los Angeles, gave the introductory remarks at the prayer service Wednesday evening, June 23. His theme was, "The purpose of the soul, set of the soul, goal of the soul." This was a very spiritual service, all enjoying the words of wisdom of the brother, which showed that though he is yet tender in years, the spirit of his calling as a priest rests upon him. Our best wishes go with him.

No services were held on Sunday, the 26th, as the members of the branch were in attendance at the two-day meeting held at Scranton, Kansas.

The Department of Women gave a pie social at the home of Sister Alfrey, north of the city, Tuesday evening, the 28th. The proceeds go to buy new chairs for the primary department; also a portion of it for branch expenses. Thus has this department made itself a friend in need.

The sacramental service Sunday morning was in charge of Elder C. H. Smith, and Brother J. G. Juergens spoke briefly to us. He has been absent for some months, yet met with the Saints when possible. He spoke of our solace in the gospel and our joy and comfort in the reading of the Bible and its associated books. The fact that Satan sometimes tries to make us believe we are not worthy to partake of the emblems in order to keep us from partaking was stressed, and the folly of judging a person's whole life by one or two acts committed when not on guard. It seemed good to have Brother Juergens with us again and also Brother Smith, who with his family moved away about a month ago. We regret to lose this worthy family. At each recurring sacrament we feel deeply the loss of Elder Crooker.

Sunday evening District President Dave Little and family, of Burlingame, Kansas, were present, he preaching for us on the theme, "The gospel law and its effectiveness in spite of unbelief." Our ignorance of God's laws does not make them inoperative, neither our disbelief. A duet, "Scatter sunshine everywhere you go," was pleasingly rendered by Mrs. C. A. Hooper and C. H. Smith at the beginning of the service. Accompaniment was by Miss Myrtle Hooper.

Other visiting Saints from out of town were Sister America Christensen and family, of Lawrence, Kansas, and a daughter from Idaho.

To all Saints visiting in Topeka we extend a cordial invitation to meet with us.

President Smith Visits Brush Creek Branch

On Thursday, June 9, the Department of Women had a birthday dinner in honor of three of their members, Katie Burgess, Icel Burroughs, and Eula Morris. The table was filled with good things to eat. Several beautifully decorated birthday cakes were on the table. Twenty-seven did justice to this fine dinner. It proved to be a big surprise to the above named. The older ladies finished a quilt while others embroidered. The following short program was rendered in the afternoon: Song, by all; invocation, Sister Lucy Brown; song, "The child of Galilee," by children; reading, Sister Fannie Caudle; reading, Katie Burgess; instrumental solo, Flossie Clow; select reading, Gladys Burroughs; an address by Brother F. L. Sawley. All departed at a late hour, saying they had certainly enjoyed the day. The crowd consisted of the Department of Women, Temple Builders, Orioles, Blue Birds, and Boy Scouts.

On Saturday night, June 18, the Orioles and Boy Scouts gave an ice cream social with a large crowd as audience.

Sunday, the 19th, we enjoyed a splendid talk given by Brother Lewis De Selm, of Mount Vernon, the superintendent of Recreation and Expression. We were pleased also to have him in our Sunday school.

The young people are having some very spiritual prayer meetings each Tuesday night. We have a good attendance at general prayer meeting on Wednesday night.

Thursday, June 23, the Department of Women had with them the district superintendent, Sister Bessie Burgess, of Centralia. She was accompanied by Sister Fairy, also of Centralia.

Most everyone of this branch attended the district conference at Mount Vernon, which convened June 24, 25, and 26.

On Monday night we enjoyed a grand surprise, that of having President F. M. Smith preach to us. The house was packed to its capacity, and several stood outside. Words can not express our appreciation to Brother Smith. We feel that this was the greatest thing that has happened at Brush Creek. He gave us some wonderful food for thought, as well as a history of his life. We hope in the future to carry out his wishes here.

We were also pleased to have Brother Fulk, our district president and missionary, also Brother J. R. Lentell, our other missionary, with us that night. We are certainly proud these two were sent to our district.

Central Los Angeles Branch

Numerous events have kept the Saints of Los Angeles busy and interested for many weeks. The first week in June our new pastor, Elder Glaud Smith, and his family, arrived. A few days later Brother Smith joined us at a Sunday school picnic, where he had opportunity to see how much some of his new flock can eat, how well others can play, and perhaps how well others can work and cooperate in various ways. And while our new friend was observing us, many were observing him; and the writer very joyfully reports, though there were many comments, only one adverse criticism seems to have come to her ears, namely that Brother Smith had committed the misdemeanor of being so young.

At a business meeting June 8 our new pastor was officially installed. Some other business was discussed, after which heads of various departments of branch work gave welcoming talks to Brother and Sister Smith and their little son. Both Brother and Sister Smith responded with a speech, and it is still undecided which is the better speech maker. Our former pastor, Apostle Myron A. McConley, made some interesting remarks, gave some good advice, and told us he hoped his friendship with the Saints here would continue to grow stronger. The Saints gave Brother and Sister McConley a vote of thanks in appreciation of their earnest and worth-while efforts to build up the work here. We shall miss them very much and shall welcome their visits among us in the future. Following the meeting was a general reception, greetings, introductions, handclaps, smiles, conversation, refreshments, and just those features that characterize a friendly, happy Latter Day Saint gathering.

The choir has the credit for a very novel banquet which was given for a threefold purpose, namely to help raise money to finish paying for the pipe organ, to acquaint others with effort of the choir and the need of branch support, and to bring Saints together who have little opportunity for social contact. Choir members planned the banquet, sold the tickets to friends who are not members of the choir; decorated the dining room, and prepared and served the feast, all in a most fitting and dignified manner. Brother Dana Crum, Brother Will Badham, and others made short, impressive talks regarding the organization, history, effort, and achievement of the choir. Several splendid musical numbers followed: Sister Mildred Nesser, vocal solo; the Silver-Haired Quartet, a great surprise to those present, gave two numbers and received great applause. The Silver-Haired Quartet was composed of Sisters Mather, Horney, Teel, and Pritchard, of the Women's Department.

The Saints of the South Los Angeles Mission gave "Uncle Tom's Cabin" to a large crowd on June 10. The Long Beach and Santa Ana orchestras furnished some fine music. On June 21, aided by some generous husbands, the Department of Women presented "The Deestrick Skule." The casts of these plays were made up of both amateurs and professionals, and from observation it was readily seen that much valuable talent has been left undeveloped these many years. The offerings taken at these plays were used for local needs by the branches participating, but perhaps the most worthwhile benefit was the social contacts of those in the play and their contribution in aiding a good cause; feelings of fellowship, and appreciation of the fact that we really never need to grow old in spirit, but at fifty may successfully play the part of a schoolgirl jumping rope or a red-headed boy playing pranks on the teacher.

Recently we have had some splendid sermons by both local and visiting ministers. Brother Pitt gave us a rousing gospel sermon. Brother Glaud Smith gave a most instructive and inspiring discourse on "The need and habits of study." Brother McConley gave a meaningful sermon on "The latter-day work." Brother John Martin, whom, with his family we have just welcomed to Southern California, told us the "Story of Esther" in the most impressive manner we have ever heard it; he depicted clearly the traits of character that make Esther stand out in sacred history, namely, love for her people, faith in prayer, her dependability, and her acceptance of her responsibility.

The spirit of the prayer meetings has been good, and especially at the service of June 22. Those present experienced a real prayer service. The theme of the evening was "prayer": how to pray, why pray, when to pray, why our prayers are sometimes not answered, and the results of prayer.

On June 20 Saints and friends witnessed a pretty wedding, when Sister Olive Davis and Brother Albert Gilstrap were united in marriage. Preceding the wedding march, Alice McConley and Myron Nichols gave a violin duet, "Love's old sweet song," Brother Wallace Farley sang, "In the dawn-ing," and Sister Mildred Nesser sang, "Love's old sweet song." Sister Mildred Mather Collinge was at the organ.

As many present have expressed themselves, the ceremony was the most instructive, practical, and impressive they have ever heard. Some of the thoughts brought out were the need for the constant consideration of man and wife for each other, the purpose of a family altar, the vital necessity of keeping the Holy Spirit in the home that love might ever prevail and the home never be torn asunder. Brother McConley performed the ceremony; Betty Johnson was maid of honor; Lois Neese and Vern Bowbeer, bridesmaids; Virginia Moe, flower girl; Bruce Crayne, best man; Frank Stauts and Wallace Farley, groomsmen. We appreciate this young couple and wish for them in life everything that is for their good and happiness.

Last Sunday was Children's Day. The young folks gave a good program, and following several children were baptized, and two babies were blessed. Brother Glaud Smith gave a sermon for the children just preceding the baptism. The evening discourse was on an old theme "Except ye become as a little child, ye can not enter the kingdom," but was treated in a new light.

Sister Stella Hodges, our choir leader, has been in the hospital for an operation and quite ill, but we are very happy to report her much improved and trust we shall soon have her with us again. She has served so well in times past that she has been sorely missed.

The Saints of this locality are very much encouraged, and many are showing new and greater interest than has been manifested for some time.

His Conception of Family Duties

In Doctrine and Covenants 17:10 we find these words: "The priest's duty is to . . . visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties."

What are family duties? Every man, who by virtue of his office must ask himself this question, is compelled to give his own answer thereto and to work on that answer, be it right or wrong. If there has ever been anything definite written or given answering this question, I am unaware of it, and yet I am very forcibly made to feel the need of such a treatise.

I believe if we as priests were more uniform in our ideas of what "family duties" consist, we would accomplish greater results in our visiting. I have given considerable study to the question: "What are family duties?" and have compiled the following list, which I pass on to you, my fellow priests, not with the thought that it is perfect and can not be improved, but in the hope that it might be helpful in answering a very important question: 1. Cleanliness; 2. Proper relations of parents to children, children to parents, to neighbors, friends, humanity in general; 3. Proper training of children; 4. Temperance—in all things; 5. Economy—frugality; 6. Payment of honest debts, which includes tithing; 7. Attendance at church meetings; 8. Reading of proper literature; 9. The obtaining of the best education possible, with proper use of same.

That a priest who shall attempt to discuss these things with others shall be a living example for them, goes without saying.

The month of June opened rather auspiciously with one of the most wonderful prayer meetings we have ever held in our little chapel. The Master poured out his Spirit in abundance, and all rejoiced under its influence. On sacrament Sunday, the fifth, our priesthood met at 7 a. m., and again that spirit of brotherly love was manifested to such an extent that all felt loath to leave the meeting. It was decided at this time to hold priesthood meetings twice a month in the future. A wonderful spirit continued to prevail at the sacramental service, with Brothers Byrn and Healy in charge. The topic of the meeting was, "We want to help to build Zion." The many testimonies offered show plainly that our little branch is moving forward spiritually, as well as numerically.

The evening service was dispensed with to enable the branch to attend the closing sermon of Brother John R. Grice at the Central Church in a body.

On the 8th of the month we were again blessed abundantly, and we had another one hundred per cent testimony meeting. We are glad to report such occurrences, for we believe they mean spiritual development.

On the morning of the 12th our pastor, E. O. Byrn, spoke to us from the fourth chapter of Paul's letter to the Thessalonian saints. The evening hour was occupied by Philemon Pement with his usual forceful discourse, which was enjoyed by all.

On the 19th our pastor again spoke to us in no uncertain terms on the subject of stewardships. Among the many things he asked was that the Saints keep their minds open to the idea of stewardships, for we hope that West Pullman may so develop that it may be one of the branches that as our President has suggested, would be moved bodily into Zion. At the evening hour, Brother Roy F. Healy spoke to us on the subject of prayer, using as his text the words found in 1 Chronicles 16:11.

On the evening of the 21st, at a special service, we were pleased to have with us as a speaker Brother John R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan, who addressed us in his forceful and energetic manner, using as his text Saint Matthew 5:16.

On the 26th we were glad to have Brother Charles Cotton again address us in the morning hour, and in the evening the latest addition to our ranks, Brother Clem Evans, spoke to us. Brother Evans now resides with our pastor. At our prayer meeting on the 29th, we were glad to have with us our district president, David Dowker. Among the visitors this month are Sister W. A. McDowell, of Plano, and Brothers Floyd McDowell and Eugene Closson, of Independence. We were glad to have with us also Brother G. T. Richards and family, of Carsonville, Michigan, who stopped on their way to their new mission in Missouri.

On the last of the month we held a talent and ice cream social, which was a very successful affair. The exact amount made is as yet uncertain, but it is very evident that it was financially a success also.

Our departments under able leadership are progressing nicely, and we hope to have some real news from them next month. Quite a few of our members attended the district conference at Mission on the 25th and 26th, and brought us back glad tidings.

Our outlook for the future is indeed promising, and we are encouraged to press forward in this great latter-day work. We are always glad to have any visitors meet with us. Our motto is, "Only once a stranger." Those desiring to communicate with our pastor, E. O. Byrn, may do so by addressing him at this residence, 12011 Stewart Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. We shall be very glad to get in touch with any friends or relatives you may have in this portion of the Lord's vineyard, if you will advise us of their address.

Madison, Wisconsin

July 1.—During the last month we have had some sickness in our branch and one death. On June 1, as the Saints met in prayer service, prayers were requested for Sister Minnie Root, who was very sick. She had a stroke of paralysis, was rushed to the hospital, where she stayed a few days. Then through prayer and administration, she was able to return home to her loved ones. Sister Root has raised a family of six children, all but one having accepted the gospel. They are very much devoted to their church. We hope the Lord will heal Sister Root and spare her life, that she may enjoy the gospel with her family a few years yet. This she greatly desires to do.

At this service beautiful prayers were offered in her behalf, and the family feel that God attended while the Saints prayed.

Sister Stevens, who resides with her daughter, was in the city visiting relatives and friends. She has been a faithful Saint for many years, and bore her testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel and the blessings of God. It is strengthening to those who are younger in years when we hear the aged bear their testimony. It gives us courage to go on in the faith of our fathers, to be true till death.

On June 3, Brother William Pratt was called from earthly life. He came home sick from work on Thursday night and Friday morning was taken to the hospital where he died a short time afterwards. Doctors said his death was caused by expansion of the heart. He was sixty-four years old, and his sudden departure was a shock to his family. Brother Pratt was held in high esteem among his fellow men and church workers. His home was always open to the missionaries, and the peace of God abode there. He was a loving father and companion, always willing to contribute to the needy. His love for the church was deep rooted, and he invariably took part in the prayer service. Though he had not the chance of gaining an education in youth, he worked to give his children more opportunities in life. We are sure he is one who will hear the voice of God and live. He leaves behind a loving companion, one daughter, and three sons, the youngest of whom, George, finished high school the week of his father's death. Funeral was held on Sunday, the sermon being delivered by Patriarch W. A. McDowell, of Plano, Illinois, who used for his text, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Singers were Sisters Walker and Dennis, who rendered "No night there," and "The Lord knows why." There was a beautiful display of flowers, and many of the men with whom the deceased had labored came to pay their last respects to the one they loved. We hope some day to again meet Brother Pratt and accept his glad handshake.

A very spiritual June sacramental meeting was enjoyed,

Brothers Woodstock and McDowell being in charge. Brother McDowell gave words of fatherly advice and counsel. We truly look upon Brother McDowell as a father in Israel. The Lord spoke through Brother Woodstock, asking Archie Root to prepare himself for greater work that is in store for him to do, that of laboring in the Aaronic priesthood, in the office of deacon.

The adults had a party at the home of Sister Walker the evening of the 15th. Games and merrymaking were the order of the evening, after which a bounteous lunch was served.

Many from here attended the June meeting, the 12th, which is an annual event, at the home of Sister Charles Hoagues, sr., of Evansville.

Those from Madison who attended the district conference at Soldiers Grove were Sister Leda Colbert and Sister Miller, sr. Brother Clark has been home to spend a few days with his family; he had charge of Wednesday night prayer service.

We welcome to our branch Brother Willard Hield and family, from Lamoni. They have located at 1917 East Washington Avenue. Brother Hield is here to attend summer school and to teach at the University of Wisconsin.

Allan Houghton is again home, having been gone for the school year at Iowa University. This spring he graduated from there with high honors.

Bobby Pratt, son of Brother and Sister James Pratt, is in the hospital with scarlet fever. He is getting along nicely.

Brother Houghton is home for a while from his mission field. He preached both Sunday morning and evening. In the morning he used for the basis of his sermon Luke 10: 26-39. In the evening he told of his early experiences in the church.

We are looking forward with great anticipation to the young people's convention which will be held here July 9 and 10. Apostle F. Henry Edwards will be our principal instructor.

Springfield, Missouri

810 East Dale Street

On May 15 a party of about twenty motored to Chadwick, Missouri, and spent the day with the Saints in that locality, all reporting a nice trip. Quite a number brought back ferns and flowers collected along hillsides, and everyone had all the strawberries he could eat.

A week later Brother A. W. Duemler and wife and F. M. Bishop and wife spent Sunday at Joplin, renewing acquaintance and attending church. While there they had the pleasure of hearing President Elbert A. Smith at the morning service, also exacting a promise from Brother Elbert to visit Springfield in the near future.

Brother Elmer Palmer and Sister Minnie Crabtree were married May 22. Brother F. M. Reynolds performed the ceremony, and the usual good time followed Tuesday evening with a charivari, and Brother Elmer proved himself a good sport. After the bride and groom had had a nice ride in a wheelbarrow and a number of other pranks were played, all present were liberally served ice cream and candy.

The strawberry season is over in the Ozarks, and we hope everyone in the State had the opportunity to taste the delicious berries which are grown in this section. There were 1,841 carloads shipped this year via Frisco lines, the total crop for this section being 3,800 cars. This makes us proud of this Ozark country, to see the "strawberry special" which is the familiar term given to entire trains of strawberries loaded in express refrigerator cars handled daily by the Frisco's fastest locomotive power.

Brother and Sister James F. Kemp and L. K. Gibbons and family spent June 6 and 7 visiting with the Saints in the neighborhood of Tigris, Missouri. All reported an enjoyable time.

June 13, a shower for the newly married couple, Brother and Sister Elmer Palmer, was held in the church basement. Many nice and useful gifts were presented, and a happy evening was spent.

You Southern Missourians, please do not forget that Spring River and Clinton District have extended the invitation to this district to join them in their reunion at Joplin, August 12 to 21. The Spring River District has a nice reunion ground at Joplin, with access to swimming pool and other recreational features, and if you have never made the trip from Springfield to Joplin over U. S. Highway No. 66, "The main street of America," this part of the trip alone will be worth your time.

Brother and Sister R. L. Bishop and family, of Mount Washington, Missouri, are visiting relatives here. Brother McCormick, pastor of the Marshall Branch, was a visitor at our prayer service last evening, and his testimony and presence were enjoyed by all.

Hilo Branch

Interesting Account of the Work of the Hawaiian Branch

Our Hilo church is a little brown building, situated on a small street—Ululani Street. It is a plainly constructed edifice, being built by the male members of the little branch. The mission house joins the church. This church was built ten years ago; and proud were the members who entered its portals the first Sunday following its completion.

Let us enter this little building. There are two rows of benches, holding a capacity of just two hundred people. On the platform facing the audience, is a koa pulpit. Below the platform is where the baptism takes place. At the base of the platform are a koa table with a koa chair on each side of it. Behind the pulpit the choir is seated. There are no elaborate furnishings to decorate the interior of the building. On either side of the choir "cove" are rooms where classes are held.

Although not very richly furnished, the mission house is homelike and comfortable. Here many social evenings have been enjoyably spent. The missionaries who have occupied this home have been very hospitable, permitting us to make free use of it.

There are just a few families attending the Hilo Branch. One can almost count them on his fingers. Although there are so few, we have carried on the work beautifully, gradually increasing the membership as the years have rolled by.

There are several branches that help to push the church work along. First there is the women's auxiliary. Once every week they hold their meetings, after which they sew. They have done much towards making financial ends meet. Good fellowship amongst the members has helped to make their work grow.

Every Thursday evening, from half past six to half past nine, the young people of the Lanakila Club spend a pleasant evening at the mission house. Games of basket ball, volley ball, and indoor baseball are enjoyed in the church lot adjoining the mission house. Indoor games are also enjoyed.

Every Sunday morning, from a quarter of ten to a quarter of eleven, Sunday school takes place. The members of the Sunday school often go on picnics or hikes; either up to the Rainbow Falls or to the Kaumana Caves, but most always to Cocoanut Island, where swimming, fishing, singing, and playing of games are enjoyed.

Our Religio commences at six o'clock and terminates at seven o'clock. We have our classes and then our program, which has been prepared for by the different members.

The choir for the services of the church consists of the younger members. Their ages range between ten and twenty-five years. There are many promising voices among the members. With the cooperation between the chorister and organist (who are very efficient workers) and the singers, the work is carried on beautifully.

During the absence of missionaries, as is the case now, the members of the priesthood carry on the duties of the pastor.

I hope I have given you a vivid impression of the work carried on in the Hilo Branch. I hope that through our love for the same work, we will come in closer contact with each other.

KANIU HAPAI.

Portland, Oregon

July 3.—Nature was generous and enthusiastic when she stopped at Oregon, for truly our State is the Nation's playground. But a few hours' drive (most of us own a flivver) carries the motorist into the wilds of the mountain, where raging streams tumble and roar and twist and turn along their rocky banks. Snowcapped peaks, waterfalls, and lakes thrill and invite us; the ocean has its charms and lures us to its shores. Can't you feel our temptation? But we raised our hands and with palm outward, said "No," very flatly.

An unusually large number was present at the sacramental service on July 3. This indicated that to the Saints of Portland an hour in closer communion with the Savior, an hour devoted to songs, testimonies, and prayer is a resting and lasting stimulus. Several out-of-town Saints were present. Brother Earl Root, who is on a short visit here from his home in California, preached in the evening.

For several weeks the Sunday school has been making a special systematic drive for Christmas offering. It has adopted the slogan, "A penny a day is the Portland way."

The presiding priest of the branch, Brother Henry Livingston, has been ill for the previous nine weeks, suffering with lumbago and shattered condition of his whole nervous system. He has been blessed through the administrations of the elders and through the prayers of the Saints and is slowly regaining his strength. Sister Allen has been undergoing a long sickness also. She has been bedfast with inflammatory rheumatism. Her little granddaughter, Eileen Hansen, has been in the Multnomah Hospital for several months. They would appreciate the prayers of the Saints. We shall be glad for the time to come when they will be enjoying their normal health and when they will be able to be in our midst.

Our reunion will begin on Friday evening, July 22, with a snappy program which we hope will start everything off with the pep and enthusiasm that is always present at a Portland reunion.

Apostle James A. Gillen, Myron A. McConley, and Bishop J. A. Becker will be our speakers. We know all of them; therefore, as the preliminaries of "getting acquainted" are already over, we are anticipant—we are eager to hear their message for us for this year.

The Portland tourist camp, the same location as for the past two years, has been chosen again. It is two blocks from Glen Echo Station on the Oregon City electric car line; or if you take the flivver, follow the Eastside River highway leading to Oregon City until you see signs along the way. It is true the ground is not covered by linoleum, and there may be a little dust, but forget the dirt and look up at those mighty firs, and listen to the birds singing from their branches. The reunion committee will cover the ground with linoleum next year!

This year the reunion committee is providing us with something new—a community dining room and a hired cook. We are all eating together this year. Now all your worries, from "Did I bring the egg-beater?" to "Where is my best linen tablecloth and napkins (for the preachers)?" are over. Just pack up your bedding and clothing and come along for a jolly good time.

If you have any vegetables, eggs, etc., send them to Brother George Appleman, 202 East Seventy-fifth Street North, Portland, Oregon. If you want further information, write to the reunion secretary, Brother George W. Stover, 1351 Haight Avenue, Portland, Oregon. Don't forget the dates, July 22 to August 1.

Independence

Stone Church

Following the early morning prayer meetings for young and for old—services where comfort, strength, and courage are derived—the Sunday school began its session last Sunday in charge of Brother S. A. Thiel, superintendent of Sunday schools in Zion, and Stone Church Superintendent G. S. Trowbridge. The opening song service was led by our efficient chorister, Miss Marcine Smith, and Brother Thiel read a portion from the Scriptures, briefly analyzing it for the children.

More than one thousand and fifty persons were present, and this number included visitors from several States. Five perfect classes were reported by the secretary, who declared the primary department the highest in attendance. As a special number, Frank White, violinist, Martin Mills, flutist, and Mrs. Emma Tandberg, pianist, gave a pleasing selection. Members of the school also appreciated having the organ accompanying the congregational songs. Miss Dorothy Koehler presided at the instrument.

The Stone Church Choir began its summer vacation Sunday morning, and in its stead the Wa Dem Na Glee Club of young people sang, Brother Paul Craig directing, and George and Robert Miller at the piano and organ. The anthem, "The Good Shepherd," was much appreciated, Miss Fern Cox singing the solo part. An excellent tenor solo was sung by Mr. Harry Greenway preceding the sermon of the hour.

Reading the first few verses in the first chapter of Saint John, Elder Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, impressed upon his hearers the fact that through frail humanity God has attempted to interpret the meaning of his message to mankind. These revelations have been made into the Holy Scriptures, and parts of these scriptures we do not understand. We shall have to wait until God comes to us in person to interpret. Under the Mosaic economy, the children of Israel looked upon the revelations of God as "thou shalt," and "thou shalt not." They did not understand the scope embraced by these messages from God to them; they needed an interpretation of the law in terms of their own lives. This interpretation was given to them through Christ the Son of God—the word made flesh. Jesus gave to them and to all the world the real meaning of living together. He did not expound doctrines but told the people how to live, illustrating his teachings with simple little stories of life. Jesus translated divinity into terms of humanity. Christ's ministry is to be measured in three ways: the vitality of his expressions; the humanity of his fellowship; and the abundance of his life coming through obedience to God's way. There are plenty to limit God, but it is for us to interpret him, for his message is one of hope, cheer, comfort, and life. It is our task to become the word made flesh. Proof that our religion is genuine is the bearing of the proper kind of fruit. We do not need so much to give attention to the mechanics of religion but to have the Spirit of Christ in everything we do. "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

At the Campus

Arrivals at the Campus on Sunday evening found the Walnut Park Band on hand with music sufficient for the evening. Several band numbers were played before Elder Sheehy took charge of the song service, leading the large congregation in the singing of "Onward, Christian soldiers," and "Joy to the world." "Tell me the old, old story," was the opening song, and Elder W. J. Brewer, pastor of Enoch Hill, offered the invocation.

The preaching service consisted of two fifteen-minute sermons, the first by the assistant pastor in Zion, Elder C. Ed. Miller, the second by Brother John F. Sheehy.

For the basis of his talk Brother Miller chose Revelation 19: 5: "And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great." He specifically spoke with reference to plans for the Sunday night Campus service, emphasizing the individualistic tendency of human nature and the necessity of cooperation before Zion can be builded. "We should develop strong individual characteristics," he asserted, "but we should cooperate in our individualism. The triumph of service will be brought about by cooperation and not competition. . . . We need spiritual cooperation, and what we want to do in Independence is to have people and churches of Independence to come together, to work together as brethren on the Campus." He explained why pictures are used in these services, giving an experience had by him in early manhood in regard to illustrated sermons.

"O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called—1 Timothy 6: 20, was the text selected by Brother Sheehy, who pictured Paul, the aged man, the old minister who had experienced so many wonderful things, now the prisoner soon to die, writing to a young friend in this manner. Paul was not discouraged; he was hopeful. It is for us also to be full of cheer, happy in the gospel. We are living in a day of great achievement; no longer are we amazed at things taking place that border on the supernatural. There are thrills today for those seeking thrills. There is material for the thinker. As a religious group there is nothing on our horizon, but a rising sun brings a new day of religious freedom. The religion of today is and must be a practical one. We must be practical, courageous, full of love.

Following the preaching service a short, pleasing pageant was presented by a number of Liberty Street young people, and the evening's program was concluded with pictures, "The good Samaritan."

Interesting Personals

President Frederick M. Smith is in the Independence Sanitarium, where he went several days ago to have a tumor removed from his foot. President Elbert A. Smith, with Sister Smith, is taking a much-needed rest and vacation in old home places in Iowa.

Sister Cleda N. Simpson, for thirty-four years a faithful member of the church, passed away at the Independence Sanitarium in the early morning of July 1. She was the wife of Elder Hibbert D. Simpson, who survives, and during her life saw much service for the church in Northern Maine and San Francisco. She was born in Delhaven, Nova Scotia, August 15, 1859, and her sojourn in Independence had been brief when death called her away. She leaves three daughters: Mrs. W. H. Atkinson, Farmingham, Massachusetts; Mrs. Lee T. Mann, New Albany, Indiana; and Miss Lillian S. Simpson, of the home address, also five sisters, two brothers, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Sister Simpson loved to repeat a verse she learned in early life:

"Jesus can make the dying bed
As soft as downy pillows are;
So on his breast I'll lay my head
And breathe my life out sweetly there."

The funeral service was held at Stahl's Sunday, July 3. Appropriate singing was under the direction of Miss Thelma Vincent. Elder J. M. Terry delivered the sermon. Interment was made in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Band and Orchestra Movement

Have you ever heard of the Walnut Park Band? Nearly everyone in Independence and bordering towns has heard this group of musicians play. Their music has been appreciated in many places, and audiences have sensed the fact that this is a company of workers, consecrated to the task of making the world better by adding to its joys good music. Organized a year ago in June, mostly from new material, there being, perhaps, only a dozen experienced players, the band has grown to forty pieces. In character it is cosmopolitan, being composed of players from the various districts in Independence and of members of other churches, and together with their leaders, Brother E. E. Moorman and Brother Orlando Nace, both of Walnut Park, they have proved themselves worthy of the support of Saints and townspeople. Busy and ambitious workers, they practice once a week and are often called upon to add the proper musical atmosphere at functions in this city and in outlying communities. Especially have they faithfully served at the Sunday night meetings on the Campus, rendering each time a special number or two of exceptional merit.

But leaders and members are anxious to do more than that. They want more players, those who play or are willing to learn to play instruments not already had in the band, such as bassoons, French horns, E flat clarinets, and several others. They are anxious for a complete instrumentation. Growth and service is their goal!

Arrangements have been made by Brothers Paul Craig, Arthur Mills, and Orlando Nace to enlist new recruits for the band and orchestra through the music department of the Institute of Arts and Sciences, during the summer school period. A course of the first ten lessons will be given for twenty-five cents a lesson. Also Brother Nace will help those wanting to buy instruments to secure them at greatly reduced prices.

"We have been planning for this a long time," says Brother Nace, "for we want to make it a permanent thing, a foundation for a musical Zion."

When the number of musicians has swelled appreciably, the plans are to divide the players into Junior and Senior Bands. Also the organization of a Ladies' Band, when there is instrumentation for it. One problem at present is a name for this movement—a name to include both band organizations. The I. and A. (Institute and Auditorium) Band has been suggested by one, or the I. 2 A. (Institute to Auditorium) Band suggests the progress they so much desire. Do you have a better name? Your suggestions will be appreciated. If you think of a good name for the movement, write to the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences or either of the band leaders.

The Stone Church Orchestra and its director, Brother R. T. Cooper, is cooperating with the Walnut Park orchestra so as to relieve the band one Sunday evening a month at the Campus; also they expect to have a good program ready for a Music Day program this fall.

Interest is being manifest in our neighboring towns. Only recently assistance has been asked in the organization of orchestras at Holden, Grandview, and Blue Springs. May the spirit of the work continue to increase. "This work is being done not only for Walnut Park," they explain; "it is for Independence; it is for all of us."

The band plans to spend one week-end at the Holden reunion, July 22-31, and contribute its part to the success of the reunion. If there are Saints in Independence wishing to assist in the transportation of these musicians, please call Brother Nace, Independence 848J.

Liberty Street

The young people of Liberty Street District have been taking turns visiting the different group Wednesday night prayer meetings. Last Wednesday evening they met at the home of Sister Arterbun in Group 30. There was a large attendance and a good meeting. Everyone felt repaid for having attended.

At the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, a male quartet composed of Fred Koehler, Harry Blake, Clarence Page, and Millard Page rendered three numbers, and Miss Evelyn White, accompanied by Mrs. Avis White, contributed a violin solo, "Love's old sweet song."

One of our local elders, Brother J. B. Barrett, was the speaker. His text was taken from the first chapter of Saint John: "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." His discourse was uplifting and helpful for all who attended.

In the evening, following the sermon at the Campus, a group of our young people presented a pleasing little pageant.

Officers of the Department of Women have been and are away visiting. Sister Carrie Ballinger, superintendent, spent a short vacation recently with her husband, Brother Wesley Ballinger, who is working in Chicago. Sister Pearl W. Moriarty, superintendent of young women and leader of the Silver Wing Chapter of Temple Builders, is with Brother Moriarty, who is in business in Amarillo, Texas. While Sister Moriarty is gone, the Temple Builders are holding regular meetings in charge of Miss Edna Resch, associate leader.

Second Church

A small congregation assembled for the eight o'clock prayer meeting, and though the number to enjoy it was small a splendid meeting was had.

Sunday school commenced at half past nine, the adult classes meeting in nearby homes because of the upper auditorium being closed for redecoration.

Brother H. W. Gould delivered a sermon at the eleven o'clock hour which was appreciated by the Saints.

Two children were baptized at half past one in the afternoon and confirmed at the two o'clock prayer meeting. A good spirit was present.

At half past three the priesthood met and planned work for the immediate future. We feel the entire day was well spent in the service of God.

Enoch Hill

July sacramental meeting was a peaceful service, one well attended and much enjoyed by the Saints. The testimonies were of a character to strengthen and cheer all who heard them, and the songs sung and prayers voiced were offered in the true spirit of worship.

Last Sunday morning Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker of the hour, delivering a timely message of warning and admonition. He especially dwelt on the necessity of drawing a line between the pleasures of the world and the work of the church, advising young and old to ascertain on which side of the line they stand, and if necessary to right-about-face, consecrating their whole effort to Christ.

The Enoch Hill Orchestra presided at this hour, rendering several selections of merit.

On the night of July 4, Sister George Street, leader of the Temple Builders of this district, gave the girls a slumber party at her home. In the evening games were followed by refreshments, and the next day the girls departed, each declaring she had had a good time.

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brothers W. W. Scott and James Johnson. The attendance overflowed the south wing, numbering fifty-eight, and a large proportion took part in the meeting in brief prayers and testimonies, making an enjoyable hour.

The Sunday school attendance was unusually large, four hundred nineteen present, including thirty teachers. The school enjoyed several numbers by the combined orchestra before they left Independence for a day of musical service at Grandview.

At eleven o'clock Elders O. C. White and Samuel Smith were in charge. The worshipful anthem, "Praise the Lord, O my soul," Alberta Lanpher soloist, preceded the preaching, the sermon continuing the theme rendered in song. Elder R. J. Lambert was the speaker. Reading 1 Chronicles 16: 23-34, he stressed the thought, "Worship the Lord in beauty of holiness," picturing in various ways what constitutes true worship—not mere vocal prayer in a church building, but sincere desires breathed from an honest heart in whatever surroundings one may be placed; also emphasizing the necessity of a righteous life in the home and in business to make worship effectual. His examples from life added interest to his earnest admonition.

A priesthood meeting was held Sunday afternoon, where a movement looking to needed improvements about our church building and premises was discussed. To follow this, Pastor White had called a branch business meeting for Monday evening, the 11th, and here the branch acted in harmony with the suggestions of the priesthood, electing a committee to work with the caretaker, John Reynolds, they to enlist the help of the entire membership as needed, thus giving each a part in maintaining our beautiful church home. The committee includes Elders O. C. White, R. Barnhardt, and F. R. Schafer, and Sister W. B. Fallon.

Spring Branch

The 8.15 prayer service in charge of W. F. Smith and Alma Tankard was well attended last Sunday, and a number of good prayers and testimonies were given.

There was a good attendance also at Sunday school, and the adult church history class taught by Brother Soderstadt filled the classroom to capacity.

Thirty-one perfect classes were reported for June—four classes being perfect for the entire month.

Assistant Superintendent Roberts announced that a Sunday school picnic was brewing for the near future, the exact date not having been set as yet.

At the eleven o'clock hour the congregation sang two songs from the Saints' Hymnal, and the choir rendered the beautiful anthem, "I will lift up mine eyes."

Sister Mansel Williams was present and extended an invitation to Spring Branch to be represented in a pageant to be given this fall by members from each branch, if they qualify for places.

Elder Ralph W. Farrell was the morning speaker and delivered an excellent sermon, taking the position that "Whosoever or whosoever constrains to do good is of God." He asserted that the Book of Mormon is just that, and that all individuals and organizations that constrain to do good are blessed of God, and Latter Day Saints who have narrowed themselves to the belief that good can only come out of Latter Day Saintism should get a larger perspective of God and his dealings with his creatures.

A pleasant surprise party was enjoyed on Sister Leonard Roberts at their home Saturday night by about twenty young people ranging from eight to seventy years of age. The occasion was Sister Roberts' twenty-fourth birthday. Games were played on the lawn. Ice cream and cake were served, and a big bonfire and marshmallow roast completed an enjoyable evening.

East Independence

A good spirit prevailed at the sacramental service a week ago Sunday morning. We were urged to move forward and occupy while we had the opportunity, and assured that the Master will bless us with his Spirit.

In the evening Brother Amos Allen was the speaker. He discussed the ensign of our Nation and the ensign of which Isaiah speaks. Sister Allen favored us with a solo.

On Sunday, July 10, Bishop M. H. Siegfried was the speaker. He said he was not going to preach a sermon but intended to just talk to us. We hope he will come again and talk. He told many interesting things concerning the financial part of our gospel economy. We note two things in particular. One is that we have invested our all in this work—our lives, our soul's salvation—all that we have. If we can do this, can we not trust a few paltry dollars, believing that they will be used in the right way. The second is that when others have done for us, we should be anxious and willing to do either for them or for some one else.

Brother F. A. Cool was the evening speaker, following along the line of stewardship. His was a very interesting and instructive sermon. Both discourses of the day emphasized the thought that we should think in terms of humanity and also in terms of tomorrow; and that salvation should be now as well as hereafter; Zion is not just a place of refuge when scourges and troubles come upon the land, but a place where we shall learn to live, to become Christlike, that we may be prepared to dwell with our Master.

Gudgell Park

On the first Sunday of July the Sabbath school was held at the usual hour in charge of Secretary C. A. Martin. Attendance was good and the lesson interesting. Brother Willard Atwell, our newly ordained priest, was present for a portion of the Sunday school session, but he had to hurry away to attend sacramental service at the Stone Church. We regretted losing him from our home service of the Lord's supper, for we have so few officers that we feel we can not spare any of them, even to attend services at headquarters. God was surely with us in our meeting; his Holy Spirit was felt by all present.

One of our young men, Donald G. Burch, left us last week to join the Navy. He asked the prayers of the Saints in his behalf during his four years' absence. Thomas Burch is leaving next week for Ava, Missouri, where he will work in the tomato fields until frost; also to visit his sweetheart whom he expects to make his wife in the near future. He will need our prayers, for he is just out of the Sanitarium, where by the power and grace of God he escaped an operation for appendicitis.

After services Sunday a number of our congregation motored to Warrensburg, Missouri, to spend the Fourth in fishing and visiting. We hope they will take better care of their fish this time than on a former trip. Then, after having a good catch, they left the fish under water and the turtles beat them to dinner.

Two-Day Meeting at Scranton, Kansas

The mornings of June 25 and 26 dawned bright and fair, as if extending a cordial invitation to Saints of the North-eastern Kansas District to attend the two-day meeting. The opening service was in charge of Clayton Crooker, of Topeka, and was a meeting for prayer. F. O. Kelley, of Topeka, gave the opening remarks, and stated that no one ever got into trouble while praying. It was a good way to begin the meeting; and though we are few in number, yet our blessings depend upon ourselves, for we do not receive them in a crowd or in a group. In that we are alone. We must look for the things that pertain to the good of the district. Being few in number our responsibilities are greater, and we observe the advancement of the cause closer than in large groups. At the close of the service Bishop G. W. Eastwood, of Independence, Missouri, gave a few remarks.

The afternoon service was in charge of E. L. Bullard, of Vassar, Kansas, and at his suggestion the meeting was turned into a round table discussion, giving those who had questions a chance to have them answered by the representative of the general church. Such questions as, "What shall I do to come to Zion?" "What class of people come first?" "Is money spent for education tithed?" "Does it make one poor to enter upon a stewardship basis?" with others, were answered by the bishop. The necessity of beginning with the agricultural problems first and the program of the church in connection with Doctrine and Covenants 58 were explained.

The evening service was a continuation along the line of temporalities.

Saints enjoyed Sunday school privileges with the Scranton school on Sunday morning, and at the eleven o'clock hour Brother Eastwood talked again on stewardship. The talk in the afternoon dealt with other phases of stewardship than temporal. T. J. Christensen, of Netawaka, had charge of the service.

A vote of thanks was extended to Scranton Saints for their generous hospitality and entertainment of the visiting Saints.

MRS. H. C. PITSEMBERGER, District Secretary.

Valley Center, Michigan

We are rejoicing in the Lord's work and are reminded by the calm and peace of the Holy Spirit on every Sunday that God is still with us.

We have been very busy since last writing to the HERALD. The first week in March we were visited by Brother James McConnaughy, of Ohio, who gave us a splendid sermon, seasoned with the divine Spirit. We were loath to bid this man of God farewell.

Eight weeks were spent working on our Easter program, and it was very beautiful and impressive. We felt the work had not been in vain.

On the first Sunday of May the cradle roll children who had passed their third birthdays were honored with a special program. While Isabell, Dona Murray, and Marie Isles sang, "Suffer little children," Cradle Roll Superintendent Lottie Murray led to the platform and seated on small chairs Winifred Isles, Harold Barr, Dennis Muir. In a very effective way she presented them to Superintendent Thomas Isles, who made a fitting response and welcome, and, in turn, presented them to Sister E. D. Finken, teacher of the beginner class. Sister Finken welcomed the little ones into her class and said that with God's help she would strive to instruct them in the beauty of the gospel. Ruth Nichols sang a song of welcome, followed by a recitation, "On babies," by Isabell Murray. The origin of cradle roll work was given by Sister Susie Benbow Muir. A pleasing feature of this program was the seating of all the cradle roll babies and mothers on the platform.

Mothers' Day was observed with an appropriate program in the evening.

Children's Day was held Sunday night, June 19. The children were pleased to contribute in some way to the program and to sing and speak of their Savior.

Sunday, June 26, found us gathered at the water's edge, the Spirit of God resting upon us. Sacred indeed did that gathering seem as we sang, "Jesus, mighty king of Zion." A spiritual prayer was offered by Elder E. D. Finken; then Pastor H. E. C. Muir led Isabell into the water. Marie Isles was next to be baptized. These two are eight years old. Ivan Isles, eleven years, and Helen Silverthorn, thirteen, followed. Confirmation took place in the evening in charge of Elders Muir and Finken. All the confirmations were accompanied by God's Spirit.

Elder Muir gave an excellent sermon, chiefly directed to the parents as to their duty in assisting the children "to go on to perfection."

We were visited Sunday, July 3, by Brother Dennis E. Benbow, pastor of the Warren, Ohio, Branch, who gave us a good sermon on "Simple relativeness," which was well received. We trust he will return in the near future.

As a branch we are enjoying health and prosperity and the blessings of God. May he help us to so live that we may ever merit his goodness.

A Bride Starts Right

There comes a time when young people are so absorbed with the matter of getting married that they have little time for much else. But we know of a bride who immediately on her return from a two weeks' honeymoon decided to start right.

"Starting right" with her meant to take an inventory of her wedding presents and pay her tithing thereon. An unpaid balance on her endowment pledge was checked up and paid in full, and before moving to her home in another State she subscribed to the church papers, that she might keep in touch with church progress.

Like most young people, the affairs of life have taken her into the world, where she had opportunity to make friends and acquaintances outside the church, but she is an outstanding example in that wherever her lot is cast her friends always know of her church connections, her ideals, and ambitions.

Her friends never have to "find out" about this young woman. She always tells them first. Such integrity brings many rewards in the satisfactions of life.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By M. H. SIEGFRIED.

Kansas City Stake

Chelsea Church

On June 12 Chelsea's services were devoted to the children, who rendered a lovely program of praise. The little church was beautifully decked in with rambler roses and ferns for the occasion. In the afternoon occurred a very impressive baptismal service in charge of the pastor, Elder Joseph A. Harrington, Grandview Church tendering the use of their font, when seven were inducted into the fold. Those presenting themselves for baptism were Gertrude Taylor, Jessie Belle Taylor, Dorothy Sears, Frances Hawkins, Lurabelle Sears, Lloyd Gress, and Ly Conklin, Elder A. W. Sears administering the ordinance.

Central Church

On Friday evening Mrs. F. B. Blair and Mrs. Burdette Root, of the Sunday school superintendency, entertained the remaining officers and teachers with a lawn party on the church lawn. Several pleasing musical numbers were rendered, and Brother Tanner spoke some very inspiring and encouraging words to those present. After the program, a general get-together good time was had in the playing of games, etc., which was followed by refreshments of ice cream and cake. Thus the officers and teachers were brought closer together through the touch of fellowship and pledged themselves anew to the responsibilities that rest upon them.

On June 30 occurred the death of Sister Clara Curtis, wife of Doctor H. B. Curtis, a member of Central Church for many years. Sister Curtis was baptized in her early youth and maintained a strong faith at all times in the fatherhood of the divine Creator and was very much devoted to the gospel of Christ and her church. She was a wonderful wife and intelligent mother, and her home life was ideal. Besides her husband, she is survived by three children, Rachel, Kenneth, and Muriel, all of the home. The many beautiful floral offerings was an expression of the sympathy of her many friends, and she will be sadly missed. Funeral services were held from the church Sunday afternoon in charge of Brother Tanner. She was laid to rest in Mound Grove Cemetery beneath the spreading branches of a wonderful tree, which in life she had loved so dearly.

Brother D. J. Kennedy was the speaker at the 11 o'clock service Sunday, his subject being faith. The attendance was very good, considering so many are enjoying their vacations and the day being extremely hot.

At 6.30 the young people held their regular monthly prayer service, at which meeting there was goodly portion of the Spirit of the Lord present, and a number of good testimonies were offered.

The lawn service which followed was in charge of Brother J. A. Tanner. He continued his subject, "The Apostle Paul," holding the interest of the large congregation present, explaining in his clear and concise manner the principles of the doctrine of Christ. It is a golden opportunity for the people at Central, as they are having outside people in attendance at these meetings that have heretofore never manifested an interest in the Church of Jesus Christ. The Central Orchestra, under the direction of Sister J. L. Johnson, rendered an enjoyable half hour program before this service and assisted in the song service.

The pictures that follow the sermon are very educational and are very much enjoyed, as in each instance we have journeyed with the cameraman back to the Holy Land and have seen sights of which we have records in the Holy Scriptures of incidents that have occurred thousands of years ago. Sunday evening the picture was, "Abraham, the Patriarch."

We very much regret the departure of Brothers Roscoe and Henry Hampton, who have gone to Nevada. Brother Roscoe was our Sunday school chorister, and both will be very much missed in the musical circles, as each was gifted with a wonderful talent, the gift of song. However, we are hoping that their business conditions will be such that they will be able to return to their home nest ere many moons.

Bennington Heights Church

Bennington Heights and Stark Acres had a joint picnic on the Fourth of July at Budd Park. The big event of the picnic was the ball game. Two sisters were selected as leaders, and they chose their players. All who would play were included. After the ball game, the dinners were spread together.

Sister Verna Carpenter and Mr. Martin Hill were united in marriage July 4. They will live with the parents of the bride, Brother and Sister Walter Carpenter.

Bishop F. B. Blair was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday, July 10.

On Sunday, July 6, the children of the Sunday school who were old enough to be promoted to a higher grade were admitted to their new classes and were given a certificate of promotion. Mary Louise Armstrong and Helen Smoot were promoted from the cradle roll to the beginner class of the primary department; Dorothy Garrett, Juanita Nelson, and Vivian Martin were promoted to the junior grade; Mary Agin, Mary Garrett, Bernice Goad, Violet Paxton, Irene Fillipo, Cecil Wood, and Ralph Cleveland were promoted to the intermediate grade; and Lela Freeze was promoted to the young people's class.

Those who were reported sick last week are improving, and most of them were able to attend the sacramental service. Sister Emma Wright Rickman was removed from the hospital to her home and she requests that her friends come to visit her. Ralph Cleveland is now feeling fine, but time will be required to heal the wounds of his face and head which were received in a bicycle accident a week ago. Brother J. D. Jackson finds it necessary to wear bandages over his inflamed eyes to protect them from the sunlight.

Sister Roy Newkirk in charge of the stake girls, and Brother Newkirk, were visitors at the Sunday school. Sister Newkirk talked to the folks about the girls' camp.

Ida Joan Cantrell, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Lon A. Cantrell, was blessed during the morning service.

Brother J. H. Tyrrell preached last Sunday evening. Brother and Sister Tyrrell expect to move to Detroit in a few days.

Argentine Church

Recent speakers have been J. Harry Paxton, H. J. Bootman, Bishop F. B. Blair, and the pastor, Roy E. Brown. A bake sale was held Saturday at Woodruff's Garage by the girls' department, netting them $13 to be used to defray expenses of the local Temple Builders at the stake girls' camp, which will be from July 12 to 17 at Horseshoe Lake, east of Independence. Sister R. E. Newkirk, leader of the girls' department, will be in charge.

Malvern Hill Church

Malvern Hill just completed a two-week series of meetings, with Brother W. D. Tordoff as speaker. The interest was very good throughout the entire series, especially among nonmembers, having as many as twenty-two nonmembers out at one night. While they have only one baptism so far to show for the effort, they believe there will be others follow.

The song service was splendid, Brother Tordoff assisting Sister Hott in leading the singing for fifteen minutes each evening before service. On each Friday night they had a mixer in the church basement. The first Friday night they served cocoa and cookies, and the last Friday evening ice cream was served. These mixers were after the services, of course, and were for the purpose of having everyone get acquainted and shake hands, and much good feeling was promoted.

The Saints were strengthened by the splendid spiritual sermons of Brother Tordoff, and much good was accomplished.

Grandview Church

The teachers of the Religious Week Day School sponsored a musical program June 23 at the church. Several of the numbers were by outside talent. A silver offering was taken for the benefit of the school.

Sisters C. B. Martin and J. B. Carr directed the Nightingale Orchestra in a very unusual program Sunday evening, June 26. The orchestra consists of children and young people ranging in age from three to twenty years.

The children of the primary department gave a miscellaneous program June 26, at the eleven o'clock hour, under the direction of their teachers. Richard Hawkins was baptized, and the babies of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. McDaniels and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were blessed, preceding the program.

The Women's Department held their semi-annual bazaar and dinner in the church basement June 30. They cleared about $85 for the building fund.

Armourdale Church

About the Father's Business

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, while an organization almost three fourths of a century in age and of more than one hundred thousand baptized believers, has the element of youth, and its great opportunities and responsibilities lie in the present and the future. This statement should not be thought to minimize the work which has been done by the noble band of pioneer churchmen which has finished its portion of the Great Commission and has passed to work across the deep river or is waiting the summons of the Master so to do. These courageous men and consecrated and loyal women are worthy our most sincere regard, even reverence, for theirs has been an arduous work, sometimes a thankless, burdensome, discouraging undertaking.

The work has been firmly established and has reached a point where there is virility, in several States, possibly in about this order for the first five: Missouri, Iowa, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio. This order is not judged on a membership basis alone, but strength of organization and official energy, the character of the people among which work of the future is to be done, are given some consideration.

Independence, the incipient City of Zion, is probably the city where the world has least excuse for ignorance of what the Church of Jesus Christ stands to support and advance. Yet in Independence, with its more than four thousand members, the great work of preaching the gospel is yet to be accomplished. Thousands of this fair city's people have not heard the sound of the angel's message. The word has not been carried to their ears; the example has not been spread before their eyes; the accomplishment does not stand as a pillar to challenge their attention.

Leaving Independence for the moment, let us pass to Kansas City Stake, where opportunity to reach people of a good grade of mentality and morality is rife, and where the church has probably little more than a score of local men who can preach the gospel, on an average occasion, with credit to themselves and with power which will convict or convert. A score among more than half of a million people!

Lamoni was the headquarters of the church for a quarter century. The people of the church predominate in the pretty, beautiful, quiet country town. The college of the church is here seated; and the Saints' Home, for the care of the aged, is built in the edge of its confines; its main church building, the old "Brick Church," built of brick and native woods for the frame work, was for several years the only building of the church in a favorable location and of sufficient capacity to supply the needs of its annual gatherings, the General Conferences; and yet Lamoni Stake, comprised of eight or ten counties in Northern Missouri and Southern Iowa, can scarcely be said to have been given a chance to hear the sound of the gospel.

Holden Stake lies adjacent to Independence. Its main towns are Holden and Warrensburg, both very comely little cities among agricultural lands. The wonderful agricultural lands of Holden Stake are thickly populated with farmers of substantial traits of character. Some of the most progressive large farms, orchards, dairies, live stock breeders to be found in this Heart of America section are located within its confines. Several small rivers and one of commercial importance thread their ways along and among her fertile acres. Markets are readily accessible and adequate. But what percentage of this people, or of the common people of this garden spot, have been saluted with the call of the Master of men through his servants, the ministry of the church of Jesus Christ?

Far West Stake lies to the north and between Independence and Holden Stake and Lamoni Stake, and with its fine agricultural lands, its progressive city of Saint Joseph, and many good towns, it lacks nothing as a field for our ministry. Here are historic places to generate devotion of the sentimentalists, to be found at such points as Old Far West, Adam-on-di-Ahman, Fishing River, and many others of scarcely less importance. One hundred live missionaries might by dint of perseverance, endurance, and great energy make themselves heard to such a degree in this one small field, that in a year's time a respectable minority of its people could have heard the sound of the precious gospel.

Passing into remaining portions of the great Central West, in the States of Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Michigan, Ohio, and thinking of the unworked territory, of the millions of human beings who know not the sound of the message of the Restoration, is it any wonder that now and then we hear from the men who have to do with administering the work of the church, such exclamations as, "The work of the church is all in the future"; "What have we been doing since 1860?" "It is high time for the church to do something"; and many like sayings which have an effect akin to that of accusation?

It is easy for any Saint to determine that there is all the territory he needs for the exercise of his faculties of mind, body, and estate (if an estate of houses and lands, businesses and bank accounts can be said to have faculties) in the promulgation of the gospel.

No business man is offered a superior proposition; no professional man could hope for a wider and richer field of activity!

And the call is to every man, woman, and child who has heard the gospel and has come to a knowledge of its truthfulness!

Hear the voice of the Spirit as found in a revelation given to Joseph Smith, the president of the church from 1860 to 1914, and its revered prophet during all those years. This word is contained in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8, given in 1887, and reads: "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all."

Turn now to the Lord's preface to the book of his revelation in the last days, Doctrine and Covenants 1, and read this language from paragraph 4: "I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers."

The work of the church is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to the peoples of the earth; to neighbors and friends; to the ones who inhabit high places, and to the meek and lowly of earth; to kings and rulers and to peasants and cripples; to the strong and mighty and to the weak and afflicted.

The work of the church is to preach the gospel in every expression and manifestation of the life of its people. The spoken word may be the most important way in some instances; the home life may be the most important and effective way in many instances. The devoted life of a clean business or professional man speaks in such thunderous tones as to drown the sound of a thousand voices of accusation or attack. The consecration of the man who has by diligence, devotion, or happy circumstance acquired great wealth may count for more in the accomplishment of this errand which Christ has given his people to do than the sayings of his faltering or eloquent tongue.

But one thing is sure: there is a work for each to do, and an opportunity which every man, woman, and child may easily find, by which the gospel may be carried one bit further towards its goal. Teamwork, consecration, stewardship, will accomplish the end which the Lord had in mind when he gave his commission. Nothing less can do this great work.

K L D S Wave Length Unsatisfactory; Programs Enjoyed

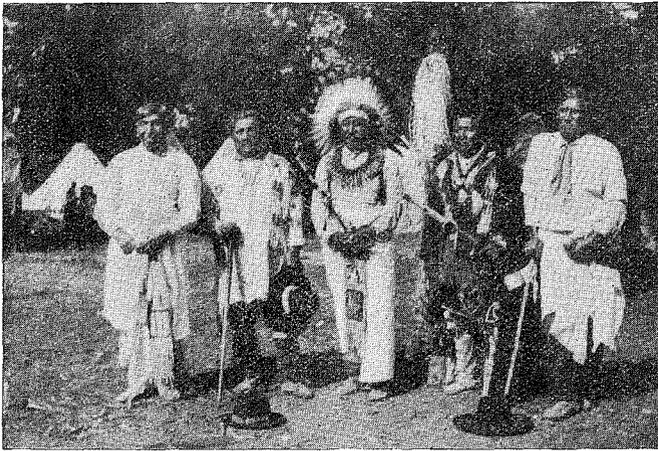

The operation of K L D S broadcasting station at 238 wave length is proving to be a disappointment. In another column is a statement from the office of the radio station which discloses the intention of the board in charge to appeal for a change. Complaints of interference and inability to pick up the station have been made by many who are regular patrons of K L D S.

A gentleman two hundred miles distant in Southern Missouri met one of our Independence men last week and when he heard the word Independence immediately unburdened himself, "Yes; that's the town from which we get those good radio programs—K L D S station. Your ministers surely give some beautiful talks—something in 'em we don't get elsewhere. And then that K L D S Ladies' Quartet; it's the best on the air." He named the four sisters constituting this quartet and said he hoped to hear them many times in the future.

Hoke Dent Passes at Ninety-Eight

Elder Hubert Case received word Monday from Elder F. E. Dillon at Red Rock, Oklahoma, that on July 14 Elder Hoke Dent (Chief Blue Hair), of the Otoe Indians, had passed from earth life, having attained the ripe age of ninety-eight years.

Elder Dent was baptized at the reunion held at Red Rock in August and September of 1920, and we believe Gomer T. Griffiths officiated in his baptism. He was a man of great influence, because of his sterling qualities, his strength of character, an outstanding physique, and his tenacity to the Indian traditions and ways.

Elder Dillon writes interestingly to Elder Case, and we quote a few sentences from his communication: "He [Hoke Dent] was ninety-eight years old, but did not look over sixty, and he had been married to his present wife for fifty-two years. . . . He was buried in true Indian style, shrouded in blankets, with eagle wing fan in his right hand, an otter skin cap on his head, and moccasins on his feet. . . . He was surely a splendid specimen of physical manhood."

Bishop James F. Keir and Sister Keir were at the funeral, Bishop Keir making an address. Of the funeral Elder Dillon speaks: "It was surely a solemn and pathetic occasion. He was highly esteemed by his people, as was evidenced by exchange of presents and sincerity of mourning, the expressions of grief being heart-rending. . . . He was not a warrior, but a man of peace and a man of splendid counsel. . . . He expressed a willingness that God's will be done in the matter of his life or death; was willing to die, but expressed regrets at having to leave his wife and boy; also as to the condition of his tribe. He desired that they should accept the latter-day gospel."

Do you know that from fifteen to twenty-five thousand pairs of eyes will examine the 1927 Harvest Festival? Saints must give honor to God by presenting their contributions in the first fruits of the harvest, that all may see how good is our God.

Courtney-Liberty Bridge Assured

For some weeks Jackson County and Independence people have been hearing reports that a corporation with headquarters in New York City was attempting to organize here for the purpose of building a bridge over the Missouri River at Courtney and Liberty Landing.

The proposition has assumed such definite form as to seem likely of early accomplishment, and the improvement will be of great value to Independence, Holden, Far West, and Lamoni Stakes, and will make intercommunication much easier.

County courts of Jackson and Clay Counties have granted a franchise for the bridge, to be operated as a toll bridge by what is to be known as the Centennial Bridge Company, which is a branch of the American Bridge and Ferry Company, of New York.

The bridge is to provide a driveway eighteen feet in width; is also to contain a separate deck for the use of railways. The Independence Examiner of July 16 says: "This bridge will furnish a direct travel route between the county seats of the two counties. It with its approaches will run due north and south from a point near Courtney to a point near Liberty Landing, a total distance of nearly one mile. The bridge proper will stand sixty-five feet above the average stage of the river."

Last conference, just before and at the time of it, I received several letters in the nature of criticism and suggestions, which seemed to be written in a friendly spirit. These letters were in type, and signed "A. P." I should like to meet and talk with "A. P."

July 16, 1927.

On September 22, just a little more than two months in the future, will occur a centennial date of great importance to all believers in the Book of Mormon and the Restoration. How many are preparing themselves for a spiritual feast in the celebration of that time when plates containing the Nephite record were delivered by an angel to the boy prophet? A fullness of enjoyment of this centennial can come only after proper preparation.

Efficiency Desirable in Hospital and Physician

BY DOCTOR J. S. BENNETT

I believe our Sanitarium should be managed according to the rules now employed by the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons.

I wish to preface my remarks by a few facts relative to the members of our church in general.

It is generally conceded and believed by our people that we are working to one ultimate end, that of establishing the kingdom of God on earth; that is to say, Zion. This being a fact, all industries and professions incident and essential to such a kingdom must of necessity be organized and maintained.

In order to realize this, it must necessarily follow that some are going to have to do some hard work along certain definite lines. This does not mean hard manual labor only; but a great deal of study of both books and experiences must be done. It not only means that we as Latter Day Saints must excel in our respective lines; it must mean that when one says a plumber, a blacksmith, a bottle washer, or what not is a Latter Day Saint, that automatically designates him or her as an expert, or superior in that line, and dependable.

This should not only apply to the trades and professions, but morally also. The fact that one is a Latter Day Saint should be sufficient security for any moral or other obligation. The writer is well acquainted with a young man who was attending school in Zion. One day the young man needing a pair of shoes went to a certain shoe store, but not having any ready cash, asked for credit for a few days. He was not acquainted with the proprietor at all, and has every reason to believe the proprietor did not know him. For some reason the man in charge asked if he belonged to the Latter Day Saints Church. When informed he did, the clerk was instructed to deliver the shoes. The owner of the store said, "I have never been cheated by a member of that church, so their credit is always good here."

Now as to our health department, I wish to make a few remarks. Many of our members object to our methods, feeling that prayer is all sufficient. This is without doubt true, providing one has the faith and is living in a manner to be worthy of the blessings. God, in his infinite wisdom, has made provision for the healing of those, not appointed unto death, who have not the faith to be healed by prayer. One of these methods is the doctor. In other words, the doctor is just an instrument in God's hand to perform the same task. What doctor claims within himself to heal even a pin scratch? He only claims to aid nature, and nature does the healing. In this instance they are pleased to call the healing power nature instead of God.

If you will grant this to be true, then it must follow that God does not wish to and will not work with inferior instruments. Humanity is very peculiar, in that it will do things with, and have things done to, the body that it would not have done to an automobile. If the automobile "gets sick," you are not satisfied with anyone less than an expert to work on it. You take it to the best garage in town, one that is recognized by all as first class. The mechanic must be trained, and the more he is trained the better you like it. Which is your choice, a mechanic who has studied and worked for years on automobiles, or one who has stumbled and tinkered along for a few months, having only a very superficial knowledge of the machine? Do you want a man who can dig into the very heart of the thing, find out the trouble, and fix it? or, do you wish to employ one who knows nothing below the coat of paint on the machine?

Those questions are all foolish, I am willing to admit. You know whom you want, and you are willing to pay a neat sum for the best mechanic. Now let us see what is done with the most complicated and most perfect-working machine in the world—the human body, the temple of the soul.

In the first place, we abuse it in almost every way possible. Were it not such a perfect machine, it would stop long before the allotted three-score years and ten. We abuse our bodies by intemperance in almost all lines, but the most common forms are improper eating, insufficient rest, and improper methods of hygiene. This continued for varying periods, the machine gets balky, gets sick; we keep on going, thinking it will get all right. Does a broken crank shaft get all right of itself? Neither does the sick or injured body. It must have help. It must have a mechanic. In this event, are you willing to go to any old garage, which in this instance is termed a hospital or sanitarium, and to have any kind of a mechanic work on you, just so long as he attaches the title of "doctor" ahead of his name? This is what you actually do; but do you really intend to do it? You may have to pay a little more in money for the service of a real doctor, but is it not cheaper in the long run? You may say, "Any doctor charges enough." He might for the first time, but one can not expect to give a crystal set service and get a superhetrodyne price for it. The real doctor will prove his worth.

Now the doctor who is considered proficient has certain minimum requirements made of him. He must have a high school diploma, which admits him to college. He must get at least two years of preparatory work along certain definite lines before he can enter medical school. After entering medical school, he attends four years of at least nine months each, and must attend at least eighty per cent of the time in all classes. This does not mean he can attend two, three, or six months and buy his diploma, but he works for it and burns many a gallon of midnight oil. That does not mean gasoline in cars, either. After his four years in medical school, he must serve at least twelve months as an interne in a recognized hospital. This makes a minimum of seven years of real study before one can even apply to take the State board examinations. There are other schools that will accept students of any class or character. Some of these students can hardly write their names, and have never been in a high school, and in some instances have not been through ward school. They attend some so-called school for a few weeks or months and annex the term Doctor to their name. Doctor of what, may I ask? Never mind what; they are called doctor, and that is enough. Are these people to be admitted to our hospitals and sanitariums on an equal footing with one who has made a real, honest study, and a real, honest effort to give an honest service to this wonderful machine of ours?

I know one man who has studied in various medical schools for over twelve years, and he is not cocksure of himself on cases at that. How much less competent are some who have studied only a few months?

Given the doctor who has fulfilled all the requirements to practice, does he not want first-class facilities with which to work? Does he wish to affiliate with just any kind of a hospital? Hardly.

Again, Why should a hospital be approved by the American Medical Association? The association is composed of men who have fulfilled certain requirements; their integrity and ability are known. They insist that a hospital, to be on the approved list, must maintain a certain minimum equipment. If they train nurses, they must have certain facilities for teaching theory and giving experience. If a nurse is to be registered, she must come from a hospital maintaining these standards; otherwise she is no more than a practical nurse. It is a hard matter for recognized hospitals to get sufficient student nurses, much less hospitals that are not recognized.

Why should a hospital be standardized and approved by the American College of Surgeons? Permit me to quote from the American College of Surgeons for 1925 a few of the aims and objects of standardization:

1. To focus all the activities of the hospital on the patient. He is the reason for the hospital.
2. To provide in hospitals adequate and efficient organization, personnel, facilities, and procedure, so as to insure for the patient (a) an early, accurate, comprehensive diagnosis; (b) the most rational and scientific treatment; (c) the rapid return of the patient to normal physical health if possible.
3. To promote better cooperation in and among the three groups directly connected with the hospital; namely, the board of trustees, the medical staff, and the hospital staff.
4. To promote better coordination throughout the institution.
5. To stimulate more interest in clinical work.
6. To educate the public as to the right kind of hospital service.

This program, when conscientiously applied, will result in at least four important benefits. 1. Shortening of the number of days the patient stays in the hospital. 2. The elimination of incompetent and unnecessary surgery. 3. The reduction of infections and complications. 4. Lowering of hospital death rate.

There is a certain minimum standard for a hospital to maintain before it is recognized by the College of Surgeons: a few requirements, such as being compelled to have a laboratory and X-ray department. The staff must be of high moral standing; must be graduates of a class A medical school. This eliminates our "diploma mill" men. They must keep records.

Another object is to get the staff together at certain stated intervals to talk over and discuss the several cases of interest, to give and receive information and suggestions as to diagnosis and treatment, all of which is "Greek" to some of the cults, and "diploma mill" men. Again, the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations are maintained for study and research in medicine. I mean by medicine, not simply drugs, but the entire scope of the healing art. These findings are reported in the several medical journals and periodicals, which can be obtained only by class A graduates. A little time in studying the worthwhileness of these institutions will or should convince the most radical person that these ideals must be maintained.

Should we, as Latter Day Saints, expect, and deliver less than the outside world when we are expected to set the pace, set the example for the world? Are we going to be able to meet the issue? or are we going to pass it by and fail? Should our Sanitarium, because it belongs to the church, be inferior to other institutions of its kind? We should not be satisfied with anything but the very best. If we do anything, our standards should exceed the requirements; never be any less.

The Book of Mormon Plates

BY S. A. BURGESS

According to the Book of Mormon, there were several different records made, on plates of different metals.

First, there were the Plates of Laban. These plates appear to have contained the books of Moses and the records of the early prophets down to the time they left Jerusalem. This would doubtless have included the historical books, with the exception of Second Chronicles and Second Kings, which of course could not have been completed. It probably included the books of David and of Solomon, part of Isaiah and part of Jeremiah. It could not have included either Ezekiel or Daniel, but might have included some of the minor prophets. It is possible that they had the books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Ruth, First Samuel, Second Samuel, First Kings, First Chronicles, Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Songs of Solomon, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, and Zephaniah; they might have had part of Second Kings, Second Chronicles, Isaiah, and Jeremiah; but did not have Nehemiah, Esther, Lamentations, Ezekiel, Daniel, Obadiah, Haggai, Zechariah, or Malachi.

Second, there were the Larger Plates of Nephi. These were commenced at an early date and were kept throughout their sojourn, down to the close of the history. These gave an historical account of the people, together with their divine direction and blessings.

Third, later Nephi was commanded to make what were called the Smaller Plates of Nephi. These were continued down to the time of King Benjamin and gave a more particular account of God's dealing with the people. They were religious rather than historical.

Fourth, there was the Record of Zeniff, of those who went back to the land of their fathers. The plates finally came to the hands of Limhi and were thus brought to the land of Zarahemla.

Fifth, there were the Twenty-four Gold Plates, beginning with the record of the brother of Jared and continuing down to the close of the first great colony, probably covering a period of sixteen hundred years. These original plates contained much valuable information of God's purposes.

Mormon rewrote and greatly condensed the Larger Plates of Nephi. When he reached the time of King Benjamin, he found the smaller plates, and was so pleased that he accepted them and continued his abridgment so as to connect with these Smaller Plates of Nephi. In this connection he wrote the Words of Mormon, as well as the Book of Mormon, and was succeeded by his son Moroni.

We should add that the first plates, those of Laban, were of brass, and that they contained not only the five books of Moses, the account of Adam and Eve, the history of the Jews and the Prophets, but they also contained the genealogy of Lehi. On these were also written the prophecies of Joseph. (See 2 Nephi 3:1.)

The Larger Plates of Nephi contain considerable more of history than do the smaller. These plates were handed down sometimes from father to son, but sometimes were transferred to other hands, as they grew in size and numbers. They were held by Nephi, and at his death were transferred to his brother, Jacob. They were then held by Jacob's son, Amos.

Then by Jarom, the son of Enos.

Next by Omni, the son of Jarom.

From Omni they went to his son, Amaron.

Amaron in turn left them to his brother, Chemish.

Abinadom, the son of Chemish, next held them.

Then they went to Amaleki, the son of Abinadom.

None of these after Jacob contributed much to the history.

It seems probable that they went to Benjamin, though the smaller plates had now been completed. From Benjamin they went to his son, Mosiah. About ninety years before the time of Christ, the plates were delivered to Alma, the son of Alma, and by him delivered to his son, Helaman, who, at his death, transferred them to his brother, Shiblon, who in turn left them to Helaman II, the son of Helaman.

By Helaman II they were delivered to Nephi, his son, and by Nephi to his son, Nephi II. The latter of these two, Nephi II, the son of Nephi, was one of the twelve Disciples of Christ on this continent.

Very little was written after the time of Nephi II, until Mormon took the plates and prepared to close the book. Still the record states that Nephi III, the son of Nephi II, left the plates with his son, Amos.

By Amos they were left to his son, Amos II. When Amos II was deceased, his brother, Ammoron, kept the records. Long periods were thus covered, and the plates were handed down to Mormon and finally to Moroni.

It is interesting to note, after Nephi's excellent record in Nephi I and II, followed by the well-written record of Jacob, but very little more was written for nearly four hundred years. The plates were handed down within the family, to son or brother, but they recorded little more than that bare fact, until the records were handed to a new family. King Benjamin and his son Mosiah held them; then by Mosiah they were transferred to Alma and his family. Mosiah, Alma II, Helaman I, and Helaman II wrote half the record we now have in the Book of Mormon. But after the record of Nephi II, the disciple of Christ, the record again suffers a lapse, and little is written for some three hundred years.

In fact, the record consists of the early story by Nephi and his brother Jacob, and the record of about two hundred years recorded by the five men above named, Mosiah, Alma II, Helaman I, Helaman II, and Nephi II, a much-condensed account of the early settlement of the Jaredites, and the final chapters by Mormon and Moroni.

The plates were finally hidden by Moroni when he found that his people had gone into corruption, to remain hidden for about fourteen hundred years, and were found by Joseph Smith, by the direction of the angel.

With the plates, when found, were the Urim, the Thummim, and the breastplate, also the sword of Laban.

The final set of plates were prepared by Mormon, who wrote an abridgment of the historical record of the Larger Plates of Nephi, and Moroni abridged the account of the Jaredites. After Mormon had completed the early record to King Benjamin, he states that he found the Smaller Plates of Nephi, and they pleased him so that he continued his own record to connect with these smaller plates.

What we have in the Book of Mormon is the Smaller Plates of Nephi down to King Benjamin; then the Words of Mormon, followed by his abridgment of the remaining history, including Moroni's abridgment of the book of Ether, as the history of the Jaredites; finally the book of Mormon and then the book of Moroni, giving the closing scenes as observed by these. Moroni found but little space available, so he had to condense his account.

There is a sealed portion of the book yet to come forth when there is a people worthy to receive it. This is doubtless a more complete record, and particularly a record of the brother of Jared, giving much concerning the purposes of God from the beginning of the world to the end thereof.

A country clergyman, preaching a funeral sermon, said the "corpse had been a member" of that church for fifteen years.

The Local Elder

BY AN ELDER'S WIFE

"A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country." Thus spoke the Master of men, according to the testimony of the four Gospels; and the local elder, pastor, or branch president often senses the truth of these words. It is hard to recognize the value of those with whom you are constantly associated.

The local elder meets with the branch in nearly all its regular services. They hear his sermons, his testimonies, his prayers all through the year. If he has a hobby, as a rule they sense it and know it. If he has a besetting sin, as a rule this is known also. His virtues are often recognized, and his home life is discussed around the family shrines. If he has a family, they have a big part to play in his success. But what we want to mention most in this article is the part he has to play in the work of the branch over which he presides, or is pastor.

The missionary can go into a place and bring souls unto Christ, but not all who accept Christ have the power to develop and become rounded-out characters in Christ Jesus without the support and strength of the priesthood that God has set in the church. And the pastor, or presiding officer, is the head of the priesthood; hence much of the growth of the Saints rests with him.

Not only does his influence reach to the priesthood, but every departmental officer feels his influence, and if that influence is to help over the rough places and to push all worthy undertakings, happy is that group of people.

The pastor can not always say yes to all; he must stand on the side of what he thinks is right, and sometimes say no. He must not have respect of persons in his decisions, but must be governed by principle; and sometimes, if he is true to these principles, he must advise in all kindness and love those whom he loves dearly; but as he advises them he knows it hurts them for him to feel they were not right.

Sometimes some will take sides against the presiding officer, even to discussing their troubles with every missionary and church officer that enters the branch. The wise pastor will bear this with patience and with all kindness to these members, though sometimes he may feel his admonitions against talebearing and for love have all been lost. Since God is in this work, only truth and right will prevail.

Oftentimes he must decide for the good of the work. Some desire to preach who have not the gift of preaching. He must develop all talent there is in the branch, and if possible get the various officers and members working where they will magnify their talents. He often finds jealousies and sometimes real hardnesses among members. He can see the good in all, but often in trying to bring the members to a working unit they will accuse him of partiality. In this work he can be ably assisted by the priesthood, but not always are they experienced men.

Almost without exception, new members in the priesthood are more inclined to drive than to lead, teach, and feed the sheep. They want to see development too fast, and many times this brings disaster to the work. In new branches oftentimes the Saints become so impatient for faster progress that it is quite necessary an experienced man be at the helm.

One of the hardest experiences a pastor must bear is to see those with talents and ability to help the work, fall by the wayside, drawn away by the temptations of the world. He sees them drop from the service little by little. He prays for them, but if they are not praying, too, they become lost to the church.

As a rule the pastor labors for his daily bread. If he sells his labor, he can not choose his hours, and many times as he assembles with the Saints he is extremely tired. He can not find the time to read and study as he should, and must lean heavily upon the arm of his heavenly Father. How comforting it is to have Saints of the branch express appreciation of his sermon, and of his effort. And as he feels that great joy, he, too, expresses appreciation of those who labor with him. Thus with love and union and united prayer, God's work goes forward.

It would be impossible to tell all the responsibilities carried, but in sickness, in death, in sorrows, and temptations the pastor labors, prays, fasts, and helps with all the wisdom that he can command. He rejoices with them when special services are arranged; and when plans miscarry, and he is forced to fill the place of the expected minister, his heart nearly fails him, but with faith he tries and is not forsaken of God.

As a lay member, I believe the church is in need of pastors, or shepherds, and when a branch is not functioning properly I believe if help could be sent, experienced men or families, I believe the work accomplished would be as productive of good as are the missionary efforts. Why not heed the admonition in HERALD of "Shepherdless flocks and flockless shepherds," and under advice of district presidents become laborers together with God, trying to learn limitations, still not feeling diffidence too much. The humble man nearly always feels incapable of accepting the task and needs encouragement. In time, perhaps, the branches and districts can be more perfectly cared for than they are now, but now let us try to appreciate the local priesthood and support them with our faith and prayers.

What Are You Investing?

We say unreservedly the church of Jesus Christ is the most virile organization ever fostered by men anywhere. The best evidence of this is, it has lived through the most careless, indifferent, lifeless attention given any organization through all these two thousand years. It survives in spite of us. The church is not perfect, it is true. If it were, it would leave all of us out. But it supplies something for which the soul of man is constantly longing and praying. If you doubt that, watch those who cut themselves off from it and try to get along without it. Are they happy? Are they satisfied? What usually becomes of them? Do they go on unto perfection, or down to the dust?

There are some bloodless Christians sitting around enjoying a fine society built on the character of the nation or state or city; yet what are they doing or giving to keep up this fine society? Nothing! Some of them say long prayers; others are wonderful in their criticisms. Would you give as much for a house and lot in Hang Chow as you would in some beautiful, clean little city in America? No. Why? Because the spirit of Christ more nearly rules here.

How much are you contributing constructively of yourself or of your earnings to keep the Christlike atmosphere predominant?

What will be your answer in 1927-1928?

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

Limitation

The view is limited by eyes,
Sunlight by windowpanes,
Apparent truth by hidden lies,
And knowledge by our brains.

All space is limited by stars,
All time by history,
The elements by unseen bars
And God by you and me.

Immigration Problem

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, July 1.—Applications of more than 1,500,000 foreigners seeking to enter the United States are pending in American consulates abroad and should cause Americans to realize the importance of studying the problems of immigration, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania informed the local Association of Commerce in a recent address before that body.

Further in his speech the Senator said: "Imagine the effect on the employment situation if the bars are lowered. These 1,500,000 are coming to work. Where can they find 1,500,000 jobs without displacing Americans from their employments? Nowhere in the United States is there any such labor shortage. What will happen to American wage levels, and to American living conditions, if such a flood of newcomers is permitted?"

"The agitation against our immigration laws during the last session took the form of quarrels between nationalities over our methods of apportioning the quotas among the several European countries. It is frankly stated by them that this is to be the first step toward breaking down the whole system of immigration restriction."—Exchange.

Educational Statistics

WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—The General Education Board has, according to statistics recently issued by the Bureau of Education, since its foundation in 1902, to July 1, 1926, appropriated $136,967,200.16 for the promotion of education in the United States. Of this sum $86,039,978.80 was paid or set aside for colleges and other institutions for white students; $9,958,164.86 for educational institutions for Negroes; and $1,203,526.16 for miscellaneous objects.

It is estimated that within the past two years, of the 404 cities of 10,000 population or more reporting to the Bureau of Education, 281 erected new buildings at an expenditure of $245,811,715, or an average of $874,775 for each city. If the cities that did not report averaged the same, $468,502,650 was expended in the cities of this size within the two-year period.

Out of the $245,811,715, there were erected 432 elementary, 165 junior high, and 127 senior high school buildings, or a total of 724 buildings at an average cost of $399,519. If the cities not reporting expended a like amount, 1,380 new buildings were Recently Columbia University of New York City erected in the cities of 10,000 population or more, graduated the largest class in its history, conferring degrees and certificates on 5,007 individuals. Degrees were granted in twenty-eight fields.

The field of education is rapidly increasing, and to be efficiently supervised, changes must be made to met the increase. The Educational Press Association, representing educational journals with a circulation of more than a million, realizing the rapid growth of the educational problem facing our Government, adopted a resolution, a paragraph from which reads as follows:

"A federal department of education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet has become an imperative necessity if education is to be economically and efficiently guided throughout America. The project for the creation of such a department has had the active support of leading educational and lay organizations for seven years. The educational Press Association urges its members to continue their work on behalf of this measure until a department of education has been created."—Exchange, July 1, 1927.

K L D S to Have Hearing Before Federal Radio Commission

Upon the request of the K L D S Radio Board that it be given a wave length similar to its old one, the Federal Radio Commission has set the date for hearing July 29, 2 p. m. K L D S will be represented by President Frederick M. Smith, also by Arthur B. Church, the station director, and legally by Franklyn D. Jones, a former graduate of Grace-land College.

In order to obtain a hearing the commission required that K L D S request a specific frequency or wave length, and the wave requested is 461.3 meters.

The 238 meter wave length assigned K L D S has proved very unsatisfactory for long distance work, largely because of the great number of stations on the lower waves and the general inefficiency of receiving sets on these wave lengths.

REUNION NEWS

NEWS AND LETTERS

North Dakota Reunion

The North Dakota reunion for the year 1927 is now history. It was held June 26 to July 3, at Logan, and to say it briefly, was one of the most, if not the most, instructive that the writer ever attended.

Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael made plain in his earnest and forceful way his phase of the work, and stressed that the priesthood was to lead the way by example.

Apostle Frank Curtis, in his energetic and inimitable manner, presented such themes as "The old Jerusalem gospel," "The faith of our fathers," and "The organic law of the church."

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley and his good wife attended nearly all the reunion. "Uncle Jerry" in his fascinating and unique way gave us some excellent advice.

Brother Swen Swenson, known to the writer for thirty-five years and a former missionary to North Dakota, was present also, and by his fund of rich experiences, by his counsel and advice, by his faith made manifest through long years of service to the church, strengthened our faith. Next year we celebrate twenty-five years of reunions and hope he may be with us again.

Our able young missionary, Brother Robert Gunlock, was with us, and though we heard him but once his theme was good.

Of the local force those present were William Sparling, Thomas Leitch, Frank Hodges, J. W. Darling, Charles A. Smith, Frank Spaulding, James O'Brien, Warren K. McElwain, Frank Anderson, and Brother Addison, of South Dakota, also the writer and perhaps others whose names we do not now recall. On this occasion Brother Ralph Darling was ordained a priest.

The Department of Women was represented by Sister Bertha Graham, who also took subscriptions to the church papers.

On the last Sunday, at one o'clock, baptismal service was conducted, and Brother Robert Gunlock baptized six precious souls, one adult, Grandma Ross. Most of her children and grandchildren are members of the church.

Before the day closed, the writer had the privilege of baptizing a very promising young lady, a graduate from the Minot State Teachers' College, Sister Lillian May Randall. She has been investigating for quite a while and promises to be a worthy member.

We have a new reunion committee, consisting of five members for the coming year, namely: Frank Spaulding, Lester Anderson, Robert Gunlock, Mrs. Bertha Graham, and Frank Hodges. This committee also constitutes the commissary committee. With this able quintet working, and our co-operation, we ought to have the best reunion next year ever held in the State.

We are thankful to our heavenly Father for the nice weather during the session this year, but the mosquitoes were very active the first few days, making it unpleasant for some.

Our next reunion is billed to be held at Brother M. D. Graham's place, seven miles above Burlington. Everyone come and stay a little longer.

WARREN MCELWAIN.
LANSFORD, NORTH DAKOTA, July 10.

In another column of this number of the HERALD appear several notices of the meeting of reunions. From these the reader will be able to determine how he can provide the necessary equipment for his enjoyment of the meeting. Write the authorities of the various reunions for any information further than what is published; don't go without the information you need.

Blenheim Celebrates Fiftieth Anniversary

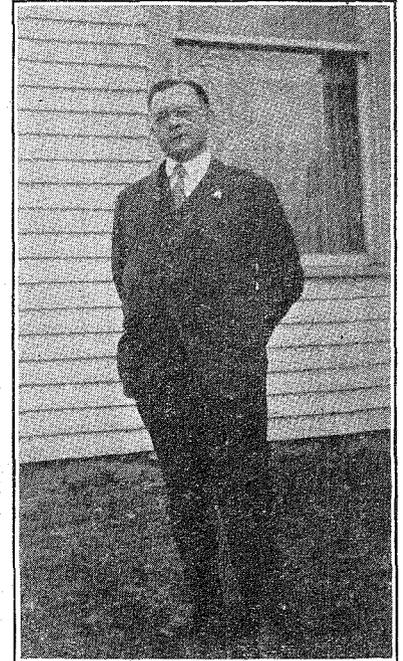

The Saints of Blenheim, Ontario, together with Saints and friends from other branches gathered at their church on the morning of June 19, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its dedication. Though there had been a constant rain the day before and prospects in the early morning for fair weather were poor, the opening session found the Saints not deterred by the weather.

The meetings were encouraging, beneficial, and instructive. The prayer service at 9.30 a. m., was in charge of Elders H. Cahoe, James Pycock, A. R. Hewitt, Robert T. Brown, and the pastor, G. Orlow Coburn. Many incidents of earlier days were recalled, and the lives and testimonies of the pioneers of the branch were refreshed in our memories.

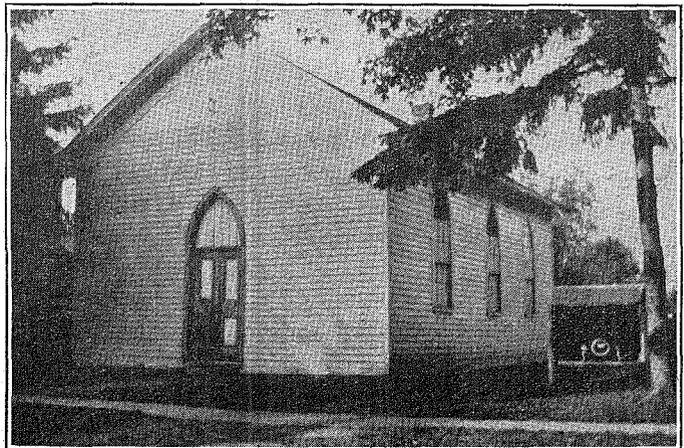

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Elder D. Snobelin, Evangelist A. Leverton being the speaker. He enumerated early experiences in his work in Ontario and Michigan, recalling deliverance from mobs and guidance from God while traveling through the woods of those early days. God had never failed him.

A Sunday school session was held at half past one in charge of W. E. Hewitt.

The three o'clock service was devoted to a number of talks. A. R. Hewitt, "History of the branch"; Bishop John C. Dent, "My early acquaintance with Blenheim"; District President Robert Brown, "A retrospect"; and James Pycock, district missionary, "The changes of fifty years." The little daughters of Elder Cahoe sang a pleasing duet, and Mary St. John sang a solo for which she won a gold medal from girls of the public school.

In the evening Elder James Pycoc preached an interesting sermon, explaining how we shall commence where we are and go on to perfection.

The services were very stimulating and gave us new hope. A picnic lunch was served at noon and again in the evening, and all seemed to enjoy the good spirit as of yore.

Buckhorn Branch was organized February 16, 1862, by Apostle John Shippy with Elder Joseph Shippy as president. From here the work spread out to all parts of Canada and Michigan. On a subsequent date the name was changed to Blenheim Branch.

The present church building was formerly a Methodist Church at Buckhorn (now Cedar Springs) situated about two miles from where Erie Beach Reunion is held, and was moved to Blenheim by George Cleveland, the first district president of Canada, for a private individual who used it for public meetings and dances. After about a year of this, it being unsuccessful for such, it was moved to its present location on Sheldrick Street, reseated, and decorated, and was dedicated by Elders W. W. Blair, Joseph Snively, and Joseph Luff on June 17, 1877.

Many happy hours have been spent there by the branch; also several conferences have been held in it since that time. On his last visit to Blenheim, President W. W. Blair pronounced a special blessing upon the church and branch, and since that time peace has prevailed in the branch.

Elder G. Orlow Coburn presides over this branch, assisted by Elder Cahoe and by Brother C. Jacklin, deacon. Elder Coburn is the son of our late Brother Richard Coburn, who for years was president and whose father, Eliphalet Coburn, was for years teacher and whose rich tenor voice still rings in the memories of the older Saints.

A FORMER BLENHEIM BOY.

Mothers' Part in the Stewardship Plan

By Mrs. W. G. Canion, a member of the Department of Women of Pueblo, Colorado

This is the day mothers get the bouquets, and rightly, too, in my opinion, for no one who has not gone through life's trials and endless burdens in the care of a family can know the sacrifice and effort it costs. These beautiful tributes of appreciation from sons and daughters are pleasing to any mother, and are our reasonable duty.

Perhaps I am expected to follow on in this strain and eulogize mothers for their constant care and devotion to their children, but may I say a word of the opportunities and sum up the responsibilities which are mothers' today? I do not mean merely the responsibilities to her children, but the broader opportunities opening to her—and especially to one who has seen her children grow up and go out to homes of their own.

I do not believe there are such opportunities and responsibilities on anyone today as are on the mothers and wives in this church, if it would live up to its profession. There is a work before this people today that challenges them to every effort, to every sacrifice; and at effort and sacrifice mothers are artists. So perhaps the Lord knew where to place a larger share of responsibility.

Foreigners tell us our women are spoiled, and we are forced to admit that there are in our midst a great many who "toil not, neither do they spin," but who appropriate to themselves all the benefits and privileges to be had and give nothing in return. But this can not be said of a great class of Christian women who are doing all in their power to serve humanity and to make this a more enjoyable place in which to live, but who, without inspired guidance, accomplish little. Still another class faces the greatest work ever open for women under the direction of the Spirit of God. The Lord expects much of these women, for where much light and opportunity are given, much must be expected.

The Lord has designated a manner of deliverance for his people, and I believe the mothers can do more than any army in carrying forth these commands. I refer here to woman's part in the stewardship plan or the establishment of Zion, the instituting of the system which shall usher in the kingdom of God, for I believe that is what the stewardship plan means. Though I am not a member of your church, I am in accord with you on many points, and this one in particular appeals to me as being of supreme importance. I found out from direct revelation that some sort of plan should be instituted for the deliverance of God's people from the plagues that shall soon begin to fall upon Babylon. I was agreeably surprised when I found you had an inspired plan for the accomplishment of this deliverance—and I am zealous of helping to an understanding of its importance and appreciation of its privileges. It is the only forward step that has come under my observation, in any church.

Approximately one hundred years ago the cry went forth: "Babylon is fallen. Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and receive not of her plagues," and this people came out in matters spiritual. If this were not the case, if Babylon had not fallen, if God had not rejected her, then this church had no right to organize; it has no right to exist. But the founders did see and recognize the spiritual decline prevalent at that time and bravely stepped out to follow instructions in founding an organization which should merit approval. This was done at the appointed time, the time which, according to prophecy, should see the "times of the Gentiles" fulfilled and the grafting in again of the branches of Israel.

Some may doubt that the nominal church had fallen and been rejected of God, but subsequent events have proved it. The growth of lawlessness, crime, immorality, and all classes and degrees of unbelief—but still having a form of godliness, while in daily living they deny the power thereof, is proof that this cry was pertinent.

This departure from Babylon in matters spiritual was accomplished that the people be not partakers of her sins; but how about "receiving of her plagues"? Have you ever considered that this admonition to depart from Babylon has not yet been carried out in full? In fact, we are today more dependent in financial matters upon Babylon than ever before. The call to "come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins" has been heeded, but the remainder is still to be fulfilled: "And receive not of her plagues" necessitates an exodus from Babylon personally and individually. Not just in worship, but in everyday contact. The plagues, death and mourning, famine and fire, are physical ills, and anyone who is in contact with or dependent upon her can not hope to escape their effects, and will surely receive of them directly or indirectly. We are today almost wholly dependent upon Babylon, and she is to fall. I wish, through the coming week each of you would daily consider just what you would or could do if this great Babylon with her complicated system of finances could not be depended upon for your daily bread. Of course, we pray to God, "Give us this day our daily bread," but we must admit that it now comes through the medium of this great city which is to fall. Even though you may not be working directly for those we call Babylonians, they control the supply of money, the credits for all business efforts. Let this be interfered with, and we who live in the great cities shall suffer. Don't you think God has been careful of his people, that he has given them an inspired plan that is to deliver them from these terrible trials? We are promised that our bread and water shall be sure, and this is the means he has given to make it sure.

This stewardship plan is for the economic deliverance of Israel, and we neglect it at our peril.

But what has this to do with the mothers? I do not mean that they shall accomplish this work alone, or take the lead over the men in the work, but that their influence and example can have more weight in carrying forward this work than any other medium. Oftentimes if mother uses her influence the tithe is paid. Under her efficient management there can be a good surplus. Whereas, if she has no interest it all might be used in extravagant living, or be wasted foolishly.

It is estimated that the women of our country spend or influence in the spending of eighty per cent of our money. Consecrate our part of this influence, and it will become a great power in mighty works. I firmly believe it is the duty and privilege of the women of this church to encourage and inspire the establishment of the stewardship plan—the building of Zion—which means the setting up of the kingdom; for most assuredly when the plagues have passed over, those of Babylon who remain will naturally look to Zion, where there is peace and safety, to set up a stable government, and when this time does come we shall see that the Lord has on hand the requisite knowledge for perfect civil government which shall stand for ever.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

June 27.—We are always glad to report the progress that is being made in the work at our branch. When we read the letters coming to us through the HERALD from the Saints of various branches, we are inspired and encouraged to go forward in the great cause. Though the task be great that lies before us, yet we feel when we are trusting in One divinely strong, we can not fail. We are sure that there are those who are anxiously waiting to hear from other branches appearing in the HERALD infrequently.

The Lord is very good to us. He has and is still blessing his Saints in this place in many ways. We are striving to do those things that will please him, for when we know that God is pleased with what we are doing we can enjoy doing them the more. Pastor William Goudy is one of those brothers who wants to have things just as God would have them. This is one of the many reasons why his flock thinks so much of him. We pray God will always keep this desire burning in his heart.

It is true that if a flock of sheep has a good shepherd the flock will be well cared for. For this reason we love the church, because it has and does things just as God would have them done. Every Saint who knows the worth of prayer should pray it shall always be so.

Brother James Carlisle is our Sunday school superintendent, and he is working hard to promote the school of boys and girls, so that when the time shall come and those who have borne the heat of the day shall lay down the sword, others will be ready to say, "Here am I, Lord."

Sunday, June 12, was the veterans' day in our branch for all who were members of the church twenty-five years or more. There were thirty-six on the honor roll, and of this number eighteen were present. Sister Rosa Warner was the oldest member present, having been a faithful member for forty-two years.

Brother Richard Baldwin being with us at this time gave a very interesting talk, especially for "the veterans," urging them to stand fast in the faith.

Brother and Sister R. E. Mason were in Columbus, Ohio, on June 19, at the dedication of the Second Columbus church building. A large number of Saints from Akron were there, as well as from Barberton, New Philadelphia, Uhrichsville, and other parts in the State. This was Brother and Sister Mason's first opportunity to hear President F. M. Smith, and they feel that God has put the right man in the right place. He is both a sociable man and an eloquent speaker. They think those who have never had the opportunity of hearing the Prophet of the church will find their time well spent to do so.

Sunday, July 3, being sacrament, we were pleased to have with us from Akron Brother Hammond and wife, to whom at this time God delivered a message of encouragement. Dear Saints, as these messages come to us let us remember that God is pleased to speak words of cheer to us through those whom he has chosen, that we may be strengthened in our spiritual warfare. Nothing can keep us more fit than love one for another, and that we be of one mind in Christ. This brings to my mind a little story that impressed me very much, and it may do as much for others.

It was in a little town some time ago, at the close of a meeting, a preacher who had attended the meeting, while coming out with the rest noticed another building from which people also were filing out. He said to a friend, "Have you two churches here?" "Oh, yes." "How do you get on?" "Oh, we get on very well." "I'm glad to hear that. Was your brother minister at the meeting?" "No, no; we don't have anything to do with each other. We think that is the best way."

And they called that "getting on very well." May God make us of one heart and of one mind! Let our hearts be like drops of water flowing together. Unity among the people of God is a sort of foretaste of heaven. There we shall not find any Baptists, or Methodists, or Congregationalists, or Episcopalians. We shall all be one in Christ. We leave all our party names behind us when we leave this earth. Oh, that the Spirit of God may speedily sweep away all these miserable walls that we have been building up! You will notice that the last prayer that Jesus Christ made on earth, before they led him away to Calvary, was that his disciples might all be one. He could look down the stream of time and see that divisions would come—how Satan would try to divide the flock of God. Nothing will silence infidels so quickly as the Saints of God being united everywhere. Then our testimony will have weight with the ungodly and the careless. But when they see the Saints divided, they will not believe their testimony. The Holy Spirit is grieved; and there is little power where there is no unity, so as we oftentimes quote, "If ye are not one, ye are not mine."

"Let party names no more be known
Among the ransomed throng;
For Jesus claims them for his own;
To him they all belong.
One in their covenant Head and King,
They should be one in heart;
Of one salvation all should sing,
Each claiming his own part.
One bread, one family, one Rock,
One building, formed by love,
One fold, one Shepherd, yea, one flock.
They shall be one above."

In the last three weeks the dark angel has come among us and claimed three of our members. They are Sister Audrey Jayburg Smith, Sister Huff, and Brother Lorenzo McMillen. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

Montrose, Iowa

June 30.—The Montrose Branch local affairs are moving along smoothly under the presidency of Elder Orval T. Miller. Regular Sunday and midweek services are held in our little chapel, conducted by the local priesthood. The local priesthood also holds services occasionally at Keokuk, Iowa.

At the last district conference Brother B. F. Strange was ordained to the office of elder. Several from Montrose attended this conference at Rock Creek, Illinois.

Quite a few from here attended the funeral of Sister McKiernan, held at Farmington, Iowa, Sunday, July 3.

Services were dismissed in the evening to allow those who could to attend services in Fort Madison.

We are looking forward to a good reunion in Nauvoo, from August 19 to 28.

IDA B. HOLMES.

Artland, Saskatchewan

June 12.—We have neglected HERALD readers so long that we can not begin just where we left off in our last letter; it is too far back. But we must mention the ringing of the wedding bells last March. Brother Frank Wood, of the Michigan Branch, and Sister Margaret Allison, of our branch, were married March 30 by Elder J. J. Cornish. We were sorry to lose Sister Margaret, for she was a very willing worker, but no doubt that which is our loss will be a help to the Alberta Saints.

We observed Easter in our branch with a nine o'clock prayer meeting, followed by a pleasing little program. We canceled our evening service, for several Artland Saints were attending and some taking part in the Easter program at the Michigan Branch just over the line in Alberta. The main feature of the program was the presentation of "The Holy City."

I have been wondering if it would be interesting to our southern readers to know just what difficulties we northern Saints have to overcome at times, to render service. Undoubtedly we all have difficulties, but they vary widely in character. During the Easter morning service, it began to rain and continued nearly all day. Towards evening those of our number who were supposed to take part in the above-mentioned program began to entertain doubts about the advisability of going. But, knowing they would be depending upon them, finally decided to make the attempt. A little later in the year we would not have thought so much about it, but just at this time a nine-mile ride in an open buggy is not a pleasing prospect. Owing to the condition of the roads, cars had not been used to any great extent as yet. In fact, several had been out for the first time that day. But we thought it not safe to start on a trip like that, at night, with a car, not knowing beforehand the condition of the road. Buggies are not found on all farms, but nearly every farm has at least a wagon. We climbed into a two-deck box and started on our way, with the rain coming gently down. We had gone about a mile when we stopped to change to a democrat, or two-seated buggy. We again proceeded, picking up another singer about a mile farther on. We reached the church on the Alberta side safely, after the back seat of the democrat had fallen down a few times and smashed a hole in one of the violin cases.

We enjoyed the program, and at a late hour started home again. To our dismay the wind had come up, and the rain had turned to a driving sleet which cut our faces and chilled us through and through. After going about four and a half miles, we stopped at the Bates home to get warm. Of course we had "tea" and after borrowing coats, caps, and robes, started out again more comfortably situated. We reached our starting place in the small hours of the morning, after changing back to the wagon and rattling home over a mile of frozen ground. But some of us were not home yet, so we gathered our sleepy children together, and climbed into the Ford and came another mile. Thus ended a "happy Easter-tide." In the morning the ground was covered with a thick blanket of snow.

On May 7, a wee stranger came to stay at the home of Brother and Sister Rudolph Cornish. They call her Fay Lenore.

Mothers' Day, the Evergreen Sunday School of the Michigan Branch joined ours, the Blue Bell Sunday School, in a program and basket dinner. To each of two mothers who were unable to attend, the Sunday schools sent a bouquet of flowers and a daintily prepared lunch. The mother from Evergreen Sunday School was Sister S. W. Kilpatrick, who has been bedfast for over two years because of a paralytic stroke. The other was Sister Grace Huggett Cornish, the newest mother of our own Sunday school. At three o'clock in the afternoon our pastor, E. Leslie Mogg, delivered an address on "Mother love." In the evening Brother Joseph Bates, pastor of the Michigan Branch, gave us another typical Mothers' Day sermon.

Sister Emma Harrison, of Saskatoon, is here visiting her daughter, Sister Millie Cunningham.

One evening the officers and teachers of our Sunday school held a council to consider the resurrection of the Department of Recreation and Expression. It is hard in this country to keep interest in evening meetings, other than Sunday evenings, as farmers are very busy during seeding and harvest, and the winters are cold, so we have just a short summer in which to really enjoy ourselves. They selected the evening of June 3 for a "tryout." We began with a good, old-fashioned wiener roast near the church. Later we went inside and listened to an excellent program. Officers were elected and a motion made to meet twice a month, on the Friday evening preceding the fifth and twentieth of each month. Brother William Allison was chosen president, with Sister Bertha Cornish as his assistant. Brother James Cornish and Sister Grace Cornish were chosen to look after the sports. Brother Howard Allison was elected critic. We hope these social gatherings will successfully continue for the summer months at least.

June 4, Elder and Sister A. J. Cornish and daughter, Zella, Elders J. J. Cornish, and W. J. Cornish made a trip to Battleford, by car, to visit the Saints there for over Sunday. As they have no member of the priesthood there, our district president, W. J. Cornish, thought it advisable for some elder of the district to meet with them at least once a month.

On July 1 Canada will celebrate her Diamond Jubilee of Confederation. Our school, under the leadership of Sister Miller Cunningham, is preparing a special feature for the parade which is to take place at the municipal celebration in Senlac. One of the girls, dressed as Miss Canada, will be seated on a cart which will be drawn by two of the boys. The rest of the girls will be dressed as Red Cross nurses, while all of the boys will wear khaki, as soldiers. The cart will be decorated with red, white, and blue bunting.

Quite a number of our branch are planning on attending the district conference which is to be held in Saskatoon, July 14 to 17. We expect to drive through in cars. It is about one hundred and seventy miles from here.

Brother and Sister E. F. Shupe Celebrate Golden Wedding

Tuesday, June 28, about a hundred of the friends of Littleton, Colorado, and Saints and friends of Denver, assembled at the home of Brother and Sister E. F. Shupe, 420 Ash Avenue, Littleton, to celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary from 2 till 9 p. m. After refreshments were served, Pastor E. J. Williams made a presentation speech and presented the bride and groom each with a ten dollar gold piece. After a short prayer, Sister Shupe responded with a short poem she had composed for the occasion. It was an enjoyable time and one long to be remembered by all present. After the guests had departed and the fragments were taken up, there was found a little over a hundred dollars in cash (mostly gold); also a number of other valuable and useful presents. Telegrams were received from friends in Omaha and Trinidad, and many telephone calls from friends who could not attend.

Brother E. F. Shupe and Eldora C. Head were married in the Rock Creek Church, Hancock County, Illinois, June 28, 1877, by Apostle J. H. Lake. Brother Shupe was baptized December 4, 1863, by J. H. Lake, and Sister Shupe by M. H. Forscutt.

Their home paper, the Littleton Independent, of June 24, published this account and tribute:

"At a time when the papers are full of discouraging divorce statistics, it is a pleasure to be able to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Shupe, who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next Tuesday.

"Both Mrs. Shupe, formerly Miss Eldora Head, of Nauvoo, Illinois, and Mr. Shupe were born and reared in Illinois.

And it was in that great Middlewestern State that they were married a half century ago. In 1888 they came to Colorado, living first in Denver and sixteen years ago moving to Littleton. Mr. Shupe is a contractor.

"Three of Mr. and Mrs. Shupe's four living children will be here for the felicitations on June 28. Leo Shupe is a resident of Littleton and will, of course, be present, as will his sister, Mrs. Susan Constance, of Denver. Homer Shupe, who has charge of the Credit Men's Association in Trinidad, is expected to arrive Sunday. Unfortunately Frank Shupe, the youngest son, lives too far away to come for the celebration. He is a farmer in southeastern Missouri.

"Littleton congratulates Mr. and Mrs. Shupe and wishes them many more years of happiness, and that it might have opportunity to rejoice with them on their diamond anniversary."

San Antonio, Texas

3522 South Flores Street

The San Antonio Branch was recently favored with a visit from Apostle E. J. Gleazer, of Independence, Missouri, who preached three powerful sermons to a crowded house. His last theme was Zion and the gathering, showing the necessity of the gathering, etc. It was a masterful effort, which we believe was appreciated by all in attendance, both members and nonmembers. The Spirit was felt in power. We are thankful that the church has such an able man to defend it, and may the Lord bless his efforts wherever he goes is our prayer.

Since last writing three accidents have occurred in this branch. The first victim was our pastor's little seventeen-month-old son, Walter James Miller. Sister Miller was backing the car out of the garage preparatory to going to town. The baby, unknown to her, suddenly ran from the house. With a scream he fell beneath the wheels of the Buick, and before the mother could stop the car, the rear and front wheels had passed over the little body. The child was rushed to the hospital where a thorough examination by doctors revealed that he was unhurt except for slight bruises about the hips. Brother and Sister Miller realize that the baby was miraculously saved.

A short time after this accident, Sister Evva Richardson with her two sisters was crossing one of the busy streets in the city and was knocked down by a car. Her head hit the pavement, knocking her unconscious for a time. She received a gash on the leg, and her hip was slightly bruised. She was taken to the hospital where an examination showed that no bones had been broken. Her head pained her for a day or so, but at this writing all trace of the accident seems to be gone. We can not help but feel that God's hand has been over his people at San Antonio, for we have observed in the last four years there have been four accidents by cars, and none of them have been fatal.

We are sorry to report the sad accident of Everette McRay, thirteen, who was swimming in the Medina River with some other boys when he was suddenly seized with cramps and drowned before he could be reached. This happened on Sunday evening, July 3. Everette was formerly a member of our Sunday school. This Fourth of July will indeed be a sad one for his parents and brothers and sisters. The family have our deepest sympathy.

The Zeta Jett Circle and the Willing Workers gave a joint entertainment on June 16, which netted them about thirty-four dollars. The proceeds are to go toward making a payment on the curbing of the lot that was purchased in the recent past.

Sister Emma Jackson, assisted by about fifteen young ladies, has lately presented several entertainments and expects to give another one next Thursday evening. The proceeds are to be used in defraying the expenses of this group of girls while they are attending the reunion. Some otherwise would not be privileged to attend that gathering. This is a worthy undertaking, and we wish them success in raising the amount of money necessary to carry them through. We trust the Saints in the district will make an earnest effort to attend this reunion, for we feel they will be amply rewarded for the effort. Patriarch Ammon White, Bishop C. J. Hunt, Elder J. E. Vanderwood, and H. E. Winegar, our missionary, are expected to be present. Those who have not received their patriarchal blessing will find this time a splendid opportunity. Come praying that we shall indeed have a spiritual feast.

San Jose, California

Hello, Central? Please give me Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. . . . Hello, Brother Editors? . . . Yes, this is San Jose on the line again. I suppose you are looking for that "news letter"? We don't seem to have a great deal stored away in our receiving station, but we shall endeavor to put a little spice into what we have to season it up a little so that it will be palatable to the Saints. Since news letters are a sort of continued story, we shall begin where we left off the first of June. Since that time the principal events that might be of interest are as follows:

The first thing that seems to present itself to our attention is a surprise party, given to Brother and Sister Hawkins by a delegation of Saints from Sacramento on the evening of Saturday, June 4, at about half past eight. Brother and Sister Hawkins were aroused from their peaceful quietude by a cry of mixed voices from the front of the house and, upon rushing to the front door, were greeted by the W. H. Dawson and G. P. Levitt families to the number of six; and they had come to stay all night, that they could get to Irvington early the next morning, to be at a rally day meeting to be held there. They were welcome guests, and it was an agreeable surprise. A pleasant evening was enjoyed. Sister Hawkins stowed them away for the night, and they got an early start for the Irvington camp ground next morning. There they spent a very enjoyable day with Saints gathered from nearly all parts of the district. The San Jose Saints canceled their Sunday preaching services, and quite a number of them attended the Irvington meeting.

The branch has been holding its regular meetings all through the month, some of which have been very spiritual, though at times the attendance has not been very large.

On the evening of June 10 Brother Roy Harris brought his troop of Boy Scouts down from Menlow Park to visit the troop which he has just organized here. The visiting troop gave an entertaining demonstration of the workings of the organization. At the close of the meeting the visitors were served refreshments. Brother Harris is scoutmaster of both troops.

On the evening of June 11 a number of the priesthood of San Jose attended a priesthood banquet, held in the San Francisco Branch, some of them remaining over and attending services in the Danvers Street church the following day, Sunday. These meetings were attended by Brethren Gillen, Levitt, Etzenhouser, and Savage, of the missionary force, besides the local and visiting priesthood. Much powerful, spiritual instruction was given at these meetings, that should be treasured up in the hearts and minds of the hearers, never to be forgotten. The instruction and admonition, especially that given by Apostle Gillen, was of no uncertain meaning. We are persuaded that the apostles of the Jerusalem church could not have spoken with greater authority and power. Saints were surely encouraged to press forward and use all the powers that God has given us to accomplish the work he has intrusted to our care.

Sunday, June 12, was Children's Day in our branch, and there was had a fine program at the church, all doing well in their parts. Two children, Bobby Bates, son of Brother and Sister Harley V. Bates, and Wilber Lawn, son of Brother and Sister A. R. Lawn, of Watonsville, were baptized by Pastor R. E. Cowden. Confirmation was by Brothers Cowden and Shippy. We heard it remarked by several that they thought it was the most beautiful baptismal service they had ever seen.

Elder C. J. Cady preached the Children's Day sermon.

On Wednesday evening, June 22, the Saints at the church enjoyed another one hundred per cent prayer meeting. Everyone present felt the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit; it was a soul-cheering meeting. Two of the sisters received administration.

Sunday, June 19, was remembered as Fathers' Day, and during the Sunday school period a number of young people were called upon to make short speeches, from which was drawn the conclusion that father has a place to fill in the home as well as mother; especially is he a very necessary adjunct when it comes to supplying the pantry and wardrobe. One party suggested the strap also. The final consensus of opinion was that the mother and father are both very necessary in a well-regulated home. Pastor Cowden preached the Fathers' Day sermon.

Elder Cowden was the speaker on the last Sunday of the month at the morning hour, choosing for a theme "The wise and foolish virgins." He was very earnest in admonishing the Saints to be found among the wise virgins; that wisdom consisted in faithfully keeping the whole law of God and improving every talent God had given us.

Visitors at services from other branches were Sister Jennings and her daughter, Lilly, from Fresno. They expect to be here through the summer, as Sister Lilly is going to attend summer school at the teachers' college. They will be very helpful in the branch during their stay. Brother and Sister Therin Walker, from Oakland Branch, were also in attendance. Brother and Sister Allen, who are members of this branch living near Livermore, forty-two miles away, were in attendance, and the smiles on their faces which are always in evidence indicated that they were glad to be here; the greetings of the Saints showed that their presence was appreciated. May it ever be so! It is heavenly bliss for the Saints to dwell together in unity.

On Wednesday evening of the 29th, at our regular mid-week prayer service, the Saints were again blessed with the Spirit's presence, and a good meeting was had. At this service a young sister from the Santa Barbara Branch, Sister Leonard Younger, was visitor. In bearing her testimony she expressed her appreciation of the lovely spirit that pervaded the meeting and stated that it had encouraged and strengthened her to meet with such a peaceful little band of Saints. She is young in the work and needed encouragement, and the Lord saw fit to give her that strength by speaking to her through one of the elders present. We are sure she is going to make a good worker in the church.

We are happy that most of the sick of the branch are very much improved. For this we thank the Giver of all, from whom all blessings come.

Eastern Maine Meets in Conference

The Eastern Maine district conference convened at Corea, June 25 and 26. It opened with a business session Saturday afternoon, in charge of Elder N. M. Wilson, district president. In the evening Elder Amos Berve, of Western Maine District, was the speaker.

Sunday morning greeted us with a heavy fog and pouring rain, but in spite of the inclemency of the weather, the attendance from the various branches of the district was very good, and we had a most enjoyable and profitable conference.

Brother Wilson and Brother Berve were the speakers, giving us sermons full of inspiration and devotion. All who attended are more desirous and eager to assist in the program of the church.

Saints of Eastern Maine are looking forward anxiously to the Maine reunion to be held at Brooksville, August 5-14. Come, spend your vacation at Brooksville, one of the beauty spots of our State. Enjoy with us the spiritual feast, healthful recreation, and beautiful scenery.

News From the Departments

The Departments' office at Graceland was the center of intense activity for the closing weeks of May. In addition to the routine office work, there was the preliminary work incident to the gathering of over two hundred people and nine instructors in a special Institute of Methods in Religious Education. The closing days of the college year came and went with their usual round of exercises. A goodly number of old students, friends and graduates returned for the home-coming, and especially to attend the dedication of Zimmermann Hall.

Sunday, June 3, was a wonderfully beautiful day and a great crowd of Lamoni people and visitors filled the large auditorium almost to capacity. A junior worship service preceded the sacrament and helped to explain its meaning and to give it deep significance to all. At 2.30 President F. M. Smith delivered a powerful message to the youth of the church represented in the college and other educational interests. The dedicatory prayer was feelingly offered by Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley. At the close of the service, ground was broken for the girls' new dormitory with appropriate ceremonies.

On Sunday evening the institute was formally opened in the stirring address of Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of Chicago, at the Brick Church. This was also the beginning of her series of nine addresses before the institute people. The institute sessions throughout the week were pronounced successful from every standpoint. All classes were well and regularly attended. The program of evening events was carried out to the letter and helped in great measure to round out the program of each day.

The work of the instructors was deeply appreciated, and the two from away were fittingly remembered with large bouquets of flowers as they left us.

Following the closing sermon on the second Sunday morning by President McDowell, one hundred thirty-four students of the institute received certificates of credit for having completed twenty-four hours of consistent class work. A total of over two hundred were enrolled throughout the week, who return to their local branches to serve with clearer vision, with more definite purpose and with better-organized effort than they have done before. Almost every section of the country was represented in the student body, generous quotas coming from Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, Ohio, and Illinois as well as from Iowa, Missouri, and other States.

Plans are already maturing for a two weeks' workers' institute about the middle of June in 1928.

Accepting an invitation from the educational Recreation Institute of Chicago, President McDowell and Gene Closson spent the second week in June in attendance upon their sessions. It was our pleasure to be present one afternoon, also, to report on our organized work for girls in Lamoni. Our report was enthusiastically received and great interest shown by other denominational leaders in the recreational program of our church. It should be a matter of congratulation with us that Brother McDowell and Brother Closson are recognized as leaders in this field. Brother McDowell was chosen one of the executive committee which will have in charge the formulation of a recreational program to be recommended for all religious denominations. He was also asked to head one of the most important sub-committees, a group whose study will attempt to determine the religious significance or value of certain types of popular recreation.

So much interest was shown in the work that is being done for Latter Day Saint girls that Mrs. Woodstock and some of her assistants were given a special invitation to attend the Lake Winona Camp of Chicago Moentita girls, held at Warsaw, Indiana, in July. Much good should come to our girls' movement through such experiences as these.

June 18 and 19 was occupied in an institute held at Indianapolis. Mrs. Richard Baldwin assisted us in class and demonstration work. There was a good representation from over the district and the class discussions of unusual spirit and interest. An outstanding feature was a demonstration junior worship service which occupied the eleven o'clock hour, Sunday. The services of the church are certainly not complete until the interests of all are considered and their needs logically supplied.

Monday and Tuesday following were spent with the Saints in Louisville, Kentucky, a group of earnest people who seemed to appreciate our message. There is promise of a good troop of Boy Scouts under the able leadership of a clean young man not of our church, but who is investigating our faith. We commend his effort.

Then came a long ride through the heart of Kentucky hill district to Ashland. The train passes in and out of tunnels through rocky, wooded hills, spans deep ravines, and circles around through fertile valleys with ever-changing vistas. Most of the villages appear quite typically rural and the residents quite content with a tiny house nestled on the hillside, while back up the valley are cleared patches for corn, beans, and potatoes, or perhaps the crops have been planted in between the stumps and the few standing trees.

From Ashland we were driven to the pleasant "mountain" home of Sister Margery Williams and her parents just out of Ironton, Ohio. This is a flourishing "iron town," the major industry being iron and steel mills. It is also noted as the southern terminal of Henry Ford's private railroad, leading from the Ohio River to Detroit.

We were joined here by Apostle Roy S. Budd, whose genial companionship and helpful counsel are always welcome. The Saints were kindly in their interest in our effort, and we trust they may profitably enter more fully into a broader program of study and activities which shall challenge the highest development of every member. Thus, only, may we make progress in building Zion.

The next two days were spent in the hills of Southern Ohio with the McDermott and Pleasant Valley Saints. The former is a stone-cutting town, and we spent most of our day watching the interesting process by which the great blocks of sandstone are quarried, sawed, and trimmed. Many a vital lesson for Zion builders can be learned from the patient, yet skillful stone cutter. The Saints are hard-working but earnest people. They especially need trained leaders who may help to develop the possibilities of zionic lives, zionic homes, zionic service. On Friday night, after meeting, we were driven to the comfortable home of Brother Luther Crabtree, in Portsmouth. This brother has driven the eighteen miles every Sunday for many months to serve as superintendent of the Pleasant Valley School.

At Middletown, Ohio, we joined Brother McDowell in an over Sunday convention. The Saints came in generously from surrounding branches and joined heartily in class work. It is a joyous experience to be mutually interested in our common problems of growth and development if we mutually assert ourselves to attain the goal of all our church work. We do need a broad and rich program, and we need enthusiasm, but we make progress only as we set ourselves actively at work to attain those attitudes and skills which are necessary to realize our ideal.

One evening with the Highland Park, Detroit, Saints and one night each at Chatham and London occupied our time before the convening of the International Institute at Windsor. We were acting as an advance agent for the institute, but we fully appreciated the chance to renew old acquaintances and to make new friends. We found most of our leaders alert and anxious to make progress. We enjoyed trying to help and to lend encouragement to the local work of the departments.

Elaborate plans had been made in four districts surrounding Windsor by an enthusiastic joint committee, and some five hundred people were enrolled and taking class work before the close, Sunday evening, July 3. Advantage was taken of the Canadian holiday, Dominion Day, July 1, and this being the occasion of the Diamond Jubilee celebration, a very fine program was rendered Friday evening. Classes were held throughout Friday, Saturday, and Sunday forenoon—President McDowell, Brothers O. A. McDowell, T. S. Williams, and C. B. Woodstock being instructors. Saturday evening a generous banquet was spread, served, as were the meals during the institute, by ladies of the United Church of Canada. The toasts by leaders at the institute and missionaries were seasoned with jest, yet replete with sound instruction and helpful observation. The responses were from the younger membership and spoke volumes of faith and confidence and sincerity of purpose. There are many young men and women of outstanding promise in church work in this part of the field. There are also some splendid men and women of maturity who hold high positions of trust and honor in the industrial world, who give evidence of sincere loyalty to the church and its work. Certainly some of these should be released soon to enter upon definite assignments in church work. They have acquired training and ability, and their services are gladly paid for and capitalized in the industrial world. Generally these leaders are assisting as they can in local church and departmental responsibility, and this is well, but we anxiously look forward to the day when trained and consecrated effort may be expended one hundred per cent in pastoral and missionary work.

The sessions of the institute were held in the cool and spacious classrooms of the Prince Edward High School. The auditorium, gymnasium, and classrooms were given freely for our use by the Board of Education, only a small charge being made for janitor service.

Institutes such as the one held at Windsor should serve a great purpose in maintaining the interest of all and in stimulating each member to personal endeavor, that his own contribution may be worthy of his calling. Thus may we grow together in an appreciation of the truth of the gospel and in a practical demonstration of its saving grace.

Efficient help was rendered by Elders H. A. Koehler, Matthew Liston, and James Pycok of the missionary force, in addition to local brethren.

Again we hasten back to the office to clear our desk before entering the reunion season.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN, July 4.

Union Branch

BATTLE LAKE, MINNESOTA, July 5.—The Union Branch at Clitherall has been holding its own and has made a gain of two by baptism; one the young wife of Brother Maurice Fletcher; and the other, the husband of Sister Mary Fletcher Fallsgraff, of Washington, District of Columbia, who with her husband has been spending vacation time here with home folks.

The Tucker family spent one Sunday with the Bemidji Branch and report a good condition prevailing there. Sister Ethel Tucker attended the reunion a few days and reports a small attendance. The scarcity of members from outlying branches was due, we believe, not so much to indifference as to the stringent financial conditions that prevail in the agricultural districts, due to the varying weather changes of the previous season. It seems almost impossible to keep the sordidness of the world from reflecting itself in the church, but with faith and right living we believe it can be done.

First Columbus Branch

The month of June was opened by the young people's class, taught by Elder F. C. Welch, with a fathers' and sons' banquet in the basement of the church. The young ladies did the cooking and decorating, superintended by Mary Jones, Sister Goldie Welch, sr., and Sister Knagie, and John Karis, chef. A splendid meal was served, including ice cream made by the ladies, and also the cake. Flowers were abundant. After the meal games were enjoyed, and the evening concluded with thirty minutes of song. There was a trio composed of Don Gabriel, Elder Gabriel, and Wilbur Overly. A violin solo by Don Gabriel was appreciated; also a solo by J. A. Foster.

On Sunday, June 5, the sacramental service was conducted at eleven, in charge of A. E. Anderton and William Grice, our new district president. This was a meeting that will long be remembered. Sister Martha Daugherty and Elder Grice were spoken to through Elder Anderton. It was a pentecostal shower.

The next day, the 6th, a volume of business was expedited at our semiannual business meeting. Part of the business was the election of Priest C. H. Foster as publicity agent, Priest H. E. Carter having resigned. This meeting was also pleasant, the true spirit of sainthood being demonstrated by all.

On the following Wednesday, prayer service was in charge of Elder F. C. Welch and Priest C. H. Foster. Brother Welch gave a synopsis of his life from the time when left an orphan at nine months old, up to his acceptance of the gospel. This narrative was an inspiration to the young.

Friday, June 10, the meeting of the Department of Recreation and Religious Expression was in charge of President Charles Ferguson, priest. There was a duet by Florence Gabriel and Helen Ferguson, and their singing was well received.

The Children's Day program came on the 12th. This was well rendered, even though some of the leaders were away at the young people's convention. To Sister Mildred Weate is due all encouragement, because of the circumstances under which she labored. Elder F. C. Welch gave a sermonet.

At the evening service the topic was, "Who are we?" The parable of the good Samaritan was used with this discourse, and Brother Welch was highly commended for his sermon.

On Wednesday, the 15th, prayer service was in charge of A. E. Anderton and C. H. Foster, the latter presenting the theme, "What is your prayer for Israel?"

On the third Sunday of June Sunday school was held at 9 a. m., but the rest of the day the church was closed in order that the Saints of First Branch might attend the all-day services at Second Church dedication, President F. M. Smith being the speaker at 10.30 a. m., 2.30 p. m., and 7.30 p. m.

Sister Esther Gates, of Saint Louis, spent two weeks at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, C. W. Clark. She also journeyed to the Second Church. We hope her stay with us was such as will recall pleasant memories.

Prayer service on June 22 was conducted by Priests Elwood and Foster. There was a good attendance.

Brother Foster was the morning speaker on Sunday, the 26th. His topic was "A life of consecration," and his text, "A living sacrifice." In the evening L. C. Lewis spoke on "A lamp to our feet." Both meetings were well attended.

Brother Weate, musical director, and family journeyed to Middletown for the two-day meeting, leaving Brother Foster in charge. He in turn called upon Elder F. C. Welch's class to act as choir for the day, because most of the members of the regular choir were away. The response was unanimous. The young men and women did remarkably well and sang a special number in the evening. The Saints were not sparing in their praise of them. Brother Foster was afterwards moved to tears because of the spirit in which the effort was made. Don't stop, young people; let that effort be a stepping-stone.

At the last prayer service of June, Brother Foster had charge of the song service. The church was well filled with Saints and nonmembers come out to hear President F. M. McDowell. Before the meeting Sister C. E. Hammitt and Brother Roy Lucas were baptized by Elder A. E. Anderton in the church font. Elders McDowell and Anderton officiated at the confirmation.

The month of June has been a very busy one, but according to information at hand July will surpass it.

The Department of Women, superintended by Sister Fay Clark, is busy, taking flowers to the homes and hospitals, also having lectures at frequent intervals. The Temple Builders also are scheming to put on a surprise, and when it does materialize, all will enjoy it. The Y. P. A. is into everything and busy, as above account will show. Elder Welch and wife still play the role of good Samaritans, visiting the sick in their homes and in hospitals, nonmembers as well as members.

Work is the salt of life! Let us also in our lives be the salt of the earth.

Council Bluffs

Central Church, 307 West Pierce Street.

Belmont Mission Church, 1618 Avenue B.

Riverside Mission Church, 3100 Avenue C.

So far as we are informed, the Department of Women in every part is occupying its mission. Many visits are being made and encouragement given.

An outing for the boys was arranged and enjoyed at Manawa Lake during the month.

A district picnic was arranged by the Department of Recreation and Expression for the Fourth at the grove of John A. Hansen, where several of the members, young and old, of the branch gathered, and enjoyed association of those from other branches.

The sick of the branch are recovering, some in a remarkable way, to the praise and glory of God. The little son of Brother G. C. DeBar is at Iowa City to be operated on, with hopes that his deficiency of speech might be corrected.

The Bible class, conducted by J. F. Mintun as teacher, has assumed new life of late. On account of other services since the first of the year, but few sessions have been held.

Elder O. Salisbury, of Saint Joseph, preached for us Sunday, the 26th. His wife was renewing old associations.

The visits and labors of Apostle John F. Garver this month have brought about some good results. We are very sorry to see the servants of God so worn, and burdened with excessive labor. Their ministrations can not be so effective as when not so burdened.

Several of the young people of this branch have concluded that marriage is instituted of God for a blessing. They have not any idea that it will be a failure if they engage in it. Sisters Ruby M. Mefford, Ula Thomas, and Dorothy Steffen and Brother Conrad Booton have entered into that state. The two first have married those not of the faith whom they have considered worthy, and the two latter have established a home where they expect to demonstrate the righteousness that should prevail in a home of Saints.

Ruth I. Mintun spent the first week in June at the Religious Institute at Lamoni, Iowa, returning well satisfied at the results she obtained. She was also present at the marriage of her brother, Guy F. Mintun, to Miss Alice Street at Independence. She reports a pleasant visit with the many old acquaintances whom she was permitted to meet in the few days spent there.

Children's Day exercises were held at the two mission churches and Central Church, all of which are spoken of with pleasure. There were several baptisms and several children blessed. The solemnity of these occasions have left deep impressions on several of the Saints.

There is an expression of great disappointment on the part of many in hearing that it is thought best not to hold a reunion in the district this year, as decided would be done at the last reunion. Some have been preparing to attend this year because of the good time had last year; and when all arrangements had been made, to learn that there will not be any was somewhat of a shock to them.

Prayer meetings are better attended of late, and an excellent spirit is enjoyed by those in attendance. Still there is much room for improvement in both numbers and activity in the services that each could render who attend. We are looking for such improvement.

Several members from other branches and places outside of branches have moved into the city to make this their present home. An effort will be made to make them feel that they are among their brethren and sisters. In most cases, the spirit of faultfinding and doubt-creating is diminishing, and a more hopeful spirit is expressed by the Saints, some of whom have felt greatly depressed in spirit.

The Saints are looking forward with pleasant anticipations to the visit and ministrations of President Floyd M. McDowell next Sunday night.

Attleboro, Massachusetts

It has been some time since Attleboro has been heard from in the HERALD, but we are very much alive and have been quite busy these past few months. The Sunday school started off in January with an entertainment and social, each class contributing something toward the entertainment. On February 12 the annual roll call and anniversary supper was held. Brother Percy Wood has had charge of this for the past four years, and he has done his work so well that as each year rolls around we feel that we can not release him. On February 22, the Equality Club (a young men's club) held a ladies' night, inviting their wives or sweethearts to a bountiful chowder supper.

Easter Sunday evening a very beautiful cantata entitled, "The Prince of Life," was given by the choir under the direction of the pastor, Earle Bradshaw. The soloists were Mildred Heap, soprano; Lillian Parker, alto; Raymond Bradshaw, tenor; John Robertson, baritone.

The Mary E. Rogers Class of young women gave an entertainment in April for the benefit of the Improvement Fund, which is to be used for a new furnace and furnace room. Two short playlets were given, "Carpet rags" and "Cynthy and Silas a-courting." The sum of thirty dollars was realized.

The Ladies' Aid also gave a bean supper for the Improvement Fund, which was well patronized. They were enabled to contribute one hundred and twenty-one dollars. This was followed by an entertainment in May by the Recreation and Expression Department, for the same purpose, and about nineteen dollars was realized.

June 23 the Mary E. Rogers Class gave a Mothers' Party. Each member of the class brought a mother with her. After a very pleasing program, all retired to the lower auditorium, where all sat at prettily decorated tables to enjoy the bounties prepared by the young women. Each mother had a souvenir beside her plate. A good social time was enjoyed, and the mothers were again reminded of the gladness of their youth. The affair was in charge of Gertrude Robbins, Anna Baldwin, and Elsie Wood.

The pastor, Earle Bradshaw, who is also choir leader, was called out of the room one Friday night, and there in the hall he found a very large and beautiful May basket. It was a complete surprise to him, and the rehearsal was turned into a May-basket party. A game of indoor baseball was played, and the young women became quite skillful in this form of the national game.

I must not forget to say that the Sunday school held its picnic June 4. This was quite an event, owing to the fact that we planned a picnic at this particular place, Lincoln Wood, for two years but were unable to have it on account of rain. Providence Sunday school took pity on us last year and invited us to their picnic to be held in the same place, but we could not go as it rained. June 4 was a nice day until just as we were ready to go home, when the "aerial waterworks" sprang a leak, and we came home in the rain. But in spite of the rain, all had a fine time among the hills, fields, and woods.

Though we have been active in a social way, we have not forgotten that the spiritual activities are of the greatest importance. We have had some very spiritual meetings these past few months. The Lord has blessed us with his Spirit. A meeting which stands out in our memory was one in which we came fasting and praying for two of our members who were sick. It was strictly a prayer service, in which the Spirit of God was with us in power; in fact, we felt the assurance that angels were near, and the confirmation of the Spirit encouraged us to feel that our sick would be blessed, and they surely have been. One little girl, after speaking her piece on Easter, collapsed and had not been able to walk since that time because of a severe nervous trouble. She also lost the use of her voice. When she did partially receive her voice back, she asked her "daddy" to request the Saints to pray for her that she might be able to walk on her birthday, which came a few days later. The Saints did pray for her, and the following week she started to walk and today is not only walking, but running and talking also. Such is the faith of a little six-year-old child. She calls for the pastor to administer to her when she is sick.

Our pastor was called to our local hospital several times to administer to a young man not of our faith, who had been gassed in the war. He had never been to our church, but his brother was acquainted with one of our members, a brother who had been healed about a year ago of a condition which called for a surgical operation. This brother was healed instantly about a year ago. He told this young man about it, and the mother and brother asked our pastor to go to the hospital often to administer to him, which he gladly did, but it was not God's will to heal him.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are not as well attended as we desire to have them, but they have been of a high spiritual order, the Lord on occasions speaking comfort to those in need. We must speak of the faithfulness of one family. Brother Roy Churchill is captain of the South Attleboro Fire Department. He lives three miles away, but whenever his day off falls on Wednesday, he and his wife and six children can always be found at the service. The oldest boy is fifteen, and the youngest is four. Some of these children bear wonderful testimonies. David, fourteen, in his testimony gave a thought for a whole sermon to one of our elders. David wants to be an elder some day and preach the gospel, and we feel that the church beyond our branch here will some day hear from him. He has just graduated from grammar school and was president of the class. He spoke at the class banquet before the school board and other officials.

There have been some changes in our branch of late. Brother Ulysses Robbins and family have moved to Rochester, New York. Harold Bradshaw, one of our young men, and assistant secretary of the Sunday school, has just graduated from the Wentworth Institute, Boston, taking up a course in steam and electric power. He has accepted a position with the Adirondack Light and Power Company, at Amsterdam, New York. Lillian Siddall, one of our talented and faithful young women, has changed her name to Lillian Parker, and we hope some day that her husband will be added to our membership. Milton Bacheller has also yielded to Cupid's enticements and has taken a wife, thus adding another member to our branch.

The services at Onset have started, and many of our members who have cottages there attend the services in the large tabernacle. It seems like a preparatory Zion to be where the Saints live, pray, and play together for the summer months. How easy it is to do right in such an environment, but how soon we forget when the busy affairs of life again swallow us up! Let us go on trying to prepare ourselves for the great day when we can all say and feel that Zion is the pure in heart.

The Clinic Work in Lamoni

Doctor Sixberry, the baby specialist for our clinic, meets with us two afternoons each month, always full of the subject most interesting to the parents of small children. The Bureau of Education at Washington, District of Columbia, keeps us well supplied with literature; and as fast as they have a new pamphlet or chart printed it is mailed out to those interested in the welfare of the small child. They are good also to furnish posters and charts to be used in the clinic room.

We meet at 3.30 every Friday afternoon and have a regular attendance of about twenty. We have been delighted with the interest manifested on the part of the parents to respond. We run our clinic on the nonpay basis, and our goal is, Every child physically fit when he enters kindergarten. The parents respond well to advice. When the child needs correction they attend to it at once, choosing the physician they prefer. Where hospital care is necessary, the patient is taken to Iowa City, Des Moines, or Independence sanitariums.

We are catering now for the next two months to the five-year-old child, for we want to do our best to have them all physically fit before September or the beginning of the new school year. We wish there was a clinic in every locality throughout our entire church, for through the clinic work we hope to see a higher type of citizenship developed.

DONA CLARK HADEN.

Michigan and Ontario Young People

The international convention of the young people of Michigan and Ontario was held at Windsor, Ontario, July 1, 2, and 3. The weather was fine, only a little too warm to enjoy it very much. The interest manifested by all who attended showed a desire to develop in the line of church work and the line of the program of the church.

Class periods were enjoyed on Friday afternoon, Saturday, and Sunday morning. These classes were in charge of Elders F. M. McDowell of the First Presidency, who spoke on the subject of "Psychology and religion"; C. B. Woodstock, "The laws of teaching"; O. A. McDowell, "Stewardships"; T. S. Williams, "Bible appreciation." Of the missionary force, H. A. Koehler, James Pycoc, John Shields, and M. W. Liston.

Friday evening July 1 was celebrated as Canadian Night, in honor of the diamond jubilee of the Confederation of Canada. Professor S. Floyd Maine, of the University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, was the speaker. He carried his audience through an interesting historical treat of the pioneer life and Canada, and summed it up with a picture of her resources, her strategical location, and her power in world affairs in relationship to the British Empire. This address was both interesting and beneficial from every point of view, and those who heard it could not help but have a greater regard for our brothers on the north.

Saturday evening a banquet was held in the gym of the Prince Edward School, where all the meetings of the convention were held. Over two hundred were seated at the banquet table. The banquet was presided over by Carlisle Whitehead, of Pontiac, who introduced the undersigned as toastmaster of the evening. F. M. McDowell spoke on "Our social contribution," and response was made by Darrell

Campbell, of Windsor. C. B. Woodstock's subject was, "Our international church," and Miss Carpen, of London, responded. James Pycoc spoke of "Our active service," and response was made by W. L. Wood, of Windsor.

The prayer services, both Saturday and Sunday, showed a degree of activity very seldom seen in such gatherings. In forty-three minutes on Sunday, sixty testimonies and seven verses of song were sung, which is almost a record for such meetings. The testimonies were of a high order, and everyone expressed a desire to do his part in the work of the church.

Preaching Sunday at 2.30 was by F. M. McDowell and at 7.30 by C. B. Woodstock. The Windsor Saints presented a cantata at the Sunday evening service, which was enjoyed by all who were able to attend. The sermons were of a high order, and the convention closed with a fine spirit prevailing. Everyone who attended went home with a higher appreciation and regard for the church work in general.

The committee in charge was composed of Carlisle Whitehead, Pontiac, chairman; Earl V. Hill, Windsor, and Guy Armstrong, Detroit, registration; George Tomlinson and James Winegarden, London, and S. E. Mifflin, Essex, program; M. W. Liston, song leader and publicity. Over five hundred were registered, which showed an intensive interest in the work of the convention.

Flint, Michigan

521 Newall Street
1502 Jane Avenue
Baltimore Boulevard, 726

As a city and a church center, Flint is still prospering. The consecration of the membership is not as good as it should be, considering the many opportunities offered, but we have no complaint to make, as some are holding out well, keeping the branch alive so that as new life enters progress shall be made very rapidly. We appreciate the talent received from Graceland in the persons of the group of Graceland students. I think I have met all of them, but can not remember their names. Thus it is impossible for me to give their names to HERALD readers. Many of these students are working at nights, so we see very little of them except on Sundays.

Thus far the year has been a very busy one, and activity is expected to continue. Our reunion is near at hand, being July 21 to 31. The Central Michigan reunion held at Coleman is only eighty miles away, and is the home district of many of our members. Its date is August 5 to 14. Then there is the state young people's convention, held during the Northern Michigan reunion, August 12 to 21, at Park of the Pines, Boyne City, north side of Charlevoix Lake. The international convention held at Windsor last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, was well attended, and much good was learned in the short time of its session.

We have three church buildings in Flint. One is located at 521 Newall Street, and called Newall Street Church; another is found at 1502 Jane Avenue, called the Jane Avenue Church; as also is Baltimore Boulevard, 726.

Sunday evening, July 10, many will meet at the Newall Street Church to listen to the sacred cantata, "Daniel," by Bradbury.

The branch president, O. A. McDowell, moved recently. He is now residing at 2106 Mason Street. Phone 1552-R. The hours of church meeting are: Sunday school, 9.45 a. m.; preaching, 11 a. m., 7.30 p. m.; prayer service, Wednesday evening, 7.30; meeting of Department of Recreation and Expression, Friday, 7.45. All churches, including Mount Morris Mission, are uniform as to hours of meeting. We will have a business meeting July 11, which may change the time and order of meeting somewhat.

On July 9, Saturday evening, we are having a big supper. It is being held in part of a big church downtown. The place is the Saint Paul's Episcopal Parish House. A large crowd is expected, one thousand tickets having been printed. The Department of Women will serve the supper. This meal is called a relief and service supper, and the proceeds are to go to pay off a small mortgage of five hundred and fifty dollars. Also, it is to help the poor.

The Flint Branch does not believe in taking a vacation, for that is just what the Devil wants us to do; he never takes one and would be sure to be on the job if the Saints left an opening. While we are active in good works, Satan is bound. While some of the other churches are closed for the summer, we can be active and give those a chance who wish to hear us without missing their own services.

The following account is taken from the Flint branch paper, The Capsule, for July 1:

Successful Rally Day

The Department of Women held its first rally day last Monday, the 20th. The cradle roll mothers were entertained in the afternoon by Sister Harry Darling, superintendent. District supervisor, Sister H. A. Koehler, gave a talk to the mothers. Mrs. McKenzie, city nurse, talked about babies and their care. Sister C. H. Robertson read a paper on "Mother." Refreshments were served at the close of the program.

In the evening a potluck dinner was served to eighty, after which the audience was entertained by a fine program sponsored by the Temple Builders and Oracles of the city, assisted by Elder Koehler in leading the singing and Sister Koehler in a talk to the women and girls. Beautiful peonies, roses, and daisies added much to the decorations.

President Smith Visits Conference at Mount Vernon

The Southeastern Illinois District held its semiannual conference with Mount Vernon Branch June 24, 25, and 26. Most of the branches in the district were represented, and a large number was present.

On Friday night a program was given by the Mount Vernon young people, a play entitled "Farmer Brown's conversion to the doctrine of stewardship," which left a deep impression on the minds of the congregation. Farmer Brown was a member of the church, but one who was not keeping the temporal law. Finally, through the efforts of his wife and Bishop Do Good, he was converted to the law of stewardships.

On Saturday morning at nine o'clock, the conference opened with prayer meeting. Elders J. M. Henson, L. C. Moore, and John Lentell were in charge. The time was well spent, the Good Spirit being present and enjoyed by all.

Business session opened an hour later, the district presidency presiding. Reports were read, some of them being very encouraging, especially the report of the bishop's agent, which showed a large increase in tithes and offerings above the amount paid in last year. We believe that much was done toward advancing the work in southern Illinois.

The most outstanding feature of the conference was the dedication of the new church building in Mount Vernon. President F. M. Smith arrived at 6 p. m. Saturday and preached to a crowded house that night. Brother R. L. Fulk was in charge of this meeting and made announcements for the following day: Priesthood meeting, 8 a. m., President Smith in charge; Sunday school, 9.45, district officers in charge; dedicatory sermon, 11, by President Smith; young people's service, 2.30 p. m., at which President Smith was again the speaker, and at 7.45 in the evening he gave the concluding talk.

The Saints in Mount Vernon worked hard to arrange for the convenience of the large gathering. The district tent was set up by the side of the church, and arrangements were made with the radio engineers of Mount Vernon to equip the grounds and building with loud speakers and microphones, which proved a wonderful help. President Smith was heard several blocks away.

Attendance was estimated to be about six hundred people. The church building proved to be too small for the occasion, so the large tent and shade trees were used to great advantage. Southeastern Illinois was delighted to have President Smith present at its conference, this being his first time with us. His message was very inspiring and uplifting. He placed great stress upon making preparation for the gathering to Zion. As Lindbergh has spent most of his life in making preparation for his flight over the Atlantic, and thus became a master of the situation, so must the priesthood become masters of their work, making preparation for the great work now before us.

The Saints were very much encouraged and went to their homes with a greater determination to work onward and upward for the establishment of Zion.

Mount Vernon Saints have erected a beautiful church edifice in a beautiful part of the city. On June 28, 1925, the corner stone was laid. Brother John W. Rushton, of Saint Louis, was asked to come over and take charge of the laying of the stone. Mount Vernon Saints worked hard making preparations to have the indebtedness removed and met with success in doing so, having it dedicated two years from that day.

President Smith was very much pleased with the neatness of the building, and after looking over the city, said we had a wonderful place in which to spread the message of Christ. He said the building of the church in Mount Vernon was not a goal, but a step in advancement, which means progress.

Brother L. C. Moore is pastor of the Mount Vernon Branch. He has a splendid band of young people, enthusiastic and alive in the work.

President Smith left Monday evening with Brethren Fulk and Lentell, to visit Brush Creek Branch. There he met a large crowd, about four hundred people. He was very much impressed with Brush Creek Branch, as it was organized in 1842 and never was disorganized through the dark and cloudy day of the apostasy. He told the Saints there that they should make that place attractive, as it is one of the old historic places of the church, and that visitors would come from various places just as they do to Nauvoo, Kirtland, and elsewhere. The district has a permanent reunion ground there, and our reunion will begin August 19, continuing to August 28. We hope to have a large crowd and a splendid reunion.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Seventh and Lottie Streets

The work in Oklahoma City Branch is progressing encouragingly in spite of the extremely hot weather of the past few weeks. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was with us on Sunday, June 26, and preached twice for us. After the eleven o'clock service we went to the State Fair Grounds, a few blocks east of the church, where we had a picnic dinner. At two o'clock we engaged in a prayer and testimony meeting, and at half past four Brother Gleazer made a short talk to the priesthood. The Religio Department had its meeting at the regular hour, 6.30, in charge of Superintendent A. H. Wilson, and Brother Gleazer preached for us again in the evening.

The young girls of our branch have organized a Temple Builder chapter under the supervision of Sister Dorothy Hanthorne. On Thursday evening, June 23, they gave an informal dinner in a grape arbor in the rear of the home of Sister Grace Scott for the purpose of paying their dues, charging fifty cents per plate. In this way they succeeded in raising about thirteen dollars.

We are always glad to have out-of-town Saints and friends visit us. We hold Sunday school services at 9.45 every Sunday, preaching at 11, Religio services at 6.30, and preaching again at 8 o'clock; also prayer meeting every Wednesday evening. Our church is located at Seventh and Lottie Streets. To reach it by street car, take the Fair Grounds car to Eighth and Lottie, and walk one block south.

H. B. HANTHORNE.

Coffeyville, Kansas

The Coffeyville Branch was very sorry to lose Brother Howard P. Anderson, who July 1 took charge of the J. C. Penney Store at Independence, Missouri. We certainly appreciate the splendid work he did here, and our best wishes go with him.

A short business meeting was held Friday, June 24. Brother G. G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, was elected branch president to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Brother Anderson. Brother O. E. Pender was ordained to the office of priest on the same evening.

Following the business meeting Brother Anderson and his wife received many useful gifts from the members of the branch. After the presentation, ice cream and cake were enjoyed by all.

On Saturday, June 25, Brother Anderson baptized three children.

Brother Ford, of Parsons, occupied the pulpit here Sunday, June 12, and on that day Brother Anderson preached at Parsons. We enjoyed the message delivered by Brother Ford, and hope that he can visit us again soon.

Brother Clarence Ward, formerly of Coffeyville, but now residing at Independence, Kansas, was a recent branch visitor.

Vinal Haven, Maine

July 3.—Today is sacrament Sunday, and the Saints were blessed with a good Spirit. All expressed a desire to be faithful and loyal to Jesus, to carry out his plans in the establishment of Zion.

As a branch we are blessed in having with us at each church service Evangelist U. W. Greene and wife; also their young grandson, Junior. They are all a blessing to us. Brother Greene preaches each Sunday at eleven o'clock, also at seven in the evening. In the near future, he will be preaching around at the homes. The Saints are desirous of cooperating with Brother Greene in these cottage meetings and all phases of the work.

The Saints held a Fourth of July celebration, and all the sports of the day such as baseball, pole vaulting, and running races for boys and girls were under their direction. Elder Greene delivered an excellent Fourth of July oration which was a part of the day's program. The attendance was large.

Vinal Haven Saints now have in mind the reunion to be held in Brooksville, Maine, in August, and hope all church members who live in Maine will do their best to come to the grounds and enjoy themselves in a season of spiritual advancement and recreation.

We are planning the reunion trip at present and hope all will do likewise, for the Lord says, Let everything be prepared beforehand.

Elder U. W. Greene leaves to spend the week-end in Rockland, but will return soon. We do appreciate having Brother and Sister Greene in the branch, because both of them are good church workers. Brother Greene has had good attendance at each preaching service and is arousing interest with Saints and those not in the faith.

The Sunday school is getting along very well under the supervision of Sister Elizabeth Barton, with an extra large attendance as compared with last year. We are hoping the good work will grow, that all the young people about us may be Saints.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is having success, with Ralph Candage as president, and the church has a playground for the young people. It is the only public playground in town, and we are hoping in this way to reach the youth and carry the gospel to all. Let us provide for our youth the future blessings for all as well as the present.

Sioux City, Iowa

610 Center Street

July 12.—Yes, Sioux City is noted for its stock trade, its modern stock yards, and packing plants. Not much is said in newspapers and year books in regard to Sioux City about the work which is being done at 610 Center Street; but nevertheless at this location a work is being done which is second to none in importance—and this statement does not bar the thought of juicy beef steak and sizzling pork chops. The location of our Latter Day Saint church is 610 Center Street.

There have been a number of happenings in our branch in the past few months to give us reason to feel that our branch, in relation to the whole church, is of importance and is progressing. We feel that the work of our pastor, Elder G. Scott Daniel, who was appointed to this branch the latter part of last year, has been the chief factor in our forward movement.

Some time ago our branch voted to adopt the coordination plan, and at our last business meeting, June 15, some business items in regard to this plan were transacted. A financial budget providing for all of our branch departments and activities was presented by the budget committee and approved by the body. The total amount for the fiscal year beginning July 1, is $1,558.

Two groups of the Department of Women, doing practically the same work, agreed to a consolidation and reorganization, hoping by uniting their efforts to do better and more effective work. As a result of this reorganization Sister G. Scott Daniel was elected as superintendent of the department, with Sister W. H. Dickey assistant and Sister A. A. Johnson secretary.

A recommendation of the pastor, having the approval of the priesthood, giving two names for the office of priest and three names for the office of deacon, was presented to the branch. Each name was presented separately, and all were approved, subject to the action of the district conference. They are, for the office of priest Sanford Vandel and Raymond Haycox, and for the office of deacon Richard Sheetz, Frederick Vandel, and George Vandel. The district conference on July 9 unanimously approved of the suggested ordinations.

Children's Day, June 12, was observed at both morning and evening services. The eleven o'clock hour was given over to a special children's sermon by Pastor Daniel. Brother Daniel has held other junior church services for the children, and his talks at these services have always been beneficial to the young people. "The awakening," a story cantata, was given by the children at the eight o'clock hour, and it was enjoyed by both the children giving it and the audience. The theme of the story was the giving of a children's party by the "King of the world," assisted by "Mother Nature," who gathered all the flowers, plants, butterflies, and birds to teach the children God's lessons found in nature. The costumes representing the various flowers, birds, and butterflies were both unique and beautiful and added much to the performance. The music for the cantata was furnished by a chorus of young people. The children's program was under the able direction of a committee composed of Sister Raymond Haycox, Sister A. A. Johnson, and Sister C. J. Smith.

Our Sunday school is holding its own, even with the hot weather present and a number vacationing. We have a well-organized and progressive Sunday school, but we are always on the lookout for improvements.

The Religio, under the direction of Frederick Vandel, is endeavoring to be useful to the young people of the branch. The hour of meeting is 6.45 Sunday evenings, and the majority of classes study the Book of Mormon. One feature of entertainment and instruction offered by the Religio is a series of lectures by prominent business men of Sioux City. The first lecture was given by Doctor Bellaire, an X-ray expert who illustrated his lecture with interesting X-ray pictures. The second lecture was given by Mr. Bonsteil, a Sioux City banker. He gave us some very good business and spiritual advice.

We lost a faithful member in the passing of Brother William Gernhart on June 29. Funeral services were held at the church July 1; the sermon by the pastor, assisted by Charles J. Smith.

Mrs. Moveta Harris, a member of the Sunday school and daughter of Brother and Sister Dave Farris, passed away July 2 at the Methodist Hospital. Funeral services were held at the church July 5; sermon by Charles J. Smith, assisted by the pastor. Those who are thus called to mourn have the sympathy and prayers of the Saints.

RAYMOND HAYCOX.

Northeastern Missouri District Conference

District conference, held at Macon, June 26 and 27, was one of the best held for several years. It seemed a little strange to start conference on Sunday, for it had always before started on Saturday. We had Sunday school at 9.30 a. m. in charge of local officers. At eleven Elder W. B. Richards preached to a good-sized audience. It was a treat to hear Brother Richards after his being away from the district for two years or more. He was on his vacation and visiting relatives and friends at Bevier and Macon.

At the close of the service several of the Saints went in cars to one of the city parks, where Elder S. J. Joyce administered the ordinance of baptism to Mrs. Vera Peaslea and Miss Clara Shelmadine. When we returned to the church, the sisters of the Macon Branch had a large table filled with things good to eat. Each one took a plate and helped himself.

At 2.30 in the afternoon we met for social and sacramental service. Sister Peaslea was confirmed by Elders W. B. Richards and Moroni Traxler and Sister Shelmadine by J. W. Peterson and Ben S. Tanner. A splendid feeling prevailed throughout the meeting.

Sister Mary Jones, district chorister, conducted a song and musical service, beginning at half past seven in the evening. Sister Jones is a good leader and does her work well; the service in her charge was pleasingly presented.

The evening's sermon was by Elder J. W. Peterson. It was a good discourse and had a fine reception from the audience.

On Monday at 2.30 in the afternoon Brother Peterson gave the Saints a splendid talk on stewardship, and several expressed themselves as understanding it better than they ever did before.

At 7.30 the district president called the assembly to order, and after song and prayer Sister Jones conducted another song service. She was assisted by the Baptist Church quartet, also a quartet of musicians from the Macon Band. Two little girls were on the program, one playing the piano, the other singing, and a little five-year-old boy sang one number and gave a reading. These were all nonmembers. In behalf of the conference, Brother Tanner thanked them for their offerings. The business passed off very nicely, and all felt that they had been benefited by being at the conference. We expected Apostle Garver, but for some reason he did not arrive.

North Platte, Nebraska

July 12.—The annual election of branch officers was held here June 26. Officers selected were: President, E. R. Sivits; priest, W. L. Sivits; teacher, J. F. Payne; deacon, John Payne; organist, Mrs. Ardis Richards; chorister, Mrs. J. R. Baskias; publicity agent, Mrs. Ardis Richards; clerk, Glen Sivits. This is the first time in the history of the branch that there has been a full quota of officers.

We are now holding our Sunday school services in the Adventist Church, located on the corner of Tenth and Willow Streets.

The branch is looking forward to the coming of the district reunion to be held here, beginning July 22.

MRS. ARDIS RICHARDS.

Oelwein, Ohio

Early in June Elder Leonard Houghton, of the Kewanee District, visited us on his way back from Iowa City, where he attended the graduating exercises of his son. He preached several sermons and by his genial presence and unflinching cheerfulness made every member in this branch feel that he was indeed one of the anointed ones, God's chosen servant, to promote peace and harmony wherever he went. We say in biblical language: "Long live Brother Houghton; may he live and flourish like a bay tree, and may his shadow never grow less."

Brother McFarlane and family have been visiting in Montana for three weeks, and we certainly miss them, as all were active members in the branch, Brother George as pastor, and his wife and sister-in-law as teachers in the Sunday school. They are having a most enjoyable time, judging from the cards and letters sent from them there.

The following is taken from the society news of The Clinton Advertiser of June 28: "At a pretty home ceremony solemnized this afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Vickerstaff, 508 First Avenue, Miss Esther Anna Vickerstaff, daughter of George Vickerstaff, became the bride of Charles Stuart Shippy, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Shippy, of Oelwein. Miss Vickerstaff was attended by Miss Marie Shippy, sister of the bridegroom. John Lippert, of Oelwein, was the best man. The wedding ceremony was performed in the presence of fifty relatives by Elder C. A. Beil, of the Reorganized Church. Preceding the ceremony B. A. Leonard and Cecil Rasmussen played, 'I love you truly,' as a violin duet. The bridal party assembled to the strains of Wagner's 'Wedding march.' With the violins muted, they played softly during the ceremony, 'With all my heart,' and also played during the informal reception following the ceremony. The fireplace was beautifully banked with palms, roses, and daisies. A profusion of flowers, pink and white, were used throughout the rooms. After a motor trip through Chicago, Lansing, and other northern points, Mr. and Mrs. Shippy will be home to their friends at a new home in Oelwein at 715 Second Avenue, N. E. Mrs. Shippy is a graduate of the Clinton high school and attended the University of Iowa for a year. During the past few years she has taught in the Kirkwood school. She is head of the Department of Women for this district. Mr. Shippy is in the concrete product business at Oelwein, and is a priest in the Oelwein Branch. Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Shippy and Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Shippy, of Oelwein, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hill and family and Mr. and Mrs. Blakely and daughter, of Shafter, Mr and Mrs. Ed. Layton and Mrs. Oscar Guster, of Moline."

Brother Kress made a flying visit here last week. He has promised to come back before long for a series of sermons. In the little town of Stanley, near Oelwein, are several people who are very much impressed with the Latter Day Saint doctrine and wish Elder Kress to preach again to them. We hope the seed sown in good ground may grow and that the harvest may be great.

Attendance has been small at the weekly meetings, but we notice that the faithful few are always there. May God bless and prosper the ones who never fail to come unless sickness hinders, who are ever ready to keep the gospel banner floating.

The intermediate class of Sunday school is to put on the program for Friday night's Religio, a dialog and some songs.

Reunion at Clinton is close at hand now, and we hope for a good attendance. We know this is the Lord's work, and these meetings should be well attended. Saints should make every effort possible to be on hand at reunion time. We can not overestimate the good that each one may derive from the meetings, sermons, talks, and entertainment provided. We have most excellent men on the program for sermons, Brother Garver and Brother Woodstock, who are sure to have a crowd of attentive listeners.

Now is the time for hikes and picnics. We have had several picnics lately, a picnic for the whole Sunday school and one for individual classes. The primary class had a most enjoyable picnic with their teacher, Mrs. Ruby McFarlane. And the intermediate class is planning a hike and a wiener roast.

We feel thankful for the papers of the church. There is much excellent reading in them all, and we think we are blessed to have the good food for reflection that they offer. A true Saint should not be without one or more of the church papers. They keep us in touch with the whole grand system of the church work, and with our noble leaders. We can not converse with them, but we can get their ideas through sermons and sketches in our church paper.

I wonder how many are taking The Departments' Journal? It is small in size, but oh, the good things to be found there! In looking it over this month, one feels that a mighty hand and power is behind our work. We feel that Brother McDowell has some excellent ideas on the subject, "What is America's greatest problem?" The prayer given under the heading, "Our institute," is one of the most earnest and heartfelt ones I have heard and certainly expresses the real feeling of all true Zion workers. "The family finger play" is something quite new and unique for small children. Mrs. L. S. Wight's "Vacation! A time of opportunity for the home," contains some excellent ideas which every mother should know. "Lure of the open road," by Mrs. Lenoir Woodstock, makes one fairly want to be out hiking and taking meals in the open air, playing games, blazing trails, treasure hunting, and all the active pleasures in which the young people delight. Brother C. B. Woodstock's article, "A first rate school," is one that if followed would produce a model Sunday school, but the general run of Sunday school superintendents do not study this problem very attentively. We should all do our best to pattern after this model presented by Brother Woodstock. "Leadership." What a quantity of qualifications have been presented by E. E. Closson in his article on "Leadership," but they are ones that are well chosen and worthy the careful study of all persons, especially those in charge of classes and schools.

Some of the good things in the Ensign are "The why of language," "Learning from Lindbergh," by J. F. Garver. "The words of eternal life," by U. W. Greene. We who have radios are familiar with Brother Greene's sermons. We also like "Do your part," by Charles H. Arven. There are many little trite sayings in it, such as "Idleness is the bane to industry. Everyone of us must contribute his or her part to the maintenance of human life. All work that benefits and is progressive to the human race is God's work."

In the first part of the letter, I forgot to mention the enjoyable sociable held at the Fred Preplow residence in the country last month. The Religio held its regular lesson session, after which a short program was given. Then many games were played in the yard, for the evening was very pleasant. Later ice cream and cake were served, and the company departed feeling that Brother and Sister Preplow were most hospitable.

I feel that in order to have a right to the tree of life we must do His commandments. As John said in Revelation 22:14, 15: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."

All-Day Meeting at Elkhart, Indiana

An all-day meeting was held at the home of Brother and Sister Willsey, 2245 Morton Avenue, Elkhart, Indiana, on Sunday, June 12. The weather was fine, and Saints began to gather early. By 9.30 forty people had come together. The first service was at ten o'clock, a prayer and testimony meeting. The Spirit was there in power. And as each one had brought a basket of good things to eat, at 12.30 dinner was served, being greatly enjoyed by all.

At half past two Brother Freeman, of South Band, Indiana, spoke to us, and he was blessed with the Spirit. At the close of the meeting he announced that he would speak to us again at seven o'clock, so we all assembled again at that hour and listened to a fine discourse.

This was our first meeting of this kind held at Elkhart, and we wish to extend our thanks to all who came and spent the day. We are only a few and are doing our little bit to get the good work established in this place.

Any Saints passing through Elkhart will always find a welcome at the home of Brother and Sister R. R. Walter, 117 Brady Street, just four blocks west of the post office, and at Brother and Sister N. Willsey's, 2245 Morton Avenue, near car barn. We hold study class at 2245 Morton Avenue, Friday nights at 7.45, and have a nice attendance. If any Saints think of moving here, we shall be glad to answer questions.

R. R. WALTER.

ELKHART, INDIANA, 117 Brady Street.

Woodbine, Iowa

607 Weare Street

July 9 and 10 the Little Sioux district conference was held in our branch. Much instruction was given along the line of development of talent and therefore greater efficiency on the part of the Saints. It was estimated that more than three hundred were served dinner on Sunday in the church basement, while a number of families and friends took their dinners to the city park and enjoyed the noon hour together.

Wedding bells have recently been ringing. Sister Agnes Jenkins was married to Mr. Ralph Roundy, and Brother Fredric Oviatt to Miss Mildred Smith. We wish these young people much happiness through the coming years of life together.

The children gave a very nice program at the Sunday school hour on Children's Day, the decorations being a lovely background of pine boughs, pink peonies, and roses.

But real purity and beauty were manifest at the afternoon service when five children were baptized, thus acknowledging Christ as their Savior. Elder D. A. Holcomb officiated, the meeting being in charge of the Sunday school superintendent, Elder George Young. And as the horizon intercepted our vision of that heavenly body of which the celestial glory is a type, we could but feel that we had reached "the end of a perfect day."

Brother Frank Fry, a Graceland student, is vacationing at home, and we very much appreciate his help along different lines of service. Not long ago he gave us a sermon which was right to the point on duties of the Saints. Others have given us much food for thought along this line.

Sister Helen Jackson is home from Graceland and will teach at Boyer, Iowa, this year.

Several of our young people attended the institute held at Lamoni and report an educational and enjoyable meeting.

The Orioles are very busy in their efforts to raise funds that they may attend the Missouri Valley reunion. In the near future they will give a program, which is to be followed by a pie social.

The Temple Builders and Orioles in the Dunlap Mission are also looking forward to attending the reunion.

The workers at this mission are trying hard to interest the young in the church work by giving them clean recreation and entertainment as well as an opportunity to attend Sunday school and Religio. Only a small per cent of the younger members of the Sunday school belong to the church.

Dowagiac, Michigan

July 13.—Dowagiac and vicinity is, at this time of year, a scene most beautiful and seems most sure to be that of God's own handwork. This is all for the Saints to enjoy, and at present they seem to be enjoying the surroundings with the many beautiful lakes and groves beside the Spirit of the Master. All are looking forward to the reunion at Indian Lake, where they can meet in a group to enjoy the many good things that are in store there.

Our place of worship is at Buchanan, Michigan, which is twenty miles distant, and the Saints gather there from Bridgman, Niles, Galien, Berrien Springs, and other places throughout the country. The Seventh Day Adventists have kindly opened their doors for our services at a very small cost. The meetings are well attended considering the distance the Saints have to come.

The Sunday school is an inspiration, and though few in number young and old are interested. We hope to strive for larger attendance.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is under the supervision of Elder J. W. McKnight, of Galien, and this is also coming along in fine shape. The group is now divided into two classes, the senior group taking the Book of Mormon for study, and the young people, the church history, young people's edition. This department held a wiener roast and party at Clear Lake two weeks ago, and the outing was enjoyed by a good number. We look for the department to increase in number, as there are a few nonmembers who are interested and have expressed their desire to come and learn of the church books.

Elder McKnight preaches at the eleven o'clock hour on an average of every two weeks. He also has charge of the Galien Branch and is called to many other places, so we are glad to have him as much as we do. Sunday, July 10, he preached on the gifts of the gospel, and this was an inspiring sermon. We shall be glad to have traveling elders pay us a visit any time it is convenient for them to do so.

We are sorry to lose Brother and Sister Vaughn Rishel and family from our midst, as they were very active in attendance and always on the job to do. They moved to South Bend, Indiana.

It was reported that Sister Roakley, at Bridgman, is up and around the house, and all are feeling very much encouraged over her condition.

Sister Burgoyne and Sister Meyers and family, of Bridgman, have been very active in Sunday school, church, and Religio activities. We are glad to see them come; and they, too, come about seventeen miles.

We would be glad to have any of the Saints passing through Buchanan stop and attend our services. Just ask for the Seventh Day Advent Church, where we hold our meetings.

It is our desire to serve. Inasmuch as we are permitted to do but little just now, we are looking forward to better conditions in this part of the country. Work at the present is not being found.

Lamoni Stake

Allendale

On Sunday, July 10, the branch at Allendale held an all-day meeting and basket dinner. The mercury was soaring in the nineties, and the little frame church had the full glare of the July sun beating mercilessly; yet the faithful members came to the "old stamping ground" for four services, beginning with Sunday school at 9.45.

The stake president, Wilber Prall, drove thirty-one miles from Lamoni, bringing with him those who furnished special music. What a useful means of transportation in caring for the various branches of the stake is this car that he drives. He often takes two elders along to supply two appointments, while he fills a third and picks them up on his return.

In this case he spoke to a fine audience at 11 a. m. and returned to Lamoni for a funeral at 2.30. No preacher could ask for better attention than was given him here, as he pictured the illusions, dangers, and losses of those who answer "The call of the far country." It was in story form and held the attention and reached the hearts of young and old. The Saints regretted he could not speak at 2 p. m., according to program, and hope Brother Prall can come again soon.

A well-prepared dinner was soon spread by the Allendale sisters, whom the visitors voted as experts in that line. The centerpiece attracted some attention. It was a large four-decker cake with candles in the form of the letter "W"—sixty of them. This was a reminder to Elder Gomer Wells, their temporary pastor, that this day, July 10, was his birthday. In thanking the two ladies who baked the cake, he also read a letter of congratulation from President Frederick M. Smith, expressing confidence in Brother Wells and wishing him many more successful years in his ministry.

Brother Wells spoke at 2 p. m., taking as his subject "The barren fig tree." This service was mercifully cut as short as possible on account of heat, for there isn't any shade to help out. At a quarter of three, the autos were carrying the crowd to the quiet and cool home retreats, and to do the chores, for most of them are farmers.

At night Elder H. H. Gold, who had ministered to Lamoni Saints at the morning hour, was on hand to deliver the last address, after a short song service and some special music. The little church was still hot, but all gave the speaker good attention as he spoke on "Casting up the highway." (Isaiah 62:10.) Brother Gold's car took Lamoni visitors home.

At about 9 p. m. the Saints were on their way rejoicing, for most of them felt that the good spiritual impulses received made the effort worth while in spite of the heat.

Those furnishing special music were: Miss Ardine Byers, Graceland student, who sang and played accompaniments; Brother Woodrow Wilson, our ten-year-old prodigy of Allendale, who sang sweetly, "Somewhere a voice is calling," his sister, Miss Carmeta, accompanying; and Mrs. G. R. Wells of Lamoni sang several solos and participated in duets. Brother Wells conducted the singing for all services. Sister Aubrey Wilkinson, of Allendale, assisted in "The glory song" in the evening service.

Brother and Sister L. E. Ivie, living northeast of Lamoni, formerly members of the Allendale Branch, picked up their SAINTS' HERALD from the mail box as they started to their own Sunday school. In this they read the notice of the all-day meeting here and decided at once to drive down and see their old friends, who were pleased to see them.

Lamoni

The communion service at the Brick Church on Sunday, July 3, was an exceptionally good meeting. The Spirit of God permeated the service, from the singing of the opening hymn until the close. A much larger number than usual participated in testimony during the service. Many bore strong testimonies of their faith in the church and its forward movement and expressed their desires to assist in the work.

The evening service was held in the church park, and the program was of a patriotic nature. The Lamoni Band played several patriotic selections. Byron Roberts read the poem, "A patriotic wish"; an octet sang, "America the beautiful"; and Emily Anthony gave the reading "A soldier." This was followed by a sermon by Elder Wilber Prall on the theme "Our Nation."

Summer Choir

During the college year Lamoni boasts of the largest choir in Iowa, but until this year little has been said of the summer choir. As a result of Brother Prall's efforts, a choir of about eighty has been organized, with Franklyn Weddle as director. Lamoni is fortunate in being able to persuade Franklyn to spend his summer in Lamoni.

The choir decided they needed "recreation" as well as "expression," so they planned a picnic to Creston last Monday afternoon. The fine community spirit of Lamoni was shown by the men of the town donating cars to take the choir to Creston. The picnic was held in McKinley Park, which is located on a little lake. Most of the afternoon was spent swimming. Hamburgers were fried, and the usual picnic menu was served, with plenty of brick ice cream and cake for dessert. After supper the sixty-mile drive home was especially enjoyable.

The choir and their director appreciate Brother Prall's deep interest in their activities. Even though he doesn't sing, he is usually at the rehearsals, giving encouragement and praise.

Young People's Prayer Meeting

The young people of the Lamoni Branch enjoyed their second picnic this summer on the reunion grounds on Wednesday evening, July 13. They met at the church at five o'clock and were taken to the grounds in cars. Upon their arrival they engaged in games for a time, and this was followed by a picnic supper. After supper they gathered in a group and were seated on car cushions for the prayer service, which opened promptly at eight o'clock. The meeting was of a high spiritual order, and the young people returned home in good spirits.

Lees Summit, Missouri

July 14.—On Wednesday night, June 8, the Saints of Lees Summit in their quarterly business meeting voted to have junior services once a month. The first of these will be Sunday, July 17. This is the first time they have had junior church here. We are wishing it to be successful, as it is a part of the church program.

Sunday morning, June 12, we had a Children's Day program during the eleven o'clock hour.

We are having junior choir practice once a week.

Sunday, June 26, was our annual home-coming day. Prayer meeting began at eight o'clock in the morning. Brother Scarcliff talked during the Sunday school hour. The eleven o'clock hour was occupied by Bishop J. A. Becker, of Independence. A basket dinner was had on the church lawn at noon. At two, ten-minute talks from all our ex-pastors present were enjoyed, and at seven the young people gave the play, "The challenge of the cross." It was very impressive and was enjoyed by all. Brother H. V. Minton, of Warrensburg, preached an excellent sermon at the regular evening preaching service. Total attendance for the day was one hundred and thirty-five.

Sunday, July 3, the young people of our Religio went to Woods Chapel, a community church in the Woods Chapel neighborhood. We gave a program of readings, vocal numbers, and violin solos. Brother Martin, of Independence, is in charge of the work there.

The Saints had a social at the home of Pastor Harding on Friday evening, July 8. The Y. P. Religio class used their new volley ball and net. They had a fine time playing with it. They were given all the ice cream and cake they could eat and reported a very good time.

Independence

Stone Church

Doctor G. Leonard Harrington, who several weeks ago returned from study in Europe, was the eleven o'clock speaker in the Stone Church pulpit Sunday morning. This was the first time since his return that Doctor Harrington has addressed Saints in the Stone Church, and all were glad to hear him once again. The morning's discourse was the first of a series of three; the remaining two will be delivered Sunday mornings, July 24 and 31. His topic, "On some general aspects of laws," proved to be one of decided interest to every listener.

In part he said: "One can not but be thrilled when he considers the greatness of laws. An astronomer by the study and application of laws can tell us years and years ahead when a certain eclipse is going to occur. Does it not thrill you to think in this world there are groups of laws that we can depend upon? When we serve a law, it serves us; then we are in position to control the matter. This makes the law beneficial and useful to us. It pays to follow the law. We are always driven by a safety motive, a desire to be saved. This is a perfectly normal thing. In infancy we are helpless, dependent upon those about us, and sometimes parents continue to do things for their children that the children should do for themselves. One of the laws of learning is to exercise with satisfaction. Doing this we learn. People, presumably adults, are not adults because some one else has done their work for them, has made their decisions. They have not fullness of self-expression; they are inhibited. Contact with other individuals is important. The first thing for us as parents is to learn something about our job, and yet we pass by the possibility of building up a piece of statuary akin to Jesus Christ for some other thing that is secondary. Law is a severe taskmaster; we have to worship at his shrine, obey him exactly, or we do not get results. Jesus Christ spent his life trying to get us acquainted with the law, that we may live not as slaves of law but as friends to it. To accomplish great things, however, we must have more than a knowledge of laws; we must have the spiritual element within us, faith. Many great men have had faith; Columbus had it, Cyrus Field, Lindbergh.

"Two points given by Doctor Fosdick, in one of his sermons, are: We are making out of God a messenger; and everything is for us if we only take it, if we only know how to use it. It is no wonder we have been commanded to 'pray always.'" Sometimes I think scientists are greater religionists than religionists are religionists, because they do not take chances as we ordinary mortals do. They must worship God exactly to get the desired results.

"How do we interpret law? Do we obey the letter and forget the spirit of law? The person who gets anywhere in life is the man who, when asked to run one mile, will run two; besides being on time, he will put his whole heart into the work. If we want to gain a life, to accomplish some task, we must lose ourselves in working toward the goal. It is a good thing to follow the mandates of the still small voice, but we should use discrimination. Accomplishment is brought about, not by satisfying our feelings, but by sublimating them."

Music for the morning service was supplied by the Stone Church Ladies' Quartet composed of Thelma Vincent, Jeanette Kelley Craig, Hazel Koehler Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind. They sang two beautiful selections. Robert Miller presided at the organ and Miss Mary Okerlind at the piano. Elder W. B. Paul offered the invocation and benediction.

At the Campus

"Lord, we come before thee now," opened the evening service at the Campus Sunday evening. The orchestra accompanied the congregation in this song as well as the preceding song service, led by Elder John F. Sheehy. An earnest prayer was offered by Elder W. A. Smith, and Brother D. O. Cato, in charge of the service, introduced "the optimistic missionary," Elder Hubert Case.

For his text Brother Case took from the Inspired Version Matthew 6:38: "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you," and proceeded to explain of what the kingdom of heaven consists, using Matthew 3 and Luke 16:16: "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," was the cry of John in the wilderness. Christ and his disciples taught that the kingdom of heaven was come. Today we have the kingdom of heaven. Its representatives, the ministry, go with God-given authority to the people and tell them of the beauties and blessings of that kingdom. There are those in the church who are not awake to the fact that they have the opportunity to be active members in the kingdom of God. There are many who are not putting the kingdom of God first in their lives. We are called with a heavenly calling, as no other people; we should not say anything to dishearten. We ought to speak good, not evil. It is our task to build, not to tear down; to do constructive work. "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God." This is the biggest thing on earth today. We have the challenge; we can not afford to disregard the thousands of opportunities to serve. Let us obey the command of God, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God," and we shall have love, joy, and peace.

A reel, "Saint Paul, the Apostle," was shown following the sermon, and this was also enjoyed by the large and attentive audience.

On Tuesday evening, July 12, the second of the four programs planned to be given by the Department of Recreation and Expression was presented on the outdoor platform at the Campus. The entertainment was short and well-rendered, consisting of "a" and "b" numbers by the Ladies' Quartet: Thelma Vincent, Jeanette Craig, Hazel Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind. There were "a" and "b" readings by Allegra Luff, "The little girl taking her music lesson," and "Papa and son." The audience enjoyed several minutes of community singing, and Brother J. M. Terry closed the meeting with prayer.

The next program will be given in the evening of August 9, and officers of the department will be pleased to see a larger crowd present to receive the contributions of those who take part than has witnessed the first two efforts of this season. Recreational activities are progressing encouragingly, there being a large crowd of young people out each Tuesday evening to take part in games on the lawn or ball courts.

Rain Saturday morning and evening prevented the usual Saturday night crowd's gathering at the Campus for the show.

Interesting Personals

During President F. M. Smith's eleven-day stay at the Independence Sanitarium, two hundred and sixty-six Saints and friends have called upon him in his room, and two hundred and ten more have been on the porch, making a total of four hundred and seventy-six visitors. Monday morning he was taken home to recuperate for three or four days, when he will leave on church business for the East and South.

Jewel and Lilly Carson, Indian girls, were baptized in the Stone Church fount, by Elder Hubert Case, Sunday afternoon.

A son was born to Brother and Sister A. B. Church, 1410 West Walnut Street, July 12, at the Independence Sanitarium.

Orra J. Rothwell, of Independence, and Miss Inez E. Blystone, of Eldorado Springs, Missouri, were married Sunday, July 17, at the home of the bride's parents, Brother and Sister Jess Blystone. Elder John W. Joyes, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. Following the wedding dinner, the young couple left for Independence, where they will make their home. Mrs. Rothwell has worked in Kansas City for several months, making her home in Independence. Mr. and Mrs. Rothwell are both members of the Stone Church Sunday school.

Campus Summer School Prepares to Close

Friday afternoon, July 22, summer school children have planned a great closing for their school. They feel that they went to share some of their joys of the summer with others. At 2 p. m. there will be a field meet for the children of the entire city, Eugene Closson, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, in charge. There will be races, stunts, games for which prizes will be given to winners. From 4 o'clock until 5 exhibit of handcraft work will be open to visitors at the Institute Building. At 5 p. m. President Floyd M. McDowell will talk to the children. Something new! Can he "Depend on you"? The remainder of the program is as follows: At 6 p. m., picnic lunch, everyone bring lunch; 6.30 to 7.30 exhibit of handcraft work of summer school in Institute Building. This is your last chance to see the exhibit; be sure to visit the display. At 7.30 a program will be given by summer vacation school of religious education. Following the program the pupils may claim handwork. All parents are invited.

The faculty feels that this has been a successful summer with the children. Appreciation from the parents shows that much of the training is being carried into actual life at home.

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. Sunday, a children's program arranged by Mrs. Ethel Moorman took the air. Features of the program included a piano solo by Margaret Lowrey; violin duet, Helen Moorman and Kenneth Collins; vocal solo, Phyllis Moorman; girls' chorus of the Walnut Park Sunday school; violin duet, Helen Moorman and Carlos Smith; vocal trio, Nowassa Rumbow, Rowena Pence, and Thelma Gard. The story was told by Mrs. Moorman.

Bible study lesson was conducted by K L D S Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell, at nine o'clock. And two hours later the auditorium service in the Stone Church was broadcast.

K L D S Sunday secular program began at two in the afternoon. Melva Ward, organist; Gladys McCoy Taylor, soprano; Clarence Brown, tenor.

And the Reverend J. Russell Brown, of the Mount Washington Methodist Church, conducted the three o'clock K L D S radio church service.

The musical program for the vesper hour was furnished by a quartet consisting of Nina Grenawalt Smith, Lulu Tyrrell, Elbert Dempsey, and Frank Russell; there were solo numbers by Nina Grenawalt Smith, soprano; Katherine Haberlien, pianist. Sermonet, Ralph W. Farrell.

The Latter Day Saint studio service at 9.15 in the evening consisted of music arranged by Robert Miller, organist, assisted by George Miller, pianist; Lilly Belle Allen, soprano; Arthur Storms, violinist; and a mixed quartet. Sermon by Elder John Sheehy.

Liberty Street

Attendance at Sunday school has been much better for the last few weeks, and this has been encouraging to officers and teachers.

One of the summer school classes at the institute gave a short play, "Dorcas," at the Sunday school hour last Sabbath. The efforts put forth by these young people were highly appreciated by all.

At the eleven o'clock hour, Brother Lehi Chrestensen rendered a vocal solo, "In God's eternal day." Elder E. T. Atwell was the speaker, taking for his text, "But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed."—James 1: 25.

Saints of Liberty Street District are regularly attending the joint services of the districts in Independence, held each Sunday night at the Campus.

Walnut Park

The morning prayer meeting, B. J. Scott and F. W. Lanpher presiding, was well attended and the time fully occupied. Prayers were offered especially for our young sister, Vermel Tillery, who has suffered excruciating pain from an affliction in her eyes. In the afternoon she was reported as resting quite comfortably.

At Sunday school we again had the pleasure of having the Combined Orchestra of Zion with us. At the close of a short lesson study, a group of girls from the Campus Summer School, presented by Sister W. A. Page, dramatized the Bible story, "Ruth." The departments from the lower rooms came upstairs to enjoy this also, while some of the Walnut Park children were engaged in giving dramatizations at other churches. Following the drama, the orchestra again occupied, R. T. Cooper directing.

At eleven o'clock Chester Constance presided, Orlando Nace offered the invocation, and Ada Fallon and her girls' chorus led in the congregational singing; also gave a pleasing anthem.

The speaker was Elder C. K. Green, from the text: "For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body," etc. He spoke with good liberty in showing how we may finally enter into the life more abundant, which is our rightful inheritance as members of the body of Christ.

Gudgell Park

Sunday school July 10 was well attended, notwithstanding a few were absent. There were ten visitors at this hour, and a lively interest was had in the adult class. We are studying the book of Matthew. Our young men, as well as the small children, show a deep interest in their studies. One young man, a visitor in the class, talked strongly in favor of infidelity, but I believe our boys are too deeply rooted in the faith to be disturbed. However, it will behoove each of us to be on guard and fortified against such arguments. We must ever be on the watch tower.

Brother Ralph Goold was our speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. His theme was "Doubt." He gave us a splendid talk, and each one was edified and made stronger in the faith. Brother Goold will always be a welcome speaker in this group.

Spring Branch

Wednesday night prayer service registered the largest attendance at a midweek service in several months. We are glad to note this revival of interest and return to former conditions. A good spirit prevailed, and special supplications in behalf of Sister Ernest Smith were offered. Likewise at the Sunday morning prayer service the Saints came fasting and praying for her, prior to administration. The Spirit was there in power, and all felt blessed under its influence.

One hundred and ten were in attendance at the Sunday school session, after which a vote was taken as to where the annual Sunday school picnic should be held. The Campus was chosen. Committees to look after the food will be selected and the date for the picnic decided upon by next Sunday.

Most of the eleven o'clock hour was taken up in confirmation and administration. Three were confirmed and one administered to. The local brethren were assisted by Brothers Hartwell and Smith, father of Brother Ernest Smith.

As a prelude to this service, Sister Katherine Haberlein played a voluntary, the congregation sang "God speed the right," W. F. Smith offered the invocation, and the choir sang "Sons of men," Roy Cato taking the tenor solo.

Brother Snively filled in the few remaining minutes with well-chosen remarks, defining to some extent our duties as members of the church and kingdom. "In confirmation, the gift of the Holy Spirit is invoked upon us, but we must not let the Holy Ghost do it all."

Preliminary suggestions for liquidating the church debt were offered, which will be put into operation in the near future, we hope.

Dorothy Mabbott, one of the teachers at the summer vacation school, took a class of nine little girls out to Englewood, where they gave the play, "Dorcas," at the Sunday school hour.

From the Hoosier Capital

Corner Pratt Street and Chester Avenue

June was a busy month for our branch, and we did not have any brides or very many roses either, but we were more than usually active in our church work—busy spelled with a capital B.

Brother Dutton, our missionary, closed his series of meetings the 9th and returned to his home at Galva, Illinois, for a short stay with his family.

June 12 was observed by the Sunday school as Children's Day, the morning hour being given over to the Sunday school officers, and they made the best of their opportunity, carrying out a splendid program. On this occasion our superintendent, Elder A. W. Gage, had the pleasure of baptizing three of the school children into the kingdom of God upon earth, one of them being his oldest son. Dinner was also served in the church basement, and a day of rejoicing and good fellowship was very much enjoyed by all.

On June 18 and 19 our district Sunday school institute was held with us, in charge of Elder Charles B. Woodstock and Sister Baldwin, institute workers. Their instruction to those in attendance was well received, was replete with methods and illustrations that should be of immense benefit to our district workers, and no doubt will bear fruit in this department of the work in the near future. Sister Baldwin's examples of work with the little tots and the junior service on Sunday morning were especially worthy of mention, while that of Brother Woodstock seemed to fit into every need. We found them enthusiastic workers with an earnest desire to serve, and we are convinced that we should have institute meetings of this character more often in our district.

Our Department of Women took care of the "commissary" during the institute, and we received favorable comment upon their services rendered on this occasion from Brother Woodstock and other visiting Saints. The C. I. C. Class also rendered valuable assistance toward the success of the institute.

Our former pastor and missionary, Elder O. J. Hawn, accompanied by Sister Hawn, dropped in to see us the latter part of the month to pack their household effects for shipment to Coldwater, Michigan, where they will make their future home. We commend them to the Coldwater Saints and wish them success in their new home and mission.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has suspended its weekly meetings during the months of July and August, this being the time of vacations and reunions; however, we expect to take up the work again with renewed vigor and zeal in the fall.

A number of visitors were present at our meetings during the month, from various places and States, and we say to them all: We are glad to see you; come again; you will always be welcome at the little church where Pratt Street crosses Chester Avenue.

Kansas City Stake

Second Kansas City Church

A wedding that was beautiful in its quiet simplicity was solemnized June 30 at the home of Brother and Sister P. J. Raw, when their daughter Elizabeth was united in marriage to Mont J. Flynn. Elder Francis A. Evans, grandfather of the bride, performed the ceremony. Elizabeth has been pianist at our church since she was a little girl and is loved by all. Our best wishes and prayers are for their happiness and prosperity. They will reside here, so we will not lose her.

Five more have been added to our number by baptism. July 5 Mont J. Flynn was baptized by F. A. Evans, and July 10 four were baptized by Brother H. R. Higdon. Three of these are the result of the services held by Brother Higdon at the home of Sister Page in Rosedale. Three generations were represented when these were baptized, Mrs. Sarah Smith, a great-grandmother, her daughter, Mabel Smith, a grandmother, and Geneva Page, a young girl. L. E. Walden, who has been attending our meetings for several months, was among the number.

Sunday school and Religio are doing well; attendance and interest good and increasing. A young men's organization which has lately been formed has given the program several times, and we appreciate the splendid things they have given us, not only to entertain but to help us in our everyday life.

Prayer meetings are increasing in interest. We had an attendance of forty at our last mid-week meeting. Almost half of that number were young girls and boys. We have been blessed, cheered, and encouraged by the peaceful, harmonious spirit that is and has been with us, not only in our meetings but in all other gatherings of this congregation.

Fourth Church

Wednesday, June 5, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fugate were baptized, the confirmation following at prayer meeting, there being forty-nine present. June 19 Brother J. A. Holsworth, of Independence, was the speaker at 11 o'clock, encouraging the Saints to take Christ's yoke upon them, defining religion as the power of the Holy Spirit gained by prayer, stating if one is active in church work he will not have time to be sick at heart. An illustration: "A father and son were going through a melon patch. The father warned the son not to step on the vines. The son answered, No danger, father; I am stepping in your tracks."

The younger children are attending junior service with much interest.

Our pastor, Elder J. O. Worden, was the evening speaker June 19, explaining God's love to humanity in each dispensation of time. A dinner was served June 26 by the Progress Club of the Women's Department, proceeds to be used for girls' camp this year. As a result of the sacrifice week, $26.50 was in the special collection.

July 3, attendance at sacramental service was smaller than usual, as also at other services, due to the vacation period.

Elder Cyril E. Wight was the evening speaker: subject, "What think ye of Christ?"

Sisters Charles Allen and Goff are chaperoning the girls at camp this year.

Our music department is coming to the front, and the congregation is learning to appreciate the songs in the Hymnal and Praises.

The 8 a. m. Sunday prayer service is well attended by the young. The pastor feels at that service that most spiritual food will be gained by them and is pleased that they are making the sacrifice to be there.

Quindaro Church

Recent speakers have been Elder Daniel Hough and Brothers Edward Baker and J. M. Higgins.

Reports in the Sunday school show an increase over last year. A junior department has been organized in the church basement, with Sister Dora Halverson, superintendent.

The Men's Bible Class is increasing in number. This class has for its teacher Elder Emmet Palmer.

We are enjoying the Sunday school adult quarterly.

On Saturday, July 9, a baby girl arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Lloyd Hawkins, and was named Dorothy Louise.

Sunday night the eight o'clock hour was occupied by the pastor, A. Wallace Eskridge. He used as a text Revelation 3: 8: "I have set before you an open door, and no man can shut it." He made the way so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein.

On Friday night, July 22, the Ladies' Aid Society will give an ice cream social on the church lawn, proceeds to be applied on the church debt.

Saint Louis District Welcomes A. M. Baker

I love your pages. Your weekly visits bring much comfort. It is like visiting with an old friend.

I am feeling more resigned to give myself to the preaching of the gospel unreservedly than ever before. I am enjoying the Spirit of God to a very marked degree. It was the Spirit that rested upon the Savior in the form of a dove that caused the Eternal Father to acclaim him, "My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Without the Spirit of God we can not be the children of God.

I just closed a two weeks' meeting in the Saint Charles Branch. Last Sunday I had the privilege of leading eight precious souls into the kingdom. Brother David Lehman assisted in confirming them. Most of the confirmations were inspirational. Brother Harold DeCoster's wife was baptized, and they are both rejoicing in the wonderful work of God. Brother Harold is taking on renewed energy and no doubt will become a worker as was his father, of fond memory, Vick DeCoster.

The Saints of this place will miss Brother and Sister A. B. East, who have moved to Independence. However, it will be Independence's gain, and Saint Charles's loss. They are noble Saints. Put them to work, Independence Saints.

I am here at East Alton, Illinois, laboring in connection with the branch president, Elder J. D. Hull. He is an earnest and zealous worker. We are preaching in a private house but hope to make arrangements for the air dome in a few nights. We are going to try to get in personal contact with the people, distributing tracts, etc.

I was just about to forget to mention the pleasant meeting I had at Brentwood Branch. While there I enjoyed the fathers' and sons' banquet. And upon leaving this little group of Saints, they presented me a splendid brief case as a token of their good will, which was beautifully expressed in a speech by Brother Roy Remington.

My association here with the district officers is of a very pleasant character. The district president, G. F. Barracough, has thrown the doors open for me. Give me time, and I will be there after a while.

The times in which we live are perilous. Faith in God is our only safety. All other things will fail. Paul says everything that can be shaken will be shaken. Isaiah the prophet also declares: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 54:17.

EAST ALTON, ILLINOIS, July 13.

A. M. BAKER.

In the early summer number of Homiletic Review is a report of a committee which examined sermons submitted in contest. The report comments favorably on conservatism of the sermons, saying there was just one distinctly fundamentalist sermon and not a single rabidly modernist in the whole number examined.

Programs will be announced later, affecting each meeting: July 24 at Cash Branch; August 14 at Bay Port; August 21 at Saint Clair; September 11 at Marlette. These meetings have been planned so as to reach the greatest number of the church membership in the district. A special effort should be made by each to attend at least one of these meetings during the season. For information regarding these meetings, write to the undersigned at Port Huron, Michigan. Matthew W. Liston.

All-Day Meeting

There will be an all-day meeting at the Cherokee Branch, Cherokee, Iowa, Sunday, July 24. The Saints living in and near Cherokee are cordially invited to attend. First service begins at 8.30 a. m. E. L. Bedwell, district president.

Address of Des Moines Saints Wanted

It has come to my attention that some members have lived here for many years, and others but a short time, whose names have never been transferred to our records. Unless the present address of non-attending members can be obtained, the ministry of the branch officers can never reach them. Dear reader: If you have a friend or loved one living here, won't you take enough interest in their spiritual welfare to send their address today? Should you be interested in a member who is soon to make this his home, let us have the name, date of arrival, and probable address. We shall depend on your help. Thanks! C. B. Hartshorn, pastor, 902 Pennsylvania Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa.

Michigan Young People's Convention

The fourth Michigan State young people's convention will be held in connection with the Northern Michigan and Western Michigan Districts' joint reunion, August 12 to 21, at the Park of the Pines, Boyne City, Michigan. Koehler, and Mrs. Earl Burt. Daily convention-reunion program will be: Prayer service 8-9.15 a. m.; class work 9.30-12; noon class work 1.30-2 p. m. Lecture 2-2.45; recreation

Other entertainment is also being arranged, that all who attend are assured of a good spiritual and educational feast. Pierce, of Bartlett. Interment in Thurman Cemetery.

The district treasurer reported receipts, $20.54; expenditures, $18.25; balance on hand, $2.29. The bishop's agent reported receipts for the past eleven months, $1,112.64. Ministerial reports were read from Moroni Traxler, Ben S. Tanner, C. J. Peters, Ivor Surrudge, F. L. McKane, and W. T. Hicklin. Ben S. Tanner was elected district president for the coming year, J. W. Peterson and W. C. Chapman, counselors. William C. Chapman was chosen clerk; Sister Mary Jones, chorister; Sister Edna Dixon, auditor for three years, and C. J. Peters for two years. S. J. Joyce was sustained as bishop's agent. The next conference is to be held in November, exact date and place to be left in the hands of the district presidency.

WESTERN MAINE.—District conference met with the Stonington Saints June 18 and 19 and opened in charge of District President Amos Berve, assisted by Harlan Billings and A. Begg. The weather was fine, and visiting Saints from various branches of the district were present. Officers elected were as follows: District president, Amos Berve; counselors, Harlan Billings and A. Begg; clerk, Louise J. Eaton; treasurer, Eugene Barton; superintendent Sunday School Department, Sister Elizabeth Barton; superintendent Department of Women, Sister Frieda Barton; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, A. Beggs. Statistical reports were read from five branches. Ministerial and treasurer's reports were read. Brother Newman Wilson, from Eastern Maine District, was present, and he and Brother U. W. Greene were principal speakers at the conference. Sunday afternoon was given over to the departmental work. Sister Frieda Barton, superintendent of the Department of Women, spoke, giving some very instructive points on this work. Sister Elizabeth Barton spoke very interestingly on the Sunday school work. Brother A. Begg, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, spoke on the work of this department. He is surely the right man in the right place. All enjoyed listening to his talk. Meetings of the conference were of high order, and the Saints seemed refreshed to start out with a greater determination than before to the work that is intrusted to their care. The next conference will be at Vinal Haven, in the fall.

This is one of the larger reunions of the church, held on the historic site of the Church's early achievements. Camp is pitched in the Temple grove, and meetings held in the sacred Temple.

The committee has made careful plans for the meeting of the needs of young and old in matters physical, social, mental, and spiritual.

A board will direct the recreational activities to which the afternoons of week days will be given over. Classes will be organized for study at 9.30 each morning; one in gospel principles as applied to everyday living by Apostle R. S. Little Journeys With the Editor in Chief

To Palmyra

I had expected that my next Little Journey with the readers of the HERALD would be to Columbus, Ohio, to attend the dedication of the church building owned by the Second Columbus Branch, then in a roundabout course to Mount Vernon and Brush Creek, in Illinois; but a chain of unlooked-for events has necessitated a change of plans, canceling two reunion appointments, and making a trip East on important matters connected with the business of the church. However, by leaving home about the time I had planned to go South, I have made a visit I have long desired to make, and about which I want to tell my readers somewhat before telling of the trip to Columbus.

Writes From Palmyra Hotel

As I write these lines it is near midnight, and it has been a day replete with interest, as the readers can well surmise when I say I am in a room in the Palmyra Hotel, Palmyra, New York, said to be the second oldest hotel operating in the State. Palmyra! A name which calls one's mind back over the whole history of the church; Palmyra, where the Book of Mormon first made its appearance; Palmyra, so closely connected with the history of my own family, as well as that of the church!

But let us begin with this morning when I awoke about half past six on a Nickel Plate train after a night of sound slumber, following a day of work on a Chicago & Alton train and that of the Nickel Plate. By the time I had cleaned up and shaved the train was approaching the outskirts of Buffalo, was swinging gracefully around the sweeping curves skirting the eastern end of Lake Erie, and soon slid into the Lackawanna station and came to a grinding stop. By plans previously made, though hastily, I was to meet there Brethren J. A. Gardner, of the Publicity Department, who was to come from Chicago by another train, and Bishop Charles Fry, of Kirtland, Ohio, who was to drive from Kirtland. And as I detrained and walked up the train shed, grip in hand, to the waiting room, I could not but wonder if our long-distance planning would carry through. They were both there.

Our greeting over, I secured a light breakfast at the lunch counter (as the brethren had already broken their fast), and we were soon in Brother Fry's car, heading north, looking for Genesee Street, which would carry us onto the road. Rochester was the first point aimed for, there to take the road to Palmyra.

I presume most of my readers, especially those interested in the early history of the church, can sense to some extent our feelings as we set out for the goal. No one of the three of us had been to Palmyra previously for a visit, though I have at several times passed through the town on the New York Central or Lehigh Valley Railroad. Now, however, we were to make a visit under conditions favorable to seeing various points of interest to us.

I am wondering if Brother Fry was not a bit more anxious to get here than we were. He was at the wheel, and the way he "stepped on the gas" had me pressing the floor board rather vigorously at times, especially when a stop signal from a man beside a wrecked Ford necessitated a short stop, one almost too short for our car, as it in response to the suddenly applied brakes skidded and swerved about in a distressing manner. But somehow we missed about three cars I thought sure we would crash into, including the wrecked one, and we were safely past the "pocket," Brother Fry apparently quite undisturbed and my heart palpitation subsiding.

New York Well Named the Empire State

I am not trying to even name the various towns we passed. The towns were not even flag stations on our line, and stops were made only for water, gas, and traffic signals, and to inquire concerning directions.

Western New York, like most countries, is not seen to advantage from railway trains; so, though I have crossed it several times by rail, I carried only a hazy idea of the terrain and towns. And so I was glad of this my first opportunity to see it through a windshield or sedan window. (I forgot to tell you that the car Brother Fry was and is using on the trip is a Dodge sedan of "old vintage," as was indicated in several ways, but like most Dodges, keeps right on going as needed.)

What a fine State New York is, anyway! The Empire State it is well named. As a student I had in history of transportation studied its network of railroads running back to the very beginnings of railroad history, and the merging and consolidation of smaller lines into the Great New York Central System, one of the finest railroad properties in the whole world. I recalled the water transportation problems clustering around the old system of canals antedating the railroads, and the disuse into which rail transportation development threw them, and the more recent rehabilitation of the canals by the construction of the present system of barge canals and canalized streams. I remember long ago hearing of New York apples and fruit; and as a worker at one time in the telephone industry, I knew something about the great network of telephone and telegraph wires throughout the State. And so everywhere the ride this morning was filled with interest as I looked out upon the hilly woodlands, the tilled valleys and hills, the little and big factory towns strung out along the "arteries of commerce," both water and rail, not to say truck and bus.

And Rochester was reached almost sooner than expected. A stop for information, and then Brother Gardner said: "Do you want to see anything in particular, Brother Smith?" Did I? Say, to every "camera nut" the word Rochester arouses a whole flock of associated ideas: Kodak, Bausch & Lomb, Graflex cameras. Stop? Yes; had I the time, about a week, every day for a separate factory. But remembering the purpose of our visit and the shortness of time at our disposal, I said, and tried to say it resignedly, "No, brethren; just find the road through to Palmyra."

The Little City of Palmyra as It Is Today

It was past eleven, but we said, "On to Palmyra before lunch." And it seemed only a short time till we saw off to the right, "Palmyra Inn," and then a sign beside the road, "Incorporated Village of Palmyra. Slow down to twenty miles per hour." And Brother Fry slowed down to something under forty.

Palmyra was a pleasant surprise to us. In some way each of us had formed the idea of an antiquated, rather dilapidated village of a few houses; but instead we found it a lively, neat-appearing town of about 4,500 inhabitants, good stores, well-kept yards, and good-looking homes, the town built along the well-paved main street running in a generally east and west direction.

After lunch at a small restaurant, we came to the hotel to reserve rooms for the night, and to get information which would enable us to find certain points in which we were particularly interested. Of the clerk we inquired the location of "Mormon Hill." He called our attention to an elderly man in the room and said he could tell us. So I addressed myself to this "old-timer" and asked where we could find "Mormon Hill." He laughed, gave short but quite exact directions, and asked, "Are you Mormons?" In turn I asked him, "Do we look like it?" and then passed a bit of pleasant banter as to whether Mormons were dissimilar from other persons or similar enough to be classed as human beings.

Some New and Old Stories Heard Again

"Where are you from?" was his next turn; and my "From Missouri," surprised an "Oh!" from him. Then he started: "Well, you not being 'Mormons,'" etc., when I stopped him long enough to tell who we were, and I then learned a very interesting bit of news, for he said the factions of the church had united, and the Utah and the Missouri churches were now one. Of course I was a bit surprised! Then I learned some more things.

The man, Miner by name, is about eighty-four years of age, lives on a farm near the Joseph Smith Farm, has apparently always been more or less interested in traditions and yarns concerning the early "Mormons" and "Joe" Smith, is loquacious, active for his age, was born and reared in Palmyra territory, and seems to think he is "authority" on early Palmyra history. He regaled us right then and there with a run of yarns of the sheep stealing, treasure digging, holy-cave making activities of "Joe" Smith, which are amusing though ad nauseam! Bah! how long will these old women's yarns pass for "history," rather than tales more akin to truth and which will reflect the true colors of the movement which had its small beginning here and has grown until there are hundreds of thousands now living who have been influenced by the religious and social philosophy set out by the much-talked-of and written-about former Palmyran?

First View of the Hill Cumorah

About a half hour of it, and we left for the hill. One of New York's fine roads leads right past the hill, and soon we were there, and on the side of a newly erected gasoline station just west of the hill and beside the road is a "sign" telling of "Cumorah Hill."

The Latter Day Saint movement may have several "beginnings" fixed, depending upon the direction of approach to the history of it; but no one can deny that one of the more important of such happenings was the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. This fixes Hill Cumorah as a spot of prime historic interest to us Latter Day Saints; and it is quite likely that our feelings today on first seeing the hill, easily recognized, were not different from those of other Saints on that occasion.

Utah Church Owns Part of Cumorah

Of course we were desirous, very much so, to climb the hill, look it over from all angles, up and down, but held the pleasure of setting foot on it till we had asked for information. The Utah people own the gasoline station where souvenirs are sold, part of the hill, and the farm through which the road runs at that point, and are negotiating for the purchase of Hill Cumorah in its entirety. And my guess is, they will get it. The family living in the farmhouse mentioned as lying west of the hill are Irish converts to the Utah faith, though going by the Scotch name of Ferguson.

With father and son Ferguson we had a few moments of pleasant conversation before introducing ourselves, and some more pleasant conversation after, and then we turned to the job of photographing and visiting the hill itself.

It turned out that each one of the three had a camera—all nuts, eh? But woe! While we had been conversing with Mr. Miner at the hotel and the rich-brogued Fergusons at the hill, old Jupiter Pluvius had uncovered from somewhere a great supply of vapor and had been sailing clouds in constantly larger masses across the sky, until when we turned to our cameras the sun had disappeared for the day. We made several "exposures," however, as we walked around the hill, and up it, and later on top of it; but by the time the top was reached the light was poor for photographing.

Cogitations at the Hill

But the hill! From the west side, from the farmhouse there, we had walked north, then east, then in the car had driven around the north end to a cluster of farm buildings lying at the foot of the hill on the east side. No one in sight (just a collie which kept up a constant barking), we "parked" the car, passed through a farm gate, and began the sharp upward climb. We didn't hurry, for two reasons: breath and beauty. As one's range of vision deepens and his horizon widens on the upward walk, there comes more and more into view a charmingly picturesque country, a bit wild in its tumbled native aspect, yet softened by the rich coloring of mid-year forest garb of this naturally wooded terrain, and by the touches given by the "hand of civilization" in clearings for agricultural purposes or the deforestation processes of the wasteful American lumberjack.

The "clearings" were pronounced in the variegated colorings of "crops," the rich gold of the wheat field awaiting the harvester, or the wheat bundles standing in shocks, the lighter greens of fruit trees and orchards, the dark gray of unpainted barns, or the vari-colored houses and buildings of the better-cared-for farms. So we stopped frequently to look, and prolong as much as we could the enjoyment of a long-anticipated event.

On the top at last, what a wonderful view, the whole horizon sweeping around a complete and wide-flung circle, for the hill is one of the highest around. Narrow-crested, it runs in a north-south direction for near three fourths of a mile, and we had climbed the north slope. "Terminal moraine," one is likely to say at first glance along the ridge and the slopes: and that opinion is strengthened by a sweeping look around the country, for glacial formation is quiet apparent. So one is not surprised to see the map dotted with lakes. That the country is well watered is evident from heavy foliage and running brooks and creeks. And what a view the hill affords! Well worth the effort to mount it, even if one were not interested in the historic atmosphere surrounding.

While the eyes were enjoying the fine vistas and panoramas of knoll, hill, ridge, dales, vales, towns, villages, and farms, our minds could not but be busy with memories—of the plates, the translation, the coming forth of the book, the beginnings of proselyting, and the formation of church organization. And, too, parts of the story the book tells were recalled, and one could not refrain from trying to picture the movements of opposing armed forces. What a country for military maneuvers of bodies of men armed as the ancient Americans must have been! And what a point of vantage the hill must have been!

But not for long could we let mind and thought rove into the dim past as reflected in the book, for we had mental pictures of happenings just a century ago, the vision, the preparation, the work, and the message accompanying the book. Were we on sacred ground? To us, yes. Whether it will remain sacred, and be so looked upon by others than ourselves depends much upon the outcome of the movement.

I could not but think of the great reformatory element of the movement here begun, the goal we are working towards, and once more arose the question, Are we progressing towards that goal, steadily and surely? And my mind's eye looked over the church, with its branches scattered throughout the world, the schoolroom of preparation for Zion. One hundred years of Latter Day Saintism! And what's to show? Could I answer other than this: "A fine people, consecrated to the service of God, moving steadily onward to Zion!" And could I wish otherwise than that each Saint might have stood beside us and received a bit of the renewal of zeal and spiritual devotion springing from a consciousness of the spot and the importance of the work begun there!

Were we impressed? Not one of the three is demonstrative, and the deeper-lying emotions were concealed by running jokes about the clicking cameras, muttering about the obstreperous weather which denied us the contrasts of sunlight and shadow, casual remarks about the pretty display of clouds, from piled-up whiteness of snow to the threatening blue-black of a gathering thunderstorm making towards us from the southwest. But we enjoyed every moment of the stay on the hill, and our memory, thoughts, and projections into the future.

We left reluctantly and descended slowly, discussing how we should photograph the hill if the sunlight permitted us to do as we would like. A few "shots" we risked, anyway, and then clambered into the car, and with many a backward glance at the picturesque ridge, drove northwest towards the Joseph Smith Farm.

Of this, more in our next.

Where Are Women Going?

The editors confess to a distinct and pleasant thrill in reading from the pen of Elizabeth Sloan Chesser, reproduced in the columns of The Spectator, London, England, an article under the caption, "Where are women going to?"

If men will be really grown up, ready and anxious to see this question in its true light, using the same breadth of vision which must be employed in questions of government and business if they would keep abreast of the times, we believe they will get satisfaction from reading this from the pen of Elizabeth Sloan Chesser. Who can fail to see the true picture of the modern high class young women of today in these opening words of hers? "I see these girls, fine and free, and capable as women never were before, with trained minds and wonderful opportunities for self-realization, and I think that they will make something very big of their lives. The last thirty years have made more difference in women's status and opportunities than a thousand years in any previous history of the world. A generation ago trained minds were exceptional among women; today every second girl one meets has been 'educated' at least up to the standard of her brother, and the girl has just as good a chance of making a career for herself."

In the columns devoted to matter "Of General Interest" we are reproducing the entire article for our readers and wish for them the pleasure we experienced in its perusal.

Why a Summer School of Religious Education?

Elsewhere in this issue of the HERALD will be found some items regarding the Summer Vacation School of Religious Education in Zion.

It has been suggested that the readers of the HERALD might be interested in a brief statement of the reasons for and purposes of such a school. The space to be devoted to this subject is limited, but we are glad to comply with the suggestion by submitting the following rather brief outline:

Why More Religious Education?

We answer:

1. The strongest bulwark of any nation is the character of its people.
2. Character is guaranteed and safeguarded only through a systematic program of moral and religious education.
3. The present-day home does not, and the modern public school for most certain reasons can not, provide adequately for the sort of moral and religious education which is sorely needed today.
4. The church, with its very limited and formal program of religious education, usually limited to Sunday, has hardly begun to solve the problem.
5. Some very definite steps must be taken by the church to improve this situation.

Lines Along Which Improvement Is Sought

1. There must be a pronounced increase in the amount of time given to systematic religious education.
2. A greater proportion of the annual budget of the church must be set aside for this task.
3. Teachers of religion must be far more adequately trained.
4. The instruction of the church school must be made to concern itself with the vital problems arising out of the complex life of the present day.
5. Greater effort must be made to reach and hold the thousands of our youth who are receiving no systematic religious training.
6. The church must become a center for religious education, consequently must provide itself with physical equipment, classrooms, teaching materials, etc., that will make of it a real school.

Why a Summer Vacation School?

1. Educators have long since recognized the folly of the assumption that the processes of education were by some magic stopped in June and set free again in September. Education is now recognized as a continuous process, going on from birth to death, winter and summer, for good or ill.

2. During the summer months the child is free—free from public education; free for the mischief which idle hands find to do; free for some systematic character training.

3. The summer vacation school is as yet but an experiment in the effort of the church to solve this vital problem. It has the disadvantage that the field is new and untried, but this is also an advantage, since it offers the teachers of the church a greater freedom and more time in which to organize and put into effect real instruction in religion.

The Summer School in Zion.

In the past two summers the Independence Institute has conducted a summer vacation school for the children of Independence. Approximately three hundred and fifty children have been enrolled each summer. The general principles underlying this effort have been outlined above. I think it may be said, however, that our school here has been governed by certain other considerations which have to do more vitally with the task of the church in establishing Zion. These are:

1. We shall never have Zion conditions until we have Zion people.

2. The normal healthy child that comes to any home and community is a potential Zion builder. Through proper training and guidance he may develop those characteristics which are essential to that sort of human living together which spells Zion.

3. The amount of time now given by the church in Zion to the religious education of its children is entirely inadequate.

4. As stated above, the long months of the summer vacation constitute an opportunity for the formation either of pernicious habits and attitudes or such habits and attitudes as will make each child a Zion builder.

5. Our Summer Vacation School in Zion is an attempt for a period of five or six weeks to furnish the child leadership in the process of actual living with his fellows so that he may acquire those knowledges and attitudes and form those habits which shall make of him a citizen in the kingdom of God.

6. For this purpose our summer school has been so organized that the child may actually learn to live and work with his fellows. He is led to choose projects which are in line with the task of building Zion. As he works on these projects, he meets the actual problems of living. Here he has to make choices. The function of the teacher is to aid him in making life choices, and to check at the outset any tendencies toward the formation of bad habits or pernicious attitudes which might bar him from successful participation in the great teamwork necessary in the carrying out of our program.

7. In a word, we have in Independence set aside several hours each week-day for a period of five weeks, in which three hundred and fifty children and some fifty or more teachers learn to live together by actually living together, and in which they learn to work together by actually working together at some little tasks which have as their ultimate end the establishment of Zion.

If our reader could see the children at work and at play; if he could sense for a moment the deep feeling of consecrated devotion of the volunteer instructors, or better still, if he could live and work for a few days with this group of Zion builders, we feel certain there would be no doubt in his mind as to the wisdom and necessity of this venture.

We might add before we close that this movement is by no means limited to our church in general, or to Zion. Many of the leading churches of America are conducting successful summer vacation schools. In our own church other successful attempts have been made, notably in Philadelphia a few years ago and during the past two or three summers in Des Moines. Perhaps there are other places. We shall be glad to have these reported.

Another Britisher Sees Clearly

During debate in the House of Lords June 22, the Bishop of London, the Right Reverend Arthur Foley Winningham Ingram, in support of a bill the purpose of which is to regulate the liquor traffic, referred to what he termed to be an assumption that the prohibition law of the United States is a failure, adding that it certainly was a mistake to make that assumption. The bishop had recently toured the United States in his trip around the world, and remarked that he saw every sign of prosperity in America, and that he looked with apprehension to the future when he thought of a "wet England" in competition with a "dry America."

The Book of Mormon and Archæology

BY S. A. BURGESS

Some very interesting books have been written on this important subject: Book of Mormon Lectures, by Henry A. Stebbins; The Book of Mormon Proven by Archæology, by Louise Palfrey (now Mrs. T. J. Sheldon); The Book of Mormon Vindicated, by I. M. Smith; Objections to the Book of Mormon and Doctrines and Covenants Answered, by J. R. Lambert; Ruins Revisited and the World Story Retold, by an Americanist (S. F. Walker); From Palmyra to Independence, by R. Etzenhouser; Book of Mormon Talks, by Orion (Hyrum O. Smith); The Book Unsealed, by R. Etzenhouser; The Archæology Committee's Reports; and books and pamphlets by L. E. Hills. The above books have been published by our church, together with other books in earlier years, familiar to some of our readers.

In addition to these, there is much literature by men doing research work giving the results of such research. Many of the more valuable of these are out of print. Their interest lies in showing the state of information and knowledge of these subjects at earlier dates. These old books are frequently referred to and quoted in those books written by members of the church.

Much has been written concerning the civilization in Mexico and Peru. It is a broad subject, however, and deserves an extended study and review. Much has been published in recent years by the Smithsonian Institute, telling of the customs, songs, dwellings, and ideas of the American Indian. They deal especially with the Indian in the United States.

There were observations taken from Mexico to Spain and accounts written of conditions in Mexico and Peru in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. But these were filed in the archives in Spain. They became the basis of such works as Prescott's Mexico and Peru. Baron Humboldt also made an expedition and wrote his Observations, which were published in French early in the nineteenth century.

But as we review this early literature, there appears to be nothing in English that could come to the knowledge of a young man in western New York in 1830, concerning these early civilizations. The idea of the American Indian held then, and for many years afterwards, and also by a great many people today, is of a fierce, barbaric people. There were many stories of their attacks upon white settlers at the time of the Revolution and the War of 1812.

In fact, the Indians in the United States showed a fair though decadent degree of culture and civilization, though the splendid civilization of these people in a past age was not recognized at the time of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. It was some years before there was a recognition of their songs and their religion. The last one hundred years, and especially the last fifty years, has been a period of rapidly growing knowledge of the Indian as he is today, as he was four hundred years ago, as a cliff dweller, and as he was in Mexico and Peru in still earlier time. Many wonderful cities have been discovered, both in Mexico and southwestern United States.

The Book of Mormon declares frankly that there once existed a high state of civilization in the Americas. The ruins still remain of many wonderful temples and palaces, as well as some remarkable cliff dwellings.

But also the Book of Mormon mentions their having gold and silver, as well as other precious metals, and this archæology bears out. Copper mines have been found in the vicinity of Lake Superior that were mined in ancient times. There are evidences of steel, too, as well as of other metals. According to the Book of Mormon, they had goods of fine texture, and archæology proves that this is true.

They owned horses and other animals. All this once was doubted but has lately been proved. As late as 1888 the fact that the Book of Mormon speaks of horses was taken as proof that it was inaccurate, though learned men had already proved that there were horses in America before the coming of the Spaniards.

The Book of Mormon speaks of cities, and many have been found in ruins which were long inaccessible. This book speaks also of cities being destroyed, sunken into the earth, and of great storms at the crucifixion of Christ, and the earth bears testimony that there was an upheaval, destroying great cities.

This record also speaks of the Egyptian influence, the pyramids of Mexico, Central America, and Peru, and the mounds of the United States rather strongly show such an influence. Critics have compared the pictographs of Mexico with the hieratic or even the demotic of Egypt, and have found very little similarity. But it is rather humorous to expect a likeness. Any intelligent person informed on the subject would not attempt such a comparison. The hieroglyphics of Egypt are different from the hieratic, so the writings of Mexico are very different from the pictograph, and furthermore they both are different from the other writings of the time. The people who came were not Egyptians, but only had some Egyptian influence, which grew less each year. It was not claimed that all of the writing was in the style of the Egyptians. The statement was only that modified Egyptian was used on the original plates of the Book of Mormon, which emphasizes that they were still acquainted with the Hebrew language.

Furthermore, it must be remembered that the records which preserved the language were held by the Nephites, and most of the record was kept, clearly, by a few. Only certain portions were to be known, because the people were not yet ready to receive it. The writings which are found by students are doubtless those of the Lamanites. When Columbus landed, it was nearly eleven hundred years after the destruction of the Nephites and the hiding of the record. There had been decadence for nearly two hundred years prior to that. Therefore it is not surprising that differences would appear which at first glance would seem considerable.

Limited space prevents an adequate review, or even a comparison of the literature on this important subject, and the ruins of great cities and magnificent temples which have been found in the Americas.

Some of our readers have no doubt followed during the past year, the Senior Religio Quarterlies, a course in the Book of Mormon, and have reread the works on archaeology in connection with these lessons.

Graceland's Answer to the College Religious Problem

College life is necessarily somewhat different from the usual social living. It has the element of temporariness. Its contacts are direct and rather personal, and so numerous in their introduction to peoples, things, and theories. The wealth of opportunities dazzles with its multiplicity of invitations to participation. Academic studies should come first. The extra-curricular activities call for additional time and effort—indeed, literary, athletic, musical, and general social phases must have their part if the student is really to develop. Perhaps there are extra hours each day for the industrial student who is making his way. The truly alert collegiate does not find enough hours in the day. If nothing else, there are the allurements of just chatting or playing with associates.

In such a situation, what place does the average student allow for the phase of life that we call religious? Worship, attendance at church services, reflection on the values of life, study of religious materials, and the like, are easily crowded into secondary or lower place until gradually they may be ranked as nonessential. The Saturday night social function easily displaces the meeting of the following Sunday morning. Deferred studies or group gatherings may crowd out midweek services. The general press and hurry of life may easily break down habits of personal devotion. And if the individual has no special proclivities toward the church, or habits of religious living, the picture will be enhanced by many degrees. Any students will testify to the truthfulness of this picture. And the condition is not limited to college folk.

The college student meets another problem. He finds himself in the midst of new materials, strange theories, enlarged social life, and a seemingly changed universe. The wealth of other minds crowds in upon the thinker. In such a situation the old religious ways and beliefs often seem to be inadequate or unfounded. The undirected youth styles himself as irreligious in his inability to fathom the new problem.

Graceland realizes these two tendencies—the crowding out of religious activities by other interests, and the need of efficient and sympathetic help in the adjustment of religious thinking. It seeks to surround the developing youth with environment conducive to wholesome living. It endeavors to weld him intelligently to the institution that gives meaning and direction to life—the church. It is in this sphere that Graceland seems to have her excuse for existence.

The hub of Graceland's religious training is the Wednesday evening prayer service. No student has ever really attended the college who has not frequented this gathering. Under the direction of one of the local pastors who is affiliated with the college, the majority of the students meet each week, and in this common gathering the real spirit of the college is revealed.

ROY CHEVILLE

The departments of the local church at Lamoni organize classes each year to meet the needs of the college folk. The past year four such study groups have been meeting; Home planning, conducted by Mrs. N. Ray Carmichael; Book of Mormon, by Mrs. Columbus Scott; Religion and science, by Morris Mortimore; and Modern religious thought, by Roy Cheville.

The Oratorio Society and orchestra, both participating in the work of the Brick Church, have their larger constituency from the college. The rehearsals of the choir on Sunday afternoons is an inspiration and a rare opportunity for education. To meet with one hundred and thirty people in choral study of sacred music affords excellent development.

Graceland's real individuality is in the general tone of men and women, whose association and standard of living, openly expressed and silently lived, tend to renew simple faith and the spirit of the church. The chapel exercises under the direction of the president and dean of the college have no small part in this inspiration. The college age is a momentous one. Graceland endeavors to meet its responsibility as no other school in the shaping, directing, and stimulating of religious living.

By having something to "do" is usually meant that one has the means of earning a living. But a man's real work is frequently something quite different. He may be mending shoes in order to make a living, but his real work may be in the region of science or literature. Burns plowed the soil for a living; but his real work was the writing of undying verse. A man's appointed toil may not be altogether in harmony with his tastes, but his tastes will show themselves in his work.—Dearborn Independent, July 16.

Summer Vacation School of Religious Education

As Conducted on the Campus at Independence, Missouri

The church in Independence has a summer school for children of all school ages and kindergarten, and the avowed purpose is to make preparation for "Zion." The definition of Zion, toward which this preparation is aimed, is: "A beautiful people living in a beautiful environment, actuated by beautiful ideals." This would make the people stewards over both temporal affairs and spiritual things.

Those in charge of the project believe the program is big enough for the complete life of the individual. The different projects are tried out first in the summer school to determine their relative values. This makes of the vacation school a sort of human workshop or experiment station. However, the leaders say this is not detrimental to the children's welfare, for no project is ever tried until it is thoroughly discussed in faculty meeting, and it is there decided to possess merit as a character builder; but, on the contrary, it is helpful to them; for certainly it were well for them to be under competent supervision during the summer vacation period.

It will be seen that the program of this summer school is not yet perfected. It is only in the making. It is being tested and tried. But it does approach the problem of the church school in a thoroughly practical manner.

The aim of this instruction is to make the child a moral individual and to develop him spiritually. By moral education, of course, is meant more than the inculcating of proper sex ideas. It means, broadly, the science or philosophy of conduct as a whole. If the child can be led to have the right attitudes and appreciations toward all of life, very few moral problems will arise.

The attempt is being made to lead the child to see God in every phase of his life. With such a beginning, he is led to purpose to do things which will help him to become what he thinks God would have him to be, the ideal Zion builder. At the same time, he will be interested in helping others in this process of "becoming." "Who gives himself with his alms feeds three: himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me," is the thought held before the child. In all of the lessons and projects there is the dominant thought of stressing the fulfilling of God's requirements, the serving of self, and the serving of others.

The project method of teaching has been selected as basic, because of the actual experience it affords the children, the projects being those that are

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Where Are Women Going To?

I suppose it is because the majority of men and women become rigid minded in the forties—incapable of accepting new ideas, of adjusting themselves to changing conditions—that this new generation of women are criticized so harshly. I see these girls, fine and free, and capable as women never were before, with trained minds and wonderful opportunities for self-realization, and I think that they will make something very big of their lives. The last thirty years have made more difference to women's status and opportunities than a thousand years in any previous history of the world. A generation ago trained minds were exceptional amongst women; today every second girl one meets has been "educated," at least up to the standard of her brother, and the girl has just as good a chance of making a career for herself. When we give girls and boys a good education, we give them the key to success and power. No girl has a right to ask more than equal opportunity for education and equal status as citizens. The days of special "privinecessary to the building of Zion. In this way the children learn how to build Zion by actually building it. The aim is to form Zion-building habits in childhood which will naturally and easily find expression in adult life. Thus Zion will actually grow in our midst.

An attempt is made to focus the projects on a perfect circle of life. They are placed on a graded basis to minister to all ages, from the nursery to sixteen years. Beginning with the kindergarten, every advancing year calls for more difficult projects.

The ultimate realization of this Zion-building idea will be when the week-day and Sunday programs can be viewed as a unit, when a religious interpretation will be put on all of the child's relationships and activities, and his whole life becomes religious—his social and his temporal and his physical life as well as his spiritual. The child should be made to realize that God has a part in all of his activities in his everyday life.

So much for the summer school as it is now functioning in Zion. The final end must be the training of children so that when they take up the responsibilities of life as adults they will move toward moral, spiritual, physical, and intellectual perfection, toward "Zion, the Beautiful."

leges" for women as women are passing, fortunately for everybody, as such privileges were in reality serious handicaps. And with their new opportunities, what will women make of life? If they are sensible, they will take no part in the clamor of discussion surrounding so-called sex antagonism. Whether men are cleverer than women, whether women are more moral than men, whether one sex is superior to the other—how stupid are all such arguments to anyone with a mind past what can be psychologically estimated as eighteen years of age. Men and women who are "adult" have no quarrel with each other. They appreciate one another's special qualities, and every woman who uses her brains to think will agree that the more feminine the woman, the more masculine the man, the more they appeal to and attract each other.

Where are women going to? We can but study the signs of social life today. The growing interest in child welfare is a welcome sign; so is the readiness, the anxiety, of modern girls of all classes to work for themselves, rather than depend upon man for support. Woman must be economically independent if she is to be free; she must be free to marry for love, for the sake of generations yet unborn. For hundreds of years the fact that man could buy (whether within or without marriage) what woman should only give for love has adversely affected the evolution of the race. Our sex and marriage relationships are in this era chaotic, and, as every doctor knows, terrible unhappiness and psycho-neurosis exist in the world as a result. Mankind will be happier when women are free, economically independent, educated, self-disciplined, with a real share in the world's work, with real opportunities of helping to solve the problems of poverty and war—the two greatest horrors of life today. Women in the future will find life happier when they are doing work that is their special right and privilege; for example, in medicine, in children's courts, and in the church and in the education and control of children, both boys and girls. The present system of the separation of boys of the moneyed classes in great schools entirely under masculine direction is bad, as every thinking mother will agree; so, also, is the separation of girls under feminine domination. Sex disqualification and sex separation are a hindrance to human progress.

Men and women working together will achieve what neither men alone nor women alone can possibly do. Women of the future, realizing the importance of hygiene and dietetics and better educated in chemistry and physiology and psychology, will work in the cause of health in the homes and in the schools, thus raising the standard of racial health. Electricity will solve domestic labor problems, and women's improved health and longer expectation of life will insure that she will give at least a score of years of public service when her child-bearing period is over. So women will come to a new perspective. They will bring their knowledge of psychology to the upbringing of their sons and daughters. An enormous amount of illness and mental suffering is caused by women's ignorance of psychology at the present time. The first six years of life are more important than any other phase, and educated women are more and more devoting themselves to their children—another welcome sign.

Girls and young matrons of the educated classes are attending lectures and classes in child hygiene and psychology, and they are forming committees concerned with the welfare of the child. There are no blue-stockings and highbrows amongst the new generation, because the girls quite naturally take up study and social service as they learn new dance steps, new bridge conventions, new slang. Women these days are realizing the importance of interest in life. They believe—this new generation of women—in full days of occupation and recreation. They have health and energy and wonderful vitality. In the conservation and wise use of vitality, no past generation of women has surpassed them; they adjust themselves to life as it flows onward towards the future. The physical inventions of today are nothing compared with the psychological developments of tomorrow. Women must prepare through study and thought and self-discipline for the future, for the new problems of love and marriage, for the new civil and political responsibilities which they must assuredly accept in the next ten years.—Elizabeth Sloan Chessner, in The Spectator, February 26, 1927, p. 321.

We're here to-day, but who can tell
Just where or when the mystic spell,
The silver chord, the slender tie,
May strain and break, and you or I
Will have to cross the "great divide,"
And stand before the portals wide
Where every soul must enter in
And answer for its every sin?

Perhaps 'twill seem we are alone
As we approach the great "White Throne"
To meet our Savior face to face
And beg forgiveness, by His grace,
But there's another, who will stand
With outstretched arms at God's right hand;
He'll plead for us, for well he knows
Why we have missed the path He chose.

REUNION NEWS

Spring River and Clinton Reunion Plans

I want to give readers of the HERALD an idea of the recreational program planned for the combined Spring River and Clinton districts reunion to be held in Cunningham Park, Joplin, Missouri, August 12 to 21.

Recreation is not a sideline at our reunion; it is part of the real program, a certain time being set apart for recreation each day. This time is generally from half past three o'clock until the night service. Each day we are to have organized games, volley ball, playground ball, tennis, golf, horseshoes, croquet, and others. We have a swimming pool in the park to which we have access. Also we have access to some tennis courts and one of the finest golf links in this part of the country. Besides the above we are making provisions for wiener roasts and watermelon feasts during the ten days' stay. What more could one want in the way of recreation?

I hope that you will not gather the idea from the above that our reunion is all recreation, for such is not the case. But it is my duty to organize the recreational activities at that meeting, hence I am writing from the recreational aspect only.

We shall certainly be glad to have any of the Saints come to our reunion and help us enjoy ourselves for ten days in a well-rounded program. We do not believe in the "young and old" factions; we believe in younger young and elder young. You can't be an old person. We will make you feel young in spite of your age.

Write to Brother Charles Wilson, Joplin, Missouri, and make arrangements to join us for ten days.

ELSWORTH G. GILBERT, District superintendent of Department Recreation and Expression.

North Dakota District Reunion

Once more the reunion season has rolled around, bringing to North Dakota District one of the pleasantest experiences of the year. From the 24th of June until Sunday, July 3, the Saints assembled at Logan had a busy, enjoyable, and profitable time.

It had been voted last year to hold the reunion at Burlington, but, owing to continued high water of the Mouse River, the grounds there were rendered so soft and muddy it was not feasible. The high water had not covered the grounds at Logan. They were dry and clean, and though the mosquitoes were a little too much in evidence, the Saints found their association together unmarred by accident, sickness, or bad weather, and often spoke of the amiable, contented attitude of all present.

The whole time of the reunion seemed to be an intensive study period, though there were hours of relaxation for young and old. The order of the day was breakfast, 6.30 to 7.30; lecture by Bishop Albert Carmichael, 8.30; prayer meeting, 9.30; preaching, 10.45, usually by Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley though Elder Swen Swenson occupied that period several mornings; dinner, 12; preaching at 2 o'clock by Apostle Frank Curtis, with charts, his theme mainly being "The beginning and continuation of the priesthood"; this was followed at 3 o'clock by a very interesting lecture on the Hedrickite departure, in which he introduced good evidence of the solid foundation laid in the early days for the beliefs and practices of the church as restored to earth in Joseph Smith's time and reorganized again in later days. The evening service at 8.30 was usually given over to Bishop Carmichael, in which he expertly taught the law of stewardships, going into details which gave to the appreciative listener a clearer understanding of the law than had ever been given them before. The evening meetings were the best attended, and though some visitors and nonmembers were heard to express a desire for the old-time gospel principles, which they felt were all that was necessary, the majority drank in the splendid discourses and expressed surprise that a program so far-reaching and ideal was taught by this church.

While the attendance at this year's reunion was small as compared to former years, the interest manifested was greater; and as the week passed, those present could not help expressing the wish that the absent ones could be there to enjoy what all declared was a spiritual feast. Though the proposition was made that two-day meetings might profitably take the place of the annual reunion, the people would not consent to give it up and voted solidly for a continuation of the annual affair.

Those of the priesthood present this year were Apostle J. F. Curtis, Bishop Albert Carmichael, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, Elders Swen Swenson, Robert Gunlock, William Sparling, Thomas Leitch, Charles A. Smith, Warren McElwain, Frank H. Hodges, J. W. Darling; Priests Robert D. Addison, of Aberdeen, South Dakota; Frank Spaulding, Warren K. McElwain, and Lester Anderson; Teacher James O'Brien. Sister J. A. Gunsolley was also an efficient worker.

Elder J. E. Wildermuth, formerly of Fargo, North Dakota, paid us a two-day visit and preached for us. His presence was greatly enjoyed by the Saints, as he was missionary for many years in North Dakota. His many services to us were gratefully remembered.

Two very successful sessions of Sunday school were held in charge of the district officers on the two Sundays in camp. A Graceland program was given on Friday evening, at which several former students of Graceland sang songs and gave a realistic dialog of the enrolling of students at the college, with J. A. Gunsolley presiding at the desk.

Minot Branch held a business meeting on Friday afternoon. Elder William Sparling was chosen branch president, Mrs. M. D. Graham, branch secretary.

On Saturday, July 2, district conference was held with these officers elected as a result: President of the district, Elder William Sparling; counselors, Thomas Leitch and Warren McElwain; district secretary, J. W. Darling; treasurer, Warren K. McElwain; Sunday school superintendent, Lester Anderson; assistant Sunday school superintendent, Robert Gunlock; Sunday school secretary-treasurer, Ralph Darling; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Laurel McElwain; superintendent of Department of Women, Mrs. M. D. Graham; district librarian, Miss Pearl McElwain; chorister, Laurel McElwain; bishop's agent, Doctor Charles Young, was sustained. The reunion committee selected for the following year is Robert Gunlock, chairman, Mrs. M. D. Graham, secretary; Frank Spaulding, F. H. Hodges, and Lester Anderson. This committee also constitutes the commissary committee, with power given to Mrs. M. D. Graham to choose two assistants. These assistants are Mrs. Frank Anderson and Mrs. F. H. Hodges. Burlington, North Dakota, was selected as the place for the reunion of 1928. The time is left to the decision of the general and district officers.

The report given on the commissary department showed the purchase of dishes to the amount of about sixty-five dollars, these to be owned by the district and used in future reunions. For a time it was feared the commissary would not pay out, but owing to the good generalship of Apostle J. F. Curtis in putting over a drive for a fund for next year, a generous sum was subscribed in a few minutes, which, added to later sales of groceries and payment of belated accounts, put our commissary in the clear with a nice sum to start on next year. There were seven hundred eighty-six meals served, the last Sunday seeing one hundred and twenty at dinner and about the same at supper.

The last Sunday of the reunion was a day of deep spiritual pleasure to all. The prayer meetings throughout were considered very good, but the Sunday morning and afternoon sacramental meetings were felt to be splendid in spirit and of great interest. Seven little children were blessed, six new members added by baptism, and the ordination of Brother Ralph Darling to the office of priest was attended to that day.

Apostle Curtis preached in the afternoon to a large crowd, while Bishop Carmichael closed the services that night with a spirited appeal to the Saints to live the law of the church in stewardships as well as in all other laws.

As usual a feeling of sadness comes at parting, for often a few familiar faces are missed the following year; but the sadness was alleviated by the feeling of satisfaction which came to those attending, that they had indeed had a feast of good things given to them, which could not fail to strengthen them during their absence from one another.

MRS. M. D. GRAHAM.

Northern Wisconsin Reunion

This reunion was one well worth remembering as to location, association, and all its features from beginning to end. Some of the things (it is impractical or impossible to mention all) that were worth while will be noted. We are in accord with the sentiment that "brevity is the soul of wit," and will follow the lead of those who have the art of condensing and of saying most in the fewest words.

We would like to mention many names of those who were present and contributed by their presence to the success of the reunion, but do not think it practical.

As to the setting of the reunion, Wisconsin itself is no mean State. Much of beauty characterizes its landscape, not excepting this northern part. Its many lakes, its level lands, its cultivated fields, its beautiful trees of pine, fir, oak, birch, etc., all go to make up its bounty and beauty. God is in evidence in his creation. The reunion grounds and the town of Chetek, just south, front on Lake Chetek, a beautiful body of water about fourteen miles long. There are many cottages and some pretentious houses around its shores, occupied mostly by summer visitors. The Northern Wisconsin District purchased its grounds fifteen years ago at a low figure. By the growth of the town, and the increase of tourists and resorters, these grounds have become valuable. Several denominations have camp grounds here and hold meetings yearly.

The improvements on our reunion grounds include a large tabernacle, dining hall, kitchen, and a cottage purchased not long since. The cottage was made good use of during the reunion. There are more than a sufficient number of trees for shade. The location of the grounds is a fortunate one. It is the purpose of the reunion committee to beautify the grounds and make them more attractive than have nature and the work done so far. Next year gives promise of a bigger and better reunion, as the Minnesota District will unite with the Northern Wisconsin District in reunion capacity. This year the reunion was held July 1-10. The time for next year is not yet fixed. Everything worked like a well-oiled machine, and while due credit should be given to the local workers, District President Lester O. Wildermuth, before, during, and after the reunion, had much to do with the comfort and convenience of the visitors and the success of the whole reunion.

The kitchen and dining room, no unimportant part of the ensemble, were very efficiently managed by Mrs. G. Hewitt, assisted by Sister Louise Sponaule. The cooking and meals were greatly appreciated and commended. There were a host of valuable assistants for the dishwashing part, which made it possible to serve good meals on time at a minimum cost.

The time was well planned and utilized. The morning prayer services were from 8.30 to 9.30. A lecture or round table followed at 9.45; preaching service at 11. In the afternoon on week days, preaching, round table or lecture, and department work occupied the time. Sister Effie Field, of Janesville, Wisconsin, had charge of both the junior church and the women's work. Many of these meetings were held on the time or at the same time of other services. We could not attend more than one meeting at a time, so we can only write of those we did attend. From what we saw and heard, we judge that the women's and junior church services were very interesting and profitable. The speakers of the reunion assisted in giving sermons and presiding at prayer meetings. Sister Ethelyn Hield also gave good assistance in story-telling.

A program was given on Friday evening, July 8, by the Recreation and Expression Department, of Porcupine. An orchestra led by Judson Livingston furnished the instrumental part. In connection with it, Graceland College pictures were shown by Elder D. T. Williams. This was a pleasing program. The Porcupine reinforcements were very welcome. There were hours of relaxation, some of which were spent in playing volley ball and other games. A few hours were spent on the lake in boating, fishing, or bathing. Some who were dying for fish had their lives saved. There may have been some that did not own up to their desperate need of fish for brain or other food, who were remarkably helped. Brother D. T. Williams spoke a number of times of the Wisconsin Saints, or those at the reunion, as "such nice people," and we felt to agree with him. We saw no inharmony, heard no faultfinding, felt no opposition in any part of the reunion program.

Being from Independence, we were not starved for preaching, but it seemed better here than there, and I believe it was attended and put over by a greater power of the Spirit. I could not fail to realize the benefit to the reunion of Bishop Carmichael's teaching and preaching along the stewardship and financial line. I am sure that great good was done, and that his teaching has been long needed, wanted, and waited for in this district. I wish that every reunion and every district might have the benefit of the same course of instruction that the Bishop gave her. Brother Carmichael's meetings and teachings, as also Apostle D. T. Williams's lectures and class work on the home, the priesthood, and members' duties have added to my realization that the school of the prophets is on the way. The appreciation of all the speakers of the reunion is general, but because of the special need, there is special appreciation of Bishop Carmichael's efforts. Patriarch W. A. McDowell and Elder L. G. Holloway gave a number of good sermons, as well as doing other good work. A few obtained their blessings at the hands of Brother McDowell. This meant much to the recipients, and we were very glad that the arrangements could be made for them to receive according to their desires. As to what the writer did, it is inconsiderable and unimportant, but he is trying to make up here at Chetek since the reunion for his lack during the reunion.

On the last Sunday, eight were baptized by Brothers Fred Atwood and Harry Steede. They were confirmed at the afternoon meeting. Monday after the reunion, but in reality a part of it, Gladys Hewitt, a daughter of our cook, was baptized by Brother L. G. Holloway, and confirmed by Elders Holloway and Wildermuth. The confirmation meeting was one long to be remembered by all who were present, for from its beginning a glad and beautiful spirit was present, but as the benediction was said, a wonderful melting influence of the Holy Spirit came down upon us and gave the final touch of blessing to the meeting, to the reunion, and to the young sister baptized. And we feel sure it was a season of blessing to her mother, and the ice was indeed broken for the whole family.

To renew old acquaintance, to make new, and especially to meet and be with one of the old not then prominent, Elder L. O. Wildermuth, has been pleasurable and profitable. But we had pleasure in the association of other old and some new acquaintances and promising brethren of the district. We appreciate to the full also those sisters not mentioned by name who are doing their bit and their best to "Lift high the royal banner," and who by doing their part with others, helped to make the reunion the success that it was. Their slogan is, "Forward to 1930 and on." In conclusion, I wish to say, that inasmuch as the writing of this report by myself was an afterthought on the part of the reunion committee, and has been done from memory, it is hoped that errors, if there be any, or omissions may be pardoned. M. F. GOWELL.

Texas Central Reunion

On Friday, July 8, the reunion of the Central Texas District opened with a play entitled "Mother of mine," which was rendered by the young people of Hearne Branch. It was an excellent exhibition of the talent and untiring disposition of the youth of the church here. Many favorable comments were heard, both from those within the church and those without. They are planning on something even better by next time, so it is quite apparent that the young people here believe in advancing as they go on in life. They at least have the faculty of starting a thing off right.

On Saturday the district conference met and transacted the business necessary to be done for the good of the district. The name of Elder C. W. Tischer was the unanimous choice of the district for president, and he was given the privilege of nominating his assistants. Those selected by him were Elder H. H. Davenport, from Dallas, and the district missionary, J. E. Vanderwood. This selection was unanimously approved. The trusted and faithful old war horse, Sheldon Armstrong, was chosen to succeed himself as secretary-treasurer of the district. Ira Snedeker, from Houston, was chosen to have charge of the Sunday School Department; C. M. Mitchell, of Bryan, as head of the Department of Recreation and Expression; Mary Beth Mitchell as head of the Department of Music; and Mrs. C. W. Tischer as head of the Department of Women.

I feel sure the people of the district can feel congratulated upon their selection of officers, and there is no question in our minds respecting the possibilities that lie before this district. We feel sure that with the corps of officers now on the job we will be able to do teamwork, which is so essential to successful work and accomplishment in any line.

We had with us as workers Brother and Sister H. E. Winegar, from the Southwestern District, and Bishop C. J. Hunt, from Independence, Missouri. Brother Winegar had charge of the young people's activities, and his athletic ability has surely endeared him to the young people of our district. Sister Winegar, representing the departments, did some very good work, especially among the women of the district. She requested Brother Vanderwood to assist her in presenting to the people the ideals and functions of the Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression. I am sure the people are able to go to their work this summer with a more certain understanding of their privileges than ever before. All seem to be encouraged in their prospects, and have expressed a desire and a willingness to work.

Bishop Hunt was at his best, and those who know him will be able to understand what this means. To say he was loved by all is putting it mildly, and the bishop's faculty of putting over the program of the church is so pronounced that it would be a very difficult thing for anyone to go out from this reunion without having a very clear and definite understanding of his duty in the work of the church. Brother Hunt is one of those graceful men who will never grow old, though he should be permitted to remain on the earth as long as did Methuselah. Peace and harmony prevailed throughout, and the people rejoiced in the blessings of the latter-day gospel.

On Thursday it became necessary for Brethren Winegar and Hunt to leave for the other reunion, and the young people were thereafter placed under the leadership of J. E. Vanderwood. They met every morning under the oak in the forest, made sacred to them by virtue of the Spirit of God which met with them there from time to time. It was there that the youth of the church in this district expressed their desire to see the program of the church carried out, and pledged themselves to do all within their power to put it across. Surely with the kind of consecration manifested by these young people there is a bright future for the work here.

The young people met at eight o'clock each morning for their worship under the sacred oak, and at nine o'clock they would march into the tabernacle just at the opening of the regular prayer meeting, singing such songs as, "We're marching to Zion," "Onward, Christian soldiers," or the consecration hymn, and by this means they would be able to inspire the older ones with the real spirit of worship, and fire them with a zeal for the performing of the work that is intrusted to all. It is a blessed thing to be permitted to work with the youth of the church and to feel the strength of their faith and zeal for the work.

Both youth and aged seemed to be encouraged and strengthened for the tasks that lie immediately before us, and I am sure there is a brighter future for our work in this district. All the department heads are awake to the needs of the work, and they see the need for teamwork if we are to be able to put over the program that is intrusted to us. It is evident, too, that where there is a desire to do teamwork, there is great possibility of wonderful advancement. The older people have consideration for the young, and the young respect and revere the aged, so I am sure there is every reason to feel encouraged with the work here at the present time. While the officers of the district are principally young, or may be classed with the young and middle aged, they have the confidence and support of the entire membership, and this means much in the way of success. The spirit of unity is quite pronounced in our district, and we feel sure that we are going to be able to bend all our energies for the forwarding of the cause that is intrusted to us.

One of the most hopeful signs of progress here is the fact that the young people are looking ahead with the idea of making the next reunion more profitable than the present one has been. Such expressions as, "I am going to do what I can to prepare for better work"; or "I am so glad there is an opportunity for me to contribute something for the good of the work"; or "I am going to try to be better prepared for the work of our next reunion than I was for this one," were heard falling from the lips of the young people as we neared the close of the reunion.

But the most commendable of all was to hear young men and women say, "I am going back to my branch and work. I am going to try to get the young people there to see the need of going forward"; to hear them say, "I have caught the spirit and vision of this work, and I want to do my best to move it forward." Surely we are going to be able to make strides in this part of the world when we have young people who are thus dedicated to the interests of the cause.

We have reason to rejoice, and to take courage when the prospects are so favorable as we find them at the present time. Of course we see plenty of room for improvement, and we hope to be able to go on in the way of improvement, but we are certainly cheered with the present outlook.

May the God of love and truth send his Spirit to the noble youth of the church and qualify them for their respective duties.

CORRESPONDENT.

Lamoni Stake Reunion Prospects

Arrangements are well under way for the Lamoni stake reunion which will open with a prayer service on Wednesday morning, August 10, and close with the evening service on August 21.

The theme, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God," is intended to stimulate our people to greater activity and a fuller consecration of our time, our talents, and our lives to the work of God.

On the opening night, local talent will give two plays, "The hour glass," and "Where love is, God is," accompanied by the Lamoni Orchestra.

Friday, August 12, has been designated as Music Day, and on that evening a combined concert will be given by the Lamoni Choir and the Lamoni Orchestra. In addition to the general recreational activities which will be conducted each afternoon at 3.30, with the exception of Sundays, Monday, August 15, will be Recreation Day. On this afternoon there will be a camp track and field program, and in the evening the Lamoni Concert Band will give a concert at 7.45. This will be followed by a program and stunts. Programs have been arranged for these days that will be of special interest to the young people.

Nursery work for the children of pre-school age will be conducted by Sister W. E. Haden, and children's meetings for boys and girls between the ages of five and eight years will be conducted by Sister Ralph Lorange each day during regular services. The activities for girls between the ages of eight and twenty-five will be under the supervision of Sister C. B. Woodstock, and they will be divided into three groups, the Blue Birds, the Moentitas, and the Temple Builders.

Interesting programs are being arranged for boys between the ages of eight and fifteen, under the supervision of Brother Roy A. Cheville.

At 10.45 each day, with the exception of Sundays, Apostle F. Henry Edwards will conduct a class in the study of "Church history and current problems," and at 2 o'clock each afternoon Bishop J. A. Koehler will teach a course in "Problems of industrial Zion." Both of these courses will be conducted so as to give special consideration to vital problems of to-day.

Prayer services will be held each morning for the young people at 7.30 and a union prayer service for all ages at 9 o'clock. Preaching services will be held each evening, with the exception of Wednesday, August 10, Friday, August 12, and

The reunion is held on the reunion grounds, a tract of thirty-seven acres of natural woods, located one mile south of Lamoni and owned by the Lamoni Stake. Spokane District Reunion

The location of our reunion at Upper Twin Lakes was ideal, the weather was good, and the Saints were feeling fine. The gathering was an uplift from first to last. Brothers J. F. Curtis and J. A. Gillen, of the Quorum of Twelve, and Elder P. R. Burton, of the seventy, our district missionary, also Brother Eli Bronson, of the seventy, were there.

Brother Burton was in charge of the young people and supervised their worship and recreation. All the recreational activities were supervised and directed. Time for games, time for boating and swimming, and time for worship was the program. In fact, all the time of each of these was supervised. We have a very fine lot of young people in the Spokane District, and they have the spirit of worship and a vision of Zion.

Our reunion was in charge of the district president and Apostles Gillen and Curtis. The apostles did most of the preaching, and when I say they were at their best, I am only expressing it mildly. Brother Curtis's sermons were on the missionary phase of the work. He used charts and portrayed the principles of the gospel so plainly that there would be no need of anyone's misunderstanding them. Brother Curtis stayed all through the reunion.

Brother Gillen came the first Sunday and stayed all through. His sermons were very uplifting, for he told the Saints their duties and responsibilities. The program of the church was held before them, and his sermon Sunday afternoon on "Priesthood authority" was a masterly effort.

The prayer services were good and well attended.

Early morning calisthenics were enjoyed and participated in by most all the camp. Brother Burton led this exercise.

Food was free, and everyone donated what he could. We came out about even. If all the pledges were paid, we would have a credit balance.

We must mention the young people's prayer service each morning. Nearly all the young people took part, and the meetings were a great success.

Junior church and primary church services were an inspiration to all. A parade by the primaries was arranged, and it was more than interesting. It denoted patient work and labor by our sisters who had charge. Sister Alice Kinue was in charge of the primary work, assisted by Sister Case and Sister Gersel Wilson.

I must say I never saw a greater interest taken among the young. Surely with such zeal and interest we can prepare for Zion.

The Saints went home feeling good and hopeful of a better reunion next year.

OSCAR CASE, District president.

Musings at Park of the Pines

By B. H. Doty

I stood on the beach one evening;

The waves were rolling high.

The moon shone in its glory,

'Twas pleasing to my eye.

I thought of those around me,

Those of like precious faith.

The trees, they, too, seemed hallowed;

Likewise the stones beneath.

All nature seemed to mingle

Its harmony around,

While I stood there in silence,

With feet on holy ground.

The night birds all were singing

Their songs so joyously,

And still I stood there musing

In silent reverie.

I pondered on God's goodness,

His love, his charity;

The gift of his dear Son to us;

His might, his majesty;

I saw his people, Israel,

Encamped so near to me.

I saw their lives before him

Were filled with purity.

I saw them marching onward

To Zion's chosen land.

The youth, the old, together,

Led by God's mighty hand.

I saw them reach there safely,

With songs of lasting lay;

With robes, made white through service

While traveling 'long the way.

Oh! Park of Pines, I'll never Forget you! How can I?

From you I'll never sever!

There're many reasons why.

For all who've ever been here

Have felt God's presence near;

Their lives have been made richer;

Their love for thee, more dear.

Oh, Park of Pines! Why can't we Make sacred every spot

Beneath thy trees of beauty,

And everything you've got?

We'll try to do the best we can,

Dear Park of Pines, I'm sure!

To pay you for the blessedness

Received by us while here.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Lincoln, Nebraska

Corner 26th and H Streets

The people in Lincoln never seem as enthusiastic in the summer as during the winter, but the different departments, Sunday school, Religio, Department of Women, and Temple Builders are still very active and have their regular meetings.

The Temple Builders have made curtains for the church basement; they are in their colors, blue and white, and they are going to work their emblems on them also. Their last meeting was held in Antelope Park in the afternoon and evening. The time was spent in taking pictures and finishing some gifts which had been started in a previous meeting. Each girl took some delicious article of food, and a picnic lunch was enjoyed at the end of the day.

Brother E. F. Robertson and wife and Elsie Hale will leave about July 14 for different parts of the State. They will go in Brother Robertson's car and plan to be gone about three weeks. Their first objective is Neleigh, where they will spend about ten days at the Central Nebraska reunion. From there they will go to North Platte to attend the reunion to be held there in the last part of July and the first of August.

The Chapple family were glad to have Brother and Sister McFarlane from Independence with them for the fourth of July. They also had visitors from Iowa. A large number of the Saints of Lincoln spent the week-end at Union, camping in the Everett grove near there. They went on Saturday evening and held church out of doors on Sunday morning and afternoon. They stayed over for Monday and celebrated the Fourth. The time was spent in boating, playing ball, etc. The people from the Nebraska City Branch were there also, and a good time was enjoyed by everyone present.

There was a good attendance at church on July 10. Brother Robertson preached in the morning, giving a very much enjoyed sermon. Religio was held at 7 p. m. with a nice crowd of young people present. A program was given at the beginning of the hour by Hazel Easton and Alice Lee Larson, who played two saxophone duets accompanied by Eunice Easton on the piano. Miss Larson also played a beautiful solo. Brother Rasmussen gave a reading on the same program. Brother Robertson again occupied at the 8 o'clock services. His subject was "Have faith in God." Elsie Hale sang a solo at the beginning of the service.

We are all planning a good time at the district conference and young people's convention which will be held at Wilber the first week in September. We will camp, and the people at Wilber have notified us that they will supply us with fresh butter, eggs, and milk. The meetings will be held in a grove on the Blue River. The Lincoln Saints will take the big reunion tent, and we cordially invite anyone who cares to attend to come and have a nice time. Thursday, September 1, will be devoted to recreation, with a big program in the evening. On Friday the time will be spent in convention work, and Saturday and Sunday will be occupied with business meetings, prayer meetings, and preaching.

The Department of Women and Temple Builders held a social in the church basement the evening of July 11. The room was decorated in blue and white. The evening was spent in visiting, and refreshments consisting of sherbet and cake were served. A good time was enjoyed by all. There were about twenty-five women and girls present. This is the first time we have tried a combined social of women and girls, but it was a huge success, and we recommend it to others who are looking for some way to spend a pleasant evening.

Brother E. F. Robertson has been elected president of the Lincoln Branch since the resignation of Brother Bilyue. Brother Bilyue and his family have moved to Wyoming.

Sunday, July 17, there was a large attendance at church. Brother Shakespeare preached and told us some things well worth remembering. A number of people from Nebraska City drove to Lincoln for the day. They were present for church in the morning, getting there in much better time than some of us who have not very far to go to the church. We hope they will come again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Zimmer have moved to California, where Mr. Zimmer will be in business for about a year. We understand they will return to their home here in Lincoln at the end of that time. Mrs. Zimmer is the daughter of the late Blanche I. Andrews.

The church is located at the corner of 26th and H streets. Visitors are always welcome!

San Diego, California

During the past three months the work has been onward in San Diego. There have been six baptisms, Brother W. F. Kellerby and wife, Julia, with their two daughters, Barbara, seventeen who has been our efficient Sunday school secretary this year, and Mabel, eleven; Avis Aileen, sixteen, and Marce O., jr., nine, children of Brother and Sister M. O. Harder, formerly of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Brother Kellerby is taking hold of the work with commendable zeal and has been chosen superintendent of the Religio for the present term.

Brother Gray's energy and enthusiasm has resulted in a marked change in the interior of the church building, as well as affecting the membership. The speaker's stand has been changed from the floor of the room to a raised platform, giving better vision to both speaker and congregation. A new baptismal font has been built to the left of this platform, where the baptisms are in full view of all the people. Further construction of a choir loft and two classrooms will be made back of the pulpit in the space now occupied by a stage fourteen by thirty-six feet.

Brother and Sister J. V. Thompson are the happy parents of a baby boy, who came to their home the morning of Mothers' Day, May 8, and answers to the name of Allen Ralph.

Sister Thompson recently was threatened with appendicitis and was taken to the hospital; but in response to administration, and the prayers of the Saints, she was taken home three days later without an operation. God still recognizes the efforts of his people in each other's behalf.

Apostle M. A. McConley was with us June 18 and 19 and preached for us three times. The four young people baptized the week before were also confirmed. The attendance was good, and interest increased, several nonmembers being present for the first time. Being at the end of the State, the general church officers do not visit here very often, and it is a real treat when they do.

Sister Zaida Sherman, daughter of Brother and Sister G. F. Sherman, was married June 25, to Mr. Elvin McGowan, who is connected with The San Diego Sun, one of our large daily papers. They are living at 4549 Thirty-third Street.

July 3 was a "big day" for the church in San Diego. District President N. T. Chapman and Evangelist F. G. Pitt, of Long Beach, with Sister Charles Chapman and little Richard, of Independence, Missouri, were with us from Saturday evening, when Brother Pitt preached to an appreciative audience. Sunday began with a priesthood meeting at 8.30, followed by Sunday school at 9.45. Sacramental service followed at eleven. Following the service of the emblems, the usual social meeting gave way that Brother Pitt might preach, there being strangers present. A basket dinner was prepared in the basement dining room, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. At three o'clock all again assembled in the audience room, and again we listened to the gospel story by Brother Pitt. Supper came in due time and then Religio at 6.30. Here Brother Chapman acted as teacher to the whole audience of adults, a large class, and an interesting program consisting of music, the reading of the monthly paper The Tattler, and a much-enjoyed talk on Australia, by Sister Pitt. By vote of the assembly, this meeting was merged into the one to follow, and again Brother Pitt was the speaker, this time giving an account of their travels and missionary experiences in Palestine. It was greatly enjoyed. Brother and Sister Pitt sang special songs at each of the meetings. There were several strangers present during the day who had never before attended a service of our church. All expressed themselves as greatly pleased. Julia, the five-year-old child of Brother and Sister Kellerby, was blessed by Patriarch F. G. Pitt at the eleven o'clock service. Taken as a whole, it was the best day's meetings that has been held in San Diego, both spiritually and socially. I nearly forgot to mention that five of the young people of the Lacey family, of Santa Ana, drove down and were here for the evening services.

Brother Gray has gone with his family for a two-week vacation, taking in the Northern California district reunion at Irvington. Elder G. F. Sherman is in charge during his absence. Brother and Sister E. C. Aylor, also, are in attendance at the same reunion.

Our pastor has recently moved to a new place of residence, his present address being Elder A. T. Gray, 1340 Third Street, San Diego, California.

Brother Eugene E. Burk, of the Navy, just back from the Hawaiian station for a few days, and Brother Hugh E. Brouner, recently from the cruise to the eastern coast, were with us Sunday, July 10. They both will go with the fleet to the northern waters as far as Seattle, soon.

Should any of our readers from out of town come to San Diego, do not forget that we are always at home at the church at 4328 Alabama Street, and a cordial welcome awaits you.

C. A. GURWELL.

The Promptings of the Holy Spirit

By Katherine Nichols, Brooklyn, New York

These thoughts have been the result of experiences I, with others, have had in the recent past at our cottage prayer meetings, which were instituted several months ago to make it more convenient for a group of Saints living quite a distance from the church to attend. We all meet in the church on the Sabbath, but during the week in these days of strenuous activity and business, social, and home life, we find it conducive to a better spirit in our prayer meetings where one doesn't have to rush so much to get there and wear out one's nerves contending with the traffic conditions prevalent in all large cities.

That our doing so has been pleasing to our heavenly Father has been very obvious, as we have been blessed with a degree of his Holy Spirit which has been extremely edifying to those permitted to partake and has created within me, and judging from the testimonies and prayers offered, within the others, a desire to give more room in our lives to the Holy Spirit. I have been made to marvel over and over at the patience and kindness of a gracious, loving Father, who is ever ready to respond to our least advance, and so my mind has been dwelling a great deal on this subject, the result of which is enlightenment such as I never had before.

Power to Do Miracles

Another result is a knowledge of the power resident within each one of God's children to do whatever we wish to do; to have whatever we wish to have (inasmuch as our wishes are worthy); to perform what to the conscious mind would be miracles. All this and more we can do if we but permit the Holy Spirit to dictate our actions. This it cannot do so long as we give fear or doubt a place in our conscious minds. These, along with envy, malice, covetousness, and like attitudes of the mind, many times take up so much of our conscious mind that there is little room for the Holy Spirit. If, however, we could drive them from us, really and truly believing what we so often utter, that God is omnipotent, supreme in power and love, every fear and doubt would be replaced by the Holy Spirit, and having faith in God's power we, being filled with that power, could do what the world calls miracles, because they do not sense the power of God's Holy Spirit when it is permitted to operate in our lives. We do not live up to our potentialities because we are afraid; but with the realization that nothing is impossible to God and that we who are made in his image, if we will proceed to do battle royal against fear and doubt, permitting God's Spirit to be the motivating power in our lives, can accomplish anything. When the disciples marveled at the miracles that Jesus performed, he said to them, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; if ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." "For verily, I say unto you, that whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou moved and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith." "The kingdom of God is within you." Christ did not mean that we could do greater works that he could do. Our faith tells us that he could have done infinitely more, but he meant that we could do as much and more than he did at that time if we had the proper faith.

Application of This Power

Applying this principle to our conscious efforts, we can be successful in any undertaking—in our businesses, in our studies; we can be well and strong in our bodies, if we believe it; if we think continually of the better side of life, there will be no room for the darker side from which so many people suffer. The following verse by Edgar A. Guest seems apropos:

"You can do as much as you think you can,
But you'll never accomplish more;
If you're afraid of yourself, young man,
There's little for you in store.
For failure comes from the inside first,
It's there if we only knew it,
And you can win, though you face the worst,
If you feel that you're going to do it."

Also let me relate an incident I recently read. There were two boys, sixteen and eighteen years of age respectively, who lifted a great log off their brother who had been caught under it. The next day these same two boys with two men were unable to budge one end of this same log, it was so big and heavy. In their dire distress for their brother, they had sensed the need of great strength, the strength of several men, and unconsciously they called upon that reserve power within them, put it into action, and saved their brother.

Have you not often found that when you thought you had reached the limit of endurance, physical or mental, you met and endured still more? To me religion is not an abstract philosophy; it is life in all its phases. If we would take God at his word and let his Spirit operate in our lives, we could accomplish much. Zion could be redeemed, the coming of our Lord hastened, and all because we have come to a realization of the power of the Holy Spirit through the promptings of which if listened to and applied to our lives we could perform miracles.

Truth Taught in All Ages

They say there is nothing new under the sun, and this I believe when applied to the fundamental principles of life. Way back in the days of the Greek philosophers, Socrates, Plato, Epictetus, and others, they taught the very same principle of faith in a supreme power. They had no fear of death because they strove to live righteously. They taught that truth is the apex of everything, and everything should be sacrificed to it. Human nature has been the same through all the ages fundamentally, but it does seem that we are becoming more and more enlightened, and such being the case should not we be doing more and still more for the cause that has brought us into the light?

To me the gospel of Jesus Christ is all inclusive, and the reason I am a Latter Day Saint is because this church has taught me the fullness of the gospel, and for the degree of faith and knowledge I have I am truly grateful to God. It is my earnest prayer that as a people we will awaken and put to use the power of the Holy Spirit within us, allowing its promptings full sway in our lives so that we may bring about God's purpose in our creation.

A Living Example of Faith and Works

From information furnished by Roy F. Hewes, bishop's agent of the Utah District, we learn just a bit of the life work of a sister in the church whose loyalty and devotion through a long period of years makes her life an outstanding example.

Sister Ellen Carlson, of Logan, Utah, was baptized into the church by Elder Peter Anderson over thirty years ago. Since that time she has never heard a sermon preached. She is now eighty-two years of age and makes her living by weaving rugs on a loom which she has used for forty years. During the years Brother Hewes has been agent, she has paid more tithing than any other one member of the Utah District.

When the Auditorium drive was made in 1920, she gave $50, and later sent an equal amount, stating that although she had laid this away for a specific purpose, she thought the Lord's work needed it more, and she felt to give it freely, trusting that the Lord would take care of her when she needed help. With Brother Hewes's letter, there came from Sister Carlson additional tithing and $10 more for the Auditorium.

The accompanying picture shows Sister Carlson on the porch of her little home where for many years she has lived and worked. Her offerings of service and money testify she loves God and his work.

Many Saints find it difficult to remain steadfast and poised in the work of God under the favorable conditions of branch privileges and communion of Saints, but who of us can say that through thirty years' time, without once hearing the voice of an elder proclaiming the gospel of Christ, we would have remained steadfast to the church.

It is refreshing in the midst of the petty occurrences of life that seemingly so easily disturb, to know of one who has remained true and faithful, as has Sister Ellen Carlson.

Could we but know of all the Ellen Carlsons in the church, and could we know of their life history, it would make a story the like of which has never been printed.

In the quiet walks of life there come to us ever and again these stories of sacrifice, devotion, and loyalty, which send us to our tasks with stronger faith and greater courage.

Magnolia, Iowa

A number of the Saints from this place attended district conference at Woodbine; they report a large attendance and a spiritual time of enjoyment.

District President Joseph Lane met with us at our last midweek prayer service. He called at the homes of a number that day. Brother Lane is always a welcome visitor. He never fails to cheer and encourage.

Sister J. D. Stuart has returned to her home after a four weeks' absence. She has been at Rochester, Minnesota, where she underwent an operation for goiter. The Saints feel that their prayers in her behalf are answered, for she got along wonderfully well.

We are needing rain badly. The late potatoes and garden stuffs are damaged. Raspberry crops are cut short; the corn however is not hurt yet.

Coldwater, Michigan

Some of the Saints from our branch took advantage of the week-end and Fourth of July holiday. Brother and Sister Starr Corless visited their children at Dowagiac, Michigan, and attended services on Sunday at Mishawaka, Indiana. Brother and Sister M. A. Johnson were guests of their son Maurice and family at Grand Rapids, Michigan, and attended the all-day meeting there.

Sisters Martelle and Margarete Ellis have been spending some time with their aunt and family of Fort Wayne, Indiana. Martelle is taking a course of pipe organ of Professor Bender. They are very much missed in our branch services.

Diana Corless, of Three Rivers, Michigan, attended services here July 3.

Brother Lewis Fisk has been elected superintendent of the Sunday school to fill a vacancy.

Brother Scott preaches here occasionally and in the different branches of the district, especially at Clear Lake, Indiana, where he is appreciated and much needed.

Sister Scott and young daughters have been at Battle Creek, Michigan, for some time, as Sister Scott has a new granddaughter over there, born to her daughter, Grace, and husband. We hear she is a very good-natured, blue-eyed girl, and has been given the name of Maralyn Louise.

Sister Ellen Scott Waldron, of Schenectady, New York, is making an extended visit at the parental home here and with her sister at Battle Creek, Michigan.

Mr. and Sister Charles Farmer, of the Port Huron Branch, enroute to Battle Creek, where they left their two sons, Max and Francis, for military training, spent a short time in our city visiting relatives.

Bishop A. B. Phillips and wife, motoring from Detroit, Michigan, to Lamoni, Iowa, made a short visit at the home of Brother and Sister Starr Corless, and Brother Phillips preached for us once at the church. His sermon had the Zionitic ring and should be of great interest to all Saints in this age. Come again, Brother and Sister Phillips. We hope to have a better acquaintance next time you visit our branch.

For some time we have been badly handicapped here by having so many of our members locate in larger cities where labor conditions are better, but we feel somewhat encouraged, as we have a new factory coming here and strong talk of the second one.

We are pleased indeed to have Brother and Sister O. J. Hawn, late of Indianapolis, Indiana, settle here. Brother Hawn is our missionary. The three sermons already preached by him have done us spiritual good, and we trust all may profit by them. Brother Hawn will be with us over another Sunday and then is to attend the reunion of the district at Lemon Park, Indian Lake, near Vicksburg, Michigan.

Sister Mary Wicks and son, Wayne, and Sister Veeneena Paurot and son, Rollin, of Jackson, Michigan, were in the city and attended our services July 10. They are among the loved and lost ones, formerly of our branch.

Brother Frank Perry has been in poor health for some time, but is much improved and able to attend church again, for which all are glad.

Sister Blanch Peer has been ill. She is somewhat improved, but not yet strong.

Brother Floyd Melf and family have located in Battle Creek, where he is engaged in the grocery business.

Apostle Hanson in Far North

On the twenty-first day of June I was awakened at Bøn at a very early hour by the sweet singing of birds. The day, fully opened, was beautiful, clear, and warm.

Elder Ruch and two of the brethren accompanied me to the railway station about one mile from town. Four days were profitably spent with the Saints in this place. The branch official force was augmented by the ordination of a Brother Iverson to the office of priest.

One afternoon Brother Ruch and I attended a women's departmental meeting in the church. The majority of those present, regular attendants, were nonmembers of the church, but took an active part in the proceedings. Sister Ruch was in charge. In response to an invitation, I made a talk, Brother Ruch interpreting.

The express was taken at 9.30 a. m. for Trondhjem. I traveled third class. There is a second class, but now no first class.

Along the way were little farms, some on the steep mountain sides, reaching in places to the snow line. A number of buildings were turf covered. One noticeable feature in the country was big barns, well built, with a runway entering at one end. On account of the long and cold winters, nearly everything is put within the barn, hence its large size.

One observes now and again a bundle of straw on top of a post, the remains of a sheaf of grain placed there at Christmas time, under the influence of its spirit, for the birds when the snow is deep on the ground.

On the way the train rises above the snow line, much snow lying in places.

One could not but be attracted to the foaming cascades, racing and raging torrents, and streams formed from the melted snow tumbling from great heights and forming into fleecy waterfalls, resembling a bridal veil; all hurrying on their way to the lakes and fjords which, like lustrous pearls, adorn the country's body.

What is it that lifts all this water, and causes it to descend by means of snow, dew, and rain—the process continuing in endless cycles?

The quick answer, "Gravitation," to such a stupendous question is well-nigh meaningless without supreme intelligence being recognized in the background.

My arrival at Trondhjem at 11.45 p. m. was in the midst of a glorious sunset. The sun had gone down, but the sky overhead and near the horizon was painted in glowing colors, blazing in amazingly well-chosen places like a furnace. This remained until after twelve o'clock.

There were no street lights, as there was no real darkness. Quite a number of people were frequenting the streets, some gazing in the shop windows which from the natural light were in visible display.

I walked to the cathedral, built of marble and the finest in Scandinavia, then about the main part of the city.

At one o'clock I pulled the curtain down in my room and concluded it was time to go to bed. A feather tick for a covering was, as usual, provided. It was not too warm and was light and comfortable.

One practice throughout Scandinavia is one price for all, Americans included. This is not the rule in some European countries.

At Trondhjem I embarked on the mail steamer Midnatsol

(Midnight Sun), bound for Narvik and calling at a number of intermediate ports.

The lighthouses do not burn during the summer. Most skillful navigation is required along the coast to maneuver the boats through the maze of islets and narrow passes. Towering snow-capped mountains are seen along the mainland.

The ports are made on schedule time, like a train reaching a station.

How inhospitably placed are many of the villages and homes! But perhaps the people are as happy as some living amidst extraordinary complexities of civilized life. From the labors and sacrifices of many of the people living in lowly places come the fish that often enrich our tables.

Life—what a wonderful and mysterious thing! More and more I marvel at its intricacies. In the ground, or the earth, in the air, and in the water is life manifested in all conceivable forms. Elder ducks were to be seen usually along the shores, and occasionally penguins.

At the island of Hestmånde, the Arctic Circle is crossed.

At Bodo I broke my journey, and there beheld the midnight sun—I think probably the most glorious spectacle ever before my eyes. Here for one and one half months in the summer the sun does not sink below the horizon. I saw it amidst resplendent clouds, gracefully dropping into a curve to almost due north, occasionally slightly hidden behind the peaks of the island of Landegode. At midnight the compass was pointing almost exactly to the sun.

I stood from ten o'clock till one, deeply affected by the scene. Instead of seeing the sun disappear below the horizon, how strange to see it well up above—then moving in its upward course. Yesterday and tomorrow were fused into the present without the element of night. The sun nearly all the while was set in clouds of indescribable splendor, some of the rose, gray, yellow, purple, silver, and gold reflected on the shimmering sea! Visible nearly all the while, but delicately hidden amid perfect cloud formations. I wish all could have seen the sight.

The night before was cloudy; no sun could be seen. Some have even gone to the North Cape and returned disappointed in not seeing the sun, owing to fog or clouds; others have seen it in a clear sky.

The view brought to me a clear consciousness of the Supreme Being. I could see him as clearly as when beholding a master painting, its author.

I had walked three miles to this vantage point. Down in the deep are the pearls—the most precious things are obtained by effort. Alone I stood, tirelessly gazing at the sky.

Alone? Not so!

I was beholding a heavenly masterpiece.

The sky was transfigured.

My hat was removed, and while standing on the shore pondering upon the Lord's goodness, his providences, marvelous works, and my assigned field of labor, the following came slowly from my heart in audible expression:

"Lord God of the ocean, air, starry skies, mountains, waterfalls, desert, sunset, and midnight sun, Shepherd of our fathers, Author of life, and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, place thy strong arms underneath me—Lord, so gird me, then I shall not fail!"

I accepted what I saw as a symbol of the glory of God that fills the earth.

At Narvik in due time I took train, stopping off on my way at Abiskojøkk, where I am at this writing.

On the shores of Lake Torne Trask, adjoining, are the Lapp camps of Palnoviken and Laimolahti, which were visited by me. The Lapps ethnologically are a remarkable people, obtaining their living chiefly from their reindeer, which during the summer months graze among the mountains.

I was told that a week ago a boat on the lake had to force its way in places through ice. Now the water is nearly all open, and the snow is melting fast.

The summer is short, but owing to the sun shining twenty-four hours in the day, vegetation thrives during the warm weather.

There is a continuous day.

How true is the saying that there is an opposition in all things. The long day of sunshine is followed by a long winter, long, dark nights, and a period when the sun remains below the horizon as long as it stays above in summer.

Every mountain has a valley. From every transfiguration scene one must go down into the valleys where most of humanity's work is performed. Evangelizing the world is a part of the program of Christ as well as enjoying the association of large assemblies of the Saints.

This trip has given to me a better insight into the habits and character of the Scandinavian people.

Tomorrow I leave direct for Stockholm.

PAUL M. HANSON.

ABISKOJOKK, SWEDEN, June 29.

Alexander, Kansas

July 18.—On Mothers' Day the Sunday school children gave a fine program. It was very much appreciated.

On June 8, Chrystal Teeters returned from Graceland College bringing with her three friends: Myrtle Lorensen, from Elsinore, Utah, a student there last year; Evelynne Boyd, from Des Moines, Iowa, a Graceland alumna, and Everett Boyd, from Montrose, Colorado, a student of last year. The four young people motored through. Their stay was short, so few of the Saints got to see them. Those who did not were greatly disappointed, since a Graceland is seldom seen in this part of the country.

Harry Probst, of Lamoni, Iowa, and Ammon Wildermuth, from Denver, both Graceland students, were in the community a couple of days, but soon went back to McPherson County, where work was more plentiful. We are glad to have them with us.

Rainy weather caused us to postpone Children's Day program for two Sundays, but when the sun did finally shine on a Sunday morning it was given.

The harvest here this summer is very poor, because the wheat was killed in an electrical storm. So the Saints are rather blue.

Brother and Sister Jay Hoffman, from Arkansas, were here on sacramental Sunday. Brother Hoffman used to be a missionary in this part of Kansas years ago. His testimony in the prayer meeting was encouraging and gave us new hope. We shall be glad if they can come to our reunion, to be held from August 19 to 28. We are planning to have a good time. We especially want to see as many young people here as possible. Recreation will be provided and supervised. Come and help us make it an event never to be forgotten.

Stockton, California

Corner Sutter and Clay Streets

Our sacramental service, while not so many in number, was profitable, as all entered into the peaceful spirit. The same Spirit also prevails at the prayer services, and is a source of great help and comfort to those who attend.

On June 15 our missionary, Elder Guy P. Levitt, started a series of meetings to continue at least ten days, but owing to the strenuous duties which are his as district president and to the reunion so close at hand, he had to bring them to a close on Sunday evening, June 19. Much good was done in the way of spiritual refreshment for the Saints. On that day Brother Levitt spoke through the Spirit, commending Pastor Brokaw for his faithfulness, also calling Brother George Vallem to the office of elder and Brother Harold Bolton to the position of priest.

At the following business meeting of the branch, Brother Brokaw stated that he had received evidence of the call of these two brethren for ordination. We expect this will take place at our coming conference.

On Sunday Ella Beth Holden entered into the waters of baptism. She had only been waiting for her eighth birthday. We with her parents rejoice that she has chosen the right path while young in years.

Brother Will Bloom, sr., had a stroke two weeks ago and is in the Southern Pacific Hospital in San Francisco. From last reports he is getting along as well as can be expected. Brother Bloom has been in the employ of the Southern Pacific for the past twenty years.

On the last Thursday of the month the women served a chicken supper, clearing about fifteen dollars. This will be the last of the activities of the Department of Women until September.

Deselm Branch

Near Manteno, Illinois

July 15.—We thought some of the Saints might be interested in hearing from this locality once more. This is the place where prejudice and persecution ran high a few years ago. The church building was burned; rebuilt; desecrated with tar; furniture and windows, etc. broken; and finally bombed. The building still stands. It looks fairly good outside, but the inside is a complete wreck. We are glad to say that a much friendlier spirit is being manifested by our neighbors toward our people. For this we thank our heavenly Father. We still hold our meetings in the hall owned by O. C. Shreffler, a nonmember, but a staunch friend of the Saints.

Of late some very good services have been held. The Sunday school has presented some excellent programs. The Easter entertainment was a volunteer program. Superintendent Earl Rogers asked each one to contribute something, and a very good program was given. Mothers' Day was observed with songs, readings, and recitations, appropriate for the occasion. Fathers' Day was also observed with short speeches from nearly all adults present, each presenting his ideas of the duties of father as well as mother in rearing the children and stressing the idea of cooperation. The Children's Day program was given by the young people in charge of Sisters Edith Rogers and Bernice Pement. It was very good.

Preaching has been mostly done by local brethren, the young men of the priesthood doing very creditably in honoring their office and calling.

Brother and Sister J. H. McGuire, of Hammond, Indiana, visited this local on May 28 and 29, and Brother McGuire preached on Sunday on "The ideals of Zion." Brother and Sister Pement, of Chicago, were with us the first Sunday in June, Brother Pement making the opening address at the sacramental service and addressing the priesthood in the afternoon.

About the middle of June three cars containing sisters of our Department of Women motored to Sherburnville, Illinois, near the Indiana State line, to the home of Sister Belle Lovering, stopping at Grant Park to call on our aged Brother Chapman, ninety-four years old, and his estimable daughter. He seemed well and cheerful. Sister Lovering served a wonderful dinner, consisting of strawberry shortcake (made by the hostess) and other good things too numerous to mention. All pronounced it the best shortcake they had ever eaten, and the way most of us ate was surely proof. In the afternoon a meeting was held in charge of Sister Augusta Shreffler.

Elder Davis, missionary to Northeastern Illinois, called on some of the Saints last week. We were disappointed in not hearing from him on Sunday, but he and Brother Earl Rogers had an appointment at Buckley, Illinois, so we hope Brother Davis will come again, that we may hear him.

Several from our branch attended the Northeastern Illinois district conference at Mission, June 26. We had the pleasure of hearing Apostle F. Henry Edwards for the first time. The early morning service was a prayer meeting in charge of Elders F. H. Edwards, W. A. McDowell, and D. E. Dowker. It was a peaceful service, and at the close several brethren were ordained to the priesthood. We did not learn the names of all.

At ten o'clock the regular Sunday school was in session in charge of district and local officers.

Apostle Edwards taught the adult class, using the "lecture method," his subject being, "How to present the gospel to nonmembers," giving as fundamental principles knowledge, first know God, know what you are teaching, and know what you are talking to, attitude towards the individual, and tact. The study period was all too short.

Brother Edwards was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, taking for his theme, Revelation 3:8: "Behold, I have set before thee an open door," etc., showing man's opportunities, if he will but enter in and occupy.

At noon a bounteous dinner was served picnic fashion on the spacious lawn of Sister Electa Hoie's home near the church. A priesthood meeting was held shortly after dinner.

At 2.30 a song fest was conducted by Sister Ruby Newman, district chorister, and many good old hymns were sung, reaching a grand climax in the consecration song. Sister Newman is surely a cultivated and enthusiastic leader and enthuses her singers.

At three o'clock another splendid sermon was given by Apostle Edwards, the subject being, "Ten reasons why I am a Latter Day Saint." He told of spiritual experiences, blessings, and prophecies that have been fulfilled in his life. God's Spirit surely attended this effort.

At eight o'clock District Missionary Davis was the speaker. We were not permitted to attend this service, and hence can not report it.

In all that we learned and others told us, it was a very profitable conference.

Brother William Bell, our branch president, was the speaker on last Sunday morning, discoursing on the subject of tithing. Brother Bell was blessed by the Holy Spirit's presence in making plain the Saints' duties along this line of service.

The Department of Women gave an ice cream social on Brother Arthur Shreffler's lawn Wednesday evening. The proceeds are to help finance the junior tent at the coming reunion at Elmhurst. A pleasant evening was spent, the young people playing games. Music and readings by Sister Hope Wainwright, of Chicago, were an enjoyable diversion. Saints and friends from Manteno, Wilmington, Ritchie, and Chicago, were present.

Some here are anticipating attending the Elmhurst reunion in August.

Santa Ana, California

Conditions are very favorable in the Santa Ana Branch at the present time, with all the departments functioning, and we believe that the usual "summer slump" in attendance will be avoided this year.

The church building has been cleaned and redecorated, making a very attractive appearance. The Department of Women gave two lovely ferns.

The Santa Ana Saints are very glad that the new missionary to the district, Patriarch John F. Martin, has made Santa Ana his headquarters. A few days after they were settled in their new home, the Saints gathered there to give them an informal welcome. We surely appreciate the addition of Sister Martin and children, Frances and Kenneth, to our services, where Sister Martin is proving very helpful with the music and has taken charge of the intermediate department of the Sunday school. Brother Martin will be here when not busy with the missionary work in other parts of the district.

The Long Beach-Santa Ana Orchestra, under the direction of Brother Bob Lacy, assisted the Los Angeles Dramatic Club with their presentation of "Uncle Tom's cabin."

The wedding of Sister Marguerite Parks and Brother Gerald Mitchell took place at the Central Los Angeles church the latter part of June, with David B. Carmichael officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell will make their home in Ontario, where Mr. Mitchell has accepted a position with the faculty of the Chaffey Union High School.

The church presented a very festive appearance the first Sunday in July, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Joveta Gonszales to Mr. Charley Robles. The ceremony was performed by our branch president, David B. Carmichael.

Brother Johnson of Long Beach was the speaker at the recent "Model Church," which was conducted under the auspices of Sister Marie Mitchell, who with her mother, Sister Lola Mitchell, has just returned from Lamoni, where they attended the institute sessions. There are now nine young people in the Santa Ana Branch who have attended the various institutes. We feel that this is an enviable record for a branch as far from Lamoni as Santa Ana. Plans are already being made for one or two representatives to attend the institute next year.

Wichita, Kansas

Corner Water and Osie

The work in Wichita Branch is moving along nicely. We feel the good Spirit prevailing among the membership.

Brother George Jenkins, of Independence, Missouri, our new missionary, visited our branch and was made to feel at home by meeting several families whom he had formerly known, they having moved here from the Spring River District, where he once labored. We welcome Brother Jenkins to our district.

Time for our reunion is drawing near, August 5 to 14, at Winfield, Kansas, about sixty miles from Wichita. The speakers assigned are Brother John Sheehy and Bishop C. J. Hunt, together with missionary George Jenkins, P. S. Whalley, and District President E. L. Barraclough. We are anticipating a splendid reunion.

Under the auspices of Religio, a general church picnic was held at Sims Park on July 4. Saints from Winfield Branch were invited to join us, making quite a gathering. All brought baskets of good things, and there was plenty of ice cream and lemonade. Games were played and a general good time had by all. Pastor Whalley enjoyed the day, notwithstanding the sunburns he received, which caused him some annoyance later.

Our finance committee has adopted the envelope system for our church collections. We believe this is going to mean success for the finance committee, as all seem to approve the plan. And when nonmembers ask for a package of envelopes, we feel then that none of our own membership could conscientiously pass them up. The little Blue Birds came in with the fruits of their labor; they had made candy and sold it and purchased the two collection trays to be used for the collection of the envelopes. On the Sunday morning, our Sunday school superintendent asked Brother Whalley to come forward. Then one of the Blue Birds, Opal Horn, came forward with the baskets and made her little speech, presenting the trays to the pastor. This was a surprise, but very impressive. It makes our hearts rejoice when we see the little ones so desirous of doing good. This organization is under the leadership of Sister Whalley and is composed of very energetic workers.

Sister Brockway has returned home from Phoenix, Arizona, where she was called by the serious illness of her mother. The mother is so improved that she was able to accompany Sister Brockway to Wichita, and through faith and prayer she is improving and is very comfortable at this writing.

Our prayer is that unity may prevail through the church to the extent that we shall be able to make this program of the church a success.

Moorhead, Iowa

July 20.—An appropriate patriotic program was rendered at the Religio service on the evening of July 3. The attendance was large, and all seemed well pleased with the program. Several expressed themselves as considering it the best that had been given.

The families of Brothers J. W. Townley, Arthur and Ben McElwaine are enjoying a month's vacation, visiting Yellow Stone Park and other points of interest.

Brother and Sister Rosenburger, accompanied by Brother and Sister James Wilson and Helen, of Woodbine, worshiped with us Sunday, July 17. Brother Rosenberger, being our district chorister, gave an interesting talk along musical lines. He is seeking the cooperation of all along that line especially at our coming reunion at Missouri Valley.

Our morning services were dispensed with on Sunday, the 10th, as so many desired to attend quarterly conference at Woodbine. Our branch was well represented there and the meetings enjoyed by all present.

Brother and Sister Ole Amundson are visiting relatives at Lamoni and Independence. We have not learned how long they are to be gone.

Brother T. O. Strand has occupied the pulpit at the Jordan Church several times since our last report. Brother Mark Jensen preached twice at Logan and once at Pisgah. Besides our locals occupying the home pulpit, Brother D. Blair Jensen, of Glendale, Ontario, delivered his first discourse on the eve of July 3, and Brother George Meggers, of Pisgah, on the eve of the 17th. Moorhead Saints very much appreciated both discourses. Nor would we overlook the branch officials' organizing a priesthood meeting and holding sessions every other Sunday afternoon. At present they are using the pamphlet, "Duties of branch and district officials," for their lessons.

Brother and Sister Clarence Mann, of Independence, visited at the home of his uncle, C. B. Mann and family, the first of the month.

Brother Harold and Sister Lavonne Mann recently made a trip to Cedar Falls, Ames, and other points.

Brother Joseph Wilson and Sister Fern, also Sister Frances Strand, visited the first of the month with friends in the southern part of the State.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO.—During the past few months we have been made to feel the directing power of the Master, and his love has been enjoyed in various ways, especially at our Sunday morning prayer services. The Lord spoke through one of his servants to Brother Mark S. Crabtree some few weeks ago, telling him there was a work for him here. Since that time he had the privilege of leading his mother, who is sixty-seven years old, into the waters of baptism. This brought great joy to all the Saints.

We are having large attendance at all our services, there being seventy-eight at Sunday school, June 26.

Sunday, July 3, was a great day, there being eighty-nine at Sunday school and many more at sacramental service. And again the Spirit of the heavenly Father was manifested. This made all present rejoice.

There were eighty at our Sabbath school a week later, all enjoying the lessons. We feel much encouraged at this good attendance.

On July 4 we held an all-day meeting at McDermott baseball ground, with the Saints of that place. The morning was spent playing games, baseball, horseshoe, foot racing. At twelve dinner was spread and all ate. A good program was the order of the afternoon. It was presented by the children. Elder Wiggett, of McDermott, Elder F. May, of Dayton, Ohio, and Mark Crabtree, of this place, gave helpful talks which were appreciated.

Brother Mark conducted a week of meetings at this place with a large attendance and great interest, many not of our faith being present. He has gone near Waverly, Ohio, where he will preach this week. We wish him good luck wherever he goes.

We are sorry to report that Brother Emery Williams met with an accident, nearly breaking his legs. It is said he is improving.

We are looking forward to July 30, which was set for an ice cream social at the church. The proceeds will go to build flues. The class of Willing Workers has decided to have a social later. They are planning to get an organ or piano for the church.

On July the first we were surprised when Brother Mark Crabtree took a trip into West Virginia, bringing back with him a wife. We wish them much joy and happiness.

Missionaries Ruch and Muceus Returning

You may be intersted in hearing that my family and I are nearing the shores of America after spending about five years in missionary work in Norway. We are due to land at New York tomorrow about two o'clock.

We left Norway on July 5 for England, where we spent about six days, visiting over Sunday with the Enfield Branch, preaching both morning and evening. These were the first sermons I had preached in my native tongue since we left America in 1922.

We sailed from Southampton, July 12, on board S. S. Leviathan under the American Flag. We have had a very fine trip on this largest boat afloat and haven't missed a meal.

It is our intention upon arriving at New York to go to Onset, Massachusetts, to attend the reunion. I am sure this will be a great privilege and experience for us, after spending several years in a foreign field.

Brother Peter Muceus is also with us, returning home from Norway. He joined us as we were leaving London for Southampton. We have enjoyed each other's association on the ship. He will be going home to Lamoni from New York. My best wishes to all of you in your work.

Sincerely,

On board Leviathan, July 17.

V. D. RUCH.

Davidson, Oklahoma

Ambitious and full of interest is the prevailing spirit of the regular attendants at all the church services in our branch, and although our correspondence for the past six months has been rather neglected, activities of this local are continuing. The branch has its drawbacks with which to contend, there not being the attendance that is expected.

Sunday school officers have recently been elected for another half year's work. Plans are made at the monthly teachers' meeting for the betterment and progress of Sunday school work, and the seven classes have been recently located in the church so as to give better results for the work of each class. More of the smaller classes have been curtained off to themselves, where blackboards, Bibles, and other equipment are at their disposal, and there is less disturbance from nearby classes. The church has been newly carpeted, and some varnishing done, which adds greatly to the appearance of the interior of the building. A spacious piece of ground at the rear of the building has been cleared of weeds and made into an excellent volley ball court, which is the scene of many a lively game during the week days and evenings. Electric lighting at night affords a delightful place for the entertainment of the young people. An organized team is getting into form now to meet the more strongly contesting teams at the reunion soon to be held at Eagle City. Davidson hopes to have the largest delegation in attendance at that gathering.

Sunday, July 3, was sacramental Sunday, and the Saints came fasting and praying for the success of the reunion. They were greatly blessed with that portion of God's Spirit which is to be with his children at all times if they are prepared to receive it.

June 12 was observed as Children's Day. However, no special day's exercises were prepared, but an all-day picnic was staged by the entire Sunday school on the banks of Red River. Everyone present enjoyed a happy day among Saints and friends.

On the night of June 7 the choir motored to the home of Brother Lou Carrow, at Vernon, Texas, where an enjoyable evening was spent in song service. New anthems were practiced which are to be rendered at the reunion.

At the morning hour on July 10, Brother Z. Z. Renfroe delivered to the Saints a wonderful sermon of admonition concerning their duties in church services.

Brother and Sister Tom Skinner have been visiting relatives in central and eastern Texas for six weeks, and the Saints here will be glad to see their faces again in our midst before long.

May each one find the talent of his service to God and dedicate it to him.

East Syracuse, New York

July 15.—A few of the Syracuse Saints were privileged to attend district conference at Niagara Falls, New York, June 3 and 4. Everyone seemed amply repaid for going. Two wonderfully busy days with good music, good sacramental service, good preaching, Women's Departmental services well attended, and very interesting exercises by Boy Scouts were enjoyed.

Since then Brother Ward L. Christy has held three special services here, all being glad to hear his words of counsel and encouragement. We were sorry his good wife could not have accompanied him, but she is busy with reunion work.

We are glad that our branch president, Morris E. Whitehead, is able to attend church services once more after suffering since December from a fall on an icy sidewalk. Surely the Lord has heard the many prayers offered in his behalf.

Brother and Sister Morris Whitehead entertained eight of their friends from Boston, Brother and Sister E. H. Fisher, son and daughter, Bishop M. C. Fisher, wife, and two sons. They attended our sacramental service Sunday morning. We were certainly pleased to meet again those with whom we had been associated for many years in church work.

Saints of our branch have also been made glad by the addition to our number of a family from Ohio, Brother and Sister A. Clark, and two children. How long we have desired that we could have some addition to our small number here. Perhaps the Lord is about to remember Syracuse.

MRS. CLARA E. BRADT.

Evangelist Bullard Honored by Saints

I have tried to keep busy since leaving Independence for my appointed field of labor, and have found among the Saints where I have labored, those who recognize the true value of this wonderful gospel, and who are willing to listen to the truth as found therein, where joy and strength are found when earnestly sought, and when leaving the world to those of the world, and seeking to become the pure in heart, which must constitute the Zion upon which God will place his seal.

I have tried to serve the church for nearly forty-three years, and have found therein the food that heart and soul hunger craves; and many times have I been made to rejoice that the Lord called me out from my father's house and kindred to where I have found the truth as revealed from heaven in this last dispensation. Today I am satisfied the step I took when hearing the voice of the good Shepherd was right, and I am confirmed in its ultimate victory over all opposing forces.

I know I have not followed cunningly devised fables; time and the years of experience in this work have verified this to me, and my faith in its ultimate ideals being reached is strong within me. But I also know it can be reached only as we honor God in all he has given as his law. From this I am determined not to swerve, and it is this I am trying to bring before the Saints wherever I am permitted to labor. The power of the Spirit is present when this is honestly taught and received, so I am anxious to spend whatever of life is granted me here, in God's work, and joy in the fact that I am acknowledged in my weak efforts.

I have found in Ogden, Utah; Rupert, Hagerman, and Boise, Idaho, where I have tried to encourage the Saints, a welcome and an appreciative people, and wish to thank them for their kindly ministrations to me while among them and trust good has been accomplished and the Father acknowledged in the good received.

My seventy-fifth anniversary was kindly celebrated at Rupert, by about all the Saints turning out to surprise me. It surely was a surprise party, for it was farthest from my mind that anything of the kind would happen after nine years' absence from them; but such is the way kindness is at times manifested. We rejoice to know our services and presence are not forgotten. After the program of the evening was about ended, I was called by Brother J. A. Davis to receive a token of love from the Saints, which was duly appreciated. Handed to me was a fine dress shirt, scarf, and collar, which are very much in demand by ye missionary. We surely enjoyed an evening's program of song and games for the young and cooled off with ice cream and cake.

I am now at the home of Doctor W. B. Sheldon, where I will try and hold a service or two for these scattered Saints. Most of the Saints where I have labored are struggling to keep even with their demands and are in the conflict for the bread that perishes. May they be cared for as their needs demand. I am enjoying the best of health and am thankful.

BUHL, IDAHO, July 13.

RICHARD BULLARD.

Burlington, Iowa

Twelfth and Locust Streets

Mothers' Day was carried out by the Sunday school as well as the branch, impressing the sacredness of motherhood and the responsibilities it carries upon all who witnessed the programs. A full house was touched with renewed fervor and affection for the mothers of Israel in particular.

On the evening of May 26 Saints and friends gathered in the church parlors and surprised our new pastor and wife with a variety shower. Many useful and beautiful presents were gratefully received. Brother and Sister Sorden have been missionaries in England and Palestine since their marriage six years ago and have not been permitted until now to go to housekeeping. As a branch we are very grateful to have such devoted people whose whole hearts and souls seem to be in this glorious work, and believe that if we, as Saints, will do our part, they will lead us eventually to higher planes of living.

All departments are not functioning as they should, but we hope and pray that at least by the time vacations and the reunion period are over, which many are looking forward to with much expectation for another feast to the soul, all will move onward and upward to the high standard of our calling of Christ which is in each one and all.

On the last Sunday in June, success marked the presentation of our Children's Day program. The church was beautifully decorated, and the seating of the children in the choir loft was impressive to children and congregation alike.

The Fourth of July we went to the Wilson sisters' farm, about nine miles from Burlington, and from there in a body we went to picnic grounds close by, an ideal place for a picnic. Everyone had such a good time that plans are under contemplation for holding another soon at that place or elsewhere.

We were glad indeed to have Brother E. R. Williams with us over the Fourth. He has been in Beloit, Wisconsin, for the past two months, but he with his family will in the near future be located at Independence, Missouri.

On July 10 the branch had a rally day, which we hope proved to the good of all. Many Saints were out who had not attended for some time. We were very fortunate in having Apostle J. F. Garver for the day, whose sermons, advice, and help in round table discussions in the afternoon were uplifting, if we only put them into practice in our daily walks of life. Infants Janet Louise Stedtlander and Evelyn Myrle Phillips were blessed in the morning service.

We were sorry Brother Garver could not spend more time with us, but reunion work called him elsewhere.

On July 14, the Department of Women gave an ice cream social on the church lawn, in which we cleared between fifty-five and sixty dollars. The weather being favorable, unusual crowds coming and going continually kept the lawn filled until late in the evening. Several of the young folks' friends enjoyed serving at ice cream booth and pop stand.

Brother and Sister Royer and daughter Mildred and son Wallace, will motor to Minnesota for their two weeks of vacation where they went last summer.

Anna Lee Welday, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is spending three weeks with relatives in Burlington.

The Master has been mindful of us as a branch during the past, and we hope that as his children we shall not betray his trust and that we shall soon come to the realization that unless we are one, we are not his. We are working to that end.

Our pastor's address is 1112 Starr Avenue, Burlington, Iowa.

The Little Sioux District Conference

We are very glad to report a very successful conference of our district held at Woodbine, Iowa, on July 9 and 10. A program of readings and vocal and instrumental music was rendered to a full house by the Woodbine local, on Friday evening, the 8th.

A prayer service was held Saturday morning from 9 a. m. to 10.30 a. m. At 10.45 the district president, with Brothers C. J. Smith and G. Scott Daniel assisting, took up a few matters of business.

From the summarized reports of the district for the past quarter, we notice twenty-seven baptisms were reported, showing we are gaining in numbers. We also can report that we are gaining in spirituality. We are willing to say the last four or five conferences held have been excellent ones.

We had with us at this conference our three missionaries, Marvin K. Fry, C. J. Smith, and G. Scott Daniel. They all gave splendid discourses, besides assisting in other ways during the conference. We were disappointed in not having Brother John Garver with us as we had anticipated, he being detained elsewhere. We welcome the assistance of any of the higher officials of the church at these conferences, and hope for the next conference to have a visit from some of them.

Recommendations were presented from the Sioux City Branch, for the ordination to the priesthood of five young men, Brothers Raymond Haycock and Sanford Vandel to the office of priest; Richard Sheetz, George Vandel, and Frederick Vandel to the office of deacon. These are very capable and fine young men. The matter of ordination was fixed to be had at Sioux City, July 16. Reports from this service reach us, as a very spiritual and inspiring meeting.

The services for Sunday consisted of our regular Sunday school session, the juniors and intermediates being taken care of in the basement of the church. A class for the elders was in charge of C. J. Smith; of the Aaronic priesthood in charge of W. R. Adams. Young people were in charge of G. Scott Daniel; two adult Bible classes were taught by Joseph Lane and Fred A. Fry.

Preaching at eleven o'clock was by Elder C. J. Smith, a fine sermon. Dinner was served cafeteria style in the basement by the ladies of the Woodbine Branch. At 2.30 p. m. a general prayer service was had, a very good meeting. At 4 p. m. the bishop's agent called the branch solicitors and branch presidents together for planning the work along the lines of finances and getting unified on matters pertaining thereto.

At 6.45 a Religio session was held, and Brother G. Scott Daniel gave the closing sermon of the conference at 8 o'clock.

We had a full day of good things, regardless of the extreme heat and dust, and are glad to report a fine conference. We had to have an overflow meeting at this conference for the young people during the eleven o'clock service.

The next conference meets at Logan, probably some time in October. Saints, let us begin to plan now and make this the best conference in the way of attendance and spirituality we have ever held in the Little Sioux District. Are you willing to help make it such?

RUBY ADAMS, District Secretary.

Bellair, Illinois

The branch report for May was reported Bellair, Ohio, which was a mistake on the part of the publicity agent and not the editors.

The branch has taken on new life since the weather and the roads are more settled.

Brother H. M. Curtis, of Casey, spoke for us on the first and third Sunday nights in June, and this was a feast to those who hunger and thirst for gospel sermons. He also assisted in the sacramental service.

On July 17 Brother Curtis spoke on "The coming of Christ." The real thought concerned was not when he should come, but that we must be prepared and ready when he comes.

Death has come to us again, taking from our midst a little bud of promise. Frederick Lloyd Edmunds, son of L. M. and Olga Edmunds, "Buddy," as he was known among us, was a bright lad of seven years; he stood at the head of his class in school, and was a great lover of Sunday school, especially interested in the song service. He lost his life while swimming with some young companions. It was a shock to the community. The family has the sympathy of many friends. The floral offering was very beautiful. Brother L. C. Moore preached the funeral sermon, being assisted by H. M. Curtis.

Brother L. C. Moore preached for us at ten o'clock July 10 and baptized two young ladies, Fay Cox and Maxine Hackett, at five in the evening. He also preached at the night service. His assistance was deeply appreciated.

Our Sunday school is increasing in numbers, which makes it more interesting.

Minot, North Dakota

One of the most pleasant occurrences in the Minot Branch took place on Sunday, July 17, 1927, when the members of the branch living at Minot, Logan, Burlington, and Lansford, met at the reunion grounds at Logan, North Dakota, for a picnic dinner, Sunday school, preaching, and baptismal service. Seventy-eight were present, and the day was one of pleasant association, fine weather, bountiful dinner, and profitable services. One of the services which brought particular happiness to all was when eight young people entered the waters of baptism and made a covenant with their Lord. These young people came from some distance to be baptized, one family coming from Aberdeen, South Dakota, a distance of about three hundred and forty miles, while two other families came from Washburn, North Dakota, a distance of eighty miles. These people were Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Kemnitz, of Aberdeen, whose two children, Evelyn and Ralph, were baptized; Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Parks, of Washburn, North Dakota, whose four children, Addison, Victoria, Ovet, and Paul, entered the waters of baptism, and Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Peterson's two children, Stanley and Gladys. Brother Robert D. Addison, of Aberdeen, officiated at the ceremony, having the pleasure of leading his six grandchildren into the kingdom, the other young people being friends of the family.

Elders Sparling, W. McElwain, and Charles A. Smith officiated at the confirmation. Sister Kemnitz also had her tiny girl, Lois Vivian, blessed.

The next branch gathering is to be at the farm home of Brother and Sister M. D. Graham, at Burlington, on Sunday, August 31. We are hoping to have as large a crowd that day, for everyone enjoys these gatherings, and it helps to keep the interest alive in the membership. To any who are in the State, or passing through, the members of the Minot Branch extend a cordial invitation to meet with us at any time, or make their presence known to our pastor, Elder William Sparling, 130 Tenth Avenue N. W., Minot, North Dakota.

Southeastern Illinois District

A great day was July 3 for the Saints at Parish Branch, with an inviting basket dinner and the visiting Saints of Benton Mission. The day began with Sunday school at the Mission at nine o'clock, with Sunday school superintendent Fredric Stratman in charge, and with officers and teachers all present.

With us was the district president and missionary, Elder R. L. Fulk, and also Missionary John R. Lentell. With a good attendance and a good lesson, the hour passed rapidly. The secretary reported five classes, all teachers and officers present, attendance of twenty-eight, and two visitors. Sunday school closed with a merry group of Saints come to meet with the Saints at Parish Branch at the eleven o'clock service.

The regular service being dispensed with, the Saints passed quietly out to the waiting cars, ready for the journey, each car carrying a well-filled basket. The journey started overland to the Parish Branch about eight miles in the country. Our arrival found the Saints gathering, and as the hour for services drew nigh, the Saints increased in number.

The hour having arrived for service, the pastor, Elder Francis Davis, took charge, and prayer was offered by Ernest Roberson. Branch business came first in order, Elder Davis, assisted by Brother Fulk, presiding. Francis Davis was sustained as pastor, and Carrol Dillon was elected branch clerk. District President R. L. Fulk read the recommendation as passed by the late district conference, and addressed the Saints in the terms of these recommendations. He was followed by an address by our missionary, John R. Lentell, after which we adjourned for the feast of good things in the baskets. While the sisters were preparing these, the district president assembled the priesthood and organized them into a study class, to better us on the program of the church and the duties of the priesthood. Elder Ernest Roberson was selected as superintendent and teacher. E. W. Davis was elected secretary-treasurer. Discussion of the purpose of the organization was indulged until there came the call for dinner, and the table was found spread with an abundance of good things for the enjoyment of all. Sister Elsie Stratman came forth with her camera and took a number of snapshots of the Saints in various groups; these in time to come will bring to memory the gathering of the day.

At two in the afternoon we assembled for sacramental service, Elders Davis and Roberson in charge. The emblems were served in good spirit, which continued on into the prayers and testimonies. We were blessed with a good degree of the Spirit. We were told by Brothers Fulk and Lentell, that if we continue faithful and fervent in the work, we would soon enjoy the riches of the gifts of the gospel.

After this meeting we were homeward bound, rejoicing over the day. When we returned to the mission at eight o'clock in the evening, our minds were again refreshed as Saints and friends gathered to the number of about sixty. J. R. Lentell was the speaker. We were again filled to overflowing with the words of a sermon that were edifying to all present.

Brother Lentell returned Tuesday to be with us two evenings more. His sermons were instructive and encouraging. We feel benefited by his presence among us, and extend the invitation to come again.

We of the Southeastern Illinois District have the testimony of the Lord that we are his people, and that the Lord is well pleased with us; and if we continue faithful we shall be blessed with the riches of God's blessings.

At our late district conference at Mount Vernon, we were encouraged by the gift of prophecy through Brother Lentell. This morning prayer service was a feast of spiritual blessings.

We are onward to the call, Come labor with us. The harvest is great. The laborers are few. We are onward to Zion.

Runnells, Iowa

Hot weather and outside attractions have diminished our numbers in attendance at all services. Sunday school is holding out the best.

District President Castings has preached for us once during the last quarter. His sermon was a plea to the Saints to live pure, for those who are married to be true to each other, and for the young people to select companions in the church.

Branch President McDonald is holding services at Dunreath on Sunday nights, the speakers being men from Des Moines.

Elder Stephen Robinson has preached for us twice, his theme being "Our church." He is developing fast in the work.

Children's Day services were held on the last Sunday in June, with a good attendance and splendid program. District Superintendent William Robinson made the address.

Our branch president went to Des Moines and baptized two young people at nine o'clock on the morning of July 3. The new members are Kleta and Earl Finley. Kleta has enrolled at Graceland and will take up her work there as soon as college work begins next fall. Earl is a promising young man just entering high school. The father and mother of these children were baptized just one month before.

We have just eighty-eight dollars left to pay on the debt incurred by finishing the church basement. This has been paid almost entirely through the efforts of our young people.

Brother and Sister Ralph Freel are again with us, having returned from Saint Louis two weeks since. Ralph takes up his work as leader of the adolescent boys' class and Mabel as assistant in the primary department. They were greatly missed while they were away from us, and we joyfully welcome their return.

Brother Fred Tingle is taking a short vacation, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Gladys Parks, and family, in Saint Louis. His duties as mayor have brought many unpleasant experiences, and he is thinking of offering his resignation.

A very few attended the lecture given by Secretary MacMillan of the Iowa Anti-Saloon League on July 3 in the evening. This was a union service, and the lack of interest was deplorable.

Tuesday, July 5, the funeral service of William Ridgway was preached by Brother H. Castings, assisted by Brother Hartshorn. Mr. Ridgway was past ninety years of age.

On August 12, the reunion of Des Moines District will meet here. Reservations for rooms can be made with C. E. McDonald and should be made early. The same grounds where we have met for the past five years have been secured, and many happy experiences are anticipated by the Saints.

Come to Runnells, where God will meet with the Saints in ten wonderful days of fellowship. Here you can go to school to the living God for ten days and be educated in the glorious gospel.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people of Independence at a joint meeting of the councils of thirteen and forty-four have arranged for a historical trip to be taken sometime in September to Liberty, Fishing River, Far West, Haun's Mill, and Richmond. The date and program are to be announced soon.

Committees have been appointed, and a very enjoyable and educational trip is announced. The following are the chairmen of committees: Trip committee, Lillian Williams; program committee, Orvar Swensen; transportation, Lee Moore; publicity, Zeno Booker; refreshment, Roberta Pallace McPherson. John Sheehy, assistant pastor in Zion, will work with all committees. Invitations are extended to the young people of Holden, Kansas City, Far West, and Lamoni Stakes. This is to be an anniversary trip, which will include a visit to the graves of Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer, of Book of Mormon fame.

The meeting of the two councils followed the Wednesday evening session of prayer, July 20. This service, in charge of Elders F. A. Cool and J. F. Sheehy, was well attended and the hour occupied with prayer, song, and testimony, beneficial to all. The Wednesday evening prayer meetings are progressing. Young people, you are invited to be present. Come and unite with Zion's young in prayers of gratitude for the many privileges we enjoy.

In delivering the second discourse of his series at the Stone Church, Doctor G. Leonard Harrington spoke Sunday morning on the laws of the mind, first reviewing briefly the subject matter of the previous Sunday's discourse.

"There is something in life," he said, "that can stabilize us. There is a something in life that can give us peace and happiness, and that something is at our very beck and call now; not next year, but at this very moment. The great spirits of all time have been calling to us and sending to us through their writings, through their music, and through their artist work the message of life, and that message of life is at our hand now. It is the great thing that Jesus Christ has spent his life in teaching to give to us."

Speaking concerning the mental laws he said, "The mind is the body reacting as a whole to the environment. The mind is therefore like a ship made out of physical parts, but that ship sailing out on the sea of life, and our body makes up our ship, and our mind is our body sailing on the sea of life."

According to Thorndyke, he said, "The driving forces within the mind-body of ours can be enumerated in these ways: First, the satisfaction that comes out of doing something successful; second, the satisfaction that comes out of being a master about something; third, the satisfaction that comes out of submitting oneself to the right man; fourth, the satisfaction that comes out of thinking we are somebody."

Discussing number four, he related a number of incidents illustrating the law of stimulus and response with their emotional background, drawing from them the conclusion that "Our great job is to widen the field of conscious control and guide the great dynamic forces which we possess."

K L D S Sunday Activities

At 8.30 a. m. the children's program arranged by Mrs. A. F. Abreo, of Kansas City, and presented by junior artists, including Paul Britzenstein, tenor, eleven years old; Betty Ann Houston, saxophone artist and musical reader, eight years old; little Vivian Abreo, pianist and vocalist, who plays her own accompaniments, six years old. The children's story was furnished by Miss Lillian Williams.

At nine o'clock Bible study lesson was conducted by Ralph W. Farrell. And the hour of eleven found the service from the main auditorium taking the air.

A musical program was presented by Amy Winning, organist, of Kansas City, and the Wa-Dein-Na Glee Club of Independence at two o'clock in the afternoon.

An hour later K L D S Radio church, conducted by Reverend J. W. Owen, of the Methodist Church, South, of Oak Grove, Missouri, was broadcast. The musical program was presented by a ladies' quartet, a male quartet, and Mrs. Carl Robertson, pianist.

Music for the vesper service hour was arranged by Mrs. Cyril Wight, of Kansas City, and presented by a mixed quartet consisting of Mrs. Alice Smeeton, Mrs. Cyril Wight, Cyril Wight, and Willard Blankenship; organ numbers were by Miss Mildred Swearingen, and contralto selections by Mrs. Cyril Wight. There was a sermon by Ralph W. Farrell.

At 9.15 the Latter Day Saints studio service began with a musical program arranged by Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock and presented by members of the Central Latter Day Saints Church, Kansas City, Missouri. Numbers were furnished by Mrs. Clayton Wolfe, organist; Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock, soprano; Roy Parker, violinist; mixed quartet consisting of Elizabeth Tanner Hitchcock, Mrs. Ralph Moore, Clayton Wolfe, and A. D. Hitchcock. Sermon was by Elder John Sheehy.

At the Campus

Directed by Brother R. T. Cooper, the Walnut Park Orchestra occupied the platform at the Campus again Sunday night, contributing to the music of the evening. Their special numbers, a medley of sacred airs, following the opening song and prayer, was particularly well done and pleased the congregation.

Elder Cyril E. Wight, of Kansas City, Missouri, began the evening's discourse by reading a poem, "Knowledge," written by Thomas Curtis Clark. The fact that today our minds are so often occupied with philosophies of life almost beyond our power to understand, was stressed by the speaker. We talk of things that we do not know; on every hand we are confronted with problems shifting, changing. We must have an anchor; we must have stability. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," was the commission given by Jesus Christ to his disciples. They were to go into all the world; they were to teach all nations "to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Today we see many people who have failed to grasp the import of this message. Some of them have gone low. This world might have been blessed by talents which have been used for the downfall of humanity. They are not, however, beyond the pale of help in the gospel. We recall the woman who was brought before Christ by her accusers, her repentance, and her faithful after-life. Often when we are discouraged we need the saving grace of Jesus' Sermon on the Mount. He has assured the world, "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly." We hurry through the vicissitudes of life and do not stop to consider the divine, but in order to accomplish the purpose for which we have been placed here, we must draw apart at times to think, to meditate upon the great things of life. Thus we shall find strength, happiness, spiritual comfort. We shall find God. Christ promised, "I shall not leave you comfortless."

A reel of Hawaiian scenes was then flashed on the screen, being enjoyed by a large crowd of young and old.

The junior service in the tent north of the Institute Building was largely attended during the evening preaching hour.

Those in charge of the Campus have deemed it advisable to put the regular Saturday evening picture show on Friday night of this week, July 29. The movie to be shown is "Behind the front," a comedy of the World War.

Interesting Personals

In the Independence news of last week's HERALD, on page 850, under the heading "Interesting Personals," the last sentence of the first column reads, "Jewell and Lilly Carson, Indian girls, were baptized in the Stone Church fount, by Elder Hubert Case, Sunday afternoon." The correspondent has been informed that Jewell and Lilly Carson were baptized by Brother Case at the above mentioned time and place, but that Jewell Carson is not a girl. He is a husky Indian boy, sixteen years of age. We hope he can forgive this regrettable error. Lilly and Jewell are of the Otoe tribe, and knew Elder Case in Oklahoma. They are living with their mother, Mrs. Irving, in Independence.

Members of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric are going from one reunion to another, assisting in making the meetings better, brighter, and more spiritual. Some will return in the fall with a number of reunions on their list of attendance. Bishop Carmichael left for his first reunion about the middle of June, and found himself in Independence three or four days a week or two ago before starting for more reunions in the East. Bishop J. A. Becker bade Independence good-bye about the first of July, going west to reunions. Brother G. W. Eastwood, bishop for Zion, attended a district conference at Thayer, Missouri, this week-end.

Liberty Church

At the morning service, a male trio, composed of Fred Koehler, Millard Page, and Harry Blake, rendered a beautiful trio, "He was nailed to the cross." We were privileged to have as our speaker Brother John F. Sheehy, his text being taken from Genesis 44: 34: "For how shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see evil that shall come on my father." In his talk, he dwelt upon the love and impartiality that God has shown to mankind. He also conveyed many new thoughts to the minds of the people.

Walnut Park

The eight o'clock prayer meetings seem never to be long enough for all to take part who would like to. Last Sunday the meeting was presided over by Brothers William Haskins and Fred Wille, and some interesting experiences were related.

In the absence of the orchestra from Sunday school, musical numbers were furnished by some of our young people: Carlos and Myrle Smith gave a cornet and clarinet duet, and Lilah Green sang a solo with Isabel Garrett accompanying.

At eleven o'clock Pastor O. C. White presided; prayer was by William Haskins, and sermon by Bishop B. J. Scott. Brother Scott used a number of texts, or quotations, all pointing to the thought of repentance, "turning away from wickedness that you may save your soul alive," the soul being the body and the spirit; for "every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down." He recalled the expressions of Saints who realized they were "slipping from the old paths" and instructed and encouraged all who found themselves thus slipping to repent and hasten back to the point where they had stood on the sure foundation. His sermon bore the same intense interest in the souls of his congregation that he evidenced as pastor, and all must have felt renewed courage, and gratitude for the plan of repentance extended to us.

East Independence

The Sunday school hour on July 17 was used by a number of children from the summer school at the Campus. They dramatized the story of "Joseph," which proved to be quite interesting.

Brother Hubert Case was the morning speaker. He spoke from the text, "They that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." He brought the truths right into our everyday life and gave many illustrations to show the effect our lives have upon the lives of others.

In the evening Elder E. T. Atwell was the speaker. He brought out many interesting things in regard to the Jews. This seems to be a favorite subject with Brother Atwell, and we are always glad to hear him tell of how prophecies are being fulfilled in regard to this people. He favored us with a solo at the opening of the service.

Sunday, July 24, Brother W. F. Sherman was the speaker.

He took for his text, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatever a man soweth that shall he also reap." It was an interesting discourse.

The pastor, Brother Carmichael, spoke in the evening. He gave us some good suggestions in regard to the Harvest Home Festival, the oblation, and the necessity of preparing for the winter months that are ahead of us. Those who saw the exhibits at the festival last year will surely be interested in helping in this work. Those who did not help last year will not regret it if they put up a few extra quarts of fruit and vegetables and donate to this worthy cause. Begin now, Saints, to prepare for this event, and see what joy it will bring to yourself and to others. We were favored with some extra musical numbers at the beginning and the close of the service, which were most certainly appreciated. We hope our chorister will continue this good work. Several visitors from town were present at the evening service.

Gudgell Park

Sunday, July 17, services were held at the usual hours. Sunday school is increasing in numbers. We were encouraged by the attendance on this Sabbath, notwithstanding ten were absent. Our seating capacity is taxed. We need more chairs, and at the rate we are going now our building will not answer our needs for long. Brother Walter Self was our speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. We are always glad to have Brother Self with us. He gives us meat in due season.

Our assistant superintendent, Brother Sylvester Myers, and Sister Myers, have gone to visit Brother Myers' sister in Kansas and to bring home their son, William, who has been visiting his cousins for more than three weeks.

Sister Willard Atwell is visiting Brother Atwell out of town this week. Our people are mostly in good health. The sick are recovering.

Closing Exercises of Summer Vacation School

Friday, July 22, marked the closing exercises of the summer vacation school of religious education which commenced June 20 at the Institute of Arts and Sciences in Independence, and has continued these weeks with high interest and intensive work among the more than three hundred and fifty students and the efficient corps of volunteer teachers. During this period the school has reached into many homes in Independence, and in the interest manifested by the parents in the closing events of the 1927 session of this school grateful appreciation was given expression.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, teachers were bustling about industriously, putting the last touches to the program plans and the exhibit arrayed on the lower floor of the Institute Building. Up in the office, teachers and helpers were continuously dropping in for consultation.

The field meet commenced on a grassy plot northwest of the baseball ground at half past two. Brother Eugene Closson, who had been in charge of the recreational features of the school, was in charge, Brother John F. Sheehy issuing rules of the games and races through a megaphone. This, to say the least, was effective. A number of prizes were to be given in races, but one of the rules was that no one who did not participate in some of the contests conducted "just for fun" could win a prize in the prize races. There were contests for the girls of each grade, and for the boys of various classes. The girls opposed the boys in a pop-bottle race as the beginning event. A circle race was enjoyed. One of the most laughable features was the suit-case race; another, the shoe race. Bystanders stood in the sun and shrieked their approval and amusement.

These activities continued until five o'clock, being hugely enjoyed by the children, but many of the grown-ups drifted away to see the exhibit, which was opened to the public after four o'clock. In the house, teachers were stationed about to direct and explain.

It took some time to see everything, and many were the "ahs" and "ohs" as parents viewed things made by their children. The interior of the first floor did resemble an art shop. There were large reed flower baskets, cord hammocks, braided bedroom slippers, articles of tie and dye work, the hues well blended, silky scarfs with beautiful designs, polychrome work, inkstands, picture frames, and even a long, shallow chest, most attractively finished. The walls were adorned with pretty books made in crayons and water colors, attractive placards made by the younger children, and across one corner of the room a line held more than a dozen brightly painted, oilcloth, telephone book covers. On display tables, bread boards shaped like pigs and painted orange and green evoked questions, and cleverly made twine winders, pretty lamp shades, neat bird houses and footstools, along with numerous other articles, were grouped.

Two articles which attracted unusual notice were The Health House, and the books of the Bible in their little bookcase. The former was one of the first things to be seen when commencing the excursion through the house. It was an attractive little bungalow, stuccoed with oatmeal, having a roof of graham crackers, a loaf of bread for the door, chocolate bars for windows, and even a border of raisins on the flour walk. The second particular attraction was a miniature bookcase having blocks of wood shaped like books painted in pleasing colors. On the back of each block was the name of a book of the Old or New Testament, arranged in the order in which they were found in the Scriptures.

Having looked to their hearts' satisfaction and eyes' content, parents and children in groups and in single families found places on the lawn to spread out supper. The refreshment stand was open during the afternoon and evening, and some sought food there. The meal was joyfully shared by those who had taken part in the contests of the afternoon. More people came, a large crowd gathering by the time the sun had slipped behind the western part of Independence. A continuous stream of humanity passed through the exhibit rooms and out into the evening's coolness.

The program on the outdoor platform commenced at half past seven. There was a hymn, and prayer was offered by Brother Sheehy. Then President Floyd M. McDowell, dean of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, spoke to the children. "Can we depend on you?" was his question.

There followed several pantomimes, the lives of biblical characters, Moses and Aaron, Dorcas, Ruth, Esther, Daniel, and others. Those portraying these parts were students of the class in religious drama taught by Sister Eunice Winn Smith. The latter read the parts through the microphone in order that the crowd might hear. Then teachers and children of the summer school were called to the platform. The stage is large, but when they had all crowded on, not an extra inch was left. Two songs were sung, the audience joining the school in "Onward to Zion," and the first verse of the summer school song, the words written by Mrs. William Gard. The Nation's Flag and the Christian Flag were held aloft by two students, and the school gave the flag salute, which was impressive.

When the children had filed back to their places, Miss Constance, acting principal, was presented a wrist watch by Brother Sheehy in behalf of the faculty, children, and friends.

After the prayer of dismissal, the teachers took their pupils back to the building, where they secured their contribution to the exhibit, the work of their hands for the summer, and the certification for their five weeks of work.

Faculty and officers of the summer school feel that a big step has been taken in this summer's work toward the goal, Zion, a beautiful people in a beautiful place working out beautiful ideals. All have worked to make this progress possible, and all deserve thanks. The summer school slogan is, "Can we depend on you?" and the school is asking every Saint in Independence the question, "Can we depend on you to help us next summer?" Let us consecrate ourselves to this ideal in our work, in our study, and in our play.

Sacramento, California

Early in June our Women's Department, with Sister Geneva Beebe superintendent, motored to Rocklin, twenty-two miles away, accepting the invitation to the home of Sisters C. W. Earle and Mabel Longstreth for their afternoon session. After the usual business, the party, numbering twenty-three, was served with a delicious luncheon, including home-grown strawberries, fresh cream, sandwiches, and cake. Farm products were a great treat.

On Children's Day the juniors of the Sunday school gave the play, "The judgment of Solomon" (Benton). Sister C. H. S. Bidwell, superintendent, was chairman of the committee. Given in costume, with the assistance of music by two cornetists from the orchestra, this was very effective and splendidly received. A basket dinner at a local park, an annual event, was a partial reward.

Sister Hazel Blohm attended the Graceland Institute, majoring in dramatics, story-telling, new manual, method and junior tent work. She has given an interesting talk at the Department of Recreation and Expression and has brought much of the literature for the various departmental workers.

Sisters Birdie Clark and husband and the former's sister, Sister Pauline Napier, have recently returned from an extensive trip through the East, visiting at Kirtland, Cleveland, New York City, Washington, District of Columbia, etc. Mr. and Sister Clark attended a convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at Cleveland. Sister Clark, president of the local ladies' auxiliary, represented them as their delegate. She recently gave an interesting recital of events of their trip at the Department of Recreation and Expression.

About forty of our members are attending the reunion now in camp at Irvington, California. Many more are expected to go down for the last week-end, so the chapel will be closed for that Sunday.

The Idola Class in the Sunday school has purchased a three-gallon ice cream freezer for its social gatherings and for any branch needs. Elder Guy P. Levitt has been made an honorary member of this class, and their group spirit indicates they are Zion builders indeed.

EDITORIAL

Presbyterian Methods of Evangelizing Philadelphia

A recent number of the Christian Century is responsible for a news item which should be given consideration by a class of our ministers who shy at open-air services, or speaking to small or larger groups which they are able to gather about them on the street of a town or city. It has been advanced as an argument against this class of evangelizing, that the class attracted, some of which may finally become members of the church, is not of as substantial or desirable quality as those whose ears are saluted in our church buildings or in other more select places. We believe the statement has much truth in it. We are also of opinion that in these particular places it is likely the Lord's fishermen will find the most hungry and needy souls. What if they do need working over! What if it is a large job for the church organization to care for these converts until they come to the common level of the present church! It's a greater and more necessary accomplishment if we save the soul who is a thousand miles from comfort and bliss than if we persuade the indifferent man found "just outside the door" to apply for entrance into the fold. And it may be the latter will revert to his former life just as quickly as the former. But that is another matter. Here is the cutting from the Christian Century:

The Presbyterian summer evangelistic committee of Philadelphia has begun its twenty-ninth annual campaign of open-air evangelistic services and vacation Bible school work. Evangelistic services are being held on public squares, in parks, on street corners, and church lawns, especially in neglected and congested sections of the city. About eighty vacation schools are being conducted by the committee.

"Remember Cumorah"

September of this year brings to the church the first centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the delivery of the plates to Joseph Smith the Prophet. In recognition of this significant event President Elbert A. Smith has written a pageant entitled, "Remember Cumorah," commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the event.

The pageant is written in four acts, and its dignified, direct style lends fascinating interest. Church progress is measured in a way that is sure to make a strong appeal to those who see the pageant.

August Autumn Leaves is carrying the full text; it is also being printed in pamphlet form, with full directions for staging. The booklet is priced at fifteen cents postpaid, and may be secured from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

The church can afford to turn its attention to this historical event so inseparably connected with the founding and history of the church. Every branch should make the Sunday following September 22 a day for special service commemorating this event, and where possible the pageant should be presented. Branches that are not equipped to do this should secure the booklet and have the text of the pageant capably read to the congregation. Undoubtedly those who see or hear will thrill again and again to the spiritual significance of the theme.

Elder J. W. Peterson is conducting a two-week meeting at Knox City, Missouri, in the northeastern part of the State, not far from Nauvoo, Illinois. He suggests that out of the many tourists passing near, there are likely some of our people who could stop for a day or two and help him with the music and singing. His meeting began July 23 and will close August 7. Any interested may find connection by inquiring at Knox City for F. J. Triplett.

Order early to be sure of size, and state location desired. David Snobelen, R. H. Jones, and Isaac Andrews, executive committee. R. T. Brown, president, John C. Dent, secretary and treasurer.

The reunion, August 19-28, at old historic Brush Creek will hold attractions for you not found elsewhere. The old branch of the church that has lived through the dark and cloudy days of 1844 to 1860 and gave to the church an advantage in the courts, proving the legal successorship, should be of interest to all members of the church. Patriarch Stone, Elder R. J. Lambert, and Elder John F. Sheehy will be with us, as well as our new missionary, John R. Lentell. We are looking forward to one of the best reunions ever held in the Southeastern Illinois District. A spiritual feast, an educational uplift, with plenty of wholesome recreation to season it are our plans. Again: Don't forget to order your tents early, or you may have to do without. Order from Elder O. C. Henson, 2401 College Street, Mount Vernon, Illinois. R. L. Fulk, for the district presidency, 2216 Carey Avenue, Mount Vernon, Illinois.

A Correction

In the article entitled, "A salt land," written by Bishop C. J. Hunt, and appearing on pages 798 to 800 of SAINTS' HERALD for July 13, a correction should be made. On page 800, near the bottom of the first column, quoting from Doctor William Barrows, D. D., the first part of the second sentence reads: "They aggregate about one billion seven hundred and sixty million square miles." This should read: "They aggregate about one million seven hundred and sixty thousand square miles."

Requests for Prayer

Sister Jennie Thompson, Sparks, Kansas, asks the prayers of the Saints for her daughter, Maude Taylor, who is going through a severe trial. Sister Thompson and her daughter are members of the church.

Mrs. W. M. Keck, Princeville, Illinois, writes on July 23: "I would like for the Saints to pray for my husband, who is sick and has been for months. It seems the doctor can do him no good. They do not appear to know what is the trouble; he feels weak and tired all the time. We think it is the effects of the 'flu.' He is needed here and has a desire to be healed and live. I ask the Saints to remember him."

Marriages

RAW-FLYNN.—The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Agnes Raw to Mr. Mont J. Flynn took place Thursday night, June 30, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Raw, West Sixtieth Street Terrace, Kansas City, Missouri. The bride's grandfather, Elder Francis A. Evans, read the ceremony before the mantel, which was banked with beautiful flowers. Miss Edith Driver was bridesmaid, and Mr. Ephraim Evans acted as best man for Mr. Flynn. Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Flynn will be at home after July 14 at 600 West Sixtieth Street Terrace, Kansas City, Missouri.

Birth Notice

To Elder and Sister F. C. Bevan, of 210 Grand Avenue, Ottumwa, Iowa, on July 21, 1927, a son, Richard Eugene.

Our Departed Ones

SPRIGGLE.—Savilla Spriggle was born February 11, 1863, west of Uniontown, Ohio. She was married to Frank Spriggle, and to them were born four children, two boys and two girls. She united with the church about thirty-five years ago and has lived a good, consistent, Christian life. Always she was ready to lend assistance. She has been isolated from church privileges nearly all of these years. Died June 30, 1927, at Myersville, Ohio, as the result of an accident brought by a runaway horse as she was on her way to a funeral. Left to mourn her departure are her husband, Brother Frank Spriggle; two sons, Newton and Earl; one daughter, Mrs. Samuel Ritzman; and her father, ninety-three years old. Funeral was held July 2, 1927, in the Methodist Church at Myersville, in charge of A. R. Manchester. Sermon was by J. C. McConaughy. Interment was in Uniontown Cemetery.

HOLTMAN.—John Holtman was born September 1, 1859, at Gibbville, Cheboygan County, Wisconsin. On March 29, 1882, he was married to Rieta Kruiyenga, and to them were given one son and three daughters, the son dying in infancy. His wife died January 15, 1899. Brother Holtman was baptized by Brother B. S. Lambkin September 15, 1912, in Princeton, Minnesota. He was a kind father and bore all his troubles with patience, and his faith in the latter-day work was strong. Died June 30, 1927, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. C. VanSomeran, in Princeton, Minnesota. There remain three daughters: Mrs. P. C. VanSomeran, of Princeton; Mrs. Henry Rens, and Mrs. Frank DeWitt, both of Baldwin, Wisconsin; twelve grandchildren, one brother, four sisters, and a number of other relatives and friends to mourn his departure. Funeral sermon was by Elder Ray Whiting, of Minneapolis. Interment was beside his wife.

FERGUSON.—Sister A. E. Ferguson was born in Mississippi December 19, 1852; died at Hardin, Missouri, July 3, 1927. Early in life she united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. At about fourteen years of age she came to Missouri with her parents, locating near Millville, Missouri. Later she united in marriage to G. P. W. Ferguson, and to them were born eight children, William, James, Mrs. Anna Knipschild, and Mrs. Fannie Gentry, of Oregon; Thomas, of California; Claud, of Colorado; Mrs. A. A. Hughes, of Hardin, Missouri, in whose home she died; Mrs. Cleota Porterfield, who preceded her in death about eighteen years; and LaFayette, known as "Dix," who also preceded her in death about three years. Two sisters survive her, Mrs. Rebecca Craven, of Russellville, Missouri, and Mrs. F. A. Corkan. The funeral services were in charge of Elder J. Charles May, of Independence, Missouri, and the burial took place at New Hope Cemetery, not far from the Wakenda church.

POHLE.—Florence Lutie, third daughter of John and Jane Marshall Edwards, was born in Beetown Township, Wisconsin, August 3, 1891. She was happily married to Harley Pohle, of Bloomington, Wisconsin, February 28, 1913. To them ten children have been born. The youngest, a tiny babe, preceded the mother to the better land in December of last year. The terrible tragedy of July 4—an auto accident—which has bereft a loving husband and left motherless nine young children, and has cast an indescribable gloom over a wide community. She was a wonderful little mother, bright and happy, capable, and friendly in all her ways. Lutie made friends wherever she was known. On June 11, 1905, she was baptized by Elder J. O. Dutton into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in which faith she continued the remaining brief period of her earthly life. Her mother preceded her in death ten years ago. Besides the bereaved husband and children, Milton, John, Charles, Eunice, Mary Jane, Roxy, Virginia, Vivian, and Marie, there remain her father and second mother, two sisters; and two brothers; also many other relatives and many, many friends. There has gone from our midst a loving daughter, a devoted wife and mother, a good neighbor, and a Christian woman. The funeral was conducted in the Congregational Church in the city of Bloomington, the pastor assisting. Sermon by W. A. McDowell. There was a very large attendance. Only about half of the people could get into the building. Over one hundred automobiles were in the procession to the cemetery near Bloomington.

BLUE.—Frances Virginia Blue was born October 11, 1857. Married Charles Blue January 25, 1877, and to them were born six sons and two daughters. She also raised two daughters by a former marriage of her husband. About twelve years ago she joined the church and has lived a good consistent Christian life. She was always ready and willing to do all she could to aid and assist in all the ways she could when opportunity was presented. She has now passed over to the other side, leaving earthly life July 12, 1927, at the age of sixty-nine years, nine months, one day. Surviving are one brother, Douglass Dewitte, of Oklahoma; one sister, Mrs. Thomas Bell, of Nebraska; four boys, Roy, Tracy, Pell, and Clair, all of Barberton; daughters, Mrs. May Brodie, of Akron; Mrs. Fay Bayler, of Barberton, thirteen grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren, also two step-daughters, and many friends. Her husband and two sons preceded her in death. Funeral sermon was by J. C. McConaughy. Interment at Lakewood Cemetery, Barberton, Ohio, July 15.

BUTTERWORTH.—Charles Edward Butterworth was born at Port Deposit, Maryland, September 24, 1846. At different periods of his childhood, the family lived at Nelsonville, Ohio, and Saint Louis, Missouri, his mother having died at the latter place of the cholera epidemic. In 1854 the family moved to Howorth Grove in Crawford County, Iowa. At the age of fifteen he united with the church and served it loyally as he did his country during its struggle, having taken his father's place with the colors. He enlisted in the year 1864 at the age of eighteen years, three years after his church enlistment, being released from his army service in 1865. In 1866 he was married to Julia Rudd, who passed away in the year 1880, seven children being born to this union. In 1881 he married Ida May Rudd, and to them were born six children. Brother Butterworth was ordained an elder March 15, 1873, a high priest, April 15, 1890, and a patriarch, April 9, 1903. He was for sixty years a resident of Crawford County and a resident of Dow City, Iowa, for many years. He led the life of a true Christian and took an active part in the various departments of the church work, where he is sadly missed since his death, which occurred May 24, 1927, as the result of a stroke. He leaves to mourn, his wife, three daughters, Mrs. Frank Schaffer, of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Ed Liese, of Vail; and Miss Vida Butterworth, a student nurse at Independence, Missouri; five sons, Robert, of Des Moines; Julian, of Ithaca, New York; Virgil, of Chicago; Raymond, of Princeton, Iowa; and Herbert, of Dow City, all of whom were present at the funeral. He also leaves nine grandchildren, four brothers, and three sisters, besides other relatives and many friends. The funeral was held Friday afternoon at the Methodist church, being largely attended. Elder F. T. Mussell, of Des Moines, conducted the services giving the sermon. Interment was made in Dow City cemetery, six boys of the American Legion acting as pall bearers. They were in uniform. Several old soldiers attended the funeral as a tribute of respect to their departed comrade.

The Pine Cone Silver Fox and Fur Farms are locating their fox ranch close to Traverse City, Michigan, with twenty-five pairs of Silver Black Foxes, which are pure bred, pedigreed, and registered in the American National Fox Breeders' Association; also ten pairs of Blue Foxes, which are pure bred, pedigreed, and registered.

Civilization has practically trapped out the foxes in the wild, so it is necessary to farm them to perpetuate them. Fur farming has proved most successful in Northern Michigan, where it has been conducted for a number of years. There is a demand for the better breeding stock and also the furs.

Our strain of foxes is selected from one of the highest average collections of foxes in the United States.

The people who can own foxes and wear silver fox furs are increasing faster than the animals can be produced, so that makes the demand for them increase.

"The fox industry is perfectly able to stand on its own merit. It does not need extravagant statements to bolster it in the live stock world. The fox rancher should be on the alert to improve his herd. Fox farming is a good business."—Dr. J. A. Allen, (eight years in charge of Canadian Government Fox Research Station, Prince Edward Island, Canada).

To Palmyra and the Hill

The feelings under which a Latter Day Saint either approaches or leaves Hill Cumorah are contingent upon so many factors that it is quite impossible to say what they are likely to be in each case; and I do not undertake to say what were the emotions of Brethren John and Charles as we left the Hill for a visit to other parts and places of historic interest; and as mine were of a mixed variety, perhaps it is well to let each reader guess what and how we felt. I have, of course, read much of our early history, yet such reading has been incidental and usually for the settling of certain things which bear on our work yet undone and the problems still unsolved. And so as we left the Hill to reach the other objectives of our visit, I presume my companions felt as I did, that it would have been a pleasure to spend hours there, in meditation upon the happenings in the early days of the church, in efforts to evaluate them in the light of subsequent happenings and developments, and which in turn would lead to efforts to evaluate recent happenings in other places in the church in the light of the objectives of the church and their bearings on our progress, and from the atmosphere of this famous ridge so intimately associated with the history of our people and our ancient connections, seek answer to a question so often rising on our lips, "What of the morrow?"

While still under the spell or charm of the sights and memories of Cumorah, as we journeyed Brother Fry had turned the car from the new main road running north and south past the Hill, and it was only a short time until we, from information we had already received, recognized we were approaching the "Joseph Smith Farm." A group of men and women were in the road between the house and the barn. "Mormons," we all thought, and we were right, we soon learned. The missionaries (men and women) were gathering at the farm for a picnic, as a preliminary to the celebration of the day following, Pioneers' Day, July 24, now quite generally celebrated by Mormons, not only in Utah, where the event occurred which is thus commemorated.

It is quite common to see, on these western New York farms, "house" group of buildings and "barn" group clustered on opposite sides of the thoroughfare. And such is the case on the "Joseph Smith Farm." The old house stands on the east side of the road, facing west; the barn is on the west side. The group of people we saw in the road were watching or participating in a game of "horseshoes."

Parking our car beneath one of the many fine shade trees so plentiful in that country, we approached the group, and I "broke in" with a question, "When was that house built?"

"Brother Bean can tell you," said the young man to whom I addressed the query. And "Brother Bean" detached himself from the group of horseshoe pitchers to give attention to our questions. He is a middle-aged man, athletic in appearance, and well set up. Didn't look like a preacher, and we learned he had for twelve years been caretaker of the farm, had purchased the property at the Hill (for the Mormons), and is negotiating for the Hill itself. We found him courteous and obliging, and for an hour or so gave his full time to us. I was a bit surprised when in answer to my question as to when the house was built, he said promptly, "1823."

"Has it been rebuilt?" was my next. The answer was, if I remember correctly, that an addition had been built to it about 1867. The good state of preservation of the building and its neat appearance were the causes of the surprise, in connection with the fact that the date 1823 fixes its age as one hundred and four years. It had been well built, though somewhat crudely, to have withstood the rain and sun, heat and cold of more than ten decades.

"Brother Bean" conducted us into the house, told us somewhat of its history, the early vicissitudes of the family on and about the farm, showed us some of the "Smith furniture," the room occupied by "Joseph," and in the courteous replies to our many questions gave us information with a readiness which bespoke a deep interest in his work and a patient research into the many details of past history connected with the place. All this, too, he gave to us as total strangers, for it was not until we were leaving that we revealed our identity or connection to the family who had once owned the place.

After going through the house, we were conducted across the road, past the barn, over the small creek (which in early days had been dammed in order to impound enough water for baptismal purposes), up a lane between meadows, and through a gate into a bit of woods apparently undisturbed by axmen for many years. This woods is called "The Sacred Grove," and we were told by our guide, "Brother Bean," that here, near a tree pointed out as fixing the spot, was where Joseph the Seer was permitted the vision he has graphically described. Whatever dubiety or certainty may exist in the minds of visitors as to the identity of the spot or place, it serves the purpose of objectifying an event of considerable importance to us, and which was of great directional influence in the life of a man who has left a marked influence upon American life. Beneath the tree, we were told, frequent meetings are held on irregular occasions, and one was to be held the next day.

All the time we had been visiting and slowly walking from the house to the fields and woods, I had been plying our guide with questions, to all of which I had friendly and kindly reply. From these replies I glean the following:

The farm was purchased by the Smiths about 1822 or 1823, the house built in 1823. The original farm comprised about one hundred acres, which are now owned by the Mormons, and about thirty acres in addition. The farm was worked by the Smiths, but was lost to them not very long after purchasing, through financial difficulties and intricacies. It was secured about twelve years ago by the present owners, and the houses and buildings have been repaired and restored. The creek in a narrow valley runs about through the center of the farm, the hills rising sharply to the east and more gradual in slope to the west. The soil, of glacial drift formation, is "spotty," as is characteristic of such formation, hence varying, sometimes sharply in short distances, in fertility. Under "Brother Bean's" management, it is farmed advantageously, the crops being those usual to the country: grass, corn, wheat, oats, and garden vegetables. Fruit trees do well in that climate, and many were in evidence. In addition to this farm, the Utah people own a farm to the west of Hill Cumorah, including a portion of the Hill, the Whitmer farm near Waterloo near in turn to Fayette, and are, I'm told, in process of negotiating for the Hill Cumorah itself, with a strong likelihood of getting it. "Brother Bean" cares for and directs the activities of all these places and seems to know his job well.

As we came to the road, between house and barn, on our return from the "Sacred Grove," we were for the first time asked where we were from. Then I told who we were. Of course this revealed the reasons of our keen interest in the farm and its history. "Brother Bean" was even more cordial, and gave us a kind invitation to come out the following day to the meetings and gave me invitation to speak to them. But as things turned out, while we appreciated and thanked "Brother Bean" for the invitation, we were not privileged to attend. As I told in my last, the weatherman had darkened the sky before we left the Hill, and as we walked from the farmhouse to the Grove, occasional drops of rain fell, and as we gave our parting salutations and expressed thanks for the courtesies shown, we moved under one of the beautiful hard maples, to protect ourselves from the rain which continued most of the remainder of the day.

It is rather picturesque, this "Joseph Smith Farm." The house, located on a road running nearly north and south, faces west, and is quite commodious for an early farmhouse, is simple in outline and finish, and is well kept up by the present owners. It stands on a slope rising rather sharply from the road, while the terrain behind it rises still sharply to the east for some distance onto a bench which extends quite to the east line of the farm. Behind that yet rises the wooded hills to the east. Across the road to the west lie the open fields and meadows "cleared" by the Smiths, while to the north and west lie the wooded slopes of the Sacred Grove of beeches, maples, elms, and other indigenous hardwood trees. On the gentler slope to the north are the fruit trees and orchard of the farm, while the road rising gently to the north is lined from just south of the house for some distance to the north of it with large and pretty shade trees, mostly hard maples. For a "farm" it is a beautiful and restful spot, and I rather admire the sagacity of my ancestors in selecting it.

How did I feel, seeing it in the hands of the Mormons? I think I hear some one ask. Well, one thing is quite certain, even if I had personally desired to own it, for very obvious reasons I could not. If the church had proposed buying it, or the Hill, or any other farm around there, I should have opposed it. The land we need lies much nearer Independence. And I know of no one who will take better care of the farm, or the Hill, and other historic spots they may buy, than will our ecclesiastical cousins from Utah; and I'd much rather see them have it or them than to see those places in the hands of those who would be disposed to collect fees from visitors. So I am glad the Utah people have the farm and are giving it their usual good care; and I am hoping they may be successful in securing the Hill. It will be a guarantee that its beauties will be preserved and enhanced, and that it will be accessible to the public. In the meantime, I am glad that we are buying land in the "regions round about," with our eyes to the future. The Utah people can afford to spend money on these far eastern landmarks; and we can not. Our burdens and responsibilities nearer "home" demand that all our resources be concentrated there.

With the rain falling gently on tree and terrain, with nature peaceful and quiet despite the deep blue-black of storm cloud, and with a cheerful good-bye to genial "Brother Bean," we mounted "the modern steed" and drove slowly away from another interesting historic spot, again with mixed feelings and emotions, I shall not attempt to describe. But I venture the guess that in the heart of each of the three was a renewed determination to "carry on" towards the completion of the yet unfilled task of "the church."

We were going back to Palmyra, to spend the night at Hotel Palmyra. Supper over, John and I, while Brother Charles wrote, rested, read, "prowled around" for information, getting in touch with business men and others who could tell us things. And we had an interesting time. Late into the night I wrote, as I have told you before.

For the next, "A visit with a unique character."

Saint Paul Believed in the Specialist

In a letter of Apostle Paul to the Ephesian saints we find him calling their attention to a principle in organization which he deemed of importance in order that the work might be competently carried on. Paul believed in a division of responsibility and an apportionment of the tasks of church building and maintenance. Hear him:

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

As has always been the case when the church of God was in touch with its Head, the church was the leader and the rest of the world came along in scattered disorder, some more nearly approaching the ideal than others, but none of them grasping the truth as did the body which Christ established to be the light of the world.

If Paul understood Christ and the plan he had adopted in building his church, each member of the body would be charged with a particular part of the work of the whole, which part would be indicated by the natural and acquired equipment of the individual: all working together that a perfect ensemble might result.

Paul's day was not what one would call a day of specialists, so far as industrial or commercial pursuits were affected. It was the day of the all-around man: the man who could raise his own food-stuffs, grind his own wheat, tan his own hides, make his own shoes, treat his own sick cattle, build his own house, and make his own wine. But Christ pointed out a better way: man might see the beauty and efficiency of the plan as related to church building and carry the principle over into his entire list of activities, thus making the church the leader of the world.

The day of apostasy (and in the world outside the church the Dark Ages) came, and in both church and private and public life this principle of efficiency was lost. The Reformation came to the church, and things were not quite so dark as had been, but the church did not seem to recover this principle to any great degree.

The light of modern times began to dawn on commerce and industry and profession, and the day of the specialist was on, so far as temporal life was affected. But it was reserved for the great Restoration movement to emphasize the plan and once more come to the front with the idea of specialization according to the equipment of the individual. From the day of the organization of the church under Joseph Smith, down through the work of his son in establishing the church, and of the work of his grandson in the development of the body, this principle of specialization has been emphasized.

This is good doctrine, as the world has found, for school, for profession, for trade, for merchandising, for the entire gamut of commercial and industrial life.

But in the modern church of the world we find that almost without exception the membership looks upon the preacher as a failure unless he is one who can organize a business campaign, design a modern church building, help construct the building he has designed, purchase without error of judgment the church furniture, decorate the church when it becomes dingy, advise the farmer, the tradesman, the artisan, the business man, the school-teacher, and the lawyer, in addition to preaching in such a spiritual atmosphere as to really dispense the bread of life, give spiritual comfort to the sick and dying, give an ear of sympathy and correct advice to the deserted husband or wife, dramatize the Sunday school lesson, purify the local politics, and in spare time provide from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent of his own living, and the maintenance of his family.

Glenn Frank recently said, "But the point I want to emphasize is that in the development of our modern churches we have gone apostate to the sound principle of a spiritual division of labor as suggested by Saint Paul. . . . We expect one lone preacher to be priest, prophet, pastor, president, all in one and at the same time."

Why not Latter Day Saints at least avoid such mistakes in the church, carefully working under the direction such instruction as the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants contain? It will be well to reread the fourth chapter of the Ephesian letter, also section 119, paragraph 8, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and continue with increased devotion to the church to leave to every man the special work for which he is fitted. In this way may the church take her place as a light to the world—to the political world, to the world of art, to the world of commerce, to the scientific world. And in this way the necessity for the administration of stewardships will appear and become more and more insistent.

Ruth Lyman Smith Memorial Library

The Ruth Lyman Smith Memorial Library was established March 22, 1927, by President Frederick M. Smith and daughters Alice and Lois as a perpetual monument to the wife and mother who passed away May 4, 1926. They contributed the initial group of books and established a fund, the income from which is used to buy new volumes for the library. The library was designed especially for works on parenthood and expression, fields in which Sister Smith was most actively interested.

The Department of Women assisted in founding the library by furnishing the first section of bookcases. Since its inception the library has been added to by a number of individuals and groups, and now contains a total of 670 volumes. Large contributions in addition to those of President Smith and family were made by Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Smith, the Sunday schools in Zion, and the Story-Telling Class of the Institute.

Periodical magazines which are available at the Memorial Library include: Children, The Junior Home, and The Journal of Expression. Others are to be added.

Although books on parenthood and expression are particularly stressed in the purpose and growth of the library, volumes from the fields of psychology, science, history, and education have been received from contributors. The contributions have long since overflowed the bookcase capacity and have been stacked on shelves, awaiting donors who will provide the needed cases.

The library is in charge of Miss Bertha Constance, assistant principal of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. Books are in continual use by the people of Independence, and the library is growing. The women of the church at the last General Conference passed a resolution to sponsor the development of the memorial.

President Smith established this type of memorial because he believed it would be of greatest good to the greatest number of people. He chose the two fields, parenthood and expression, because Sister Smith was particularly interested and had invested much effort in them. She was widely active in the work of the Department of Women and was highly talented in the field of expression. A member of the first faculty of Graceland College, she occupied the chair of elocution and public reading and speaking in 1895 and following. She graduated from the National School of Elocution and Oratory at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Many of her own books were among the collection which founded the library in her memory.

A collection of Indian curios was also contributed by President Smith. It is hoped that in the future a special room may be provided at the Institute in which both the book and museum phases of the library may be further developed.

Volumes of The Ruth Lyman Smith Memorial Library are marked by attractive bookplates designed by George Bartholomew.

From Bishop Charles Fry at Cumorah

Tuesday morning we received this message, which speaks for itself: "After three days' visitation of the historic places in western New York, where the church had its beginnings one hundred years ago, and of interviews with many people of this region, my faith in the church and the Book of Mormon has been greatly increased and confirmed. I am sending this message from the Hill Cumorah: That in view of this year being the centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, I am undertaking to reread that book by September 22 in recognition of the centennial, and am wondering how many of the Saints will join with me in reading it.—Charles Fry."

Surely nothing but strength and purity and re-

Where the Plates Were Found

BY S. A. BURGESS

When Joseph Smith was in his tenth year, his father removed from Sharon, Vermont, to Palmyra, in Ontario County, New York. The name of this county has since been changed to Wayne. Some years later he removed to the village of Manchester in this same county.

Joseph Smith further informs us that it was the second year after that that a revival was held in Manchester, commencing with the Methodists but including all the sects in that region of the country. It would appear that the removal to western New York was probably early in 1815, and to Manchester from Palmyra probably late in 1818, as this revival was held in the spring of 1820, while Joseph Smith was in his fifteenth year, having reached the age of fourteen years, three months, and four days before—in December, 1819.

This section of the country is very beautiful, with a series of lakes, hills, and valleys which make for scenes of unusual beauty.

As the Whitmers lived in Fayette, near Seneca Lake, it is in this lake that many of the early baptisms took place. Not the first, however, as Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were still in Pennsylvania when they baptized each other in the river.

Joseph Smith evidently went into the woods near his home when he prayed and received his first vision. We learn from other sources that in the woods near this place there is a place where the family frequently resorted for prayer. It is quite probable that this place of prayer is very near this spot where he received his first vision, and that it was since that time used as a place of worship.

It was in this woods that the eight witnesses were shown the plates of the Book of Mormon. It was south of these woods, near the Whitmer Home, where the three witnesses received their remarkable spiritual manifestation when the plates were shown to them by an angel of God, and they were commanded to testify. To the eight witnesses no remarkable spiritual manifestation was given, but they were shown the plates and handled them.

Near the little village of Manchester there are a series of hills, but the greatest of these is the hill afterwards called Cumorah. It is on the western side of this hill that the plates were concealed, and it was to this spot that Joseph Smith was directed in September, 1823, when he secured his first vision of the plates. We think the account given by Oliver Cowdery is of enough interest to quote here:

You are acquainted with the mail road from Palmyra, Wayne County, to Canandaigua, Ontario County, New York; and also, as you pass from the former to the latter place, before arriving at the little village of Manchester, say from three to four, or about five miles from Palmyra, you pass a large hill on the east side of the road. Why do I say large; it is because it is as large, perhaps, as any in that country. To a person acquainted with this road, a description would be unnecessary, as it is the largest and rises the highest of any on that route. The north end rises quite sudden until it assumes a level with the more southerly extremity, and I think I may say an elevation higher than at the south a short distance, say half, or three quarters of a mile. As you pass towards Canandaigua it lessens gradually until the surface assumes its common level, or is broken by other smaller hills or ridges, water courses and ravines. I think I am justified in saying that this is the highest hill for some distance round, and, I am certain that its appearance, as it rises so suddenly from a plain on the north, must attract the notice of the traveler as he passes by.

At about one mile west rises another ridge of less height, running parallel with the former, leaving a beautiful vale between. The soil is of the first quality of the country, and under a state of cultivation which gives a prospect at once imposing, when one reflects on the fact, that here, between these hills, the entire power and national strength of both the Jaredites and Nephites were destroyed. . . .

The hill of which I have been speaking, at the time mentioned, presented a varied appearance; the north end rose suddenly from the plain, forming a promontory without timber, but covered with grass. As you passed to the south, you soon came to scattering timber, the surface having been cleared by art or by wind; and a short distance further left, you are surrounded with the common forest of the country. It is necessary to observe, that even the part cleared was only occupied for pasturage, its steep ascent and narrow summit not admitting the plow or the husbandman, with any degree of ease or profit. It was the second mentioned place where the record was found to be deposited, on the west side of the hill, not far from the top down its side; and when myself visited the place in the year 1830, there were several trees standing; enough to cause a shade in summer, but not so much as to prevent the surface being covered with grass—which was also the case when the record was first found.

Whatever may be the feeling of men on the reflection of past acts which have been performed on certain portions or spots of this earth, I know not, neither does it add to nor diminish from the reality of my subject. When Moses heard the voice of God, at the foot of Horeb, out of the burning bush, he was commanded to take his shoes off his feet, for the ground on which he stood was holy. The same may be observed when Joshua beheld the "Captain of the Lord's host" by Jericho. And I confess that my mind was filled with many reflections; and though I did not then loose my shoe, yet with gratitude to God did I offer up the sacrifice of my heart.

How far below the surface these records were placed by Moroni, I am unable to say; but from the fact that they had been some fourteen hundred years buried and that too on the side of a hill so steep, one is ready to conclude that they were some feet below, as the earth would naturally wear more or less in that length of time. But they being placed toward the top of the hill, the ground would not remove as much as at two-thirds, perhaps. Another circumstance would prevent a wearing of the earth; in all probability, as soon as the timber had time to grow, the hill was covered, after the Nephites were destroyed, and the roots of the same would hold the surface. However, on this point I shall leave every man to draw his own conclusion, and form his own speculation, as I only promised to give a description of the place at the time the records were found in 1823. It is sufficient for my present purpose to know that such is the fact; that in 1823, yes 1823, a man with whom I have had the most intimate and personal acquaintance, for almost seven years, actually discovered by the vision of God, the plates from which the Book of Mormon, as much as it is disbelieved, was translated. Such is the case, though men rack their very brains to invent falsehoods, and then waft them upon every breeze, to the contrary notwithstanding.

I have not given sufficient on the subject of the hill Cum-orah—it has a singular and imposing appearance for that country, and must excite the curious inquiry of every lover of the Book of Mormon; though I hope never like Jerusalem, and the sepulcher of our Lord, the pilgrims. In my estimation, certain places are dearer to me for what they now contain than for what they have contained. For the satisfaction of such as believe I have been thus particular, and to avoid the question being a thousand times asked, more than any other cause, shall proceed and be as particular as heretofore. The manner in which the plates were deposited:

First, a hole of sufficient depth (how deep I know not) was dug. At the bottom of this was laid a stone of suitable size, the upper surface being smooth. At each edge was placed a large quantity of cement, and into this cement, at the four edges of this stone, were placed, erect, four others, their bottom edges resting in the cement at the outer edges of the first stone. The four last named, when placed erect, formed a box, the corners, or where the edges of the four came in contact, were also cemented so firmly that the moisture from without was prevented from entering. It is to be observed also, that the inner surface of the four erect side stones was smooth. This box was sufficiently large to admit a breastplate, such as was used by the ancients to defend the chest, etc., from the arrows and weapons of their enemy. From the bottom of the box, or from the breastplate, arose three small pillars composed of the same description of cement used on the edges; and upon these three pillars was placed the record of the children of Joseph, and a people who left the tower far, far before the days of Joseph, or a sketch of each, which had it not been for this, and the never-failing goodness of God, we might have perished in our skins, having been left to bow down before the altars of the Gentiles and to have paid homage to the priests of Baal.

I must not forget to say that this box containing the record was covered with another stone, the bottom surface being flat, and the upper, crowning. But those three pillars were not so lengthy as to cause the plates and the crowning stone to come in contact.

I have now given you, according to my promise, the manner in which this record was deposited; though when it was first visited by our brother in 1823, a part of the crowning stone was visible above the surface, while the edges were concealed by the soil and grass, from which circumstance you will see, that however deep this box might have been placed by Moroni at first, the time had been sufficient to wear the earth so that it was easily discovered, when once directed, and yet not enough to make a perceivable difference to the passer-by. So wonderful are the works of the Almighty, and so far from our finding out are his ways, that one who trembles to take his holy name into his lips, is left to wonder at his exact providences, and the fulfillment of his purposes in the event of times and seasons. A few years sooner might have found even the topmost stone concealed, and discouraged our brother from attempting to make a further trial to obtain this rich treasure, for fear of discovery; and a few later might have left the small box uncovered, and exposed its valuable contents to the rude calculations and vain speculations of those who neither understand common language nor fear God. But such would have been contrary to the words of the ancients, and the promises made to them; and this is why I am left to admire the works and see the wisdom in the designs of the Lord in all things manifested to the eyes of the world; they show that all human inventions are like the vapors, while his word endures forever and his promises to the last generation.

Forensics at Graceland

BY G. N. B.

When Graceland was still an infant in years and numbers, in the days when the old "Ad" Building served for a men's dormitory, gymnasium, kitchen, and everything, a group of typically earnest students conceived the idea of a literary society which they called the Athenian. Now, if we were to erase the concept Athenian from the minds and memories of Graceland's students, we would be robbing them of one of their richest college traditions.

The Athenian's exact contribution to the training and development of Graceland's army of leaders will never be known. But we are sure it has been one among several potent factors in developing the latent talents of many.

Very soon after the opening of school in the fall, one can hear the question on every new student's tongue, "What society shall I join?" The question is answered before long, and he finds himself initiated into one of Graceland's four literary societies constituting the Athenian Federation.

At first the student does not quite understand what the rush is all about. However, by the time he has participated in a few society programs, gulped down some refreshments with his fellow society workers, and yelled his head off at an intersociety forensic meet, he begins to develop a lively sense of society loyalty if not ownership. Before long our new society member is approached by the society forensic captain, and told that his society at the end of the year has hopes of winning the forensic banner given to the society gaining the largest number of forensic points in the intersociety contests. He is asked, "How are you going to help our society win?" The new member normally feels his weakness. He immediately wants to make a break for the open spaces. His fear is abated, however, when he is told that all he has to do is try. He may have a choice of a number of different activities. Everybody tries something. Greener people than he have walked away with the honors. If he does not make something the first trial, he will get good training for the second attempt. By this time he actually has a little confidence in himself and enrolls in just about every contest in the list. Thus our young, inexperienced student, suffering from an inferiority complex, is gradually engulfed in the stream of literary activities. He emerges along with two or three hundred like companions much better equipped to meet the demands of social and religious leadership.

Some idea of the general participation in Graceland forensic activities can be gained by giving the number competing in some recent contest. In the recent college extemporaneous speaking contest thirty-six college students appeared in the preliminaries. Forty college students memorized and delivered a Practically the whole student body participate in some form or other in the annual society music contests.

In comparing the work done by the Graceland system of universal literary participation with that of larger colleges which conduct forensic activities on a limited select scale, we feel that our church college offers a superior service to her students. In turn she expects to turn out students who are equipped in a superior way to serve her.

Branch Efficiency

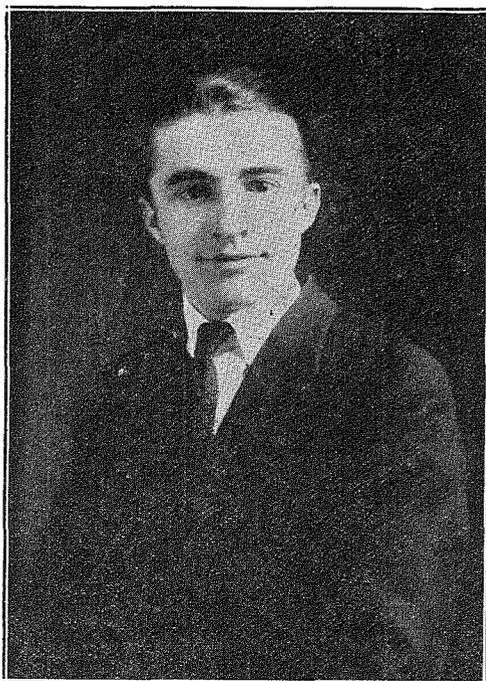

(Thoughts from a Missionary's letter.)

I am not attempting to touch upon all the factors which look in the direction of branch efficiency, but will mention a few of the necessities.

Defining Efficiency

First of all, efficiency is relative and is measured in terms of attainment toward certain aims or goals or certain services to be performed. When the aim of a group is clearly defined, and methods of attaining the aim have been intelligently revealed and scientifically applied, the activities aroused will reflect the ultimate ends of these endeavors. When these revealed ultimates coincide and are equal to the aims of society, we have efficiency. Aims may be evil or good. The sometimes subtle and unseen clashing of social forces, as well as the open and visible conflicts of these forces striving toward opposite or antagonistic ultimate ends, create the "Kulturkampf." But it is not the mere opposition of a group toward others, nor yet is it the mere enthusiasm over a program of action that is efficiency. The defining of objectives does not create efficiency; the mere possession of alertness does not make efficiency; being active, doing something, is not efficiency; the acquisition of knowledge and riches does not mean that he who so possesses is efficient. All these are not in themselves efficiency unless we define the final ends of societies and individuals as being these activities or states of being.

In our church the goals of society have been revealed to us. We do not need to wait till the end of our endeavors to have revealed to us the final result of them. In other words, we are not blindly passing through our culture development. The revelations of God have given us our aims. I believe that these aims have been intelligently, under inspiration of God, defined as the present realization of salvation for humanity, not merely as a future condition of transformed unearthly souls. The aim of our church, then, is present-day salvation in every activity or life contact. This is the Good which we

This year there are sixty-five society members signed up to write original short stories. Twenty-four men and women made public appearances in inter-society debates.

as a church embody in our aim. If we are saved in the present, the future will hold no dark terrors for us, for present-day salvation is continuous; the moment it ceases it becomes a thing of the past. The future will be comprehended in the present. Our salvation becomes a status, but not a crystallized condition. In this respect we have a continuity of present salvation. It is progression, and not stagnation or retrogression.

Creating and Maintaining Efficiency

We must conceive methods and activities which will create effective working organizations, whether they be rural, in small communities, or in urban centers. The end of competency, ability to advantageously perform the work intended, must be kept in mind as the organization is conceived.

Zion is a people; Zion is a state in the fullest sense of that term; Zion is a condition of mind. In other words, it is a state with citizens whose minds, whose souls, are being trained to operate, under religious stimulus, along certain lines indicated by particular attitudes toward God. But these attitudes are the fruits, not merely of daydreams, of mystical religious formulæ for prayers, and of meditation; they should be the results of spiritual education and guidance from the pulpit, in the schools and colleges, in the homes, on the streets, with the gangs of boys and girls. The soul is not so much a matter of birth as it is of development by education; its salvation is absolutely a matter of education, not of physical birth or of baptism.

Faith alone or repentance alone will not save. The development of attitudes toward God which gradually will displace evil through their activities, means salvation for the soul. These attitudes are mind conditions, are mind characteristics. The mind of man is the sum total of all his experiences plus the light of understanding. The experiences of people in various communities differ in too many ways to mention, but the essential thing to grasp is, that the experiences of all the individuals make up the experience of the group and the mind of both individual and group is controlled in its essential development by the attitudes they have toward God, and that these attitudes are matters of education.

Our priesthood is not made up of all the educators and educating forces having to do with the religious development and the education of our people. But I emphatically say that our priesthood should be in such a state of preparedness and have such an alert grasp of the processes involved that our people might be directed in right channels in their full development. This makes up government of our people through priesthood. Through the operation of priesthood in such a government among our people, the individual would be revealed to himself and God would be revealed to him. Until man is revealed to himself, he can not understand God. The potentialities of youth, its talents, its points of danger and weakness, its God possibilities revealed to youth in time, and youth aided in its development and expression of talents will do more to keep the young in our church than any number of formulated prayers and pious songs. When the group is guided and educated till it sees its own problems, recognizes the prophets, even the youthful ones, who are of their own flesh and blood, and will keep these prophets at home, permitting them to use their talents for the salvation and blessing of their own kith and kin as well as for others, we will be on the high road to efficiency.

My concept of the efficient branch is that branch where the aims of the church have been completely embodied in the objectives of the branch and are reflected in the branch activities; where every officer of the branch and every member of the priesthood is awake to the task of educating and developing the attitudes of the members of the church according to the social, economic, and spiritual aims of the church; where the youth and the aged are united in the work of discovery and development and use of every talent that can be used for the common good of all; where there is no fear of the revealments of God by prophetic instrumentality and of the revelations of scientific research; where the priesthood in righteousness administers vocational guidance as well as spiritual salvation; where the priesthood is correctly organized and governed according to the mental and spiritual priesthood qualifications of each member of it. This latter especially works for great unity under a wise governor. It is "vocational guidance" applied to calling to priesthood and appointment and election to office in any department of the church.

The reason high office is so powerless to bring about reforms, the reason titles and prerogatives are helpless in making a clean sweep of injustice, is just this—no office or authority gets any further than the character that creates and fills it. Character is the great authority. Given character, we can dispense with office. Presidents and kings and magistrates of all degrees are but the servants of great characters. And great characters are independent of riches or power. They are rich and they have power, and are therefore invincible in whatever right things they undertake.—Dearborn Independent, July 23, 1927.

Quakers Call for Good Will Toward Russia

The Society of Friends has earned the right to speak upon international affairs. It is certain that on the Continent of Europe its members have done much by their practical service to commend the Christian message. Even the Russian revolutionary, who is hot in his anger against all churches, will make an exception of these Friends and will read this message of theirs without scorn: "The yearly meeting of the Society of Friends now in session is deeply anxious concerning the situation existing between this country and Russia. Recalling the sorrows of the past and the work our members were able to do in the years of famine in Russia, we know that there is a better way than the path of conflict. We desire to draw the minds of our people from the strife of today to the deeper unity of mankind in God, and to urge upon all those who love their fellows an effort of spirit to rise above the cloud of political antagonism. At this time of crisis there is a call to seek the mind of God and to know the peaceable spirit. We believe, too, that men should always seek the way of understanding and of human fellowship. In the name of that peaceable spirit, which is stronger than all the forces of hate, we appeal to all men of good will."—Christian Century, June 23, 1927, page 783.

Macy Campbell—Educational Statesman

BY T. O. WELCH, EDITOR OF "MIDLAND SCHOOLS"

If a history of Iowa education is ever correctly written, Macy Campbell will have a large portion in the treatment. To some it may be he was known only as a teacher in a college or a head of a department at Iowa State Teachers College. To others he was known only as an educational lecturer with a burning message. He was both of these and a marked success in each.

But Macy Campbell was far more than teacher, educator, or lecturer. He was an educational statesman, and one of the too few to deserve that term. As one has expressed it, he had the far view of any problem with which he was connected. He was a most thorough student of the problem before him. In visiting a consolidated school, for instance, he would ride with the children on the route and look into the home life. This first-hand knowledge made him an authority on the subject he presented.

Another characteristic of the man was his fearlessness in promoting a movement in which he believed. For this he was often misunderstood and obliged to face severe criticism. But Macy Campbell never flinched. However, he was known to be open-minded and brave enough to acknowledge his error when so convinced. These are the marks of a big man.

In Iowa this man has for several years been recognized in educational circles as a leader in educational thought and activity. It was only recently that he had become nationally known in education, among the farmers, and in business circles. He was associated with national leaders in various lines. His recent book, Rural Life at the Crossroads, has attracted wide attention as a masterly treatment of the rural economic and educational problem, and he was permitted briefly to glimpse the recognition he so well deserved.

The untimely death of this Iowa educator, which occurred in Macon, Georgia, April 16, has brought to the fore two outstanding characteristics of the man. He was doing an outstanding work, and the quandary is to find a man in Iowa or the Nation who can fill his place. He was a man of unusual vision. He was a man of unusual industry. His habit has long been to rise at four o'clock in the morning to study or to write, before the regular duties of his profession should begin. The only recreation for him was his daily walk of several miles to and from his classroom.

The contribution made by Macy Campbell is the contribution of a better understanding of the rural problem in America and an emphasis upon the need of equality in education and in industry for the farmer and for the farm child. The cause became a passion to the man, and in his untimely passing many see the man a martyr to the cause. Verily, the rural children of America, could they understand his great work, would arise to call Macy Campbell blessed.

Among the tributes which have come are the following:

Macy Campbell packed into less than a half century of time a century of work on behalf of the country school children.—Agnese Samuelson, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Iowa.

I knew Macy Campbell as an educational evangelist for rural welfare. His sincerity and intense earnestness; his thoroughness and completeness of knowledge impressed me greatly. He inspired me with his deep patriotic feeling, and his heart-felt concern for the welfare of the rural child and the rural community.—F. T. Vasey, President Iowa State Teachers Association.

His was the spirit of the true crusader, and his work will live long after him.—Ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden, Oregon, Illinois.

Macy Campbell impressed me deeply as a man who combined in a peculiar way the spirit of an evangelist and the sobering sanity of a scientist.—F. G. Blair, President National Education Association.

Warm-hearted, far-seeing, and dynamic as he was, Professor Campbell's sympathies had long been stirred by the unfair treatment accorded country children, but of late years his study had delved into the underlying sources of this injustice and made him our outstanding national authority on the economic factors in rural education. So great was his vision of this need, and so driving his Mosaic leadership of its forces, that it is no exaggeration to say that he literally laid down his life in its service. Devotion like his is all too rare in these materialistic days, and we who survive him can only thank God for his fine idealism and dedicate ourselves anew to the great cause for which he stood.—Mabel Carney, Teachers College, Columbia University.

In his professional days at the Iowa State Teachers College, he was a teacher without a superior in quantity and quality. His students always left his classroom with a consciousness that each hour was a complete one that did not need reconsideration. In his life as a citizen, he impressed everyone with his catholicity, his Christianity, his self-sacrifice, and his masterfulness. He died young in years but old in constructive service and in permanence in contribution.—Homer H. Seerley, President Iowa State Teachers College, Cedar Falls.

Census of Agricultural Settlements in Palestine

An agricultural census taken during August, 1926, by the Department of Agricultural Colonization of the Palestine Zionist Executive shows that the 41 settlements wholly or partly financed by the Keren Hayesod in Palestine include 17 Kvuzot (cooperative farms), girls' training farms, 16 Moshave Ovdim (small holders' villages), and 4 "middle class" settlements. The population of these settlements is 4,628.
