PRICE.—Elizabeth Price was born December 18, 1904, at Ottumwa, Iowa. United with the church when she was ten years old and remained a faithful worker until the day of her death. For the last twelve years she has been in Des Moines. She graduated from East High School in January, 1924, and from the Four C's Business College in March, 1926. Passed away October 5, 1927, at the Iowa Methodist Hospital, Des Moines. She leaves to mourn her departure her mother and father, three brothers, Frank, John, and James, and two sisters, Emma and Lillian, all of Des Moines. Funeral services were conducted from the church by Elder C. B. Hartshorn on October 7. Interment in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Des Moines, Iowa.

PALLET.—Betty Ann Pallet, age 3 years, 7 months, and 2 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pallett, of Pittsburg, Kansas, died suddenly at the home of her parents early the morning of September 13, 1927. She was born at Weir, Kansas. She is survived by her parents, two sisters, Regina and Mildred, and a twin brother, Bobbie, besides a host of other relatives and friends. Funeral services conducted from the Weir Church by Amos T. Higdon. Interment in Cherokee Cemetery.

LAPWORTH.—James Richard Lapworth, born in Payson City, Utah, March 30, 1861. Crossed the plains with his parents, in a covered wagon, when four years of age. They settled at Crescent, Iowa, where he has remained ever since. United with the Reorganized Latter Day Saint Church January 1, 1879; baptized by R. M. Elvin. On December 7, 1892, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth Kirkwood by Elder Charles Derry. This union was blessed with two children, Mrs. Elsie E. Butler and James Harold. Besides his wife and two children, he leaves one brother, J. C. Lapworth, of Crescent; one sister, Mrs. John Kirkwood, also of Crescent, and a host of other relatives and friends. He met with an accident three years ago which was the cause of his demise October 1, 1927. Sermon by Elder F. A. Smith, assisted by Joshua Carlile and William I. Fligg. He was a man of sterling integrity, highly respected by all who knew him. Was a member of the school board, and all the school children stood at attention as his remains were taken to the cemetery.

Conference Minutes

ARKANSAS.—District conference was held at Searcy, August 26 to 28 in charge of the district presidency. Business of the district was attended to and reports of elders and various branch officers were read. The tent committee was empowered by vote of conference to purchase material for a tent for the district. Some splendid meetings were enjoyed. The speakers were Brothers S. S. Smith, E. A. Erwin, A. E. Ziegenhorn, and F. O. White. Meetings were held in an arbor out of town, with dinner on the grounds Sunday. Conference adjourned to meet again, the time and place being left to the district presidency.

IDAHO.—The district conference convened at Hagerman, Idaho, August 20 at 10 a. m. with District President J. Arthur Davis in charge. President Davis was ably assisted by Apostle McConley, who acted as chairman, and Bishop J. A. Becker. Reports were submitted from the following district officers: President (verbal), bishop's agent, treasurer, and Sunday school secretary and treasurer. The branch president's reports were from Hagerman, Rupert, and Boise. Religio reports from Rupert and Boise. Statistical reports were as follows: Rupert 78, Boise 86, and nonresident group, 235. A budget system was instituted to take care of all departmental moneys in order to meet the expenses of the various district officers while carrying out the work of the Lord. The budget committee appointed by the chair consists of bishop's agent and the heads of the different departments. Motion prevailed that a committee be appointed to purchase a district lantern. The committee is composed of the following brethren: Earl F. Hoisington, of Boise; Silas D. Condit, of Rupert; and John B. Cato, of Meridian. Motion prevailed to take under advisement the matter of handling the district president's car. The committee appointed is as follows: Brother Earl F. Hoisington, Boise; Brother W. A. Connell, Rupert; and Brother Silas D. Condit, Rupert. The following district officers were elected: Elder J. Arthur Davis was sustained as district president. Elders Earl F. Hoisington and W. A. Connell were sustained as members of the district presidency. Sister Gladys Chambard, Boise, was sustained as district secretary; Brother Earl F. Hoisington, Boise, was sustained as bishop's agent and treasurer; Sister Lulu Mae Jackson, Boise, was elected Sunday school superintendent, and Religio superintendent; Sister Jennie Condit, of Hagerman, was sustained as head of Women's Department and Sunday school secretary and treasurer; Sister Rena Haas, Rupert, was sustained as head of the Music Department. The following recommendations were made for ordination: Hagerman: Brother J. W. Condit and Brother Cecil Gilmore were recommended for ordination to the office of priest; Rupert: Brother A. V. Moore to the office of elder, Brother C. J. York to the office of priest, and Brother William Story to the office of teacher. The ordination of the above-named brethren, with the exception of Brother Story who was unable to be at Hagerman, took place just after prayer meeting the morning of August 21. Motion prevailed that the reunion committee be continued and that they be associated with the district presidency in making arrangements for time and place for the reunion next year. Motion also prevailed that the presidency select the meeting place for the next conference.

ALABAMA.—District conference, at Flat Rock, September 10, with district presidency presiding. The district chorister was in charge of the music. Pleasant Hill Branch reported. Move was made by W. J. Williamson and seconded by D. E. Sellers that Brother T. N. Peacock's license be restored to him. Motion carried. It was moved by B. E. Barlow and seconded by Elie Diamond that we use the money collected above reunion expenses as tent funds. Time and place of next conference were left in the hands of the district presidency.

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

Life and Matter

There have appeared in the daily press references to a speech Sir Oliver Lodge made in Oxford recently on the subject of "Life and matter." Feeling that some of the rather startling headlines under which these "reports" appeared might do violence to the eminent scientist's position or attitude, I sought an accurate report, feeling that I should like to read his own statements. In response to requests, some of our Saints in England sent me reports made for the Manchester Guardian, the Oxford Times, and the Oxford Chronicle, the reports appearing simultaneously on June 10. Selecting the report which appeared in the Oxford Times as being the most concise and perhaps the best, I herewith reproduce it:

Sir Oliver Lodge addressed the Oxford Psychological Society at the Examination Schools on Wednesday on "Life and matter."

Matter, he said, is an instrument in which thought can be incarnated and manifested. The essence of life is beyond us; we know not whence it came nor whither it goes. So far as we know at present, there is no life without antecedent life. Life is passed on from one organism to another, and can increase illimitably, and it is dependent on matter and physical and chemical energy, but neither matter nor energy can explain the thing itself. Yet many of the organic compounds found in or secreted by living organisms have been made in the laboratory. If a mass of protoplasm could be made and be subjected to suitable treatment, this artificial protoplasm might be expected to exhibit vitality and to manifest one or other of the forms of life; the lecturer regarded this contention as inevitable. Because of the undoubted facts that living things have appeared on this planet, and that this planet was at one time a mass of molten material, or even glowing gas, in which life as we know it was impossible. Something of the kind had gone on in the past, might be going on in the present, and may possibly be understood and controlled and humanly managed in the future.

Sir Oliver Lodge gave his present ideas about the constitution of the ether of space. It must be the seat, he said, of enormous energy—the boundless ether utilized and impregnated throughout with something that might be called Life and Mind in excelsis. "I conceive of the ether," he continued, "as the vehicle or physical instrument or concomitant of this Supreme Mind. I presume that here and there portions of it have become individualized and that throughout space there are individual entities of various grades, down even to those which are akin to our own standard, and even lower than that, down in its rudiments to the amœba." He spoke of the production of masses of glowing gas which split up into constellations, and how the smaller bodies, the planets, cooling quickly, could support the formation of molecules and eventually of protoplasm. Here occurred the incredible; with the appearance of protoplasm, matter could "receive and incorporate some of the previously unidentified life and mind of which general ether is full." Life gradually developed into mind and the reign of individual consciousness. In conclusion, he emphasized that the great problem was how life and mind came into association with matter at all.

The opinion of so great a scientist and thinker as is Sir Oliver is always of interest. Particularly so is his opinion of interest to all who believe in a great First Cause. In many of the reports, the intimation seemed to be that Sir Oliver had held that the generation of life in the laboratory was probable, while a careful reading will show that he went no farther than to say that under "suitable treatment" synthetic protoplasm "might be expected" to exhibit vitality. Let it be noted that he uses the subjunctive to express his opinion here. His process of reasoning to this possible end is interesting, and particularly his conclusion in emphasizing the fact that the great problem is "how life and mind came into association with matter at all."

Some twenty years ago, Sir Oliver was called out in a criticism of Haeckel's "Riddle of the universe," and that criticism took the form of a book entitled, Life and Matter. And it is not at all unlikely that his recent address contains a continuation of his thinking on that subject. And in connection with the foregoing quotation from the Oxford Times, it is of great interest to note the preface to his book, which appeared in 1907. He says:

This small volume is in form controversial, but in substance it has a more ambitious aim: it is intended to formulate, or doubtless rather to reformulate, a certain doctrine concerning the nature of man and the interaction between mind and matter. Incidentally it attempts to confute two errors which are rather prevalent, viz:

1. The notion that because material energy is constant in quantity, therefore its transformation and transferences—which admittedly constitute terrestrial activity—are insusceptible to guidance or directing control.

2. The idea that the specific guiding power which we call "life" is one of the forms of material energy; so that directly it relinquishes its connection with matter other equivalent forms of energy must arise to replace it.

The book is specially intended to act as an antidote against the speculative and destructive portions of Professor Haeckel's interesting and widely read work, but in other respects it may be regarded less as a hostile attack than as a supplement—an extension of the more scientific portion of that work into higher and more fruitful regions of inquiry.

Adverting to the question of life being imparted to protoplasm, I recall an outstanding moment in the laboratories of Graceland. I had often under the microscope seen the protoplasm of plant cells; but on this occasion I had the fine pleasure of seeing the protoplasm in motion, and as I looked, marveling at the rare sight, that motion stopped. At that moment, that cell died. What caused it to stop is as deep a mystery as what caused it to move in the first place. It is the mystery of life. And perhaps it will always remain a mystery to us till the coming of the time when we "shall know as we are known"—to God.

Settling Cases Out of Court

A Word to the Ministry Which the Members Might Read With Profit

I recently saw in a collection of historical curios, the court docket as kept by the late Joseph Smith when he was a justice of the peace in Hancock County, Illinois. I did not have opportunity to look through the docket, but would like to do so sometime, for I recall something said to me once by Major McClaughry at the time he was warden of the Federal Prison at Leavenworth on one of my visits there. Speaking of father's work as a justice of the peace, the Major said: "We who were connected with the sheriff's office of Hancock County when your father was a justice of the peace, discovered that he settled about as many cases as he tried." On mentioning to father what the Major had said, he (father) stated that he believed he settled more, and then told me that his first efforts always were to have the persons coming before his court settle their differences out of court if possible, with the result I mentioned.

Why bring that up here, you say? Just this: I can not but wish more of the ministry of the church were actuated by a desire to have troubles between church members settled "out of court" rather than force them into elders' courts. Some seem to be possessed of the idea that the way to settle "cases" is to file charges (formerly), appoint a court, and bring "culprits to bar."

A good teacher I once knew, now deceased, was possessed of a fine faculty for settling trouble and smoothing out disrupted friendships between persons. He seemed to hold that as a teacher his task was to settle cases and keep them out of court. And I think he was right. In contrast to him was a teacher I once heard of who boasted: "I've been a teacher only three months, but I've got seven out of the church already." His chief duty he felt to be to "prefer charges" and "get 'em out."

In the work of the High Council we have seen many cases where the work of pacificators, or members of the ministry who felt their duty in part consisted in settling quarrels and widening the scope of friendship, could have prevented cases running the course of the courts. These court cases, or cases in court, are likely to develop the acerbities rather than the amenities of social intercourse. These quarrels, differences, when first appearing are much more easily adjusted than when harshened by age and widened by friends "taking sides." And is it not part of our task to keep evil out of the church by exhausting our resources to settle disputes and quarrels? Watch over the flock and detect these "differences" before they become chasms separating friends.

Let us have fewer elders' courts and more of "settling out of court," as did the justice of peace mentioned in the foregoing.

The Department of Music

In other columns of this number of the HERALD there appear three short articles from the pens of Louise I. Robinson, Arthur H. Mills, and Mabel Carlile, and all three articles are of prime importance to the church. They contain the information needed for those who would engage in the work of music for the church service in the particular line of choice or qualification.

The article of Sister Robinson breathes a spirit of hope for better things than have been attained before, and will find response among the branches of the church. It is outspoken in giving honor where she believes honor is due, and is refreshing.

Brother Mills tells of the working organization recently formed, and how it came about; of the importance of the musical function in the conduct of church services; he places the Department of Music definitely at the disposal of those who need aid in development of music, and evidently he and Sister Robinson partake of the same fountain of hope for increased activity and achievement.

Sister Mabel Carlile, in charge of choir and chorus work, contributes a definite, helpful, informational article of great worth. I am particularly pleased with some portions of Sister Carlile's writing, and will quote a few words here in order to emphasize the truth she expounds: "We as musicians should have a clear, conscious, united purpose to make this program definitely religious, eliminating all idea of display, pride, or jealousy from our minds." When I have seen petty jealousy and a desire to obtain the praise of men and women enter among the members of our valued organizations of choir, orchestra, or quartet, and render the organization useless, I have been conscious of the fact that Satan is pleased and God is grieved. Unless musically capable and inclined people can rise above such error, their renditions can not be "definitely religious"; in fact, they are definitely and to an objectionable degree human.

President Elbert A. Smith once propounded this question to one who had withdrawn from choir work because he conceived himself to be offended by the choir leader: "Are you serving the choir leader while you sing, or are you serving Jesus Christ? In case you are serving Christ, would it not be well not to permit any slight of choir leader, whether intentional or not, to interfere with or destroy that service?"

Sister Carlile has tactfully stated some essential truths and supplied some valuable and definite information to the department of chorus and choir. If it shall be followed up by subsequent work of this scope and spirit by herself and other "activity heads," the HERALD expects to be able to report the success of the Department of Music.

Home-Coming at Graceland

The last week-end saw the repetition at Graceland of an event which has come to assume a permanent place among the traditions of the college—the annual Home-coming. Home-coming—that season at which the sons and daughters of Graceland return from the many and varied "walks of life" for a renewal of that Something which makes Gracelanders successful wherever they go. Home-coming—a time at which the "grads" tread again the old familiar paths and relive in reminiscence the days of the past around which time has already thrown a halo of glorification. And oft they are heard to say, "Those were the best days of my life."

Yet they were but days of preparation, and although these alumni return with a great deal of pleasure to their Alma Mater for a few days, it is only that they might carry forward with renewed fervor the tasks of life through which they have chosen to give service. It is but a fleeting glimpse backward into the joy of yesterday that they might turn back stronger and more determined to meet the responsibilities of today. And this brief handclasp with the past and with the Graceland of today is thus worth while.

Home-coming promises to become a means of keeping the alumni of Graceland in touch one with another, and thus looking toward the perfection of a permanent alumni association. The beginnings of such an organization have already been effected.

The value of a united and an active alumni body to the college is boundless—its influence and support working always in the interests of a "bigger and better Graceland." They are the representatives of Graceland in the world; they know what she offers; their lives and their words speak from an actual experience.

There may seem to be strangers at Home-coming. To the freshman, the home-coming group seems at first a throng of strangers, intruding into a place in which he has begun to develop a feeling of ownership. The home-comer may feel even more of a stranger than he seems to the freshman—especially if he is returning after an absence of several years. He comes, perhaps, back to scenes in which only the brick and stone of the older landmarks had part in the campus which he knew as a student—save here and there he should happen upon another "old-timer" like himself. There are individual cases ranging all the way between these two.

What, then, generates the united and successful spirit of a Home-coming? It is the fact that the loyalty, the sentiment, and the devotion of all is welded and centered around a common experience—that of living for a time, no matter when or for how long, within the benign shadow of Graceland's walls. With this to blend and unite—the freshman of 1927 and the alumnus of 1900 are friends and fellows.

"Bankrupt Farmers"

It has been a matter of common occurrence to read of untoward conditions prevailing the past few years among the farmers of America, and the unsatisfactory condition of agricultural economics has given rise to much perturbation. So we have become somewhat used to reading articles about American agriculture which are gloomy in tone.

I was a bit surprised, however, a few days ago, in reading the London Spectator, to see an article under the caption "Bankrupt farmers," and to see that it applied to British conditions rather than American. I feel sure that our readers generally will find the article of great interest, so we are reproducing it in another column.

As Ministers for Christ

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

We are not always aware of the ideas held by men when they hear the words used in the caption of this article, but we do know that different people have different ideas. For this reason let us discuss the fundamentals of the Christian ministry for a moment in order to reach a common understanding of terms.

In his instruction to the young man Timotheus, Paul said: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." This instruction alone involves a large field of activity and challenges the best there is in the men who are called to the ministry. It is required of a minister to be studious, ambitious, persistent, patient, and cautious.

The ministry of Christ was surrounded with activity. He was busily engaged in the performance of his duty day and night. The scripture says, "They had no leisure, not even to eat bread." This would lead us to understand that the Lord and his disciples were so fully occupied that they had not sufficient time to eat their meals.

I am not sure that this is at all bad, for there is a blessedness in activity that is found nowhere else. Paul was as busy in his ministry as a man could well be, and he taught that "if any man work not, neither shall he eat." Surely he who would represent the Master of life must become active; he must become helpfully active!

The minister is but a steward; he is intrusted with the things of God. What is true of the minister is true of all mankind, and each will be held accountable for the use he makes of the things committed to him. Time belongs to God, and he has set apart certain portions of it for rest and certain other portions for work. The measure of success or failure that shall attend your work and mine is determined by the use we make of our time. Benjamin Franklin said, "If you love life, do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of." Our life has much to do with time, and the manner in which we use time will determine the kind of life we live here and hereafter. The thrifty man is one who has learned how to conserve time; the sluggard has no appreciation of time. Time is one of the most precious commodities in the world, and the man who really values his time is the one who will make a success of life. He will triumph in all that he undertakes, because he makes proper application and use of that which he has received from the Giver of all good.

When the gospel was restored in this last dispensation, there came to this people a straight charge respecting the use of time. "Thou shalt not be idle: for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garment of the laborer." Since we are forbidden to be idle, we should employ our time fully and wisely. Again we read: "Thou shalt not idle away thy time; neither shalt thou bury thy talent that it may not be known."

The man who idles away his time is a sinner as well as he who takes goods that do not belong to him. His time is given of God, and he is expected to make a wise use of it. He has no right to idle away the thing that is of such great value. "Many are called but few are chosen." God can choose only such men in the completion of his work as have made a proper use of the time given them. We read, "Cease to be idle." What an effect this language would have upon the world of humanity if it were fully honored and respected! Again we read, "Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repents and mends his ways." The building of Zion is a work that can be accomplished only by thrifty, industrious people.

It is the duty of the Christian ministry to teach both by precept and example the message that has been committed to them. He who will discharge his duty to God and the people must learn to study as well as to work. He who would help put over the great and excellent program of this church must constantly apply himself both to acquire and use the things that come from persistent effort and study.

The minister for Christ must possess knowledge, but knowledge of itself is not sufficient. He must know how to use that knowledge in the best possible way. He must know how to approach all men, so that he might draw the people to him and then lead them to the Lamb of God that "taketh away the sins of the world." He must learn that it is utterly impossible to antagonize and attract at the same time. He must study means and methods of approach as well as of telling the plain facts. He must know how to make his facts attractive. The minister for our Lord must know how to use tact; he must be kind, patient, and gentle at all times and under all circumstances. If he would graduate in these graces, he must constantly apply himself to learn of the Master. He must use well his time and opportunity; he must patiently pursue his course until the fruits of love take form in his daily life. Thus will he become an effectual minister for the Son of God.

When we see that the ministry of helpfulness is the one great feature of the Christian religion, and that as we are able to lift mankind to the more sublime heights we are able to vindicate our ministry, we will make greater strides towards success than ever before. The minister for Christ must teach faith by showing that he has faith; he must teach repentance by demonstrating what the principle of repentance means in his life; he must teach the virtue of baptism by showing others that it has had a renovating effect in his life; he should teach the virtue of the laying on of hands by the divine Spirit that works with him in all his labors. The minister for Christ must be able to reveal Christ if he is to reach the maximum of efficiency. To do this he must constantly apply himself; he must be busily engaged in his work of preparation and service.

The apostle of olden time wrote: "We can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us." If we are in constant correspondence with the Divine One, we shall find our burdens light, and the laboriousness of our tasks will cease. For with him we shall find joy in our work; and when we come to delight in it, the drudgery is gone and it is made sublime. Only the wire that is connected with the power house is able to transmit light and power; so only the man who is in touch with the Infinite is able to inspire men with an undying faith and confidence in the Son of the Living God. This ministry is a most sacred thing and should receive the most careful consideration. He who fails of his purpose only brings sorrow to himself.

We should seek daily the fountain source from whence comes our power and inspiration, remembering that when we are fully charged with the divine life we shall be able to quicken those unto whom we minister. We may either forge ahead and increase our usefulness among mankind, or we may go backward and sink into shame and disgrace—according to the choices we make. We may become the ministers of life if we but apply ourselves and learn to live with Him who is the author of life.

"Watchman, what of the night?" Are we using the liberty that is ours as wisely and as well as we should?

"The Show of the Countenance"

It is not an uncommon experience to have a bit of poetry, a line of verse, or a scene of some experience to linger with one during the day. Sometimes it teases; oftentimes it colors the tone of one's conduct; at times it is a reminder. Today such a line of rather scriptural nature has lurked around me. It was one suggested by a friend during an early conversation: "The show of their countenance doth testify against them."

It is a strangely attractive line, and somehow it has called to my mind some unusual pictures. I recall a face I saw this summer in the lowest districts of San Francisco's Chinatown. In a hall of one of those long, dingy, tenement houses where fresh air is a scarcity and cleanliness a luxury, I passed the living remains of a man. The slouch of his step, his bent posture, the sallow color, the tremulous hand, the outspoken presence of poverty, told the story of a gambler and dope fiend whose former days of prosperity had now given way to the misery of his old age. The story of wretchedness and dissipation needed no announcement: the show of his countenance testified against him.

I also remember another figure of adverse testimony. This time it is a young man who roomed in an apartment adjacent to mine in a large city. His eyes were bleary, his hand was shaky, and his vitality low. He was a victim of intemperate habits, and an incessant addict to the cigaret. His face would inspire no trust nor invite the placement of responsibility. His countenance was not contrary to the life he led.

But the recording is not all to the negative. It is said of Bernard d'Clairvaux, that pious saint of the Middle Ages, that his very demeanor attracted men. He was a humble devotee of the Master—perhaps overexact in his denials and ceremonies—yet it is said of this saint that the very sight of his face made men think nobler and aspire higher.

Again, I know of a man in modern times whose open countenance bespeaks frankness, integrity, and rugged manliness. He is the athletic coach of a large university and is known and honored for his uprightness. A long career of championing the Christian virtues in intercollegiate athletics graces his record. I read into that rugged countenance the character of a Christian gentleman.

Of course, there are assumed countenances—those would-be masks that cover up the real personality. Some desire to appear “tough” who inherently have noble qualities. Others who are steeped in iniquity may attempt a mask of goodness. But in the long, slow process that Nature employs, the mask will be broken through and the real countenance will speak.

We can not get away from this fact. Our faces will portray the faith, the nobility, the peace of Christian living, if we have caught the spirit of the Christ.

Perhaps you have heard the story of the great painter, Andrea del Sarto. For years he searched Italy to find a study for the portrait of the Christ, and at length discovered the face of a rustic youth. It was to be a group painting, and he still lacked a character—he needed Judas. Weakness, selfishness, treachery, and remorse were to be told in this countenance. One day, long after the painting of Christ, while visiting a prison, he discovered a face in a convict about to be executed. The warden very reluctantly consented to allow so dangerous a prisoner to sit before the canvas of the artist. A unique discovery was made: this Judas was the degraded man, who years before had sat for the role of Jesus.

Daily we paint the testimony that shall testify for or against us. I want that my countenance shall testify of fidelity, integrity, and spiritual achievement, and to that end I ask God's help tonight. Always, unbidden will the show of our countenance give its testimony.

The World's Verdict

One sent out his ships to earth's farthest shores,
And brought to his coffers the Orient's store;
The wild desert sands
Became gold in his hands;
And the world called him Genius—and wondered.

One sought out the secret of planet and star;
He reveled in problems of granite and spar;
He hungered to know
All the earth could bestow.
And the world called him Scholar—and praised him.

One looked on a suffering, down-trodden race;
He wept as he gazed upon each troubled face;
He heeded their plea,
And he set their hands free;
And the world called him Brother—and loved him.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Bankrupt Farmers

A general fear is abroad, and has been sedulously fostered, that English farming is on the edge of an abyss. Bankruptcies, which have been not infrequent, are likely to multiply—such is the prophecy—and the banks could, if they wished, become possessors of a great part of the land of England, by foreclosing mortgages. There is a cry for wholesale government assistance; and with a certain change in their point of view the National Farmers' Union seem to seek the props they recently scorned. Farming is a basal industry in a sense true of no other industry. Its collapse could mean only ill-health in the body politic and indeed the body social. It is, therefore, the business of all of us to know the truth of the present depression and threatened collapse.

It is necessary to take a calm view and a long view. In the history of British agriculture there have been many ups and downs. One of the suddenest and most disastrous falls began just fifty years ago and reached its worst in the early eighties. Some of the private records of a particular Midland estate may be quoted. The landowner's gross receipts fell in 1879 from 12,000 pounds to 3,000 pounds, and a certain amount of land went out of cultivation. In the neighborhood not a few farmers gave up the struggle. Many a farm was thrown on the owner's hands, and he generally lost money in attempting to farm it himself. On this particular estate, the landowner has not made money since the collapse in 1879, and has often had to make good a serious deficit. A great many of the villages thereabouts have now less than half the population they had in 1880, in spite of the revival of farming in and immediately after the war.

In certain regards, the position today is nothing like so bad as it was in 1879. There has been no complete fall in prices—though there have been deadly fluctuations—but stock and milk and corn, which in that order are the three chief heads of production, all cost so much to produce that the result is not very different from such a cheapening of the product as ruined the farmers forty and fifty years ago. The country tided over that collapse for one reason only: the capital in the landlord's control absorbed the shock. Today the machine is no longer equipped with a shock absorber. The landlord is either absent or poor. Many farmers are their own landlords, and few of the others can fall back on the owner's capital. An industry without sufficient capital must flourish continuously or perish utterly. It can not merely exist and hope for better things. Nor is this all. The smallness of the capital—in some cases consisting chiefly of an overdraft—is actually destroying the land. The degeneration of fences, drains, and outbuildings, the insufficiency of cleaning, manuring, and cultivation, cumulatively increase the need of capital. Farms that once required, say, ten pounds an acre capital now require fifteen if they are to be put “in good heart,” as farmers say. The result is that quite a large amount of land, even within sixty or seventy miles of London, is worth today less than nothing. It is unsalable. When or if it is bought, the money paid is less, often a good deal less, than the value of the houses and wood standing on it.

Let there be no mistake. This account of rural England does not mean that farming has tumbled into the abyss. It means that there is no alternative between extremes. The industry is in such a state that continued losses would do more than cripple. They would kill. Farming must be made to pay, or huge areas must go down to prairie as a certain number have already gone down to prairie; and even the prairie will be understocked if prices for store cattle remain at the present level. Can farming be made to pay? The answer is that a great deal of it does pay and has continuously paid. Dairy farmers have done well (until quite recently when the limit of supply has been reached) over the better part of the west of England; and the number of good cows and the sum of production has been much increased. Parts of the east of England, which in the past have subsisted on corn growing, have been saved by the introduction of sugar beet and the building of sugar factories. Pigs have paid, and bacon factories would flourish if the British farmer would consent to produce the type of animal made compulsory for the Danish farmer. The science of farming has improved. On the better lands—in the Teme valley, for example, in South Lincolnshire, in the Lothians—farms may be found of quite incomparable excellence. Allotments and market gardens have never been so many or so good. British stock is better than it has ever been. The poultry industry in both extent and quality has continuously improved. Forestry slowly becomes a real and valuable national industry. Nevertheless, the truth has to be faced that the poorer lands—the heavy clays of the Midland, the thin soils over chalk, as in Wiltshire and parts of Berkshire, the sandy soils of East Anglia—are tumbling out of cultivation, the villages and laborers vanishing, the ditches and drains filling up. Even on richer soils any little accident, such as bad weather and a temporary fall in price, may prove a last straw, and bankruptcy overtake some of our best cultivators.

Can the industry be safeguarded, in the general or special meaning of that political phrase? No nation can afford to allow its soil to fall out of cultivation. Nor can any nation do without its farmers and land-workers; and the best of the signs of the times is that the urban consumers begin at last to recognize these truths. When they quite recognize them, they will consent to accept the essential solution. A standard price for the chief primary products is necessary for successful farming. It can be obtained in two ways only. One is by internal organization that shall give the producer a greater share in the value of his products. In other words distributor and transporter must not accumulate wealth at the cost of the producer. In this all political parties will cooperate. The second way is to insure a minimum price by some act of government. Reformers have, of course, different recipes. Some like the idea of a National Purchase Board that regulates imports according to the degree of sufficiency in home supplies. Some suggest a transference of the duty on things we do not produce at home, such as tea, to things we do produce, especially meat and dairy products. By some scarcely credible miracle, all these political parties have already agreed to subsidize sugar growing and to guarantee a minimum price for the product over a certain period. What matters most is that politicians should pool their pet policies and, recognizing the common end, agree to a common means. Every student comes back to recognition of the truth that without a good standard price for the product, farming is and will be impossible on the second-rate soils of Britain. That is one of the “distinctions that are plain and few”; and it should direct the aim of every agricultural reformer.—The Spectator (London), July 16, 1927.

Holy Places

Wherever souls of men have worshiped, there
Is God: where old cathedrals climb the sky,
Or shining hillsides lift their heads on high,
Or silent woodland spaces challenge prayer,
Or inner chambers shut the heart from care;
Where broken temples of old faiths now lie
Forgotten in the sun, or swallows cry
At dusk about some crossroads chapel bare,
Alike of bells and beauty; where saints walked
Of old with speaking presences unseen,
Or dreaming boys with quiet voices talked
In pairs last night on some still college green;
Where Moses' Sinai flamed, or Jesus trod
The upward way apart: there, here, is God!

For THOSE INTERESTED in MUSIC

Greetings to Music Workers

The first meeting of the general chairmen of the Department of Music, held at Independence at the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, Thursday, July 7, 1927, marks, we hope, a very decided epoch in the progress and development of this department. It was deemed advisable at last General Conference to appoint this committee to carry on this department and its work until such time as the General Director, Albert N. Hoxie, can assume charge.

Since 1920 the Department of Music has been kept alive by the untiring efforts of Brother Arthur H. Mills, assisted by Brother Paul N. Craig and a number of others who from time to time lent him assistance. The department no doubt would have become entirely extinct had it not been for the devotion and determination of Brother Mills to keep it alive. That this condition should exist is unfortunate; but out of it has come a very energetic, capable committee, each chairman determined to develop his department to the highest standard, and to put every musician in every branch and district into active service. And we hope that each musical director in the church will immediately get in touch with the chairman of the department in which he is particularly interested, by letter or visit, telling of the difficulties, problems, or successes in his district, and, should he need advice, ask that chairman for his advice and counsel.

We will keep you informed from time to time as our plans develop; but in the meantime, as a committee, we want to get acquainted with the musicians throughout the church; to know what they are doing; what they have accomplished; what their ambitions are; and receive from them constructive suggestions that will be helpful to us in our efforts to get all forces in this department working effectively.

KANSAS CITY MISSOURI, Baltimore Hotel.

Announcement to Music Workers

The music workers of the church who attended the last General Conference undoubtedly retain vivid memories of the institute for music workers, held in the early days of the conference session. They will easily recall the steps taken to put the Department of Music on its feet, and the distinct promises given by the general officers of the church and the department workers that the coming year should see renewed activity in musical affairs of the church.

At this General Conference, Mrs. Wallace N. (Louise) Robinson was made acting superintendent of the department and its work, while the undersigned was retained in his old job of secretary. Recognizing the several ways in which our church functions in its music work, the following were chosen and approved to serve as "activity heads" (the title is mine), to have charge of and develop the principal activities of music in the church:

Miss Mabel Carlile, Lamoni, Iowa, Choir and Chorus.

Paul N. Craig, 1300 West Lexington Street, Independence, Missouri, Congregational Singing.

Joseph Anthony, Lamoni, Iowa, Band and Orchestra.

In July of the summer just past, a meeting of these "activity heads," with the undersigned and Sister Robinson, acting superintendent, was held in Independence, to determine the scope and plan of work and outline a program and a plan of further action and development. It was resolved to stimulate the work in the various activities outlined, and each head of an activity was instructed to prepare an introductory article concerning his field of work and to place it before the music workers of the church through the medium of THE SAINTS' HERALD. So, in this issue you are given the initial bow of the newly constituted Department of Music. First, there are the greetings and announcement of the newly appointed acting superintendent, Sister Robinson. Second, Sister Mabel Carlile, in charge of choir and chorus work, greets you and makes a very interesting announcement. Greetings and announcements from the other activity heads, who have been herein listed, will follow in early issues of the HERALD.

In closing, let us remind you that the Department of Music is alive and wanting to work, even though under some pertinent disadvantages. The department wants to help with your problems and be a factor in the growth that should come to the church.

ARTHUR H. MILLS, Secretary.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, 1514 West Short Street.

To Choir Directors

Now is the season for each choir director's opportunity to build up his choir. The singers in the congregation who have not been lined up with the choir activities should be enlisted for musical service. Every pastor needs the music, and the musicians need the pastors. It does not matter who makes the first advances—although we freely allow it is the pastor's place—just so they get together. When the chorister and pastor work together, it is much easier to secure the help of all the singers. Sometimes it is best to set a special date, on which occasion all new singers, and delinquents, are urged to be present. Once they are infected with the spirit of the choir, and the pleasure and profit of belonging to it are made manifest to them, many can be persuaded to remain, thus building up the permanent resources of the church.

The director and pastor should outline the year's musical program before the singers. In turn, we as musicians should have a clear, conscious, united purpose to make this program definitely religious, eliminating all idea of display, pride, or jealousy from our minds. As far as possible, our music should fit the sermons, and it may be at times that the sermons for special occasions may be builded around the music.

It is difficult to say just what organization we should have in our choirs. Certainly there should be some, but this will vary according to the size of the choir and the local needs. In our own choir, which numbers about one hundred and fifty members, we have four officers in addition to the director and accompanists. These are president, secretary, treasurer and librarian. We have no membership committee, since the matter of attendance is not a difficult problem in our organization. The secretary keeps a strict record, however, and what little is done on attendance is handled by the president and director. If the chorister feels that his work would be aided by a membership committee, certainly he should have one. The secretary is often designated as the membership scout.

In conducting rehearsals, individual choristers may find various plans successful in their different branches. I have always found the following plan helpful:

1. Opening hymn.
2. Prayer.
3. Rehearse hymns.
4. Polish anthem for the following Sunday.
5. New anthem.
6. Practice two other anthems.

Do not overlook the practice of hymns. I believe these are sung far more indifferently and carelessly than our special music. Certainly we can all improve our standard of hymn singing.

In taking up a new anthem, the director should have studied it thoroughly until he is familiar with the music of all parts, and the words. At the rehearsal, first read the text and then sing through the anthem once or twice in order to get a general idea of the music. This done, serious practice should begin to perfect all the details in notes, interpretation, expression, and enunciation. It is best to study an anthem a section at a time, and secure so far as possible the proper expression and tempo from the first. If the chorus sings an anthem in full voice while learning the notes, it is almost impossible to get delicate shading later. Shading and tempo should receive their share of attention from the first. It is very difficult to overcome bad habits incurred the first few times an anthem is sung.

The following is a list of good anthems which may help you in selecting your winter's materials. I would suggest each choir director send to some reliable music company for the entire list on approval. In this way you can select what meets your individual needs. The following are three of the many good music companies in the United States:

J. W. Jenkins, Kansas City, Missouri.
Lyon & Healy, Chicago, Illinois.
Theodore Presser, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Moderately Easy Anthems

1. "Enough to know," by Ross; Harold Flammer.
2. "In heavenly love abiding," by Brown; Oliver Ditson Edition.
3. "Recessional," by Kipling; No. 2004, John Church Company.
4. "More love to Thee, O Christ," by Speaks; No. 6591, Schirmer.
5. "Peace I leave with you," by Roberts; No. 4471, Schirmer.
6. "No shadows yonder," by Gayl; No. 4313, Schirmer.
7. "Lead, kindly light," by Godard-Parks; No. 739, Parks Company.
8. "How long wilt Thou forget me," by Pflueger; No. 380, White-Smith.
9. "Turn ye even to me," by Harker; No. 6425, Schirmer.

Medium Grade

1. "Evening hymn and morning hymn," by Rheinberger; No. 3017, Schirmer.
2. "What went ye out to see?" by Nudlinger; No. 10643, Theodore Presser.
3. "The Lord is my light," by Allitsen-Salter; No. 1339, Boosey & Company.
4. "Oh, for a closer walk with God," by Foster; No. 10253, Presser Company.
5. "The king of love my Shepherd is," by Shelley; No. 3125, Schirmer.
6. "The lost chord," by Sullivan-Brewer; No. 2606, Schirmer.
7. "O love divine," by Thayer; No. 725, Arthur Schmidt.
8. "In the end of the Sabbath" (Easter anthem), by Speaks; No. 6795, Schirmer.

In a short time we shall list a few good Christmas anthems. I shall be glad to answer questions concerning adult choir work as rapidly as a busy teaching schedule will permit. Watch for future articles in the HERALD on technique of choir directing. Our next article will concern music of the 1930 General Conference.

MABEL CARLILE.

The Department of Women is quite active this year in our branch (First Columbus, Ohio, Branch), and we have a nice group of girls in Temple Builder, Oriole, and Blue Bird circles. We meet each month and have always sent in our dollar a month since I have had charge of the group; have a class taking the food and body course and have had two lectures so far this year by Mrs. M. Cartwright, of the State Board of Health.—Mrs. Faye Clark, 197 Clinton Street, Columbus, Ohio.

REUNION NEWS

Seattle and British Columbia

The reunion of the Seattle and British Columbia District met July 29, 1927. Because of the illness of his wife, District President M. H. Cook was unable to meet with them until Sunday, July 31.

The grounds on the shore of Silver Lake, between Seattle and Everett, were in readiness because of the efficient work of the reunion committee under the direction of its president, Brother H. R. Tabbut.

Elder A. C. Martin, district missionary, took charge of the organization, and Brother M. A. McConley, associated with the district presidency, was chosen to preside.

Bishop J. A. Becker arrived Sunday morning, and Apostle McConley on Monday. Attendance was not as large as upon some other occasions, but the services were of a high order. Bishop Becker's thorough understanding of the objectives of the church and his pleasing way of presenting the work added much to the success of the meetings, and he found his way into the hearts of the Saints. Brother McConley, by his genial personality and inspirational talks, left an impression that will make him a welcome guest whenever and wherever he may go in the district.

Sister Jennie Jones, Sunday school superintendent, was faithful and active, doing her bit in a way which showed that her heart was in her endeavors. The recreation largely was under the direction of Granville Swenson, being well arranged and adding much to the pleasure of the reunion.

Conference business was looked after Tuesday, August 2, and resulted in the election of M. H. Cook, district president; counselors, J. E. Johnston and C. E. Wheeler. The bishop's agent was sustained; secretary, Sister Alice Phipps; president of the Department of Women, Sister Emma McDole; Sunday School Department, Orville Oplet; Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Coburn; Department of Music, Austin Earl.

One evening was devoted to a stereopticon talk on the college and its work, by M. A. McConley; another on the Land of Zion, by J. A. Becker. A musical evening was also fully appreciated.

And not least among the pleasant things was the paying off of the debt against our reunion grounds. On Friday evening after the services, with an appropriate program, the contract signed by the district officers for our permanent reunion grounds was publicly burned, it having served its purpose.

The last prayer meeting and sacramental service was a spiritual feast. An admonition was given by the Spirit through Brother A. C. Martin, which greatly strengthened and comforted the Saints.

MARCUS H. COOK, District President.

Reads the Church Literature

(A letter to the First Presidency)

I am writing to let you know I have completed the reading of the Book of Mormon, this being the second reading this year. I have read Doctrine and Covenants, besides the three church papers; also reread Isaiah, as the Book of Mormon quotes it so much.

Being isolated, the church papers are the only way I have of keeping in touch with what the church is doing.

I need the prayers of all Saints for myself, that I may not weaken in faith and that my boys may turn to the church and serve it.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Visits in Zion

By invitation of Elder Snively, the efficient and loved, in charge of the Spring Branch Church, one of the "eight churches in Zion" we, my companion and I, visited the choice flock recently, and met, as we always do, a hearty welcome. We spoke on the marvelous theme of the Book of Mormon, which was well received by the audience. We met there Brother Louis Dalton, whom we knew in El Reno, Oklahoma, who is doing a good work as an officer, also many others who are working together for the good of the cause. They are nicely housed in the stone basement of their future church, very comfortable. There we met Brother Weston, the map and chart maker, and others of the tried and the true. We found but one mind regarding the solidarity of the church and its forward movement. We were favored there with a beautiful solo by Sister Corinne Haines French.

In answer to our long desire, we were invited to visit Gudgeon Park Church, another of the eight, and there found a hearty welcome in their small church on the hill in the southern suburbs of Independence, under the care of Elder P. A. Sherman. A pleasant little Sunday school they have. We attended a class in which an important question was ably discussed. At the appointed time we spoke with good liberty. Gudgeon Park is in charge of efficient officers and will be a great help to build up Zion.

On August 28 we found our way to the "Northeast" Church in Kansas City, where we found another flock of earnest Saints. We met those there we had known some years ago in Saint Joseph, Missouri, Brother and Sister Nanny and others, whose faith of years ago still remains firm. We enjoyed the good Spirit in telling them the good old gospel story.

We met with the Mount Washington Church, where we found a faithful band nicely housed in their neat church building under the pastoral care of Elder Bishop and other efficient officers. Surely, they are helping to purify Zion.

On September 11 we answered a kindly invitation to visit Bennington Heights, and as usual found a band of Zion builders earnestly engaged in the good cause. They have a building neat and clean and used to a noble purpose. We found a good and faithful elder here caring for the flock, leading them to Zion conditions. We regret not being able to give names. Not long since we went to the Fourth Branch by invitation and found there a young man in charge whose parents and grandparents we knew as faithful members of the blessed church, Elder Oliver Worden, with a companion of equal worth by his side. We found a spirit of welcome there and enjoyed meeting with the flock of like precious faith. In all these journeys my companion has ever been at my side, a faithful companion and help.

At the Stone Church where is held a prayer service each Sunday at 2.30 p. m. inspired by the spirit of revelation, we hear from time to time the voice of admonition and warning, to the strength and encouragement of the Saints. There is room for many more to attend these services.

In our visits here and there in Zion, we find a general spirit of good will and great sociability and a desire to build up rather than tear down. We visit the Sanitarium frequently and find those who need comfort in their afflictions. Sister Etzenhouser, who is there sick, remarked to me on visiting her, "Few really appreciate what a privilege it is to live in Zion." Yes, Zion is a good place to live if all things are prepared beforehand. The work in Zion is moving steadily forward, and it is our hope it will thus continue until the Savior shall come. In the language of another: "I only know my present duty and my Lord's command to 'occupy till I come.' Then at the post where God hath placed me in his providence, I, for one, choose to stand, no faithless servant frightened from my task, but ready when the Lord of the harvest comes."

Some time ago we visited East Independence Church, where is another earnest congregation under the pastoral care of Brother N. Carmichael, assisted by a band of efficient officers who are upheld by the confidence of the flock.

Zion is moving forward despite the enemy's strong but fruitless efforts to hinder. The Zion road leads upward to the eternal city of perfection and glory.

The Gospel Work in Europe

Germany is getting on her feet. Many changes in evidence of this have taken place since I was here three years ago. The shop windows of all kinds have on display many and varied goods, the articles being marked with prices within the reach of the people. An absence of foreign goods is noticeable. There is no atmosphere of luxury.

Wages run on an average from twenty-five to forty-five dollars a month. Fifty dollars is a big wage.

It was in the midst of harvest time when I came down by train from Copenhagen to Hamburg. The crops are fairly good, but considerable grain had fallen, and damage has been caused by frequent rains.

Elder Leonard G. Hoisington met me at Hamburg—it means much in Germany to have with one a person who can talk English! We proceeded to Hannover, where varied services were held. This branch is of good size. Elder Carl Greene and the local workers have done well—the branch stands in testimony.

In visiting branches and places of church interest, the two mentioned and I went east as far as the Poland border, calling at Gross Wartenberg, Breslau, Gross Raschen, Berlin, and Braunschweig.

After leaving Hannover, we stopped off at Eisenach, and visited Wartburg Castle one and a half miles distant, where Luther in exile translated the Bible and put it in the hands of the common people. The room where this work was done—about seventeen by twenty-five feet—is as it was in his day, with original table, chair, bed, etc. A hole is seen cut in the post, where it is said the ink bottle was thrown "at the Devil." On the walls in frames are a few of Luther's letters in his handwriting.

The castle is situated in a strategic place on top of a mountain, from which most beautiful and sweeping views are obtainable of the surrounding country.

We also broke our journey at Wittenberg and visited the church in this city where Luther challenged the Pope by nailing his ninety-five theses to its door. In going toward the altar, one sees on the right side of the church, near and a little in front of the pulpit, where Luther lies buried. A large wreath with a silk American flag, recently placed by a group of Americans, was on the grave.

Directly opposite, across the room, is the resting place of Melancthon.

We entered the pulpit and looked out over the building where the voice of Luther reverberated and changed the course of history. Luther may have had weaknesses, but one's admiration is stirred for the work he performed.

Why should not these great characters, who risked their all and succeeded in tearing away much of the black superstition from the sky of their time, be honored? They contributed mightily to the opening of the door of religious freedom.

Elder John Stebel and a few of the Saints in Poland came over the line to attend our special meetings at Gross Wartenberg. Three were baptized by Elder John Smolny.

A large number of young people met on Sunday afternoon in the shade of a large tree. Included in the program were sacred pieces by their orchestra, the strains of which inspiringly floated over the surrounding country.

Brother Stebel, our missionary in Poland, speaks Polish and German fluently, and has baptized eighteen there the past twelve months. There were other baptisms by local officers.

Poland is strongly Catholic. The president of our branch in Makoszyce told me he is visited annually by the sheriff of the community and asked if our church has baptized any Catholics.

As good work has been done in various other places as in Hannover. An encouraging foothold is being secured in Berlin and Breslau.

Especially in the eastern part of Germany, throngs of women are seen working in the fields. For a day of eleven hours in the harvest field they receive about thirty-five cents, board not included. Men receive for the same kind of work about eighty-five cents. Conditions in Poland are much worse.

A good man told me just recently in discussing his environments that he wished he was born in America. My heart palpitated in sympathy.

Myriads would love to go to America. Conditions leading to this expressed desire are low wages, obstacles to progress, unsettled political conditions, and a cloud of fear hanging over the horizon of the future. To many—far more than Americans living in the midst of plenty can realize—life is only an experience of toil and sleep. How simple the fare on numerous tables! For us a few times there was a special meal of boiled potatoes and butter, tea and sugar—nothing else. I have seen tables less heavily freighted around which the family were seated.

American citizenship—what a priceless heritage! Does not such a blessing coming to one from God carry with it responsibility?

"Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice," is the command of God to the church. Zion is an ideal which over here thrills all hearts. Money used in helping worthy Saints abroad will be well invested, for the persons themselves and the church. Out of bondage—as from Egypt—men must be brought to worship God with all inherent powers.

The branch in Rotterdam, Holland, where I am at present, numbers about one hundred—a fine record, considering its organization about three years ago. Six were recently baptized.

Last Sunday evening at the beginning of our preaching service, twelve voices under the direction of Elder A. Pyl sang in English: "Savior, lead me, lest I stray." For the time I almost imagined I was in America. The rich voices with foreign accents, in complete harmony, singing without any musical instrument accompanying, touched my heart.

What a great day that will be—representatives from all nations assembled in Zion!

A couple of days ago I heard Elder Frank Veenstra, our missionary here, sing the Consecration hymn among an excellent family of nonmembers. He did not know I was listening. Then he had them join in with him. Who can beat it? They were singing themselves into the church.

Several of this family are now knocking at the door of the church for admission.

Battle Lake, Minnesota

October 3.—One of the gratifying events of the past month was the return of the branch president, Lester Whiting, who has been absent for several weeks on church business in Duluth. Another pleasant fact is that so many of our young people are either beginning or continuing their high school work.

On September 25 the adult Sunday school class dispensed with the regular quarterly and used the time in reading and discussing portions of the Book of Mormon, enjoying a profitable session.

The Religio is studying the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, but on account of unavoidable causes has missed a few sessions during the past month.

The branch was much grieved to learn of the death of Brother Frank Horne, who was a good, kind, self-sacrificing man.

Brush Creek, Illinois

Monday night, September 12, Saints and friends numbering one hundred or over gathered at the home of our worthy branch president, William Clements, and gave him a pleasant surprise to show appreciation of his work in this branch. Ice cream and cakes were taken and served. Several games were played, and pep songs were sung. Everyone enjoyed the evening to the greatest extent.

Although it rained all day Saturday, the 17th, a nice crowd attended the ice cream social that night at the dining hall. The net proceeds were something near ten dollars. They were used for improvements on our church lot.

The Department of Women planned and carried out a short program on the Book of Mormon at their regular weekly meeting Thursday, the 22d. Some splendid themes were given.

A very enjoyable day was spent commemorating the centennial the following Sunday.

Our district bishop's agent, Brother O. C. Henson, of Mount Vernon, was with us and delivered two splendid discourses. At the noon hour, a bountiful meal of good things to eat was set in the dining hall, and a large crowd heartily partook of it. Mount Vernon, Centralia, Xenia, Cisne, and Johnsonville were represented here.

District superintendent of the Department of Women, also district librarian, Bessie Burgess, of Centralia, was with us. We are pleased to have our district workers with us at any time.

Several were present at our sacramental service Sunday, October 2, where a goodly portion of the Holy Spirit was enjoyed.

A number of our Sunday school members have pledged to read the Book of Mormon. Attendance Sunday was about seventy. Out of this number something near forty were reading the Book of Mormon. We think this a pretty good showing, as several who were present were too small for the task, also there were several nonmembers. We hope and pray for a rapid increase, as many are ignorant concerning this book which to us is so precious.

Wiley, Colorado

October 2.—It has been some time since we have given anything to the HERALD News department, so a few lines may be acceptable. There are some HERALD readers who are interested in the progress or non-progress of the work here.

We have acted upon the suggestions regarding the reading or rereading of the Book of Mormon and have met with almost unanimous response.

Brother Richard Bullard has just been with us for a very pleasant visit. His consecrated life, rich experiences, and consistent faithfulness give to the Saints a worthy example. We rejoice that most of us are more seriously interested in our Christian warfare than we were before Brother Bullard's visit. His talk on the Book of Mormon and its significance to the people of the United States was especially good.

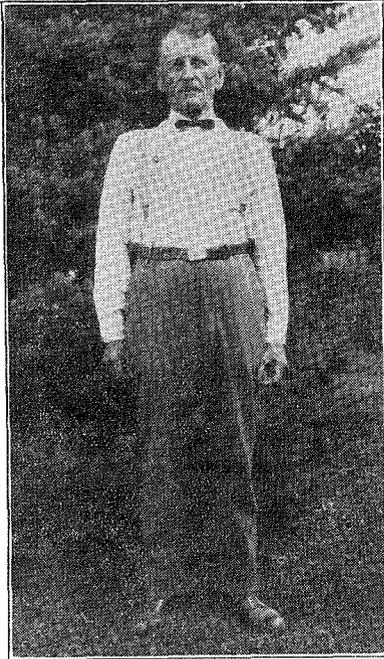

While we always enjoy the visits of the General Conference appointees, we are also thankful for our local workers. Especial credit is due Sister Fletcher for her efficient and untiring effort in behalf of the Sunday school. It may seem to her that her efforts are not appreciated, but she can be assured that there is one at least other than the Master who is very thankful for her work.

We are planning some special study courses for the winter and want to get an early start in order that we may complete them before the busy season next spring interferes.

A Historic Place and a Beloved Character

The first four days in September there was held on historic ground in the vicinity of Wilber, Nebraska, a young people's convention and conference. It was the first time for many years that the woods in this particular spot had rung with the music of the songs of Zion. The gathering consisted of young and middle-aged, with a small sprinkling of older ones, from Nebraska City, Lincoln, Pawnee, Tecumseh, Grand Island, Kearney, Fairfield, and other points, who came, as the Saints used to come to Wilber in days of old, to sing the songs of Zion and speak to each other of the goodness of God and the sacredness of their faith.

Incidental to the pleasure and work of the conference and convention, there was revealed some of the history of the work at Wilber, which was begun by Elder R. J. Anthony about three score years ago. At that time there was no distinction in the minds of the people between representatives of the Reorganized Church and those from the church in Utah, and prejudice ran high. A mob gathered, with a rope, to hang the missionary, but found themselves face to face with a dauntless and fearless defender, in the person of one of their townsmen who believed in fair play. He sprang to the platform, seizing a stool, which happened to be the nearest thing at hand, and rending the legs from it and brandishing them in the air, commanded the mobocrats to stand back and keep silence, then said to the elder, "Now, you go ahead and preach." The elder went ahead and preached, and as a result people came into the church, the man who so effectively defended him being one of them. His name was Robert White. He lived in Wilber to a good old age, and was honored and beloved for his rugged honesty and fearlessness in the right until the day of his death. The sons of Robert White still remain in the vicinity of Wilber, one of them, Henry White, being superintendent of the Sunday school.

Among the interesting scenes in Wilber is the old courthouse, in which was held the first debate between our beloved Bishop E. L. Kelley and Clark Braden, notorious in his time as a formidable foe to what he was pleased to call Mormonism.

Of those who lived in Wilber at that time there are several remaining. One who was then in sympathy with Mr. Braden, but who has since opened his eyes to greater light and whole-heartedly accepted the "angel message" as it was delivered by Bishop Kelley, is the present president of the branch, Samuel Broliar.

Mr. Broliar was baptized in September 1884, since which time he has been a constant attendant at the services in the Blue River Branch. In the early days the Saints held their meeting in a tent. They banked it up and closed it in for winter and held tent meetings the whole winter long, but about forty years ago they built the neat little church that still occupies a prominent corner in the beautiful little city; a city of many beautifully kept homes and nicely decorated lawns, but with few, if any, that show more careful attention than that at the little church, where Sam Broliar, now a man of three score and fifteen years, acts as caretaker, janitor, all around man, and pastor as well as performing the work necessary to the editing of one of Wilber's weekly newspapers, and taking care of his own home, where everything, inside and outside, bespeaks real refinement and a love of the beautiful.

No citizen of Wilber stands higher in the estimation of his fellow townsman than does this sprightly, pleasant, friendly man, whom they can not yet regard as an old man, though he is within less than five years of being four score.

Brother Broliar informs us that during the forty or more years since the church was builded there have not been more than twenty meetings held within its walls when he has not been present. He has had as associates in the work, most of the men who occupied prominently in the ministry in the generation that has past, and many of the generation now active.

It would not do to close this sketch, however, without mentioning one who was for many years a constant associate and adviser, Elder C. H. Porter. Elder Porter, about the same age as Brother Broliar, now lives at Geneva, Nebraska, but frequently visits Wilber and lends the influence of his long years and deep study to the maintenance of the life of the work.

To us who are younger, the lives of these old men are an inspiration and an incentive to faithfulness in the service of the Master and the cause we love.

The church at Wilber, Nebraska, which is said to be a model for neatness and care of building and grounds.

May rich blessings attend them as they journey down the further slope of life, is our prayer.

Detroit District Conference

District President A. H. DuRose advises that plans are well under way to make the coming district conference one of the very best. This gathering will take place in Orion November 5 and 6. The services, for the most part, will be held in the new auditorium of the high school.

District Musical Director Myrtle Holden expects to be able to present the sacred cantata "Daniel" at the Saturday evening service, assisted by talent from various parts of the district.

Apostle D. T. Williams is expected to be present throughout and to address the men during the Sunday school hour Sunday morning and the general public on Sunday afternoon, when some of Orion's leading citizens are expected as special guests. These include the village president and the superintendent of schools.

Ladies of the Women's Department will serve dinner Sunday. Sacrament Sunday morning 8.30.

Elder C. M. Clifford delivered a very fitting and able sermon at the Union Centennial Service last Sunday evening. Special music added to the occasion.

A happy evening was spent at the home of Brother and Sister Frank Rivett last week, the occasion being the celebration of her birthday by members of Sunday school class number 3.

Schedule of Services

Some little misunderstanding of the time of services seems to be obtaining among our members, so we present the following schedule, prevailing in all our churches of the city of Flint.

At 9.45, Sunday school; 11, preaching or prayer; 7.30, preaching. Wednesday evening, prayer service at 7.30; Thursday evening, choir rehearsal at 7.45; Friday evening, Religion at 7.30.

The ministerial institute to be held in Detroit will probably commence with a session on Wednesday evening, October 19, and continue with evening sessions until Saturday, the 22d, when Saturday and Sunday will be utilized all day. It is planned to make this an institute of ministerial methods for the priesthood of all of Michigan, as well as Eastern Canada, as distinguished from the ordinary or usual department institute. J. F. Curtis, D. T. Williams, F. Henry Edwards, and F. M. McDowell will be in attendance.

Brother and Sister Rolland Hutchins and their daughter, Dorothy, and son, Ralph, formerly of Oakland, California, have returned to Flint to take up their residence with her father and mother, Elder and Mrs. F. Z. Harder. We are glad to have these Saints with us again.

Newall Street Paved

A very much needed improvement has been completed in the paving of Newall Street in front of the church. A new cement driveway and steps from the street to the sidewalk have just recently improved our church property materially.

Flint Saints were much disappointed in not being able to hear Elder Coats, bishop's agent of the district, according to his schedule in Flint. Brother Coats was unable to fill this appointment. We look for him soon.

Bishop C. J. Hunt came from Port Huron and preached for us on Monday and Tuesday evenings. His fatherly advice and kindly spirit in presenting many valuable truths makes us just feel sorry for those who did not hear him.

Elder W. L. Chapman, president of the Central District, will be the speaker at Newall Street Church a week from Sunday morning, the 9th.

At a prayer meeting recently over twenty-five pledged to read the Book of Mormon before the last of the year.

Silas Robertson is making his parents a visit at this time. Walter Kuhn, one of Flint's most estimable young men, left for Iowa City recently to take up the study of medicine.

Allen Pohly has been much appreciated by members of the Newell Street choir in his work of director in the absence of Myrtle Holden, absent on her vacation.

Elder George Lewis, formerly a Graceland student, who has been working in Flint the past few months, will leave this week for Chicago to take up special studies. George says he feels he is a part of Flint. We have been greatly benefited by his stay here this summer.

Fernley McNamara gave a reception at her home Monday evening in honor of her brother, Glen Cumming, who was married Saturday in Owensdale.

At the last sacramental service the little sons of Brother and Sister Rivett and of Brother and Sister Fred Hutchins were presented for blessing.

Carl Thomas Little and Walter Oliver Glen Hoover were blessed at Sunday evening's service.

Brother Leslie Bacon has been quite sick for the past three weeks, but is much improved at this time. He was under observation at Hurley Hospital a few days last week. He and his family feel grateful for the results of the prayers of the Saints.

It is truly an inspiration to see our young people with good prospects before them in the industrial world, leaving this, sacrificing home and loved ones, to go and train themselves for more efficient service in the work of God. Then as reports come back from time to time of their success in making their credits, we feel often to say, "Go on, God bless you; go on!" This fall as three of our young people were leaving for college, they came and paid their tithing in full to date, as well as complying with the laws of stewardships. These have shown by their deeds that they meant just what they said when they went into the waters of baptism, that they would "follow Him."

Will God recognize their efforts? Yes! He has said, "When ye do what I have commanded, then am I bound. These will help redeem Zion, enlarge her borders, and hold up the banner of King Emanuel. We say to them, "Go on, God bless you; go on."

Sister Matthew Liston and family have moved to Port Huron, where Elder Liston is pastor of the branch. They are very nicely situated in that city.

Elder Israel Goheen was called to Gladwin recently on account of the sudden death of his mother, who was seventy-eight years old and had been a member of the church forty years.

Sacramento, California

A short time ago I read your request in the HERALD that we read or reread the Book of Mormon by September 22.

I began reading the Book of Mormon the first of this year, finishing it the latter part of March, after which I began reading the Bible; one or more chapters a day, until I read the above request in the HERALD.

I then reread the Book of Mormon, finishing it September 22, only a few hours before going in to see the pageant, which was being put on in our branch on that date.

I invited a number of my friends, one being a very good Catholic. The morning following the pageant, she called on me to ask a few questions about it and is now reading my Book of Mormon, and is interested, too.

Each time we read the Book of Mormon, it seems more clear and helps me to reconsecrate and rededicate my time to the service of this beautiful gospel. When I think of the suffering and sacrifice that has been made for us in the past that we might enjoy the gifts and blessings which have been restored to us, and the strength which we receive from the overshadowing influence of the Holy Spirit, my heart fairly swells with praise and gratitude.

I read all the church papers, including the Envoy, from England, and they are all full of beautiful truths, which are inspiring and help us to have higher ideals.

There is a noticeable spirit of unity and a development of purpose manifest in the past year in our church literature, and I pray that it will continue to grow, as it inspires the readers and creates a desire to go higher and higher, that our light may shine far as from a city on a hill.

I read an article about "Clippings" in a HERALD of recent date. As I am always looking for good thoughts, I often find those which appeal to me, and I will inclose a few for you, to be used as you please.

With the best of wishes and the sincerest prayers for the developing of this gospel,
AMY S. BEEBE.

Southern Ohio Conference

The semiannual conference of Southern Ohio met at the Highland Branch at 2 o'clock, October 1, 1927, with Elder A. E. Anderton, vice president of the district, in charge.

Weather throughout the conference was ideal, and a good spirit was present and enjoyed. About nine of the fourteen branches were represented, and the little church on the hill was filled to capacity.

Following the reading of reports, a motion was made to approve the appointment made by the First Presidency, in that Elder William M. Grice was appointed to act as the district president of Southern Ohio. Immediately Brother Grice, in his kind but modest way, asked the privilege of retiring from the room while the vote was being taken, which was granted. But it was only necessary for him to remain out for a moment, as he was heartily welcomed as our new district president. Brother Grice hails from Michigan.

As Sister Margery Williams, of Ironton, Ohio, who has been serving in a very good manner as our district superintendent of Sunday School Department during the past four and a half years, has resigned in order that she might go to Graceland this year, Sister Mary Jones, of Columbus, Ohio, was elected to take her place. Sister C. W. Clark, also of Columbus, was made head of the Women's Department for the remainder of this term.

The recommendation of the Middletown Branch, that Pious W. Barker be ordained to the office of elder, was approved, and his ordination was ordered.

A motion was made by Brother J. G. Halb, our district missionary, that the district purchase a tent for missionary purposes. This was followed with another motion that a committee of five, consisting of the district president, district chorister, district bishop, and our two district missionaries, arrange for a program of missionary effort in this district.

With all the business transacted, a motion was made that when this conference adjourns, it adjourns to meet at the call of the district presidency, at the First Columbus Branch for the spring conference.

Saturday evening the church was filled to capacity, and a number were on the outside. Sister Hazel Gribbens, our district chorister, gave us a beautiful solo, "Silent voice." Elder E. L. Ulrich then gave us a splendid sermon on "What part shall Latter Day Saints have in the great world economy?"

Sunday morning at nine o'clock we witnessed a spiritual feast at our sacramental service, which lasted about an hour and a half. Elder Jacob G. Halb, our district missionary, and who many probably know as our foreign missionary, who with his wife went to Switzerland and Germany in those trying years during the World War, asked the Saints to pray for him, and he also asked for administration that he might be made whole again so that he might continue his labors for the Master.

At the close of this service, Brother P. W. Barker was ordained to the office of elder under the hands of Elders Grice and Anderton, Elder Anderton being the spokesman.

During this service four persons were spoken to by the Spirit. Brethren Charles Garmen and Heber Woods were called to the office of priest.

At 10.45 we again had preaching service, with the house packed. Sister Hazel Gribbens gave another beautiful solo, "Jesus the very thought of Thee." Brother Anderton then talked in his rather characteristic way from his text, John 1:29: "The next day John saw Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world." At these meetings there were quite a number of nonmembers present, another church postponing their convention for the same dates until a later time, in order that they might attend our conference.

At noon a basket dinner was spread, and there was plenty. Following lunch, a number of us went up to explore "Fort Hill." This is a large hill with a fort thrown up on top and thirty-six "gates," which is said to have been used by the early Indians' ancestors.

At 2.15 in the afternoon we enjoyed another preaching service. Sister Mabel Bailey, of Middletown, sang very beautifully a solo, "All alone," and then Brother Grice preached what he chose to call an "old gospel sermon," which he did in very pleasing way, outlining to us the principles of the doctrine of Christ and of authority to represent God. At the close of this service, Brother Anderton sang "A child of the King," being his own accompanist. The two brethren, Heber Woods and Charles Garman, were ordained to the office of priest. Both are of the Highland Branch. Brothers Grice and Anderton were the spokesmen in the ordinations, respectively.

At this time nearly all of the visiting delegates and members were returning to their home branches, but I learned afterwards from Brother Halb that at the evening service Brother E. L. Ulrich again preached, and that the church was full to overflowing and many had to stand on the outside.

We think all enjoyed the hospitality of the Highland Saints and that it will be a conference long to be remembered.

Apostle Hanson Writes Church Offices

(Extracts from a letter to the First Presidency.)

I arrived here a few days ago from Hanover, Germany—wearry. For about four months I have been talking through interpreters, listening to various languages, which is in time a terrific strain—carrying thought until an interpreter is through with it, and instantly providing new thought. It is necessary to so carry it, for occasionally an interpreter will ask for what was said to be repeated.

In Germany a visit was made to the chief places where our interests are located, Brethren Hoisington and Greene accompanying me.

The official ranks are about as strong numerically as can be made at present.

Authorization was made by me for the ordination to the eldership of John Lippa, who will probably be chosen to preside over the branch in Poland, which has a membership of about seventy.

John Stebel, twenty-eight years of age, missionary over there, came over to our special meetings at Gross Wartenberg, on the German side of the Poland border. He is of the student type, had four years Latin, two Greek—an education equal to about two years in college, speaks German and Polish correctly and fluently, is very consecrated to his work; baptized eighteen the past twelve months.

I placed in his hands an epistle for the Poland Saints.

An encouraging foothold is being secured in Berlin and Breslau—the work is spreading throughout Germany.

I also authorized the ordination of Waldemar Korth, of Braunschweig, thirty-eight years of age, of the student type and intelligent, to the eldership. He has an education equal to about three years in college; Latin eight years, Greek three years, French five years. He speaks English fairly well.

He was expecting to go to Graceland this fall, but upon calling on the American Consul in Berlin was told five hundred dollars, which he has, was not enough, and an affidavit vouching for his care in case of need in America was necessary. This is different from what was required of Larsen at Copenhagen, and practically puts his requirements on the basis of the quota list.

I wrote to the Consul General asking for a statement of the requirements relating to students going to accredited colleges in America. No answer has yet come to hand.

Something should be done in organizing or preparing the way for worthy Saints to emigrate to America. It is necessary for those going over to become citizens to have some one in America vouch for their care, etc. This whole work will repay the church as it progresses.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

*Central Church, 307 West Pierce Street
Belmont Mission Church, 1618 Avenue B
Riverside Mission Church, 3100 Avenue C*

There are three Boy Scout organizations in the branch, the one at the Riverside Mission being the most active.

The Sunday school is arranging to care for other classes and to better care for those already organized. The Religio dispensed with the study feature of their work during the month of August, but to many this was not satisfactory. They are now trying to arrange to have one social each month. The classes of the boys and girls have been provided with teachers, and the outlook for these classes is better than for several months. There has been a new class organized in the doctrinal course, which has decreased the number in the study of the Book of Mormon.

The last business and social meeting of the Women's Department was held September 15. Among the reports read was one from Sister Inez House, which shows excellent work done, and she seems to have won the title of another Dorcas. She has several associated with her in visiting and ministering to the needy, and the total visits are about one thousand. In these visits there is represented the cleaning of houses and caring for needy children and the sick, assisting many children to be kept in day school and the Sunday school. Over one hundred and thirty girls are in organized circles and chapters of Blue Birds, Orioles, and Temple Builders, with a leader that is always ready to assist the girls in their problems. What is in the minds of those occupying as leaders in this department is to develop the girls physically, socially, mentally, and spiritually. The Aid Division of the Women's Department is working with a view of a bazaar being held about December 17. They are arranging to have at their future meetings one read the Book of Mormon while the rest work, and have in view the completing of the book by the last of the year. Several are interested in a child's study class being taught in the different schools of the city.

Several of the Saints attended the funeral of Brother James R. Lapworth held at Crescent last Monday. The Presiding Patriarch came to give words of consolation and instruction. We trust he can come and minister for us in an evangelical way. Patriarch Joshua Carlile preached a spiritual and uplifting sermon in the Central Church October 2.

The pageant "Remember Cumorah," sponsored by the branch under the direct management of the one in charge of departmental work, Brother O. A. Currie, was attended by large audiences of very appreciative listeners, many expressing themselves as being impressed with the wonderful word of God in giving the Book of Mormon to the world, and the work now required of us in distributing it and its message to the nations. Before rehearsals and each session of the play held on Thursday and Friday nights, those who had parts were called together, and prayer was held for the success of each, and that each might be so blessed as to give full representation to the different parts of the work of God, so that he could accompany the thing represented by the Holy Spirit. And this was achieved, for many were heard to testify of the Spirit's presence during the rendition of the pageant. The directors were Sisters W. T. Spanswick, M. A. Smith, and J. F. Peterson. They were assisted by three others. When the different countries came to the church making their plea to be remembered in the ministrations of the church, and especially when all had made their pleas, and bowed before the cross and the church and sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," followed by the choir singing the Hallelujah Chorus, the Spirit was very wonderfully felt by many. During the rendering of the choir work, and especially in connection with the singing of "Book of Mormon, hid for ages," one remarkable event happened that gave evidence that the heavenly choir approved of the work of the choir, and in some sense the representation of the pageant relating to the Book of Mormon and its importance, for the unseen choir was heard to sing the same words and music after the choir had finished their part in the singing. Apostle J. F. Garver was present during the rendering of the pageant on Friday night, and he was so impressed with the fitness in the representation of the nations in petitioning the church to remember them that on the following day at the young people's convention he took that as his theme and made a good impression on those present as to the importance of the missionary work of the church at the present time. Those who took the principal parts were Philip Fisher, Joseph; F. C. Fullberg, the minister; Amos Graybill, Carl Larsen, and Cleo Hoover, the three Nephites; M. A. Smith, Moroni; Sister M. A. Smith, the church; J. F. Mintun, the historian; with Sisters Ida Prouty and Margaret Anderson representing the children of this day. Brother P. J. Tice had charge of the electricity. All did their part well and to the glory of God.

The young people's convention was conducted on Saturday and Sunday following the pageant, in charge of Brothers J. F. Garver and F. M. McDowell, and their work was uplifting in its nature; but on account of rain not so many enjoyed their ministrations as was expected. The departments of the church were inspired to more active service and are planning to take up study classes for each of the departments as far and as soon as they can find teachers to do the work required.

The prayer meetings of late are quite spiritual in all three meeting places.

Modesto, California

October 4.—The Saints of this place have much for which to be thankful. During the past month Elder G. P. Levitt held a week of services here which was enjoyed by all. The Saints were built up and strengthened by his visit.

On Sunday, September 18, rally day was observed, the speakers being Bishop Ingham and Bishop Hawley, of Berkeley, Elder Levitt speaking in the evening. A bounteous basket lunch was served in the basement to about one hundred people. A number were here from Stockton. The day was well spent and enjoyed.

During the past month the church has received a thorough cleaning, redecorating of the wall, all the woodwork and pews a new coat of stain, and the floor a coat of hot oil, so the church is a clean and pleasant place in which to meet. The work was donated, as was the money to buy materials.

The Sunday school is wonderfully improved. Good decorum is especially noticeable, no disorder being had between Sunday school and church service.

The Religio is progressing. About fifty were present last Sunday evening. A young people's class has about twenty members. And there were sixty-one at our evening preaching service when the branch president delivered a splendid sermon.

On Sunday morning an excellent sacramental meeting was enjoyed, when the Spirit was present to a marked degree.

Last evening the quarterly business meeting was held, and that same peaceful spirit was there to bless. The business transacted, all went to their homes feeling that the Lord is good to his people.

The Department of Women is taking up the study of the Book of Mormon, trying to finish it before 1928 is ushered in.

Everything seems to be on the upward march here; nearly all are doing their part. We hope to advance in the great work.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Brother and Sister Hawkins, who have been visiting isolated Saints at Monterey and Santa Cruz, have returned to their home in San Jose, where they are always welcomed by the Saints and their near neighbors. Brother Hawkins reports that the Saints living in those sea coast cities are interested in the welfare of the church to that degree that they are not only willing to say, but to do according to that which is written—"they pay their tithing." He also reports blessing three babies while on his visit.

Brother Charles H. Burgess, son of the late Elder Henry Burgess, and husband of Sister Harriet Burgess, who has been afflicted with heart trouble for quite a while, and at times suffered very severely, passed from earth life on August 24, his body being laid to rest on the 26th in Oak Hill Cemetery. Elder L. B. Shippy officiated at the funeral. Brother Burgess was one of the charter members of San Jose Branch and has served as a teacher in the branch for many years. He had faith in the ordinance of administration, and many times in his life has he been relieved of affliction through this means provided by the Lord. In his last sickness he called frequently for the elders to administer to him, but got only temporary relief. He was sixty-six years of age. Sister Burgess, two daughters, and one son, all members of the church, are the immediate members of the family called to mourn. They have the sincere sympathy of the Saints, as well as of many relatives and friends.

Our young brother, Meeder Smith, who has been incapacitated for the past seven months with a broken leg, was out on crutches at our last sacramental service, where he was greeted with congratulations by the Saints. We all hope it will not be long till he will be able to dispense with the crutches and ride his motorcycle again if he chooses to so do.

Sisters Bertha Worden and May Gilbert, who also have been on beds of affliction, were able to meet with the Saints at this service. We were glad to see their faces at the meetings again.

Elder George H. Wixom met with the Saints in prayer meeting the evening of August 24. He was passing through to his mission field.

The Organ Boosters Club held a social at the home of Brother and Sister L. E. Harris on the evening of September 15. A very enjoyable evening was spent playing games, interspersed with instrumental music and songs. Refreshments a la cafeteria were served later in the evening, the proceeds going to the organ fund. They realized nine dollars and lots of fun.

On September 18 at eleven in the morning special business meeting to determine whether or not the Saints were ready to install a pipe organ and build an addition to the church held the attention of the branch membership. After some discussion a committee was appointed to investigate and determine ways and means by which money could be raised to defray the expenses for said improvements.

San Jose Saints canceled their preaching services in their home branch on the 25th, more than thirty of them attending services with the Park Presidio Branch in San Francisco. This branch is fifty miles from San Jose, and the Saints had to get an early start in order to get there in time for the services, which began at 9.45 in the morning. Their program was as follows: Prayer meeting, 9.45 a. m.; preaching, 11; luncheon, 12.30; the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," 3 p. m.; preaching, 7.45. There was quite a gathering of Saints from different branches of the district; the meetings were good; the pageant was well rendered.

On Wednesday, September 28, District President G. P. Levitt came down from Sacramento and preached for us Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, remaining over Saturday and Sunday. He assisted in the Sunday school at 9.40 a. m. sacramental service at 11, priesthood meeting at 3, and preached for us in the evening.

District Bishop Edward Ingham and one of his counselors, Bishop Cecil Hawley, were also down from the Bay Cities and spent the day with us. Brother Ingham addressed the Sunday school, praising Sister Shippy, our superintendent, very highly for the decorum of the school.

Bishop Ingham preached at 11.30 a. m., and Bishop Hawley addressed the priesthood meeting in the afternoon, at which time we had a round table, giving every member of the priesthood a chance to ask and discuss questions. The meeting lasted two hours, the time being fully occupied, and proved to be very profitable, the bishops giving us some valuable information and instruction. These priesthood meetings are invaluable and ought to be held often and regularly. We were privileged to have the district president with us at this meeting. His presence was appreciated.

One sermon preached by Brother Levitt on the subject of tithing was especially commendable. The correspondent thinks that it was the most spiritual and comprehensive sermon he ever heard. Some nonmembers said it was the best they had ever heard. The Spirit certainly gave light and liberty to the brother in presenting it to the people. It seemed to the writer that if there was anyone present who had a sincere desire to be a follower of the Christ, who had not complied with the financial part of the law of God, equally spiritual with all the rest of his laws, he would go at once and comply with this law. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" May God help us to understand.

Sarnia, Ontario

We of the Sarnia Branch extend to the Saints everywhere greetings in the name of the Master, and we pray that we may be strengthened and encouraged to carry on and help to bring about the redemption of Zion. We have been blessed in many ways, and we feel it a joy to be engaged in this glorious work.

Sunday, September 18, we celebrated the tenth anniversary of our branch and had with us Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Curtis, of Independence; also our district officers, R. H. Jones and Bishop J. C. Dent, and District Missionary Elder James Pycoc.

The nine o'clock prayer service, with Brothers Carmichael and Curtis in charge, was opened by singing Hymn 102. Every minute was enjoyed by all, there being six prayers and thirty-four testimonies. At eleven in the forenoon, the service was in charge of Elder R. H. Jones, with prayer by Elder W. L. Phillips. Apostle Curtis then gave us a very expressive sermon. After this service everyone repaired to the church parlors, where the ladies served a sumptuous dinner.

In the afternoon Bishop Carmichael spoke on his favorite subject, "Stewardship," which was enjoyed by all. At this service the little son of Mr. and Sister Clifford M. Smith was blessed and given the name of Ronald Charles.

In the evening Elder James Pycock addressed us in his pleasing manner, and each night of the following week he spoke to us on the "social program of the stewardship." Beginning October 3, he will speak to us each night for another week on "The principles of Christianity applied to modern problems."

We have had our basement repaired and painted. The Women's Department held a kitchen shower for the church and, in the way of amusement for the evening, put on a mock wedding.

We are glad there is a spirit of unity in our branch. All seem to be striving to work for the good of the cause. We hope and pray that we may all live in such a way that we can enjoy the blessings God has in store for us.

L. M. SWAINSON.

Minot, North Dakota

Our summer has seemed to fly, and autumn has arrived with its busy season of harvest, reminding us of the fact that our pleasant outdoor get-together sessions will soon be at an end.

Every two weeks the members of the Minot Branch have met at some of the homes for services and dinner, and so great has been their enjoyment of these affairs that they are reluctant to give them up. A splendid turnout at the home of Sister J. F. Bailey in August was followed by sacramental service at Elder Sparling's home in Minot on September 4. Brother Sparling was in Montana at the time at the home of his son, Harry, so Elder Warren McElwain, presided, speaking to the Saints in a manner that showed deep spiritual insight and consecrated purpose.

Our commemoration of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was held the 18th of September at the home of Mr. O. K. Spires, northwest of Burlington. Many remember his wife, Sister Spires, now deceased, and her deep love for the gospel and the church. Though the day was one of the kind that forces most people indoors, being cold and very windy, there were fifty-seven present, Brother Joseph Darling and wife from Thorne, North Dakota, one hundred and ten miles away, being among the several from other points. Sister Darling's sister, who has been visiting her from Kansas City, accompanied them, also Elder George Day, of Bemidji, Minnesota, who has been working during the threshing season in the Thorne neighborhood. We were all very glad to see Brother Day and renew old acquaintance, as an interval of nearly twenty years had passed since his meeting with some that were there.

Elder William Sparling conducted the Sunday school session that day, and after a bountiful dinner, Elder Warren McElwain took charge of the subject, "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon," and gave a fine talk, bringing in many interesting points that could not help but impress the nonmembers present. Elder George Day was invited to preach and spoke upon faith in an able and impressive manner, easily holding the attention of all present. Congregational singing was the order of the day, as our soloists failed to put in an appearance owing to an accident to their car.

Sacramental service and Sunday school were held at Elder Sparling's in Minot, October 2, with twenty-seven present. The Minot Sunday school elected new officers that day and also set the time for Sunday school at 11 a. m. on Sundays, except on sacramental Sunday. Then it is to be held following the dinner, which on that day alone will be of the picnic type, it being more convenient for Saints coming from a distance.

On Sunday, October 9, we are to meet for Sunday school, preaching, and dinner at the schoolhouse in Logan, while on Sunday, October 16, the members are to go to Lansford to meet at the home of Elder Warren McElwain. We are hoping the weather will be of a mild variety so these happy days may be continued through the winter. Though the least driving distance for the Saints has been about sixteen miles one way, many driving fifty to sixty miles each time, there has been such enjoyment at these meetings that we are loath to give them up. We feel more like one big family when we study, sing, pray, and eat together, and are continually grateful for the evident pleasure in greetings and the lack of friction among the members of this branch.

Among the visitors in the branch this summer is noted Sister Bailey's daughter and family of Columbus, Ohio, Lola Bailey Miller. Mr. Miller is employed in the City Traction Service there. They have two lovely little children. Sister Miller is a member of the Second Columbus Branch.

Brother and Sister Charles A. Smith are now living in Minot, where their children are attending school, Lucile, their daughter, being a freshman in high school.

Laurel and Pearl McElwain and Lillian Randall, a recent addition to the Minot Branch, are attending the State Teachers' College in Minot, Pearl and Lillian having a room at Elder William Sparling's.

Ferd McElwain is teaching school at Frazier, Montana.

Brother and Sister Sparling have their rooms filled with young ladies, students of the State Teachers College, fourteen being resident with them.

A local of the Department of Women was organized on October 2 at Minot, starting with a membership of eleven. The sisters of the branch are considered members, whether residents or not, for we have found distance bars none from attendance in this country. Sister Birdetta Smith was elected superintendent. They are to meet at present on Saturday afternoons at two. The church history has been selected as the first study, discussion being upon the condition of the world then as it affected woman's work and place compared to the present. A second study, of Book of Mormon times, has been also selected. Sisters near Minot, or coming there for several days, are asked to communicate with Sister Smith. Address, Mrs. Charles A. Smith, 713 Eighth Avenue, N. E., Minot, North Dakota. We shall be glad to welcome them or any of the Saints who make themselves known.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

We of this branch are of good cheer. Has not the Lord said, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world"? We are endeavoring to obey this command, even though we are at times made to sorrow. An event which causes us regret is the departure of Brother Mark S. Crabtree. He preached his farewell sermon here September 11, and leaves for Point Marion, Pennsylvania, where he will make his home.

On September 17 the Loyal Workers Sunday School Class held a box social and netted a sum amounting to more than thirty-three dollars, which was added to the fund for the purchase of a new organ.

District President William Grice, of Crosswell, Michigan, and Elder A. E. Anderton, assistant, Columbus, Ohio, came into our midst Saturday evening, September 24. Brother Anderton delivered a wonderful message to a fine audience.

On the following day we had all-day service and a basket dinner. Instead of Sunday school at 9.30, prayer service convened, Brother Grice in charge, and Brother Anderton assisting. The Spirit prevailed throughout. Through one of our visiting brethren the Lord spoke to Brother Roscoe Bailey, of Jackson, Ohio, giving him a wonderful message. Elder Francis May, of Dayton, spoke on the Book of Mormon and how the plates were found one hundred years ago. This sermon was delivered at 10.30.

The sisters and ladies not members of the church spread dinner on the lawn at noon, and everyone partook of the feast.

The priesthood met with Elder Grice in charge at 1.15, and a fine spirit prevailed. At 2.30 Elder Anderton preached a splendid sermon.

Brother Grice occupied the evening hour, the house being filled to its capacity; and Monday evening, his last night here, he preached on authority. The house was again full, and the crowd included some informed men not of the faith. Some of these greeted Brother Grice, assuring him they knew every word he had spoken was true. Nearly all the McDermott Saints were with us on this occasion. Brother Harley Vance, of 877 Madison Avenue, Chillicothe, and others were present.

Sunday, October 2, Sunday school was smaller in attendance on account of the conference at Highland Branch. But we had a good prayer and social meeting.

We are encouraged when God's able servants come into our midst, and we wish them God's blessings, and hope the time may come when they or others may come to us.

Brentwood Branch

The summer months in Brentwood Branch were spent in the usual branch activities, the regular church and departmental sessions being held regularly.

All the usual days, such as Mothers' Day, Fathers' Day, Children's Day, and the like, were celebrated under the leadership of the Temple Builders' organization.

The Sunday school had its picnic on the Fourth of July, and "repeated" on Labor Day. We are informed from authentic sources that a neat sum was added to the treasuries of the organizations having concessions at the picnic. Sister Eastman was there, with barbecued pork shoulders, and her stand was always hot—with fire to cook, and demands for the good eats. The Temple Builder girls had a fancywork counter and a "bargain counter" at each picnic.

The stork has been busy with the Brentwoodites this summer, stopping at Brother and Sister R. C. Hands' home with a nice big boy, and likewise at the home of Brother Perry Peate, and of Sister Edna Miles. Thelma Elizabeth is a new arrival at the home of Brother and Sister Roy Remington.

The wedding bells have tuned in as a further accomplishment here, Sister Lucille Oliver becoming the wife of Mr. Lloyd Eastman, son of Sister Jesse Eastman, amid the surprised good wishes of the whole branch.

District Missionary A. M. Baker spent two weeks with us. He was ably assisted in his work by the local priesthood and well supported by the hearers.

Brethren Fred Mills Nelson and Ralph N. Remington were ordained to the office of Aaronic priest, Elders C. J. Remington, John Edwards, and Roy Remington officiating. They are a much-needed addition to our Aaronic priesthood, the burden of which has been on the shoulders of Brother Ira Day since the ordination of Brother Roy Remington to the Melchisedec priesthood.

Brother and Sister R. C. Hands and Sister Catherine Wilson have come into the branch by letter, and Brothers David Cooke and Claude W. Dayton have been added by baptism. David is the grandson of "Uncle Noah" Cooke, of bygone days.

Our branch was saddened on the midnight of the 24th of September, when Brother Frank Baker, son of Missionary A. M. Baker, passed from this life after a very brief illness, due to the removal of an abscessed tooth in his lower jaw. Efforts of loved ones and physicians were futile, and Brother Baker passed from this life before any of us realized his danger. Our heartfelt sympathies are with his wife and two small children. The funeral was conducted by District President George F. Barraclough, with the assistance of Undertaker Schrader, of Ballwin, and interment in Bethel Cemetery, at Pond, Missouri.

The Temple Builders gave a supper and bazaar on September 27, but the success was not so marked as had been hoped, for we had not recovered the shock of Brother Baker's demise, and no one felt the usual carnival spirit that accompanies gatherings of this kind.

The priesthood is meeting twice a month, Brother Roy Remington conducting class work in religious education as pertaining to this church. In their classes they have been having the various members go through their paces, while others looked on. Some very constructive work has been done, and some knotty problems have been unraveled to the edification of all.

The burden of preaching has fallen on the shoulders of Elders Charles J. Remington, John Edwards, and Roy Remington, with efforts as well from Priest Ira S. Day. Brother F. F. Struebing, the presiding elder, has been giving the "boys" an opportunity and has stayed in the background for the most part. Elder John Edwards and the two Elders Remington have spent a goodly portion of time assisting in other nearby branches through the summer; and while it has meant a sacrifice to Brentwood, we trust that good has been accomplished.

Our prayer services have varied in degree of spirituality, but with all getting back into harness again a decided change for the better is noticed.

A goodly percentage of the branch are reading the Book of Mormon, and every home has been provided with a copy of the book, so they will be without that excuse when the day of reckoning comes.

Cumoram Sunday was fittingly observed with the program as suggested by the Presidency, to the edification and enlightenment of all.

Brentwood is still facing Zionward—working for that goal.

San Francisco, California

Park Presidio Branch

Arguello Boulevard and Clement Street

After a celebration or victory of any kind, you will often hear it said that it is now all over but the shouting. The Ruth's Club of the Park Presidio Branch of San Francisco has the satisfaction of knowing that after presenting the pageant, "Remember Cumoram," the better part of five hundred people included the shouting, for never in our glorious city has the Reorganized Church presented a program or celebration that met with such success.

The entire Richmond Masonic Temple was used for this celebration. The writer made mention in his last letter that the large hall would accommodate four hundred people, but we succeeded in having approximately five hundred. The banquet hall accommodates between one hundred and ninety and two hundred persons, but the hall had to be reset to meet the demand for luncheon, which consisted of creamed chicken in patties and the usual good food accompanying same. The menu ended with the usual ice cream and cake. Sister J. A. Cunningham and her committee merit much praise for the splendid success in the banquet hall.

Regarding the pageant, it is hard for the writer to lay particular stress upon any particular part of the program, for all who participated did remarkably well, and the people who represented the nations and peoples of the world evidently tried to outdo one another, for the costumes and make-up were amazingly beautiful. The Asiatics, Hawaiians, American Indians, and all presented a wonderful tableau in the last act, thus bringing to a climax the impressive lesson of divine truth as portrayed in the pageant. Following is the cast of characters: Historian, L. B. Shippy; first child, Arthur H. Mellberg, jr.; second child, Betty Cooper; the minister, Virgil B. Etzenhouser; Joseph, James Savage; Moroni, Funton E. Hartsough; the church, Ruth Waller Clegg; the blind man, Robert E. Cowden; first Nephite, Clarence Moran; second Nephite, John Carmichael; third Nephite, Richard Ferris.

Sisters Bessie Bohall Holling and Ruth Waller Clegg had charge of the celebration and carried out the plans in a very successful manner. Sister Christiana Waller, who had charge of the orchestral selections, presented an excellent program. Sister Jessie B. Ferguson, stage manager, is also to be complimented on her good work.

The Park Presidio Branch has had an abundance of publicity since we first met at the Richmond Masonic Temple, Arguello Boulevard and Clement Street, on January 2, and the writer is happy to report the San Francisco Examiner gave us a nice article in the Sunday issue; and the two local papers, the Richmond Banner and the Weekly Herald, came out on Friday, September 23, with three quarters of a column front page articles. These were considered by us as a big help in putting over our work.

This branch had the pleasure of having its first baptism on September 20, when Mrs. Lydia Flood was led into the font by Elder Edward Nelson and was confirmed during the morning prayer service on September 25.

The centennial was truly a wonderful means of telling the world the story of the Book of Mormon. The writer can truthfully say it has been the means of educating some who in the past could only associate the name with polygamy; but since hearing the morning sermon by Brother Guy P. Levitt and being enlightened as to its value to society, they pledged themselves never to use the name in jest. Not only do they intend to read the Book of Mormon but the Bible as well. As I have said in the past, my hopes and ambitions are to see that the church as a whole will take new hold on this wonderful work and put forth a renewed effort to bring into the fold many that are groping in the dark.

Too much praise can not be given the Bay District branches, which gave us their whole-hearted support, and special mention is in order for Oakland, Sacramento, San Jose, and San Francisco.

A. L. HOLLING.

Salt Lake City, Utah

October 11.—Our work is going along quite nicely here, and the interest of our young people is encouraging. On the evening of September 22, they put on the wonderful Pageant, written by President Elbert A. Smith, in a creditable manner. It was directed by Sister Amanda Condit and Frederick Rich. The scenery was prepared by Henry Egan and Lester Jensen and showed talent.

We had visiting Saints that evening from the Ogden Branch and Provo Branch, and all pronounced the pageant as being wonderful. This has stimulated an interest in the Book of Mormon, and many have signed up to read it in the near future.

The young people have started a choir under the leadership of Zenda Starr, which will, I feel sure, be a great help in increasing interest and attendance.

Our mission house has been blessed by the visits of quite a few of the eastern Saints this summer, and they are always welcome. The Lewises, from Iowa, spent a few days in Salt Lake with us. The Ganoes, from Durand, Wisconsin, also visited with us later in the summer. Each of these families had a daughter from Graceland, so Ted was right at home showing them around the Mormon capital.

Brethren Martin, McConley, and J. Arthur Davis have visited with us, and they gave us some fine sermons. Our conference at Ogden, October 1 and 2, was pronounced by many as the best held here in a long time.

My son, Frederick, was ordained a priest, and I believe he will be a great help to our work. Brothers McConley and Davis were present and gave us some fine sermons.

We believe the work in our district is going forward.

CALVIN H. RICH, Pastor.

Alliance, Ohio

Corner Seneca and Main Streets, in Knights of Malta Hall

October 11.—Since our last reporting, the Alliance Branch has been favored with visits from the following: Elder W. C. Neville and wife, of Canton; also two sisters of Brother Neville, from Akron; Elder T. G. Neville and family, of Kirtland; Elder J. C. McConaughy, of Barberton; Patriarch Richard Baldwin, district Sunday school superintendent; Brother Odum, of Cuyahoga Falls; and District President James Bishop, of Kirtland. We have been strengthened by these visits and are always glad to welcome our brothers and sisters.

Fourteen Boy Scouts with their scoutmaster, of Sebring, attended a Sunday evening service here in May. They gave a short but interesting program at the beginning of the service, after which Elder W. C. Neville, of Canton, gave a very fine sermon, it being appropriate for the occasion. They were a fine group of boys, and we are thankful for such an organization as the Boy Scouts and feel to praise and support it whenever opportunity presents. Come again, boys.

We feel we have every reason to be encouraged in the work here; the meetings in every department are better attended than ever before. Our prayer and sacrament services are very spiritual, the Lord manifesting himself through the gifts in an unmistakable manner, some of the things being literally fulfilled even now.

July 3, Brother Alba Smith was ordained to the office of priest. He has the love and confidence of all the Saints and should be able to accomplish much for the church. He has been greatly afflicted with abscesses on his eye, which have caused him much suffering. At one time the specialist told him the blood veins were growing in on the sight, and nothing in medical science could save the sight, but today that eye is stronger and better than the other, and we feel to say with Apostle Paul, "The gospel came not in word only, but in power and much assurance."

Brother and Sister J. E. Gordon have had another little son given into their care. Paul Elbert is his name. This accounts in part for the nonappearing of our news letter in the HERALD, Sister Gordon being kept very busy with the little newcomer.

July 2 was picnic day for the Latter Day Saints Sunday school, so with well-filled baskets and light hearts we went to Lake Milton. Swimming, ball games, and contests were the order of the day. Elder Guy Hammond and wife, of Akron, and District President James Bishop were special guests. We enjoyed ourselves.

Our orchestra is progressing nicely under the leadership of Brother Alba Smith. In the latter part of September, they gave a wiener, marshmallow, and corn roast at the home of Brother Robert Dawson, of Sebring, inviting the church. A good time was reported.

Many of the Saints here attended Kirtland reunion, feeling well repaid for the effort put forth.

Brother Arthur P. Gordon and wife, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, were visitors here in August at the home of J. E. Gordon, his brother. They attended Kirtland reunion and visited her people in Detroit, Michigan; also visited Niagara Falls; Philadelphia; Washington, District of Columbia; and New York City. Sister Gordon was formerly Florence Leland, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, having acquired the name Gordon on August 11, the confetti which kept dropping from their clothing attesting the fact they were newlyweds. This was formerly the home of Brother Gordon and where he first received the gospel, and the Saints love him, and now his place in our hearts is equally divided with Sister Florence. May God's blessings follow their union is the wish of the Saints here.

Sunday evening, October 2, a splendid program was given in honor of the Book of Mormon centennial, the young and old taking part, the orchestra and other music having a very special place. Not long ago this particular program would have been impossible, so we thank our heavenly Father for the gospel that helps our people to develop into leaders and workers in every avenue of service, and we rejoice to see our young people taking their part. The Women's Department had charge and are certainly to be commended.

Duluth, Minnesota

Corner 60 Avenue West and Bristol Street

We may say as Paul, To work out our own salvation with fear and trembling before God. We shall try to heed this admonition if God so permits. May we be living epistles to mankind.

On Sunday, September 4, we met in sacramental service, feeling the peaceful influence of God's Holy Spirit strengthening us and confirming us to his promises. Testimonies and prayers, voicing our desires to serve and to go on to perfection, were expressed.

In the evening Elder M. F. Gowell was the speaker, using the theme, "Our objective is the kingdom of God." The principal thought given to the congregation was that the kingdom of God is to come down from above to meet the material kingdom built up below. Much food for thought was expressed.

September 4 ended the Christmas offering contest between the Whites and the Greens, and while the amount was not great which was received, it helped to teach us all to work together and gave a desire to each one to do his part whether it be great or small. The Greens won with a total of nine dollars and sixty cents, the Whites gathering together six dollars and ninety-three cents. The White side furnished a marshmallow and wiener roast at Indian Point when volley ball and other sports were entered into.

The Sunday school picnic was held at Chester Park bowl on Labor Day, September 5. The Lord blessed us with a perfect day. While a lively shower was experienced in the afternoon, our ardor was not dampened, but a good time was enjoyed. A lesson was learned on this occasion, the lesson of the greater need for cooperation between officers, teachers, adults, children, in play as well as work. Elder Lester Whiting, of Clitherall, Minnesota, wrote a clever little rhymed description of this outing.

Elder M. F. Gowell made a trip to Ashland, Wisconsin, September 8, to bring to the Saints residing there at Bayfield strength and true manna from God's storehouse.

Elder Carroll Olson and wife are with us now, making their home at Superior, Wisconsin, where Brother Carroll is teaching in the high school. He was the speaker on September 11, reading Matthew 7:1-21 inclusive. The theme of the discourse was taken from verse 34: "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, who built his house upon a rock, and the rains descended and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, but it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock." Some ideas presented were: Do the things we have heard, for we shall not receive more until we put into practice that which we have already received.

Elder Lester Whiting was the speaker in the evening. Brother J. P. Fetting, of Port Huron, Michigan, assisted, reading the first Psalm: "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. The ungodly are not so: but are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish."

The anniversary of the coming forth of the plates of the Book of Mormon was observed on September 25. One side of the rostrum was arranged to show the grove where Joseph Smith went to pray on a beautiful day in the early spring of 1820, while on the front rostrum behind the altar was a beautiful landscape showing the Hill Cumorah with trees and a road passing by.

During the Sunday school service the responsive reading was Alma's discourse on faith (Alma 16:143-173). Reading, an article on page 456-457 of Autumn Leaves, "The Book of Mormon centennial," by S. A. Burgess. A talk was made by Elder Samuel Case on the visions enjoyed. At eleven o'clock Elder M. F. Gowell was the speaker, reading Ezekiel 34. He brought to us a clear understanding of the need of the Book of Mormon, illustrating to us the meaning of the grove and the landscape of Hill Cumorah in the background of the rostrum.

Elder W. E. Shakespeare, while visiting his loved ones and friends at Minneapolis, from his field of duty, felt to also favor us with a visit and stayed for a while. He was the speaker on September 18 in the morning, using Matthew 27:19: "When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him." He quoted the question of Pilate: "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?" And read Matthew 16:19. In the declaration of Christ: "I will build my church," the speaker drew the illustration that the church is the means for finishing the work of Jesus Christ, as a bridge is the means of crossing the stream. We may enter as a member of the church and never arrive at our destination as a man may go upon a bridge and yet never get across unless he puts forth efforts and uses the means as provided for the crossing. By it and through it (the church) the salvation of human kind is wrought. There is much more to be accomplished before the people can be brought up to the standard Jesus holds up for us to reach. What is the purpose of the church? We must make ourselves in the image of the Father in order that we may have life and that more abundantly. The prime object of Christ was that man might live, that we might have life, and that more abundantly. Man can not develop alone; he must have companionship. We are depending upon one another for development—joining together—actuated by the Spirit of God that we may have life. What is life? He lives that develops advancement in life. Blessed are they that do. Those that are living are enjoying the more abundant life. If we want to enjoy life to the fullest extent, we must develop it to the fullest extent. The purpose of the church is that man might have life.

In the evening Brother Shakespeare again occupied, reading Acts 24:18, and employing the subject, "Developing of spiritual power." The theme was concerning the thought of keeping the channels open. Subtopics of this sermon were: first, Keeping a good conscience. Read Isaiah 59:1, 2: "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it can not save; neither his ear heavy, that it can not hear. But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." The spirit of service is the essence of religion. Consciousness of sin estranges us from God. Second, We should cultivate deep personal convictions. Third, We should develop character. Fourth, We must maintain a consciousness of a consecrated life. Fifth, It is essential to maintain a deep sense of priestly responsibility. Sixth, We should cultivate a prayerful attitude. And seventh, We should use the power we have; exercise our developed strength. The Lord gives to those that use. Use your developed strength.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

October 10.—Sacramental service was well attended October 2, and a good spirit prevailed.

Brother John Mizell is spending a time with his son, Ollie Mizell, in Texas.

School opened here September 5 with an enrollment of nearly two hundred. Teachers and pupils seemed anxious to get to work. We hope to have a successful school term.

Within the last two months, one adult and four children have accepted the faith and entered the waters of baptism.

Sister Mable Smith left August 28 for Independence to enter training in the school of nurses in the Independence Sanitarium.

The Department of Women held its regular meeting last Thursday at the home of Sister Susie Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Porter are the proud parents of a baby girl born September 25.

We expect to meet next Sunday afternoon to organize a Book of Mormon class. Several have pledged to read the Book of Mormon before December 31.

A fine baby boy arrived August 7 to make his home with Brother and Sister Charles Miller, and has been given the name of Calvin Oneal.

Sunday school is getting along nicely under the management of Brother Noll Barnes. Teachers' and officers' meeting is held once a month.

Sister Lou Smith spent last week with her daughter in Mobile.

Brother Turpen was with us September 17 to 24. We are sorry he could not stay longer. His sermons and good advice were greatly appreciated.

Brother John Sherman was on the sick list last week.

Sioux City, Iowa

October 10.—Since the last writing from the Sioux City Branch, quite a little personal and church news has accumulated which might interest HERALD readers. Our branch showed an unusually good representation at the Little Sioux district reunion held at Missouri Valley August 19 to 28. Ninety-five of our members attended. Along with this good attendance at reunion might be mentioned the increase in attendance at our prayer meetings. For the second quarter of this year, the average attendance was fifteen; for the third quarter, which has just ended, the average attendance was twenty. So if the spirituality of a branch can be judged by its prayer meetings, as has been said, then the spirituality of our branch must be increasing.

An all-day-bring-your-lunch picnic was held at Riverside Park on Labor Day. Games were played until the usual shower, which almost always comes on outing days, came late in the afternoon and caused a hurried and laughing scramble for shelter.

Our branch business meeting was held Wednesday, October 5.

Since our Religio president, Frederick Vandel, left the city to attend the Des Moines School of Pharmacy, and his brother George Vandel, recreation leader, left to attend the Art Institute at Chicago, it was necessary to fill the two offices made vacant by their leaving. Raymond Haycox was elected to fill the office of Religio president and Dora Dexter Haycox to fill the office of recreation leader.

Brother and Sister A. R. Daniel, from Cameron, Missouri, arrived to make their home with their son, Elder G. Scott Daniel. Brother A. R. Daniel is seriously ill at this time. Brother and Sister A. R. Daniel were charter members of the Cameron Branch, and that has been their home the past thirty years.

There is also another arrival to be mentioned, of a baby girl, Patricia Aileene, at the home of Brother and Sister Raymond Haycox.

Next Sunday, October 16, will be rally day. The morning hour will be given over to a rally day program by the children.

We are working on the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," which will be presented in the near future. It is being directed by Sister G. Scott Daniel.

Sioux City had a good representation at the Little Sioux district conference at Logan October 8 and 9. The conference, which was largely an educational gathering, was enjoyed by those who were privileged to attend. Brother J. F. Garver delivered several instructive and inspiring lectures to the priesthood and membership. Brother Joseph Lane, who has been district president or a member of the district presidency for the past twenty-five years, asked to be released from the responsibility of that office, and Brother G. Scott Daniel, pastor of the Sioux City Branch, was elected to fill that position.

2119 Jackson Street

September 30.—Brother Judson Livingston and wife visited friends and Saints in Madison the first of the month. While here Mrs. Livingston was baptized by Brother Henry Woodstock and confirmed at the sacramental service by Brothers Woodstock and Livingston.

Brother Archie Root, who was superintendent of Recreation and Expression, also secretary of Sunday school, is attending Graceland this year. Brother Harold Carpenter was elected to fill the vacancy of superintendent of Recreation and Expression, and George Pratt, Sunday school secretary. A party was given in honor of Brother Archie before he left. The boys' organization known as the "Felix Club," presented him a leather-covered notebook, also a gold fountain pen was given him by other members of the branch.

Brother Woodstock occupies the eleven o'clock hour in delivering to his congregation a practical sermon. At the evening service other members of the priesthood have their turn.

The evening of the 11th found Brother Burns the speaker. This brother is improving very much in his delivery.

On September 17, at 2.30, at the home of Brother Woodstock, Brother Robert Brigham and Ester Kendall were united in marriage by Brother Woodstock. On the evening of the 29th a party was given by the branch, being held in the basement of the church, for Brother Brigham and wife. Even though it was a rainy evening, quite a few were present and a good time was enjoyed. Brother Lee Root had charge of games which were very appropriate for the occasion. Ice cream and cake were served as refreshments. Brother Woodstock presented to the newlyweds in behalf of the branch an electric grill. Other presents were also given them.

Apostle D. T. Williams and District President E. J. Lenox arrived on the 16th, Brother Williams preaching in the evening.

The speaker for the evening hour of the 18th was Brother Willard Hield. For a text he used Proverbs 22: 29: "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men." Some of the thoughts presented were: God created man for a purpose; he sent his Son into the world that we might have life and have it more abundantly. God's way of developing man is by multiplying talents; he has given creative powers to each individual. To him that has created shall be given greater opportunities to create. Plato said, "Prefer diligence before idleness, unless you would prefer rust to brightness." Zion is to be a beautiful people living in beautiful surroundings, each one doing his part for its accomplishments. The following poem expresses the thought in this connection. This he read:

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass;
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass,
But the liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains, some have to be crew,
There is something for all of us here;
There's big work and little for people to do,
And the task we must do is the near.
If you can't be the highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be the sun, be a star,
For it isn't by size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are.

He quoted from President Smith wherein he said, Part of the Zionie ideal is that each individual shall be trained to his best capacity and then work in that capacity. One saves himself by losing himself in service. If trained, we are going somewhere; we have a schedule. Diligence is taken from the Latin diligio, meaning "love ardently or with all his heart." Proverbs 13: 4 says: "The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat." Diligence is the mother of luck. Plow deep while sluggards sleep, and you shall have corn to sell and to eat. Some one has said: "He that lives largest lives but a little while, and has no time to waste. He closed with the words, "They that are diligent in their business will be able to assist in Zion and shall stand before the King of kings."

Brother Houghton preached for us on the 25th, both morning and evening, the two services bearing on the centennial of the Book of Mormon. In the morning his subject was "Internal evidence of the Book of Mormon," in the evening, "Divinity of Book of Mormon proven by archæology."

The midweek prayer service was in charge of Brothers Houghton and Holloway. The prayer services are very well attended.

Sister Clayton Weeks, of Chetek, is visiting at Sister Leonard Houghton's home and among other Saints. A party was given at Carl Wirth's for the young people this month. Twenty-six were present. Lunch was served.

Gertrude Ganoë, of Porcupine, is teaching school in our city. She is a former Graceland student.

Northern Wisconsin District Conference

The annual conference of Northern Wisconsin District convened at Porcupine, Wisconsin, October 1 and 2, with a fair representation attending Saturday sessions and good attendance Sunday, considering the rainy weather and bad roads. We were fortunate to have present Apostle D. T. Williams and Elder L. G. Holloway, of the Seventy.

After the Saturday morning prayer service, the usual business sessions were held, which resulted in the unanimous vote of the conference to sustain Elder L. O. Wildermuth as district president for the coming year. This will make the third year Brother Wildermuth has served in our district, and in his quiet, patient way he has won the love and confidence of the Saints. He has inspired in us a greater desire to move onward to 1930. There were not many changes in the other district offices, most of last year's officials being chosen for the coming year.

After the business was finished on Saturday afternoon,

Brother Williams gave a talk on parliamentary practice, and this was followed by a short talk on "Why we should study," by the superintendent of the Department of Women, and finished by a round table talk.

Saturday evening Apostle D. T. Williams was the speaker, also Sunday forenoon. In the afternoon Elder L. G. Holloway spoke, and Elder L. O. Wildermuth in the evening.

Sacramental service was held Sunday morning at 9.30 with a good attendance, and the gentle influence of God's Spirit prevailed, which gave us a greater determination to be of service in his work the coming year.

Excellent meals were served in the basement by the sisters of the Frankfort Branch, and thus gave time for games on Saturday and singing, short talks, and visiting on Sunday.

Prospects for our district are brighter, and we hope to take advantage of the opportunities as they present themselves, to advance the work in Northern Wisconsin, that the objectives of the church may be accomplished.

DISTRICT SECRETARY.

Marshall, Missouri

October 10.—Elder H. V. Minton, one of the missionaries of Holden Stake, has held a series of meetings here for the past four weeks, beginning September 11. Good attendance was had, with several nonmembers who seemed very much interested in Brother Minton's forceful explanation of the gospel. He used a chart of the two ways, the straight and narrow way and the broad way, making it very convincing, as he spoke under the power and inspiration of the Holy Spirit all the way through.

On September 25 Apostle F. Henry Edwards accompanied Brethren H. V. Minton, W. P. Mitchel, and R. M. Ridge home from Independence, where on Saturday night they attended the centennial program of the finding of the Book of Mormon plates. Apostle Edwards was greeted both morning and evening with a full house. He was in fine spirits and wonderfully enthused his audience. Some were curious perhaps to see a real live apostle! And he certainly was alive!

In the afternoon at three o'clock, three were baptized by H. V. Minton. They were Sister Ralphie Ridge, Westley Bowler, and Fern Lyley. Confirmation was at night by Apostle Edwards and Elder Minton. The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Charles H. Thayer, Helen Charlene, was blessed at that time, the spokesman being Brother Edwards. Let us not forget the good old-fashioned sing we had after the baptism and the enlightening talk the apostle gave us, outlining the work to be done between now and 1930.

Sister Jessie Harlow, who was administered to that same evening after church, received a blessing. Having suffered a stroke of paralysis, she could not lie on her right side, but was enabled to do so after the administration.

Sunday, October 2, Brother Minton met with the priesthood at eight in the morning. He also had a class of young men meet with them, instructing them to prepare for service. These young men are going to organize a Doctrine and Covenants class, to meet early every Sunday morning for study. They will be instructed by the branch teacher, Marion Johnson.

A good spirit prevailed in the sacramental meeting. No time went to waste. Brother Minton urged the importance of partaking of the emblems if we expect the blood of Jesus to cleanse us of all sin. A baby daughter of Brother and Sister Cecil Walton was blessed at this time and given the name of Margaret Adell. Elder Harold Thayer was spokesman, assisted by Elder Minton.

Six more precious souls were buried in baptism at three in the afternoon. The candidates were Roy Johnson and wife; Mrs. Kate Jacobs, mother of Sister Johnson; Evaline Johnson, daughter of Evan Johnson; Maurine Mitchel, daughter of Deacon W. P. Mitchel; and Mrs. Emma Thayer McClure, the aged aunt of Brother G. A. Thayer. These were confirmed at the night meeting by Elder Minton, who spoke under inspiration to each one. Special music after the opening of the service was rendered by a quartet composed of Lois Spohrer, Mrs. Zola Everhart; and Brother and Sister Cecil Walton. The infant son of Brother and Sister Walter Smith was blessed by Brother Minton and given the name John Arthur.

Thursday night, having promised picture slides, Brother Minton presented pictures representing the coming forth of the latter-day work and some views of ruins found in South America, the work of the ancient inhabitants; also some views of the coast of Maine in winter, taken by Elder Minton when he was missionary to Maine. Friday night he showed slides representing the life of Christ, which were finished Sunday night, October 9, with a splendid lecture accompanying. A solo was very ably rendered by Sister Lois Spohrer.

Brother Minton kept saying there should be one more baptized to make ten! So Sunday morning after services another sister who had not yet fully made up her mind, received the consent of her mind and sent in her name for baptism in the afternoon. Being baptized, she was confirmed that afternoon. This dear sister was Mrs. Zola Everhart, sister of Sister Cecil Walton. Coffeyville, Kansas, Saints, take notice.

The young people did bravely furnishing special numbers in music and singing. One night three young brothers, Eugene Ridge, Jack Spohrer, and Herbert Ridge, gave us a sample of band music, the two first named playing sliding trombones and the last the fife drum. Their effort was much appreciated. There were two duet numbers by Sister J. H. Spohrer and daughter, Lois, two by Alice Lyley and Frankie Thayer, a duet by Agnes Ridge and Frankie Thayer, a duet by little Fern Lyley and Dorothy Ridge, two solos by Winona Johnson, two solos by Lois Spohrer, two solos by Lillian McDonough, two quartet numbers by Alice Lyley, Frankie Thayer, Garland Tickemyer, and Eugene Ridge, and two special numbers by the choir, led by Sister W. P. Mitchel. Others did their bit, furnishing ferns and flowers for the altar.

A basket dinner was planned for Sunday, October 2, and an all-day meeting, but the rain interfered, making roads very bad for friends out of town.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana

I would not omit features of our Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District which point to the robust faith and commendable efforts of the Saints throughout. If nations are to be judged by their constitutions and their institutions, then the church may be comforted in the thought of its work, since the refractory element that resisted the high solvent power of the gospel has rested its case, and find the more rapid and rational have been the solidarity and progress of the institutions embodying the great principles which are so clearly enunciated in the Restoration.

Worthy of attention and approval was the very pretty program rendered by the Coldwater Religio on Wednesday evening, September 21, the one hundredth anniversary of the "sealed book," unsealed. Ethel Galigher superintends this department. The music was all, or nearly all, on the theme except the anthem, and even this exalted the author of the record as "Lord of all," Jesus Christ so "crowned."

Sister Stroh read her paper so fitly framed on the events of the coming forth of the book, angelic ministrations, and the organization of the church. "O stop and tell me, Red Man," was rendered by Sisters Stroh and Scott, answering the questions by a quartet asked in the first two stanzas, all in the tune of "Annie Laurie," this being very effective.

A poem of rhythmical order was read, original with

S. W. L. Scott, which covered a great deal of ground traversed by Book of Mormon History. All the numbers in this program were well rendered and inspiring.

Sunday, September 25, Clear Lake Saints staged an anniversary which was enjoyed by a goodly number, at home and abroad. Fort Wayne, Kendallville, Elkhart, Angola, Indiana, and Bryan, Ohio, sent a fine representation, while Coldwater, Michigan, sent fifteen to augment. The day was well occupied with five services, two Book of Mormon specials—and a bountiful repast in the church kitchen. Sister Martel Ellis rendered the piano solo, "Centennial march," at both Coldwater and Clear Lake. Her interpretation is an unfolding of the century. Sister Stohir, of Fort Wayne, gave a very fine reading. I believe everyone enjoyed an enlarged vision of the importance and blessing brought by the ancient record. Here, as at other points, I delivered three sermons during the day.

October 2 I met with the Grand Rapids Saints in public worship. Here is a fine large branch under the presidency of Brother Walter F. Ryder. If ever the law of adaptability was strongly apparent (at least to me), it is in the presidency of Brother Ryder over this fine, spirited congregation. They seemed to be foreordained for this relationship.

The first service was young people's prayer meeting at 8 a. m. The second was sacramental service at ten o'clock, preceded by a twenty-minute talk, and the Spirit was with the Saints throughout. Testimonies, songs, and prayers were inspiring. A large attendance was wrapped in the spirit of devotion. The Sunday school followed with vigor and order. Those young people are a power for good. In the evening they gave me the largest crowd we have seen in a long time, and I felt like talking, too. Quite a number said I did talk. Grand Rapids is alive, and forging ahead with a fine complement of leaders in all departments. The orchestra is certainly an inspiring feature in their musical department.

Brother Corless, president of Coldwater Branch, has arranged for an all-day service, a "get-together" for the branch and all over the country, October 16, Saints' chapel in Coldwater. Come.

S. W. L. SCOTT.

From the Hoosier Capital

Corner Pratt Street and Chester Avenue

Since our last letter to the HERALD, we have been favored with a visit from Patriarch J. E. Matthews and wife, of Columbus, Ohio, who were visiting their children in our city. Brother Matthews gave us some excellent gospel talks while with us, full of fatherly advice and counsel.

Our concession at the Indiana State Fair this year was a decided success. The concession was operated by a committee of three, Elders J. A. Robinson and A. W. Gage, and Sister Keo Robinson, on a stewardship basis for the benefit of the branch. The membership cooperated with the committee to an encouraging degree, both in the way of finance and labor, all working for the success of the venture. At the accounting of the committee, the "stewardship" netted the branch a cash surplus of $270.91, and supplies which can be used to advantage by the Department of Women, valued at $22.95, giving a total of $293.86. To the writer, however, the most valuable feature was the lesson gleaned therefrom, namely, that God blesses the united, earnest efforts of his people in righteousness, regardless of the personnel of the directing head or heads having charge of the work. Unity of action in a righteous cause always brings results.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has renewed its activities for the winter months, and has changed its study period to 6.30 Sunday evening; its social features will be held from time to time on Friday evening. The department dropped its movement for the presentation of "Remember Cumorah," an inventory of available material to successfully present it not warranting the venture.

The Sunday School Department is holding its own, and interest in class work seems to be increasing. Officers and teachers are cooperating for the advancement of the school.

The Department of Women is still on the job, in various ways, assisting in the finances of the branch, stimulating interest in the study of the Book of Mormon, and endeavoring to raise our conception of what constitutes Christian citizenship.

Elder Charles A. Nolan and family, formerly of Independence, are now residing in this city. Brother Charles was a former resident here, and is welcomed back to our city. We are also glad to have his assistance, for earnest workers always are welcome.

Elder A. W. Gage, branch priest, was called to his boyhood home on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, by the serious sickness of his father. We wish for him a safe journey, and for his father a speedy recovery.

A list of recent visitors to church services here include Elder A. H. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio; Brother J. W. Davis, of New Albany; and Brother and Sister Arthur Bennett, of Martinsville. We are always glad to welcome visitors. Come and worship with us.

New London, Connecticut

The Department of Women has resumed its work after the summer vacation. A Halloween party is scheduled and also a gift sale. Each member is to contribute five articles to this sale.

Brother Harold Garfield and wife and brother, Leonard Garfield, and wife, of New Haven, Connecticut, were present at the sacramental service here October 2. The Saints are always pleased to have them come.

Brother John E. Blastow has returned from his summer's work. All are glad to have him back. He has been greatly missed. It is expected that he will take up his work with the male quartet.

Sister Christine Crandall has made great improvement in health, and it is hoped that she will continue to regain strength.

There seems to be a good spiritual condition in the branch, and the gospel work is going forward.

Lansing, Michigan

October 10.—The appearance of our church, both outside and inside the building, has undergone a marked change during the late summer; and it looks good! thanks to the efforts of Brother and Sister Hawn, of Coldwater, who came over to Lansing to do the work for us. Credit also is due the branch members whose liberal donations made possible the decorating and cleaning.

We wish to mention our success in staging the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," rendered September 25. The church was filled to its capacity; some were compelled to turn away because of lack of room. Several requests have been made for a second showing of the pageant. We feel this success was largely due to the ready response of those called upon to take part, together with the united prayers of our branch members, and was also due to the efforts of our director, Mrs. Elizabeth Manning.

Since our last writing the angel of death has visited us, taking away our Brother Leon Van Horn. But death can not erase the memory of his willing service and his loyalty to the church. Surely loyalty and service can justly claim their reward in that land beyond the grave.

Conference in England

The annual Southern District conference convened at Enfield on Saturday and Sunday, July 30 and 31, 1927, commencing at 6 p. m. Saturday. The Enfield Branch Orchestra opened with a number. Hymn 158 in the Hymnal was sung, Elder J. W. Worth, of London, offering prayer. Elder J. A. Judd, district president, addressed a few remarks welcoming those present, including many visitors outside the district. Elder J. W. Worth and Missionaries Abel Hall and Harry Price assisted to preside over the meeting. It was resolved that the local ushers act as ushers of conference, with power to elect assistants.

The minutes of the previous conference were read and approved. Elders A. Hall and H. Price were associated with the presidency of this conference.

Reports were read and accepted: District president's spiritual report; branch president's spiritual reports; elders' labor reports. Reports were also received from the chorister, Religio field worker, Women's Department, historian, and financial secretary.

The following officers were elected: J. A. Judd, president; D. A. Judd, secretary and recorder; Arthur Wicks, historian; C. Lily Tatman, treasurer; William Goulee, chorister; J. W. Foster, Sunday school superintendent; J. W. Foster Religio superintendent; Sister E. E. Judd, Women's Department; Brothers Goulee, Oakman, and Edwards, auditors.

Resolved that a committee be chosen to revise the district rules and to draw up new where necessary in accordance with previous resolutions. The appointment of this committee was left in the hands of the presidency of conference and was later named as Brethren J. A. Judd, J. W. Worth, J. W. Foster, D. A. Oakman, and D. A. Judd.

Resolved that branch historians be requested to fill their duties by reporting to the district historian. It was also resolved that the branches with no historian should elect one as soon as possible.

Resolved that we sustain all general and district officers by our prayers.

The locating committee's report was read and accepted.

A resolution to adjourn was carried, and the closing prayer was offered by Elder D. A. Judd.

Concert

Commencing approximately at 8.30, a short but fine concert was held, and was enjoyed by all present. The program was composed of orchestral items, songs by Doris Foster and Ada Taylor, and A. Oakman and E. Sykes; recitations by Sister M. Maloney; and violin solos by D. A. Judd. A few remarks and a prayer by Elder J. A. Judd closed the evening's entertainment.

Sunday's sessions opened at eleven o'clock with a preaching service in charge of Elder Abel Hall, of Manchester, assisted by Elder J. W. Worth, of London. The speaker for this session was Elder J. W. Foster, who chose for his subject, "The Bishopric." A very instructive sermon was delivered and interesting facts recorded.

The Sunday school program at 2.30 p. m. was arranged by Sister E. E. Judd, the Enfield Branch Sunday school superintendent, and was announced by Elder F. Wilson, of Exeter, who was in the chair. The opening hymn was followed by prayer by Brother E. Meadows, of Gloucester. Then followed songs by the scholars, scripture reading, the roll call, and a short talk by Elder A. T. Trapp, of Gloucester. Altogether a splendid hour was spent, and the service closed with prayer.

At 3.45 p. m. commenced a sacramental and prayer meeting in charge of Elder J. A. Judd, assisted by several of the priesthood. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by prayer by Brother Newport, or Leicester. The sacrament was administered, after which several prayers were offered and the proceedings closed with prayer by Elder H. Price. Directly following this meeting, the priesthood met at the home of Elder Lewis Folkes, and there a general and interesting discussion took place.

The half hour from 6.15 to 6.42 was devoted entirely to the musical portion of the work. Selections were given by the orchestra, whilst Sister D. Foster and A. Oakman and E. Sykes rendered items from the well-known oratorio, "Elijah." A violin solo by D. A. Judd, and hymns by the congregation completed a splendid program. W. T. Goulee was the accompanist for several of the items during the program.

Preaching service at 6.45 was in charge of Elder Abel Hall, assisted by Elders H. Price, A. T. Trapp, and J. W. Worth. The speaker for the evening was Elder J. A. Judd, the district president, and a fine sermon was enjoyed by the large congregation present.

Following came a prayer and testimony service. Many testimonies were given, whilst the Spirit was made manifest. A hymn was sung, after which Elder J. A. Judd addressed a few remarks to the people upon the experiences of the past sessions. The closing prayer was by Elder A. Hall.

Music throughout the conference sessions was supplied by the Enfield Branch Orchestra, under the leadership of Brother William T. Goulee, of London. The conference itself was one of the finest ever held in this district, being attended by the Spirit from beginning to end, and those who attended were encouraged to go forward in the great work of God. We greet the Saints of the world and wish them success in every undertaking.

On Monday about forty-five of the Saints spent the day at the Alexandra Palace for the annual outing on the August Bank Holiday, and voted it a happy time.

Isolated Saints Invite Visitors

I am renewing my subscription to the SAINTS' HERALD. I could not do without it. We live away up here at Massena, New York, near the Canadian border, the closest branch being Syracuse, about two hundred miles from here. But the HERALD always renews my faith and helps me keep my eyes Zionward. We are four Latter Day Saints here, my wife and I, and our daughter and her husband. I would very much like to get in touch with the Saints in Syracuse, it being about six hours motoring from here. Often I would like to have a good talk with some of the elders or Saints of the church. Should there be Saints passing this way, we would be pleased to have them come and visit us. There might be Saints living in this part of the country and having cars who, if they knew we were here, would come over to Massena. We are here and will welcome our brothers and sisters.

THOMAS HOLLAND.

MASSENA, NEW YORK, 7 Stearns Street, October 5.

"Remember Cumorah" at Brooklyn

Last Sunday, September 25, we produced the pageant, "Remember Cumorah" in our church, and it was a success. The building was filled to its capacity, and we had over fifty in the cast. Most all of the people in the audience were strangers, but friends of our members. To these we gave tracts, and we had some articles in the daily papers.

As a result of the pageant, we can see that there is going to be a greater interest in the study of the Book of Mormon. Many have stated that they are going to read the book again, and some are going to read it no never have read it. Also we started a class of women in their department, who are going to study the book again. So, in a general way, the pageant was a success and will do much good, we hope.

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK.

Independence

Stone Church

Yearldean Mae Bailey, infant daughter of Brother and Sister R. V. Bailey, was blessed by Bishops J. A. Becker and R. T. Cooper, preceding the commencement of the eleven o'clock morning preaching Sunday. "This is the day the Lord hath made," was sung by the congregation; prayer by Bishop Becker; organ offertory, "The coming of the Magi," by Robert Miller; an anthem rendered by the choir; a pleasing soprano solo, "I will lift up mine eyes," by Miss Margaret Johnson, accompanied on the piano by Robert Miller; and Bishop R. T. Cooper in charge of the service, announced the speaker, Elder J. M. Terry, to radio listeners and the congregation seated in the church.

"Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp. And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down."—2 Kings 6: 8, 9. This, the text chosen by Elder Terry, was also associated with a verse found in 1 Corinthians 10: 11: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

Applying these scriptures to modern Israel engaged in her heavenly calling, the speaker warned the Saints to avoid certain Syrian camps, the Camp of Lukewarmness, the Camp of Carnality, the Camp of Despondency, and the Camp of Do Nothing, "for thither the Syrians are come down," and in each case strong scriptural support was forthcoming. A sketch of how Elisha, representative of the wisdom, the understanding, and the Spirit of God, saved Israel from the invasion of the Syrian host, how God informed him of the Syrian position, that he might warn the people of Israel, and how God watched over his children, protecting them and confounding their enemies, was interestingly given.

If Israel of today would achieve her ambitions, if she would be zealous, earnest, sincere in her work, if she would use her talents to carry out the designs of God in establishing the land of Zion, in building up God's church on earth, she must avoid the camp of the Syrians, particularly the above-mentioned encampments. To go too near the camps of Lukewarmness, Carnality, Despondency, or Do Nothing means death to our hopes and aspirations, captivity of soul, and loss of happiness. Let the people of modern Israel remember, "All these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

One verse of the closing song, "How firm a foundation," seemed to be particularly appropriate, following Brother Terry's splendid sermon:

"Fear not, I am with thee: O be not dismayed;
For I am thy God, and will still give thee aid;
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand,
Upheld by my righteous, omnipotent hand."

The Saints were dismissed by Bishop Becker.

A program that was very interesting and worth while was had at the Campus Sunday morning. Elder James Strachan gave the talk. He took for his subject, "Fishing." The instruction given was much appreciated.

Recreation night, sponsored by the Religio, opened for the winter last Friday evening in charge of officers of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Superintendent Kress reports that though the crowd was not so large as it might have been, all ages were represented and had a good time. Young people, if you are seeking a place where you may enjoy clean, wholesome fun with your fellow church members, come to the Stone Church dining hall on Friday evenings.

The regular Sunday night Religio program last Sunday consisted of a well-executed piano solo by Anita May, a reading, "Hello," by Allegra Luff, and a saw solo by Brother Charles Dell, accompanied by Nida Vincent.

Preceding the beginning of the evening preaching service, Elder John F. Sheehy led the Saints in several songs, being accompanied at the organ by Robert Miller. This service was cut short by the administering of one of the church ordinances—the blessing of a babe. Brother and Sister Kenneth A. Trowbridge brought forward their tiny daughter, Barbara Kent, who received her blessing at the hands of her grandfather, Elder G. S. Trowbridge, and Pastor C. Ed. Miller.

According to announcement through the daily press, Pastor C. Ed. Miller addressed the large audience assembled for the evening, limiting his attention to a discussion of the form—the organization—of the church and its tremendous importance. "Form," he said, "is one of our 'talking points' just as the statement: 'The older this engine gets the better it works' is the 'talking point' for certain automobile salesmen." Christ said to one of his apostles: "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church."

"Christ builded the universe," the speaker continued; "then he undertook to build the organization of the church. The church of Jesus combines the human element and the divine. Its object is to make imperfect material—the human—perfect. The plan is perfect, but the tools are to be perfected. This church has a 'talking point': we say if we build we must build according to form. The earth was without form and void. Jesus Christ gave it form; he has given men and women form; he has organized and builded his church, giving it a form. This church contends for certain organized form in church architecture so far as the church is concerned with human beings."

"You may always stand by form, against force," he read from the pen of John Ruskin. "To a painter, the essential character of anything is the form of it, and the philosophers can not touch that. . . . Hold fast to the form, and defend that first, as distinguished from the mere transition of forces. . . . It is curious how far mere form will carry you ahead of the philosophers. . . ."

"Today we have form in church organization. When the people are faithful to that form, faithful to the teachings of the Master, the church is functioning properly, and nothing on this earth can take its place." His message was especially for the young people, and this was his counsel: "Young people, courageously stand for that form." The narrative of his encounter with "another rich young man," during one of his travels closed his discourse.

Elder W. A. Smith offered the invocation for this hour, after which Miss Thelma Vincent rendered a soprano solo, "I hear thy voice," being accompanied by Robert Miller.

Two reels of films were shown to the audience at the close of the evening.

Interesting Personals

Perhaps HERALD readers would be glad to hear of the whereabouts and the activities of the members of the higher church quorums at this time of year. President Frederick M. Smith, who last week was in Denver and other parts of Colorado, passed through Kansas City last Saturday en route to Washington, District of Columbia, where he expects to remain several days giving his attention to a number of business matters. From Washington his itinerary takes him to New York City, then brings him back to the State of Indiana. President Floyd M. McDowell, who some three weeks ago underwent an operation at the Independence Sanitarium, is at his home in Independence convalescing. He is anxious to be off to his various posts of duty.

Bishop Albert Carmichael spent the week-end in Lamoni. Apostles Curtis, Williams, and Edwards will at the close of this week, find themselves in Detroit, Michigan, attending a ministerial institute. Last Sunday Brother Garver began a three-week series of meetings at Saint Louis, Missouri. James A. Gillen and Myron A. McConley continued their efforts in the West, and Apostle Gleazer recently left Independence for the field in Colorado. Word comes from Brother Hanson, across the water, that he is in England, and Brothers Budd and Ellis have arrived in aristocratic old Boston to conduct a ministerial institute.

Laurel Club Bazaar

The annual bazaar of the Laurel Club will be given at the Stone Church dining hall on November 3 and 4. The purpose of the Laurels this year is to raise money with which to purchase kitchen and dining room equipment and furniture for the Auditorium Building. Last year many organizations and individuals from over the church helped in this annual bazaar, donating fancywork, provisions, etc. A general store will be conducted again this year, and most anything of value can be turned into cash to assist the Laurels in their great task. Canned and fresh fruits will be acceptable donations.

Chicken dinners will be served, and other refreshments dispensed during the two days, and good values will be given.

Liberty Street

Little Richard Williams sang a solo at the morning service, "We are little sunbeams," and Brother and Sister Earl Page rendered a vocal duet, "Carry me back to old Palmyra."

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker of the hour, selecting for his text Acts 2: 21-22: "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know." His earnest discourse reached the hearts of the Saints and aroused in their minds many things for meditation.

It is pleasing to see the growth of interest among the junior children. And it is no wonder they are interested. With the innovation of junior services in the church basement, which is rapidly being excavated, the children are coming to see and hear everything that is going on. For two Sundays have they met to themselves. A week ago Sunday, Brothers Glenn Davis and Ray Wrigley were in charge of the meeting; last Sunday Elder Walter E. Curtis and Brother Harry Blake presided. Already their room is large enough to accommodate about fifty children, and plans are to make it yet larger. Thirty-five were reported to have been present at their second meeting. Those who were in charge were encouraged at the interest manifested.

On Sunday evening the young married people's class came forward with its contribution to the Religio program; its members presented a short play, which was appreciated.

A violin solo, played by David Stewart, and a vocal solo by Sister E. C. Harrington were the two musical features of the evening preaching service. For speaker we were privileged to have Elder Richard J. Lambert.

Walnut Park

The morning prayer meeting Sunday was presided over by F. R. Schafer and William Haskins. One thought emphasized throughout was the wisdom of following the leadings of the Holy Spirit.

Sunday school attendance remains close to the three hundred mark—there being two hundred and ninety-two present Sunday. Eighty-three attended junior meeting.

The eleven o'clock speaker upstairs was Elder E. T. Atwell, who has studied the subject of the Book of Mormon thoroughly and gave us many external evidences of its divinity.

Before the close of the service, a babe was blessed by Elders Samuel Smith and W. T. Gard—little Oral Reed Guthrie, son of Brother and Sister Oral Guthrie.

The Religio numbered about one hundred more Sunday night than when it began two weeks ago, with even more in attendance after the count was made. Bishop B. J. Scott continues his class in stewardships, with Lyman Smith assistant teacher. They have begun the study of Problems of Industrial Zion, by J. A. Koehler, with a class of sixty-three. An extraordinary feature of the program was music by John Sopcich and his little daughter Rosie and son John, jr., who are Austrians and played on native instruments. This rare music, with Rosie's sweet voice in song, gave unusual pleasure. This family are strangers except to the program leader, Earl Cox, in whose band Mr. Sopcich plays. Next Sunday the program will be furnished by an orthophonic victrola and radio combined.

Elder W. H. Deam was the evening speaker on important characters in the Bible, adding to scriptural information from his wide reading of early history. At this service Sister Grace Edwards sang, "The Lord is my shepherd," accompanied by Mrs. A. C. Dobson.

Spring Branch

Another week of ideal weather stimulated goodly numbers to attend the various services. Increasing interest in the Wednesday night prayer service continues.

The choir met in their first rehearsal Thursday night with renewed enthusiasm for the season's work; the majority voted to continue class work under Sister French in addition to the regular choir practice.

New officers were elected for the Religio on Friday night. Brother L. E. Dalton was chosen president; Leonard Curtis, vice president; Victoria Stevens, secretary. Under this new corps of officers, the work ought to move forward.

The Sunday morning 8.15 prayer service was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. Ninety-six were reported at the Sunday school session, with several new faces in the congregation.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, again emphasizing the necessity of fuller compliance with the law if we are to be favored with a continuance of God's blessings.

Brother W. F. Smith offered the invocation to this service, followed by Hymn 110, Saints' Hymnal, and the anthem, "I will lift up mine eyes."

The choir again assisted in the evening service when the sermonet, "Dead flies and ointment," was presented by J. C. Mabbott. This service was greatly enhanced by the Liberty Street Male Quartet, which favored us with three numbers. The personnel of this quartet is Millard Pace, Clarence Pace, Fred Koehler, and Harry Blake; Sister Pace accompanied.

Don't forget the chicken dinner this Thursday night at the Stone Church dining hall.

Use Business Circular for Religious Lesson

I felt impressed to write to the HERALD, sending in something I read in a bulletin issued by the Sinclair Refining Company, Kansas City, Missouri, I paraphrased to suit my purpose:

"A church organization may spread itself over the whole world, and may have a hundred thousand members; but the average person will usually form his judgment of it through his contact with one individual.

"If this person is rude or inefficient, it will take a lot of kindness and efficiency to overcome the bad impression.

"Every member of the church who in any capacity comes in contact with the public is an example of the organization or church, and the impression he makes is an advertisement good or bad."

My hope and prayer is that I, with the Saints, may be able to set a righteous example.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The monthly stake ministry meeting was at 3 p. m., the bishopric, by F. B. Blair, explaining the financial statement for the nine months of the year, making simple the terms used, such as present worth, accounts receivable and payable, etc., and showing how the $160,141.69 had been received and disbursed. The cash on hand is $77.80. The statement made clear a sound increase over like previous periods. While not all have complied with the temporal law, there are more tithing payers than in previous years. Altogether a good record. Brother Blair emphasized the statement that the stewardship plan is to develop men.

Argentine

Elder Delbert Whiting, from Independence, was the speaker morning and evening, who in an earnest manner set forth his messages on the fulfillment of the promises of God. The men-folks prepared and served a chicken dinner with trimmings, to the church folks at the home of Brother Ralph Goold. Argentine certainly has some good men cooks. The affair was very much enjoyed. A Saturday bake sale netted the Women's Department a neat little sum.

Mount Washington

We have just returned from removing our booth from the Harvest Festival; it was with joy and gladness we built it a week ago. With just such a feeling do we hope to fill the storehouse of the Lord. We need Zion.

Just previous to our sacramental service Sunday morning, little Lee James Phillips entered the waters of baptism, smiling, and came out still smiling.

A baby, Lila Rose Phillips, a niece to Lee James, was blessed by Pastor R. L. Bishop, he also being speaker of the evening hour. It was surely a day of rejoicing with us. We are preparing for a series of meetings beginning October 9 to be conducted by Brother Wilfrid D. Tordoff. We will hold an attendance contest as a means of getting strangers to hear the gospel message.

We are proud of the way our young folks put on the pageant. They will repeat it Friday, October 7, for the benefit of Stark Acres Mission.

Births

Adra May Weir, January 15, 1927, 715 Cedar, Mount Washington, Missouri, daughter of Sister and Mr. John E. Weir. Blessed July 17, 1927, by Brother B. J. Scott at Mount Washington.

Lila Rose Phillips, August 17, 1927, to Sister Anna and Brother Albert Phillips, 8913 Independence Road, at the home of Sister Phillips's parents, Theo and Cora Gerber.

Armourdale

Sunday evening, September 18, Brother Edward Tucker was the speaker. His earlier experiences were related, especially his experiences in the Church of England, and the difficulties he met in his first religious efforts. An appreciative attitude toward our own religious liberties of the present time and of our organization was presented.

Thursday evening, the 22d, a wiener roast was held at City Park by the Young Men's Class of the Sunday school, as the monthly social event of the class, this being a class rule. The Young Ladies' Class was invited.

Sunday, September 25, was given over to Book of Mormon anniversary services.

An early morning prayer service was held, which extended to time for the Sunday school service. Great interest and enthusiasm were manifested.

The morning preaching service hour was used for short addresses by members of the priesthood and the Sunday school superintendent, upon the different phases of the Book of Mormon, the subjects being selected by the pastor.

The evening prayer service hour was used for a song service, with the exception of a short talk by Brother Richards.

The speaker of the evening service was Bishop Blair, who gave a very interesting and enlightening sermon, his subject being the Book of Mormon.

It was a very enjoyable day, possibly the best part coming at the end, when requests were made by four for baptism.

Graceland Chats

Enrollment

There are enrolled this year at Graceland 254 students from the following places:

Australia, Canada, Denmark, Alabama, California, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

Prayer Meeting; Dependableness

The Graceland prayer meetings are beginning to take a greater and greater place in the college life. Last Wednesday night there were 153 present, and thirty testimonies. The theme of "Dependableness" was presented by Brother James Thomas, and alumnus.

On the platform was an alumnus, a faculty member, and a student. There were testimonies from Canada to Texas, and from California to New Hampshire.

The theme is very fitting for all phases of life, but most of the testimonies were in terms of "remaining true to Graceland trust," as Graceland is the center of the students' interests.

Two Student Themes

What My College May Expect from Me

Several days ago I heard a fellow student say, "I wanted to go to a college closer home, but my parents wanted me to come here, and I finally yielded. Now, I'm glad I came." Why was he glad he came? Because he recognized the advantages and opportunities afforded him here which were lacking in other schools. Since my college offers me more than other schools, she has a right to expect more in return. She may expect me to do my best to keep up the standards which distinguish this school, so that others coming later will have the same opportunities which she now affords me.

She may expect my hearty cooperation in all her activities. If I am athletically inclined, she may expect me to use my ability in her games and track meets. She may expect me to use any talent I possess for the bettering of my college, to improve my talents by industrious application to my studies, and by my undivided attention to the work in the classroom.

My college has provided for me the best equipment she can afford; a good library, gymnasium, laboratories, and classroom equipment. She may expect me to cooperate by taking care of them.

I am expected to conform to all rules of the college, governing both school life and dormitory life. Such rules were made, not for the benefit of the college, but for my own benefit; so to disregard them would be folly.

One of the most valuable opportunities offered is participation in intersociety programs, both athletic and forensic.

Here we have a chance to put into practice what we learn in the classrooms. One of the writers of the Bible said, "Faith without works is dead"; so is knowledge without practice, entirely useless. Therefore my college may expect me to take an active part in the activities of my society.

If I try my best to do the things which my college expects of me, I shall be greatly repaid for my time and labor; if I do not, I shall pay dearly for what little education I do receive.

ELBERT HANNAH.

An Interview on the Subject of My Vocation

The maternal instinct, common to all women, often reaches beyond the barriers of family to the aid of those who, ill and stricken in different ways, need the help of an understanding hand and heart to steady them until they gain strength to go on alone. This is the work of the welfare worker.

Many young women have asked me about the qualifications necessary to enter the nursing field. Four years of high school are essential; and I strongly advocate two years of college training in the social sciences. The average girl just out of high school has not enough stability of character to stand the shocks she will receive upon looking into the raw wounds and festering spots of human life. It often takes several years for an unprepared girl to adjust herself to a normal conception of society again. A girl who feels she has been endowed with vital health, together with an elastic optimism and an exalted ideal of service, may safely prepare herself for this responsible work.

The training period covers from two and one half to three years, depending upon State requirements. During this period she will receive her lecture courses, room and board, also an insignificant monthly allowance. After graduation, many avenues of service will open to receive her. A State board examination is mandatory in most States, which, when successfully negotiated, will entitle her to inscribe the letters R N after her name. They mean only that she has technical knowledge. It is her privilege to garner her own experience. Private duty nursing will be discovered to be a most potent factor in gaining such experience. She will be repaid in self-development. Her social contacts will be many and varied. She will gain poise, tolerance, infinite patience, true sympathy; and the great depths of human nature will yield up their secrets to her. A year spent in such work will prove a treasure chest, yielding its richness to many whom she may meet in the coming years.

As society becomes more complex, its need for special workers becomes greater. The social service and welfare workers are rapidly gaining the confidence of the community. It trusts the guiding of its school children in habits of health, to their ministering hands. The young wife and mother alike look to them for sisterly advice, to learn the proper care of their young children, that they may rear them in radiant health, to be such men and women as shall make for rapid advancement in our striving toward social perfection.

NELL WELDON.

A Useful Clinic at Lamoni

I feel that you will be glad to know how happy we feel in our clinic work here in Lamoni. Our interest is good, and we have new members coming to us every week. I sometimes wonder if we have all the little people enrolled, and then another mother, whom I have never seen, will come in and ask to have her child enrolled. The talks Doctor Sixberry gives are highly educational, and I am sure the parents are deriving good from them. We invited a good dentist to lecture for us just before the school year began, and his lecture was effectual, for the parents responded well, and I think every child entering kindergarten was given dental attention.

Broadcasting Station Increases Schedule

In this week's listing of K M B C programs, several new features will be noticed. Perhaps foremost among these is the new daily farmers' noon hour, which consists of market reports, informative talks, including features supplied by the United States Department of Agriculture, and music. This hour is especially designed to be of service to people living out of the cities, following agricultural pursuits. Live stock markets are broadcast by remote control, direct from the live stock center of the Southwest, the Kansas City Stock Yards. Other features will be broadcast from the radio studio.

Beginning October 16, K M B C added a new Sunday schedule, broadcasting by remote control the services of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City. This organization will bear the expense of broadcasting its regular Sunday night features, which include very fine music and sermon by one of America's foremost ministers, Doctor R. H. Miller.

The station management expects to add many new features this winter, announcements concerning which will appear in the HERALD.

No Decision on Power Increase Hearing

At this writing (October 17) no news has been received that the commission has rendered a decision on the application for a permit to increase power, requested by K L D S and K M B C. It is unusual for so long a time to elapse between a hearing and a decision on it by the Federal Radio Commission. A telegram from Brother Franklin D. Jones, at Washington, advises that the commission expects to make a decision about the middle of this week. President Smith is now in Washington and will try to expedite matters in obtaining more favorable broadcasting conditions for the church station.

An unexpected amount of opposition was encountered at the hearing by stations in Milwaukee and Pittsburgh, which were represented by one of America's foremost radio attorneys. These stations protested an increase in power for K L D S on the grounds that such an increase would greatly decrease the range of their 500-watt stations, which have been assigned the same wave length given K L D S by the Federal Radio Commission.

The outlook for listeners at a distance from Independence is not at all pleasing, because of the commission's policy to assign a number of stations in different parts of the country to each frequency, or wave length. It is obvious that when K L D S is broadcasting, listeners in the districts of Milwaukee; Pittsburgh; Macon, Georgia; Galveston, Texas; and Corvallis, Oregon, will be unable to hear K L D S when their neighborhood stations are also on the air. For a few super-power stations the commission has practically cleared the air on the wave lengths assigned them, but these cases are rare.

The K L D S office is anxious to receive reports from listeners, giving reports on reception under present broadcasting conditions. In a few instances the reports received have indicated even better reception than on the old frequency of 680 kilocycles, corresponding to 441 meters. This matter is of great importance to the many thousands of people who have contributed to the building and maintenance of the church broadcasting station.

Redemption

By Walter Phillips

Justice and mercy in rival claim
 For the soul of fallen man did vie ;
 Justice in all fairness dealt
 Decree that mortal man should die,
 And in dying should to dust return
 And through oblivion's door
 His spirit pass;
 That man should be no more.

But mercy from that death decree,
 Despairing made appeal
 And with compassion prayed to God
 His grace He would reveal;
 From Heaven's throne God's grace did come
 And earthward wend her way,
 Justice to appease,
 The debt of sin to pay.

Then mercy triumphant in her cause
 Did claim man's fallen soul,
 Comfort that e'en though death
 From mortality take toll,
 A star of hope in Heaven burned
 And during man's probation,
 Upon gospel terms,
 He could win his own salvation.

From estate just lower than an angel's
 Man did fall in sin;
 If he had obeyed the law
 Such strife could not have been;
 Fellowship with God his lot
 And ere his natural force abated,
 In the twinkling of an eye
 To immortality translated.

Thanks to infinite grace and mercy
 And God's universal plan
 Both the spirit and the body
 Shall assemble; and then man,
 With substance more enduring,
 Come forth from the fall,
 Each attribute of God intact;
 While charity covereth all.

MISCELLANEOUS

Notice of Appointment

Notice is hereby given that, effective at once, Bishop E. L. Traver, 20 Winchester Road, Arlington, Massachusetts, will have charge of the work of the Department of the Bishopric in the Eastern and Western Maine Districts, which have heretofore been under the supervision of Bishop M. C. Fisher.

Bishop Fisher's work has been very much appreciated and he is only being relieved of this territory in order that he might have more time to devote to the remainder of the territory under his charge.

We bespeak of the Saints in the Eastern and Western Maine Districts, their fullest confidence and support for Bishop Traver.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.
THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

Elder W. W. Fordham having presented his resignation, we hereby appoint Elder L. E. Holmes, 1626 Fifth Street, Couer D'Alene, Idaho, as bishop's agent for the Spokane District, subject to the approval of the next district conference.

We take this means of publicly expressing our appreciation to Brother Fordham, who represented the church as the agent for the Spokane District for over twenty years. Brother Fordham was very careful in his work, responding readily to any request from the general office. His method in reporting displayed his keen interest in the work of the church.

We ask for Brother Holmes the hearty support of the membership of the Spokane District. The branch solicitors will please note Brother Holmes's address, and forward their reports to him not later than the 25th of each month.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By J. A. BECKER.

Approved by the First Presidency.

Satisfaction

It is one of the satisfactions of life to have investments that turn out right—that keep every dollar of principal safe and that pay a good income with un-failing regularity.

A church bond has back of it the moral integrity and good will of "a people" in addition to tangible resources of property and money.

Description of Bonds

- $25 Baby Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, payable annually.
- $50 Thrift Bond, 5 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $100 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $200 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.
- $1,000 Bond, 10 year, 5% interest, coupon bond, payable semi-annually.

The $100 bonds may be purchased by paying $10 down and $10 per month until the face value of the bond is paid. On $25 and $50 bonds any amount of $1 or more will be accepted as part payment. The church will allow 5% interest to the purchaser on such installment payments, when full payment of the bond is made. Installment payments will easily and quickly secure a church bond if you do not have the money to pay cash. Government bonds will be accepted at their market value in exchange for church bonds.

Are you interested in The Blue Bird Manual

This new edition of the manual of the Blue Bird Band, originally written by Estella Lentell and revised by Lenoir Woodstock, is a pretty booklet of sixty-four pages in blue paper cover, filled with good helps and interesting reading and instruction intended primarily for girls of pre-adolescent age, and particularly for those who would become or who are members of the Blue Bird Band. It contains:

How to Organize
Helps for Leaders
Program Suggestions
Conduct of Meetings
Ceremonies and Activities
Special Songs, Games, etc.

It justifies the title of Blue Bird Manual, and may be purchased through your branch publicity agent or direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, at the price of twenty-five cents.

Independence Sanitarium Approved

The Hospital Standardization Movement is now ten years of age. The Director-General of the American College of Surgeons, Doctor Franklin H. Martin, of Chicago, recently said of the movement: "Its growth has been phenomenal; from 89 hospitals meeting the requirements, or 12.9 per cent, in 1918, to 1,803 hospitals, or 69.9 per cent in 1927. This is due to the fact that the people of the United States, Canada, and other countries, where this movement is carried on, have been convinced of its worth, both from the humanitarian and economic aspects. Every community must accept the responsibility of providing adequate care for the sick and injured. The only way possible to do this in a proper manner is through the acceptance and carrying out of the principles of Hospital Standardization, as many of the hospitals in your community have done.

"Choosing your hospital when sick or injured is a most serious responsibility. This has been made easier in recent years through the publishing annually of the list of hospitals approved by the American College of Surgeons officially announced this morning. These approved hospitals stand for the right kind of care of the patient through the utilizing of the best means of diagnosis and treatment that modern scientific medicine can afford for the one out of every ten persons, or 12,000,000 who seek hospital care annually at a maintenance cost aggregating over $1,000,000,000. Results count most. These are evidenced by the lower average days' stay of patients in hospitals, the gradual falling of hospital death rates, the minimizing of complications, and the improving in results generally.

"I am sure it is a great satisfaction for the people to know that the patient in a standardized or approved hospital is better assured of a prompt and accurate diagnosis, more scientific treatment, and an earlier return to normal physical conditions if at all possible. This is what every patient is entitled to and is the responsibility of the hospital to carry out."

The American College of Surgeons gives this list of hospitals and sanitariums in the State of Missouri, and the friends of the Independence Sanitarium will be pleased to find this institution on the list as fully approved.

Mrs. Edison and Home Duties

A man whose name is constantly before the public, one of the best advertised men in the world, both because of his inventions and the publicity he gets through the press because of the "human interest" aspects of his life and work, is Thomas A. Edison. Not so much has been written about his wife, and perhaps few persons have any idea what for a person this good lady is. But one can not but know that she and her attitude and work are important factors, and have always been in the life and activities of her distinguished and famous husband. And so I found much interest in an article I recently saw in the press, reading it, as I recall, in one of the Denver papers.

I had wanted to cull out some points of the article, but it is all so interesting that I am here reproducing all the important parts of it, for even if our readers may have seen the article, to reread it will do no harm, and to meditate upon some points in Mrs. Edison's "domestic philosophy" will do a bit of good to almost any person.

Here is the article:

"Tommy!" shouted Mrs. Edison into the deaf ears of one of the greatest men in the world, "the crown prince is here." Tommy was in his working clothes. Tommy always is. On this especial day, when the Swedish royalty were coming to Llewellyn Park, Mrs. Edison had tried to get him to put on a fresh suit; but his reply had been the characteristic one: "What's the use? It would be dirty before they arrived." So there he sat at his desk in the laboratory, pencil in hand, scratch pad in front of him, old coat on his shoulders—and nothing about the crown prince or the crown princess remotely in the neighborhood of this extraordinary man, says Frederick L. Collins in the Delineator.

For a moment he gazed in bewilderment at his wife as if she were an extra logarithm which had wandered uninvited into his calculations. But as her affectionate hand began the daily, or, rather, hourly, task of brushing his coat sleeve and straightening out his collar, he seemed to realize her identity, and to acknowledge it with a smile.

By the time Gustavus Adolphus entered the room, Thomas A. Edison was the smilingly benign elderly man whose beaming face is known the world around. No one, not even Mr. Edison himself, knew that it was the poised, considerate, always watchful woman by his side who had pulled him into shape, who had brought him so successfully to the mark. . . .

Especially, Mrs. Edison has little use for the aristocracy of money. It is one of her choicest theories that too much emphasis is given to finances in what she calls the greatest business in the world, home making. She says that "a woman who determines that she really will build a home can make it beautiful on a small income, can make it luxurious without rare rugs and many servants."

Her own home in West Orange is an excellent example of her theory. When Mr. Edison bought it forty years ago, he told his friends that it was too good a place for him, but not half good enough for his wife.

"When we came here forty years ago," Mrs. Edison once said, "there were only gas lights. You had to go around with a taper and light each jet separately. Then there were no hardwood floors and rugs; we used carpets which had to be swept and taken up and cleaned. Bathtubs were painted and had to be scoured; while today they are porcelain and you wash them as easily as you wash a dish."

Mrs. Edison isn't altogether sure that these life savers are one hundred per cent beneficial to women. "No one wants to go back, of course," she admits, "but what a lot of the time saved from housekeeping is wasted playing bridge today! Of course there should be recreation, but it sometimes seems to me—I am old-fashioned—that some people want only to play bridge, dress, spend money, and run about seeking they know not what."

Mrs. Edison's duties as guide, philosopher, and nurse to this absent-minded genius do not stop with food and clothing. Nor do her duties as social secretary cease with the entertainment of itinerant kings and queens. She has the much more difficult problem of diverting her husband's attention to anything other than his work. She has studied his peculiarities and his tastes; and whenever either of them lead him away from the laboratory, she encourages and fosters them.

As one of the very many details which had to be given consideration in locating the Auditorium, the following letter from Brother W. O. Hands to the President of the church will be of interest to readers of the HERALD, and so we present it without comment:

BROTHER F. M. SMITH, INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Dear Brother Smith: It may interest you to know that a line drawn through the exact center of the Auditorium will produce straight through the exact center of the old Stone Church and will be a true north and south line.

The compass needle does not point true north. This year at Independence, Missouri, it points 6° 39' east of north. That means if you followed the needle one mile, you would be 607 feet east of the point you started from.

The north star is not stationary, but moves around the North Pole in a small ellipse.

I remember that you wanted the center line of the Auditorium to be a true north and south line, and Brother Henry C. Smith, the architect, wanted the center line of the Auditorium and the center line of the Stone Church to coincide. It seemed it would be impossible to satisfy both of you, but when the line was finally worked up it was found to produce through both buildings and to be a true north and south line.

Yours respectfully,

W. O. HANDS.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, October 10.

Lord's Prayer Again in Question

"Lead us not into temptation," a phrase of the Lord's prayer, as contained in King James Translation, has again been brought to notice, this time by an eminent scholar, William Lyon Phelps, who writes of it in September Scribner's, introducing opinions of other learned men, including Professor Charles C. Torrey, known as an accomplished student of Hebrew, Greek, and Early Church History.

"Suffer us not to be led into temptation," the version of the Lord's prayer declaration which appeals to Latter Day Saints because of its finer meaning, is found in the Inspired Translation. We commend this to our readers for consideration after reading the article of Mr. Phelps as republished in our department Of General Interest. This Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures would help out in many cases similar to the one under consideration, and we hope to see this book published in such attractive form in the near future that the world will want to consider it when making a study of Bible texts.

Book of Mormon Readers

During the past two months there has been a continual stream of letters pouring into the several offices of the church telling of numbers who are reading or have read very recently the Book of Mormon. From these letters and from conversations with many of the traveling ministers and workers, it seems likely that the reading and study of the Book of Mormon will be a common activity among the church membership for months to come.

This morning there were placed in my hands a bunch of these letters, and from them I have received several interesting bits of information, some of which I shall pass to you.

Elder David J. Williams, located in Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, writes inclosing the declarations of twenty-six in that city who are reading the Book of Mormon. One non-member is among the number.

William L. Goudy writes that those signing pledges to read the Book of Mormon by January 1 do not include all who are reading the book at New Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Some do not desire to sign the pledge card but are reading or studying the book.

W. I. Cochran, of Central Chicago Branch, sends in names of a number of his flock who are willing to read and are reading or rereading the book.

Earl F. Hoisington writes from Boise, Idaho, inclosing forty signed pledges to read or reread the book, and in the course of his letter expresses the sentiment: "We followed out the suggested program for the Book of Mormon centennial anniversary beginning with the sunrise prayer service. There was a splendid spirit enjoyed throughout all of the day's services and the largest attendance we have had at any service for over a year. I believe that such anniversary services are a splendid thing. We ought to have more of them. And I surely believe that the effects of this church-wide Book of Mormon reading movement will be far reaching and no doubt will be the means of making many converts to the church as it did in the early days of the church. I also believe that it will benefit the church in many ways. I can begin to see a renewal of interest in the affairs of the church among some of our members, and I think it will also increase our tithing from some of them. May the spirit of Cumorah ring down through the ages till every heart and soul is born anew."

John W. Blair, San Bernardino, California, says that numbers of the Saints of this western city are reading and going to at once read the book.

Here is part of a card from Louise Rees, Stevensville, Montana: "I have joined the Book of Mormon Reading Club. I have studied this book for many years, but this present reading is giving me a clearer insight into its mission than I have had hitherto. Also a feeling of peace and joy accompany the reading. Thank God for the wonderful latter-day work! My prayers are for its success."

W. C. Stauty writes from Minnesota: "Inclosed find a number of pledges for the reading of the Book of Mormon. We believe that the reading and rereading will result in a greater unity among the people of God because of the great knowledge it contains of God's plan of salvation, the clearness of understanding of the gospel ordinances, and of the unchangeability of God. His desire to deal with one nation as another. It indeed is the fullness of the gospel, and coupled with the Inspired Translation and Doctrine and Covenants should grace the home of all Latter Day Saints, not as an ornament, but as a useful study to learn to live, not for self but for God, by helping and living for our fellow men."

Sister Charles Axtell, Opheim, Montana, writes a widely distributed sentiment as to her experience in rereading: "Since there is no branch here, I am sending this direct to the First Presidency, that I may be counted as one who is rereading the Book of Mormon. I find it wonderfully interesting and

"He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country—and he called his ten servants and said unto them, much easier to understand than at the first reading some years ago."

From John Blackmore, a missionary located at Cameron, Missouri, in Far West Stake, comes a bundle of fifty-three "Remember Cumorah" slips. He reports that almost the entire adult membership of Cameron Branch is reading and rereading the book, and says: "Last Sunday evening the pageant, 'Remember Cumorah,' was presented to a crowded church, the whole of the service being a decided success."

R. A. McDole writes from Sagle, Idaho: "This idea of Bishop Fry's is certainly a good one, and I am happy to see the church capitalize it. Hardly anyone with whom I have talked has manifested any hesitancy, other than a doubt if they could find time to complete the reading in specified time. Some are going to make the effort, but would rather not sign the card."

Will R. Adams, Logan, Iowa, includes this in his report of those who are reading the book: "We are finding quite an interest among the membership to want to reread the book. We are planning to organize a group this fall and winter to meet at the homes and read it together."

H. W. Burwell, of Louisville, Kentucky, includes these details and sentiments in his short letter: "I am inclosing thirty-one pledge cards which have been signed by Louisville Saints. Out of a congregation of thirty, there were twenty-four signed last Sunday morning when they were distributed. We hope to get a pledge card in the hands of all Saints located here. We hope renewed activity in reading the Book of Mormon will be rewarded with a better understanding of the possibilities of our people by the use of the material placed in our hands."

Bernard Case writes from the Indian Mission near his home at Decatur, Nebraska: "Inclosed find slips signed at Indian Mission to read the Book of Mormon. I believe all will do their best to fulfill. We teach the Book of Mormon considerably at the mission among the Indians."

Mary F. Rydall, Wiarton, Ontario, writes an interesting letter from which we quote: "When Brother Fry's invitation was given to read the Book of Mormon, it appealed strongly to me. I have never read it through, though I have read a good deal of it. Now I am more than half through and have certainly been blessed in the reading, and do feel thankful that Brother Fry sent out the call. It is surely inspiring to see how the church generally responds to any call, and to you it must be so, after all the trials and discouragements you have been called on to endure. Surely the people are awakening."

Death of Orville L. James

Saints throughout the church are acquainted with Brother and Sister Orville L. James, who maintain a home at 809 West Waldo, Independence, Missouri, but have lived of recent years at Claremore, Oklahoma, where they conduct a hotel.

Sister James and her son have been in Europe this summer, but recently returned to the United States. Brother James left Claremore, Oklahoma, last week, for Saint Louis, Missouri, driving his automobile, to meet his returning loved ones. Near Rolla, Missouri, southeast of Jefferson City, on Wednesday, October 19, his car struck loose gravel, skidded, and overturned, and Brother James was severely injured, never regaining consciousness, and passing beyond Sunday evening at the hospital at Rolla to which he had been removed after the accident.

October 25 his body was received at Independence, and on October 26, at 2.30, the funeral will be conducted from the home on West Waldo.

On another page of this number of the HERALD will be found a short account of the active lives of Brother and Sister James which was written originally some months since for Autumn Leaves, but by courtesy of its editors is appearing in our pages.

The enduring and active interest evidenced by Brother James for the work and advancement of the church, and his ability to contribute to its progress, makes his loss keenly felt by a large number.

Added to Graphic Arts Bureau

An old photograph of President Joseph Smith, formerly owned by Mrs. Margaret P. Campbell, of Centerville, Iowa, has been given by her to the Graphic Arts Bureau, where it will become a part of the pictorial history of that beloved man and prophet of God. The church owes gratitude to these people who generously contribute from their personal store that the archives may become possessed of complete series.

Mr. R. M. Streeter, of Independence, has presented to the church a copy of Times and Seasons, volume 6, 1845. In this volume we notice an account of the first meeting in the Nauvoo Temple. The temple certainly was not completed from the account given, as this statement is to be found on page 1017:

A Temple, entirely enclosed, windows in, with temporary floors, pulpits, and seats to accommodate so many persons preparatory to a general conference; . . .

President Young opened the services of the day in a dedicatory prayer, presenting the Temple, thus far completed, as a monument of the Saints' liberality, fidelity, and faith. . . .

Some ten or more years have passed since Patriarch Isaac N. White visited Liberty, Missouri, and true to his leanings, was visiting places in the town which were of historical interest to the church of his choice. He found the steel bar which locked the door to the old jail at Liberty, the place where Joseph Smith and several officials of the church were confined in 1838, awaiting trial on charges which had grown out of the old Missouri troubles. It was during this particular chapter of the mob troubles that General Alexander W. Doniphan befriended the church officials in such an eminently just and courageous manner as to call for admiration both of Saint and mob member.

Of course Brother White wanted that steel bar, which was one half inch thick, two inches wide, and twenty-eight inches in length—what a valuable article this would be! He set about obtaining permission to remove the bar, obtained it, and it remained in his possession for several years, until he passed on to his eternal reward. Since his death this article has been in possession of Sister White, his widow, who recently gave it into possession of the church. A museum is being gathered at the Library Building, at the corner of Lexington Street and River Boulevard, and it becomes a part of this collection.

Saloonless and Stainless

By Odillon B. Slane

A saloonless nation and a stainless flag,
This our motto today;
A march that is forward and does not lag,
We watch and work and pray.
A stainless flag—a saloonless nation,
A land whose sons are free,
"Lead us not into temptation,"
Is the prayer that ought to be.

A saloonless nation and a stainless flag,
This is our hope today,
Echo the slogan from valley to crag,
Nor slack nor stop nor stay;
The saloon and flag have no relation,
So may it ever be,
Spirit, lead on through all duration,
Pray that the blind may see.

A saloonless nation and a stainless flag,
A cry of the heart today,
Our spangled banner is not a rag,
Its colors were born to stay.
A stainless flag—a saloonless nation,
A glory in every star,
Rising high in the world's gradation,
A power that none can bar.

In Memory of Wayne B. Wheeler.

Their Hearts Are in Zion

Orville L. James, Mary E. James, mother of Orville

The Robinson family came to Independence, Missouri, in the fall of 1887, as Elder John Robinson used to say, literally "carried on the shoulders of the Philistines." His business firm transported him, with all his household, from Peoria, Illinois, to Kansas City, where they were opening a branch establishment. The boom was at its height in Kansas City, and there were no available houses, so the family located in Independence.

The James family had preceded the Robinsons, coming to Independence from Pittsfield, Illinois, about three years before. And in time Belle Robinson and Orville James became acquainted, friends, very good friends. She tells the story herself.

"During my second winter there, I met Orville—rosy-cheeked and handsome—and after a courtship that extended over more than five years, we married. Two or three times during those years I was almost persuaded to marry men outside the church, but the Lord was good to me and helped me make the decision that has been a blessing to me and mine all my life."

Independence at that time was not the prosperous city of churchly condition that we see today. The little brick church east of town was the place of worship, and among her first memories Mrs. James holds one of a slender, blond boy playing the organ for the choir—Arthur Mills, then a boy of sixteen or seventeen years. Since she was musically inclined, the choir had great attraction for Belle Robinson.

During all the years between that time and when the James family left Independence in 1903, they were closely connected with the choir and other musical work. The first leaders were F. W. Barbee and H. R. Mills. Later it was either Mr. or Mrs. James, each serving as chorister for a period of six years during the last twelve years of their residence in Independence. At the same time, either one or the other was chorister of the Sunday school.

The laying of the corner stone of the Stone Church in the spring of 1888 was an auspicious occasion in which the choir took a prominent part. And now the great work before the musicians and the choir was to secure funds for a pipe organ for the new church. The idea was first fostered in the Hawthorn Society, a women's organization for that particular purpose. Belle Robinson was among the foremost of those who worked tirelessly for years toward the realization of their dream. She took subscription lists to her friends in the city, not members of the church, and to Independence business firms. Finally, all pulling together, the fine old organ was purchased and installed in the loft of the Stone Church.

The irony of fate was that after all the years of endeavor, Mr. and Mrs. James had little opportunity to enjoy the fruits of their labor. They were present to hear the dedication concert and for a Sunday or two following; then they moved away from Independence to Oklahoma. Their enjoyment of the long-worked-for organ must be only in knowing that they had worked in a worthy cause and that others would be privileged to enjoy the results.

Belle Robinson James also served the church in another and important channel during these earlier years. In 1890 at General Conference in Lamoni, President Smith asked her to report the conference speeches and business sessions. At that time the church boasted of two very fine court reporters—Daniel Lambert and Colonel Sellon. Mr. Lambert was not strong, was editing a paper, and did not have time or strength to add to his duties. Colonel Sellon was busy reporting various courts, and, although he reported a sermon occasionally, could give but little time to the church work in that line. Mrs. James became the conference reporter and stenographer, and continued in that position for about twenty years.

Some of the conference sessions were stormy, and she says, "I can recall several where I quaked with terror when asked to reread what some one had said in his speech. The scramble to find the exact words amidst that labyrinth of notes was nerve racking!" True to the nature which she was always known to display, however, she was glad to fill a place for which no one else seemed ready at the time. She has the remarkable record of having been in attendance at all except four of the General Conferences of the last forty years.

Mrs. James reported the first sermon published in Zion's Ensign—one by W. T. Bozarth, and of which she says, "He had to do considerable editing to get in all the fine points. He was very rapid, and sometimes I wouldn't have all of one point finished before he had started on another. Thus, I sometimes left the other one out—but there was lots of hard work connected with this reporting business!"

Among her finest experiences in reporting, Mrs. James counts her work in aiding the patriarchs of the church. She reported blessings for Patriarchs Alexander H. Smith, Fred A. Smith, Henry Kemp, Joseph R. Lambert, John H. Lake, Charles Derry, C. A. Butterworth, Richard Baldwin, and I. N. White.

The James family, speaking now of the second generation, made the first trip to Oklahoma in 1903, and since that time have "commuted, as it were," between Oklahoma, Kansas City, and Independence, with the exception of a residence of four years in Emporia, Kansas. And it was in Emporia that Belle Robinson James, now mother of a family of her own, secured her college degree—bachelor of science in music!

They had bought a hotel in Emporia, then a city of 12,000. The son, Orville Thomas, was beginning high school; and the daughter, Pauline, was enrolling in her first year of college. "Coming there from Tulsa and Kansas City, I was lonely and somewhat dissatisfied," said Mrs. James in speaking of the events of those years. But here loneliness and dissatisfaction soon disappeared.

She had been studying French in night school at Kansas City and Tulsa, and since no private tutors were available in Emporia, Pauline suggested that her mother join a French class at the college. Mrs. James demurred at first, thinking "my gray hairs too numerous and my years too many to associate with college boys and girls." But the class received her with such a cordial welcome that she was soon a regularly enrolled member. The following semester she enrolled for harmony and sight singing in addition to the French. She added more and more work as she progressed, and received her degree after three years and four months, during which time she attended one summer school session, taking extra hours during several semesters in order to finish.

"I had the splendid cooperation of my husband all this time," says Mrs. James, "and the last two years of my school work found me on the campus every morning for eight o'clock classes. It was a great experience—the association of the young people was one of the greatest pleasures I ever had, and I feel that I can never become old and crochety in thought, for I seem to get their viewpoint and their angle on most questions. I love to work with young people."

The James family is now living at Claremore, Oklahoma, where they are proprietors of the Sequoyah Hotel. They have a home place in Independence, however, and whenever possible they return there to open their house and enjoy the association among people who are very dear to them.

Mr. James has a tenor voice which has been used in our church and in community work wherever he has lived. He is still singing, and is song leader of the Claremore Rotary Club. Pauline was married last summer to Mr. S. S. Arnson, and now resides in Saint Louis, Missouri. She has spent most of her time at home, studying voice, teaching school, besides spending one year of study in Paris. Orville Thomas has had two years of college at Emporia and Kansas University, and is now learning the hotel business with his father as a teacher. He is also a singer, and plays wind instruments well.

Mr. James's mother is still living, is seventy-seven years of age, and in very good health for her years. Mr. James's father died in 1903. Mrs. James's parents have both passed on, her father, John A. Robinson, in 1902; her mother in 1921.

Other family names which are recalled as pioneers who worked and sacrificed that the name Latter Day Saint should be respected and honored in Independence contemporaneous with those of James and Robinson, are: Barbee, Murphy, Mills, Pitt, Warnky, Williamson, White, Harrington, Luff, Clow, Crick, Parker, Bushnell, Benjamin Smith, Bishop Cox, Chatburn, Brackenbury, Kennedy, and perhaps others—stalwart, faithful, earnest, loyal Latter Day Saints. All honor to them!

Summer Worship

I worship the God of the grasses,
Of quivering elms and the sea,
And every stray breeze that passes
Is laden with wisdom for me.
I find Him in sky-topping mountains,
In deep, shaded valleys of fern;
He sings in the crystalline fountains
And broods as the autumn fires burn.

How vainly they seek for His glory
In creeds that are musty with age!
Why will they not welcome His story
On Nature's all-scintillant page?
I worship the God of the grasses,
The Lord of the dawn-tinted skies,
And every stray breeze that passes
Brings news of some near paradise.

College Day Is Sunday

October 30, next Sunday, is "College Day," and means much to the young people of the church and to the church school.

It is quite important that funds should be gathered upon this day set apart by action of the General Conferences of the church for the purpose of advancing the interests of its educational institution, Graceland College. The church has said that funds shall be gathered on that day for the support of the college, and by agreement the resulting moneys are placed in a fund to finance young men and women who need help in order to gain the coveted training.

While this is desirable and to be encouraged, surely there is another phase of the work of College Day which can not be gauged by the amount of money raised. That phase is the contemplation of the work of the church along educational lines, which would include a searching look into the purpose and efficiency of our college.

From the beginning it has been the purpose of the church to give its young the most natural and hence the truest conception of life and its demands upon the individual who would be useful to the group. In this purpose the church has succeeded: witness the large percentage of the official family and missionary force which now is accomplishing the work of the church. Because of their mental and spiritual equipment the lot falls more and more upon the Graceland product.

In efficiency we can gauge success somewhat by the fact that Graceland students are welcomed by other institutions of advanced learning, which institutions have sought after our young men and women and have given them unusual preferment.

It is gratifying to find that some parts of the church are already sending in their contributions, not waiting for College Day, thus showing the deep interest they have in Graceland College and the institutions and young of the church. Thayer Branch in the Southern Missouri District is keeping up its good record, being the first branch to report its quota raised.

Those who have been Graceland students in former years are conducting a considerable percentage of College Day activities in 1927, and we wish them the utmost success.

I saw an interesting article in the daily press recently on the uses of tea, coffee, and cocoa, by Doctor Reed, formerly president of the American Medical Association, in which he made the statement that a cup of ordinary boiled or percolated coffee contains about two grains of caffeine, which, he states, is the ordinary prescription dose of caffeine.

Just What Is Correct Interpretation?

"Lead us not into temptation." This phrase, which is repeated every day by millions of people, is not clear. What does it mean?

Professor Charles C. Torrey, a three-dimensional scholar (Hebrew, Greek, Early Church History), once furnished me with a possible explanation, though conjectural. "I don't believe, myself, that the original (Aramaic) meant what our literal Greek means. There is another passage, Matthew 26:41 (and Mark 14:38, Luke 22:46), which I think should be taken in connection with the words in the Lord's prayer. 'Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation' is too general, too weak, for the situation; as more than one commentator has remarked, though no one has suggested any other meaning of the words (no other is possible in the Greek). I think that the original was: 'Awake, and pray not to be overcome in the trial [which is at hand],' i.e., pray for strength to stand against the coming test—which, in fact, proved too much for them. In the Lord's prayer we certainly have the same verb, in the causative stem; meaning (as I think) 'Let us not be overcome by temptation.'"

I have been working on the sentence in the Lord's prayer, "And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil," in the attempt to get satisfactory meaning out of it. I write to ask if the following seems convincing to you:

"'Lead us not into temptation' may mean either, 'Let us not be tempted,' or 'Let us not be overcome by temptation.'" I am in favor of the latter interpretation, because Christ in Matthew 26:41, says, "Watch and pray that you enter not into [that is to say, that ye do not act upon] temptation," and in Luke 22:32, says, "I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not." In both cases there is no thought at all that temptation may be withheld. The attitude is that it will come as certainly as rain will come, only when it does, may one be prepared to thwart or shed it.

An analysis of the sentence would make it seem sensible to substitute an "and" for "but" (leaving out the first "and," capitalizing "I" in "lead"), thereby making the two petitions distinct. For they should be distinct. People may be in two conditions. One is when they have an opportunity to avoid or commit sin; the other is when they have already sinned. What I think Jesus wanted was to have people feel that in whichever state they happened to be, there was a special and pertinent utterance for them in the prayer.

I asked Professor Torrey to comment on this letter:

I agree with this man's interpretation, as you know, but am unable to demonstrate its correctness,

It can not possibly be obtained from the Greek, the reading of which is perfectly certain, both in the Lord's prayer and in Matthew 26:41. The Greek means exactly what is expressed in our English version; and there never was any other Greek reading. So also Luke 11:4.

But both Matthew and Luke were translated from the Aramaic language, and there is some ground for thinking that the verb in the original may have permitted not only the rendering found in our Greek but also the one suggested by your correspondent, "be overcome." This, however, is mere conjecture, based on slender evidence.

I can not see that "and" is an improvement over "but." Either one makes good sense, to be sure, and the second clause can be understood in more than one way.

In Browning's poem, "The ring and the book," the old Pope makes a fine allusion to this difficult phrase, which drew from Stevenson this comment:

"It is lawful to pray that we be not led into temptation; but not lawful to skulk from these that come to us. The noblest passage in one of the noblest books of the century is where the old Pope glories in the partial fall and but imperfect triumph of the younger hero."—William Lyon Phelps, in "As I like it," Scribner's, September, 1927.

A Nation's Menace—Her Children

BY WILLIAM MATTHEW HOLDERBY, The Dearborn Independent
October 8, 1927

Thirty-one million five hundred thousand children—30 per cent of the population of the United States—are under fourteen years of age.

The child population of the United States is greater than the entire population of the twenty-one States west of the Mississippi, including Wisconsin. The total population of the United States in 1860 was only 31,400,000. We have enough boys and girls of nineteen years and under to replace the entire population of France; enough under fourteen to repopulate Canada almost four times.

The State of Kansas could be repopulated every five years by the boys and girls of America who die before reaching the age of ten years. And Kansas has a population of 1,769,000.

From these 31,500,000 boys and girls will come tomorrow's presidents, legislators, judges, authors, artists, musicians, teachers, inventors, fathers, and mothers. They are the hope of America; commingling of the world's civilization, they are the hope of the world.

Where are these boys and girls today? And how are they preparing for tomorrow's tasks?

Our public school system aims to make the child intelligent—but it does not teach righteousness as such. Religion has little or no place in our public schools; the result is that we are raising our young people to lead lives of spiritual illiteracy.

The various Christian denominations are endeavoring to curb this illiteracy through the Sunday school and young people's organizations, but the results have been far from satisfactory.

More than 27,000,000 children and youth, under twenty-five years of age, are not enrolled in Sunday schools and receive no systematic religious training.

Protestant denominations are not alone in this neglect. Catholics also complain of the spiritual ignorance of their youth; New York City Jews complain that three fourths of their children of school age—206,000 in all—do not attend religious schools.

This survey of national condition confronts us with circumstances appalling in their dimensions of possible dissolution of our Government if this generation of childhood is not conserved religiously and politically. No man needs to be counted an alarmist who frankly faces the facts and truthfully reveals them to the people.

Two expressions of religious life nationally have been the means of securing for us and securing to us our national liberties. These institutions are the Christian Sabbath and family worship. The breakdown of these two expressions of religious life in our Nation, within the past decades, confronts our national life in its political phases, with the certainty of suffering inevitable disintegration. So serious are the conditions of total disregard for constituted authority now developing in all the social areas of America's population that, unless something is accomplished within the next five years to reestablish in the national consciousness a responsibility toward the things of righteousness and godliness, America must pay the price of veritable anarchy that shall be forced upon her by what may be expected in a complete social breakdown.

Water wastes itself when it flows on in a stream, but when a dam blocks it, power is developed. Today tremendous energy is being wasted in a stream of social effort, on behalf of youth, because it is not working against the barrier of an idea. What is needed today is an idea with the efficiency of a scientific accuracy that would get results for all the time, energy, and means now being wasted on impractical methods of social service. The greatest single error in modern life is the development of the individual as the unit of society. This is most seriously represented by the conceited attitude of present-day youth, fostered by types of educators playing for popularity.

The Marxian philosophy in its development within the half-century has displaced the ideal of the family as the pivotal point about which revolves the organization of industrial, religious, political, and social expressions in life. The vogue of criticism of excesses and indulgences of the children of our present age, however, will need more than resentment on the part of a passing generation of adult minds, if conditions are recovered that will produce decency as in former social relations. We are now doing no more than treating the sores with either salves or caustics rather than eliminating the cause of our social splotches and open pus pockets of moral decay.

America is surfeited with community movements and public welfare organizations. The plea for support of these efforts is almost bedlam. Can not some one in the midst of the din and confusion see the futility of them? What these misdirected social efforts have done is to destroy the family in America's life. According to sex and age, father, mother, son, and daughter have been separated into groups, and the social expert has been given the responsibility to progressively develop these into the social units that will represent our eventual achievements for a mass society. The benefits of any discipline as exerted by such directors of youth groups seem to last only while the supervision lasts. This won't work. No such conditions of juvenile delinquency ever existed in American life as that discovered today. Not until the American family is reconstituted and father and mother are again placed as the social experts at the point of original responsibility, as God intended them to be, dare we hope for a better generation.

The contribution of a high order of organized family life is expressed toward the three divisions of a social, religious, and national responsibility. These are represented in the three institutions of home, church, and nation. These institutions are themselves creations of the family and in turn are the protectors and defenders of the family life. It is evident that only as the family is of a high standard of living and representative of the solidarity that this group demands will these institutions be strong to serve the community life of groups of families. The family must be preserved intact if these institutions are to live, and anything that strikes at the preeminent position of the family and the official position of father and mother strikes at the heart of home and church and nation, for neither individualism nor socialism can establish them or preserve them.

When the Pilgrims gathered in the cabin of the Mayflower and devotedly committed themselves to God for his service, they covenanted with each other and signed a compact. A reading of this document discloses the first stipulation to be that when they reached the shore each man should build himself a house. Thus we are somewhat justified in maintaining that the home is the foundation of our other institutions, both of religious and political life, in that it has been the forerunner of them.

The staggering thing is that the task is so large. Using wrong methods of social effort, such as the idea of the individual for the primary unit of society or the mass idea of socialism, we accomplish very little. The failure of present-day methods is as if we were trying to work from the outside in, rather than from the inside out. It is not practical to build the wheel by putting the felloe inside the tire, then placing the spokes in the felloe and trying to insert the hub as the last operation. The order must be reversed. First, the hub, then the spokes, then the felloe, then the tire. If the vitalizing idea of the family is put first, out of it will flow results so much larger than anything of present achievement that we shall find the later achievements somewhat commensurate with the task that now faces us. The place to begin the expression of individual life is in the family circle, in the home environs with parents' precept and children's practice.

Within less than seven years, many of this generation of American youth now less than fourteen years of age will have reached the position of citizenship. Womanhood will have equal suffrage with manhood. What will it mean if in that day when expressing the sovereignty of American citizenship which is to cast the ballot, they have no respect for God, nor appreciation of the significance of the Stars and Stripes? The menace we face is that one generation can destroy a nation. No non-Christian nation has ever preserved its civil liberties.

The importance of Christian unity is obvious when one realizes that Christ prayed for it in order that the world might believe that he came from God. Whoever encourages or tolerates any sectarianism or authority other than that of Christ (whether of man or of organization) helps deny an answer to the prayer of Jesus. Such a person is an enemy of the faith and a hindrance to the conversion of the world.—Frederick E. Gielow.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Red Letter Day at Coldwater, Michigan

Concerning the splendid effort of Coldwater Branch to stage a get-together service, the Coldwater Daily Reporter of October 18 carries the following:

"Activities at the Saints' church Sunday, October 16 were occasioned by the annual home-coming and all-day service as preannounced in the Reporter. The early session of Sunday school reported 86 visitors, and the attendance increased during the day until the noon hour registered 150 people who dined at tables in the basement of the church. Three sermons were preached during the day by Reverends Scott and Harrington. Music was a conspicuous feature, and anthems, choruses, duets, and solos were rendered at every service. Members were present from Bryan, Ohio; Fort Wayne, Kendallville, Elkhart, Angola, Fremont, Clear Lake, Salem Center, Indiana; Dowagiac, Three Rivers, Battle Creek, Marshall, Lansing, Jackson, Hudson, Detroit, and Quincy, Michigan. It was an enjoyable gathering."

But the experiences of such meetings in the southern part of the district the past season can not be realized fully from cold type. The spirit of light, good will, and fellowship was with all from beginning to end, and something was doing every minute. The robustness of faith and earnestness of endeavor was eminently manifest in Zion's ideals.

The sermons enchain the interest and rapt attention of the listeners, while the music in its adaptability was characteristic in all renditions, vocal and instrumental. Coldwater is out to excel when it comes to public functions. Its talents and reputation are not discounted. May such continue to be perpetuated. Brother Harold Scott, whose voice has been heard over W R E O the past season, was present and rendered a solo, "I have made my heart a temple." This was greatly appreciated. The Three Rivers duet was charmingly rendered, Sisters Fish and Galigher surpassing former efforts.

The dinner was a fine assemblage of viands, satisfying to the appetites of daintiest epicures. Being cooperative, the credit for such a menu must be given to all, and we can not give enough, for it involved some sacrifice.

The morning sermon was by S. W. L. Scott, and was an exegesis of "The great day of the Lord, and there is none like it," based on Jeremiah 30: 5-8. The "voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace," is the latter-day work which for a hundred years has proclaimed, contrary to the universal sentiment of the age, that this is the "end of the world" and "the hour of God's judgment" made manifest by the angel's message. The kingdom of God appeared upon the world's stage two thousand years ago, as a "voice in the wilderness," exhorting the people to "bring forth the fruits of reformation" and warning them to "flee from the wrath to come." Read Matthew 8. This work of 1830 is a "voice of fear and trembling," that the time soon cometh "that peace shall be taken from the earth." This "voice" is from heaven, saying, "Come out of her, my people," and escape the plagues. See Revelation. It comes from heaven at the "time of Jacob's trouble." Since August 1, 1914, we have lived in a world made strange and terrible by the conflict of many powers, mighty and spectacular. World events have been crowding so swiftly that they are like vanishing and unrealized dreams. Dynasties have fallen while we watched; governments have been raised up and thrown down; millions of men, women, and children have been enslaved in one place, while other millions have been emancipated elsewhere; age-old customs, creeds, and traditions have shriveled in the fire of new conditions, and the relationships of mankind have undergone radical and basic changes. "Distress of nations with perplexity," as predicted by Christ, and all things being in "commotion," seem to be the raging ocean in which now the great world swims. Turkey, so distressed, with "hands" on her national "loins," opens her door and admits the chief of the "three unclean spirits" and enshrines it as her state religion. What next?

The afternoon sermon by District President George Harrington stressed the relationship between God and man. His text was, "Great is the mystery of godliness." While man is in the image of God, the gospel which redeems from the fall imposes a new relationship, involving new obligations, even those which reveal God and "everlasting righteousness," for "this is eternal life, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ." While we all live the natural life through the laws of nature, we do not possess the "life more abundant" without the new relationship, with its obligations, imposed through the mission and the emancipatory message of "God manifest in the flesh." Brother Harrington rendered a solo, assisted by Sister Martel Ellis, pianist. Some of the Saints from a distance carried over for evening service, and an old-fashioned sermon was delivered on the topics: "The church; her origin; her constitution; its ratification, and confirmation." Some nonmembers were in the audience.

Administrations were performed during the day. Thus the event passes to be long remembered. A day fully devoted to God's service, and its good fruits can be seen "from afar."

Des Moines, Iowa

October 16.—On Sunday, October 2, we had Sunday school promotion exercises. This was in the beginner, primary, junior, and intermediate departments. These departments are in charge of Sisters Carpenter, Howard, Charters, and Cook, respectively.

Sacramental service followed, with a good spiritual influence throughout.

The Religio program was also uplifting and educational. Piano solo by Lucie Langdon; vocal solo, Ardith Kirkwood; reading, Delma Jordan; piano solo, Vivian Castings; vocal duet, Gladys Barr and Eva Cook.

The evening service was the beginning of a series of special services conducted by Apostle F. Henry Edwards. The meetings have been very well attended, and the Spirit of God has permeated the messages every night.

On Sunday, October 9, Brother Edwards was in charge of the morning service. Sister Verba Parker ably rendered the vocal solo, "Open the gates of the temple." She was accompanied by a violin obligato played by Vern Deskin. Following this, Brother O. L. D'Arcy, of Canada, was the speaker of the hour, his subject being, "Character building." Brother D'Arcy certainly did justice to the subject, and the young people especially were helped.

Again at the Religio a splendid program was given. Reading by Gladys Barr; piano solo by Thelma Clark; vocal duet by the little sisters, Elizabeth and Clara Mayers; with a short address on "Christian living" by Brother Berwyn Lungwitz.

At the night service, Apostle Edwards took for his topic, "The nineteenth century prophet." The church was well filled for this meeting.

We feel that this day, Sunday, the 16th, has been a blessed day for the Saints here. Brother F. O. Wilkinson and family, of Council Bluffs, were attendants at the Sunday school. Brother Fred, who was formerly one of our Sunday school superintendents, gave a short talk. The Des Moines Saints are glad to see them again. The morning service was devoted to prayer and testimony, and a splendid spirit was manifested.

We are having some excellent programs at our Religio, and a good one was given tonight: vocal solo, Ardith Kirkwood; reading, Roy Richards; vocal duet, G. Barr and E.

Cook; piano solo, Marjorie Castings; violin duet, Vern Deskin and John Ferguson.

The evening service, which was the closing of the special services held by Apostle Edwards, was very well attended. Ardith Kirkwood rendered the vocal solo entitled, "Others." Following this, Brother Edwards took for his topic of discussion, "Why I am a Latter Day Saint." It was a fitting climax to the messages that had been given by him during the past two weeks. Altogether the Saints have been blessed and uplifted through the efforts of Brother Edwards. May God bless him in his work as he goes into other parts of the vineyard.

It may be of interest to know that the Polk County Sunday School Association held a five-day School of Methods here, beginning September 25. Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, of Chicago, and Doctor W. C. Bower, of Chicago, were the faculty. Nineteen Latter Day Saints enrolled in the course. It was very intensive work, yet eleven finished for credit. It is interesting to note that while our group was only five per cent of those enrolled, we received twelve per cent of the credits given.

Doctor Brown made two statements during his lectures which were particularly interesting from a Latter Day Saint viewpoint: "As for me, I can not think of God as an abstract theological formulæ; he is a person, though great Father of us all."

"The chief concern of our leading religious educators of the country as well as our university instructors of religious thought, is to make the principles of Christian living operative in group association."

The above are quoted from the notes taken by Brother Hartshorn at the time, although he says they are not verbatim.

Cherokee, Iowa

October 19.—We are still striving to let our light shine in this part of the vineyard. It seems there is always some affliction or trial for God's people to overcome. This is a good reason for us to work harder than ever and to be more faithful.

Bad weather the past month has interfered to some extent with services and has caused many of the Saints to suffer with colds.

Attendance at prayer services is somewhat better than it was, and some one hundred per cent meetings have been held, a fine spirit being shared by those present.

Sister Gladys Silsbee is again in charge of the young people at Sunday school and also assists with the music at all services. We are glad to have her assistance, for music is our weak point. Sister Silsbee teaches music in Cherokee public schools.

Louis White, a brother of Brothers Harvey and Kay White, was killed by a falling tree limb September 27, and the funeral was held in the church on the 29th. He was the youngest son of Brother and Sister L. C. White, of Le Mars, Iowa. Funeral sermon was by Pastor A. R. Crippen. The body was taken to Moorhead for burial. Louis was not a member of the church but had attended services when he could. He was seventeen years of age and leaves many relatives and friends to mourn his untimely departure.

The heads of all departments, with all officers and teachers, were treated to a fine supper by Brother and Sister Albert Haynes on Saturday evening, October 1. Brother and Sister Haynes were assisted by Brother and Sister Alfred Ballantyne. After the supper, a get-together meeting was held to plan ways and means for our winter's work. Each one present was asked for a talk or statement of his views, and we believe some good was accomplished. District President Ellis L. Bedwell was present and gave some excellent advice. We are hoping for some more such meetings and suppers during the winter.

Brother E. L. Bedwell was with us for a week and held meetings. While attendance was poor, those who attended enjoyed the talks. The weather was very bad, which no doubt cut down the attendance.

A fine new stove capable of comfortably heating the church has been installed. We had hoped to put a basement under the building and put in a furnace, but this was thought inadvisable under present conditions.

Sunday school is handicapped by a lack of teachers. The loss of Sisters Crippen and Reeder was a severe blow, and illness has kept some others away. We trust the Lord will soon raise up some of the young to help in this work. Attendance is very good most of the time.

Sacramental service this month was much enjoyed, and a fine spirit was experienced by the small crowd present.

Brother and Sister Halberg and daughter, Bonnie, of Storm Lake, Iowa, attended services with us last Sunday.

Sister Gladys Silsbee has been elected branch pianist to fill vacancy caused by the illness of Sister Mary Smith.

At this time we are having wonderful autumn weather, which should cause everyone to attend services.

District conference will meet with us Saturday and Sunday, October 22 and 23, and we are expecting a large attendance and a good spiritual meeting.

Mallard, Iowa

Brother and Sister Edwards and children, of Pomeroy, and Sister Anderson and husband, of Fort Dodge, visited our branch September 11. Brother Edwards spoke at the morning service.

Sunday morning, September 18, the morning service was given to those who attended reunion, and the reports brought many good thoughts for our consideration.

At the evening service, September 23, the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a program in honor of the Book of Mormon. It was announced that each one prepare something suitable for the occasion, and all responded except four of the smallest children. We had a very nice program, consisting of music, songs, talks, papers, and readings lasting over one hour. We believe everyone enjoyed it greatly, as all were interested. Two hours' time could very easily have been used. Saints of Mallard are pleased with the Book of Mormon study and desire to gain more knowledge from it.

The Sunday school superintendent asked us to define loyalty in terms of God, self, and church on September 25. We were told to write our answers on paper. They were collected and read the next Sunday. Some very good definitions were given. Such things cause us to think.

On the first Sunday of October, a good sacramental service was enjoyed. Brother and Sister Pearson and Brother and Sister Peterson and families, of Albert City, were with us.

The Department of Women spent their study period on September 29 in preparing garments for a needy family.

Logan, Iowa

The quarterly conference of the Little Sioux District was held at Logan, Iowa, October 8 and 9. Friday evening preceding the conference work, a musical program was given in charge of Sister Mary Peyton, and was enjoyed by those attending.

We were glad to have Apostle John Garver with us. He gave us some very splendid discourses, as did also Brother G. Scott Daniel and C. J. Smith, of the missionary body. The conference was not one of business sessions, but talks and discussions on better methods in conducting branch services; also duties of branch officers and cooperation of superintendent of departments with branch presidents. Our district president, Brother Joseph Lane, who has served us so faithfully for a number of years, asked that he be released from that responsibility. We were loath to release him, but knowing it was his desire, it was granted him by a unanimous vote of the conference. Brother G. Scott Daniel was selected to fill the vacancy until the first of the year. Brother Daniel expressed himself as desirous that Brother Lane's associates, W. R. Adams and Fred A. Fry, should act as his associates until the close of the year.

Our attendance was small on Saturday, partly due to road conditions, but on Sunday our church building was taxed to the limit of its capacity at all of the services.

Sunday eve "Remember Cumorah" was put on by the Missouri Valley and Logan people. This drew a large congregation; some were turned away, not being able to get in. The play was spoken of very highly. Next Sunday evening it will be given at Woodbine.

The bishop's agent read a few figures to the conference, covering a period of four months, showing some interesting matters. Ninety-eight people, in tithes and other church funds, turned in during the four months $3,206.01. Ninety-eight represents about five per cent of the membership of this district. You can figure out what would be the results if fifty per cent would get in line on this part of God's work. The oblation collections have increased quite materially in every branch.

We feel our conference was very successful. Our next conference will be held at Missouri Valley.

Conditions in German Mission

I had a few articles gathered at Gross Raeschen to send you for the Harvest Festival. These were sent me after I had left Braunschweig on a tour of the mission with Brother Hanson. As soon as I learned of their whereabouts, I telegraphed and had them forwarded to you. I hope they arrive in time for use.

There was a glass of cherries from Sister Schwarz; a glass of beans from Sister Kleemaun; a brown coal bricket from Brother Wilk Schoepke; rye, oats, and barley from Brother Wilk Schoepke; a glass paper weight, Brother Wilk Schoepke; an artificial flower, from Sister Weinhold; six potatoes, from Sister Johann Smolny; a sofa pillow from Sister Gertrude Grusckka.

Brother Hanson and I visited the glass works where Weinhold and two of his sons work. The workers here do not average in wages received over forty dollars a month. The wage scale runs from about five dollars a month for apprentices to about sixty dollars a month for master glass blowers. The workers in the coal field average from twenty-five to forty dollars a month. The indices of living are higher than in America. Butter is fifty-five cents a pound. Meat is mostly in the form of wursts and costs in this form as high as a dollar and a half a pound. Boiled ham costs from seventy-five to a hundred cents a pound. Workers of the above classes live very meagerly, buying the cheapest of meat and food articles. Horses are slaughtered when too old or crippled to be of use, or even ill, and are sold to the poor people. There is what is called a Freibank meat sale, or a "scrap meat counter" maintained by the city. All animals to be butchered are butchered by city butchers; the meat is examined by officials. A tax is levied for this butchering. But after this is done, the scraps from healthy animals and the meat from sick animals is taken to the "scrap counter" and sold. The money from this goes into the city treasury. One can buy at this counter almost anything from intestines to tuberculosis meat and meat with trichinæ. I have spoken with people who have bought at this counter and with butchers who have butchered there. The incomprehensible part is that after animals are declared to be ill the meat from them is sold by the city. There is much, volumes, that could be written about the evils among these peoples. There is room for improvement in America, but in spite of the heralded evils of high finance and other social evils in America, the United States especially is becoming more and more the promised land for the middle and lower classes in Europe.

Brother Hanson and I learned a great deal and saw much of interest to us on our tour of the German mission. I leave it for Brother Hanson to write his impressions of this trip.

LEONARD G. HOISINGTON.

BRAUNSCHWEIG, August 24.

Benton, Illinois

Sunday, September 25, found the Saints of Benton and surrounding country gathered at our little meeting place, on the corner of Buchanan and Smith Streets, for Sunday school, after which we retired to a grove on Brother Huff-sletter's farm west of town for a short program given in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, also giving the children a long-asked-for picnic.

After spreading our dinner on the table, built for our convenience, we gathered around to partake of the many good things to eat. Then after the children had their play and the older ones their visit, we were called together for our program. We had songs, readings, and talks, and in the evening a sermon on the Book of Mormon, by Brother Ernest Roberson.

All expressed themselves as having had a very good time, and I am sure the day was a profitable one.

I am glad to hear of so many reading the Book of Mor-mon. I have read it, but am reading it again, and find it very interesting.

Book of Mormon, blessed record
Of the people of our God—
Who came across the waters
To the shores of Joseph's sod.
Hark! we hear the Spirit's whisper
To the faithful ones who read,
These the precepts of our Savior,
Handed down through Lehi's seed.
Read with faith for understanding
With untrammelled heart and mind,
And within its sacred pages
You will truth and knowledge find.

MRS. ANNA ROBERSON.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Corner of Eleventh and Washita

All departments of the branch seem to be doing good work. However, there is never anything so good that it can not be made better. We are hoping for a general in-crease in attendance. There is a noticeable increase in at-tendance at the midweek prayer meeting.

Branch President G. G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, was with us Sunday night, October 2. The presence of Brother Cadwell at Religio is a pleasure to all. The senior Religio class is especially pleased when he is there because the members are studying "Zion builders' problems." They feel that he makes the lesson more interesting in giving them many helpful suggestions.

The pulpit was occupied by Brother O. E. Pender on Sunday, October 9.

Elder Amos T. Higdon, district president, was with us Sunday, October 16. He delivered two very fine sermons, which were appreciated by all. Brother Cadwell was also with us.

Little Sister Edith Biggerstaff, who has been ill with typhoid for five weeks, is reported some better.

Sister Emma Hart, whose face was rather badly burned while working with their bees three weeks ago, is well now. There were no scars left on her face.

Brother Cadwell is with us as often as possible. His sermons are always very interesting. He delivered a fine talk Sunday night, October 16.

Sister T. M. Cummins was called to Chanute, Kansas, last week on account of the serious illness of her small grand-son, Billy Cline. He died Sunday morning, October 16.

The young people of the branch are holding regular bi-monthly meetings. All the young people seem to be inter-ested, and we are looking forward to "doing things."

Holden Stake

Atherton

We had the privilege of having with us Sister James Brendel, who gave us a very interesting talk on music. She was accompanied by her family. Brother J. J. Teeters was the morning speaker, and we all greatly enjoyed his sermon. In the evening Brother C. V. Hopkins was the speaker. He always encourages the Saints to be loyal to the church.

August 21.—Brother W. Self was with us again, and as usual gave us a good sermon. In the evening Brother Whit-ing, from Independence, gave an excellent sermon on faith.

August 28.—Brother Gaughman was our speaker. He is a Bible student and always gives facts which are worthy of our consideration. In the evening Brother A. K. Dillee, of Independence, was the speaker.

September 4.—Sacrament as usual. In the evening Brother E. T. Atwell, of Independence, gave us a most splendid sermon on the Book of Mormon. He also favored us with a solo, and we were all pleased to have Sister Garvia Meyer, from Lexington, Missouri, who sang very beautifully, "In the garden."

September 11.—We were all pleased to have Brother R. D. Weaver for both the morning and evening services. He gave us two splendid sermons.

The Temple Builders have been meeting all summer under the supervision of Sisters Ora Thompson and Anna Bogue. The Orioles have met under the supervision of Sister Flor-ence Bogue.

Knobnoster

Knobnoster Branch is moving forward under the capable leadership of our genial pastor, Elder John T. Nutt. The prayer services are well attended and are very encouraging. Quite a number of our boys and girls are assisting in mak-ing the prayer services interesting by bearing their testi-monies.

Sister Bernice Norman has been seriously ill, but is now well on the way to recovery. Sister Emma Ross has been poorly for some time.

Brother E. E. Petre has been assisting the pastor by occupying the pulpit recently. Brother and Sister E. E. Moorman, of Walnut Park Branch, Independence, visited our branch Sunday, the 18th, and conducted junior church at the eleven o'clock hour. Many favorable comments were heard regarding the service.

Bates City

Although Bates City has not been heard from for a long time, we are still doing what little we can for the work. We have had some visiting elders from time to time that have given us food for thought. We all love to hear Brother Salyards, with his simple gospel sermons that even the chil-dren can understand.

Sunday night a few friends and relatives gathered at the home of James A. Davis, where his daughter, Beulah, was united in marriage to Walter Scott, Elder Frank H. Cotterell pronouncing the double ring ceremony. The room was nicely decorated in white and lavender flowers. The wedding march was played by a cousin of the bride from Kansas City; a solo, "The sunshine of your smile," was sung by Mrs. Frank Cotterell.

Bates City is making plans for fixing up their church now and would like to hold a revival meeting soon.

Warrensburg

Brother Harvey V. Minton, one of our stake missionaries, recently gave a series of lectures here, which were much appreciated by the Saints of this local. His explanation of the four horsemen of Revelation was very interesting. We were favored two nights with stereopticon views of the life of Christ. Brother Minton will give illustrated lectures on the restoration of the gospel in the near future. The pageant entitled "The challenge of the Cross," given by the dramatic club of Lees Summit, was beautiful, and each participant rendered her part in a very commendable way. Sister C. W. Childers chaperoned the young folks and sponsored the play. There is a splendid lesson to be learned from this pageant, given in a way that impresses it on the mind better than it could be learned in any other way. The songs, appropriate to each scene, were "Come, said Jesus"; "Must Jesus bear the Cross alone"; "My Jesus, as thou wilt"; "Jesus and shall it ever be"; "When I survey the wondrous cross"; "I am coming to the Cross"; and "Jesus, I my Cross have taken." The wiener roast held at Electric Springs was quite well attended and enjoyed by all present. A few came from Knobnoster.

Brother J. P. B. Shepherd, who passed away at his home near here, was buried at Liberty Cemetery. The funeral services were held at the church, W. S. Macrae, of the stake presidency, and Patriarch I. M. Smith, presiding. The very large attendance at this service showed the respect and esteem in which he was held. Brother Shepherd was a pioneer in this part of the country, having moved here many years ago. He was also a pioneer in church work, being one of the first to join the church. He was one of three men who made it possible in a financial way for us to have our nice little church. There is now only one of the three living, Brother Nels Abrahams having passed on a few years ago.

Robert Burgess, who is in charge here, is very faithful in attendance, though he has a long way to come. His instruction to the Saints is very timely, and his talks are inspiring and fraught with encouragement and hope.

Buffalo, New York, Branch

On Sunday evening, September 25, the Department of Recreation and Expression gave the pageant "Remember Cumorah," which was a real success. The scenery was painted by Brother George Scheafer, who worked night after night until the early hours of the morning. The scenes were very beautiful. Brother George Lloyd designed the stage settings, and Brother George Schreger looked after the stage lighting, which was perfect. The first scene opened with Joseph, ably portrayed by George Scheafer, in prayer in the woods while George Lloyd sang, "That beautiful garden of prayer." The wood-lawn scene with Joseph and the minister, who was Brother E. Wagner and who took his part to perfection, was as one would imagine. We all felt the inspiration of the prophecy. The bedroom scene, with Brother Clatworthy as Moroni, and Joseph, demonstrated the coming forth of the marvelous work. The hill scene seemed filled with reality, and then the final scene with all nations coming to the church, portrayed by Sister Weegar, again filled us with the Spirit and brought to us a realization that we all have a work to do.

Our pastor, Doctor Weegar, acted as historian and afterward gave a short talk on the Book of Mormon to the many strangers. There was no delay while changing scenes, and the interest of the audience was successfully held. The church was filled to capacity, and many of the strangers present expressed their kindly sentiments and promised to come again.

Brother Wagner made a splendid stage director, and we intend using him again in the near future.

At the close of the play we went home thanking God that our hard work had been crowned with success.

Seiling, Oklahoma

October 15.—A few lines from this branch may be of interest to some, Missionary in charge of the Western Oklahoma District, Brother A. H. Christensen, of Alva, Oklahoma, came to visit us the first part of September with the tent to hold a series of meetings, but the Pentecostal people were already on the ground. So it was thought best to set the tent up in a cottonwood grove five miles north. A splendid meeting was had, with good attendance and interest from the start. The meeting lasted three weeks, and fourteen were baptized, four of whom were heads of families. Brothers Lester E. and Lemuel D. Dyke, of Eagle City and Minco, Oklahoma, assisted part of the time.

The sermons were of a very high order, and we feel encouraged at this place.

Brothers E. L. Ballinger and Fred Durfey were ordained to the offices of elder and priest, so our branch is more fully organized than heretofore.

After the meeting Brother Christensen stayed a few days and assisted the brethren in painting and repairing our church building, which work was very much needed. We hope soon to have the building all completed and dedicated.

Young People's Convention

Young people's convention was held at Lock No. 4, Pennsylvania, September 30, 1927. The convention lasted three days, commencing Friday evening and closing Sunday evening.

The first meeting was at 7.30 p. m. Friday evening, C. B. Woodstock lecturing on "Objectives in religious education."

Saturday

- 9.00 a. m., Prayer service was in charge of R. Baldwin and W. Daugherty.
- 10.00 a. m., Lecture by C. B. Woodstock on "Processes in religious education."
- 11.00 a. m., "Illustrative material," by Sister Baldwin.
- 2.00 p. m., "Illustrative material," by Sister Baldwin.
Talk to young people on lawn by C. B. Woodstock.
- 3.00 p. m., Round Table on "Junior church," by C. B. Woodstock.
- 4.00 p. m., Games and play.
- 6.00 p. m., Volley ball.
- 7.30 p. m., "Consider the lilies," by C. B. Woodstock.

Sunday

- 8.00 a. m., Prayer service in charge of Brothers Baldwin and Ullom.
- 9.30 a. m., Sunday school:
Divided into four groups in charge as follows:
 - (1) Adults—Brother Woodstock.
 - (2) Young People—T. L. Clark.
 - (3) Juniors—Sister Baldwin.
 - (4) Beginner and primary departments under regular teachers.
- 11.00 a. m., Sacrament.
- 2.00 p. m., Sermon, "Whole armor of God," by R. Baldwin.
Lecture, "Efficient leadership," by Brother Woodstock.

3.00 p. m., Round Table, by Sister Baldwin.

"Cradle roll work."

7.30 p. m., Sermon, "Sower and the seed," by Richard Baldwin.

We had a very interesting and educational convention, and we consider ourselves fortunate to have had with us Brother Woodstock and Brother and Sister Baldwin.

We also had Brothers Ullom and Thomas Clark with us.

Stockton, California

Sutter and Clay Streets

Our attendance at present is somewhat lessened, as some have moved away and several are on the sick list; but the spirit and desire to carry on is manifest, and the services are all profitable.

On September 18 the church was closed here, and all who could went to Modesto to join with the Saints there in their special day services. It was one of those gatherings where much spiritual strength is gained and was one long to be remembered.

September 1, a little son came to gladden the home of Mr. and Sister Carl Maynard. He has been named Carl Junior. Sister Maynard before her marriage was Irene Bloom.

The Women's Department began their activities by tying comforters; then a cafeteria supper on the 29th, at which about twenty dollars was cleared. Also they are busy planning for the annual bazaar and other suppers.

The centennial of the Book of Mormon was observed on the evening of September 25 by a program including reading a part of "Remember Cumorah," talks, and other readings suited to the occasion.

Our prayer services are quite well attended, and a goodly degree of the Spirit is present with us.

Saint Louis, Missouri

The Weekly Bulletin, a mimeographed news folder, four pages, of recent date at Saint Louis, Grand Boulevard at Carter Avenue, contains the following interesting items:

The tornado which swept over our city last week did considerable damage to several of the homes of our members. Two were hurt, but not seriously—Miss Alice Evans and Mrs. Vera Wendelburg.

We express our sympathy with those who suffered in any way and join in gratitude to our heavenly Father that all escaped as well as they did.

Today there will be taken up a special collection for the Red Cross in aid of the victims of the storm. During the morning service, this offering will be taken, and we hope it will be generous.

M. A. Etzenhouser, representing the Social Service Department of the church, came in Monday to make inquiries about the storm, and to see if there were any needs among the church people which might be helped. This gesture of sympathy and interest is much appreciated.

Tuesday morning our aged Sister Roberts was stricken with her third attack of paralysis, but we are pleased to say she is improving. The other sick ones are doing nicely.

Brother R. Archibald, with several others, motored to Piedmont, Missouri, to attend the funeral of Brother Walker, who was a member of this congregation years ago.

Owing to the storm, there was no service in our church, because the lighting system was dislocated. The pastor preached in East Saint Louis, filling Brother Archibald's appointment.

The Bulletin also contains mention of the series of meetings to open October 16, disclosing a good organization for advertising and conducting the series, which indicates a determination to make it a successful effort. We hope to hear good news from this work at Saint Louis.

Scranton, Pennsylvania

October 18.—With vacation time over, many of the Saints who have been absent during the summer months are once more taking their places in the church.

During the past month we have been greatly blessed and encouraged to go forward through visits made by Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, Apostles Roy S. Budd and Clyde F. Ellis, Brother G. Robley, and our district president, Elder A. E. Stoft. Brother Griffiths held a series of meetings and gave the Saints some good advice. Many took the opportunity to receive their patriarchal blessings, which kept Brother Griffiths quite busy. We were pleased to make the acquaintance of Sister Griffiths.

October 1 and 2 was the Archbald conference. This is about eight miles from Scranton. It was largely attended, and a peaceful spirit prevailed throughout the meeting.

Monday evening Apostle Ellis was the speaker in Scranton. Although it rained heavily, a large number of Saints and friends gathered to hear him. We wish we might hear more from him.

The following night began a series of meetings by Brother Robley. Brother Stoft was also with us at this time. We were well pleased to see the latter looking so well, and our prayers are that God will continue to bless him with health and strength needed in the great work he desires to do.

On the next Sunday at a quarter till twelve, we had the pleasure of hearing Elder Rudd, of Chicago, preach.

We should like to be honored with a visit from the President of the church, Brother Frederick M. Smith. We hope the next time Brother Smith comes east, he will take opportunity to visit Scranton Branch.

The Oriole girls and Temple Builders have started their work for the winter months, meeting every Monday evening.

The men's club, with Brother John Jenkins in charge, meets every Thursday evening. Games are played, followed by a study of the Book of Mormon.

We hope to do better work in the future, and I feel sure if we only heed the counsel of our branch president, Elder R. J. Hawkins, we shall be earnest workers for the Master.

Graceland Chats

College Day

Sunday, October 30, is known throughout the church as College Day. By action of General Conference the collections taken on this day create the Graceland Scholarship Fund. Each year a number of scholarships are loaned to worthy young men and women who are desirous of continuing their education and who otherwise have not the means to do so. These scholarships are loans, covering tuition, made to the student, and are to be paid back to the college, on the installment plan, plus interest, as soon as he has completed his education.

This year at Graceland there are forty-two young people, sixteen of whom are sons and daughters of missionaries, who have asked for scholarship loans. Or, in other words, there has been a total application for $5,250. These young people have asked for this loan as a last resort, not being able to borrow the necessary funds elsewhere. Some students, who in previous years have asked for scholarships, have been able to give notes this year, thus giving others the benefit of the scholarship.

Even now, there are other young people who would be at Graceland could they have secured a scholarship. Who can estimate the loss to the church by not having available funds for the granting of scholarships? And is there not danger that the loss will be even greater if these funds can not be secured this year?

As one who has had the benefit of a scholarship, I can say that it means much to one desiring to attend Graceland. Being able to secure a scholarship rendered it possible for me to come to Graceland and partake of the wholesome environment and uplifting ideals of Graceland life. My aim and ideals have been raised to higher levels through Graceland associations. I would that these young people might receive of the same life-giving atmosphere. Had I not been able to obtain this scholarship, making it impossible for me to attend Graceland, my ambitions might have been directed in other channels than those of service to the church.

Unless the funds are contributed on College Day, these young people will have to find some alternative. And what will it be? Shall these missionaries be called in from the field that they may better provide for the education of their children? Shall these young people discontinue their school work and thus lessen their possibilities of becoming the most efficient Zion builders?

To the greatest extent, the solution of this vital problem depends upon you, the people of the church. Today these young men and women are anxiously waiting your response.

Many times in the past Graceland has looked to the church's people for assistance. Never has the church failed the little college on the hill. We are sure you will not fail us now. We know the loyal supporters of Graceland will again rally to the cause, that these young people may continue in their work of preparation for the most efficient service in and for Zion.

Parade and Football Game

Was Home-coming a success? Yes! and in more ways than one. I am going to enlighten our HERALD readers about the real parade we had and the keen football game.

The parade was the largest that has ever been in the history of Graceland. In fact, it was two blocks long. It gave one the thrill of a lifetime to see so many people marching together with one thought, that Graceland was going to do its best to beat Chillicothe. The band led the parade, followed by each and every Graceland supporter, decked out in blue and gold caps, carrying blue and gold pom-poms. The "gang" marched from the college hill to the center of town and there stopped long enough to give a few yells and sing songs in order to let everyone feel the Graceland spirit. They then proceeded to the North Park, where they all assembled on the west side of the gridiron to boost their team with every ounce of pep they had.

It is impossible to relate all of the game in detail, but will give the high points. The "yellow jackets" were able to push over the first touchdown and were also able to get the point. Chillicothe succeeded in getting the next two touchdowns, so first half ended 12 to 7 in Chillicothe's favor.

Graceland managed to get a safety and another touchdown in third quarter; thus the yellow jackets were ahead by a 15 to 12 score. In the fourth quarter Graceland was unable to score, while Chillicothe got a touchdown and kicked for point. Game ended 19 to 15 in Chillicothe's favor.

Although Graceland was beaten as to score, she played a clean, square game and did her best. After all, that is what counts.

Between halves forty girls, dressed in white uniforms, with blue and gold caps, pom-poms, and ties, did a very pretty marching drill, which ended in the formation of the "G." While in this formation they sang the very popular football song, "Graceland forever."

GERTRUDE LANE.

The Lamoni-Graceland Orchestral Society

The Lamoni-Graceland Orchestral Society is an organization composed of members from college and those from the town. It is not a very old organization, but is rapidly finding its place in the college and the community. Mr.

Joseph Anthony, as director, has worked with untiring efforts and enthusiasm towards its success, and he has not worked in vain. The orchestra furnishes music for all college functions whenever requested. In addition to this, one number is given each Sunday morning at Sunday school, and each fourth Sunday night in the month a forty-five-minute concert is furnished by the orchestra.

The following new members have been added: Carl White, Melvin Howe, Delma Bass, Elizabeth Briggs, Mark Anway, Verna Schaar, Homer Doty, Percy Jenkins, William Hand, Walter Killpack, LeRoy Dick, Lois Barrows.

The orchestra has done much for the church and college as well as for the community, and is looking forward to a record-breaking year in 1927-1928.

The College Players

The College Players began their activities this year by the semiannual election of officers on Thursday, the twenty-second. The election was held during the traditional fall picnic in the south woods. The following officers were elected: Director, Forest Roberts; president, George Mesley; vice president, Beatrice Gates; secretary, Doris Waterman; treasurer, Monta Parrish; stage manager, Kenneth Ury; costumer, Ruth Gates.

There has been much dramatic ability shown already by the new students, and the Players are looking eagerly forward to the time when their ranks may be filled. There are about twenty old members back, and it is hoped the club may number thirty or thirty-five at the end of the year. The Players expect to stage four major productions during the coming year, and in addition produce several one-act plays for the Athenian. By far the most outstanding work done last year was in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," given the first night of institute, which met with much favorable comment by all who attended. The club has established a high standard of plays and players and is of inestimable value to all who participate in its productions as well as all who attend.

Recreational Leadership Course at Graceland

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Closson are conducting a class in recreational leadership at Graceland this year. Mrs. Closson has a class of eighteen girls who are being instructed in the methods of organizing and conducting youthful organizations, such as the Blue Birds, Orioles, and Temple Builders. Gene's class of twelve men is taking up the problem of Boy Scout Mastery. Already there is the assurance that the courses are going to be intensely interesting and profitable. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Closson are heart and soul in the work of advancement of both Graceland and the church and have responded nobly to the call of service, giving both time and talent without thought of compensation. Their interest is in preparing more people in the fundamentals of efficient recreational activities—not only how to organize a group but what to do afterwards, and how to keep the movement growing.

SARA GARDNER.

Graceland Teacher-Training Students at County Teacher's Convention

The start was from the college at eight a. m.; the arrival at Leon varied as to the speed of the particular car. The first lecture at half past nine found all the college group in attendance. At the end of the third consecutive discourse, a roll call would have found our "little band" depleted in numbers, not sadly depleted, but nevertheless, smaller.

But here, my friends, we hesitated for a short but "full" hour and a half. Yes, it was full, and so were we at the end of this intermission, all because we adjourned to the tourist park, where we met and turned to rout a host of sandwiches, cookies, and oranges, not to mention pickles and tomatoes.

Back we went to attend the lectures. It was the general opinion of everyone who attended them that it was indeed time well spent.

The party broke up fast at half past three, the football men hurrying home to be on time for daily practice.

CRAIG SIEGFRIED.

Lamoni Stake

"The Oratorio Society is singing tonight" was one of the main announcements for October 2. It was their first appearance after the reorganization with the opening of college. It has been their custom to sing every Sunday morning except the first of the month, when they appear in the evening. Tonight they sang no anthem—only two old familiar hymns, "Rock of Ages" and "'Twas midnight and on Olive's brow." The latter was sung unaccompanied, with unusual effects, the full chorus of one hundred and forty sounding in the subdued shadings much like the soft strains of a large organ. From everywhere there came words of appreciation. This fall the outlook is very encouraging. The number enrolling, the balance of sections, and quality promise well. Just now they are beginning to learn the Messiah in contemplation of the Centennial celebration. Mabel Carlile continues as director.

Graceland's home-coming game was played October 15. The following Sunday continued the program and spirit of home-coming. Elder C. E. Wight, of Kansas City, an alumnus and former instructor at the college, and sometime president of the Lamoni Stake, was the preacher at the Brick Church in the morning. The choir sang an arrangement of "The Lord is my light," and the A Cappella Chorus sang one of their standard numbers, "Listen to the lambs." C. F. Church, the "flower man," had made the church attractive with bouquets of autumn leaves and flowers. Through the large congregation were many who returned to Lamoni for the week-end. The combination of a beautiful autumn day, the meeting of old friends, and the worship of the service combined to create a spirit of gladness and devotion. This was carried over into the evening service, where a concert by the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra and a sermon by Bishop Carmichael effected a fitting close to the day.

The week-end brought several from Independence, among them Bishops A. Carmichael and M. H. Seigfried. Every third Sunday morning the priesthood meet for prayer service at eight o'clock. The visit of these two members of the general bishopric prompted a change to a discussion of the economic program of the church. The interest and opportunity suggested a continuation, and a second session of the priesthood was held in the afternoon, at which Bishop Carmichael delivered a stirring appeal to the priesthood. His plea was that the priesthood acquaint themselves with the program of the church in order to lead in teaching and in demonstration. His visit has given a definite impetus to the economic phase of the church's program.

The leaders of the Department of Recreation and Expression met a few weeks ago and outlined their plan of procedure for the next months. During the summer months the time of meeting was shifted to Thursday night as an experiment, thus making possible features of the program and recreation work and lightening the schedule for Sunday. The general opinion favored the continuation on the week night.

The program committee has provided some interesting features. Two weeks ago, young people of the college literary societies presented the one-act play, "Suppressed desires." Last week the "Pioneer program" was rather unique. Old residents of Lamoni appeared. No doubt the average age was not far from seventy. First, a male quartet, including Oliver Hayer, Eli Hayer, W. W. Pitkin, and T. J. Bell, sang an old hymn and responded with an encore. David Keown, who has lived his life of seventy-four years in this neighborhood, told in characteristic way several incidents of pre-Lamoni history. Elder C. E. Willey, now seventy-six years of age, played two violin solos of the type of olden times. As D. C. White, next on the program, said, while hearing the old fiddle solo he could imagine he was back in boyhood days. Brother White has been in Lamoni for over thirty years. His talk breathed the spirit so characteristic of his character—a happy faith in the brethren of his church. The closing number was a quartet of those who might be called "mothers in Israel." The oldest member was Emma Lacey, now seventy-six years. Others were Sister Feldhahn, Elizabeth Williams, matron of Saints' Home, and Sister O. E. Prall, mother of the stake president. Each of these responded with willingness, and somehow their appearance left one with a new appreciation of the pioneers in Israel. The committee is endeavoring to make this a really expressional meeting rather than a gathering for artistic display of specialists. This week the program centers around the National Child Welfare Week.

The child welfare program is sponsored by the Women's Department. Sermons, programs in the public school, clinic work, etc., have made a rather extensive project. Another feature has been a religious census of the community, taken to ascertain church membership, interests, attendance. A project that this department has just completed is the raising of funds by programs, entertainments, etc., to purchase new rubber matting for aisles of the auditorium of the Brick Church, and folding chairs for the rostrum. The chairs are of walnut finish, with leather seats, stable and attractive. The enlarged orchestra and choir have made them necessary.

Independence

Stone Church

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." This text, taken from Saint Matthew 24:14, was used by Elder V. D. Ruch in the sermon at the Stone Church Sunday morning. Elder Ruch has recently returned from a mission to Scandinavia, where, with his family, he spent nearly five years. He worked into his sermon descriptive sketches from his experience in Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

The Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang as the morning anthem, "Fear not, O Israel," by Spicker. Solo parts were sung by Albert Brackenbury, baritone; Elizabeth Okerlind, alto; Ina Hattey, soprano; and Elbert Dempsey, tenor. Robert Miller played an organ prelude and as the offeratory "The old refrain." George Miller played piano accompaniment for the musical service.

The opening prayer and benediction were offered by Patriarch W. A. McDowell, of Plano, Illinois. Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the service.

Elder Ruch drew a brief sketch of the decline and apostasy of the church of Christ, and the restoration to earth of the power and authority which had been taken away. "And with this restored gospel comes the great responsibility of carrying it to all the world. This our church is doing as readily as men and women and funds are available."

In speaking of his experiences among the Scandinavian peoples, Elder Ruch praised their frugality, politeness, and cleanliness. He described the beauty of the "Land of the Midnight Sun," in the words of Apostle Paul M. Hanson who visited there recently. The long period of continual sunshine is followed, however, by a period of darkness equally as long, and the snow drifts very deep. The Christmas season in Scandinavia lasts from December 24 to January 13, and the festivities are carried on almost exclusively in the home.

"Although we loved these Scandinavian brethren of ours," says Elder Ruch, "we were glad to get back to our native land. But we are still engaged in the work of the Lord."

The Campus juniors were very well pleased with the speaker, W. B. Paul, Sunday morning and will be glad to welcome him again. The musical part of the service was furnished by some of the pupils of the intermediate department.

The Religio program following the study period, though brief, was well rendered, and held the interest of the gathering congregation. A violin solo, "The swan," was played by Frank White, Wayne Cooper accompanying on the piano. The K L D S Ladies' Quartet, composed of Mary Fields Edmunds, Clara Curtis, and Amelia and Gladys Good, was "borrowed" from K L D S, it being broadcasting hour, and the number given by these singers was deeply appreciated. Lucille Watkins, one of our small readers, gave "The radio."

"Every man is called according to the gift of God unto him. When he comes into the world, he comes with a divine commission; he does not come by accident, but in accordance with the universal plan of God." So stated Patriarch Ammon White, the speaker selected to contribute his expression of faith and belief in the gospel work of latter days on last Sunday night, and whose sermon proved to be a valuable integral part of the general theme of personal testimony and doctrinal teaching of the church—the theme which is being adhered to in the Sunday night meetings for this winter. "There was a man sent from God whose name was John" was the text, and Patriarch White's endeavor was to prove beyond all doubt that many others, like John, have been sent from God, each with a special mission. "Feed my sheep," was the commission Christ gave to Peter; that was Peter's work upon the earth. Before the time of John, such men as Adam, Enoch, Noah, Moses, Samuel, and numbers of others were "sent from God" and served their purpose upon the earth. John heralded to the world the coming of another man sent from God—Christ the Father's Son, who chose his disciples and helpers, other men sent from God. In our own age there have been and are many whom God placed upon the earth for a particular work; in fact, each person has his work—his volunteer service—to give to humanity. In order to perform our work we must comply with God's will; and when we have the spirit of peace manifested in our hearts, our works confirmed by signs following the believers, the balm of the Holy Spirit in our lives, we may be sure that we are discharging our responsibilities in accordance with the plan of the heavenly Father. He made impressive the seriousness of our mission, urging the Saints to think over these things and to study in the ways of faith the teachings of the Master of men.

Such old favorites as "How gentle God's command," "My faith looks up to thee," "Lord, may our hearts be tuned to sing," and "This world will be blessed by and by," were sung by the congregation, led by Elder John Sheehy before the opening of the preaching service. As a special, a number was given by a mixed quartet from Kansas City Central Church, following the opening prayer by Elder W. A. Smith.

The moving pictures proved to be unusually good on this evening, the first showing historical places associated with the life of the Father of American writers, Washington Irving, as well as representations of two of his famous characters—Rip Van Winkle and Ichabod Crane. The second reel concerned two Samaritans, modern and ancient.

Laurel Club Bazaar

Pieces of handwork assigned by the ladies of the Laurel Club to be prepared for the bazaar should be turned back in time for the bazaar to be held November 3 and 4. The Laurels are bending their efforts to raising money for the purpose of purchasing equipment and furnishings for the Auditorium kitchen and dining room, and will appreciate the donations and patronage of Saints and friends. The bazaar will be conducted in the Stone Church dining hall.

Halloween Frolic for Herald Office Force

Tall ghosts glided noiselessly about, and goblins, witches, and devils skulked in the black and hollow stillness of press-room, composing department, and business office of the Herald Publishing House last Saturday night. The occasion was a Halloween celebration, and Herald workers and their friends turned out seventy strong. To begin with, the whole thing commenced backwards, the guests being escorted by a sheeted thing to the back door and urged into the blackened cavity of a wide door. At stations along the fearful pilgrimage through the mechanical departments the venture-some were directed by the sepulchral voices of "the unseen." The editorial room—a spacious place quaintly decorated for the night—was the end of the tour, and into it gratefully trouped colonial ladies, pirates, clowns, hoboes, a highland lassie, the terrible Turk, Indians, ghosts, and many others who could not be classified. There were games and a story to enhance the spookiness of the atmosphere in which all participated.

The prize for the most original costume went to Brother John Fassnacht, "carton character," arrayed in a series of black boxes. A supper of pop corn balls, apples, doughnuts, and cider—true witches' fare—was spread on uniquely decorated tables in the bindery, where Victrola music heightened the merriment.

Interesting Personals

The funeral of Elder John Conrad Severin was held Monday afternoon at the Stone Church, and burial was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Brother Severin was born near Stockholm, Sweden, September 24, 1856, and came to America in 1877. His marriage to Mary Jane Davis took place in 1881. His baptism occurred May 11, 1884. Ordained an elder June 20, 1886. Fell peacefully asleep at his home in Kansas City, Missouri, October 21, 1927. He leaves his wife, two daughters: Mrs. C. O. Whipple, of Englewood, and Mrs. Carl White, also of Englewood; five sons: H. T., U. C., E. R., all of California, J. S. and M. G., of Miami, Florida, ten grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

Second Church

The young people's prayer meeting at eight o'clock has been especially good for the last two Sundays, having a fine attendance, and an encouraging spirit of activity being manifested. God has responded to our efforts to find him and has poured out his Spirit, making us rejoice.

October 16 was promotion day with us, and a goodly class of twenty-five was promoted from the junior department to the intermediate, twenty-seven from the primary to the junior, and seventeen from the beginner to the primary, with appropriate exercises and the presentation of diplomas. Last Sunday our "teachers in training" were given certificates for completion of course 2. This class of seven intermediates is making definite preparation for future service as teachers. From these and other indications we feel our Sunday school is growing.

Brother C. Ed. Miller was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour October 16 to the instruction of the Saints; and W. H. Kelley occupied the pulpit in his usual helpful, hopeful way in the evening.

A good Religio session was held each Sunday, as well as the afternoon prayer meetings where the promise, "Where two or three are met together in my name, there will I be," was verified.

A little girl, Ethel McLees, was baptized and confirmed October 16.

Elder D. A. Whiting was the speaker at the morning hour October 23, and J. A. Koehler talked at eight in the evening. Both brothers stressed, from different angles, that obedience on our part is necessary if this is to be a land of Zion unto us as individuals. Special music at these meetings was very much enjoyed and added to the completeness of each service.

Our desire is that more of our members will meet with us, bringing with them their nonmember friends, that the good things we enjoy may be shared more widely. We are hopeful of this as a result of the brethren's visits among the membership and their efforts to encourage them in the good work. Already the Wednesday night meetings begin to show growth in attendance.

Liberty Street

On Thursday evening, October 20, a cafeteria dinner was served at the church, the evening being sponsored by the choir. Following the meal a program which proved most interesting was given. Robert Crawford contributed a saxophone solo, and Betty Crawford gave a reading. There were also several readings by Glenna Salisbury; a vocal solo by Beulah Conkerwich; violin solo, by David Steward; piano solo, Edward Regan; vocal solo, Robert Trumble; piano solo, Billy McPherson; a trio, McPherson brothers; and an original poem by Mrs. Joseph Elliott. A happy time was had by all, each one feeling well repaid for having attended.

Brother C. E. Blodgett was speaker for the Sunday morning service, his text being taken from Isaiah 55: 6-8; "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." The discourse was fittingly closed with the reading of the poem, "I will build my church."

The Religio program was in charge of Sister Erma Peek. "Praise ye the Lord," was the anthem rendered by the choir at the evening service. Brother Glenn Davis consented to speak to Liberty Street Saints at the evening hour. His theme was "The quest of happiness," his scripture lesson taken from Luke 18: "And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, that is, God. Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother. And he said, All these have I kept from my youth up. Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing: Sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me."

East Independence

Sunday, October 9, Elder E. T. Atwell was the morning speaker, giving an interesting discourse concerning the Book of Mormon. With him he had some excellent drawings representing the buildings of ancient times. That evening Evangelist U. W. Greene continued his talk in regard to the Restoration of the gospel in these latter days, quoting and pointing out the significance of some of the prophecies of the Jews that are now being fulfilled.

Elder J. W. Metcalf preached to Saints of East Independence at eleven o'clock Sunday, October 16, keeping the audience interested as he told the gospel story. Brother U. W. Greene in the evening used a theme which clearly brought out present-day fulfillment of prophecies made in ages past. This was the closing sermon of Brother Greene's series given in our district, and he briefly reviewed his efforts of the last two Sundays.

Last Sunday Elder Joseph Luff was in our midst. His subject of discussion dealt with the unchangeability of God and made plain the fact that God is perfect and his laws are perfect, while man and his laws are imperfect. In his talk he emphasized the necessity of our applying God's laws to our lives in order that we may become like him. Elder Atwell again visited us Sunday evening, preaching a sermon particularly directed toward those who are not of the faith.

We were given to understand that salvation can come in no other way save through the channel of obedience to the gospel.

Sister Joseph Stowell has been quite sick for some time and has been unable to attend services. Our prayers are for her.

Spring Branch

A splendid early prayer service was enjoyed by about thirty Saints Sunday morning. Brothers McClain and Badder were in charge.

Ninety-seven was the attendance at the Sunday school hour.

Brother J. M. Terry was the speaker at eleven o'clock. His subject, "Thou shalt not remove the ancient landmarks," was a splendid effort, proving that what God doeth is for ever. His illustration showing that with a sextant and field notes any surveyed point may be located, so with the three books as legs of the tripod supporting the compass (the spirit of prophecy), God's purposes concerning his people are so definite that they may easily be discovered, for they are always there.

The choir rendered the anthem "Sons of men" at this service, and again in the evening two numbers, "I will lift up mine eyes" and "Thanks be to God." At this time Brother Weston talked on the providential moving of the Smith family, using a map for illustration.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday was another beautiful autumn day, and at 7.30 a. m. about one hundred and fifty members of the Sunday school gathered at the church in readiness for a visit to our neighboring Saints of the Far West Stake and to visit places of historical interest to every Latter Day Saint.

The first stop was at Richmond, where the grave of David Whitmer was visited, after which the trip was resumed, a number arriving in time for the morning preaching service at Far West, the balance in time for the lunch which had been so graciously prepared by the Saints there.

Patriarch H. O. Smith gave a short historical sketch of the early-day Saints, pointing out the lot where the corner stone for the temple was laid prior to the Saints being driven from that community. At the present time, nothing but the small church remains and stands as a living testimony out in the field; and on the lawn of this church the lunch was served and was greatly enjoyed by everyone present. The trip home was made over different routes, some coming via Saint Joseph while others stopped at Lexington, but everyone returned happy in the thought that they had visited spots that are sacred to the memory of our people. Thanks be to the Plus Ultra Class, sponsors of the trip, as there was nothing left undone to make the trip successful and to provide for all the needs. All reported a wonderful time.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Elder Seth S. Sandy. Despite the fact that the congregation was small, the service was entered into very feelingly in the singing of "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning," prayer being offered by Brother Sandy. Sister Luella Wight sang a very beautiful solo, "If ye will hear his voice."

Elder R. L. Bishop, pastor of Mount Washington Church, was the speaker, taking for his theme, "Human relations or human understandings." He stated there was nothing we need to know more about than to know more of one another and to practice what we know of human needs and human understandings. All life depends upon human relations! Ofttimes people are driven apart because of misunderstandings, and the real purpose of our religion is to teach us how to live together, understand one another and our needs. Real happiness does not come by having all there is in life, but comes when we understand the needs of those around us and they understand us; and in our attempt to understand

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

The Officer and Teacher Meeting for November

The outline submitted for use in October completed the study of the text, How to Teach Religion, by George Herbert Betts. We have learned of many schools where the outlines were used each month through the year with much pleasure, interest, and profit. We anticipate the selection of a new text in January for use in monthly meetings during 1928. These will be provided especially for those schools which feel they can not meet more often than once each month.

A large number of schools have already enrolled their officers and teachers in one of the seven training courses to be had by correspondents through The Departments office and plan to meet each week. Such work is far more constructive and will carry regular credit toward a teacher's or leader's certificate. A catalog of courses and an enrollment blank will be sent on application.

In many branches, too, continuous use is being made by all departmental officers and workers of the splendid material appearing each month in the Departments' Journal, a monthly dealing with the specific problems of religious education in our own church program.

For the November meeting, we wish to offer the following outline as a basis of thought and discussion. We are considering the personal qualifications and specific preparation desired of all officers and teachers. We trust our outline may be questioned, weighed, criticized, enlarged, and improved during the group discussion. So far as time permits, let each item be discussed, illustrated, evaluated, and applied in the light of local conditions and experience.

In December we will try to consider the essentials of the teaching process.

Personal Qualifications:

1. Cheerfulness, which radiates good will, lends attractiveness, and even meets disappointment with a smile.
2. Promptness, in attendance and in response to every call of duty—a splendid example to set.
3. Willingness to serve—to do the best one can now, and to prepare for an ever better service in one's job.
4. Dependability—a mark of sterling worth vastly increasing the value of one's service.
5. Faithfulness to duty, especially in attendance at and participation in the services of the church.
6. Integrity, straightforward honesty in all one's relationships.
7. Sympathy, ability, and readiness to feel with and for others.

each other we should not forget the spirit of prayer, as it is the keynote in this attempt.

At 7.30 the song service was in charge of Sister Myrtle Walmsley. Following the opening hymn, Sister Myrtle sang, "Open the gates of the temple," which was very much appreciated by the congregation.

Elder J. A. Tanner was the speaker of the hour, resuming his missionary effort. He took for his theme, "Have faith in God," and produced statistics that showed the appalling number of people that do not profess to be Christians or attend any church today. Following the sermon, we journeyed with the camera man to "Zion, the city of David," viewing interesting sights and reminiscences of that shepherd, poet, and king.

One of the interesting features of the Sunday night services is the Bible contest, which has been prepared by the pastor. The contest extends over a period of three or four weeks, after which those submitting answers to the questions flashed on the screen will receive their grades, and the winner will receive a prize. Their picture will be shown on the screen if they so desire.

8. Cleanliness, purity in thought, in word, in act, and in person.
 9. Patience, which suffers long and is kind, endures hardships as a master workman.
 10. Resourcefulness, which calmly takes in a situation and meets any emergency.
 11. Physical courage, in the face of danger, or distress, or pain.
 12. Moral courage to stand for the right, no matter what the temptation or what the consequences of choosing the right act may be.
 13. Loyalty, to high ideals and noble purposes, to the cause of right, of truth, and righteousness, to the church and its program.
 14. Charity, the pure love of Christ, which loves humanity because we all are brothers, which loves mankind for what they may become, even when little of loveliness is at first apparent.
 15. Helpfulness; only those acts are helpful which contribute to the greatest happiness, success, and welfare of all concerned.
 16. Altruism, a hopeful, cheerful attitude born of faith, love, patience, and confidence in the triumph of right.
 17. Gentleness, a quiet spirit, soft-voiced, mild-mannered, self-controlled, given to kindness and service.
 18. Humility, not cringing, hesitant, or retiring; strong, ready, and fearless as a leader who is conscious that his service is as unto God and that his success shall come only as his consistent effort is supplemented and accompanied by divine power.
 19. Studiousness, teachableness, that in turn one may be able to teach. A growing, expanding mind, with ever-broadening horizon, ever-deepening sympathies, ever-clarifying vision. One's very attitude must inspire others to study.
 20. Spiritual-mindedness, given to devotion, to prayerful consideration of life's problems, to a close walk with the Master.
 21. A dynamic attitude, readiness of initiative and expenditure of time and effort to make things go, to carry ideals over into action.
- Specific Preparation for the Task:
1. A knowledge of human needs as manifest in the class or group and the special interest problem, or crisis need of each individual member.
 2. A working acquaintance with the subject matter in the general field of religious education in which the class study lies. Then a specific knowledge of the subject matter of the quarterly lesson prepared as so much source material to be drawn upon as it may be used to meet individual and class needs.
- Further, as wide a knowledge as may be obtained of additional supplementary information, illustration, and explanation with which to enrich the lesson hour, to make vivid, concrete, and personal the lesson application.
3. A general knowledge of teaching aims, methods, and devices, and skill in their use to impart fruitful information, to give ideas, to stir emotion, to develop loyalties, to inspire courage, to arouse wholesome desire, to lead to useful habits, to broaden sympathies, to deepen appreciations of the best and noblest in life, to awaken a sense of personal responsibility and a consciousness of duty, to quicken a love for God, the truth, and the right, to train the pupils in power of choice, initiative, and achievement, both personal and social, which shall enable them to develop to their fullest capacity their physical, mental, social, and spiritual natures.
 4. A spiritual preparation, through faith, prayer, and study that one who would teach may be imbued with the spirit of the great Master Teacher. This means a consecration of purpose which should enable our pupils to Spokane district conference will convene at Spokane, Washington, December 10, 1927, 10 a. m. All the priesthood are especially requested to be present for class meetings which will be arranged for Saturday and Sunday. Oscar Case, district president.

Attention, Scandinavian Saints!

For many years the church published a little paper called Sandhedens Banner, printed in the Scandinavian language. That paper was a great encouragement and comfort to the Saints who live in Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. Some two or three years ago it became necessary to discontinue the paper on account of its not receiving the financial support which would justify its publication. That was a great loss to our Scandinavian Saints, and they desire much that the paper be revived.

The Board of Publication has consented to publish the paper again, providing enough financial support is assured. There are not enough Saints in Scandinavia to provide all of the necessary support for the paper. In that case we must appeal to the Scandinavian Saints in America for help. You are living here in this country, where you have wonderful church privileges. You have the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, that bring to you news from all parts of the church. You have the privilege of attending General Conferences, district conferences, reunions, and perhaps living in a large branch. These are great blessings to you, but your brothers and sisters in the Old Country are denied all of them. They have no point of contact with the general church, with the exception of what they get through the missionary. If you were still living in Scandinavia and could not read English, I am sure you would at least want a church paper published in your own language.

The subscription price for Sandhedens Banner will probably be one dollar a year. We will need about 450 subscriptions at that price if the paper is not to be published at a loss. We are not asking that you send any money now. But we are desirous of hearing from you at once, letting us know how much support annually we can depend upon from you in case we are successful in getting the paper started. Promise to subscribe for yourself and if possible pay for two or three or even five subscriptions, so that the subscription list can reach the goal necessary. You can have the extra papers sent to you for distribution, or they can be sent to the missionaries to be used as tracts.

Your interest in spreading the gospel in the land of your nativity I am sure is of such a character as to move see in our personality the exemplification of an approach to the ideal to which we would lead them. We, ourselves, must sincerely try to be what we would have them become. We must manifest our faith in the way of life to which we would point them. We must ourselves draw deeply from the living spring from which we would encourage them to drink.

Marriage Notices

RANDALL-CHRISTY.—Sister S. Elira Randall and Bert G. Christy were united in holy marriage at the home of Brother and Sister Randall at Cloud Bay, District of Thunder Bay. The bride was given away by her aged father. Priest Abraham Miller pronounced the ceremony. Witnesses were a brother and sister. After the ceremony many friends assembled around the table prepared with the good things of our land.

Our Departed Ones

DOWKER.—William Henry Dowker was born March 21, 1872, at Park Hill, Ontario, Canada. United in marriage to Caroline M. Breyding, at Durand, Michigan, March 22, 1895. To this union were born two children, Vera Kathleen and Gertrude Eleanor. United with the church March 20, 1887, being baptized by Elder J. J. Cornish at Bayport, Michigan. Died October 13, 1927, at his home in Danville, Illinois, death being caused by cerebral hemorrhage. He survived only five hours after being stricken. He leaves to mourn his passing, his companion, two daughters; two sisters, Mrs. James M. Ferguson and Mrs. B. C. Harder, and two brothers, John A. and David E. Dowker. Funeral services were conducted at the Immanuel Presbyterian Church at Danville, by Reverend Miles Snyder, assisted by Elder William Henderson. Members of Division 100, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, acted as honorary escort, the services at the Spring Hill Cemetery being conducted by Anchor Lodge 980, American Free and Accepted Masons. Our brother although being isolated from church privileges for more than thirty-seven years, has lived a true consistent life, which has merited for him the esteem of his fellow workmen and his many friends and neighbors. This high regard for his memory was evidenced by the large number of floral offerings, some of which came from various States. Hundreds passed his remains, paying tribute to the memory of a true man who has gone to a sure reward.

GERNS.—Frederick Wilhelm Gerns was born October 11, 1845, in Germany. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on January 14, 1912. Died August 19, 1927, at his home in Salt Lake City. Funeral sermon was by Pastor Calvin H. Rich, and remarks by Elder Larkin, of the Utah Church. Brother Gerns leaves his companion and three daughters residing in Salt Lake City. Interment at Mount Olivet Cemetery, Salt Lake City.

WORKMAN.—Mabel Leona Workman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Davis, of Council Grove, Kansas, was born March 9, 1901. She married Brother Edward Workman, of Foraker, Oklahoma, October 11, 1919. They were both baptized December 16, 1923, by Brother A. H. Christensen, and became real leaders. Her death, occurring on October 4, 1927, was quite sudden, and all the community mourns her departure. A real Saint was laid to rest. Funeral sermon was by Hubert Case, in the Methodist church at Foraker; the prayer was by Brother J. E. Montague.

RANCH HOME OF THE PINE CONE SILVER FOX AND FUR FARMS, INC.

Located three fourths of a mile south of Traverse City, Michigan, in a beautiful 40-acre wooded tract. We are building a 50-pen fox ranch, the company having twenty-five pairs of silver foxes and ten pairs of blues. Also providing for fifteen pairs of boarding foxes.

Those seen in the picture are Roy V. Hopkins, president; Mrs. R. V. Hopkins; Cecil J. Moran, vice president; C. H. Smith, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. C. H. Smith; B. D. Smith; and Mrs. B. J. McGee. The gentleman taking the picture is Mr. McGee, the president of the Michigan Fox Breeders Association, of which we are a member. We are also a member of the American National Fox Breeders Association.

"The women of the United States are buying and wearing one half billion dollars ($500,000,000) worth of furs every year. Of this vast sum only $70,000,000 worth is produced in the United States. Canada and Russia, two of the greatest fur-producing countries on the globe, do not ship so many because the inhabitants of those lands, especially in the regions that produce most of the furs, wear them for clothing. But an industry that amounts to five hundred million dollars a year ranks so high in the volume of the world's business that it must demand and receive immediate attention. The United States is admittedly the arbiter of fur fashions for the world."—Editorial in the Peoria Star, Wednesday, September 28, 1927.

So with 25 pairs of pure bred, pedigreed silver black foxes and 10 pairs of blue foxes, that are prolific and are good fur producers, that have been selected from one of the highest average collection of foxes in the United States, we are entering this industry with a trained expert in charge of the foxes.

With an ever-increasing demand for the better pelts, we are going into the fur business; and with production $480,000,000 short in the United States, we know we can expand six and one half times.

Anyone interested or wishing to know more about the industry, write:

The Church and Parenthood

"A great deal of thought is being given to the increasing number of broken homes caused by divorce," recently said Doctor Valeria Parker, who lectures under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches. And she expressed the opinion that because the church has always held marriage to be sacred, it therefore is a task of the church to train men and women for home building and parenthood.

Without doubt religious education should play a part in preparing people for parenthood, but the causes of broken homes are not summed up in the word divorce, for divorce is but the outcropping of the deep-lying forces which have led to the divorce. Those causes are not always simple, but when properly analyzed sometimes show great complexity.

The chief remedy for the evils, in my opinion, lies in education, but not in religious education alone, unless by religious education we mean general spiritual culture. Throughout the whole intellectual development and expansion of the child and adolescent should run the golden thread of social responsibility, and no pains should be spared to impress the great ideal of education, citizenship; and citizenship includes parenthood.

Doctor Parker is right in holding that the church has a heavy responsibility to discharge in solving the problem presented by growing instability of the home. The sanctity of marriage must be emphasized and thoroughly inculcated. Upon youth must be impressed the idea that our highest attainments are reached only when our homes are established on the basis of responsibility to God and to society.

And this means that there must be taught to our youth the essentiality of clean religious lives as a preparation for parenthood. And to teach cleanliness, the factors which enter into it must plainly be analyzed and discussed with especial emphasis upon the positive aspects. Doctor Parker rather succinctly presents the problem when she says, in making a plea for organization of special groups in congregations wherein this aspect of religious education might be carried on:

Instead of vaguely talking to boys about purity, the church should tell the ways in which nature will help him to make the fight for clean living, the principles of which the church upholds.

If you believe in the eternity of life, then you should be interested in the origin of life. Since the home never has carried on this educational work to any extent, the people should be able to come to their church and get the information so that they may answer the early questions of children truthfully.

The greatest difficulty in dealing in this work is to get older people to realize that there is a difference between the manifestations of the misunderstanding of sex, such as social diseases, illegitimacy, and prostitution, and in the most important relationships of life to be found in love between men and women in marriage and in parenthood.

It is hard to get them to look upon sex in its normal aspects as something clean and fine and constructive, and not as a thing dark, mysterious, and degraded.

I have long been looking forward to the time when we as a people shall have developed a system of education wherein our youth shall be cultured and trained with the higher responsibilities always in view, and towards this we have made some progress; and as in this progress our religious educational work gradually expands towards its ultimate right proportions, we will find the problems of and preparation for parenthood occupying an important place. And such desirable progress in the education of our youth can not come too soon. Already the forces of home disintegration have played much havoc.

Doctor Cadman on Theological Discussions

The prominence of Doctor Cadman, of Brooklyn, New York, in church circles today is such that it gives a significance to his public utterances not attaching to lesser lights. Recently, when speaking before a Philadelphia gathering, this popular preacher deplored the "waste of the resources of God to satisfy sectarian vanity," while referring to theological wars of all varieties. He charged that the church had lost its "worth-whileness" in the opinion of the public and had been succeeded by the state, intimating that these theological wars had been largely responsible for this change in the minds of the public, a change of view which confronted the church leaders with a serious problem.

Speaking in the interests of greater church unity and the necessity for churchmen and churches to apply themselves to the problems of touching by church influence the millions as yet untouched, he said:

I would be glad to see a holiday given to all theological speculation for fifty years. We already have enough Modernist writing to do us and far too much Fundamentalist writing. It is time we put aside the discussion that means exactly nothing at all to the 59,000,000 in this country still untouched by the church, and begin to live some of the principles that are the basis of our religion.

I plead for union upon an irreducible minimum of faith and propose certain neutral zones for difference of opinion in theological thought.

We never can think alike and never want to think alike. That would be the most hopeless of stagnations. The great denominations have made great contributions to Christian history, and I would be the last one to cast all this aside. But we are living in a different world today, and the crest of this wave of sectarianism has passed. The new day is dawning.

It would be interesting to see an expression by this distinguished churchman as to what constitutes the "irreducible minimum of faith," and what might be the "neutral zones for difference of opinion." I venture the guess that an attempt on his part to do so would start a vigorous and prolonged theological discussion which would threaten the continuation of the Federal Council of Churches of which he is the head.

How far will Doctor Cadman go in permitting some one else to define for him what the "irreducible minimum" of faith is? F. M. S.

Interest in Book of Mormon Increases

It is gratifying to hear from authoritative sources that the Book of Mormon has a firm hold on the interest of the Saints; that it was no fancy which attracted them as to a novelty, but that the second, third, and fourth readings produce deeper and more intense sensations and faith. These things are clearly conveyed by many who write to the First Presidency and to other officials of the church, and to the HERALD editors. They come from young men and young women, from men in their best days of activity, from mothers active in the duties falling to them, and from Saints who are living far beyond the allotted years of man—threescore and ten.

From the entire field of correspondence accessible, we gain the idea that the present impulse to read and study the Book of Mormon exceeds anything of the kind that has ever come to the church. Saints are determining calmly and deliberately the great value of the book and are fearlessly presenting it for the consideration of their friends and neighbors.

A suggestion made early in the present movement, that everyone engaging in the reading and study of the book determine for himself just what particular purpose he has in so doing, seems to have borne fruit because of the closer application and deeper thought which necessarily ensues. Many have read for the purpose of determining whether its doctrines agree with those of the Bible and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and joy has possessed them when they have found the three books agreeing on each pivotal point of doctrine, and each adding to the other a clearness and depth of understanding which begets increased faith. Some have read to determine the value of the book in the solution of the present-day social problems knocking at our door for solution. Whatever the special aim or purpose of the reading, it has worked for profit to the reader. The book is standing the test of the closest scrutiny.

In some families reading the book has become an organized family function, accompanied by prayer, and of course a spiritual uplift ensues. God is making good his promise that the light and testimony of his Spirit shall be given to those who ask of him, and read with a sincere desire to know the truth.

Reading, pleasant and profitable though it be, is not an end in itself. Spirituality, faith, the fruits of the Spirit, the urge to go on, to do more of similar and different work, we believe is coming to be the common experience of the Saints, and from this crystallization in general sentiment in time there will come new aims, new tasks, new opportunities to engage in definite activities of a common, church-wide nature, adding to the common store of knowledge, experience, achievement.

Here is a sample sentiment from a recent reader of the Book of Mormon which comes to our desk this morning: "I finished reading the Book of Mormon today. This makes five times I have read it. I love it more than ever." This comes from Elder R. D. Weaver, who has been busily engaged in special preaching services for four weeks at Denver, Colorado, during which several have displayed a very deep interest in the work and three have passed through the waters of baptism. It is fair to presume that the reading of the Book of Mormon has added to Elder Weaver's already splendid equipment to preach the gospel to the world.

Let the reading of the Book of Mormon become the special activity of the Saints for the ensuing winter season, and individually, in family circles, and in societies, clubs, and classes, let the spirit of devotion mark the work. R. J. L.

Dead Sea Treasures

For several years articles have been making appearance in the press of the country describing the immense wealth contained in Palestine's Dead Sea. Several attempts have been made to form corporations to reclaim this vast wealth, which finally were resolved into a struggle among corporations and syndicates for the concession to work the sea.

Recent dispatches from London, England, say that a British syndicate, a subsidiary of the Imperial Chemical Industries, limited, representing a capitalization of nearly $300,000,000, has been successful in obtaining concessions, and this carries with it the rejection of overtures from American and other European financial organizations.

It is claimed, after years of consideration, that the Dead Sea contains an almost inexhaustible supply of potash, and the cost of reclaiming the product is not considerable. The industry will doubtless be of great service in the building up and development of Palestine, and would seem to supply the element of reasonably remunerative employment which has been lacking thus far in the rehabilitation of the country.

As to the value of this concession, the London Times says: "Thus ends the prolonged struggle of powerful interests, British, American, and European, for the most coveted prize in the way of development concessions which has been competed for in modern times."

Unique Method of Recording Book of Mormon Readers

Ina S. Bivens, Gashland, Missouri, writes: "After Brother Fry's letter came out in the HERALD, I asked the Mothers' Class one Sunday morning how many had read Brother Fry's letter and were complying with the request. Two sisters raised their hands. I suggested that we try to see how many pages we could read the coming week. This proposition was put to the school, and the following Sunday the count was taken by classes. We found we had read a total of 2,753 pages. Next we were to see how many pages we could read in each family. This brought us 2,394 or a total of 5,147 pages. Besides this reading, one sister, Mrs. Charles Allen, read the entire book in nineteen days. This was not included in the school count, so our total for three weeks was nearly six thousand pages. We have an enrollment of ninety-four, I believe, and of course a goodly number of these were too young to read, so we think we have made a good record, and we believe all or nearly all are continuing to read. OFFICIAL

Book of Mormon Story and Essay Contest

The character of the inquiries coming to the Publicity Department regarding the Book of Mormon Story and Essay Contest indicates that many appreciate the opportunity to make a contribution to the literature of the church.

Probably not all the articles in their entirety will qualify for publication, but in every article and story submitted there will doubtless be some chapter or some paragraph of such outstanding merit that it can be used effectively in our church literature.

Prizes are offered for articles and stories on the topics as follows:

The Missionary Message of the Book of Mormon.
The Zionie Idea in the Book of Mormon.

The Book of Mormon and Religious Life of Today.
The Story of the Book of Mormon.

Many writers who in years past have contributed to the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves have asked what latitude will be allowed on the fourth topic. The outline covering this fourth topic, namely, The Story of the Book of Mormon, indicates that the entire narrative account should be given, not written as an abridged history, but as a brief, colorful, and moving account of the rise and fall of a great people.

It has been decided to allow latitude on this fourth topic, and let the writer follow the topic outline if he desires, or choose some epoch in Book of Mormon history, or some outstanding character, or some great achievement or some great religious crusade or missionary enterprise. If this is done, the historical situation should be kept accurate, but into it can be woven the legitimate imaginings of the writer, calculated to emphasize some great principle or truth, and yet so skillfully done that there will not be need for a label to interpret the plot.

To those with literary ability, the latitude given this fourth topic will prove the opportunity of a lifetime to enrich the literature of the church with a history of human life—its romances, its tragedies—yet accurate as to its historical setting.

The Publicity Department will gladly place at the disposal of those who register in this contest every help possible, and in response to inquiry, will furnish all information available.

THE PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT.

Gomer Thomas Griffiths: An Autobiography—I

CHAPTER I

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

I first saw the light of day in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania in the little town of Minersville, Schuylkill County June 2, 1856, being the fifth son of David and Martha Davis Griffiths.

My father and mother were born in South Wales in 1805 and 1819 respectively. They were married in 1835. To them were born fourteen children, all but three of whom have passed to the great beyond. Most of them were buried in Merthyr-Tydfil, Glamorganshire, South Wales. My parents migrated to America in 1855, just one year prior to my birth. My father died December 26, 1871, at Bevier, Missouri. My mother died December 29, 1906, at the same place, and was laid by the side of her loving companion who had preceded her by thirty-five years and three days.

They united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Merthyr-Tydfil, Glamorganshire, South Wales, in 1844, the year in which Joseph and Hyrum Smith were assassinated. My mother was the first to obey the call of the gospel, my father following a few weeks later; he was ordained to the office of deacon soon thereafter, in which office he labored for many years.

They left their native land with the idea of going to Zion, Utah, but during their journey across the Atlantic Ocean my parents thought the elders of the church who were in charge of them did not conduct themselves in a way and manner becoming to holy men of God. They made up their minds that after landing in America they would stop in the Eastern States for a while and investigate the affairs of the church before proceeding on their way Zionward.

landed at Philadelphia. As they depended upon the wind for their progress, very often a day's journey would be lost by a change in the wind, the vessel being carried back many miles.

After arriving in America, my parents located in Minersville, Pennsylvania, where my father, a coal miner, soon found work. But they had been very unfortunate in that they had lost all of their personal effects in transit, and, further, they were at a great disadvantage for the reason that, being Welsh, they could neither understand nor speak the English language. Being very poor in this world's goods, not being able to converse with their new neighbors, and the habits and customs of the people being so different from those to which they had been accustomed, they became very much discouraged with the new country and also with their religion in the light in which it had been presented to them by the representatives from Utah. The Zion which was to be found in America upon the mountain tops had been pictured to them in glowing terms by these ambassadors who had been sent to gather in the honest in heart to the "land flowing with milk and honey." They were to find heaven upon earth as soon as they reached the "promised land," but that which they had witnessed on board the ship and the treatment they received upon reaching the "land of the brave and the free," caused them great anguish of soul and almost destroyed their confidence in the great latter-day work. Under these perplexing and trying circumstances I was born into the new world.

My father had a sister living at McKeesport, Pennsylvania, not far from Pittsburgh. I have been told that my uncle owned nearly all the land where McKeesport is now situated and that he operated a line of steamboats on the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers. My father's relatives were not interested in his religion, but my parents could not forget the many blessings they had received in their native land. The Lord had confirmed the truthfulness of the latter-day work to them through the Holy Spirit. They finally concluded that God must have a people somewhere upon the earth who were trying to live pure lives in accordance with the gospel law. Subsequent events showed that God was mindful of them, and his Holy Spirit directed them to Syracuse, Ohio. Here they found a group of people who, like themselves, had become dissatisfied with Utahism and had gathered to this place awaiting future developments. Some of the Utah ministers visited them and did all within their power to convince them that polygamy and its kindred evils that had crept into the church were of God. They also received a command from Brigham Young that they should be rebaptized and reconfirmed, with which command they complied. This was the time when all the Saints who followed Brigham Young were baptized out of the Church of Jesus Christ into the Church of Brigham Young. Being a very young child, I was blessed in the Utah Church, but do not know by whom.

My parents continued to worship in this church until 1860, the year in which the late President Joseph Smith assumed the presidency of the Reorganization.

Elder Isaac Sheen, of the Reorganization, resided in Cincinnati, Ohio. He was editor of the True Latter Day Saints' Herald, a small paper published monthly and the first paper to be published by the Reorganization. Elder Henry Green, who was one of the leading local officials of the Utah Church, in some way came in contact with Elder Sheen, and upon the former's invitation, Brother Sheen visited Syracuse and there was instrumental, in the hands of the Lord, in baptizing my parents into the Reorganization. One year later Apostle James Blakely arrived upon the scene, at which time he blessed me. I was five years old. So I have been blessed twice, once in the Utah Church and again in the Reorganization.

My father was later ordained an elder, in which capacity he served until his death. Upon his deathbed he testified that he had the blessed assurance through the Holy Spirit that he would come forth in the first resurrection. He also called me and my nephew to his bedside and testified to the truthfulness of the latter-day work. He further told us that if we did not keep the covenant we had made with the Lord upon entering the waters of baptism, it would have been better for us had a millstone been tied around our necks when we were babes and we cast into the sea.

None of my father's relatives had anything to do with religion in any form. I visited many of them while in Europe and found this to be the case. My mother's people were just the reverse. They were full of religion and running over. My Grandfather Davis was a very strict Christian. He would not permit his family to do any kind of work on the Sabbath Day, not even to peel potatoes. Everything had to be prepared on Saturday, as there was to be no cooking on the Lord's Day. He and his sons owned and operated a woolen mill at Llandovery, South Wales, and were held in high esteem by all who knew them. Both my grandparents died without hearing the latter-day work. I visited some of my mother's people while in Wales, and they were very kind to me and showed me every respect, but they were not interested in the gospel message.

Both my parents had wonderful faith in God, and implicit confidence in his promises. I never saw a doctor in our home during my father's lifetime, and not until sometime after I had entered the ministry. The only medicine given us when sick was olive oil; that is, for minor complaints. If we became dangerously ill, the elders were summoned posthaste. My parents did not have great worldly riches to bequeath to their children, but they did bequeath to us something which was of far greater value, a really tangible faith in God and in his promises.

I am greatly indebted to my mother, who lived thirty-five years after my father's departure and who had the great responsibility of rearing us boys, for she continually sought to instill in me the desire to serve God and to be an instrument in his hands for good. She impressed me that I should devote all my time and whatever talents I possessed to the service of our heavenly Father. She was a very spiritual woman and exercised the gifts of the gospel. Many times, under the influence of the Holy Ghost, she spoke to me in prophecy regarding my future.

I was also blessed with a sister, who, like my mother, was very spiritually minded and full of faith. She took a great interest in me and encouraged me, when I was almost ready to give up the warfare, to press forward in the conflict and never give up the struggle until victory had been won. She passed to her reward three weeks after the death of her mother, to be at rest in the paradise of God. Margaret Thomas will be remembered by many Saints in various parts of the United States. I have never met anyone in this church who was blessed with such a great variety of spiritual gifts as was she. She would speak in many different tongues, under the influence of the Spirit, and give the interpretation; sing in the Spirit, prophesy, and pray in the Spirit.

My youngest sister, Elizabeth Bath, of Canton, Illinois, united with the church when she was very young. She raised a large family of sons and daughters. She was a good, faithful Saint and passed away a few years ago to the spirit world. She and her good companion, Isaac Bath, did all within their power to sow the seed of the gospel in the hearts of their children and were highly honored and respected by all who knew them.

I have a sister, Maria Surrige, residing at Bevier, Missouri, who is in her eighty-sixth year. She has been a member of the church since about eight years of age. She has reared a large family of sons and daughters, some of whom are actively interested in the church. She has wrought well and is waiting for the summons to call her to her eternal home.

My oldest brother, John Griffiths, departed this life in Butte, Montana, about thirty years ago. He was identified with the church when very young and believed in the latter-day work with all his heart. He was sixty-one years old at the time of his death and left a large family of sons and daughters. His oldest son, John, is an officer in the branch at Lucas, Iowa.

My youngest brother, Edwin, who resides at Brookfield, Missouri, was baptized when a boy, but for some reason or other he has never been a very active member. He has one son and two daughters living, his wife having passed away some years since.

William Henry, a brother next to me, died when about two and one half years of age. All I remember of the occasion was the funeral. I remember sliding down the banister of the porch the day he was buried. He was laid to rest in the Syracuse Cemetery, Syracuse, Ohio. If he were living now, he would be about sixty-seven years of age. I visited his grave not long ago. It is seldom one brother has the privilege of visiting another brother's grave sixty-five years after his death.

I also had three brothers and one sister who were buried in Merthyr-Tydfil, Glamorganshire, South Wales: Joseph, Hyrum (named for the two Martyrs), David, and Mary. All four departed this life some time before I was born.

My father followed coal mining for a livelihood. I have traveled quite extensively in this world, but I have never met a coal miner whom one could call rich.

During the latter part of the Great Rebellion, I was quite young in years, times were very hard on the poor people, and it was difficult at times to get enough food to keep soul and body together. I can well remember when my youngest brother and I were allowed one egg between us. It was a real case of "fifty-fifty." For breakfast we were given bread with a small piece of butter, and hot water with a little sugar to sweeten it; once in a while we were given a small piece of cheese.

We had some excitable experiences during those war times. We lived in the village of Syracuse, on the banks of the Ohio River. Morgan, the leader of the guerillas, gave the people along the Ohio River considerable trouble and annoyance. One day his army would pass through our little town, and perhaps that same night the Union men would be after them pell-mell. Old men, cripples, and hunchbacks, who were not fit for war, were forced to act as guards on the outposts of the village, to protect the women and children. All could not be furnished guns, so they were given picks and axes with which to defend their loved ones. The poor women, to appease the wrath of the guerillas and the rebels, made sandwiches and other good things and had their small boys stand in line along the road and hand out the food to those starving men. Some of them would thank us and give us money and seemed to appreciate our kindness to them, while others would swear at us. I can remember distinctly General Custer passing through the town at the head of the cavalry. He had long, light hair reaching far down his back and was certainly a fine, handsome young man in those days. They went through the streets with a dash and did not stop for food. They were in too great a hurry to capture Morgan and his men, who had gone up the river ahead of them. In this they were successful, as they captured them a few miles above Syracuse, at Buffington's Run, and put them in our schoolhouse. I and other boys had the task of feeding them. What disposition was made of them I do not know.

When I was eight years of age I was put to work down in the coal mine, beneath the ground. I did not have to do any hard work, but I was forced to remain in the mine all day, and the worst of it was I had to spend most of my time back on the slack pile, wrapped up in my father's coat, in total darkness. My father did not permit me to burn a light, for that was considered a waste of oil. Once in a while I was allowed to throw small lumps of coal into the tram, and I surely deemed it a wonderful privilege to be permitted to do so, for it gave me the opportunity to get warm. As a general thing it is very cold and damp in the mine. I used to sleep hours and hours during the day, and sometimes when I awoke I was almost frozen; at least I thought I was. The pit boss used to come around once in a while, and he generally let me know when he paid us a visit, for he would give me a rap with the handle of his hatchet.

I spent many lonesome months in that dark place. My father was allowed a car a day for me, which amounted to about one dollar, and that went a long way toward the support of the family during those hard times.

Young as I was in years, I was exposed to many dangers. One particular time it seemed to me that the time of our departure had arrived. The slate and rock overhead started to come down upon us, and the terrible pressure on the props that supported the roof caused them to break in two. What an awful feeling came over me as the rumblings sounded as if there were a great many big cannons engaged in a fierce battle, and the constant snapping of the props made a loud noise just like torpedoes going off. There was some fast running done on the part of father and myself to get out of that chamber of death.

On another occasion, father and I were working with a man who had a very bad temper and who would use profane language when in a rage. One day the blast missed fire, which necessitated drilling out the tamping, a very dangerous undertaking, for if the drill point should come in contact with the powder, it would explode instantly. My father wanted to drill out the dirt, but the man insisted that he would attend to it. He was terribly angry and in a rage all the time he was drilling out the tamping. My father kept telling him to be very careful, but he rammed the drill into the hole as hard as he could, and there was a terrible explosion, which blew out our lights. There we were, in total darkness and the place full of smoke! I was badly frightened. My father called to the man, but there was no answer; hence we concluded that he had been killed. Some men working not far from us heard the explosion and came running into our chamber to see what had happened. To our great surprise, we could not find the man. They searched for him under the pile of coal that had been blown down by the force of the premature blast, but he was not there. At last they found him. The force of the explosion had blown him back on the slack pile, quite a distance from where we were. His clothes were on fire and he was almost dead. Poor fellow! He was in a terrible condition and was confined to his bed for many months.

That experience made a very strong impression on my mind against working in the coal mines. I have had many narrow escapes from death while working in the bowels of the earth, but my Father in heaven delivered me from all.

During the winter months, the days being short, it was seldom that I saw much daylight except on the Sabbath. It was generally dark when we descended into the pit and about dark when we ascended at the close of the day. People do not realize how many miners give up their lives and undergo hardships in order to furnish heat for others.

Wheat Pool and Stewardships

BY BISHOP G. LESLIE DELAPP

Passing through Winnipeg a few weeks ago, I happened to notice on the editorial sheet of the Winnipeg Tribune an announcement of the publishing of "Pooling wheat in Canada," by Walter P. Davisson.

Having spent considerable time in Canada, before and since the organization of the pool, where my work has brought me quite closely in contact with its activities, I had more than a passing interest in the announcement made, that a book had been published giving a complete history of its organization, as well as setting forth its purposes and aims. I placed my order for a copy and have just finished reading it.

I wonder if some of the HERALD readers would not be interested in a little of the story of the development of an organization of "138,000 farmers of Western Canada selling their wheat through their own office."

I can not hope to give more than a general idea of the contents of the book, but perhaps shall be able to present enough to make one appreciate the wonderful possibilities resident within such an organization as the "pool," and to think of it in terms of stewardship. Not that cooperative marketing is stewardship, but in putting our doctrine of stewardships in operation, we will, of necessity, have to give consideration to cooperative marketing.

The author in a brief introductory note states that the parents of wheat pools in Canada are a grim pair: War! Necessity!

"The Canada Wheat Board was established by the Federal Government in 1919, placing all wheat in the Dominion under the nation's control."

"The wheat pools—first established in Alberta during the late summer of 1923—may be recognized as its re-creation."

The characteristics of both are set out within one sentence:

"The Wheat Board"—"Government controlled; compulsory; with the aim of preventing wheat profiteering in the immediate post-war years." "The Wheat Pools"—"Grower controlled; voluntary contract; with the aim of preventing the dumping of wheat on glutted markets in days of peace."

In an interesting manner, one is told much of the history of rural Western Canada; the opening up of new country; the hardships and struggles of its early settlers; but one will have to read the book in order to fully appreciate that phase of it.

"Just fifty years ago the first wheat was shipped out of West Canada—857 bushels via Red River boat to Duluth, and sold in Toronto—and today just thirty per cent of the world's export wheat originates on those prairies."

In the crop year 1925-26 the growers of Western Canada delivered a total of 364,000,000 bushels of wheat to the market, 190,000,000 bushels of which was marketed by the pool, an organization created in the year 1923, and which in less than four years reached a point in growth where it handled over half the wheat raised in Western Canada.

Let me quote one of the reasons for the pool: "In the year 1923, there seemed to be no end to the river of grain which flooded onto the market in Western Canada during the first hundred days after harvest. It was not long before the surfeited markets refused to stand up against the disorderly stampede of grain sellers."

Prices fell, and a general slump followed which all but ruined growers in spite of the magnificent crop they had raised. It was here that Aaron Sapiro outlined principles of commodity cooperative marketing which ran across the prairies like a flame: "By aid of scientific selling of wheat, the cooperatives aim at increasing the basic level of grain prices to the farmer."

Three pools were started, one in each of the three Provinces, Alberta, Manitoba, and Saskatchewan. Their aim was to reach fifty per cent of the wheat acreage. Alberta was the only pool which had organization plans completed and the authority to operate at slightly less than the fifty per cent objective. It marketed 35,000,000 bushels in the 1923-24 crop year from 2,602,000 acres pooled. In 1926 over 20,000,000 acres of grain was pooled and 190,000,000 bushels of wheat marketed the pool way, raised by 138,000 growers.

The pool organization is democratic—there are 16 directors on the board of Saskatchewan Wheat Pool. There are 80,500 pool growers in this Province, bound together by individual five-year contracts. Each member has one vote, whether he farms 15 acres or 10,000 acres. The Province is divided into 16 pool districts. Each district is divided into 10 subdistricts, and each subdistrict is represented by a delegate who is elected by ballot, via mail. The 160 delegates do not meet at the head office, but meet at a central point in the 16 home districts, where each ten elect one of their number to the Board of Directors.

The delegates do, however, meet once a year in a general convention at the head office. Here the directors render an account of the past year's activities.

There are approximately one thousand shipping points in Saskatchewan. There are some 850 local pool committees grouped around these shipping points. These committees consist of a chairman, a secretary, and board of three. These are elected yearly by the pool growers in the shipping territory served by the local. This committee is the chief communication trench between the head office and home district and serves the growers in numerous ways.

Field workers are scattered over the Province. These men keep in touch with the growers, advising them of the activities of the pool, keeping them interested, and doing much good in an educational way.

The pool has a separate organization to handle the marketing of the grain. This organization is known as the Central Selling Agency. It serves as a central marketing association for the pools, but for no others. Its purpose, "To preserve for the growers their proper profits and preserve for the public their proper economies."

The central board of this agency is made up of three members from each of the Provincial Pool's directorates. The Central Selling Agency takes over all pool grain at its terminals and sells all pool grain. This agency is completely owned and controlled by pool growers in all three Provinces through their representation on the central board.

The Central Selling Agency has a seat on the Winnipeg grain exchange—has erected its own selling equipment and personnel at strategic points on both sides of the Atlantic, with offices at Calgary, Vancouver, Toronto, Fort William, Montreal, New York, and Paris. Its head office is in Winnipeg.

The pool has been able to accomplish a great deal through this organization. It is headed by some of the most brilliant brains in Canada. The pool believes it poor economy to employ any but the best. In the crop year of 1925, 190,000,000 bushels of wheat were marketed in an orderly way. No more than 26,000,000 being marketed in any one month and no less than 9,000,000, with the exception of the last month, when 7,000,000 bushels were marketed. It is also to be noted that through this method of marketing every grower gets the same price, according to grade, whether he delivers his wheat in the months of September and October or January and February, thus giving the man located a long distance from market the same advantage as the more favorably located member.

In addition to the orderly marketing brought about, the payments to the farmer have been spread over the year. The initial payment, which has averaged around one dollar per bushel, depending on the grade and the market, is made at the time the wheat is delivered; the first interim payment of from ten to thirty-five cents is made about the first of March, just when the farmer starts his spring work; the second interim payment, which runs about the same as the first, is made around July or August, about the time the farmer starts harvesting; and the final payment is made in October.

The pool handles and sells the grain at cost. The sum of two cents per bushel is deducted each year from all deliveries of pool wheat, to set up a reserve for the purchase of elevators and equipment. Since the fall of 1923, including the year 1926, the organized growers of Prairie Canada have paid in a total of $10,000,000 in connection with their elevator plans. A great saving to the growers is made here because of the great amount of grain handled with less equipment than under the competitive trade organizations.

Many other things are hoped to be accomplished through the pool. At the present time a good deal of mixing of grades is taking place. The farmer does not get the benefit of this, but under the pool system it is hoped to make it work to his advantage. The pool also hopes to eliminate undue speculation, etc.

Not so long ago, some 200 men, accredited delegates from Australia, United States, Russia, and Canada, in an international conference met in Kansas City, Missouri, that they might confer as to possible ways and means of coordinating their respective wheat-marketing plans. Nothing definite was accomplished, other than to form a permanent Cooperative Marketing Bureau. But what of the future? There is every possibility of an international marketing association developing. If so, there are not many of us who will not be affected by it in one way or another.

Cooperative marketing, of course, creates opposition. It doesn't eliminate the conflict of interests, and so the pool realizes that it has a war on its hands. Grain traders who have been in business for years and who have a large capital investment, are not going to see their business torn down without a fight. Again, who can tell what the future will bring forth?

As I wonder about it, I am made to think of our own future. In the establishment of stewardships we are going to find the same conflict of interests, not only with the rest of the world, but with our own people. Only the Spirit of the Master predominating in the lives of men and influencing their actions can eliminate that conflict of interests. We must be bound together with but one common purpose, that of the building up of the kingdom of heaven. It can be done when and just as soon as we are willing to set our hands to the task and comply with, "Organize yourselves and appoint every man his stewardship." This and this alone will bring about the only satisfactory form of brotherly cooperation.

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

The violation of every law, whether physical, civil, or spiritual, in the very nature of things, carries with it an appropriate penalty; otherwise it would cease to be a law.

Every act of service, either great or small, has its proper compensation in this or the life to come. This is evidenced in a very wonderful statement made by the Master of life as recorded in Luke in an effort to emphasize the significance of true service. He suggests that when a feast is prepared it should not be made to those who are amply able to repay by giving a return spread, for therein is "their recompense," thus balancing the account; but rather seek to render service to those who are unable to recompense. However, we are assured that such shall not go unrewarded, for they shall be recompensed in the life to come, or "at the resurrection of the just," and blessed is the man who is thus recompensed, for God will give the reward. It is "blessed to eat bread in the kingdom of God."

Some time ago, while passing a certain church building, I noticed the following announcement: "We preach Christ and him crucified." It occurred to me that it was possible to crucify him every time we preach him, in the fact that on Sunday from the pulpit the blessed word of the Lord is beautifully presented with "rhetorical delivery backed up by the evergreens of truth" as far as the scriptures are concerned at least, telling how we should "love God and our neighbor as ourselves, for therein is the law fulfilled," and straightway on Monday by pursuing "strictly business methods," or manifesting how shrewd we are by "putting one over on our brother." Our discipleship with Christ is contingent upon our ability and disposition to bear fruit or render service. As Christ was lifted up physically in death, let us lift him up in life.

Not long ago in one of our large cities two workmen were at dizzy and dangerous heights attempting to place a sign advertising a product the use of which would drag down to a dismal desert of degradation, and if continued to death. Many there are who will jeopardize their life and liberty for a few paltry dollars. Will the time come when the

ARCHAEOLOGIST TELLS ROTARY CLUB OF SURVIVALS OF ANCIENT MAYAN CIVILIZATION

Doctor Sylvanus Griswold Morley, who for some years past has been conducting archæological researches in Central America as a representative of the Carnegie Institution, Washington, District of Columbia, told the members of the Rock Island Rotary Club yesterday some very interesting facts about the buried cities of Yucatan and Guatemala. The Rotarians' guest is at present in charge of excavation at the buried city of Chichen Itza, Yucatan, not far from Merida, the capital of Yucatan. Three weeks ago he was made an honorary member of the Rotary Club of Merida, an organization of forty members. Merida has a population of about 80,000. All but about a thousand of this number are Indians and half-breeds.

Doctor Morley had much to say in praise of the civilization attained to by the ancient Mayas, the people who made up the population of Central America ages ago, and he declared this race made far greater progress than the Incas of Peru or the Aztecs of Mexico. "The Mayas reached the highest civilization in the New World," he declared. "That civilization was equaled only by the tribes who occupied neolithic Europe 25,000 or 30,000 years ago."

The speaker said that the earliest date thus far discovered on Maya monuments was 98 B. C. He told his hearers the leading facts regarding his discovery in northern Guatemala in 1916 of a Maya monument of date, 68 A. D. It seems that Doctor Morley offers a prize of $25 to natives for each buried city they discover. He pays them from $10 to $20 for every reported find of an ancient monument, as well as bonuses.

An Indian youth who was in the forests from January to June, the season for gathering the sap from which chewing gum is made, reported to Doctor Morley that he had run across a buried city not far from the camp in which he had spent the winter and spring. For a consideration of $4 a day and a mule to ride, this youth agreed to guide Doctor Morley's party to the spot. The youth was ill of malaria, and according to Doctor Morley, the boy's liver was "as hard as a brickbat."

Doctor Morley's Find

A doctor in the party kept the Indian in fair condition by medicine and drugs, and although when they reached the camp the lad was quite sick, he guided them to the site of the buried city six miles away. Here Doctor Morley was disappointed because the first monument found had been damaged by a fallen tree and the inscription had been scraped off by the tree in its fall. However, members of the party found about twenty other monuments, and the one discovered by Doctor Morley bore the date of A. D. 68. He said in his address that every five years the Mayas erected a large-sized shaft of stone, and these are the shafts, for the most part, which are discovered.

Chichen Itza, the buried city he was excavating, was about nine square miles in extent. "That is," he added, "from the center of the town one can walk to a point two miles away and still run across relics of the ancient town. It is located in northeastern Yucatan and was founded about 530 A. D. It was occupied for about one hundred and fifty years, and then, for some reason, abandoned, and lay in ruins for about one thousand years. It was then reoccupied until a period about fifty years before the Spanish conquest, when it was permanently abandoned. Doctor Morley said that temples, pyramids, and palaces are found by the excavators. The houses of the common people, built as they were of palm leaves with thatched roofs, have long since disappeared. The forest has literally swallowed up this ancient town.

Essentials of Progress

Doctor Morley said the five essentials of racial progress were steps marking the conquest and practical use of fire, the use of agriculture involving the use of domesticated animals, and the rights of property, the use of tools other than those of stone, beasts of burden, and the application of the principle of the wheel to manufacturing. Although the Mayas, he said, had but two of these essentials, they did more to pull themselves out of savagery than any other race in the pre-Columbian world. "They are especially noted for their hieroglyphics and the calendar they made use of for the measurement of time. This calendar can be available for a remarkably long space of time. Their hieroglyphics are ideographic, not phonetic; that is, their characters stand for ideas, not words. Their calendar keeps a most accurate tab on elapsed time."

Soil Fertility

Doctor Morley said he had known bananas in Central America to grow an inch in a period of twenty-four hours. He said that when they tore up an old walk preparatory to laying a new cement walk, a sack of beans in some way became mixed up with building material, and the water caused the beans to take root in the ground and "in four days there was a crop." The Rotarians looked a bit skeptical at this, but Doctor Morley could have told them much more about the fertility of the soil in Central America had he felt so inclined. Speaking of the necessity for taking quinine in that country, he remarked that he had himself taken a dose of fifty grains.

Years of Work

Doctor Morley explained that in 1914 he was asked to make a survey of archæological possibilities in southern Mexico and northern Central America in behalf of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, an establishment for scientific research with an endowment of $30,000,000. He was to make a study of human history from available material. He presented a plan, but a Mexican revolution interfered, and next came the World War. However, in 1922 he made a survey in Mexico, and in 1923 secured permission to make excavations in Yucatan.—Rock Island Argus, July 13, 1927.

Unread Stone Book in Nebraska University

HARTINGTON, NEBRASKA, August 8.—On the rocks of Cedar County some day may be found the key to the life of a prehistoric people, if characters on boulders and stones are ever deciphered.

The most recent discovery of interest was made by J. C. Brockman, near Hartington, who plowed up what looked like a book but the leaves of which were of granite. On these slabs, which are one and one half inches thick, are inscriptions in a language yet unknown to civilization. The glyphs closely resemble those marked on the face of a boulder found near the spot in 1869 and which is preserved on the campus of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

Not only the granite book but the spot where it was found has been one of speculation for some time. Some magnet in the ground seemed to draw electric currents, and whenever there was an electric storm lightning always struck close to the spot. For three years Mr. Brockman had a grain stack near it; and a fence which surrounded the stack crossed the mysterious spot. Although the grain never was damaged, the fence was, and after each storm there would be burnt posts to replace.

Geologists Study the Find

In 1869, when Cedar County still was unsettled save by a very few, Professor Aughey, one of the first four instructors in the University of Nebraska, which was opened that year, was exploring in parts of northeastern Nebraska and came upon the face of the granite boulder projecting about three inches above the ground. He was caught by the appearance of the stone and proceeded to uncover it. On the surface were glyphs.

Professor Aughey realized the value of the boulder as an historical specimen, but was unable to provide the means to bring it to the university. The place was marked, but nothing was done toward removing the boulder for years. Finally Doctor Barbour, then a professor in Iowa, heard of the remarkable slab of granite and with the aid of the senior class intended to take it to the Iowa state campus. But the stone was saved for Nebraska through want of funds on the part of the graduating class at Iowa.

In the meantime, Doctor Barbour had accepted a position in the University of Nebraska's department of geology. When he came to the campus here, the senior class likewise was looking for some remembrance to leave to the university. He told them of the Cedar County boulder, and the students decided at once to save it for Nebraska. They raised the money and sent a man to bring it to Lincoln without delay.

Geologists and archæologists who have seen the stone believe that the language written on it is that of a prehistoric people who lived before the glacial period. The rock seems to bear proof that it was brought to Cedar County in the glacial movement. E. E. Blackman, curator of the Nebraska State Historical Society, examined the other rocks on the hill around the place from which the boulder was taken and found that they were of a softer, smoother material, and he reasoned that if Indians carved these symbols they would have chosen one of the softer rocks on which to leave their thoughts.

The only other specimen resembling the characters on the campus boulder and the recent granite book, is at Dighton, Massachusetts. These, so far as is known, are the only ones in the world with the peculiar glyphs on them. The Dighton rock lies on the bed of the Tauton River about twenty miles from Boston. It can be seen but twice in each twenty-four hours. That is during low tide. When the tide goes out, leaving the river shallow, the rock bares its face, and scientists, tourists, and those whose curiosity leads them into strange places, row out to look at the rock. The rush of the water, the wear of the tide and the debris of the river have not marred the imprints on its face.

The characters on the faces of these stones have been studied and compared with all known ancient writings, but they are essentially different. Many of the Indian tribes that wandered over Nebraska have been asked to translate the glyphs, but none has been found that could decipher any of the messages on the faces of the boulders. One character which is the same on all these specimens is a cross resembling a plus sign, which appears in the center.—Sioux City Journal, August 9, 1927.

Indian's Belief of Creation

The ancient mysteries of the Greeks are fairly well known, through the investigation of scholars, and the fact that other early peoples also had ritualistic ceremonies by which lessons were sought to be taught is quite well established. It is interesting to note that the aborigines of this continent are now known to have had their secret societies and that in some particulars they sought by means of dramas to bring home particular beliefs. Doctor Alanson Skinner, curator of anthropology for the Public Museum of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has been a great student of this subject and was made a member of the Mitawin, the society of the Menomonic Indians, under the designation of "Little Wolf." He gives the ancient myth as promulgated in the ceremonies of this tribe, which is but a variant in detail from that common to nearly all Indians of North America. It is as follows:

In the beginning the Great Spirit sat above, gazing down on an illimitable expanse of waters. He willed it, and there appeared an island, the world, upon the surface of the seas. The Great Spirit again willed it, and behold the earth sprang up upon itself personified as a woman, our grandmother. For a time she was alone upon the earth, and then, again by the will of the Great Spirit, she gave birth to a daughter, who dwelt with her. In turn, this daughter was entered, some say by the four winds of heaven, and she gave birth to three children, one of human form, who was called "The Great Dawn," or "The Great Light," another who was an anthropomorphic wolf, and a flint rock, which, issuing un-naturally, caused his mother's death.

The Great Light dwelt with his brother, the wolf, or, as he is also called, Onahpatac, after they had grown up. It was his duty to rid the earth of the evil snakes and other monsters who dwelt upon it and who made it an unfit place for the habitation of mankind who had not yet appeared. The wolf hunted for him and kept the lodge supplied with food. Angered at his continual attacks, the monstrous evil powers plotted to slay the Great Dawn, but, as he was created by the will of no less a person than the Great Spirit himself, they soon realized that this would be impossible,

But now the Great Dawn attacked them more mercilessly than ever. He drove them from their remotest hiding places and slew them. There was no safety for them anywhere. Then he wept for his lost brother; the very ocean receded at every strangling breath that he drew. The evil ones were terrified. At last they brought the slain Wolf brother back to life and returned him to the Great Dawn, but when he approached the dwelling place of that hero, the Great Dawn refused to admit him, saying he had been dead four days and he smelled foully. The brother begged the Great Dawn to reconsider, saying that if he were allowed to return to earth, then human beings, when they should come into existence, would also be resurrected upon the fourth day. But the Great Dawn refused, saying it would be an evil thing for the bodies of mankind to be resurrected after dissolution had set in, and he sent his brother to the western heavens, where he was given charge over the realm of the dead. It was he who constructed the "Road of the Dead," the Milky Way, over which the souls of the departed must pass.

The Great Dawn now recommenced his war upon the evil spirits, and in desperation they called upon the Great Spirit himself to save them. He suggested that the only way in which they could compound their difficulty with the Great Dawn was to offer him the secrets of their "Medicine Lodge" and teach him its ritual, that he might pass on to mankind in due time the rules of fraternity of health, long life, and immortality.

This the powers did. They constructed an oblong lodge, oriented east and west, on the tops of the mountains. They caused it to be covered with clouds, blue within and white without. They seasoned the food for the feast with a pinch of the blue sky itself. They entered and seated themselves around its edge, and took off their skins, or, as the old men say, "their animal natures" as birds and beasts, and hung them, full of their secret things, from the poles behind them. Then they sent for the Great Dawn.

When the Great Dawn entered the Lodge, he was instructed secretly in a room adjoining the body of the structure, and then he was taken into the main building and there, after certain rites, he was slain and brought to life again, and was then in possession of all the light that his instructors had to offer.

Truly no more interesting interpretation of the American Indian's concept of the creation and the belief in immortality can be found than this. And it further illustrates the mythology of these people, possibly showing a common source with that of the ancient inhabitants of the Old World.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Lincoln, Nebraska

We're all busy! There is much going on in Lincoln Branch now, and it is difficult to keep up with everything.

Ruth Turpin entertained a group of young people at her home the evening of the 8th of September. This day was Ruth's birthday, and she received several useful and pretty gifts. The evening was spent in playing games both on the porch and in the house. Delicious refreshments were served at the end of the evening by Ruth and her mother.

After State Fair was over, thoughts were turned toward school. The university students, who return to their homes in the spring for the summer recess, returned. We are always glad to see fall come, because there is more activity in every department of the church.

On September 25 the services took the form of an all-day meeting. There was special music, and we had a number of visitors from other branches in the district. Mrs. Black and her two daughters from Grand Island were here. There were also a number of people from Nebraska City. Dinner was served in the basement at noon, and in the afternoon a meeting was conducted by Brother Robertson in which the priesthood gave talks on church history and the Book of Mormon. Supper was served in the basement at night, and then the evening hours were spent in listening to the pageant, "Remember Cumorah." The pageant was put on in a pleasing way and was enjoyed by all. Much credit must be given to the actors and also to Eunice Easton, who had charge of the program.

On Friday evening, September 30, a number of the Saints gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Poague and held a pie social. A good time was had by all present, and the pies were in great demand and most of them at good prices. The proceeds were used in buying for Brother Robertson a pair of new glasses, and the remaining money was given to the Temple Builders to use in their work of redecorating the basement of the church.

October 11 two carloads of Lincoln people went to Dewitt to attend the series of meetings being held by Brothers Shakespeare and Smith. George Sutterfield, a university student, played a saxophone solo. They enjoyed themselves so much that on the 17th a number again attended the meetings. Thelma McWilliams played a violin solo, and Elsie Hale sang a vocal solo.

Brother Porter, of Geneva, Nebraska, spent one Sunday with us and preached a very interesting sermon in the evening.

A Sunday school party was held in the basement of the church on the evening of October 14. There was a very large attendance, and everyone reported a good time. Eunice Easton, Sunday school superintendent, and Margie Weller, assistant superintendent, had charge of the party, and the evening had been very well planned.

Three cars full of Lincoln people drove to Nebraska City in the afternoon of October 21 in order to attend a pie social given there in the evening. They were highly entertained and enjoyed the program. They drove back to Lincoln that evening after the social, after having secured a promise from the young people there to attend our carnival, which will be given October 28 by the Temple Builders to help pay for the new piano which they have purchased.

The work of decorating the basement of the church has progressed very much. The walls have been calcimined and the woodwork painted. The girls who are doing the work are very grateful to the men and boys who have given their time and work in building the partition and helping with the painting. After the carnival the time will be spent in planning for the house warming, which will be held after the rooms have been finished and the new furniture put in.

Sunday, October 23, saw a very large attendance at all the meetings. Sunday school was held at 9.45 a. m., followed by preaching by Brother Robertson, with the meeting in charge of Lawrence Brockway. At four o'clock a number of young people gathered at the church, and a choir was organized under the leadership of Brother Poague. We hope the enthusiasm shown that night will continue. Ezra Oerhing was elected president; Leslie Hale, vice president; Ruth Turpin, secretary-treasurer; Elsie Hale, librarian and assistant to the leader in selecting new music. Mary Gee is pianist, and we surely hope all the members will continue to come because the choir is a main part of services. The first Sunday night of each month will be music night. There will be several anthems by the choir, two or three selections by the orchestra, and solos and duets, etc., of various kinds.

Mrs. Hawley was present at church last Sunday morning. We have missed her much this summer. She has been in Omaha recuperating from injuries received in an automobile accident last fall.

October 16 a number of young people who have instruments met at the church and organized an orchestra. Annabelle Chapple was elected leader, and we are sure they will add wonderfully to the music department of the branch. There are four violins, a mandolin, two cornets, two saxophones, drums, and piano. They have practice on Tuesday evenings.

Davenport, Iowa

October 21.—While sitting at my desk this morning, I watched the people hurrying to and fro, each with a definite purpose in mind. It is a perfect Indian summer day, and the very air spells autumn. How good it seems, after the weeks of rain when the sun scarcely appeared all day.

The thought comes to me, how characteristic it is of our branch here in Davenport, when, after weeks of discouragements and disappointments, the sun seems to shine again. And so it is with a keener sense of the responsibility that rests with each and every member of the church that I write of a few of the late happenings in Davenport.

At the present we are getting our church painted, and are making plans for setting out shrubbery on the lawn, papering, and, in fact, doing our best to make our church a more beautiful place in which to worship.

Our Sunday school is proud to claim the membership of a good number of little folks who are keeping the teachers busy trying to keep them interested. We also have a class of boys who are taking up the study of the Book of Mormon.

We have just completed a contest between the men and the women in Religio. It was based on attendance, program numbers, and visitors. As was to be expected, the women won out, so the men have promised us a party shortly after Halloween. We can be ready to expect most anything when the men begin to plot.

The Religio Department is giving a Halloween frolic October 28 in the basement of the church. It is to be a masked affair and will include all the usual thrills, and perhaps a few new ones.

Wednesday night prayer meeting was held in the home of one of the Saints. Every chair in that home was pressed into use. Prayers and testimonies were given by both the young and the old, and a peaceful spirit prevailed throughout the entire meeting. Several visitors also attended the meeting.

Everyone is manifesting a spirit of willingness and a desire to help, which is bound to have its effect upon those who have drifted away from active work.

Brother Kress, our missionary, is in Davenport and is always ready and willing to offer suggestions and encourage us in our various offices. We find him to be a real booster in anything that might help our branch gain its place in the church.

We find that one sure way to make progress is to give every member something to do, instill in each a desire to help, to use his or her talents to the betterment of the members as a whole, and by so doing, we forget our petty grievances and think only of how much there is to be done and how little time there is to accomplish it. We cannot afford to slack up one bit, for the minute we do we find ourselves far behind.

It is the earnest desire of our branch to make our light so shine that it will be a living testimony of the goodness of God to his people when they earnestly strive to do his will. Watch Davenport grow.

A Patriarch's Exhortation to Unity

I wish to convey to the Saints among whom I have labored in my appointed field the past six months, my sincere gratitude and appreciation of their kindness so willingly extended to me while endeavoring to assist them to attain a higher altitude of spiritual enjoyment in the work of our Lord and Master; for the many kind words of appreciation, and the encouragement which is so helpful to a worker for Christ in these days of test. I take this means to reach them with this word of thankfulness, with a prayer, that the comfort and helpfulness so willingly extended to them by a loving Father may be received, with the continual peace and joy of the Holy Spirit.

I have enjoyed my work because of the blessed influence of the Spirit that has been given me, and trust there has been lasting good accomplished, for which I pledge to give the honor to Him who has been mindful of me, notwithstanding my many weaknesses, and has along the pathway of life, proved to be my friend and support. I can say from my heart, I love this great work of God, for the many testimonies given of its divinity, and the fulfillment to me of the promises made of the sustaining help needed in my work; so I have nothing but thankfulness for the patience and love extended to me by our loving and indulgent Father.

My health has been of the best the most of the time I have been in my field, and I have at times felt the vigor of youth, and the strength given to accomplish the work demanded of me which at times was quite strenuous, but it has been the delight of my life to be a worker with the Master in the accomplishment of good to my fellows.

I feel the time is upon us when we should as children of the light get together more fully in the bonds of love and forbearance; "united we stand, divided we fall," or fail. There can be no room for bitterness in the heart that possesses the true spirit of this latter-day work; the spirit of retaliation has no place with the heart consecrated to Christ; but loss and darkness follow in the wake of those who entertain these disturbing elements, and the lack of the Christ in our life will be manifest if we allow them to stay with us. The times are too pregnant with disaster, and the clouds hanging over this sin-cursed world are too ominous to waste the needless strife and division. Let us as Saints of God no longer trifle with the patience and long-suffering of a merciful Father, but be men of God, standing firmly for truth and the law of God as given to his church, even though we may not see eye to eye in all matters, but accord to all honesty of purpose as we desire extended to us.

We have been praying for the endowment of power to come to the church. Surely there will have to be less of division, less of harshness, and much less of worldliness before this is received. It would not fit in with the conditions existing; it can not come under existing conditions; we must prepare for its reception by putting on the beautiful garments of humility, meekness, godliness, charity, and brotherly love before the heavens will open to pour out the promised endowment upon the church.

This is the business we must be in to be counted heirs of the promised inheritance, joint heirs with Christ Jesus. This can be done! Let us get busy with ourselves.

First Columbus Branch Celebrates Eleventh Anniversary

On Sunday, October 16, First Columbus (Ohio) Branch celebrated its eleventh anniversary. The day's services opened at eight in the morning with a spiritual prayer service. Sunday school, with orchestra conducted by Elsie M. Weate, followed at 9.30.

An hour and a quarter later, preaching was by Elder William M. Grice, who gave a very spiritual sermon wherein the power of God was felt by all. All eyes were moist with tears. A special anthem was rendered by the choir under the leadership of Director Nathan Weate.

Dinner, under the auspices of the Department of Women, led by Sister Fay Clarke, followed.

In the afternoon at 2.30 there was a sermon by A. B. Kirkendall, the church being filled to capacity due to the presence of the congregation of Second Branch. At this hour a child was blessed. There was a special anthem by the choir, also duet by Brothers Anderton and Grice, junior.

At 7.30 Second Church closed and came on the hill in a body. Elder John R. Grice spoke to a crowded house.

A powerful Spirit was present all day.

To the musical director, Nathan Weate, and his choir, also his daughter, Elsie M. Weate, with her ten young people of the orchestra, and Sister Thelma Hersafberger with her beautiful organ voluntaries, interludes, and postludes, are due the highest commendation for their services, not for that day alone, but for their faithful day-in and day-out regularity. First Church is fortunate in having such musical graduates in its services.

The day was well spent, and the word comes to the writer in all reality: "Did not our hearts burn within us?" There were present two brothers whom we call the fathers of the work in Columbus. These two brothers at one time trimmed the oil lamps and swept and dusted the little storeroom where we first started the work in Columbus. They are Patriarch J. E. Matthews and Bishop H. E. French.

The following members of the priesthood were present: High priests: H. E. French, A. B. Kirkendall, W. M. Grice, sr., John R. Grice, C. W. Clark; Patriarch J. E. Matthews; elders: G. W. Stewart, of Dayton, Pastor J. B. Williams, A. E. Anderton, Fred C. Welch, Charles Schafenberg, John Gabriel, Gard Kirkendall; priests, W. P. Vicroy, of Lancaster, W. E. Watson and Fred Shelton, of Dayton, William Elwood, C. Ferguson, H. Ebersbaugh, N. Weate, Brother Kribbell, Charles H. Foster, publicity agent; teacher, George Tomlinson.

Now if any have been omitted, please put it to the weakness of man. The writer has attempted to make as concise a report as possible and enjoy the communion of the Saints besides.

This day will be long remembered, and we pray God that the Spirit we enjoyed may go through life with us.

Benton Work Is Forward

The mission at Benton, Illinois, in charge of Brother Earnest Roberson, is still progressing. We have regular Sunday school and regular preaching; in fact, we are functioning as a branch in every way except in organization. We have an elder, a priest, and a deacon.

We have five classes in Sunday school, and sacrament every first Sunday. Our Sunday school is attracting some attention out of the church as well as in the church. We have visiting ministers of the church; also the district president and counselors; also our missionary, Brother J. R. Lentell.

We have had one death in this quarter. The sermon was preached by Elder J. R. Lentell, in the Freewill Baptist Church, in the near vicinity, to an audience twice the seating capacity of the church. The sermon was fitting to the occasion, and was given an attentive hearing. It was followed by the Free Masons' ceremony at the cemetery.

The institute of the young people at Marion, just twelve miles south of us, was a success, and we hope it will soon come our way.

WEST FRANKFORT, ILLINOIS.

Logan, Iowa

October 26.—Busy! Busy! seems to be the watchword these days. We are still striving toward the higher ideals and program of the church. Quite a number of our young people are away teaching school or going to school, and we miss them in our services.

The different departments of the branch are working to promote their phases of the work. We have been having some very good programs in the Religio Department. Our Sunday school has adopted some new features, which we think contribute to its interest and welfare; the primary department is progressing very well under the care of Sister Myrtle Crabb. The branch at its last business meeting appointed a committee to make purchase of an individual communion set; we think this a step in the right way.

Mark Jensen, of Moorhead, recently spoke for us. We always enjoy Brother Jensen's earnest appeal and counsel for the better things in the gospel. Fred A. Fry, of Woodbine, has given us some counsel along the line of the better life for the Saints to live. D. R. Chambers occupied the pulpit Sunday morning and evening, October 23. Brother Chambers' missionary work has qualified him for useful work in the gospel. Some of our local men have given us some good sermons.

The Logan and Missouri Valley people have given the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," five times, twice at Logan, once at Missouri Valley, at Pisgah, and last Sunday, October 23 at Woodbine, each time to a crowded house. We have heard many favorable comments on their rendition of it. Brother Joshua Carlile, a priest in our branch, baptized two of his children Sunday, October 16. We are glad to see these young people come in and be one with us.

Brother and Sister O. J. Barr have moved back to Logan, and we are glad to have them back.

There is very little sickness among the Saints for which we are very thankful.

It seems we are truly favored with ideal weather conditions at present writing; a most beautiful picture greets one every day as he emerges into Nature's glorious fields and forests; bountiful crops and beautiful foliage everywhere. We are made to wonder if God will get his one tenth from the land's yield of its bountiful harvest? Surely God is good and kind, and I am wondering, as we approach the holiday season, if there are not ways and means we each might devise to bring our gifts to the Master and make this a year of giving; surely we have received. When we look about us, we are constrained to believe that some people give with the idea of receiving. God says, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." There is a beautiful lesson in Luke 14: "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed; for they can not recompense thee."

We are glad to report a goodly number pledging themselves to reread the Book of Mormon. About forty-five have signed the little slips sent out by the church.

The district conference was held at Logan, the fore part of October. A report has been given regarding this.

We very much enjoy the HERALD and the many good features it contains. Autumn Leaves we rank as of the best ever, and we are proud of such a clean, wholesome magazine for the people to read.

We trust and pray that God may bless and prosper his Saints through the land, that they may ever work for the accomplishment of Zion's ideals.

Be a Peptimist

"How are you?" is a question asked most people every day. Many people who ask it do not realize what they ask, and many who answer do not realize what was asked. How you are includes your spiritual, mental, and physical condition.

Most people think only of the physical, and I assure you that it is very important that we think of our physical condition. One's spirit functions poorly through a diseased body. One's mind functions poorly through diseased brain cells.

It is written, "Sin cometh from within"; which is one way of saying that disease comes from within. Disease is the result of sin. It is caused by overeating, eating wrong kinds of food, using things which are not food, or using the wrong combinations of foods. Disease may be inherited weakness.

Smallpox, measles, and all disease is but nature throwing off the poisons and waste material. Do not take anything to retain the poisons in the body, because some will work to your harm.

The reason some get sick while others remain well is because some are stronger physically, or have been eating proper food and taking better care of themselves. To be healthy, one must eat right, give the body proper exercise and rest, think right, be clean in all ways, and use the body for the divine purpose intended.

Much might be written, but I will close by saying, Be a peptimist. An optimist is one who looks only on the bright side; a pessimist is one who looks only on the dark side. A peptimist is one who not only looks on the bright side, but uses pep in making the bright side.

Is Confirmed in the Gospel Work

It has now been over six months since I moved here from Utah, and since coming here my faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ and in his loving Father has been greatly strengthened. I have been blessed in many ways. Oh, for the joy of being able to mingle with the Saints of God in the land that he has pointed out with his own finger to be the land of Zion! I have been in the church for over twenty years, yet I never felt as strong in the work as I do now. I feel God's hand over me wherever I am; whether at my work, or walking along the busy streets, I always feel the loving touch upon my soul, and I am filled with a prayer of thankfulness at my work, when I walk the streets, when I stand in the midst of congested humanity, when sitting in solitude, or when upon my knees in my secret closets, that he has made it possible that I could have my many years of longing satisfied. My life has been filled with trials and temptations, but through the love and mercy of God I have leaned heavily upon him and he has always strengthened me.

I have been attending the Kansas City Fourth Church and have enjoyed many spiritual prayer and sacramental services there, some of which have melted us to tears when the Holy Spirit has touched our souls. Thanks be to God that many of his children are living such lives that he can speak to them through his Spirit. May we all have our eyes continually set upward to Zion, so that it may soon be redeemed. Thanks be also to God for such great leaders as F. M. Smith and many others who are working with him, who are giving their all for the gospel's sake. Will we all help them, and sacrifice as much as they are sacrificing for the work? If so, then Zion will very soon be redeemed. Yes, dear Saints, the Spirit of God is manifesting to us that it will take much sacrifice on our part, both in money and talents, as well as many other things, before Zion is redeemed.

I am glad that the leaders of the church have urged the reading of the Book of Mormon in this its centennial year, as well as rereading it. Though I have read it through several times, yet I just got through reading it again; and this time I read it very slowly and carefully, and I got more out of it this time than ever before. I have a very strong testimony of its divinity. According to the words of the book, if anyone will ask God with earnest desire to know the truth therein contained, he will answer him. And I have heard his very voice in answer to my prayers in this regard.

Let us exercise faith in God, for without faith it is impossible to please him. C. O. PETERSON.

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, October 22.

Syracuse, New York

Syracuse Branch observed September 25, Book of Mormon Sunday, with the Sherrill Branch. The weather was all that could be desired, and our associations were very pleasant. The Book of Mormon was used as basis for study period in Sunday school; then followed ten-minute talks by several of the ministry, alternating with some fine music, Sister Elms rendering her favorite, "Israel is free," and other selections were given, besides congregational singing. Brother Mesle closed the day's exercises by a talk in the evening on the Book. A profitable day, was the opinion of all.

On the following Sunday, Syracuse again met with the Sherrill Branch in the capacity of a convention. There the Saints enjoyed meeting Apostle Ellis and Patriarch A. H. Stone. Brother Ellis preached in the morning and evening.

On Monday Brother and Sister Christy arrived for a week's services. On account of sickness and a few other things, the attendance was small. We heard many good and profitable things; advice it would be well to follow. It seems sometimes we are like Israel of old; we listen to an entertainer, failing to heed the advice and warnings given.

We have been made sad by the death of a young man we have known for some time. He did not belong to the church, but his wife, Sister Fern Collinge, is a member. We know only our heavenly Father can comfort as she needs to be comforted.

There are busy times ahead for the winter, and though we are few in number, indications are now that our Sunday school will average the two dollars a member as desired for the Christmas offering.

Denison, Iowa

The hundredth anniversary of the Book of Mormon was celebrated in this branch, and although the weather was rainy and disagreeable, the day's worship began at the early hour of 8.30 a. m. when the young people assembled at the church for a prayer and testimony meeting. Sunday school convened at ten o'clock, and for a short time we were engaged in the lesson study. Then we enjoyed a brief talk from Bishop's Agent E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, Iowa. Brother Edwards also addressed us at the hour of eleven, admonishing us to follow no man except he should follow Christ.

At 2.30 in the afternoon the Saints gathered for a round table discussion on the Book of Mormon. The translation of the Book of Mormon was freely discussed by all during the Religio session, and at the evening service Brother Fred Baber talked upon the divinity of the Book of Mormon.

Among the many sermons of late delivered by the priesthood was one given by Brother Warren G. Oliver on the theme of "Our God-given talents." His explanation of how we will be held accountable for the use we make of these talents was clear and concise.

We are proud of our young in the branch and the way in which they are striving to develop their talents. Each Sunday special music furnished by the younger members is enjoyed. There are numbers by quartets, violin solos, and others. Last Sunday Sister Shives favored the congregation with a vocal solo which evoked much comment, she having composed the words of the song.

On October 9 we had the pleasure of having with us District President Ellis Bedwell, who gave us many good thoughts concerning methods of developing our spiritual life.

Upon last Sunday it was decided by those in charge to change the order of the evening meeting from what we were accustomed, to a series of sermons given by members of the priesthood, each one occupying a period of fifteen minutes.

Some from Denison are planning to attend district conference at Cherokee.

An increased interest throughout the membership of the branch is evidenced by their presence at meetings and the increase in numbers of prayers and testimonies at our prayer services. These meetings are spiritual and uplifting—feasts to the famished soul.

Grandma Montgomery is convalescing since her last illness. Many of the Saints have been suffering with colds due to the cold, damp weather.

Wichita, Kansas

Corner Water and Osie Streets

The prayer and sacramental meeting held on the first Sunday of the month was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed throughout the service.

Sister Audentia Anderson and husband, of Omaha, Nebraska, were visitors at the home of Brother and Sister Whalley and were in attendance at our meetings on the first Sunday. Brother Anderson with Pastor Whalley and Elder E. L. Barraclough presided over the sacramental service. At the young people's prayer meeting at eight o'clock Sister Anderson was present and gave an interesting talk which was well received; and by request she occupied the evening hour, giving to the Saints a brief history of the Smith family. We were delighted to have Brother and Sister Anderson meet with us. We feel we derived much good from their visit among us.

Brother and Sister Whalley have just returned from Omaha, where they have been for a short stay visiting Saints and friends. Brother Whalley was formerly pastor at the Omaha Branch. Elder Barraclough was in charge during the absence of Brother Whalley.

Sister Stella Brockway has accepted a position in Lamoni as secretary for Brother Gene Closson, general superintendent of the Religio. She is also taking some work at Graceland. Stella is one of our most faithful ones, and we regret to lose her but are glad for her opportunities, as she desires to work and gain more knowledge that she might be of greater service to the church.

Brother James Jennings passed away October 14 and was buried October 17 at Andover; funeral conducted by Elder E. L. Barraclough. Brother Jennings was numbered among the most faithful; he was true and steadfast to the end. Recently at the sacramental service, he bore his testimony of the divinity of the work and his love for the church of which he had long been a member. He was past seventy-nine years of age, and we can truthfully say he has fought a good fight and keep the faith. Surely a crown of righteousness was awaiting him. We extend our sympathy to Sister Jennings and her children in their hour of trial.

Our Religio has been changed from Sunday night to Friday night, and so far it seems to be a wise change, the interest and attendance being good. Sister Eleanor Williams is superintendent, and much credit is due her for her untiring efforts to increase interest in this department.

Brother Bailey, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, was the speaker at both eleven and eight o'clock services Sunday. We enjoyed the message Brother Bailey gave to us and hope he visits us again.

Wichita Branch is moving along encouragingly under the leadership of our faithful pastor, Brother Whalley. We believe we are united in our efforts for the accomplishment of good.

Nauvoo, Illinois

October 27.—Nauvoo is enjoying the most beautiful fall weather they have had for a number of years. The sunsets on the Mississippi River are gorgeous, and the green fields and trees with their wonderful colorings arouse within one a greater realization of the divine power that is back of it all.

Corn is being shocked, and prospects are favorable for a better harvest than was anticipated in the spring. The thermometer has registered above eighty degrees during the day for nearly a week, which is very favorable for the ripening of the corn.

We notice the following item in the local paper: "Last Sunday the mercury registered 92 in Quincy, and violets, dandelions, and fruit trees are blooming for the second time this year, an event unprecedented."

A very pretty baptism took place in this wonderful setting one Sunday afternoon when H. C. Snively led eight-year-old Joseph Henderson into the waters of baptism. The Saints gathered on the bluff overlooking the Mississippi River near the Snively home, and a beautiful spirit was felt during the ceremony. Joseph was confirmed at the evening service by H. C. Snively.

Goldie Kuntz, an eighteen-year-old Nauvoo girl, who has been attending our Sunday school, was baptized during the reunion by L. H. Lewis and confirmed by J. W. Layton.

Clyde Anson, of Trenton, Missouri, is now making his home in Nauvoo and working in the Henderson Bakery.

Brother and Sister C. E. Fusselman are the proud parents of a fine baby girl, named Edith May. Sister Fusselman has been seriously ill, but is slowly recovering. We were glad to welcome her back with us once more last Sunday. During her illness the Women's Department presented her with a surprise bag containing packages to be opened, one each day. This helped to brighten the long, trying days, and many useful gifts were received for the new baby.

The men of the branch have been very busy shingling the roof of the church. The money for materials was raised by subscription, and the men gave freely of their time to accomplish the necessary repairs. The Nauvoo House is also being shingled.

John Williams, of Joy, Illinois, was a guest of the Sanfords for a few days. He and his mother expect to make Nauvoo their home in the near future.

Woodbine, Iowa

October 25.—On September 25 the Saints met in a seven o'clock morning prayer meeting. A splendid Spirit was present, bearing witness through testimony of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon, and expressing thankfulness that we live in the day that Ezekiel saw as he looked into futurity and was inspired of God to say: "I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in my hand." The Sunday school hour was occupied by the young people in the giving of talks and readings along the line of the Restoration, as was also the eleven o'clock hour by older members of the priesthood, with a fine paper by Sister F. C. Oviatt on "The Book of Mormon from the standpoint of archæology." Music was along the line of the coming forth of the latter-day work.

Missouri Valley and Logan Saints, fifty in number, are giving the pageant "Remember Cumorah" in different branches in the Little Sioux District, and on last Sunday evening favored us with its rendition. The church was crowded with attentive listeners who seemed impressed with the sacredness of the occasion.

Elder W. R. Adams preached for us on October 16, his subject being "Influence," stressing the thought that every one of us is exerting an influence, either in the right way or the wrong way, upon the lives of those about us, and in his closing remarks used the quotation, "Let my army become very great; let it become sanctified before me."

Elder Raymond Smith linked up his sermon in the evening with that of the morning discourse, although he was not present at that service, using the text, "If you love me, keep my commandments; and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever," and calling attention to the fact that all were of one accord when waiting for the Pentecostal shower, thus emphasizing the necessity for purified, unified effort upon the part of those who constitute the church of God.

On October 5 the spirit of our brother, John Moroni Pett, was called to its eternal home. He had been a patient sufferer for more than two years. From his obituary we quote: "He was honest to an exalted degree; and as time softens our sorrow, from the priceless wealth of memory will come thoughts of him to inspire us to love more and do more for those around us." We sympathize with those bereaved.

Several of our homes have been blessed with new babies. Benjie Barry and wife, formerly Opal Deal, have a boy. Oscar Deal's, Clifford Browne's, and Jay Fields' each have a baby girl.

Central Chicago Branch

Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

Possibly the most outstanding feature of the work of Central Chicago Branch last month was the preparing and giving of the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," the first Sunday in October. It was a decided success.

The sacramental service of that day was attended with a very pleasant spirit.

We have with us this winter quite a number of young people studying at the university and elsewhere whom we welcome and invite to work with us.

One of these, Brother George Lewis, of Australia, is to have charge of a new Sunday school class organized last Sunday.

The Department of Women decided not to hold a bazaar this fall but to spend their time sewing for the needy and in all ways doing the things which seem best.

The Department of Recreation and Expression also invites attention on Friday evening.

The half past six Sunday evening study class continues under Brother Pement's supervision.

We have recently had two visits from Brother and Sister Pitt, his sermons and solos being greatly appreciated.

Last Sunday being union sacramental service, we had many visitors and a splendid Spirit.

West Pullman, Chicago

11926 Parnell Avenue

Our little branch still continues to thrive, and now that the hot summer months have passed away we expect to enter into the activities of the autumn and winter with increased zeal.

The Women's Department, under the leadership of Sister Robert Burwell, will resume its activities after a little vacation.

The Men's Club of the branch met at the home of our pastor on September 2 for its regular session. They have started the study of the pamphlet, "Duties of district and branch officers." An hour at each session will be devoted to such study.

We again enjoyed the Spirit of the Master on the 4th of September as we met in our regular sacramental service. The service was in charge of the pastor and Brother Charles Cotton, and all rejoiced under the spirit that was present. At the evening service, Brother Charles Cotton spoke to us, giving us food for thought, as Brother Charles always does.

The morning service on the 11th of the month, Pastor E. O. Byrn broke unto us the bread of life in no uncertain terms.

Brother Roy Healy spoke in the evening on "Why we should play," bringing to us the necessity for a play period in our lives.

On the 18th our pastor again addressed us from John 8:36, portraying very vividly the meaning and the fruits of freedom enjoyed as a result of living in the spirit of the gospel law. At the evening service Brother Clem Evans spoke to us from Matthew 19:20, appealing in his energetic manner to the membership to make such an examination that might make possible a compliance with the law that we might become disciples indeed.

On the 25th we were glad to have with us again Brother Philemon Pement, who spoke on the "One hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon," appealing to us to prove ourselves disciples and to more completely meet the requirements of the celestial law. At night our Sunday school superintendent, Brother John Wahlgren, spoke from the seventeenth chapter of Samuel, bringing out the results of the simple life and faith of the young shepherd and pointing out that the unstained and devoted life is the real secret of power.

The month saw us striving almost every available night that we could spare, preparing for the play, "Remember Cumorah," which we hope to be able to give in October. Visitors always welcome here.

Bradner, Ohio

October 16.—In our last letter we told HERALD readers we were working on the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," and we are pleased to tell you that it was a far greater success than we anticipated. This pageant took nearly our entire congregation, and at first it looked pretty big for us to tackle, but we got busy, and after not many rehearsals, on last Sunday night, October 9, we were met by a splendid audience. The spirit of the pageant, together with the wonderful scenery and costumes, won for us many compliments. The doctor of our town said it was the best thing ever put on in Bradner.

We were fortunate in being able to borrow the green blanket from the undertaker here, which we used to make Hill Cumorah. This made it much more realistic than it otherwise could have been.

Before the pageant began, all who were in it gathered together behind the curtain and sang a number of old hymns, which seemed to bring all into an attitude of worship. Some of the Toledo Saints were visitors with us that night.

In the latter part of September we were favored with a visit from our brother and apostle, Roy S. Budd, who preached one fine sermon on prayer. We were much benefited, and this sermon has stayed with us, being mentioned among us many times.

This morning in the Sunday school hour, as a special feature the assistant superintendent read a letter in the HERALD from Elder E. Y. Hunker, whom so many of us met at Kirtland this year and learned to love. We were touched with the wonderful spirit of service and sacrifice and were made to feel that Brother Hunker could truly sing, "If Jesus goes with me, I'll go anywhere." Bradner Saints will remember Brother Hunker and family.

On Sunday, September 25, an early morning prayer service was provided and well attended. God's Spirit was with us, and we felt that it was good to be in the house of the Lord. The usual morning preaching service was changed. Three of our young men, one not a member but a faithful attendant, gave short talks on the Book of Mormon and its history. This proved interesting and beneficial to the congregation and to these young men.

The Department of Women will hold its bazaar on December 2 and 3. We meet each week. We hold one meeting out of each month during the year for bazaar work, the rest of the meetings being devoted to study.

Bradner Saints hope to merit the approval of the heavenly Father in all that they do, and are desirous of being ready to do their part in that task that lies before them.

Minneapolis, Minnesota

Corner of Queen and Fifth Avenues, North

October 20.—On the evening of Septetmber 1 a farewell party was held at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Lundeen, in honor of their son, Vernon. Games were played, and a nice lunch was served. Vernon left on the 8th for Lamoni, where he is attending Graceland College. We miss him at our meetings and the young people's gatherings, but we are glad he can attend Graceland and prepare for greater service.

The Minnesota State Fair opened on September 3, and the Saints of Minneapolis conducted a dining hall on the grounds, as they have been doing for the past two years. Saints who came from other places to help us were Brother and Sister Hubert Case, of Independence; Brother and Sister Ed. Dillon, of Oklahoma City; Brother and Sister J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni; and Sister Lillian Horne, of Almora, Minnesota. Brother Case managed our concession for us.

In spite of the hard work, each Saint expressed himself as glad that he was able to work with the group in harmony and love and to enjoy the good fellowship which was had during the week. We also made a nice sum of money to aid in paying our church debt.

Sunday evening, September 11, Brother Hubert Case was our speaker and, as usual, gave us a fine sermon. We are always glad to have Brother Case with us. On Monday morning the Cases and Dillons left in the Dillon Buick for Oklahoma. We hope we can have all of them with us next year to help at the fair.

On Sunday evening, October 9, Apostle D. T. Williams was our speaker. His sermon was greatly enjoyed. Brother Williams is always a welcome visitor at Minneapolis, and we hope he may be able to come more often in the future.

Pastor Ray Whiting and other local men have been giving us excellent sermons, and are encouraging us in the work.

A mission has been opened at Columbia Heights, in north-eastern Minneapolis. Brother Tutty, priest, has charge of it. Meetings are held each Sunday afternoon at three o'clock: Sunday school and preaching service immediately afterward. Brother Tutty reports a good interest and good attendance.

Orion, Michigan

October 26.—Orion Branch is moving along nicely under the management of John L. Hall, pastor.

Quite a number of the Saints are reading the Book of Mormon and finding renewed interest in it.

A few of our members are taking the teachers' training course, with Miss Mona Schaar as teacher. We hope some day to be able to pass our examination in a creditable manner. We are not trying to complete the course in the prescribed time, but are making a thorough study of both books as we go along.

The juniors had full charge of the Sunday school last Sunday, and we were very proud of the way in which they conducted it and the splendid review they gave on the life of Paul. Sterling Schaar acted as superintendent and announced the opening hymn, No. 153 in Zion's Praises. A short history of the song was given by Mildred Hall before the singing. Prayer was offered by Phyllis Schaar, after which Merle Davis read the one hundred and thirty-eighth psalm. The roll was called by Ardyce Schaar; then, led by Kingsley Gonyon and Lloyd Forbes, the classes marched to their places. After the lesson study, the secretary's report was read by J. Dunlap, and was followed by the program: Mildred Hall told of the cities which Paul and his companions visited and the way the people lived. Lloyd Forbes told of the work Paul did in the cities he visited on each of his missionary trips, and Phyllis Schaar described their mode of worship. Anice Gonyon, the teacher of the junior class, and Ardyce Schaar, one of the pupils, sang a beautiful duet, of which Mildred Hall gave the history. Sterling Schaar told of the way in which Paul traveled to the different cities, and Merle Davis told of the kind of food they ate. Kingsley Gonyon described the trees that grew in these places. Then the class sang, "Earnest workers for the Master," and the closing prayer was made by Mildred Hall.

The former teacher of the juniors, Miss Verna Schaar, is attending Graceland College this year, and although we miss her very much we are glad for the opportunity she has of preparing for future service, and we hope that many of our young people will follow her example.

We are expecting to have the Detroit district conference meet with us on November 5 and 6 in our new school building. For the past three years we have rented the lower part of our church building for school purposes, and we expect to be the first to hold a public meeting in the new building.

We are ever praying for the success of the work.

JULIA HAMMOND, Branch Clerk.

Stewartsville, Missouri

October 13.—Stewartsville Branch is still carrying on. In the past few weeks, progress is quite evident.

On Sunday morning, September 18, at 8.30 the young people of this branch met in their first young people's prayer meeting. It was a very interesting meeting, and the young people expressed themselves as desirous of making it a weekly event. It is our earnest desire that this meeting may make rapid growth until all the young people are included and are making the spiritual progress necessary in the youth of the church.

On the evening of September 29, seventeen members of the branch met at the church and organized a class in religious education. This is to continue twelve weeks. Brother Blackmore, of Cameron, consented to take charge of the class. We consider ourselves very fortunate in securing him, for he is indeed an able and a pleasing instructor.

This class meets at eight o'clock each Tuesday evening. All are manifesting much interest, and it is believed this work will accomplish a great deal of good.

Doctor Curtis Vernon, of Trenton, Missouri, was our speaker at last Sunday evening's service.

We understand the stake convention is to be held at Guilford this coming Sunday. Quite a number of our branch plan to attend.

A large percentage of the membership has pledged itself to again read the Book of Mormon before the year closes. At this writing quite a number have completed the task, and others are reading diligently.

We failed to send news for the month of September and wish to make mention of a play given by the Orioles and Blue Birds under supervision of their leaders, Sister Orpha Day and Sister Delpha Flinn. The costuming was very good, and the performance showed both talent and training. They are deserving of much praise. Following the program, all congregated upon the church lawn, and the remainder of the evening was spent in playing games. Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served.

Brockton, Massachusetts

15 Appleton Street

October 17.—The busy season is upon us here in Brockton. The work started with a bang when the "earnest workers" of the branch put on their annual stunt of feeding many hundreds of people at the Brockton Fair. Their place of business consisted of a very large tent and a handful of earnest workers. If our memory serves us right, one book of instructions says we receive our best thing by sacrifice. This effort on the part of the local sisters demonstrates the benefits that can be derived by sacrifice. Forgetting self and putting their best foot forward, they accomplished the task. After all, the few generally put over the big things.

Elder Patterson and wife rendered valuable assistance, also Sister Spinnet, of Providence, who made the trip here especially to serve. Mrs. Leslie Garfield and Mrs. Harold Garfield journeyed from Bridgeport, Connecticut, and gave their time and energy to the success of the project. All should be commended for the spirit of cooperation shown through the fair. The money received from the effort will materially reduce the church debt.

The Saints received a severe blow when on September 21 our young brother, Edmund Roberts, was accidentally shot and killed by one of his playmates.

We have also since lost a dear old brother, Samuel Silver. We feel keenly our losses through the death of these brethren. We are made to believe that the more we lose the more is required of those that remain.

All are encouraged to go on. The district has taken on new life, and we will no doubt feel its effect very soon in the branches.

Any Saints living in or near our city, who have not yet got acquainted, if they will kindly write H. A. Chelline, 83½ Cary Street, Brockton, will find a means of getting acquainted. Brother Chelline will be glad to extend to them a welcome.

Toronto, Canada

October 13.—Toronto has settled down to the regular fall and winter program. The holidays are over, and everyone seems anxious to get into the harness again.

The centennial of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was celebrated in fitting style on Saturday and Sunday, September 24 and 25. On Saturday evening, the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," written by President Elbert A. Smith, was presented by the Religio under the direction of Mrs. Zella Clifton Hewitt. James Peterson took the part of Joseph; William Bailey, Moroni; Earl Swainson, the minister; Adeline Whitehead, the church. It was well done and made a deep impression on all who were present. Some of the scenery and equipment was borrowed from one of the local theaters. We had visitors from different parts of the district and as far west as London and Chatham. A Jew who saw it was profuse in his compliments.

Sunday was a beautiful day and was enjoyed by the Saints of Toronto and our many visitors. Prayer service was at 9 a. m.; Sunday school, 11; preaching, 3 p. m., by Bishop Carmichael, and at 7 by Apostle J. F. Curtis. This made a day well filled with good services. These brothers remained with us during the week and preached night about until the annual district conference and convention opened on Friday, September 30.

Our Religio, under the capable direction of Doctor C. A. McLean, is going in full swing again. Last Friday evening there was a party and refreshments. Games were provided for old and young. An enjoyable time was had by all present. The attendance was less than expected, on account of the rain. The unique event of the evening was a beauty contest staged by five boys dressed up as "modern girls." The prize for this was won by Arthur Whitehead. Several big nights are planned for the Religio in the near future, and we hope to see this department expand.

The Women's Department is at its "knitting" again.

Toronto district officers have planned an itinerary so that practically all the branches in the district will be visited, built up, and edified.

Marshall, Missouri

Elder R. S. Salyards, of Holden Stake missionary force, was asked to occupy the pulpit at Marshall Sunday, October 16. His sermons were so instructive and inspiring the Saints insisted upon his staying the week through. This he did, to the satisfaction of all who attended. There was good attendance considering the four weeks of meetings which occurred so recently. Brother Salyards is always welcome.

Revival in Denver

Rally day was quite a success, and after it Elder R. D. Weaver began a series of meetings which lasted four weeks and was one of the most successful from the point of attendance ever held in the city. Attendance increased from the beginning, and the services were very interesting. With one or two exceptions, Brother Weaver was the speaker every evening for the entire four weeks, except Saturday evenings, when there were no services. Results: three were baptized and many others interested. He closed Friday night, the 21st, and left for Fort Collins, to begin services on Sunday, the 23d.

Apostle Gleazer gave a lecture to the priesthood the evening of the 20th, which was very interesting.

Elder Percy Farrow, missionary to Eastern Colorado District, was the speaker Sunday morning and evening, the 23d. His morning subject was "Life," and we hearers got some new ideas which were worth listening to.

Sister Carrie Neef, one of the faithful standbys, met with a serious accident a few days ago and has been suffering excruciating pain most of the time. She was passing from the bathroom to her bedroom when she tripped over a rug and fell, breaking her hip in two places. She is confined to Saint Joseph's Hospital, and we all earnestly hope for her speedy recovery.

There have been some weddings among the young folks lately, and others are not far away. Brother Glen Holmes and Sister Hazel Richards were one couple, and Brother Paul Bair and Sister Katherine Keck were another. There are rumors of others who are keeping it quiet, but there has been a leak.

The Religio is adding some new features, which make it interesting to the young folks.

The junior choir, under the tutorship of Sister Ina Shrunk, is making quite an impression. Sister Ina is a hard worker and entitled to success in this effort.

Brother Bruce E. Brown, our jovial district president, made a short visit to Denver last week.

Long Beach, California

This week our branch has been saddened by the death of our young brother, LeRoy Williams Moran, better known as Roy Morgan, who passed away on Wednesday, October 19, at the age of nineteen. Brother Roy will especially be mourned by a host of friends in Omaha, Nebraska, in which city he was well known and active in church work. He had been in California for two and a half years, during which period his time has been absorbed in carrying on his business of an auto ambulance company. Brother Roy had undergone an operation for acute appendicitis, and for a time seemed well on the way to recovery when complications set in, and he lived through thirteen days of intense pain, so that the angel of death brought peace to his soul as well as to his family who suffered with him. He leaves his mother and stepfather, Brother and Sister Arthur Moran, a half sister, Carolyn, and two half brothers, Eugene and Arthur. The service at the undertaking parlor was impressive, and the wealth of flowers and floral pieces attested to the high esteem with which he was held both in business and social life. Those who are acquainted with Brother J. F. Martin will know that the sermon he preached was beautiful, dignified, and consoling. Brother Glau Smith, pastor of the Los Angeles Central Branch, sang "Beautiful isle of somewhere"; the Long Beach Choir sang "The saints shall wear robes as the lilies," and "Abide with me"; Brother W. A. Teagarden, president of the Southern California District and local pastor, offered the prayer. The body was laid in Sunnyside Mausoleum for its final earthly resting place. To Latter Day Saints death has not the sad, hopeless, finality it has to the people of the world, for we have the promise of a glorious resurrection and a reuniting with loved ones in a place where there is no sorrow and pain. Death is not the end of things, but the beginning of a journey which all must take alone, and its end will find us, we pray, once more together, more joyous for our separation.

Sunday, the 16th, Brother and Sister Herbert Pederson, of Santa Barbara, were visitors in our branch. Brother Wilbur Gillen had been invited to speak at the eleven o'clock service and gave us a very interesting sermon in spite of the fact, as he says, that there are many things he does with less effort than preach.

Sunday, the 23d, Brother Sutherland, newly elected district Sunday school superintendent, preached the morning sermon; and apropos of the coming College Day, his theme was along lines of study and self-improvement. He said that God set his stamp of approval on Graceland when he said, "Come, learn of me." He closed his sermon by saying, "We are glad to enter into Christ's joys, but reluctant to enter into his sorrows; yet if we go with him all the way, he has promised us his place as our heritage."

In the September Departments' Journal, "Brother Mac," under the heading, "The call of the school bell," tells us our most vital need today is trained leadership, and asks us if we shall not all answer the call of the school bell and study to improve. Brother Mac, you will find Long Beach with you, for a veritable wave of desire to study and improve seems to have swept into our branch. Some are going to part-time adult education school, some to night school; others are taking correspondence courses and doing constructive, conscientious study at home, and your correspondent is going to junior college. We are happy in our study and feel a desire to give of our new ideas and learning to others who have not our opportunity or desires.

I like to close my eyes and visualize a great, beautiful, pillared, white building which glitters in the sun; on its steps in a robe of white, stands a Personage who, with arms extended and in a resonant voice of deep beauty pleads, "Come, let us study together." I see the youth of the church rise and follow in growing numbers until the building is filled to its capacity. Time passes, and from every door of this white building which glitters in the sun, come hundreds of the flower of our church; their heads up, countenances aglow, eyes full of vision, and hearts swelling and throbbing with the beauty of their mission, they go forth with the precepts of the gospel until they permeate every land and clime, and those who come within the sound of their voices are made to rejoice in God! Let thy blessing go with each and every one who has a desire to study, to improve, and to qualify.

Ionia, Michigan

October 24.—HERALD readers, we feel sure, will be interested in hearing of the progress the Saints of Ionia are making. We have been struggling along here for years, few in number but strong in the faith and love of the gospel.

We began by holding prayer services and Sunday school in the homes of the Saints, later renting a small hall.

Last January we purchased a building which with much hard work has been remodeled into an attractive little church, one in a favorable location.

Our faithful pastor, Elder J. D. Aelick, who lives at Belding, sixteen miles distant, has driven in every evening during the summer after his day's labor in the silk mills to work on the building.

On September 11 the opening services were held. It was indeed a day of rejoicing for those who have labored and sacrificed that we might have a church home.

Saints were present from Grand Rapids, Lansing, Pontiac, Greenville, Belding, Battle Creek, Coldwater, and McCords. District Missionary O. J. Hawn was with us and that evening began a three-week series of meetings. He was truly blessed with the spirit of his calling, and many became interested and began to investigate. As a result seven were baptized on Sunday, September 25, driving forty-two miles to Lansing, where they could use the baptismal font. Most Ionia Saints went with them and remained to enjoy the pageant given in the evening by Lansing Saints. This was an inspiration to all.

We feel sure the seed has been sown in many honest hearts and earnestly hope Brother Hawn may come our way again to complete the work.

Love and unity prevail, and we have been greatly blessed in our prayer meetings. Much credit is due our faithful pastor and his wife, who come so far in all kinds of Michigan weather to help and encourage us. R. W. SETCHFIELD.

South Bend and Mishawaka, Indiana

Sunday, August 28, Elder J. W. McKnight and wife, of Galien, Michigan, met with the Saints of South Bend and Mishawaka Branch. Brother McKnight preached both morning and evening to fair crowds; he is a welcome speaker in South Bend.

Owing to the holiday, Labor Day, following the sacramental service, Sunday, September 4, the attendance was very small at our regular service, but a good spirit was present.

Pottawattamie Park on Monday afternoon, September 5, was the scene of our Sunday school picnic. Young and old played, ran races, ate candy, ice cream, and the splendid basket lunch, and we believe a very enjoyable day was spent by all. The working-together spirit was greatly appreciated by the officers and committee in charge. Attendance was fine, members and nonmembers sharing all activities.

When Brother McKnight was here, he invited this branch to spend September 11 with Galien Saints, the event being their all-day meeting. Brother and Sister Coonfare, Brother and Sister Myers and family, Brother and Sister Galloway and family, Brother and Sister Boney, Frank Boney and wife, Brother and Sister Freeman and family, and Sister Myrtle Perry responded to the invitation, also Brother and Sister Willsey and son Robert, and Brother and Sister Walter and daughter Inez, of Elkhart. Regular services were held at home, but attendance was small.

On Sunday, the 25th, we held our all-day meeting. Saints from Hibbard and Elkhart responded to our invitation, also Brother and Sister McKnight, of Galien, Michigan. After the morning service we repaired to the Saint Joseph River, where Elder C. B. Freeman led four Sunday school children into the waters of baptism, namely Lenice Galloway, Jane Malloy, Robert Willsey, and Frank Stephenson. After the baptismal service we enjoyed lunch in Pottawattamie Park, then returned to the church, where the baptized members were confirmed by Brothers McKnight and Freeman. Then Brother McKnight preached one of his helpful sermons.

In the evening we rendered the greater part of the pageant, "Remember Cumorah." The cast: the historian, C. B. Freeman; children of today, Lenice Galloway and Frank Stephenson; the minister, Lee Coonfare; Joseph, Leonard Tappan; the church, Lydia Myers; the three Nephites, Charles Ferry, Clair Galloway, and Charles Stephenson. All were working people and scattered over quite a territory, but we felt satisfied with the result. We believe to the branch "Remember Cumorah" will be an inspiration, a lesson of what united effort can accomplish. About one hundred and twenty were there, which is good for our community. The visitors stayed over. At the close of the service a series of meetings was announced, with Brother J. W. McKnight as speaker. Owing to its being an exceptionally rainy week, attendance at services was not large.

On Sunday night, October 2, we were glad to have several of the Galien Saints with us. Sacramental service that day was well attended. Brother McKnight was called away October 5 because of the death of his father. Services were indefinitely postponed, for we had no one free to take his place. We believe good was done, for some nonmembers are still meeting at our regular services.

Sunday, October 9, we were pleased to have Brother A. H. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio, as a speaker morning and evening. Attendance was good.

Sunday, October 16, meetings were well attended. Our pastor preached morning and evening.

Our prayer meetings also have been well attended considering all things, and as we hear the sentiments of the Saints expressed and see all developments made, we believe the work is onward.

Brother George E. Harrington, district president, made a hurried call September 27 and 28. He preached for us September 27.

Brother and Sister John Hoover have purchased a farm near Buchanan and expect to move to it at once.

San Diego, California

October 17.—Increasing faith, unity, progress, new members, and continual blessings are the order of this day in San Diego Branch. Right after the three baptisms last month, a cluster of Saints drove to the Central Church at Los Angeles for a two-day convention, the details of which rest with them to report; but I would like to mention a few outstanding features of this successful gathering of God's people.

There we met Apostle James A. Gillen; the smiling, forceful apostle, M. A. McConley; Prince Chapman, covering physical pain with his usual bombardment of smiles; Elder Teagarden, elected later in the day to succeed the president of the district; and Thomas Chapman, who was forced by illness to retire from this strenuous position. And there was (straight to the point) Wilbur D. Gillen, district counselor; Glaud Smith, district counselor; Doctor Teel, the "genial one"; and last but not least, Elder A. True Gray, "the man who aroused San Diego" and put her on the map as a going branch. Consecrated men brimming over with active love for the building of Zion.

For a background, we had thirty perfectly trained and expertly directed instrumentalists and thirty charming vocalists. The highly successful effort of the first evening was the Book of Mormon pageant, with Patriarch J. F. Martin as historian and Elder Glaud Smith as Joseph Smith, who were one hundred per cent perfect. There were others I would like to mention if space permitted.

The dominating factor in this gathering of six or seven hundred people was unity, and their spontaneous expression was "love."

As soon as we returned home, baptisms occupied attention. Since the 20th of last month we have baptized nine people, mostly adults. Last Sunday Apostle James A. Gillen came down, and the first duty he performed was the ordination of two elders, John Munroe and W. F. Kellerby, also Leland Wetherbee a priest, and Mars Harder deacon. He stayed with us till Thursday night and preached vigorous, spirit-filled sermons twice on Sunday and every evening following.

Apostle Gillen makes so deep an impression on the people that they are loath to go home; he speaks with power and instantly wins his hearers as soon as he steps on the platform, and holds their attention to the last word. I have been studying Brother Gillen for five days and believe God loves him and is reserving for him a choice place near the throne. If ever I come to the breaking point and can remember the counsel he gave us the last night he was here, I am sure it will enable me to pull up again.

I want at this point to give a testimony of how God dealt with me. Five months ago neither my wife nor children nor myself belonged to any church, although my children did attend Sunday school. I personally did not believe in the claim of divine authority attributed to this church, and finding a quarterly in my house tore it into many pieces. It annoyed me to think that my children would leave the Bible for anything so silly. As I said, that was five months ago.

Today the six members of my family are enrolled in this organization, standing one step back of the program of this church. My seventeen-year-old Barbara is secretary of the Sunday school, and also my secretary in the Department of Expression. My twelve-year-old Mable is teacher of the primary class, and the others are on the waiting list waiting for a job.

To cap the climax, last Sunday Apostle James A. Gillen with life vibrating through his finger ends, assisted by Elder A. True Gray, laid their hands on my head and conducted me into the order of Melchisedec priesthood. God's answer to my foolishness was to put me to work in his kingdom.

In last week's issue I expressed the hope that from some quarter would spring a workable plan to increase four-fold the circulation of the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, to be subscribed for together, and as a first step suggested that we have active discussion of this problem in the Religio meetings. Yesterday in Santa Ana at the meeting of department managers of Southern California, Counselor Wilbur Gillen made a strong plea for support of our publications, and next Sunday I shall endeavor to have our branch order one Book of Mormon and twenty cents worth of tracts for every five active members in our branch, and may I suggest that this would not create much hardship if every branch would do likewise. It would mean that over twenty thousand Book of Mormon copies would be available for distribution at once. Rightly used ought to mean twenty thousand new members from this source alone, bringing nearer the day when the noble lines of our social and spiritual plan will stand out so clear and strong that the eyes of the world will open, that they too may catch the metemorphosis vision as Elisha did the "chariot of Israel."

The Work at Ann Arbor

Perhaps some of those who know about the Sunday school that was started in Ann Arbor last spring would like to know how we are progressing here. We are very few in number but are trying to be faithful and to do what we can to let our light shine. There is not a member of the priesthood here, and we are sadly in need of some. We have the sacramental services every month, District President DuRose sending some one each sacrament Sunday. We appreciate the opportunity of partaking of the emblems. Many times I long for church privileges other than the Sunday school, but I feel God has been very good to me, and I do not want to complain.

About two months ago we lost two valuable workers in our Sunday school, Sisters Clarisa Olds and Jennie Nugent. Both were energetic, helpful girls. We miss them very much. Sister Olds returned to her home at Flint, and Sister Nugent went to attend Farris Institute at Big Rapids.

Some time ago Brother DuRose advised us to have an announcement of our Sunday school published with the church items in our weekly paper. We did so, and last Sunday were much pleased when a Latter Day Saint from Ann Arbor whom we did not know joined our number. He knows some other Saints here of whom we did not know and promised to do what he could to get them to come to Sunday school.

We are planning a Halloween party for the benefit of our young people, and all are looking forward to a good time.

We would welcome a missionary if one could come this way. We have been saving what we could for the purpose of sustaining a missionary when one could be provided. We are anxious to have the gospel preached here, for we believe there are many honest-hearted people at Ann Arbor who would be glad to receive the gospel in all its purity and fullness.

One of our neighbors has a new radio. I have told this family what I could about the gospel and gave them some of the church papers to read. Tonight I told them of our broadcasting station at Independence and gave them the last HERALD with our K L D S program. I am hoping and praying the radio may be the means of bringing the gospel into their home.

Remember the Ann Arbor Saints in your prayers, and may we all be faithful and help to bring about the good for which we are working, is my prayer.

MRS. INA CASTERLINE.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, 709 Brooks Street.

Patriarch Griffiths in the East

Some weeks ago we left home to spend several months in my mission in the East. Our first stop was at Buffalo, where we were kindly received by Doctor Weegar and family. We spent a number of days in the home of Brother and Sister Fred Harper, where we were made to feel at home. Labored at Niagara Falls, on both sides of the river; most of the time with the Saints on the New York side. We were kindly received and greeted with good-sized congregations. As I was again privileged to look upon the great waterfalls, I was reminded of the first time I saw them, some forty-seven years ago. They seem to have changed, in that the volume of water does not seem to be so great as it was. The towns on both sides of the river have made wonderful growth. The surrounding scenery is beautiful, and especially that seen from the great Peace Bridge, connecting New York with Canada. From here to the falls along the Niagara River is a ride well worth taking, and we are indebted to Brother Harper for the pleasure afforded.

We went on to Scranton, Pennsylvania, where I preached for one week. Richard Hawkins is president of this branch and is the right man for the place. He also renders assistance to the Archbald Branch. He is fortunate in having associated with him some very capable officers.

October 1 and 2 we attended the New York and Philadelphia district conference, which was held at Archbald, Pennsylvania. R. S. Budd, A. E. Stoff, George Robley, E. B. Hull, and others of the local ministry were in attendance. Everything passed off peacefully. On Sunday we had a remarkably spiritual prayer service in the morning, which will not soon be forgotten. The gift of tongues and the interpretation were enjoyed, and several prophecies, and the Saints were greatly encouraged and strengthened in the faith, the only complaint registered being that the meeting did not last long enough, which is an indication of a good spiritual condition. There were quite a number of Saints present from New York, Philadelphia, Elk Mills, Scranton, Bloomsburg, Fawn Grove, and other points. The Saints at Archbald worked hard to provide for the visiting Saints, and much credit is due them for the manner in which the situation was handled. They are not very many in number, but they surely can do things.

I continued preaching here for one week after the close of the conference, Brother Robley holding forth at Scranton. The meetings were a success and the attendance and interest good. It was with regret that we took our departure from the good Saints. We shall not soon forget their kindness.

While in Scranton and Archbald, about twenty-five of the Saints received blessings, which has kept us busy.

October 8 we arrived at Bloomsburg and have been kept busy preaching and talking with the Saints. Have blessed ten in this place. Walter Lewis is the presiding elder here, and is ably supported by Brothers Cunningham and Jones, of the Melchisedec priesthood, and good assistants in the priests, teachers, and deacons. They are also fortunate in having some very active workers among the sisters.

Bloomsburg is the home of our worthy Brother Archibald Angus. We have spent many hours in his company. He is patient and long-suffering in his affliction. He wields a wonderful influence for good with the people in and out of the church. Notwithstanding the fact that he is unable to attend the services in the church, the Saints generally go to him for counsel and advice. They very often have prayer meetings in his home, so that he can have the opportunity of being in the service and they to have his counsel along spiritual lines. He is blessed with a good, patient wife, who does all within her power to make it comfortable for him. He spends most of his time in a chair, as his affliction is confined mostly to his limbs. His pleasant countenance and smiling face is an inspiration to everyone. May God continue to bless him and, if it is his good pleasure, restore him to his normal health.

The branch president is always on the job. He is highly respected by the old and the young. Such men are valuable to the church, because they are dependable. Brother Cunningham is known throughout this country for his worthiness. He had the misfortune to lose his companion about a year ago. We have been fortunate enough to be domiciled with him in his home and truly appreciate the great kindness shown us on the part of his housekeeper, as well as himself.

Here I have had the pleasure of again renewing the acquaintance of Brother Thomas Jones, of Wales, whom I have known for over thirty-five years. He was an active missionary in that country and in England for about fifteen years. He is a man of extraordinary ability. He is feeling fine in the faith. He occupies the office of high priest. His efforts are highly appreciated by the Saints in this place. His son Isaac is a capable young man and has a bright future, providing he honors his calling. If faithful he will accomplish a great work for the Lord. We bid him Godspeed.

The deacon here, Brother Pealer, is one of the best to be found in the church; is faithful in the performance of the duties devolving upon him, in the face of all conditions, favorable or unfavorable.

Brother Clugston, the teacher, who was at the point of death a year ago, is now actively engaged in the work pertaining to his office, and he and his wife, Alice, make a fine team. Alice is chorister and a worker.

We have felt blessed of the Lord in our weak efforts to strengthen the Saints and encourage them in the warfare, and while conditions are not as bright as they might be in some places, we have evidence that our Father in heaven and his Son Jesus are mindful of the church, and in the end will triumph over all that may be brought to bear against it. We also are reminded of the decree of the Lord that he shall pour out of his wrath upon the nations as the news comes to hand daily of disasters throughout the world—and the end is not yet. It behooves all Saints to put themselves in that attitude before God that shall warrant to them his protection in the hour of need and danger.

The Saints miss the editorials and Blue Pencil Notes of Brother Elbert. They are praying that he will be able to resume this work, as his past work in this respect has been very encouraging and stimulating to God's people. He is held in high esteem by the Saints, and his labors are highly appreciated.

We leave today for Baltimore and other points in the East.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

Dixfield, Maine

On September 9 we were pleased to receive as visitors to the branch at Dixfield, Elder Amos Berve and wife from Stonington, Brother Berve being our missionary to this district.

We had hoped to have a series of meetings, since we had such an able minister in our midst, but owing to conditions here it was deemed inadvisable at this time. However, a few meetings were held at the home of Sister Tainter and at the home of Brother and Sister Eugene Holman. These meetings were very encouraging to the Saints, and some interest was shown by friends seeking the light.

On October 2 our regular sacramental service was held. This service will be remembered by those present, during which two officers were called and ordained, Brother W. C. Porter to the office of deacon and Brother Everett Merrill to that of priest. A third was designated for the office of teacher, when ready for ordination.

These offices having long been vacant, the Saints now hope and feel that a fresh impetus will be seen in the work here. Two new members were added to our number by baptism.

A lot has recently been given to the church by Sister Tainter for the purpose of erecting a church building at Dixfield. It is hoped by the Saints that this may be accomplished in the near future. This will meet a need that has long been felt.

New England Young in Convention

The young people's convention of the Southern New England District met at Boston on Saturday and Sunday, October 8 and 9. For months we had planned on having Brother McDowell with us, and we had widely advertised him, for he is always a big drawing card, and particularly with the young people.

At the last moment, due to illness and an unexpected operation, he was unable to be here. At first we were just a bit discouraged upon hearing of this, but Brother McDowell was making such valiant efforts to provide other speakers for us, and was so keenly disappointed at being unable to be here, that everyone just entered right in, determined to make the convention a big success.

On Saturday morning, Apostles Budd and Ellis, with Charles Woodstock and twelve young people from Brooklyn, New York, arrived on the boat. From the moment they arrived, the skies began to look bright, and things began to go. If ever men could fill Brother McDowell's place, these men could, and the large group coming from Brooklyn gave us further encouragement. We want to thank them for coming.

Saturday afternoon the young people and their guests met at the church, where about fifteen automobiles were waiting to take them for a drive through historic Lexington and Concord. On the way out, we went through Cambridge, and a brief stop was made at the beautiful Longfellow mansion. It was a glorious afternoon, the sun was warm and bright, the air cool, and as we bowled along over smooth macadam roads, through scenic country, where the foliage was just beginning to turn, there came to all a sense of exhilaration and keen enjoyment.

At Concord a visit was made to the old battle ground, where the famous shot was fired that was heard around the world. Here, also, is the famous Minute Man statue. At Sleepy Hollow Cemetery we saw the graves of many noted men and women. If we had only had the time, there were many places in Lexington which would have been well worth visiting, but after leaving the cemetery, we went directly to the church, where we were sent to various homes for supper, to return to the church again in the evening.

Saturday evening at 7.30, about one hundred and fifty young people were assembled in the upper auditorium of the church. We started off with about fifteen minutes of community singing, led by James Houghton. All who know him know he is a wonderful leader, and he had the crowd with him right from the start. Bishop E. L. Traver, pastor of the Boston Branch, offered the opening prayer.

Miss Rae Lysinger, of Lamoni, played a piano solo. Rae is in Boston this year attending the New England Conservatory of Music. Ralph M. Hardy, chairman of the committee, welcomed the young people to Boston and introduced the speaker, Apostle Roy S. Budd.

Brother Budd gave a short talk, outlining the theme of the convention, and the ideas that he wanted to put across. His talk was interesting and inspiring; he absolutely won the confidence of the young people, and they were indeed happy to have him with them.

This talk was followed by several musical numbers by the young people of the district. "Jud" Carter played a cornet solo; Grace Calvert, of Providence, sang two delightful little songs; Lewis Phillips, of Wales, sang a stirring national anthem in his native tongue; and as a fitting climax to our excellent entertainment, Jim Houghton sang a group of three numbers. Jim has, of course, a wonderful voice, and everyone was glad to have the privilege of hearing him. In two of his numbers he was ably assisted by Helen Coombs, soprano, of Attleboro.

At the close of the entertainment, all were invited to a get-acquainted party in the basement of the church. The room was charmingly decorated in yellow and brown. The program was arranged by Miss Ruth Fisher, and the games and stunts and songs soon had everyone feeling right at home and acquainted with each other. Ice cream and cookies were served. The evening was characterized by a high degree of good fellowship, which was an excellent foundation for the meetings of Sunday.

Sunday morning at nine o'clock, the young people had one of their famous prayer meetings. They felt the responsibility of the meeting resting upon them, and they responded nobly. Brother Budd, Brother Earl Bradshaw, of Attleboro, and Brother Hardy were in charge. It was truly a meeting of inspiration, and all present resolved in their hearts to make a greater effort to serve the church more fully and devotedly.

This was followed by a round table, with Brother Woodstock and Brother Budd in charge. Brother Woodstock gave a very interesting talk on religious education and made an appeal for consecrated workers in this field. Brother Budd gave another talk on what he considered to be the theme of the convention, Learning, Doing, Serving. The time for this meeting was all too short, for we would indeed have enjoyed more from these men.

Following this service, the women of the branch served a delicious buffet lunch in the basement of the church. This part of the program was also enjoyed by all.

In the afternoon, at 2.30, we assembled at Unitarian Hall for the largest meeting of the convention. We had secured the hall, in order that all of our visitors might be comfortably cared for. To this meeting the entire district had been invited, and we were greatly pleased at the wonderful crowd that turned out.

A beautiful musical program preceded the sermon. Mrs. Everett York, of Boston, was in charge of the singing. Miss Helen Coombs, of Attleboro, and Mrs. Charles Harris, of Brooklyn, sang solos, and Mr. Hendricks played a violin solo. These solos were beautifully rendered and added much to the service. Apostle Budd was the speaker, and he delivered a forceful and worth-while message. Following the sermon the Attleboro choir sang an anthem.

As a fitting closing to a wonderful convention, the young people rose and sang "Consecration," and Apostle Clyde Ellis pronounced a special benediction upon them. A devoted band of young people singing "Consecration" must always be impressive.

The convention was well handled, and everything ran smoothly, and for this much credit is due the committee, Ralph M. Hardy, chairman, Bertram Lewis, Sanford Fisher, Edward Joy, Florence Gordon, and Dorothy Elliott.

Gallands Grove Conference

Gallands Grove District conference met at Cherokee October 22 and 23. A goodly number arrived from distant points on Friday evening and enjoyed a fine talk by District President E. L. Bedwell who is a teacher of marked ability.

Conference opened Saturday morning with social service at nine o'clock. At eleven Bishop G. W. Eastwood, of Independence, Missouri, gave a fine sermon which was much enjoyed by the Saints.

The afternoon was largely devoted to business. At this time it was decided to hold conferences quarterly instead of semiannually as we have held them during the last few years.

In the evening a long song service was led by Sister Gladys Silsbee, after which Brother Eastwood gave another excellent sermon.

Sunday morning a large crowd gathered for social service and were rewarded with the gift of prophecy bearing testimony that the message Brother Eastwood would give was the truth and that we should heed it. Sunday school was an inspiration both for teachers and pupils. The song service again was in charge of Sister Silsbee and sermon by Brother Eastwood. Seating capacity of the church was taxed to the limit at this service. The afternoon meeting also was attended by a large crowd, and Brother Eastwood was the speaker. His talks were all concerning the stewardship plan and were much enjoyed; we feel we understand it better than ever before.

Brother Bedwell preached in the evening and closed a very successful conference. We were blessed with beautiful weather, and Saints were permitted to come from a long distance on Sunday. A number of families brought their dinners and had picnic parties in the park.

We were disappointed that Missionaries M. K. Fry and Charles J. Smith were unable to be present, but realize we can not have all that we desire. We are thankful to Brother Eastwood, for he made a special trip to attend the conference. The local Saints responded to the call and loyally entertained the large crowd.

Following is the announcement which appeared in the Cherokee Evening Times and was copied in several daily papers in this vicinity.

"The convention and conference of the Church of Latter Day Saints, Galland Grove District, embracing twenty-one counties in northwestern Iowa, will be held at the church on Clark Street Saturday and Sunday, October 22 and 23. The conference will have especially to do with Sunday school work. There will be a Sunday school convention, beginning Saturday. A business session will be held on the afternoon of that day. There will be a prayer meeting at 9 a. m. Sunday, and preaching at 11 a. m., 2.30 p. m., and 7.30 p. m. The public is invited to all services. About one hundred delegates are expected.

"A bishop from Independence, Missouri, the headquarters of the reformed branch of the church, will be present as a speaker. Other speakers will be Mr. Fry, of Missouri Valley, Mr. Smith, of Sioux City, and E. L. Bedwell, of Lamoni, Iowa.

"The district derives its name from the place where the first Reformed Church of Latter Day Saints was organized in this part of Iowa, when the church split over the doctrine and practice of polygamy. This branch of the church always repudiated the practice that was eventually suppressed by Federal statute and is now repudiated by the older branch of the church as well as by the reformed organization.

"The church in Cherokee was organized about fifty years ago, lapsed, and was reorganized more than thirty years ago. Elder Crippen, who has been a resident of the county for forty-eight years, has served the local church as minister for thirty years.

"The congregation numbers fewer than one hundred members, and there are about forty children in the Sunday school. Elder Crippen lightens the financial burden of the church by being at all times employed at profitable labor."

Portland, Oregon

October 3.—On September 25 Brother Eli Bronson told the story of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and proved its validity by the scriptures. His theme for the evening service was also from the Book of Mormon.

Sister Lila Livingston directed the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," which was presented on the evening of October 2. The cast was as follows: Joseph Smith, Harley Morris; minister, Lloyd Appleman; Moroni, Walter Barker; the church, Eunice Livingston; reader, Lila Livingston; historian, Eli Bronson. The nations represented appeared in costume. The church was filled to overflowing, fifty-three being present, and a great many were turned away.

There is much sickness at the present time in the branch, but aside from this everything is moving forward very smoothly.

Tolerance is that virtue which enables a man to smile when some one treads on his mental corns.—Floyd L. Yeomans.

Independence

Stone Church

Elders John F. Sheehy and D. O. Cato presided over the young people's prayer service last Wednesday night, which commenced at eight o'clock in the Stone Church lower auditorium. "Behold, what manner of love the Father bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God," was the text chosen by Elder Sheehy in the opening remarks. "If we are his sons," he reasoned, "then we are joint heirs with Christ. It is possible that Jesus Christ is the type of son that God wants us to be. . . . As the sons of God, we have certain duties, certain tasks to perform. Christ had a work and did it. God has purposed something in the creation of every one of us, and this thing that he has purposed in our creation, if it is left undone by us now, will for ever be left undone so far as we are concerned. I do not know just what that thing might be; you do not know. It is never too early to begin to find out, but it might be too late to start. We must now begin to do something worth while; enter into a life of activity not only in God's church, but in God's world. The young people of the church must prepare for future achievement as sons of God."

An encouraging number of faithful young Saints gathered together in the spirit of true worship at this hour. Though the testimonies and prayers were not many, those that were given were earnest, reverent, purposeful. Under the influence of the spirit of song and of meditation, the youthful Saints were caused to renew their hope, "May this my glory be, that Christ is not ashamed of me."

The Stone Church Orchestra, directed by Bishop R. T. Cooper, was in its place for the opening of the Sunday school rally day last Sunday. Its assistance was appreciated by the school. "Victory through grace," was the song commencing the devotional exercises. Following the study hour, special numbers were given by the various departments. A vocal duet was sung by Marguerite and Gladys Givens, of the intermediate department; a quartet, Mrs. J. D. Gault, Mrs. Madge Kueffer, Fred Friend, and Orville Thompson represented the adult department, and from the seniors came Mrs. Lyda Budd Robertson with a splendid reading.

Attendance at this session ran far above the twelve hundred mark, and ten classes were reported perfect. There were at least six other classes whose members were all present but who, on account of tardiness of some in arriving, could not count themselves on the perfect list. Officers of the Sunday school hope attendance, interest, and promptness will continue to grow.

Rally Day was observed at the Stone Church during the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, with a program by the First Independence Sunday school. Short talks were given by John F. Sheehy and J. Glenn Fairbanks, and an excellent musical service was presented.

The Sunday school orchestra played under the direction of R. T. Cooper. Two anthems were sung by the Junior Choir, with Mrs. J. T. Westwood directing. Members of the choir were: Madelyn Barto, Doris Blake, Shirley Dobson, Gladys Givens, Marguerite Givens, Lois Hartshorn, Anita May, Vaughnie Reese, Pauline Siegfried, Alice Tucker; Evelyn Barto, piano accompanist. Madelyn Barto sang the alto solo for the second anthem.

Albert Brackenbury sang a baritone solo, "On life's highway." A double quartet from the Y. K. T. Sunday school class sang, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Elbert Dempsey, Gerald Johnston, Thelma Vincent, Aileen Bullard, Grace Edwards, Elizabeth Okerlind, George Gates, and Albert Brackenbury were the singers, with Florence Koehler-Campbell accompanying at the piano.

"A glorious past" was the subject taken by John F. Sheehy in tracing the history of the Sunday school from its beginning in Europe as a day school for paupers down to its present position in the field of religious education. Brother Sheehy emphasized the importance of youth as the decision time in life; therefore, the importance of the Sunday school influence in the lives of youth. He summed up the progress already made by the workers of the past and urged those of today to accept the challenge of "carrying on."

In speaking of "Preparation for life," J. Glenn Fairbanks, assistant superintendent, drew an analogy between the preparation necessary for a trip on a modern railway and the Sunday school as preparing for the life journey. He spoke of the preparation made by the manufacturer, the engineer, and the crew of the railway train; and of the traits of character which might be developed in the lives of Sunday school people—virtue, knowledge, temperance, brotherly kindness, godliness, and charity.

A special offering was taken in the interest of Graceland College Day, following an announcement of its origin and purpose by Mrs. Mary Cochran, a Graceland graduate.

The Rally Day program was in charge of G. S. Trowbridge, general superintendent. Congregational singing was led by Marcine Smith, musical director of the Sunday school. Invocation was offered by L. W. Rawlings, superintendent of the senior department.

The Campus congregation felt they were greatly honored by having Apostle Budd speak to them in junior service. He took for his subject, "Why?" and said while it is all right to question, yet all must be ready, like Samuel, to answer, "Here am I," when called to work. It was a talk that will long be remembered. Although living in Zion many of the children are not acquainted with those who stand at the head of the church, for their larger duties make it impossible to meet with the younger members.

Evening Services

The class in religious education which meets from six o'clock to twenty minutes till eight on Sunday evening in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church, reports progress. Elder John F. Sheehy is teacher, and together teacher and students are studying the text, Life of Christ, by Kemp. Sunday night the lesson period was devoted to consideration of the four gospels—Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Attendance in this class averages about seventy.

Apostle Frank Curtis addressed the Y. P. R. Class of the Stone Church Religio Sunday evening, interestingly describing the city of Jerusalem, its surroundings, ancient means of defense, the location of many important buildings, and giving several of his experiences upon gala occasions during his visit in the Holy Land. In its study of comparative religions, the class has recently considered Judaism, and found Brother Curtis's talk most helpful.

Immediately after the sounding of the bell bringing Religio classes from class study, the first number on the program, a dialog by Muriel and Majel Barker, was announced by the superintendent of programs. Marcine Turner rendered a pleasing vocal solo, and Myrtle Stripling contributed a well-executed piano solo taken from the setting of Robert Burns's "Tam o' Shanter."

Superintendent Kress announced that the regular Religio play night will not be had this week, because of the Laurel Club bazaar which is scheduled to occupy the dining hall November 3 and 4.

With the singing of "Nearer, my God, to thee," the baton in the hand of Elder John F. Sheehy, the eight o'clock evening service opened; invocation by Pastor C. Ed. Miller.

In observance of College Day, two song slides, "O Graceland beloved," and "Happy Graceland," were flashed upon the canvas. Then Elder D. O. Cato, in charge of the service, announced a recent Graceland graduate of liberal arts, George Gates, who gave a short talk upon Graceland's athletics. Woven into the main topic—intercollegiate athletics at Graceland—were brief sketches of Graceland accomplishments, intersociety activities, banners, trophies, Graceland personalities, officials, faculty, and record makers; vivid accounts of battles on Graceland's gridiron; praise for Graceland's "clean, fair, square sportsmanship"; and mention of that much-spoken-of Graceland spirit, which the speaker believes is a "combination of the feeling one has for his alma mater and the spirit of unity and reverence resulting from the Wednesday night Graceland prayer meetings."

"The Angelus," a tenor solo, was sung by Elbert Dempsey, former Graceland.

The lecture on Graceland College, given by Albert Brackenbury, another former Graceland student, and illustrated on the screen, was both comprehensive and entertaining. Slides of college hill and its well-known buildings, of some of Graceland's first boosters and helpers, Joseph Smith, Marietta Walker, E. L. Kelley, J. A. Gunsolley, and others, brought to mind pleasant memories for those who have been associated with Graceland or her students. Members of the congregation who were not already acquainted with them were introduced to Graceland's present faculty and some of her friends. There were scenes of the library, the chapel, classrooms in Briggs Hall, Graceland's tower, and the old West Door. Athletic events, banquets, and honor societies came in for their share of attention, as also did the musicians of the college.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried spoke briefly concerning the struggle Graceland has had to keep her doors open to the youth of the church who hunger for knowledge, urging the Saints to help swell the Graceland scholarship fund.

The films for this evening were "Beautiful scenes in the United States and Canada," and of the Bible series, "Abraham and Lot."

Pen and Ink Club Meets

For the first time in a number of months members of the Pen and Ink Club met in the capacity of a business meeting. Gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Ellis Short, sr., Sister Ellis Short, president of the club, in charge, they listened to an explanation of the essential features of the Book of Mormon contest now being sponsored by the Publicity Department, as it was given by Elder J. A. Gardner of the Publicity Department. Definite action was taken by the club to support this contest, and work for the winter season was discussed and decided upon. The resignation of Sister Nina Brooks, vice president of the club, was accepted, Sister Brooks being unable to attend this winter because of college work she is taking at the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. Sister Bertha Mader was elected vice president.

Halloween Observances

Much merriment has been had at various Halloween functions this year. All ages have participated in masquerades and frolics.

Last Friday night the Y. K. T. Class of the Stone Church gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Eben Miller on North River Boulevard. From there they were spirited away, in cars, to the "Wiches' Den." This proved to be a vacant, eight-room house, some two miles distant. Every room was gorgeously decorated with cornstalks, boughs, leaves, and jack-o'-lanterns. The entrance through an improvised tunnel seemed alive with skeletons, devils, and ghosts. Games, contests, and ghost stories made up the evening's entertainment. There was an abundance of cider, doughnuts, and apples for everyone.

Between one hundred and one hundred twenty-five found their way to the Campus for the party on Saturday evening, October 29, given by the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. The lower floor of the Institute Building was appropriately trimmed and decorated, and there the guests gathered about the hour of eight—a motely group in all kinds and fashions of costumes. The children were taken upstairs and began playing almost at once. Downstairs time was had for getting acquainted; games were played; and all enjoyed refreshments of cider and ginger snaps; pop corn balls for the children.

The Y. P. R. Class of young people was given a true Halloween jollification at the home of the teacher, Brother Glenn Fairbanks, Thursday, October 28. The attic and rendezvous to which the guests were conducted through devious dark routes in the basement of the Fairbanks home, in and out about the furnace, was lighted with strings of jack-o'-lanterns, and crisp leaves covered the floor. In the corner crouched a witch, brewing her potions of fate. Following the unmasking, games and contests were heartily entered into by the class, prizes being awarded those who excelled. Refreshments of pumpkin pie, apples, cider, and Halloween candies were eaten downstairs. A gay, informal gathering it was.

Second Church

College Day was a day well spent by the Saints of Second Church from the hour spent by the young at the early service through Sunday school, where a definite appeal was made in behalf of our support for Graceland and her work; carried on by Apostle J. F. Curtis in the sermon at eleven o'clock when he presented good reasons why we should "Study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen who need not be ashamed." A full choir rendering splendid music added its part to God's praise and our joy at this time.

The afternoon prayer meeting was presided over by J. T. Curtis. We had an increase in attendance and a good active meeting.

At the Religio we enjoyed a fine lesson, good attendance, and an excellent program.

Last and best was the evening program, when Sister Vera Redfield gave a talk on what Graceland has meant to her. Her lecture was almost as good as a visit to Graceland. As Brother Bolt threw the pictures on the screen and Sister Vera told us of them and some of her experiences there, we envisioned Graceland life; and as we viewed the picture of Zimmermann Hall, the interior, with the motto, "This year we sail Zionward which is our course," we remembered the young people's conventions of two and three years ago; the testimonies heard there and the prayers; the vision we there caught; and our determinations were strengthened to carry on, and we dug deeper into our pockets to again donate what we could that others of our young might receive of the Graceland environment.

We wished we could do more. Congregational singing preceding this service was enjoyed, and everyone appreciated the two selections by our male quartet. May the good work of Graceland continue to prove a blessing to the church.

Liberty Street

The Liberty Street Male Quartet furnished the music for the morning services on Sunday. We were pleased to have Pastor C. E. Miller as our speaker for the morning, his theme being Graceland College.

Brother Heman Davis was the speaker at the junior service.

At the Religio hour, Heman Davis talked to us on the subject, "The spirit of Graceland College"; Helen Rich, of Kansas City, gave two readings; a vocal solo was rendered by Dorothy Peek; a vocal solo by John Koehler; and a talk by Brother Anthony Robinson.

The choir sang an anthem at the eight o'clock service, "I heard the voice of Jesus." Brother E. T. Atwell was speaker for the hour, taking his text from Jeremiah 6:16: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, we will not walk therein."

Walnut Park

The Walnut Park Band was on duty at the Sunday school hour before and after lessons, where more than three hundred enjoyed it.

At the opening of the eleven o'clock service, which was in charge of Pastor Howard Andersen, with prayer by William Haskins, Brother Andersen suggested the need of having a bishop's agent for Walnut Park. He was prepared to name Elder John Schwab as a desirable nominee, and Brother Schwab was unanimously elected.

Sister J. W. Adams announced the progress of the women's financial undertaking, they having agreed at the beginning of the year to each give a penny a day toward local expenses, which is amounting to hundreds of dollars, but has not yet been handed to the bishop.

The forenoon speaker was Elder Lyman Smith, who truthfully depicted the conditions prevalent in the world—the tendency of man to wander in by and forbidden paths; then gave the remedy for the condition—repentance, which he defined as consisting of, first, a conviction of sin; second, a sense of remorse; third, confession; fourth, forsaking the evil and doing everything possible to right the wrong. Sermons like this, if heeded, would soon create Zion conditions.

Six o'clock Religio is having an attendance of about three hundred, a large majority of whom are enrolled in the eight classes, some of which are so large that more teachers are needed. The programs continue to be very popular.

At eight o'clock Brother Andersen presided at a meeting of Graceland supporters. A choir of former Graceland students sang "God is marshaling his army." Prayer by John Taylor. Annie Torrence Roberts gave a piano solo, after which three speakers occupied the evening, Agnes Adams on "Social life at Graceland," Elder Cyril Wight on "Graceland's scholastic standing," and George Gates on "Graceland's athletics." The song "Graceland for ever," by the choir, and the College Day collection followed.

Enoch Hill

Sunday services at Enoch Hill were conducted in commemoration of Graceland College and her achievements, her work in the past, her hopes for the future. Bishop G. W. Eastwood was the morning speaker, employing the theme, "The open door." A vocal duet by Brother Charles Warren and Sister John Jones, "Light of life," pleased the congregation.

In the evening Elder Amos Allen read Matthew 21, propounding to the congregation the question Jesus asked of the chief priests and the elders, "The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men?" The latter part of his discourse was given to a discussion of the necessity for the young people to prepare themselves to begin where their parents have left the work, to use the experience of those who are older in advancing their own, to prepare the ways of the Lord and make his paths straight. As a climax to this sermon, Brothers William Sarratt and Charles Warren sang, "I would be true." Evening preaching on Enoch Hill commences at 7.30.

The choir has changed its time of practice from Thursday evening to Sunday evening, following the church service. By making this change they hope to encourage greater attendance and participation of the singers of this district.

Enoch Hill Religio, which is now being held on Sunday evening, reports an average attendance of eighty members. There are seven classes, four of which are studying the quarterly and two the Book of Mormon. Officers of this department are: President, Harold Hattey; vice president, Melvin Quick; chorister, William Worth; pianist, Richard Maloney; secretary, Ruth Ballinger; assistant chorister, May Chronister.

Miss Lula Whitsett gave a Halloween party for her Sunday school class Friday night, October 28, at her home. The decorations were very appropriate. Martha Chrestensen received the prize for the prettiest costume and Nadine Undland for the most original. An enjoyable evening was spent.

Saturday night, October 29, the Enoch Hill Temple Builders gave a Halloween party at the home of their leader, Mrs. George Street. Those awarded prizes for the prettiest costumes were Beryl Warren, Gladys Cox, Mildred Hill, Richard Bullard, Arlon Chapman, and Carlos Smith. The rooms were well decorated in Halloween colors. About fifty guests were present to enjoy the games and refreshments.

Spring Branch

The theme for the Wednesday evening prayer service was "Special blessings," in which many present related instances of special blessings the Lord has given them. Brothers Snively and Mabbott were in charge.

The Curtis sisters and Ralph and Ted Snively furnished the program for Religio Friday night. The Religio social committee planned a Halloween social for Monday evening at Brother Leonard Roberts. Pie was in evidence as refreshments.

The Sunday services were all well attended, and a good spirit prevailed throughout.

Brother B. J. Scott was the speaker in the morning, and he held the close attention of the audience throughout his discourse.

W. A. Smith gave a good old-fashioned missionary sermon in the evening. This was preceded by a half hour song service in which the congregation was assisted by the choir.

Rehearsals for a Christmas cantata by the choir will begin next Thursday night. We would welcome any singers who desire to help out in this movement.

Kansas City Stake

Quindaro

On Sunday, October 23, at eight o'clock the Oriole Girls, under the leadership of Sister Emily Foley, gave a play entitled "Aunt Margaret's tenth." The cast: Margaret Beggs, Dorothy Halverson, Alberta Hartman, Gladys Chaney, Helen Murphy, and Edith Foley. Preceding the play a vocal solo was sung by Sister Pearl Goodfellow. There was also a sermon by Pastor A. Wallace Eskridge. The play was well rendered, and much credit is due those who participated.

The day dawned bright and clear October 30, and a record attendance was had at the Sunday school. The number on the roll is one hundred and ten, and one hundred and twenty-four were present. At the close of class study, Elder Harmon Higgins gave a splendid talk for Graceland. We wish that more of our young could take advantage of the opportunity our college offers. A collection was taken for that purpose. Sister Emily Foley sang, "We love you, dear old Graceland."

Elder Higgins was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. Scripture reading was taken from Revelation 14, using as a text the latter part of the seventh verse, "And worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of water." In an earnest manner Brother Higgins set forth his message for higher ideals. A goodly number was present, and all felt benefited. Sister Marie Meier sang, "The widow's mite."

The Religio program was furnished by the Senior Book of Mormon Class, and consisted of readings by Sister Harmon Swart and Sister Charles Scrivener; also a duet by Brother Frank Murrah and Brother Charles Scrivener.

The eight o'clock hour was occupied by the pastor, assisted by Brother Dan Tucker, of Grandview, and Brother Clarence Penticuff. The theme was, "The living church," and with the use of the chart the true and living way was clearly portrayed. Sister Daniel Tucker sang, "My homeland." We were glad to have Brother and Sister Tucker with us.

Bennington Heights

There are several on the sick list, but reports come from each indicating an improvement. Teddy Agin, little son of Brother and Sister E. H. Agin, has been afflicted with infantile paralysis for several weeks, but he is now able to move himself around on the floor. Brother William McCarrison was in the hospital a few days on account of a pain in his shoulder. He has also had stomach trouble, which has caused him to lose time from his work.

Brother and Sister George Garrett's little daughter, Henrietta, has been receiving treatments for diphtheria.

Elder D. Robert Winn and his wife have been visiting his parents, Brother and Sister D. F. Winn. A week ago last Sunday afternoon, thirty or forty members of the Winn family gathered for a family visit. There were five of the six great-grandchildren present. Brother and Sister Robert Winn made the trip from their home in Columbus, Ohio, by motor.

Sister Emma Etzenhouser underwent an operation in the Sanitarium a month ago. She is recovering and getting along well.

Sister John Walburn has returned after visiting several weeks in New York City and Washington, District of Columbia.

Last Friday the children held a morning radio party and listened to Uncle John's program from radio station K L D S. Twelve children attended.

Elder Wilfrid D. Tordoff, missionary, began a series of meetings last Sunday evening. The church was filled as the result of an effort which is being made by the members to maintain a good attendance for the meetings.

Sunday School at Miles City, Montana

We are anxious to keep Eastern Montana on the church map, though this sometimes seems to be an uphill job.

Ten years ago there were eight thriving Sunday schools in eastern Montana. Our last district convention reported but two. This is due in part to the exodus Zionward and in part to the series of dry years visiting this section of the West, causing a scattering.

Sometime ago Elder Swen Swenson held a short series of services in Miles City at the home of Sister F. A. Ingalls, resulting in the baptism of Brother Ingalls and six others.

The district officers were glad to hear of this work but realized the necessity of following it up with some kind of permanent organization, else the good seed sown be left to wither and die for want of spiritual food. So after some correspondence with Sister F. A. Ingalls, it was arranged to organize a Sunday school Sunday, October 16.

Wife and I, with our two daughters, Mildred and Genevieve, accompanied by Elder A. R. Ritter, district president, left Sidney about eleven o'clock Saturday, October 15, bound for Miles City, a distance of one hundred and fifty miles. This may sound like a long distance to travel by auto to organize a Sunday school, but Montana is a land of "vast distances and lofty mountains," so we become accustomed to these little trips.

Glendive is the only place of any size between Sidney and Miles City. Here we stopped for dinner and spent some time looking at the large display of moss agates of various shapes and sizes on display here. These stones abound wherever gravel is to be found along the Yellowstone River. After leaving Glendive, we passed through Fallon and Terry, then across Powder River, almost dry at this season, but sometimes up and roaring and tearing out bridges along its course. The Yellowstone Trail bridge was in such a dilapidated condition that it rattled and clanged, calling to mind the cowboy's saying, "Powder River! Let her buck!" But this bridge was not in this condition because of its use by cowboys, for the days of the cowboy are fast passing. Ponderous steel trucks pass hourly, hauling gravel to improve Yellowstone Trail that pleasure seekers from the East may ride in comfort as they look forth upon sagebrush and space.

We raced a train for miles out of Terry, leaving it far behind, but after crossing Powder River the Yellowstone Trail takes to the hills. After winding in and out, up and down for several miles, we caught a glimpse of the engine down a coulee to our right. The engineer waved for us to come on. When we arrived at Miles City, some time after dark, his engine had already gone to sleep in the roundhouse.

At eleven o'clock Sunday morning, the Miles City Saints met at the home of Sister Ingalls and organized a Sunday school with eight charter members. A small beginning indeed in such a large place as Miles City! What a big work might be accomplished there! With no member of the priesthood living there, it will depend on the faith and perseverance of these few Saints as to what the outcome will be. May their motto be "Onward and upward."

"Let him who setteth his hand to the plow look not backward,

Though the plowshare cut through the flowers of life to its fountains,

Though it pass o'er the graves of the dead and the hearts of the living.

It is the will of the Lord, and his mercy endureth for ever."

Passing missionaries should remember the Miles City Saints.

Elder A. R. Ritter addressed us after the Sunday school sessions. He admonished the Saints to diligence and service.

After a short prayer service, we said good-bye to the Miles City Saints and started for home, where we arrived after an uneventful ride of five and one half hours.

We now have four Sunday schools in the Eastern Montana District. May they continue steadfast in the great work of character building. Will this Sunday school at Miles City be the hub around which a branch may organize? It is up to you, Miles City Saints.

A Family Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Claus, 2334 Elmhurst Avenue, Detroit, Michigan, invited the members of Mr. Claus's family and those of his aunt, Mrs. David Maynard, Cedar Springs, Ontario, and Mrs. J. H. Shippy, Detroit, to spend the weekend at their country home at Harrow, Ontario, on October 22 to 24. While it was a reunion of these families, all were happy to extend birthday greetings to the host's mother, Mrs. Walter Claus, on her eighty-second birthday and to Mrs. Maynard who just passed her eighty-fifth milestone. Both ladies are in the best of health and enjoyed themselves greatly.

The weather was ideal and was a joy to those guests who enjoyed a long ramble over the estate Sunday morning and likewise to those who enjoyed the sunshine on the spacious porches.

A bountiful repast was served at the dinner hour on Saturday, after which all enjoyed games until a late hour. Again Sunday noon a delicious dinner was spread, to which forty-one guests did full justice. Mr. and Mrs. Claus and family, Miss Charlotte and Masters Jack and Jimmie, were very considerate hosts to so large a gathering. The spacious rooms of the lovely home were gayly decked in rose and white.

Of the host's family beside his immediate family there were present: Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Claus. With Mrs. Shippy were her family, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McIlvenna, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Shippy, and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Shippy and daughters. Of Mrs. Maynard's family were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. H. Damman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maynard, Mr. and Mrs. Gladwyn Maynard, Mrs. Glen Burke, and small son, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Maynard and daughter.

Mrs. Walter Claus and Mrs. David Maynard are daughters of Elder John Shippy and wife, Sophronia, both of whom departed this life years ago. S. D. Shippy, of Lamoni, Iowa, is a brother to the ladies. Mrs. J. H. Shippy is the widow of the youngest son in Elder Shippy's family. John H. Shippy passed away suddenly last November. His family still keenly feel the passing of one so young in a family, many of whose members pass the fourscore mark.

Infinite

Every hill is higher than the one you climbed before;

Every vista's wider than the last one you had seen;

Every height attained expands your vision more and more—

Further peaks uprear and grander valleys intervene.

He who says, "This steep I climb is final," speaks amiss;

Only blindness hides from him the loftier heights ahead.

Cloud-dim, snow-clad crags the morning's rosy fingers kiss—

"Final" things are only for the soul whose hope has fled.

We have the addresses of several, and we sent out letters to them during the summer, but we do not know whether they were received or not. There are a great many whose addresses we do not have. We desire to be of service to all the Saints living in isolated places, in any way we can during the coming months. We want to get in communication with all, so that we may become acquainted with, and minister to your needs to the best of our ability; that we may be mutually strengthened, encouraged, and built up, and our faith increased in the work of the Master.

Let us know who you are, where you are, and how to find you. Let us hear from you at an early date, at Box 275, Pomeroy, Iowa. E. L. BEDWELL, District President.

Our Departed Ones

SMITH.—Mary Amelia Smith was born December 16, 1864. She was married to James B. Smith in about the year 1885, and from this union six children are living. She was baptized at Gallup, New Mexico, in 1894, by Elder William B. Farley. Her greatest desire for years was to see all of her family in the church, and responding to her last wishes four of the children were baptized, and the promise from the remaining one granted brightened her last moments. Died on September 25, 1927, in San Diego, California, after directing that she be taken to Bisbee, Arizona, for interment by the side of her husband. Services were conducted from the Palace Undertaking Parlors, September 29, the sermon being preached by Elder S. D. Condit. Five of Sister Smith's children were present at the funeral, two daughters and one son from California, one son from Phoenix, and one daughter residing in Warren, Arizona. The body was brought from San Diego, where Sister Smith had been living with her daughter, Sister Daisy Rieper, since the death of her husband in Bisbee six months ago. One son who lives in Long Beach was unable to attend. Two brothers from Phoenix, Arizona, were present. Sister Smith's mother, who lives in Missouri, and a sister located at El Paso, Texas, were unable to attend. Five grandchildren also survive.

HARRIS.—John F. Harris was born January 14, 1852, at Plymouth, England. Came to America when yet a young man. Was baptized June 16, 1879, in West Virginia. Brother Harris spent a number of years in Holden and Independence, Missouri, and was a faithful caretaker at the nurses' home of the Independence Sanitarium. Passed into the next world October 16, 1927, at the Sanitarium. He leaves two sons and a daughter in Pennsylvania. The funeral was on Wednesday, the 19th. Very appropriate music was rendered by Sister L. E. Hills and Sister H. L. Barto, Miss Evelyn Barto at the piano. Elder J. M. Terry spoke words of hope and comfort from Psalms 116:15. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

WHITE.—Emma Vietta Brownell, daughter of Shadrack and Vesta Brownell, was born October 6, 1851, at Carlton, Orleans County, New York. When about ten years of age, she located with her parents in Michigan. Was married to Jesse D. White, a soldier fresh from the Civil War, June 28, 1869, at Buchanan, Berrien County, Michigan. To this union seven children were born, Frances E., George J., Vesta, Jesse Lee, and Willie preceding her to the farther shore, the two remaining being Mrs. Carrie Vanderhoof, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and John R., of Chicago. George J. was quite sick, necessitating a major operation, which was thought to set him on the way to recovery, and a few weeks following dropped dead of apoplexy. Sister White was unable to overcome the shock and passed away October 8, 1927, in the home at Galien, Michigan, which she had occupied for fifty-six years. She was a long-time Latter Day Saint, a charter member of the Galien Branch of the Reorganization, and very loyal to the faith and active in the local society until old age bade her retire. Those of near kin who hold her memory dear are the two children, ten grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and a multitude of friends. The funeral was conducted from the Saints' church in Galien, October 11, S. W. L. Scott, preaching the sermon to a large assemblage of friends. Burial in Galien Cemetery.

WILLIAMS.—Daniel E. Williams, son of Brother and Sister Thomas R. Williams, was born May 6, 1886, at Lucas, Iowa. Died at his home near Dogwood, Missouri, October 7, 1927. He married Miss Zada McLain at Tigris, Missouri, December 30, 1921, and to this union four children were given, Ellen, who preceded him in death November 30, 1924, Loyal Dean, Loren Ervin, and Oren Evan, who with Sister Williams are left to mourn the loss of a kind father and husband. Was baptized September 29, 1927. Of a cheerful disposition, the deceased had a smile for all, and was respected by all who knew him. Funeral sermon was by Elder J. C. Chrestensen in the Good Hope Church. Interment in Good Hope Cemetery by the side of the daughter who preceded him. Besides his wife and children, Brother Williams leaves two brothers and three sisters: J. A. Williams, of Derby, Iowa; T. J. Williams, of the home address: Mrs. G. W. Peck, Mahaska, Kansas; Mrs. George Williams, Kenosha, Wisconsin; and Mrs. R. E. McNew, Chicago, besides many friends and other relatives.

BRADEN.—John Adam Braden was born near Cameron, Ontario, June 4, 1871, and died in Sacred Heart Hospital, Havre, Montana, October 17, 1927. Was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1884. Married Frances Hepburn in 1902, and to them were given three children. Brother Braden came to Montana in 1915, homesteading and ranching in the vicinity of Malta. During the last few years he has engaged in business in Malta and by honest dealing as well as a clean life he made a host of friends. He was steadfast in the Master's cause to the end, and will be greatly missed in this community. Left to mourn are his companion and three children. Funeral sermon was by George W. Thorburn. Interment in Malta Cemetery.

SEVERIN.—John Conrad Severin was born near Stockholm, Sweden, September 24, 1856. Came to America in 1877. Married Mary Jane Davis in 1881, and to them were born ten children, of which number three daughters are dead. Baptized May 11, 1884. Ordained an elder June 20, 1886. Died at his home in Kansas City, Missouri, October 21, 1927. His faith in the God he served held firm, and to go was not a fear to him. He fell asleep in peace. Surviving are his wife, two daughters: Mrs. C. O. Whipple and Mrs. Carl White, both of Englewood; five sons: H. T., U. C., E. R., of California, J. S. and M. G., of Miami, Florida; ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Funeral was conducted at the Stone Church in Independence Monday afternoon, October 24, Elder A. White delivering the sermon. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

PETERSON.—Alfred S. Peterson was born September 29, 1872, at Fremont, Nebraska. He married Mary Dolvin in 1894, and to them five children were born, all of whom are living. Entered the church by baptism July 14, 1907. Died at Butte, Montana, October 15, 1927. Brother Peterson was raised in the Deer Lodge Valley and was well and favorably known by members and nonmembers. In his demise the church militant loses a valuable servant. Surviving are his wife and five children and many friends. Funeral services conducted in Christian church; sermon by George W. Thorburn. Interment in new addition to Anaconda Cemetery.

HORR.—Ellen Dobson, daughter of Thomas and Sarah K. B. Dobson, was born January 26, 1859, at Deloit, Iowa. Married Sylvester Horr November 7, 1875, and united with the church in early womanhood. Died October 19, 1927, at the home of her only living daughter, Mrs. C. D. McKim, Thunderhawk, South Dakota. She is survived, besides her daughter, by five grandchildren: Mrs. Gertrude Waldecker, Mrs. Bertha Waldecker, Norris, Arlo, and William McKim; one great-grandson, and two others who were mothered as her own in her home to manhood and womanhood, namely, Bert Kellar, Edgar, Montana, and Mrs. Ella Richardson McKim, Thunderhawk; also two sisters, Mrs. Emma Spence, and Mrs. Arsenia A. Myers. Funeral services at the home, Reverend Bishop, Pentecostal minister, officiating. Interment beside her husband in the cemetery at Lebanon, South Dakota.

HAMMOND.—Martha J. Hammond was born February 22, 1896, at Elkton, Maryland. Baptized April 19, 1925, at Elk Mills, Maryland. That dreaded disease known as consumption of the physical forces, but not so serious as the consumption of the spiritual forces, took her away July 19, 1927. She lived the best she could in harmony with her covenant, and left an excellent record of patience. Funeral at her brother's home in Elk Mills, conducted by A. H. Parsons.

Conference Minutes

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.—District conference convened at Archibald, Pennsylvania, October 1 and 2, Apostle Roy S. Budd and district presidency presiding. Reports from district presidency, A. E. Stoff, George W. Robley, and E. B. Hull, and from department heads. Secretary reported seven branches in the district, with a membership of 1,282. Thirty-four of the ministry out of 108 reported. Twelve had been baptized in the last six months, twelve confirmed, nine assisted in confirmation, fifteen children blessed, and assisted in blessing twelve children, 418 administrations to sick, 67 times in assisting to administer to sick, seven cases of difficulty adjusted, five marriages solemnized, one case submitted to court. Treasurer reported on hand at last report $118.11; no receipts; expenditures $51.60; balance on hand $66.51. Reunion committee reported receipts $1,063.21; expended $820.48; in bank $242.73; all bills not in, it will not be possible to make a full report until next conference. The reunion in 1927 was one of the most spiritual held in Deer Park. The Presiding Bishop was present and suggested in business meeting that the park be placed in the hands of a committee to be run as a stewardship for the church. The members acted on this suggestion and placed the matter in the hands of the District Bishop, John Zimmermann, sr., and District President A. E. Stoff, to form such committee. A resolution was passed on the time of holding the next reunion, the date to be the second Saturday in July, 1928, for the reunion to begin. The following names were submitted and recommended for ordination: Harry Mann to the office of elder; Vincent Smith a priest; Angelo Piedmont a priest; Alma Matthews a teacher; and Michele Sperandeo a deacon. H. A. Cunningham was elected secretary-treasurer, to fill the unexpired term of Sister Elizabeth Teal. Preaching by Apostle Roy S. Budd, Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, and District President A. E. Stoff. A mass meeting of the priesthood was held, A. E. Stoff in charge. The Department of Women met, in charge of District Superintendent Mrs. E. B. Hull, and discussed several subjects. The weather was like summer, which brought to the conference a large number from all over the district. A good, spiritual time was had. At the sacramental service an oblation of $36.65 was received. Adjourned to meet in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in March, 1928, the exact date left to the district presidency.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS.—District conference convened at Alexander, Kansas, August 27, 1927, at 10.35 a. m., with District President A. C. Silvers in charge. Reports were submitted from the following district officers: district president, secretary, bishop's agent, superintendent of Department of Women, chorister, also statistical reports from Selden and Twin Creek Branches, and elder's report from John A. Safety in Law, and Liberty in Respect

Under the cloak of freedom a dangerous doctrine is being promulgated, which if carried to its logical conclusions will lead to anarchy. Personal liberty is one aspect of it, and is strongly advocated by those opposed to prohibition. Liberty of speech under this cloak is distorted into license to say what is calculated to harm society and undermine the foundations of government. Along with it goes disrespect for properly constituted authority and disregard of law. To this I have called attention time and again, and my very efforts to warn against this invidious social danger have been distorted by those who have aligned themselves with the advocates of the doctrine. But the leaders in good government the world over have recognized that social safety lies in obedience to law, and obedience to law implies restrictions upon personal liberty. One has right to do and act only as he does and acts within the limits designated by law.

Lincoln, one of the greatest leaders of his time, who had a clear vision of social safety, as well as the forces threatening that safety, repeatedly proclaimed the necessity for strict observance of law. He thought and spoke in terms of American government and welfare, but his words in principle apply to all societies and peoples whose governments are based on constitutional principles and rights. One of Lincoln's most earnest appeals to Americans to recognize the great truth that social solidarity and safety lie in obedience to law and respect for authority, runs as follows:

Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well-wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country and never to tolerate their violation. . . . Let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty. Let reverence for the law be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books, and in almanacs; let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed from legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. And, in short, let it become the political religion of the Nation, and let the old and young, the rich and poor, the grave and the gay of all sexes and tongues and colors and conditions sacrifice unceasingly upon its altars.

Loyalty lies at the root of obedience, and I can not too strongly impress upon our people that because of the principles of our belief, the fundamentals of our religion, because of our antecedents and our true traditions, we should stand among the fore ranks of those who revere law and render deference to the representatives of properly constituted authority. And we should be alert to the dangers of the theories and subtle arguments which tend to lead us away from those standards.

"I will write the law in their hearts" spells the essence of obedience, and obedience prompted by an innate and divinely implanted desire to do all we can and be all one should for the welfare of mankind and the glory of God.

If we would find safety, we must learn obedience. If we would be happy, we must learn the respect which attaches to righteous authority.

In writing thus I am quite aware of the dangers which spring from the abuse of power, and looking back over the history of the past can see where in many places great harm has come by those in political power distorting the functions of government into instruments for personal advantages. And these dangers must be guarded against; but in attempting to flee one danger, it is folly to plunge into the midst of a greater.

The Christ set us the example even in this by being obedient. "Nevertheless, let thy will, not mine be done."

Our safety lies in law, and our obedience to it measures our social solidarity.

Lamoni Has College Day Spirit

In the news columns you will find an account of the activity of Lamoni Branch on College Day. This community has its financial burdens, and during the past six or seven years they have been heavy, but during this time continued and liberal support has been given the institutions of the church, and its activities. This year the sum of $1,044.20 was raised on College Day, with which they are not content, but are trying to reach the $1,100 mark. This is an outstanding achievement.

Cost of Education

The stupendous figures of the cost of education in the United States are rather startlingly set out in statements recently issuing from the United States Bureau of Education. From the Evening Ledger, of Philadelphia, issue of October 27, I cut the following:

Profitable Investment

Three billion dollars is invested annually in the rising generation by the people of the United States. That is approximately the total of all expenditures for public schools as announced recently by Doctor Frank M. Phillips, chief of statistics of the Bureau of Education.

In an address before the National League of Compulsory Education, meeting in Cincinnati, Doctor Phillips said there are at least 27,500,000 children in the schools of the United States. To develop them by means of education into efficient, law-abiding citizens, the people are spending about $100 per child. The collective bill will, of course, grow. Today school attendance has reached unprecedented figures, which continue to mount. Only two years ago there were in the United States some 3,000,000 children between the ages of five and seventeen years who were not attending school. In 1927 the figure has fallen to 2,500,000. A marked increase of attendance is shown in the upper grades. No fewer than 4,000,000 children attend the high schools throughout the country.

The bill for all this may seem large when thus presented, but it falls far below the total of national expenditures for luxuries. And that it represents a wise investment, no one can deny. The child or adult who has enjoyed the benefits of education not only gets more out of life for himself than the uneducated, but gives more to his community.

There has recently been some agitation on the question of whether the cost of education should be borne by the State or by the persons affected. The conclusions reached in such discussion will depend on the direction of approach. If the welfare of the group is in view, and the betterment of the coming generations is one of the objectives held to, the answer is, of course, that society should stand the expense and furnish the equipment. If an education is looked upon solely as an equipment for the industrial activities, then education may be termed capital, and the individual should bear the burden.

I have leaned strongly towards the view that the education of children and adolescents should be envisaged from its social significance, and social betterment should be at once the objective and the criterion of educational activities. If, as will be the case, the individual is the better prepared for industrial activities, this in turn becomes socialized, if the end results of individual activities in industry are measured by the benefits accruing to the group.

For the foregoing briefly stated reasons, I favor universal education of children to the limit of individual capacity, at the expense of society, with social welfare the dynamic of the educational activities. And so our slogan, "The equivalent of a college education for every boy and girl in the church to the degree he or she is capable of taking it, and is willing to work for it." But with this ideal must go something else, viz: Everyone working for the group, and at that for which he is best qualified.

Educate aright, for the right job, and with the greatest good to the greatest number—and let society stand the expense.

Advertising Church Locations and Activities

The question comes to us almost every week, in varied form but all generated by the same need, "Why do our people advertise so little? I do not find our church's advertisement among the others?"

From some quarters the question has almost ceased coming, for the reason that an energetic and efficient pastor or other officer of the local church has accomplished his purpose and in the local paper there appears each week, or more often if occasion demands, the announcement of our church and its activities. Only yesterday morning there came to my desk a portion of a Fresno, California, newspaper which contained a direct, creditable advertisement announcing the church location and program. Such a piece of work is of great convenience to Saints and others who visit that city, and in addition it gives standing among those not of the church who each week consult the newspaper as to the Sunday activities of the various churches. From many people we formerly heard in reply to the question, "Where is the church of Latter Day Saints in your city?" a reply something like this: "It seems to me there is a small church of that name somewhere in town, but I never hear of any activity." People who read the newspapers should no longer be able truthfully to make such replies.

On our desk at this moment is a letter from a Saint in Michigan who claims to have tried at various times to locate our churches in some of Michigan's and Illinois' best cities, and has been unable to find them advertised among the other churches, or listed in directories or telephone exchange lists. This Saint says, among other things: "I have been in C—, and in S—, and other places, . . . and have inquired of policemen or people on the streets as to the location of our church, and I have been answered that they did not know of such a people. . . . I have bought newspapers and could find no announcement of our church services, and of course have been deprived of attending. I hope in the future to see that the church has a greater place in the advertising columns of all the leading newspapers."

The HERALD has invited its regular correspondents to use a line in the head of their news letters to its columns by which the readers may locate their places of worship, and in addition expects in the near future to publish a list of these locations in one column, that the Saints may have the information gathered for their use. Any interested party may send to the HERALD editor the location of the church or meeting place of the Saints of his branch, but it should be the particular responsibility of each branch president to see that this is correctly done. Will you cooperate with the HERALD that this good work may be accomplished? R. J. L.

Valuable Old Photographs Secured

Because of the public spirit of the possessors of some valuable old pictures and photographs, the Graphic Arts Bureau has come into possession recently of historical specimens which might easily have been destroyed within a few years.

Among these are the following: Sister Rannie, a short time since widowed by the death of Elder Edward Rannie, has placed in the bureau's care a well-preserved picture of President Joseph Smith which was taken possibly at the time he came to the head of the church at Amboy, Illinois, in 1860; a picture of David H. Smith, taken at the time he was on a mission, in Salt Lake City, Utah; a picture of Edward Rannie, taken in 1883.

Elizabeth Totty, of Independence, has surrendered a large composite picture published by William Crick in 1897, which is so complete a pictorial history of that time as to be of great value.

A souvenir booklet published by the Stone Church Sunday school in 1914, containing views of the residence of Elder John W. Brackenbury, where the first Sunday school in Independence was held, and of the Brick Church where the Saints formerly met on East Lexington Street, has been donated by Adeline Tignor, of Independence.

Elder E. B. Hull, pastor at Brooklyn, New York, has donated two negatives of the original Jackson County Courthouse, now moved to Kansas Street, near to the City Hall of Independence. At the time these negatives were made, the old building was covered with weatherboarding which hid the logs, but these were removed when the building was restored to the original condition as much as could be, and it was taken from Lexington Street to its present site. The negatives were made April 12, 1918, and form an important link in the pictorial history of the old courthouse of Jackson County.

Saints and friends who remember and consent to place these rare articles in care of the Graphic Arts Bureau and the archives of the church should be regarded as thoughtful and careful people. Too much destruction of such and other historical matters occurs as people move from place to place, or as keepsakes change possession. R. J. L.

Elders Holloway and Wheaton in Debate

The Kansas City Times and the Kansas City Journal contained prominently placed news dispatches on November 7 announcing the opening of a debate November 6 between Elder L. G. Holloway, of the Reorganized Church, and Apostle Clarence L. Wheaton, of the Church of Christ.

The dispatch states the debate was to have been held in a country church a few miles distant from Lancaster, Wisconsin, but so much interest had appeared among the people that it had been moved to the Lancaster town hall, which was filled with hearers at the opening session.

The discussion is to continue for ten days; the propositions are so framed as to require each disputant to affirm that his church is the true and lawful continuation of the church organization formed under the leadership of Joseph Smith, which took tangible form April 6, 1830. Each disputant also affirms that his organization is in harmony with the original church in origin, organization, doctrine, and practice. Elder Holloway's affirmative is to be canvassed the first five nights; Apostle Wheaton presents his affirmative beginning November 11.

The Wichita Eagle recently published an interesting account of the meeting of the Civitan Club, which was entertained by Henry Roe Cloud, an Indian, who had traveled forty-five thousand miles in 1926 in order to sit in the councils of every Indian tribe in the Nation. Mr. Cloud said that the Indian had religion as a basis for all of his thinking; that he is a better companion because of taking that religious thinking into consideration in his social contracts, and a better warrior when he takes his religion with him on the path. He regards sacrifice as a necessary portion of the life which would show progress, and believes that when such ease and luxury come to either white man or Indian as to entirely dispense with sacrifice, that the tendency to discard religion comes also. "The Indian who has known sacrifice yet has been allowed to taste the sweetness of gain takes his religion like his forefathers took it. His religion is part of everything he does." The spirit of sacrifice is found necessary to the happy home.

He further said: "We should stop apart from the activities of life on occasion, and let the pendu-

KLDS AND KMBC NEWS

Change in K L D S Vesper Schedule

Beginning next Sunday, November 13, the K L D S vesper hour will begin at 6 o'clock instead of 6.30. This change will enable distant listeners to receive the K L D S program with less interference from other stations than at the later period.

So many stations are broadcasting on each wave length that it is very difficult to receive distant stations, and because of the much greater range of any station at night than in the daytime, interference at night is consequently much worse. So, from the standpoint of interference, it is believed that the six o'clock vesper hour will be an improvement over the later period.

Power Increase Application Denied

Although no official communication has been received at the K L D S office at the writing of this article, newspapers have published the report that the Federal Radio Commission has denied the K L D S application for increase in power. A maximum of 5,000 watts was petitioned by the station management, which had been practically assured through its Washington attorney, Brother Franklin D. Jones, that at least a substantial increase would be allowed.

It has been necessary to purchase new power equipment to replace that originally installed for the 1,000-watt station, and the equipment ordered will easily handle the maximum power requested from the commission. Even though the actual power output of 1,500 watts may not be increased at this time (the new equipment should be ready for use December 1), listeners should be able to hear K L D S-K M B C somewhat better when the new power plant is put in use.

"Journal-Post" Now on the Air

Arrangements for broadcasting Journal-Post features have finally been completed, and this Kansas City newspaper, published by Walter S. Dickey, went on the air November 1. The Journal-Post features are well described in the following news item, which appeared in the November 2 issue of the Kansas City Journal:

"Broadcasting Service of Up-to-the-Minute Events Is Launched Successfully"

"The new radio service inaugurated yesterday by the Journal-Post, including broadcasts of weather and market reports and the principal news of the day, made a favorable impres-lum of mind swing back, and out across the future, too. We should take stock of our needs and find a place for worship.

"The Indian always does this. The religion of the white man hasn't come easy to him. His own religion has been his basis for all thinking. He sees the white fellow using one conduct in his business house, another in his social contact, and still another in his church.

"This departmental worship has been hard for the Indian to understand. He finds it necessary to pause apart and let the pendulum of mind sweep across his accomplishments. I think the white fellow ought to do that, too."

sion on radio fans in Kansas City and all parts of the Middle West.

"This broadcasting will be a supplementary service of the Journal-Post that will be found dependable, valuable, and interesting," said Jason Rogers, general manager of the Journal-Post, who introduced the first night feature program from the Journal-Post studio of K M B C at seven o'clock last night.

"Listeners-in in the Kansas City area will get the latest important news quicker than they could by any other means," he said.

Editor Addresses Fans

"Dick Smith, managing editor of the Post, then addressed the radio audience.

"The entrance of the Journal-Post into the radio broadcasting field at this time is not a happenstance," said Mr. Smith. "It is the result of developments that have made broadcasting a legitimate newspaper activity.

"Until recently the rules of the great press associations prohibited client newspapers from broadcasting the news which these associations gather from the far corners of the earth.

"The only exceptions were special occasions when the news involved was available to all and there was no chance of one news-distributing agency getting over the radio news that a competitor had obtained at great expense.

To Avoid Confusion

"This forced newspapers which desired to broadcast to turn to entertainment programs—music and the like—with which the air already was cluttered. The Journal-Post saw nothing to be gained by this course, feeling that additional broadcasting schedules of such a character would only add to the confusion already bordering on chaos.

"But now most of the news-gathering organizations have decided that their policy was shortsighted and the ban on news broadcasting has been lifted, making it possible for the Journal-Post to go on the air without stepping outside of the normal and natural function of a newspaper, which is the dissemination of news.

"In fine, the Journal-Post, through its news bulletins and the broadcasting of newspaper features, is filling a field heretofore unoccupied in Kansas City, and one that rightly belongs to a newspaper. The schedule has been arranged so as to interfere as little as possible with regular entertainment programs of other broadcasters. We will be on the air through station K M B C for short periods three times daily—at 12 o'clock noon, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 7 o'clock in the evening."

Temple Orchestra to Broadcast

K L D S will broadcast a special program by the White Temple Orchestra, of Saint Joseph, next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. This orchestra has broadcast from the church station several times and has been enthusiastically indorsed by many listeners. The orchestra is composed largely of young people of the First M. E. Church of Saint Joseph, also known as the White Temple. The orchestra is conducted by W. C. Maupin. The man who is responsible for this organization is B. P. Johnson, the business manager, who has a great interest in young people.

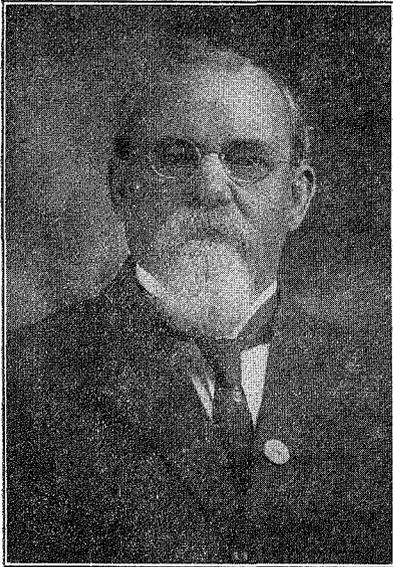

I read all the church papers and usually reread them. I have read the Book of Mormon three times, once before I joined the church, twice since. I like it very much and think it is a good book for anyone to read and then reread. I only hope that I can live a life as good as some of God's people of Book of Mormon times. That, however, is not an easy thing to do in a place like this where one hears nothing but profanity from morning till night. I am not letting that bother me, but endeavoring to do to others as I would have them do to me.—J. H. Eaton, East Dorsett, Vermont.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

My father, like many of those days, indulged in the use of tobacco, but he confined its use wholly to smoking. He used to have me light his pipe for him, and many times he would warn me what would befall me if he ever caught me smoking or using tobacco in any form. Poor soul! He did not seem to realize that he was teaching me to use the filthy and unprofitable weed every time he requested me to light his pipe. I am sorry to say that I learned to use tobacco, both chewing and smoking, thus going one point beyond my father. But thanks be to God, he influenced me by his Holy Spirit to rid myself of these unprofitable habits over fifty years ago. Later I shall relate how I came to quit the use of tobacco; also tea, coffee, and intoxicants.

The reader can readily see that I did not have an opportunity of procuring a first-class education when I was a boy, or a young man either. I was sent to school when very young, but could not learn rapidly, like most children, for I was at a great disadvantage in that I did not understand the English language. My parents would not permit their children to speak to them in English in the home. In their opinion, the Welsh language was the only language, and they were determined that their children should not get away from it. At times I have been very sorry that I was born under such conditions. The only opportunity I had to learn the English language was on the streets, from other children, and they were a mixture of all nationalities. One can readily see what kind of a language I would naturally acquire.

It was difficult for me to correctly pronounce words with more than one syllable, or words that began with the letter "s." The English and the Welsh drop the "h" where it should be and put it where it should not be, and it was a difficult task for me to overcome this habit. I would say for horse, orse; for white, wite; for whale, wale; etc. Hence, when speaking in public, I had to keep this in mind all the time I was talking, and I found it a tremendous obstacle to overcome. It has caused me many hours of sadness and discouragement.

In trying to pronounce a word beginning with the letter s, I had a little experience that proved very amusing to my wife. I had been preaching on false prophets, making a comparison of genuine money with counterfeit money, and wanted to use the word spurious, but was unable to pronounce it. After retiring, assuming that my wife was asleep, I undertook to master the word. My wife suddenly turned over and wanted to know what was the matter with me. I answered that I was not aware that anything was wrong. She then asked what I had been spuing about for the past half hour. I told her I was trying to master the pronunciation of a certain word, but could not get beyond the spu. Before we went to sleep I had mastered the pronunciation of spurious.

I can not see why boys and young men of today can not speak the English language correctly, especially those who have parents who use good English in the home. I have a grandson ten years old who can pronounce words of six and seven syllables as easily as I could pronounce words of one syllable when I was a young man. He has had an advantage over me in that his father is a professor of English classics in a university and his mother has had a university education. I have often thought that had I been favored with such an environment, I could have accomplished a greater amount of good in the world in the Lord's work, but I am thankful that the Lord, by his Spirit, helped me to go forward, notwithstanding the discouraging conditions with which I had to contend. And if the Lord could take such an ignorant boy and make him useful in his service, how much more can he do with boys who have had the advantage over me in point of education. God can do more with a sharp tool than with a dull one, providing such a one is willing to be used by him.

My parents were at a disadvantage in that they could neither read nor write the English language. This was a very great handicap to me and caused me much worry and sorrow. If I were late in going to school or for some reason were kept at home, I had to go without an excuse because my parents were unable to write one for me. If the lessons were difficult and hard for me to solve, my parents were unable to help me. My teachers did not realize my position, and did not always believe me when I told them I was kept at home by my parents to care for my younger brother while they went to attend a funeral or some other affair, and many times I was punished when innocent.

There were times when I became discouraged and tired of such treatment and would play "hooky," and as a consequence I received "what Paddy gave the drum" from both teacher and parents.

My parents thought it very strange that I did not learn more quickly at school—especially the English language. At last, as a penalty, I was sent back to the coal mines. I followed that occupation until I was about nineteen years old, or until the time I became interested in church work and the Lord called me out to work in the general ministry.

I used to indulge in many innocent boyish pranks. I was guilty of doing what Paul said most people do at a certain period of their lives—"thought as a child and acted as a child."

One day a little boy by the name of Thomas and I went down on the Ohio River bank to play. There were growing along the river bank some very high weeds that produced large, white flowers resembling lilies. We noticed humming birds going in and out of these flowers, abstracting the sweetness. We concluded that what was good for the little birds was also good for us, and we proceeded to eat the insides of some of these flowers. That night my little friend became very ill, and died before morning. It must have been that I did not eat very many of the flowers, for I did not become sick at all, or perhaps my time had not yet come and I was protected from the fatal result by the Lord.

At another time a number of us boys dug a cave in a sand bank. That same night one of the boys by the name of Marshall, who had played "hooky" from school and was afraid to go home, went into the cave to sleep for the night. The sand caved in on him, and the next day some one passing the cave discovered part of his body sticking out of the sand. It was rumored about that the dead boy was I, this mistake being due to the fact that we had hats alike. This disaster brought sadness to my heart, but it taught me a lesson—not to stay away from home when bedtime arrived.

Our parents were very strict with us and did not permit us to go in or near the Ohio River without their consent. One day another boy and I, without the consent of our parents, went down to the river to swim. My playmate was quite a good swimmer, but I had not learned the art. He gave me strict orders to wade around in the shallow water close to shore while he went out in the deep water.

But, in some way or other, I went out beyond my depth, and as I went down for the second time, I saw him going away from me. I then gave up all hope, but as I went down, I must have made some peculiar noise, attracting his attention, for, to my happy surprise, he came to my rescue. My parents never knew of this event. I always had a tender spot in my heart for the lad who rescued me. A few years later he was killed, and I was sad.

At another time I played hooky, went to the river, and spent the day in swimming and playing. I was afraid to return home, but went to the home of my oldest sister. She had left an empty flour barrel on the porch, expecting a farmer to fill it with apples, but the farmer failed to turn up that day. I turned the barrel upside down, crawled inside, and fell asleep. My parents went in search of me. I was not to be found on the streets or near the river, so they concluded I had fallen into the water and drowned. Finally they went to my sister's home, and in passing the barrel on the porch, my sister kicked it over, and there I was, sound asleep. I escaped punishment that time, for they supposed I had crawled in there during the day. You can imagine my rejoicing!

Close to my sister's home was an orchard, and there was one tree in particular whose fruit had attracted my attention for several days, but I did not dare go inside the orchard for fear of getting into trouble. This tree was near a high fence. One night I slipped out after dark and picked some of the fruit. Imagine my surprise and disappointment upon biting into one to find it to be a quince! That is not the only time I have been disappointed in judging things from outward appearance; I have had like experiences many times. No doubt the fruit of which Adam and Eve partook looked as good to them as did the quince to me, and they, like myself, discovered to their sorrow that it was not as sweet as it appeared and that the eating thereof produced bitterness.

Once I decided that the Lord had come to my rescue to save me from punishment at the hands of my parents. I played "hooky" and spent the entire day going here and there until after supper time; then, knowing full well what the consequences would be, I dreaded to go home. I wended my way to the river, made a line out of some thread, a hook out of a pin, put a little bait on it, and threw it into the river. To my great surprise and happiness, something pulled at the line, and I brought it to shore as quickly as I could. The water was quite shallow at that point, so I waded out in the water and met him half way. I was happy when I saw a fish two feet long, what we called a sturgeon in those days. I started for home with him, as fast as my legs could take me. That saved me from getting a whipping, so I thought that surely the fish I had caught was a Godsend, and my heart was full of gratitude.

My father had occasion to go to Kaysville, Illinois, to work in the coal mines. After being there for some time, he wrote to my mother that he would soon be home and that he was going to bring us boys some hazelnuts. I had a nephew nine months younger than myself, and he was equally delighted when he heard that his grandfather was going to bring us hazelnuts.

In those days there were no railroads along the Ohio River, and all the traffic was by boat. There was a big bend in the river, about two miles down from where we lived, but the large steamers carried very powerful whistles that could be heard for miles, which they always blew before coming to a landing. My nephew and I expected my father to arrive on every boat that came up the river, and when we would hear the whistle we would make a bee line for the landing. At one of these times it was dark, and we took a lantern with us. As we arrived at the river bank, we saw the steamer coming up towards us. When she came in sight, my nephew waved the lantern, and the boat headed for shore. When close in, the captain called out, "What do you want?" Before I had a chance to say a word, my nephew called out, "Is my grandfather on there?" The captain was furious and replied by consigning my nephew's grandfather to another sphere, and ordered the boat to proceed up the river. The steamer happened to be a fast express and did not stop at small places. We had put them to a lot of trouble to turn and see what was wanted. It was no wonder the captain went into a rage.

One Sunday morning my mother started me off to Sunday school in a suit of new clothes. In those days our clothes could not be purchased ready made; our mothers had to make them for us. She gave me special orders that morning that I was not to dirty or tear my new clothes, and said if I disobeyed orders I would be severely punished. No little boy was more proud of his new clothes than I. It was in the month of June, and the cherries were ripe. While on my way, I saw some boys up in a cherry tree, helping themselves, and since they refused to throw some down to me, I decided to climb to the top of the picket fence and help myself. I picked the cherries off one limb which was close, and reached out for another limb, when, to my great dismay, the branch broke off and down I fell, head first. To my awful sorrow the bottom of my new pants caught on the top of one of the pickets and stayed there, while I went down to the ground. You can imagine the condition of my new trousers. I was forced to go straight home, and for my disobedience, my mother gave me a good thrashing the next morning with a rawhide whip. She always kept this whip hanging on the wall where we could see it.

Mother never punished us on the Sabbath Day. She never whipped us when she was angry; neither did she forget the promises she made. It was a case of "yea" and "nay" with her. She always said what she meant and meant what she said. It would be a mighty fine thing for a great many children today if their mothers would pursue the same course. I have heard mothers tell their children that if they did or did not do certain things, they would inflict terrible punishment upon them, but the promised punishment never materialized. Such mothers do not have much regard for the saying of Jesus, "Let your yea be yea, and your nay be nay," nor for the fact that they shall have to account for every idle word.

Other mothers, when their children disobey, use very endearing terms, such as "honey," "sweetie," "dearie," and "lovie." At such times they should remember the saying of Solomon, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," for the rod would be more effectual in most instances than the endearing words. I have been in homes where the little rod should hang on the wall; perhaps it would be more attractive if the handle were silvered, and underneath the words inscribed in large golden letters, "I need thee every hour."

I have a vivid recollection of seeing W. W. Blair and J. W. Gillen in those youthful days, the former being an apostle and the latter a missionary. I remember being sent to the blackberry patch with Brother Gillen.

CHAPTER 5

Dan Jones was captain of one of the passenger steamers on the Mississippi River that plied between Saint Paul and Saint Louis. It is said that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, and other dignitaries of the church, were passengers on his boat, at which time a preaching service was held, Joseph Smith being the speaker. Captain Jones became interested in the gospel and obeyed it. He was subsequently called to the ministry by Joseph Smith and sent to Wales on a mission. God operated through him in a marvelous way, and he was the means of gathering in hundreds, among whom were some of the better class of people. My parents accepted the gospel and were baptized.

Upon the return of Brother Jones to Nauvoo, Illinois, he found the church had broken up. He followed Brigham Young and his followers to Salt Lake City. He later returned to Wales and attempted to introduce polygamy and its kindred evils to the Welsh people, but they refused to have anything to do with such teachings. This was a death-blow to the work in Wales and has proved a handicap hard to overcome.

At the close of the War of the Rebellion, my father, being seriously afflicted with miner's asthma, was advised to go west for his health. He located in the little hamlet of Saint David, Fulton County, Illinois.

A brother by the name of David Williams had started a coal mine in this little place. All the men working in the mine were Latter Day Saints. The mine boss was Elder Jeremiah Jeremiah, who later was ordained a seventy and sent on a mission to South Wales, accompanied by Jason W. Briggs, president of the Quorum of Twelve, and in charge of the work in Europe.

Saint David could boast of only two rows of houses and a little chapel that the Saints had erected out in the woods. This chapel served as a meeting place for the Saints as well as a schoolhouse for the children. I have no doubt this was one of the first church edifices built by the Reorganization in the United States. It was in this little chapel that I first gazed upon the face of our late beloved Joseph Smith, who presided over the church for nearly fifty-five years.

Sometime during the summer of 1866, the president of the branch announced that the prophet and president of the church would soon pay us a visit. This announcement created a sensation; the old as well as the young were very much excited, and his proposed visit was the subject of conversation on the streets and in the homes of the Saints. I was ten years of age and had ideas as to the appearance of a prophet of God. To my boyish mind he was a being very different from others, and I clothed him with personal attributes and characteristics almost divine. So I considered myself very fortunate to have the privilege of looking upon the face of a prophet of God and of hearing him speak.

The eventful day arrived. The church in which the Saints met seated only about a hundred persons, so to be sure of getting a seat I was one of the first at the meeting house, and I sat up in front in order to get a good view. At last the personage appeared, in company with Jeremiah Jeremiah, president of the branch, and Edwin Stafford; they occupied seats on the old-fashioned half-moon platform.

Childhood's impressions are vivid and lasting, and I now see him distinctly in memory as I looked upon him then. Truth compels me to state that I was greatly disappointed in his appearance, as I had in mind all the time a being of abnormal physical proportions, while before me sat a seemingly very human man, wearing ordinary clothes, with no adornment whatever, and having quiet and unassuming manners. He was slight in build, with black hair and whiskers. I was favorably impressed with his dark, piercing eyes, which seemed to penetrate one's very soul, but at the same time his intense gaze was modified by a kindly, sympathetic expression, making his thin face not unattractive. He also had a personal magnetism about him that drew even little children. And there was never a time when our worthy brother was not sociable and very considerate of those around him. He had a power with him that drew people, and such winning ways that the people loved to be in his company.

He impressed me as being only an ordinary speaker, he then having had only about six or seven years' experience in the pulpit. In later years, as I have sat listening to his wise counsel, able arguments, and marked ability as an interesting pulpiteer, I have compared him with the Joseph of years before.

As I sat there, a ten-year-old boy, little did I think that I would be so closely associated with the speaker in carrying the angel's message, and in helping him to build up the kingdom. I am quite sure that he did not have the slightest idea that the ignorant little Welsh boy who sat before him would be associated with him in the high councils of the church for about forty years. Only our Father in heaven knows what is in the future for little boys, and therefore parents should commit the keeping of their boys and girls to him.

I was called to the office of Seventy and ordained just about ten years after I met the Prophet.

Soon after the departure of Brother Smith, I asked for baptism, and Brother Jeremiah Jeremiah, one of the Seventy and president of the branch, baptized me July 5, 1866.

The Saints in those days were very spiritual, and they were made partakers of many blessings. My mind often reverts to the times when the Lord spoke to them in tongues and in prophecy. My, how they did sing the songs of Zion! They had wonderful confidence in the promises of God. They sang many of the old hymns of finer spiritual quality. If we of this day would sing more of those good old-time, soul-reviving, spiritual hymns, there would be more of the Spirit in our meetings. As Saints, in our hymns, we are copying too much after the world.

In those days the Saints met together on Tuesday evenings for prayer meetings and on Thursday evenings for testimony meetings. The order of the prayer service was that as many as three or four prayers would be offered before rising from our knees; then we would have some singing, then another season of three or four prayers. This was continued until all had prayed who so desired.

One of these evenings, in the first season of prayer, I fell asleep with my head in my arms, resting on the seat before me, and kept on sleeping. The meeting adjourned, the Saints went home, and I was left alone in that little chapel out in the woods. At bedtime my parents discovered my absence, and I presume they became very much wrought up. They made a search for me and finally found me, in the wee small hours of the morning, in the church and fast asleep. That was the longest period that I was ever on my knees at one time, and I have often thought that it was a mighty good thing the Lord had poured out upon me the spirit of deep sleep, for had I awakened in that lonely church out in the woods, there would have been some terrible screaming and great excitement. There never was a boy in this world more afraid of ghosts and devils than was I, and it was many years after I entered the ministry ere I could get rid of that awful feeling. My parents and all the rest of the people with whom I was associated believed in such nonsensical foolishness. Many a night I have slept with my head under the bed covers, and almost suffocated, not daring to look out into the room for fear I would see a spirit. After I began reading the Scriptures, I learned, to my great happiness and peace of mind, that the spirits of the righteous went to Paradise and that they could not come back to earth unless they were sent as ministering spirits, and that the spirits of the wicked are consigned to hell, God's prison house, and that they could not come back at will, but would have to remain in prison until they appeared before the great august Judge to receive their sentences and be punished for the evil deeds done while in the flesh.

Foreigners are the most superstitious people in the world, often relating stories of a frightful nature before their children, which is a very wrong thing to do, as the fear thus instilled often mars the after life of the child. There are those grown to manhood and womanhood who are never able to throw off the fear thus acquired.

While still residing in Saint David, I was afflicted with a very bad case of sore eyes, which caused me considerable suffering, and I could not leave the house with my eyes in such a bad condition. One prayer meeting night just before going to the church, my mother, thinking it would soothe my eyes so that I could go to sleep, applied a poultice of cold tea leaves. I went to bed, but in a short time my eyes pained me so severely that I got up out of bed and dressed. Then, using the fence to guide me, I went to the prayer meeting and requested that I receive the administration of the elders. My eyes were almost instantly healed, and I have never had any trouble with them since. The incident made a great impression upon my mind and instilled within my young heart great faith in the Lord and in his ability to heal the sick.

My Way

Mayhap it stretches very far,
 Mayhap it winds from star to star;
 Mayhap through worlds as yet unformed
 Its never-ending journey runs,
 Through worlds that now are whirling wraiths
 Of formless mists between the suns.
 I go—beyond my widest ken—
 But shall not pass this way again.

So, as I go and can not stay,
 And never more shall pass this way,
 I hope to sow the way with deeds
 Whose seed shall bloom like May-time meads,
 And flood my onward path with words
 That thrill the day like singing birds;
 That other travelers following on May find a gleam and not a gloom,
 May find their path in pleasant way,
 A trail of music and of bloom.

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

Some one has said that "Variety is the spice of life." This may be true, but it occurs to me that the real "cake" of life has to a more or less extent become so "spiced" with "variety" there is little left but the "spice."

Is it not just possible that the world at large is more or less carried away with incidentals, while the basic principles of life are either neglected or overlooked?

Let us not spoil the wholesome life with the spice of variety.

Jesus said, "Seek ye first to establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and these [incidental] things shall be added unto you."

We are told that a thousand years is as a day with the Lord. I have no particular objection to this if it is the Lord's way; however, I am quite sure this measurement does not apply to mankind.

The safest and most logical course for man to pursue is to "get busy" as early in life as possible, confining his operations to the first hundred years of his life, working while the "day" is young.

When we pray "Our Father who art in heaven . . . give us this day our daily bread," are we thinking alone of the physical laws representative of God by which "the earth shall yield its increase" and which under proper process becomes the bread upon which we subsist in order that we might be able to meet the physical demands which come to us? Or does the prayer have a deeper significance, in that we are created spiritually as well and in the nature of things must be fed on food divine so that we might be strengthened with might in the inner man, for tomorrow we may be called upon to go forth to forgive a brother, and we must be strong for such an occasion?

According to the statement of our blessed Lord, the forgiveness we expect of our heavenly Father is contingent upon our ability and disposition to forgive our brother. Lord, we are in need of both physical and spiritual food; give us this day our daily bread.

Vox populi, vox Dei, I understand is Latin for "The voice of the people is the voice of God." Well, I wish I had time and ability—the disposition would not be lacking—to make an extended excursion back through the intervening decades with the idea of finding the man who said it, why he said it, and what the conditions were under which he said it.

It is true that I may not be highly educated; my judgment at times may be warped because of prejudice; and I may see through a glass darkly now and again; but if I should ever be fortunate enough to meet with the man who said it, I would walk straight up to him and say: "Mr., I don't believe it," for I don't.

I have not traveled as extensively, perhaps, as have others, but I have been up in Iowa and as far away as Arkansas, and what mine eyes have seen, what my ears have heard, and what my heart has felt in hearing the voice of the people is in striking contrast to that which I feel when I commune with my heavenly Father, or the feeling which comes to me when I can really sense the significance of the wonderful words of life so beautifully expressed by the Master of life. Again, when I life mine eyes to the starry realms above, and the flowers, the beautiful groves budding around me, I hear and see and feel the voice of God, and I think of that which was presented by the Psalmist David: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." This, then, because of the God within seeking to answer to the voice from above, I say, "I hear and come to thee."

No! I can not think the voice of such a being is represented in the jazz-swept world of today.

The voice which comes to me daily from the people represents such conditions as unholiness, unholy ambitions, selfishness, avarice, and their concomitant evils with which the world is deluged and which can not be confused with the voice of God, as it is unlike the voice who said, "I am come that they might have life and have it more abundantly."

Just a Word

By R. E. Chrono, Sr.

We can't recall life's quickly passing hours,
Nor heal a wound and leave no searing scar;
We can't prevent a harsh word's mighty powers
To hurt a friend whose love seemed like a star.

We can't unsay a harmful word once spoken,
Nor rob a blow of humiliating shame.
We can't renew a friendship once its broken,
For confidence can never be the same.

If word of mouth with anger's might is freighted,
Or barbed with poison and dire vengeance sought,
Then love for friend its parting flight has started
Into a realm where friendship can't be bought.

If love of friend we greatly prize and treasure,
Then love for friend we surely should retain,
And give to him a heart's sincerest measure
Of sentiment and friendship without strain.

So guard the tongue from words which hurt another,
And keep that frown a captive with a smile.
It will joy and gladness bring to each other,
If we strive to make our friendship worth the while.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys with the Editor in Chief

The Hoosier State

I recently received a letter from a brother who seemed to be under the impression that these "Little journeys" are a running account of my work and movements from day to day. It has never been my intention to do anything approaching this, for such a biography or "public diary" would be quite out of place. At times I have feared that I have to too large an extent included account of my movements, especially when away from home. To write of routine would be quite tiresome, both to reader and to writer; but from various quarters I have received encouragement to continue the journeys with the editor, as the HERALD readers were interested in the descriptions of places and events, and that there was sufficient of the human interest about the "journeys" to make them worth while to our readers; that some, at least, perhaps many, were interested in knowing somewhat of the work, travels, hopes, ambitions, and an occasional heart throb of the "big chief," as I have been termed, perhaps both in derision and affection.

So I am, for the time being at least, appearing in print now and then with a "journey" in the hopes that they will be of interest and not without some benefit to the HERALD readers.

I have not seen much of the Hoosier State, except transiently, mostly from the windows of fleeting trains across the State in passing from the West to the East, and contrariwise. Some year or more ago I visited Indian Lake reunion, and later visited the Clear Lake Branch, but of the work in the State I knew but little from first-hand observation, though names of workers and branches were more or less familiar from reports, letters, conference minutes, etc.

And so when after a day's journey from Philadelphia (where I had made a rather hasty call) I found myself approaching New Albany with before me a two- or three-day visit among the Saints of Indiana, I found myself keenly interested in what I would experience in places whose names had been familiar ones for years, and with pleasure in meeting Saints of whom I had heard, but had not personally known. It was on the 28th of October, and I was on a Baltimore and Ohio train, and my first objective was Byrneville, where a church was to be dedicated on the 30th. I reached New Albany about 9.35 p. m., some hours earlier than I had expected (an error in reading time tables), and hence instead of spending the night on a train, I spent it in a hotel, The Tavern. I enjoyed a needed rest and sleep and the opportunity to remove the stains of travel.

Upon coming into the lobby from my room on the next morning, I experienced the pleasure of meeting two old-time friends, Brother and Sister J. A. Robinson, or "John" and "Keo," as I had always known them.

As I ate breakfast we chatted, about times old and new, and I learned much from J. A. concerning conditions in the district. Breakfast over, and a few errands run, we, baggage and all, were stored in the Ford and were off for Byrneville, an "inland" town a few miles from Georgetown, on the Southern Railway. From what I saw in New Albany, I should judge that it is a live, thriving, southern Indiana town, perhaps a bit too close to Louisville to become a big city but a good place to live at that. Concerning its statistics I learned little more than that it is of about twenty-five thousand population. J. A. and I were too busy on church matters and experiences.

Leaving the little city, I found the car was purring (rattling, should I have said?) along a smooth, concrete road, which changed in a few miles to macadam. I had heard much about the "sticks" of Southern Indiana, its wild aspects, and its undesirability as a place to live. But I was treated to a fine surprise. In just a short time the road lifted from the level on which New Albany stands into the hills of the Knob Country—Floyd Knobs, those are called—and as the Ford chugged around bend and curve, beating its way to the summit, I caught vistas and views of timbered hills and wooded glens which were a delight. The country is of rare beauty. In general aspect it is not unlike the hills of the Ozarks, so far-famed for beauty. The hills were a riot of color, though the fall change of color had progressed till the deeper shades had formed, but browns, yellows, and reds alternating with the greens of cedars, and some others which still had their summer garb, as the pictures varied with the changing contours of hill the sweep of valley, presented scenes which made the ride one of continuous pleasure because of the appeal of beauty.

Through Floyd Knobs, village unincorporated, and one or two others, and we reached Greenville. A strange story was told me of this place, a story going back into the first decade of our church history; of a visit there by Joseph Smith, Hyrum, and others, of an attempt at poisoning Joseph and Hyrum frustrated by divine help. I had not heard the story, or if I had, had not retained it in memory. Brother Robinson told it, and I heard it from others later, and was told it was from church history. Mayhap more of it later. Greenville had appearance of being old enough to figure in such a happening. It lies on a road which was a thoroughfare early in the history of Indiana, back in the forepart of the nineteenth century.

At Greenville we turned off the old road, to go towards Georgetown and Byrneville; and after a few miles of road through a country evidently once heavily wooded but "sawed off." We reached about ten o'clock, the farm home of Brother S. O. Mosier, and there we stayed till after lunch. We found a quiet but nevertheless hearty welcome from Brother and Sister Mosier, and we also found one of the old-timers of our workers in the person of Brother Dutton. The house, which constitutes one of the material aspects of the home, is situated on a hill overlooking to the south the valley and opposite bordering hills of Indian Creek, and the vista across the valley and down it, away towards its confluence with the Ohio some miles away, is charming. And I found on that half section much to interest us. So while waiting for lunch, we were shown by Brother Mosier and the son, Fulton, the herd of Jerseys, the wheat fields, the cleared timberlands, etc., and from Brother Mosier I found a readiness of answer to my many questions which indicated a keen knowledge of farming conditions in southern Indiana.

Lunch over, again in the Ford, Brothers Robinson, Mosier, Dutton, and Sister Robinson, and I went a mile or so farther, to the quaint and far-from-new village of Byrneville. There we stopped awhile, to meet such of the Saints as we could and to see the new church, of which I'll write later. Then, with Brethren C. N. Maymon taking Sister Robinson's place (she remaining to rehearse with singers, etc.), we went some twelve miles farther to visit a place of considerable historic interest, Corydon. It was the State capital from 1816 to 1825, and was the capital of the Territory previously. In the square in the center of the town, stands yet the solidly built square stone capitol, two stories high, surmounted by a cupola, and in so good state of preservation that it is still used for offices and courtroom. Owned now by the State, it will be restored to original form, and preserved as a monument of history. A new courthouse is being built.

As we visited the old building and met acquaintances of Brothers Mosier and Maymon, I found a reminder of olden times in the long hitching rack of posts and log chains stretched around the square; and what was more interesting, I saw a row of horses hitched to carriages and wagons, and that row solid, stretched across the east of the south side of the square. The persistence of this method of travel bespoke the rough terrain and unimproved roads of the surrounding country.

A call on the newspaper men, a chat in each of the two offices, and we were off on return trip to Byrneville, where Brother and Sister Robinson and I had supper with Brother and Sister Byrne. I found I had been booked for a talk at the evening hour. And so at an early hour we went to the church across the street.

Byrneville is a small village, and the branch there, though one organized many years ago, is small, yet by a fine bit of teamwork, and pulling together, a very neat and commodious church home has been built. In size it is sufficient to seat about two hundred and twenty-five or two hundred and fifty people. It is neat in appearance and was built at an expense of money surprisingly small. From the report of the building committee, I was surprised to learn that less than fifteen hundred dollars in cash had been paid out. Work and working together tell the story of the accomplishment. Brother Mosier, one of the committee, has a sawmill. This he loaned to the men of the branch who went into the woods, felled the trees, and sawed the lumber. Not only that, but they sawed a carload of lumber for sale, the proceeds going into the church. All the work on the building was done by Saints and friends. And I assure you, my dear readers, it was a pleasure to me to hear the people of the branch and town tell of how those men and women worked to build the church, and how much pleasure they got from their work. Last August, work was begun, and to find the building up, painted, paid for, and ready for dedication on October 30 is a fine record. Teamwork! Let's have more of it. Who worked? Who did not work? Can't name them all now but as near as I can learn, about everybody made some form of contribution in work as well as money—the Maymons, Mosiers, Martins, Byrnes, Jenkinses—everybody. And I sincerely hope that that little group of Saints, having so strikingly shown what can be done by working together, will keep right on working together for the branch, for the district, and for the church. There is much to do, for all.

Well, back to my story, Saturday night, a small branch. I went to the church thinking I would have a small audience. But by the time the singers had done their work and John's horn was on the seat and I was "introduced," there was a goodly audience in the house. They came for miles around, and the evening was spent in getting acquainted—audience and speaker.

Sunday, the 30th, the day for the dedication, looked forward to so keenly by the Byrneville Saints, had been made a gala day for the district; and by the time Brother Dutton and I had walked in from Brother Mosier's (for exercise), we found the Saints were already gathering. The day was fine despite the threatening clouds of the night before, and by the time Sunday school was over, the little street was lined with cars, from Marengo, Derby, Louisville, Indianapolis, from every branch in the district. And I began to doubt the capacity of the building to hold the crowd. It didn't. The crowd overflowed it.

The morning hour following Sunday school was given to sacramental service. It had been suggested to me to preach, but I felt the sacramental service would be best. I did speak of the sacrament and its benefits. More than two hundred and twenty-five Saints were in the building, and a fine spirit prevailed. Thirty testimonies in about twenty-five minutes, a good record. But best of all was the sensible presence of the Holy Spirit, which developed the willingness to serve and sacrifice. I heard one good sister say it was her first meeting with Saints in twenty years. What a rebuke that to some of us! Twenty years isolated and still faithful to the cause! Another told of instant relief from painful illness of years' duration. The same beautiful story, the goodness of the Father to his children.

Sacrament over, dinner on the lawn. And what a fine dinner! Those Indiana women know how to prepare for a common meal. I think it would be safe to say that more than three hundred partook, and were happy to be with each other, to visit with those of like faith.

At half past one all were in place again. I can not say all were in church, for they were not. About three hundred were, and quite a number of others who could not get in were outside, at the windows.

The district and branch authorities had arranged a program which took about two hours to complete: History of the building, list of donors of work and money, passing of deed to the general church, all found place in the program. From Brother Robinson for the branch I received for the bishopric, the deed, and the keys. I took pleasure in both and particularly in handing the keys to Brother Maymon, for the branch, with the admonition to see that the building was used for the people and the church.

Special music had been prepared, and under the direction of Sister Robinson, a choir had been built up from the Byrneville young people, which I hope will be the beginning of something permanent in that line and which will contribute to the general music movement of the church.

In following Brother Robinson's dedicatory prayer by a dedication sermon, I felt well in presenting the ideals of the church, and in pleading for the church to become a factor of uplift and cleanness in the community.

I must not forget to say that about one hundred and fifty dollars was subscribed and taken up for additional improvements, etc.

As we closed the dedicatory service about 3.40 or 3.45, it was evident that all had thoroughly enjoyed the services, and as groups of Saints left for homes distant, remarks were frequent to the effect that it had been a profitable day for the district.

And I was glad to have met with the Saints of the Southern Indiana District for that day, and am glad if I have in any degree contributed to the cause in that part of the vineyard. I found pleasure in meeting the many fine Saints of the district, to form acquaintance with those who have so valiantly served the cause. I hope I may have encouraged them in the work and turned their eyes more clearly toward Zion.

That afternoon service did not close the day's work, for after supper we met again in the evening, and I spoke to an audience which nearly filled the house; and despite the rather strenuous day, I had fine attention while I tried to encourage the Saints to greater activity in the cause.

That meeting over, it was interesting and good to see the groups of Saints visiting, evidently reluctant to leave the spot where a day so pleasant had been spent. And as I returned to the hospitable home of Brother Mosier for the night, and visited with him and his family a while before retiring, I was tired but again happy in the thought that perhaps I had helped the Saints of the district and the branch to carry on, on towards Zion. La Junta, Colorado

October 31.—In June we had the pleasure of having with us Elder R. D. Weaver, of Independence, Missouri. He preached for more than four weeks. We enjoyed these missionary sermons.

In September Brother Richard Bullard favored us with his presence, preaching and giving blessings. This good father to the church won the love and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. The writer has known this brother for many years. He used to stay at times with the writer's father and mother, Brother and Sister W. L. Willis, at Wray, Colorado.

In October Brother Bruce E. Brown and Apostle Gleazer, of Independence, came into our midst. Brother Gleazer preached some wonderful sermons. With those stirring discourses, about which the Saints still talk, there came into the lives of the workers here renewed vitality. Brother Gleazer is surely a man of God, and we bid him Godspeed. May God continue to add his blessings.

In the first week of October we gave a pound party for our branch president at his home in Las Animas, twenty-one miles east. To our surprise, when we arrived there Brother Bruce Brown came out of hiding, so the surprise was partly on us.

A week ago, October 19, we gave a chicken pie supper, which netted us about nineteen dollars. Everyone enjoyed himself.

God add his blessings to his church and to those whom he has placed in charge. This is our prayer.

Nauvoo District

Rock Creek

A series of meetings was held here September 11 to 25, the speakers being Elders D. B. Sorden, pastor of Burlington Branch, and F. C. Bevan. Attendance was very good for a country church. A number of nonmembers attended services, one being baptized. The speakers say they found a real welcome among the Saints. The branch president here is Elder Elbert Lambert, a fine young man.

Fort Madison, Iowa

Fort Madison Branch is moving forward under the leadership of Elder W. H. Gunn. A series of meetings was held here October 9 to 23, speakers Elder D. B. Sorden and F. C. Bevan. They had a fairly good attendance. The newspaper of this city was very good, putting the sermons in the paper each evening, thereby helping to advertise the church. The speakers are reported as having said they felt at home among Fort Madison Saints. Brother Barker, of Burlington, Iowa, came over and sang at the services two Sundays out of the three. Other singers were Brother E. Wright, Sister Gunn, Sister Sanford, and Sister Iona Smith, of Fort Madison. These musicians helped with the meetings.

Burlington, Iowa

The work at Burlington is moving along under the leadership of Brother D. B. Sorden.

This branch was made sad by the sudden death of Elder John Jenkins, who passed beyond Sunday, October 23. The local lost a fine man; not only the branch, but the district, has lost a willing worker and a cheerful man of God. Not long ago the district president went to Brother Jenkins and asked him if he would go out in the district to preach sometimes. He cheerfully replied: "Here am I and my car at your service." The funeral sermon of this brother was preached by Apostle John F. Garver, which sermon was of surpassing quality. At the present, Bishop Carmichael is here holding a special series of lectures for four nights.

Montrose, Iowa

The faithful few are doing well for a small group. They were found often at the meetings held at Fort Madison, Iowa. This branch is under the leadership of Elder O. Miller, a willing, cheerful worker.

Nauvoo, Illinois

This branch, where we have a number of young people as well as older people, is still holding high the flag. A group from here attended meetings held at Rock Creek, one helping with the singing. We are glad some are catching the missionary spirit, for it is a good thing to catch. Much of this spirit is needed. The branch is under the leadership of one of the faithful guardians, Elder J. W. Layton.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Ottumwa is holding its own. It recently had the pleasure of having Apostle D. T. Williams for a Sunday; also Brother Brown, of Council Bluffs, stopped over one Sunday. Sermons by these men were of a very high order. The pastor here is Elder F. C. Bevan.

Keokuk, Iowa

We have a faithful branch of sisters keeping things moving at Keokuk. There are no men in the church here who are able to help with the work. There is only one brother here, and age prevents his active service. The sisters here deserve much credit for their good work.

Visits Points in Indiana

A few weeks ago I left Battle Creek, Michigan, ready to stop anywhere that I could be of service, and after visiting South Bend and Elkhart, Indiana, I landed at Wabash and found a situation justifying my remaining with them and holding meetings, doing so ten days.

I was pleasantly surprised to see the good attendance and interest shown throughout the services. Brother Joseph Williams, who is the superintendent of the Sunday school, is an enthusiastic worker, doing his level best to develop interest in the work of the church. Others are faithful attendants at church services and in its activities.

There is a strong desire to have Elder O. J. Hawn come and hold a series of meetings. The visits and services of Elder J. A. Robinson, of Indianapolis, were much appreciated, as well as those of his wife.

I had pleasant visits with Sisters Quinn and Davis, and the England, Whiteside, Ellis, Bolsover, Barnhouse, and Williams families.

The Saints have a nice meeting place, convenient to most all; still there is a strong desire to secure a desirable building under their full control.

Before leaving, we were privileged to baptize three of the family of Brother and Sister Charles England, which produced joy in many hearts.

A birthday party surprise was given Brother Frederick Whiteside, which warmed many hearts, bringing a stronger desire for church associations and activities. This occurred shortly after my arrival, which was likewise a surprise. All were joyful at this event.

I was well treated and cared for and received a liberal contribution for traveling expenses.

Their meeting place is on the south side of the city.

Joseph Williams's address is 791 High Street.

Hammond, Indiana

1153 Monroe Street

October 28.—On the 25th of September the Saints of Hammond Branch met for a prayer service at seven o'clock in the morning to observe the centennial and commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon plates. Because of the occasion, our pre-thought, each one feeling a goodly degree of the Spirit before opening the meeting, resulted in a most enjoyable service and one that is outstanding among all the prayer services of our branch. As the sun arose on that early Sunday morning, to see the Saints coming from all directions and gathering in our little church to express their gratitude to the most high God, was indeed a striking picture.

We are very grateful for what we have been able to accomplish this summer in the way of improvements on our building. Early in the spring we outlined quite an extensive work program, and step by step, here a little and there a little, we have made improvements, until now as it nears completion we have a building of which all are proud. Such work has been done as leveling and sodding the lawn, installing a new steam heating plant, installing a new electric lighting system in both upper and lower auditoriums, repairing the roof, painting and decorating the lower auditorium, etc., with the painting and decorating of the upper auditorium now under way—all under the supervision of our pastor who has made much of this work possible. It has been remarkable how faithfully and well this group of men worked together to accomplish their task. We would not forget the women, who assisted in every way possible, and who also served meals to the men, which indeed was most important. When we are all able to work together with an equal degree of unity and endeavor in building the kingdom of God, we shall be rapidly approaching the redemption of Zion.

Our departments have been doing remarkable work of late. Aside from carrying on a small Sunday school in Gary, Indiana, the steel city, about twelve miles from Hammond, our Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression hold an attendance of fifty-three and fifty-four out of a branch enrollment of sixty-five members. The Department of Recreation and Expression have with class work, various kinds of programs. Last Friday evening Mr. Todd, judge of our city court, gave us an interesting and instructive talk on "The need of such organizations as the Department of Recreation and Expression."

The Department of Women is to be highly complimented for the work it has been and is doing. The women have held bake sales, visited laundries, etc., until they have nearly financed the branch. We hope to continue to improve the departments.

We have recently been visited by Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith and Apostle D. T. Williams, who gave us much instruction and encouragement.

We invite all who may pass through here and have time to visit us.

First Columbus, Ohio, Branch

On Sunday, October 2, Patriarch J. E. Matthews visited First Church. Sacramental service was conducted with High Priest C. W. Clark, Patriarch J. E. Matthews, and Elder Fred C. Welsh in charge. The Saints were exhorted through Brother Clark.

Patriarch Matthews spoke at 7.30 p. m. service. He was full of his old-time zeal, and as he spoke our minds went back twenty years when all the Saints met in a small Grand Army of the Republic hall. Brother Matthews has done much to help establish the two church bulidings and their respective congregations in Columbus.

We had Bishop H. E. French and wife as visitors Sunday evening, also Brother and Sister Sensabaugh.

Brother Charles Ferguson preached at 10.45 on the following Sunday. His theme was "Consecration," and in the evening Elder Fred C. Welsh discoursed upon the subject, "The way to the Cross." These two were classed among the inspiring sermons that have been preached at First Church.

Prayer meeting on October 19 was conducted in charge of A. E. Anderton and Thomas Williams. Forty Saints were present.

Monthly class meeting of the Willing Workers was held at the home of Nathan Weate. About thirty were present, this number including High Priests William M. Grice and son John R. John R. Grice sang two numbers. Brother Robert Willison, of Second Church, was present and sang two numbers. "The social problem of the church" was the topic for the hour's study, and a profitable evening was had.

Elder F. C. Welsh and family continue to care for their sick neighbor, a lady dying with dropsy. She can not be moved, or she would have been a member of the church long ago, but she has already borne testimony of our work and has enjoyed the blessings resulting from the ordinance of administration for the sick. She has gone so far as to arrange for a Saints funeral.

Sister N. J. Weate is now bedfast. She desires the prayers of the Saints.

On Sunday, October 23, at 10.45 Elder Charles Schafenberg spoke on "Come unto me." Lehi's vision was the principal consideration in the evening sermon by Brother C. W. Clark. Both subjects were appreciated. The choir sang an anthem in the evening. An interlude, "Dying in the west," was played by Thelma Hersey.

Prayer meeting on the 26th was in charge of High Priest

William M. Grice, district president, and Elder A. E. Anderton. This was a spiritual meeting.

On the morning of the 30th, T. S. Williams spoke on "What seek ye?" This subject was forcibly brought out.

That evening Elder F. C. Welsh talked about "The sower." We were plainly shown that all are sowers, either for God or for the Adversary.

San Francisco, California.

The Little Brown Church, Eighteenth and Danvers Street

On September 18 we had preaching at eleven in the morning by Pastor J. A. Saxe, and in the evening by Emery Parks. Both sermons were good.

The 25th saw George S. Lincoln as the morning speaker. In the evening Brother Etzenhouser, president of Oakland Branch, addressed Saints of this branch.

In a recent article to the church papers, we failed to credit the painting of our church to the sisters of the branch. They in their society raised the money and paid the bill. God bless the sisters. What would we do without them? They are always in evidence, especially when they are needed in church work.

A boy, John Ganz, was baptized on October 2, and confirmed at the sacramental meeting by Elders Lincoln and Parks.

On Friday evening the Sunday school had a banquet at the home of Emery Parks, and a very pleasant evening was spent, where young and old entered heartily into the entertainment and feast.

Brothers George S. Lincoln and Emery Parks were the speakers morning and evening on October 9.

On the following Sunday we had as visitors Sisters Rayan and Robinson, of Detroit, Michigan.

Elder William Anderson, from Oakland, addressed the Saints on the 23d, discoursing along the line of the development of Zion and the duties of the Saints in this connection.

Religio and Sunday school are doing well, and regular services are instructive and encouraging.

Fall River, Massachusetts

October 27.—Sacramental service was held October 2 with Elder John E. Rogerson as speaker. Sister Margaret Slater and children and some of the members of the Whipple family, from New London, Connecticut, worshiped with us that day. Sacrament was carried by Pastor James W. Heap and Alma M. Coombs, priest, to Sisters Halstead and Myra Cockcroft.

About eleven persons attended the young people's convention at Boston October 8 and 9. They reported an enjoyable time but were disappointed not to meet Brother McDowell, who was ill. This was a very rainy Sunday, and only four came to church in Fall River and about ten to Sunday school. They used the time by talking quietly and singing the songs of Zion.

Sister Alice Monk passed away October 8 at the Truesdale Hospital, following an operation. She was in her seventy-third year. Her husband, Brother William Monk, preceded her in death about twelve years. She was a woman of beautiful character and always faithful to the church. The services at the home were in charge of Elder William Patterson, district missionary.

Brother Woodstock, the Sunday school worker, met with us Wednesday, October 19. Saints came from New Bedford and Plymouth. Dennisport was invited, but the writer is not sure whether any were able to come. We listened to an instructive, informal talk; and questions were asked. One thing that pleased Brother Woodstock was the fact that we have such young men in office, namely Ralph Baldwin, superintendent; Elvin Baldwin, assistant; Donald Chesworth, secretary and treasurer; and Wilfred Brindley, pianist.

October 23 Elder William A. Sinclair, of Boston, was the speaker. All his family were with him. The oldest boy, Oliver, was in the uniform of a Merchant Marine. Spain was one place he had visited this summer. This Sunday we had visitors from Ohio, Brother Ray Clough and Sister Addie Whiting Clough and their children; also Sister Ennanora Whiting—, the writer does not recall her marriage name. In the evening Brother Alma Coombs was the speaker, and there was a duet, "Face to face," by Sister Ennanora and Sister Mabel Daniel. At this service two elders from the Utah Church were present. They are in Fall River at present seeking converts.

The Department of Women will hold a supper and Halloween party October 29, the proceeds to be used for re-painting the inside of the church.

Sister Beatrice Baldwin Hollins's little boy, Harold, has recovered from diphtheria.

Brother Ernest Chesworth has been confined to his bed the past few weeks.

An aluminum demonstration was held at the home of Sister Margaret Chesworth October 14. A group of Saints and friends attended. Another will be held October 27 at Sister Rogerson's.

The little folks' room in the Sunday school is becoming attractive through the efforts of Sister Sophia J. K. Brodie and Sister Florence Wood.

Second Columbus, Ohio, Branch

Rinehard Avenue and Twenty-second Street

Theme for the sacramental meeting on October 2 was, "What does the sacrament mean to you?" There were many interesting testimonies, and a good spirit prevailed throughout the meeting.

At the evening service G. H. Kirkendall preached an interesting and instructive sermon, using "Charity" for a theme.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a marshmallow toast October 7 out in the country. All had a good time.

The Department of Women held its monthly meeting October 13 at the home of Mrs. McKee, on Whittier Street. We enjoy the instructions given at these meetings and feel that we go away better prepared to meet our everyday problems. Lunch was enjoyed by the sisters.

The church was closed for the evening service of October 16 in order that Second Branch Saints could meet with the congregation of First Branch in celebration of the dedication of their church. Brother A. B. Kirkendall, of Creola, Ohio, preacher in the afternoon, and Elder John R. Grice in the evening. Both sermons were ably delivered and were appreciated by all who heard them.

We regret to report the death of Sister Francis Morris at her home, 477 Demead Avenue, on October 22. She has been a member of the church since November, 1879. She was an active worker in the Women's Department, always ready to do anything she could. Her life was a beautiful example of patience. The funeral was held at the church on October 25. J. E. Matthews preached the sermon, assisted by William Grice. The beautiful flowers show the many friends she leaves to mourn.

On October 23 J. E. Matthews preached a splendid sermon on "The life of Christ," pointing out the divine example he left for us to follow.

The women's study class is reading the Book of Mormon and expects to finish it by the last of the year.

Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party October 28 in the basement of the church.

The social room was decorated in orange and black crepe paper, Japanese lanterns, corn shocks, and autumn leaves. Everyone was masked, and after the grand march prizes were given for the neatest and most comical costumes. Games were played and prizes given. After all had played until they were tired, doughnuts, cider, and apples were served.

Second San Antonio Branch

912 North Colorado Street.

October 30.—On the morning of October 9, Brother Winegar, district missionary, filled our pulpit, greatly to the enlightenment and edification of the Saints. It was the first time we had had the pleasure of his assistance, and we were happy to find him filled with the Spirit of God, intensely earnest, energetic, and logical. We anticipate the pleasure of further visitations from him in the future. Brother Winegar displays a fervor of religious spirit unusual in one so young, and it is deeply appreciated by us.

On October 16, Elder R. E. Miller, our beloved district president and pastor of the First San Antonio Branch, honored us with his presence behind the sacred altar, and thrilled us with one of his sermons. The Saints are still talking of the "points" he made, and the lasting impression left by him upon our hearts and minds. Brother Miller is a welcome guest among us, probably because we recognize in him a brother of superior judgment, sound wisdom, and great charity of heart—virtues only too rare with many of us.

October 16 also brought to the Second San Antonio Branch the happiness of our first baptisms since our reorganization, July 25. Harry Richard McRae and his recent bride, Ines Latopie, asked for and received baptism in the San Antonio River, under the hands of our pastor, R. E. Chrone, sr. This solemn ceremony (a loss to the church of Rome and a gain for us) was attended by a large aggregation of the Saints from both branches here. The Holy Spirit was very evident throughout the ceremony of baptism, and of the confirmation that evening.

At 7.30 p. m. most of the members of the Second San Antonio branch assembled with the Saints of the First Branch, where, at the request of Elder R. E. Miller, Elder R. E. Chrone sr., took charge of the meeting. After the blessing of an infant child at the hands of Elders Winegar and T. J. Jett, jr., confirmation of Harry Richard McRae and his bride followed. R. E. Miller confirmed Ines Latopie McRae first, followed by T. J. Jett, sr., uncle of Brother McRae, confirming him. Brother McRae, more familiarly named "Little Dick" by those who love him, showed in his countenance and physical deportment the deep spiritual impression of the ceremonies in which he participated during the day.

According to our beloved Sunday school superintendent, Gracia Waid Robinson, and others, the ceremony of baptism had scarcely been concluded, and R. E. Chrone was scarcely out of the water before a huge water moccasin invaded the spot just vacated by Elder Chrone and the converts. The Saints rejoiced that no disturbance was felt because of this unwelcome and dangerous visitor. It seemed to be another case when the "Devil arrived too late," either to prevent or punish those interested in serving God.

On October 23 it was our great pleasure to meet Patriarch U. W. Greene, of Independence, Missouri, at the train and conduct him direct to the Second San Antonio Branch, where we arrived just in time for Patriarch Greene to occupy the pulpit for our 11 a. m. service. Who can adequately and justly describe Brother Greene's wonderful sermons? Who may attempt to portray their effect upon the human heart—the ranging and varied emotions aroused within the breasts of his hearers? What depth of feeling is touched and aroused, until like a clear, bubbling spring, these emotions, with their source in the unknown deepness of the human heart, rise to the surface to refresh and strengthen the weary spirit and stimulate desire and determination to go forth and master the things of this world and to become stronger in our faith and works for Jesus. Justice can not be done Brother Greene in any attempt to describe the good he does in his discourses. He grows upon one in an unexpected manner—and it is with regret we listen to his closing words.

Brother Greene is now dividing his time, preaching to the Saints at Second San Antonio Branch each Sunday morning, and to those at the First Branch each Sunday evening. As soon as it can be conveniently arranged, a series of meetings will be held from which we hope to derive great spiritual blessings.

Our branch, during the past few weeks, has felt the loss through absence of a number of mothers and children, due to various illnesses. We have especially missed our organist, Zora Carnes, who has been confined with her two babies to their home. Sister Zora is doubly missed, because of her musical ability, and because of her charming personality and stimulating influence among the Saints.

Sister T. J. Jett, sr., who recently met with a very painful accident which caused a dislocated shoulder and badly strained muscles, has been able to be out very little, but promises attendance soon again.

Sister Flossie Davis and her little Dorothy Mae have each been very ill, as have also Sister Ruby Jett Banks and her little Anna Ruth. However, they were at church Sunday. Little Anna Ruth Banks, five years of age, is the very life of our Sunday school. Indeed it is doubtful if in all the world there may be found another child her age, equal to her in Sunday school enthusiasm. Dorothy Mae Davis, enthusiastic in every way, but of a more sober temperament—a shy, quiet, little "Miss Muffet," loved for her sincerity of purpose and her quiet dignity, electrified and astonished the Sunday school recently by a masterly rendition on the piano. Surely Dorothy Mae is a coming genius. Our branch is now proud of these two little tots, but in time to come the church as a whole will surely honor them. Nor are they all, for among Brother and Sister Isaacks' five splendid children, there is a spirit self-evident, which in time will develop and be productive of a great good in the church.

That our branch is happy in its reorganization has been said before. That we are thankful for its progress and the good it is doing, we can not say too often. Not a single week has passed that strangers do not come among us, enjoy themselves, and declare "they are coming again," and with few exceptions they do come again, and again.

May we not ask the combined prayers of the Saints that we may continue to move forward, never wavering, nor swerving in our purpose to serve the Lord? Our prayers ascend daily for all the Saints throughout the universe, that we may be made strong to endure to the end.

As San Antonio ("where the sunshine spends the winter") is the Mecca of tourists throughout the year, we cordially invite all intending visitors to make the Second San Antonio Branch, located at 912 North Colorado Street, their church home. Take the West End street car from the business district, get off at North Colorado Street, and walk one hundred feet to the right. Or telephone Pastor R. E. Chrone, sr., Woodlawn 2099.

Sister Burton, wife of Elder P. R. Burton, has organized a Book of Mormon Class of twenty-three very splendid young people who come to her home and read the Book of Mormon each Tuesday evening. All are very much interested. Brother W. W. Woods, publicity agent, sold quite a number of copies of the Book of Mormon as a result of this effort. But, keeping the best till the last, each one has filed his inventory and is a good tithe payer. The motto of Spokane young people is "Onward to 1930."

Creston, Iowa

On October 30 College Day was fittingly observed in Creston. The program of the day was arranged by Thelma Lane, former Graceland student, now a teacher of music in Creston schools. A number of Graceland students were present, some coming from Lamoni and others from nearby towns where they are teaching. All took part in the afternoon program, which consisted of solos, both vocal and violin, readings, and short talks. Dean Lonzo Jones was the speaker, morning and afternoon. We think the college can well be proud of him.

The local Department of Women served dinner, and visitors were given lunch before they returned home in the evening.

Our quota for the scholarship fund was raised. We feel more than glad to do our share that these worthy young men and women may remain in school and become better prepared for service.

On Friday night, October 28, a Halloween party at the home of Brother and Sister Bowman was enjoyed by the Saints and their many friends. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to ghost stories. A luncheon was served by the hostess at a late hour, and all went home feeling the evening had been enjoyable.

We have divided our Sunday school into two groups, the Reds and the Blues. The purpose is to see which side can raise the most Christmas offering. Offering to date is over fifty dollars. The Blues are giving an oyster supper Friday night. Come on, Reds; you will have to hurry if you keep up.

San Antonio, Texas

October 27.—Brother H. E. Winegar has just closed a series of meetings, which we consider was a decided success, although the attendance through the week was not so large as it should have been. The preaching was marked by the Spirit, and many precious truths were brought forth and presented in such a convincing way that those in attendance could not help being benefited. On the last evening, however, the church was filled. Members of the Second Branch met with us, among whom was Sister Minetta Isaacks, who rendered valuable service in singing beautiful solos. These were much appreciated. Several Saints from Nitalia met with us on last Sunday. Sister George Hiles, of Beeville, was also with us. Altogether we feel we had a profitable meeting.

On last Thursday Sister Emma Jackson, assisted by the Department of Women, gave a chicken dinner in the central part of the city. This netted them over fifty dollars. The proceeds are to be used to make a payment on the new baby grand piano which was purchased in the recent past. Brother Winegar was a splendid helper by way of advertising the dinner. Standing just outside the door, he invited those passing by to step inside, where they could be served. Many responded to the invitation and went away satisfied, having been furnished a good meal. We do not want to forget to make mention of Sister Winegar, who so valiantly assisted us till everyone was served. There were no drones among us, but all worked faithfully and well. Nearly every member of the Department of Women assisted. We enjoyed the association. We appreciate having Brother and Sister Winegar with us, for they are assets to our branch.

Patriarch U. W. Greene is in our city, and we understand he and his daughter will spend the winter here. He preached for Second Branch last Sunday, and we have heard many favorable comments upon his sermon. We are anxious to hear him. It was announced that he will preach for us next Sunday evening. We feel ourselves very fortunate in having such efficient help and hope and pray that all the members will come out to hear him, for we are sure that they will be greatly benefited.

The Religio is gaining in attendance. There are six classes. One class is studying the Book of Mormon, and another is studying the Stebbins Lectures on the Book of Mormon. Each Friday evening after the lessons are over, an interesting program is given by different members. Last Friday there was an extemporaneous debate, Brother Winegar and Sister Flossie Waite on the affirmative side and Brethren W. H. Mannering and Rouss Eastham on the negative.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are not as well attended as they should be, but those who meet together are blessed with the Spirit. If those who stay away knew what they are missing, we believe they will attend more regularly. There are still quite a number of our members who are sick.

We just received news of the death of the infant son of Brother Glaud Kuykendall. They have our deepest sympathy in this trial. May the Lord comfort their hearts.

Brother R. E. Miller was called out of town last Sunday to officiate in a marriage ceremony. Brother Teddy Dorow, San Antonio, and Sister Ethel Adams, of Pearsall, were the contracting parties. They are a fine young couple, and we wish for them a long and happy voyage through life. They will make their home in San Antonio. The Religio is planning to give them a kitchen shower Friday night. Brother Tedd was formerly our Religio president, and is quite a favorite with everyone.

Carthage, Missouri

Carthage Branch held special College Day services Sunday, October 30, beginning with eight o'clock prayer meeting. This was followed by appropriate services throughout the day. We were very happy to more than double our quota for the college.

Those who know Carthage best see an improvement in conditions here, which improvement makes for progress in the Lord's work.

Since the untimely death of Charles Crabb a few months ago, the branch has been without a resident elder, and this added a burden to the work of Branch President Freeman, who lives at Webb City. But Brother Freeman is truly a man of God, giving himself in service to his fellow men, ever faithful to his duty. To whatever demand is made upon him, he responds willingly and without complaint. He is a splendid example to those who associate with him.

District Sunday School Superintendent Jones was with us a few Sundays ago and expressed himself as well pleased with the progress our school is making under Brother Cook, superintendent.

The Department of Women has again taken up its duties, after three months of vacation. Sister Cook, the leader, is a consecrated worker, and no doubt the women will receive great benefit from this phase of church work.

Brother Herschel Green heads the Department of Recreation and Expression with a splendid interest at all times, and hearty cooperation in the way of programs, etc. This makes it possible to attract nonmembers to these Friday evening meetings, to the great advantage of the church at this place. At times the crowd almost taxes the capacity of our little church building. A move is now on to equip the lot back of the church for a volley ball and basket ball court, for the benefit of the young people of the church and their friends.

We are expecting Missionary Quick to be with us soon to hold a series of meetings.

May our lives be lived so that in our association with our fellow men the honest hearted may be given the opportunity to accept the truth, and with the children of God be gathered into the fold.

Independence

Stone Church

The congregation of young people which assembled in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church last Wednesday night for a service of prayer, song, and testimony was larger than usual. Apostle Roy S. Budd and Elder G. S. Trowbridge were in the stand. At the close of the meeting about thirty-five young people led by Elder John F. Sheehy went to the home of President Elbert A. Smith, and standing on the front porch sang some of the songs of Zion, "Blest be the tie that binds," "My God, how wonderful thou art," "My times are in thy hands," "Glorious things are sung of Zion," "God is marshaling his army," and "God be with you till we meet again." Their voices blended harmoniously, and the prayer offered by Elder Sheehy was stirring and eloquent. Brother Smith expressed his gratitude for this visit.

The Stone Church was filled almost to its capacity Sunday morning at the sacramental service, few seats being available for late comers. The service was in direct charge of the local pastor, Elder C. Ed. Miller. Assisting him in the pulpit were Bishop R. T. Cooper, who directed the singing, Evangelist H. O. Smith, and Elders D. O. Cato, M. T. Williams, and Earl D. Bailey, the last from Tulsa, Oklahoma. Brother Bailey offered the opening remarks, which were uplifting and inspiring. There was marked fervency in the opening prayer by Evangelist H. O. Smith, as well as in the testimonies which followed the administration of the bread and wine. The meeting was one of continuous and prompt activity, and the Spirit that pervaded the audience carried with it assuring promise of the nearness of the Savior's coming, deeply touching the hearts of many with its cheer and comfort.

Downstairs the junior sacramental meeting was one of the best services had in many months. About two hundred young people between the ages of eight and twenty were present, and in thirty minutes twenty-one testimonies were voiced. Seated in the stand were President Floyd M. McDowell, Elders J. E. Kelsey, J. A. Holsworth, James L. Gray, Priest Roland Flanders, and Deacon George Gates, each of whom made some contribution toward the success of the meeting.

Thirty-seven testimonies and two prayers were offered at the Campus junior sacramental service in the short time allowed. The meeting was in charge of Elder James Strachan and his efficient helpers, who tried to carry out the theme of the Sunday school hour, "Stewardship of talents."

Evening Services

According to the usual custom of the winter season, the Stone Church Choir assisted in the evening program on Sunday. Directed by Paul N. Craig, the singers rendered as the opening number "Divine praise," a Russian composition. In this rendition they were unaccompanied. An organ prelude by Robert Miller held the audience, after which Miss Grace Edwards, contralto, sang "The Good Shepherd," being accompanied at the piano by Robert Miller. Together congregation and choir sang, "In thy name, O Lord, assembling"; prayer by Elder D. O. Cato. Following the organ offertory the choir gave the anthem, "The radiant morn hath passed away."

Elder William I. Fligg, the speaker, was announced by Elder Cato, and spoke upon the subject of "Authority," using a blackboard outline to illustrate his message. He named the officers set in the church Christ established: apostles, seventies, high priests, bishops, evangelists, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, asking the question of his hearers, "If the officers set in the church, as it was established two thousand years ago, were the only ones endowed with authority to administer such ordinances as baptism, laying on of hands, and serving the Lord's supper, who has the authority today to perform in this capacity?" Elder Fligg's comparison of the government of the church with that of our country—its officers, their authority, prerogatives, and responsibilities, and the duties and rights of the citizens of that government, was apt.

"The land of opportunity" was the reel of pictures which followed the sermon.

K L D S Sunday Activities

The 8.30 children's program, arranged by Mrs. C. A. Shoop of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church, was presented Sunday morning by the Watson Methodist Junior Chorus and by Mrs. Violet Fairchild, vocal soloist; Lucille Langdon, violinist; Lucille Burgess, saxophone soloist; and Maxine Rohrs Yale and Mary Catherine Yale, in piano duet numbers. The children's story was told by Mrs. Shoop.

At nine o'clock an interesting Bible study was conducted by Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell.

Music furnished by a mixed quartet composed of Thelma Vincent, Elizabeth Okerlind, Elbert Dempsey, and Frank Russel, Mary Okerlind pianist, was rendered at the eleven o'clock studio service. The sermon was by Elder J. W. Paxton, missionary to Alberta, Canada.

K L D S Radio Church began at three in the afternoon, being conducted by Reverend C. H. Berry, of Garfield Baptist Church, Kansas City. Music was furnished by the Garfield Baptist Choir under the direction of Mrs. J. Victor Pedester and orchestra directed by Mrs. T. G. Seville.

Radio vesper service took the air at 6.30, the music being arranged and presented by Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, assisted by Edna Daniel, contralto; Alma Kearns, tenor; Wingfield Lewis, bass; Mrs. George H. Hulmes, accompanist. The sermon was by Elder W. I. Fligg.

At 9.15 the Latter Day Saint studio service was enjoyed by radio listeners. The musical program for the hour was given by the Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig, director, Robert Miller, organist. The sermon was the first of a series by Elder M. A. Etzenhouser.

Bazaar of Laurel Club

More than four hundred and forty dollars was added to the Laurel Club's fund to purchase equipment for the Auditorium dining room and kitchen as a result of the club's annual bazaar held November 3 and 4 in the Stone Church dining hall. Five attractively decorated booths: one for fancywork, another for art work, an apron compartment, a candy counter, and a country store occupied wall space, and in these anything from a big pumpkin, straight from a Missouri field, to painted floor pillows, could be bought. Many beautiful pieces of handwork were displayed and sold, and the candy booth was popular. Meals were served cafeteria style Thursday noon and evening, and Friday noon and evening—good home-cooked chicken dinners. Members of the club worked hard to make the 1927 bazaar a success in every way, and they think they have. They wish to thank all those who so generously contributed to this success and those who patronized their sales.

Health Program for Department of Women

The Department of Women met in the Stone Church lower auditorium in its regular gathering for the month on Friday, November 4, at 2.30 p. m., immediately after the business meeting of the Frances Willard Chapter of the W. C. T. U. At the opening of the program, there were seated upon the platform, Mrs. Alice Cowan, superintendent of the Department of Women in Zion, Mrs. D. J. Krahl, health superintendent, Miss Faye Franklin, nurse of the health department, and Doctor Joseph T. Brenna, Jackson County health commissioner. Miss Ina Hattey directed the music, and Mrs. Lillian Pope Cross presided at the piano. Special musical numbers were rendered by Miss Hattey, who sang "Molly darling," and "I can not sing the old songs," Mrs. Cross accompanying.

Doctor Brennan, the principal speaker of the afternoon, was introduced by Miss Franklin. In charge of the health of the schools in rural Jackson County, which excludes only the schools of Kansas City and Independence, Doctor Brennan is in position to give those interested in health conditions and problems much information of value. Under his supervision are one hundred and twenty schools, attended by more than eight thousand children. With a sanitary inspector and two or three nurses, the doctor visits each school as often as is possible, giving each child a thorough examination. In his talk he ably described the methods followed in this work, the record made of the child's disabilities, etc. The latter part of his lecture was devoted to reading a paper dealing with infantile paralysis—its symptoms and treatment—and answering questions asked concerning this and other diseases. In conclusion he introduced Miss Virginia Westring, a nurse who accompanied him. Miss Westring is in charge of tubercular sufferers of Jackson County, including Independence, and in a few words gave the audience an understanding of the work of the Tuberculosis Association. The assistance of these two workers was deeply appreciated by the members of the Women's Department. Mrs. D. J. Krahl brought the meeting to a close with an extemporaneous talk on hygiene.

School of Religious Education Progresses

Last Sunday morning saw the close of the first nine-week term of courses being offered by the school of religious education of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. These Sunday morning classes are being held from 9 o'clock to 10.45 in the Library Building, across River Boulevard from the Stone Church. It is estimated that one hundred and twenty-six teachers and officers and those who are qualifying to hold such positions in the Sunday schools of the various districts finished this course, and the majority of this number are returning to their districts to relieve regular teachers and officers in order that they too may take these courses in religious education.

The new nine-week term commences Sunday, November 13, offering courses in beginner methods, primary methods, junior methods, intermediate and senior methods, and stewardships. Teachers are: beginner methods, Sarah Butler Brewer; primary, Ruby Williamson; junior, S. A. Thiel; intermediate and senior, Fred A. Cool; stewardships, Bishop J. A. Koehler. These courses give thirty-six points toward the teacher's certificate offered by the departments of the general church.

Interesting Personals

Miss Louise Hagler, daughter of Brother and Sister J. W. Hagler, of Independence, and Mr. Hayward G. Austin, also of Independence, were married Thursday morning, November 3, at the Stone Church by President Floyd M. McDowell. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Pearl Hobart, and the groom by Mr. Thomas Caldwell. Only a few friends and the families of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Austin went to Chicago for a wedding trip. They will be at home after November 10, at 711 South Park Avenue.

Walnut Park

On October 30 occurred the death of Sister Anna Ziegenhorn, who has made her home in this community for the past three years, coming here from Mercer County, Illinois, where she was baptized in 1910. Thirteen children and twenty-five grandchildren survive her, her husband, Henry C. Ziegenhorn, having preceded her in death in 1921. Having great faith in the Lord, she humbly strove to follow him by ministering to those in distress around her, and her last thoughts were for the poor and needy, requesting that no flowers be brought for her funeral, but that any money collected for that purpose be given to the poor; also leaving a share of her estate to charity. She was lovingly cared for during several months of illness by her son Truman, and daughter Beulah Brunson. Funeral at the Walnut Park Church November 2, in charge of Elder E. A. Curtis.

Sacramental Sunday again found about thirty Saints out for the early prayer meeting. Not all can be on time, but, entering quietly, they immediately partake of the spiritual atmosphere, and are glad to be there. J. W. Collins and W. T. Gard presided.

At the 11 o'clock hour, F. W. Lanpher was in charge. Prayer by J. W. Adams. Opening remarks by W. H. Kelley on the last supper and the promises of the Savior. Attendance was excellent, and the hour was fully occupied.

Religio classes are growing, making it necessary for Bishop Scott's stewardship class of nearly one hundred to be held in the basement hereafter. The program leader, Earl Cox, secured as soloist Sunday evening, Herbert Fraher, nicknamed at Sugar Creek "Caruso," who rendered two solos, accompanied by his sister. Walnut Park's many music lovers greatly appreciate the special musical numbers afforded at these services. Local talent completed the program.

Instead of an evening sermon, a junior service was held in charge of their leaders, Brother and Sister E. E. Moorman. Mrs. A. J. Paris told the story, after which Vance Eastwood displayed and described a picture machine he has invented and which the juniors are raising money to purchase for their own services. Pictures were shown, and the older people contributed to the children's fund.

Liberty Street

On Sunday morning the Saints of Liberty Street met together in communion service. In the opening remarks Brother Chester Young brought to mind the sickness and disaster coming upon the people of today; he also stressed the necessity of our obeying the Word of Wisdom, which God has given to us. At this hour a spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

The Religio program Sunday evening was presented by the young people's class.

At the evening service the choir furnished a number. "Serve the Lord in the days of thy youth," a vocal duet, was rendered by Erma Peek and Doris Blake.

Bishop B. J. Scott was speaker at this hour.

On Monday evening, October 31, a Halloween party was given in an empty house on North Spring Street by the young married people's class of the Sunday school. After many games and contests, gingerbread, cider, doughnuts, and apples were served. Prizes were won by Miss Grace Edwards and Rollo Bridges.

East Independence

Graceland College Day, October 30, was fittingly observed in East Independence district. In the morning D. R. Carmichael, former Graceland student, was the speaker, and in the evening Sister Ardine Byers, a recent student at the church college and at present employed in the general church offices, talked to the congregation. Both these young people were enthusiastic concerning the work of Graceland College and succeeded in imparting their enthusiasm to their audiences. We wonder how many of the young people of our district who heard these talks concerning the work done at Graceland will in years to come join that student body.

Sacramental service last Sunday morning was a good meeting, the Spirit prevailing. While in these meetings the members were impressed with the wonderful opportunities that are before the young people to make this world a better and happier place in which to live.

Brother G. W. Hancock preached Sunday evening, interesting his hearers in narrating some of his experiences in the work, particularly in coming to the land of Zion. He emphasized the necessity of our having faith in order to go forward in the work. The congregation on this evening was not so large as usual, but those present enjoyed the discourse.

The Presiding Bishopric would like to know the names and addresses of expert tailors in mens' clothing. They believe they have a proposition that will interest a few such people. Address Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

A very pretty little church wedding occurred at the church on Thursday evening when one of our young women, Florence Armstrong, became the bride of Mr. Jess Richardson. Preceding the ceremony, Elizabeth Hitchcock rendered several organ numbers, after which Clayton Wolfe sang "Until," and "I love you truly," Elder Cyril E. Wight pronounced the words that united these young people in the bonds of holy matrimony. They have the good wishes of their many friends.

Despite the fact Sunday was our first wintry day, there was an attendance of 304 at Sunday school, with a collection of $15.04. Following the lesson study, Alfred Hitchcock, chairman of the young people's meetings, made a talk, in which he urged that we make one hundred per cent on the Honor Roll, after which the young people (the whole congregation, as everyone feels young and there is no age limit to those attending these services) sang the following song, which had been composed for this occasion:

"Seven Nights at Seven-Thirty"

(Tune—Reuben, Reuben.)

Listen, young folks, I've been thinkin'
It would be a lovely sight,
Just to see our boys and girlies
All at Central every night.

Seven nights at seven-thirty,
If you'll do it, bless your soul,
You'll be repaid ten times over
And get on the Honor Roll.

Everything is in readiness for these meetings, which are to start November 13 and continue every night to November 20, inclusive, and Apostle Williams has the assurance of the support of the young people, not only of Central Group, but throughout the entire stake, as these meetings have always been a source of comfort and strength and have been heralded each year by everyone, this year being no exception.

The auditorium was filled to capacity at eleven o'clock Sunday, for the serving of the Lord's supper, and after the administering of these rites, a few good earnest prayers were enjoyed, followed by the usual testimony service.

The 7.45 service was occupied by the pastor, in which he continued his usual Sunday evening missionary sermon, and in all instances he has received the undivided attention of a listening congregation. These meetings are well attended and are proving excellent in purpose, and the pictures are quite educational and interesting.

Stake quarterly conference will convene November 20 and 21, all-day services being held on Sunday. Stake Missionary Tordoff will be the speaker at the 11 o'clock hour, and Apostle D. T. Williams will conclude the young people's meetings at 7.45. Lunch will be served at a nominal cost at 12.30 and 6, and there is anticipated a goodly attendance.

Business session will convene at 7.45 November 21, and there is much to come before the conference in the naming of the 1928 respective officers for the groups. Be there!

Bennington Heights Church

There seems to be a good interest in the series of meetings which are being held by Brother Wilfrid Tordoff, missionary. The group has been divided into two sides, for the purpose of getting people to attend the meetings. Each night is designated as a special night, as Loyalty Night, Adolescent Night, Family Night, etc. On Family Night there were fourteen full families and nineteen nonmembers present. Thursday evening was spent in getting together and becoming better acquainted. Sisters Clara Finnell, Emma Baldwin, Mabel Wolf, and J. D. Jackson gave a playlet, which was followed by congregational singing led by Brother Tordoff, and games.

Brother Tordoff has a way which wins him friends where he labors. When behind the pulpit, he is an able speaker and presents the lesson of the hour in an interesting way. When he goes among the people, he is a jolly Englishman, breaking down any barrier which prevents his becoming fully acquainted. Everybody sings when he leads his campaign song, "I choose Jesus."

Teddy Agin, who has been afflicted with infantile paralysis, was brought to the church Sunday and administered to by the elders during the sacramental meeting. He immediately showed a very marked improvement. His parents and others were caused to rejoice.

A Halloween party was held in the evening of October 31, in a garage near the home of Brother and Sister Max Schwartz. A good number were present, and ice cream was sold.

Grandview Church

Thursday evening, October 13, the Temple Builders were in charge of a program furnished by Professor Koontz and members of his professional union orchestra and Dorothy Johnson, reader. The purpose of the program was to secure money to buy mothercraft manuals, which the Temple Builders are going to study. The class will be held at 6.30 every Sunday evening, with Sister Ernest Hawkins as teacher.

Religio has been started again and is also held at 6.30 p. m. each Sunday, with Brother Herbert Merrill as president. Several classes have been organized with efficient teachers in charge. October 18 the church basement was the scene of a festival of the four seasons. A cafeteria supper was served by Sunday school classes in charge of the different booths. A miscellaneous program was enjoyed in the evening.

On October 30, at 11 o'clock, Mrs. Mary Littick lectured on "Prohibition and its relation to food." She explained how we make "walking stills" of our bodies because of the mixture of food we take in, and stated that prohibition will never reach its highest aim until we learn how to properly combine our food. Mrs. Littick believes the time not far off when we will be ashamed to complain of even a headache, because any ailment, however small, means we have disobeyed some law of nature.

Religious week-day school opened again the first of October, with Sister D. L. White as superintendent. The school has a larger attendance than any year previous.

Brother and Sister Wilber Hayes are the proud parents of a baby boy born the 23d ult. He has been given the name of Lawrence Lewis.

Argentine Church

The speaker at 7.45 was Bishop F. B. Blair, basing a splendid discourse on the seventeenth verse of the eighteenth chapter of 1 Kings: "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" And the answer of Elijah, "I have not troubled Israel; but thou and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord and thou hast followed Baalim." He emphasized the folly of King Ahab in relying on the god of his wife and Israel's God at the same time. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

Mr. and Mrs. Estill were inducted into the kingdom by baptism today. Thus are the ranks of the congregation increased by the heads of a family of three children. Announcement is made that there are others near the kingdom.

The infant daughter of Sister Phyllis Coats, born the 2d of September, was blessed by Elder W. S. Brown.

The Presiding Bishopric is desirous of getting the names and addresses of persons who are members of the church, and who are engaged in business of any kind. Address Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Elder A. H. Parsons writes that he is leaving Elk Mills, Maryland, to spend the winter at Tampa, Florida, where he will be located at 209 West Osborne Street. He has hope there will be some scattered Saints and some interested in the church and its work, who will call on him or write him there, so that he can do some one good during the winter. He says, "I desire to do what little I can for the uplift of those who can be persuaded to believe."

Lamoni Stake

College Day

College Day in Lamoni is a community affair. The offering is received from townspeople in general, and the program is a union service with the Methodist Church. Previous to Sunday, advertising and collecting had been carried on this year by a committee from the business interests.

The weather was bright and warm, and a large crowd gathered. The church was brightly decorated with festoons and pennants of college colors and with large baskets of chrysanthemums. The full membership of the Oratory Society sang an anthem and "Graceland forever." The sermon was delivered by Reverend H. L. Slick, of the Methodist Church, on the subject, "Education a necessity." Reverend Slick is a young man who came to the local pastorate this fall and has entered Graceland for part-time work. Besides carrying his studies, he has been a dependable member of the football team, playing in the backfield during the season's games. During his talk he paid a splendid tribute to Graceland. He said he had attended other colleges and mingled in campus life but had nowhere experienced the spirit of loyalty and devotion to genuine Christian education as here.

Lamoni Branch has contributed $1,044.20 to the College Day collection to date, and we are hoping to raise this amount to $1,100 within the next few days.

Teams of college students and faculty members visited other parts of the stake to give programs for the day. Readers, vocalists, violinists, were among the program numbers.

Child Welfare Week

The week from October 23 to 30 was observed in child welfare interests. This week is outlined by national organizations, and in Lamoni was sponsored by the Women's Department. The sermons on October 23 carried the theme. Elder Lonzo Jones, who for the past year has taught a large class in Parentcraft during the Sunday school hour, directed the attention of the congregation to the problem of eugenics as a basis for physical well-being. At the evening service, Eugene Closson, of the general Department of Recreation and Expression, talked on the nature and value of the proper kind of recreation for the young. The concluding sermon on October 30 was preached by the pastor, W. E. Prall, who spoke of vital problems and immediate needs in the community. His emphasis was upon the responsibility of the parents in directing the child. Much of present maladjustments were laid to failure of parents to meet their obligations.

Another project of the week was the taking of a census of the homes of the community to ascertain data relative to the habits of both children and adults. Church membership, church attendance, reading and radio habits, the number of evenings spent at home were the chief items on the census blanks. This data will be turned over to agencies of religious education.

The public school has arranged with the state department of health for a special nurse to visit the local schools this week. She will hold clinics until every child in school has received her services. Mrs. Dona Haden continues her nursery work along this line.

In Lamoni, child welfare was interpreted to mean not only physical welfare, but educational and moral training was included as the most vital element. It is designed to follow up this initial work.

Stake Missionary Activities

Elder James Thomas closed a series of missionary and pastoral sermons at Bloomington Branch October 23. The closing feature was an all-day meeting with basket dinner. Morning and afternoon sermons were delivered by the members of the stake presidency, W. E. Prall and Roy Cheville. The large attendance, the sociability of the membership, and the spiritual tone evidenced the worthwhileness of the services.

Last week Elder Thomas was at Beaconsfield, a new opening. In recent months Elder D. C. White, a veteran of the ministry, has preached there and created an interest in the message of our people.

Elder Gomer R. Wells has been preaching at Allendale, Missouri, but is now at Centerville, Iowa, where he is holding a series of meetings.

Elder J. D. Stead, though on the retired list, continues to serve the people of the stake. He visits Lone Rock Branch frequently, where the membership especially appreciates his ministry.

Junior Church

A service is held for the juniors every Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, except the first Sunday of the month, when they unite with the adults in sacramental service. The program of October 30 was especially interesting. Two children were to be received into the church, so the service was planned to create a setting for this ordinance and to develop its meaning and purpose to the junior. Roy A. Chevillie was in charge of the service. He described the many ways of making promises between friends and then pictured baptism as a manner of making a promise. As a friend of Jesus, the two children today promised to live in his way, and they in turn would receive help from their Great Friend.

The service was quiet, orderly, and impressive. As the candidates went into the water, the old hymn, "Blest be the tie," was played softly on the piano. Lee Kelley officiated. Marcella Schenck in her story-telling way described how she had grown into the church and been baptized in a pretty stream among the woodlands of western Iowa. She told how God's Spirit had been with her as a girl. And then before the playmates and classmates, the ordinance of laying on hands was administered. Perhaps the deeper appreciation of baptism was brought home to the children. Those baptized were Nina Propst and Alvin Thomas Chatburn.

Stake Conference

The stake conference is meeting this week-end at Creston. Institute work in department methods is scheduled on the program. All the stake officers from Lamoni will be in attendance.

Pleasant Valley Branch

LUCASVILLE, OHIO.—We of Pleasant Valley Branch are endeavoring to heed the admonition of Paul: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling. For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

Sacramental service was well attended on October 2, and a good spirit prevailed.

We feel proud of the ambition of the class of Loyal Workers. They have purchased the new organ. We have finished some repairing on our church home, painting the roof, building flues, etc.

Local officers are taking Sunday about preaching. They are doing well, and are having large crowds. We feel, however, that we need some of the missionaries to help us, for there seem to be many hungering and thirsting after righteousness.

Twenty-eight of our number signed pledge cards to read or reread the Book of Mormon.

We were pleased at the way our people responded on College Day. They gave all they were asked to give and more to the college fund. We hope every Saint will do his part in helping in this movement for the college.

Attendance at Sunday school is fine. It is also good at Sunday prayer services and excellent at preaching meetings,

MISCELLANEOUS

Sectional Ministerial Institute

Arrangements have been perfected for holding a ministerial institute in Denver, Colorado, December 2, 3, and 4, the first session being Friday evening, at 7.30. President F. M. McDowell and Apostles E. J. Gleazer and F. Henry Edwards will be present.

All conference appointees, as well as members of the priesthood not under appointment in the Eastern Colorado, Western Colorado, and Utah Districts, are urged to be present.

The entire time will be devoted to lectures and class work dealing with vital topics of practical interest and value to the priesthood. The services and classes will all be open to the public.

F. M. MCDOWELL, for First Presidency.

E. J. GLEAZER,

M. A. MCCONLEY, for Quorum of Twelve.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, November 7, 1927.

Young People's Convention

The fourth annual young people's convention of Kewanee District will convene at Rock Island Church, corner Eighteenth Avenue and Tenth Street, November 25 to 27, inclusive. Elder and Sister John Blackmore, of Cameron, Missouri, will conduct the class work and be the principal speakers. The program will be as follows: Friday: 8.30, prayer meeting; 9.45, class work; 11, class work; 2.30, class work; 7.30, song service followed by preaching; Saturday: 8.30, prayer meeting; 9.45, class work; 11, class work; 2.30, class work; 3.30, recreation; 7.30, social gathering (get-acquainted meeting); Sunday: 8.30, prayer meeting; 9.45, class work (Sunday school); 11, preaching; 2.30, preaching, or lecture; 6.30, pageant, "Remember Cumorah." Meals will be served in the basement of the church, and visitors will be entertained in the homes of the Saints in the Tri-Cities. Plan to spend your Thanksgiving week-end vacation at this convention. Will branch presidents please have this notice read to their congregations, and then posted in their place of meeting. E. R. Davis, president Kewanee and Eastern Iowa Districts.

Conference Notices

Southeastern Illinois district conference will convene at Centralia, Illinois, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, December 2, 3, and 4. There will be the organization of the priesthood into a more definite working group, the election of district officers, transacting other matters of importance, and some wholesome entertainment. We expect to have one or more of the leading general church officials with us to help make the conference a success. Saints, be sure to attend. We need you, and you need the association of Saints. The district presidency, R. L. Fulk, J. M. Henson, and L. C. Moore.

The semiannual conference of Northeastern Illinois District will convene with the First Chicago Branch, 4416 Gladys Avenue, November 19 and 20. Bishop J. A. Becker of the Presiding Bishopric will be in attendance. We urge a full attendance, as important matters of business will be considered as well as the election of district officers. David E. Dowker, for the district presidency, 6506 South Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Spring River district conference will be held at Arma, Kansas, November 25 to 27. The first session will be held but the midweek meeting does not seem to be proving a success.

Elder Ervin Pyles preached on Sunday evening, October 16, to a fair audience. Brother Pyles did fine.

On the following Sunday evening, Brother Walter Culp preached to a large congregation.

Friday evening for organization, followed by program under the direction of Brother Ellsworth G. Gilbert, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression of the district. Business session will be held Saturday. Bishop A. Carmichael will be with us. Ministerial and branch reports should be sent at once to Mrs. C. A. Dooley, Box 384, Mulberry, Kansas. Amos T. Higdon, district president.

Saint Louis district conference will convene with Belleville Branch, Saturday and Sunday, November 26 and 27. Business meeting Saturday at 6 p. m. Election of district officers for ensuing year is main item of business. Sunday, usual conference activities, Sunday school, departmental work, social service, and preaching. We expect to have with us on this occasion Apostles F. H. Edwards and J. F. Garver. Send your reports to C. J. Remington, 1423 Cecelia Avenue, Webster Groves, Missouri, in time to reach him not later than November 19. G. F. Barraclough, district president; C. J. Remington, district secretary.

Council Bluffs to Have Series of Meetings

Beginning November 13 and continuing eight days, the young people of Council Bluffs, Iowa, are to have a series of young people's meetings. President Floyd M. McDowell will preach the series, beginning with the Sunday night service. Very definite plans are being matured to make this series of meetings of lasting profit.

There are many Saints now living in other localities who formerly lived in Council Bluffs, and during this series especially the Council Bluffs Saints would like to hear from the Saints and friends who formerly resided there. If you can not attend, why not send them a letter or telegram? George Beaty, 352 Logan Street, president of the branch, and L. M. Spence, 214 Morningside Avenue, is representing the young people in this series.

No small part of the plans for these meetings is to strengthen the bonds of fraternity wherever points of contact can be secured, and wherever the influence of these meetings extends.

Address

David Pycok, 156 Fairlawn Avenue, Toronto, Ontario (home address); 915 Howard Street, Port Huron, Michigan (field address).

Our Departed Ones

RADIKE.—John Russell Radike was born October 31, 1891, in Saint Clair, Michigan. Killed in an aeroplane crash, while serving as mechanic, in the late New York to Spokane Air Derby, at Long Valley, New Jersey, September 20, 1927. Brother Radike had been a member of the church, and of Saint Clair Branch, Saint Clair, Michigan, for the past five years. Was baptized by John R. Grice and had been a very faithful member until the day of his death. "Jay," as he was familiarly called, was a young man of outstanding personality and was loved by all who knew him. Numbers of prominent men have been buried in Saint Clair, but old residents say there never was so large a funeral before in the history of the town. The sermon was preached by J. R. Grice, in the Congregational Church, the largest in the city but wholly inadequate for the large assembly. Fully three hundred people were waiting in the cemetery, who could not get in the church, to see the last rites performed. The towns of Saint Clair and Marysville, the place where Brother Radike worked for the Buhl Aeroplane Company, were wrapped in gloom for several days after the announcement of the tragedy. Many tears were shed by strong men because of the passing of one with such a bright future ahead of him who had been faithful to his God, his church, and the community in which he lived. He leaves his companion, three children, and a host of relatives and friends. A good man has gone to his reward. Interment in Hillside Cemetery, Saint Clair, Michigan.

RICHARDSON.—Grace Lee Richardson, of Saint Louis, passed away in the Missouri Baptist Hospital, October 25, after a long and painful illness. She was born March 28, 1886, in Monarch, Colorado, and married Albert C. Richardson November 12, 1921. While not a member of the church, our sister attended the services with her husband and showed appreciation of the church services. The funeral services was conducted at the Craig Funeral Parlors by the pastor. Afterwards the body was taken to Desloge, Missouri for interment. Besides her husband and little son, Evan Everett, there mourn her loss her mother and father Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Lee, of Desloge; two sisters, Mrs. Eva Thomas, of Seloge, and Mrs. Lottie Wheeler, of Saint Louis; a brother, Arthur Lee, of Festus, Missouri, and many relatives and friends.

Faith—Knowledge

Recently the press contained account of an interruption at a meeting in Saint Paul's Cathedral, London, when a churchman openly denounced the Bishop of Birmingham. The controversy was over the modernist-fundamentalist question, and the disturbance was in a sacramental meeting. It is not likely that the methods used on that occasion will mollify already ruffled feelings, but will tend to widen the breach which has riven various churches since this age-old question was revived. At various times in past ages the "conflict between religion and science" has broken out and flamed brightly for a time, only to die down when readjustment has been had. But it seems only to smolder rather than go out, and hence is fanned into flames by the breezes of skepticism and the evolution which goes on in religious circles, as well as in others in human progress and development.

Perhaps one underlying cause of the recrudescence of the conflict is the inflexibility of creed. Creeds are statements or articles of belief, or standards of agreement determining the affiliation of like-minded believers into organized association. It is quite apparent that such standards or articles must undergo reinterpretations or eventually be outgrown. So flexibility is necessary if creeds are to function. But perhaps creeds are an "abomination" in the sight of the Deity who is desirous of seeing his people "go on unto perfection," and so the most desirable creed would be, "All truth."

Let "all truth" become a creed for associated believers and workers, and it follows that demonstrated truth must be accepted and one's idea of religion readjusted accordingly. And surely there can in this be no danger for the "eternal verities."

As a people, then, who have declared our creed to be "all truth," we are fortunate that in the present conflict between modernism and fundamentalism we can remain placed, with open minds ready to accept truth from all quarters. Let me here reiterate my belief that between true religion and true science there is no conflict, for both represent the Deity.

The differences between religionists and scientists arise out of incidence—a question of approach. To so believe, enables us to appreciate and join issue with the editor of the London Spectator, when in an article on the incident I have referred to he stated that we today need theologians who as learned men of science can reinterpret and restate religion in terms of scientific knowledge. It is because I have so firmly believed that conflict can not exist between knowledge and religion, learning and religion, and science and religion that I have never hesitated to advise our youth so inclined, to go as far in science as is possible, without fear of hurting their faith, or destroying their confidence in religion, or losing their trust in God. But open-mindedness is as essential in science as in religion. "We see as through a glass darkly," but with faith working hand in hand with science I see no reason why our walk upward to the glory of Deity should not be continuous and certain, so long as we are guided on the way by the Sun of righteousness.

Divisions of belief may occur even among scientists, and are closed only by the advent of knowledge; but while waiting for knowledge on mooted questions, we need not be disturbed because of division of belief, if the great fundamentals are not lost to view, nor the external verities covered. Wholesome division of belief may preserve an alertness which, as the Spectator remarks, would be better than the "dignified slumber of complete agreement." But manner of disagreement is as vital as is attitude of mind in participating in the sacramental ceremony.

Unfortunately, however, even in the midst of our own people, there exists despite our "creed," an inclination with some to hold that the canon of truth is full, therefore creed is fixed and our scientifically trained members run counter to those who undervalue science. And mayhap the dogmatically inclined scientist is quite as obnoxious to the religionists as is the dogmatically constituted religionist to the scientist. Sympathetic understanding, reciprocally so, is what is needed. The lack of such brotherly tolerance (in the true sense of the word) is what creates the friction out of which grows the "conflict."

So as a people I feel that we can cling to our creed, "All truth," and remain neutral, feeling certain that as "knowledge" is "added" to our faith, it will fit smoothly into our creed to the glory of the Eternal One which is intelligence, and rejoice as we progress towards the goal where we may know God, for that is life eternal. F. M. S.

Bishop Swint on the Dress Evil

There comes to the editor's desk a copy of the Wheeling Intelligencer for November 7, which gives an account of a meeting of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, opened Sunday morning, November 7, addressed by Bishop John J. Swint, of Wheeling. In his virile address the bishop of the diocese of Wheeling scathingly assails the modern dance, the modern theater, and present-day female attire. I think it would be well for all Christian women to read and consider these few sentences from Bishop Swint:

There is the present-day indecency in women's dress. . . . Bishops and priests have raised their voices against it. What are our Catholic women doing about it? For the most part they allow themselves to be dragged along with the crowd, the slaves of silly and immoral fashion. I am not far wrong when I say our Catholic women are as bad as the rest. Probably you women do not know the harm you are doing. I trust you do not know it. I do not impute to you bad intentions or bad motives. I have a strong belief that you yourselves do not suffer morally or spiritually from it. If you did, I believe you would at once remedy the matter. But you do not realize the harm you are doing to others. Will you be able to face God and say to him that you are not accountable for the evil thoughts and the passions you aroused in others by your immodesty of dress?

Surely it is not the pope, or bishops, or priests that ought to be obliged to tell you what is decent or what is indecent in dress. If you only will not allow yourself to be totally blinded, your own sense of Christian decency will tell you what is right and what is wrong; what is proper and what is improper.

You can not break away from fashion? You can not afford to be different?—what means, then, your being a "light to the world" or "salt to the earth" or the leaven which is to leaven the whole mass of humanity? Instead of following the fashions of the day, created as you well know, as a purely money-making scheme, adopted blindly and subserviently by a paganized world, you ought to set the fashions.

What is here said to Catholic women we wish some influential minister of every denomination describing itself as Christian would as clearly bring to the attention of his people. I am persuaded there is not enough consideration given such subjects, first by the people before any style shall enlist them as devotees, then by the ministry as an aid to the people in seeing themselves in their true light.

What minister is free from blame who sees his flock thoughtlessly following the whims and freaks of fashion, leaving out of consideration the question of Christian example when they plan their amusements, their attire, their vocation? What person in the ranks is alike free from blame? R. J. L.

What Is a Home?

In another column is a notice written in the office of the Social Service Bureau of the church, asking that homes be opened for the reception of seven children who need protection and direction as they travel the remainder of the journey from infancy to manhood and womanhood. Tragedy has come into the lives of seven children for whom the church feels a degree of responsibility.

Just one thing makes endurable such a situation as is here disclosed: there is a remedy—one which may restore joy and opportunity to these young lives and at the same time bring the spirit of youth, or companionship, or other helpful influence to the homes in which they find place.

Some years back, a pair who had been married for years, and from which death had taken two babes, the only ones born to the pair, called at Lamoni and wanted to see through the Children's Home. There were therein at that time more than a score of children, well cared for and showing steady development, most of them desiring to go into homes where they would be reasonably certain of retaining the same man as "father" and the same woman as "mother" for the remainder of the term of childhood.

After careful inspection, these good people came to the office of the secretary and asked definite information as to parentage and prior surroundings of some three children who had attracted their special attention, and from which they wished to choose one for adoption. One boy of four years and a girl of ten years stood their closest inquiries, except for former and first parentage. The girl was from a family of children thrown into the Children's Home upon the death of her mother and the committing of the father to a penal institution. The boy had come to the institution as one of a family of children left motherless, whose father seemed to lack in energy and thrift. The searching pair feared these bright, teachable, affectionate children might not yield to their teaching, but would develop some objectionable trait; but their intense desire for a child in the home finally won the day, and they took the girl to their home in another State. During this summer we met the woman, and this is her story:

"We have had a wonderful experience with G—. At first she was inclined to be willful and moody. Brother W—— spent considerable time and gave her much attention; I added my mite, and within a few months she became indispensable. She brought young life, imagination, necessity for help and direction—everything we needed to make our home complete, except that we needed a brother or sister for her. We tried to get S—— as soon as we saw the situation, but you had placed him elsewhere. Finally we found a boy just a year older, and we lost no time in taking him home with us.

“That was twelve years ago. G—— is a wonderful young woman, just now a new mother. The boy is with my husband, learning to be a splendid, capable farmer, having completed a good education by working a large part of his way through college.

“One year I was an invalid. G—— came home from school as soon as father told her of my affliction, nursed me and cared for the home during more than half of the school year, and left while I was convalescing, having taught her foster father and brother enough to insure my proper care and the home's comfort.

“Oh, I could keep you here for hours telling of our experience with these children, but you are busy. Let me just say this, which I have wanted to say to you for a long time: When you told father and me that we would do well to forget the misdeeds of G——'s father, and depend upon the power of the gospel to hold her to a good life, you decided a matter for us that has meant the difference between aching void and appreciated affection and fullness. I want to thank you.”

There may be some such blessings at hand for the Saints who will make room in their homes for these seven children now in need. It does not always end so well as the experience just related, but often, if not all but universally, it is because the foster parent has not taken the charge as a Christian opportunity and responsibility, but rather with a selfish or business motive.

No thing yields satisfaction to Saints equal to the development of individuality and Christian character under their personal effort and supervision. One may spend much time and means in the care, development, and possible salvation of a boy or girl, but what joy equals the finding in that person of strength developed under our own consecration and devotion, unless it should be the making in eternal life to find this character has perpetuated itself in life as a member of the kingdom of the Father!

We hope the Saints will find homes for these children and joy and satisfaction in rearing them. Think what it may mean to you who hunger for an opportunity to serve the “least of these”! Think what it may mean to the child of tender years who was hungry and you fed; who was naked and you clothed; who was sick and to whom you ministered!

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

There was a time in the earlier days of my life when I repeatedly called attention to the fact that I was a self-made man and gloried therein. There was no necessity for so loudly proclaiming this, as the people had no difficulty whatever in making the discovery, in consequence of which I agonized deeply as time went on. The thought which I desire to emphasize is, that it is immaterial whether we are put to the necessity of molding or shaping the instruments with which to carve from the hard rock of experience a career or character, or whether our equipment has been provided in some other way; the fact remains, we are just what we are, regardless of the processes; neither time nor season can alter this. Even though today we may see in the dim distance “the rock that is higher than I,” and tomorrow are successful in attaining these heights, we are still what we are. The praises of men or flattery of women will not alter the fact; truth survives the ages.

Our Lord and Master brought beautifully to the surface some thoughts akin to this during the Sermon on the Mount. He said: “And many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? and then will I say, Ye never knew me; depart from me, ye that work iniquity,” or as expressed in substance, “Your fruit shall determine what ye are.” There is no necessity for vainly attempting to establish what we are not. The growing flower or yielding fruit trees have no occasion to call upon dumb and dead witnesses in order to proclaim their worth; the very fact that the flower or fruit exists is in itself evidence that God's eternal purpose has been fulfilled in them. Our life, if properly evaluated, declares our worth.

Among other things said by Solomon, the wise man, we have the following: “There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men: a man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honor, so that he wanted nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity and it is an evil disease.”—Ecclesiastes 6: 1, 2.

You Can Not Serve Two Masters

A SERMON BY F. A. SMITH
(Mrs. A. Morgan, Reporter.)

I want to call your attention to a statement in the 6th chapter of Matthew, beginning with the 24th verse:

No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other; or he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye can not serve God and Mammon. And again I say unto you, go ye into the world, and care not for the world; for the world will hate you, and will persecute you, and will turn you out of their synagogues. Nevertheless, ye shall go forth from house to house, teaching the people; and I will go before you.

There is one other verse I want to read in connection with this, the 38th:

Wherefore, seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.

If you read that chapter in the Inspired Version, you will discover those things that are spoken of are referring to the things of the world that are our necessities. The Master has very nicely put it, for these are the words of the Christ himself: Ye can not serve two masters. You will love the one and hate the other, or you will hold to the one and despise the other.

I don't know how many of you have had occasion to see that tested out, but it was my good fortune, at one time, to see this thing in operation.

I was sent out west by a firm in Illinois to take charge of a mill as the superintendent; the manager of this mill had been sent there by the same firm. He was a man about my own age, a son-in-law of the president of the company that built and owned the mill. Now, you can readily see the position we occupied. He was the manager; I was the superintendent. It wasn't very long until I saw conditions that were unsatisfactory, and when I finally took charge of the mill, I undertook to prevent that unsatisfactory condition from continuing. I thought I had successfully accomplished that work, and in the course of the work I found that the men were disposed to listen to one and pay little regard to the other.

In my work with them, having had the experience that they had gone through, having worked my way up from the lowest position in the mill, I could sympathize with their efforts. I knew when they had done their work. I could have a good idea of the time it would take, and I used my experience to make it pleasant for these men. It wasn't a great while until I discovered that they were ready and willing to do anything I asked of them, cheerfully, gladly. But the other man might ask and ask again. They had little use for him; and I began to recognize it more and more, and to ask why. The text I have read was brought very forcibly to my mind, just about that time, when I was looking for something to talk about in the church, and as I studied the question I found myself face to face with the conditions I was laboring under every day. It was there, and if you stop and think just for a little bit, you will discover that the tendency with every individual is to think for himself as to how it should be done, no matter what you are doing, and each individual may have his own peculiar way of doing things. But you will discover that the individual who may be directing your work, or seeking to lead you, who harmonizes the nearest with your conception of what is right, is generally the individual whom you are inclined to follow. And there's another feature that comes in here that we must recognize. The individual who has had experience, and by virtue of that experience has become well acquainted and wise in the carrying out of the work, will unquestionably give to you the best recognition of your efforts, because of the fact that he knows just what is needed.

A good leader, a good superintendent, will not always insist upon his way, and his idea, for he may recognize that the idea of some of those laboring under him may be better than the one he has suggested, or had in mind; and if he is wise he will at once recognize the value of that and, in the recognition of it, give to the individual the credit due, and let him work in the way he desires.

This, I have found, was true in the world, in my experience, in business life, but I have found it true also in my religious life, and in the working under it and with it I have been made to recognize that the Master's statement in our text today was absolutely true. You can not serve two masters. Get the word, masters. For you will love the one and hate the other, or you will hold to the one and leave the other. You can not help it, my friends. It is as natural as it is for you to live. It is just one of the peculiar traits of humanity, and I may say that the individual who does not have an opinion of his own, a thought of his own, an idea of his own, as to what is best and right, doesn't amount to very much. He hasn't much force about him. These don't even use the mental powers that God has given them, and as a consequence do not develop or grow. They won't do it in the things of this world. They won't do it in the things of God. They are simply manikins, moved around by some one else, and amount to very little. But the individual who thinks, the individual who recognizes the work that he is trying to do, and seeks to develop in it, and bring that work to some high standard, and make it successful, is going to have some opinion of his own. It may not be absolutely correct, it may need a little trimming occasionally in order to get it into good shape, but if the individual is wise he will submit to that readily, especially if he can find that alteration from a source that he recognizes as having the proper experience, and from some one who knows what he is doing.

Have you obeyed it?*

Now these men with whom I worked soon found out that I knew my business; that I had had experience. Our manager had never had one day's experience in his life in the work in which we were engaged until he came there. He never had done a day's physical work. From his school life he had gone into a bank, and from there he went to the management of this concern. He knew nothing of the physical exertion or the mental effort that might be necessary in carrying out the work of the day, except that required in his own line. The men were very quick to recognize that, and I soon discovered that they not only recognized it, but were disposed to discount his wisdom and knowledge in giving instructions; but at once they fell into line with me. I had no trouble with them; not the least bit; and the real reason, when I came to sum it up, was that in the experience I had secured, and the knowledge I had acquired, they recognized that peculiar power that must come to every individual who gets knowledge in that way. As a consequence we got along fine. I strove to recognize their rights and to utilize any idea that they might bring to me or that they might see in the carrying out of their work, and to encourage the individuality and the initiative inherent in men who would work. The result was that two years after I had been there, I could tell my men what I wanted them to do, leave the mill, go away, and they would carry it out. They knew how, and there was no trouble about it.

In the carrying out of the great work of God, that rule is just as true as it is in the things of the world. In other words, in our religious life and our religious work it is just as practical and just as essential that we use good judgment as it is in the things of this world.

The other thought I want to emphasize comes in the explanation of the Master. Wherefore, seek not the things of this world, but seek first to build up the kingdom of God and to establish his righteousness. There is the first object in life. That does not say that we shall not attend to the business of this world that may be ours. But I would emphasize the thought that it does say that we should carry the principles of God and his righteousness into the everyday life with the world, in order that we might establish—not simply by word, but by example—the righteousness of God. As he has expressed it in this very declaration, I say unto you, Go ye into the world and care not for the world. Can you do that? Are you big enough to recognize that principle? Can you gather the idea that the Master has presented to us there, and he gives us a reason for it—for the world will hate you and persecute you; and why?

Why should the world hate you and persecute you? Well, I am going to tell you, if I can, just briefly, some of the reasons why.

In the first place, if you are carrying the principles of the gospel of Christ into your life, your very life itself will be a condemnation to the world and its wicked ways. You can not help it, my friends. They are going to recognize it, and they don't like it. And they are going to use every means they can to keep you from doing it, if possible, because they don't like that constant contrast that exists between the righteous individual and the unrighteous. They have a little conscience left, and they can see and recognize it.

In order to bring this out, let me give you a little illustration. I may have used it before, but it will answer my purpose now.

We were working down here at Carthage, Missouri, the year before I went into the general missionary field, and the dam needed some repairs before a freshet should come. I took the men out one day to work on the dam. I had been there for some time with them, and in putting one of the timbers up it was quite difficult to get it into place, and they had striven several times to put it in, and something had happened every time, that the timber would come down. It was heavy, and hard to put up. Finally we had it right where we thought we could get it in place without any further trouble, when something happened, something slipped, and that timber came down again. The men stood there, looking at it. One could see by their faces they were disgusted. I knew these men; knew they were in the habit of cursing everything blue when things went crooked like that; but nothing was said for quite a little bit, and finally I had to smile. I said, "Boys, why don't you swear?" They got red in the face, and finally one of them looked up at me and said, "Mr. Smith, if you were not here, we would." I said, "What have I to do with it? I haven't found fault with you." They said, "We know that, but we know you don't swear, and you don't like it." They knew I didn't, and that it would be objectionable; and so they didn't resort to it. But the probabilities are, they wished I was out of their way for a while so they could express themselves as they wished.

Now, I have found that while you may make yourself pleasant and agreeable, the very fact you are a minister is oftentimes very disagreeable, because it is a restraint. And oftentimes men will avoid having you there if they can. That is sufficient to illustrate the thought I want to bring out this morning—that if we go into the world and care not for the world, but seek first to establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness in all our life and in our actions and our associations, we are going to find that the world doesn't care very much for us. You can make up your mind to that. The years that I have traveled and the years I have labored among mankind have taught me some of these things very effectually, and I am still of the opinion, and more firmly convinced, that until this church recognizes that feature, and puts into operation in our lives every day the characteristics of the Christ, the manifestations of the citizenship of the kingdom of God, to live lives pure and clean, filled with kindness and thought for each other, and recognition of the rights of each other, that we may manifest to the world that we are the kingdom of God and come out of the world and serve God, we will never accomplish very much; and we will never redeem Zion.

I say, without any hesitancy, unless we can manifest a spirit of kindness and love, of charity and peace, that the world may recognize the fact that we are living in that attitude, we will never redeem Zion. I don't think that is putting it too hard.

What is it to build up the kingdom of God, and how are you going to do it? You can not do it, my friends, with enmity and hatred in your hearts. It is an absolute impossibility. It is only when the Spirit of God comes into your heart and creates within you that love for your fellow being, that you can reach out the helping hand, and with a kindly mind and with patience and forbearance and long-suffering, even with foibles, mistakes, and errors, that we may ever hope to accomplish the great purpose God has assigned us.

I may say to you, it is a pitiful sight that presents itself today—the kingdom of God established in these last days, divided asunder, tormented as it is with doubts and fears and suspicions. I ask you, What are we offering to the world? I plead with you people to think a little ahead of your personal ideas and ambitions. Let us look to our Leader. You think for a moment in your religious life, Who is it that has had the experience and has come to the age with a knowledge of the things of God complete. You answer, There is but one who has successfully done it. And when I go back and look over the list of men, I find Jesus Christ standing before us, his outline clear and distinct; and when I begin to look at it and think of the application of the things he has given, there comes to me a conception of what he meant, and I find in him a leadership built upon experience, for he came from the realms of glory down to the earth, took upon himself the nature of humanity, and went through the trials of this life, the difficulties, and met, here, the powers of temptation that the Adversary exercises, and all the vicissitudes of life that come to us, and yet demonstrated the ability to carry into effect the gospel; and when he had suffered and gone through all the tortures of this world, and met this world, then he said to us, Come, follow me; I have trod this mill; I know. And as I look at him, my friends, and think of the situation, I am confronted with the thought that he is indeed well acquainted with all the conditions that we have met. He has gone from the bottom to the heights, and said to us, Come, follow me; and he knows what we have to meet. He understands what it requires for us to give up the things we desire. He knows what it is to make sacrifices. He understands the powers of man; he understands the powers of the Adversary, and he knows the powers of God, and hence is in a position to say to us, This is the way that will be best. This is the way in which you can most successfully carry it out, and this is the way I would like to have you do it.

It has been one of the things I have always loved to talk about, when I have discovered that in Jesus' work with men, in God's work with men, he has always appealed to their love, their affection, the highest feature of them—their intelligence—and asked them to exercise it. He has never been dictatorial; never said that you must do so-and-so. It isn't there. It isn't in the word of God anywhere.

He has always put it in a way—if you wish to do so and so, you must do this or that or the other; but always that condition is there, and that recognition of the right of men to exercise their agency, and their intelligence. Because of that I can see in him the leadership that ought to be manifest to the world, and ought to appeal to us, and why? Because his life is the embodiment of the very things he has taught. His life was fraught all the way through with that condition of mercy, of kindness, and yet firmness, and a steadfast stand for just what God had given to him.

You would be surprised, possibly, if you would go into the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and look carefully and see the many things given us there, in which he has pictured what we should do, what we should teach, what we should recognize as his law, and emphasized it all the way along. But let me ask you to think, and think real hard for a few moments: Who are we going to serve—God, or Mammon? You may say, What do you mean by Mammon? I may mean several things. There are several definitions that could be given for the word Mammon, and sometimes it has been applied to the idea of wealth. The accumulation of wealth is the Mammon of the world, but that is a mistake, in my estimation. That is only one of the features of Mammon. Ambition may enter and be another one, and ambition may be the particular thing that you are worshiping, and it may have its effects, and because of it, you are giving more attention to that than you are to God.

Take the individual who loves power and influence and moves along political lines to obtain it, and he becomes obsessed sometimes with that desire for power until he forgets everything else, and he will even stoop to unscrupulous things to accomplish his end and attain his object. He loves it and is after it, and that is the big thing with him. He will even forget, sometimes, to look after his family, in order to accomplish that end.

There may be other lines. I have seen individuals who seemed to be worshiping the pleasures of life. Nothing but pleasure, pleasure, pleasure, and they not only sought after pleasure but they were dissatisfied, often, with what they got. They wanted more; they wanted something different; and as a consequence it became the obsession of their souls, and they didn't have time to worship God. They didn't go to church. That was too solid; that meant something serious. You had to think, and they wanted something that would give them amusement; and I may say that is one of the difficulties today in the world. The whole world is obsessed by the idea of pleasure; and yet, what do we mean by the word pleasure? That is the Mammon of the world today. What does the word pleasure mean? Does it simply mean entertainments, recreation, and things of that description? Games, amusements, etc.? Is that all you get out of pleasure? Isn't it possible that there could be such a thing as pleasure that would supersede and be higher than any of those things that the world has given? You may enjoy some of the things that you will see in a show. It may be very pleasant and agreeable at the time, but how long does it last, and what has it done for you? Has it elevated you? Has it brought you closer to the Master? Has it made you better? Has it caused you to think of your own life, and how to make your life serviceable to your fellows? You can not help but answer no. It has given you the amusement of the hour, and when once past you are looking for something else immediately. There is a sense in which pleasure may come, abiding confidence, comfort, strength, following all along with that pleasure that God gives. In the service of the Master you will discover there are many things that give us pleasure; a pleasure that has its peculiar influence upon us and makes us want to be better, that we may enjoy more of it; a conscious feeling that lifts you higher and makes you contemplate the idea of being better and higher, and that pleasure God brings to us. And when you have reached that and partaken of that peculiar element, you discover that these things of the world sink into insignificance and actually do not satisfy the longing of the soul. Then is when you must look for something else. And then let me suggest, my friends, that in the building up of the kingdom of God and his righteousness—what is his righteousness? The statement is, establish his righteousness—not our righteousness, but his, God's, righteousness. And when I take the Apostle Paul's definition of that, he says, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, unto the Greek and unto the Jew, for therein is the righteousness of God manifest. And when I begin to look around, I discover that that gospel means more than simply the worldly things that we know, and God has said in that declaration, These things shall be added unto you if you seek first to establish that righteousness.

I pick up the book I hold in my hands, and I tell you without hesitancy, it is the most wonderful book of this church—the Book of Doctrine and Covenants—and while the Bible manifests to us how he has dealt with his people in ancient days on the Eastern Continent, and the Book of Mormon tells of the life of the church on the Western Continent, did it ever occur to you that if we were confined to those we would have a difficult task to tell just how to establish and build the work of God when it came forth? Yet in this book there is the instruction as to how we should do it. There is the definition of what we should teach, and what composes the gospel of Christ, and we find it in perfect harmony with the Bible; and therein lies some of the strongest features we have. And as I take it up and read it, at times I am astonished at some of the things I find, and I discover things there that are staggering when we come to look at them; but when compared with the things of the world and the things that God has manifested, we discover there is no comparison between the two.

Again, God has left us so much, has given us teachings so fine and so excellent in their nature that, as the Apostle Paul expressed it, as one of the prophets expressed it, Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things that God hath in store for them that love him, but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit, which searcheth the deep things of God. Then I turn over here and read to you just one little reference, and I want you to notice it carefully, section 42, paragraph 5, of the Doctrine and Covenants:

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit; and the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith, and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach.

We find there a plain statement as to what our teachings shall be—a clear-cut definition—and when I get that and think it over I have to meet the emphasis laid upon what God would have us teach and why, because these things make for holiness, for righteousness, for the establishment of the kingdom of God; and if we are going to serve God here, let us serve him the way he asked us to serve him, and let us do it with an eye single to the glory that he said belonged there. And then let me emphasize to you one thing, that in this same book he has put the declaration clearly to us that if we would do these things and would teach as he has said, would follow the direction that he has given, he would cause the earth to yield her increase and give to us the things we need. That is just what he said in that paragraph over there. If you would first establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness, then these other things would be added unto you.

My dear friends, that emphasizes what it says in the Doctrine and Covenants: "It is my plan"; but why are we so slothful? Why are we so thoughtless? Why will we let the world and the pleasure of the world, and the riches of the world, and the honors of the world make such inroads among us? The honors of the world blind our eyes, obsess our souls, and prevent us from doing the things that God has required. Have you any faith in God? Have you lost it? Do you believe in him? If so, then I say the time has come for us to worship him with all of our heart and soul, and to exercise every energy within our souls to teach the things that he has given unto us, all of them, until everyone shall be filled with that spirit of peace, unity, love that shall characterize the children of God, until, as he says over here in John, By this they shall know ye are my disciples, for ye have love one for another. That is the statement he made, and if there is enmity, if there is hatred, if there is prejudice—those things which make division all the time, manifesting themselves, where will the world find the sign of the brotherhood of Christ? Where will they find the manifestation of the kingdom of God? I ask you to think, and to think seriously, for on every single soul there is the responsibility of doing its part to manifest these things that the body may be perfect and complete. Then we will worship God and not Mammon; and the only power that can save us is the worship of God and not Mammon. You may look around, and you will see everywhere that God is love and kindness. You may see the great power that he has manifested in behalf of mankind, and you may see the wonders of the world; and while the wonders of the world are present with us now, they are gone tomorrow. The same condition that God has established has been maintained for centuries; it is there yet; and the promise of God is that it shall continue until the end, and no man knows when the end is.

As I look out upon these things, and think it over, my heart becomes burdened at times, and my soul is troubled, for I see the day hastening when God has said there shall come into the world perilous times. There shall come troubles, and men shall be fearful, losing their hearts and courage, and bowed down with fear because of the things coming upon the earth. But he has said, Then let my people, my disciples, lift up their heads and rejoice; and why? The day, the hour of their redemption is at hand. I ask you to think if these things are manifesting, these things are demonstrating the future that is before us. I want you to gather the idea that we must decide whether we will serve God or Mammon; whether we are going to follow God and his teachings, or going to follow the world and her teachings; whether we are going to get our pleasure from the good things that God gives, or from the pleasures of the world, which are not elevating in their nature.

The time is at hand that we must make that decision, and we must stand for that decision and witness to the world that we are worshiping God and not Mammon, and that we are building the kingdom of God and establishing his righteousness, and making it manifest to the world that there is no mistake in that. Are we ready to do it? That is the question. Are we going to do it? We must make the decision. We can not serve God and follow the world. It is an absolute impossibility.

Go ye into the world, but care not for the world. Be not of the world, as it says in another place. We are in the world, but my friends, we ought not to follow the world. We should so carefully recognize the things of God that we bring ourselves into subjection to them, for he appeals to us as the Leader, the Commander, and I can follow his leadership. I love the very thoughts of a leadership of that character, and I want you to think it over. He didn't sit down in the comfort of his kingdom, back there on the throne of God, and say, Go! and if you don't do what I tell you I will damn you! But he left that throne and came down here. He tested out his own powers. He tested out his own gospel. He suffered, he died, he rose by reason of it, and then said to mankind, Now come on; I have tested it, I know it will work. Follow me. And who is there that doesn't love a leader who takes the lead? Who is there that doesn't wish to follow a general in the army who says, Come on, boys, I will lead. You know, my friends, every one of us know, that the biggest heroes we have had have been those who went to the front themselves and said, Come on, men; we will do this and that. And they did it.

Jesus Christ stands out before us and takes the lead and says, Come on, people, I will lead you; and we will do it. Who is ready? Are you? May God help you to make your decision, is my prayer.

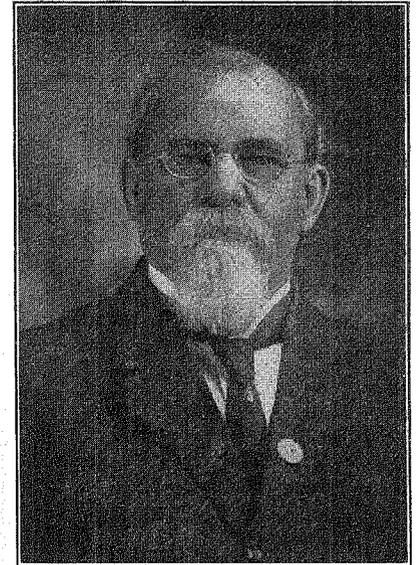

There is no strength in mere self-gratulation: there is no hope in being sure. Enlightened endeavor is the law of progress: a stout-hearted dissatisfaction with what has been done, a clear-sighted understanding of what there remains to do, an undaunted spirit to undertake and achieve it.—Woodrow Wilson.

In the latter part of 1868 or the beginning of 1869, with the idea of improving my father's health we moved farther west, to Bevier, Macon County, Missouri. Here we found quite a large branch of the church, the members of which represented a great many nationalities, many of whom had belonged to the different factions of the church. They brought with them into the Reorganization many queer ideas and strange doctrines, and it was not smooth sailing in this branch for many years. Not until the majority of those old-time elders were taken away in death did the branch prosper in peace and spirituality. There was only one thing that all the ministry could agree upon, and that was that the late Joseph Smith was the legal successor to the Seer and the only one of all the leaders of the various factions then extant that could preside over the church of Jesus Christ lawfully.

The branch held prayer meetings on Tuesday nights and testimony meetings on Thursday nights. Also social services on Sunday afternoons and preaching at night. What wonderful meetings they had, and what wonderful testimonies they would bear in the social services from time to time! But in their branch business meetings they would roar at each other like wild lions, and become terribly excited. What some of those old elders did not know about law and order, in their opinion, was not worth finding out. To most of them, the holy priesthood was wonderful, and they did love authority. But very many of them did not live according to the gospel law. They did not try to make the Sunday school interesting to the young. Perhaps there would be one or two of the older people who would put forth an effort to have Sunday school, and then when we attended we did not learn anything. Under such discouraging conditions, the younger element became disgusted and lost interest in the Lord's work, many drifting away into the beggarly elements of this sinful world.

I did not take very much interest in the church until I was nearly twenty years of age. I am quite certain that if it had not been for our heavenly Father moving upon me by his divine Spirit, I would not have started out when I did.

Father died when I was just past fifteen years of age and left me without a father's love and protection. Mother was left with no means of support, with two boys for whom to provide. My brother was more than five years younger than I. I was at a great disadvantage in making a living for myself. I could neither read nor write. It was a dark picture that confronted a poor, ignorant boy. I tried being a newsboy on the trains for a short time but did not make a success of this business venture. I made just a few trips on the old Hannibal & Saint Joseph Railroad, a road now operated by the Burlington system. We would leave Quincy early in the morning and arrive in Kansas City the same evening, crossing both the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers en route.

Kansas City was not a very large city, neither was it very attractive in those days. It was not a very desirable place in which to live, since during the war and soon thereafter the roughs and toughs of the whole country had settled there. The James brothers and the Youngers, who were robbers and lawbreakers, lived near there. Where the principal part of the business section of the city is now, then were high bluffs. The first railroad station was near the Missouri River, close to the Burlington Bridge. The present station is the third one that has been erected since I first visited the city, in the summer of 1872.

Not having a special liking for railroading, I went back to Illinois to work in the coal mines, and put in a few years driving mules and digging coal.

In the early part of 1876, my mother married a man by the name of Thomas Matthews. When I learned of her marriage, I became very angry and decided I would never go home again; but within a few days a feeling came over me that I can not describe. It seems that I became homesick to see mother, and the first thing I knew I was on the train speeding away to Bevier, Missouri. Mother was greatly surprised to see me as I walked into the house unheralded, and there surely was a happy meeting between mother and son. I loved my darling mother and was willing to tolerate a stepfather for her sake, for she had been a kind and loving mother to me as well as to all of her children.

The Sabbath before my arrival mother had been spoken to in prophecy regarding me, being told not to worry about me, that the Lord was feeling after me, and that in the near future I would return to the church and would be used as an instrument in the hands of the Lord to do a great work for him. Having this prophecy in mind she greeted me with great joy, and she was not long in telling me about it. However, I gave her to understand that I had not come home to take my place in the church and that I did not intend to have anything to do with it. For a long time after my return home, I refused to attend the church services. Poor mother! How disappointed she was at my lack of appreciation of what the Lord had revealed to her regarding my future. She still believed the Lord would bring me back to the church but that it would have to be brought about in some miraculous way.

Soon after arriving home, I had a very strange dream, which, try as I would, I could not drive from my mind. I dreamed that I went into a saloon, and while there a man came running in with a revolver in his hand and, to my horror, shot at another man in the room, the shot missing him and hitting me, causing my instant death. My spirit left my body, and I realized I was being carried by some power. We arrived in a spacious building with many large rooms, and to my great surprise those rooms were full of spirits of people who had been on the earth. They seemed to be very unhappy, as they appeared to be confined to the particular room in which they were placed. I visited one large room where the spirits were chained to their seats. These were the only spirits of which I seemed to be afraid. They looked terribly vicious, and I kept a safe distance from them. I walked about the room and engaged one spirit in conversation. He appeared to be a very old man and was very much discouraged. I asked him why he felt so blue and sad, and he replied that he had been suddenly killed, had left his family in much distress, and did not know how they would get along without him. I was standing at one end of the room, and as I looked in the direction where I had entered the building, I saw great crowds coming up from below. They were the spirits of men and women who had just come from the earth. Some looked very wild, while others were quite calm.

There were officers in charge who took these spirits and placed them in the different rooms before mentioned. Finally I went to one of the officers, who apparently was in charge of the room in which I was standing, and asked him if I could see my father, who had been dead about five years. He replied that it was impossible to comply with my request, since my father was in paradise; that I had come into the wrong place; that I was in the prison house; that my father could not come to me there, and that I could not go to him. I felt very sad over this information. I was conscious of the fact that my body was on earth, and I wondered what disposition my folks had made of it. Had they buried it by the side of my father? The officer also told me that it was not intended that I should be in the prison house, and that if I would promise to be a good Latter Day Saint, I should be permitted to return to the earth and reenter my body. I quickly made the promise, and the next thing I knew I was traveling through space, conveyed by some power, and upon arriving at my mother's house went in through the door and up to my room, where I reentered my body which was lying on the bed. I was terribly cold when I came to myself! I believe my spirit had been out of the body.

This, to my mind, was a remarkable experience, in view of the fact that at the time of the dream I could not read the Scriptures, and therefore knew nothing whatever about the prison house or paradise. I had heard people talk about heaven and hell but had no idea as to where they were or what they were like. I had been taught that heaven was for good people and hell for the wicked people. I had never heard that there was a prison house; but later, when I became interested in the church and the Lord gave me his Spirit that enabled me to read his holy word, I discovered that there is a prison house and what I read regarding it coincided with that which I had seen.

In my dream, in the room where the spirits were chained to their seats, I saw one of my brothers-in-law. At that time he was an officer in the church and a very faithful Saint, but he provoked me very often by his continual preaching to me. I surely was dumfounded to see him there! Some years later, after I became actively engaged in the work of the church, this brother-in-law turned his back upon the church, taking for his companions such works as those penned by Thomas Paine, Robert Ingersoll, and others of like character. One day, on my way west, I called at his home for a visit. I related my dream and told him I had seen him in the prison house chained to his seat. A year or two later I again visited him, and I discovered, to my great pleasure, that the dream had had the desired effect. He was as zealous and faithful a worker in the church as ever before. At the time of his death he was one of our most faithful Saints. My dream had performed a double mission.

Notwithstanding I had promised to be a good

Latter Day Saint if permitted to return to my body upon the earth, I would not communicate my dream to my family for fear of their using it as a club on me. Nevertheless, I did not visit the saloon or go out of the house far for a few days thereafter, for fear I might be killed.

Brother T. W. Smith, of the Quorum of Twelve, was preaching in Bevier at that time, and one evening I went to hear him. I did not become interested in his sermon; in fact, I can not recall one thing about which he preached. At the close of the sermon he extended an invitation to those present who were ready for baptism to stand up, and one lady arose. Brother Smith then announced that the baptism would take place that night in a pond near by. I, with other young people, went to witness the baptism, after which all were invited to witness the confirmation at the home of Brother Thomas Rees. All the Saints went, and I, with some of my friends, accompanied them to the house. After singing a hymn and offering a prayer, Brother Smith confirmed the sister. He then requested the Saints to move out and take part in the service, either in prayer or in testimony. During the service Brother Smith's wife spoke in tongues, during the delivery of which one elderly sister became very much excited. Her peculiar actions started me laughing, and for some cause or other I could not stop. Brother Smith was sitting near me and could hear me laughing, and finally he publicly rebuked me for my rudeness. I felt a very strange feeling coming over me, the like of which I had never before experienced; I wondered what could be the matter. I felt as if I had a fever; I was burning all over, both inside and out. About this time Brother Smith announced that there was a young man present with whom the Lord was working and directed that that young man should get upon his feet and speak. Being quite confident that he was speaking to me, I thought to myself that those present would have a long wait if they waited until I arose and spoke. Still that power was working with me in an effort to force me to my feet. My, how I did fight to keep my seat! But the first thing I knew I was on my feet and talking. I can not remember all I said, but I think I told them that I would try to serve the Lord from that night on. That was the first time I had ever tried to say anything in public, and it was also the first time I had ever felt the Spirit of God operating in my heart. The Lord had certainly performed a miracle that night; I had been transferred from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God, and that within a few hours. What a great change had been wrought in my desires and feelings! I went home with dear mother a new man. How pleased she was to walk from church by my side!

Brother Smith announced at the close of this wonderful meeting, and truly it was a wonderful meeting for me, that there would be another meeting the next morning at ten o'clock at the home of Ephraim Rowland. Before going to this meeting, I retired to my little bedroom and bowed in earnest prayer. I had never done much praying and did not know how to address God intelligently. It was a short prayer; I simply asked the Lord to bless me, that I might be enabled to read and understand his word and that I might serve him acceptably. At this time I could neither read nor write; neither could I pronounce one word in fifty of the English language correctly. I learned to read by God's divine help. I learned to write after I entered the ministry by copying the letters I received from friends. I tried to print the first letters I wrote to my mother. I have since found some of those letters, which my mother kept, and I have laughed when I read them over. At the same time my heart was full of gratitude to my heavenly Father for the miraculous manner in which he blessed me in answer to that weak and feeble petition that I offered.

I arrived at the home of Brother Rowland at the appointed time, and what a glorious meeting we had! That surely was another red letter day for me. What a wonderful display of God's great and mighty power! A diversity of gifts was manifested; namely: tongues, interpretation of tongues, and prophecy. Sister T. W. Smith arose, and under the power of the Holy Spirit spoke to me in tongues and gave the interpretation. I was told that the Lord had heard my feeble prayer; that he would enable me to read and understand his word; that he had felt after me and if I would be faithful to the covenant I had made with him he would use me as an instrument to perform a great work in my day; that I would baptize hundreds into his church; that I would travel and preach his gospel in many foreign lands and kingdoms; and that I would be known in all the world by his people. This prophecy was given in the summer of 1876, fifty years ago, and all that was said to me has come to pass, as I have baptized hundreds, have traveled in many foreign lands and kingdoms, and am known in all parts of the world wherever our people are to be found. Thank God, I have been enabled to read his precious word and declare it with authority from heaven!

I really do not think that many of the Saints present at that prayer meeting had much confidence in the prophecy that was given concerning me and my future work in the church, for they knew how ignorant I was and what my past environment had been. I never heard one of them make a comment upon it.

Almost immediately following this meeting, I was ordained a priest by Apostle T. W. Smith and placed in charge of the young people's meeting. Soon after I was ordained, an elder of the branch requested me to assist him in administering to a sick sister, and I, being wholly ignorant of the duties of a priest, laid my hands with his upon her head. How could I have known what the duties of any of the offices in the church were when I could not read? I was ignorant of the contents of the Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon, though my parents had these books in the home, in the Welsh language.

Within a few days after I was ordained, I secured a Bible and borrowed a Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Brother Rowland loaned me a small textbook which was written many years ago by Brother Winchester. I fasted and prayed almost every day and kept my nose in these books.

Some of the prominent men of the town were very much amused to think I had been ordained a preacher. They thought they would have some fun at my expense and started to ask me questions regarding religious matters whenever they met me. Such unbecoming conduct on their part made it very unpleasant for me. However, in a few months I began to mark passages of scripture, and when they came after me I was ready for them. But I was greatly handicapped in that I could not pronounce a word with more than one syllable, so I would get them to read a passage of scripture and then I would comment upon it. At such times the Spirit of the Lord would rest upon me in great power, and he certainly helped me in a wonderful manner. It was not long until these same people who were so ready to make fun of me, treated me with respect and reverence and came to hear me preach. They laughed at me no longer, but instead they were filled with surprise and wonder that I could preach as I did. They could not make themselves believe that such a thing could happen; it was the talk of the whole town. I used to go into the stores and engage the people in debate, but within a year no one would debate with me.

The following item was printed in the Macon Republican regarding my efforts and work in my home town at that time:

Gomer T. Griffiths, an uneducated coal digger who has had no advantages, has persevered to make himself a preacher. He has been in Illinois a long time, and about two weeks ago he returned and has preached very acceptably here several times. Of all Bevier boys, he was the last we

HOME EDUCATION

The Rights of the Small Child to a Place of His Own

BY DONA CLARK HADEN

In all this busy, whirling world, there must be a place where the little people may come and find themselves surrounded by materials that fit their size and interest—most homes and churches were not planned with the interest and welfare of the baby (or small child) in mind. But can you imagine how ill at ease our little people must feel, having to sit in a church filled with chairs built for tall folks? And isn't it pitiful to think of their being asked to sit in those seats in that most uncomfortable position just as long as the tall people wish to stay, regardless of how deeply annoyed the little child feels?

There are too many homes planned with no thought of a nursery for the dear little people God wishes to send to make home the most heavenly place in all the world. Every little child should have access to a place that he can feel is his very own play room, with small chairs that he may sit in at ease while he rocks his favorite doll and looks at the nursery pictures hung within his restful gaze.

Every church local should establish a nursery expected would be a preacher. We had the pleasure of hearing him last Thursday night, and we venture to say if he had an education he would make his mark in the world. He very much resembles Moody.

I also give a portion of a letter written to the late Joseph Smith by Edward L. Page, from Macon County, Missouri, June 4, 1878, regarding my work in that place:

My purpose in this communication is to call attention of young elders to the experience of Brother G. T. Griffiths as affording encouragement to such as hesitate in the duties of their calling, fearing they may not preach acceptably. What the Spirit of God has accomplished for him will not be denied others of the faith. Gomer T. Griffiths is twenty years of age, and but little more than one year ago he was baptized and ordained. From drinking, swearing, running with dissolute companions, and partaking of their vices, he quit at once his evil practices, ceased to chew and smoke tobacco, practicing in lieu thereof the Word of Wisdom, and started out to declare the gospel of Jesus. He was an illiterate coal digger. He is now an able defender of the truth and a fluent speaker. His conversion and intellectual improvement are accounted wonderful by all who knew him and are certainly a striking evidence of the right power of God as exhibited among his children. His labors in Brother Thrutchley's neighborhood have awakened a great degree of interest, broken down the barriers of prejudice, and induced a spirit of investigation and inquiry, the immediate results of which are noted in the baptism of three last Sunday.

under the supervision of a trained nursery mother, and this trained nursery mother would be glad to teach a class every week in "methods for the small child." We need most of all, educated parenthood, and it surely is heartening to know that in the State of Iowa there are seventy-five organized classes in parentcraft. Our hope is that the rights of the small child shall soon be better understood.

Who Is to Blame?

Today Jeanne rushed into the house crying, "Mother, Ned and Dolly threw my ring toss game into a tree." And yesterday, "Mother, Billy ran over my new teapot with his scooter." Still another time, "Mother, they've used up all my water colors and smashed the box."

"But, dear, why don't Billy and Ned and Dolly play with their own playthings?" I asked one day.

"Oh, they have no toys, mother. They always smash them as soon as they get them."

After a little investigation, I found that she was right. In fact, I saw the remains of some of them—a train of cars, a scooter, a doll carriage, and fragments quite unrecognizable, scattered on the cellar floor when I had occasion to be there. I found, moreover, that the cellar floor is the only place the mother has ever been willing to spare them for their toys; they have never known the tidying influence of a cupboard or shelves, nor the desire to keep them there, that a place all their own instills. What could be the advantage of caring for the scooter or the carriage at play only to have it lie on the floor afterwards at the mercy of brother and sister, who kick it out of their way?

While mother made apologies for the condition of the cellar floor, Billy came running in with the frame of a lampshade he had found.

"What's that you have now?" demanded his mother. "Don't bring any more trash in here. Look at this floor!"

"Aw, mother, I want to cover this shade to put

NEWS AND LETTERS

Anniversary Services at Grand Valley, Ontario

The third anniversary of the opening of their new church in Grand Valley was celebrated by the Latter Day Saints on Sunday, October 9. The principal speakers were Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Curtis, both of Independence, Missouri, where headquarters of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are located.

Services were held several nights previous to the Sunday celebration and were addressed as follows: Thursday and Friday evenings by Bishop Carmichael and Saturday evening by Apostle J. F. Curtis.

The first service on Sunday was at 9.30 a. m., being a prayer and testimony meeting, and was in charge of Apostle Curtis, assisted by Bishop Carmichael, District President D. B. Perkins, of Warton; Evangelist John Shields; and Bishop A. F. McLean, of Toronto.

The speaker at 11 a. m. was Apostle Curtis, assisted by Elders H. A. Dayton and R. J. Farthing of the general missionary force. After reading a portion of 2 Corinthians 5, the 9th verse was used as a text: "Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of Him." Mrs. G. Richardson and Mr. Hilliard Taylor sang, "Let him in."

At noon lunch was served to all in the basement, and refreshments were again served in the evening. A large number of visitors were present from other congregations, including Elder B. Belrose and James Morrison, of Owen Sound, Elder Charles Hannah, of Hamilton, Elder King Cooper, of Guelph, Elder F. B. Stade, of Harriston, and many others from Toronto, Redickville, Hillsburg, Georgetown, and other places.

Bishop Carmichael was the speaker at 2 p. m., discoursing at considerable length concerning the doctrine of stewardship and the law of the Lord regarding the proper use of temporal means by the members of the church. He showed clearly how the Latter Day Saints are trying to bring about in that house I made. Give me some stuff to cover it with, please!"

"Well, I guess I'll not waste any good material on that old thing. What would it look like if you made it? It would look about as well as that house you've been tinkering at for weeks! You never finish anything, anyway. Next time I look, the house and lamp will be in pieces on this floor!"

Of course Billy hastened to fulfill mother's bit of prophecy by kicking the house to pieces in his disgust.

Jeanne's complaints, as well as those of other neighbors' children, about the destruction done by Billy, Ned, and Dolly, are likely to continue.

A safe place all their own for their toys, a few words of encouragement when they attempt to make new ones—what pride she could awaken by providing these! Enough, indeed, to lessen the destruction of their own things and effectually to awaken a new regard for the property of others.—By Pauline Herr Thomas, in National Kindergarten Association Leaflet.

a condition of equality, according to the "needs and just wants" of all, by observing the law of the Lord in respect to tithing, consecration of surplus, and oblations, which will bring about a condition in which there shall be neither rich nor poor, but the needs of all will be amply supplied. "In the garden," was sung by a male quartet. The speaker was assisted by Elder Stade, who is bishop's agent for the Owen Sound District, and by Bishop McLean, of Toronto District, who was also the speaker at another service held at 4 p. m.

After the 4 p. m. service, many of those from distant points went home, and yet a full house greeted Apostle Curtis at the 7 p. m. service, for many of the people of Grand Valley and vicinity were present, in spite of threatening weather. The speaker was assisted by Evangelist John Shields. After reading Acts 26, Apostle Curtis spoke from the 2d verse: "I think myself happy, King Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews." The sermon consisted principally in a setting forth of those Christian principles necessary to salvation that are peculiar to Latter Day Saint teaching. The special music was a duet, "I must have Jesus with me," by Mesdames R. J. Farthing and Gordon Richardson (known to many as "the Taylor twins").—Grand Valley Star and Vidette, Grand Valley, Ontario.

1116 Clay Street

October 28.—This Sunday school was put on record at the "Kansas Free Fair" by Sister Mildred Goodfellow, she received two blue ribbons as a reward of merit for two original posters. One was an illustrated song and the other Mothers' Day.

Members of the Sunday school class of which Sister Grim is a member gave her a little surprise on the evening of her birthday.

The Department of Women held a noodle supper at the home of Sister Cora Killen on the evening of September 29. Then on the 1st and 3d of October a rummage sale was held netting a little more than fifty dollars.

Sacramental service on the 2d was in charge of Elder B. F. Dellar. The need of making special effort to attend this service was urged by F. O. Kelley in the opening remarks.

The morning of the 9th was occupied by J. G. Juergens. "Proving our identity," was the theme, and many comments were heard as to the logical deductions presented.

"The coming forth and purpose of the Book of Mormon," was the topic used by F. O. Kelley on the 16th. The guide post to the coming forth of this marvelous book is found in Isaiah 29. "We have as the eleventh commandment 'Thou shalt think.'" Science teaches us to think. New things scoffed at years ago are common now. The automobile took the world almost over night. The sooner we find out our mistaken ideas and correct them, the better it is for us. "The religion of our fathers is good enough for me," is an old excuse for not accepting the truth. Science is continually bringing to light new things that prove our position on the book, although the discoverers themselves do not realize the aid they are rendering us. Science promotes truth and is one of the "mysterious ways" that God moves to bring about his work. Some people grant God the power to do anything under the sun except to speak to people in this day and age of the world. This book was to come forth in a lawless age. People are self-seeking; there are innumerable violations of law every day. The Bible is accepted by some as the first, last, and only written word of God.

Elder C. H. Smith, formerly of Topeka but now of Independence, Missouri, preached for us on the 23d. The scripture used was from Book of Mormon, "Therefore blessed are ye if ye shall believe in me and be baptized, after that ye have seen me and know that I am. And again more blessed are they who shall believe in your words, because ye shall testify that ye have seen me and know that I am." He drew a beautiful illustration from a bouquet of flowers and one of autumn leaves which were on the stand. Let us as members of the local reflect the peaceful influence of the gospel as the flowers reflect their beauty; and let us not wither and fall by the wayside as the leaves of autumn.

Sister Pearl Elrick and family, of Independence, Missouri, are now located in Topeka. Saints and friends will find them at 1124 Tyler Street. We are glad to welcome them to our branch.

Chatman, Ontario

Things have been going along quite normally since our last letter. Elder Anthony R. Hewitt and family are back in the city again, and Elder Hewitt has been conducting a mission at Bradley's Farm, a short way out of Chatham, with good success. There is a large community at this point, and a number attending are Kentuckians who have just come to Canada recently to work in the tobacco fields.

Apostle J. F. Curtis and Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael paid Chatham Branch a visit early in October, preaching two evenings. Their discourses were much enjoyed.

Sister Rachel Kelley passed away on October 20 at the Public General Hospital, Chatham. Sister Kelley has been a patient sufferer for years, and her death came as a great relief from pain. She was taken from the home of her sister, Mrs. James Pritchard, where she has made her home for a number of years, to Bothwell on Sunday, October 30, where a public service was held from the Saints' church, Elder Arthur Leverton in charge.

Miss Gladys Jones, daughter of Brother and Sister Thomas Jones, was united in marriage to Mr. Murray Clark, of this city, on October 29, Elder R. H. Jones, uncle of the bride, officiating.

Anniversary services of this branch were held Sunday, October 30. Patriarch James Davis, of Michigan, Patriarch R. C. Russell, and James Pycock, missionary in Chatham District, were present and delivered good gospel sermons.

On the following evening an anniversary supper was given in the basement of the church. This was sponsored by the women's auxiliary.

Foraker, Oklahoma

The Sunday school, Brother Swain superintendent, still numbers from fifty to fifty-six in attendance. Recently a Brother Barrenger and wife and three grown sons have been regular attendants. They come from Newkirk, driving a distance of twenty miles down from the northwest. Brothers John and Reuben Workman's families, also Brother Montague's family, come about the same distance from the south of us. These all come as often as weather and health will permit.

Sister Leela Woslum has been in very poor health for some time. Also the small boy and babe of Brother Homer and Sister Lennie Wells are sick at present.

We were deeply grieved when death entered our little flock, taking Sister Mabel Workman, wife of our young pastor. She was stricken near sundown the evening of October 3 and passed away October 4 at two in the afternoon. She was always trying to fill whatever place was assigned her. Several babes have gone before her, and we feel she rests with them in the paradise of God.

Arthur Slover preached at eight in the evening of October 22, at "Carter Nine" oil camp.

We still have prayer service Sunday evening at seven, then preaching by local brethren.

Earl D. Bailey was with us and preached on the morning of the 22d.

Inez Slover is teaching school near Drumright this winter.

Brother and Sister Storm, also Nathan Workman, have been near Joplin, Missouri, at the bedside of a sister who was very sick. They were also accompanied by Hubert Storm.

The Religio continues to progress. Paul Storm is president.

We understand that Edward Workman is to start about the first of November with Brother Case to visit the different branches of Saints in Central District.

The Department of Women gave a pie supper at the school-house and a Halloween party for the young people. It was sponsored by Lizzie Slover, teacher of the school this winter, others donating sandwiches and coffee, all rendering reasonable service. Owing to our scattered condition and sickness, some could not help as much as they wished. The supper netted the workers forty-three dollars. This they felt was evidence of success, although so few could attend.

Brother Swain is to have a stock sale November 2, and the sisters are to serve there also.

The weather is ideal and has been for the past month. The farmers are hopeful for bounteous crops.

Ruby Storm is quite sick at present.

We feel the work is onward here, and pray that we may grow in unity of Spirit.

Northeastern Nebraska

We attend services with a small group of Saints that live in Pawnee County. It is twenty-five miles to the place where we meet in what is known as the Frog Pond School-house. We have Sunday school and sometimes preaching. On the first Sunday of the month sacramental service is held, that is, when the roads are so we can go in the car. But when it rains we can not go, as the road is not taken care of like a highway. Nevertheless there are some earnest workers for the Master in this region; and though we do not seem to make much progress, I feel some good is being done.

On August 21 we held an all-day meeting. Brother E. F. Robertson, of Lincoln, district president, was with us, and of course he brought his good wife along, for which we were all glad. She has made a great many friends throughout the district by her pleasing manner and her willingness to help out in whatever capacity she can.

At eleven o'clock Brother Robertson preached to us, using for a text, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God" (Matthew 6:33). He said we must first seek the kingdom of God in our homes, that by so doing we may bring up our families in the way of truth and righteousness, that when they arrive at the age of accountability they will seek the kingdom of God and be brought into the fold by baptism. He suggested that the unit of Zion's timber must be brought up at home or else when the call comes to gather we might not fit into the place in which we are supposed to fit; we might even have to step aside and let some one else take our place.

At about 12:30 the basket dinner, of which there was plenty and to spare, was served on the steps of the school-house. At two in the afternoon Brother Robertson spoke from John 12:47, "To save the world," being his text. We can truly say he dealt with the subject as only a man of his ability and spirituality can.

Again on October 16 Brother Robertson and also Brother Lawrence Brockway came down, Brother Lawrence being the district Sunday school superintendent. After the Sunday school hour, Brother Brockway gave us a short talk that lasted about an hour, his subject being "Zion, a beautiful place," and he brought out the thought that in the Sunday school is the place to sow the seeds of Zion, and that by proper instruction in the Sunday school and in our homes the children will grow in knowledge, in spirit and in truth, to the fullness of the stature of Christ. Then, when that condition is brought about through education, and not till then, will Zion shine in her beauty. So, Saints, let us rally to the cause of Zion; let us each put forth more effort than we have heretofore to bring about this condition spoken of by our brother, that through our efforts in the Sunday school and in our homes we may educate our children and our neighbors' children under the standards of Christ.

Brother Robertson spoke at the two o'clock hour, and all returned to their homes feeling they had been well paid in spiritual food for the effort made and long journey traveled to be there. May God continue to be with his people and his servants everywhere is my prayer.

Eastern Iowa District Conference

The Eastern Iowa District met in conference October 29 and 30 at Fulton, Iowa.

The weather was not entirely promising, but a fair crowd attended, especially on Sunday. The district was well represented. Meetings were spiritually and educationally good, and a keen interest was manifested to know more about God's work and to abide by his laws.

Bishop J. A. Becker, of the Presiding Bishopric, was the main speaker, and offered much in the line of explanation of the financial law of the church. Those present felt amply repaid for attending after having heard Brother Becker.

Saturday services began with a prayer meeting at nine o'clock. Although the gathering at this hour was small, a fine prayer meeting was enjoyed. Following was a preaching service, Brother E. R. Davis, of Kewanee District, being the speaker. Brother Davis was elected at the business meeting to succeed Brother Clarence Heide as district president of Eastern Iowa. The latter found it necessary to give up the work because of other burdens. We are all acquainted with Brother Davis, he having worked in this district a number of years ago. We know his capabilities and are confident that the district will lend him its hearty cooperation in his double duty of serving both Kewanee and Eastern Iowa Districts.

The afternoon session was devoted to conference business, Brother Heide being in charge, Brothers Becker and E. R. Davis assisting, the last-named taking the chair after having been elected district president. A suggestion that this district join with Kewanee District for 1928 reunion, if such is favorable with Kewanee District, was had from the First Presidency, and was voted upon. We hope that it can be effected, as it will be a step forward in the work, and also much more can be accomplished. Let us be ready to do our part, Eastern Iowa.

At this time, Brother Davis extended an invitation to the young people of Eastern Iowa to attend the Kewanee district young people's convention at Rock Island, November 25, 26, and 27. Eastern Iowa has always responded to Kewanee's kind invitations in the past, so let us do so this year.

It was voted to hold the next conference at Oelwein, Iowa, in June, 1928, the exact date to be known later.

Bishop Becker was the speaker at the evening service. He talked about inventories and stewardship. In a pleasing way he explained very plainly how an inventory should be filed. Much was gained from the service. After the evening service, the young people (and some not quite so young in years but who felt young) gathered around a large bonfire built by our ambitious Fulton young men, and enjoyed a marshmallow toast. There were marshmallows in abundance, and everyone had plenty. Novelty songs were sung, stunts were put on by everyone, and a few games played. At the close, "Consecration" was sung, and we were dismissed by prayer by Brother C. A. Beil.

Visiting Saints were then taken to the hospitable homes of the Fulton people, or, rather, those living in the vicinity of the little town of Fulton, for most of them are engaged in farming. We were royally entertained at these fine, well-kept farms and are happy to claim these people as brother Saints.

Sunday morning found us in prayer meeting, a good crowd arriving for it. It was a splendid service. We could truly feel "the tie that binds," and the pleasure of being counted as a group of God's children. By the time Sunday school was ready to start, many Saints from out of town had arrived for the day, so the church was well filled.

The speaker Sunday morning was Bishop Becker, who delivered a most appropriate discourse, rousing us to a realization of what a privilege it is to be a member of God's church and kingdom. This being College Day, he also spoke concerning Graceland as well as mentioning the progress made upon one of the big projects of the church—the building of the Auditorium.

Sunday afternoon was devoted to a round table discussion by Bishop Becker. It proved profitable. The conference was closed with a preaching service in the evening. All in all, the conference was a fine one. Practically all the district officers were present and "on the job." Everyone was ready to contribute in some way toward making the conference successful, and we feel glad to say that it was.

May we go on, knowing that the conference has instilled in us some of the hopes expressed in the following lines:

"If I can live, and living be each day a better man,
If I can love, and loving lend each day a helping hand,
If I can learn, and learning be of use to fellow man,
If I can say the things God has for me to say,
If I can do but one of these things every day,
He will be pleased with me as I pass along life's way."

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

Church attendance during October was not up to the usual mark. There were two rainy Sundays, and home conditions in some cases prevented a few of the members from attending. However, on the last Sunday of the month there was the average-sized gathering which enjoyed two good services—Sunday school and prayer meeting. The prayer meeting was especially good, the spirit of love being felt in a marked degree.

Preceding the Sunday school session, the annual business meeting was held, and unity prevailed. Sunday school business was done at this meeting, and the funds of the Sunday school and branch were combined, making them available for either or both organizations. The branch treasurer's report showed a slight deficit, but the Sunday school was about seventeen dollars ahead. For a small enrollment, the Sunday school does exceptionally well, the usual collection being four or five times the attendance. Tithes and offerings reported were about two hundred dollars for the seven months preceding. This does not include one hundred dollars directly paid to the bishop by Frank Tucker and family, and possibly some other payments; but it does include some receipts from the Harpster and James Anderson families of the Frazee Branch.

The removal of Lillian Horne, the efficient Sunday school superintendent, to Minneapolis, made it necessary to elect another superintendent; and Frank Tucker, who had been acting as assistant, was elected. The other officers of the branch and Sunday school were reelected, with the exception of J. W. Peek, who declined; his son, Chester, was thereupon elected janitor, and Alta Kimber treasurer. The president of the branch is Lester Whiting, who has served in this capacity for several years; organist, Mrs. Bessie Richards; and chorister, Lester Whiting.

Graceland Chats

College Day at Lamoni

Sunday was not only College Day at Lamoni, but also the climax of a week of earnest endeavors in the field of child welfare. For this reason the churches combined, making the morning service one for the community. The true spirit of the day was revealed when the congregation joined in singing "Graceland forever." The A Cappella Chorus and the Graceland-Lamoni Oratorio Society provided special music for the service. The Reverend Slick of the Methodist Church, who is a Graceland student, gave the sermon of the day. It was very inspirational and educational. He paid a splendid tribute to Graceland when he said that during his varied experiences he had met students from a great number of campuses, and had attended other schools, but he had never before found the spirit of loyalty and devotion to the true cause of education as at Graceland. Members of the faculty and students represented Graceland at several of the neighboring branches during their Sunday services, thus helping to accomplish the purpose of the day. Many of the students were permitted to return to their homes to help with Graceland programs. The collection in Lamoni amounted to more than one thousand dollars, which will be used for the scholarship fund. Truly the church has rallied to the cause of Graceland, thus enabling deserving students to continue their preparation for a greater service.

Intra-Mural Sports

Graceland College is very proud of its intra-mural program, as it is very well organized and carried out. Just now the societies are in the throes of excitement of the contests.

The race for the banner has begun. The Niketes took the lead by winning tag football. This game was very successful from the standpoint of players and onlookers. The games were interesting and well played. Tag football has been played for three years now and has been so successfully received that it has become a permanent fixture in our society contests. The societies placed in this order: Niketes, Kappa Deltas, Victorians, and Alpha Pis.

Women's field ball came next. If you had happened out on the old "bean field" while a game was in progress, you would have seen much excitement. These games drew crowds of students and were all interesting. The Kapps were winners here, with the Victorians a close second, Niks third, and Pis last. Volley ball and basket ball will soon claim the attention of all societies in the race for the Athletic Banner.

Extemporaneous-Speaking Contest

The first intersociety forensic contest of the year—the extemporaneous-speaking contest—was held Saturday night, October 29, at a meeting of the Athenian Federation. Each of the four literary societies was represented in the final contest. The student body as a whole responded very well and gave the speakers good attention and moral support.

Verna Garver, from the Kappa Deltas, spoke on "The future of aviation." Gertrude Lane, also a Kapp, talked about "The United States in Central America." The Alpha Pi contestants were, Thad Howland, whose subject was "Graceland's greatest need," and Granville Swenson, who discussed "Changing the calendar." Pearl Boylan, a Niketes, surveyed the political situation in a speech on "Presidential possibilities for 1928." The Victorians were represented by George Mesley, whose subject was "Good roads for Iowa."

The work done by the various contestants was very good. The speeches were well organized and delivered in an interesting manner. The judges placed the following: Gertrude Lane, first; Verna Garver, second; George Mesley, third.

Musical numbers were furnished by members of the different societies. Kathryn Skinner and Eunice Butts each sang a solo. Doris Weegar gave a harp solo, and Alta Royer played "under the wood" on the piano.

The Lamoni Choir Is Inspirational

(Experienced as the choir sang No. 90—"Olive's brow"—in the Hymnal.)

I sat in the Brick Church enjoying the Sabbath peace. The opening hymn had been sung, and prayer had been offered. The large choir arose; the air was filled with an exquisite harmony. I felt my soul being wafted back through time and space through the ages by the sweet sounds—back to the Mount of Olives, and there standing alone, I gazed upon a sight which stirred my deepest feelings; I seemed to glimpse the Savior in his agony in the lone hours of the night as he knelt in prayer; I saw the sad face that bore the sorrows of humanity. No one was with him to share his grief and suffering. He passed alone through that darkest of all hours. Through prayer he gained the strength to endure his trials. For two thousand years has humanity found unspeakable comfort and inspiration in that life. The singing ceased. I found myself sitting near the front of the church among a group of my college friends. The "concord of sweet sounds" had lifted my soul to spiritual heights, and there welled up anew within me the desire to make my life accord with that of the "Savior of men."

Graceland Prayer Meeting

Many of the new students who come to Graceland have heard so much about the Graceland spirit, that that is the first thing they expect to meet. They meet it in several avenues; in dorm life, in the classroom, at a football game, and even in the dining room, but to me they have not tasted the Graceland spirit until they have attended the Graceland prayer meetings.

Our last prayer meeting was especially impressive to me. I was tired and not very agreeable. As I went into the chapel, I could feel the quiet spirit of fellowship and the spirit of—not awe—but deep reverence. This spirit coming from a group of college young people is more inspiring than from any other group. The singing was whole hearted and joyous. The theme was "Carrying religion into education." Religion is a science, and to live it is an art. To live it best, we must study the theory and use our everyday life as a laboratory. All the thoughts added, gave a different slant to the topic and broadened the subject.

I came away, not tired nor disagreeable, but refreshed mentally and spiritually with a deeper understanding of life and of my associates. Within me was renewed that Graceland spirit—that indefinable "something."

BEATRICE GATES.

Friday Chapel

The chapel last Friday was one of the most impressive of the year. The students assembled very quietly. The voluntary consisted of a quartet sung by Doris Watermann, Grace Lane, Franklyn Weddle, and Thad Howland.

Mrs. Blanche Mesley gave us a very instructive lecture. She told how child welfare week originated, its object, and what it has accomplished. She brought to our attention statistics and summaries made in school systems where a group of children was taught religion and a group was taught ethics. Tests of the two classes were made, and it was found that the children that were taught religion had a higher moral standard than those taught ethics, and those who were taught ethics excelled by a high percentage those who had not received special training. The students were made to realize that religious training plays a very important part in life.

MARGARET HARRINGTON.

Decatur, Illinois

1174 West King Street

November 5.—November 1 found the Decatur Branch emerging from a splendid series of meetings conducted here with good interest for the past three weeks.

The Saints of Decatur were quite disappointed when they heard of the appointments of Elders J. O. Dutton and E. L. Ulrich to new fields of labor, and we were afraid there were no others who could fill their places. However, we are glad to say we have with us a very competent and able district president, Elder F. T. Mussell, who has given us some wonderful sermons in this series.

Five little girls, Edith Bauer, Mildred Blakeman, Pauline Peters, Helen Toler, and Margie Atkinson, were baptized by Elder F. T. Mussell and confirmed by Elders William Vanhooser, of Taylorville, and O. C. Johnson. We also have five or six adults who are on the verge of becoming members but are holding out at present. These, we feel, will soon be with us.

Since the last report Decatur Branch has lost Brother D. C. Moore and family, who moved to Chicago, where they will make their home. This leaves us without a priest and takes from our midst an earnest worker.

I am in a position to say the work is progressing nicely here in all the departments. The women's work is wonderful considering the few members there are to help. The sisters have been able to equip the church with dishes, stoves, tables, rugs, mats, and other things to help in promoting the work.

We are now looking forward to the district conference, which will be held here in February, and want to make it all that God would have it be. With his divine assistance and the cooperation of Saints in the district, we expect a good session.

On October 31 a Halloween party was given in the church basement, where Saints and friends gathered in their queer costumes. This event was much enjoyed by all, particularly the young. Elder Mussell being with us took the lead in furnishing games.

We shall be glad to have Saints coming through Decatur stop off and visit us.

LAWRENCE E. JOHNSON.

October 2 Brother Leonard Houghton was the speaker. For a subject he chose "The Book of Mormon," discoursing upon various phases: its teachings, testimony of witnesses, and prehistoric America.

Beginning at the home of Brother and Sister Carl Wirth, the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a treasure hunt October 7. At each stop they were given instructions how to reach the next station. This hunt supplied much recreation and was thoroughly enjoyed. Brother George Pratt and Sister Eunice Johnson found the treasure.

Elder Houghton was again the speaker on the evening of October 9. His scripture reading was the parable of the cursing of the fig tree, and "Have faith in God" was quoted as a text.

"Lord who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill of Zion?" was the text used the morning of October 16 by Elder Woodstock. The gist of some of his thoughts is: We have no right to do as we please when what we do conflicts with the rights and lives of others. The Master's secret for a happy life is found in doing things which benefit others. Christ did good because of his love for humanity. If we follow the example he has given us and do things because we love to do them, we shall find that we do them better; we shall be successful. Everything we do and everything we say will sometime be brought to our remembrance. Shall we be satisfied when we remember these things? If we are to brighten our corner we must serve. We are daily building for eternity; if we can not abide the celestial law here, we shall not be able to abide the celestial kingdom. Our life's rent must be paid in service. The Apostle Paul says, "Work out your own salvation."

In the evening Brother Floyd Carpenter was the speaker, using for his text a verse from the Book of Mormon: "But in the gift of his Son, hath God prepared a more excellent way, and it is by faith that it hath been fulfilled."—Ether 5: 12.

Two Brighamite brothers were present at both Book of Mormon study class and preaching service.

Elder Leonard G. Holloway was here October 23, occupying the pulpit in the morning. He left in the evening for Beloit, where he joined Brother Lenox.

Brother and Sister Carl Wirth and daughter Genette worshiped with Beloit Saints Sunday.

The Department of Women held a food sale October 26 at Carl Wirth's shop. Proceeds of this effort amounted to more than twenty-five dollars.

A new furnace has been installed in our church this fall, and a cement floor is being put down in the furnace room. Mr. Walker and Brothers Woodstock and Wirth have faithfully applied themselves in the evenings to the accomplishment and completion of this work.

Graceland College Day was observed, Brother Williard Hield giving a talk on "The mission of Graceland." Sister Hield talked on "Activities of Graceland." A collection was taken which amounted to thirteen dollars and sixty-five cents, more than double the amount asked for.

Wednesday evening Brothers Holloway and Lester Wildermuth worshiped with us. They had charge of the prayer service. Our services of prayer and testimony are very well attended. At this time Brother Wildermuth related experiences of the past week shared by himself and Brother Holloway in their work together, showing how the Lord had blessed them and proving beyond doubt that man's extremity is God's opportunity. This recital informed the Saints of incidents where doors, locked and barred so far as men were concerned, were with God's help easily opened. Thus we see that the Lord is abundantly blessing his servants, that his work may go forward. We in Madison wish to do our part to help bring about the purposes of God and to establish his righteous will.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

Sacramental service on October 2 was well attended, a good spirit prevailing. In the evening Elder J. M. Henson was the speaker, using for his subject "Spiritual gifts." The principal thought he desired to give the congregation was that we must cultivate these gifts and as a people stand together, be one in purpose, one in heart, one in mind, as each member of our body stands together to make a perfect body.

On October 9 Branch President L. C. Moore was the speaker. Sister R. L. Fulk; O. C. Henson, Lewis Deselms, and Arthur Henson were called to Marion to help carry on an institute program under the supervision of Brothers J. R. Lentell, R. L. Fulk, and Sister J. R. Lentell. Most of the program, which was well rendered, was carried on by the young people. At noon the Marion Saints spread a table with an abundance of good food, the meal being eaten in Fair Ground Park. The day was a wonderful season for all present. The Saints were back home for the evening service. Elder O. C. Henson being the speaker. His theme was "Stewardships."

Thursday evening, October 13, the young people went to the woods for a picnic. With plenty of brush to burn, they had a fine bonfire, and there were plenty of marshmallows to toast. Then Sister R. L. Fulk directed the singing of songs and playing of games.

Another institute was held in our district, this one being at Centralia, Illinois, October 16. Several Mount Vernon Saints attended, and members of our group were speakers on the program. We believe this institute work, if carried on, will be a great help in developing the young people.

Brother M. F. Lowmy was speaker October 23 at eleven o'clock. J. M. Henson talked in the evening.

Every Monday evening finds most of the men in class study. (We hope to find the rest of them with us in the near future.) We are studying "Problems of industrial Zion." We have just completed the study of "Duties of district and branch officers." Big interest is taken in these lessons, and much is being accomplished.

Instead of Religio meeting at the church Friday evening, October 28, we all went to a grove for a Halloween masked social. One of the outstanding characters was Brother R. L. Fulk dressed in woman's clothing. This was a jolly evening for all. Prizes were given to four of the most comically dressed. Refreshments were served.

College Day program, October 30, was in charge of Sister R. L. Fulk. A talk, "The spirit of Graceland," was given by Arthur Henson; readings by Lewis Deslems, Grace Henson, Ruby Rockett, and Sister Fulk. Several songs were sung. A good contribution was given at the close of the program.

Elder L. C. Moore was the speaker in the evening.

The Temple Builder girls have their class study every Monday evening. Last Monday, October 31, they were entertained with a Halloween party at the home of Sister Ida Hargis.

Prospects for the branch are brighter. We hope to take advantage of all our opportunities and accomplish the work to be done in Mount Vernon Branch. Our eyes are set Zionward.

Brush Creek, Illinois

The masquerade party and oyster supper held here October 29 in the dining hall proved a grand success. The Department of Women cleared something over ten dollars on the sale of oyster soup, pie, cake, coffee, and hamburgers. Several splendid make-ups were seen maneuvering around through the crowd. Three prizes were given for the best-masked couples. Kate Morris and Maudie Caudle were awarded first prize, their appearance being that of a Jewish bride and groom. Several Mount Vernon Saints came masked, among them R. L. Fulk and family.

The following Sunday Brother Fulk was our speaker at the morning and evening services. Several visiting Saints were in attendance, among them being Frank Brashears and family of Cisne; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Henson, of Mount Vernon; and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Holman, of Xenia.

Brother Fulk remained with us the following week, preaching some inspirational and uplifting sermons. If we would but comprehend and treasure up even a part of the wonderful things he brought to us in his discourses, how pleased our heavenly Father would be, for he knoweth all things; knoweth the need our branch has of improvement. We hope and pray that we may continue to move forward, tearing down and preventing the work of the adversary, for we are on the upward move.

Sunday, November 6, we were pleased to find our district superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Brother Lewis Deslems, of Mount Vernon, present for the entire day. We were also glad to see several other visiting Saints present. We welcome one and all to attend our services.

Sacramental service at the beginning of the month convened as usual at the eleven o'clock hour. A goodly portion of the Holy Spirit was enjoyed throughout the day.

At noon everyone partook of the basket dinner. Elder Fulk delivered a splendid sermon at two in the afternoon along the line of thought, "Shall we know Jesus by the prints of the nails in his hands?" He again preached at the evening hour, thus closing his week of meetings, and that night departed for his home in Mount Vernon. It was fortunate for him that he did not wait until Monday morning, for at that time it was sleeting, snowing, and raining.

Wednesday, November 2, Robert C. Morris was led into the waters of baptism by Elder R. L. Fulk. "Bert," as he is called, is a brother of the late I. A. Morris.

Enjoys Church Correspondence

I will write a few lines to your worthy columns. I am a reader of the HERALD, and every week I enjoy each and all letters from parts all over the United States and foreign lands. I enjoy Brother F. M. Smith's writings on his journeys. I wish that I could attend some of the spiritual meetings, the accounts of which appear in our church papers; and to be able once more to hear good gospel sermons would be a great blessing. I am looking forward and endeavoring to prepare, in order that some day I may move to Zion where my children will be surrounded by church companions and the influence of the church. If I did not have this hope, I do not know what I would do. My husband, Clarence Thompson, is deputy sheriff here. We have four boys, one a junior, one a sophomore, one in the third grade, and the youngest in the first grade.

My husband plans to go to Independence, Missouri, November 26 to meet his four brothers, one sister, and aunt. Leland Thompson, from Arkansas City, will be there. Herman, Ed. and Kenneth Thompson, and Mrs. James Gault live there, so they will have a family reunion of those who remain.

MRS. MAY THOMPSON.

LA CROSSE, KANSAS, November 8.

Bremerton, Washington

On beautiful Port Orchard Bay, lying on an arm of Puget Sound, with the Olympian Mountains towering to the west lies the city of Bremerton, where Uncle Sam's big war dogs are kept in repair. Around this bay are three towns, Bremerton, Port Orchard, and Charleston, and in the three a number of Saints dwell.

One evening in April of 1926, a few Saints met for prayer service, and from that time on it became a weekly meeting, gathering at the home of Brother and Sister Dalberg. After prayer service one evening, the subject of our need of a meeting place came up and was discussed. As a result of this discussion, Sister Dalberg bought twelve hundred baby chicks, raised and sold them, and with the proceeds bought two corner lots in a new district where there is no other church.

In August of that year the district officers came over from Seattle and organized a Women's Department. Beginning with eight members, it is steadily growing and is hard at work.

This spring the Saints decided it was time to build a place for worship, as we had hard work to find a place for the missionaries to preach, so on July 4, 1927, the foundation for a building twenty-six by forty feet was laid by the always faithful few. All during the summer those who could spent their Saturday afternoons and evenings working on the building, which went forward by leaps and bounds until it came to the finishing, which is slower. Much is needed to finish the building, but so far we have been wonderfully blessed in this undertaking.

In August, 1927, Sister Dalberg organized the little girls into an Oriole Band, which organization is steadily growing. In the near future the girls will give a play. At their meetings they sew and study.

Sunday morning, October 16, Brother A. C. Martin, district missionary, accompanied by his wife and family at the invitation of the Saints, came from Seattle to preach the first sermon in the new church. His topic for the morning was, "I will build my church," and for the evening, "Who we are, and why we are here." Attendance at both services was good, being mainly composed of nonmembers. While here Brother Martin organized a Sunday school.

Sunday, October 23, we had our first Sunday school meeting. The children in the neighborhood had been anxious all summer for a Sunday school to be started, so we had a fine attendance for the opening, twenty-eight being enrolled. We hope in a week or two to have the classes well organized and going in for a full winter's work.

In the evening of October 23, Brother D. S. McDole, president of Seattle Branch, came over to administer to a sick brother, then stayed to preach, giving a very spiritual sermon to a good crowd.

We hope to have a season of meetings in the near future, for we are sure there is a great work to be done here, and we ask the prayers of the Saints that we may be able to do much good in this community. MRS. EVA LUNDEEN.

De Kalb, Illinois

November 2.—Sister Grace Johnson, of Chicago, spent the week-end with Sister Jennie Johnson and worshiped with the Saints here the 16th of October.

Sister Wildermuth, of Aurora, is attending De Kalb Normal School this year.

Brother J. E. Wildermuth, of Aurora, has been preaching a few sermons for us recently.

Sister Jennie Cooper, of Plano, worshiped with the Saints here Sunday. She drove over with friends.

Brother Kenneth Knutson is recovering nicely from a severe appendix operation. He is at the Saint Mary's Hospital.

Brother Roscoe Davy, district missionary, of Aurora, gave us a very fine sermon on prayer Sunday morning, bringing out different points: that we should pray in faith; that we should do our part in having our prayers answered, not expect the Lord to do it all; that unless we forgive our debtors we can not expect the Lord to forgive us our debts. In praying for the redemption of Zion, we should expect to work for the same as well as pray.

Brother D. E. Dowker, district president, assisted Brother Davy in prayer and benediction; and Brother David Dowker was to have occupied the pulpit in the evening, but in getting off the train at Sycamore in the morning he was thrown as he was about to step down, and injured his side. He left for Des Moines, Iowa, in the evening to attend to secular business. Brother Davy left Sunday afternoon for Rockford, where he expects to begin a series of meetings.

Brother Vowels and son and Brother Pinkerton, of Belvidere, met with the Saints in the evening, and Brother Pinkerton preached for us. MAUD PRESTON WHITNEY.

Fall River Massachusetts

October 31.—The Sunday morning service October 30 was in charge of Pastor James W. Heap. Both invocation and closing prayer were by Brother Sanford Fisher, of Boston. The speaker was Ralph Baldwin, the youngest deacon. This was his first attempt in the pulpit, and he took for his scripture reading the second chapter of 2 Timothy. It would be well if all would open their Bibles and read this chapter. Some of the verses he particularly stressed were: "Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." "The husbandman that laboreth must be first partaker of the fruits." "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." "Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart."

At the close the pastor reviewed Brother Ralph's sermon. All were glad to see the young man take one more step forward, but it especially made glad the pastor and his Sunday-school teacher, and his parents, Brother and Sister Baldwin.

Sunday school was held directly following the preaching, with Ralph and Elvin Baldwin in charge. Prayer by Donald Chesworth, and at the close of the lesson a talk by Sanford Fisher, superintendent of the district. We received some good instruction and retained many helpful thoughts. Every officer and teacher was present at this service. A goodly number of little children were present. Sister Sophia Brodie at the organ taught them a new song.

The supper and Halloween party given by the Department of Women was a success, and over forty dollars were gained. The women have pledged themselves to pay for the redecoration of the walls of the church. Most of it has been done already, and the church never looked prettier. Mr. Arthur Daniel is the painter. After the supper, games were played and prizes awarded under the direction of Sister Mabel Daniel.

The Utah people are still in the city, Brothers Moses Sheehy and William Baldwin have called on them, and without doubt others also have. They preach on the street and have services in a hall. Their district president was with them yesterday.

Plymouth, Massachusetts

The branch here in the little Pilgrim town is still carrying on. Our first meeting held here since reunion was on September 11, the Saints having attended Onset meetings up to that time. We feel that much good came to us from the timely exhortations and firm teaching received while there.

Since last reporting we have added the name of Addie H. Leland to our branch membership by baptism. Brother Donald B. Leland left us September 3, to attend Graceland, and we are glad to hear from time to time of his interest in the life and work of the college. Already the "spirit of Graceland" has taken possession of him, and although we miss him a great deal, we would not have him anywhere else.

Brother and Sister William B. Leland are spending the winter with their children in the West.

We also report here the marriage of two of our worthy young people—Florence Mae Leland and Arthur Paul Gordon. It is a happy fact that in spite of all the places visited in their trip west no place looked better to them than Plymouth; and so they are back, now happily settled in a home of their own.

Saturday evening, October 8, two of our young sisters, Gladys A. Leland and Jessie I. Sutherland graduated from the Jordon Hospital School of Nursing. They are now at the service of the public, and we feel that honor is due them for their persistent efforts and success thus far in their chosen profession.

On October 23 we had for our speaker here Brother John Rogerson, of Fall River. We were glad to hear his message, and feel that many years of service and experience are back of his words.

The young people of Plymouth attended the young people's convention held at Boston October 8 and 9. Much was gained in the way of inspiration and determination to serve from the spirit of the meetings. Who could listen to such men as Brothers Budd, Ellis, and Woodstock, and not feel a surging desire to do?

Our branch was also well represented at the meeting called for the departments, on Thursday evening at Boston. In spite of the storm we were glad we could be there.

Meetings here are of much the usual character. A study class Sunday evening on stewardships takes the place of the preaching service as formerly held. Our pastor conducts this class. We are studying the Book of Mormon in the Religio under Brother Arthur Gordon, superintendent.

Our Department of Women is very much alive and doing good work both with our hands and our minds, under the able direction of Sister Doris Giovanetti, superintendent.

A social was held Friday evening, October 28, at the home of our pastor, B. W. Leland. Everyone enjoyed the singing, speaking, games, and refreshments. It was indeed a Latter Day Saint social of wholesome recreation. We feel that much credit is due our leader for his years of faithful service. Alike through days of sun and days of cloud, he has taught us to carry on.

Midland District, England

The Midland District's reunion was held in the Saints' meeting room, Sutton-in-Ashfield, on Saturday and Sunday, October 8 and 9.

It commenced at five o'clock with social introduction; refreshments were served, after which the usual preliminaries were attended to. At half past six G. W. Rawlings, health superintendent, gave a talk on health, emphasizing the necessity of pure air and water. Following this, E. Chappell gave an address on the "Importance of music and musical culture." The Women's Department superintendent, Sister Joseph Holmes, spoke to the assembly for a few minutes, but gave the remainder of her allotted time to Brother Hanson, who was attending the reunion.

During the evening an illuminated address was presented to J. E. Meredith, in appreciation of his services rendered as late district president.

A priesthood meeting at 9.30 commenced the Sunday services. Apostle Paul Hanson was the speaker, who talked on "Ministerial efficiency." Brother A. Hall occupied as the preacher for the morning service, taking his text from the eighth psalm: "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?"

The local Sunday school met at 1.45; no individual classes were held, as E. Chappell, district Sunday school superintendent, addressed the scholars.

The latter part of the afternoon was devoted to the usual prayer and testimony meeting. A good spirit was enjoyed.

At 6.30 p. m. a preaching service was held. Musical items were rendered by S. Holmes and family and Mrs. Baugh. "Moses' faith" was the center of Brother Hanson's address, in which he showed how Pharaoh's mighty earthly works had crumbled while Moses' spiritual works stood through all time as an example.

The weather was very favorable during the whole of the reunion, and a good spiritual time was enjoyed.

M. MEREDITH, District Secretary.

Wray, Colorado

November 6.—For some time I have been thinking that HERALD readers might be pleased to hear from the Wray Branch, although there is not a great deal to report. We are glad to say we are still on the map and striving to do our bit in the Lord's work.

There are not many families left in Wray, and the attendance in both Sunday school and church has been rather light, but recently the group of Saints living near Robb, about eight miles from Wray, are attending here; they have discontinued their union school for the present.

The first Sunday in October, Apostle Gleazer and Brother Bruce Brown, district president, were with us. We had an all-day meeting and a basket dinner, so many of the scattered Saints were enabled to meet with us.

Brother Gleazer preached both morning and evening to a well-filled house. His sermons were forceful and instructive and enjoyed by all.

Sacramental service at two o'clock was well attended. A priesthood meeting followed the sacramental service.

On October 6 Elder P. E. Farrow and wife, of Canada, arrived in Wray. They were cared for in the home of Brother and Sister Tabor until they found a suitable location. Brother Farrow was transferred to the Eastern Colorado District on account of Sister Farrow's health. They seem to be comfortably located for the present, and he has occupied the pulpit most of the time since their arrival here. He is a very earnest, able man, and we appreciate having him with us. We hope and pray for our sister's speedy recovery.

Elder R. Bullard also favored us with a visit in his return home to Independence after six months' labor in the west. He preached several times, and all felt encouraged and strengthened by his splendid sermons.

Brother Tabor, branch president, has been occupying in the Liberty Branch and rendering service wherever he is needed. The Department of Women is meeting regularly and have very interesting sessions.

Our beautiful fall weather is at last broken by a cold wave.

CORRESPONDENT.

Boyer City, Michigan

In the Northern Michigan district conference held at East Jordan, October 29 and 30, which gathering was well attended by Boyer City Saints, we had the pleasure of having with us Apostle D. T. Williams, of Lamoni, Iowa. He presided over the conference in an altogether satisfactory manner and assisted in other ways. The press agent's account of the conference will be published under another caption.

Elder W. E. Alldread was elected pastor at the July business session, and is, as ever, faithfully discharging his duties and endeavoring to build up the work and improve conditions in this local. For several years Brother Alldread was connected with the church work at Flint, but his health having failed last winter, he returned to his home here and during the summer months made his abode in Park of the Pines, taking sun baths and breathing the enervating air of the park, until now he is feeling fine and is enthusiastic to move the good work along.

A new furnace is being installed in the basement of the church, and it will soon be ready for use. Other minor improvements are being made upon the church property, and in the meantime the dining hall is being used for services.

Carlyle, the fifteen-year-old son of Brother and Sister W. E. Alldread, was seriously ill for several days a few weeks ago, suffering with pleural infusion, but we are glad to report he is better and able to attend school.

Sister Helen Clute underwent a major operation about six weeks ago and is just getting able to sit up for a few moments at a time. This is the third serious operation Sister Clute has undergone in less than eight months.

The one-day meeting held at Boyer City, September 18, was not so well attended as it might have been, but those attending enjoyed all the services. Social service was conducted at 9 a. m. At eleven Elder E. N. Burt delivered an impressive address relative to the centennial. During this service a junior church was conducted in the basement. A picnic dinner was held in the dining hall for visiting Saints and branch members. At 2 p. m. Elder A. E. Starks, of Central Lake, delivered a sermon on the topic "Our reasonable service." At 3.15 p. m. Elder H. C. McKinnon, of East Jordan and Elder Elmer Parks, of Gaylord, were in charge of a Park of the Pines reunion (1927) experience meeting and called on several to relate what they "got out" of the reunion. The responses, as would be expected, were varied and interesting. The music seemed to make the greatest appeal; the lessons, various sports, cooperation of all attending, new ideas to convey to home branches, and many other features being also enjoyed. At 7.30 in the evening Elder H. C. McKinnon occupied the pulpit and with an earnest discourse brought to a close the meetings of the day.

Brother and Sister J. A. Hartnell spent several weeks this summer visiting relatives in Detroit and near London, Ontario. They were accompanied by their two younger children, Bernard and Eloise.

Sister Ella Clute, who was employed in Detroit for several months, returned home a few weeks ago and is conducting the dry goods store owned by William Nulph. We are glad to have our young sister with us again.

The women of the branch recently gave a public dinner, and proceeds from this effort are to be applied to the payment upon the new furnace.

Park of the Pines presents a very neat appearance now. The trees have been trimmed, stones removed, and other improvements wrought. Brother Allread deserves much of the praise for the neat appearance of the grounds, for he spent many hours during his stay there last summer in "cleaning up."

Sister Emma McNally is supervising the organization of a class of Blue Birds, and the little girls are busy learning their pledges in order that they may be full-fledged Blue Birds. About ten will comprise this class. Sister McNally has had many years' experience with small children in a Sunday school class and truly has the tact of supervising such a group. Sister Ada Allread is monitor of the Orioles. Sister Ivah Hutton is supervisor of young women's department and hopes to organize a class of Temple Builders in the near future.

Sister Verna Hartnell was elected supervisor of the Department of Women of the Northern Michigan District and is using the columns of the church paper as a means of getting in touch with the several local leaders throughout the district. Write her at Boyne City, Michigan. She hopes to visit each branch local of the department in the coming year.

At the time of the closing of this letter, we are enjoying our first snowstorm of the season in this vicinity.

Fargo, North Dakota

1423 First Avenue, South, the Bungalow Church

Fargo Saints are wearing pleasant smiles, hopeful in the gospel, while the ground is slowly but surely being covered with a white blanket of snow, and once more the North Dakota winter has arrived. These winter breezes make the sisters ambitious to put on a food sale. November 19 is the date determined.

The members of the Department of Women have decided to study the diet book each week for the remainder of the year. They recently enjoyed a social meeting at Sister John Konietzka's, and dainty refreshments were served.

Sister Sophia Fetting, of Borup, Minnesota, was a welcome visitor at sacramental meeting Sunday, November 6. Elder Thomas Leitch was in charge.

It seems Fargo holds an attraction for Saints who scatter here and there. Ofttimes they wander back to the flesh pots of Fargo, as did Sister C. M. Brown, and daughters Elsie and Bernice, and Sisters Ferne, Elizabeth, and Ava Shackow, who some time ago went to Independence, Missouri, but being unable to get sufficient employment decided to return to the old home town. They say they are firmer in the faith than ever and hope in the future to return to Independence to make their permanent home.

A change has been made in our seven o'clock service. Instead of the adult Bible study, it has been decided to have a song service for half an hour. Mr. Worth Couey has promised to lead in singing. Then we study the Book of Mormon for half an hour. This book seems dearer to the hearts of Saints than ever before, and new light comes as its pages are perused.

A Sunday-school teachers' meeting was held at the home of Sister A. H. Thompson, superintendent, Tuesday evening. Plans were talked over, and it was decided to meet once a month hereafter. Sister Thompson served delicious refreshments to help revive the teachers' spirits.

Thanksgiving and Christmas programs are being arranged for the Sunday school.

Brother William Shackow, who has been very ill, is slowly recovering.

A Halloween party was enjoyed by the wee ones at the home of Sister John Konietzka Saturday evening, October 29, and to help celebrate the birthdays of Marvin and Deanie Konietzka. Ice cream, cake, and apples were served.

Prayer meetings are being held and enjoyed at the homes of the Saints each Wednesday evening. While Elder Swen Swenson was with us, a prayer meeting was held at Sister Worth Couey's home, which Brother Swenson pronounced one hundred per cent. Why? Because nearly everyone present took part. The good Spirit was felt and enjoyed as it always will be if Saints do their part.

Brother and Sister Frank Tucker, of Deer Creek, Minnesota, pleasantly surprised the Saints of Fargo on a Sunday not long ago, and Brother Tucker gave an interesting and encouraging talk. He read from 2 Samuel 6, Doctrine and Covenants 34:6, and Nehemiah 12:43.

Brother Eber Thompson, of Canada, is visiting his mother, Sister Barbara Thompson, of Clifford, North Dakota. He assisted her in her sale of household goods Saturday, October 22.

Sister Lude Peterson, of Dunseith, returned from Minneapolis Sunday, November 6, accompanied by her daughter, Emma. They are now visiting Sister Minnie Peterson, of this place.

Pastor Thomas Leitch has of late been reviving the Saints' faith with several good sermons. Sunday evening, November 6, he read from Nephi 3 of the wonderful vision of the tree, representing the love of God, etc. This meeting was held at the home of Brother John Rotzien.

Elder Swen Swenson has been a welcome guest among the Saints and preached some good spiritual sermons. A few of the thoughts left are: Charity started in the heavens with God. If you have faith and charity, you go right along. Do not let anything upset you. Sometimes through trials we lose faith, hope, and charity. If we keep the pure love of God in our hearts, we shall make it. Some say "meetings are too dry." Why? Because they do not take a part and have no interest; they are not spiritually inclined. A condition of mind which leaves no place for a desire to attend Sunday school and church soon comes when one is taken up with worldly things. When we feel how little we are, we will not find fault with others. We must not forget our mission, nor lose courage, but endeavor to do a little better each day. There is always a chance to improve even if one is the best of men. Jesus was a loving man; he did not think of himself. We should learn to be like him, think of the poor, sick, lonely, etc. We must look out for the good of others, save the children, encourage attendance at Sunday school—the nursery of the church. If one destroys the nursery, no trees are set out. It is our work to save people for the church, and we must meet the children of men with love. After members of the church have been labored with in love, prayers, tears, and all efforts of kindness, then, as a last resort, they may be cut off. If treated kindly, people will repent. The gospel is a beautiful pearl, and we must never lose it.

Elder Swenson seems especially blessed this year. He left for Audubon and other points in Minnesota, expecting to baptize some candidates at Frazee.

Elder Thomas Leitch recently spent Sunday with Saints at Straubsville. He preached to them in his kindly way while there.

In this age there seems to be a universal cry, What shall we do for our youth? This is indeed the real problem—to keep them religiously inclined in the busy whirl of life. And if we do not do that, what will the next generation be? Its children are the most precious raw material of the nation. The young want something constructive to do. They should be encouraged to read good literature, read for a purpose, and be able, like the diamond cutter, to take out the rough and retain for their own the best. Good music is uplifting; poor music is degrading. Music and reading have an effect upon our lives. Let us speak a word of courage to the young, and be not always criticizing. The words of the song: "Speak gently to the young, for they will have enough to bear," is a thought to keep in mind. Do not take the joy out of their lives but always encourage; give a helping hand and through kindness gently lead the young to the heavenly goal. What greater joy is there than to save the souls of our young? We must not only consider our own children but all children with whom we come in contact, and by this means let our lights shine in the little corner where we are. We all have an influence. Let us be more zealous and prayerful and raise the standard of our faith in God who is merciful, loving, and kind.

As Thanksgiving time draws near, let us show our thankfulness, not only by prayer, but by sharing with others. 'Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye do it unto me.'

Saint Louis, Missouri

From the Weekly Bulletin

The special services closed last Sunday night. All who were able to attend were benefited by the exposition of the church's position regarding doctrines, ethics, and ideals, by Brother Garver. We are sure our brother's visit was appreciated by all. While comparatively a stranger when he came, to most of the congregation he was well esteemed when he said "Farewell." We thank him for the splendid way in which he responded to our need and appreciate the way in which he performed his task.

We extend sincere thanks to all who helped to make these meetings a success. The several committees, Brother E. C. Bell and the friends in the church and others whose contributions in the ministry of music delighted us on all occasions, and the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Crabtree with whom Brother Garver made his home while among us, especially are in mind.

The ladies' aid came to our rescue again in sponsoring a very well prepared supper which was daintily served on Thursday, October 20. We have not learned of the financial success as yet. Will report later.

Mrs. Minshall was taken home from the hospital last Sunday, and we rejoice in her recovery. Mrs. Ahalt, who is in the same hospital, is making rapid recovery and feels very happy in the blessing she has received.

Brother Wilson, who resides at 1632 Park Avenue with his wife and family, is very ill and has been confined to his bed for five weeks. This family came to this city from West Virginia some time ago. Here is a case which should have the consideration of any able to help. Mrs. Wilson is trying to meet the situation by going out to work each day.

Elder Quick Holds Meetings at Weir, Kansas

November 9.—Elder Lee Quick closed two weeks of meetings at Weir Sunday night, with good interest maintained throughout that time. A chart showing the Lord's vineyard was used as the basis of a part of his sermons, and several nonmembers seemed much interested.

After closing the meeting, Brother Quick was called back the following week to baptize a woman of middle age who has been studying our work for some time and who after hearing the gospel plan made plain was fully convinced of her need. The small daughter of Brother and Sister Mason was baptized also. We felt others were very near the kingdom, but hesitating.

The Saints are strengthened as a result of these meetings, and the practical thoughts given expression in Brother Quick's talks at meetings of the Department of Women were worthy the endeavor to put them into practice.

The best wishes of all go with him in his further labors for the cause of the Master.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

*Central Church, 307 West Pierce Street
Belmont Mission, 1618 Avenue B
Riverside Mission, 3100 Avenue C*

The choirs, both adult and junior, are busily engaged in their work of perfecting themselves. A compliment was paid them last Sunday by Brother Gardner, general publicity agent, that should encourage them in what they have accomplished. He seemed to be overjoyed in what he had witnessed both during the afternoon and evening, and it seemed to inspire him to give us an excellent sermon.

Brother Gardner is still here to assist the young people in their campaign for the week's service to be held here by President F. M. McDowell from the 13th to the 20th. He has given us spiritual encouragement in all the services. Tonight a prayer meeting of all the branch is to be held at Central Church, with the special object in view of supplicating the Lord for his presence at the services to be held next week, and the younger Saints are making special preparation to be out in goodly number. We are looking forward in confidence to these meetings, believing they will stimulate all the branch and its members to renewed activity in a spiritual way.

The Sunday school is steadily moving forward, with a few added to the number of attendants. Officers are working with a will to solicit an increased attendance and an increased interest. The promotions in this branch were: In the Belmont Mission, 8 beginners to primary; 3 primaries to junior. In the Riverside Mission, 3 beginners to primary; 1 junior to intermediate. At Central Church, 12 beginners to primary; 5 primaries to junior; 2 juniors to intermediate; 11 intermediates to senior.

Riverside Mission has organized a Sunday school council, consisting of all the officers and teachers, with the adult class members, to which is referred all the problems of the Sunday school, and any advanced steps contemplated, of which a record is made, and informal actions had. They meet once a month at some of the Saints' homes, and have fifteen minutes recreational work, forty-five minutes of business, then light refreshments are served. This is promoting increased unity of effort.

Central Sunday school is having at the beginning of each session a short program, either of music, of readings, or a short play, to stimulate the young to greater interest. We hope for the best of results.

There was an assembly of the superintendents of all the Sunday schools in the district the 6th inst., first to visit the Central Sunday school; then a session for consultation was held at 2 p. m., information of the results of which is not at hand.

The Religio is having better attendance of late, and a better understanding is being had. It seemed that we were passing through a transitory period, and many did not know just where they were, or what to expect, but we trust that this experience is now past. The new class introduced of late has had an effect on the students of the Book of Mormon that was not encouraging, but there will come out of it some advanced conclusions, and we trust it will be helpful and healthful to the Religio as a whole. Last night the Bright Star Class met in social and business capacity, and all went from the gathering feeling well, or so they expressed themselves, and a few more were added to the Book of Mormon study. This class consists of both the study class members and social members, who meet as a rule once in two months in a like capacity to promote a better acquaintance and interest in each other. We have several people who are social members, not of the church. One custom we have is to take a flower or a bouquet to sick members, and the result of that is to find greater favor with God and the relatives of the sick, and it has done much good. The Pyla Class has its social on Thursday of this week. This is another of the older classes of the Religio, and is composed of those younger in years, but of mature minds. Their study most of the time has been the Book of Mormon, and I believe is today, out of which much of good has come and is coming. The one in charge of the departmental work is earnestly seeking the promotion of anything that will advance the welfare of the membership and better prepare them for service in the church.

The Women's Department met in its monthly social and business session on Thursday, the third, and reports from the different departments were very encouraging; in fact, your correspondent was present and saw in the reports nothing but that which was of encouragement, and the spirit in which the work was done was commendable. As I understood the reports of the cradle roll, there are about one hundred and forty now enrolled. These, I understand, are promoted into the beginner department of the Sunday school, and there was some question why it should not be a part of the Sunday school work proper, and so reported. However, the Women's Department and the Sunday school are working together and giving each other assistance.

Several members of the church have moved into the city in the last few years but never attend the services. It was not known that they were members of the church. Some have lapsed into unsaintlike activities, and others have gone into other churches without any of the officials of the branch knowing of it. There should be closer contact with all the members of a branch, where possible, and when they are moving, seek to inform the branch near to which they are moving so that they can be assisted to retain their faith. It is surprising that some of the members of the church do not understand their duties toward the church of which they are members, and either report or attend the meetings so that the busy officials may render to them such assistance as they may need, which all officials are desirous of doing to the extent of their time and ability.

Omaha, Nebraska

*Corner Thirty-Sixth and Burt
Telephone Harney 7954*

November 9.—Omaha's pastor is Elder J. L. Cooper. Telephone Walnut 3105.

We are going forward under the wise guidance of our pastor and his associates. Our field is large, and as a workman Brother Cooper puts in seven days a week at his labor.

Home-coming Sunday for this branch will be the 20th. We are expecting a time of much rejoicing, as the Saints gather for thanksgiving and to praise our blessed Lord for his many mercies to us.

District conference will be held at our branch the 26th and 27th of this month. We anticipate the presence of Saints from other parts of the district.

Last Sunday fathers and sons were appropriately honored by an address given by Brother C. T. Self.

Cupid has been busy here and has united the hearts and lives of the following young people, to whom we extend our blessings and best wishes: R. Francis Hall, son of Mrs. Lilly F. Hall, to Miss Lorena Kenyon, on April 16; this young couple graduated together in June from Technical

High School. Guy Allen chose Miss Betty Boardman as his bride. The wedding occurred in the church on October 9, Brother Cooper officiating. Merl B. Grover and Miss Genevieve Thiehoff were married at the bride's home June 28, Doctor H. A. Merchant conducting the service. Brother and Sister Grover reside in Breslau, Nebraska, where the groom is employed by the Burlington Railroad. Miss Helen Bryant and Mr. Robert Ferguson were married July 10 at the church. Elder Carl T. Self read the marriage lines, and the wedding was followed by a reception given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bryant.

The Blue Bird Band of the Department of Women is an active, happy group of girls, led by Sister Mary Grace Larson. Much genuine, intelligent guidance is displayed by this leader, and we hope for the same qualities in leaders soon to be selected for other groups. It is a privilege to work with material to be used in the upbuilding of God's kingdom on earth.

The Sunday school is very much alive and growing. Sister Rose Adams is at the helm. Recently an interesting and educational feature was offered by the intermediate department. One of the girls pictured a tree—the tree of spiritual life—on the blackboard. The roots of this tree were Faith, and Obedience to God's laws. The branches bore the following names: near the roots were School Work, the Fourth Commandment, Sunday School Work, and Obedience to Gospel Principles. On up the trunk the branches were called: Assisting in the Home; Giving General Service. Then there were Trial, Sorrow, and Sacrifice, and near the top were Strength, Understanding, Perseverance, and Personal Demonstration of God's Word. The very desirable fruits of this tree grew on the very topmost branches, and were Love, Charity, Virtue, Faith, Knowledge, Patience, Wisdom, Meekness, and Brotherly Love. The drawing was accompanied by a dialog between the teacher, Mrs. Mae Wellman, and the pupils, and showed these children's depth of study and the consecration of the teacher's efforts.

Recently the boys lost to the girls in an attendance contest, and as a result the girls exacted the forfeit from the boys. The intermediate group was treated to a taffy pull and wiener roast at the home of "Chuck" and Charles Russell, Friday evening, the 4th. The senior girls will be entertained in the woods at Bellevue tomorrow evening at a bean bake at the expense of the losers.

The grim harvester, Death, has been busy among us during the past weeks, taking one of the late additions to the kingdom, Brother Rufus Bishop, whose faith was bright and whose hope was clear. During the same week Mrs. Frank Taylor, daughter of old-time Latter Day Saints, Brother and Sister Frank Leach, was called, leaving her husband and infant son and aged parents. Within the past few days the entire branch was shocked at the sudden death of Brother Harry Fryxell, one of our accomplished musicians of the group, who had given ten years of service to the branch as pianist. Hands are empty and hearts sad in the home of Brother N. P. Nielsen at the passing of their invalid son George, age thirteen years, who had received the patient administration of his devoted parents at his bedside for the past five years. We sorrow with those who mourn.

The Religio Department is getting into the harness. With three classes studying the Book of Mormon and a varied program each Sunday night, we can account for the increase in attendance. Of course, this is the result of the splendid leadership of Superintendent Mildred Keairnes, and Assistant Maenard Hall. These young people are becoming a splendid support to the evening reaching service.

"Remember Cumorah" was given before a packed house, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather throughout the day and evening. Brother Maenard Hall took the part of Joseph Smith; C. N. Hollenbeck, the minister; Fay Rollet, the genial pastor from the South Side Branch, the historian; the patient and long-suffering part was taken by Brother

Harold Kirkpatrick and his mother, who directed throughout the work of preparation and final execution. Brother and Sister Edward Johnson, of DeKalb, Illinois, were appreciative witnesses of the pageant. Brother and Sister Johnson are old-time friends of the Coopers, and their week's stay and visit in Omaha with the Cooper family and Saints is a pleasant memory.

Red letter week for Omaha Branch was the return of the former pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister Whalley, now of Wichita, Kansas, for a few days' visit with Saints and friends in Omaha. Such rejoicing! Truly it is good to be a Saint in latter days. Our pastor would have been glad if the Whalleys could have remained and worked with the group in helping to "build up" the kingdom. Love and best wishes go with them to their present field of labor.

Elder B. M. Anderson and wife, who have been in Colorado and elsewhere for several weeks in the interest of Brother Anderson's health, have returned to us again, and we are glad to find Brother Anderson in old-time form.

President McDowell at Council Bluffs

If the early eight o'clock prayer meeting Sunday morning was any indication of the devotion of the young people here, it meant that there are about two hundred Council Bluffs young people pledged to carry on the work of this church, and to give their very best to accomplish it. Earnest expressions of deep devotion to clean living and consecrated service made this prayer service of unusual significance to Brother George Beaty, the pastor, and to the young people who participated.

The eleven o'clock service, in charge of Bishop Clarence Skinner, was also one of participation. About ten young people told, simply and sincerely, how they felt about the work of preparation for the meetings; they spoke of their unbounded faith in God, and loyally pledged their support to the unending tasks that must be done in the follow-up work at the close of the meetings.

President F. M. McDowell arrived Sunday morning and will preach each night. Both Riverside and Belmont missions closed Sunday night, and all met at the Central Church. Long before the opening hour the church was crowded to capacity, and many who could not be seated stood during the entire service. Many more were turned away, not even standing room being available. For several days prior to the opening service, the young people have been busy with well-organized work, and by personal and telephone calls they have extended to all the invitation of the branch to attend the meetings. As a result, the N. S. R. (no standing room) sign was posted early on the first evening.

The four hundred or more who were present sang the old-time songs of Zion with the Spirit and with understanding, under the inspirational leadership of Sister Helen Anderson. Brother L. M. Spence, chairman of the young people's organization, offered the opening prayer.

President McDowell preached for forty minutes with unusual liberty, outlining the work for the week, and voicing his belief in the youth of the church; their ability and willingness to direct their energy and talents to establish the kingdom of God. He closed his sermon with the appeal of the call of Christ, and just as he closed, Sister Verlie Phoney began to sing the old familiar song, "Softly and tenderly Jesus is calling." It was a prayer. The tense audience followed every word of the appeal so beautifully sung.

An unusual feature, strengthening the bonds of fraternity with other branches of the church, was the eleven telegrams and seven letters received during the day. Many branches at a distance sent greetings and pledged support to the young people of Council Bluffs in their meetings, and also to President McDowell as the speaker.

Messages were received from the following: Moline, Illinois (two); Flint, Michigan (two); Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Minneapolis, Minnesota; Portland, Oregon; Buffalo, New York; Columbus, Ohio (two); Grand Rapids, Michigan; Boston, Massachusetts; Cameron, Missouri; Des Moines, Iowa; Sioux City, Iowa; Independence, Missouri.

Graceland College sent a letter with seventy-one signatures affixed, which, when read, gave a real thrill to the evening service.

The young people greatly appreciate the good wishes and support evidenced by the telegrams and letters. They will continue their personal work throughout the week. P. M.

Independence

Stone Church

The young people's eight o'clock Sunday morning prayer meeting was in charge of Elder E. R. Williams, recently of Burlington, Iowa, and Deacon George Gates. The meeting was a season of calm instruction and helpful peace, and the audience of young people profited by the testimonies and prayers of their brothers and sisters.

Jesus as the revelation of God and faith as the keynote of his life formed the central theme of the sermon by Apostle F. Henry Edwards at the Stone Church Sunday morning. No revelation is complete except it shall be translated from words into life, become flesh among men—such a revelation of God to man was Jesus, says Apostle Edwards. Faith as the keynote of Jesus' life was not merely part of a creed, but was a way of living.

The Stone Church choir, under the direction of Mrs. George H. Hulmes, sang the anthem, "The sun shall be no more thy light," by Woodward. Accompaniment was played by George Miller, pianist, and Robert Miller, organist, the latter also playing an organ prelude and the offertory. The service was broadcast over K L D S.

Apostle Edwards continued, in summary: Faith is an abiding confidence in God because of the revelation through his Son who trusted God enough to launch out his whole life upon that trust. The essential greatness, the quality of the life of Jesus, lies in the fact that he was always in touch with God. Because of this continuous fellowship with his Father, he was able to minister so fully to the needs of man.

The faith of Jesus was more than belief in faith; it was having faith. It was a way of life, responsive to the highest, the best, and the noblest he knew—centered in God. Faith to him meant action, a faith that changed life, a faith in things spiritual and eternal rather than in things material and transient.

There is need today for such a faith. Do you have faith? The man who has faith acts faithfully; he seeks the things of the kingdom; he puts first things first; he not only believes in the building of Zion, but gives his life to build Zion; he lives in that way which he says he has faith will triumph. He identifies himself with things which are eternal, and is willing to give his life that these beautiful things shall come.

If you have faith, thrust out your lives upon these things; and they shall triumph. Then shall the transient, unlovely things pass away before the transforming power of faith translated into life.

Elders J. M. Terry, William Self, and Daniel Tucker presided over the Sunday afternoon prayer meeting beginning at 2.30. At this hour a splendid service was enjoyed by one hundred and fifty Saints, the Holy Spirit prevailing.

Evening Services

Each Sunday evening following the lesson period of the Department of Recreation and Expression session, the brief program is a special attraction. A week ago Sunday evening, a reading "The school-teacher," was given by Blaine Bender. Little Sybil Barrett read "The girl that lives next door," and Eunice Porter sang "The close of the twilight hour." She was accompanied by Mrs. Lillian Pope Cross, and violin obbligato was by James McPherson.

On Sunday evening, the 13th, there was a cornet solo by Layard Smith, an excellent reading by Lyda Budd Robertson, and a vocal solo by Miss Grace Edwards.

Song service at half past seven Sunday evening was conducted by Brother Francis Holm, Robert Miller at the piano and Miss Eva Voelpel at the organ. The preaching service was begun with the singing of "Praise ye the Lord"; invocation by Elder E. R. Williams; organ offertory by Miss Voelpel; soprano solo by Margaret Johnson Blaine, accompanied by Robert Miller.

Bishop B. J. Scott, the evening's speaker, was announced by Elder D. O. Cato, and in his discourse followed the theme of obedience to the requirements of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the necessity of an awareness upon our part of the needs and signs of the time. The first few verses of Hebrews 2 were read, and in a very applicable way the story of Abraham's plea to God to save Sodom, God's promise, the wickedness of the city, the visit of the angels, the destruction of the city, and the flight of Lot and his family were brought in. "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" was the question Paul asked of the Hebrews, and repeated by Elder Scott to the Saints of latter days. Emphasis was placed by the speaker upon his belief that now we are filling out another dispensation of the fullness of times; this is the latter part of the latter-day dispensation, and the Gentile time is closing; that in this day God's word is to be fulfilled, and he will manifest himself in power greater than ever before in the history of man. The Saints were warned that Satan and his hosts are seeking more energetically than ever before to overthrow the work of God's people and to destroy the light, and that faith, obedience, and consecration are the virtues which will enable the workers to finally triumph. Many scriptural references were given supporting the exigency of obedience to the doctrine of Christ, unity in the work of the redemption of Zion, and complete observance of the spiritual and temporal law.

"America's enduring power for service," giving the congregation a better idea of the size, the advantages, and the resources of the United States in comparison with the size, advantages, and resources of other countries of the world, was the first film shown upon the screen. "The rescue of Lot," was the biblical reel.

Young People Meet

Friday evening, November 4, the young people of Zion with the young people's councils of thirteen and of forty-four met together at the Stone Church in charge of Elder John F. Sheehy. Beginning at eight o'clock, a much-appreciated musical program was rendered. The Chrisman High School Boys' Quartet, the K L D S Ladies' Quartet, members of the Chrisman Orchestra, and Herman Lukens, soloist, contributed to the enjoyment of the evening, and there was community singing led by Miss Marcine Smith. Following the program came the business of the meeting, the young people being divided into their home districts and instructed to select from their number a committee. The duty of these chosen committees is to select young people suitable for nomination for office on the council of thirteen. On the first Friday of December another meeting will be held to elect representatives for the councils from the nominations of the committees or from individuals. It is hoped that universal interest in this business will be manifested by the young people and that a large crowd will join to sustain the two councils in their work for the coming year.

Interesting Personals

The whereabouts of the members of the higher quorums of the church will no doubt be of interest to a large number of Saints. These elders and bishops are scattered near and far, and engaged in an extensive program of promulgating the gospel. Last Saturday night President Frederick M. Smith left Kansas City bound for Chicago, where he spent Sunday. This week he is in the East and plans by Friday to be in Columbus, Ohio. Council Bluffs is the scene of a series of meetings being conducted by President F. M. McDowell. Unless his plans are changed, these meetings are to continue through Sunday, November 20.

Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael started Friday, November 11, to Canada, and is now in London, Ontario, where he will remain for ten days.

Apostle Roy Budd is in the South. Mobile, Alabama, is now the scene of his activities, but his plans are to go farther south and into Florida District as far as Miami. Brother Clyde F. Ellis is in Brooklyn, New York, but is to leave for Philadelphia on the 21st. D. T. Williams during this week is conducting a series of young people's meetings at Central Branch, Kansas City, Missouri. His efforts are being attended by great interest, evidenced in the large crowds of young hearers. Apostles McConley and Gillen are in the West, the latter particularly laboring in Southern California. Saint Joseph, Missouri, has claimed Elder Garver's attention for the past few days, and Brother Gleazer is engaged in meetings in the vicinity of Little Rock, Arkansas. Brother Hanson is in England.

Sister Ida Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, spoke on the subject of child welfare to the Parent Teacher Association at Noland School, Independence, this afternoon.

The family of William Ecclestone is delighted with the news received from England that the son, William A. Ecclestone, sailed from Liverpool for New York November 11 on the Regina, and is expected to arrive in Independence about November 25. Brother Ecclestone is a mechanical engineer by profession. He will likely remain permanently in America.

Second Church

Second Church Saints have enjoyed the services of the past two Sundays. On November 6 the Sunday school had good attendance and an interesting session. At the communion service D. A. Whiting was in charge. The good Spirit was present, and the Saints rejoiced. Four of our brothers were admonished to prepare for added responsibility. At this meeting the little daughter of Brother and Sister Moretina was blessed. The Religio had a larger attendance and greater interest than previously. Local talent rendered a good program, and in the evening Brother Heman Davis instructed us, being blessed in his effort.

During this day mention was made of a special effort to raise money to cancel our indebtedness. A "dollar day" was to be observed. A class of recently promoted intermediate girls went to work and during the week made and sold candy, and on Saturday held a pie sale, raising ten dollars and fifty cents to apply on the debt. They set the Saints of the district a worthy example. As a class name they have selected Willing Workers.

There were nearly thirty in attendance at the eight o'clock prayer meeting November 13, and it was a good, active time of prayer and testimony.

The Willing Worker Class had charge of the Sunday school session and rendered an appreciated program.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood addressed us on our financial standing at the eleven o'clock hour, and preceding the narration of several rather touching events by Pastor Dillee. An aged couple who left during the week gave their dollars to the pastor and deacon to be placed in the plate. Two small boys who were not staying to church came and handed their offering to the pastor before they went home, and some of the grade school boys who earn their money gave a dollar each. The morning collection was fifty-five dollars. Surely God will accept such service.

At 1.30 the youngest son of Brother J. E. Andes was baptized, also Mr. Robert Hann and his grown daughter. These were confirmed at the prayer meeting in the afternoon.

The priesthood held a very interesting session beginning at 3.30, but decided to temporarily discontinue these meetings in order that they may attend the classes at the Campus.

More than two hundred attended the Religio to hear the splendid program presented by Brother T. J. Watkins using his automatic orthophonic Victrola. Collection was fifteen dollars and eleven cents.

At the evening service Elder C. Ed. Miller gave us an instructive illustrated lecture on the Islands. We enjoyed the narrative of some of his experiences there.

Collections during the day netted Second Church almost a hundred dollars, and the Saints hope soon to be able to wipe out the old debt, to pay as they go.

Walnut Park

A little delay in getting the new correspondent to work after the resignation of the old one prevented a satisfactory write-up of the good services on November 13. Elder C. K. Green preached at eleven o'clock and Elder J. M. Terry at 7.30, both sermons being highly spoken of.

Our girls' chorus, forty in number, under Margaret Gard, assisted in services at Lees Summit Sunday evening, going there by bus. This is a new venture, and the chorus felt happy over its first effort in missionary work.

Walnut Park extends a hearty invitation to all young people to spend Sunday, November 27, with the young people at Walnut Park Church, corner Pearl and Alton Streets. This splendid program is promised you: 8.00 a. m., prayer service. 9.30 a. m., music by Walnut Park Orchestra, Orlando Nace, conductor, assisted by Lois J. Burnett, violinist, of Leavenworth, Kansas, and Margaret Gard, contralto. 10.00 a. m., address by Doctor T. B. Homan, subject: "The idealism and realism of forgetting." 10.45 a. m., music by orchestra and girls' chorus of fifty voices. 11.00 a. m., address by Doctor F. M. McDowell, subject: "The way of Christ." 6.00 p. m., Department of Recreation and Expression. Special program, arranged by Earl J. Cox. 7.45 p. m., music by Young People's Chorus. 8.00 p. m., address by Doctor F. M. McDowell.

Liberty Street

On Sunday morning Liberty Street Saints were favored with a violin solo by Mr. David Stewart.

Brother Heman H. Davis was speaker at the morning hour, his text being taken from the first chapter of Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

The intermediate class furnished the program for the Religio, which consisted of a piano solo by Martha Ruth Westwood; a short play "Behind the scene," presented by Delores Chadwick, Dorothy Peek, Florence Peek, Elva Curtis, and Glenn Davis; a piano solo by Dorothy Pettibone; a piano solo by Mrs. Leona Robinson, and a vocal solo by Anthony Robinson.

Elder A. R. White occupied the pulpit at the evening service. His text was "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?"—Romans 6:16.

Enoch Hill

Evangelist Frederick A. Smith is still engaged at Enoch Hill church, this being the second week of a series of sermons on doctrinal subjects. Elder Joseph Luff substituted for Brother Smith a few evenings of last week, while he was absent from the city. These sermons with the old-time missionary and doctrinal flavor are drawing large crowds and holding the interest of the people. Many of the sermons we deem of such interest and value as to preserve in printed form, and Zion's Ensign will contain a number of them within the next few months. Pastor W. J. Brewer is well pleased with these meetings. Saints from various parts of the city are visiting them.

On last Saturday, November 12, occurred the marriage of one of our popular young church workers, Sister Ann Russel Watts, to Thomas D. Crick, in the office of Bishop G. W. Eastwood. Brother Eastwood performed the ceremony, Sister Eastwood and Miss Opal Hill acting as witnesses. The young couple are at home with Mr. Crick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Crick, Jones and Delaware Streets, the groom being owner of the People's Laundry, Cottage and Pacific Streets.

Spring Branch

The various services of the week draw the usual numbers in attendance. An especially good prayer service was had last Wednesday evening, the time being fully occupied. About thirty persons were present. Brothers Snively and Mabbott were in charge.

Superintendent of Sunday school, Alma Tankard, reported thirty-six perfect classes for the month of October. The average total attendance for that month was about ninety-seven.

As a prelude to the eleven o'clock service, Sister Katherine Haberlein played "A sonata to the moon," and a mixed quartet sang "The sinner and the song." Brother Hancock occupied the pulpit, outlining the duties of the priesthood.

At 2.30 the local priesthood met for conference and to plan activities for the future.

The new officers of the Religio are taking hold of their work, and that branch of the work is progressing.

Brother W. F. Smith occupied in the evening, employing the gathering by sacrifice as a central thought.

The Crescent Chapter of Temple Builders of Spring Branch, not to be outdone by their older sisters of the Department of Women, will serve a real old-fashioned southern dinner at the Stone Church dining hall this Thursday evening, from 5.30 to 8.30. We do not know for sure what is to be served, but the name of the meal suggests to us "apple sass," "co'n pone," and "hawg." We are assured that it will be good. Let's all find out.

Gudgell Park

Sunday school Sunday morning was in charge of Superintendent John Inman. A number of Gudgell Park members are attending classes at the Stone Church, and this accounts for the absence of some familiar faces. However, Sunday school attendance is very good, being above the average.

Bishop B. J. Scott was speaker at eleven o'clock. All those who have heard Brother Scott preach will know that we received a spiritual feast in due season. Brother W. E. Atwell, in company with a Lamanite brother, was with us, and several visitors from other branches also enjoyed the good sermon of Brother Scott.

The sisters of this district will hold a bake sale in Brother B. C. Harder's store on Main Street, also a bazaar in Brother P. A. Sherman's furniture store on Main, Saturday, November 19. Money thus raised by them is to be applied to paying off Gudgell Park building debt. Sister Roy Sherman is chairman of the committee in charge of this work. Please remember the date, November 19.

Thanksgiving Day will be observed in this district with an eight o'clock prayer service, after which the brothers clad in overalls and jackets will busy themselves with some very necessary work upon the building, and the sisters in bungalow aprons will quilt until time to serve dinner. It is planned that our principal Thanksgiving meal—dinner—will be brought to the church in baskets and shared by all. We want on this day to pray together, work together, eat together, and play together—one big family.

Englewood Gospel Meetings

Elder John W. Peterson will conduct a missionary effort at Englewood church, the opening sermon to be delivered on Sunday evening, November 20. With such an experienced and able exponent of the gospel philosophy, the Englewood Saints should be able to gain the interest of many of their neighbors and friends.

A Correction

Under the caption, "First Columbus Branch celebrates eleventh anniversary," appearing in SAINTS' HERALD for November 2 and found on page 1286, second column, in the third paragraph from the end of the article, the name "G. W. Stewart, of Dayton," should be "G. W. Stephens, of Dayton."

Apostle D. T. Williams in Kansas City

Sunday, November 13, saw the opening of a series of meetings for the young Saints of Kansas City Stake. Apostle D. T. Williams is the speaker, and the meetings are being conducted in Central Branch, located at Thirtieth and Tracy. For seven nights this series is to continue, closing Sunday, November 20.

The commodious auditorium of Central Church was taxed on the opening night as early as half past seven, and interested listeners stood throughout the evening. Apostle Williams, known to the church as a successful leader of young people's meetings, spoke upon the theme, "If we were God."

With Monday night came threatening November weather and rain, but the attendance was not appreciably lessened, and an increased number of young people profited from the subject, "The God we worship." Topics for the remaining nights are Tuesday, "A progressive religion"; Wednesday, "A progressive church"; Thursday, "Christ the great revolutionist"; Friday, "How to escape temptation"; Sunday, "The challenge of the Christ 1927."

Assisting Elder Williams and directing the music is Elder John F. Sheehy. In the song service preceding the sermon, this able conductor is getting a ready response in the singing of favorite Latter Day Saint hymns. Special music is being rendered in turn by representatives of the various Kansas City branches.

In comparing this with a statement given to the church by the Lord in our day and time, practically the same thoughts are presented: "Woe unto you rich men that will not give your substance to the poor; for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of my visitation and of my judgment and of my indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!"—Doctrine and Covenants 56: 5. Certainly a severe pronouncement against those who will make riches their God; who think only of their worldly possessions and the selfish purpose they will serve in their lives, as a result of which their eyes are blinded to the happiness which awaits those who through services could assist in laying the foundation of Zion as expressed in Doctrine and Covenants 58: 3, wherein the Saints are advised relative to the preparation for coming to Zion: "Firstly the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble; and after that cometh the day of my power; then shall the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the deaf, come in unto the marriage of the Lamb, and partake of the supper of the Lord, prepared for the great day to come. Behold, I, the Lord, have spoken it." What an opportunity for those who have the means to become instrumental in laying the foundations of Zion! "A consummation devoutly to be wished." Surely a glorious heritage worthy of the best efforts of all.

Open Your Homes to the Children

Can you think of anything so pitiful as to be a little child without a home. Look back over your own childhood experience and recall what home and mother meant to you.

The next most pitiful thing is a home without a child—where the halls do not resound with the echo of childish feet and laughter.

We have seven little children that are needing homes, and somewhere there are seven homes that need the touch of a child's hand before they can be called real homes.

Because of State laws, dependent children must be placed in homes within the State of which they are residents, unless special arrangements are made with the State Board of Children's Guardians of the State of which the child is a resident, and the State wherein those reside that are asking for the custody of the child. Many of the States require bonds to be deposited with them before a dependent child can be brought into one State from another.

We appeal to the Saints of Iowa to open your hearts and homes to the following children: A boy of eleven years, a boy of four years, and a girl eight years of age.

We appeal to the Saints of Ohio to take into their homes the following children: A boy of thirteen, and a boy nine years of age; a girl of eleven, and a girl of four.

We will be glad to receive applications from Saints living in other States who can make a home for a child. Send applications to the Social Service Bureau, Box 255, Independence, Missouri.

Notice, Saints of Southeastern Illinois

On account of brothers of the Quorum of Twelve not being able to be with us until the second week in December, our district conference will be postponed until the second week in December, the 9th, 10th, and 11th. All prepare to come to Centralia, Illinois, on the above mentioned dates. R. L. Fulk, L. C. Moore, and J. M. Henson.

Two-Day Meeting

There will be a two-day meeting at Waterloo, Iowa, beginning at 9 a. m. on Saturday, November 19, and continuing over Sunday. Church is located at 405 Parker Street. E. R. Davis, district president.

Akron, Ohio, Annual Home-Coming

The annual home-coming or rally day will be held on Saturday and Sunday, November 19 and 20, at Akron Branch, 77 West Crosier Street, and all Kirtland District Saints are cordially invited to attend.

Conference Notices

Southeastern Illinois district conference will convene at Centralia, Illinois, December 2, 3, and 4. We expect a good representation from the district and a good conference. Everyone who possibly can should come. Important business will be under consideration, district officers elected, the ordination of men to the priesthood, and other things of vital interest. Myrtie Choate, district secretary, Marion, Illinois.

Our Departed Ones

SIMMONS.—Alice Simmons was born July 20, 1857, at Gatesville, Texas. Married S. W. Simmons January 7, 1877, at Temple, Texas, and to them were born four sons and four daughters. She obeyed the latter-day gospel July 22, 1885, at Temple, being baptized by I. N. Roberts. She was a faithful Saint, and no sweeter character ever lived. She loved the Lord and his church, and her last days were spent in reading the church papers. Several years ago two of her daughters, Dora Ollie Simmons and Mrs. Ida Morgan, passed on to the next world. Sister Simmons was ready and waiting to go at any time the Lord called her. She was afflicted here but never murmured. Her passing occurred at Holdenville, Oklahoma, October 13, 1927. Left are her husband, S. W. Simmons; her children: Mrs. W. O. Perkins, of Holdenville; W. H. Simmons, Holdenville; S. W. jr., Fort Cobb, Oklahoma; Mrs. J. H. Hutchison, Healdton, Oklahoma; J. K., of Holdenville, and Floyd, Lima, Oklahoma; two brothers, Sol and Jim Childers, of Fort Cobb, and a host of relatives and friends. Funeral services at the Latter Day Saint Church in Holdenville, Saturday, October 15, conducted by Elder Ed. Dillon, and interment was in Holdenville Cemetery.

GAMET.—Grace Pearle Auten, daughter of John and Pauline Auten, was born at Inman, Nebraska, October 4, 1887. Spent her childhood and youth in the vicinity of Inman. October 22, 1906, she was married to David M. Gamet, a son of the widely known Elder Levi Gamet. To them have been born fifteen children, ten of whom remain to mourn the loss of a faithful and devoted mother. She also leaves, besides her husband and numerous other relatives and friends, two brothers and three sisters. Sister Gamet has been for a number of years a faithful member of the church. She will be sadly missed. Her death occurred at her home in Tecumseh, Nebraska, October 21, 1927. Funeral from the residence October 24, sermon by Elder E. F. Robertson, Elders Charles J. Smith and W. E. Shakespeare assisting.

M'CUNE.—Louise Elizabeth McCune was born June 15, 1846, in Dorsetshire, England. Died October 7, 1927, at Poplar Bluff, Missouri. She united with the church at Braidwood, Illinois, early in the 70's and retained her faith till the end, although isolated from church privileges for the past twenty years. Her last illness was of two weeks' duration. The funeral services were conducted by Reverend Westbrook, of the Baptist faith, who paid her a glowing tribute for her faith. Left to mourn this visitation are three children: F. T. Mussell, Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. Pearl Houser, Longmont, Colorado, and Charles Mussell, with whom she made her home; also seventeen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

BURTON.—Amelia Mollie Burton was born July 21, 1849, at Oldenburg, Germany. With her parents she came to America in her infancy. Has lived in Jackson County, Missouri, since 1879. From the Lutheran Church she came to unite with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints fourteen years ago, being baptized by John Zahnd, and at once became an active worker in leading others to the marvelous light. She died October 31, 1927, leaving three children: Mrs. Addie A. Ware, Nora E. Togle, and Walter M. Burton; one brother, Charles Weaver; eighteen grandchildren, and nineteen great-grandchildren. The funeral service was held November 1 in Independence. Music was rendered by Grace Nace, May Namur, and C. L. Wheaton, Mrs. A. S. Wheaton at the piano. Sermon by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment in Mount Washington Cemetery.

ZIEGENHORN.—Anna Guingrich, daughter of John and Susan Guingrich, was born February 7, 1868, at Tremont, in Tazwell County, Illinois, and departed this life at her home in Independence, Missouri, October 30, 1927. In March, 1873, she moved with her parents to East Lynn, Iroquois County, Illinois. Here she was united in marriage to Henry C. Ziegenhorn, February 8, 1886. In 1904 they moved to Mercer County, Illinois, where her husband passed away January 15, 1921. Three years later she moved to Independence, which was her home until her death. She was the mother of thirteen children, all of whom survive her: Mrs. Clara Constance, of Cameron, Missouri; Raymond A. Alwin E., Harry L., and Charles G., all of Fisher, Arkansas; Monroe C., Emery E., and Herbert C., of Joy, Illinois; Mrs. Beulah Brunson, H. Forrest, Truman B., Velma A., and Florence S., of Independence. On December 18, 1910, she united with the church, and her faith in her Redeemer was great. She sought not place or position, but spent her days in ministering to the poor, the obscure, and the needy. Surviving are her children, twenty-five grandchildren, and the following brothers and sisters: Joseph P. Guingrich, Gridley, Illinois; Benjamin F., Garrison, Iowa; John L. Hoopston, Illinois; William M., Francesville, Indiana; Mrs. Sadie Zeigenhorn and Mrs. Ada Frank, of Claytonville, Illinois. Funeral was conducted in Walnut Park Church November 2, the service being in charge of E. A. Curtis. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

BACON.—Leslie Allen Bacon was born July 14, 1881, at Blenheim, Ontario. He was baptized by his father, the late Elder Samuel H. Bacon, and remained a steadfast member until his death. United in marriage to Bertha A. Kelley, at Chatham, Ontario, and to them were born four children: Russell, Mildred, Margaret, and Paul. For the past thirteen years he has resided in Flint, Michigan, acting as foreman of the freight departments on the D. U. Railroad. He passed away October 27, 1927, at his home in Flint. Funeral sermon by Elder Welch at No. 3 Church, was largely attended by relatives and friends. Left to mourn his departure are his companion and children, his mother, Mrs. Margaret Bacon, and brother, Millen, of Chatham, Ontario; one sister, Mrs. W. R. Leverton, Bothwell. Interment in Flushing Cemetery.

HARTSHORN.—Frederick George Hartshorn, son of William and Charlotte Hartshorn, was born March 2, 1846, at Beloit, Wisconsin, and was united in marriage to Anna Gilman on September 9, 1882. To them two children were born; LeRoy F. Hartshorn, of Cameron, and Charlotte J., now Mrs. G. Scott Daniel, of Sioux City, Iowa. Brother Hartshorn passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. G. Scott Daniel, Sioux City, Iowa, July 15, 1927. Funeral services were conducted at Marathon, Iowa, July 18, by Elder Samuel Twombly.

DANIEL.—Asa Daniel was born at Harlem Springs, Carroll County, Ohio, January 24, 1889; was ordained a priest March 15, 1903, at Cameron, Missouri, and on March 15, 1914, received ordination to the office of elder. Brother Daniel passed away at the home of his son, G. Scott Daniel, Sioux City, Iowa, October 10, 1927. There are left of his immediate family, his companion, Mrs. Clara Daniel, one daughter, Mrs. Herbert Scott, of Winstons, Missouri, and three sons: Roscoe B., of Cameron, Missouri, Allen E., of Saint Joseph, Missouri, and G. Scott, of Sioux City, Iowa. Funeral services were conducted from the church at Cameron, by Elder John F. Sheehy, and interment at the Delano cemetery, north of Cameron.

FASIG.—Richard Herman Fasig was born November 23, 1903, at Haileyville, Oklahoma, and was baptized into the church at the age of twelve by Elder Harp. He soon became an active worker for the church. Was united in marriage to Miss G. B. Thompson August 30, 1924, and with his wife moved to Independence, Missouri, in 1925. Died at the Independence Sanitarium November 7, 1927. He leaves wife and son, father, mother, grandmother, and a wide circle of uncles, aunts, and other relatives residing in Chicago, Illinois; Denver, Colorado; Houston and Simonton, Texas; Haileyville, Oklahoma; Kansas City and Dodge City, Kansas. The funeral occurred at the Stone Church November 9. Appropriate music was rendered by Grace Nace, May Namur, and Agela Wheaton, with Mrs. Cora Reynolds at the piano. Prayer was offered by Elder Thomas Hartnell. The sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry on the special salvation in waiting for the obedient and true.

WHITE.—Loren A. White was born June 11, 1865, at Addison, Steuben County, New York. Died at Midland, Michigan, November 5, 1927. Was married at Saint Louis, Michigan, to Cora Krisher in 1890. Entered the church May 21, 1908. Brother White was a man loved and respected as a brother by everyone. He was always helping others; it seemed he could not do enough. Met his death when he drove his car into a nine-foot ditch in attempting to avoid a collision with another car, and after three weeks of suffering passed peacefully away. Left to mourn are his wife and two children, Mrs. Earl Falconer, of Midland, and son, Glen, at home, one brother, Fred, of Belding, and a sister, Mrs. Nettie Phillips, of Mount Pleasant, as well as a host of friends. Funeral services were held November 8 from the Saints' chapel in Midland in charge of Elders Byron Bartlett and W. L. Chapman. Sermon by Elder Chapman. The church was completely filled with Saints and friends. The body was taken to Mount Pleasant for interment.

WILLIAMSON.—June Althea Marten Williamson was born in Dana, La Salle County, Illinois, June 2, 1895, and died at her home near Marseilles, Illinois, November 1, 1927. She became a member of the church November 5, 1916, being baptized by David E. Dowker while she was teaching school in Miller Township. Married Silas E. Williamson June 2, 1918, at Roanoke, Illinois. To them were born two children, Charlotte, now aged eight, and Marten, now aged 5. Besides the husband and children, she leaves her father, Albert Marten, of Roanoke, and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Dunham, of Dana, and Mrs. Arria Allison, of Streator, Illinois. Funeral services were held from the home and at the mission church November 3, in charge of Henry Castings, of Des Moines, Iowa. Sermon by Elder Dowker. Music furnished by Elder and Sister F. G. Pitt, of Joliet, Illinois.

EPPELSON.—William Epperson was born in Parke County, Indiana, October 9, 1840, the oldest child of Willis Epperson and Mary Gordon Epperson. When he was but a boy, his mother died, and his father soon after moved his family to Peoria County, Illinois. The father, too, soon died and left his little family to make their own way in life. United with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints about twenty-five years ago and continued a faithful member to the end of his life. For almost eighty years William Epperson has lived in Peoria County, and for the last twenty-five years has lived in Peoria up on the West Bluff, where he had many friends. He has outlived his brother, Frank Epperson and his sister, Emily Epperson King, formerly of this city. He leaves behind, two daughters and one son: Mrs. Mary E. Gillin and Mrs. Flora B. Norris, both of Peoria, and John H. Epperson, of Pasadena, California. There are three grandchildren: Eugene E. Hegwood, of East Moline, Illinois; Gladys L. Hegwood and William H. A. Norris, of Peoria, Illinois. One grandchild, Marie Epperson King, preceded him in joining his wife and family on the other side. He departed this life November 4, 1927. The funeral was conducted by Elder F. G. Pitt, at Peoria, November 6, 1927.

Conference Minutes

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.—District Conference met at the Saints' Church in East Jordan, October 29, at 10 a. m., District President Allen Schreur, Apostle D. T. Williams, and Elmer Parks in charge. Opening song "God is marshaling his army"; prayer by Elder Parks. By motion from district president, Brother Williams was chosen to preside over conference and given power to choose associates. The district presidency were chosen to assist. Minutes of former meeting read and approved. Visiting members were given voice in the meeting. District President Allen Schreur reported his fifteen months of labor in the district: sermons, 83; times in charge, 50; assisted in presiding, 40; other services, 132; total services, 305; baptized, 5, children 2; administered to sick, 17; marriages solemnized, 5; administered sacrament, 1. Report accepted. Elder E. N. Burt's missionary report read: sermons preached, 270; times in charge, 45; times assisted in presiding, 60; other services attended, 150; total number of services, 525; baptized, 40; confirmed 35; assisted to confirm, 5; children blessed, 30; administrations to sick, 125; marriages solemnized, 8; new openings effected, 3; administered sacrament, 10. Report accepted. Richard Hartnell was chosen to look after general harvest home festival work. Sister Ada Aildread was chosen to send letter of condolence to Sister J. C. Goodman, in behalf of the Northern Michigan District. Upon recommendation of district presidency, the Hillman Branch was disorganized by the conference. Upon recommendation of Allen Schreur, Brother Warren Acker's ordination to office of elder was provided for. It was moved and carried that Brother Allen Schreur and Brother Dick Schreur act as committee from Northern Michigan conference to meet with committees from the other conferences to settle the question of the number and places of reunions in Michigan and to report to our next conference. It was moved and carried that Central Michigan District be invited to meet with us at the Park of Pines at our next reunion. Officers elected as follows: district president, Allen Schreur, with power to choose counselors (who are Hector McKinnon and Elmer Parks); secretary, Ada Aildread; treasurer, Dirk Schreur; musical director, Arthur Starks; members of library board, Ada Aildread and Hector McKinnon; superintendent of Department of Women, Verna Hartnell; bishop Dirk Schreur (sustained); superintendent of Sunday school, Elmer Parks; secretary, Ada Aildread; member of library board, Adele Gorman; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Hector McKinnon. Secretary's summarized report of Sunday school was read and accepted. It was moved and carried that all district gatherings open the first meeting at 9 a. m. central standard time. Report of Elder R. D. Davis was read and accepted; reports of locals read and accepted. Moved and seconded that we adjourn to the call of the presidency. Meetings held during conference were: two social services; priesthood meeting in charge of Brother S. Jones; program by East Jordan local Saturday evening, also address by Apostle Williams; young people's prayer meeting Sunday morning; Elder Allen Schreur preached at 10.45 a. m. Sunday; Apostle D. T. Williams, 2 p. m., and Elder E. N. Burt at 7 p. m. Saturday, business session. All enjoyed the services and left with more determination to help the church move onward. A vote of thanks was rendered to East Jordan Saints. Conference adjourned.

CENTRAL MICHIGAN.—District conference convened at Beaverton, Michigan, W. L. Chapman, district president, in charge. Meeting opened by singing number 82 in Zion's Praises, followed by prayer by G. W. Burt. Apostle D. T. Williams was given charge of the business. The secretary being absent, Sister Hulbert was chosen to act. Minutes of previous conference read and approved. Reports read: Priesthood: Saginaw, Houghton Lake, Beaverton, Tawas City, and Kilmaster: Statistical: Houghton Lake, Bay City, Beaverton, Glover, Midland, Tawas City, 1st West Branch, Gladwin, and Farwell. Report of district presidency read. District librarian's report read. All reports accepted and ordered spread on the minutes. District superintendent of the Department of Women gave a verbal report. The following resolution, presented by joint reunion committee was read: "The joint reunion committee of the Detroit District and Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, having met in executive session and considered the problems of the reunion situation, have agreed upon a working basis, and beg leave to present the following resolution as their best opinion on the matter: Resolved, that this conference go on record as favoring the establishment of a Michigan state reunion, this reunion to consist of the territories and Saints within the present Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, the Detroit, Eastern Michigan, Central Michigan, Northern Michigan, and Western Michigan, and such other districts as may desire to unite in a joint reunion. And be it further resolved, that each of the above mentioned districts be requested to appoint two delegates to form a state reunion committee, with full power to represent them. Be it further resolved, that the general church authorities be petitioned to lend their influence and power to the establishment of this state reunion. Be it further resolved, that, if needed, the joint reunion committee be authorized to secure from General Conference an enabling act, permitting the erection of this committee with power to organize and function as representative of these districts." Moved and seconded we concur in suggestion, and committee of two be appointed to act for the district, as to the advisability of such a movement. After considerable discussion, motion was carried. Moved and seconded W. L. Chapman and H. A. Koehler act as this committee. Motion recalled and a motion prevailed that committee be elected by nomination and acclamation. W. L. Chapman and apostle in charge of this mission having received highest number of votes, were declared elected. Moved, seconded, and carried, district president call a special conference to report on finding of committee relative to state reunion. Further priesthood and statistical reports read and ordered spread on the minutes. G. E. Burt, district superintendent of Sunday school, then read report of Sunday School Department. District budget committee reported, recommending a budget of $580 for coming year. A motion prevailed that this report be adopted. At this juncture G. E. Burt recommended sending a delegate to Lamoni convention to represent Sunday school. Since this would incur additional expense, and require additional funds to this department, a motion prevailed that the matter of additional funds be referred to budget committee, with power to act. Motion prevailed that all matters concerning further finances be referred to budget committee. G. E. Burt then offered recommendation that first collection of each quarter be taken up for Sunday school expense. Motion prevailed we adopt recommendation. The following resolution was then presented: "To the First Presidency and Quorum of Twelve: Inasmuch as Central Michigan District is a large district and has only one missionary, who is unable to work the whole district, and after consultation with the district president, W. L. Chapman, and Missionary J. A. Koehler, we do hereby petition you to consider the reinstating of Brother S. T. Pendleton to the missionary force, and allow him to work the northern part of the district." Signed, W. E. Harder, Willis Schrock. A motion prevailed we adopt resolution. A motion was then made and seconded that district superintendent of Sunday School Department be sent to Lamoni convention. After some discussion a substitute was offered, that selection be made by heads of departments. Original motion lost and substitute carried. Financial statement of bishop's agent read and ordered spread on minutes. Resolution offered that we accept recommendation of joint council and district conference and elect W. L. Chapman district president. Moved a substitute we elect by nomination. After much discussion, original motion carried, resulting in the election of W. L. Chapman. A motion prevailed we elect balance of officers by nomination. Motion prevailed. District president was chosen opportunity to choose his counselors. Brother Chapman chose present incumbents. Otto Bartlett and M. A. Sommerfield. Choice was ratified. Nominations were made to elect district secretary, with the result that Winnie Hulbert was declared elected. William Methner was unanimously elected district treasurer. Nominations for district Sunday school superintendent resulted in the election of G. E. Burt; and John Wade was declared elected district superintendent of Recreation and Expression. Other officers elected as follows: District Sunday school secretary, Verna Burt; district librarian, Clara Nichols; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister J. A. Koehler; chorister, Willis Schrock. A motion prevailed that chorister appoint pianist. Winnie Hulbert was then nominated for district publicity agent. Moved and seconded that secretary be authorized to do work of publicity agent. A substitute was offered that we recommend Winnie Hulbert to J. A. Gardner for appointment to this office. Original motion lost and substitute carried. W. L. Chapman then recommended that Carl Larson, Winnie Hulbert, and G. E. Burt be appointed as auditing committee. A motion prevailed that recommendation be adopted. Brother Chapman then recommended that this conference authorize the bishop's agent to arrange with the deacon or branch solicitor in each local to collect per member amount to pay as an expense budget. Motion prevailed we adopt recommendation. Matter of sending missionaries and delegates to General Conference referred to special conference. Moved and seconded we elected boy leader. After much discussion, motion prevailed, resulting in electing B. Norcross to this office. After some announcements were read, a motion prevailed to adjourn subject to call of district president.

EDITORIAL

Stewardship and the Problem of Stewardship

In one of the large newspapers recently, there appeared an editorial commenting briefly on the predictions of British scientists that by 1940 electricity would be produced to sell for about two and one half cents per unit, and that then because of its cheapness house heating would be by electricity. On this the noted editor makes comment which ought to be very interesting to Latter Day Saints who have been advocating the doctrine of stewardships as a social reform. He says:

"More important for the world than the question of power is the possibility suggested by Sir Alfred Mond of reversing the old rule, and instead of taking from the weak and poor all they have, trying instead to give them something.

"Sir Alfred, who is a Jew, a great industrialist, head of a $300,000,000 concern, Chemical Industries, Ltd., says: 'You can not make the world more prosperous by making the rich poorer. We must make the poor richer.'

"When the poor realize that they can gain nothing by tearing down those that have, and when the rich realize that they can promote their own welfare and make this prosperity safe only by making the poor richer, this world will have made a real start towards civilization."

The total amount of wealth in a country or the world increases or decreases slowly; and if the amelioration of the condition of the poor is to await the time when the amount of wealth possessed by the poor is increased while the rich retain what they now have, then the elevating of the poor out of their penury will be a tardy process. There are poor today not because there is a scarcity of wealth, but because the processes of distribution so work that the few acquire a plethora while the masses have little and the very poor none. So social reform must touch the processes of distribution.

The editor is right, and so is Sir Alfred, in holding that the desideratum is to make the poor richer; but how this can be done without the rich shall surrender at least what they do not need, is not explained by either Sir Alfred or the editor. It is quite likely that few if any of the present rich will surrender any part of what they have. This is indicated by the expressed views of both men mentioned. Mayhap the rich would contribute of their superabundance if they could feel that they still had some claim on what they give up. This may sound paradoxical, but it isn't. It can be done by sharing ownership. This means socializing the surplus.

How this can be done may be a puzzle to some, but to Latter Day Saints the answer is easy. This may in turn sound egotistical, braggadocio; but it is not, for the modus operandi is founded upon the principles of Christianity applied to industry.

The answer is stewardship.

If the poor are to be enriched, made less poor, then the rich must share their wealth; not by giving to the poor, but by surrendering surplus to the group (society), for the benefit of the poor, and it might be added, for all others as well. Thus the rich will not be relinquishing all rights on what they "give up," for as units in the social order they have their rights in it protected. This removes the apparent paradox.

And the problem as presented by Sir Alfred and the editor throws our minds back to the solution, as presented in our own books, when we are directed and divinely instructed to let "the rich" and "the noble" and "the wise" first "gather" to Zion to prepare for the coming of the poor up, up to Zion and up unto better industrial conditions.

In the attitude of Sir Alfred and the rich editor, (for he is very wealthy,) is reflected an underlying cause why the condition of the poor is not more speedily improved. Each sees the social necessity of enriching the poor, but neither is willing to let go of his own wealth, even though it is many times more than enough for just wants and needs. And the same underlying cause, is, I fear, functioning among us to prevent the speedy development of Zion towards the condition where the poor will be made richer by socializing surplus. To socialize the surplus of those who now have more than needs, would not in any way impoverish the group, but would enrich the poor by averaging the individual rights on the total wealth. This enrichment of the poor is not charity, but only opportunity to earn needs and just wants. Under such social conditions the greatest possible increase of wealth is without social danger such as inevitably ensues when great wealth is amassed by a small group while poverty is extensive.

I wonder what Sir Alfred and Brisbane would think of the doctrine of stewardships. F. M. S.

Youth Sees Inconsistency of Many Churches

Reverend Walter W. Van Kirk, associate secretary of the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches, is the author of a recent dispatch containing much truth in consideration of the contest for supremacy among the churches, and the effect of this contention upon the youth of the present generation. He says:

The young people of America are not irreligious. Nor are they atheistic, despite the organization of an occasional undergraduate association for alleged heretics. It can not be denied that many of our young people are jazz-minded. That is largely because they are keeping in step to the music played by their elders.

There are, on the other hand, vast numbers of American youth who are profoundly concerned with religious verities and with the future of the church. But it must be a more united church. Youth is breaking away from the denominational narrowness of its fathers. Youth is not interested in debating theological abstractions that have little if any relation to present-day issues.

Why this impatience of the younger generation with denominationalism? For one thing, young people want to see war banished from the earth. They do not believe that world peace can be accomplished as long as the churches are at swords' points with one another. "How," youth asks, "can we expect the politicians of the world to compose their differences around the conference table when the representatives of the church are either unable or unwilling to do likewise?" If men are to be kept out of the trenches, the churches of Christ in America and throughout the world must sign a treaty of peace that will bring to an end the shameful competition among Christians.

Youth likewise believes that industry can not be democratized, that the conflicting interests of the various races can not be reconciled, that the peril of mass illiteracy can not successfully be combated, until the church casts off its divisions and in the strength of union proceeds to fashion a better world. Furthermore, youth questions the right of any denomination to carry its sectarian stamp to the missionary field. The practice, for example, of cutting up China, India, and Japan into a large number of denominational spheres of influence, while it is an advance over former competitions and overlappings, is regarded as only an unsatisfactory makeshift by many of the younger missionaries and those now preparing for missionary service. What is wanted by these more youthful churchmen is a strong united church in the various countries where missionary work is being carried on.

At home and abroad, then, youth visualizes the need for a closer integration of the several branches of Christendom. Most of the young people who are interested in religion have parted company with theological hair-splitters. They are neither fundamentalists nor modernists. They are trying simply to be Christians, and they want a church at peace with itself.

It is interesting to hear such statements as are herein contained, and they lead one to consider several questions again and more carefully.

Are the young people of America religious? Reverend Van Kirk says directly they are not irreligious, but goes on to explain in such a way as to indicate that he would have been more consistent had he said: "The young people of America are not anti-religious." Surely when they are jazz-minded, and of the disposition which goes with jazz-mindedness, they can not be religious, hence are irreligious, at least in the sense of being impious and uncontrolled by religious motives. Of course he would not deny the patent fact that there is a class of young people which is distinctly anti-religious, but from the information given by writers who have considered the question closely, I believe the general indication to be that this unwholesome sentiment against religion is to be found among the young of America who are either foreign born or born of alien parents. I wish that Reverend Van Kirk were right in his declaration, but I have my doubts, and these doubts are not dispelled, but confirmed, by reading him through.

There is doubtless much accuracy contained in his second and third paragraphs. There are numbers of American youth profoundly concerned with religious verities, and a large number of these would demand that it be a united church. And why not? Of all universal questions, there is likely not one which would demand closer unity and agreement than this question of the church. The logical young man or woman looking for the Great First Cause can not comprehend that he is the author of the various creeds to be found in Christendom. These would prove him to be a god of confusion, rather than of order, and what attraction does confusion, disagreement, or war possess for one who is deeply concerned in verities?

If God, the Bible, and organized religion have virtue, and are essential, they will not produce organized church bodies opposed to each other, either in belief or practice of fundamental principles. They may disagree on methods, the working out of principles, or upon unessential details, but upon the fundamental facts and principles they can not. The youth of America would not be averse to the necessary working out of details and the conducting of the church organization, but they are justified in demanding that the matters of fundamental virtue be agreed upon before they enter the church and assume a part in the work.

Men around the conference table of the church must be ready to receive all truth, without regard to the former action of any council of church or of churchmen, and if this be their quest we may expect the God of heaven, through the influence of truth and the intimate touch of his Holy Spirit, to make one in faith and purpose all the denominations which now contend, one against another. This contending for what is conceived to be our very own, because we have possessed it, is what brings war—in church or in political organization or state. . . .

We Latter Day Saints should avoid lining up with either fundamentalist or modernist—we are neither, but are believers in truth as it was in the beginning, as it is now, and as it ever shall be. Apostle D. T. Williams illustrates a declaration along this line from his home life experience with a son: When the son was a small child, he chanced to gain possession of his father's razor. The father regained possession after the child's hand was bleeding, and he instructed the wounded little fellow: "You must not touch the razor; it is not good for you." But just now he expects he will soon hand him a razor, and say, "Son, take this and learn to use it; it will be good for you." And both times the declaration to the son is true.

The world may have made trouble for itself in seeking to handle social problems and to bring equality to all men, and it may have torn its flesh and spilled its blood because it handled in a clumsy manner the social weapon that would lower the rich and raise the poor. But it must learn to handle this tool, known to us as the surplus, and socialize it.

We can do this by recognition of a law re-declared in the word of the Lord in the last days, the law of stewardship. Is it possible that this principle of stewardship shall become the uniting truth of the Christian religion, and at the same time the attracting sign to the young of America and of the world? I see hope that it shall be. R. J. L.

Philadelphia Saints and College Day

The following words are quoted from a letter to the First Presidency, written by the Philadelphia pastor, Arthur E. Stoft: "In a circular letter that we received from Brother McDowell asking for a donation from our branch toward Graceland College fund, the amount $53 was designated. I asked the Saints for $150. I made the announcement several times about the collection we intended to take up for the college, and yesterday morning I made a short plea and asked the deacons to take up the offering. The result was that we collected $181.15, and the deacon told me last night that he thought we would get almost $200 before the effort was finished. I hope the rest of the church does as well. I am expecting to hear from the different branch presidents of the district as to how they made out in their efforts to get money for this cause. I wrote them about it and urged them to take an active interest in it."

A Comfort to the Workers

Men shoulder the responsibilities of the gospel work with joy and discharge them with gratitude for opportunity and strength to work. Years come and go, and they have still the same attitude, though it may be the roguery, perfidy, or the passive attitude of some traveling in the same direction but not able to make good in times of stress or temptation shall suggest that there is danger for the work when the time comes that they and their small band of faithful and energetic ones shall have passed on.

It is at times when this view comes to the front of the mind and is the principal part of the picture, that a letter like this one from twelve-year-old Virgil E. Enfield, of Melrose, Nebraska, warms the soul, brings comfort, and urges the constant and strenuous worker to continued faithfulness and greater achievement.

I stepped up to the desk of Evangelist Frederick A. Smith the other morning. Brother Smith had been conducting a lively meeting at Enoch Hill for two weeks—had been called to distant points twice during the time to preach funeral sermons at the memorial services of two tried and true Saints—and one would have expected him to be weary. Instead of showing anything like weariness, he quickly found a letter and the answer of recognition and commendation he had sent in reply, and with beaming face he extended it to me, saying, "Isn't that the kind that does one good?" Here is the letter:

MELROSE, NEBRASKA, November 6.

FREDERICK A. SMITH,
Independence, Missouri.

Dear Brother Smith: I received your letter some time ago. I am sending in my tenth, which is $3.50. I am always going to try to keep my tenth paid up.

I am twelve years old and came into the church one year ago last August. I am glad I received the gospel while I am young. My mother and father are members of the church, too. . . . We are looking for Brother Shakespeare to come and preach for us this fall. . . .

Will you please give this money to the Bishop?

VIRGIL E. ENFIELD.

It is safe to say that if Virgil keeps to his resolution he will find joy and peace in the work of the church in the due time of the Lord, in the branch of the work for which his natural talents and his acquired development shall have fitted him. These are the bits of encouragement which come to the workers and cause them to know that their places will be filled when the time comes that they can not trust themselves with responsibility because of the faltering step, the dulling ear, the dimming eye, and the failing memory.

God is raising up to himself an army sufficient for the work, and efficient and willing, and the leaders are likely to come from boys who are thrifty and faithful, and who are glad that they "received the gospel" while young.

Her Last Labor of Love

When eyes and hands grow old, having been engaged in the toil of life for many years, the tasks which were light for young eyes and hands become heavy, and the minutes which it formerly required to finish a given task are lengthened into hours. In age the necessity or the urge must be great if the will be converted and order the body to undertake a task of any considerable dimension.

Emma Burton had not spared herself in the days of her youth and middle age; she had been more than ordinarily active in the years of her strength. Her whole being had been thrown into the breach many times in order that a given end which seemed desirable or necessary might be attained. Now she had grown old, and loved ones were caring for her wants, so that little activity was necessary. But her mind and spirit had retained a certain youthfulness which had preserved to her an enjoyment of life, and her time must be occupied by some effort.

What is there to engage such a person? She had not neglected to write words of commendation to God's servants of the ministry as she saw or sensed the tasks they were accomplishing. But she would do more. And so she took up her knitting needles, counted her stitches, and said in her soul, "I can do this one thing for the servant of the Lord."

So it happened that during the few months just preceding the demise of Sister Burton in early September, a pair of beautiful woolen socks took form as her fingers plied, and as she divided the exercise of her eyesight between this work of her hands and watching the steady progress of the building of the Auditorium, the while she hummed or sang the hymns of the Saints.

Her fingers may have been slower, her eyesight not quite so keen, but her will was strong, and love took from the task all the toil, the drudgery, the labor that might otherwise have pertained to it. The day of her passing approached, she finished her task (it was the last work she accomplished), and almost her last intelligible words were instruction to send them to President Frederick M. Smith.

A few days since I was in the office of President Smith, and with an impulsive movement he grasped a white carton, removed the cover, and I saw a pair of blue and white socks of excellent design and execution. He told me their story, and asked, "Should I wear these, or have they a higher mission? What do you think?" And I agreed with him that they were too valuable in the lessons they would teach and the uplift they would give to observers who could see them on display in the museum, to admit of their becoming a part of his wearing apparel.

"All right," he said. "Do with them as you see fit. I will intrust them to your care."

I shall place this evidence of the faith and devotion of a Saint of God in the keeping of the man who guards jealously and preserves intelligently such evidences of the faith of God's people. Many hearts will quicken their beat, and eyes will dim for a time, as emotion of honor and tenderness wells within.

It was her last task; she set the task for herself; she completed her work. It may have been humble in the physical execution, but there was nothing but dignity, grandeur, achievement, in its mental and spiritual conception and accomplishment. She has here and elsewhere erected monuments which neither fire, quake, nor flood can destroy. They are in the tablets of the souls of her brothers and sisters, her loved ones, and they are indestructible.

Eight Ways of Killing Any Department

1. Don't come to the meetings.
2. If you do come, be sure to come late.
3. If the weather does not suit you, why, of course, don't think of coming.
4. If you do attend a meeting, don't forget to find fault with the officers and other members.
5. Never accept an office, for it's lots easier to criticize than to do things.
6. Nevertheless, get sore if you're not appointed on a committee; but if you are, do not attend a committee meeting.
7. If asked by a chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matter, tell him you have nothing to say. But after that meeting tell everyone how things ought to have been done.
8. Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary; but when other members roll up their sleeves and willingly and unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, you just howl that that department is run by a clique.

The Undiscovered Book of Mormon

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

To the vast majority of people who have heard enough about it to mention, the Book of Mormon has always reposed in an atmosphere of discreditable mystery. Its reputed origin, on which many theories were exhausted, for years held the interest of divers people in divers places, until the subject grew threadbare with much handling. Thus for a hundred years interest in it has centered rather in the mystery of its origin than in the importance of its contents, the exceptions to this attitude comprising a minority of interests.

It may even be said that a great many nominal believers in the Book of Mormon know more about the history of its origin than they know of the importance of its contents. That its real value must be found within, not outside of the book, will doubtless be conceded, and the casual reader is not likely to discern that value to any great extent unless his attitude is unusually well prepared. How one may derive the most benefit from reading it depends much upon the individual and the nature and duration of his effort. I venture to say that to many of its believers the Book of Mormon is still an undiscovered book, and that it holds many features of interest of which they little dream. They have been quite interested to learn how it was found, deciphered, and published, and how it has been treated by the world. They have often told of its miraculous discovery, but have failed to discover it for themselves in the only way that can yield them its real worth.

One reason for this may be found in the fact that the interest of too many is the interest which attaches to the mystery of the work. This has caused some to forget, for the time, the more important aspects of its religious, moral, ethical, and sociological content. Even its historical aspect has been emphasized above those named, as a rule. Doubtless this emphasis has had its benefit and has been the natural outgrowth of the many details of archaeological discovery with which the Book of Mormon record could be compared, and it has increased faith in its integrity. But this basis for faith should be considered as the starting point from which to enter into the richer enjoyment of the work through a consideration of the more important aspects which it presents.

Benefits of Purposeful Reading

The attitude and purpose of the individual is highly important when reading a book, relatively as much so as when engaging in a business occupation. It largely determines what the result shall be. To read, with a determination to find fault is worse than a waste of time, for it strengthens vicious traits of character. Aimless or haphazard reading should also be avoided, with respect to such subjects, for they tend to a light esteem of sacred things, and to makeshift habits, as well as lessening the ability to properly evaluate and retain the significance of that which is read.

Reading consecutively from beginning to end, particularly if the work is arranged in narrative form, is often advisable, thus giving a clearer concept of the connection of events and the general trend of the work. But books such as the Bible and Book of Mormon are not purely narrative, but are also didactic, prophetic, and in other ways disconnected with respect to various topical materials, hence should be studied topically also. A good dictionary or topical digest of contents is of material aid in doing work of this kind. Also one may, and should, make notes under proper topical headings in the course of a consecutive reading of the work.

While doing consecutive reading it is helpful to use a previously compiled list of the topical matter to be noted as found in any part of the work. For instance, one may note texts setting forth social teachings, ideals, aims, laws, ethics, ordinances, Bible harmony, genealogy, ethnology, chronology, geography, zoology, government, cities, rivers, mountains, movements of the people, proper names, industries, sciences, arts, agriculture, botany, and a host of other topical materials that one may desire. After making such compilations it becomes comparatively easy to make a careful study of them. Some of the topical headings I have used are: "The Land of the Book of Mormon," "The People of the Book," "The Chief Characters," "The Governments," "The Social Order," "The Personal Qualities of Leaders," "The Industries," and a list of theological subjects.

*Does love ever ask, "How much MUST I do?" Or does it ask, "How much CAN I do?"
How much do I love the gospel?*

Some Aspects of Intensive Study

In order to obtain a comprehensive analysis of the Book of Mormon one must have a digest of the work from which to compile the essential topical headings, and a work of years would result from such an effort on the part of a single individual. However, a brief list selected from some of the topics here noted may be so chosen as to cover the work quite effectively in a general way, and it is surprising to note how much interest is added to a reading done in this way. Probably the more intensive studies thus far published are mostly confined to archæological and theological features, though some topographical and geographical notes have also been compiled. With increasing interest in the book will come a demand for a more extensive topical digest than has as yet been issued by the church, and this should facilitate a broader understanding of the work by the membership.

In the course of consecutive reading one may also make notes of striking passages, similarities, prophecies, special incidents, miracles, ceremonies, and other unusual features of interest. These may be kept for convenient reference and more extended study. Passages that are thought to throw additional light on obscure teachings of the Bible, that is, those which help to show the meaning of texts, may be compiled to good advantage. But such work is beyond the facilities of the average member, as it requires close familiarity with the Bible and biblical history, biblical interpretation and translation.

The work referred to in the preceding paragraph touches the realm of critical study, for which the individual must be equipped by years of preparation and natural ability. A critical analysis would involve the number of writers and other authors extensively quoted in the book, the character and style of the passages, marks of scholarship, phraseology, provincialisms, mental concepts, and the possible effects of translating these into English by a single translator. Untranslated words used in the book and the orthography employed seem to suggest that letters not in use among the ancient Hebrews at the time of the Nephite migration were also unknown to the Book of Mormon writers. The absence of distinctively modern names of articles and of titles of distinction may also be noted. It would be easy for even an experienced writer to blunder in some of these respects, but such modern words as boot, collar, cuff, pants, shirt, calico, ale, beer, and various others are not found.

The More Important Discovery

While the church has greatly valued the miraculous nature of the work that was done in producing the Book of Mormon in English, a much deeper appreciation is experienced by those who have searched more closely in recognition of the personal application of its message to them. An assurance must indeed be precious when it offers to open the windows of heavenly communion and afford the seeker a vision and foretaste of things divine. And such assurance repeatedly characterizes the Book of Mormon record. Even more positive than most of the biblical texts is its promise that God will reveal himself in every age to him who will conform to the divine will.

It is generally recognized that the Book of Mormon in a marked degree holds for the one who receives it a refined religious atmosphere. Quite clearly its religious teachers derived their concepts from a similar source to that of the biblical instructors. It is therefore not strange that the reader notes many teachings closely parallel in the two volumes, both breathing the fervor of faith and assurance and insisting upon the importance of right spiritual, moral, and ethical conduct as a means of obtaining the divine approval and grace.

The discovery of the Book of Mormon in its more essential meaning comes from more than a superficial search of its contents. It is even more than a recognition of its indicated purpose: to give the believer consciousness of eternal life and the joys of divine communion. The more important discovery is the experience of rapport with God to which the recognition of its purpose is intended to lead. A careful reading of such a book can hardly fail to impress the reader constructively, and when this interest develops into the experience of spiritual power and nobler purpose in divine service there will be experienced by him the more significant discovery of the book.

Many things are necessary to a day well spent. Our health shall have been maintained at its level or increased; we shall have learned a lesson from life which we may apply to ourselves; we shall have learned or partially learned something which will make us of greater service to others; we shall have lost ourselves in some act or word of kindness; our minds shall have been impressed with sights, acts, or thoughts which shall later serve as guardians to our right living, or inspiration to our courage and perseverance in some future day. We shall have increased our understanding of those with whom we live and of the Creator of all law and order.—Delmar Goode.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

The morning after I had renewed my covenant, I was sitting beside the stove waiting for breakfast to be announced, when the impression came to me that I should quit the use of tobacco, tea, coffee, and intoxicating liquors. I rose from my chair, and taking what tobacco I had with me, offered it to my stepfather who was sitting near by. He thought I was joking with him and refused to take it; but when I took the lifter to raise the stove lid in order to put it in the fire, he was quite willing to accept it. He wanted to know my reason for quitting the use of tobacco, but for the life of me I could not tell him. I did not know. My father and the other brothers in the church used it, except it was Brother Rowland, and I had never heard a word said against its use by any of the officers of the church. How I did love coffee and to chew and smoke tobacco!

One can not realize what a tremendous task I had assumed in deciding to quit these habits. What a great fight I had on my hands! I battled with the terrible temptation day and night for about three weeks. There were times when it seemed to me that I just had to give way. I was forced to leave my work and seek the Lord in earnest prayer, soliciting his help. By his grace and divine power I gained the victory. I am confident that what the Lord did for me he will do for others. A brother asked me what I did when the temptation came upon me to go back to those bad habits, and I told him that at such times I went to the Lord and not to the tobacco, tea, and coffee.

A few months later, while reading the Doctrine and Covenants, I came across the Word of Wisdom, section 86. After reading it I understood why the Lord had directed me to give up my evil habits and that he had done so in answer to the prayer in which I told him that I wanted to do his will in all things and to be taught of him. The morning I put the tobacco from me, in the prayer service which I later attended, I was spoken to by the power of the Holy Spirit, and the Lord said he was pleased with me for what I had done. I was promised health of body and strength of mind and a long life if I continued as I had started out. I had been having chills and fever for about two or three years, but these ceased to bother me after I quit my unprofitable habits.

About two years later I was preaching at Salt River, a few miles from Macon City, Missouri. At the close of my discourses, four married men made application for baptism. On the Sabbath following we repaired to the water's edge to administer the rite of baptism. I led three of the men into the water and baptized them without any interruption whatever, and likewise led the fourth candidate to the same place. Some one called my attention to the man, who appeared to be in a fainting condition. I began leading him out of the water, but before I reached the bank he revived and requested me to take him back. This was repeated two or three times, when suddenly he stopped, and, placing his hand to his mouth, removed a quid of tobacco. Then he said, "Take me back. I am all right now." I baptized him without further trouble.

The young men of the ministry of today are to be commended for the stand they have taken against the use of tobacco.

While preaching at Salt River, David Winn, one of the four men whom I had baptized, requested me to administer to his little girl. She had pined away until she was now a mere skeleton. After I saw the condition of the child, I was so convinced that she could not live until morning that I did not administer. In the morning she was still living, and I administered to her. About three months later I was present at a conference at Salt River, at which time Sister Winn asked me if I were acquainted with the child who was with her. I confessed I was not and was much surprised to learn that she was the same little girl I had given up to die three months previously. She will never be any closer to death than she was then, but our heavenly Father in his abundant mercy restored her to robust health. She later became the wife of Walter W. Smith.

From Salt River I went to the home of my mother at Bevier, Missouri. Immediately upon my arrival, a boy came for me and requested that I come at once to his mother's house and administer to his little brother. I honored the summons and found the child in a spasmodic fit. He was then seven years old and had been subject to these fits since birth. I administered to him, and he was healed, and has never been troubled with anything of the kind since. He was a son of John Morgan, of Beaver, Missouri.

At the time I became interested in church work, a local preacher by the name of William Reese attended the services and finally requested baptism. Apostle T. W. Smith, with several others, accompanied him to a stream of water known as East Fork. The railroad company had built a large tank here to water their locomotives. In order to get to this place, we had to walk about two miles on the railroad track. It was a very warm day, and when we arrived within a quarter of a mile of this tank an electrical storm came up, and we had to do some fast running to get into the tank shelter before the storm should overtake us. It rained furiously, the wind blew a terrific gale, and it seemed as if the building would blow over. The wind and the rain made such a noise that we could not hear an ordinary tone of voice, but Brother Smith called out as loudly as he could, requesting us to join with him in prayer that the Lord would stop the storm. He then commanded the wind and the rain to cease. Immediately all was calm. In a short time the storm started again, and Brother Smith called out, "This is a test of your faith," and again commanded it to stop, which it did instantly. Brother Smith then said, "Come on; we will go and attend to the baptism." The storm did not commence again. This was a real miracle, and all present, including some outside the church, certified to this fact.

CHAPTER 9

During the latter part of the summer of 1876, I preached my first sermon at Saint David, Illinois, in the little chapel where I first saw President Joseph Smith. John T. Williams, who has composed many hymns and the music for the same as found in the Saints' Hymnal and in Zion's Praises, accompanied me on that occasion. We were stopping at Canton, Illinois, and had to walk the twelve miles to and from Saint David. This was also Brother Williams's first attempt at preaching, and we preached about twenty minutes between us. We surely did feel blue and as if we never wanted to try preaching again.

A few months later, at the district conference at Millersburg, Illinois, I met William T. Maitland, and later I accompanied him to eastern Iowa. I traveled with him for a short time, he preaching and I acting as helper. Brother Maitland was well educated and a very brilliant speaker.

I then went to Inland, Iowa, where I met Eli

Wildermuth, who was one of the first seventies in the Reorganization.

In the winter of 1877 I visited the home of Brother Larkey, in Jones County, Iowa. He was ordained a high priest in the days of the Martyr and had been engaged in the conflict between the Saints and the mob in Far West, Missouri. He told me many interesting things in regard to the persecutions and the sufferings of the Saints at the hands of the mob.

One Saturday morning Brother Larkey requested me to accompany him to a schoolhouse called Hickory Grove, as he had appointments there for that night and Sunday. I consented to go with him; however, I told him I had preached only once and did not feel competent to preach. The schoolhouse was packed with people, with only a few Saints present. Brother Larkey opened the service in the usual way, and started to preach, as I supposed, but he talked only a few minutes and then introduced me as the speaker of the evening.

I arose to my feet without the slightest idea as to what I was going to speak about. I took my place at the desk with trembling knees; had it been possible, I would have rushed from the place. I was very much frightened and did not know what to say, but suddenly the Spirit descended upon me, and I quoted some scripture as found in John 10: 1-3. As far as I knew, I had never read these verses before. I thought I had been speaking only a short time, and was very much surprised to learn that I had spoken for forty-five minutes. After this, I felt very much encouraged, but readily understood the Lord had assisted me. I felt very grateful for his help, as well as inspired with much confidence to trust God in the future.

My talk was on the subject of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. At the close of my discourse, a Presbyterian preacher arose to his feet and asked permission to make a few remarks. I willingly granted his request, inviting him up to the desk. He called the attention of the audience to the fact that it was very evident that I was uneducated and wholly unfamiliar with the Greek, Hebrew, and Latin languages. He told them that in my use of the incident of Philip baptizing the eunuch in support of immersion, I had laid too much stress upon the word in and that this word did not always mean that which I had attributed to it; that in one language it meant close by, in another, near to, and in another, beyond.

It being quite true that I had no knowledge of the several languages mentioned, I was very much discouraged at the information advanced by the preacher. Feeling that there was nothing I could say in defense of my position, I arose to close the meeting, and immediately there came to my mind a story I had heard about a German who had gone to a preaching service. The preacher on that occasion presented to his congregation the same argument as did the Presbyterian preacher in replying to me. At the close of the sermon, the German arose and said to the preacher, "Mr. Preacher, I was so glad I be here tonight; you say that in does not always mean to go down into the vater or into anything, but it means to go close to or near by or beyond. Mr. Preacher, I never did believe that Jonah was in the whale's belly, and I was so glad I was here tonight, because that fish story always troubled me, but now I see how it was. Jonah was not in the whale's belly, but close to, or near by, or on the outside of the whale's back. Oh, Mr. Preacher, I was so glad I was here tonight, because I was troubled in my mind about the future when I die. I read in the Bible if I was not good I be cast into hell; now I know I won't go into hell, only close by or beyond it. Then again, Mr. Preacher, if a man was good the Bible say he go into the kingdom of heaven, but now I don't know which way I go, whether it be close to, near by, or beyond."

By the time I finished this story the house was in an uproar, and it took me quite a while to get the audience under control. The Presbyterian preacher got up and went out.

At the close of the service, Brother Larkey, to my great disappointment, announced that I would be the preacher for the next morning and evening. My, but didn't I do some fasting, praying, and reading the next day! But the Lord stood by me and wonderfully blessed me with his Holy Spirit; the wondrous way in which he wrought through me increased my faith and confidence in him. I remained in this place for six nights, and I was astonished at the size of my audiences.

At this time I did not dare to undertake to read a text, as there were so many words I could not pronounce. I have often thought of those days and the marvelous way in which God came to my help through his Holy Spirit. Thanks be to him, the giver of all good!

CHAPTER 10

In January, 1878, I was ordained an elder by E. M. Wildermuth, at Inland, Iowa.

During the early part of this year I preached in different parts of Jones County.

I next went to Canton, Illinois, and met with the Saints in the Kewanee District's conference. At this conference I was appointed to a mission with Joseph A. Crawford. We traveled together for some time, visiting Colchester, Tennessee, and Burnside, Illinois, performing considerable labor. As we were laboring in the vicinity of Carthage, Illinois, part of the time, where Joseph and Hyrum were assassinated, we met with considerable opposition from the sons and daughters of the old mob. We received many threatening letters, in which they told what they would do to us if we did not leave that part of the country; but they did not molest us.

One night while we were preaching in a school-house, a number of young men came marching in. Each had a hickory stick with which he made considerable noise at every step as he marched down the aisle. After they were seated, one of them produced a deck of cards, and they started to play. I went down to them and asked if they would not kindly refrain from playing cards during the preaching service, which they consented to do. But before I had reached my seat the cards were out, and they again commenced playing. I again went to them, finally persuaded them to put up the cards, and we had no further trouble with them during that service.

After the service we were on our way to the place where we were to stay for the night. Instead of staying in the road, we walked inside of the old fence that zigzagged in and out, when all at once we heard the sound of horses coming at considerable speed. They were ridden by those young men who had been at our meeting. When they arrived alongside us, the young man in the lead reined in his horse so quickly that the horse fell, with the rider under him. We did not stop to find out how seriously the young man was injured, but climbed over the fence at that point and went on about our business. However, we were sure of one thing, and that was that they had all they could do to take care of him without bothering us. It was evident that these young men were out to do us bodily harm, but their evil designs were frustrated.

On another occasion we were holding forth in the Baptist Church in Tennessee, Illinois, Brother Crawford being the speaker. There were two aisles in the church. At the close of the service, Brother Crawford walked down the aisle on the left side and I on the right; a man stopped me and demanded that I perform a miracle or give him a sign. I asked him if he knew who the first sign seekers were, and he replied in the negative. I told him they were those who persecuted Jesus to death and demanded that he come down from the cross. This made him very angry, and he took hold of me, but I said, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and moved on. By this time he was in a terrible rage, and quite a crowd gathered around. They laughed at him, and some of them sided with me. We encountered this kind of conduct from outsiders very often in those days, and especially in that part of the country.

One day Brother Crawford and I walked from Bushnell to Colchester on the railroad tracks, carrying our satchels with us, a distance of about twenty-five miles. We reached Colchester and went to the home of Lucy Milliken, a sister of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the Martyrs. She was a very refined lady and had a lovely family. We were both very tired after our long walk, and she gave us a good welcome. Sister Milliken was a good Saint, and we enjoyed our sojourn in her pleasant home.

From Colchester we went to Burnside, where we met another sister of the two Martyrs, Catherine Salisbury. She was the mother of Solomon, Don, and Frederick Salisbury. She was somewhat older than Sister Milliken and of a different type. She was talkative, full of energy, and good-hearted. She wielded a wonderful influence for good among those with whom she came in contact. During our sojourn here we were domiciled in the home of Don Salisbury. We were joined by "Uncle" William B. Smith, a brother of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, who was one of the first apostles ordained in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1835. I traveled with him for some months and with him again visited the part of the country from which I had just come.

From there I went to Missouri and traveled exclusively in the Northeastern Missouri District; labored much in Salt River, where a good-sized branch of the church was raised up, and where I had the pleasure of baptizing quite a number.

Voices of protest are heard now and then crying out against present-day wrongs in America. Will we listen to these voices? Shall we insist upon full pay for honest toil and honest toil for honest pay? Shall we endeavor to secure good homes for everybody, with space, air, and sunshine? Shall we insist that temperance is as good for the employer as for the employee? Shall we be as careful of the farmer as of the manufacturer or the banker? Shall we call for racial fair play? Justice in the educational realm would throw out of college many people who attend only for social prestige or for a good time, and would put into the schools many an earnest student who now has not the slightest chance of getting in. Justice in churches would distribute the burdens of finance and toil more equitably. . . . Do we want justice—for everybody?—John R. Ewers.

HOME EDUCATION

Educational Parenthood

Read by Clara E. Bradt, superintendent of Department of Women, at educational institute, Niagara Falls, New York.

I make no claim that the ideas contained in this paper are all original. I have quoted some from an article appearing in the Central Christian Advocate of November, 1925, by Judge Miriam Van Waters, of Los Angeles, California.

"We all agree," she says, "that being a parent is the biggest job on earth, therefore the necessity of wise parenthood." That word does not mean that all the responsibility rests with the mothers. This big job can not safely be left to chance, but "we should cultivate a sound public opinion in behalf of planned, durable marriages." The word durable should be emphasized strongly. The unwanted child very often receives only the tag ends of its parents' interests; that which is left over after business, pleasure, whims, and moods. Such a child is very likely to become unhappy, spoiled, or delinquent. He may become a pest to the neighborhood, a truant, a runaway, or a thief, and a large number of these delinquencies have been directly traced to the doors of the parents, who take no genuine, intelligent, satisfying interest in him.

It is the child's right to grow up in the atmosphere of a home where he is wanted and where his needs are understood. There should be an atmosphere of warmth and friendship and confidence in the family relationships.

This sounds easy; yet how many parents fail to love their children wisely, steadily, with that even current which can safely bear the young through all their miseries, disappointments, and failures. There is a difference between real and false affection. "Too many caresses, too much dependence, are perhaps no less damaging to the young child than coldness and dislike."

Parents should furnish themselves with modern ideals. The up-to-date child loses respect for parents who are not informed about current events and opinions. Parents must be wise and tolerant. Their eyes must be open to modern pitfalls. They must know where their children are and what temptations they must meet, but they need patience. In the Talmud it is written, "Limit not thy children to thine own idea; they were born in a different time."

Parents should learn to be leaders. What subtle force is it that makes a child desire to be with and to follow certain personalities whose acts and words may be so undesirable from the parental point of view? Parents usually try to suppress these friendships; they imagine that if the companionship is destroyed, the influence will be gone. It would be wiser if the parents would study those who lead their children, to discover what the attraction is, and then offer superior attractions and different outlets to attract their children. Much could be said against extravagance; sordid city conditions; organized devices for corrupting children, such as bad moving pictures, stupid and obscene literature, unsupervised dance halls. You say, "But these conditions have always existed." True; but to the healthy child from a good, Christian home these things offer little attraction. Fortunate, indeed, are the children who can believe in the integrity of their parents.

Many of the young people of today have lost or are losing their confidence in religion. Are we as a church so busy teaching our doctrine that we are forgetting to safeguard our young by explaining life, birth, and mating to them in a clean, wholesome manner.

You might ask what is all this leading up to. The reply is, To the work of the Department of Women. Am I right in saying that parenthood is the biggest job on earth? Hence the necessity of preparation. The Department of Women has all the helps necessary to make our young women efficient wives and mothers. There are women who are spending all their time in preparing helps for our very young girls who are grouped as Orioles; for the older ones known as Temple Builders, which includes all young women. Can we afford to grow indifferent to this great work? We can not rid ourselves of responsibility by evading it.

Why are not all our women deeply interested in this movement to which the Lord has given his approval? What if our girls and boys are all married; there are plenty of young women whom the older women can help. Then why stand aside and let this opportunity of helping go by?

In evangelism lies the hope of the church and the world. Out of the plastic material furnished us from our Bible schools in the boys and girls who are playing and dreaming about us, we may, by the help of Jesus of Nazareth, raise up a generation of men and women who will really represent Christ in the world and will usher in a civilization that will be dominated by the Spirit of Christ, the spirit of brotherhood and service.—J. Quincy Biggs.

Temple of the Warriors

Fine Example of Maya Architecture; Gratifying Results of Excavations at Chichen Itza

Three working seasons ago, the Temple of the Warriors, Chichen Itza, Yucatan, to the eye of the casual observer, seemed nothing more than a tree-covered mound of debris rising fifty feet above a heavily wooded plain. Today as a result of the work of the archæologists of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, this sanctuary of Kukulcan, the patron deity of Chichen Itza, gives visible proof of ancient magnificence. It is now clear that the Temple of the Warriors is by far the most elaborately decorated building at Chichen Itza, once the capital of the New Maya empire, and once containing a great number of imposing structures. Indeed, it is also evident that it is one of the most beautiful examples of Maya architecture extant.

For centuries the splendid limestone structures of the greatest of America's aboriginal races have been assailed by nature's relentless forces. Wind and rain have remorselessly beat upon them. Roots of giant trees have riven roofs and walls, abandoned and unprotected as they were by man. As a result, most of the one-time magnificent buildings have been reduced to huge piles of fallen masonry. The task of the archæologist, attempting to repair these structures, consists of clearing these mounds of trees and underbrush, digging them out and identifying the fallen structural elements, and returning them to their original positions. This replacement work on the Temple of the Warriors has now gone about as far as it is possible to carry it with the certainty that it faithfully conforms to the structure as it originally stood.

The Pyramid Foundation

The temple proper rests upon a pyramidal foundation 37 feet high and 136 feet square at the base. The hearting of the pyramid is of masonry and is faced with cut or dressed stone. The pyramid foundation rises in four retreating terraces. Each of the vertical parts of these terraces, except the topmost one, carries a richly sculptured frieze, consisting of eagles, jaguars, warriors, and an unknown quadruped which the institution's archæologists, for want of a better name, have called "the woolly." The design of the friezes comprises a repetition of alternating pairs of warriors and pairs of bird or animal figures.

The figures of the warriors are placed feet to feet, their faces turned from each other. In general, the bird and animal figures have their backs toward each other, while they hold what appear to be human hearts in their claws, or forepaws. They seem to be offering these to the warriors whom they face. The warrior figures themselves wear elaborate costumes which still bear traces of the blue, red, and green paint with which they were originally decorated. Staffs or javelins from which plumes descend in long and graceful curves are held in their hands.

The Temple Approach

A steep stairway, thirty-four feet wide, containing thirty-six stone steps, ascends the front or west face of the pyramid at an angle of sixty-six degrees with the horizontal. Two stone balustrades four feet wide, carved to represent feathered rattlesnakes, rattles at the bottom, fanged heads at the top, flank the stairway.

Mounting the stairway, one reaches a broad terrace directly fronting the temple portal. Two massive feathered serpent columns, with heads on ground and tufted tail rattles rising fifteen feet above, divide the temple entrance into a triple doorway.

In front of this awe-inspiring portal is a reclining human figure, life-size, carved in limestone. Such figures are known as Chac Mools, one of the minor Toltec deities. They are always represented as of human form, reclining on back and elbows, with knees drawn up, arms pressed tightly to sides, and uplifted head turned to one side. The abdomen is always flattened or hollowed out, presumably to serve as a receptacle for incense and other offerings.

Inner Chambers and Murals

Passing through the serpent-column doorway, one enters a spacious hall, 60 feet long, 31 feet wide, and originally probably 22 feet or even more in height. Its corbelled-arch roof is supported by twelve square columns, each sculptured and painted with figures of warriors. This hall gives access through a carved doorway in its rear wall to the sanctuary of the temple of the same size as the outer chamber, its roof being upheld by eight square sculptured and painted columns.

Against the back wall of the sanctuary is a platform, whether altar or throne has not yet been determined, some 14 feet wide, 8 feet deep, and 2 2-3 feet high, resting on nineteen painted statuettes, carved in the likeness of human beings.

The walls of both the outer hall and this inner sanctuary were originally covered with fine white plaster and then brilliantly painted with scenes of domestic life, of battle fields, and of religious ceremonies. These murals have been copied wherever sufficient traces of the original were distinguishable.

Ancient Temple Buried in Pyramid

But this was not all that the institution's archaeologists found buried in the great mound of debris which concealed this splendid temple. During the first season of work (1925), Mr. E. H. Morris, in immediate charge of excavations at Chichen Itza, found a square sculptured column buried in the northwest corner of the pyramid, seventeen feet below the floor level of the Temple of the Warriors. He surmised then that some earlier building had been dismantled and filled in to make way for the later and larger construction.

During the 1926 field season, this conjecture became a certainty. Excavations in the northwest corner of the pyramid in front of this sculptured column disclosed two other carved columns lying in line with the first. These still preserved their original brilliant hues—reds, yellows, greens, blues, and blacks. Just in front, dismantled and broken, lay the enormous heads and tufted tails of the two great serpent columns which had formerly guarded the portal of this earlier temple.

Colors of Original Brilliance

Never before have such colors been seen at Chichen Itza. It was obvious at a glance that this older temple had been dismantled and buried in the masonry of the pyramid which supports the later Temple of the Warriors while the paint on it was still fresh and vivid. Because the light of day had not reached it for centuries, perhaps for as many as six, its pigments were at the highest point of original brilliancy.

The final excavation of this buried temple was one of the principal activities at Chichen Itza during the season just brought to a close. The results exceeded the archaeologists' fondest hopes. The Chac Mool figure belonging to this earlier temple was found lying on its back at the southern end of the outer chamber. Except for a broken nose and a broken lock of hair, it was in excellent condition. The carving, protected as it has been from weathering, was practically in a perfect state of preservation. The eyes and fingernails would seem to have been made of some sort of an inlay, jade, shell, or obsidian, which, however, had been picked out in ancient times, before the figure had been walled up in this earlier temple.

Writhing Serpents Guard Doorway

The walls of the buried temple were brilliantly painted with great writhing serpents. Two of these, one on either side of the entrance, extend around the three walls in reverse directions, and meet at the opposite doorway. They are enormous reptilian creatures with clawed legs, feathered pendants, and pointed crests, painted red, yellow, blue, and black.

In two places on the plaster of the walls some idle hands had scratched the outline of a human figure, arms above the head, palms up, as if supporting something. Perhaps this was a study for the Atlantean columns, upon which rested the throne or dais, which once projected from the back wall. This throne was completely destroyed when the temple was originally dismantled and the Atlantean figures carried away. There are grounds for believing that they were used in the Temple of the Warriors (above). The reason for so thinking lies in the fact that the nineteen Atlantean figures supporting the throne in the newer structure were too tall for the positions they occupy, so they were buried below the floor level of the Temple of the Warriors, up to their knees. Little dummy feet of stucco were built out from the knees to give the effect that they were standing on the temple floor.

In the sanctuary of this buried temple a sculptured and painted column was found which in brilliance exceeds anything heretofore unearthed in the Maya area. The figure on the column holds a round fan in its hand. Delicate details of costume—embroidery, featherwork, tassels, as well as parts of the body, nails, hair, etc.—are clearly brought out by outline in black against brilliant colors. The amazing effect thus gained is barbaric in its splendor.

Doctor Sylvanus G. Morley, in charge of the institution's activities in Yucatan, states that much to the gratification of himself and his staff, it was found that this earlier temple was roofed over and inclosed by the masonry filling of the pyramid, in a way that the original structure, in so far as the workmen had left it standing, was preserved.

Other Operations of Importance

The excavation and repair of the Temple of the Warriors is but one of several Maya operations upon which the Carnegie Institution is working. Extensive excavations are being made in a still more ancient part of Chichen Itza in the attempt to trace the course of the architectural development of the city. Work is going forward also on the repair of the Caracol or astronomical observatory, the oldest structure of its kind in the New World. It is hoped that 1928 will see the completion of this undertaking. Expeditions also have been made to

NEWS AND LETTERS

Indianapolis

In my last I told of having been with the Saints of Southern Indiana District in the ceremonies of the dedication of the church building at Byrneville, of the pleasant and happy time had, and of the day closing for me when, tired but happy in the opportunity to serve my people, I retired for rest at the farm home of Brother S. O. Mosier.

The next morning found the family at that farmhouse astir rather early, and I found myself interested in the before breakfast activities, quite characteristic of a dairy farm. At breakfast and following, a pleasant chat or "visit" was had with host and hostess and the son.

It had been expected that we should get a fairly early start for Indianapolis, but some calls for visit to the bedside of the sick delayed Brother Robinson, so that when he and Keo arrived with their "tin steed" all accoutered for the journey, it was near nine o'clock. We bade a reluctant farewell to the Mosiers and set out on the journey, back over the road we had come Saturday, to New Albany. Increasing difficulty with the ignition system of the car necessitated a stop for repairs at New Albany, so that when finally we were headed north and the good road leading to Indianapolis, it was past eleven o'clock, near a half towards twelve. And then we began a steady pace which, with only a pause for gas and oil, and a brief stop for lunch, kept up till the outskirts of Indianapolis were reached about four o'clock. A stop at the union station for railway transportation matters, a swing round the Indianapolis justly famous Circle, with its artistic monument, past the state house, and a few other fine buildings for a glance at the architectural aristocrats of the city, and we were soon at the domicile of Brother and Sister Robinson and experienced its characteristic welcome; and incidentally, there I found a "characteristic" bundle of mail awaiting my arrival. A hasty scanning of the mail, a clean-up and change of linen, and we were aboard the Ford again, bound for the church.

I had known that something special was on, but was not quite prepared for what I found. In the basement of the church a dinner had been prepared—a "family" one for the whole branch. That dinner, in neatness of service, quality, and setting quite assumed the proportions of a banquet. The basement room had, under somebody's skillful and artistic management, by aid of some inexpensive decorations, together with generous contributions from the flower gardens of the Saints, been converted into a pretty banquet hall, and the neatly attired tables were quite in modern banquet form. In front of my place at the table was a bouquet of flowers from the garden of my sister, Mrs. Weld, of Lamoni, placed there by her daughter, Rebecca Noland, who surprised me by her presence in Indianapolis. And if those tables did not groan under their burden distant regions where new Maya ruins have been discovered and examined.

Doctor Morley reports that relations of the utmost friendliness and cordiality have been maintained throughout with the Mexican officials under whose jurisdiction the institution is carrying on this work. A spirit of cooperation and of mutual assistance has developed which will have far-reaching effects in the development of this rich field of archæological science.—Exchange.

of good foods, it was because they were well made. I had learned in Byrneville that the Southern Indiana women know how to cook and serve tempting viands, and here I learned that the Indianapolis sisters were equally good. The meal was informal, and after grace was said and thanks returned we broke bread a la family; and why not? Do not we find the fraternal feelings everywhere in our large family of Saints?

I am not going to try here to tell who was responsible for the well-ordered dinner, for on this my first visit to Indianapolis Branch, the various names, and even the outstanding ones of the standby workers did not become familiar to me. So all I can say is that the quiet hospitality, the tasty refreshments, and the fraternal associations were all enjoyed, and I was glad to be one of the Indianapolis family of Saints, and I find myself strongly wishing that the fine co-operation necessary to successfully carry on that dinner might always be present in the branch and everything they undertake in the interests of the cause and for the advancement of the work.

The "family dinner" over, all satisfied so far as the physical man is concerned, we repaired to the main auditorium for "meeting." I spoke to the Saints for near an hour on some of the problems of the church arising from our attempts to "go on unto perfection." While I was thus occupying the pulpit, a goodly portion of the comfortable pews were occupied by the major portion of the branch, especially of the regular attendance, even though it was Halloween. The meeting over, groups of Saints remained to visit.

I found the Indianapolis church building to be located in a good neighborhood, with spacious grounds, and the stucco form building is very neat in appearance, well arranged, well appointed. It is always easier to criticize when a job is done than to make helpful suggestions before started or while in progress. So it is not surprising that there should be some questions here which might have had fair answer if some things had been taken well into consideration before building. I was at a loss to understand why a location was secured so far removed from where the majority of the Saints live and why the building was turned as it is. But on the whole the achievement of the Saints in building the Indianapolis church challenges admiration. The location is in a growing residential neighborhood where real estate values are very likely to increase; the building presents an appearance of which we may justly be proud, while its size and equipment speak eloquently of the sacrifice and devotion of the comparatively few in number who have borne the burden. Altogether, building, equipment, and lots, represent an investment of about $10,000 value, against which there now stands an indebtedness of about $4,800, or $4,900. This speaks well for the cooperation and willingness to sacrifice existing among the Indianapolis Saints. And I am hoping and praying that their good teamwork may continue until they are out from under the burden of debt, and then still continue while they turn their attention to the bigger problems of the general forward movement of the church. Brother John Robinson, now acting as pastor, speaks highly to me of the splendid help furnished him by the workers of the branch, whose names I shall not here try to mention. All honor to the Indianapolis Saints for the zeal, the devotion, the teamwork, the fraternity they have displayed in their work for their new church home. May they always have before them the consciousness of a job worthy of their metal.

Returning to Brother Robinson's after the service, there was a strong temptation to "sit up" still later to visit and chat, about acquaintances of old, the church, its present and future. But the need of rest advised seeking it.

Up betimes the next morning, I experienced on Tuesday the "let down" feeling usual to "blue Monday," and that continued with me most of the day. But a visit was made to one home, and to the monument on The Circle, before Brother and Sister Robinson and I met Brother and Sister

Gage at the Bamboo Inn for a social meal before my departure at 12.50. At the train, a Baltimore & Ohio, bound for Springfield, Illinois, the "folks" left me. I was headed for home again. And as the train rolled its steady way towards the destination, I meditated upon the experiences brought to me by my first visit among the Saints of the Hoosier State. There, as elsewhere, I found some excellent Saints, formed new pleasant acquaintances, met some whose names were familiar. I found interest in Zion real and deep-seated, and there, too, I found encouragement to carry on towards the goal and continue the strife for better and higher conditions.

May God bless our Hoosier Saints with health and plenty of work, which combination spells happiness. Carry on!

Duluth, Minnesota

Sixty Avenue, West, and Bristol Street

Sacramental service, October 2, was in charge of Elder Carroll Olson, of Superior, Wisconsin. A fine spirit prevailed. While attendance was small, the meeting was profitable to those present. Would that each member could catch the vision of what this sacred ordinance means to us as a people. We should remember what Jesus the Christ has done for us and that if we do not partake thereof we have not life abiding in us.

Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley and Brother Samuel Case were called to go to the bedside of Sister Bertha Eckley, of Barnum, Minnesota, to administer. Sisters J. A. Gunsolley, Julia Case, and C. E. Silverthorn accompanied them. Sacrament was served, a fine meeting enjoyed, and many of the songs we all love, sung. Sister Lula Dathe, sister of Sister Eckley, also resides at Barnum.

In the evening J. A. Gunsolley was the speaker, his subject being "Charity." Doctrine and Covenants 85:38: "And above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace," was quoted, also Book of Moroni 7:51, 52: "And charity suffereth long, and is kind, and envieth not, and is not puffed up, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, and rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things; endureth all things; wherefore, my beloved brethren, if ye have not charity, ye are nothing, for charity never faileth. Wherefore, cleave unto charity, which is the greatest of all, for all things must fail; but charity is the pure love of Christ, and it endureth for ever; and whoso is found possessed of it at the last day, it shall be well with them."

Apostle D. T. Williams gave us a very welcome visit October 3 to 5, speaking each evening. Although the number attending was not large, the Saints received a greater vision of the latter-day work. We hope this will not be Brother Williams's last visit with us, and that many more of the leading officers of the church will think of us, for we need their advice and counsel not only by letter but by word of mouth. A desire was expressed by Brother J. A. Gunsolley that Brother Williams come to hold a series of meetings. This expression finds favor with each one of us.

October 9 Elder Gunsolley was the morning speaker. His text was: "I give unto you to be the light of the world and to be the salt of the earth." He read the sentiment of a poet which deals with us of today in "The land of beginning again"; also read Matthew 7 and "If thou wouldst teach," by H. Bonnar.

Elder M. F. Gowell was the evening's speaker.

On the 10th he left for an indefinite period for Bayfield and Ashland, to visit Saints and to spread the good tidings of great joy, the everlasting gospel.

Quarterly business meeting was held October 11, Elder

Ray Whiting, district president, in charge. Elder Lester Whiting resigned as pastor, and the recommendation of Apostle D. T. Williams that Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley be elected pastor for the balance of the ensuing year, was adopted. We realize what this means to us to have in our midst such stalwart workers as Brother and Sister Gunsolley, and we are sure that a greater vision of the work of the church will as a result be ours to enjoy. Elder Gunsolley spoke both morning and evening, October 16. At the eleven o'clock service, his subject was "Faith," which he illustrated with the story of the faith of a colored man who said that if the Lord commanded him to go through a brick wall, it would be his duty to throw himself against the wall and the Lord's duty to put him through it. In the evening the topic, "Faithfulness or diligence," was discussed.

Mention of our Christmas offering contest and its results should be made. In the tour of the West over the Northern Pacific Railroad, one side had a red special, the other a blue. They left Duluth for their destination, Portland, Oregon, going by way of Saint Paul. The red special arrived first, but the blue was in the next block signal or close behind. This contest netted the Christmas offering forty-four dollars and fifty-seven cents, moving a mile for each cent. This amount was realized by the combined efforts of Sister C. E. Silverthorn, captain of the winning team, and Sister Mahala Bundy of the blue special, and their respective teams.

Brother J. E. Walters, wife, daughter, and Sister Alphaetta Johnson, of Carlton, were down the evening of October 16, at which time Brother Walters sang a pleasing solo, "Somebody knows."

Brothers Samuel Case and wife, Sister C. E. Silverthorn, and W. C. Stauty, with daughter Grace, motored to Two Harbors Sunday, October 23, and met with the Saints in a combined service of prayer and preaching. A fine meeting was had.

Elder Gunsolley was the evening speaker at Duluth, his theme being "The gospel contract." Dividing and subdividing it, we have: I. Parties: A. God-church. (1 Corinthians 12:27; Acts 2:41-47.) B. Man. II. Subject Matter: A. Redemption. (Mark 16:16; Acts 16:31.) III. Consideration: A. On God's part, 1. Knowledge, wisdom, etc. 2. Blessings hereafter (1 Corinthians 15:40; John 17:2, 3). B. On man's part: 1. Compliance with laws of adoption (Acts 2:38); 2. Serve and love God and fellow men (Matthew 22:36-40). IV. How Executed: A. By man (Acts 2:38; Mark 16); B. By God (Ephesians 1:13, 14; 4:30; 2 Corinthians 1:22).

The Department of Women gave a chicken supper and bazaar October 28, which netted them for the supper one hundred and forty dollars and for the bazaar about sixty dollars. Nothing is too great for a band of people when they work in unity and love.

Sunday, October 30, being College Day, and having with us Brother J. A. Gunsolley and wife, church workers for the educational advancement of the church, a fine miscellaneous program was rendered at eleven o'clock. Songs of Graceland were sung. "The past of Graceland" was given by Brother and Sister Gunsolley; "The present of Graceland" by Sisters Carroll Olson and Lottie Zuelsdorf; "Future of Graceland" by Marjorie Ann Zuelsdorf, Robert White, and Grace Stauty. A fine talk was given by Sister Gunsolley, "Graceland and our girls." Brother Gunsolley also spoke, using Doctrine and Covenants 85; 55; and 90:4-12 as the basis of his discussion. He told of the early work of the Saints, of the establishment of schools and places of learning, not forgetting that the first schoolhouse built in Kansas City, Missouri, was erected by Saints in 1838; the first building erected at Far West was a schoolhouse; at Nauvoo the first consideration was schools and university, and at Lamoni in 1889 the talk of building a college; 1890, serious consideration of this talk and the conference which authorized the building of same, of the work of Marietta Walker, now known as Mother of Graceland; and the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Independence, Missouri, offering fifty-six studies. Many thoughts for study were advanced. Worldly wisdom is not sufficient of itself, and there is a growing need of knowing God. Learning and wisdom are separate accomplishments. To learn is good if we heed the counsel of God. Wisdom is the proper use of learning; it is the right use of knowledge. Graceland is the school that makes men. Ideals of Graceland were taken from "Graceland Chats," SAINTS' HERALD for October 19, under the subject "What my college expects of me," by Elbert Hannah. This young man quotes from the writers of the Bible "Faith without works is dead," adding "so is knowledge, without practice, entirely useless." And again of Graceland's ideals as expressed by Madeline Clark, "Graceland Chats" of October 26. Graceland slides were shown in the evening, the explanations being given by Brother Gunsolley. We set a goal of fifty dollars, which will likely be our subscribed amount.

Two carloads of Saints motored to Two Harbors Tuesday evening, November 1, when the slides were again shown at the home of Brother and Sister J. A. Hastings. Those going were Brother Robert Zuelsdorf, wife, and daughter Marjorie Ann; Sister Mahala Bundy, Brother and Sister J. A. Gunsolley, Brother Samuel Case, Brother W. C. Stauty and daughter Grace, and Brother Robert White. A fine collection was taken, and pledges were subscribed for Graceland College—the beacon light on the hill.

Nauvoo District Conference and Young People's Convention

Nauvoo district conference and young people's convention was held at Fort Madison, Iowa, November 4, 5, and 6. The weather was fair, and as a result attendance was very good, but there were not as many young people present as there might have been. The speakers and class workers were Apostle F. Henry Edwards, of Independence, and Brother Eugene Closson, general superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, of Lamoni; also Patriarch Ammon White, of Independence, was here.

On Friday evening, the 4th, at 7.30, the convention opened with a sermon by Elder F. C. Bevan.

Saturday morning at 8.15 prayer service was in charge of Apostle F. Henry Edwards. The question asked was: "Am I a Latter Day Saint?" which found response in the testimonies.

Class work was conducted by Brothers Edwards and Closson from 9.30 to 12.

Business session opened at 2.30 in the afternoon, Brother Edwards in the chair. The election of district officers resulted in the following: district president, F. C. Bevan, of Ottumwa, Iowa; Elders W. H. Gunn, of Fort Madison, Iowa, and D. B. Sorden were chosen by him as associates in the presidency; secretary, W. H. Gunn; treasurer, Elder F. H. Broman; Sunday school superintendent, Bert Kunz, of Burlington, Iowa; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Arnold Ourth, Nauvoo; superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister S. L. Rayer, of Burlington; chorister, Sister S. Lee, of Nauvoo; secretary of Sunday schools, Elnora Cornean, Fort Madison; bishop's agent, Elder A. Sanford.

Saturday evening's program, which was very entertaining and instructive, was in charge of Eugene Closson.

Priesthood meeting began at eight o'clock Sunday morning. This meeting was well attended, and Brother Edwards gave a good talk. At the Sunday school hour, Brother Closson made all the adults one class and presented to them some fine thoughts.

Apostle Edwards was speaker at 10:45, employing for a text: "How shall I go up to my father and the lad be not with me? lest peradventure I see the evil that shall come on my father." This sermon was of a high order, and all expressed their appreciation of it. It gave them a new vision of their possibilities.

In the afternoon at 2.30 we had sacramental service, and a good spirit was present.

There was preaching at 7.30 by Brother Ammon White on the Book of Mormon, which discourse was well received. Many Saints are more anxious to read the book than they were prior to hearing this sermon.

Dinner and supper were served in the basement of the church by the Department of Women of Fort Madison. The meals were very good. Saints of that local did all they could to make things comfortable and pleasant for visiting Saints, and appreciation was expressed for their kindness.

Saints of Nauvoo District were happy to renew their acquaintance with Apostle Edwards, and he with them was helped in the class work. All were very glad to have Brother Eugene Closson and wife, this being the first time we have had them in our district. Their smiling faces and pleasing personalities proved them good mixers, and the class work conducted by "Gene" won the hearts of young and old. A number expressed themselves as being sure that "Gene" is in the right place in the church, a place which we are glad is filled. We expect them back in our district soon. People of the district also rejoiced to see Brother White again, a number of them looking to him as a father in the church.

The spirit of fellowship which was in evidence during the conference was admirable, and those who were present said they were well repaid for coming. About one hundred and eighty attended.

Brother F. Barker sang solos for us at our services.

Bishop Hunt Writes from Canada

When entering the Owen Sound District October 1, I informed District President D. B. Perkins and his counselors, James A. Morrison and King Cooper, also the bishop's agent, F. B. Stade, that I had come to their field to labor under their direction. They gave me a hearty welcome, assuring me the members in the several branches and groups would give me a good hearing, a saintly reception, and that the full gospel law should be preached, including the defined program of the church as adopted by General Conference.

The district officers were correct in recommending their membership, for I did find attentive listeners—a good people—and my soul has been enriched, my vision and responsibility to the Lord and his church enlarged because of labors and association with them.

Elders Perkins and Stade outlined my travels; then they kindly and thoughtfully sent letters of introduction, recommendation, etc., making it possible to economize time and expense of travel. The branch officers and solicitors also gave me splendid consideration, the Saints caring for me in their homes. In some families the interest was so great favoring Zion and regions round about that we talked until after midnight.

The blessed spirit of stewardships and the gathering is moving upon many, and I believe the time is not far distant when nearly every member in some branches would arrange to move to the stakes of Zion and reestablish themselves as a congregation. The councils of the church have hopefully looked forward to a realization of such provision being made. Larger financial contributions will help to hasten this part of the sacred work.

As members we do not always lack in knowledge of temporal duties, but often lack in ability or willingness to live by them. Sometimes we hear Saints say, "I love this gospel better than I do my own life." From all such brave members we have a right to expect a tenth of their earth life earnings, also liberal offerings. Have you disappointed us? "Deeds show what we are; words, what we should be," is a saying applicable to all.

It was encouraging during my travels in the district to hear the solicitors and tithepayers say that F. B. Stade, their bishop's agent, was always prompt in writing and returning receipts for church funds. The same commendation should be said of every person in this church holding like responsibilities.

The recent labors of Bishop Albert Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Curtis in this field have been fruitful of good.

Of the interesting places visited was Manitoulin Island (reported to be the largest fresh water island in the world), where I preached in four different places to interested Saints. At a place called The Slash, four meetings were held on Sunday, October 30, one of which was the solemn and impressive dedicatory service of their little frame chapel. Brother Chester Smith offered the dedicatory prayer. Elder Harvey Sagle is pastor.

After concluding my labors on the island, and being so far north, I thought it an oversight on the part of the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric, when authorizing me to labor in this field, not to include the Saints of "the ten lost tribes of Israel in the land of the North." Perhaps Apostle Curtis will favor me with a letter of appointment and recommendation, as his territory has no limit as to northern boundaries.

In one locality where I preached (and mention was made of the splendid progress being made in the erection of the Auditorium at Independence, and the special uses for good of the church it would be available for), some one misunderstood me and reported that I claimed the Auditorium was to be the Temple. I am sorry that such a mistake was made by any listener—the Auditorium is not the Temple. By and by the Lord will give the church that is building the Auditorium command and direction to build the Temple, and a General Conference or General Assembly will authorize published notices to that effect.

During the thirty-nine days spent in Owen Sound District, I held services in every branch except one, preaching forty-four times. President Perkins assured me that he and his counselors would issue circular letters encouraging the Saints, especially the priesthood, to file inventories by January 1. I hope other districts will show a like interest.

At this writing I am en route to Toronto District. Will preach in Stratford and Saint Mary's on the way.

HARRISTON, ONTARIO, November 8.

C. J. HUNT.

Saint Mary's, Ontario

Upon receiving the HERALD, we always first glance over the headings. The letters and news items from different branches and districts are interesting, especially if we are somewhat acquainted with them. Probably some one somewhere would like to read a line from Saint Mary's.

Our numbers are few, but we believe as a branch we are keeping pace with the onward progress of the church. Our buildings and grounds are kept in good condition, and financially we are in good shape.

In the summer we had a very successful all-day meeting, having with us Brother Roy Budd, apostle. We enjoyed his counsel and advice. Of late we have had Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Curtis, and later still a visit from Bishop C. J. Hunt. It is surely a great help to branches to be visited by the general church officers. We hope the time will soon come when we shall be in a more gathered condition and when all can benefit from the instructions of these workers.

Brother G. C. Tomlinson, sr., is at present president of the branch. All departments are organized and working as best they can with the numbers at our disposal.

We put on a program for College Day, all departments joining, and we felt blessed in this effort. We also celebrated the coming forth of the Book of Mormon in like manner.

We are hoping and trusting that as a branch we may let our light shine, that others seeing it may be guided into the straight and narrow way. This is our prayer.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

November 1.—On Sunday, October 9, San Jose Branch was favored with a visit from Brother Edwin Burdick, assistant musical director of Northern California District, who was the speaker of the morning hour. Brother Burdick is well qualified for the office he holds, very thorough in his work, and is consecrating his talent to the service of the church. Being a splendid organizer, he gave definite instruction in regard to the organization of the music department in the branches. His visit here was timely, and his instructions were much appreciated by the local Saints. Pastor Robert Cowden was in charge of the service.

This was one of the banner days for the Sunday school, there being eighty-one present at that hour. Forty-five remained to church service at eleven o'clock. Visitors were Mrs. Nellie Burdick, mother of Brother Edwin Burdick, of San Francisco; Sister Farley, of San Mateo; Brother and Sister M. H. Fonda, Oakland; Brother Floyd Manchester, Palo Alto.

The branch has resumed the Sunday evening services, and the pastor was speaker on this evening, with Elder C. W. Hawkins in charge. The subject chosen for the evening discourse was "Health" and "The Word of Wisdom," Doctrine and Covenants, section 86, serving as the basis of his remarks. Members not present upon this occasion missed some very good instruction. We are admonished in the Scriptures that we should live by every "word" that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, and the Word of Wisdom is part of that "word."

Saturday, October 15, Sister Mary Shippy, Sunday school superintendent, took her school on a picnic to Alum Rock Park, the city's country playground, where the children, ranging from three to seventy-five years of age, spent a very enjoyable day, visiting, playing games, hiking, swimming, sliding, running races, and using other equipment with which the grounds are supplied for amusements. Even the older men had not forgotten the gladness of their youth and participated in a game of horseshoe, pitching with a zest that would have been creditable in younger men. The oldest one of this group is in his seventy-sixth year, but it was conceded that he held his own with the younger men.

At noontime a bountiful lunch was spread, and fifty-four "children" gathered about the board to partake of the good things, the "top sheaf" being ice cream. After all were satisfied, some one called for twelve baskets to take up the fragments. At five o'clock the children had a "hand-out" before going to their homes, after having spent a happy day in the woodland park.

L. B. Shippy was in charge of the morning service Sunday, the 16th, and Pastor Cowden was speaker of the hour. His theme was "A marvelous work and a wonder," and Isaiah 29 was chosen for a reading. At the evening hour, Brother Cowden was in charge, and Elder L. B. Shippy spoke on "Church building."

Visitors present during the day were Brother and Sister Holling, of Park-Presidio Branch, San Francisco, and Brother and Sister Allen, from Livermore.

Sister Robert Andrews and her husband who went east from this place a year ago, have returned and were made welcome by the Saints at the prayer meeting of October 19. Mr. Andrews is not a member of the church, but he says that the Saints are the most friendly and sociable people he has ever met. He with his wife was at prayer meeting again last night, at which time a good service was had. He seemed to enjoy the gathering and spoke concerning its quality. During this meeting one of the elders in charge arose and told of a vision he had seen concerning the divinity and progress of the work in San Jose, and this narrative proved to be very encouraging to the Saints. This local has of late been having some highly spiritual prayer meetings.

Friday evening, October 21, at a regular meeting of the Religio, the department voted to change the time of meeting back to Sunday night at 6 p. m.

Elder C. J. Cady was speaker at the morning hour Sunday, October 23. He gave us a good old-time sermon on "The Restoration," and sought to stir up our pure minds in the way of remembrance. Fifty were present to hear and enjoy this discourse.

Sister Grace Hook and two daughters, Blanche and Mary, from Roseville, Placer County, were visitors here that day.

The Sunday school presented a program on College Day, October 30. This was a rainy day, but the school opened with sixty-two present, and a fine program was given. Sisters Bertha Elam and Edith Young, former students of Grace-land, addressed the congregation, telling many of their experiences while at school and speaking favorably of the college. They recommend it very highly, not only to Saints, but to all people, because of the moral atmosphere, the religious surroundings, the clean and wholesome recreation and expression—splendid environment for the youth of the church and the world. Their advice to the young is to attend Grace-land if it is at all possible. These two sisters' maiden name was Gilbert.

On the evening of October 28 the Department of Recreation and Expression held a Halloween social at the home of Sister Mabel Hanson, where a very enjoyable evening was spent. Games of various kinds were indulged in by the young and old of the branch, and "spooks" stalked around. Skeletons and jack-o'-lanterns dangled in the air, and the old witch sat by her boiling pot, which has been used for about one hundred years, and told the fortune of anyone desiring to know his future. A ghost with a withered and clammy hand gave the right hand of fellowship to all who entered the door. The committee on arrangements is to be congratulated upon its success. Decorations were most appropriate. Refreshments were served at the close of the social and consisted of pumpkin pie, apple cider, and walnuts.

The latter part of the month the Department of Women held a rummage sale in the city's business district, netting fifty-five dollars or more, and very soon this department will conduct its annual bazaar in the downtown district. The word quit is not used in their vocabulary. Sister May Gilbert, superintendent of the Department of Women, has been in poor health for some time, but is better at present.

Friday, October 28, Mr. Ralph, the father of Sister Gilbert, passed on to his reward, and remaining members of the family are called to mourn their loss. May the Lord give them that comfort and consolation none other can give.

Dow City, Iowa

September 25 Brother J. L. Butterworth was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. His subject was in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Book of Mormon. The same theme was carried out at Religio, in which a pageant, "Joseph receiving the plates," was given. This was well rendered, and appropriate songs made the presentation impressive. The attendance was fair.

After the opening of the public schools, it was thought best to change the time of Religio from Friday to Sunday evening. Interest in this department is very good, and attendance is fair. Each week the superintendent appoints a member to arrange a short program for the following Sunday evening. These selections precede the lesson study, and so far this arrangement has proved successful.

The Sunday school sponsored a wiener and marshmallow roast September 20. A large crowd enjoyed the evening around a big camp fire on the hill south of town, singing songs and playing games.

Dow City enjoyed a visit from Brother Warren Oliver and wife, of Denison, Iowa, October 16. Brother Oliver was the speaker of the morning hour. His talk was touching on the financial law and the stewardship plan. This brother formerly was a member of this branch, and it is wonderful to note the progress he is making in the church work. Dow City Branch will be pleased to have him come again.

Elder Ellis Bedwell, district president, stopped here overnight October 6. and gave a short talk on Thursday evening. Several special musical numbers were given preceding Brother Bedwell's talk. He was on his way home to Lamoni, to be present at the home-coming of Graceland.

Quite a number from Dow City attended the district conference, which was held at Cherokee, Iowa.

The Misses Helen and Bernice Jackson, of Dunlap, Iowa, and Cecil Talcott, of Weston, Nebraska, were Sunday school visitors last Sunday. They, too, were formerly members of this branch. Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Newcom, of Buck Grove, Iowa, were also Sunday school visitors.

The Department of Women is busy in its line of work. Two weeks ago a social was held in honor of Sister C. E. Butterworth, the president of the organization, who was leaving for an extended visit with her daughters, Mrs. Frank Schaeffer, of Independence, Missouri, and Miss Vida, who is taking a course in nurses' training at the Independence Sanitarium. From there Sister Butterworth expects to go to visit her son Raymond and family, at Princeton, Iowa.

On account of the physical condition of Brother J. L. Butterworth, we have not been having Sunday evening preaching service for some time, but it is hoped that condition may change in order that these services may be resumed.

We are trying to "keep the camp fires blazing," but at times it seems a struggle. We hope that the way may be opened that Brother Butterworth may have some assistance in the work here.

Stewartsville, Missouri

November 9.—The past month has been a scene of many social activities for the young people of the branch.

On the evening of October 13 sixty friends of Sister Stella Wood surprised her, it being her birthday. The evening was very pleasantly spent playing games.

On Halloween night Brother Z. J. Lewis and wife entertained fifty of their young friends. Their beautiful home was converted into a Halloween rendezvous. Jack-o'-lanterns, masked dummies, ghosts, and the witch of Halloween with her fortunes, lent much to the spirit of the occasion. All entered into games and contests and had a happy time. A lunch of sandwiches, salad, pickles, and pumpkin pie was served. All the young people agree that Brother Z. J. Lewis and wife are most gracious host and hostess.

On Friday night of this week the young and old of the branch will meet at the home of Sister Mary Ault for a social.

Sunday, November 13, Brother Twombly is to begin a series of meetings at Stewartsville. We hope for good weather, so that all may come.

Last Sunday morning sacramental service was conducted, Brothers Z. J. Lewis and S. J. Hines presiding. The former admonished us to be more free in giving oblation. It was timely advice, for when we look about us at our many blessings it should behoove us to do all we can for the less fortunate.

Brother T. T. Hinderks was with us in services, and his testimony was an inspiration and comfort to all. We trust that strength may be given Brother Hinderks that we may have him with us in prayer meetings throughout the winter months.

We have had several musical treats for Religio. Last Sunday the orchestra was with us. They presented a fine program. On the evening of October 30 the Four Leaf Clover Quartet presented the entertainment. It was very good and enjoyed by all. Members of this quartet are Stella Wood, trombone; Mildred Hidy, clarinet; Veneta Hinderks, saxophone; Violet Hinderks, violin; Charlotte Woods, piano.

Each has exceptional musical talent, and we consider their programs a treat.

The Department of Women is a busy group, preparing for a bazaar to be held some time in December. These women are a band of very conscientious workers and are doing a great work.

Moorhead, Iowa

November 14.—Moorhead Saints have been trying to keep the gospel banner afloat. Regular services have been held at the church, besides some outside preaching. About every second Sunday, one of our representatives occupies at the Jordan church, Brother John Boswell occupying on November 6, and Brother Mark Jensen two weeks previously.

Several of our number attended part of the quarterly conference at Logan last month. Among those who went were T. O. Strand, John Boswell and family, Sisters Clara McDonald, Dena Mortensen, and Etta Jennings, Brothers Loren Millard, Cecil Pellissier, Arnold Adams and family, and Brother and Sister Mark Jensen and daughter Aleta.

The pageant "Remember Cumorah" as presented by Logan and Missouri Valley Saints was so much appreciated that our branch sent an urgent request to our brothers and sisters to reproduce it at our church. They were unable to do this. However, several Moorhead Saints motored to Pisgah and enjoyed the privilege of seeing it there. Among those who went were Brother and Sister Perry Mann, Brother and Sister Fred Pellissier, and Brother and Sister J. W. Townley.

Brother J. W. Lane occupied the Moorhead pulpit on October 23 at the morning service. We always welcome his fatherly visits in our homes, as well as the splendid advice and counsel given us by him from the pulpit.

Sister Lem Simpson is still confined to her bed, having been ill for ten weeks. Her faith is strong in the gospel, and she appreciates the prayers of the Saints and feels that if it is the Lord's will her health will be improved.

College Day was appropriately observed. The usual forenoon services were dispensed with that there might be more time given to honor Graceland. The program consisted of a beautiful instrumental solo by Sister Ruby Inlow; an address by Mark Jensen on "Benefits derived from attendance at Graceland, scholarships," etc.; an address by Sister Sarah Hoffman based upon her experience as cook and helper at Graceland something like twenty years ago as compared to the modern conveniences had today. Sister Hoffman feels that there is still the same loyalty and love among our college young people as was manifested in years gone by. An original "stunt" by Brother and Sister Arnold Adams, assisted by Brother Cecil Burton, was next on the program. A home scene in which Sister Aurelee was engaged in the family mending while Brother Arnold read the news was presented, being interspersed with appropriate songs by Brother Cecil, the first, "Home, sweet home." The weather report was followed by "It ain't goin' to rain no more." Following an account of Grandma Townley's ninety-second birthday party (her birthday celebration is quite an annual "affair" with us and was held on the afternoon of October 18 and attended by sixty of her friends), "Silver threads among the gold" was rendered. Several items regarding Graceland's progress and her students known to us were read from the HERALD, Record, etc., and followed by Graceland songs. Sister Lois Scott, of Omaha, another Graceland, who was visiting among us, favored us with a lovely piano solo. About thirty dollars was collected for the college offering.

Following the morning service, the majority of the Saints united in a basket dinner at the aid house and enjoyed a happy social visit while partaking of the meal. Several met at the church and practiced Thanksgiving songs in the afternoon.

The evening service consisted of a union meeting at our church of the W. C. T. U. A fine program was rendered by members from both churches, and there was a good address given in behalf of the cause of temperance by a lady from Council Bluffs. This completed a very busy but beneficial day. What a source of comfort it is at the close of day when we lay our tired bodies down to rest to feel that the day has been well spent in active service for the Master's cause, in doing good to humanity. Service—what a privilege!

Sister Mildred Querin and little daughter, of Marcus, Iowa, were present at services Sunday morning, November 6. We appreciate having our scattered members get home and meet with us.

Recently our hearts were made sad when we learned of the death of Brother Fred Oviatt, of Woodbine, also Grandma Adams, of Logan, and of the critical illness of Brother Charles Blackman, of Opportunity, Washington. Brother Blackman was a member of this branch for many years.

The Department of Recreation and Expression carried out a very successful Halloween party at the home of Brother Bert Mann and family. Much innocent fun was indulged in by young and middle aged, after which delicious refreshments were served. Much credit was due those having the affair in charge for the splendid way the event was engineered.

While practicing basket ball at school a few weeks ago, Nina Burton was accidentally hit on the back of the head with the ball, which rendered her unconscious for a short time, after which she was taken to the home of Brother and Sister Lynn Wilson, where she is boarding. Shortly afterward she again lost consciousness. Friends and home folks were summoned to her bedside and were unable to arouse her. Elders T. O. Strand and Mark Jensen were called. After administration she at once became conscious and conversed with loved ones. In a couple of days she was back at her school duties as usual. This we regard as another manifestation of God's love for his children.

We are planning to celebrate Thanksgiving by holding a prayer service in the morning, basket dinner at the aid house, and a preaching service in the afternoon. We are hoping that the attendance will be large and the day successfully observed.

Sister J. B. McElwaine and daughter, Sister Glenn Wilson, accompanied Mr. McElwaine on a visit to relatives at Sioux City Sunday.

May we ever strive for the upbuilding of the Master's work.

Davidson, Oklahoma

November 14.—Davidson Branch is still moving along at an encouraging rate.

A pleasant occurrence marked Sunday, October 23, when Sister B. A. Howard and family, of Erick, Oklahoma, drove over for services. Mr. Howard asked for baptism. Brother Z. Z. Renfroe baptized him and his three sons, also Mrs. Loyd Fisher. We are surely glad to have this number added to our branch.

Brother Howard is superintendent of one of the schools at Erick. His conversion was brought about through Sister Howard's religious training of the children. Each night they would have their study from the church books, also their prayers. Therefore great fruit has been borne as the result of this labor.

We all are rejoiced to have Brother Lew Carrow's family back with us. They are assets to the branch.

The sisters have recently served two chicken dinners, the first netting them nearly seventy dollars, the last about forty-five. These women are planning to buy a lot near the center of town on which to build a new church at some future date.

Sunday night services are having large attendance. Everyone is enjoying the pastor's sermons. We believe each sermon is better than the one preceding.

Springfield, Missouri

November 15.—Though the attendance was not large, our district conference passed away very well. Bishop G. W. Eastwood was with us and gave us some very good and timely advice, and all appeared to enjoy his counsel and advice.

Our branch business meeting was held the following night with a very large attendance, and the following officers were elected for the year: Branch president, Elder F. M. Reynolds; assistant, Elder Henry Sparling; chorister, Herman Plumb; organist for church and Sunday school, Jenett Bootman; superintendent, Grace Palmer; assistant, F. M. Reynolds. The remaining officers were sustained for another year.

Improvements on Springfield church building are about completed. On the financial side of this endeavor, the Department of Women and Temple Builders proved themselves strong factors. With our building now complete, we are hopeful that we shall be able to put on a real missionary effort. The branch has felt the need of this movement for some time.

Missionary J. T. Riley was in attendance at the quarterly conference, but Springfield Saints did not have the pleasure of hearing from him at that time. We are hoping we may have him to preach to us before very long.

The branch orchestra rendered some good selections at this meeting. It will be most helpful to hear often from this organization of musicians.

Rally Day at Nebraska City

Among the oldest branches in the Reorganization is the one at Nebraska City, Nebraska. It has made its contribution in bygone days, both in capable and consecrated workers and in tithes and offerings. This was originally the home of the Kemps, the Elvins, and other men of prominence in the early days of the Reorganized Church. And later, within the memory of the present writer, of Mark H. Forscutt, J. W. Waldsmith, the Self brothers—W. M. and R. O., and of H. A. Higgins. All of these are well known among the ministry.

All the names mentioned, with many others who might be mentioned, have either passed to the other side or moved from Nebraska City, and it has been a problem in recent years how we were going to find official material to keep the work going. But under the presidency of Elder J. Orville Preston, with the assistance of Reese Preston as priest, E. N. Byergo as teacher, and John Preston as deacon, we hope it has taken a new lease of life, and of continued usefulness to the church and to the community.

A rally day having been named by the district president at this branch November 13, the early morning found Saints from the surrounding regions wending their way by auto, and those in the city busy with preparations for an eventful day.

By 9.45, the hour set for the first meeting, the building was well filled, seven loads coming in from Lincoln, two from Plattsmouth, three from Union, and some from other places.

Sisters Robertson, Parr, and Dora Preston had the little folks in charge, while all above the junior age were assembled in the main room and were addressed by Lawrence Brockway and Ezra Oehring, two of the students in the University of Nebraska. Brother Brockway spoke for the departments in general and for the Sunday school especially, while Brother Oehring represented the Department of Recreation and Expression.

We were pleased during this session to see among those entering the building the smiling faces of several of our old friends from Guilford, Missouri.

Brother Robertson was the speaker at 11 o'clock, using Ephesians 4:16, and showing that it is by that which is supplied by every member, officer, and department that the body is compacted and is able to make its increase unto the edifying of itself in love.

After this meeting, the Saints were invited into the dining room and seated around long tables spread with a bountiful and inviting dinner.

Brother W. E. Poague, of Lincoln, district chorister, had arranged for several special songs, which were well rendered and much appreciated. We hope to see our district make much advancement along song and musical lines in the near future, under direction of Brother Poague.

After a short song service, Brother Brockway was the afternoon preacher, his theme being "The spirit of Zion." It was a splendid talk and showed deep thought and clear vision. Many favorable comments were heard on the effort of our "boy preacher."

Supper was served in the dining room of the basement of the church, and the Saints enjoyed themselves socially till time for the early evening service, which was a service of song, followed by a short sermon on the duties, responsibilities, and obligations of sainthood, by Brother Robertson.

Those from a distance left with a warm appreciation of the hospitality of the Nebraska City Saints, and we trust that we left the Saints there with a feeling of closer relationship, and of renewed courage in the work we all love.
E. F. R.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard at Carter Avenue, 4200 North

Brother John F. Garver, who was the special preacher from October 16 to October 30, delivered a series of ten sermons to the enjoyment and instruction of all who heard him. While he was comparatively a stranger to most of the Saint Louis congregation when he came to us, he won his way to confidence and esteem of all before he left. He carried with him the good will of the Saint Louis church and warm invitations to return.

The services altogether were enjoyable, and while the attendance might have been better, the spirit and attention of each service was exceptionally good. The musical features, under the leadership of Brother Bell, enriched the worship through the ministry of music.

Brother Garver's message is summarized as follows: "This is my beloved Son. Hear him!" This proclamation which characterized the first ministry of Christ and also the restoration in modern times, exalts Jesus Christ as the supreme Word of God and the complete Expression of the Divine Will. This supremacy stands unchallenged. In teachings, principles, ethics, helpful and sympathetic service to suffering and lost humanity, the unfoldment of spiritual ideals found in the New Testament are still unrivaled. He is the Word of God through whom the Infinite speaks to us and expresses his will and reveals his purpose. Through these teachings, doctrines, rituals, ethics, and the institutions of the church, are found the means of spiritual culture, and also the revelation of God's ideal of man. Those who have faith in that ideal amend their ways and seek to adjust themselves to God's will and purpose. Through baptism we signify our union with God and live a new life, establishing relationship with him. Through the laying on of hands, we submit to the control of God, in which the new correspondences make a resurrected state, henceforth, recognizing new standards of value and judging all things—in the Spirit. Through the gifts of the Spirit of God, which are available now, the potential abilities, powers, and gifts, which are in every man constituting his possible personality, are cultivated and made perfect. Such a people make up the church, which as the body of Christ in organized capacity perpetuates and extends the functions which were distinctively Christ's revealing the will of God and achieving his purposes.

Any man surrendering to this new power and recognizing this new ethic, no longer lives to himself and for himself. His life, possessions, talents, and opportunities are the sacraments through which he serves for the good of all, rather than personal profits and selfish gains. This is the principle of stewardship.

When this spirit and these principles permeate the church of Christ, individually and collectively, there will be a new social order. This will be the fulfillment of the prophet's dream of Zion and the realization of the kingdom of God, the promise of Christ, and the hope of the apostles. Here will be the reflection of the Divine Beauty, the witness of God's presence among men.

Graceland Chats

(Taken from the "Graceland Record")

Chapel Prayer Meeting

Graceland held her best prayer meeting Wednesday night, when one hundred and twenty-nine students, including a few Lamoni High students, met in the chapel. On the platform were Mr. Cheville and two students. Mr. Cheville presented as the theme of the meeting the beginning of the Boy Scout pledge, "On my honor I promise—" He pictured the value of one's honor and the valuelessness of a lack of honor.

Following the remarks were twenty-seven testimonies, in which those participating realized the responsibility they had, to represent a home, a church, friends, a school.

The meeting was one of deep meditation, where young folks were recasting the lines of their lives and making certain resolves. It was a meeting in which all participated, whether in spoken word or not—a meeting in which all were a part.

Attend Convention

The state convention of the Educational Society of Iowa met in Des Moines the last three days of the week, beginning Thursday. President Briggs, Dean Lonzo Jones, Forest Roberts, and Dean Esther C. Gates from the college attended the convention.

Dean Jones addressed the college section of the convention on the subject, "Arranging a personnel in the small college."

General Chapel

Friday chapel opened impressively with a violin solo by Verna Schaar. After the Lord's prayer by the student body, the Athenian Quartet sang a beautiful response. The spirit of Graceland was felt strongly at this chapel, and the song, "Oh, come, ye sons of Graceland all," furnished an appropriate background for the program which followed—the challenging of the students to support the Acacia of 1928.

The subject was presented by Raymond Smith, editor of the Acacia, and Harry Emmerson, business manager. It was suggested that each student use his available two cents to write home for the cash necessary to obtain a copy of the annual. A unanimous decision was made to keep the Acacia of the same superior quality, which proved again that the Acacia as a "cross section of Graceland College" means much to the student body.

Sunday Services—Oratorio

Sunday being sacramental Sunday, the choir gave its usual concert in the evening. Miss Hatch sang a sacred solo,

"Open the gates of the temple." Stanley Barrows played an appropriate trumpet solo. The Oratorio Society sang "Jerusalem," with Grace Lane singing the solo part to the anthem.

A sermonet on "The business of living" was given by A. R. Gilbert. When "Willie" talks, he has something to say, and says it. He set forth some valuable principles in the matter of our common problem of living. His summarizing sentence was: "Before making a decision, consider whether or not you want the consequences and how much it will cost."

Graceland Students Wed

Sunday night, in the presence of a few friends, Miss Alice Kaestner, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kaestner, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Methner, of Claire, Michigan. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Mabel Carlile sang "At dawning" by Cadman, and "Because" by De Hardelot, accompanied by Byron Neville.

Just at seven o'clock, to the strains of Mendellsohn's wedding march, the bride and bridegroom approached. Mr. Roy Cheville, the officiating minister, preceded them to the altar, banked with white chrysanthemums, where the single ring ceremony was performed.

Mr. and Mrs. Methner will live with the bride's parents during the remaining part of the school year and will continue their studies at Graceland.

Mapleton, Kansas

We have been dilatory in writing concerning the work in Mapleton. However, it is not because we have done nothing; on the other hand, we feel that as a band we have had a profitable year thus far. The Saints are in a better condition, spiritually, than they have been for several years. Unity, love, and peace seem to be the watchwords. Out of a membership that is represented by thirty-five families, all are regular attendants except two.

Several events of note have taken place since our last chronicling. These we shall list as follows:

On the third day of July we held an all-day meeting with regular services in the morning, preaching by Lee Quick, after which we went to the water's edge, where the pastor, Hollie Dennis, was permitted to baptize nine precious souls into the kingdom. A basket dinner was served, after which a confirmation and prayer meeting was held. Preaching service in the evening was introduced by orchestra and choir work.

On July 4 the Saints operated a stand requiring a lot of consecrated, unified effort to make a success. However, after the din of battle had cleared away, we found seventy-five dollars and twenty-five cents on the right side of the ledger.

A wonderful two-day meeting was enjoyed by the Saints on the third and fourth of September, the autumn weather being ideal for the occasion. A good spirit prevailed throughout the two days, and everyone present felt strengthened to move on and work more earnestly and diligently for the one great goal. Saints were present from Arma, Girard, Eldorado Springs, Prescott, Fort Scott, Independence, and other points. The first meeting was held Saturday morning, it being a prayer service, followed by a problem meeting in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening by Bishop B. J. Scott. Sunday morning came with a Sunday school session, preaching by Amos T. Higdon, and at the noon hour a basket dinner was served in the city park to over two hundred and fifty people. At half past two a splendid prayer meeting was had, Brother R. T. Walters, district president, presiding and being assisted by Missionaries Lee Quick and Amos Higdon and twenty-five members of the priesthood being present. The evening sermon was by B. J. Scott.

We greatly appreciate the coming of Aunt Mattie Hughes into our midst this winter. She is staying with her sister-in-law, Mrs. H. C. Hughes. Aunt Mattie has been on the sick list but is some better now.

All summer we had planned a series of special meetings for the fall, so on September 25 they were begun with Elder J. W. Paxton as speaker. Rain immediately made its unwelcome appearance and stayed with us for about ten days. After the weather cleared up, Brother Paxton's throat became affected so that he had to leave on October 9. We were sorry to see him go, for he had made a favorable impression while with us. An S. O. S. call was sent to Brother W. E. Haden, and, although he had an appointment for another meeting, Monday night found him on the job. He certainly looked good to us, and an interested crowd of two hundred people awaited his arrival. His first two weeks of sermons were on the program of the church; the third and last week was more of a missionary effort. On account of his appointment made at Coal Hill before coming to us, Brother Haden felt that two weeks was as long as he could stay with us, so accordingly at the conclusion of his first two weeks the meetings were closed and he was preparing to leave for Coal Hill early Monday morning. But before sunup a call came from one of the most beloved couples in this community that they could not wait any longer, and consequently a sunrise baptismal service was conducted by Brother Haden. After this experience, meetings were taken up for another week, resulting in the induction of nine more souls into the church by Elder Haden and the pastor.

An all-day meeting held on the last Sunday of October was attended by three hundred people. Attendance all day was fine, and interest ran high. The whole community was stirred up. The only sad part was that Brother Haden could not stay any longer. A banquet and program were given in honor of the new members on Friday night, after the close of the special meetings. Lunch was served to about two hundred and fifty people. An orchestra from Blue Mound helped us at this function and occasionally during the meetings. We can not measure the good or estimate the value of these meetings to us.

A pound, tacky, and surprise party was given in honor of our pastor on November 9. The party members met at the church and drove to his place in a body. Then all gathered outside the house and started singing the good hymn, "The old, old path." Everyone present was young, even though old, because each member joined in playing games and acting as young children as much as they possibly could. There were present old maids, school girls and boys, hoboes, etc. Brother Hollie received many useful pounds, and the pound party turned out to be a pounds party. He appreciated the gifts, but more the spirit in which they were given—the spirit of cooperation among Saints.

Burlington Loses Good Worker

BURLINGTON, IOWA.—After suffering intensely for six days, Elder John J. Jenkins passed away on October 23. A ruptured appendix, followed by two operations, caused his death. The best of care and the city's best physicians and surgeons did all that was humanly possible. It is probable that Brother Jenkins submitted himself to their care too late for successful results.

Brother John was administered to several times, and a wonderful degree of the Spirit of God was poured out upon the Saints of the branch in two special prayer meetings held in behalf of the afflicted one. The Saints were made to fully sense that Brother John was in the hands of God. It did not seem to us that we could possibly afford to be without the service of our brother. He was very active in all of the branch activities, ever willing to do his part cheerfully. A faithful member, administered to by men of integrity, "If they live they live unto me," saith God, and "If they die, their sins are forgiven and they die unto me."

DANIEL B. SORDEN.

Mallard, Iowa

November 11.—Our faithful few are striving to keep the Lord's work on the move, each one doing his bit as we travel along.

Sister Hill and family, of Ayshire, met with us October 16.

Some of our members attended conference at Cherokee October 23, so attendance at home was small. However, regular services were held, and we were glad to have our brothers and sisters avail themselves of the opportunity to attend. It was a great thing to be prepared to fill the vacant places, and God blessed us in so doing.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held its Halloween party at the home of Elder Robert Fish. Brother and Sister Fish enjoyed the social time and were glad to have us come. About forty were present, perhaps half of them being nonmembers. A good program was given, after which the evening was spent in playing games. We were glad to have Brother Ellis Bedwell with us. Refreshments were served, and we enjoyed a splendid evening. We hope to have many such gatherings during the winter.

Brother Bedwell spent a week here, holding meetings every evening. He spoke mostly on the program of the church. He brought out many new and good thoughts, and his efforts showed that he is striving to fill his office and calling in a profitable manner.

On October 30—Graceland College Day—we had arranged a program, but Brother Bedwell being with us was called upon to talk as a student of the college. He told us many good things and tried hard to impress upon our minds what our college should mean to us.

A good attendance and fine spiritual communion service were had on sacramental Sunday, November 6. Brother and Sister Peterson, Brother and Sister Person, and Sisters Ida Horne and Jane Crane, of Albert City, Brother and Sister Herring and son Robert, of Charles City, were visitors. We are pleased to have our brothers and sisters meet with us when they can.

Kentucky and Tennessee District Baptize Thirty-five

In a few brief words I shall try to express our appreciation to our heavenly Father for the wonderful blessings he is bestowing upon us here at Foundry Hill and also throughout the Kentucky and Tennessee District. I am glad to say that the Lord has not forgotten us. He is pouring his Holy Spirit out upon us more than ever before. Why? Because we have humbled ourselves before him and have united our efforts before him. My dear brethren, I would to God that we might all humble ourselves and realize the beauties and blessings that are in this great gospel.

A word concerning the condition of our branch and the district may be of some benefit to HERALD readers. When our reunion began, we were at a very low ebb spiritually. But the Lord was good to us in sending us Brother Thomas Newton as missionary. Brother Newton is the man for whose help we have been praying. Elder J. O. Dutton was with us during our reunion and did a good work while here.

Since July we have had the privilege of baptizing thirty-five, and there is still a number yet to accept the gospel. One of those baptized was a woman ninety years old.

District conference convened with Foundry Hill Branch. Although weather conditions were bad, we had a large crowd. The Holy Spirit was felt in our midst. We were happy to have Apostle Roy S. Budd with us, and his beautiful sermons have given us a better theme for life. There were six ordinations: Brothers Robert Warren, J. P. Jimmerson, and C. B. Gallimore to the office of elder; E. M. Seaton, priest; T. W. Paschall, teacher; Homer Ross, deacon. We want to say the work at High Hill and also Bethel is progressing nicely. We are hoping to get the other branches to work.

I want the Saints in Kentucky and Tennessee to cooperate with me. Remember, Saints, of what we have we owe the Lord a tenth. I do pray that we may do our duty. I want to be as the Doctrine and Covenants says we must be if we assist in this work, humble and full of love.

The Saints all love Brother Newton. He is doing a great work here.

My prayer is that the district will progress.

PURYEAR, TENNESSEE.

C. B. GALLIMORE.

Lees Summit, Missouri

November 15.—October 16 at Lees Summit Branch Brother McWethy of the presidency of the Holden Stake, presented the name of Brother Marshall Martin, of Independence, for our pastor. This name was accepted by the branch. Brother Martin comes to us highly recommended by the First Presidency, and, although he has been with us only a few weeks, we think he is a fine young man, ready to sacrifice in many ways for the upbuilding of Zion.

Sunday morning, October 23, President Floyd McDowell was with us. It is always a great pleasure to have Brother Floyd with us. He gave encouragement to both young and old, urging them to greater activity in the cause. At the evening services we were again made happy to hear Brother McDowell's father.

Sunday, October 30, at the morning hour Brother T. S. Hartnell was the speaker. We feel ourselves very fortunate in having such efficient men to present the gospel in these latter days. At eight o'clock College Day was observed. With us was one of the college boys of the church, Brother Leslie E. Flowers, who gave a lecture while pictures of Graceland and the men and women who have made our college, activities of the school, etc., were shown upon the screen. We are thankful we have such a place for our boys and girls and hope all who can will not miss the opportunity to join that student body. A very good collection was received.

Sacramental service was one long to be remembered by Lees Summit Saints. A spirit of reverence was manifested by all. Brother Martin was assisted by Brother R. V. Hopkins, of Independence. The prayers and testimonies were uplifting and inspiring, and the nearness of our Savior was felt in our midst. Elder Hopkins arose, and with the Spirit resting upon him gave us a message both in prophecy and in tongues to cheer and comfort us and to warn us to be faithful. Our hearts were deeply touched.

A series of meetings began Sunday, November 13, with Elder William I. Fligg as the speaker. Attendance is good, being composed of members and nonmembers. His theme throughout the meetings will be, "We are laborers together with God for the upbuilding of his kingdom." If we are laborers together with God, we must be of service to him. Also "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Elder Fligg has the prayers of the Saints that the seed of truth may be sown in the hearts of those around us.

We appreciate the help of Independence people, Sister Hattey, Sister Weaver, Brother Friend, Brother and Sister Cox, and the junior choir of Walnut Park Church, with their director, Sister Margaret Gard. Sister Gard asked us if we were giving our services as those girls were. I wonder if we are giving our services to carry on the work as our forefathers, or are some of us in doubt and falling by the way-side? It is good to see the young preparing themselves to carry on the work.

The Department of Women is working to wipe out their church debt this year. They will hold their annual bazaar on December 9 and 10.

A Halloween party was given at the home of Brother and Sister Childers, which entertainment was enjoyed by about sixty in number.

Central Los Angeles Branch

Corner Thirty-ninth Street and Grand Avenue

Since the district conference of Southern California two months ago, the Los Angeles Saints have pressed forward with greater vigor than ever before. The peace and good spirit of the conference have had a far-reaching influence. Under the splendid organization of our pastor, Gland A. Smith, the priesthood have set out to visit the members, and already their faithful efforts show worth-while results in greater attendance at services, increased spirituality, and a closer touch with members who are ill or who can not attend church because of other hindrances.

A correction should be made in the account of Southern California conference, published in SAINTS' HERALD of October 12. The account begins on page 1199, but the mistake occurs in the latter part of the second paragraph of the first column on page 1200. Beginning on the eighth line it reads: "Superintendent Women's Department, Sister Gregory, Long Beach"; and it should read, "Superintendent Women's Department, Sister Cameron Stewart, East Los Angeles."

The Wednesday evening prayer meetings are a spiritual feast. Testimony, prayer, and song follow the theme suggested by the leader, and it seems the greater the unity along this line, the greater is the spiritual blessing to one and all. Attendance at prayer meetings has increased four-fold during the last ten months.

During the last few weeks, Apostles Gillen and McConley and Patriarch W. A. McDowell have favored us with visits and discourses. Their sermons have been instructive, encouraging, and uplifting. We like to have them come our way.

The local publicity agent reports an increasing call for copies of the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Bible; also that a number of Saints have ordered books and papers as gifts for others.

Graceland College Day was most appropriately observed in Los Angeles. The entire eleven o'clock service was turned over to former Graceland students. Short talks were given by several and music by others. Graceland would be proud to hear the good things said about her by various speakers, and much amused at some of the escapades they experienced when within her sheltering walls. The purpose of Graceland, the need of religious education today and our part in supporting this institution were some of the topics covered. At the evening service the pastor spoke on "Our creed." He quoted the many passages in Doctrine and Covenants that not only sanction, but command improvement of one's mind by study and observation of peoples, countries, books, and nature, the seeking of all truth.

Under the leadership of Brother L. L. Sutherland, the Sunday school is moving forward, as is evidenced by increased membership and lively interest in department activities. The monthly teachers' meetings are giving us an opportunity to work out some of our problems that heretofore have gone unsolved.

The primary department is missing one of its classmates, little Amy Ruth Lewis, who is in the hospital. They have taken her a doll, books, and sent birthday cards, all of which were enjoyed by not only Ruth, but by other children in the same ward. Ruth is doing nicely now, and we hope she will be with us soon.

Halloween festivities were in charge of the Women's Department. A large crowd was present, and a great deal of amusement was created by the many masked faces and novel program numbers.

Last week the Boy Scouts, with their scoutmaster, Brother Richard Wagon, took a hike to Switzer's Camp in the mountains, four miles north of Pasadena. While they were around the camp fire enjoying a story, they were surprised by a thunderstorm, which necessitated quick action in order to keep dry. It was quite an enjoyable experience to see how well the boys really could work together in an emergency.

A number of educational activities are now in progress. Sister Fern McConley is fostering a quartet composed of senior boys. We are expecting some numbers from them soon.

Sister Margaret Wickes Jones is teaching voice and pipe organ, which is a wonderful opportunity for our young people. Sister Jones and Sister Dana Crum have recently turned out another organist by their unselfish effort in behalf of others and the church.

Sister Laura L. Freie has a class in dramatic interpretation, composed of senior girls. Sister Freie has done some splendid work in dramatics, and we see great possibilities in her class of senior girls. "The rock," put on recently under the direction of Sister Freie, was perhaps the most impressive play ever given in the church at this place. The cast was well chosen, parts were thoroughly learned, and the players caught the spirit and beauty of the lesson set forth. The play was repeated at Santa Ana and was greatly enjoyed by all who saw it.

Recently Brother Newland, Sister Wallace, and others have brought lovely dahlias, chrysanthemums, and roses that have added much to the already beautiful auditorium. These gifts have been especially appreciated, as they were the product of the labor and care of those contributing them. Sisters Viola Bouge, Mabel Crum, and Lucile Crawford, and Brother Newland have made special efforts to arrange the flowers artistically.

Choir members are taking their places Sunday evenings now, as well as Sunday mornings. The increased interest and added service are much appreciated by all who attend. Mildred Nesser and the Crum quartet have furnished several vocal numbers this month. Pastor Gland A. Smith has sung a number of beautiful hymns, illustrating or emphasizing thoughts connected with the theme of various sermons. These have not only been impressive lessons as to the thought couched therein, but have also brought greater appreciations of Latter Day Saint hymns and renewed interest in musical activities.

Irwin Jenkins, cellist, and Sister Margaret W. Jones, organist, have given us some beautiful duets of late. The audience has been inspired and uplifted by this lovely instrumental music, and services following seemed to have been enhanced by it. Friday, October 28, a musical concert was given by Irwin Jenkins and others. An appreciative audience was present. Sister Jenkins has reason to be proud of her son, who is just entering upon a musical career as both a cellist and a vocalist. With his talent, training, and earnestness, he will undoubtedly achieve success. The offering taken at the close of the concert went to the organ fund.

The young people are getting ready for the Southern California young people's rally to be held November 19 and 20. A splendid program has been arranged. More about this later.

Utleyville, Colorado

We are continuing faithful here, and attendance is getting better all the time. We hold our Religio session Sunday evening before preaching, and every two weeks on Friday night have a program for the young people. The church is full at both meetings.

Brother Bullard was here a short time ago and gave us some good sermons. Also District President Bruce E. Brown has been here. Brother Brown always gives us good sermons, and attention is fine.

Our Christmas offering is steadily growing. Quite a bit was raised by the Saints' giving their Sunday cream and eggs. We hope to have over a hundred dollars by Christmas.

Mrs. I. N. De Long.

Fresno, California

November 9.—An item of interest to many is the marriage of Brother Alma Andrews and Sister Ona McClane, which occurred in the church Friday evening, October 28, Brother A. S. Votaw, pastor, officiating and using a ring service with the regular church ceremony. The church was prettily decorated with asters and greenery, and the wedding was well arranged. "The bridal chorus," from Lohengrin, was played by Sister L. W. Roberts, at the piano, as the bridal party entered. Miss Aileen Smith was maid of honor, and Brother Arch B. Fugate acted as best man. Preceding the wedding march, Sister Louise Roberts Kaiser sang. Mary and Irene Inman were flower girls, and little William Krazchel acted as train bearer. Brother and Sister Andrews were tendered a reception by the Department of Women of the branch. Brother Andrews will be remembered as one of the assistant superintendents of the district Sunday school. He is assistant pastor in Fresno and also Sunday school superintendent.

Brother L. W. Roberts is still faithful in driving to Sanger every Thursday evening; Brother Andrews has often gone with him. The members of the little group there are always faithful and appreciate the effort in their behalf.

Attendance in the branch has waned at all services, but those who come are still interested and desirous of carrying the work forward.

Kansas City Stake

Bennington Heights Church

The Saints are all happy, and a splendid feeling exists as the result of the series of meetings held by Elder Wilfrid Tordoff, stake missionary. Last Sunday marked the end of the two weeks' series of meetings, and it was with much reluctance that the meetings were brought to a close. To permit the young people to attend the young people's meetings at the Central Church, it was decided to discontinue the meetings; but Brother Tordoff hopes to return in the near future to continue his labors here.

Instead of the regular preaching service last Sunday morning, a testimony meeting was held. At all times there was some one on the floor telling of his joy and gratitude; and the meeting continued past the regular closing time. Testimonies were borne by the children as well as by the older folks; and one brother, who is not a member of the church, testified that he also was enjoying the spiritual feasts. He recently became a member of the Sunday school. The gift of prophecy was manifested.

The Saints have been brought closer together through their united prayers for Teddy Agin, age three, who has been afflicted with infantile paralysis. Teddy is not yet able to walk, but is able to support his weight on his limbs; and contrary to the prediction of the doctor, his legs are not becoming thinner, but are filling out. He is steadily improving.

Sister Emily Beaman, after being confined to her home through illness for several weeks, is now attending meetings at the church. Sister A. L. Meyers was not able to attend last Sunday on account of sickness of herself and her little daughter.

While the Saints are enjoying divine blessings, they are reminded to "praise God from whom all blessings flow," be humble, and show their appreciation by good deeds.

Second Kansas City Church

During the month of October, a series of meetings of one week's duration was held, Brother V. D. Ruch being the speaker. The sermons were edifying and educational, and the meetings were fairly well attended. Sister Ruch was present and assisted in the song service; also rendered a number of solos, which were enjoyed and appreciated.

A Halloween party was given by the Sunday school for the benefit of the young folks, which was well attended by both old and young. All seemed to enjoy themselves.

Brethren H. A. Higgins, F. A. Evans, and H. R. Higdon have occupied the pulpit during the preaching hour at various times. Each one was blessed in the effort to encourage the Saints to live nearer to God, to study and learn and be workers together with God to make the world better.

A few weeks ago the little daughter of Brother and Sister David Graham was accidentally shot, pneumonia developed in the wound, and although physicians gave them no hope for her recovery, yet through the administration by the elders and prayers of the people, her life was spared and she is now as well as before the accident. The family is deeply grateful for the blessings of God to them, and we all join with them in praise and gratitude because the God who did the sea divide and let his people through is still the same.

Sunday school and Religio are doing well; all other meetings well attended.

Mount Washington Church

November 9.—Elder W. D. Tordoff, the missionary for Kansas City Stake, recently concluded a series of meetings at the Mount Washington Church.

Prior to the beginning of the meeting, the local Saints organized their church into two groups for the purpose of conducting a friendly contest to promote attendance and interest in the meetings. All participating in the contest recognized the need of subordinating the contest to the real purpose of the occasion, and worked together in such a spirit of friendly rivalry that there was a uniformly splendid attendance every night.

The total attendance for the series lasting two weeks was sixteen hundred and thirteen. Mount Washington has a membership of one hundred and ten and is located between Independence and Kansas City. The meetings attracted many of the Saints from both of these places.

There was a good, consistent attendance of nonmembers each night, and Brother Tordoff enjoying good liberty held their interest. At the time of this writing, eight have been led into the watery grave to emerge into a newness of life. The message found lodgment in many hearts, and we feel sure that others will cast their lot with God's people as a result of the meetings.

By common consent the local Saints agreed to engage in a moment of prayer at half past twelve each day during the period of the meetings. A short vesper service was also held each evening before the song and preaching services. Of a surety our heavenly Father does recognize the united and humble sincerity of purpose of his people, for the peaceful presence of his Spirit was enjoyed from night to night.

On Friday night of the first week of the meetings, following the regular service a short social was held. Simple refreshments were served, several games were played, a number of songs were sung, and the large crowd went home happy and much better acquainted with one another. The following Sunday the various families brought well-filled baskets to the church, and an old-fashioned basket dinner was enjoyed at the close of the eleven o'clock service.

Splendid musical numbers were contributed, and a number of our brothers and sisters came from Independence and Kansas City to sing and play for us. Brother Tordoff's musical contributions with voice and guitar were enjoyed.

The meetings closed October 23. However, Brother Tordoff returned the following Wednesday night to make plain to another large and deeply interested audience the distinction between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church.

The local Saints were much encouraged by the series of meetings, and rejoice to know that our heavenly Father was pleased with the effort. The result of this series of meetings is another evidence of God's willingness to supplement the efforts of his children with his Holy Spirit, if they will move forward with humble, united courage, to gather other sheep into the fold. "There may be some at your very doorstep who will enter into the kingdom if you will seek them out with divine assistance."

Central Church

The main auditorium was filled to capacity last Sunday morning, and at the 11 o'clock hour Elder Cyril Wight spoke to an appreciative audience and urged that we do not permit ourselves to be turned away from our tasks of life because of what some one might say. The question was asked, "What are you weaving?" He pointed out very clearly there were those who were permitting their talents to be buried because of the useless things they were doing that in the final analysis will have nothing to do with the upbuilding of the kingdom of God. A quitter is contemptible in the sight of God and man, and we should not permit ourselves to become cynical, for there is a direct relation between us as individuals and God; and while that relation to a certain extent has been measured in terms with our fellow man, it is to be determined upon the confidence with which we increase that relation and its richness and fullness with our heavenly Father. He urged that we get a clear vision, or we would not see our task. We lose the reflection of God when we lose our vision.

At 7.15 the stake orchestra rendered several pleasing numbers preceding the song service, which was conducted by Elder John Sheehy, more familiarly known to readers and radio listeners as "Uncle John." It was the beginning of the young people's meetings, and the audience filled every seat available. The opening song was No. 141 of Zion's Praises, "Onward, Christian soldiers," and under the direction of Brother Sheehy the singing was very much inspired, and the Spirit of God reigned throughout.

Apostle "Danny" Williams was the speaker, and as his sermons are to appear in the HERALD under a separate caption, we will not endeavor to consume space to tell you of the wonderful message that he presented each night.

On Monday night a terrific rain came up at about seven o'clock, which prevented a large attendance, but one of the touching events of the evening was when Brother Sheehy called to those present to come closer to the altar for the benediction that we might be close to the hallowed influence of the Spirit of God and receive his blessings ere our departure.

We wish that the isolated Saints who read these columns could have enjoyed the messages that were rendered through the gift of song. Each of the fourteen churches contributed some musical number, which proved a sweet communion to the soul of man that he might be prepared to drink from the word which was to follow. The S. W. S. Ladies' Quartet (service with song) rendered several numbers at different times, and each time was requested for more. Each church had a captain, with an honor roll list of the members of their church. Northeast Group won first place for the entire week, having ranked first in percentage of their enrollment each night, with the exception of one.

Sunday, November 20, the entire day was given over to quarterly conference, Apostle Williams being the speaker at eleven o'clock. The afternoon was given over to prayer service, women's meeting, and priesthood meeting.

The stake orchestra rendered a beautiful service at 7.15, and at 7.30 Brother Sheehy wielded the baton. After a good song service, Apostle Williams addressed the congregation, his subject being "The challenge of the Christ of 1927." At the conclusion of the service, Brother R. L. Bishop, in behalf of the young people, presented Brother Sheehy with a bill fold which contained four new five-dollar bills, a token of our appreciation of his service during these meetings. After accepting it and telling us of the wonderful time he had with us and of the new friends he had made, Apostle Williams was then presented with a like bill fold and a brief case. He stated he was pleased to have been with us and had received courage and strength by so doing at a time when he needed it most. Thus the 1927 series has closed, and we have gone back to our respective churches, feeling strengthened and encouraged and better prepared for the battles of life.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Blue was blessed at a recent meeting and given the name of Betty Jane.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Rush (Hazel Hidy) announce the birth of a daughter, born Armistice Day, November 11.

A Thanksgiving dinner will be served at the church at 12.30 for the nominal price of seventy-five cents a plate. It is anticipated a number will attend and enjoy the good fellowship, and an invitation is extended to neighboring Saints.

Idaho District

November 6 Brother Calvin H. Rich and I closed a splendid meeting at Boise, Idaho. The Saints did everything they could to make this effort a success. About forty dollars was paid for advertising purposes. Handbills were taken to most of the doors in the city by Brother Rich, myself, and each family in the branch. However, we did not get the attendance of nonmembers we expected, on account of bad weather and an epidemic of infantile paralysis. This disease has made itself evident in a number of the cities of this State, and the schools in many places are closed.

On the last day of our meeting, the Lord through Elder Rich gave the Saints a very comforting message, saying that if they were faithful they would increase in number until the building they now have would be filled. One brother who was baptized was told that if he were willing to do the Master's bidding, God would make of him an instrument for good among men.

Boise Branch has a splendid group of men and women. They have bought a good church building and will pay for it, for each is willing to do his part. And these members are not neglecting first to pay their tithing. Brother Earl F. Hoisington is at present the branch president, and he is supported by leved-headed men who hold the priesthood, Brothers John Cato and David Vantrump, also Brothers Hull, Jackson, and Anderson. These men are strong and sound in the faith. In the walks of their daily life they talk that which they preach in the pulpit.

We have but four branches in this district. There are, however, many scattered Saints, and they need attention. And this attention can not be given them except to a limited extent, since I am working alone.

At Hagerman Brother Silas Condit is branch president. This branch is one of the oldest in the State. Judging from what they tell me, it seems that nearly every one of the leading men in the church has been here at one time or another; that is, every man except the president of the church. On this point Idaho District is rather inclined to find fault.

Brother Condit is doing splendid work. He is a young man and earnest in his labors. Attendance at church is good; Sunday school also is well attended. They are putting some improvement on the church building, which will help preserve its appearance and usefulness.

Filer Branch is in charge of Brother H. P. Hanson, a man who loves the Lord. Saints at that place have no church building in which to meet. They are at present holding Sunday school and other services as well in the residence of Brother James Winegar. They have in mind the procuring of a building of some kind in the near future. Some fine young people are in this branch. The membership of this band is respected by nonmembers.

The branch at Rupert has Brother Arthur Condit at its head. He is doing well. A splendid building is owned by Rupert Saints, and they are out of debt. Brother R. C. Chambers has moved back among them and will be a great help. This is among the best branches of the district.

From my standpoint I see a big improvement in conditions. There are only a very few who are unsettled in their course Zionward. I am praying the Lord of the harvest to send more men into the field.

HAGERMAN, IDAHO.

Stone Church

"The greatest thing for which to be thankful," was the subject of the sermon by Elder W. D. Tordoff at the Thanksgiving service in the Stone Church Sunday morning. The "greatest thing" to Elder Tordoff is the restored gospel of Jesus Christ and the church which believes in a God of today and in the gifts and fruits of the gospel.

The congregation sang, "Come, ye thankful people, come," as the opening hymn. The Stone Church Choir, under the leadership of Paul N. Craig, presented the cantata, "The landing of the Pilgrims," by Coerne, Albert Brackenbury sang the baritone solo parts. Elbert Dempsey, tenor, sang a solo, "Thanks be to God." Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the service, with Bishop J. A. Becker assisting.

Elder Tordoff read from Saint Luke, chapter 6, for the scripture lesson. He then discussed many of the things for which thanks might well be given: homes, mothers, country, freedom of opinion, and property. He spoke of some things which others "have not," for which those enjoying them should be thankful: health, hearing, speech, and sight.

"Be not hasty in branding people with labels which handicap them," says Elder Tordoff. "I am thankful for the desire to examine myself, and for a Father who looks beyond my faults and sees the good in me and in others." There is no such thing as two absolute classes, one all good and one all bad.

Using the apt illustration of a boy shouting up the mountain side and hearing the echo of his voice returned with the selfsame words, Elder Tordoff pointed out that one receives from the church, from life, or anything else in proportion to that which he puts into it.

Speaking of appreciation of friendships, he said, "We do not lose our friends through death, but through unkindness and misunderstanding."

Evening Services

Religio program Sunday evening was of unusually pleasing variety. It began with a violin solo played by Mildred Hill. There were readings by Eleanor Ruth, Dorothy Marie, and Jane Fairbanks, and a well-executed piano solo by Emma Jean Etzenhouser. The little girls of the Department of Recreation and Expression are doing their part.

"The Lord has said in latter-day revelation that with none is he displeased except those who do not confess his hand in all things. When men permit the Lord to do so, he will direct the destinies of the nations. The ideal government is one led of God—theocratic. As a people, we believe the Lord intended that this magnificent land of ours should be used to God's name, honor, and glory. This week is set apart by custom and by proclamation of the President of the United States as Thanksgiving week." Thus Pastor C. Ed. Miller began his discourse at the Stone Church Sunday evening.

In an impressive manner he emphasized the blessings we have in the liberty we enjoy. An account of a visit made to the oldest ship afloat, the Success, a British vessel used many years ago to carry prisoners to Australia, was most interesting.

The American characteristic to boast of the advantages, the progress, the beauties, etc., of the United States, Elder Miller thinks, is only another way of expressing gratitude for the many blessings we as American citizens enjoy every day of our lives.

Beginning with the departure of John Robinson and his flock from England and their settling in Holland where they might worship according to the dictates of their consciences, Brother Miller carefully sketched the story of the Pilgrims and early American history; and by way of illustration, a series of lantern slides were shown to the congregation. Historic photographs of people, places, and things, such as Plymouth Rock, the house of Governor Bradford where the first Thanksgiving was held, the first railroad, the national monument to the forefathers, William Penn making his covenant with the Indians, the Boston Tea Party, the room where the Declaration of Independence was signed, the Liberty Bell, Bunker Hill Monument, old North Church, Washington taking command of the Continental Army, Betsy Ross and the first Flag and many others were exhibited, and explanations were had from copies made of old records now to be found at Plymouth, Massachusetts.

Should not we of modern America who have so many blessings, be thankful for the brave work of our stout-hearted forefathers who established the annual custom of giving thanks to the heavenly Father for protection, crops, homes, and for their freedom to worship him?

A cornet solo by Earl Cox, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Cox, was a special feature of the 7.30 song service. Congregational singing was led by Brother Francis Holm, Robert Miller at the organ, and Miss Voelpel at the piano. A solo was rendered by Job Negeim, accompanied by Robert Miller. In keeping with the theme of the evening's lecture, the congregation with Brother Miller read the song, "The breaking waves dashed high on a stern and rockbound coast," and then under the direction of Brother Holm sang the hymn. Brother Bert Taylor offered the invocation and benediction.

Liberty Street

Thursday evening, November 17, a chili supper was given at the church, sponsored by the young people's class of the Religio. After supper a program was presented. There were a vocal solo by Grace Edwards, a reading by Betty Crawford, a vocal solo by Evelyn White, reading by Bernice Boyd; and Erma Peek and Evelyn White contributed a vocal duet. Brother George Fender gave a reading. Proceeds from this supper will be used for the completion of the basement of the church.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Cheet was blessed by W. E. Shears and Leonard White at the morning service on Sunday. At this hour Brother and Sister Fred Koehler gave a vocal selection, "It pays to serve Jesus."

Elder John Soderstadt was speaker for the morning hour, taking his text from Doctrine and Covenants 85:8: "And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willetth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, can not be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still."

The men of the congregation were in charge of the Religio program presented at the evening's session following the lesson study.

Elder George A. Gould was the preacher for the evening hour.

East Independence

On November 13, Pastor N. Carmichael was the morning speaker, and Elder John Davis occupied the evening hour. Both preached excellent sermons, their themes centering about the home, the duties of parents and children, etc. If all parents would try to build up a home such as these brothers pictured to us, Zion would soon be redeemed, and we would have a delightful place in which to live. There is too much laxity in our homes, and Saints should remember that homes are the foundation of the Zion of which we talk so much. When will parents rise up, sense their duties, and realize that they are responsible for the little ones God has intrusted to their care?

Pastor and Sister Carmichael went to Lamoni last Wednesday and were not with the branch on November 20. Elder Davis spoke twice on this Sabbath, giving us many things upon which to ponder.

A Thanksgiving service and basket dinner are planned for Thanksgiving Day, Thursday. Saints of the district hope for a large attendance.

Spring Branch

Elder John F. Sheehy preached a Thanksgiving sermon to a house filled almost to its capacity, at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, and Brother Snively occupied in the evening, speaking to a smaller but nevertheless appreciative audience. He held up Jesus and John the Baptist as two types of men reaching maturity under maternal guidance and paid a splendid tribute to motherhood, dwelling upon its influence in shaping the manhood of the world for the work that must be accomplished if God's will be done.

Some of the older Saints were commandeered to furnish part of the program for Religio Friday night. Brother Snively and Sister Mabbott were among those who responded with some of the zest of former days, and each "spoke a piece."

The prayer service Wednesday night was in charge of Henry Badder and Jesse Smith. This meeting was held in the primary room in the sub-basement on account of easier heating facilities.

Brothers Tankard and Brewer were in charge at the early Sunday morning prayer service. This was an especially good meeting. "Safely through another week" was the theme. The time was fully occupied. About thirty were present.

The Temple Builders' dinner given at the Stone Church dining hall last Thursday night was quite well patronized and netted about fifty dollars, which amount was turned over to the bishop. Many compliments were given on the quantity and quality of service.

The choir is getting in some solid rehearsals on the Christmas cantata "Bethlehem," to be given on or near December 25.

Council Bluffs Closes Week's Series of Meetings

Saints in the Council Bluffs congregation who have been members of the branch there for twenty-five or more years, said Sunday night that the series just closed was the greatest and most effective that was ever held in that place.

Choosing for his theme, "The faith of the mountain top," President McDowell treated various aspects of this subject in a most interesting way and drove home his argument with characteristic force. A full house every night, and especially on the two Sunday nights, when many were unable to gain admittance to the church, testified to the interest of the Council Bluffs Saints in supporting this project.

The young people organized intensively and gave their support without reservation. While the week's series was planned particularly for young people, yet every member of the congregation was cordially invited to participate.

Under the influence of beautiful music and inspirational preaching, many were enabled to catch a new vision of the gospel of Christ, and many voluntarily pledged themselves anew to the great tasks ahead, not only in sustaining interest in church affairs, but in missionary enterprise as well.

Although President McDowell was not in the best of physical condition, yet under the power and unction of the Spirit of Christ he was enabled to do some great preaching, and drawing from his seemingly inexhaustible resources of information, experience, and spiritual power, he brought to the Saints of Council Bluffs a vision of Christ and of his gospel, and of worthy tasks to do, that challenged the best personal as well as group endeavor of those who heard.

The meetings closed Sunday night as half past nine, yet the congregation wanted to stay and review with each other the events of the week—to pledge each other in handclasps a mutual support.

The week's series will prove of lasting good and benefit to those who determined to apply to their lives the principles of the gospel of Christ.

Portland, Oregon

October 30 was rally day. Brother Eli Bronson's sermon in the morning was on Graceland College. A banquet was spread in the lower auditorium, which was decorated in autumn leaves and crepe paper of blue and gold, thus using the colors of Graceland. Our branch president, Brother Walter H. Barker, was toastmaster for the occasion, and the following people spoke on various subjects relative to the problems of the branch: Brother P. G. Hager, the bishop's agent; Sister Ethel Bronson, district Sunday school superintendent and president of the Department of Women of Portland; Sister Lila Livingston, district chorister and superintendent of the Portland Sunday school; and Sister Eunice Livingston, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. A problem meeting was held in the afternoon; and Brother Bronson spoke again at the evening service.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party in the lower auditorium of the church on October 29. Everyone appeared masked, which added to the gayety of the occasion.

On October 31, the Erodolphians, the young married people's Sunday school class, commonly known among the younger generation as the "Airedales," or "Airtights," entertained at the home of Brother and Sister Hayley Laird. Brother and Sister David Mitchel and Brother and Sister Laird were duly initiated into the Erodolphians, and they now have all the rights and privileges of that far-famed organization.

At the sacramental service on November 6, the Saints centered their prayers on Brother Asa Clement, who is very seriously ill, and Sister Besse Young, who has been afflicted for several weeks and does not seem to be improving. Brother Mark Yeomans was present at the sacramental service. His illness has caused both him and his wife to be absent for several months, and as they were both active workers as teachers in the Sunday school and Religio, they were missed. We are very happy that Brother Henry Livingston's health is still improving and that he and his wife are back in the ranks of the workers. Administrations and the prayers of the Saints for the sick have brought about many blessings, but we are still remembering and praying for those less fortunate ones in the branch.

"Pray in faith, and pray unceasing
To the God we love and trust,
For our prayers are much availing
If we walk upright and just."

Brother Walter Barker read for the text of his sermon, on November 13, the familiar verse from Jude 1: 3: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints." Then he took the words from No. 104 in the Saints' Hymnal, "O for a faith that will not shrink," and delivered a most wonderful sermon.

In the evening our old friend, Brother M. H. Cook, our former district president, happened in very unexpectedly, and it was a pleasure, indeed, to hear his voice from the pulpit again.

The young people's convention will be held on December 2, 3, and 4; and we are very happy to announce that Brother John F. Martin will be the speaker. He is a stranger to most of us, but we have heard of his attributes, and we are very keen to meet him.

It will be a great help to those in charge if the Saints from out of town who will be in need of housing accommodations will please notify Sister Verna Laird, 19 East Seventy-ninth Street, Portland, so that the necessary preparations will be made. We are assuming that everyone in the district will be present to help make the convention the best ever; and we invite visitors from our neighboring districts to come and see what a fine lot of young people we have in our district.

Interesting College Day at Los Angeles

Sunday, October 30, we had a good College Day in Central Los Angeles, judging from reports from the Saints and not just my own feelings about it. One sister told me she enjoyed every minute of the eleven o'clock hour, and if we are to judge by the response had in offering for the college fund, we will not find such a bad indication there either. The offering for the college was taken up at the close of the service Sunday morning, and it was seventy dollars and twenty-two cents. Of course the regular collection fell off quite a bit, but we have hopes of making up any deficits along that line.

Perhaps the program for that hour might interest you. We had the choir in their usual places, and beside that had all the former Graceland students that we could muster, on the rostrum. The choir opened and sang their anthem; then came the singing of the alma mater hymn of Graceland. Elder Wilbur D. Gillen was the first speaker (ten minutes), and his subject was a little history of the school. The former students then sang "Graceland forever." Sister Minna Mae Lewis then talked on the place of education in the church, or in God's plan, followed by a very excellent piano solo by Sister Loene Kibler. The last talk was to be inspirational and was given by Elder J. R. Johnson. The song written by Sister Vida Smith, to the tune of "Believe me if all those endearing young charms," was then sung by Sister Margaret Wickes Jones. I had the honor then of suggesting to the folks that now was their time to add their part to the program, by making their offering. And they did. It was not to be expected that any one of the speakers could tell all there was to tell about his subject in ten minutes, but all did well. An effort was made to use only former Graceland people in the program. I was the only one who had any conspicuous part to play that had never been there. I did not know there were so many in Los Angeles who had attended the school (about eighteen). GLAUD. A. SMITH.

An Inconsistent Critic

In the Scientific American for November, 1927, an article on "Science and scientists" is quite enlightening. I quote a small section: "We have all met people who deride science. Scientists amuse them. Scientists do queer things and have such queer ideas. They make queer mistakes and—well, they're just a little queer themselves, you know. A man harangued one of our editors in that vein the other day, for half an hour, while both rode to New York on a commuters' train, crossed on a ferry, rode again in a subway.

"The world would have been better off without it," he said, summing up against science.

"And almost in the same breath he knocked the subway for being slow.

"That man lives in a house that without the benefits of science would have been a dimly lighted hovel; he travels on trains made possible only by science, and, we noted, conversed about the enjoyment of his radio (no science, no radio), his car (science), wore glasses fitted by science, and was literally surrounded by the results of science of whose benefits and significance he never took time to reckon. And there are lots more like him.

"We wished that, for a day, we could have abolished the conquests of science and set him back in the ages of Faith, the early Middle Ages. He couldn't even get his face clean (then). Soap is the product of science.

"And, so to speak, that's that."

No matter how spiritually minded we may become, and no matter how much faith we, as a people, exercise, and say and know we have, we can, besides saying and doing similar things, to "remove hence," to yonder mountain and it will remove—we can advance materially, and spiritually with the scientific world, and with scientific leaders.

Why not use all the blessings the Lord puts in our way, both scientifically spiritual and scientifically material?

All things were created spiritually before they were created materially, Genesis tells us. E. C. J.

MISCELLANEOUS

Priesthood Institute of Denver

To all who are planning on attending the priesthood institute in Denver, Colorado, December 2, 3, 4: Please notify E. J. Williams, 1210 East High Street, so that provision can be made for your entertainment. The institute will be held at the church on the corner of Speer Boulevard and Logan Street. Take any street car going south on Broadway, get off at Speer, and walk four blocks east. Bruce E. Brown, 215 East Oak Street, Fort Collins, Colorado.

Ministerial and Departmental Educational Conference

The ministerial and departmental educational conference of West Virginia District will meet at Parkersburg, West Virginia, Saturday, December 3, at 10 a. m. We expect a splendid program and would be pleased to have the Saints throughout the district to make it possible to meet us there, and especially those to whom papers have been assigned. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis will be present, and we expect many good things from him. We trust all will make an effort to be present at the first meeting. Regular meetings and Sunday school of the branch will be taken up with the educational program. Alma Booker, district president.

Attention, Michigan Saints

Those that attended the young people's convention at Park of the Pines will well remember the many pleasing activities of this gathering. One phase was the splendid organized effort of the musicians, and we all promised that the next convention would find us prepared to do even better work. Some of the plans are now ready for you, and we know that you have been eagerly watching for this announcement. Let us help in making this the most musical church in the world.

The sacred cantata "Daniel" will be rendered at this convention. It is not difficult. Anyone who can properly sing hymns can sing this. Order your book now from Oliver Ditson Company, Boston, Massachusetts, and ask for "Daniel," by Root and Bradbury. Single copy, 75 cents. On receiving the book, read the text; also read the story as given in the Bible. Get the spirit of this beautiful message.

The following anthems will also be used: "The Lord is my light," by Frances Allitsen. "Fear not ye, O Israel," by Spicker. "God is our refuge and strength," by Dudley

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN, 240 Travis Street, N. E.

Conference Notices

Alabama District, at Lone Star, December 9, 10, and 11. Come, Saints, and remember this is the time to elect officers for another year. We expect to have President Frederick M. Smith with us, or Apostle Roy S. Budd, or both. G. W. Miniard, secretary, McKenzie, Alabama.

Musical Institute

A musical institute will be held in Kirtland District at East 110 Street, and Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, November 25, 26, and 27. All who are interested in music in any of its branches are especially invited to attend; also any who would care to spend a pleasant week-end are invited. Meals will be served in the church Saturday evening and Sunday noon and evening. Mrs. F. T. Haynes, district chorister.

Request for Prayers

Brother E. W. Brimm, 26 South Kensington Avenue, La-Grange, Illinois, requests the prayers of the Saints in his behalf, that his sufferings may be less and he may be able to obtain rest and sleep. Brother Grimm will enter his eightieth year December 29, and is subject to constant and severe pain.

Sister T. D. DeHay, Montalba, Texas, asks the prayers of the Saints for herself, her husband who is an invalid, and her niece. They live in isolation and stand in need of divine assistance.

Two-Day Meeting

A two-day meeting, rally day, will be held in Hammond on December 3 and 4. This meeting will serve the double purpose of a rally day, and home-coming to celebrate the remodeling and decoration of our church. All are invited, especially the branch officers of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District. The program has not been fully arranged, but we can assure you that your time will be well spent at this meeting. J. H. McGuire, pastor.

JAMES.—Orville Lymond James, a son of Thomas and Mary Ellen James, was born in Pittsfield, Pike County, Illinois, May 8, 1870. At the age of thirteen he came with his parents to Independence, Missouri. While living at Independence he attended Woodland College, later taking a business college course at Spaldings, in Kansas City. January 16, 1895, he was united in marriage to Isabel Robinson. In 1903 he moved with his family to Tulsa, Oklahoma, where with Wallace N. Robinson he engaged in the hotel business. In the succeeding years he was variously associated with Brother Robinson in the Robinson Hotel, Tulsa, and Tulsa Hotel, and the Saint James at Sapulpa. He also was proprietor of a hotel in Vinita, Oklahoma, and Emporia, Kansas. In 1913-14 he erected the Orville Apartments at Ninth and Forest Streets, Kansas City, Missouri, and lived with his family there a number of years. During his location in Kansas City he was very active in church work, leading the choir work as well as helping in many other ways. At the time of his unfortunate death, he was residing in Claremore, Oklahoma, and was owner of the Sequoyah Hotel and Radium Baths at that place. During his absence from Independence, he still maintained a residence there, the place where he and his family came from time to time to enjoy the pleasures of home and extended hospitality to their friends. October 19, while driving to Saint Louis to enjoy a happy reunion with his family, who were returning from a vacation, he received his death wound by the skidding and overturning of his car near Rolla, Missouri. Soon he was surrounded by his loved ones, and everything possible was done for his recovery. Sunday night, October 23d, at 8.40, after a great struggle, he fell asleep in death. Early in his youth he embraced the Christian faith and has lived a faithful and devoted member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to the end. His integrity of soul, his virtuous and manly life, and his faithful attendance to the tasks allotted him have won recognition among all who knew him, and the respect and friendship of men in all classes of life have been his reward. Of the immediate family, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Belle Robinson James; his daughter, Mrs. Shankland S. Arnsion; his son, Orville Thomas James, of the home place; also his aged mother, Mrs. Thomas James; two sisters: Mrs. L. R. Wells, Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Frank Esgar, of Independence, Missouri, and a number of other relatives. His funeral was conducted from the home place in Independence, 809 West Waldo Street, in charge of J. A. Tanner, assisted by Bishop A. Carmichael. He was peacefully laid to rest in Mound Grove Cemetery.

ARNOLD.—Isabelle Kendall Arnold was born at Maryport, England, March 12, 1839, and came to this country with her mother when three years old. Her father, an elder in the old church, was killed by the falling of a scaffold. The mother and her three children settled in Nauvoo, Illinois, and she has lived there and in that vicinity all the rest of her life. She died at the home of her daughter in Keokuk, Iowa, November 12, 1927, at the ripe age of 88 years and 6 months. She leaves one son, George Arnold, of Independence, Missouri; three daughters, Mrs. John W. Garrison, 1508 Palen Street, Keokuk, Iowa; Mrs. Emma Huggins, Hamilton, Illinois; and Mrs. Alice Peters, of Independence, Missouri, all present at the funeral, besides many other relatives and many friends. She united with the Reorganized Church at Nauvoo, Illinois, in October, 1864, and has been a faithful member. She was buried alongside her husband near Hamilton, Illinois. She lived a widow thirty-six years.

FRYXELL.—Harrison J. Fryxell was born April 11, 1906, at Lincoln, Nebraska. Died October 24, 1927, at his home in Omaha, Nebraska. United with the church June 11, 1916. Brother Harry was a graduate from the Central High School in Omaha and also attended the University of Omaha. He was a musician of promise and served ten years in the church as pianist, being one of the responsive and active members of the local church. Everyone loved Harry. He was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. John Fryxell, and leaves them stricken with the deepest grief. There also survive other relatives and many friends. Funeral services were held in the church. Sermon by the pastor, J. L. Cooper, assisted by Elder James Huff. Interment in West Lawn Cemetery.

MYERS.—Sarah A. Dillivan was born near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in July, 1859. Passed peacefully away at her home in Deloit, Iowa, September 4, 1927. At the age of six years she came in a covered wagon with her father, W. W. Dillivan, two brothers, and two sisters, to Carroll County, Iowa. Was baptized September 11, 1881, by Ira I. Goff, remaining a faithful member until death. Her home always was open to the ministry. On March 14, 1882, she was united in marriage to Myron E. Myers. To them five children were born, Mearl, Lacy, Mrs. C. R. Imes, Mrs. H. G. Newcom, and a son who died in infancy. Left to mourn are her husband, four children, three grandchildren, three half sisters, one half brother, two stepsisters, one stepbrother. A faithful wife, a loving mother will be greatly missed. Sermon by D. R. Chambers, assisted by Earl Winey.

POWELL.—Lovina R. Powell, daughter of William and Jane Powell, was born September 8, 1878, near Ravenwood, Missouri, and departed this life June 1, 1927, at Independence, Missouri. Uniting with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in early childhood, she lived a faithful Christian life, was strictly honest and upright, in all her dealings worthy of imitation. Left to mourn their loss are two brothers and three sisters: Frank and Joseph, of Ravenwood; Mrs. Mary Jane Thomas, Fort Scott, Kansas; Mrs. Sophia Gunsolley, Mapleton, Kansas; and Mrs. Martha Hawley, Ravenwood; besides many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held from the Christian church at Ravenwood, Bishop Milo Burnett, of Saint Joseph, in charge. Interment in Sweet Home Cemetery.

HAYER.—Lorenzo Hayer, only son of Hans and Sarah Hayer, was born in La Salle County, Illinois, July 14, 1853, died at Lamoni, Iowa, November 3, 1927. On March 17, 1881, he married Bertha Danielson, who preceded him in death June 27, 1921. There survive their four daughters, Mrs. John P. Garver, Mrs. James E. Kelley, Mrs. Vaughn C. Bailey, Mrs. R. Leo Brackenbury; his four sisters, Mrs. M. J. Danielson, Ellen L., Mrs. W. E. Hougas, Mrs. W. H. Sumption; his thirteen grandchildren, other relatives, and many friends. Brother Hayer was in his young manhood baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He served many years as a priest in the ministry. He was ever faithful. Services in charge of W. E. Prall, sermon by Bishop A. Carmichael. Interment at Lamoni.

JENKINS.—John J. Jenkins, eldest son of Winchester and Eleanor Jenkins, was born at Colfax, Iowa, July 12, 1886. Died at Burlington, Iowa, October 23, 1927. When a young man, Brother Jenkins was baptized a member of the church. He served in the ministry first as a priest and in his later years as an elder. Diligent and dependable, he was always in demand and will be much missed both by the Burlington Saints and those of the Nauvoo District. On October 20, 1907, he married Ethel Luke, who with his two sons, John and David, survive him, as do also his mother, his sisters, Mrs. William Zwang and Mrs. D. J. Williams, the latter on a mission with her husband to the Hawaiian Islands, and his brother, Winchester. Services in charge of his pastor, Daniel E. Sorden. Sermon by J. F. Garver, an old-time friend. Interment at Burlington.

SARTWELL.—Harry Sartwell was born January 26, 1883, and became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints February 24, 1924. His death occurred very suddenly Monday, November 14, at his home, the old Sartwell homestead near Savanna, Illinois, following about two months of ill health. His passing came as a shock to the entire community, especially to his devoted wife and other near relatives. Left to mourn are his wife, Margaret; two daughters, Wilma and Ione; one son, Wilber; his father and mother, Homer and Emily Sartwell. (Continued on next page.)

The Way to Prevent Crime Is to Teach Virtue

Reprint of an address by Walter Scott Athern on Crime Prevention, first published more than a year ago in Industry, has just reached our desk. Although our recognition of it is somewhat belated, we feel that it contains much of current worth for our people, especially those interested in the field of religious education.

The facts given in the address are based upon extensive research conducted by Doctor Athern under the direction of The Institute of Social and Religious Research, of New York. This alone, should give them considerable weight.

Among the significant conclusions from this study we note the following:

1. Millions of American children and youth are unreached by the educational program of any church. Nineteen out of every twenty Jewish children and youth, three out of every four Catholic children and youth, and two out of every three Protestant children and youth under the age of twenty-five are not enrolled in any religious education school. Certainly the following question is pertinent: "How long can the moral integrity of a nation be maintained when seven out of every ten of its children and youth receive no systematic moral or religious training?"

2. Extensive testing of the ethical ideals of our American youth indicates a very low level of such ideals. To quote the exact words of Doctor Athern: "Results show that a surprisingly large percentage of the rising generation are potential liars and thieves."

3. There is a high susceptibility to immoral conduct in typical groups of American youth. "The major crimes are committed by boys who were in knee trousers when their older brothers went forth to fight to 'make the world safe for democracy' . . . more than half of the automobile thieves are boys of the high school age."

Contributing Causes of Crime

Certainly, if our readers have been observing some of the harmful results of the materialistic philosophy and the open attempt to spread atheism among the young people of today, they will feel that the following warning from Doctor Athern is most timely: "When a belief in a personal God fades from the life of a people, the crime rate will increase correspondingly." "Such a vital faith in a personal God places moral obligations on the individual . . . he becomes a coworker with God; all property is sacred and must be preserved for the furtherance of God's will."

Much of the current philosophy taught in the schools of our Nation tends to substitute for this faith in a personal God and allegiance to him, the thought that in last analysis conduct should be determined upon the immediate impulses and personal desires of the youth. It is thought by some today that nothing should be permitted to check those responses which have as their end the gratification of our instinctive desires.

Is the Church at Fault?

"If morality can be taught so that it controls conduct with certainty, why do our children record so high a percentage of moral delinquency? Who has failed? The homes? Yes. The state? Yes. But the major blame for the present crime wave must be borne by the church. The church assumed the responsibility for the spiritual and moral training of the children of this country when religion was removed from the curriculum of the public schools. But the church has failed as a religious and moral teacher. Why has the church failed? The answer is clear. The church has never taken its educational work seriously. Sunday schools have been supported on a penny collection basis. Voluntary teachers have been untrained and unsupervised. In the mounting crime rate we record one of the evidences that the church has failed as a teacher of morality."

The Way Out

The following conclusions of Doctor Athern are significant:

The crime wave is due to the absence of an adequate program of moral and religious education for the childhood and youth of the Nation.

Children are not born crooks or degenerates—they become criminals by bad training or from the lack of moral training.

Failing to provide instruction in religion and morality, spiritual illiteracy follows as a natural consequence.

The way out of our present condition is by the road of moral and religious education.

What, then, is the cause of crime? The failure of society to teach virtue.

How long will the crime wave last? The crime wave will last until society builds a system of moral and religious schools to match our public schools.

F. M. Mc.

"More of Your Time"

A public man recently gave expression to this sentiment: "Be content with less rather than strive for more, and above all remember that it is not more money or things that your family really needs from you, but more of your time."

The sentence has caused me to reflect. God has said that he requires one tenth of all that we possess of material wealth, to be given as a tithe to him. When it comes to our time he has required one day out of seven instead of one out of ten—the tithe is to be kept holy unto the Lord; the Sabbath is to be holy unto the Lord. If we are able to accumulate more wealth than is needed to supply our just demands, that surplus is to be given to the Lord's treasury, in order that others may have what is for the supplying of their just demands. Should we have more time than is needed or demanded in the production of that which shall be consumed by us in the regular progress of life, it should be given to the church, the kingdom of God on earth, that others may possess what we possess and enjoy. The family is entitled to its just wants and needs out of your gross production of material things.

Now comes the real problem: What shall I do about giving my sons and my daughters enough of my time to insure their getting every protection my experience and ability can secure for them? Am I justified in trusting their mental and moral development to the care of specialists whose services I purchase, while I spend what I consider to be superior ability, devote my more finely discriminating mind to the purpose of securing wealth for their enjoyment? If in the race for wealth I can excel, what about the race for character? If I can build up a great estate of houses and lands, what about a legacy of service to my loved ones and the public? The legacy of a fine mind devoted to lofty ideals, the accomplishment of great philanthropic purposes?

And all of these thoughts as they run riot bring me up with a start at the consideration: Time is the principal thing. God has given me as much of this fundamental element as he has given any other man. How shall I distribute my inheritance of this valuable and fundamental thing is my principal problem. Surely if my children are entitled to a first claim on the accumulation resultant from my life's effort, it is because they have prior claim upon the element which I have expended to produce that accumulation.

I believe the lecturer declared a truth of great importance: "It is not more money or things that your family really needs from you, but more of your time."

Electricity is generated at a very low cost per unit, but there is so much loss in transmission and in passing through the transformer that its cost to the consumer is multiplied. If customers could take and use it just as it comes from the turbine, how much lower would be the cost, and thus the Nation's resources might be conserved. And if we feel it necessary to send our knowledge of life and all that pertains to it over foreign lines and through human transformers whose real efficiency and loyalty is continually a problem, is not the cost too great? Why not discard some of the mediums and consequent losses, and give yours more of your time?

His Love O'er All

By Elizabeth M. Davis

Like to the restless heart of man,
The tossing of the rolling sea,
For ever flinging longing arms
And questioning eternally.

And oft at night my listening heart
Hears in the city's human roar
That lonely calling of the sea
Beating some wild and barren shore.

Like to the great Creator, God,
The calm, eternal mountains stand,
Majestic, changeless through the years,
Vast works of an Almighty hand.

Or gaze by night on glittering spheres
Wheeling in their appointed ways;
And lo, our eyes have him beheld,
Moving in power and majesty.

But this I know in saddest moods—
O'er all the world God's spirit broods,
O'er fields and cities, raging seas,
And mighty mountain solitudes.

STRATFORD, ONTARIO.

The Auditorium Walls Are Rising

At the right is seen the steel derrick by which concrete is raised to the required height, and delivered to the forms through the chute as seen in the picture.

Back of the seven pillars may be seen the steel framework on which the ramps in the southeast corner of the building are being constructed.

Each week sees appreciable progress in some part of the building. At the present time, steel has been delivered and is being set, completing the structural part of the front entrances. Steel is also in transit for the pillars which will encircle the ellipse of the first floor, rising from that level at various heights, from fifty-two to sixty-four feet. On these pillars will rest the steel structure of the great dome which will surmount the building.

The church outside the immediate vicinity of the city of Zion is wondering how fast the work of construction progresses, and the HERALD feels this picture will give them some idea of the accomplishments of the builders up to the present. Our next will be a close-up of one corner, and will give a good conception of the ramps which rise at each corner of the building.

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

Selfishness and Service

"I'm going to get mine while getting is good" has become almost a world-wide slogan. It expresses that which is representative of the spirit directly or indirectly responsible for a large percentage of the suffering and distress so apparent in the world today. Here is the same idea otherwise expressed: "I don't care a jar of jam what becomes of Simp, or Sam, just as long as I can by hook or crook control the forces which will bring comfort and ease to me and mine." This attitude is just as unfortunate as it is wrong, and will ultimately die by its own hand, as it does not have rootage in truth. The Master has said, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." He gives us to understand in another statement that at the proper time the "tares shall be bound in bundles and burned." That which is of God will finally triumph.

Today the whole world is in a state of anxiety, perturbation, and unrest, resulting from this fretful fever we sometimes call life, which in truth is but the unwholesome spirit of selfishness so prevalent in "these latter days." No particular age can claim it as its own, for it is as old as the "everlasting hills," growing more mischievous perhaps with age.

If I mistake not, selfishness was the spirit which prompted Lucifer to obligate himself to perform a certain piece of work, providing he should have the glory. Even the disciples of our Lord were not altogether free from the insidiousness of this spirit, as is evidenced in a request made by James and John, the sons of Zebedee (Mark 10: 35-37), and according to Matthew I understand that the mother was likewise a party to the scheme.

First they undertook to commit the Master to the promise that he would grant unto them whatsoever they might ask. The Lord was not only the master of himself, but the situation as well, when he calmly asked, "What would ye that I should do for you?" I am disposed to think they entertained the hope that their selfish request might be granted; for they answered at once, "Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory." Then and there he witnessed the manifestation of the very thing he came to destroy, and I have wondered just what his feelings were while listening to their strange, wild request. The words employed in the answer were wonderful, because they were the words of life, representative of the powers he served; for in his reply he not only administered a rebuke, but was able to present unto them the real significance of their ministry when rightly understood. Here is his answer: "Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism I am baptized with?" In our vernacular, "Are ye willing to undergo the severe experience of refining fire which consists of fortitude to bear the cross which I bear; the serenity to endure the trials and hardships which I endure; and have ye the faith to look beyond this vale of tears into the glorious garden which follows the work of service? Are ye willing to lose your life that ye might find it?" When they replied that they were able to do these things, Jesus assured them that the cup from which he drank they would likewise drink; the baptism which was his should be theirs, etc., in order that they might qualify for service by having the dross of selfishness "burnt and purged away," then proceeded to tell them that, "To sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared." No doubt the occupancy of any and all will be determined by the discipleship evidenced or the fruit that is borne.

This is not all that was presented to these sons of Zebedee, for the crowning beauty of his observations was offered in the following: "But whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: and whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

I wonder if James and John caught the import of this magnificent answer? Has the world heard it? In truth I am wondering if the church collectively or individually has gathered the divine import of the wonderful spirit of real greatness presented to us through the Master's experience with these wonderful men, the sons of Zebedee, for I am sure the experience through which they passed and which Jesus foresaw made them great.

The more I become acquainted with the spirit of service as presented to us by the Savior of men, the greater is my faith in the ultimate triumph of the church and the redemption of Zion. With this faith comes a greater desire to make my contribution to the forces that sooner or later must set the world on fire through the spirit of service. May God speed the day when the church at least shall through its membership die to selfishness and sin, and under the baptismal fire of God's Holy Spirit rise to heights divine, and thus make possible that for which Jesus taught us to pray: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

Gomer Thomas Griffiths: An Autobiography—5

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

In the spring of 1879, I labored with William B. Smith in the Northeastern and Northwestern Districts of Missouri. We visited Far West and the regions round about, from which the early Saints had been driven. John M. Terry and I preached on the corner stone of the temple before a large concourse of people. They had a mass meeting on this occasion, people assembling from different parts of the country for miles around. Brother Smith took for his subject, "What is a temple?" He told us that he was present at the time the corner stone was laid and outlined the significance of the Temple, as well as the use and purpose for which it was intended. I had never heard before, nor have I heard since, a more intelligent exposition on this subject.

Later we visited the Haun's Mill country, where seventeen of the Saints had been killed by a mob and were buried in a well by the Saints. We crossed the Grand River close to that point into Daviess County, and did considerable preaching. Here also our people had received severe persecution at the hands of the enemy. Subsequently I visited this part of the country alone, and a son of one of the old mobocrats tried to kill me with a knife, but a strong and powerful Missouri woman came to my rescue, standing between me and his murderous arm with a hickory chair. I could see murder in his eyes, and the situation was quite serious for a while, but the woman won out.

I am thankful I had the privilege of traveling with "Uncle" William, he being one of the most genial and sociable companions with whom I have ever traveled in the ministry. I loved him as I would a father; he was good, kind, and considerate, and helped me wonderfully when I was ignorant and helpless.

Brother Smith told me that his father, Joseph Smith, the patriarch, in blessing him, predicted he should live as long as he desired. He did live to a great age, until he wanted to die. I met him again at a conference held in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1883. He was then very old and feeble.

It was my good fortune to become associated that year with Alexander H. Smith, William T. Bozarth, and Rudolph Etzenhouser, all three of whom took an interest in my welfare and assisted me with their good counsel. I have always had a warm feeling in my heart for these men. Brother Smith was especially good to me, helping me with my language, criticizing my English, and in many other ways helping me in those things that would be for my good in the work of the ministry. Like his Uncle William, he was as a father to me. In later years Brother Smith and I traveled in other missions together, were associated together in the high councils of the church, in the apostles' quorum, and now I, too, am occupying as a patriarch, in which ministry he died.

In the fall of 1879, I met the late Joseph Smith in Lamoni, Iowa, this being our first meeting since the time I had met him in the little chapel in Saint David, Illinois, in 1866. We slept together at the home of Elijah Banta. I received the kindly advice from Brother Joseph during our sojourn there which proved to be a source of great strength and encouragement to me.

From there I went to Gallands Grove, Iowa, to attend the General Conference which was then held twice a year. This grove was large and beautiful, and there seemed to be several hundred tents pitched on the grounds, which gave much the same appearance as one of our modern reunions.

On the afternoon of the day of my arrival, President Smith announced that I would be the speaker at eleven o'clock on the following day and would be assisted by W. T. Bozarth. This being my first introduction to General Conference and having never met with so many apostles before, I felt very much depressed at the thought of having to face such a large audience and to preach before so many of the high dignitaries of the church. Brother Bozarth and I slept together that night, or rather we went to bed together, but the spirit of deep sleep was not troubling me; the thought of having to preach the next day was! Finally I thought I had a brilliant idea, which was to have Brother Bozarth occupy the pulpit in my place. This he finally consented to do. I was relieved and did not give the next day's service and sermon further thought. At the close of the prayer meeting the next morning, Brother Joseph came to me and said, "I understand you are not going to be the speaker this morning." I then told him of the arrangement I had made with Brother Bozarth, but my plan did not meet with his approval, for in an authoritative manner he said, "You are going to be the speaker as announced."

You can imagine my feelings as I walked up toward the stand. I really felt like a lamb being led to the slaughter. Just then Brother Joseph took me by the hand and said in a kindly, sympathetic voice, "Be not afraid, for the Lord will bless you with his Spirit, and you will have good liberty." As I arose to begin the sermon and looked over that large audience, I wished I were miles away. I saw Brother Joseph only a few feet away, with those piercing black eyes looking right through me. Conditions were now reversed! I was no longer the ten-year-old boy looking at him; but the prophet, comfortably seated, was looking at me, ready to hear what I had to say. I felt very much embarrassed at first, but soon learned that I had his prayers and sympathy.

At the close of the service, Brother Joseph took me by the hand and said, "Did I not tell you that the Lord would bless you?" Many others complimented me on my effort.

It was encouraging for me to be associated for so many days with such good, cheerful, happy people, and I felt greatly stimulated to press forward in the work. At this conference I was called to the office of seventy. When informed that my name would be presented before the conference for ordination, I questioned the wisdom of such a move at that time. That a young boy with such limited experience and education should be called to occupy in such a high and important office seemed out of reason to me. There was one thing I thought was in my favor—the people before whom I stood to preach, judging from my appearance (I was very slim, weighed about one hundred and twenty pounds, and had a little moustache), did not expect much from me.

There were others whose names had been presented for ordination at this conference, including Joseph Luff. He requested me to accompany him to the woods that we might pray about the matter and see if the Lord would not give us some personal evidence as to the divinity of our calling. Out there in the woods Brother Luff made one of the most wonderful prayers I had ever heard. My prayer was very short. Judging from the degree of the Spirit enjoyed by Brother Luff in his prayer, I concluded that he would be fully satisfied of his calling, and I felt he was fully qualified for the position. I was very much surprised when he informed me that it was not his calling and that he would not accept, but he told me that it was my calling and advised me to accept the ordination. However, I could not quite understand why the Lord would choose me and not Brother Luff, whom I knew to be a brilliant speaker, so I made up my mind to decline. But later Alexander Smith, of the Twelve, and E. C. Brand, president of the Seventies, urged me to be ordained; they told me that everything would come out all right and that I would be abundantly blessed of the Lord in this calling. I was ordained to the office of Seventy by William H. Kelley.

After my return home from this conference, I passed through a terrible time of darkness, almost doubting the call I had received because of my conscious inability to magnify the office; but the Lord, in his great mercy, gave me in a dream abundant evidence of the divinity of the call. In my dream I was standing on the corner of a prominent street in the city, and there was another street coming in another direction in front of me, where I stood on a platform. On this platform there seemed to be two stands, one on top of the other, behind which I stood. Far down the other road were crowds of people surging about. A man with a team of horses came along, called my attention to these people, and directed that I go where the people were and preach to them. This I refused to do, whereupon he took the top stand away, the removal of which caused the lower stand to rock to such an extent that I was forced to quit talking. Before the top stand had been so placed, I was able to talk, but having once been placed and then removed, my ability to talk was taken from me.

When I wakened, I had the interpretation of my dream. The first stand stood for the office of elder, which office is primarily for local work; the second stand, which had been placed on top of the first, stood for the office of seventy, which required traveling and going where the people were and there preaching to them. It seemed to imply that if I did not go forward in my new calling I would be unable to accomplish a work in the other. I went forward and made an effort to magnify my new calling, which office I held for about seven and one half years.

*Do you drive a car? You do not try to drive it on next year's income, do you?
Nor do any of us want the church to run that way.*

Shortly after this, in company with William T. Bozarth, I visited Cameron, Missouri, and other sections in and around Far West. At Crooked River, near Kingston, I delivered a series of sermons under great difficulties, as there were a number of descendants of the old mobocrats living in and around the vicinity who had no special liking for the Saints. This was the place where they horsewhipped one of our ministers, Harvey Green, years ago. They made a great many threats against me, but the Lord protected me from mob violence, and I was instrumental in his hands in baptizing fifteen people before I left the neighborhood. One of this number was Charles Duncan, who was then between sixteen and seventeen years of age. He later became one of our able missionaries, traveling quite extensively in the Virginias, Ohio, Colorado, and other States. He passed to his reward some years ago in the West.

While I was preaching here, the leader of a crowd of young men, a half-Indian, met me in the water as I was coming out with one of the candidates, and requested baptism. I at first doubted his sincerity, thinking it was his purpose to take me out into the water and then try to baptize me, thus making fun for the onlookers; but when I came nearer I discerned that he was in earnest. I complied with his request. I also baptized a young lady school-teacher who proved to be a descendant of one of the old-time Saints. During my stay here I organized a branch.

Upon leaving, I went back to Bevier and Macon, Missouri, in both of which places I did considerable preaching and baptized a number. Also visited Saint Joseph, Missouri, and from there went to Independence, Missouri, where I found only a few Saints residing at that time. They met in the home of John Brackenbury on the East Side.

I visited Holden, Missouri, taking with me Rudolph Etzenhouser. He was a young man but had manifested a desire to work in the ministry. We took up our residence with Sister Scarcliff, mother of Frank Scarcliff. He entered the ministry before we left that place. I was permitted, through the kindness of the Lutheran minister in this place, to use his church, he sharing the pulpit with me, he preaching in German and I in English.

From here Brother Rudolph and I went into the country a few miles from Lees Summit, where we had been invited by a young man, a member of the church, whose wife was not a member. He took us to the schoolhouse on a cold winter night and then returned to his home, leaving us to fill the appointment. We had a large audience, and they seemed much interested in what we had to say. At the close of the service I told them that we would remain and preach for them providing we had a place to stay. But no one invited us, so we were left in the schoolhouse to get along as best we could. We went out to the woodshed, brought in some wood, and started a good fire in the stove. We were getting ready to lie down to sleep when we heard walking on the outside; then the door opened, and a young man entered. He asked us if no one had invited us to his home, and we answered, "No." He said that he was a hired man, that it was about four miles to the place where he was working, and that he was almost home when the thought came to him that perhaps no one had invited us, and so he came back to see about it. He extended an invitation to go home with him. We were rather hesitant, not knowing the people with whom he was staying, nor how they might feel, but since the young man assured us that everything would be all right with the "folks," we went with him. It was with a feeling of timidity that we entered the dining room the next morning upon being called down to breakfast. This feeling was soon dispelled by the welcome that was extended to us by the good man and his wife. A splendid breakfast followed.

Since our audience of the previous evening had not manifested enough interest in the continuance of the meetings to invite us home, we did not think it wise to return to the schoolhouse. We decided to go back to Lees Summit and there take a train for Holden. Years afterward I learned that the schoolhouse was crowded on the next evening, the young man who was instrumental in our going there being present. He wanted to know if anyone knew anything about the preachers, but no one could give him any information. The only one who could have given some enlightenment on the matter was the young man with whom we stayed, but he knew that we had left for Holden and so was not present.

Brethren Etzenhouser, Scarcliff, and I then started on a missionary tour through Lexington, Missouri Junction, Huntsville, Renick, Macon City, Bevier, and other points in Missouri. We went on foot from place to place, carrying our heavy satchels, overcoats, and other paraphernalia. We were forced to walk most of the time, as the Saints were scattered far and wide. One day we walked about forty miles. We considered ourselves very fortunate when we could stop with a Latter Day Saint family. There was much persecution on every hand, and money was scarce. However, the Lord was ever present by his power to encourage and stimulate us.

We performed considerable labor in the North-eastern Missouri District. I presided over the Bevier Branch and acted as vice president of the district for a time. Later I went back to the Kewanee District and labored quite extensively in and around Canton, Saint David, Bryant, and Lewiston, baptizing a great many people, and then returned home to see my aged mother and other relatives.

On one occasion I was quite homesick to see my mother, but I was practically out of funds, having only eighty-five cents left after paying my way to Quincy, Illinois, and it would cost $3.85 from there to Bevier. I did not know how I was going to do it, but I ran the risk. I did a lot of praying and got on the train. The train which I boarded was a limited, stopping only at the county seats, arriving at Quincy about midnight and reaching Bevier about four in the morning. Shortly after I took my seat, the conductor made his appearance, and I handed him the eighty-five cents; upon his inquiring my destination, I answered "Bevier." He informed me that three dollars more was necessary for my fare to that place. I told him that the eighty-five cents was all I had and that I would ride as far as that would take me, which happened to be Palmyra Junction, the next stop. The conductor took the money, walked off a few steps, returned and threw the eighty-five cents on my lap.

When the train reached Palmyra Junction, I was sound asleep. A station or two beyond, a young boy boarded the train and took the seat just behind me. I happened to be awake, and along came the conductor; he asked the boy for his ticket, and the boy answered that he had none. He was ordered to get off the train at the next stop. I fully expected the same orders, but I again fell asleep, and when I awakened the boy was gone. The next stop was Macon City, the county seat of the county in which I lived, so I decided that I must keep awake so I could get off there, as it was then only five miles to Bevier, and the train would not make another stop for fourteen or fifteen miles beyond Bevier. The next time I awoke, the train was going at a terrific speed between Macon and Bevier. I was disappointed to think that I had not stayed awake; now I would have to walk back fourteen or fifteen miles. When we came in sight of Bevier, I could see the lights on the streets, and it was a trial to think that I could not get off and see my mother that morning. As the train neared the station, I heard the engine whistle, the train came to a sudden stop, and the conductor opened the door, looked in, and cried out, "Hurry up there, young man, and get off."

It did not take me long to do his bidding, and I was a very happy young man as I wended my way toward my mother's home. I had the eighty-five cents, too.

I have often thought of that strange experience and wondered why the conductor put the young boy off the train and permitted me to ride all the way, returning my money, and stopping the fast express for me to get off. I wonder if God did not put it into his heart to favor me?

Divine Healing

BY W. E. PHILLIPS, M. D.

I suppose I can sense the feeling, to some degree at least, that came to John the Baptist when the Master of men came to him and demanded baptism, as I am sure there are men that are much more qualified for this task, and I have much need to learn of them.

It has never been my happy privilege to meet a follower of the art of Æsculapius who believes in the principle of divine healing, but my being a follower of this art and having associated with varying sects that bear testimony to this principle, I have had certain conclusions forced upon me from observation.

The first thing we must do, of course, is to see what is written in the divine word, and I just want a few prominent passages of scripture kept in mind while examining this article. The first one is James 5:13-15; and the other is 1 Corinthians 12:9, 10.

James divides our departure from normal into two classes, afflicted and sick; and I would also have you notice that to the sick, healing is promised by the administering of the elders.

In affliction, or, we might say, functional disease, there is absolutely nothing to heal, so we are commanded to pray; but in sickness, or organic disease, there is a real test, because there are structural changes that have taken place and there is more to do than to just think we are not sick.

Some misguided people contrast divine healing with healing under the guidance of a physician in such a manner that it may be inferred that the work of a physician is opposed to the divine way of doing things. But that is not in keeping with proper religious tenets, and is objectionable because these people have failed to recognize the fact that God, having created the world, has established natural laws, and disease operates under natural laws just the same as the growing of corn, wheat, or oats.

The medical profession has passed the just-happen-so stage and is based on laws that are as definitely established as the astronomer's laws of the moving of the planets, and are just as divine.

Let us look at a few of the most common organic diseases. We will take pneumonia and manufacture a definition for that particular disease: Pneumonia is an acute infectious disease, characterized by sudden onset, rapid breathing, pain in affected side, and certain structural changes that take place in the lungs, one change following the other, and the disease running a clinical course peculiar to pneumonia itself. We may take typhoid, measles, nephritis, or any organic disease, and the same may be said of each. It is just as much of a divine law that causes pneumonia to attack the lungs and have characteristics peculiar to itself and run a definite course, as it is to plant a grain of corn and have the process through which it goes to maturity.

If, then, diseases are governed by a divine law that causes them to run a course peculiar to themselves, and God set in operation that law, are we to expect that he will run counter to his own law? If so, why? and how is it to be done?

I have been firmly convinced that this principle of divine healing is the most abused and the most easily camouflaged of anything in the whole religious world, and this is why the medical profession is so "hard boiled" against all the cults, healers, etc., Latter Day Saints included, which they dump all into one class and condemn, and for the simple reason that their testimony too many times will not bear close observation and inspection.

This very thing is one that stands out prominently in convincing me that Joseph Smith was a prophet, for even though he was the first man in modern times to advocate this principle, he admonished his people not to be addicted to this testimony.

I want to give you one or two examples of the many experiences I have had. One night late in November I was called to three different homes. In each home there were two children. I found the same condition at each home, I left the same treatment at each place, and the next afternoon all the children were about normal. As one of these families believed in divine healing, they sent for Elder —, and about two weeks later the mother of the two bore testimony to the healing of her children, and tried to prove it by me. What was I to do? Was there any evidence to me that her children had been healed?

Another time I went to see a boy about twelve years of age who had measles. On arriving I found a boy with a slight fever, nice rash, and what I would call a boy comfortably sick with measles. I was also informed that no medicine would be given, as the Saints had been sent for, and that my visit was just to comply with the law. Of course the boy got well, and again I was called upon to sanction divine intervention. Again, Where was something for me to base the fact upon? This boy had had measles, just as anyone else would.

These are some examples that are happening every day that are not giving any prestige to the principle of divine healing to a clear-thinking disbeliever, and I am sure there are many things done along this line that are not pleasing to our heavenly Father. We are to expect divine healing because the Scriptures teach it, and it is to be one of the manifestations of the Spirit of God in the body or church, and when properly applied it does not run counter to any natural law. But there is a right and a wrong way to go about it.

First; we must be sure that we are sick, and that our ills are not imaginary. Second; we must send for the elders ourselves, and not our relatives send because they want it done. The command is to you, and the motive in view should be to place ourselves in the hands of God. I am sure that this is not the motive of most people. My experience has taught me to believe that it is either that they are afraid they are going to die, or they want relief from pain. Surely this is a selfish purpose, and I believe it is wrong.

Then, how are we to expect this thing to be done?

First, we must bear in mind that there is a sickness that is unto death, and it may be manifested in different diseases; and to this sickness we must all succumb. From any other sickness to which man may fall a prey, we must recover through the channel of either the common law through which diseases pass, or special law or principle of divine healing. All diseases from which man recovers pass through at least three different stages: beginning, or stage of invasion, or until the height is reached, however long this may be; then, the height, however long; then, the decline. Every disease passes through these three stages to recovery.

Now during the course of disease, between the period of invasion and decline, if under the administration of elders the height is reached and the one who is sick progressively gets better from that time, then we may infer that there has been divine intervention; and if during the same period after the administration of elders the one who is sick gets immediately up and is well, that is a miracle and not a case of healing. Healing is a slow process and is not done instantly unless it be a miracle.

Then, if healing is a slow process, pray tell me how you can separate the natural law of God, through which the physician operates, and the specific law through which God himself works? It is simply this, God does for man what he can't do for himself.

And that faith that puts in operation the specific law is a gift, as healing, prophecy, wisdom, etc. It may be cultivated, and we may seek for it, but we can not exercise it at will, neither is it promised to every man that obeys the laws of God any more than wisdom, knowledge, tongues, etc., are promised to all. That is what Paul said he did not want the Saints at Corinth to be ignorant about.

When we can live under perfect conditions, there will not be any sickness; but now, as we know only in part and having been placed under environments that are sometimes favorable to the development of disease and having contracted the disease, many times we must expect diseases to run their course.

When Latter Day Saints learn that praying for the sick is a command of God, and that it should be exercised with the view of placing ourselves and the outcome of our sickness in the hands of him who knows best and (not expecting the end of our time if a good prayer was not offered quickly), expecting our healing to be gradual, also using all the intelligence that may be had, then and not until then will the principle of divine healing occupy the place God designed it should, and not until then will Latter Day Saints' position be correct. Not until then will it be in harmony with scientific knowledge and not run counter to any law.

Things of Greatest Value

BY J. E. VANDERWOOD

He is a dull scholar who doesn't learn by observation; and he who permits truth to lie before him constantly and not become acquainted with it, is worse than foolish. Just how long it is going to require to bring humanity to that standard of wisdom and excellence required in the divine law is a problem that we might well give some thought and consideration as we go along. I can help others to advance only when I have made advancement myself. I can teach only that which I have acquired myself; and it requires no argument to enable very ordinary people to understand that my attempt at teaching is weak unless I am able to back it up with good, sound judgment and reason. There is a tendency on the part of humanity to want to dwell in the past and to neglect the present, and here we have a fruitful field of endeavor if we would rightly relate the events of the past to the possibilities of the here and now. There is ample ground here for a successful career, but there seems to be but few people able to vision the really great things of life.

I once saw a wordy treatise that had been written and found place in one of our church periodicals, and when I saw it I remarked: "Why worry about things of that nature?" The article referred to was entitled, "Will we eat and drink during the millennium?" I said, Why go so far afield as that? What difference does it make to us now? The idea of worthiness to be there is so much more vital and of so much greater importance that we ought to use our time and energy in considering who were worthy to have a place in the millennium, and not whether we should eat and drink after we get there. A little later I saw another article that asked the question, "Will we partake of the sacrament of the Lord's supper during the millennium?" I once more said, "How is it that we are willing to spend valuable time and energy discussing things of that nature, when we ought to be working out the problems that concern the children of men today? Recently I listened to a man preach a very eloquent sermon. He dwelt largely upon the things that had to do with the preexistent state of man, and I again thought, How much better it would be to make the present vital needs of man the principal issue! To me it is of but little concern what I might or might not have been in the beginning of things; the thing of paramount importance is, What am I doing with the opportunities of the here and now?

It would be a nice thing, I will admit, to be able to understand all the methods of creation and to know how the Creator worked out his great plan in bringing about all of his purposes, but to me it is much more important to be able to know how to live with my fellow men, and be able to contribute something to the social weal. It is a wonderfully nice thing for one to be able to possess a theory of the mysterious things of the universe, but it is much nicer to know how to live peaceably with mankind, and to cause them to be alive with the things that make for peace on earth and good will among mankind. That which does not enable me to better live and better relate myself to others immediately around me is hardly worth the time and trouble of acquiring. It sounds big for one to get before the people and discourse upon the seven heads and the ten horns and the other little horn, but I am persuaded that if the same effort were made to enable man to understand his relationship to his fellow man the time would be much better spent, and the day would be hastened when the kingdoms of this world would become the kingdom of our God and of his Christ.

One of the greatest difficulties man encounters is his inability to rightly evaluate things. It is of but little value to me that I should know that certain things are written in the Bible, but it is of much importance to me that the same things have a place in my life. It is of but little value to me that I am able to quote Paul as saying, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," but it is of vital importance that I have made that truth a part of my life and that I have come to bear the fruits of peace in my life because I have learned the truthfulness of that language. It is of little value to me that I should be able to make an argument in support of the principle of repentance, but it is of paramount importance that I have come to implant in my life right principles. The mere theory is of but little worth to anyone; it is the living of the life, and the revealing of the nature of Christ in my life and labor among men that shall be of the greatest of value both to me and the people with whom I am permitted to mingle from day to day.

I have wondered if we are using the best methods in our endeavors to teach mankind? I am sure my fellow workers are just as anxious as I am to get the truth implanted within the hearts and the minds of man, and if we are not using the best methods we would all be glad to discover methods that would increase our ability to teach, and would make us more efficient in our life's labors. In the law given to this church as recorded in Doctrine and Covenants 42, we find a brief statement that I believe we have not as yet fully evaluated. It reads, "The elders, priests, and teachers of my church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and in the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel." Years have been spent by certain of our number in an endeavor to get the geography of the book arranged. This is a nice thing in its place, but it is not the thing we are instructed to do. I wonder how carefully we have read the language, "Teach the principles of the gospel." Since I have come to see the need of preaching the principles contained in these books I have been able often to get the truth implanted in the heart and the mind of mankind by teaching the principle contained therein and never mentioned the book in which that principle is found. It is the matter of making the word flesh that is of most vital importance to us, and if I can get the truth into the life of man it is much better than merely causing him to be able to say that in a certain book and on a certain page it is written thus and so.

Our task then is not so much quoting scripture and arraying a lot of proof texts on a given point, as it is to assimilate the message of life, clothe it with flesh, reevaluate it, and then put it out to men as a living thing that is of vital importance. He who is able to do this will be able to speak with authority and not as the scribes. It is of much greater value that I come to make the message a living thing than that I have the theory of it committed to memory. One illustration will help to make clear my meaning. There are many people today who are quite fully converted to the Bible; they believe the Bible is a divine record. But few of that number know anything about the principles of the gospel that are contained therein. I find many people in Utah who are converted to the Book of Mormon, but I find but few of them who know the principles of the gospel contained therein. I have come to see the need of making the word flesh that it might dwell among us. I have learned that the thing we are screams so loudly that people are utterly unable to hear the thing we are trying to say. When we learn to teach the principles contained in the books of the church, we will have assimilated them and so completely revalued them that we have been able to put them out as living realities, and with such power and authority that the highest and lowliest of men will be compelled to hear the message.

To simply destroy the belief of some one else is worse than folly. The thing for me to do is to so interest my hearers in the truth of the message I am bringing to them that they will gladly sit at my feet and hear the words that fall from my lips; and unless I am able to do this I am not yet able to speak with authority; I am not able to teach men the principles of the gospel of peace. The most important thing in the world, then, is to be able to translate the message into terms of human life—I must vitalize it, clothe it with flesh, live it from day to day, and when I speak be able to put it out as a living reality that shall challenge the best there is in humanity and cause them to have a profound desire to come in possession of that which they discover is the very essence of our life and conversation. The admonition of Paul comes to me here with a new meaning, "Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Surely the word of truth is never rightly divided until it is made a part of myself.

Are we able to qualify for the work that is immediately before us? is the question that concerns me most! I have but little time to dwell in the mysterious past or future, but I do see a bright future if we are able to arise to the privileges of the present and make the word flesh, reevaluate the things that we receive, and put them out again as the essence of life, the food that vitalizes the one who receives it.

The Holloway-Wheaton Discussion

By J. F. Curtis

No doubt your readers will be interested in hearing of the public discussion held at Lancaster, Wisconsin, which began November 5 and continued ten nights. Elder L. G. Holloway, of the Quorum of Seventy, represented the Reorganized Church, and Apostle Clarence L. Wheaton represented the Church of Christ people on the Temple Lot, during the debate. The following propositions were discussed:

First, Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true and lawful continuation of the church organized April 6, 1830, and in harmony with said church in origin, organization, doctrine, and practice. L. G. Holloway affirmed; Clarence L. Wheaton denied.

Second, Resolved the Church of Christ on the Temple Lot, Independence, Missouri, is the true and lawful continuation of the church organized April 6, 1830, and in harmony with said church in origin, organization, doctrine, and practice. C. L. Wheaton affirmed; L. G. Holloway denied.

The Bible and Book of Mormon were the standards of evidence in the discussion; other books and periodicals were to be used, but were to stand on their merits. Five sessions of two hours each were given to each proposition. Speeches were thirty minutes each, alternating—the affirmative leading in each proposition. J. F. Curtis acted as moderator for Elder Holloway, and Apostle H. E. Moler, of the Church of Christ, acted as moderator for Elder Wheaton.

The discussion was to be held in the vicinity of Lancaster, Wisconsin, but before the exact location was agreed upon where the debate should be held the Church of Christ people published in one of the Madison papers that the debate was to be at Oak Grove, which is some eight miles from the town of Lancaster. It was finally agreed between the disputants that the discussion should be held in Lancaster, and a hall was secured to accommodate the crowd.

Elder B. C. Flint, who for several years represented the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, has united with the Church of Christ people on the Temple Lot, and lately has sought to influence a number of people to follow him. Naturally having baptized a number of the people in that field and working among them for many years, he was able to influence some to decide to unite with the Church of Christ. I have been informed that some nineteen persons had decided to unite with the Church of Christ who were formerly members of the Reorganization, but when our ministers visited these people ten out of nineteen decided to remain with the Reorganized Church.

Elder Holloway in his opening speech defined his proposition, stating the origin, organization, doctrine, and practice of the Reorganized Church, and stating that there were certain things both churches held in common as to teaching and doctrine on which he would spend very little time, but that there were things on which they differ materially, and these he would endeavor to discuss in detail.

The question of there being a First Presidency in the organization of the church and the reasons why such a quorum existed in the church were entered into quite thoroughly. Also the subject of lineage came in for its share, and, naturally, many other things were taken up from time to time during the discussion, on which the two disputants differed.

Elder Holloway set up the church as it existed in the days of Moses, claiming that there were three men, Moses, Aaron, and Hur, at the head, assisted by twelve men, as found in the first chapter of Numbers, and further assisted by the Seventy, as found in the eleventh chapter of Numbers; claiming also that Christ later reestablished his church in New Testament times, and that Christ was an apostle and high priest, as spoken of in Hebrews 3: 1, where Christ is referred to as the Apostle and High Priest of our profession; that he was the head of the church and directed it personally while he was on earth, during which time he selected and ordained twelve apostles as stated in Matthew, the tenth chapter, and later selected the seventy, Luke, the tenth chapter. Other officers were placed in the church later, which finally included a presidency of three. Elder Holloway also suggested that as God is the same yesterday, today, and for ever, the church as reestablished by Christ in latter days should, and does, conform to the original pattern followed by Moses and Christ.

Elder Wheaton objected to the three men, Moses, Aaron, and Hur, being a first presidency, claiming that there was no evidence to show that Aaron and Hur were ever ordained high priests in connection with Moses. Elder Wheaton admitted that Moses was a high priest, but called for the proof that Aaron and Hur had been so ordained.

Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that while Elder Wheaton admitted that Moses had been ordained a high priest, yet he could not show from the Bible that such ordination had taken place, but that he was compelled to rely on the statement in the Doctrine and Covenants in this regard, that Jethro had ordained Moses, showing that the Bible did not record all the ordinations that had taken place.

Elder Holloway referred to the Doctrine and Covenants on the question of the Melchisedec priesthood, and read the following: "Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church." After speaking of the Twelve and the Seventy being quorums equal in authority one with the other so far as decisions are concerned, we read: "A majority may form a quorum, when circumstances render it impossible to be otherwise. Unless this is the case, their decisions are not entitled to the same blessings which the decisions of a quorum of three presidents were anciently, who were ordained after the order of Melchisedec, and were righteous and holy men."—104: 11.

Elder Holloway took the position that the presidency, according to the Doctrine and Covenants, consisted of three high priests who were ordained after the order of Melchisedec. In proof of the fact that not only Moses was ordained a high priest, but that Aaron also was ordained a high priest after the order of Melchisedec, he read Hebrews 5: 1-6, where the subject of a high priest was mentioned and the ordination of Christ is referred to as being a high priest, quoting the statement in the fourth verse as follows: "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." Here the calling of Christ to be a high priest of the Melchisedec order is referred to as taking place in a similar manner as the call of Aaron to be a high priest. The first verse of this chapter reads: "For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins." Elder Holloway showed from the book of Exodus not only the call of Moses to deliver Israel from Egyptian bondage, but that Aaron was also selected of God to accompany Moses and be the spokesman for him. When Moses complained that he was slow of speech (Exodus 4: 10), the Lord in the twelfth and fourteenth verses said: "Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say. . . . And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Moses, and he said, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know that he can speak well." By this time Aaron had established a reputation of being a good speaker. In the sixteenth verse the Lord in speaking to Moses concerning Aaron said: "And he shall be thy spokesman unto the people: and he shall be, even he shall be to thee instead of a mouth, and thou shalt be to him instead of God." This shows that Aaron was to be the spokesman of Moses, harmonizing with Doctrine and Covenants 97: 3, where Sidney Rigdon, who was then a counselor to Joseph Smith in the First Presidency, was designated as a spokesman for Joseph Smith unto the people. It reads: "And it is expedient in me that you, my servant Sidney, should be a spokesman unto this people; yea verily, I will ordain you unto this calling, even to be a spokesman unto my servant Joseph; and I will give unto him power to be mighty in testimony; and I will give unto thee power to be mighty in expounding all scriptures, that thou mayest be a spokesman unto him, and he shall be a revelator unto thee, that thou mayest know the certainty of all things pertaining to the things of my kingdom on the earth." Elder Holloway called attention to Exodus 4: 27-31, where the Lord spoke to Aaron as follows: "And the Lord said to Aaron, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses. And he went and met him in the mount of God, and kissed him. And Moses told Aaron all the words of the Lord who had sent him, and all the signs which he had commanded him. And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel: and Aaron spake all the words which the Lord had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people. And the people believed: and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." This gathering of the elders together had been commanded of God to Moses, as follows: "Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt."—Exodus 3: 16.

Here was a direct command from God that the eldership of the church should be gathered together. Moses as prophet and leader was assisted in this work by Aaron. The elders here referred to were not merely old men, but officers of the people, as is shown in Numbers 11: 16: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee." Elder Holloway claimed that this was positive proof that these elders were officers in the church holding the Melchisedec priesthood, and that Aaron being the spokesman to the eldership certainly did hold priesthood, as he was working in a position or capacity above the eldership. The further fact was cited that he accompanied Moses into Egypt, and that miracle after miracle was wrought by them, showing that the power of God was with them.

The special charge of God to Moses and Aaron was referred to as found in Exodus 6: 13 as follows: "And the Lord spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, and gave them a charge unto the children of Israel, and unto Pharaoh, king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt."

Elder Holloway showed the close relationship of Aaron and Hur in their assistance to Moses as found in Exodus 17: 8-12: "Then came Amalek, and fought with Israel in Rephidim. And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose us out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand. So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side, and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun."

After referring to this citation to prove that these three men were working together as leaders of the people, Elder Wheaton disagreed with Elder Holloway concerning this passage of scripture and argued that this was a case of war where Moses, who was leader, being old in years had two assistants to hold up his hands; that it had no reference whatever to a presidency. Elder Holloway in further proof of the position he had taken concerning the presidency, cited Exodus 24: 12-14: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there: and I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them. And Moses rose up, and his minister Joshua: and Moses went up into the mount of God. And he said unto the elders, Tarry ye here for us, until we come again unto you: and, behold Aaron and Hur are with you: if any man have any matters to do, let him come unto them." Elder Holloway claimed that this was positive proof that Aaron and Hur were occupying in a position officially higher than the eldership, showing that Aaron and Hur represented Moses while he was up in the mount.

Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that the twelve men, one man from each tribe, had been selected to assist Moses as found in Numbers, where it says (Numbers 1: 4, 5): "And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers. And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: . . ." After giving the names of these twelve in verse sixteen, we read: "These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel. And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names."—Numbers 1: 16, 17. Here again Moses and Aaron are represented as being above the twelve, and what is true of the twelve is also true of the seventy. Moses and Aaron occupied a higher position than the seventy, agreeing nicely with the position of the church in our day and time where there are three men in the presidency, then the twelve apostles, then the seventy.

Elder Wheaton claimed that this was under the Mosaic dispensation and did not represent the church of Christ, quoting from the Book of Mormon to prove that the Mosaic law had been done away, and that we were not to be governed by the conditions existing under the Mosaic law.

Elder Holloway showed from the scriptures that the church existed under Moses prior to the time when the Mosaic law was given, citing for proof 1 Corinthians 10: 1-4: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea: and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ." Also Hebrews 4: 2, speaking of the people under Moses as follows: "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." From these two passages of scripture it was shown that the people under Moses ate and drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ, and that the gospel was preached unto them.

Elder Holloway showed from the Inspired Translation that the first tables of stone which Moses possessed read differently from the second tables. He read Deuteronomy 10: 1, 2: "At that time the Lord said unto me, Hew thee two other tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me upon the mount, and make thee an ark of wood. And I will write on the tables the words that were on the first tables, which thou breakest, save the words of the everlasting covenant of the holy priesthood, and thou shalt put them in the ark." Also Exodus 34: 1: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Hew thee two other tables of stone, like unto the first, and I will write upon them also, the words of the law, according as they were written at the first on the tables which thou breakest; but it shall not be according to the first, for I will take away the priesthood out of their midst; therefore my holy order, and the ordinances thereof, shall not go before them: for my presence shall not go up in their midst, lest I destroy them. But I will give unto them the law as at the first, but it shall be after the law of a carnal commandment: for I have sworn in my wrath, that they shall not enter into my presence, into my rest, in the days of their pilgrimage." It is here shown that the first tables contained the covenant of the holy priesthood which pertains to the church, but because of transgression as stated by Paul in Galatians 3: 19, the law of Moses was added. Paul says: "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." Elder Holloway showed that here the gospel law had been broken by transgression and that later the Mosaic law was added. The holy priesthood was taken away out of the midst of the children of Israel, which also agrees with the statement made in Doctrine and Covenants 83:4, as follows: "Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst, and the holy priesthood also; and the lesser priesthood continued." This shows that the Doctrine and Covenants and the Inspired Translation agree as to the holy or Melchisedec priesthood being taken out of the midst of the children of Israel on the Eastern Continent because of transgression.

Elder Holloway showed that when the holy priesthood was taken out of their midst, those holding the holy priesthood naturally were placed under silence, and that Aaron and others did not hold this priesthood after the silence. Elder Holloway showed the splendid condition of the church prior to the time that they went into idolatry by citing Exodus 24:9, 10: "Then went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel: and they saw the God of Israel." In verse 12 of this same chapter the Lord requested Moses to come up on the mount, and while he was up there, after being gone for forty days, the children of Israel fell into idolatry and finally took of their jewelry and made a golden calf. This was so displeasing to God that the Lord made the following statement to Moses, Exodus 32:7-12: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Go, get thee down: for thy people, which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves: they have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them: they have made them a molten calf, and have worshiped it, and have sacrificed thereunto, and said, These be thy gods, O Israel, which have brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And the Lord said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people: now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may wax hot against them, and that I may consume them: and I will make of thee a great nation. And Moses besought the Lord his God, and said, Lord, why doth thy wrath wax hot against thy people, which thou hast brought forth out of the land of Egypt with great power, and with a mighty hand?"

Elder Holloway showed by this that God not only took the holy priesthood out of their midst, but that he was disposed to destroy them as a people, but Moses did plead for them and God extended mercy. While Moses was on the mount God told him to ordain Aaron as found in Exodus 28:1: "And take thou unto thee Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him, from among the children of Israel, that he may minister unto me in the priest's office." This was an ordination to the Aaronic priesthood, as Aaron had held the higher priesthood and had been silenced. Under the Mosaic law it was necessary that those who officiated at the altar should be ordained, for "the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death." (Numbers 3:10.) There was a change from the gospel church to the law of Moses, making it necessary to ordain priests to officiate under the Mosaic law.

Elder Holloway read from Matthew 17, the account of Jesus taking with him Peter, James, and John, on the mount of transfiguration, stating that while these three were members of the quorum of twelve, yet no doubt a special work of preparation was being had to qualify these men for future service. He also cited Mark 5:37, where on a special occasion Jesus went into the sick chamber and permitted only Peter, James, and John to accompany him. Also in the garden of Gethsemane (Matthew 26:36-38) Peter, James, and John again are more closely associated with Jesus than the other members of the twelve. For some reason, said Elder Holloway, these three men were given special privileges over the other members of the twelve. He then cited the account of the ordination of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery by John the Baptist, showing that John worked under the direction of Peter, James, and John. The quotation is as follows: Church History, volume 1, page 36, Joseph Smith said: "Accordingly we went and were baptized. I baptized him (Oliver Cowdery) first, and afterwards he baptized me, after which I laid my hands upon his head and ordained him to the Aaronic priesthood, and afterwards he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same priesthood, for so we were commanded. The messenger who visited us on this occasion and conferred this priesthood upon us said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood, he said, should in due time be conferred on us—and that I should be called the first elder and he the second." He further cited Doctrine and Covenants 26:3 as follows: "And also with Peter, and James, and John, whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry; and of the same things which I revealed unto them; unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fullness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven and which are on earth." He read Doctrine and Covenants, section 110, paragraph 20. Referring to Peter, James, and John, Joseph Smith said: "And again, what do we hear? . . . The voice of Peter, James, and John, in the wilderness between Harmony, Susquehanna County, and Colesville, Broome County, on the Susquehanna River, declaring themselves as possessing the keys of the kingdom, and of the dispensation of the fullness of times." Turning to Doctrine and Covenants, section 80, Joseph Smith, jr., received the keys that "belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood." This shows clearly the reason why Peter, James, and John, were given special privileges in accompanying Christ. While James, the brother of John, was killed, as stated in Acts 12th chapter, James, the Lord's brother, became the one referred to later in connection with Peter and John. F. W. Farrar, in Early Christianity, pages 323, says: "Saint James, first bishop of Jerusalem, one of the brothers of the Lord." Speaking of Peter getting out of jail, he says: "Tell James and the brethren these things." (Page 338.) And then he continues: "The expression shows that James, the Lord's brother, had succeeded the son of Zebedee as the chief person in the mother church." (Page 338.)

Elder Holloway cited Doctrine and Covenants 80:1, to show that there were certain keys that belonged always unto the presidency. In a revelation given March, 1832: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, my servant, Frederick G. Williams, listen to the voice of him who speaketh, to the word of the Lord your God, and hearken to the calling wherewith you are called, even to be a high priest in my church, and a counselor unto my servant, Joseph Smith, jr., unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood." This shows that certain keys were given to the Presidency of the high priesthood as possessed by Peter, James, and John, and conferred upon Joseph Smith and others in our day.

Elder Holloway further showed that there were keys mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 105:7, which belonged to the twelve. He read: "Verily I say unto you, my servant Thomas [Thomas B. Marsh], Thou art the man whom I have chosen to hold the keys of my kingdom (as pertaining to the twelve) abroad among all nations, that thou mayest be my servant to unlock the door of the kingdom in all places where my servant Joseph, and my servant Sidney, and my servant Hyrum, can not come." In proof of his position that Peter occupied a higher position than one of the Twelve, Elder Holloway quoted Matthew 16:19, as follows: "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." It was shown in the tenth chapter of Matthew that Peter had been ordained an apostle but that here, six chapters later, he was promised other keys, something to be given him in the future, as he says, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven." This could not refer to the keys given him as an apostle because he had already received them, but here were future keys promised to him, agreeing with the other statements above referred to, showing that Peter became one of the presidency.

Elder Holloway took the position that James was the first bishop or president of the church at Jerusalem, and that Peter and John were also evidently associated with him in the presidency, as the law provides for three when the quorum of the first presidency is full. Elder Wheaton claimed that this statement in Matthew 16:19 was not to Peter only, but to all of the twelve. Elder Holloway replied by reading the statement from the Scriptures showing that he was talking to Peter only. Galatians 1:19 was cited in proof of the fact that James the Lord's brother was an apostle. Paul, speaking about the time he visited Jerusalem, says: "Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days. But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother."—Galatians 1:18, 19. Elder Holloway claimed that while James the Lord's brother was an apostle according to the Bible, yet the term apostle applied to the presidency as well as the twelve, and quoted Early Christianity, page 338, by F. W. Farrar. Speaking of James he says: "Though he might in the less technical sense be called an apostle, was not one of the chosen witnesses to whom had been entrusted the evangelization of all the world." Again he says: "To James, therefore, the Lord's brother, not only because he was the Lord's brother, but because of the force of his character and influence, fell naturally and at once the office of bishop of Jerusalem." He further says, when speaking of James the Lord's brother: "He is spoken of with the pompous inflation of a later sacerdotalism, as the Lord James. . . . The Prince of Bishops, Apostles, and Martyrs, the Bishop of Bishops, who ruled Jerusalem the Holy City of the Hebrews. He is the archbishop of Jerusalem, who, sending about even the greatest of the Apostles at his own behest dispatches Saint Peter to withstand Paul."—Page 347.

Elder Wheaton claimed that James was only a local bishop, presiding at Jerusalem. Of course this put Elder Wheaton against the Bible, as the Bible shows clearly that James was an apostle, and the word bishop here was used in the sense of a general overseer, as Mr. Farrar claims that James, the Lord's brother, was the bishop of bishops, sending about even the greatest of the apostles.

Elder Holloway showed that James presided over the council at Jerusalem, Acts 15th chapter, quoting the statement of James, the Lord's brother, in the 13th verse, where he said: "Men and brethren, hearken unto me," and in the 19th verse where he said, "Wherefore my sentence is," showing that James, the Lord's brother, here was a man of authority. He also quoted the 22d and 23d verses, showing that the whole church acquiesced in the sentence given by James, and that the churches in Antioch, Syria, and Cilicia were notified, showing that James was more than a local bishop over one congregation, as his work reached out unto different churches where this disturbance had arisen. Elder Holloway further quoted Acts 16:4, showing that this was a decree sent out to these different churches. It reads as follows: "And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem." He cited Doctrine and Covenants 122:14, showing that the first presidency and twelve were all recognized as apostles and high priests. It reads: "For the same reasons in me that it is not expedient to fill the quorums of the first presidency and the twelve, who are apostles and high priests, it is not expedient that a patriarch for the church should be indicated and appointed."

In further proof of the fact that James was president of the general church at Jerusalem, James 1:1 was cited as follows: "James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting." This epistle is a general epistle of James, showing that James was not a local bishop, presiding over one assembly, but was a general officer of the church.

Elder Wheaton tried to make it appear that Elder Holloway had claimed that James was president of the church one night, but the next night claimed that Peter was the president, but in this Elder Holloway was misrepresented, and he so stated, that while he had claimed that James was president of the church, he claimed that Peter and John were associated with James in the presidency, the three holding the keys of the kingdom.

Elder Holloway showed from Doctrine and Covenants 17:1 that when the church was organized April 6, 1830, Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were called of God and ordained apostles at that time, showing that men could be apostles and not be in the quorum of twelve. That the quorum of twelve was not organized until 1835 and that Joseph Smith was declared in Doctrine and Covenants 27:2 to be the head of the church. Elder Holloway further showed from Times and Seasons, volume 5, page 624, also our Church History, volume 1, page 244, that Joseph Smith was ordained president of the high priesthood. The quotation of Joseph Smith is as follows: "On the 26th (April, 1832,) I called a general council of the church and was acknowledged as the president of the high priesthood according to a previous ordination at a conference of high priests, elders, and members held at Amhurst, Ohio, on the 25th of January, 1832."

Elder Wheaton claimed that Joseph Smith was first ordained as president of the high priesthood, without any revelation directing so to do, and that the revelation was given later. In reply to this Elder Holloway cited Doctrine and Covenants 43:2, which made provision for the successor of Joseph Smith as follows: "But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed." This revelation is dated February, 1831, about eleven months before the ordination of Joseph Smith to the office of president of the high priesthood. This same revelation is found in Book of Commandments, chapter 45, and it shows clearly that God, prior to this time, that is, February, 1831, had stated to Joseph that his successor must come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before. This is proof of the fact that previously God had mentioned this question of ordination concerning those who should occupy as head of the church on earth. It being necessary for Joseph Smith's successor to be ordained to fill this office, then surely Joseph, the first one filling the office, should and ought to be ordained. The only statement in the Doctrine and Covenants referring to such ordination is found in section 17, paragraph 17, and reads as follows: "Every president of the high priesthood (or presiding elder), bishop, high councilor, and high priest, is to be ordained by the direction of a high council, or general conference." Paragraphs 16 and 17 of section 17 were not printed with this section when published in The Evening and the Morning Star, but were printed in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants in this section in 1835. They were either omitted in the first publication or were inserted later by revelation on this subject. Evidently this is what was referred to when the Lord said in the above statement quoted from section 43, that the successor of Joseph Smith should be ordained as I have told you before. This is evidently what he had told him before.

The question as to who the successor of Joseph Smith would be, came up for consideration, Elder Holloway claiming that he appointed his son, young Joseph, by revelation, and that the blessing of the first Joseph was to go upon the head of his posterity. Elder Holloway read the following from Doctrine and Covenants 107:18: "For this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, In thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed. Therefore, let my servant Joseph, and his seed after him, have place in that house." Elder Wheaton claimed that this blessing pertained only to the Nauvoo House, which was to be built at Nauvoo, claiming that special blessings were not given to any family in the Bible, that all were on an equality. Elder Holloway cited the blessing of Abraham and his posterity as found in Genesis the 18th chapter and 18th and 19th verses: "Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him? For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment; that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him." Genesis 22:18 was quoted: "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice." Showing that God did grant a special blessing unto Abraham, and that this blessing was placed upon Joseph Smith and his posterity. As to the anointing referred to, that had been placed upon Joseph Smith, Elder Holloway cited the statement in Millennial Star, volume 15, page 620, from the history of Joseph Smith as follows: "At early candlelight I met with the presidency at the west school room in the Temple, to attend to the ordinance of anointing our heads with holy oil, also the councils of Kirtland and Zion met in the two adjoining rooms and waited in prayer while we attended to the ordinance. I took the oil in my left hand, father Smith being seated before me and the remainder of the presidency encircled him around about. We then stretched our right hands towards heaven and blessed the oil and consecrated it in the name of Jesus Christ. We then laid our hands upon our aged father Smith and invoked the blessings of heaven. I then anointed his head with the consecrated oil and sealed many blessings upon him. The presidency then in turn laid their hands upon his head, beginning at the eldest until they had all laid their hands upon him and pronounced such blessings upon his head as the Lord put into their hearts, all blessing him to be our patriarch to anoint our heads and attend to all duties that pertain to that office. The presidency then took their seat in their turn according to their age, beginning at the eldest and received their anointing and blessing under the hands of father Smith. And in my turn my father anointed my head and sealed upon me the blessings of Moses, to lead Israel in latter days even as Moses led him in days of old, also the blessings of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." Evidently this is the anointing referred to that was placed upon the head of Joseph Smith and later placed upon his successor, his son, young Joseph. This recognized the law of lineage as provided in section 83, paragraph 2, where it is stated: "Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers."

Elder Holloway showed that the church was organized April 6, 1830, and continued until 1844, when because of transgression the church was rejected as a church but that later there were those who refused to follow Brigham Young and other leaders, who were leading astray, and that a number of these people who contended for the original faith united together and formed the Reorganization from 1852 to 1860, calling attention to the fact that different branches of the old church were part of those who formed the Reorganization. Elder Holloway cited the revelation of Jason W.

Briggs as found in Church History, volume 3, page 200, showing that wolves had "entered into the flock . . . Behold I will judge those who call themselves shepherds and have preyed upon the flock of my pastures. . . . Therefore, let the elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, or by the hand of those ordained by him, resist not this authority nor faith in the discharge of duty which is to preach my gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews and the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and cry repentance and remission of sins through obedience to the gospel, and I will sustain them and give them my Spirit; and in mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church; and then shall the quorum assemble and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith; after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit. Behold, that which ye received as my celestial law is not of me, but is the doctrine of Baalam, and I command you to denounce it and proclaim against it; and I will give you power that none shall be able to withstand your words if you rely upon me; for my Spirit shall attend you."

Here the elders of the old church and those who had been ordained by them were commanded to continue the work in harmony with the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, and to cry repentance unto the people, and then God promised that in his own due time he would bring one forth from the seed of Joseph Smith to help carry on the work. This evidently refers to young Joseph, and as polygamy had been advocated by James J. Strang and others, Jason W. Briggs was commanded to declare against it.

Elder Wheaton claimed that polygamy had been taught and practiced by Jason W. Briggs, because of the statement in the revelation which reads: "Behold that which ye received as my celestial law is not of me, but is the doctrine of Baalam." In reply to this, Elder Holloway cited the testimony of Jason W. Briggs in the Abstract of Evidence in the Temple Lot Suit, pages 402 and 403, showing that polygamy had been presented to the members of the church in that section of the country, but that the church members, including Briggs himself, had rejected it. The statement of Elder Briggs is as follows: "None of the parties that I named in my examination in chief as being present at the time of the reading of the paper in the priesthood lodge, ever accepted the doctrine of polygamy. No, sir, none of them that I know anything about, unless setting there and listening to it being read could be called an acceptance of it. They did not pass upon the paper and did not accept it that I know of. It was not passed upon and consequently there was no acceptance of it at all. I know that I did not accept it, and I do not think the rest did. At any rate they did not do so at that time."

The revelation of God given to Jason W. Briggs was in November, 1851. This was over seven years after the death of Joseph Smith. Briggs had associated with members who had previously belonged to the old church, including William Smith and James J. Strang and others, but when he found that these men were teaching contrary to the law, he withdrew from them and helped to take part in the establishing of the Reorganized Church. No one opposed polygamy more than did Elder Briggs, and his own testimony shows that he was not included in the people referred to as being in or practicing polygamy, that they had received it only in the sense of having it read to them, but that they opposed it.

Not only did Elder Wheaton try to connect Jason W. Briggs with polygamy, but he also tried to connect W. W. Blair with advocating polygamy, and cited a statement from the Saints' Advocate of September, 1878, volume 1, number 3, page 1, as follows: "'Christ the End of the Law.' In treating of celestial marriage in the Advocate for July we incidentally mentioned a great fact, one that all Latter Day Saints should be familiar with and be agreed upon; namely, that the law of Moses was fulfilled in Christ and ceased by limitation with the ushering in of the gospel as is taught by both the Bible and Book of Mormon, and now a correspondent, one of the apostles under one branch of the great latter-day apostasy takes offense at our statement and pronounces it a lie." Elder Wheaton insisted that the statement here quoted showed that W. W. Blair favored polygamy, but the reader will note that W. W. Blair referred to a previous statement found in the Advocate for July, touching on or "treating of" celestial marriage. Going back to the July number we find the article referred to under the heading of "Celestial marriage," published in the Advocate July, 1878, pages 5 to 8. The entire article strongly advocates the one wife system only, and positively forbids polygamy.

That the reader may know the position of W. W. Blair, we make the following extracts from this article in July, after quoting Matthew 19: 4, 5, where Jesus says: "He which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?" Again in commenting on the statement quoted, "And they twain shall be one flesh," Elder Blair says, "one husband and one wife, one bosom to recline upon, one heart to be for only one. Such was the law of heaven given of God to man. Here is the expressed will of heaven as written in nature and by grace proclaimed in Eden . . . God has always been true to this plan, and in no case has he suffered deviation from it except in the times of the wickedness and barbarism of the people, when they followed the lusts of the flesh." In referring to a statement in the Book of Mormon, Elder Blair says as follows: "To say that this passage means that God would or might at some time command polygamy is to say that he would then sanction as pure and holy that which he now denounces as abominable, grosser crimes, etc. This would be calling evil, good, and vice, virtue. . . . That sorrow and mourning with loss of confidence among children are the fruits of polygamy and concubinage and that wounds and death result from them. . . . To us the Book of Mormon teaches that monogamy is an essential agent, while polygamy is a great hindrance in raising up seed unto the Lord." This article from W. W. Blair is positively against polygamy all the way through, and yet Elder Wheaton tried to make it appear in the debate that W. W. Blair was advocating polygamy. This shows to what length some will go in misrepresentation.

Revival Meetings at Houston, Texas

At present we are busy getting ready for a missionary campaign in this great city. Brother Hubert Case is to be here this evening to assist us in the work. I am sure the readers of the papers are all acquainted with the good work Brother Case has been doing, and we are in hopes he may be as successful here. There seems to be a spirit of unity prevailing here that causes us to feel that God will be pleased to bless and prosper our effort here for good.

The work of the church in this district is considerably improved; but we have need of advancement still. The most important thing is confidence in God and man. Of course we must have faith, hope, and love if we are to be able to prove of assistance in the work of the church. In these graces we feel that the Saints are growing, and it gives us courage to press on toward the goal that is set for us in the program of the church. Surely we have much to inspire us with courage, and I am convinced there are greater opportunities awaiting us if we will move forward with confidence and courage.

Our local publicity department is working here, and I am confident we will be better understood in this city when we have completed this missionary effort. There is every reason in the world for us to feel hopeful, and I am sure the good Lord will sustain us if we will meekly and lovingly trust him for the help that is so essential to our advancement in the gospel work.

On Armistice Day I finished the rereading of the Book of Mormon, and while this was my fourth time to read it through, I feel that I received benefit from the effort. On yesterday I received a letter from a lady whom I baptized less than a month ago, telling me she had completed the reading of the Book of Mormon, and that she had received much light on the Bible teaching as a result of this reading. This is the mission of the book, to make plain to all mankind the plan and purpose of God in the uplift and salvation of mankind.

Surely our pathway lies in the forward course, and we should be bending every effort to make more successful our labors of love among our fellow men. To me the gospel never was so grand and so glorious as it is at the present time. I have every reason to be glad that I am permitted to have a part in it and want to be able to do all that is required of me for its advancement. J. E. VANDERWOOD.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, November 19.

Oakland, California

Sixteenth and Magnolia

Yes, we are still at Sixteenth and Magnolia, but we won't always be, with the "pep" our Religio Department shows. Recently they gave a circus. It was a wonderful success, and they raised over forty dollars to equip a gymnasium in our new church.

Oakland Saints have enjoyed quite a reunion in the recent past in the way of a series of meetings, our district president, G. P. Levitt, being in charge throughout.

Saturday evening, October 15, the nearby branches joining, the Department of Recreation and Expression had a very profitable institute meeting, with Ethel Christensen, district superintendent, in charge.

Sunday morning, the 16th, at 9.45 the Sunday school workers of this part of the district were called together for a similar meeting. District Sunday school officers being unable to be present, Brother Levitt had charge.

At eleven o'clock the Music Department had charge, and at two o'clock the Department of Women. All meetings were well attended.

Brother Levitt preached a series of sermons covering the evenings of the following two weeks, and although our branch membership is scattered over five or six cities, the church was comfortably filled at every service.

Brother Mark Fonda, local choir leader, had charge of the music, and although he is a busy business man he arranged to have some special music for each service, our musicians cooperating splendidly.

The final day of the series was more than interesting, it being Graceland Day. Our young people's class, with Gladys Carmichael as teacher, started the day by furnishing a Graceland program for the Sunday school hour.

Brother Levitt and Brother V. B. Etzenhouser, our pastor (both having been Graceland students) occupied the eleven o'clock hour.

Orville Towsley, Dale Aldrich, Allie Sanford, Earlita Smith Inslee, of the old students, were present. Of the other former students, William Collins, Iva Powell, Roy Weldon, and wife were called out of town, and Ethel Knipschild Etzenhouser was not able to be there.

Our quota was placed at thirty dollars, and our offering for Graceland amounted to sixty dollars.

After the morning meeting, Fred Elmer Bush, son of Doctor and Mrs. W. P. Bush, was baptized.

At 2.30 the regular meeting of the Bay Cities Sunday School Institute was held in the church. The institute is formed of workers from the Sunday schools of the Oakland, Melrose (East Oakland), San Francisco, Park Presidio (San Francisco), and San Jose Sunday schools.

We had very interesting talks on "Religious education for the junior," by Mrs. Turner of the Tenth Avenue Baptist Church, a well-known East Bay church worker, and "Interesting the teen-age boy," by G. P. Levitt. Lively discussions followed each. A very unusual demonstration of map drawing by the San Jose intermediates, and a demonstration of their birthday exercise completed the program. Melrose Sunday school had charge of the social side of this gathering, serving punch and wafers.

In spite of a steady downpour of rain, we had a gain of thirteen over last Sunday evening's meeting. Brother Levitt preached the last of the series of sermons to a well-filled house.

The ladies of Melrose Mission entertained at a luncheon the ladies of the Oakland Department of Women, together with District Superintendent Ruth Waller Clegg, V. B. Etzenhouser, and Brother Arthur Gillen on Wednesday, November 9. About twenty-five or thirty were present, and an enjoyable time was reported. We have it from one of the gentlemen present that the "eats" were unusually good.

Detroit District Conference

The annual district conference of Detroit District met at Orion, Michigan, November 5 and 6. The conference started with a business session at 10 a. m. Saturday at the Saints' church on North Broadway. District President A. H. DuRose was in charge, being assisted by his counselors, C. J. Mottashed and M. J. Crowley. Associated with them was Apostle D. T. Williams. The forenoon was spent in organizing the conference, reading reports, and other routine business.

At the afternoon session the question of a state-wide reunion was discussed, and the Detroit District voted to concur in this project. However, for the year 1928 it was voted to unite in reunion with the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District as was done in 1927. The recommendation for ordination of R. M. Gray, E. H. Montross, of Detroit, and John L. Hall, of Orion, to the office of elder was approved.

Election of district officers resulted in the following: district president, A. H. DuRose, of Flint; secretary, Glen Hardy, of Flint; treasurer, R. A. Coates, of Detroit; musical director, Mrs. N. C. Holden, of Flint; orchestra leader, N. C. Holden, of Flint; librarian, Leo Reigle, of Flint; superintendent of Department of Religious Education, V. D. Schaar, of Orion; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, Noble Gault, of Detroit; superintendent of Women's Department, Mrs. H. A. Koehler, of Pontiac; Elder DuRose chose as counselors Elders Mottashed and Crowley, who also served the previous year. A budget was adopted for the district officers.

On Saturday evening the cantata "Daniel" was given by the Messiah chorus under leadership of Mrs. N. C. Holden. About fifty trained voices were in this chorus; the soloist parts taken by Miss Mildred Fredericks, of Detroit, as queen; H. A. Koehler, of Pontiac, king; Allen Pohly, of Flint, Daniel; Richard Gault, of Detroit, Azariah; Mrs. N. I. Townsend, of Detroit, sister of Azariah; A. H. DuRose, Flint, herald; O. A. McDowell, Flint, solo voice. This was given in the new high school auditorium. Sunday morning at eight three precious souls were baptized into the kingdom of God by Elder James Meade, of Pontiac. These baptisms were in the waters of beautiful Lake Orion at the waterfront home of Mrs. Mae Forbes. Those who were baptized were Miss Vivian Harrison, of Capac, who is attending county normal at Lapeer, Mrs. Earl Forbes, of Orion, and the son of Brother and Sister Payne, near Pontiac.

Sunday services also were held in the new high school auditorium. Sunday morning at 8.30 a sacramental service was held. It was presided over by Elders O. A. McDowell, of Flint, and T. S. Williams, of Detroit. At this service R. M. Gray, E. H. Montross, and John L. Hall were ordained elders. The baby of Brother and Sister Albert Mellendorf, of Orion Branch, was blessed. Several testimonies were given in the short space of time, and all felt spiritually strengthened by this service.

Sunday school was conducted by District Superintendent V. D. Schaar and Local Superintendent Julia Hammond at 10.15. A priesthood round table was conducted in the church by Elder D. T. Williams.

At eleven o'clock Apostle Williams preached a very effective sermon calling us to greater activity than ever before.

Dinner was had at Barney's restaurant.

And at 2.30 p. m. a community program was held. A short talk was given by Elder D. M. Taylor, of Orion, who helped establish and build up the church in Orion and who was its first president. He spoke in regard to the church in the local community and what it is trying to accomplish, its many blessings, etc. Mr. A. R. Brodine, of Orion Exchange Club, welcomed the conference to Orion and spoke concerning the relationship of the community to the church. Apostle Williams then addressed the audience on "The church and its community responsibility." His address was very interesting, and many favorable comments were heard on it from the citizens of Orion, of which a large number attended. Special musical numbers were given by Miss Mildred Stoddard and Doctor C. J. Hathaway, organist and choir director of the Methodist Church, Misses Mona Schaar and Reva Braid and the Orion Latter Day Saint Girls' Quartet. Elder C. J. Mottashed was in charge of the program, giving some very nice remarks at the opening of the service and introducing the speakers in his pleasing manner.

The evening service was held in the Saints' church, and Elder H. A. Koehler was the speaker.

A good attendance was at the conference from the district and several present from other districts. Many expressions were made upon the good feeling prevailing in the conference and the influence of the Spirit of God among his people. This was one of the best conferences in Detroit District, although not the largest.

JOHN L. HALL, for the Press Committee.

Cherokee, Iowa

417 Clark Street

District conference met with our branch October 22 and 23, and a good spiritual time was enjoyed by visitors and local Saints. We are trying to settle down for a good winter's work.

Sacramental Sunday was a big day for Cherokee Branch. We met at 9.45 a. m. for Sunday school, then at 10.45 Pastor A. R. Crippen baptized six precious souls into the kingdom, five little girls and one man, Irvin Hahn, the father of two of the girls and son-in-law of Brother Crippen. He has investigated the work thoroughly and is well satisfied with the step he has taken.

Following the baptism, confirmation and sacramental service was held. Elders Crippen, Spence, and Reeder confirmed the new members, and a fine spiritual social service closed the morning meetings.

In the evening the children of the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a program. The evening sermon was by Brother Reeder, who chose for his text John 9:4: "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work," the theme being that faith must be followed by works. There was fair attendance at all services, and excellent attention was accorded the speakers.

Small attendance greeted yesterday's services on account of sickness, of which there is no small amount in our branch. Pastor Crippen has been ill with flu for two weeks. He is a little better at this writing but yet unable to be about his duties. Brother Reeder has filled his appointments for the past two Sundays. Yesterday morning's service was a prayer meeting in behalf of the sick of the branch. Several earnest prayers were offered, and the Spirit of God was with us. The testimonies of the Saints were encouraging and helpful. With the spiritual aid of this gathering, Elders Spence and Reeder called and administered to four of the sick who were permitted to receive wonderful blessings from the heavenly Father who hears all our petitions. Truly, God will hear us if we but ask in faith believing he will grant our request.

The Department of Women will hold its bazaar and food sale December 3. Proceeds are to help pay for the fine new stove for the church.

Apostle J. F. Garver is expected to visit us for two days some time in December.

The Sunday school will give a Christmas program, and a tree and treats will be provided by the grown-ups. Our children have been very faithful and are entitled to some reward and encouragement.

As the year is closing, we believe the Saints are drawing nearer each other and are striving for a better understanding of the conditions we must meet if we are to inherit a place in Zion. We feel encouraged to go on in the work and trust the letters from Cherokee may be a help to some of our brothers and sisters who are scattered throughout our land. We pray for them and trust they remember us.

Des Moines, Iowa

November 20.—The work in this part of the Lord's vineyard is moving forward very satisfactorily. On October 16, Sunday, our pastor spoke at the morning service upon the topic, "The church as an influence in industrial and civic life."

The program of the Religio hour was enjoyed by all present. It consisted of a vocal solo by Virginia Skinner, and a piano solo by Mary Louise Mussell. A thirty-second discussion was held on the theme, "The Religio, or Department of Recreation and Expression." Those taking part in this were Roy Parker, G. F. Hull, Sister Kirkwood, Sister Rudkin, and C. B. Hartshorn.

Previous to the opening of the evening service, the Saints rejoiced to see Patriarch F. A. Smith and his companion enter the building. Of course he was the speaker of the hour and was gladly received. For his text he took, "No man can serve two masters," and, "Seek ye first the kingdom of heaven."

Sunday, October 30, was Graceland College Day. Brief remembrances were spoken by Brother J. L. Parker, who formerly was a Graceland student. The pastor spoke at the morning service on the theme, "Graceland and its needs." At the close of the Religio session, a baptismal service was held. Dorothy and Arlene, the two children of Brother and Sister Fowler, of Webster City, Iowa, were the candidates. The ceremony was performed by Brother J. E. Slocum, who is in charge of the work in that vicinity. We are always glad to welcome the Saints from that place, and rejoice with them as new members are added to their flock. The evening service was in charge of Elder Hartshorn, with Brother Will Robinson as speaker. "Forward ho," the subject, proved very interesting. A vocal solo, "Not understood," was rendered by Sister Forest Pratt.

Last Sunday the day was dedicated to thanksgiving. At the morning service the choir sang the anthem, "Thanks be to God." The sermon was by Brother H. Castings, "Where are the other nine?"

At the Religio hour the Saints enjoyed a solo by Brother Hartshorn, "A dream of paradise." Thanksgiving discussions were held by Sister Kirkwood, Sister Deskin, and Lloyd Mussell. In the evening Brother Hartshorn was the speaker, on the theme, "The greater salvation." Ardith Kirkwood rendered the solo, "Others."

A recent feature of the Des Moines Branch was a fathers and sons banquet held Thursday, November 17. The program included a vocal solo by Howard Anderson; reading by Roy Richards; vocal solo, Dean Dalbey; talk by J. Johnson, "To our lads"; talk by Lloyd Mussell, "To our dads." The principal speech of the banquet was made by Doctor Morehouse, of Drake University. A very happy time was had by all present.

On Friday night a Kounty Fair was held under the auspices of Pan-Adelphia Chapter of Temple Builders. The affair was well attended, and the receipts went to the building fund.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

November 14.—Saskatoon Branch has not been heard from for some months, but we still are very much alive. Services are held in the chapel three times every Sunday. Sunday school at 10 a. m.; prayer service at 11; and evening service, 7.30. Brother William Brant is usually our speaker on Sunday evening, and there is generally a musical number. Last Sabbath Sister Ruth Peterson and Brother Paul Schmidt sang a very pleasing duet.

Brother Arthur Gendron, branch teacher, leaves for Laramoni today. He hopes to attend Graceland College. Brother Brant had also planned to accompany him but owing to the long period of wet weather has not yet completed his threshing.

Our young Saskatoon Saints are vitally interested in improving their talents. We have nine young people attending college this winter, one at normal, one sister studying voice, a number studying piano or violin, a young brother taking a course at night school; and another sister who is already an R. N. is taking a postgraduate course after Christmas. These years of preparation will mean much to the church in future years. We have no doubt but that the work will grow, for many of these who are studying are consecrated young people.

The members of this branch have been invited to attend a supper and social on November 18 at the Grand Plains Branch, Delisle, the proceeds to be used for Christmas offering. We had planned a fancy dress party at the home of Sister C. J. Osler for the same date but for various reasons have been obliged to postpone it.

The Saints of Northern Saskatchewan have been much saddened because of the death of Sister Byron Anderson. She leaves eight children, the youngest only a few weeks old. The deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband and little ones.

Stockton, California

Corner Sutter and Clay Streets

October 9 our district bishop, Brother Ingham, and his counselor, Cecil Hawley, paid us a visit. Also the Saints of Modesto Branch joined with us in worship, first with the Sunday school, and at the eleven o'clock service Brother Hawley gave a splendid talk. At noon a basket lunch was enjoyed by all, it being spread in the basement of the church. Brother Ingham spoke on the subject of stewardship at 2.30. These get-together gatherings are a great help, spiritually and socially.

Brother Edwin Burdick, of Sacramento, talked to us in the interest of the music department of the district on Sunday evening, October 16. Brother Burdick is leader of the district orchestra, a man thorough in his work. His talk was interesting, and inspired all who hear him with a desire to qualify more fully in whatever talent they may have.

The women of the branch served a cafeteria supper on the 27th. The proceeds will go toward church improvements. There have recently been new windows installed, and the painting of the church has just been completed. These improvements give our little chapel a much better appearance.

On last Sunday our hearts were saddened when news was brought to Sunday school that Brother Briggs had suddenly passed away. We shall miss him greatly, for he was always on hand to help wherever he was needed. Never did he fail to visit all who were sick; he was a friend to everyone, as many floral offerings bore tribute. The funeral was held from the church Wednesday, November 2, at 2 p. m. Brother Briggs was known throughout the district. Representatives from several branches were present at his funeral. Elder Guy P. Levitt preached the sermon, being assisted by Brother Etzenhouser, of Oakland. The remains were cremated.

Our sympathy is also extended to Sister Mallory and family. Mr. Mallory passed away last Sunday. His funeral was held on Wednesday at eleven o'clock from the undertaking parlors. Brother Levitt conducted the service. A large gathering and a profusion of flowers bore evidence of the esteem in which he was held in the community. Mr. Mallory was often seen in our services, and we shall miss him.

A Halloween social was given by the Religio at the home of Sister Tinkess. A bonfire and wiener roast as well as the usual Halloween games and fun were enjoyed.

It is the desire of Stockton Saints to work together to build up the church organization.

Canadian Saints Celebrate Anniversary

A cutting came to the editor's desk, taken from the London, Ontario, Free Press of November 21, which contains the following account of a celebration and special meeting:

Church Marks Twelfth Anniversary

Latter Day Saint Congregations Hear Special Speakers

With special speakers at both the morning and evening services, the members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints yesterday celebrated the twelfth anniversary of the building of the church. Founded fifty years ago by Elders J. J. Cornish and Arthur Leverton, the church has grown until it now holds one of the most prominent positions in the religious circles of this city. The first building was a small frame structure on Maitland Street, near York, and served the purposes of the congregation until 1915, when it was found necessary to build a larger and more impressive edifice.

With the passing of another milestone in an era of prosperity, the church now finds itself free of debt and with a comfortable sum in the treasury. The congregation now numbers between three and four hundred people. The large edifice was filled to capacity during both the morning and evening services yesterday, while visitors were present from Saint Thomas, Stratford, Saint Mary's, and a number of other cities and towns in the district.

The speaker for the morning service was Bishop A. Carmichael, of Independence, Missouri, while during the evening services Bishop C. J. Hunt, also of Independence, conducted the services and preached the sermon. During the afternoon an open session of the Sunday school was held, with both bishops addressing the congregation. Assisting at the services were Elder Frank Gray, Elder Atkinson, of Saint Mary's; Elder Albert Cordery, of Saint Thomas; Elder Clarence Weeks, of Tillsonburg, and Elder J. E. MacGregor, of the London church.

Special Music

Music played an important part in the program of the day, with the choir, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Timbrell, who was also organist, offering a number of beautiful anthems.

In his address at the evening service Bishop Hunt took for his sermon the subject of giving tithes to the church, choosing for his text the gospel of Saint Matthew, chapter 24, verse 14, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." That the end of the world would not come until the true word of God had been preached in every corner of the earth was the contention of Bishop Hunt, and that when the time came that God's will was done on the earth as it was in heaven then would come the end, he stated.

But the Word of God could not be preached in other countries, it was pointed out, if the people who had already received the faith did not give money to provide a means to send missionaries into the foreign lands.

Not until all nations had heard the Word of God, stated the speaker, would the bursting clouds reveal the Son of God. We must keep this in mind and do our part toward spreading the faith of the Lord, pointed out the speaker.

We will all stand before God on the day of judgment, stated Bishop Hunt, and then we will have to answer to him for not giving our tithe to the church. Although there are many young men and women who are anxious to go out and spread the faith in other countries, he said, the necessary money was lacking, and that we would have to answer to God on our last day for not providing for his missionaries.

Merlin, Canada

Sunday, November 13, Merlin Branch held its anniversary services. The day's meeting opened at 9.30 in the morning with a spiritual prayer service. Patriarchs James Davis and Arthur Leverton were in charge. A gift of prophecy was given through Brother Davis.

At eleven o'clock preaching was by Elder Arthur Leverton.

Sunday school was at 1.45 with District Superintendent Willard Kettlewell, of Windsor, in charge.

At three in the afternoon there was a sermon by Bishop John C. Dent, of London, the church being filled to capacity. Mrs. Charles St. John and daughter Ethel, of Ridgetown, sang a duet.

Bishop Dent again spoke to a crowded house at seven in the evening. Miss Fern Atkinson rendered a solo which was enjoyed by all.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Meals were served in the basement of the church by the women of the branch.

This day will be long remembered, and we pray God that the Spirit we enjoyed may go through life with us.

CHARLES L. OSBORNE.

Fall River, Massachusetts

November 18.—November sacramental service was well attended, and the Holy Spirit was there. All the parents and six individuals received prophecies. In the afternoon the sacrament was carried to Sister Halstead, Sister Hargraves, and Brother Ernest Chesworth.

Sister Myra Cockcroft was in a Boston hospital at this time. When visitors were allowed, the Boston Saints were very kind to her.

A debating class was formed, with Ralph Baldwin president, on the first Sunday of the month. George Brindley was chosen vice president; Donald Chesworth, secretary; William Baldwin, sr., and Alma Coombs, teachers. This class will meet every Tuesday evening at 7.30 and debate religious subjects. Thus far attendance and interest are good.

Fall River more than doubled its quota for Graceland College.

November 13 there was a departmental conference at Attleboro. Quite a number went from here, and not enough came in Fall River to hold services. Alma Coombs was to have been the morning speaker and Thomas McGuire the evening, but only one or two came to each service. Attendance at Sunday school was thirty-two. Brother Ernest Chesworth was so much improved that his father could take him to Attleboro.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was with the branch November 17 and showed stereopticon views of the South Sea Islands.

The writer was not able to be present, but Sister Florence Sheehy reported a good attendance with some nonmembers in the congregation. Some Saints came from Brockton Branch. Brother Ellis went from here to New Bedford. The pictures were beautiful and interesting and the lecture instructive. Apostle Ellis stayed at the Rogerson home during his brief visit in Fall River.

The Department of Women will hold a Christmas sale and supper December 10. Sister Mary Bowden is president of this department.

We enjoy reading "Little journeys," written by President Frederick M. Smith.

Services here are usually advertised in the daily paper, but not always.

Hagerman, Idaho

November 19.—Elder J. A. Davis has been with us the past week, holding meetings at the Tuttle schoolhouse. He has been having good interest and crowds, and the local Saints are assisting in any way they can. No doubt much good is going to result.

We believe Hagerman Branch is improving. Attendance is growing, and interest is better.

We have refinished the inside of the church, and as soon as the busy time is over we are going to repaint the outside of the building.

Hagerman Branch has more help in the priesthood since the summer conference. At that meeting Brothers Cecil Gilmore and J. W. Condit were ordained priests, and they have been making commendable efforts in presenting the word.

Our Department of Women is active. Under its supervision, dinner was served at the Labor Day celebration, netting nearly one hundred dollars. SILAS D. CONDIT.

Birmingham, England

England and Zion—what a long way apart! Yet what ideals we share! Truly the faithful ones have their faces turned Zionward. We are longing to see Zion redeemed, Zion a reality, something we may point out to people. Though perhaps "Distance may lend enchantment to the scene" (to us outside of America), the Lord has said, "There is none other place appointed than that which I have appointed for the work of the gathering of my Saints."—Doctrine and Covenants 98:4. So we wait and pray and labor that we may help to make Zion a success, knowing that God's words fail not, but that eventually all will be accomplished that he has promised.

Saints of Birmingham Branch are having their trials, their setbacks, because, as it seems to the writer, "there are many spirits gone abroad into the earth," spirits not in accord with the Spirit of Jesus Christ. Spirits we can not understand, causing disunion amongst the Saints, who ought to be the happiest people on the earth.

Our branch has had many losses this last year or two by death, causing us to wonder who will bear the gospel banner in the future. In May, 1926, Brother Howard Meredith, a comparatively young man, passed to his reward. The same year we lost such old stalwarts as Brother Ephraim Webb, known in England and America for his stanch attitude toward the gospel; in April, 1927, Sister Sarah E. Walton, wife of the late branch president, in a ripe old age, faithful to the last in duty and devotion; November 1, 1927, Brother Herbert Smith, priest, a stanch defender of the faith, well known in many religious denominations, in his neighborhood, and respected for his faith, though perhaps not so polished as some, yet true to the core to his belief in the gospel. His end was peace. His funeral was proof of the respect and love for this honest Saint. The floral offerings were beautiful and plentiful and show the esteem in which our brother was held. The floral tribute from his son and daughter, Herbert and Annie Smith, was most unique, being in the form of a full-sized armchair, of crimson and white roses, and truly showed the love and respect they had for their father. The tribute sent by Birmingham Branch had the following attached:

Blunt, honest, true.
These qualities we knew,
In this our brother.
Ready always to fight,
For truth, justice, and right,
To defend another.

Gone to a better land,
With the redeemed to stand,
Has this strong heart.
To live with the Savior dear,
And his sweet voice to hear,
"Thou hast done thy part."

Oh, like him, may we,
Evermore to be,
A warrior true.
To strive to reach the test,
That when we have sweet rest
We may hear it, too.

This was written by Sister Gertie Allen, branch chorister, niece of the departed Brother Smith, and youngest sister of Apostle F. Henry Edwards. The branch members greatly mourn the departure of our brother.

We send kind greetings to all the Saints, known and unknown.

WILLIAM H. ELDRIDGE.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, 208 Lichfield Road, Aston.

Western Maine

District conference convened at Vinal Haven, October 29 and 30, in charge of Elder Amos Berve, district president.

A very enjoyable time was had, and although we were together only two days it was two days of spiritual unity and education. Many expressed regret when the time to separate came.

Brother and Sister Berve arrived Friday morning, accompanied by C. B. Woodstock, of Lamoni, Iowa. Friday afternoon Brother Woodstock held an interesting meeting for departmental workers, everyone being welcome. Again in the evening he spoke, continuing his theme of the afternoon.

Saturday morning prayer service was at 9.30 and was well attended, unity and love seeming to predominate. The round table talk at eleven o'clock led by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, of Independence, Missouri, was inspiring and educational.

District business meeting was held at two in the afternoon in charge of Brother Amos Berve. "Ida Cline" was not present, and "nos" forgotten, so the business was quickly disposed of. Brother E. L. Traver was accepted as bishop for Western Maine and a standing vote of thanks given Brother M. C. Fisher for his past services among us.

Following this meeting was a sermon by Brother Woodstock, and then recreational activities in charge of Brother Archie Begg were had on the side lawn until supper was announced.

Apostle Ellis gave an entertaining lecture on the people and customs of the South Sea Islands, illustrating his talk with stereopticon slides, at seven in the evening. Most of these pictures he had himself taken while on his mission there. Although this meeting ran overtime quite a bit, many gave a sigh of regret when it ended.

Sunday dawned clear and cool.

Prayer service at 8.30 a. m. was much enjoyed, many testifying to the blessings of the gospel and their determination to press onward in the work.

Sunday school at 9.45 was in charge of Brother Woodstock, and many new features were introduced into the opening exercises.

At the eleven o'clock service, Elder Ellis preached to the adults; and regular junior church service in another part of the building was in charge of Brother Woodstock.

Brother Berve called a meeting at 2 p. m. of the Reunion Booster Club, which meeting was well "boosted."

At 2.30 preaching service by Brother Woodstock was followed by a talk to the priesthood by Brother Ellis. This meeting was open to all persons under one hundred years of age, so all felt welcome, many remaining in their seats during the short intermission.

Following supper Brother Woodstock held a round table discussion with officers and teachers, and this hour was much appreciated and enjoyed.

The farewell sermon was preached by Brother Ellis at seven in the evening, and although this was the sixteenth meeting of the conference no sign of fatigue or lack of interest was shown.

A baked-bean supper was served in the building Saturday night, and dinner and supper Sunday, this doing away with the bustle of hurrying home to prepare meals, and allowing all to be present.

Much appreciation is due those who helped make this conference a success, and especially do we thank Brothers Woodstock and Ellis for their willingness to occupy the various times requested, also Brother Berve for his untiring efforts in seeing that things "went well."

Many are looking forward to meeting at Stonington for the spring conference.

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Southern New England Departmental Conference

The Southern New England district departmental conference was held at Attleboro, Massachusetts, November 12 and 13. Doctor W. A. Sinclair assumed charge of deliberations at 3.15 p. m. Minutes were read and approved, and the following were elected to serve as officers of the conference: The district presidency, Doctor W. A. Sinclair, E. L. Traver, T. J. Elliott; district secretary, with power to choose assistants; chorister, Susie E. Sinclair, who was empowered to choose organist, Florence Gordon; ushers, local deacons; press committee, district secretary.

A communication was read from Bishop A. Carmichael, and a telegram of greetings was sent to President Floyd M. McDowell and the young people in session at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Superintendent of Religious Education, Sanford L. Fisher, made eight official visits in the district. Superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Ralph Hardy, made three visits and says he "greatly appreciated the spirit of cooperation shown." Superintendent of Department of Women, Lucie H. Sears, sent an instructive report from a bed of sickness, from which we quote: "The primary object of the Women's Department is home building and Zion building. This main objective gets lost sight of, and the department seems to function mainly as a finance committee. While this is desirable and the courage and zeal of the women in assuming financial obligations of a branch show a splendid spirit of service, it should not take all the time and energy of our department. We must be prepared to meet the developing needs of a growing church. Soul culture is the most important phase of our work and the development of character the thing of greatest concern. These can not be met by sales or suppers, but by study to make ourselves approved." Signed, "Lucie H. Sears."

Election for the ensuing year resulted in the choice of the following officers: Superintendent of Religious Education, Sanford L. Fisher; secretary, Catherine Carter; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Ralph Hardy; superintendent of Women's Department, Lucie H. Sears; superintendent of health department, Doctor W. A. Sinclair; superintendent of music department, Beatrice York; treasurer, Bishop M. C. Fisher.

Bishop Fisher spoke in an able manner upon "Tithing," "Wills," and "Church mortality or marriages outside the church."

Sunday nine o'clock prayer service was of a high order. There were four songs, forty-one testimonies, one word of inspiration. No prayers were offered except at the opening and close of the service, but the spiritual feast enjoyed certified of prayerful preparation prior to the service.

At 10.45 the Department of Women had charge. There was a splendid talk by our "new preacher," Catherine Carter, her subject being, "Why is it we are not functioning as a department?" She said, "A study of social psychology is needed—I would say Latter Day Saint psychology." Catherine answered questions with practical answers. Three written questions were presented for discussion: 1. Does the church expect the Department of Women to study? Decidedly yes. 2. Should they study civic affairs? T. J. Elliott, Susie Jordan, Sarah Fisher, and Doctor W. A. Sinclair gave stirring talks in the affirmative. 3. Should they pay tithing on money earned? President Coolidge will never beat Bishop M. C. Fisher for brevity in his answer to this question.

A telegram of cheer was sent to Lucie H. Sears, wishing for her speedy recovery.

The noonday meal deserves especial mention for quality and quantity, and was served in a businesslike manner. We can well pattern after Attleboro in the manner in which they cared for the Saints.

Branch President Earl R. Bradshaw was with us on the Sabbath, arising from a bed of sickness.

At 2.30 p. m. a talk, "The young people of today," was given by Sanford L. Fisher, and another, "What is it all about?" by Ralph Hardy. He stressed, "All departments should work together for the benefit of the whole"; also that we should have "church-centered recreations."

At seven in the evening the subject of the sermon was, "The War Lord or the Lord Jesus," by Elder William Patterson. This discourse closed a fine conference.

F. S. DOBBINS.

Hilo Branch

Hilo Branch is getting on splendidly, although we have no missionaries. With the help of Brother Waller, the Saints here are inspired to do better work. Brother Waller, who is the presiding officer over all the work in the Hawaiian Islands, is a very efficient and encouraging worker, pushing the work along splendidly. Brother Waller makes a visit to the Hilo Branch every three weeks. While here he gives encouraging sermons, which inspire the members to do better.

D. J. Williams, who has been very ill, has now recovered, although he is still not very strong. Brother Williams is an energetic worker and pastor of the Honolulu Branch. While ill, great was the sorrow of the Saints on both the islands of Hawaii and Oahu because of his being dearly loved by all those here. All those here have been made happy through his recovery.

Miss Ludivina Camara, of Hilo, was recently married to Brother Miguel de la Cruz, of Honolulu. They spent their honeymoon at the latter's beach home, afterwards returning to their town residence, where they expect to reside. Brother de la Cruz is a school-teacher, and a very efficient worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

School has commenced, thus having all the young folks back at school again. Those who had been visiting the "Big Island" have returned to their several homes at Honolulu.

Sister Leilani Hapai, former organist of the Religio Society (we have retained the name Religio) and for the church services, Sunday school and Religio teacher, and choir member, of Hilo, has recently gone to Honolulu to attend the Territorial Normal School. She has been a great helper to the branch, especially in carrying on the musical part of the work.

The Lanakila Club had their usual meeting. They had an initiation of new members. The evening was enjoyed by all present, as the initiation was entirely different to those which they had formerly participated in. A game of volley ball was afterwards enjoyed by all.

The Women's Aid is having a sale in the near future. They have on sale such things as dresses, towels, and embroidery work. They have played a great part in helping to push along the work here, especially along the financial line.

As Christmas is coming along, there is a great stir in getting ready a program for the Christmas exercises. The president of the Sunday school has selected the committees for decorating, buying of the presents, and such.

Sacramento, California

Twenty-fourth and Kay Street

November 20.—About thirty members of our Women's Department, with Geneva Beebe, president, went by auto to hold their October meeting by invitation at the home of Julia Crocker, at Loomis, about thirty miles away. Her beautiful new home situated high up among the fruit-tree covered foothills, made a pretty setting for the luncheon, and business session later.

Apostle M. A. McConley was a welcome visitor one evening in October, stopping over to preach for us on his way home to Los Angeles from a brief trip into Nevada and Utah.

Apostle J. A. Gillen was also welcomed here in time for our Halloween party, held in a local city clubhouse. Our Women's Department Social Committee sponsored this, with Naomi Hutchinson in charge. One hundred and seventeen were present in various costumes, and the grand march in the spacious hall was a pretty sight and one to try the judges in the giving of prizes. Brother Gillen was one of the judges. About ten were so cleverly costumed that they were not recognized until the unmasking. Brother Gillen also spoke for us on College Day and several evenings following.

The Idola Class of adults in Sunday school, with E. C. Burdick, president, is championing a contest for attendance and visitors, the losers to treat the winners. Brother Burdick heads the Reds and Sister Amy Beebe the Radiant Blues. This has been on over one month, and we have added ten new members and had many visitors, our attendance being around one hundred fifteen every Sunday, rain or shine, and this nearly fills our one-room chapel. One speaker said that in modern verbiage we are "crying out loud" for that new church building.

A farewell reception at the church was tendered Brother and Sister J. A. Austin and family one evening last week by the Musical Department and the branch, with Birdie Clark in charge. They are leaving soon to take up their residence in Los Angeles. District President G. P. Levitt was present to make the farewell speech. Hazel Blohm read a paper in appreciation of the devotion and service of each member of the family, even including the automobile, which has been consecrated in service on any and all occasions needed. Pastor W. H. Dawson made the presentation speech, presenting them with the gift of silver salad forks. Home-made ice cream and cakes were then enjoyed, two especially decorated cakes brought by Emma Joseph being presented to the family.

Early last month the Idola Class held an ice cream social in the Disabled War Veterans' Hall, secured through the courtesy of Henry Hulett. Bertha Austin had charge of the games. Eleven dollars and forty cents was cleared for the class funds.

Guy P. Levitt was present to preside over our last mid-week prayer service. He is at home now, busily engaged in the preparations for the young people's convention to be held here next week. Edward Nelson, president of the new Park-Presidio Branch in San Francisco, was a visitor at the prayer service and again with V. B. Etzenhouser, of Oakland, and Brother Levitt at the Idola Class meeting at the home of Sister C. H. S. Bidwell. The class is going forward in their splendid spirit of accomplishment. The Idolas have undertaken the responsibility of the coming convention, with J. A. Austin general chairman, and although he is to leave for his new location on the eve of the services, the work is going right along in committees, and E. C. Burdick is his assistant to carry on. The Women's Department is assuming the provision of all meals, and the banquet. Their superintendent and many of the members are of the Idola Class. A history of this class is soon to be sent the HERALD, and the secretary is to correspond with the general Sunday school superintendent with a view of making the Idolas a distinctive group everywhere, with class pins, by-laws, ideals, etc.

At a recent city election, C. H. S. Bidwell, husband of our Sunday school superintendent, was reelected to the city council, an honor over which we are all happy.

A junior orchestra has been organized here and has held two rehearsals. There are two violins, one clarinet, one trombone, one cornet, and one baritone and pianist. E. C. Burdick, district and local orchestra leader, is directing, with one of the young boys at the piano. So far all the members are boys from ten to fifteen.

Ontario Branch of California

It is with joy that we of the Ontario Branch greet the Saints everywhere in the name of God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, and pray that through obedience to, diligence in, and by application of the gospel of Jesus Christ his choicest blessings might be yours and ours to enjoy; that unitedly we might labor together in harmony with God's law, that he shall be pleased to shower his blessings upon us.

On July 3 Apostle M. A. McConley was with us and gave us much encouragement. May the Lord bless him in his work.

On July 17 Hiram Holt from Whittier was over and spoke to us at the morning hour, and might I say that he is blind as pertains to his physical eyes, but his spiritual eyes are alight with the gospel fire. We pray that God's choicest blessing might be his to enjoy.

July 20 must be mentioned, as we had a most wonderful prayer service, for God did indeed bless us to overflowing with the presence of his Spirit. Many of the young of the branch were present with us and did testify.

Wednesday, July 27, prayer service—a wonderful experience. Many of the young were in evidence, and the Spirit of God was in our midst.

July 30 we held our annual Sunday school picnic at Fairmount Park, Riverside. Swimming, boating, play, and games were indulged in. A family dinner at one large table was served at noon. After dinner there were several peanut and taffy scrambles for the young folks, and there were no old folks present. Evening found us wending our way homeward, tired but happy. We pray that the day may come when all the Saints will be gathered as one unbroken family in the land of Zion.

On September 24, 25, most of our branch attended the Southern California district conference at the Central Church, Los Angeles, California. On Sunday night, September 24, the pageant, "Remember Cumorah," was rendered by the district, all branches participating. The Ontario Branch rendered the parts of the Indian and Canadian groups. All branches did very well, considering the fact that they rehearsed together only once and that just a little over an hour before the regular presentation. A wonderful spirit was present throughout the entire presentation, which brought tears of joy, even to nonmembers.

I have attended all the conferences in this district for several years, but I never enjoyed any of them as much as this one. I felt the presence of God's Spirit as I entered the church building Saturday morning, and as the business sessions progressed everything moved along in peace and harmony, without a single disturbing feature. It was wonderful. May all our future conferences be of such a nature.

On Sunday, October 16, Brother Holt was again with us and gave us some very timely advice that awakened us more fully to the day in which we are living. P. Kaufman, of the East Los Angeles Branch, was with us also. He brought Brother Holt over. We are always glad to see Brother Kaufman, as he always has a smile for everyone.

Our young people's class in the Department of Recreation and Expression have taken up the study of the new pamphlet, "Industrial problems of Zion," and are much interested. I might say, in harmony with many of our branch, this new pamphlet of recent issue is indeed a gem.

We have eighteen members and several nonmembers who are trying to read the Book of Mormon through by the first of the year. Some have already completed it.

Our program committee of the Sunday School Department is already at work formulating the Christmas program.

We ever pray that we might be doers of the word, as well as sayers. We know that a person can not become a violinist without exercising according to the laws that make violinists, and likewise we can not become Saints and Zion builders except we exercise according to the laws and principles that make Saints and Zion builders.

San Francisco, California

Park-Presidio Branch

November 20.—Park-Presidio Branch of San Francisco has not lost any of the zeal with which it was endowed when we first commenced our meetings the first of the year. Regular services are attended with a ninety per cent roll call, which in itself proves that the membership is faithful to the cause. Saints of this branch have been particularly blessed with good speakers as follows: John W. Rushton, Bishop Edward Ingham, John B. Carmichael, and Clarence E. Moran. Our branch is greatly indebted to these brothers who have made it possible for us to succeed.

The Ruth's Club has been up and going, having had a costume Halloween party at the home of Brother and Sister Holling, October 21, at which time there were thirty-five members and friends present, and all voted it a grand success. The club also served a fine home-cooked full-course turkey dinner, which was public, and about two hundred were served. From what has been said, they are looking forward to our next, which has become an annual affair.

The manager of the I. F. Bank, Mr. Heyer, reserved a table for his family and the clerks and their wives. The Y. M. C. A., as well as other business concerns, were well represented.

The writer is pleased with the activities of Park-Presidio Branch. We are forging ahead and with the opportunities presented for publicity feel that the Reorganized Church is on the map to stay.

Eastern Michigan District

Since our last letter to your columns, the Eastern Michigan District has forged steadily to the front, and has kept up the good work it has been capable of doing for some years past. With the coming of Elder David Pycock to the district as the president, he has been able to spend his entire time in the work of the church, and his visiting the various branches and local memberships in these branches has brought about a better understanding of the policies of the church.

Many special meetings have been held throughout the summer and fall seasons. The one-day meetings opened with the Cash Branch in July; and following in order with a couple of weeks intervening the Bay Port, Saint Clair, Marlette, Fremont, and Huron Center Branches were the hosts of the district in one-day meetings. All these meetings were well attended, and the interest manifested on the part of the membership in the round table discussions showed a desire to become better informed on what the church is doing.

The sermons at these meetings have been presented by Elders Pycock, R. H. Huston, William Davis, and M. W. Liston. The sermons were of a high order, and the response of the membership could be noted. The programs were arranged to take care of most of the departments of the church, and with each working in harmony, much good was accomplished through this work.

The last meeting of the season is the departmental conference at Carsonville. The program has been arranged by Earl Diem, who is head of the Department of Religious Education; and Mrs. Mae Engle, Port Huron, district supervisor of the Department of Women, and J. J. Ledsworth, Port Huron, of the Department of Recreation and Expression, are cooperating. A good attendance is expected, and this will be the means of carrying out the fine program which has been arranged.

Eastern Michigan District as a whole has enjoyed a very successful season. The farm crops have been good, but not above the average. The potato crop is the only one that has fallen below the average, and it is the poorest of some years. Other crops are about up to the average. The unemployment problem is a hard one to solve, as many are out of work at present.

MATTHEW W. LISTON.

Thanksgiving in Lamoni

Through sermon, music, story, and tableaux, the theme of Thanksgiving was presented at the Brick Church. Seasonal decorations gave a setting. Saints coming into the auditorium on Thanksgiving Sunday found a bank of fruits and vegetables before the pulpit and bouquets of pine and autumn leaves on either side.

Pastor W. E. Prall was the speaker at the morning service. He drew pictures from the colonial New England days, the early days of Latter Day Saintism, and from modern life, depicting the conditions and the reasons for gratitude. A stirring appeal for expression of gratitude in conduct made a fitting climax to the sermon. The choir sang Dudley Buck's "Festival te deum."

The evening service carried a somewhat different program. A quartet sang as a voluntary, "Come, ye thankful people," and the congregation joined in the familiar hymn, "Praise ye the Lord." A scripture reading from the Psalms, and prayer followed. For this the congregation was seated, that they might enter into the quiet response that the quartet sang with the close of the prayer. Marcella Schenck told an old Thanksgiving story to a group of small children seated on the platform. It was the story of the little girl who started out to thank those who had furnished her a bounteous dinner and who eventually came to thank God, as the giver of everything.

The principal number of the program was a series of tableaux, "The farmer's reverie." On the front wall of the church was projected a verse describing the scene, whereupon a spotlight was directed to the platform for the tableau. Suitable music accompanied each scene. First there was Farmer Jones seated at a desk figuring his accounts, with the attitude that he had nothing except scanty board for which to be thankful. The following scenes depicted the mental pictures of the farmer and his discoveries of causes for gratitude. An invalid in a wheel chair reminded of present health. A soldier in uniform by the side of an unpainted cross while "taps" was played suggested the care of loved ones during the year. A Pilgrim scene of 1620 made a contrast between their hazards and our times of comparative plenty. The most impressive scene was that of Emma Smith and children who appeared while a male quartet sang, "Jesus, I my Cross have taken." With the realization of this blessing of freedom of worship and many others, the farmer reappeared in the spotlight in happy thanksgiving.

Owing to the holding of prayer service on Thanksgiving morning, the preceding Wednesday evening was given to the Department of Recreation and Expression, who conducted a social in the lower auditorium. Eugene Closson, of the general department, supervised the games and stunts in a delightfully informal manner. Doughnuts and apples were served.

On Thursday morning a good-sized congregation met at 8.45 for prayer meeting. With the stake presidency in the stand was Apostle J. F. Garver, who was home for over the holiday. The Thanksgiving prayer meeting has seemed to be the most fitting manner of observing this holiday.

Creston

The quarterly session of the Lamoni stake conference was held at Creston, Iowa, on Saturday and Sunday, October 12 and 13. The conference opened with a prayer service of an exceptionally high spiritual order. At eleven o'clock H. H. Gold, stake Sunday school superintendent, delivered an address on the subject, "Ten commandments for the Sunday school." Brother Gold in an interesting manner presented some practical helps for teachers and officers of small schools.

In the afternoon Blanche Edwards Mesley discussed in an instructive way the work of the three departments and their relation to the church. Elder James A. Thomas spoke in the evening, taking as his theme, "The council of peace," setting forth clearly that lasting peace can come only as the nations of the earth turn to the gospel of Jesus Christ for their solution.

Sunday was observed as a home-coming day for the Creston Branch. The day was opened with another good prayer service, followed by Sunday school under the supervision of the local officers. At eleven o'clock Roy A. Cheville, of the stake presidency, preached the home-coming sermon. In his subject, "Sacred places," he developed the idea that every life should have experiences of transfiguring nature that will give spiritual tone and stability in the ordinary life. Saints live in specific spiritual experiences, not on general theory.

The ladies of the Creston Branch served an excellent chicken dinner at twelve o'clock. At 2.30 A. R. Gilbert, stake superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, discussed in a practical way the place of recreation in the branch. Sister Mesley followed with a talk entitled, "Housekeeping vs. homemaking." The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a program of talks, music, and dramatics at 6.45. W. E. Prall, president of the stake, preached the closing sermon. A quartet consisting of Grace Lane, Stella Brockway, James Thomas, and Roy Cheville, from Lamoni, assisted the local singers with the music of the conference.

Oland

The Oland Branch observed its first home-coming on Sunday, November 13. Although the roads were good, the weather was chilly and threatening, so that not many from a distance were present, and the attendance was not as large as expected.

The day's activities began with Sunday school at ten o'clock with the local superintendent, Grover C. Sharp, in charge. The local pastor, E. Dewey White, took charge of the eleven o'clock service, his father, D. C. White, of Lamoni, preaching the sermon. The choir sang the anthem, "Stand fast in the faith," which sounded the keynote of the day, and was carried forward in the excellent sermon of the hour. Three letters from friends of Oland, J. A. Gunsolley, Bert Brooner, and Brother and Sister Roy Haskins, were read and greatly appreciated.

At the noon hour a sumptuous feast of—well, everything they have at basket dinners—was served cafeteria style by the ladies and heartily enjoyed by all.

The afternoon service was opened with congregational singing, followed by special numbers, a quartet, sextet, and a duet. Clara L. Nichols read a poem entitled "A retrospect," composed by her for this occasion. Brother F. J. Sharp then reviewed the history and progress of the branch. The afternoon sermon was by J. C. Ballantyne, of Lamoni, and was very timely. The Religio service in charge of the local president, F. J. Sharp, began at seven o'clock. At eight o'clock a half hour musical program was given by members of the Lamoni Orchestra led by E. Dewey White, and was fully appreciated by all. Oland is very fortunate in being located near Lamoni. As a consequence she enjoys musical talent from there occasionally. Elder V. E. Shepherd preached the closing sermon of the day, taking as his theme, "The home-coming of Christ." Following the sermon, E. Dewey White played a cornet solo, "A perfect day," and as the congregation listened to the strains of that beautiful song, they felt that in spite of threatening weather it had been a perfect day and one long to be remembered.

Saint Louis, Missouri

From "The Bulletin"

Sunday last our congregation commemorated the victory and peace which came to the war-weary world nine years ago. The sermon in the morning by the pastor was directed to showing the dangers of the present and the remedy. He emphasized among the elements of danger the economic, international, racial, and moral problems. Our safety would be found in cultivating understanding, good-will, sympathy, and patience. We need clear ideas and good fellowship more than all else.

In the evening Brethren A. C. Larsen, T. Howard Elliot, and Clarence L. Archibald had charge of the service and gave a symposium on the subject of "Patriotism and peace." Their efforts were much appreciated.

Through the invitation of Brother Bell the congregation enjoyed some very beautiful music, two solos on the Italian harp by Mrs. Paul Hartzke being rendered very artistically.

The business meeting last Tuesday was sparsely attended. A peaceful session was had. The financial state of the branch was discussed with serious regard to the urgent need of arousing the members to a sense of their responsibility in this matter. Out of 355 members, but 87 are contributing to the sustenance of the work, and of this number many are but intermittent in their payments. These 87 paid during the 17 weeks from July 1, on an average of 33 cents per Sunday. If these 87 are to bear the burden, they will need to raise this average weekly amount to 85 cents. If all would do their part, then 25 cents a week per member would meet our needs.

Last week two conventions were held in this city. "The World's Congress of Goodwill"; and the Missouri State Teachers' Association. Many world-renowned and talented speakers, men and women, took part and gave vital addresses. Surely with the noblest and best of our race dedicating themselves so whole-heartedly to the cause of peace, the public sentiment against war will widen and intensify until it will be crystallized in the outlawry of war as an instrument of settling disputes between the nations, as slavery, dueling, and the saloon (in America at least), have been placed under the ban of public opinion and laws.

Education and religion were recognized as the two chief forces presently available, as being able to achieve this desired end. What a gain even to the church it would be, if all were striving to create a better understanding and make friendship a real power in human affairs! The greatest of Masters and Teachers of our humanity taught us centuries ago: "I call you not bondslaves, but my friends"; and, "By this shall the world know my disciples, because ye love one another."

Independence

Stone Church

Last Wednesday evening the young people's prayer meeting, held in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church and conducted by Brothers Herbert Barto and Roland Flanders, changed the order of the meeting at half past eight, devoting the remainder of the time to a special service of prayer in behalf of President Elbert A. Smith, who left for California on November 25 for the purpose of recuperating his health. A letter en route states he was resting well during the progress of his journey.

Elders J. F. Curtis and John F. Sheehy presided over the young people's early Sunday morning prayer meeting, leading the young of Zion through a profitable hour of prayer, song, and testimony. Taking the thought expressed in the first two lines of the song, "My faith looks up to thee, thou Lamb of Calvary," Apostle Curtis made his opening remarks follow the topic "Faith." "It is a wonderful thing to have faith, for faith is one of the gifts God has made us. Faith can be cultivated. We are told without faith it is impossible to please God," he said. And speaking of obedience and service, which he linked together, he propounded this doctrine: "Religion must be cultivated within us in the sense of obedience and in the sense of doing our duty. It must be uppermost in our minds to serve God. If we put our minds on the things God would have us do, we grow along lines God would have us grow. True, many things there are that can separate us from our God; we can not expect, under present conditions, things to be perfect, but we can build up better conditions, first by making ourselves stay in the right attitude and then by laboring in the kingdom of God. . . . We must be in harmony with the law and avail ourselves of all its opportunities."

An unusually large crowd attended this meeting. There were a number of prayers, several songs from the heart, and the testimonies were brief, concise, sincere, and worth while.

"Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh" (Matthew 24: 44), was the scripture read by Brother Levi Rawlings in the devotional exercises of the Sunday school. He spoke briefly on preparedness, using as an illustration the Boy Scout motto, "Be prepared." Sunday school attendance mounted above the thousand mark and made ten classes perfect. A selection from the orchestra, conducted by Bishop R. T. Cooper, followed the lesson study. Several new faces are to be seen in the orchestra, and others are expressing themselves as desirous of joining this band of musicians as soon as they are properly qualified.

"The greatest thing that separates humanity from God is sin," declared Apostle J. Frank Curtis, Sunday morning's Stone Church speaker. "Paul's admonition against sin" was the topic of his sermon, and Romans 6 was chosen as a scripture reading. From this Elder Curtis quoted: "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." He continued: "It is one thing to start out in a religious life; it is still another thing to continue along that pathway, obeying the teachings of Jesus, waging a Christian warfare, and seeking the kingdom of God. This Paul knew when he said, 'Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.' There are so many things tempting us to do the thing we should not that we must watch and fight and pray. It is all right to fight, but we must be sure it is the right kind of a fight. In our warfare we should not forget to read the word of God, to seek his Spirit through prayer, and to come to church. Shall we be able to say with Paul, 'I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith?'"

"Paul also tells us 'We are laborers together with God.' Do you feel you are in partnership with God? If not, you are not in proper condition. Perhaps you are careless; you neglect to pray, to read the word of God, and to strive as a child of God to let your light shine. If you are in this condition, you are not occupying the high standard of spiritual development that you should. 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' Eternal life is God's gift to us, but we must earn it by righteous living; we must avail ourselves of the opportunities to serve him. We must be enthusiastic with the Spirit of Christ, that we may enthruse others."

This affirmative discourse was concluded by a short scriptural defense of baptism by immersion.

Music for the hour was furnished by the choir directed by Professor Paul N. Craig, by Organist Robert Miller, Pianist George Miller, and the congregation. "Peace I leave with you," by Roberts, was the anthem sung by the choir, Elbert Dempsey taking the tenor solo. The invocation and benediction were offered by Elder J. W. Metcalf.

Evening Services

The Religio program Sunday evening consisted of a vocal duet by Madeline Barto and Larena Bullard, accompanied by Evelyn Barto, a piano solo, "Anitra's dance," Grieg, by Anita May, and a vocal duet by little Winifred Gault and Ida Thompson.

By half past seven the main auditorium was filled with Saints who entered into the spirited song service, led by Elder John F. Sheehy, Robert Miller at the piano and Miss Eva Voelpel at the organ.

"The land we love is calling," the opening song sung by the congregation, preceded the prayer offered by Pastor C. Ed. Miller. Miss Voelpel at the organ rendered a beautiful offertory, and Miss Grace Edwards sang "Abide with me," Robert Miller accompanying with the piano.

Just as we depend upon the physical structure of a rose to bring to us its intrinsic value of beauty and fragrance—its spiritual attributes—so must we depend upon the structure (the organized body) of the church as a medium through which God and man may communicate and the world be blessed. When the flower withers, it loses its fragrance; its beauty is shattered; it is worthless. So it is with the church—when its organization is destroyed or corrupted, God no longer communicates with it, and it ceases to be of worth to humanity. Thus Elder Cyril E. Wight illustrated his point in his sermon, "Organization of the church from a young man's viewpoint," delivered from the Stone Church pulpit Sunday evening.

"The church does not exist in nor of nor for itself, but for the particular purpose of carrying the message of light and truth to the world. There is only one way in which a church can give a real excuse for existence: that it shall function according to the pattern God designed, that because of its existence men and women shall be better and able to give to the world the helpfulness of godly lives."

In his discourse Elder Wight gave to the church three distinct functions: First, it must be a means of communication between God and man (prophetic function); second, it must be the means of presenting these communications to the world (apostolic function); and third, it must be the means of conserving these communications or messages from God and those who have given heed to the message (pastoral function).

The two-reel film, "Abraham Lincoln, the son of democracy," concluded the Sabbath service.

Interesting Personals

Thanksgiving Day, November 24, was a day of especial thanksgiving for the family of Brother William Ecclestone, for it marked the arrival of the son, William A. Ecclestone, from England. For three years Brother Ecclestone has been in England, concluding this stay when he sailed from Liverpool for Quebec on the Regina, November 11. Brother Ecclestone reports a rough passage on winter seas.

Miss Cora Fligg, daughter of Elder and Sister William I. Fligg, was married to Basil L. Bullard of Walnut Park District on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day, the 24th. Liberty Street Church was the scene of the wedding. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Alice Bullard, sister of the groom, attended her as maid of honor. The ceremony was read by Bishop J. A. Becker. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and then Mr. and Mrs. Bullard left for a short wedding trip. They will be at home at 104 North Union Street after December 1.

The wedding of Miss Fern Dowker, daughter of Elder and Sister J. A. Dowker, and Clarence Stribling occurred at 7.30 Wednesday evening, November 23, at Liberty Street Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father. D. E. Dowker, of Chicago, an uncle of the bride, pronounced the ceremony. There was also a reception at the church after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Stribling left immediately afterward for Emporia, Kansas, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be at home after December 1, at 1835 Mason Avenue, Englewood.

Second Church

On Sunday Brother A. W. Whiting occupied in the morning, pointing out some of the prophecies contained in the Doctrine and Covenants that have already been fulfilled. In the evening Pastor Dillee spoke on the text, "As panteth the hart after water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." He received a degree of the good Spirit and helped the congregation to realize more keenly how completely we may be satisfied if we truly hunger and thirst after righteousness.

The Sunday school and Religio are progressing, and the prayer meetings are a source of joy to the Saints.

Special musical numbers on these two Sundays added much to the beauty and completeness of the services in the house of the Lord.

At the business meeting on Friday evening the congregation chose A. K. Dillee to act as pastor for 1928, and Delbert A. Whiting as his assistant; W. A. Welton as custodian, and Ross Leaverton to assist; Sister E. E. Weir as the head of the Department of Women.

Liberty Street

Monday evening, November 21, the annual branch general business meeting convened at the church for election of officers to direct and conduct the work of Liberty Street District during the coming year. Elder Leonard White was sustained as pastor, and Brother Glenn Davis was chosen associate pastor. Other officers elected are: Supervisor of the Department of Women, Sister Carrie Ballinger; custodian, Brother Patrick; chorister for church, Sister Leona Robinson; pianist, Lyda Tomlinson; treasurer, Brother Patrick; Sunday school superintendent, Heman Davis; assistant superintendent, Lee Christenson; secretary, Ruth Tignor; chorister, Sister Mabel Sellars; pianist, Leona Robinson.

"America in Pilgrim days," was the play given by the Saints of Group 30 Tuesday evening, November 22, at the church. Following the play, pie and ice cream were served. The production was directed by Sisters Lee Davis and Everett Bowen.

Elder John F. Sheehy was Sunday morning speaker, his subject being, "On to perfection."

During the past week our little church home has been the scene of three weddings. Two of these young couples are from outside Liberty Street District, and their weddings are reported under "Interesting personals" of Independence news. The third couple, two of our well-known Liberty Street young people, Miss Esther Louise Ballinger and Leroy R. Ballinger, were married by Pastor White Thursday evening, November 24, at eight o'clock. Before a large audience of friends and relatives the marriage vows were taken, the double ring ceremony being used. The bride was attended by her sister, Ruth Ballinger, as maid of honor, and Miss Octa Brainard, bridesmaid. Mr. George Fender was best man, and William Turner, groomsman. Little Betty Lee Turner and Robert David Smith bore the rings, and Bonnie Lee Curnutt and Jeannette Leach were flower girls. Preceding the ceremony Miss Ina Hattey, accompanied by Miss Mary Okerlind, sang "I love you," and "At dawning." A violin solo, "I love you truly," was played by David Stewart, accompanied by Dorothy Koehler. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Velma Resch. The bride is the daughter of Brother and Sister L. W. Ballinger of this district, and the groom is the son of S. R. Ballinger, of Enoch Hill. Brother and Sister Ballinger will make their home in our district.

Sunday evening, the 27th, Elder W. D. Tordoff commenced a series of meetings to continue for two weeks with the exception of Saturday nights. His opening subject was "Faith." At this hour the Liberty Street Male Quartet furnished two numbers.

Walnut Park

Sister Ammon Badder, who had been sick for several days with the flu, developed pneumonia fever and was taken to the Sanitarium Sunday evening, the 20th. She is reported to be improving.

Several of the men of the congregation met at the church Monday night, the 21st, and proceeded to give it the "once over" in the way of repairs, etc.

The Department of Women of District 3 plans to hold an oyster and chili supper in the basement of Walnut Park Church Thursday night, December 1. You will be welcome. Come.

On Wednesday evening, November 16, Saints of District 3 held a business meeting at Walnut Park Church and re-elected Brother Howard Andersen pastor for the ensuing year. Brother Andersen has won the favor of both young and old in the short time he has been with us.

Sunday, the 27th, was young people's day in our district. On the preceding Sabbath Walnut Park invited all the young men and women of Independence to be in attendance on this day.

The splendid morning prayer service, Brother Fred Horn in charge assisted by Brother Earl Cox and Brother Fred Wille, was well attended and gave a fitting opening for the day's services.

There was no Sunday school in the upper auditorium of the church, for at the ten o'clock hour Doctor Homan, of the Kansas City Teachers' College, spoke on "The realism and idealism of forgetting." "We can not forget," said Doctor Homan. "Every act is recorded and is subject to recall."

"We don't want to forget," he continued, "but the disgusting pictures as well as the beautiful scenes should be woven into and should help to make a wonderful fabric—life!"

"We can best help youth by not forgetting our own experiences," was his concluding statement.

Preceding Doctor Homan's lecture some musical numbers were rendered by the orchestra; a violin solo was played by Miss Lois J. Burnett, of Leavenworth, Kansas, and a vocal solo sung by Sister Margaret Gard. Both of these young ladies are graduates of the Kansas City Conservatory of Music.

There were a number of visitors present, including Mr. De Shazo and his class of young men from the Baptist Church; some young men from the Methodist and Christian Churches, as well as some from the Stone Church, Liberty Street, Second Church, and Enoch Hill.

President F. M. McDowell made an inspiring and far-reaching appeal to the young people at the eleven o'clock hour, his subject being, "The message of Christ to the youth of 1927."

He mentioned seven things as being important for the young today, and referred to the life of Christ for evidence to support his points. 1. Obedience—Christ was obedient to his parents and to his God; 2. Preparedness—Christ spent about thirty years in preparation; 3. Growth—"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man"; 4. Personal character—"He increased in favor with God and man"; 5. Life is sacred—it is a gift of God; 6. We must have some great purpose in life—Christ's purpose was to establish the kingdom of heaven; 7. We must be consecrated—which is another way of saying we must be God's stewards.

Preceding the sermon the girls' chorus, directed by Sister Margaret Gard, sang two beautiful songs which harmonized in thought with that of the sermon.

Following this service an eight-year-old boy, Arthur Caffel, was baptized, Brother John Taylor officiating. The two children of Mrs. Anna McVail were blessed.

Religio program consisted of a vocal solo by Herbert Frayer, Mrs. Ross Highbee accompanist; an extemporaneous speech by Bishop B. J. Scott on "How the young people have helped me as a pastor"; a recitation by Ruth Irene Cox; a cornet solo by Carlos Smith, Mrs. E. E. Moorman accompanying.

"In what may the young people believe?" is the question President F. M. McDowell discussed in his sermon at eight o'clock Sunday evening.

"You may believe in God," he declared, and proceeded to show the blessings such a belief brings into our lives. He also showed the utter inability of atheism to meet the requirements and needs of any human.

"You should also believe in mankind," he went on; "next to your love of God, Christ commanded you to love your fellow men."

"And youth must believe in themselves." This closing statement was an appeal which was brought home very forcibly by bits of history taken from the lives of others.

Brother Paul N. Craig and the Wa-Dem-Na Glee Club furnished special numbers for the eight o'clock service. The congregation expressed gratitude for their assistance.

Enoch Hill

Sunday morning speaker at Enoch Hill was Radio Pastor Ralph W. Farrell who discoursed upon the subject of "Thanksgiving." He sketched the hardships endured by the early makers of America, and emphasized the fact that we are sinning if we are not grateful for the many blessings, spiritual and temporal, we have today. The Saints were made to sense the opportunities of this age of Christianity and progress. At the opening of the service Margaret Goldsmith, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Noel Goldsmith, was blessed by Pastor Brewer and Elder Farrell.

Elder W. H. Kelley occupied the pulpit in the evening, speaking on "The divine plan." He devoted his time and attention to showing that God's plan has existed since the beginning, unchangeable, everlasting, and victorious, and that the plans of men have always suffered defeat and ignominy. That we must have faith in God's plan is Brother Kelley's belief, and faith comes by hearing the word of God, by learning of him, and by doing his will.

The branch business meeting, held last Monday evening, was of an exceptionally uplifting character. The spirit of agreement and cooperation was marked. President F. M. McDowell, Bishop G. W. Eastwood, Pastor in Zion C. Ed. Miller, and Pastor W. J. Brewer presided, and business was expedited with dispatch. Officers selected for 1928 are: Pastor, William Sarratt; associate pastor, Robert Whitsett; custodian, J. E. Alexander; assistant custodian, Lester Heath; supervisor of the Department of Women, Sister Agnes Hartman; associate supervisor, Sister Dolly Masterson; chorister, Charles Warren; assistant chorister, William Worth, jr. There were talks by Brothers McDowell, Eastwood, and Miller, in which hopes and plans for the year to come were expressed and outlined. A congregational vote of thanks was given to Elder W. J. Brewer, retiring pastor, for his conscientious work at Enoch Hill, and an expression of welcome given the new pastor.

Sister Rilla Johnson, wife of Brother Delbert Johnson and daughter of Brother and Sister W. H. Cox, was operated upon for appendicitis Monday morning. Her present condition at the Sanitarium is considered satisfactory.

Enoch Hill lost one of its active young women when Sister Opal Consuelo Swalley went to Omaha, Nebraska, last week, and at the home of Doctor H. A. Merchant was married at eight o'clock November 23 to Ray G. Hanson, of Wahoo, Nebraska.

Spring Branch

Services of the past week are worthy of special mention because of their high order and helpful influence. The prayer services of Wednesday night and Sunday morning were of a spiritual nature that all in attendance were refreshed and strengthened by the influence of the good Spirit that prevailed.

At the Religio Friday evening, a pie social was planned for Friday night of this week after the Religio session. The ladies are to bring pies, and the men are to furnish the cash and the appetites. Proceeds are to be used to purchase new song books.

Annual branch election occurred Tuesday night. There was practically no change made in the personnel of officers for the coming year.

Elder John Davis occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, and Elder James Strachan in the evening. Both discourses exhorted the Saints to live clean lives, this being essential to the upbuilding of the kingdom of God.

Dorothy Mabbott spent Thanksgiving and the week-end with her parents and friends in the branch.

Fairland Heights Mission

After united effort on the part of the workers of Fairland Heights Mission and their helpers from Independence, a speaker has been secured to hold meetings in the Union Sunday School Rooms, Eighteenth and Oakland, one block south of the Fairland Heights station. These rooms have been the meeting place of Saints and their friends in the vicinity, and during the past months they have established regular services there.

Elder J. W. Paxton, whose assistance they have obtained, began the meetings Sunday night and is preaching there every night this week with the exception of Saturday. Members of the mission will appreciate the presence and help of Saints from Independence, Mount Washington, and Kansas City.

Nauvoo District

The Monday morning after the close of our district conference, which was held at Fort Madison, Iowa, November 4, 5, and 6, Evangelist Ammon White and the district president went to the Rock Creek Branch, which is near Adrian, Illinois, to hold a few night services. They found a real welcome among the Saints.

From there they went to Montrose, where again the Saints were pleased to receive them and where they were happy to meet the Saints. Brother F. C. Bevan had to leave Brother White here on the night of November 10, to proceed to Ottumwa, Iowa, there to arrange for a series of two weeks' meetings to start there November 20, but Brother White remained there till Sunday morning of the 13th. In the afternoon of that day, he went to Nauvoo, Illinois, to hold meetings till November 16. Here the speaker found a good response from the Saints and a warm welcome. He proceeded to Burlington, Iowa, where he preached from the evening of the 17th to Sunday morning of the 20th. The Saints were pleased to receive him, which they proved by their attendance.

Now he is to be found in Ottumwa, where he has just commenced a two-week series of meetings. They have been well advertised beforehand in newspaper and large posters in the stores, and a number of letters have been sent out in the form of invitations. As a result there was a good congregation to greet the first night of his services.

Graceland Chats

Thanksgiving at Graceland

While the sun rose in the heavens and cast exquisite color shadows over my room, I determined I was, on this day, thankful.

Thanksgiving at Graceland brings us closer to the harmony of spiritual feeling. At 8.45 in the Brick Church a group of thankful coworkers gathered to praise God. Seldom is there to be found in church so many business men and young people, both of the high school and college, as gathered on this day for worship. The theme was one of thankfulness, and we praised our heavenly Father for strength to carry on.

At ten o'clock we met at the North Park for the game of football. We wanted to win, because—well—it was the last game of the season. But we lost. Was the spirit of happiness dimmed? No; Garver carried us safely through our disappointment, and we are thankful our fellow pals escaped injury.

Well, why all the rush? Where is the fire? These are questions one would hear floating through the air when the game ended. Can you guess? Of course, it was time to have that dinner. The country-club girls hurried to Mrs. Platz's home, for they were to eat there. The F. N. P.'s served a delicious dinner for their friends. George Mefferd was ill, and Mildred Taylor could not attend. This did not make them doubt their thankfulness, however. Dinner was served at the college in family style, and the spirit of the prayer meeting carried there.

At two o'clock a car drove up by my college home, and little Davy Ash yelled, "Hey there, Barney, are you going hunting with us?" Well, it was the "Gimpers" after Barney Neville, who had taken dinner with us. They were going hunting, and what they shot was to be the feed for the evening. I hear the Royal Thirteens followed the same plan.

The day would not be complete without an evening event, and it was the motion picture, "The Yankey stowaway." Are we happy at Graceland? Are we carrying on? Yes, we are! So to us this day has made the "Graceland spirit" a deeper, a sweeter, a more congenial spirit than we have ever felt before.

A Glimpse of Bide-a-Wee Life

The second floor of Briggs Hall has been converted into a girl's dormitory, which is known as Bide-a-Wee. The family consists of Mother Gates and forty-five girls. It is here that East meets West, and for nine months they learn something about the art of living together.

At half past nine o'clock on each Monday night, a loud shrieking voice, characteristically feminine, calls out, "Bide-a-Wee Meeting! Bide-a-Wee Meeting!" Then forty-five girls open the doors of fifteen rooms and trip out into the reception room in full regalia (pajamas, bathrobes, and kimonos) and find comfortable seats in chairs, settees, but mostly on the floor, because you see there are not chairs enough to accommodate a general session of Bide-a-Wee Club. Ruth Gates, president, lets the gavel fall, and Doris Waterman calls the roll. The girls answer present in various ways suggested by Ruth, from naming some dainty viand or confection to giving one's age. Most everybody knows the latter would be the limit. Then the page's report is read, and a very complete account is given of everybody's coming-ins and going-outs. Some group of girls produce a short one-act play, or readings are given, some business is transacted, then "Graceland for ever" or "Rah, rah, Bide-a-Wee" is given, then "Good-night."

At seven on each Wednesday evening we are reminded, "Girls, don't forget that we meet tonight in Olive's room for our little prayer meeting," by Mother Gates. It is in this session of prayer that a girl's real nature is revealed. First we sing a few favorite hymns; then the lights are turned out, and then we see into each other's hearts. It is not unusual for every girl present to offer prayer. Our service ends just in time for us to wend our way over to the chapel, where the college prayer meeting is held.

Friday and Saturday are social evenings; also the evenings for dormitory spreads. How we do appreciate our mothers and friends for having sent those boxes! It is just like taking your friends home with you for lunch and introducing them to home folks. Is it necessary to tell anyone that we are happy here in Bide-a-Wee? We are immensely.

Thanksgiving with a "College Mother"

Thanksgiving away from home! The very thought of such a thing made two poor coeds feel lonesome and, yes, even homesick. Then, quite suddenly, they began "looking at the world through rose-colored glasses," and all because of an invitation from their college mother to "Come down for Thanksgiving dinner." Did they go? Of course they did. And what a day! There was a dinner with turkey and "everythin'," and after that an afternoon by the fireplace—a basket of red apples and a pan of pop corn to eat, magazines to read, music for other entertainment, and, if one wished it, a nice soft pillow on which to sleep. The "home-like atmosphere" was what they wanted, and they were happy to find it in this adopted mother's home, as were many other lonesome girls on the campus who were entertained in a similar way.

Mothers Given Reception by College Daughters

This year at Graceland the idea was conceived of placing all the girls of the college in some down-town home where they may occasionally share some of the joys of home life.

This arrangement has added much happiness to the lives of Graceland girls. On Thursday, November 17, the girls gave a reception to their down-town mothers in Bide-a-Wee reception room, from two to five. The mothers were met by their daughters, who showed them their rooms and gave them an insight into their college life.

Through the afternoon, musical numbers and readings were given, and refreshments were served.

This mother and daughter experiment has certainly proved successful, and it is hoped will be carried on during future years.

Graceland Enjoys Thanksgiving Guests

The students of Graceland are always glad to welcome old friends and new ones. On Thanksgiving the students were favored by having several alumni as guests. They were: Fred Cheville, Walter Tracshel, Florence Juergens, Michael Johannes, Thelma Lane, Dean Stewart, Hugh Braby and his wife Emma Snead Braby. Some of the students and faculty were so fortunate as to have their family or members of family as guests. There were: Ruth Smith, Ann Morgan, Louise Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Gilbert, and Joy Sherman. It always adds much to the atmosphere of Thanksgiving at Graceland to have relatives and friends come. And for this the students are thankful.

Angels' Serenade

It was just a few minutes past nine o'clock, and all the girls in Marietta Hall were quietly studying in their respective rooms. Not a sound could be heard throughout the dormitory, when suddenly there came a sound as of angels

Clergy Permits for 1928

General Conference appointees and other ministers who are devoting their entire time to ministerial labor who are entitled to reduced fare on the railroads should get the necessary blanks from their nearest railroad agent, fill out carefully, have them signed by their home railroad agent, and send in to the undersigned with the necessary money order made payable to the agent of the clergy bureau involved. If you use these permits, do not put this off. A few days may mean several dollars, if you have to make a trip after January 1 and do not have the new permit. If you can not get the blanks from your railroad agent, send to me for one.

Our Departed Ones

SULLIVAN.—Hannah Yeager was born in Toronto, Canada, February 11, 1855. Married Michael Sullivan at Port Huron in 1880, and to them eight children were born. She united with the church February 21, 1904, her membership being with the old Armstrong Branch, in Kansas City, Kansas. Died at Saint Margaret's Hospital November 21, 1927, being faithful until death. Surviving her are three sons and two daughters, singing in the distance. The melodious tones rose, swelled, then died away. From each window of Marietta several pairs of eyes tried to pierce the darkness. Startlingly, out of the murky blackness, for it was almost raining, a song started up, right at our own front door. "Rusty" called to us to hurry over to Bide-a-Wee reception room. We certainly did hurry. And what a scramble there was! You would never have guessed that five minutes before some of the girls had been in dreamland. We found that the girls from the Country Club had preceded us. Then came the Herald Angels. "Cocky" was in front with the ice cream. The others followed. After a few more songs by the angels and one by the girls, the boys served ice cream and lolly-pops to the group. The girls from Bide-a-Wee gave a short program. After a few yells we were reminded that the lights had flicked, and everyone made a dash for her own room. "It was the biggest thrill I've had this year," one girl was heard to remark. It really was just lots of fun, and who doesn't enjoy fun?

FLOY ROBERSON.

one sister, and one brother. Funeral services were conducted from Butler Undertaking Parlors, Kansas City, Kansas, in charge of J. A. Tanner. Interment in Mount Hope Cemetery.

ROBERSON.—Donita Jo Roberson, daughter of Ernest and Anna Roberson of Benton, Illinois, was born March 14, 1926. Died October 14, 1927. God saw fit to give this little one into the care of earthly parents for the short space of nineteen months. She leaves her father and mother, five sisters, two brothers, and many other relatives. Funeral services were conducted in the home, Elder R. L. Fulk preaching the sermon.

ADAMS.—Jennie N. (Carrico) Adams, was born October 9, 1845, at Nauvoo, Illinois; departed this life November 9, 1927. She was baptized by Elder Charles Derry August 15, 1877, and was confirmed by her father, Thomas Carrico, and Charles Derry; to this covenant she has been true. She and her companion were among the pioneer settlers of Harrison County, locating near Bigler's Grove in the fall of 1855. Five sons came to bless their home. Charles F. died at the age of four years. L. W., of Miami, Florida, Thomas M., of Omaha, Nebraska; and W. R. and R. E., of Logan, are left to mourn her departing; also one sister, Almira P. Adams, residing at Logan, she being in her eighty-ninth year; and two grandsons and a granddaughter. She was laid to rest beside her companion in the Logan cemetery. A true companion, a loving mother, and a faithful Saint has gone to her rest; she will be missed. Funeral was conducted at the home of her son, William R. Adams, at Logan, November 11, 1927, by Elder Fred A. Fry.

SAGLE.—David John Sagle was born October 8, 1861, in the county of Grey, Ontario, Canada. He was married to Annie Sims. United with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 2, 1907, at The Slash, Manitoulin Island, Ontario. Was ordained a deacon January 27, 1918, and he spared neither time nor money in assisting to build the Saints' church at The Slash, which church was dedicated by Bishop C. J. Hunt Sunday, October 30, 1927, a little more than two weeks before the demise of Brother Sagle. His death occurred at The Slash November 14, 1927. Surviving are his wife, five sons, and three daughters: William and Harvey, at home; John, Robert, and Thomas, of Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario; Elizabeth, at Graceland College, Lamoni; Mrs. William McCullough, of Little Current, Ontario; and Mrs. Golden Noble, of Silver Water, Ontario. Funeral sermon at the Saints' church by Elder H. A. Dayton, assisted by Elder R. J. Farthing, November 16. Interment in Hilly Grove Cemetery.

FORBES.—Wilson H. Forbes, age 70 years, 5 months, 10 days, passed away at Detroit, October 28. He was struck by an auto a week earlier and injured, which injury caused a cerebral hemorrhage on the above date. Elder Forbes was perhaps the best known of the local elders in Detroit. His constant conversation was the gospel; his constant desire was its final accomplishment; his constant work its best advance among the children of men. During his years in the church, he has been associated with the Saints of many places, notably the old Pittsburgh District. He had resided with his family at McKeesport, Pennsylvania, at Toledo, Ohio, and Detroit, Michigan. He was well known in various parts of Eastern Michigan, and many looked for his visits and counsel when among the Saints. The funeral was held at the parlors of Moore and Coats, Detroit, Monday, October 31. Many of his friends were in attendance, in addition to his family. Elder Matthew W. Liston, Port Huron, Michigan, preached the sermon.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.—District conference was held with Springfield Branch November 4 to 6, district presidency associated with the missionary presiding. Five branches: Springfield, Thayer, Ava, Beaver, and Millspring reported a gain of six by baptism, and the nonresident group ten added by baptism during the past three months. Missionary J. T. Riley reported good interest in the localities where he has labored. Brother J. F. Cunningham, district president, also had met with much to encourage him at the extreme end of the district. The question of a central gathering place where all the Saints could occasionally meet was not approved at this time, but the committee in charge was continued. Bishop Carmichael was expected to attend this gathering, but he was prevented, and in his place Bishop G. W. Eastwood, of Independence, very creditably represented the financial side of the gospel plan, with three discourses on duty and stewardships. The bishop's agent reported receipts of $264.04 during four months. Time and place of next conference was left with district officers. Springfield Saints know how to entertain visitors, and everyone is made to feel at home while in their midst.

The Women's Department of the Grand Valley Branch, Ontario, held a very successful bazaar Saturday, November 19, at 3 p. m. The Saints contributed liberally, baking and sewing. The proceeds amounted to nearly a hundred dollars.

“A Position of Trust”

The modern funeral director has many responsibilities and obligations which were not dreamed of in the past. He is the adviser of the bereaved family in the purchase of merchandise; he is the custodian of important documents; he is a guardian of the public health.

On account of these responsibilities, which demand ability and integrity of the first order, it is important to select the funeral director with the same care that is used in choosing a personal physician or lawyer.

Graceland Chosen Depository of United States Literature

A news story in the Lamoni Chronicle for last week brings information concerning new recognition given to Graceland College. We quote in part:

Graceland College has received word that through the recommendation of Congressman Thurston, of the Eighth Iowa Congressional District, the local college has been selected as a depository for Government literature sent to this district.

In each congressional district, one college is selected for this purpose, and Graceland is very fortunate in being thus honored. The literature thus deposited in the college library will consist of books, pamphlets, and bulletins of a varied nature.

This is but one more evidence of the growing recognition being given to Graceland as a junior college and as a three-year institution. Through the splendid efforts of President George N. Briggs, the college has gained rapidly in recent years in quality and variety of instruction, and in standing among other colleges and with the accrediting associations of the State, section, and Nation.

Elder Leonard Hoisington is quite seriously afflicted in his mission field in Germany, and is coming home in the near future. The church authorities have sent transportation, but the date of his sailing is not definitely determined.

Elder Abel Hall will sail from Liverpool on January 7. He is coming to America for one year to make observations of the work and the methods of the church in order to be of greater use as an officer. America will welcome Elder Hall, and it is fondly hoped that benefit may come to Brother Hall as well as to the church in America as a result of his visit.

Evangelist Richard Baldwin has been appointed to the European mission. The likelihood of his staying for a term of years is quite strong. Sister Baldwin accompanies him on this foreign mission. They have determined to sail, embarking at Boston on December 11. Their ship is the United States liner, Republic. This is not their first experience as foreign missionaries.

We received death notice the other day from one of our German brethren, Brother Kippe. It was a model which we would like to see patterned after by the American and English people who have been more or less careless, and have given altogether too little attention to such an important thing as writing up a life history of a man within a very limited space. No one can read this account of the life and death of Brother Frederick William Max Kippe, of Australia, which is contained in "Our departed ones" without forming an adequate idea of the station, the devotion, and the successful culmination of the life of a man of God. It is well worth the close scrutiny of all.

Sandhedens Banner, the Scandinavian journal for Latter Day Saints, has been published intermittently for many years, ever since it was first conceived and executed under the direction of that consecrated and energetic man of God, Apostle Peter Anderson, deceased only a few years since. During his recent experience of a term of years in missionary work in Norway and Sweden, Elder V. D. Ruch has seen the dire necessities of that people, and the lack of any means of communication between them and the church in America, and has longed for Sandhedens Banner again. A few weeks since he made an appeal to the Saints in every portion of the country for financial support to begin again the publication of this little journal. The response he fondly expected has not come, and this week Elder Peter Muceus, once editor of the Banner, adds his appeal in the correspondence column of Zion's Ensign. Surely the response of the Saints to this appeal for help should be very generous. It should be ample for the purpose of again publishing Sandhedens Banner. If you have any interest in the mission to Scandinavian countries, read what Elder Muceus says, communicate with him at Lamoni, Iowa, or with Elder V. D. Ruch, 300 South Grand, Independence, Missouri, and offer assistance. The work must not be permitted to languish.

There Are Prophecies and Prophecies

I was in the home of a sick Saint one day in the summer of 1925, waiting to talk with and offer administration to the one suffering, the while a medical doctor was ministering. This doctor is a man of considerable friendliness, and inclination to find interest or create it, and as he came from the sick room he caught sight of me and said: "Is one hundred degrees hot enough for a June day?" and I did not hesitate to reply affirmatively. I was dreading the days of July and August which would immediately follow, and so expressed myself, which drew from him approximately this: "Have you noted what the scientists are saying about 1926 and 1927?"

"Yes; just a little."

"What do you think of the prediction that the climax in 1927 will be reached by the almost entire absence of summer heat?"

"Brother —, I have read somewhere a bit of scripture claiming to be the word of the Lord, and it is to the effect that day and night, cold and heat, summer and winter, seedtime and harvest shall succeed each other and shall not cease. I rather believe those statements. They have been true for so long that I am anchored to them, and I look on these contradictory statements of some men who prophesy in their own names and wisdom with considerable doubt."

"Well, brother, it may be the modernists are right, and that a large part of the Bible is mythical and not reliable. This particular writer presents some evidence to support his prediction, and several scientists agree with him. We are to expect such cool weather in the spring, summer, and fall of 1927 that crops will not mature. Come to my office and read what I have there."

"I shall; but, doctor, there's a mistake somewhere. Science and religion—or God knowledge, can not conflict: science is knowledge of facts; and God is truth. Facts and truth agree. Either the Bible statement is a false representation of what God said to Noah, or your scientist's predictions are not deduced from a comprehension of all the facts in the case. And my present preference of belief is with the Bible's statement. I expect 1927 to be not so different from former years."

I watched the journals of the country for statements regarding the prediction in question and found considerable interest had been generated. Again, when the winter of 1926-1927 began, I was watching the changes of the season with great interest, and will confess to a feeling akin to elation when the winter proved to be normal—not even severe. This feeling intensified as spring opened and crops were started. The summer became wet and cool; only a very few hot days until the real summer months were gone, and while I was a little disappointed, I felt that Noah's account of what the Lord had said to him had been verified for the nineteen hundred and twenty-seventh time since Christ.

Then came the heat and forcing season of early fall, and the month of September showed abnormal power to finish a crop of corn, vegetables, etc.

This condition continued through October and into November. Armistice Day came, and the gardens and fields were still green in Missouri. Flowers were blooming; pears and apples had not all been gathered; even roses were blooming in the open; snapdragons were at their best—no killing frosts. Thanksgiving Day came, and but few freezes have occurred in Jackson County. The day succeeding there comes to my desk a cutting from the Rural New Yorker. My faith still rests upon the plain statements of the Bible; rightly read and stripped of preconceived ideas, the Bible is true. I believe also that when and if the signs of the physical universe are correctly read, they are true; but these signs are likely more difficult of correct reading and interpretation than are the prophecies and statements of the Bible. What do you think?

Here is the cutting from the Rural New Yorker:

Some of us were inclined to be worried a year ago over weather prophecies that foretold an exceedingly cold winter and a season to follow that would make the year 1927 long remembered as a year without a summer. Notwithstanding that those who keep accurate records and make a scientific study of weather conditions assure us that weather can not be accurately predicted long in advance, we could hardly help wondering whether, after all, these confident long distance weather prophets had not discovered some natural laws overlooked by the rest of us. Had the prophets predicted an extremely wet summer, or one marked by widespread and unusual storms and floods, their rating for accuracy would now be high, and we should be inclined to listen when they speak again. But, as to temperatures, the winter was unusually mild, starting in with brisk cold but breaking in February and finishing with almost spring-like gentleness. Early spring was dry; summer cool and wet. Our great corn crop lagged. We were urged to gather seed ears even before maturity, lest we should have none at all. Then came September and October with glorious sunshine. Corn sprang to its feet in a wondrous burst of speed. Other crops ripened and were harvested under such ideal weather conditions as we seldom see. Now in November, we look back at our fears and remember with thankfulness that older prophecy:

"While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

And now we await the next prediction of the self-styled scientists, and shall probably, as before, depend upon the Bible to determine their likelihood of fulfillment. Surely there are predictions and predictions; prophecies and prophecies.

The Auditorium Walls Are Rising

Those who visited the Auditorium at the time of last General Conference will note the progress that has been made since that time by reviewing the description and picture in last week's HERALD, and the one here shown.

Here is seen the southeast corner of the Auditorium, showing the construction of the ramps, or inclines, by which entrance may be gained to any floor in the building.

This feature eliminates the use of steps, which are more or less hazardous. By the use of ramps, a safe and easy entrance and exit are provided. After the main floor is inclosed, it will be impossible to get another picture like this one, showing the construction of steel and reinforced concrete.

At the present time the ramps in each of the four corners are practically complete, and steel is arriving daily which, when placed on the immense pillars on the outside edge of the ellipse forming the first floor, will form the structure upon which will rest the structural steel framework for the great dome which will cap the building.

At the date of issue for this HERALD, forms are being completed for pouring concrete to form the overhead framework of the front entrance. The weather thus far has been ideal for construction work, with but few days when work could not be kept going.

Since construction began in February, 1926, probably more than fifty pictures of the Auditorium have been shown, recording its various stages of construction, but even pictures do not give one an adequate sense of the bigness of the structure, or its massive strength as indicated by the great supporting pillars, the foundations of which go down to the solid ledge of rock which underlies the entire structure. To get a proper sense of proportion, one must be on the site and view its great proportions.

Although the main auditorium and gallery are being built to seat 6,900 people, it is thought that the seating capacity is none too large.

The plans are well in hand to inclose the building for the 1928 October annual conference.

Spiritual and Physical Relationships

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

The word spirit, from the Latin spiritus, with its primary and secondary meanings is used in more than twenty ways or relationships. In a scriptural sense it is prominently employed with reference to the human will, the character, or that part of man's duality represented by the conscious entity of the soul.

The word physical is derived from two Greek words meaning "to produce nature," and is employed with reference to any created existence having a corporeal body. So far as our experience in this life is concerned, the spiritual finds its expression in and through the physical. In a practical sense the relationship is inseparable during our earthly career, which alone indicates sufficiently its great importance.

The unfathomed mystery concerning the origin and nature of the human spirit has engaged the closest thought and study of philosophers and sages throughout the ages. Even the seers and prophets of antiquity found this subject of absorbing interest. The poet-singer of the Bible in wonderment made inquiry of Jehovah, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" And the famous Poet of Patience ages before him also inquired: "What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him? and that thou shouldest set thine heart upon him? And that thou shouldest visit him every morning, and try him every moment?"

Many similar expressions, some in wonderment and some in attempted solution of this great mystery of mysteries, may be found scattered through the pages of sacred and secular lore from time immemorable to the most recent moment. There is but one answer to this pregnant question that has power to satisfy such urgent desire of the human heart to know whence and what he is. Perhaps the solution of this compelling mystery is set forth as beautifully in the language of the scriptural Wise Man of kingly glory as anywhere to be found. In solemn majesty the sacred muse affirms:

Man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets; or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

The Science of All Sciences

These spiritual and physical properties of the human being are sometimes called the duality of man. One of these, marvelous though it be, has yielded its secrets to the patient research of the chemist. But that most refined substance which we term the spiritual has not been found by means of the physical agents which he must employ. Whether under the title of biologist, or whatever term of distinction, no scientist has ever yet mastered that science of all sciences, the secret of which rests in the bosom of God.

Yet the Creator has revealed to us many wonderful words of priceless worth in explanation of the origin, purpose, and destiny of this duality. The essential nature of the relationship involved is most clearly stated in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as follows:

The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fullness of joy; and when separated, man can not receive a fullness of joy. The elements are the tabernacle of God; yea, man is the tabernacle of God, even temples; and whatsoever temple is defiled, God shall destroy that temple.—90: 5.

To cause proper spiritual and physical relationships in endless variety and innumerable realms of life, with their consequent charm of form, color, and sphere of action, is a science that no human tongue has explained and no human brain comprehended. We see its amazing manifestations of today, and from the bowels of the earth we dig up startling evidence of other manifestations of bygone ages. Thus we know that the enigma of life has wended its mystical way from beyond the times of human history. But only the great Biogenist of the Universe has the cabalistic key to unlock this hidden mystery. We can not even find the secret door, much less can we explore the wonders that lie beyond its portals.

All Living Things Created Spiritual

We have reason to believe that the principle involved in the duality of man was applied by the Creator with respect to all living existences. So far as the work recorded in Genesis is concerned, the evidence is conclusive. This is particularly explained in the Inspired Version, which states that prior to the physical creation there had been a spiritual creation in heaven. The statement is quoted in part, as follows:

For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth; . . . And I, the Lord God, had created all the children of men, and not yet a man to till the ground, for in heaven created I them, . . . Nevertheless, all things were before created, but spiritually were they created and made, according to my word.—Genesis 2: 5, 6, 9.

With respect to all animal life the ancient Hebrew employs the same term, nephesh, as is used for man. The translators made a distinction, however, and rendered the word soul when applied to man, but used the word creature as applied to animals. Had the word been rendered uniformly, the term living soul would then apply to all animal life, of which Genesis 1: 21, 24, and many another place, is representative. The creation account thus rendered would be:

And God created great whales, and every living soul that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly, after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind. And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living soul after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind.

The celebrated Variorum Reference Bible, which gives the renderings of leading versions, states in a footnote at these places that the literal rendering is soul, and that in Hebrew soul is used more widely than in English, "and denotes the sentient principle possessed by all animals generally." Doctor Bush, in his commentary on Genesis, states that "The phrase living soul is repeatedly applied to the inferior order of animals." The celebrated scientists, philosophers, and scholars who have affirmed a belief in the future life of animals include Socrates, Menander, Rabbi Manasseh, Tertullian, John Wesley, Canon Wilberforce, Bishop Butler, Professor Agassiz, Doctor Adam Clark, and George T. Angell. Clearly the teaching is also affirmed in the Bible. (Note Isaiah 11: 6; 65: 17-25. Revelation 4: 8.)

We are therefore warranted in saying that all forms of life represent spiritual influence, their physical manifestations being expressed in varying degrees from the almost inanimate coral to the supreme type, man. The entity individualizing all of these forms is evidenced by that differentiation which is discernible in each of the species. The variant characteristics of mankind, of which no two are exactly alike, are particularly discernible in the spirit or quality of the nature expressed by each physically, being manifestations of spiritual qualities which did not originate in a physical environment and the development of which surely can not be wholly traced to such environment.

Spiritual Power over the Physical

Physical deformity is not always the product of spiritual deficiency, though it may be so in certain respects. Of Jesus it was written that he had no form nor comeliness, that men should desire him. If physical aspects were entirely the result of spiritual characteristics Jesus should have possessed the supreme physical development. Accident, so called, is often a potent factor of earth life affecting physical growth, hence one can not evaluate the spiritual wholly by expressions visible to the eye.

But when physical blemish is the result of spiritual deformity or degeneracy it will be found that the physical appearance can not be wholly remedied except by a reformation of spiritual character and consequent habits. This fact explains measurably the ability of an individual to discern character in the facial expression and manner of others. There was evidently a greater and more spiritual discernment possessed by Jesus, however, as represented by his power to read even the thoughts of others. Nevertheless, it is worth much to us to remember that the scriptural injunction to "Work out your own salvation" recognizes our power to become largely what we will to be. This is our priceless heritage in life. If we fail we must bear the responsibility of our failure, as we shall likewise hold the reward of our success.

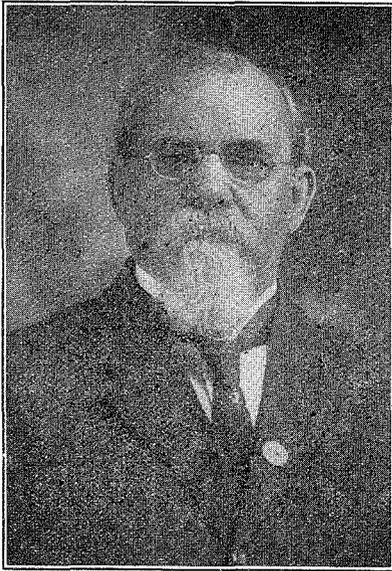

A most important factor in man's spiritual supremacy over the physical is that of the divine influence. By the direct inflow of the Spirit of God is made possible man's correspondence with the divine, by which he may assimilate of the divine nature and purpose, and by which he may be inspired to right actions and attitudes of the will. This light of God, which is the light of truth and righteousness, resides in the soul of each child of his to the extent that the light is cherished and followed day by day. And when at last we learn to know and express perfectly the leadings of the divine we shall also possess the key to immortality and eternal life and to the treasures of the hidden mystery of all things. Our great objective is summed up in the counsel of the writer of Ecclesiastes:

Hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be bad.

Our answer to this world-old problem we are daily writing in the indelible materials which constitute the record of our lives, and which irrevocably determine the nature of our eternal future.

Gomer Thomas Griffiths: An Autobiography—6

CHAPTER 12

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

In the spring of 1880, I attended the April General Conference at Plano, Illinois. It was here that I first met the present President of the church, Frederick M. Smith, who was at that time a small boy, about seven or eight years of age.

I was appointed to a mission in Michigan and Canada. Heman C. Smith and M. T. Short were also appointed to Michigan, as well as Southern Indiana. Our first stop was at Galien, Michigan, where Bishop George A. Blakeslee, who was directing our labors, placed me out in the country five or six miles from the town, while Brothers Smith and Short were assigned to two other localities; this with the idea of bombarding the town from the outside. After about three weeks of preaching, I had the pleasure of baptizing seven or eight persons.

Years before our having gone to Galien, Brother Blakeslee's brother-in-law, at a time when the branch there was in a flourishing condition, had a dream in which he saw the branch die out spiritually, but later, due to the efforts of a missionary who came to the town, revive again. So every time a new missionary arrived Brother Blakeslee would ask his brother-in-law if this was the missionary he had seen in his dream.

At the time we three missionaries went to Galien, the branch was at a very low ebb spiritually, and had been for some time. We attended the service on Sunday morning, Brothers Smith and Short occupying in the pulpit, while I sat in the rear by the door. These two were preachers with experience, while I was virtually a beginner. At the close of the service, Brother Blakeslee again asked his brother-in-law if either of these two men was the missionary he had seen. He answered in the negative and added, "But the young man with the curly hair sitting back by the door is."

Those whom I baptized I took to the branch for the confirmation, at which time the Spirit of the Lord was present in power. This revived the spirit of all the members, and later many others were baptized. Thus the branch was revived spiritually, in which condition it continued for many years. Some of those whom I baptized became active workers.

Later, in company with Columbus Scott, I went to Canada, and we certainly had great experiences there. I baptized a great many while on this mission and opened up the work in new places; also raised up a branch at Walsingham Center, Ontario. I had been preaching for some time in this latter place; had large audiences, and the people seemed to be very much interested, but not a soul applied for baptism, so I became discouraged and concluded that if no one applied for baptism by the next night I would wind up my preaching and go elsewhere. During the next day I fasted and prayed that the Lord would make it known to me if there were any in that place who were to come into the church, desiring that he would make it known to me in a dream. When I awoke the next morning, the sun was shining brightly, but I was greatly disappointed, as I had had no dream, and my fasting and praying were seemingly in vain.

I was staying in the home of Brother Fish, the owner of the flour mill in that place. My room contained three windows, two in the front and one at the side, to the left. As I sat on the side of the bed feeling very sad and discouraged, and gazing out through one of the windows, suddenly I saw a fish about fifteen or twenty inches long glide by the first window and then by the second window. Just behind came another. I was wide awake, and I certainly was astonished, for this was the first vision I had ever had with my eyes open.

I finished dressing, went down for breakfast, and then went out and sat down on the porch. As I sat there looking in the direction of the mill, I saw a man drive up in his carriage, get out, and go into the mill. He soon came out and then drove up to where I was staying, and coming up to where I was sitting, informed me that he and his wife had been attending my meetings, believed the message I was presenting, and wanted to know if I would baptize them that day. This I did.

Since being in the ministry, whenever I dreamed of catching fish, it has always followed that I baptized some people. My praying and fasting had not been in vain. Truly, God is good.

While still preaching in this place, one night I dreamed I was fishing in the mill pond and that I saw a big fish in the water close to the shore. I did not try to catch it with a hook, but just jumped in after it, and it was so large that I could not get my arms around it. Then I saw lots of fish all around and caught some others. This dream was very encouraging to me, to stay in that place and continue preaching. I baptized a number of people before I left.

One night near the close of my meetings, when about half through the sermon, I noticed a very large woman come down the aisle and take a seat near the front. She weighed about three hundred pounds, if not more. At the close of the service she came up to me, informed me that her name was Light, and requested that I baptize her. I was rather surprised at her request, since she had not been to any of my meetings, and I so informed her. She then told me that she had been converted to the gospel twenty years before by Apostle John Shippy, but that her husband would not permit her to be baptized; that now her husband was dead and she was free to do as she pleased in the matter. I arranged for her baptism. In those days I weighed only about one hundred and twenty-five pounds, and it did appear a big undertaking for me to baptize such a large woman. Quite a large crowd gathered to witness the baptism. As I led her out into the water, I felt a little shaky but looked to the Lord for help. I had no trouble whatever; she seemed no heavier in my hands than a child as I put her down into the water and lifted her out. The audience on the bank was a little amazed at this.

During my stay here it was also made known to me in a dream that Joseph Luff and I would be called to the Quorum of Twelve, which dream subsequently came true.

In April, 1881, I attended General Conference in the church at Plano, Illinois. This building would not hold one fourth of the ministry who attend a conference today; the church has made growth since that early day. While at this conference I met and married Harriet Anna Robbins. We were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony by Apostle T. W. Smith in the home of Bishop Israel Rogers, at Plano, Illinois.

Six months later my wife told me that she had previously written to President Joseph Smith, asking his advice in the matter of matrimony, and also inquired concerning me. It was a great thing that President Smith answered her letter favorably to me. Since entering the ministry four years before, the burden of my prayers had been that the Lord would give me a companion who loved him and his work; one who would encourage and support me in the performance of the duties in the church, and especially in the ministry. Our Father in heaven certainly heard my prayers and granted an answer.

We lived together nearly forty-three years, and never once did she call me home, but continually encouraged me to go forward in the performance of the work the Lord had assigned. She endured great hardship and made wonderful sacrifices, but never once did I hear her complain.

She kept posted as to the movements of the church and was well versed in the laws of the church as contained in the three standard books; especially did she love the Book of Mormon. I could go to her for counsel, and very often I went to her with confidences pertaining to my work. She never revealed our secrets. She was weak in body and suffered much physical pain, but our Father in heaven prolonged her life for many years, which I am confident was largely in my interest, as she was a good wife, a genuine pal and companion.

She traveled with me for a few years in the ministry, and wielded a great influence for good with all who knew her. She had the confidence of the old and the young, and many of the ministry and Saints often sought her advice. She brought up her children to reverence God and to love his eternal truths. She was never afraid of death and always said she was willing to go when the Lord summoned her.

Three of our children out of eight were born while I was away from home, and one passed away in my absence. We also had the misfortune to lose three growing boys within about one month, but she never found fault with God while passing through this terrible ordeal, but was patient, submitting to God's will.

In the fall of 1881, wife and I attended the semi-annual conference at Council Bluffs, Iowa. On the way we stopped off at Lucas, Iowa, where I held a series of meetings and baptized twenty. We also stopped off at Emerson, Iowa; I preached a few times to a crowded house, but baptized none.

The General Conference proved very beneficial to both of us spiritually. I was reappointed to Canada under the direction of Apostle John H. Lake. President Joseph Smith requested that I visit Emerson, Iowa, again en route to Canada, which I did and was very successful, baptizing more than thirty people. Within about two months, twenty more were baptized. I organized a branch in this place but have not been there since.

After leaving here, my wife and I traveled together as far as London, Canada. Here we separated, she going on to the home of her parents in Worcester, Massachusetts. During her sojourn there, our first boy, Gomer, was born, but passed away almost immediately.

During the early summer of 1882 I attended conference at East Douglas, Massachusetts, where I met Doctor Gilbert, F. M. Sheehy, and others. From there I visited Boston and baptized a lady; and Fall River, where I labored for some weeks and baptized a number.

At this place I had another strange experience: My wife and I were on our way west, and I had sent word to Joseph Squires, who resided at Brooklyn, New York, requesting that he have some one meet us at the wharf, as we were going across Long Island Sound on the steamer. But in the social meeting on the following Sunday, a brother who held the office of priest spoke to me under the influence of the Spirit, directing me to remain in Fall River until commanded of the Lord to take my departure. Further, that I need not be concerned about the word I had sent to Brother Squires to meet the steamer, as the Lord would make it known unto him that I would not be on that boat.

After the death of our boy, my wife and I had planned that she would teach school and that I would go to work for a while so that we could accumulate enough means to give us a start in life. Through this brother, in the same prophecy, the Lord told us what we had planned to do, and directed that I should continue in the work of the ministry and that he would see to it that we did not want for the necessaries of life. We were satisfied as to the divinity of that which was given, as he did not know anything about our plans, we having revealed them to no one. Some of those present did not have much confidence in the prophecy. I did not have time to send further word to Brother Squires, so made up my mind to put the prophecy to a test. About Wednesday of the following week I received word from Brother Squires that they did not go to meet us, as an angel had appeared to his wife in a dream and told her that we would not be on that boat.

In obedience to the command of God, I remained there for some time, or until I was directed to go. I held a number of meetings and was abundantly blessed of the Lord, as well as nobly supported by the Saints.

On the next Sabbath, when I was about half through my sermon, two nicely dressed, intelligent-looking ladies entered the church. The younger of the two seemed especially interested in what I was saying and at the close of the service came to me and inquired if I believed that evil spirits took possession of people nowadays. I replied that I certainly did. She said she had asked a number of people this question and they had all answered in the negative. She then told me she was confident that she was so possessed at times. Shortly after this conversation, she requested baptism. On the following Sunday afternoon she came to the home of Doctor Gilbert and asked Brother Potts, president of the branch, and myself to administer to her, and expressed a desire that the Lord would rebuke the evil spirits with which she was tormented. After the administration the young sister became very calm. I do not know what became of her, as I never heard of her after I left that part of the country.

While in London, Canada, I was asked to baptize three persons, two older people, and a young girl about eighteen or twenty years of age. The baptism was to take place in the River Thames. The two older persons were baptized without any difficulty whatever, but when I led the young lady into the water, she made quite a disturbance. I discerned the trouble and quietly prayed to the Lord to come to the rescue; she calmed down immediately.

The confirmation took place at the following Wednesday evening prayer meeting, which was held in the home of the father of R. C. Evans, the latter being present at the time. Edgar Harrington, Elder Mottashed, and I officiated. The young sister was the last one to be confirmed, and just as soon as we laid our hands upon her head, she tried to kick us away and commenced to scream. Brother Harrington was the mouthpiece but did not rebuke the evil spirit. After the confirmation the three of us went to our seats in different parts of the room, the young lady continuing to scream at the top of her voice. The sensation it produced was terrible. I turned to sit down in my seat, when the first thing I knew I was standing over the young woman with my hand raised over her, and I commanded the evil spirit, in the name of the Lord, to come out of her. It was summertime, and the back door was open. Immediately the voice making the noise through her went right through the room, out the open doorway into the back yard, and there died out, while the young sister sat in her chair as calm and self-possessed as could be. Previous to doing this I had not the slightest idea of rebuking the evil spirit. There were many people present to witness this miracle, it being a real case of the casting out of devils.

From Fall River, Massachusetts, we journeyed to New York City and Brooklyn. The Saints gave us a good welcome, and we held some very interesting meetings. It was here I first met George Potts, president of the branch, Joseph Squires and wife, Captain Potts, and others.

Our next stop was Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It was midsummer, and we experienced some extremely hot weather; do not know that I ever before suffered more intensely with the heat. Brothers

Stephen Stone, Stewart, and Crist were the principal workers there. The branch was not very large, neither was it in a very good condition spiritually. Those who were the life of the branch in those days have crossed the great divide. Quite a contrast in the work there today and then, in point of activity, spirituality, and numbers.

From Philadelphia we went to Hyde Park, which is now part of the city of Scranton, Pennsylvania, tarrying here for some months. The branch was composed of Welsh, English, and several other nationalities. We had some wonderful experiences in this place. When it came to contention, jealousy, and one pulling against another, I question whether the branch officers in that day could be excelled; they even contended in the Sunday school in the presence of little children. I was almost persuaded to believe that Satan had a mortgage on that branch and that some day he would foreclose. Notwithstanding this, there were some good and noble men and women among the members.

Another sad feature was that there were many who were addicted to drink, and the men used tobacco. While here I was commanded of the Lord to deliver a message to three of the leading men of the branch to the effect that if they did not cease their quarreling and contention he would take some of them away by death. Within two months from that time two of these men died, and the other, an Englishman, apostatized. Many changes for the better have taken place in the branch since then.

On our way to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, the latter part of 1882, we stopped at Syracuse, New York, to visit my wife's parents. From there we went to Pittsburgh, arriving the week before Christmas. We were taken to the home of Sister Matthew Smith, the mother of Ralph G. Smith.

The Sunday after our arrival, the district conference was held. The entire day was devoted to the business session.

It was here that I first met our worthy and faithful brother, Apostle Josiah Ells. Also George H. Hulmes, Frank Criley, R. S. Salyards, and Jacob Reese. Wife and I united with this branch.

The Pittsburgh Branch has had a wonderful history, having produced some of our most capable men. The work was established there in the days of the Martyr. Sidney Rigdon resided there at one time; also J. F. McDowell, James Brown, William H. Garrett, Thomas Lloyd, C. Ed. Miller, Harry Thomas, Joseph A. Jaques, Bishop L. F. P. Curry, as well as his father, Lemuel Curry, and his uncle, Ebenezer Curry, and many others. Many of the leading men of the church have occupied there, among whom were Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair,

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Almaden Stone's Secret Is Bared by Archæologist

Has the Rosetta Stone which will unfold the history of the prehistoric days of Western America been found? It has, in the opinion of Captain George Cooper, San Jose archæologist.

Last May, during the Fiesta de las Rosas, one of the most interesting exhibits in the historical museum was a stone engraved with queer symbols in the picture language of a primitive people. The stone was the property of M. F. Rossi, of this city, who found it in a cave in the old Sunset Park, near Almaden. The mystical figures on the stone excited interest and curiosity, but no one was able to read them. However, the stone was such an important historical relic that the Mercury Herald carried a picture of it.

Deciphers Markings

This attracted the attention of Captain George H. Cooper, who has made archæology a life study. Captain Cooper examined the stone and became so interested that he purchased it from M. F. Rossi, the owner. He has now completed the translation of the hieroglyphics on the stone to his own satisfaction, and is incorporating his translation in the second volume of Ancient Britain, the Cradle of Civilization, which he is just completing. As soon as his

At the present time it is presided over by Frank L. Shinn, a son of D. L. Shinn. The Pittsburgh District is presided over by Joseph A. Jaques and is in a better spiritual condition than for many years past.

On December 26 we went to Wheeling, West Virginia. There was no branch there at this time. We crossed the Ohio River to Bellaire, Ohio, and neither was there a branch at this place. But at Warnock, Ohio, a few miles from Bellaire, there was a small branch out in the country. Five miles farther west they had another branch, at Lampsville. Both branches were in a very bad condition, spiritually. We labored for several weeks with a view to reviving them, but there was very little material with which to build, and both branches soon died out, the older members dying off and the younger members moving away.

translation is protected by copyright, he will make it public.

The record preserved by a prehistoric race on the stone, which Captain Cooper has named the "Almaden Stone," following the example of the discoverers of the Rosetta Stone, he says relates the story of the migration of a people to America and describes the place of their departure. This stone, Captain Cooper believes, is the key to the mystery of the early civilizations of America, and in his opinion it may prove as important to the early history of America as the Rosetta Stone proved to Egyptian history.

For centuries the hieroglyphics of Egypt were an unsolved mystery, and it was only slightly over one hundred years ago that there was discovered at Rosetta, in Egypt, a tablet of stone on which was engraved an order of a priest, in hieroglyphics, demotics, and Greek characters. By comparison with the two known languages, the hieroglyphics were deciphered, and the key fitted to Egyptian history, which had been closed up to that time.

Wealth of Material

Will the Almaden Stone do the same service for the history of early America? Captain Cooper believes that it will. Here in California there are hieroglyphics carved on rocks, in caves which were probably used as places of worship, which could tell of California's earliest inhabitants if they could only be interpreted. There is a wealth of material with which to work if the key could only be found.

Those who are interested in the men and women who lived in California when it was young will be eagerly awaiting the publication of Captain Cooper's translation of the Almaden Stone.—San Jose Mercury, November 22, 1927.

The gospel is a matter of majestic ideas of great thoughts. Its very power lies in the range and reach of it. It challenges and rebukes our littleness and refuses to let us be content with small aims or petty ends.—James Percival Huget.

Science does not prevent a man from being a Christian; but makes him a better Christian. It has made me a better Christian. For the next year I am going to talk to the students of various colleges on this higher spiritual meaning of science. My personal belief is that everything that happens in this great universe is for a purpose; and that purpose is the development of the human soul. That is where science and religion touch. Science adds immeasurably to the foundations of religious faith. Science will strengthen religion.—Doctor Michael Pupin.

NEWS AND LETTERS

The Holloway-Wheaton Discussion

By J. F. Curtis

The question of a plurality of gods came up for consideration. Elder Wheaton claimed that Joseph Smith had taught a plurality of gods and that the Book of Abraham also sanctioned it. The King Follett sermon as published in Times and Seasons, volume 5, page 612, was referred to. In replying to this Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that this was not published until after the death of Joseph Smith. That in Tullidge's History of the Life of Joseph the Prophet, published by the Utah Church in 1878, page 516, this sermon is referred to, and the following comment is made upon it: "In consequence of the rain only the bare notes of the discourse could be taken by the scribe, and at length the notebook had to be closed, but still Joseph pursued his subject and still the thousands were gathered around him." This shows that this sermon was written out afterwards, and inasmuch as the Utah people changed the writings of Joseph Smith as they did on the question of gods, inserting in it Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 121, a number of statements pertaining to a plurality of gods; yet in the Times and Seasons, volume 1, pages 99 to 103, is the original of this article which claims to be a prayer and prophecy written by Joseph the Seer while in Liberty Jail, Clay County, Missouri, March 20, 1839; and in this original article, as found in the Times and Seasons, there is not the slightest hint of a plurality of gods. Yet in this article of the Utah Doctrine and Covenants, section 121, in different places, statements are added advocating a plurality of gods. This shows clearly how the Utah people sought to make Joseph Smith responsible for this doctrine of a plurality of gods as held by the Utah Church. In the Book of Abraham, the story of creation is told by Abraham and reference is made to the fact that the gods had to do with creating and forming the world, and man upon it. But in the Inspired Translation of the Bible, in the Book of Moses, it shows that the persons who took part in the creation of the world and the creation of man also, were the Father and the Son. The Pearl of Great Price, Book of Moses, chapter 2, paragraph 26, reads as follows: "And I, God, said unto mine Only Begotten, which was with me from the beginning: Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and it was so." This shows that it was the Father and the Son who said, Let us make man. Turning now to the Book of Abraham, chapter 4, paragraph 27, we read: "So the Gods went down to organize man in their own image, in the image of the Gods to form they him, male and female to form they them." This shows that those who took part in the organization of man, referred to as the Gods, were the similar ones referred to by Moses, which refers to the Father and the Son.

Baptism for the dead came in for consideration. Elder Wheaton insisted that baptism for the dead was not taught in the Bible nor Book of Mormon and that baptism for the dead was wrong, that it was a false doctrine, that it had been introduced by Joseph Smith prior to his death. Elder Holloway called attention to the statement of Paul found in 1 Corinthians 15: 29: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead?" He showed further that Christ (1 Peter 3: 18-21) went and preached to the spirits in prison. The quotation is as follows: "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us." Christ not only preached to the spirits in prison, but what he preached is shown in 1 Peter 4: 6: "For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." This shows positively that the gospel was preached to the dead, and Paul says there is only one gospel, in the 1st chapter of Galatians. The gospel consists of certain principles, such as faith, repentance, baptism, the laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. Evidently these principles were taught to the dead because they are the principles of the gospel of Christ. In Philippians 2: 10, 11, we read that the time will come when all shall confess to Christ. The statement is as follows: "At the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." That those who are in prison will be delivered by the covenant of Jesus Christ is shown in Zechariah 9: 11, 12, as follows: "As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope." Also in Revelation 20: 13: "And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works"; showing that the time will come when the prisoners who are in hell will be delivered up and will be judged according to their works. In 1 Timothy 2: 5, 6, we read: "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." In God's own due time all will have an opportunity to hear the gospel. The gospel is not only preached to the living, but to the dead, and God who has made provision for the living has also made provision for those who have died, that they too may hear the gospel and receive the glory of which they are worthy. In 1 Corinthians 15: 41, 42, in speaking of the resurrection, Paul calls attention to the fact that there are different glories to be received by those who are resurrected: "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead." The entire plan of salvation is based on proxy, for if Christ had not done a work for us we would all have been without salvation. In the days of Joseph Smith, baptism for the dead was taught and practiced during the latter years of his life. But when the church was rejected because of transgression, the principle of baptism for the dead was stopped and has not yet been recommended to the church.

The question of a First Presidency came up repeatedly, and one night Elder Wheaton claimed that many of our people came into the church without knowing that there was a First Presidency in it, and tried to make a point by getting the members of the Reorganized Church to vote, but they all sat quiet and paid no attention to his request for a show of hands. He thought he had scored a point, but the next evening when Elder Holloway replied to the speech of the night before, he asked that all our people who knew there was a First Presidency in the church before they were baptized, hold up their hands. A large number of hands went up, showing that the people did know how the church was organized before joining. Brother Holloway showed from Acts 12: 1, 2, that Herod the king had killed James, the brother of John, who was one of the twelve apostles. The quotation is as follows: "Now about that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church. And he killed James the brother of John with the sword." In Acts 13: 1 to 4, Barnabas and Saul are called and ordained to be apostles. Elder Holloway insisted that in the 12th chapter was only one vacancy in the quorum of twelve, but in the 13th chapter, two men are called to occupy as apostles, showing that possibly Peter and John had been taken from the Quorum of Twelve and placed in the First Presidency. In proof of this he cited Galatians 2: 9, as follows: "And when James, Cephas (Peter), and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision." Here James, Cephas, and John, whom Paul said seemed to be pillars, directed the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, to their field of labor, but when it came to their field, they selected their own field of labor. If these apostles were all on an equality, three of them would not be designating the fields for others. This is in harmony with the work of the church today, where the Presidency, consisting of three, appoint the Twelve Apostles to their fields of labor. After the resurrection of Christ he appeared to James, the Lord's brother, as stated by Paul in 1 Corinthians 15: 7: "After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles." It is claimed by Eusebuis that Christ ordained James to be the head of the church, the chief bishop on this occasion. Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, page 31, speaking of Christ's visit to James, says: "Afterwards he says he appeared to James." Then in the footnote he continues: "Many of the ancient writers affirmed that James, the brother of our Lord, he that was ordained the first bishop of Jerusalem, was not of the number of the twelve apostles, but of the disciples of the Lord." Again, on page 273 we read: "James being the first that received the dignity of the episcopate at Jerusalem from our Savior himself." Then in the footnote, same page, we read the following: "It was an old tradition that James, the apostle, was ordained bishop by Christ."

Elder Wheaton claimed that there was no record showing who ordained Joseph Smith president of the high priesthood. Elder Holloway replied that there was a record, but that it had been taken to Utah under the leadership of Brigham Young after the death of Joseph Smith, and referred to a statement of Apostle Peter Anderson that in a conversation with Andrew Jenson, church historian of the Utah Church, Elder Jenson made the statement that the records in his office showed that Joseph Smith was ordained president of the high priesthood by Sidney Rigdon. On his return from Utah, Apostle Peter Anderson informed the joint council, of whom he was a member at that time, of what had been told him, by the Utah Church historian, Andrew Jenson.

In further support of a high priest being over the church, Elder Holloway referred to the Book of Mormon and called attention to the statement in Mosiah 13: 63: "And it came to pass that Alma was appointed to be the first chief judge; he being also the high priest; his father having conferred the office upon him, and had given him the charge concerning all the affairs of the church." Also in Alma 2: 24, 25, where Alma delivered up the judgment seat to Nephiah, but retains the office of high priest over the church, we read: "Now this man's name was Nephiah, and he was appointed chief judge; and he sat in the judgment seat, to judge and to govern the people. Now Alma did not grant unto him the office of being high priest over the church, but he retained the office of high priest unto himself; but he delivered the judgment seat unto Nephiah." That Alma was a high priest of the Melchisedec order is also shown in Alma 2: 28: "And thus in the commencement of the ninth year of the reign of the Judges over the people of Nephi, Alma delivered up the judgment seat to Nephiah, and confined himself wholly to the high priesthood of the holy order of God, to the testimony of the word, according to the spirit of revelation and prophecy." Again in Alma 3: 3: "I, Alma, having been consecrated by my father Alma, to be a high priest over the church of God, he having power and authority from God to do these things, behold, I say unto you, that he began to establish a church in the land which was in the borders of Nephi." That the priesthood referred to here by Alma was the Melchisedec priesthood is shown by Alma 9: 63, 64: "And I would that ye should remember that the Lord God ordained priests, after his holy order, which was after the order of his Son, to teach these things unto the people; and those priests were ordained after the order of his Son, in a manner that thereby the people might know in what manner to look forward to his Son for redemption." And again in verse 70: "This high priesthood being after the order of his Son, which order was from the foundation of the world." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that Melchisedec was a high priest of this order and that Melchisedec himself held the office of the high priesthood as stated in Alma 10: 11, 12; "Now this Melchisedec was a king over the land of Salem; and his people had waxed strong in iniquity and abominations; yea, they had all gone astray: they were full of all manner of wickedness; but Melchisedec having exercised mighty faith, and received the office of the high priesthood, according to the holy order of God, did preach repentance unto his people." And in the 9th verse we read: "Now these ordinances were given after this manner, that thereby the people might look forward on the Son of God, it being a type of his order, or it being his order." Showing that long before the Mosaic law was given, Melchisedec was a high priest after the order of the Son of God, and held the office of high priest over his people. Alma, in Book of Mormon times, held the same office, and later still there were others who were high priests over the church. We read an account of Helaman and his brethren being high priests over the church, in Alma 21: 34, speaking of the opposition of Amalickiah, who was a dissenter from the church, and the effort of Helaman and his brethren to defend the church, we read: "Thus they were led away by Amalickiah, to dissensions, notwithstanding the preaching of Helaman and his brethren; yea, notwithstanding their exceeding great care over the church, for they were high priests over the church." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that while the people in Book of Mormon times before Christ observed the Mosaic law, yet they had the gospel of Jesus Christ, several of their members holding the Melchisedec priesthood. To prove that it was the church of Christ, he referred to Mosiah 11: 129 to 131: "For behold, this is my church: whosoever is baptized, shall be baptized unto repentance. And whosoever ye receive, shall believe in my name; and him will I freely forgive: for it is I that taketh upon me the sins of the world; for it is I that hath created them; and it is I that granteth unto him that believeth in the end, a place at my right hand." After the resurrection of Christ he appeared on this Western Continent and ordained twelve men. In 3 Nephi 5: 44, 45, the account is given as follows: "And it came to pass that when Jesus had spoken these words unto Nephi, and to those who had been called, (now the number of them who had been called and received power and authority to baptize, were twelve.) And behold he stretched forth his hand unto the multitude, and cried unto them, saying, Blessed are ye if ye shall give heed unto the words of these twelve whom I have chosen from among you to minister unto you, and to be your servants." After the calling and ordination of these men, still later, we find one special ordination mentioned which seems to carry the idea of one having authority over all others found in 3 Nephi 8: 32: And when the multitude had eaten and were filled, he said unto the disciples, Behold, there shall one be ordained among you, and to him will I give power that he shall break bread, and bless it, and give it unto the people of my church, unto all those who shall believe and be baptized in my name." The twelve that Jesus had formerly selected were present upon this occasion and Jesus was among them and he took bread and wine and blessed it and gave it unto the disciples to give unto the multitude, and after this, Jesus provided one special ordination, and the one so ordained was to give the sacrament to "all those who should believe and be baptized in my name."

Elder Wheaton claimed that no one could be a prophet, seer, and revelator without holding the Urim and Thummim, and referred to the late Joseph Smith and Frederick M. Smith as not having the Urim and Thummim in their possession. Elder Holloway replied that these men had been ordained to the office which qualified them to act in the capacity of prophet, seer, and revelator whenever necessary, and further called attention to the fact that the Church of Christ people on the Temple Lot had ordained Granville Hedrick president, prophet, seer, and revelator, when he Hedrick did not have in his possession the Urim and Thummim. Elder Holloway quoted from the Truth Teller, published by Granville Hedrick, page 31, as follows: "Remember this, that these revelations were given through him (Granville Hedrick) whom the church in General Conference selected by vote and was ordained president, prophet, seer, and revelator of the church by members of the Quorum of Twelve." To this Elder Wheaton made no reply.

Elder Wheaton insisted that it was not right to have a president over the church who was the sole mouthpiece of God. Elder Holloway replied by saying that while a number may have the gift of prophecy in the church, both men and women, yet God does have a prophet at the head of his church through whom he reveals his law to the church. Doctrine and Covenants 43: 1, 2, were cited: "O hearken ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for, behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand. And this ye shall know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me." Here God provides for one prophet through whom he shall reveal his mind and will unto the church.

Elder Wheaton objected to the high council of the church, composed of high priests. In reply to this Elder Holloway cited section 99 of the Doctrine and Covenants, showing that the high council was organized by command of God, that it was to consist of twelve high priests and one or three presidents as the case might require, and further that in The Evening and The Morning Star for October, 1832, printed at Independence, Missouri, in a revelation dated November, 1831, the Lord said: "And again, no bishop or judge, which shall be set apart for this ministry, shall be tried or condemned for any crime save it be before a conference of high priests; and inasmuch as he is found guilty before a conference of high priests, by testimony that can not be impeached, he shall be condemned or forgiven according to the laws of the church." This revelation, given as early as November, 1831, provides for a council of high priests to act as a court, and the Church of Christ people on the Temple Lot claim to believe in the revelations as published in The Evening and The Morning Star, which was the first paper published by the church.

Elder Holloway called attention to the recommendations of Elder Wheaton under date of October 6, 1925, when Elder Wheaton was holding the office of presiding elder over the general church of the Church of Christ, and in his recommendations to the General Conference he said: "It is hereby recommended that the office of presiding elder, over the general church, shall be abolished, and that a Quorum of Twelve elders shall be chosen to have general oversight of the church. That they shall be a regulating quorum to set in order the various churches which compose this Church of Christ. That they shall have oversight of the missionary work of the church in all the world. That they shall be a court of last resort in all cases affecting the rights of local organizations or individuals." Elder Holloway pointed out that while Elder Wheaton was objecting to a high council composed of high priests to be the highest court in the church, yet Elder Wheaton had recommended twelve elders to be the highest court in the church, but there is no law for such procedure. And further, that while Elder Wheaton objected to a first presidency over the church, yet Elder Wheaton had occupied the office of presiding elder over the General Church of the Church of Christ for eight or ten years as admitted by Elder Wheaton, but without ordination, or counselors, and that Elder Wheaton in his recommendations to the conference had recommended that this office of presiding elder over the general church be abolished and that twelve elders be placed in charge of the general church. Elder Wheaton replied that an apostle was an elder, and that it was proper for the apostles to preside over the church. But Elder Holloway showed that at the time the recommendations of Elder Wheaton were made there were no apostles in the Church of Christ, and that his recommendation for twelve elders referred to elders only, and not to apostles, and that the conference when acting on this recommendation finally selected five elders to preside over the general church, giving power to three of the five to transact business if necessary without the consent of the other two, but what they did was to be referred to the two other members or elders later. But that in emergency the three elders would have power to act. This of course would give three elders the power of a first presidency over the church.

Elder Holloway called attention to an article of Elder Wheaton on the subject of high priests, as published in Zion's Advocate for June, 1927, page 86, wherein Elder Wheaton had opposed the office of high priest and had also opposed the idea of a bishop being selected from among the high priests. The following extracts from this article were read: "Therefore if we in the latter days shall design to establish the office of high priest in the Church of Christ, let us remember that it must be in harmony with that which is written. To do so will be to reestablish the ordinances and offerings of the Mosaic period. Who is prepared to go to this length?" Again: "What about the selection of bishop? Let us have the proof from the New Testament that Paul told the churches to select bishops from among the high priests that were worthy. If the Lord requires us to have high priests in the church, then all that has been done in the church in the last two years or more is unscriptural. In the revelations received since 1834 the office is inseparably connected with the high council and the hierarchy of the First Presidency." Elder Holloway in refutation of this position called attention to the fact that the revelation above referred to in The Evening and The Morning Star, dated November, 1831, provided for high priests in the church, and that the bishop was to be selected from among the high priests. The revelation says: "There remaineth hereafter in the due time of the Lord, other bishops to be set apart unto the church to minister even according to the first; wherefore it shall be a high priest who is worthy; and he shall be appointed by a conference of high priests." This shows that there must be high priests in the church, and that no Bishop should be selected only from among those who are high priests. But Elder Wheaton in his article says that if this is so, then what the Church of Christ has done in this regard for the last two years is unscriptural. Elder Holloway showed that the Church of Christ in the selecting of a man for a bishop who was not a high priest was contrary to the law, therefore, not legal. In addition to this evidence concerning high priests, Elder Holloway called attention to a statement made by Apostle Otto Fetting, of the Church of Christ, published in Zion's Advocate of May, 1927, page 69, wherein Mr. Fetting had claimed that a messenger by the name of John had visited him. Speaking to him concerning the articles of faith of the Church of Christ, he said: "Don't change the articles of faith and practice, because the Lord inspired the men that wrote them." And then he said: "See to it that they are not changed." He further said: "The revelation that was given for the building of the temple was true, and the temple soon will be started." Inspiration is claimed for these statements. Turning to the articles and covenants referred to in Zion's Advocate of June 15, 1925, page 6, we find a quotation concerning the temple as follows: "We believe a temple will be built in this generation in Independence, Missouri, wherein Christ will reveal himself and endow his servants whom he chooses with power to preach the gospel to all the world, to every kindred, tongue, and people, that the promises of God to Israel may be fulfilled. We believe that a New Jerusalem shall be built upon this land unto the remnants of the seed of Joseph, which city shall be built beginning at the Temple Lot." (Doctrine and Covenants 83:1.) Elder Holloway said that inasmuch as this purported messenger by the name of John, who it is claimed appeared to Mr. Fetting, had indorsed this revelation concerning the temple, and the statement is taken from the revelation, Doctrine and Covenants, section 83, it shows that this revelation is a true revelation. Elder Holloway then read from the revelation showing that not only it indorsed lineal priesthood, but high priests as well. The quotation concerning lineage is as follows, section 83, paragraph 2: "Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers"; showing that the Melchisedec priesthood was one of lineage. He also referred to 83:22 on high priests as follows: "And, behold, the high priest should travel, and also the elders, and also the lesser priests." When pushed to the wall on this proposition, Elder Wheaton finally claimed that anyone holding the Melchisedec priesthood was a high priest, that even elders were high priests and that apostles were high priests. But this was out of harmony with his article written in Zion's Advocate, referred to, wherein he said that if they had high priests in the church today they would have to go back under the Mosaic law. The statement referred to is as follows: "Therefore if we in the latter days shall deign to establish the office of high priests in the Church of Christ let us remember that it must be in harmony with that which is written. To do so will be to reestablish the ordinances and offerings of the Mosaic period. Who is prepared to go to that length? Elder Holloway advised Elder Wheaton that inasmuch as he now claimed that an elder was a high priest that when he went home he should establish the burnt offerings and sacrifices as under the Mosaic law.

Elder Wheaton claimed that the Book of Commandments, published in 1833, contained all that was intended for the committee to publish, and claimed that the Doctrine and Covenants was not authorized properly and that some of the revelations in Doctrine and Covenants had been changed, from the way they were published in the Book of Commandments. He quoted the statement of David Whitmer, who claimed that the Book of Commandments was completed and copyrighted. In reply to this position Elder Holloway cited section 70 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, where God had appointed a committee of six, consisting of Joseph Smith, jr., Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, and William W. Phelps, and had "ordained them to be stewards over the revelations and commandments which I have given unto them and which I shall hereafter give unto them." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that the date of this revelation appointing this committee to publish the revelations was November, 1831. That the revelations that had been given thus far in the church were not only intrusted to their care for publication, but that this committee was also to publish the revelations that would be given in the future. Turning to the Book of Commandments he showed that the Preface to the Book of Commandments was given November, 1831, and that chapter 2 of the Book of Commandments commenced with a revelation dated July, 1828. One revelation after another was published in the Book of Commandments, up to September, 1831. When chapter 65 of September, 1831, in that book was being published, the printer had published 47 paragraphs of this chapter 65 when a mob destroyed the press, July 20, 1833. Elder Holloway showed from a photographic copy of the original paper in the hands of the printer at the time the mob destroyed the press, that there were fifty-five paragraphs in this last chapter instead of only 47, as appears in the Book of Commandments, and that in this same photographic copy there is shown another revelation to William E. McLellan, dated October, 1831. All of these revelations contained in the Book of Commandments were given before the committee was appointed. Not one revelation given after the appointment of the committee appears in the Book of Commandments. Yet the positive instruction to the committee by revelation was that they were not only to publish the revelations that had been given up to the time of their appointment, which was November, 1831, but they were also to publish the revelations that would be given in the future. That the committee so understood this is clearly shown from the fact that in The Evening and The Morning Star is found a statement by the publisher in May, 1833, as follows: "Having given, in a previous number, the Preface to the Book of Commandments now in press, we give below the close, or as it has been called the Appendix." Again he says: "The book from which this important revelation (Appendix) is taken will be published in the course of the present year, from 25 to 50c a copy. We regret that in consequence of circumstances not within our control this book will not be offered to our brethren as soon as was anticipated. We beg their forbearance, and solicit an interest in their prayers promising to use our exertions with all our means to accomplish the work." Then follows the publishing of the revelation called the "Appendix" in The Evening and The Morning Star. This shows that they intended to publish this "Appendix," which was to be a part of the Book of Commandments. In further proof of the fact that the Book of Commandments was not completed at the time the mob destroyed the press, we quote a statement signed "P," supposed to be W. W. Phelps, published in Messenger and Advocate for August, 1835, which reads as follows: "Doctrine and Covenants"—By an article entitled general assembly in this month's paper it will be seen that the Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of Latter Day Saints is nearly ready for sale. At any rate it may be expected in the course of a month, as one thousand copies have already been delivered to the binder.

"Since the commencement of this work even in Missouri, where, just before it was ready to come out it fell into the hands of a mob, our anxiety and exertions have been unabated to put in the possession of the Saints, and all who feel a desire to be saved. . . . We bear testimony that the revelations therein contained are true and faithful?" This last statement refers to the Doctrine and Covenants, as the heading shows. In this statement above quoted the writer shows definitely that the Book of Commandments was not yet off the press when the mob destroyed the press. Notice carefully his statement: "Just before it was ready to come out it fell into the hands of a mob." Remembering that the mob destroyed the press July 20, 1833, the Book of Commandments was still on the press, according to this writer. In further proof that the Book of Commandments was not finished we call attention to the statement of Elder William E. McLellan who was one of the apostles chosen in 1835. In the SAINTS' HERALD, volume 17, pages 555, 556, he says: "But now I will say a few things about the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. No revelation given to the church was printed until June, 1832, and the Book of Commandments was not printed (in part) until 1833." Speaking of the revelations he continues: "Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer were appointed to carry them to Zion (Independence) and print them. They printed some, but a mob tore down their office, destroyed their book-work, etc. I hired a printer boy to gather up the numbers as far as printed, and temporarily bind it for me. I have it now: Thank God!" This harmonizes with the statement of Elder Phelps, and shows that the Book of Commandments contained only some of the revelations intended to be printed, and that the printing was interfered with by the mob destroying the press.

In Zion's Advocate for January, 1926, page 5, reference is made to the Book of Commandments, and the question is asked: "Can a book be copyrighted without being complete? . . . The Book of Commandments was copyrighted on the 13th of February, 1833, and Edward R. Durham, clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Central District of Western Missouri, certifies to the possession of a full, true, and correct copy of the copyright." This statement of Mr. Durham that the book was copyrighted on the 13th of February, 1833, is a correct statement. But the statement which says, "Can a book be copyrighted without being complete?" seems to convey the idea that the book must first be completed before it is copyrighted; but the fact as shown above that the book was still in the press in May, 1833, is proof of the fact that it was not published complete at the time the copyright was made. With reference to the copyright asked for February 13, 1833, President E. A. Smith is quoted as follows: "At that time it was only necessary to file copy of the title, and a copy of the text need not be filed with the clerk until three months after date of publication. This was according to the congressional act of February 3, 1831. By the act of August 10, 1846, the delivery of one copy to the Smithsonian Institution and one to the librarian of Congress was made necessary within three months from date of publication. (See Corpus Juris 1072 under heading, "Copyright and literary property," published by the American Law Book Company.) At the time when the Book of Commandments was sought to be copyrighted in 1833 it was only necessary to file the title to secure copyright. Evidently that was all that was done. Joseph Gamble, clerk of the United States District Court, is quoted as follows: 'Be it remembered that on this 13th day of February, in the year of our Lord, 1833, W. W. Phelps and Company have deposited in the office of the United States District Court for the Missouri District the title of a book the right whereof they claim as authors and proprietors in the words and figures following, to-wit:

"A Book of Commandments for the government of the Church of Christ organized according to law on the 6th day of April, 1830."—Zion's Advocate, volume 2, number 6, page 6. The above explanation is made by President E. A. Smith in the HERALD February 3, 1926, page 98, and shows conclusively that all that was necessary to do in order to have a copyright for the Book of Commandments was to file the title-page, which was done. The Book of Commandments was not completed at that date, but was still on the press as late as July, 1833, months after the copyright was asked. The committee of six who had been appointed to publish the revelations and commandments given to the church realized that their work was not completed, but that they had only published the revelations in the Book of Commandments up to September, 1831. So after the destruction of the press, as soon as convenient they secured another press at Kirtland, Ohio, and began publishing the revelations as found in the Doctrine and Covenants. This work was completed and published under the title of Doctrine and Covenants in 1835. Of the committee who were appointed in November, 1831, to publish the revelations, all of them, possibly with the exception of Martin Harris, had to do with the publication of the Doctrine and Covenants, and all of them including Martin Harris gave their indorsement to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants after it was published. Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and Sidney Rigdon were on the first committee and also on the second committee appointed to publish the Doctrine and Covenants. W. W. Phelps and John Whitmer of the first committee assisted in the work and Martin Harris also on the first committee was a member of the High Council in Missouri, and David Whitmer was president of the High Council and W. W. Phelps and John Whitmer were his councilors. (Church History, volume 1, page 503.) Of this high council in Missouri we read Doctrine and Covenants, General Assembly, paragraph 4: "Elder Levi Jackman, taking the lead of the high council of the church in Missouri, bore testimony that the revelations in said book were true, and the said high council of Missouri accepted and acknowledged them as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote." "President W. W. Phelps then read the written testimony of the Twelve as follows: The testimony of the witnesses to the book of the Lord's commandments, which he gave to his church through Joseph Smith, jr., who was appointed by the voice of the church for this purpose: We therefore feel willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of all the earth, and upon the islands of the sea, that the Lord has borne record to our souls, through the Holy Ghost shed forth upon us, that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men, and are verily true. We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper: and it is through the grace of God, the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, in which we rejoice exceedingly, praying the Lord always that the children of men may be profited thereby." (Doctrine and Covenants, General Assembly, 108A, paragraph 5.) Elder Holloway showed that the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was unanimously indorsed by the church and its officials in 1835.

Elder Wheaton called attention to the fact that in several places the Book of Doctrine and Covenants differed from the revelations as published in the Book of Commandments. Elder Holloway stated that with one exception the revelations in the Book of Commandments were published from copies, that the originals were at Kirtland, Ohio, and then quoted the statement of Oliver Cowdery concerning the revelations published in The Evening and The Morning Star and in the Book of Commandments. Cowdery says: "There are many typographical errors in both volumes, and especially in the last, which we shall endeavor carefully to correct, as well as principle if we discover any. It is also proper for me to say that in the first fourteen numbers in the revelations are many errors, typographical and others, occasioned by transcribing manuscript, but as we have the originals we shall endeavor to make proper corrections."

He further states: "Of the revelations we merely say that we were not a little surprised to find the previous print so different from the original. We have given them a careful comparison, assisted by individuals whose known integrity and ability is unexcusable. Thus saying we cast no reflection upon those who were interested with the responsibility of publishing them in Missouri, as our own labors were included in that important service to the church, and it was our unceasing endeavor to have them correspond with the copy furnished us. We believe they are now complete, if not in every word, at least in principle. For the special good of the church we have also added a few items from other revelations."—Evening and Morning Star, volume 1, page 16.

Elder Holloway claimed that the Doctrine and Covenants, 1835 edition, had been indorsed by the Church of Christ people from 1835 when the book was first published, up to the year 1918. In proof of this the following statement was offered from the Truth Teller, page 42, published by the Church of Christ in 1864-65, as follows: "The first edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was received by the church from the first beginning." And again: "The Book of Commandments was never received by this church at any time, neither in part nor as a whole as a book, but the first edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Bible, and Book of Mormon were received as the standards of their faith." Elder Wheaton admitted that he had indorsed the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants in 1900, also in 1918, but later had disapproved of it. Elder Wheaton claimed that his church was built upon the Bible and Book of Mormon. But Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that repeatedly Elder Granville Hedrick, who for several years was president of the Church of Christ, had indorsed the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants. In proof of this he read from the book entitled, The Spiritual Wife System Proven False, published by Granville Hedrick in 1856. On page 15 he says: "Did Joseph Smith, jr., positively and certainly organize the Church of Jesus Christ on this foundation by a special call from heaven to lay the foundation of a great work? Was the Book of Mormon, and Bible, and Book of Covenants to be the rock and pillar of their faith for the foundation of the church which was organized on the sixth day of April, 1830? And was these three inspired books to be a standard for the people of God? Yes, this position is true and can not be controverted by any man or set of men." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that in a number of places this book of Hedrick's stated repeatedly that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants were the books used as the standard of faith. The testimony of Granville Hedrick found on page 109 of this book concerning the Book of Doctrine and Covenants is as follows: "It is the identical plan which is given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. They are open for your investigation as well as mine, and if I did not know by the spirit of truth that the things in that book were true, I would not give myself the trouble to defend them at so great odds, for I have to meet opposition in the church as well as out of it." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that The Evening and The Morning Star and the Book of Commandments disagree in many places concerning the revelations published in them.

Elder Wheaton claimed that the church apostatized in 1834, when the name of the church was changed from the Church of Christ to the Church of the Latter Day Saints. In reply to this Brother Holloway showed that the Church of Christ had used different titles in referring to their church. In the Spiritual Wife System Proven False, by Hedrick, page 15, he refers to the church as the Church of Jesus Christ. On pages 16, 18, 19, and 91 the church is referred to as the Church of Jesus Christ. On the title-page of the Truth Teller he also read the following: "The Truth Teller will advocate the primitive organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Elder Holloway also showed that the property in Independence known as part of the Temple Lot is held by the Church of Christ under the title of the Church of Christ (Latter Day Saints). Elder Holloway showed from the Bible, Acts 4:10 to 12, that the name given whereby we could be saved was the name of Jesus Christ. Also in Book of Mormon, second Book of Nephi chapter 11, verses 34 to 39: "For there is save one Messiah spoken of by the prophets and that Messiah is he who should be rejected of the Jews. For according to the words of the prophets the Messiah cometh in six hundred years from the time that my father left Jerusalem and according to the words of the prophets and also the word of the angel of God, his name shall be Jesus Christ, the Son of God. . . . There is none other name given under heaven save it be this Jesus Christ of which I have spoken whereby man can be saved." Also in the Book of Commandments, chapter 15, paragraphs 23, 24, and 25: "Take upon you the name of Christ and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved. Behold Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved. Wherefore all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day." This statement is also found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Elder Holloway claimed that he had proved by the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Commandments that the name whereby salvation would come was the name of Jesus Christ, and that the words Christ and Jesus Christ were used interchangeably at different times.

Elder Wheaton claimed that his church was established on the sixth day of April, 1830, and that it had never apostatized, therefore, did not need a reorganization, and claimed that Joseph Smith had ordained a Mr. Judah and Owens and that these men had not participated in the things of the church down to the time of Joseph Smith's death, but from about the time of 1832 they had acted separate and apart from the church over which Joseph Smith presided. Elder Holloway challenged this statement and asked for the proof that there was more than one church in existence that believed in the angel's message from 1830 to 1844. When Elder Wheaton insisted that the position he had taken was true, Elder Holloway quoted the statement of Granville Hedrick found in his Spiritual Wife System Proven False, pages 88 and 89: "Now that the church as organized through Joseph Smith was invested with all the authority of the priesthood of the Son of God that was necessary in this age to build up the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and regulate all the affairs of the same, was once believed by every member who understood the ground work of this church organization and during Joseph Smith's lifetime was acknowledged to be the president of the high priesthood of the whole church by every orderly member of the church, and for the space of thirteen years general satisfaction prevailed in regard to the authorities as the church was then regulated. The several quorums were kept regularly filled and all seemed to acquiesce in uniformity of the church government until Joseph's death. But alas! since the death of Joseph Smith we have another and entirely different picture to look upon. The church has apostatized and for the last ten years have practiced all manner of iniquity." Elder Holloway showed by this that the position taken by Elder Wheaton was not in harmony with the history of the past. That the president of his own church was against the position taken by Elder Wheaton. Elder Wheaton had a chart upon the wall representing a tree, with the tree broken down at the stump. The tree represented the church on his chart. He had the Reorganization coming up out of the broken tree, but the Church of Christ was represented as a sprout coming out of the lower part of the stump. The top of the sprout was dated 1831, but where the sprout came out from the stump he had it dated 1927. Elder Holloway examined the chart of Elder Wheaton and called attention to the fact that the top of the sprout was dated 1831 and the bottom of the sprout dated 1927, showing that according to the illustration his church was upside down, that the sprout was growing downward instead of upward. This raised a big laugh with the audience; then Elder Holloway said the sprout represented the same condition as Elder Wheaton's church, which had things upside down in it.

Elder Holloway showed from the Truth Teller two revelations published by Hedrick that have proved false. The first one is found on page 4, given April 24, 1864. The statement referred to is as follows: "Hear now, oh ye people of my church. Take counsel together that you may escape the awful calamity of war and famine which shall fall upon this people of the Northern States, beginning in the year 1871, at which time the sword shall fall heavily upon the people and famine shall quickly follow and thus shall the sword continue to be drawn and by bloodshed shall this nation war and contend until they are overthrown and their liberties taken away from them which shall terminate in the year 1878." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that there was no war that broke out in 1871 in the Northern States and that war did not continue from 1871 to 1878 in which time the United States was overthrown. This purported revelation certainly was not inspired of God. Then turning to page 145 of the Truth Teller he read another revelation, published April, 1865, showing in what way or manner this war was to be conducted. It reads: "'A Revelation to the Church'—Hear, oh ye people who call yourselves the Church of Christ. Hearken to the counsel of your Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and give heed to the words given to you by the power of his Holy Spirit, because of the great destructions that are coming upon the land. For thus it shall be unto your country, it shall be attacked by a mighty foe on the South and East, by a combinations of strong nations and the eastern cities of the coast shall fall in the storm of battle and the great Atlantic Ocean will be blockaded by a combined fleet upon the coast and all vessels of the Federal Government upon the high seas will be endangered. Wo! Wo! to the proud cities of the East for their railroads will be torn up and poverty and misery pervade the land; and great consternation will spread through the Northern States because of war and bloodshed; and great political divisions will arise throughout the government between the states and many will set up for themselves separate governments and great tumults will arise among the people." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that this prediction of course would have to be fulfilled before 1878 according to the first revelation and that both of these revelations were absolutely out of harmony with the facts.

It was charged by Elder Wheaton that the Reorganized Church had a secret confessional system, and that the church claimed to forgive sins. The statement referred to is found in Doctrine and Covenants 42:23, which was cited by Elder Holloway as being sufficient on this point. The statement is as follows: "And if thy brother or sister offend thee, thou shalt take him or her between him or her and thee alone; and if he or she confess, thou shalt be reconciled. And if he or she confess not, thou shalt deliver him or her up unto the church, not to the members, but to the elders. And it shall be done in a meeting, and that not before the world. And if thy brother or sister offend many, he or she shall be chastened before many. And if anyone offend openly, he or she shall be rebuked openly, that he or she may be ashamed. And if he or she confess not, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of God. If any shall offend in secret, he or she shall be rebuked in secret, that he or she may have opportunity to confess in secret to him or her whom he or she has offended, and to God, that the church may not speak reproachfully of him or her. And thus shall ye conduct in all things." Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that the rule of the church was in case of immorality that the offender could be forgiven for the first offense, but that if the offense was repeated the offender would be excommunicated from the church.

Elder Wheaton claimed that the Church of Christ never ordained the apostles in 1835, that these apostles were never apostles in their church. In reply to this Elder Holloway showed that John E. Page had been ordained as one of the apostles in 1835 and remained with the church until the death of Joseph Smith and finally, on his previous ordination to that of apostle, was received into the Church of Christ and was one of their apostles. Elder Holloway said that if the only apostles in the Church of Christ in the early church were Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, as Elder Wheaton claimed, then the church was without apostles up until the time of Granville Hedrick, and if the Quorum of Twelve Apostles was to be the head of the church, as claimed by Elder Wheaton, then Elder Wheaton's church had been without a head for a number of years. That nowhere in the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants did it say that the Quorum of Twelve was to be the head of the church. That in the days of Moses, the Twelve instead of being the head of the church were under Moses, Aaron, and Hur. Surely the Twelve were not over Moses, Aaron, and Hur. So in the New Testament times, when Christ was here upon earth, Christ was the head of the church, and not the Quorum of the Twelve. That if the Church of Christ as represented by Elder Wheaton had not associated with the church as presided over by Joseph Smith since 1834, then it followed as a conclusion that as the Kirtland Temple was built in 1836 the Church of Christ had nothing to do with building the Kirtland Temple. Elder Wheaton claimed that they did not reject all of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, but when Elder Holloway asked him to state which revelations he accepted and which he rejected he would not so state.

Elder Wheaton had tried to make it appear before the audience that the Reorganization was never the church organized by Christ, but one evening he received a large number of the Torch of Truth, papers published October, 1927, and handed them out for free distribution. Elder Holloway read from this edition of the Torch of Truth, page 127, the following statement pertaining to the Reorganized Church by Elder Yates: "So the Lord called new Apostles and the Reorganized Church became the instrument through which under God they exercised their holy ministry. God blessed their labors. Much of the work of the church was approved of heaven. There were errors due to human method and procedure and some of the remnant of the Church of Christ did not unite with the Reorganized movement because of these errors. Spiritual life in said remnant of the church was preserved by continued devotion to the principles of righteousness, but the extensive missionary activities in spreading the gospel was by the Reorganized Church for some sixty-five years. It began its spiritual work as an organized body in 1860 and terminated that work as an official body representing Christ in the year 1925."

Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that the representatives of the Church of Christ did not agree. That here it was shown by Elder Yates, the Lord had recognized the Reorganized Church for some sixty-five years and had used it to carry on missionary work representing Christ, while Elder Wheaton took a different view, claiming that the Reorganized Church did not represent Jesus Christ in its work. Elder Wheaton claimed that the Torch of Truth was not their church paper, but Elder Holloway showed that Elder Yates was one of their representatives and was the editor of the Torch of Truth.

Elder Wheaton claimed that William McLellan reversed his statement concerning the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, but Elder Holloway showed that the statement of McLellan was not until 1872, and then after he had joined with the Church of Christ people; that his former statement as one of the Twelve was in favor of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and that he never changed his statement regarding the Book of Covenants until thirty-seven years afterwards.

Elder Wheaton quoted a statement published by President Elbert A. Smith concerning the good standing of the Church of Christ at the time they entered into an agreement of working harmony with the Reorganized Church in 1918. Elder Holloway called attention to the fact that at the time this statement was made by President E. A. Smith the Church of Christ had indorsed the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, but that since that time they have gone back on the 1835 edition, and therefore have apostatized from the position they held in 1918.

It was claimed by Elder Wheaton that some of our members had left the Reorganized Church and had come into the Church of Christ. Elder Holloway showed that all the Church of Christ required of members of the Reorganized Church was to sign a card stating that they desired membership in the Church of Christ, and they were taken in without rebaptism or reordination in cases where men had been ordained by the Reorganized Church. This of itself, said Elder Holloway, is proof of the fact that even the Church of Christ recognizes the baptism and ordination of the Reorganization.

Several other things were mentioned during the debate, and some unpleasantness was indulged in, but we pass these by. I have tried to give the line of thought in the discussion and confine what I have said to the main points in the debate.

We think that much good was accomplished by the discussion and that the membership of the church was much encouraged to press on in the good work.

Springfield, Illinois

November 26.—The branch at Springfield was organized twelve years ago. We have always looked forward to a time when we might have a house of our own in which to worship. Now we are rejoicing because those hopes are becoming realities. The new building is twenty-eight by fifty feet and built of brick. Only the basement is finished. Services will be held in the basement this winter. The rest of the building will be completed next summer.

On Sunday, December 11, we are to lay the corner stone. We have invited the adjoining branches, and appropriate services will be held. We also are inviting one of the Quorum of Twelve to be present on that day.

Springfield has about fifty-six members, so this is quite a large undertaking for us, but the spirit of cooperation is strong, and we feel certain that we shall succeed in building a little church of which we may be proud, and in making of Springfield a stronger, better branch.

FRED O. PRITCHETT.

Superintendent Woodstock Writes of Summer's Work

For many weeks we have tried to find time to recount some of the interesting events which have filled the busy summer and autumn in our corner of the Department's office. Perhaps corner is pure rhetoric, as my memo notes indicate that I have had but six weeks in all at the office desk in as many months.

Omitting many details, I may write briefly of departmental activities at the four reunions attended after the middle of July.

The Eastern Iowa reunion was held at a well-appointed city camp ground at Clinton, Iowa. Good shade, a free swimming pool, commodious auditorium, dining hall, and dormitories, made one of the most compact and well-regulated small reunions we have ever attended. Supplementing the regular preaching and prayer services, the class work and young people's activities made a harmonious balance, yet comparatively few of the district membership took occasion to be in regular attendance. The few who remained upon the ground were absolutely loyal to the exercises, and some came in from the town. We shall not be able to make great progress in class work or other development until a larger percentage of our membership takes advantage of these occasions for constructive education and training under experienced leadership. We must expect to pay the price of development in any line of earnest effort, and we shall make the growth anticipated in the gospel only as we train ourselves through study and exercise, which may call for careful planning and some sacrifice. Our people have an unusual opportunity to live, to learn, to grow, to gain spiritual vision and power, to develop faith, and to train themselves in the exercise of charity, patience, courage, and all the Christian virtues as they unite their efforts and blend their interests while dwelling together upon the reunion ground. It should be to them, and may become, a miniature Zion.

At Clinton a dozen or more active young people found it possible to be present at every service, as well as participating in all the varied activities. Their spirit was beautiful and contributed in great measure to the success of the reunion.

While I was at Clinton Mrs. Woodstock was an invited guest at the Moentita Camp at Lake Winona, Indiana. This was an ideal girls' camp, and Mrs. Woodstock returned inspired with the desire to make a similar camp possible to all the Temple Builders of the church. The week following she was able to make a beginning by the Lamoni Stake Temple Builders with whom she went into camp at Creston, Iowa. We were privileged to look in upon them as we passed early one morning, en route to the Decatur reunion. Such a camp, neatly arranged, well ordered, with a rich program of instruction, drill, devotion, discovery, physical exercise, recreation, and rest, in an atmosphere of splendid comradeship, with mutual ideals and ambitions, must make for joyous, healthy growth in the gospel life.

The Northeastern Nebraska reunion was held at Decatur, on the edge of the Omaha Indian Reservation, our Indian Mission being located only a few miles from the village. Very fine grounds are furnished by friends of the church, and the large tent from the Little Sioux District is rented for the occasion. Here, also, attendance of the membership was very light during the week. The tone of the meetings was fine, and the Spirit of the Lord was present to bless, comfort, and strengthen those in attendance. The only regret was that hundreds instead of dozens might have been present to participate in the varied services, classes, and exercises.

A few hours at the Indian Mission impresses one with the wonderful possibility of the reception of the Angel Message among the Lamanites of today. The model farm is modern in every way, and the little chapel is neat and attractive, altogether worthy the admiration, not only of our Indian membership, but of the entire church. But few Indians were in attendance at the reunion, however, due in a measure to the holding at the same time of the annual Indian powwow at Macy, on the reservation. The Indians who came were neat in their native dress, stalwart in appearance, and earnest in their expression. Evidently there are many problems to be met in taking the gospel to the Indian tribes, but there are rich promises of blessing awaiting the mission. We trust those who have the matter in charge may have faith and courage.

Two young sisters were present, Ethel Butts and Nellie Woodward, both sorely afflicted, but sweet and patient in disposition and courageous in spirit. Their testimonies of faith and cheer gave new courage and zest to all in attendance. Sister Ethel is blessed with a poetic gift and has written volumes of beautiful thought in rhyme. One morning in her testimony she quoted from her verses from which we copied the following:

"Like the sturdy oak in the storm I've stood;
I've tried to be patient, kind and good;
I've tried to not murmur at my fate,
And, do you know, my joys are great!
And though shut in from the world's busy throng,
With a cheerful heart I trudge along,
And while my frame is bent and drawn
I catch the spirit of the song:
'God's way is the best way, though I can not see Why sorrows and trials oft gather round me,
He ever is seeking, my gold to refine,
So humbly I trust Him, my Savior, divine.'"

Universal interest was manifested in the junior church conducted by J. L. Cooper, missionary in Omaha. Out under the trees every day there was a large and appreciative group of children who responded beautifully in varied exercises under the able and sympathetic direction of this minister for Christ. Surely such leadership is a necessary part of every reunion program, and one must study to make it yet more efficient.

On Sunday evening the young Saints from South Omaha, under the direction of Vera Gamet, ably presented the dramatization, "Other sheep I have." It is a beautiful story of the visit of the risen Christ to Joseph's land, and carries a wonderful message of love and faith and divine protection, as well as illuminating the pages of the sacred record. In every branch and district, our young people must cultivate this inspiring and beautiful art of expression, and we must discover for ourselves the wealth of treasure contained in the Book of Mormon.

So well was their work done that the young people were requested to reproduce the dramatization the week following at Missouri Valley reunion. They accepted the invitation and rendered a still wider service.

A few days in Lamoni permitted us a little touch with the largest and undoubtedly the best-organized reunion of the church. Every detail is planned weeks beforehand, and the various features are assigned to responsible parties who give it immediate attention. The Lamoni reunion affords the large membership of the stake the unusual advantages of a ten days' church school in which adequate provision is made for intensive study and training of every age, and interests groups from the little Blue Birds to the adult class in the "Economic problems of Zion." The daily programs are replete also with special features, concerts, contests, and recreational activities, as well as prayer and preaching services.

On August 20, with Mrs. Woodstock we drove to Missouri Valley, Iowa, to assist in the Little Sioux reunion. This was held on the spacious fair grounds and under most fortunate arrangements made by the local brethren with the County Fair Board and the city officials. A varied program pleasantly filled every day from the early flag raising salute by the Temple Builder girls to the closing song and prayer after a brief outdoor game or two following the evening service. Preaching, prayer service, and class work were well attended, and a fine spirit prevailed. Mrs. Woodstock planned and carried out instructive program work with the groups of Temple Builders and their leaders, while J. E. Keck, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, profitably filled leisure time with well-planned recreational activities.

We can not overestimate the value of well-planned and well-balanced activities in the program of a reunion or of a branch. But especially at a reunion should we be able to organize our effort and fill our days as nearly as possible to approximate a "gathered" condition. We are met under a spirit of sacrifice and consecration, and we should earnestly seek to come and to conduct ourselves in a manner becoming Zion's children. The reunion is a special school for Zion Builders, and its services and exercises should be planned accordingly.

A part of the first week of September was spent in office work at Independence. We were privileged to be present and to assist in the exercises preliminary to the opening of the Independence Institute on Sunday afternoon. We wish all the church might realize the spirit of earnest study and striving for improvement manifest on the part of many who dwell in Zion. Most commendable is the spirit of willing service in helpfulness on the part of those qualified by training to teach. Thus shall Zion grow, her foundations be firmly laid in wisdom born of study as well as of faith.

We especially appreciate the organization of credit courses in religious education and a plan to relieve a definite percentage of Sunday school officers and teachers for periods of nine weeks at a time to pursue teacher training studies under the direction of the institute on Sunday morning. The rotating plan should provide every Sunday school worker with an opportunity for advanced training during the year. This is a splendid forward movement in Zion and should help to greatly increase the possibility of Zion's speedy development. Undertaken in a spirit of humility and loving service for the Master, it is bound to bring a measure of success.

At this meeting the General Superintendent was most agreeably treated to a "shower" in the form of an envelope from each of the Sunday schools in Zion, containing a list of subscribers to The Departments' Journal. This was most gratifying, as the list totaled a large percentage of the active workers and manifested a splendid appreciation of the helpful material offered in the Journal.

We were fortunate in being privileged to spend several days in the offices at Lamoni at the time of the opening of Graceland's college year. It was most pleasant to greet a score or more young people whom we had met out in the field, whose parents and homes we had known, and whom we had encouraged and assisted in planning to enter Graceland. How joyously they came to the realization of all they had dreamed, and more! After giving nine years as an instructor in the college I thought I knew what Graceland meant, but I am sure I have never sensed the spirit and service of Graceland as I do this year when our own son, born to us during the early days of our work on Graceland's faculty, is entered as a student to participate in its life, to receive of its inspiration and training, and, perchance, to make his contribution to its welfare and the life and work of the church. We attended many of the opening exercises and the regular chapel services, as well as the first Wednesday night student prayer meeting.

With deep appreciation did we listen to the sound logic, the frank advice, the earnest address, the sympathetic appeal of president, dean, and faculty folks, many of whom we had known in their early college days—now with their advanced degrees and years of experience grown sober, earnest, profound, as the occasion might demand, yet, withal, carrying their earnest dignity with an easy grace born of wholesome, happy living of the gospel life in close touch with the buoyant, vigorous youth of the church. We owe much to the college faculty and the life of Graceland made possible by their patient zeal, their training and consecration, and their undaunted courage.

The week closing September 17 was marked by the quarterly meeting of department heads with President McDowell at Lamoni. At these meetings the whole field of religious education in the church is conversed, our recent progress reviewed, our needs considered, and further plans made for the immediate future. Among other important decisions at this meeting were the following: A setting out of our need of spiritual growth, of deep and abiding faith in God and in the church and its program as the great motivating force, the paramount issue, in our effort.

A resolution to further enlarge and improve the Departments' Journal, and to use every possible means of increasing its circulation among the ten thousand officers, teachers, and leaders throughout the church.

The revision and publication of the Blue Bird, Oriole, and Temple Builder manuals at the earliest date possible. The first of these is now in the mail and ready for use. They are to be had from the Herald Publishing House.

The printing at once of a handcraft manual for use in Women's Department and organized girls' circles, copy of which had been prepared by Mrs. Woodstock. This work has since been done, and the valuable manual may be had from the Departments' office.

Provision was also made for the preliminary organization looking toward the General Departments Institute in Lamoni in June, 1928, and an Older Boys' and Girls' Camp to be held in June or July, 1928, possibly at Nauvoo, Illinois.

There were many other provisions relative to the current administration and development of departmental activities, but the above may serve to indicate something of the trend of our service and the scope of our effort.

On Saturday, immediately following the council, we drove with Brother and Sister Closson and Mrs. Woodstock to Nauvoo to look over the ground and to make necessary plans for the two summer camps, one each for older boys and older girls on the old historic grounds made all but sacred to Latter Day Saints by the struggle, the sacrifice, and the blessing of former days. It is an ideal spot for a training camp for the coming workers and leaders in the church.

Responding to many requests and fulfilling promises of many months' standing, I packed my grips on September 20 and made ready for an extended trip of ten weeks through the districts of the northeastern States, and return by Florida and the districts of the Southeastern Mission. Of those experiences we must write later.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK.

On board S. S. Cherokee Clyde Line, en route New York City to Jacksonville, Florida, November 3.

Elkhart, Indiana

November 23.—The Saints at Elkhart are few in number but determined to do their duty in spreading the gospel. We have changed our study class from Friday evening to Sunday morning, and the class is proving successful, having better attendance of the Saints, also a number of nonmembers.

Beginning November 14, Elder J. W. McKnight preached each evening throughout the week to Saints and friends. Owing to rainy weather the crowd was small, but we feel the effort put forth was not in vain.

We regret to report the death of Sister Nese Slack, an active church worker and one known and loved by many. Her life was a beautiful example to all. The funeral was held at the home November 21. Elder J. W. McKnight preached the sermon, being assisted by Elder C. B. Freeman, of Mishawaka. She left many friends to mourn.

Far West Branch

November 27.—We were very glad to have our pastor here this morning and have him able to give us a sermon. We are thankful to the Lord that he has blessed Brother Koger during and after his operation.

November 16 the usual prayer service was held at the church by Brother M. M. German. Several earnest prayers and testimonies were offered.

Preaching on the evening of November 20 was by M. M. German, who is our presiding deacon and who is making good efforts in talking for us. Brother German is also superintendent of the Sunday school and of the Religio.

The Department of Women met at the home of Sister Emma Paul, November 22, and in charge of Sister M. M. German worked on quilts and other things for an auction sale. Several were in attendance.

Midweek prayer service on the 23d was again in charge of Brother German. We felt that we had many things to be thankful for.

On the following Friday evening a committee composed of Sister H. O. McKee, Sister Grace Sparks, and Sister Mollie Gover gave an entertainment at a schoolhouse near here. There was also an auction sale of candy, bonbons, pies, clothing, and other articles. Nearly thirty dollars was raised. This money is to be applied to improvements on the church building.

Far West Saints were glad to see Brother Swen Swenson Sunday morning, the 27th, and to listen to one of his old-time, rousing sermons. We have been much interested in reading through the HERALD of his work in other places.

Our pastor gave us another good sermon this evening.

Nauvoo, Illinois

November 30.—Graceland College Day was observed with a special program in charge of Arnold Ourth, a former Graceland student. Irene Layton read from "Graceland Chats," the article on College Day written by Madeline Clark, of Maine. Sister J. W. Layton read from Autumn Leaves an article by George Lewis, and a group of girls sang, "Happy Graceland." We were fortunate in having with us Myron Wood, one of this year's students, who had run home for a week-end visit. He gave a splendid talk on his impressions of Graceland. Bishop Carmichael asked for a donation of $4.50, that being the quota for our branch, and we succeeded in raising $10.50.

The majority of the Saints attended the district conference held at Fort Madison, and all returned for the Sunday evening service, when Elder Nephi Snively, of Burlington, was the speaker.

Patriarch Ammon White held a series of meetings for four nights beginning November 13. His talks were very instructive to the Saints, and all felt blessed and strengthened by having him meet with us. On Sunday evening Albert Sanford, jr., was ordained to the office of deacon under the hands of Ammon White and his father, A. L. Sanford.

One beautiful Sunday afternoon, twenty-five of the young people, under the leadership of Brother and Sister L. H. Lewis, visited their altar on the hill by the river. Prayers were offered, songs sung, and a short talk given by A. L. Sanford on "Opportunity," after which each one responded by telling what opportunity he or she intended to take advantage of during the coming year.

A Halloween party given by the Religio was held at the Lewis home, and a good time was enjoyed by all present. Nearly all came in costume, and so well were they disguised that it was almost impossible to find a clew that would identify the different individuals. Sister Grotts, dressed as a witch, carried off the girl's prize, and Jack Sanford, as a colored preacher, the boy's prize. Sister Lewis, disguised as a witch, presided over a flaming caldron in the summer house, out on the lawn, and dispensed fortunes to all of high school age and over. Sister Lewis composed the fortunes to fit the different individuals, writing them all in rhyme. These caused a great deal of merriment. Sister Sanford entertained the children, and Arnold Ourth the older ones. Refreshments of doughnuts, apples, and punch were served.

Bishop E. L. Traver and wife and Sister Kate Davison, of Boston, and Elder Joseph Biggs and wife, of Kirtland, were visitors for a few days at the Lewis home, where a family reunion was held. A picnic supper was served and a pleasant evening spent talking over old times, when nearly all were members of the Boston Branch. Before dispersing, "The old, old path" was sung and prayer offered by E. L. Traver. The following day the visitors went on to Lamoni to visit Edward Traver, jr., and others attending Grace-land. From there they were to go to Independence to spend Thanksgiving with Brother and Sister O. L. Newcomb.

John Williams and Ralph Garret, of Joy, Illinois, were guests of the Sanfords for several days while looking up property in Nauvoo. Sister Elsie Williams has purchased the old Donaldson homestead, and she and John will take up their residence there in a month or two. By a strange coincidence, the name Williams is engraved on the front doorstep of the house.

Arnold Ourth has purchased the old William Marks house, by the river, one of the old landmarks. This makes two of the "Old Mormon houses," as they are called here, redeemed within a week by the Saints.

Is the Church Making Spiritual Growth?

As I see the situation, we have grown more in the last two years than in any previous twenty-five years of the history of the Reorganization. I say this because I have traveled quite extensively, and this is the testimony of many who are in a position to know, as well as myself. The vision of Zion has come to the church; they are ready to go to work; they have quit the spirit of contention. The Lord told us in the last revelation to this people that if we would go to work in the spirit of unity, the Saints would be astonished at the exhibition of his power. This is beginning to come to pass. There is a marked increase of power in my preaching, and it is often spoken of by the people to whom I minister.

Some have "pined for the good old days," as they did in Israel's history for the return to Egypt. We have been wandering in the wilderness long enough, it seems; the call has come for a forward move now, and many are ready to respond. God is surely raising up the people to put over the program laid down in the books.

The building program is going forward in splendid form. The stewardship plan is marching onward; the increase of the Spirit in our work tells the story of God's approval.

In my Oklahoma field, the people are hungry for our message. They do not want contention; they are tired of that, and will not stand for it; neither in nor out of the church.

Almost every church is considering stewardship, and some of them go so far as to teach the idea of Zion. As the spirit of contention subsides in every community of our people, and the spirit of peace and good will takes its place, joy fills their hearts; and with the spirit of unity, working harmony comes, and the law of the Lord is being honored. No wonder I say we are making progress. No; of course we haven't gone as far as we hope to go when the men of the ministry all set the example by making their inventories, paying their tithing, and going to work as a united people throughout the whole church; the world will then see the thing they are looking for and the Saints have longed for all throughout our whole history.

We want to see the sick healed, the blind eyes opened, the lame made to walk and praise God. Well, the door of opportunity is wide open to us today to enter in and occupy.

Saints, let's "tackle the job that can't be done," and then there will come the joy of service that we have never yet seen, but have believed would come to this people.

The Saints are ready and waiting; they want Zion. They want to take part therein. Don't wait for the other fellow. This means you; it means me; it means every one of us. Our day of opportunity is here!

The united quorums are calling for action; the vote of the Saints in General Conference calls for this move, not once, not twice, but three several times we have voted almost unanimously for the move. Shall we move? The Lord is moving by his Spirit, inviting us onward. Shall we heed the call of the Lord? Shall we heed the call of his prophet? Shall we heed the call of this people in conference assembled? Or, shall we go down in defeat, as others have? No, a thousand times! The real move has started; let everyone boost; not alone in faith; let works combine with the Lord, and we know that victory is assured.

HUBERT CASE.

HOUSTON, TEXAS.

West Pullman, Chicago

11926 Parnell Avenue

Two months have passed rapidly since our last letter, but much has been accomplished in that time, especially in the departments.

October began rather auspiciously, with the priesthood of the branch meeting at an early morning service on the 2d, followed by the regular sacramental service with our pastor, E. O. Byrn, and Roy F. Healy in charge. The Master poured out his Spirit in abundance at this meeting, and all rejoiced. We look forward to our regular sacramental services with a great deal of anticipation, for they have become one of the most enjoyable as well as beneficial services we have. Interest is increasing each month, and a deeper devotion is being made manifest as the months pass by. The evening service was dismissed on the 2d to allow the members to attend the wonderful presentation of the "Hill Cumorah" by the Central Chicago Sunday School. Among our visitors for the day were Brother and Sister Gust Lilja and family, of Belvidere, Illinois, and Sister Liza Wright and daughter Frances, of Sandwich, Illinois. We were indeed glad to have these friends visit with us. Sister Wright and Brother Lilja spoke to our Sabbath school, bringing words of encouragement to us. We hope they may be able to meet with us again in the near future.

On the 9th we held a young people's prayer service at 9 a. m., which was well attended. This service was in charge of Brother Clem Evans and John Wahlgren. We thus revived a service that had become neglected the past few months.

At the morning session Brother Roy Healy spoke to us on the Book of Mormon in the light of Bible prophecy. In closing, he appealed to the Saints to comply with the request from the general offices of the church and read the Book of Mormon through before the new year. Brother John J. Oliver of the Central Branch occupied the evening hour, admonishing the Saints to remain steadfast to their covenant, and they would be blessed abundantly.

On the evening of the 15th our Men's Club met at the home of our pastor for its regular monthly session and study period.

On the 16th our pastor addressed us from John 11:40 at the morning service, and in the evening the Department of Recreation and Expression under the direction of its superintendent, Irene Scribner, presented the play "Hill Cumorah," to a large and attentive audience, a large number of non-members being present.

On the 23d we were indeed glad to have as our speaker, at the morning service, the pastor of the First Chicago Branch, Brother C. A. Edstrom, who showed us very clearly the power that the gospel brings to us if we will only live for it. In the evening Brother Charles Cotton spoke to us on the ultimate triumph of the Saints if they remain faithful.

On the morning of the 30th we were again glad to welcome Brother Joseph Smith, of the First Branch, as speaker. At the same time Brother and Sister George Anway paid us a visit, Brother Anway favoring us with a beautiful solo.

In the evening Brother Clem Evans addressed us in his customary forceful manner. On November 6 our priesthood again met at an early hour, and this meeting was again followed by a wonderful spirit of devotion on the part of the Saints as they met in the regular sacramental service. E. O. Byrn addressed us in no uncertain terms on the subject of unity at the evening service.

The 11th saw our Men's Club in session again.

The pastor occupied at both services on the 13th, addressing us in the morning from Doctrine and Covenants 63:7 and in the evening from Amos 3:7.

All services on the 20th were dismissed, due to the district conference being held at the First Chicago Branch. On the 20th Roy Healy spoke to us from Ephesians 4:32, pleading for unity in all our religious life, especially between the departments. In the evening Clem Evans addressed us on "Zion and its prerequisites," in a very forceful manner. The Women's Department will hold its annual bazaar the 8th and 9th of December.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party October 29 that was enjoyed by all, at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Scribner. The home was artistically decorated with appropriate designs and colorings. The evening was spent in playing games, and later tasty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Visitors passing through Chicago always welcome at our chapel.

Fanning, Kansas

There has been a movement among the priesthood this fall to visit each member of the church in his home. Two by two they are carrying out this work, and much good seems to have been done. Many are coming out to meetings as a result of priestly labors and are expressing their intention to attend regularly.

Two men were baptized November 6, one a head of a family who lives in Bern, Kansas. On the same day the branch and several scattered members met at Fanning for an all-day meeting. Apostle E. J. Gleazer and his companions were with us, he giving some very good sermons and other help as needed. A basket dinner was served at the noon hour. All seemed to enjoy the sociability of the occasion.

Brother Homer P. Dittmore and wife were present, being here on a visit with home folks and friends. He is still with Uncle Sam, serving as first lieutenant stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Last Friday, November 11, the Department of Women served a chicken supper at Fanning Schoolhouse. There was a crowd present and about thirty-five dollars was cleared.

On Sunday the Sunday school was well attended, also church service.

Brother George Gamet and family, of Tecumseh, Nebraska, met with us. They are isolated, but occasionally meet with a group in an adjoining county. Brother Gamet lost his companion in the recent past and has the sympathy of all his friends in Fanning.

College Day was observed here; all were invited to meet with the group at Troy, Kansas. This group meets in the Presbyterian church at Troy. A good collection for Grace-land was obtained, a program presented, and a basket dinner shared. A service at two o'clock was held, Elder Samuel Twombly occupying the time. A special song was sung by Sister Ethel Johnson. Thus a very profitable and enjoyable day was spent, all feeling encouraged.

Cameron, Missouri

Another month of interesting activities has been enjoyed by the Saints of Cameron, during November. Brother Charles May conducted a series of missionary meetings for one week. A fine congregation greeted Brother May each evening. The last Sunday evening service was exceptionally good. Brother May was at his best and gave a splendid message to a closely packed church.

On the Sunday evening of the 20th, the Department of Women had charge of the service. A crowded church immensely enjoyed the high quality of the service as presented by the ladies. Cameron, like other places where the church lives, must give a great amount of credit to the ladies for the life of the church. The Temple Builders recently entertained the branch in a delightful play and social.

Cameron is a refined and clean city about seventy miles from Independence. Hard surface roads connect it with the central point of Zion. Cameron is only a few hours' drive from the Auditorium. It is the junction of two great highways. Highway Number 69 is the great trail from Canada to Mexico. Highway Number 36 joins the Atlantic with the Pacific. Cameron is the crossroads of these two great trails.

Cameron Saints will welcome all visitors. The church building is comfortable and well located. The Saints here stand high in all community relationships and activities.

If you expect to settle in the stakes of Zion, inquire about Cameron and the farm lands adjoining.

JOHN BLACKMORE, Pastor.

Marion, Illinois

In order that others may catch a glimpse of what we are doing in our attempt to carry on the Lord's work, I shall endeavor to write to the HERALD. Assistant Missionary J. R. Lentell and Sister Estella Lentell are located in Marion, and we are very thankful to have them here. This is the first time we have been permitted to have a missionary living in our city.

We have just come to the close of a series of meetings which served to inspire many and lasted seven weeks. Brother Lentell's voice came near giving way the first two weeks, but the Lord was with him, and it gradually became stronger. Elder R. L. Fulk, district president, relieved Brother Lentell the last week. His sermons on Zion were inspirational, and we hope many have had the desire aroused to prepare themselves as stewards for Zion. We were glad to have Brother Fulk add his influence. The closing meeting last night was inspirational and touching.

After an inspirational song, written by Brother Ivan Casey, was sung by Sister Lentell, Brother Fulk told how this was a message to him, how he had wondered if his message of Zion, that he had been preaching the past few nights, was what the Lord wanted him to give to the people at this place. He said he realized now that it was God's will, that it was a confirmation of the Lord's blessings.

The spiritual sermon by Brother Lentell on faith was a retrospection of the past seven weeks' sermons, now a fitting close for the series. A feeling of sadness came over us as we thought of the many nights we had been worshipping together, and now it was all over.

From the heart we sang, "God be with you till we meet again," for we meant every word of it. Many with tear-stained eyes wished Brothers Lentell and Fulk Godspeed and expressed the hope that they will come again for another series of meetings before many months shall pass.

We are very busy in Marion. Besides our meetings, Sister Lentell is teaching psychology each Thursday afternoon to the Department of Women. This class is interesting and well attended. Sister Lentell is also conducting a teachers' training class each Sunday evening.

The Sunday school is growing; it is graded up to standard.

The Religio has had to take a back seat for the past seven weeks, but it will soon be up and going again with good study class and program.

We are very much pleased with the interest some of our young people are showing in regard to the work of the Master. Some have recently filled out their inventories and paid tithing. We hope that others may soon see the need of complying with God's law in its fullness and of trying to pay the debt they justly owe the Lord.

On October 16 a number of Marion Saints attended the institute in Centralia, Illinois, and some of our group took part in the program. We believe institute work will be of great help to our district. We are looking forward to our district conference, which is to be held in Centralia.

There has been much sickness in our branch of late. Brother G. R. Casey is very ill at present, and we ask an interest in your prayers in his behalf.

We trust that we may ever be found on the upward move in the cause of Christ, and may we help to redeem Zion is our prayer.

Song given by inspiration to Brother Ivan Casey. To be sung to the tune, "Let the lower lights be burning":

Father, thou who knows our weakness,
Knows our sorrow and our care,
We would pray that thou wilt bless us,
That these burdens we may bear.

Chorus

For temptations and deceptions
Are most always at our side;
But our aims and our ambitions
Are with thee now to abide.

And we pray that thou wilt help us,
These satanic powers to kill;
That like him, thy Son, our Jesus,
We will love to do thy will.

For we know the time is coming
That to Zion we must flee;
Bless our efforts now, dear Father,
And we'll give the praise to thee.

MYRTIE CHOATE.

Reflections upon Questions of Worldliness

As one of the scattered of the flock, without having had to any large degree the privilege of communion and fellowship of the church in its organized activities, I should like to bring a few thoughts for the possible edification of God's covenant people.

The question, as I see it, is, How much can and should we mix with the world and yet keep our motives spiritual and our goal Zionward?

For the first year or two after obeying the gospel, I lived largely in the spiritual realm, being at that time associated with those of like faith. Later, as I was forced out among strangers and having worldly pleasures to deal with, I assumed a more or less passive interest in the welfare of the church. Now, again having communion with the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost (but not extensively with my fellow Latter Day Saints), I feel an active interest in the welfare of the work of saving souls to God's kingdom and for the speedy redemption of Zion.

Therefore, can we isolate ourselves from the world? God forbid that we live unto ourselves, as did the hermits who sacrificed or crucified the flesh in order that they might live a spiritual life in the mortal state. We influence as well as we are influenced by our fellow beings. Whether our lives shine out bright unto the Gentiles as examples of what Saints should be, concerns all of us; but only shall we be able to wield the necessary leadership when we understand the temptations and views of those struggling in the darkness. This will take unlimited faith and prayer in order to surmount the many more numerous temptations, even as the Savior was able to overcome them unto the attainment of a sinless man.

We know not when the harvest of the many seeds we scatter along life's highway will be reaped. Perhaps, if faithful, many of us shall become priests of God in the millennium. Could it be there that the final gleaning of the sheaves will be accomplished? If not priests, will not our lives in the higher state of glory bring back remembrances to those more darkened minds of our associations with them on this equal stratum in which we exist?

Only by our faith and prayer in overcoming the temptations of the world can we hope to attain the more perfect state of this life, which is embodied in the principles of Zion. My heart yearns for the Saints who strive so zealously for the riches and pleasures of the moment, but who have as yet failed to catch the vision of Zion in her purity. I fear that we are too prone to fill our lives with material wealth and our hearts with fleshly lusts. Can we afford to sacrifice these stumblingblocks? If so, then the church will not only seek to bring forth but will be able to establish the cause of Zion.

Dear Saints, let us be ever faithful to our trust, praying always, that we may be able to overcome temptations, striving continually for success in the saving of souls for the kingdom of God, and that the church may continue to progress steadily forward to the ultimate redemption of Zion.

E. B. BELSCAMPER.

MANHATTAN, KANSAS, State Agricultural College.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Corner of Eleventh and Washita

Coffeyville Branch still is moving onward, holding regular Sunday meetings and weekly prayer services. All meetings are well attended, especially those of prayer, showing that the Saints have the interest of the church at heart.

Elder G. G. Cadwell, branch president, has been with us every Sunday it was possible. We appreciate his efforts and feel that his messages are both interesting and beneficial. He was detained at home Sunday, November 19, by illness, and his absence was noticed by everyone.

Brother O. E. Pender has given us several good talks since last writing.

Elder Earl D. Bailey, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, was with us October 30. Morning and evening sermons were delivered by him and enjoyed by the Saints.

Brother Glen Burch, of Parsons, Kansas, delivered the message on November 13, giving us a splendid talk on foreordination and predestination. We hope that he can be with us again soon. Brother O. E. Pender filled his monthly appointment at Nowata, Oklahoma, on that day.

The Y. P. O. have been holding regular bimonthly meetings. Members of this organization have been divided into two groups, the Blues under their captain, Thelma Walton, and the Whites led by Evelyn Yeubanks. Since the Y. P. O. have been organized, we have noticed an increased interest among the young people.

A farewell party was held Tuesday, November 22, at the church for Brother and Sister Jess Hart and Sister Sophia Hart, better known in Coffeyville as "Grandma." The party was well attended, several Saints from Independence, Kansas, being here. Brother Jess Hart and family have entered upon the stewardship plan of living and will run a bee farm at Independence, Missouri. Sister Hart will make her home with her daughter, Ella, in Independence. We are sorry to lose these members, but our best wishes go with them.

Sister Edith Biggerstaff, of the junior department, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is much improved. She has been quite sick, and the prayers of the Saints go out to her for a speedy recovery.

Southern California Young People's Rally

On Saturday, November 20, a promising group of young folk met at the Central Los Angeles Church, Thirty-ninth Street and Grand Avenue. The first meeting of the rally was a banquet at 6.30 Saturday evening. The banquet was planned by Bertha Ball, superintendent of the young people's department in Sunday school. Many contributed their labors to make this occasion a success.

The dining room was beautifully decorated with autumn flowers, leaves, and berries, and the color scheme, russet and gold, was carried out in the menu and talks as well as in the decorations. Of course you know what words of gold are, and you can draw on your imagination for talks rich in russet.

W. A. McDowell asked the blessing. All were then seated and listened to an appropriate number by the district orchestra; either this or Doctor Teel's talk that followed immediately seemed to increase the appetites of those present. The toastmaster, Glau A. Smith, said that those banqueting might sing down anyone who talked too long. Doctor Teel said he felt like not beginning in that case, as he wished to talk two hours. A number of cheer and good fellowship songs were joined in by all, and a feeling of warmth and happiness chased all the ice and timidity out of the room. The feasters paused long enough to listen to other numbers on the program: reading, conversation between darkey and turkey, Evelyn Newton; reading, "The Land of Mince Pie," Lois Neese; singing stunt by four Los Angeles girls; reading, "Sam's letter," Fern McConley; reading, "Thanksgiving dreams," Alice McConley; reading, "Thanksgiving wooing," Juanita Holzenberger; reading, "Thanksgiving for what?" Mildred Johnson; song by the Los Angeles male chorus; reading, "Ballad of the Thanksgiving Pilgrims," Lucille Crawford; clarinet solo, George Givens; vocal solo, Sister John F. Martin.

Brother McDowell was called on for a speech and responded by saying that it was well perhaps that he had had an opportunity to eat before speaking, as he had heard that "an empty wagon rattles most." Sister McDowell said she was sorry that a number at the banquet were as old as thirty-five, as she was only "sweet seventeen." Indeed, it seemed good for all to be youthful in spirit.

During the latter part of the evening, interesting games held the attention of all. Margaret Neese won out in "musical chairs." A knot-tying contest created a great deal of excitement. Brother Cameron Stewart wore out the leader in playing "O'Grady says thumbs up." The winning players in "human checkers" were elated over their red stick-candy prize. L. L. Sutherland was the winner of a Book of Mormon in the Department of Recreation and Expression contest.

"Smile the while, we bid you fond adieu,
We have had a happy time with you," etc.,

was the jolly closing song of the evening.

Eight o'clock prayer service Sunday morning was well attended. Glau A. Smith was in charge, assisted by Brother Wilfred Burton. Brothers Johnson, Jack Milner, Earle Root, and Karl Rouff were also in the stand. The theme was "Thanksgiving." In prayer, song, and testimony, gratitude was expressed for Jesus Christ, his sacrifice, the privilege of seeking the more abundant life, opportunities, father and mother, friends, food for thought, application of the gospel and what it has accomplished in the lives of many, hope for the future. The young indeed showed themselves valiant in testimony.

Sunday school followed immediately. The children were in charge of their regular teachers. Myrtle Randall talked to the young women, and Doctor Teel addressed the young men. In the adult department, appropriate songs were sung, Will Teagarden offered prayer, and Brother Sutherland gave a timely talk regarding the young people and matters in which adults should be more active. Sister Carpender spoke on the possibilities of our youth and the value of adult effort in properly developing these possibilities. Brother Teagarden, district president, told of some experiences of his boyhood and showed how expressed confidence in the young inspires them to service in high and holy things. The primary and junior departments gave a short, impressive program. Little Frank Jones very sweetly sang, "Anchored." The senior boys' quartet gave a number that was much appreciated. Irwin Jenkins gave two cello numbers—a musical treat. Sister John F. Martin sang, "Not understood," an impressive number.

At the eleven o'clock service, N. T. Chapman offered the opening prayer. The choir rendered some splendid music, and Glau A. Smith, pastor of the Central Los Angeles Branch, was the speaker. His theme was "Thanksgiving—thanks-living." The text: "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve: . . . but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Joshua 24: 15. The speaker very forcefully showed that we should live thankfully each day by recognizing the value of God-given instincts, intelligently directed. This discourse was instructive and strengthening to old and young alike.

A rather unexpected feature of the rally took place at half past two Sunday afternoon. Ethel Getz and Abraham Benjamin Cutler were united in marriage in the main auditorium, Doctor Teel officiating. Friends followed the attractive bridal party to the main Sunday school room and there wished the bride and groom much happiness and comfort and joy throughout their lives.

Following the pretty wedding, Brother Richard Wagon and his Boy Scout troop conducted a sight-seeing party to Exposition Park and through the museum, where members of the group were thrilled with various things, from wee humming birds to the skeleton of the mammoth mastodon.

Five o'clock found a number of hungry Saints, young and old, enjoying a lunch provided by the Santos Jovenes Class, planned and managed by Sisters Mabel Crum and Nell Crum. The lunch was a treat and appreciated by those who partook.

Round table that met at 6.30 was in charge of Wilfred Burton. Lucille Crawford gave an organ solo. Karl Rouff offered prayer. Laura Freie spoke on "The value of story-telling in teaching." Sister Cameron Stewart, district superintendent of Women's Department, explained the opportunities open for young girls in the Temple Builder, Oriole, and Blue Bird organizations. Mildred Nesser rendered a vocal solo. Mr. Mather, general scoutmaster at the Methodist Church, talked on the "Value of scout work in character building." Richard Wagon gave a brief history of scouting, which was very interesting. Frank Anthony sang a beautiful solo, after which Brother Sutherland gave a stirring talk, urging all to at least be prepared to enter the race in 1930; to be so equipped as to insure achievement—success. The orchestra, made up largely of Ontario Saints, under the direction of George Givens, rendered a pretty selection, the choir favored us with a song, and David Carmichael talked on "Financially forward."

There was so much food for thought suggested by talks, music, and prayers, by the peaceful influence present and the spirit of good fellowship, that Saints, whether young or old, were inspired to use more time and energy in behalf of the gospel cause—to pray, study, work, and give.

BILLIE CARPENDER.

Sister A. H. Seymour, 1430 South Park Street, Saginaw, Michigan, writes in behalf of her sister-in-law, Mrs. George Seymour, who is in the tuberculosis hospital, Pine Crest, located at Oshtemo, Michigan, asking the Saints and elders of Kalamazoo, Michigan, or elsewhere to visit her. The writer and her family are situated about one hundred and fifty miles from the hospital and get to visit their relative only infrequently. Sister Seymour is away from all her relatives and desires the administration of the elders as well as the visits of the Saints.

Warrensburg, Missouri

Brother I. M. Smith has been occupying the eleven o'clock hour Sunday mornings with a series of sermons on the Book of Mormon. Brother Smith's ability as a speaker, his logic and reasoning, are well known by all who have heard him. His sermons have not only given strength and comfort to those who have been trying to work in the vineyard, but have attracted others to the morning services. We feel indeed grateful to have in our midst one whose life and service are such a contribution to the cause.

The junior church has become a permanent part of our Sunday morning service and is capably superintended by Sister H. V. Minton.

The Department of Women is again holding meetings, Sister Harring being the president. Sister J. V. Woolsey was put in charge, with power to choose assistants, for giving a chicken pie dinner November 16.

A pound party was recently given at the home of a needy friend, by the Women's Department.

Brother R. E. Burgess, of Knobnoster, continues to meet with the Warrensburg Saints as pastor.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

1321 Milburn Boulevard

Mishawaka, Indiana

October 23 regular services were held during the day; then in the evening at Religio Brother McKnight presented the message of the restored gospel to a well-filled church. It was decided to continue the services during the week, and regularly a few came to hear the word taught and explained.

On the following Sunday, Brother and Sister F. Appleby were led into the waters of baptism by Elder C. B. Freeman and confirmed in the evening by Elders McKnight and Freeman. The attendance was very good all during the day.

For Saturday, October 29, the Department of Recreation and Expression planned a masquerade Halloween party at the home of Brother and Sister R. F. Boney and son, Walter, and wife, about six miles east of Mishawaka. A pleasant evening was enjoyed.

Brother McKnight continued preaching each night until Thursday, November 3, then returned again and preached the evening of November 6. The last week's attendance was not good, and the few who came were Saints.

As a branch we feel thankful that two more souls have made covenant with God.

On November 19 we had a box social at the house of Brother and Sister Coonfare, west of South Bend. Owing to conditions existing, attendance was not so large as is usual at our socials. The proceeds were given to Brother and Sister McKnight, in appreciation of their efforts in our midst.

Our sacramental service was well attended November 6, and a good meeting enjoyed.

As many of the Saints as could went to Elkhart, Indiana, November 21 to attend the funeral of Sister C. W. Slack, who died at the Independence Sanitarium on the 18th. Sister Slack had been a sufferer for several weeks, and she and her loved ones sought every means that she might be spared, but it seems she could not remain. She left a husband, seven sons, and one daughter to mourn, besides many other relatives and friends. The funeral was in charge of Elder J. W. McKnight, assisted by Elder C. B. Freeman. Our hearts are with those who mourn in their bereavement. For his text Brother McKnight took, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints." We sympathize with the group of Saints at Elkhart as well as with the family.

At our prayer service November 23, we were caused to rejoice as we listened to the prayers, testimonies, and songs. One brother, who has not been long in the faith, said in substance that while he was thankful for material blessings, he was more thankful for the development he had seen in the lives of the Saints, taken from the world, himself included, making covenant with God, turning from the world and worldly habits, and pledging themselves to Christian service. Others expressed themselves grateful for the gospel.

Regular services were held throughout the month. Attendance was good at all services. Interest and zeal were manifested, and we truly believe the work here in each department is onward.

Sister George E. Hartwell and Miss Audrey Hartwell, formerly of North Dakota, and later of Missouri, have come for an indefinite stay with Sister Hartwell's son and family, Brother and Sister C. B. Freeman.

Brother and Sister John Hoover and little daughter Betty Jane have moved to their new home near Marcellus, Michigan.

Fresno, California

2412 Clay Street

November 25.—We were made to rejoice by a two-day visit from District President G. P. Levitt, who preached for us on Monday and Tuesday evenings, November 14 and 15. A large number came out to hear him, some coming from Sanger. There were also some nonmembers present. All felt repaid for the effort put forth to be present, for the Saints are always filled when Brother Levitt speaks.

Sister Ethel Christensen, our district superintendent of Religio, was with us on last Sunday, occupying during the preaching hour. She made a splendid talk, giving some exceptional ideas and advice to us which will be of great help to the local.

Graceland College Day was observed in the branch services by the pastor and his assistant, also in the Religio program by the superintendent, Sister Lillie Jennings. Special collections were taken.

Sister Inez Crane has a Thanksgiving program prepared for the Religio for next Sunday, and the Sunday school program committee is busy with the Christmas entertainment.

Our church address is 2412 Clay Street, one half block west of North Fresno Avenue car line. Pastor A. S. Votaw, Shasta Avenue (402), phone 2-6564.

Bisbee Branch

Women's Club Building, Quality Hill

BISBEE, ARIZONA, November 24.—Bisbee Branch was favored with the presence of Apostle M. A. McConley and Elder George H. Wixom for the entire week ending November 12, also Sunday, the 13th. The splendid sermons given by Brother McConley were illustrated by many beautiful stereopticon views. Quite a number of our friends enjoyed these meetings with our members.

At the Sunday morning meeting, Brother Raymond Ratterree was ordained deacon, and at Douglas Sunday afternoon, November 20, Brother William D. Roe was ordained teacher. We now have a full set of local officers.

For the week ending November 19, and Sunday, the 20th, Brother McConley lectured at the Douglas Branch, Nineteenth Street and C Avenue. Quite a number of the Bisbee Branch members motored to Douglas to attend these meetings, which were also very instructive and interesting.

In the afternoon at Douglas Branch, November 20, Apostle McConley baptized two who became members of the Douglas Branch, and our pastor, Elder D. L. Evans, baptized Sister Herbert Hall's young daughter, Thelma, who became a member of Bisbee Branch. Several others are seriously considering uniting with us.

At a recent meeting of our Sunday school, a committee was appointed to arrange a Christmas program, and they are now busily engaged to that end.

Independence

Stone Church

That God has restored to the earth his marvelous work and a wonder; that to us is given the mighty task of continuing this work; that the establishment of Zion of the pure in heart is the goal which will convince the world of the divinity of our undertaking; that only through service to mankind can we magnify our profession as children of God and glorify his name, are some of the convictions expressed by Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael to the Stone Church congregation at the sacramental service Sunday morning. Bishop Carmichael during the past season has traveled through many branches of the church in the United States and Canada and brought to Independence and to the Stone Church congregation a message of cheer and courage and the greetings of the Saints.

Almost every seat in the auditorium was occupied at eleven o'clock, and the Saints assisted Brother Paul N. Craig in triumphant song. On the platform sat Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael, Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith, Bishop R. T. Cooper, Elders C. Ed. Miller, D. O. Cato, and Paul N. Craig. Back of them were members of the priesthood of every office.

The invocation was offered by Patriarch Frederick A. Smith.

Two of the older brothers, formerly active workers in the cause of Christ, W. H. Garrett and H. R. Mills, for whom the prayers of the Saints were asked during recent illnesses, were present and bore testimony of the truthfulness of the work, of their intense desire to see it go forward, and of their love for it. There were other testimonies by Saints who have for years lived in Independence, by workers recently from other locals, people who have spent many years in the church, recent converts, old, young—all expressed hope and faith in the gospel of Christ and their determination to live for it.

Downstairs a number of the younger members of the priesthood presided over the junior sacramental service. They were Brothers M. T. Williams, Roland Flanders, Glenn Fairbanks, and Edward Darmann. Gordon Kress led the songs. A large number of young people were present, and the service was one of activity and profit.

Sacramental service at the Campus was in charge of James A. Strachan and S. A. Thiel. The guest of the morning, Brother M. B. Williams, gave the opening talk on the life everlasting—a talk ringing with genuineness such as only those of faithful, long years of service can offer. In the fifteen minutes for social service, three prayers and sixty-one testimonies were given. A spirit of reverence and peace pervaded the meeting.

Evening Services

To many Saints of Independence the eight o'clock service Sunday evening in the main auditorium of the Stone Church was an experience which words can too weakly describe. Main floor and gallery of the auditorium were occupied almost to capacity, the Saints singing with Elder John F. Sheehy, when members of the choir filed into their places.

First on the program was a number by the Stone Church Ladies' Quartet, composed of Thelma Vincent, Jeanette Kelley Craig, Hazel Koehler Moler, and Elizabeth Okerlind, "May the Lord depend on you?"

"Earnest workers, true and loyal
To the Lord, oh, let us be!"

and the entire three verses of "Earnest workers for the Master," was the response of the congregation. One of the favorite sopranos of the center place, Miss Ina Hattey, sang a solo, being accompanied by Jeannette Kelley Craig. And the congregation contributed, "Stand up, stand up for Jesus." "Jesus, thou art standing," was the anthem rendered by the Stone Church Choir, directed by Professor Paul N. Craig, Miss Elizabeth Okerlind taking the contralto solo.

While the audience sat in appreciative silence, lights were extinguished, the large room being lit only by an illuminated cross, erected in the center of the rostrum, and a quartet, Mrs. J. D. Gault, Miss Grace Edwards, Elbert Dempsey, and John Sheehy sang the verses of the beloved hymn, "The old rugged cross." Then softly through the darkness came the organ notes of "Nearer, my God, to thee." In the majesty of the moment, every breath was bated, every tongue hushed. A calm and holy peace fell like a gentle benediction upon more than a dozen hundred hearts.

At the urgent request of the pastor in Zion, President Floyd M. McDowell had consented to repeat his sermon on the subject, "What may our youth believe today?" delivered Sunday night, the 27th, at Walnut Park Church.

"Why am I interested in this subject?" he began. "First, because I believe belief is being placed in jeopardy today by the young people themselves and by the older ones who claim to have an undying faith. Society is being organized to promote atheism." Specific examples of organizations of young people for the promulgation of doctrines which discountenance belief and faith, were named, and the attitude of many older people who look back upon faith as something belonging to the ages was given.

"We are living in a wonderful world filled with wonderful opportunities," the speaker continued. "In some respects I believe this is the most marvelous age that has ever been. About us are extensive developments of science, countless inventions, and many indications that the world is getting better. Still, the cry comes: 'What is worth while? In what may we believe to help us live? What are the guideposts of life?'"

"Belief is a necessary thing in life. It is necessary to believe in the things of the future. The man who strips himself of all belief in the future stops living. Confidence is based upon faith. To have health, home, family, friends, happiness—everything of value—one must exercise faith; such blessings are impossible without faith."

"Youth may believe in God," he stated, and in a few words set forth the two philosophies of life built upon the opposite premises, there is no God, and there is a God. The testimony of the ages, of saints of old, of Saints of modern times was used to substantiate belief in God, the mighty Creator, the loving Father.

"Youth may believe in humanity. God said, 'Let us create man in our own image.' We believe man is the handiwork of God, and that God 'so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' . . . Planted in the heart and soul of man is that quality which enables him to become as his older Brother. If we are to teach men, to serve men, to help men, we must believe that in men are divine potentialities."

"Youth must believe in themselves. There is nothing worse than loss of confidence in self. The youth must have confidence in their own ability, in their ambition, in their work. They must be courageous, constant to others, and true to themselves."

"Into the sunset," a poem written by Doctor S. Hall Young, pioneer missionary in Alaska who was killed before he completed the poem, was read to conclude the sermon:

Let me die, working.
Still tackling plans unfinished, tasks undone!
Clean to its end, swift may my race be run.
No laggard steps, no faltering, no shirking;
Let me die, working!

Let me die, thinking.
Let me fare forth still with an open mind,
Fresh secrets to unfold, new truths to find,
My soul undimmed, alert, no question blinking;
Let me die, thinking!

Let me die, laughing.
 No sighing o'er past sins; they are forgiven.
 Spilled on this earth are all the joys of heaven;
 Let me die, laughing!

As a special treat for members of the Religio, Brother Job Negeim sang two beautiful solos at the program period. He was accompanied by Miss Lilly Belle Allen. There was also a clever reading by Kathryn May.

In the Departments

The last regular meeting of the Department of Women, Friday afternoon, December 2, assumed classroom aspects when President Floyd M. McDowell informally addressed the sisters at 2.30 o'clock. He devoted his time to a careful review of the article "As a man thinketh," by Albert Edward Wiggam, which appears in the December number of Good Housekeeping, analyzing the principles set forth, making practical applications, answering questions asked by the women. Scriptural quotations forming the basis of his lecture along with the article were: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."—Proverbs 4: 23; "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Romans 12: 21; "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians 4: 8.

The meeting was in charge of Superintendent Alice Cowan, and opened with the singing of the song, "Praise ye the Lord." Mrs. D. J. Krahl offered the prayer. Mary Field Edmunds sang a pleasing solo, "Dreaming," by Shelley, accompanied by Evelyn Barto. The closing prayer by Sister Cowan expressed gratitude for the blessings and progress enjoyed in the past year, and hope in the things to be done and the joys to be had in the new year.

An evening of happy, wholesome entertainment was had by the young people of Independence, members of the church, last Friday, the 2d, preceding the election of representatives to serve next year on the young people's council of thirteen.

Two one-act plays, "Suppressed desires" and "The constant lover," were presented by members of the White Masque Dramatic Club, and were much enjoyed by the youthful audience. Music was furnished by the K L D S Mandolin and Guitar Club, directed by Brother Ralph Smith and by the William Chrisman High School Boys' Quartet.

It was an appreciative congregation of young Saints that was, following the program, divided into their respective districts and instructed to elect from nominations submitted by committees, chosen at the young people's meeting held a month ago, or from their own nominations their representatives for the council. Under the direction of President McDowell and Elder John Sheehy the work was quickly dispatched.

Classes for the Priesthood

A number of the members of the priesthood in Independence have requested that classes be held for their special benefit. Accordingly, on Sunday, November 20, two classes were started in charge of Bishop J. A. Koehler and Elder F. A. Cool. President McDowell will occasionally teach one of the classes. There were about one hundred members of the priesthood present on the opening day. The classes will continue each Sunday during the winter, meeting in the Institute Building at two o'clock. Credit will be given for work done. All members of the priesthood are welcome.

"The Messiah"

Sunday evening, December 18, at 8.15 o'clock, the Messiah Choir of two hundred voices will present its tenth annual Christmas gift to the community in its rendition of Handel's oratorio "The Messiah," under the direction of Paul N. Craig. The soloists are: Mrs. George R. Cowden, soprano; Mrs.

Raymond M. Havens, contralto; Edward Brackenbury, tenor; Albert Brackenbury, bass. Robert Miller will preside at the organ, George Miller at the piano.

Because of the limited seating capacity of the Stone Church auditorium, admittance will be by complementary ticket. Watch for further notice as to where tickets may be obtained.

Interesting Personals

The first part of the last month of 1927 finds members of the quorums of First Presidency and Twelve scattered to their various fields of labor. President Frederick M. Smith left Independence last Thursday for the South. Saturday and Sunday he was scheduled to spend with Pensacola Saints, and before his return to the center place, about the middle of the month, he expects to visit several other southern branches, going as far west as Texas. Encouraging news comes from Pasadena, California, where President Elbert A. Smith has gone to rest and recuperate. Brother and Sister Smith are with their son, Ronald, and wife.

Milwaukee is the scene of Apostle D. T. Williams's activities. Brother J. F. Curtis also is in Wisconsin, having recently returned there from Independence. Brothers E. J. Gleazer and F. Henry Edwards, who have been conducting ministerial institute in Denver, Colorado, returned to Independence the first of this week. Apostle Gillen is expected to arrive home from California the end of the week. Starting back northward from Miami, Brother Roy S. Budd finds himself again in Pensacola, Florida. Clyde F. Ellis is working with the Saints of West Virginia, and Apostle Paul N. Hanson continues his efforts in England.

Liberty Street

Elder Charles May made the opening remarks at the sacramental service Sunday morning. He based his brief discourse upon the verse from Romans: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

Elder Wilfrid D. Tordoff has been holding a series of meetings at Liberty Street, beginning Sunday, November 27. Much interest has been aroused over these services, and large crowds of members and nonmembers have listened to him each night. One of the most outstanding sermons of the last week was "At the foot of the Cross," in which he portrayed how Jesus endured the cross, despising the shame, before he sat down at the right hand of God; how that without chastisement we can not be the sons of God. These meetings are continuing throughout this week. Elder John F. Sheehy is in charge of the song service each evening.

Pauline Alma Linville and Clifford Brainard, both of Independence, were married Sunday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of the bride by Pastor Leonard White. The couple will make their home in Independence. Brother and Sister Brainard are members of Liberty Street district.

Walnut Park

An oyster and chili supper held by the Department of Women last Thursday evening, proved quite a success. A net profit of sixty-five dollars was had, which sum will be applied to our church debt. The Walnut Park Orchestra helped the department by providing musical numbers for the evening.

Brother Howard Andersen's Sunday school class, the Galileans, will give a play Friday night, the 16th. A silver collection is to be taken and used to diminish Walnut Park debt.

An exceptionally large number attended the Sunday morning sacramental service, and the hour was enjoyed by all.

In the evening the Religio program was given by the children and appreciated by a goodly attendance. A forensic combat will be the big feature of the program next Sunday evening.

Elder J. A. Gardner was the eight o'clock speaker. This service was somewhat out of the ordinary. Brother Gardner said that instead of having preaching service we were going to worship together. The congregation sang, "Anywhere with Jesus," "I'll go where you want me to go," and "He leadeth me." "Softly and tenderly Jesus is calling," was sung by Hazel Saunders.

In his talk Elder Gardner asked the following questions: "Do we have the spiritual background that we must have to redeem Zion? Have you had your experience on the road to Damascus as did Paul? Are you as willing to get to church service at eleven o'clock as you are to get to work at eight?"

In last week's report of Walnut Park news, appearing on pages 1419 and 1420 of SAINTS' HERALD, is recorded the baptism of Arthur Caffel. The name should read Arthur Caffel Shupe. Brother John Taylor administered the ordinance.

Enoch Hill

Brothers Sarratt, Brewer, Thomas, Whitsett, and Rogers presided over the sacramental service Sunday, the 4th, at which hour a good meeting was held. The Spirit was present to a noticeable degree, speaking through human instrumentality to one of the young men of our district and admonishing him to prepare for future work in the Lord's vineyard.

Sister Rilla Cox, who was operated upon for appendicitis at the Independence Sanitarium, Monday, November 29, is doing well, and her friends hope soon to have her with them again.

Brother Glen Davis, one of the young members of the priesthood of Liberty Street congregation, spoke to the Saints in the little white church on the hill, Sunday night. His theme was "The heavenly vision," and as a basis of his discourse he used Paul's statement of Agrippa: "I have not been disobedient to the heavenly vision." "How would we make answer if Christ asked us had we been true to our heavenly vision?" was the question put to the congregation. Lehi was given as an example of one who was true to the light he received—his heavenly vision. In a straightforward manner Brother Davis told the young people the story of the prodigal son, warning them to beware of the lure of the far country, to think of the experiences of those who have wandered in the far country before they surrender to temptation. That we each have a heavenly vision, a goal, before us, that we must humble ourselves before God to do our work, and that we should forget those things which tempt were beliefs propounded by the speaker. God will test our faith and obedience as he tested Abraham of old, but it is our task to be strong, to continue in hope, love, and faith, to put God first, our fellow men second, and ourselves last. Our greatest joy comes when we do something for some one else. In conclusion he read the first verse of "Admonition," a song given by inspiration to Elder Joseph Luff. "Jesus is calling today," was the hymn of dismissal sung by the Saints.

Spring Branch

Perhaps no more spiritual prayer service has been held in our new building than that enjoyed by the Saints last Wednesday night. Nearly an hour and a half was fully occupied in prayer, song, and testimony. About thirty were in attendance.

The pie social at the close of Religio Friday night, netted an even seven dollars, which sum was used to purchase new Saints' Hymnals.

The response at the early Sunday morning prayer service was not so prompt as on Wednesday; neither was this meeting so well attended, there being about eighteen present.

For the month of November the Sunday school report recorded sixty-six visitors, forty absentees, and thirty perfect classes; average number in attendance about ninety.

Sixteen members of the local priesthood were seated upon the platform at the eleven o'clock sacramental service and nearly an equally large percentage of the membership was congregated to partake of the sacred ordinance. "Redeemer of Israel" was sung, and the invocation was given by our associate pastor. Following the second song the pastor gave a few well-chosen remarks. A profitable hour was spent.

Liberty Street Male Quartet furnished two numbers at the evening service. Brother Jesse Smith was the speaker. This was his first appearance behind the pulpit desk, but his subject, "Character," was handled in a manner that would have done credit to an experienced pulpiter.

East Independence

Thanksgiving service was held at the church Thursday, November 24, the program beginning at eleven o'clock and including readings and special music, also appropriate addresses by Brothers Roy Young, T. W. Thatcher, H. J. Friend, and Pastor Carmichael. Dinner followed the entertainment, and though all did not get to remain and share the meal, those who did report an enjoyable time.

The following evening, Friday, members of the Religio presented a Thanksgiving play which was very interesting.

On the last Sunday in November Pastor N. Carmichael preached what proved to be his farewell sermon. It was a strong appeal to the Saints to stand firm, to try to help carry out the program of the church. Brother and Sister Carmichael left last Wednesday for California where they plan to spend the winter. We shall miss them, but we are glad to know that they shall be in sunny California during Missouri's months of cold weather.

In the evening Elder E. T. Atwell preached an interesting sermon after singing a much appreciated solo.

Annual business meeting was conducted November 29, in charge of President F. M. McDowell, assisted by Bishop G. W. Eastwood and Pastor C. Ed. Miller. At this time Pastor Carmichael made public his plans to leave us, and the Saints were saddened at the prospect of going on without these two helpers whom we have learned to love. Elder Walter M. Self, the nomination of the First Presidency, was unanimously voted pastor by the congregation. Other officers selected are: Superintendent of Sunday school, Albert Thatcher, jr.; assistant superintendent, Brother Edgerton; superintendent of Religio, T. W. Thatcher; assistant, J. C. Friend; superintendent of women, Sister Edgerton; publicity agent, Sister Madge Thatcher. Brother N. Carmichael made a farewell address. A spirit of peace and unity prevailed among the people throughout the meeting, and after the prayer of dismissal the congregation came forward to bid Brother Carmichael good-bye.

On December 4 a large crowd came out to sacramental service. Bishop Eastwood introduced the new pastor, Brother Walter M. Self, who responded in a manner which made the Saints at once feel acquainted with him.

Sister Edgerton called a meeting of the Department of Women in the afternoon, and eleven answered the summons. At this time Sister Madge Thatcher was appointed leader of Group 39; Sister Inner, leader of Group 40. Arrangements were made for meetings to be held on the fourth Sunday of every month, beginning with January.

Pastor Self in the evening preached to a large audience of Saints of this district, convincing us that we shall be blessed in our labors together.

Lucasville, Ohio

Pleasant Valley Branch

In the recent past, Pleasant Valley Branch has been favored with visits from the following: Sunday evening, November 13, Brother Richard Shope, of McDermott, Ohio, preached to a large audience on the subject of tithing; Sunday evening, November 20, Brother A. E. Rexroad preached an instructive sermon to a smaller audience. It gives us strength and encouragement to have these brothers with us.

Sunday, October 23, we celebrated the seventy-ninth anniversary of Sister Joan Crabtree's birth. There were thirty present for dinner, and a number of others came in the afternoon. A good time was had.

We are planning a Christmas entertainment. Sister Verney Crabtree and Sister Rosa Pollock volunteered to practice the children. McDermott Saints will take part in the program. It is not yet decided on what evening the program will be presented, because the school-teacher in the community wants to take part.

Christmas Day will be the time for Pleasant Valley Branch to elect Sunday school officers for the coming year.

Holden Stake

Atherton

October 9, for both the morning and evening service, Brother J. J. Teeter, of Independence, occupied. October 16, Brother Roth, an old veteran in the gospel, preached for us. He used many passages of scripture which are used by skeptics and infidels and applied the meaning as per the customs in the day in which they were written. In the evening J. A. Koehler preached a splendid sermon on tithing and willing service. October 23 J. A. Holsworth preached, stressing the thought of useful service in the church. The evening service was turned over to C. E. Miller, who showed pictures of the life of Christ.

The women have resumed their activities in the Women's Department for study. They are reading the Book of Mormon.

Stake Conference

The Holden stake conference convened at Knobnoster November 18, 19, and 20. Friday evening at 7.30 the Women's Department met in the upper auditorium, Sister Krahl, the stake leader, in charge, Sister Ida Etzenhouser being the speaker. All who are acquainted with Sister Etzenhouser will realize what an instructive evening they had.

The priesthood met in the basement, W. S. Macrae, stake president, being the principal speaker. His heart being fired with interest and zeal, he gave a very interesting talk, setting forth forcibly the duty of the men in the ministry.

Saturday morning was opened with a prayer meeting, E. A. Curtis and H. V. Minton, stake missionaries, in charge. The good Spirit was present, and the time was fully occupied by the Saints, which made a beautiful setting for the opening of the day. Following this meeting was the regular business meeting and the election of officers. The stake president was sustained; Brother Amos Allen was chosen as one of the counselors to the bishop. The bishopric was sustained. Miss Daisy Spence was elected secretary, Brother Glauod Rodger, superintendent of Sunday school; Brother E. A. Curtis, Recreation and Expression leader; Sister Koehler, Women's Department leader. Mrs. J. A. Brendel, superintendent of the Department of Music.

At four o'clock the Women's Department had another very interesting session in the upper auditorium, while the priesthood had a round table meeting in the basement. At 6.30 junior church service was conducted. At 7.30 M. A. Etzenhouser was the speaker. His discourse was well received.

Sunday morning began with a young people's prayer service, Brothers Curtis and Rodger in charge. At ten o'clock E. A. Curtis spoke to the adult department, his theme being, "Better Sunday schools." He very ably handled this subject, and no doubt many will return to their schools with a desire to adopt the improvements suggested.

Sister Koehler took the juniors to the basement, and they always have an enjoyable and instructive time when they have Sister Koehler with them. Brother Macrae preached at the eleven o'clock hour. He was at his best. In the afternoon short talks were made by the new officers. Brother Macrae preached another very interesting sermon in the evening. Excellent meals were served in the church dining room by the Knobnoster sisters.

Sedalia

Pastor R. E. Bozarth being away on business, A. A. Weaver has acted as substitute.

R. F. Moorman has organized a ten-piece orchestra, which we believe will be quite a help to the work here. The junior choir is also doing good work.

Brother Reesland is recovering from a siege of typhoid fever, and it is felt that he has been greatly helped during his illness by administration and use of the consecrated oil.

Thomas Kelley, wife and sons, from Clinton District, have recently located here. We are always glad to have new ones come in.

Sister Cecil Thistlethwaite surprised many friends here on October 10 when she was united in marriage to Mr. Lee Thompson, of Sedalia. They drove to Warrensburg, where the ceremony was performed. We wish for them a long and happy life.

October 23 the Saints were glad to have our stake president, W. S. Macrae, with us to preach both morning and evening. We were admonished to be more faithful and diligent in the Lord's work, and we trust his effort may not have been in vain.

October 30, College Day, was observed by a special program in the afternoon. W. S. Macrae and C. F. Scarcliff and Daisy Spence, of Holden, gave interesting talks on the aims, purposes, and advantages of Graceland, and special musical numbers were rendered by the ladies' quartet and also the male quartet of Holden, the Sedalia orchestra, and junior choir. R. F. Moorman made his first appearance as a cello soloist, which was much enjoyed. An offering of ten dollars was taken for the college.

November 6 our sacramental service was well attended, and a splendid spirit was manifested, as has also been the case in our recent midweek prayer services.

Quite a number from here attended the stake conference at Knobnoster and enjoyed the association of the Saints and the splendid spirit present throughout the conference. The Saints here appreciate the cancellation of our church debt by the conference.

Elder H. V. Minton came to Sedalia from the conference and preached for us in the evening, which was much enjoyed by all. The thought conveyed was that just as the things we eat affect our physical bodies, so the things we say and do will affect us spiritually, so we can not be too careful. A number of the Marshall Saints stopped on their way home and enjoyed the sermon with us. We hope they may come again. Elder Minton will begin a series of meetings here November 27.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a Halloween party in the church basement October 23. The Women's Department held a rummage sale, also a bake sale recently, netting a nice sum toward the branch expenses.

Bates City

The church at Bates City has been undergoing repairs lately. New seats have been installed, new stove, floors, new roof, and many other improvements which present a very neat and attractive appearance. Most of the labor was donated, rendering the cost much lower than if labor had been paid for. The Saints there desire to have a series of meetings as soon as practicable. H. F. Cottrell is pastor.

Jefferson City

Missionary H. V. Minton and Stake President W. S. Macrae, visited the Jefferson City Saints recently and were present at their annual business meeting. A. H. Wintermeyer, 1200 East Atchison, was elected pastor.

The Saints there were handicapped for a place to meet, being compelled to use a private house. They are raising a building fund and expect to have a suitable place of worship. The stake has a unified building program, by which all members of the stake who will, may contribute to a building fund and assist in the erection of houses of worship in the various localities where church buildings are practicable. Scattered members in the stake who wish to contribute to this fund may send same to Bishop J. A. Koehler, Holden, Missouri.

Kansas City Stake

Central Branch

The forty-second quarterly conference of the Kansas City Stake was held at Central Church, Thirtieth and Tracy Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, November 20 and 21, 1927, the opening conference day being coincident with the closing day of the young people's meeting conducted by Apostle "Danny" T. Williams, assisted by John Sheehy, song leader. Both were successes, the young people's meetings having a very spiritual close, while the opening of the conference was alike seasoned. Sunday school had a good attendance. The sermon in the morning was by D. T. Williams, who it seemed had saved his best sermon for this hour. The church was well filled, as meetings at all of the thirteen other churches, with the exception of Sunday school, had been dismissed for the day, enabling them to enjoy union meetings.

The Elders' Quorum met at 1.30 in charge of their president, W. S. Brown. They are studying now the pamphlet by Bishop J. A. Koehler on "Industrial Zion."

The regular and young people's prayer meetings were held simultaneously at 2.30 p. m., the time of each being completely occupied by songs, prayers, testimonies, and other spiritual manifestations, the former in the main auditorium, the latter in the I. X. L. Room.

At 4.15 the ministry of the stake were addressed by Apostle Williams in the I. X. L. room, which was crowded to capacity. At the same hour the Women's Department, in charge of Fern Lloyd, held forth in the auditorium, John Sheehy being the principal speaker.

At 7.15 the stake orchestra held forth for fifteen minutes, which was succeeded by song service of fifteen minutes under the leadership of Elder Sheehy, when after the usual opening exercises Apostle Williams made his closing effort to a crowded house. Thus was a memorable day spent in the presence of the Lord.

The business session of the conference was held at 7.45 the 21st, the stake presidency, J. A. Tanner, S. S. Sandy, and C. D. Jellings being in charge. A report from them for the past six months indicated that the work of the stake, generally speaking, is in a lively condition. The stake high council recommended the ordination of Herbert Gould, Mount Washington, to the office of elder, which was ratified by the conference, his ordination provided for. He has since been ordained. The stake bishopric reported cash on hand January 1, 1927, $2,658.34; and received $26,233.79; with expenditures of $28,814.33; leaving a balance on hand of $77.80. Reports were read and spread upon the minutes from the following: Department of Women, Recreation and Expression, Boys, Boy Scouts, Stake Missionary W. D. Tordoff, Elders' Quorum, Priests' Quorum and Teachers' Quorum. The stake bishop's court reported their action in regard to Elder Walter L. Gates, who desired to withdraw his membership from the church, the decision of the court being that the brother be permitted to withdraw his membership in the church, which was by motion sustained. Elder H. W. Goold, because of residence in Independence, had asked to resign from the stake high council, which was granted. The following officials, after ratification by the conference, were sustained for the year: The stake presidency, J. A. Tanner, S. S. Sandy, and C. D. Jellings; stake high council, Harvey Sandy, C. A. Selbe, R. L. Bishop, J. O. Worden, Robert Winning, A. R. White, L. W. Hays, R. E. Browne, John J. Shimmel, Emmett N. Palmer, and J. A. Harrington; stake bishopric, Frederick B. Blair, John Tucker, and Frederick S. Anderson; secretary-recorder-historian-reporter, W. S.

Mildred, daughter of Brother and Sister Charles Cleveland, and John S. Thompson were united in marriage, November 16 by Elder James E. Cleveland. The wedding was at the home of the bride's parents and was attended by sixty guests.

A baby daughter, Norma Jean, was born November 22 to Brother and Sister Howard Fillipo (Mary McLanahan).

A pleasant hour was spent in a prayer and testimony meeting Thanksgiving Day. The meeting was held at 8.30 p. m. and was well attended. In the evening, the Saints brought their suppers to the church and the time was spent in a social gathering. Stake missionary, Wilfrid D. Tordoff, and his family were present. Elder C. A. Selbe, pastor of Northeast Mission, and Sister Selbe were also present. Brother and Sister Selbe were formerly members at Bennington.

The Sunday school was well attended last Sunday. There were 151 present, and five classes had a perfect attendance

Request for Prayers

Sister Patsy Peevy, of Brooklyn, Alabama, writes asking the Saints to remember her in her affliction. She has long suffered with gallstones and the doctors have told her that an operation is her only alternative, but being sixty-three years of age she hesitates. She desires the Saints to fast and pray in her behalf, for she has faith that she will be healed.

Sister Beulah Pratt writes a detailed description of the lamentable physical condition of her mother, Sister C. F. Pratt, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and asks that the Saints be informed that the affliction is so serious that unless God intervenes and dispels it, life is despaired. Many Saints will hear and observe this cry for support, fasting and praying that God will exercise his wisdom and power in their support and for their relief.

Our Departed Ones

KIPPE.—Frederick William Max Kippe was born August 20, 1859, at Hochheim, Erfurt, Germany; went to southern Australia in 1889, and settled near Hastings, Victoria, as a farmer and fruit grower, where he accepted the restored gospel through C. A. Butterworth. On a visit to Germany in 1899, he interested his younger brother, Alexander, in the restored gospel, but being at that time only a teacher of Hastings Branch, he could not baptize him. This was done later by Elder C. C. Joehnk. Max Kippe in truth laid the foundation stone of the German mission of the Reorganized Church, because Brother Alexander Kippe and his wife, Alice, were the first baptized into the church in Germany, their induction being on April 19, 1906. Max Kippe died August 20, 1927, at Hastings, a retired elder of the church. He leaves his widow, Benigna Kippe, three sons, their wives, and some grandchildren. He suffered in his last years with some strokes of apoplexy, but bore his sufferings with great patience.

Grandview Church

The Delphian Dramatic Club presented a comedy, "Brown, Brown, and Brown," at the church November 3 and 4. The proceeds were applied to the church debt. The play was repeated November 10 for the benefit of the W. C. T. U. Sister Juno Cook is president.

Sister Mary Stratton was conducted into the church through the waters of baptism November 20 by Elder Daniel Tucker.

Recent speakers have been Bishop Fred B. Blair and Elders Alma R. White, Edward Tucker, sr., and L. W. Hays.

Argentine Church

The speakers today were Elders E. W. Lloyd at 11 o'clock and Welton Wood at 7.45. At the morning service, Brethren Roderick May, III, Richard Day, Robert Crawford, and Orville Martin, Independence, Missouri, favored them with three vocal selections which were very much appreciated.

Sister Ethel Junion, a long-time worshiper at this church, but now a resident at Hammond, Indiana, has been visiting her many friends for a few days, returning home Sunday night.

Heathwood Church

They are happy to announce the entrance of four more souls into the kingdom of God—two adults, Mrs. May Decker and Mr. Wilford Bayless, and two children, Cecilia Shepherd and John Bryant, who were baptized by John Tucker.

The attendance during the past few months has shown constant growth. They are especially happy to see the interest taken by the young at the Wednesday night prayer meeting.

The Temple Builders, which include fifteen members, under the leadership of Mrs. John Tucker, have been making fancy pillows for the past few weeks, the sale of which has helped provide funds to finish the church basement, making it more attractive for the junior church, consisting of about thirty-five children who meet during the 11 o'clock hour.

Hopeful Condition Disclosed

During the late summer Bishop Charles Fry, of Kirtland, Ohio, proposed to the church through the columns of the HERALD that they join him in reading the Book of Mormon, to complete the work by September 22, 1927, its centennial date. Thousands joined him, more thousands undertook the reading and study of the Book of Mormon, seeking to finish before the year 1927 had passed, and in addition many began a reading of the book, no definite date being fixed for its completion.

This morning there comes to me the intelligence that in Palestine there are at least four people so engaged, the names of Geraldine Bullock, Mary Floyd, Abraham Misrahi, and Sister H. A. Doty being reported as so employing their available time. From other parts of the great church field are being reported numbers just beginning a reading of the book, and altogether we have sufficient to convince us that interest in this outstanding feature of the Restoration movement is deep and abiding.

Some who have completed their work have reported the very best effects resulting in their lives—increased appreciation of the gospel, its Author, and especially of the doctrine and work of Jesus Christ, our Peerless Leader. Among this number we find retired ministers of the gospel, fathers and mothers, boys and girls. One boy under twelve years of age has generated an interest in the church which bids fair to carry over into adult life and become a directing, compelling force for good against evil.

I am hopeful because of what has occurred and is now occurring, that this activity shall prove productive of unity among the Saints in at least these particulars:

1. The necessity and virtue of the restoration of the gospel.
2. A realization that the Book of Mormon is being recognized by those who will read, as another witness that Jesus is the Christ.

3. Agreement that no personal pique, no fault of our brother, shall hinder our work of presenting this precious book for the consideration of our neighbors and friends.

4. A sensing of the Spirit of God while engaged in its study.

5. Evidence that no principle of truth learned from God's word or his Spirit elsewhere, is disparaged or contradicted here.

And if these things result, it will surely follow that the small matters of disagreement which have been magnified out of proportion to their importance and essentiality, must disappear. I want no better settlement of my grievances against man or organization than an agreement on fundamental truth which must be emphasized and organization responsibility which must be discharged, and a compact that the future shall find us engaged to accomplish these ends.

Let the peace which has come to the people of God in times of turmoil long since past, return to us now as we engage anew and strike hands to accomplish these desirable and obligatory ends.

R. J. L.

President Elbert A. Smith Improving

The declining health of President Elbert A. Smith has been a matter of deep concern to the church for many months. He was given the best care which could be provided at his home in Independence, but that care did not seem competent to stay his decline.

Recently it was determined to try a change of scenes and climate, and November 25 Brother and Sister Smith took train for Pasadena, California, where it was hoped he would find such conditions as would contribute to his recovery.

The devotion of the church to Brother Smith carried also the support of faith and prayers, and thousands of Saints will be made glad to read that a letter from Sister Smith discloses encouraging information of progress toward recovery. Sister Smith says:

The day we left he was very poorly, owing to the thoughts of leaving home and Lynn, and the excitement of getting ready to leave. But after we got on the train and had time to get his berth made up, he lay down and went to sleep. I had to waken him at Topeka to get his dinner. He also slept considerable in the afternoon and all night, so that he was rested and felt better. He stood the trip fine and felt better than when we left home. We got here Sunday evening. Monday we took him to the Sanitarium at Glendale. I believe that is the right place for him, so I am glad we came. The doctor there, also Doctor Teel, are agreed that what he needs is rest and proper diet. They are feeding him up. He gets some eggs, milk, buttermilk, butter, and cream, besides the whole wheat breads, cereals, fruits, and vegetables. He certainly is looking better and feeling better. The Sanitarium is among or near the foothills. From the sun parlor on the fourth floor the view in every direction is wonderful. So the surroundings are pleasant, and he is quite contented.

Friends of President Smith will understand from this letter how the surroundings described will contribute to his peace and welfare; and will rejoice at his improved condition.

The Right Use of Forces of the World

In a recent sermon a well-known minister comes out with a flat repudiation of the "show," which seems something of a reversion to the fast-disappearing idea that such agencies as the theater are "bad" in and of themselves. It deserves attention, not as representing any one individual, but as setting forth a principle which seems regrettable.

Those who follow to any appreciable degree the standard of "all truth" must come to realize that the motion picture, the theater, the drama, are powerful agencies for good or for evil, depending entirely upon their use and the purpose toward which they are directed. To negatively emphasize the possibilities of evil, however, and fail to appreciate the possibilities for good, is to fail to lay hold upon one more avenue of progress, or going on to perfection.

The excellent success both at the Campus and the Stone Church testifies to the good results obtainable from the use of the motion picture when used to portray worth-while events and wholesome scenes. Those who appreciate the strength and power with which the one hundredth anniversary of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon was depicted in pageantry throughout the church can not fail to glimpse the vast field of opportunity for the teaching of moral and religious values through the media of picture and dramatic reproduction. May such work go on.

Even a casual survey of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ reveals that the greatest teacher man has ever known was a dramatist. He did things in a dramatic way, and taught by means of the parable. He thus spoke to the people in the language which they could best understand—in terms of an illustration drawn from the people and things around them every day. Thus, he did not merely tell them; he showed them the way. This is drama; this is the impressive and effective presentation.

It is asked, "Can you be uplifted at a motion picture show? Do you feel the kindling influence of the Spirit of God as you sit in the theater?"

Not so long ago I listened to a Sunday evening sermon, in which the speaker spent more than an hour in expounding, seemingly with no particular unified end in view. He quoted extensively from scripture, lauded at length certain abstract virtues, but did not draw one concrete example—and excelled more in loudness of tone and in complicated sentence and grammar than in reasonable conclusion or inspiration to his hearers.

A day or so later I sat in a large theater and saw portrayed on the screen a story of living men and women, a story of the triumph of right ideals and Christian living over vice and dissipation. It was not called Christian living, not a church was pictured, not a syllable of Holy Writ was quoted—but I venture to say that through the lives of the characters who succeeded there shone the light of a gospel such as the Christ himself must have taught as he "went about doing good." For it was a gospel not of words alone, but of an abundant life portrayed day by day in the affairs of men.

It is to be readily admitted that there are numberless misuses of the agencies under discussion; there are "shows" in which the element of good influence is so small as to be negligible. This in no way condemns the agency itself, however, and only emphasizes the responsibility of the home, the teacher, and the church in shaping the use to be made of the theater and drama. They must select the better and teach youth to appreciate and select for himself the better.

Will you say your son, your daughter, can not be inspired by worthy lives and ideals portrayed in motion picture and drama—yet their souls be saved by superficial discussion of abstract principle?

Independence voted on Monday to authorize the city government issue of $75,000 bonds. These bonds are for the purpose of the entire reorganization of the Independence Fire Department. A new building is to be erected on the site of the old one just north of the courthouse square on Main Street. The building on Elm Street just off Lexington, which serves the factory district and west and south side properties, is to be remodeled. The best of modern fire-fighting machinery is to be added, which items alone will involve an expenditure of about $30,000. Training quarters for fire fighters, ample tools and appliances, transportation, etc., are comprehended in the scheme of reconstruction.

In addition to their already extensive factory, the Gleaner Manufacturing Company, manufacturing modern harvesting machinery, is adding room and equipment which will cost more than $100,000, and is reorganizing the entire plant and business. They expect to employ several hundred men during the coming season.

The large, modern, and beautiful plant of the Jackson County, Light, Heat and Power Company is nearing completion alongside the Missouri Pacific tracks at Alton Street. This plant will represent an additional investment to the company of $200,000 and gives Independence the very last word in modern gas manufacture.

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

On one occasion, when but a lad while crossing the American Desert with my parents, we failed to locate a certain watering place which we understood was directly in the route we had taken.

As a result of this, I suffered greatly from extreme thirst. So severe was my desire for water that I soon fell victim to a sort of delirium which follows a fever. While in this condition, in my imagination there appeared before my vision sparkling springs and beautiful streams, which appeared just out of my reach. How I longed to drink long and deep of the waters before me!

Since that time I have gone over that experience on the desert with the thought of drawing a lesson therefrom. I know what it is to thirst for the physical waters so wonderfully provided in the great plan of our heavenly Father.

While I appreciate the provision wherein our physical needs are supplied, I am not altogether unmindful of the wonderful fountains; of continuously flowing streams, ever at the disposal of man whereby he may drink of spiritual waters; waters of life which flow freely to all who desire to drink.

I think of these things as presented by Jesus and recorded by John, his implication being that our physical thirst must be periodically quenched, but "Whosoever shall drink of the waters that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the waters that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

After my experience in the desert, knowing some things of the pangs of physical thirst, I can appreciate to some extent the lesson which Jesus sought to impress upon the woman at the well and am disposed to petition the Master as did she: "Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not."

It appears that the good woman was not able to gather the real significance of this wonderful answer, as is evidenced in her request. It is altogether likely that the world today has failed to gather the fullness of the divine import couched in the statement just referred to. It is just possible that the church individually has failed to sense that which our Master intended to convey to our spiritual consciousness.

There is no doubt as to the existence of these spiritual springs; deep-flowing life springs somewhere in this desert of mortal heritage. In our mad rush after the pleasures which allure; in our vain attempt to possess the wealth of the world, we have for the time lost our way, and we thirst to the extent of delirium; we are fretful with the fever which is upon us. The springs we see in this condition are not real; they do not quench or satisfy. They present false hopes which only aggravate and distress our souls.

Lord, retrieve us from this fitful fever; bring us back to the consciousness of the life which thou dost offer. Permit us to walk in paths which lead to the fountains which flow from thy throne, from which we can drink of clear cool depths and be filled so that we shall never thirst.

Gomer Thomas Griffiths: An Autobiography—7

CHAPTER 14

January, 1883, found us in Glen Easton, West Virginia, where there was a small branch presided over by a good and noble brother, Aaron Harris, assisted by Brother Amos Dobbs. The branch was in a very weak condition, spiritually. I started preaching in the Nauvoo schoolhouse and continued the meetings for several weeks, baptizing a number. The branch was revived spiritually, and new impetus was given the officers. It has continued in existence ever since.

From Glen Easton we crossed the river to Glenco, Ohio. There were a few Saints, among them Brother Van Sutton, but there was no branch. From here we went to Byesville and Nicholson, Ohio, baptizing a few at both places.

The first General Conference held in the Temple by the Reorganization convened at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6, 1883. Ministers and members gathered to this point from all over the United States, and some from Canada. It was a grand and glorious conference, and the spirit of peace prevailed from start to finish. The Saints enjoyed meeting in the old historic building which had been preserved by the power of God, and which had just been repaired and put in proper condition for the meeting of the Saints.

This Temple has been on fire three times and was struck by lightning several times, but each time, in some marvelous manner has been saved from destruction.

Nearly one half of the ground adjoining the Temple now owned by the church, and which was a part of the Temple Lot, was then owned by an outside party. There was an old-fashioned fence around it, and a little building on the spot adjoining was at one time the office of Joseph Smith the Martyr. The Temple had been neglected for many years; sheep and cattle occupied the basement, and many dances had been held in the auditorium. There was great rejoicing on the part of the Saints when Judge Sherman restored the Temple to the possession of the Reorganization. The late Joseph Smith, associated with William H. and E. L. Kelley and Bishop Rogers, was active in the negotiation. Leonard Holman and William Birch had the contract for restoring the woodwork, the latter also restoring the plastering, both inside and outside. In those days the Temple was heated by burning wood in four large stoves, one of which stood in each corner of the first auditorium. Light was furnished by old-fashioned coal oil lamps. After the repairing of the Temple was completed, it looked beautiful with its white walls.

After moving to Kirtland I went around among the old-timers (mostly nonmembers) and took up subscriptions for the purchase of a bell for the belfry, as there never had been one in it. In this way, with the additional help of a lawn fete, sufficient money was raised, and the bell was purchased and installed.

I also purchased the piece of land which adjoined the Temple, with the house upon it, moved the building to another lot, and then returned the land to the church. Some years later A. H. Parsons was sent to Kirtland to look after the Temple, and he, with others, planted a grove of trees. This, with the later additions of concrete walks and shrubbery, added much to the beauty of the setting.

The Saints in Kirtland, as well as the outsiders, are very proud of the Temple, the only known building standing in the world today whose erection was directed of God. The Temple was designed and erected for a stake organization, and we have concluded long since that God had a wise purpose in preserving it all these years.

At the time of the first conference in Kirtland, the inhabitants for miles around were descendants

Too many people are willing to give what they "can spare" after spending famously on themselves. This does not work out the problem of stewardship. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the FIRST FRUITS [not what you have left after spending all you want on yourself] of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty."—Proverbs 3:9.

You can not invert the order and get the benefits. Are you giving the FIRST to the Lord?

For example, look up and read of the home in Zarephath—1 Kings 17. Wouldn't it be interesting to know how the young lad's life was affected throughout by this wonderful experience? Stewardship and giving affect not alone the head of the family, but every member of it—young, as well as old.

of the Saints who had gathered there in the days of Joseph Smith the Martyr, the great bulk of whom went into spiritualism and infidelity. Yet they had a feeling of friendliness in their hearts for the Saints.

I lived in Kirtland for twenty-two years. I have a lot in the cemetery close to the Temple, where were placed the bodies of my wife, four children, and one grandchild, and where I also expect to lie when my time comes, until Michael sounds the trumpet which will be the signal for the righteous dead to come forward in the likeness of their Savior's glorious body.

Nowadays thousands of people, including ministers of the various denominations, Mormons, politicians, and men and women of all grades of society, visit the Temple throughout the year, and all speak in the highest terms of its beauty and grandeur. This has been the means of removing prejudice from the minds of the people and has given the church an opportunity to reach many thousands of people annually with literature, and in the presentation of our gospel message through capable ministers orally. There is no place in the world where we can preach to such a variety of thinking people and where so much good can be accomplished during nine months of the year. The number of visitors is increasing every year.

Kirtland is the mecca every summer to which hundreds of Saints gather from various parts of the United States and Canada, to attend the annual reunion. In order to care for this assembly, an auditorium has been erected across from the Temple. Here meals are served to the visitors. At other times this building is used for various purposes by the local Saints.

The Lord said through the Prophet Joseph Smith, a short time before he died, that Kirtland would become a city of the Stake of Zion, as indicated in Doctrine and Covenants, section ninety-one, paragraph one. And in the year 1841, in section one hundred seven, paragraph twenty-seven, the Lord again said through the Prophet that he would rebuild Kirtland. If these revelations are true, there is a great future for Kirtland. However, these promises are contingent upon the faithfulness and worthiness of those who dwell there.

During my sojourn in Glen Easton, Albert Smith came there on a visit and was baptized by me. His wife was a member of the church, she being the daughter of Frederick Ebeling, father of Francis J. Ebeling, recently deceased.

May 1, 1883, found me in Wheeling, West Virginia, where I was kindly received into the home of Sister Ebeling. Soon after my arrival I secured the use of the schoolhouse in Benwood and held a series of meetings, during which L. D. Ullom and two sisters requested baptism. Many others were ready for baptism, but the Devil stirred up the people against me. A man by the name of Welsh held the keys of the building, and he permitted the enemy to influence him to close the door. We were thus forced to hold our meetings in private homes. I continued to baptize people into the church.

One night the Lord spoke to me through the Spirit and directed me to call the few Saints together and advise them to build a church of their own. I, personally, doubted that such an undertaking would be successful, in view of the fact that the Saints were only working people and did not receive big wages, some only one dollar and fifty cents a day, working in the nail mills. However, I decided to follow the Lord's instructions, called the Saints together, and told them just what the Lord had told me. At this meeting Brother Ullom stated he would give six hundred dollars towards the enterprise, while others of the Saints promised to help to the best of their ability. We consulted a carpenter, who advised that providing we would purchase a suitable lot, he would erect the desired building. We had no trouble in procuring a lot on the river front, and the carpenter went to work. He erected a forty by twenty-four foot building and stated that we could have our own time in which to pay for it. Within one year the debt was paid off, and an organ was purchased for Sunday school and church use. It was not long until we had a good-sized branch.

But my, how the Devil did rage! I was threatened by a mob. A Presbyterian preacher in the city made war upon me from his pulpit and went around among his people urging them to keep away from my meetings, and this all on account of my having baptized three of his members. Shortly thereafter the poor fellow suddenly took sick and died. The condition became such that I had to have a few young men arrested for bad behavior; the magistrate fined them heavily and put them under bond to keep the peace, and threatened to send them to jail if they came before him again.

I organized this branch and was made president of it; was also made president of the district, over which I presided for nine years. Later this first building was sold, and a new and larger house was built on a lot purchased at the lower end of Wheeling. A great many people have been baptized into this branch, and it is still growing, O. J. Tary being its president. Since the organization of the Wheeling Branch, branches have been organized at Moundsville and Wellsburg, West Virginia, and Bellaire and Steubenville, Ohio. These branches, together with the one at Glen Easton, make a good district, over which William Richards presides.

For a few years I was the only missionary in the States of Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, and the western part of Pennsylvania, these States including seven or eight districts, with thousands of Saints. These districts have produced some very capable ministers, such as James E. Bishop, John F. Martin, Francis Ebeling, O. J. Tary, C. Ed. Miller, and many others.

CHAPTER 15

During the winter of 1884, Josiah Ells and I made a tour through West Virginia, visiting some of the branches. In the spring of the same year I performed ministerial labor in Byesville and Nicholson, Ohio, baptizing a number in both places, and organizing them into branches.

In Byesville I had arranged for a discussion with a minister of the Church of God named McBroom. Upon my arrival in this place, he sent me word that he was sick and would, therefore, be unable to carry out his part of the contract. However, he informed me that I could have the use of his church until he was physically able to appear. I delivered a number of sermons during the week to large audiences. On Friday evening Reverend McBroom attended the service, at the close of which he announced that the proposed discussion or debate was canceled, but that on Saturday and Sunday evenings he would occupy the pulpit and expose Mormonism. Upon my taking him to account for thus canceling a discussion for which I had come such a long distance, he ignored me and stated that absolutely there would be no debate.

The next evening my wife and I attended his service and took some notes. He told the people about Joseph Smith being a money digger, traveling around with gold plates in a bean barrel, and all such nonsensical stuff, about which we have heard. Enduring it as long as I could, I arose to my feet and requested that I be given permission to reply and correct some of the false statements he had made to the people. He ordered me out of the house. Later, meeting him at the door, I told him what I thought of his cowardly conduct, and informed him that as soon as I could get an available meeting place, I would return to the town and reply to his false statements. I was at a disadvantage in that there was no other building in town that I could then procure, but in about two years a new store building was erected, with an assembly hall overhead, and the owners gave me the privilege of using the same in replying to Reverend McBroom's onslaught. I had a large audience, but Reverend McBroom did not put in his appearance to defend his side of the question. I was informed that the Sunday evening upon which he had made his second attack on us his audience was very small, the people of the town being disgusted with his lack of fair play.

The branch at Byesville continued to exist for some time, and years later Bishop J. A. Becker united with the church there. Brother and Sister Palmer, who now reside at Akron, Ohio, were lively members for years.

On the 29th of September of this year, our oldest daughter, Martha Lucretia, was born; we were made very happy with her coming, as our first-born did not live very long. This daughter is still living, now having a husband and two children.

During the fall and winter of this year I devoted my entire time to laboring on both sides of the Ohio River, in Belmont and Monroe Counties in Ohio, and in the Panhandle Counties in West Virginia. I was also still presiding over the Pittsburgh District, and was kept very busy.

In the spring of 1884 we experienced the great Ohio River flood, which lasted a week and caused great damage. The water extended from hill to hill and many houses were washed away; many of the Saints suffered great loss, and hundreds of people were left homeless. Much sickness and death ensued, due to the after effects, and some of our own people died because of having to sleep in the damp houses after the water had receded. The water rose to a height of eight feet in the church, and the wooden brother (the organ) was destroyed. The water reached the second story in my home, and my wife and baby were rescued in a skiff from a second story window. The flood was a terrible sight to behold.

It took time to clean out the houses, as the water had left mud and debris in them. The Saints and the people were very patient through it all, being thankful they had escaped with their lives.

I took my wife and baby and went west as far as Stewartsville, Missouri, attending the General Conference which was held there. I preached there and also in several places on the way. I was blessed by the Spirit and treated kindly by all the Saints.

I devoted the rest of the year to preaching in Ohio, West Virginia, and western Pennsylvania, meeting with good success, baptized quite a number of people, and opened up new places. I looked after the local work as well as the missionary work.

The Exactness of the Law

BY LOUIS J. OSTERTAG

Permit me to offer comments on a certain part of The Elements of Stewardships and Our Social Program, as published under the name of Bishop Albert Carmichael. On page 34 of the booklet there is a figure which has struck me very forcibly because of its simplicity and yet its thoroughness. It is a triangle, and if any other figure had been chosen the possibilities are that it would not have conveyed the thought or thoughts in the mind of our brother. There is no doubt that our brother knew the value of the triangle as a figure, and, not having read the fullness of his thoughts, I would like to emphasize some points, hoping that it might be of some help to others.

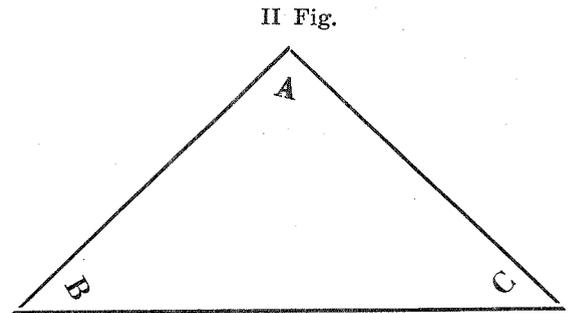

When we speak of triangles, we speak of the possibility of three kinds of figures, namely, equilateral, isosceles, and scalene triangles. The equilateral has three equal sides, the isosceles has two sides equal, the scalene has the sides and the angles unequal. The scalene triangle takes in all other triangles outside of equilateral and isosceles. One remarkable property of the triangle is that no matter how large or how small it is, the sum of all the angles inside of the triangle is equal to 180 degrees.

A equals B equals C equals 60 degrees. A equals God. B equals Individual. C equals Group or Church. I Fig. is an equilateral triangle. A plus B plus C equals 180 degrees. A equals Apex. B C equals Base.

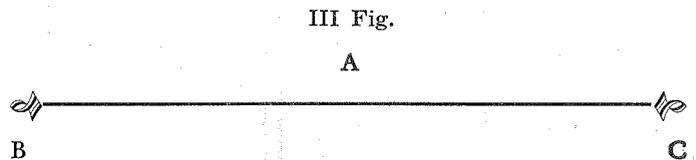

Desiring equality at the beginning, and to have a starting point, we shall assume that the triangle in question is equilateral. It means, then, that the three sides are equal, the three inner angles are equal, and since the sum of those angles is 180 degrees, each angle is equal to 60 degrees. We shall place one angle at the top, which we shall call, following the custom, the apex, the side at the bottom is to be known as the base. The apex angle, or A, represents God; the angle at the left of the base, or B, is the individual; and the angle at the right, or C, represents the group or church. The sum of the relations between God, the individual, and the group is equal to 180 degrees. It might be well to mention that no matter how long the legs or sides of an equilateral triangle are, the angles are equal to 60 degrees each—whether the sides are one inch or a mile long.

A equals 120 degrees. B equals C equals 30 degrees. A equals God. B equals Individual. C equals Group or Church. II Fig. equals Isosceles Triangle.

Suppose now that we increase the length of the base so that the angles B and C are equal to 30 degrees; then angle A equals 120 degrees. It means that when the individual and the group decrease their efforts, God must put forth more compassion with mankind in order to accomplish His purpose. The same is true if angles B and C decrease until both are equal to one degree each. But when B and C become zero, then a peculiar thing happens. A has continued to increase until it is equal to 180 degrees, and the base now coincides with the two other sides, and we now have a straight line. B and C, or the individual and the group, have disappeared, but God is still there, and since a straight line goes from infinity to infinity and has no limit, so also in this case God is still infinite. We see, therefore, that God can not be changed.

A equals 180 degrees. B equals C equals nothing. equals infinity. Length of A equals infinity.

Some one, however, is sure to raise this question: If the above holds good for angle A, why does it not hold good for B and C? The answer is as simple as the question itself: If there were no individuals, there would be no group, and with no group no redemption of society; then B and C could not exist. In other words, C can not exist without B, and B is no good as a social being without C. Though we can separate the individual from the group, yet the group can not exist without the individual; therefore all that has been written above holds good for equilateral, for isosceles, or for scalene triangles.

I pass it on to you for what it is worth, hoping that it may help some one else.

HOME EDUCATION OF GENERAL INTEREST

What Shall We Do with Our Daughters?

Read by Mrs. Victoria A. Lewis at educational institute at Niagara Falls, New York.

What shall we do with our daughters?

The question implies that there is need of doing them a service, and if this be the case, what shall that service be? Shall it be to fit them for taking up life's duties and performing faithfully every task that falls to their lot, or shall their training be so superficial that they expect something at every turn from the hands of the one nearest them, without giving back anything for the common good?

As we look about us and learn from different sources of the shipwreck that some one's daughters are making of their lives, we wonder where the fault lies. We know there are different standards for the actions of our daughters—different from those of even three decades ago, and although conditions have changed for the better in some ways, there are many things that tend to cause unrest among our daughters. They are not satisfied without indulging in pleasures that make them fail to appreciate simple home life and the duties that devolve upon the daughters of the home.

Some mothers can say and very often have said when the training of their daughters has been called into question: "My daughter has been taught more than I was taught about the temptations to which girls are exposed." But have they been taught their responsibility in the setting of standards of behavior?

Many girls think that the more talkative and demonstrative they are in a public place the more popular they will be, and they speak slightly of a quiet-mannered girl, calling her stiff and old-fashioned.

If we can instill right ideas in the minds of our daughters as soon as they are old enough to ask questions about life and its meaning, they will look upon life and its duties in a rational way and not expect an abundant harvest where they have planted nothing. If the mother can from the babyhood of her daughter guide her mind, helping her to control wrong impulses and stimulating her ambition for right doing, there will be a strong sympathy and confidence between mother and daughter.

Margaret Slattery in her book, The Girl in Her Teens, says that great numbers of girls suffer from improper food and many more because they do not get enough sleep. She mentions an eighth grade teacher telling her that out of fifty girls in her class,

Probable Origin of Indian

Authentic Tale Concerning Likeness of Language—Indian to That of the Philippine Igorrote—Tends to Prove Former to Be of Asiatic Descent.

A Masonic historian of Oklahoma tells the following story:

During the Philippine insurrection, a young Creek, scion of the highly respected Stidham family of that nation, served with the United States Army in its eventful campaign against General Aguinaldo. During an expedition of his command, young Stidham was captured by a native band, and with his comrades, securely bound, taken to the Filipino camp.

During the night, the captors were debating in their own tongue upon an appropriate disposition of their prisoners. Stidham was startled by the conversation and dumfounded to learn of his own impending fate, because the language of those far-off Igorrotes was so like his own native Creek that he understood almost every word! After hearing his own death sentence agreed upon, he cast about for some means of escape, but he seemed helpless.

After all but a lone guard had fallen asleep, Stidham addressed his captor in Creek. The astonished guard responded in his own dialect. Certain preliminaries were arranged, and just before dawn the sleeping Filipinos were aroused by shots and frantic cries from the unharmed guard for help. With a five-minute start and the gray of an eastern sky to forty were said by their mothers to be very nervous, the cause being music and dancing lessons, movies and parties, besides their school work. If mothers can gradually interest their daughters in the higher things of life, simple pleasures will be more satisfying.

We must let them and should urge upon them to do their own thinking, but to think always of the good of others as well as themselves.

Happy are they if inclined by nature to be spiritually minded, but those attributes can be cultivated and will bring an abundant harvest.

There is a wide field of work opening to the girls of our church, and well will it be for the work if we sow with patience, and above all, by good example lead them to see their duties and to go in and occupy.

guide them, the Americans were able in a few hours to report in safety to their command.

Even the mighty Pacific, ceaseless and restless for countless years, had not effectually separated a people. Powerful, indeed, must be the influence of a fraternity, whatever it is, to have endured the stormy waves of centuries to make friends of enemies from opposite hemispheres! "Civilization" in its "onward march" had encircled the globe to find two "savage races" clutching at each other's throat.

When Stidham returned to his family and friends an honorably discharged soldier, he related the incident of his miraculous escape, along with other experiences in the western islands. Full-blood Creeks accepted the story. Others did not. So-called students of the times, particularly employees in the Indian service of the Government, were outspoken in their skepticism. Only the knowing nods of the old Creeks and the influence of his family spared Stidham from being branded as a community liar. The incident became the general topic for both discussion and dispute until in 1904 it reached the columns of the local newspapers.

"One of the enthusiastic Stidham partisans suggested that one of the attractions at the Saint Louis Exposition was a camp of Igorrotes and that if Igorrotes could talk Creek in 1899 then Creeks could talk Igorrote in 1904."

An accomplished young Creek lady, fluent in both Creek and English, was induced to go to Saint Louis. In the presence of persons who had never heard of Stidham or his story, the Creek girl visited the Igorrote camp, addressed the first one she met by asking a question in Creek, and received an intelligent answer. Other questions previously arranged for her by persons who did not understand either language were asked and most of them correctly answered. Stidham was thus "officially" vindicated, and the story of his mysterious escape stands.

Scientists in the study of languages find in instances such as this support for the theory that the American Indian came from stock across the Pacific and so long ago that it is possible the intervals of lands were not so infrequent. The story at least furnishes the ground for interested conjecture.—The Modern Woodman, July, 1927.

If we would have our communities made new, if we would have all things transformed into instruments of life and growth, if, in short, we would have this very hour become the beginning of the kingdom among us, let us glorify the Christ, and crown him Lord of Lords.—A Nelson Willis.

For THOSE INTERESTED in MUSIC

Good Things for Our Orchestra Workers

In the HERALD of October 19 we published an article by Mabel Carlile, the official of the Department of Music in charge of senior choir and choral work, in which she outlined the program for her work and gave a graded list of anthems for choirs over the church.

In this number of the HERALD, Joseph H. Anthony, who is in charge of the band and orchestral work of the church, makes his initial bow as such to the music workers of the church. Brother Anthony has some fine things to say about the orchestra work of the church and gives a list of things on which our band and orchestra workers can get busy.

All music workers of the church, who have orchestral problems they need help on, are advised to write to Brother Anthony, at Lamoni, Iowa, and he will be found ready and willing.

Secretary Department of Music.

To Orchestra Leaders and Players

To me has been given the task of assembling the scattered orchestral forces of the church, and to get them working toward a definite end, that their work may be more efficient in their local branches and that in time we may be able to promote some real, worth-while ensembles at our district and general assemblies.

From the data at hand it is rather difficult to formulate an opinion as to the strength of our instrumental forces, though the secretary of the Music Department has gone to an unlimited amount of work in compiling a list of the orchestras in the church. To find the exact number of players and their ability can be realized only by one hundred per cent cooperation on the part of the leaders and players.

The Department of Music has outlined a definite, progressive program, and it is hoped the orchestra will play a very prominent part in this program. I would like to get in touch, personally, with the orchestra leaders in the various branches as soon as possible, that we may bring our records up to date and formulate a working basis to put the orchestral work upon its feet. Write me a letter, stating clearly as possible the orchestral situation in your branch, giving the number of players, something of their ability, what you would like to do, and what you think could be done.

Our idea is to get the orchestras of the church working along the same line, using the same music, and once a standard program is adopted by all it should be comparatively easy to assemble players at any church gathering who can play together. It should also tend to assist in the development of local organizations, even though they may never participate in district or general ensembles. Very often these organizations are inclined to fall into a rut, and by not having the proper music fail to make the advancement they should. This plan, we hope, will help to eliminate this condition and offers those desiring it the opportunity to make a steady and satisfactory advancement.

As an orchestra leader of some twenty years' experience, I think I can sense with you the difficulties to be encountered in developing this work. However, I think the opportunities are greater now than they have been in the past, and with the continued growth of instrumental music in the public schools and the interest manifested by thousands and thousands of children, musicians are being developed who are anxious to play and use their talent and should furnish our church orchestras with competent and willing members.

My message to the orchestra leaders of the church is: Let us combine our interests and our efforts and get to work. We will meet discouragements, of course, and will see times when we think the results are not worth the price, but what leader does not have these same conditions to meet? In fact, I think these things show the qualifications of a leader more than anything else—if you give up, you are no leader; if you stick, you are—so let us make up our minds to stick and work, and I am sure in a few years the orchestral work will show a noticeable advancement.

In accordance with our program, I am submitting a list of music which we are asking the orchestras of the church to work on and which I have graded from the easiest to moderately difficult and from which we will make up some programs for present use and possibly for the 1930 General Conference. The list is as follows:

Very Easy

Harold Bennett Orchestra Folio—Numbers 1 and 2 F.
Melodie Orchestra Folio—King B.
Jacobs' Folios for Young Orchestras—Numbers 1, 2, and 3 W. J.

Easy

Lovers' Lane—King B.
Romance of a Rose—O'Connor, W. J.
June Roses—Barnard B.
Millennial Reverie—Barnhouse B.
Garden of Eden Overture—Barnard F.
Billy Sunday's Successful Songs—Fillmore F.
Inspiration Overture—Hayes F.

Medium

Panorama Overture—Barnhouse B.
Milady's Pleasure—Smith, cornet duet, B.
Lustspiel Overture—Keler-Bela W. J.
Solaret (Queen of Light)—Allen W. J.
Joy to the World—Sacred Potpurri—Barnhouse B.
Evening Idyls—Barnhouse B.
Berlin in Smiles and Tears—Conradi W. J.
Moonlight in Florida—Storms B.

Difficult

Hungarian Dance No. 5—Brahms W. J.
Selection from Carmen—Bizet W. J.
Orpheus Overture—Offenbach W. J.
A Hungarian Episode—Bendix W. J.
Raymond Overture—Thomas W. J.
Unfinished Symphony—Schubert C. F.
Jupiter's Carnival Overture—Barnard B.
Hungarian Lustspiel Overture—Keler-Bela C. F.
Stradella Overture—Flotow W. J.
Spanish Dances, Numbers 1 and 5—Moszkowski W. J.

In the very easy grade I have listed only folios, as many beginner orchestras prefer to buy music that way for the sake of convenience and economy, and the ones I have listed are all good, usable music. The letters following each title refer to the publisher, as follows: B—C. L. Barnhouse, Os-kaloosa, Iowa; W. J.—Walter Jacobs, Inc., 120 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts; F—Fillmore Music House, Cincinnati, Ohio; C. F.—Carl Fischer, Cooper Square, New York, with branch stores at 380 Boylston Street, Boston, Massachusetts, and 430 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

We are not asking orchestras to use all the pieces in the foregoing list, but that they make selections therefrom for good, usable music, and when we obtain more definite data as regards our orchestral forces, we will select definite numbers from this list for ensemble occasions. It has been decided to make Schubert's Unfinished Symphony one of our selections for 1930; also the orchestral accompaniment to "The Messiah" (definite edition to be announced later). Other numbers for this occasion will be announced later and will probably be made largely from the "medium" and "difficult" grades listed above.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Side Lights

By C. J. Hunt

"Thou Shalt Not Kill"

In the early part of a prayer and testimony meeting in the Owen Sound District, Elder James A. Morrison advised the Saints to heed the holy instruction by Moses, named above, giving a new and enlarged meaning or application to the words, saying, "Thou shalt not kill time by inactivity." The members heeded the advice, and a profitable service followed, in which the Holy Spirit was present to encourage and bless. Years ago we witnessed some long experiences related that not only "killed time" but also destroy the righteous purpose of the meetings. It is truly encouraging to note that the younger generation select and condense their testimonies, dividing time with others. Do I hear some careful observer say, "I have known of preachers selecting a wrong or inappropriate subject or text and kill time for an hour at the expense of money and the congregation"?

God's Judgment

In that holy and inspired announcement of the restoration of the gospel by John the Revelator (Revelation 14: 6, 7,) one sentence reads, "Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." We believe it quite possible that too much emphasis has been placed on judgments such as earthquakes, cyclones, wars, etc., when discoursing on that subject, and not enough on the preaching of an affirmative gospel, assuring the congregations in kindness and love that all who hear this blessed message of the restoration in this "eleventh hour" are now sitting in "judgment" on their own churches in faith, doctrine, organization, etc., contrasting their beliefs with the "fullness of the gospel." It is fair to presume that should there be a dozen different church faiths represented at our preaching service, that they (all other church people) are capable of contrasting in their own minds the difference between "sound doctrine" and man-made religion, hence they must answer to God, rendering their own decision now to obey or not to obey—also in the final day of judgment. Preach an affirmative gospel—let other people's peculiar faiths alone. It might be well in every place, as a precaution, "safety first," where our ministers come to preach, that they be kindly urged by pastor or members not to mention by name, or hold up to ridicule the faith and practice of any church people. Our church work in some localities, groups, and even in branches has been greatly injured—fatally so in some instances—by assailing others. The religion of every person, true or false, is his sacred way of approach to God, hence should be respected. Any preacher who assails other peoples or churches is short on sermon preparation.

Missionary Barrels

Over a year ago a letter was received from a faithful sister in the northwestern part of Iowa, saying, "I emptied my missionary barrel today. Inclosed please find bank draft for thirty dollars offering to the church." The letter informed us that every year, besides paying tithing, she has a specially provided receptacle, a "barrel," in which, after shopping, all ten-cent pieces found in her purse, are placed. Thousands of Saints could well afford to follow that good example by establishing receptacles and putting in them their pennies, nickles, or dimes for the Master's cause. One penny a day for a year, from every member of the church, would mean a gift of nearly four hundred thousand dollars. If only one fourth of the members would give five cents every day for a year, a half million dollars would be offered to the church, besides being a constant reminder of other duties—tithing, etc. People can get nearly everything on credit nowadays excepting eternal rewards.

Good Luck—Bad Habits

A prosperous business man observed that "Oil and water are no harder to mix than good luck and bad habits."

During my labors on Manitoulin Island, Brother Chester Smith showed me his flock of sheep, very modestly informing me that he was careful to observe the law of tithing, and that his loss of sheep had been very small thus far. He also said he did not attribute his success wholly to the fact of observing the temporal law, for he studied the sheep industry, working hard to protect and prosper them. It was clearly evident that Brother Chester believed in careful, practical husbandry, as well as spiritual insight, in one of his chosen lines of work. Mr. Edison is reported to have said that "Science is one per cent inspiration and ninety-nine per cent perspiration." Latter Day Saints might do well in their work to consider "fifty-fifty" at least. Probably some people pray for things they would not be willing to work for.

America Has

- 6 per cent of the world's population;
- 7 per cent of the world's land;
- 25 per cent of the world's wheat production;
- 20 per cent of the world's gold;
- 33 per cent of the world's silver;
- 40 per cent of the world's iron and steel;
- 40 per cent of the world's railroads;
- 60 per cent of the world's oil production;
- 75 per cent of the world's corn production;
- 85 per cent of the world's lumber production.

Missouri Self-Supporting

It has been said that though a wall were built around Missouri and no alien products allowed to come in, its inhabitants could continue to live in supreme comfort. Missouri has a diversity of natural riches that is not excelled by any other State in the Union. It is one of the great wheat and corn States of the Union, it grows cotton, is famous for its peaches, its timber, and its strawberries. It has great coal mines, and one of the most productive lead and zinc areas in the world. The productive possibilities of Missouri can not be fully estimated. It is a leading poultry State. Missouri leads the Southwest with one hundred and seventy-four millionaires—an inviting field for more missionary work. More converts of the right kind mean more financial help to the church. Is it opportune to say that "Our respect for the great men (or State) is always tinged with envy"? Nothing jars some Latter Day Saints more than to feel their location seems splendid to them, and suddenly to be apprised of the fact that the Lord has said Missouri is to be the headquarters of the Zion movement—the modern Canaan.

Boss to Some One

One writer said, "Almost every man is boss to some one." Saint Paul wrote, "I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."—Romans 8: 38, 39. By careful study, meditation, and experience, the apostle "persuaded," became "boss" to himself, whereby he was truly a safe, capable instructor and example to others. Let us take an inventory of ourselves, carefully taking note of the selfish things we have, like Paul, overcome by persistent persuasion—become "boss" to ourselves for good. We did conquer self to a great extent when entering the waters of baptism. Have we been loyal to the church ever since? Have we persuaded ourselves, at times, to give it our full support, then failed to keep the resolve. Paul was determined to keep control of himself—not allowing anything past, present, or things to come to separate him from his duty to the church. It is surely within our power also to be wholly "persuaded" and "boss" to our own selves, spiritually and financially, keeping the law of God in its entirety—an example to others. It can be done.

The Modern Commandments—Ten

Doctor L. M. Chambers Wichita, Kansas, pastor of Saint Paul's Methodist Church, gave the following decalogue aimed at preacher conduct:

"1. Thou shalt not preach until God calls thee to the ministry; thou are God's man.

"2. Thou shalt be more diligent in thy work than the most industrious toiler in thy parish. Verily, laziness is the besetting sin of the ministry, and an idle preacher tempts the Devil.

"3. Thou shalt make the church thy force and not thy field.

"4. Thou shalt have success or leave the ministry and earn an honest living. God never called thee to be a maker of excuses.

"5. Thou shalt serve the Lord thy God with all thy mind. Remember, a live program and a new idea are rare and precious treasures among the clergy.

"6. Be tactful.

"7. Thou shalt respect but never fear thy church, thy council nor any living man: thou art not for sale.

"8. To thyself be humanly true. Verily, religion has suffered more from artificial saints than from all the wiles of the Devil.

"9. Be prepared. Occupy and fill thy pulpit.

"10. Believe thy message if thou wouldst have others receive it."

New Philadelphia, Ohio

We are again nearing the day when the Nation shall be confronted with the words of the angel of the Lord from heaven. He came to the earth with the greatest proclamation that has ever been made to mankind. The ear of man has never heard greater words than these spoken by the angel and recorded in Luke 2: 10, 11: "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

We are looking forward to that day as a day of great blessing to our souls, as a time of wonderful accomplishment in the work he has established in our midst. We realize at this time that we have been assigned to a great task and the success that comes to us will largely or entirely depend upon our standing with God.

The work at New Philadelphia is progressing. Many are becoming interested in the work, and in the near future we expect to see others unite with us.

October 29 our branch held a Halloween social. A fine crowd was present, nearly all being masked. Later the Department of Women held a masquerade party at the home of their president, Sister McMillen. About twenty-four were present, and a good time was had.

This department held its monthly business meeting at the home of Sister Hazel Noble, New Philadelphia. The members also held a quilting party at the home of Sister Mason, Uhrichsville, Ohio.

College Day, November 13, was observed with a program given under the direction of Charlene Hensel, former Grace-land student of Uhrichsville, Ohio.

Sunday, November 20, a Thanksgiving cantata was presented by the young people, directed by Professor Samuel Mansel, of Dover, Ohio. Brother Mansel is very much interested in the training of the young people, and we feel that the Lord is blessing him in that work. Elder James Carlisle is mustering quite an army of young folks through the Sunday school. Each Sunday attendance ranges from one hundred to one hundred and fifty. We hope he continues in the good work.

Our branch president, Elder William Goudy, is always on the job to see that things move along as they should. Jesus upon one occasion said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Because of this he made a great success of life. From this we may all draw a great lesson, that it makes no difference what we are called to do if we expect to succeed we must be about our Father's business. And if in this business we put forth our best effort, God will crown it with success.

Every one of us can love Christ, and we can do something for him. It may be a small thing, but whatever it is it will be lasting. It will outlive all the monuments on earth. Iron and granite will rust and crumble and decay, but that which is done for Christ will never fade. It will be more lasting than time itself. Christ says: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away."

Southern Wisconsin District Conference

Southern Wisconsin district conference met at Milwaukee, November 26 and 27. The weather was beautiful.

Branches represented were Madison, Evansville, Janesville, and Beloit. District President E. J. Lenox, Missionary L. G. Holloway, and Apostle D. T. Williams were present.

On Friday evening E. J. Lenox was the speaker.

Saturday morning at 9.30 prayer service was held, time being principally devoted to prayers. Some very fervent prayers were offered.

Conference business was in charge of Apostle Williams and Elder Lenox at 10.30. Brother Lenox gave a verbal report in regard to the work of the district and some things which have been accomplished. Printed reports including those from the ministry, branches, bishop's agent, and treasurer, were in the hand of everyone present, and enough were printed that each family in the district would have one. Bishop's agent's report showed from June 1 until November 1, total receipts from district $1,018.05.

Provision was made for a young people's institute to be held in 1928. Time, place, speakers, courses, and all other arrangements were left to the district presidency and missionary.

A committee was appointed to confer with Northeastern Illinois District as to the advisability of combining reunions, and to report to the June conference. This committee is composed of E. J. Lenox, Charles Hoague, and L. G. Holloway. District officers elected were: district president, E. J. Lenox; associates, Henry Woodstock and Fred Drayer; secretary, Leda Colbert; bishop's agent and treasurer, Charles Hoague; superintendent of Sunday schools, Leda Colbert; superintendent of Department of Women, Effie Hield; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Norman Hield, jr; head of department of music, Carl Wirth. Time and place of next district conference were left to the district presidency.

We are sorry Brother Holloway could be with us only on Saturday. Sunday morning he left for Black River Falls in the northern district. Brother Holloway preached Saturday evening, his subject being, "What we expect of the church, and what does the church expect of us?"

Sunday morning at 9.30 sacramental service was had. Since the service of the previous morning was principally devoted to prayers, this meeting after the emblems were passed, was given over to testimonies, there being only one prayer. Following the singing of "Am I a soldier of the cross?" the congregation was asked to remain standing for a moment with heads bowed in silent prayer, after which Charles Hoague offered the prayer for the congregation. From the testimonies borne, we sensed that the Saints have a deep desire to go forward and to give a worthy contribution to the church.

At eleven o'clock Apostle Williams was the speaker. After the service the congregation was heard talking about the sermon and the high order of it, many expressing their appreciation. Junior church at the same hour was held in another part of the building, Leda Colbert in charge.

At 2.30 Alethia Clark, of Madison, gave a reading, after which a round table discussion was conducted, Brother Williams answering many questions about the church—questions of things not correctly understood heretofore.

Dinner and supper were served in the building, and the Saints of Milwaukee did all they could to make things comfortable and pleasant for visiting Saints. Appreciation of their kindness was evoked.

A peaceful and quiet spirit was in evidence during the entire conference, and it makes us feel the truth of the words we sing:

Sweet the place, exceeding sweet
Where the Saints together meet,
Where the Savior is the theme,
And we joy to sing of him.

Northeastern Illinois District Conference

The district conference met with the Saints of the First Chicago Branch November 18, 19, and 20. A program of musical numbers and a demonstration of first aid, signaling, and knot-tying by a troop of Boy Scouts from the neighborhood occupied the evening of the 18th.

At 9 a. m. on the 19th the Saints gathered at the chapel for a prayer service. A wonderful spirit of harmony and love prevailed, and the meeting proved to be one of great benefit. District President David E. Dowker called the first business session of the conference to order. The district presidency, associated with Apostle J. F. Curtis, were chosen to preside over the conference and complete the organization of the conference. Brother Dowker called attention to the printed pamphlet containing the reports of the various departments and also of the ministry of the district. Brother Dowker reported for the reunion committee, of which he is chairman. The report of the bishop's agent was read and approved, also the district treasurer's report and the auditing committee's report were approved. Apostle J. F. Curtis then addressed the conference, bringing us a word of comfort and cheer.

Election of officers followed at 2.30 p. m. Those selected for the coming year were: District president, David E. Dowker; counselors, Jerome F. Wildermuth and H. T. McCaig; superintendent Department of Women, Sister Roscoe Davey, who chose as her assistants Sister Clem Malchor and Sister J. E. Thoman; superintendent Department of Music, Sister Ruby Newman; she chose Brother Frank Almond as her assistant. Brother Sidney Barrows was reelected superintendent of Sunday schools; he chose Sister Hattie K. Bell as assistant and Sister Ethel Williamson as secretary. Roy F. Healy was sustained Superintendent of Recreation and Expression, with Edgar O. Byrn and Charles Simpson as assistants and Sister Louise Simpson as secretary; Orrin Romer sustained district secretary, with Roy F. Healy, assistant. Reunion committee, David E. Dowker, Elmer Kahler, Jerome F. Wildermuth, Roy F. Healy, Gust Lilja, and H. T. McCaig. Elmer Kahler was unanimously sustained as bishop's agent and district treasurer. A budget committee, C. A. Edstrom, Charles Simpson, H. P. W. Keir. Ordination of Arden O. Skinner to the office of elder and William McPeake to the office of priest was provided for. Motion adopted, that the ministry of each branch make out their reports in duplicate and hand to the branch president, who will sign and forward the original to the district secretary, keeping the duplicate for branch records. Motion that all the departmental and priesthood reports be made from October 1 to September 30 of the year following, and that they be printed previous to the fall conference; carried. Roscoe Davey, district missionary, occupied in the evening, giving us a forceful sermon that will remain with us for many days to come. At this service Frank Almond favored us with a vocal solo.

Sunday at 8.30 a. m. we gathered to a prayer service in which the Master poured out his Spirit in power, and all rejoined under its influence. At ten o'clock the regular Sunday school session in charge of Sidney Barrows, held our attention. At 11.15 Apostle Curtis addressed us with a masterful sermon, and again at 2.30 he gave us another excellent sermon.

At 6.15 the Department of Recreation and Expression gave an interesting program of musical numbers and readings.

At the concluding service of the conference, Bishop C. E. Erwin formerly of Philadelphia, spoke to us.

We can not help but speak a word of praise for the ladies of the First Chicago Branch who so nobly responded to the needs of the inner man by providing meals in the basement of the church, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all, and the efficient and quick manner in which they handled such a large crowd is to be complimented.

From all sides we hear this report: The best conference I ever attended in Northeastern Illinois.

First San Antonio Branch

352 South Flores Street

On the second Sunday of November, at 7.30 in the morning, Brother H. E. Winegar led four precious souls into the waters of baptism. The candidates are well known to some of our HERALD readers, and are W. H. Ferguson, son-in-law of Elder L. L. Wight, deceased, French H., eldest son, W. H., junior, youngest son, and Jack Busbee, grandson of W. H. Ferguson. Those in attendance said it was an impressive sight. This service brought great joy and satisfaction to the members, for the father and grandfather has been a regular attendant of the Saints' church for a number of years. Some had almost given up hope of his accepting the gospel. To most of us his baptism came as a blessed surprise. The brothers were confirmed at the eleven o'clock service. At the close of the confirmation, Brother E. L. Henson, who had assisted in confirming them, stepped out and said he felt like making a few remarks by way of welcoming these members into the church. He made a beautiful initiatory talk to each one, from the eldest, whom he designated as the patriarch of the family, down to the grandson, who, he said, was last but not least. He told of the wonderful possibilities that lay before him and the work that he would accomplish if he were faithful. Each word seemed to be inspired by the Spirit of God. It caused our hearts to rejoice and brought all into closer relationship. Brother Henson was pastor of the branch a few years ago and was well acquainted with the family, which acquaintance gives him more than a passing interest in them. The talk was most appropriate.

Elder H. E. Winegar followed with a beautiful sermon on sacrifice, using as a text Romans 12: 1: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Emphasis was placed on the thought that God requires only a reasonable service at our hands.

Patriarch U. W. Greene, of Independence, Missouri, just closed a series of meetings at our branch, and these were greatly enjoyed by all who attended, members and non-members. There were some present who had never before attended our services. The meeting closed all too soon, for each evening brought a larger attendance. But those in charge thought it wise to divide time with the Second Branch, so the meeting was closed Friday evening at First Branch and began Sunday evening at Second Branch. Our branch dispensed with its eleven o'clock service and also the evening service in order that all who wished might attend the meeting of the other branch. Nearly every regular attendant member availed himself of the opportunity and helped swell the crowd at Second Branch. The Saints from that branch have been good to attend the meeting held in our branch, so our members felt that they should return the compliment. The series will continue through this week.

San Antonio Saints are sorry that Elder Greene can not remain with us through the winter, as he expected, but his plans have been changed by conditions over which he exerts no control. We think ourselves fortunate to have had him with us, and feel that in him we have a strong ally in the gospel. His broad experience has instructed us. We hope he will not forget us and will come again, for in the short time we have known him we have learned to love him.

The good work continues to go on at San Antonio.

Yesterday morning, Sunday, seven more souls were led into the waters of baptism by Brother Greene. These candidates are all women, two being the heads of families. This makes eleven brought into the kingdom this month. They were confirmed at Second Branch, as there were no services at First Branch.

Following the confirmation we were favored with a splendid discourse by J. W. Davis, who is at present located at Nitalia, Texas. His subject was on the new birth and man's relationship to the heavenly Father, which was presented in such a plain and concise manner that even the children understood what he said.

There are still a number of sick in our branch, most of whom we are glad to report are on the road to recovery. Glenn Edwards, son of Brother and Sister Milam Edwards, was the victim of an accident last week. While working on a derrick at the Somerset Oil Field, he was riding on an elevator, and as it came within about forty feet of the earth the cable broke, letting him fall. The fall resulted in his right ear being severed from his head and one bone being broken in his left foot. His right foot was sprained. He is improving, but still is not out of danger. He is in the San Rosa Infirmary in this city.

Elder H. E. Winegar, missionary to this district, was called away to hold a meeting at Skiatook, Oklahoma. He left on Thanksgiving morning. We were sorry, for he will not be back before Christmas. But we know Skiatook Saints will profit by his presence, and we pray for his success.

Gifford Edwards, one of our members, is engaged to play the violin three times each week over the radio from K G R C, the Gene Roth Company. He plays Monday morning from 8.30 to 9.30; Friday evening, 7.30 to 8.30; and Saturday evening from 8.30 to 9.30. Those who have radios may listen in on his programs.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

Seventh and Lottie

November 26.—We are very glad to report that we are still trying earnestly to bear our part in the work of preparing a people to redeem Zion.

Our pastor, Brother E. L. Kemp, has been unable to attend church services for some few weeks, on account of some special work which he has had to do for the company for which he works. He is now back at his post and seems to be as energetic as ever.

Some two weeks ago our people held a box supper in Sister Dearing's dining hall, for the purpose of increasing the Christmas offering. Games were played, and all enjoyed themselves for an hour or so before the boxes were sold. From the sale we realized a sum of about fifty-four dollars, which was divided evenly among the Sunday school classes, to apply to their goals. Several of our classes have gone beyond the goals which they set for Christmas offering and are working to double them if they can.

On Thanksgiving morning we engaged in a very spiritual prayer meeting, at which about twenty were present. We greatly enjoyed an hour and a half in the presence of the Spirit of God, and apparently everyone left the building greatly encouraged and built up in the faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

We are all hopefully looking forward to the time when all of the Saints shall be working unitedly on the stewardship plan, and when we shall have accomplished our purpose of making the Church of Jesus Christ on earth indeed a church of peculiar people, zealous of good works.

Visitors are always welcome. We hold Sunday school services at 9.45; preaching at 11; Religio at 6; preaching again at 7.30, and prayer meeting every Wednesday evening, at our church at Seventh and Lottie Streets.

Conference of Northeastern Missouri

Northeastern Missouri District held its conference at Bevier, Missouri, November 20 and 21. Elders F. Henry Edwards and F. T. Mussell were with us. Brother Edwards came in the interest of church work in our district. Brother Mussell met a part of his family here, and they attended Sunday services and visited old acquaintances, Bevier being their old home town. Brother Mussell preached at 11 a. m. Sunday and Brother Edwards at 8 p. m. At seven in the evening Brother Edwards gave a nice talk on the proposed program for the centennial celebration of 1930. From 7.30 to 8 Sister Mary Jones, district chorister, conducted a musical program, which was enjoyed by all, one of the best parts being two violin duets by Barbara Hill and Thena Thomas, two little girls who give promise of being expert violinists in the near future.

At 7.30 p. m. Monday, the 21st, a business meeting was held, in charge of District President B. S. Tanner and William C. Chapman, clerk. There was very little business, and the item of principal importance was the disorganizing of Higbee Branch. This leaves our district with only two branches.

The district secretary sent out seventy-six letters inviting nonresidents to conference. Few replied. Some of the letters came back unclaimed. I should like to hear from all if only by a postcard, in order that I may keep your correct address on file.

Mothers and Daughters Festival at Midland

MIDLAND, MICHIGAN, December 3.—Seventy-five mothers and daughters gathered at a festival sponsored by Mrs. Arthur Koehler, the district superintendent of women, and "Uncle Walt" Chapman, the president of the district, at Midland, Michigan, Saturday and Sunday, November 26 and 27.

The Community Center Hall was obtained for the banquet, as the accommodations at the church were not sufficient to meet the requirements.

One appreciated the color scheme in the decorations. We are indebted to Mrs. Rose Pollard for this and the flowers she made for the occasion.

The three-course meal of chicken, etc., was daintily laid out. A better presentation could not be had for only thirty-five cents a plate. Mrs. Margaret Johnson and Mrs. Bye were responsible for this. Sister Johnson's husband is chef at the Dow Chemical Works and has charge of the many banquets of the Kiwanis and other club functions of the city. Mrs. Mary Bartlett superintended the table and seating arrangements. Mrs. Winnie Hulbert, the toast mistress, was on the jump with witty and becoming responses. The speech of welcome was given by Mrs. Hazel Sweetman. Miss Gladys Humphrey responded with a word to the mothers, followed by Mrs. H. Arthur Koehler with a word to the daughters. A reading was then given by Mrs. Earl Faulkner. At this juncture H. Arthur Koehler rendered several solos. He also had charge of the music, and incidentally painted seventy-five oil paintings as mementos of the occasion. Mrs. M. Nichols responded with "A progressive Women's Department." "How daughters can help" was by Elsie Begeick.

The Sunday services were well attended. The prayer service, supervised by Brethren McGraw and Bartlett, demonstrated a true manifestation of zeal. Soon after the Sunday school session was taken up, under the able direction of the superintendent of the district Sunday school, and his accomplished wife. Brother Earl Burt surely pepped things up in the lesson study period, giving us some points to ponder, Sister Burt, the superintendent's wife, had a large class in the junior church in the basement. H. Arthur Koehler addressed the audience upon the subject of "Mothers," and caused us to feel a greater responsibility in the task that is ours.

In the afternoon Sisters H. Arthur Koehler and Earl Burt gave lectures that were very much appreciated. During this period prizes were offered to the oldest mother present, and the one graced with the greatest number of children. Peculiar as it may seem, Sister Keeley, of Midland, won both of the prizes. It seemed to be a proud moment in her life. A solo was rendered by Miss Douglas, of Bay City. The assistant at the piano was her sister.

At night "Uncle Walt" Chapman delivered the address on the home. A full house greeted him. This was also the commencement of a series of meetings to be held by Brother Koehler.

Some of the provisions were contributed by the produce houses of Midland, Beaverton, and Bay City.

On February 12 a fathers' and sons' banquet will be held in the church at Saginaw. The Boy Scout leader of the city, and the editor of the News are enthused over its prospects.

Akron, Ohio

77 West Crosier Street

After several months of rather irregular meetings, Akron Branch is glad to get back to being together again. While our little church was undergoing extensive alterations to accommodate the large number of Kirtland District Saints who gather for the various home-comings, conventions, etc., the Barberton Branch invited us to meet with them. The building was raised several feet, so that now we have a lovely basement, which can be used for recreational purposes as well as a dining room. There was also a large addition made to the front of the building to provide a room for the mothers, and in the rear of the rostrum a baptismal font was built, with dressing room adjoining. This is separated from the main auditorium by four big folding doors. With newly decorated walls and freshly varnished seats and woodwork, it provides a most pleasant meeting place for the Saints, thanks to the untiring efforts of the many brethren who worked nearly day and night to accomplish this.

On November 20 one of the most pleasant home-comings the writer has ever attended was held here. We were happy to have with us Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin. Brother Baldwin occupied at both the morning and evening services, the latter being his farewell sermon before leaving for the British Isles. It is with deep regret that we bid farewell to our dear brother and sister, but we are consoled in the thought that our loss will be a most welcome gain to those across the sea who are anxiously awaiting their arrival. Our prayers are with them and for them.

The afternoon was spent in social service, at which time there were thirty-six testimonies. This was followed by the baptism of four children by Brother Baldwin. A little previous to the social service, Sister Baldwin gave a short talk to the children. It proved interesting to the grown-ups as well.

The Women's Department served meals in the basement, and it was estimated that more than four hundred were fed at both meals.

One of our oldest, most faithful members, Sister Stottler, passed on to her reward on November 15 at the age of seventy-five years.

After the holidays, the Religio plans to resume the good work brought about by their previous activities, and the boy movement under Brother Hubert Mitchel and Charles Gilchrist are planning a basket ball team.

The Women's Department has some lovely needlework on hand, which they expect to dispose of at their Christmas bazaar and supper. They are planning on having suppers at least twice a month to help meet their pledge towards the new building.

With every department working harmoniously, and with a clean building, we hope to catch the true Christmas spirit, and we pray God will bless our efforts as we strive more earnestly to spread the gospel and live as befits a true Latter Day Saint.

First Columbus Branch

Wednesday night, November 2, prayer meeting was in charge of C. Schafenberg and William E. Elwood. It was a good meeting.

November sacramental service was in charge of Brothers Clark and Williams, pastor. On that day (the 6th) Charles H. Foster with T. S. Williams spent the day with Lancaster Saints. They had a good sacramental service at the home of Brother and Sister Wasm, followed by a talk by T. S. Williams. In the evening Brother Foster spoke to the Saints at the home of Brother and Sister Vickroy, on the Book of Mormon. These two brothers report good meetings, sweet association of the Saints, and good country food.

Monday, November 7, the juveniles of the branch held debate upon one of our Columbus bond issues. The negative team won.

Sunday afternoon Professor H. F. Vallance, M. A., spoke on education. The little folks, who had been coached by Principal William Judd, of the public school across the street, gave an interesting drill.

Prayer service November 9 was attended by about thirty-five. Brothers Anderton and Williams were in charge.

"Image of God," was the subject of the discourse delivered by Brother William Elwood at 10.45 on the 13th. And in the evening Brother A. E. Anderton made plain his points on "Confidence."

The following Wednesday Brothers John R. Grice and C. H. Foster presided over a prayerful hour. The gathering was small because of inclement weather.

Sunday, the 20th, young people's program began at 10.45 a. m. The organ prelude, "Liebestraum," Liszt, was rendered by Thelma Hershey. "Loyalty unto Christ" was then sung by the congregation, followed by an organ solo, "Reverie," Dickinson, by Thelma Hershey. A talk, "Should the Bible be in public schools?" was given by William E. Elwood, jr., and preceded the duet, "Let the lower lights be burning," by Helen Ferguson and Mildred Weate. A piano selection, "Boat song," by Virginia Lewis pleased the listeners; then Dan Gabriel played a violin solo, being accompanied by Elsie M. Weate. A reading, "Thanksgiving," by Elsie M. Weate, was followed by a talk, "The Sunday school should not find its activities from the quarterlies alone," by Charles A. Ferguson. After the prayer of dismissal, Thelma Hershey played the postlude, "Schorzando."

This was an inspiring program. If any branch desires to learn what talent it has in its midst, we of First Columbus Branch would recommend that it have a young people's program. Especially if you have one at your Religio session, will you be astonished what talent you uncover.

At 7.30 p. m. Sunday, the 20th, Elder John R. Grice preached a wonderful sermon, which every branch in the church should hear. He spoke plainly, as did Christ to the church two thousand years ago. Brother Grice is called of God, hence he speaks the things of God.

Mrs. Cora Annie Timmons, the neighbor whom Elder F. C. Welsh and family have been caring for, and to whom the young people's class presented a Bible and other remembrances, died Monday, November 21, after eleven months of illness. The young people's class, with Brother and Sister Welsh, met at the home of the deceased. The young ladies of the class were pallbearers. There was singing by the young ladies and prayer by C. H. Foster before the party proceeded to the church. Sister Thelma Ryson presided at the organ, Sister Florence Gabriel at the piano. Brother C. H. Foster, soloist, was accompanied by Florence Gabriel. Elder F. C. Welsh preached the sermon, being assisted by Brother Myers. The young people's class was the choir. The church had a capacity attendance, most of which were nonmembers, the bereaved family being nonmembers. But through the hospitality previously mentioned, a Latter Day Saint funeral was requested. Everything worked well; the young people performed admirably. That is all our young people need—more opportunity to do.

Martha Irene Dougherty, daughter of Brother and Sister C. R. Dougherty, was united in marriage to Elder Harry B. Smith, of Parkersburg, West Virginia, by Elder F. C. Welsh, Thursday, the 24th. The church was crowded with friends and relatives. Harry and Martha have left us to make their home in Parkersburg, and we shall miss them. Their leave-taking was hearty, but tears were mingled with the departure. We say God bless them.

Prayer service on the 23d was conducted by C. W. Clark and T. S. Williams and was a spiritual meeting.

On Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, there was a 7.30 p. m. prayer meeting at the home of Brother and Sister C. R. Dougherty. About forty were present, and the power of God was made manifest. F. C. Welsh and Brother Smith were in charge. Also the prayer service at the home of T. S. Williams was a nice little gathering, some nonmembers being present. T. S. Williams was in charge, assisted by C. H. Foster. A spiritual hour was followed by explanations of our faith to nonmembers. We feel that Thanksgiving Day was well spent in the service of God. It was celebrated in many ways by members of the branch, some taking baskets to the needy.

Our Religio continues successfully under Superintendent Charles A. Ferguson. Pastor J. B. Williams was able to spend Friday evening, November 25, with them.

On the last Sunday of November, Charles A. Ferguson spoke on life. The writer was not present, but many comments have been made concerning our young brother's effort.

C. W. Clark preached on "Obedience" in the evening, receiving the undivided attention of the Saints. His message was well received.

Second Columbus Branch

Rinehard Avenue and Twenty-Second Street

December 3.—The first Sunday of November when we assembled for sacramental service was a beautiful day, and the Saints were grateful to God for the many privileges they enjoyed in this meeting. The Spirit was present, and every heart was touched. At the evening hour J. E. Matthews preached a splendid sermon.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has changed its study hour from Friday evening to Wednesday evening following prayer service. One Friday evening each month will be given to recreation.

On November 11, at eight o'clock the Department of Women met at the home of Sister Maude Reeves, 1118 Whittier Street. Ethel Kirkendall gave an interesting talk on child training. Edna Jackson read a paper on Thanksgiving. Each one enjoyed the splendid lunch and social time.

G. H. Kirkendall preached November 13 at the evening hour, an interesting sermon on the theme, "Canst thou by searching find out God?"

A birthday surprise was given November 18 by the Department of Women on Mr. Schaeffer, who is in White Cross Hospital with a broken neck. A birthday cake with candles and ice cream and cake to treat his nurses composed the treat. A purse of five dollars was given him. We are glad to bring happiness to the shut-ins.

On November 20 at the morning session we were pleased to have Elder John R. Grice, of Saint Clair, Michigan, to preach for us. That evening District President William Grice preached. Both sermons were ably delivered and enjoyed by the hearers.

The prayer meetings for the month were not so well attended. Those who did not come missed good meetings.

The Sunday school is preparing its Christmas program to be given Friday evening before Christmas.

Book of Mormon, and Conditions in Australia

These items are taken from two letters to the First Presidency from Elder Walter J. Haworth, of Australia.—
EDITOR.

Re Book of Mormon Centennial

Letters and reports to hand show that in almost all parts of the mission special services were held in commemoration of the handing of the plates of the Book of Mormon to Joseph Smith one hundred years ago. The October number of the Standard contains reports which show that everywhere great interest was taken in the celebrations.

It is being generally recognized that the Book of Mormon is one of the greatest assets, from a propaganda point of view, which the church possesses. Brother Velt has aroused great interest in the subject here by means of lantern lectures on archæology. We are following this up with sermons and a Book of Mormon propaganda play, "The vanished American." Stereopticon views dealing with ancient American ruins will be used to illustrate parts of a sermon in the play.

Arrangements have been made for a portion of the play to be broadcast, and the ticket sales show that the building will be filled to capacity. The Saints are working most unitedly to make this function a success, and tickets have been sold to many very influential people. Today I called on and had a talk about the Book of Mormon and American archæology with the Registrar General for the State of South Australia. Brother Velt has been in touch with him for some time, and he has placed some very fine archæological pictures at our disposal.

It is my intention to lecture on the Book of Mormon with stereopticon views, throughout the mission, for I believe that it is not only one of the most interesting subjects, but good convert-getting propaganda.

The work in Adelaide is on a fine footing. Brother Velt has about one hundred contacts who are interested, more or less, in the work. On occasion they attend the church services, but much of Brother Velt's initial work with such people is by means of church literature, and a good follow-up system. Have greatly enjoyed my spell of work in this place.

Altogether work in this mission is on a much more satisfactory basis than it was two or three years ago.

Returned here two days ago from my visit south. Found the work in Victoria onward, though showing much ground for improvement. Elder C. A. Butterworth's health is in bad shape. His heart is very weak, and in addition he is much subject to bronchitis. Geelong Branch is picking up, though there is room for improvement.

The bright spot in my travels south was Adelaide. There, there was opportunity for much productive work. It was good to associate with Elder Velt in the class of missionary work he is doing, which has as a special feature house to house visitation with Bible studies, either for households or community.

Good audiences greeted us at every session, but on the evening of the rendition of the Book of Mormon play, "The vanished American," we had the church full for the first time. It is ninety feet by thirty-five feet, and we got approximately four hundred people into it. That represented a lot of work on the part of the Saints, but it was good to see them work so unitedly.

Brother Velt is overjoyed at the success achieved. He writes to the Standard:

"What an inspiration it was to have our church almost entirely filled. . . . Congratulations have been flowing in from all directions. It was a huge success, and the music and singing were excellent. We appreciate it that such splendid talent has been so willingly given in service to the church. The press has devoted a deal of space to the report of the function, for which we are duly thankful.

"The most wonderful part of the whole thing, however, was the good-will diligence with which everyone worked where he or she was best fitted for serviceable help. A vast amount of work was entailed in the preparations: costume making, carpentering, work of art in the making of tepees and the Indian paintings on them, preparation of slides on archæology, electric lighting, and general decorations, apart from ticket selling and the practices for the play, at first weekly, latterly twice weekly.

"The working in of lantern slides of most wonderful ancient ruins, along with the acting of the closing scenes of the Book of Mormon, and the preaching of the restored gospel among the Indians, made the play very valuable from the standpoint of church propaganda; the same time giving wholesome entertainment in the representation of Indian life in America, so that the whole audience seemed thoroughly delighted, and many expressions of surprise at the talent at our disposal have been forthcoming."

The first fifty minutes of the play were broadcast by 5 C L, and there was good reception in South Australia, but static interfered somewhat with reception in New South Wales.

Syracuse, New York

Saturday evening, October 29, Doctor Weegar, district president, held a priesthood meeting at the home of Branch President M. E. Whitehead, Patriarch Stone being one of the number present. Doctor Weegar was so full of ideas he had to give expression to many of them. A very interesting evening was spent clearing up some points about which some were in doubt.

The next morning the Saints were off bright and early for a one-day meeting at Fulton. Saints attended from Buffalo, Rochester, Sherrill, Red Creek, and Syracuse. Brother Stone preached in the morning. Prayer meeting, Sunday school, sermon, dinner served in the hall, music under leadership of Sister Ada Davidson, then departmental work made a busy day. It was decided there would be no evening service, as so many had a long distance to travel homeward.

Monday evening a Halloween social was held at the home of Brother and Sister M. E. Whitehead. All seemed to enjoy themselves, the games and refreshments doing their part in adding to evening pleasure. The admission was vegetables, a good supply being sent to a worthy, needy family. Thus while we enjoyed ourselves, others who needed it were helped.

Then rally day claimed our attention. There are few of us to rally, but we did the best we could and felt glad we could be there. We regret that one brother and his wife have moved out of the city. They had been faithful in attendance and in giving of their services. Since then we have had some members move to Syracuse from Fulton, so our numbers have increased rather than diminished, and we see that God works in his own way to bring about his purposes.

Some of the Saints had a glimpse of Brother and Sister Traver, Sister George Sinclair and daughter, also Sister

Kate Davidson, on their way west to spend Thanksgiving.

Syracuse Saints are thankful that the branch president has been able to return to business this week for the first time since his accident, one year ago lacking about twenty days. We sometimes wonder why the Lord has not healed him sooner, but we are satisfied there is some good reason back of the delay. We know we can trust him.

Marshall, Missouri

December 5.—Sacramental meeting was presided over by Elder T. L. McCormack. A good spirit prevailed. Elder C. L. House and wife worshiped with us, and a goodly congregation of Saints partook of the blessed sacrament and testified of the goodness of God. Saints can not afford to miss this great privilege. The members should continually watch their lives, that they are worthy and faithful to their covenant. If we are not right with God and man, we should make every effort to get right before it is too late.

Priest Ralph M. Ridge, who has been our pastor for the past few months, has given us much satisfaction, as he has presided over our assemblies in his quiet, unassuming way.

The young people are now looking forward to the young people's institute which will begin December 26, at the chapel.

Sister Lois Sphorer, leader of Recreation and Expression, is directing a play for that occasion.

Sister W. P. Mitchell, assisted by Sister Roy Smith, instructs the junior church each Sabbath in the basement of the church.

Kirtland's Musical Institute

The Musical Institute of the Kirtland District has passed into history. This institute was held November 25, 26, and 27. So far as the writer knows, it is the first ever conducted in the district.

The opening session was held on Friday evening. District President James Bishop gave an illustrated song lecture the first part of the program of the evening. A description of the songs was given, along with the illustration. This part of the program was greatly enjoyed by all. Brother Bishop has a good collection of slides for such occasions. A number of our own hymns, dear to the hearts of the Saints, were shown on the screen, and the audience heartily joined in the singing of them, as well as all that were shown each evening. After the congregational singing, a short talk was given by the district chorister as to the aims of the institute.

At 2.30 Saturday afternoon two papers or talks formed the program, one on "Suitable hymns for church services," by Bishop Charles Fry, the other on "The qualifications of an accompanist," by Sister Melba Kirkendall Colgrove. Although the audience was small, those who were there enjoyed the papers, and because of this these two talks were repeated.

Saturday evening found us again assembled and a goodly audience in evidence at this session. Again we had the illustrated songs by Brother Bishop, after which Brother Fry's talk was repeated. Brother Fry had the congregation sing some of the songs and hymns about which he was speaking, and the district learned one new hymn because of this. We thoroughly enjoyed our brother's talk about this phase of our work, and believe many whose duty it is to choose hymns for our services will try to put some of these things into practice.

The rest of the evening was spent in a musical program. Those who took part in this were Sister Twilla Maze, of Lorain, Ohio, who played a piano solo very creditably; and Sister Mildred Moore, of Kirtland, Ohio, sang a soprano solo. The Saints of the district always enjoy hearing Sister Moore sing, and she sang very pleasingly at this time. Sister

Mayme Atchison, of Kirtland, Ohio, also sang a very pleasing solo. Sister Atchison was suffering from the effects of a cold, but all appreciated her willingness and kindness in consenting to sing, and her solo was enjoyed. Sisters George D. Sinclair, Raymond Clough, and F. T. Haynes rendered a trio number. These sisters are also sisters by family ties; they are well known in the Southern New England District as the Whiting sisters. It has been seven years since they sang together in public, because of the distance of their places of residence. They enjoyed singing together; as to whether others enjoyed it will have to be told by others, for the writer of this article is one of the sisters. The closing number of this program was an organ selection by Sister Melba Kirkendall Colgrove, of Cleveland, Ohio, who played from memory, "Nearer, my God, to thee," with variations. This beautiful hymn, played as only our accomplished sister can play it and put her own interpretation into it, sent us home with a fine appreciation of the gift of music and of song which God has bestowed upon his Saints, and also prepared us for the services of the morrow.

At 9.30 Sunday morning a prayer meeting was scheduled. This really was an experience meeting, many telling of the hymns that have been of inspiration and of help to them along life's pathway. And we learned how many times song has comforted the Saints in their gospel experience. It was an especial comfort to the writer to have this service to start the day with.

At 11 o'clock three papers were to have been read, but none materialized. The hour or more was spent with a talk by the district chorister, and by the repetition of talk by Sister Colgrove. The latter talk was greatly enjoyed by many who were not musicians, as well as by the musicians themselves. Sister Colgrove is an accomplished musician and is a great asset to the district; her ability to handle the pipe organ is greatly enjoyed by the Cleveland Saints, who have just purchased a large church with a fine organ in it. At this service Brother George Neville and Sister Mildred Moore sang a duet; also the Whiting sisters again sang a trio. One of these sisters, Sister George Sinclair, was visiting her sisters in Ohio. Sister Sinclair is a member of the Boston, Massachusetts, Branch.

At 2.30 in the afternoon, a round table was held, the subject being, "The robing of choirs." I believe it is safe to say all are united in favor of the vesting of choirs, but when the discussion drifted to the robing or vesting of the ministry, nearly all disagreed, some thinking business suits suitable, others favoring robing or vesting, others preferring a Prince Albert coat, or frock coat. Of course we did not have to decide for them but had an enjoyable time discussing it.

The closing session was held at 7.30 Sunday evening, with a sermon by Brother James Bishop. Kirtland District Saints enjoy the sermons and labors of Brother Bishop. Especially does the chorister of this district wish to acknowledge the splendid help and cooperation she receives from Brother Bishop. He has been a great help to her in her work. At this service Sister Annie McNeil sang a pleasing solo, "A benediction." Sister McNeil has done splendid solo work in this district for a number of years, and she is very dear to the hearts of many of the Saints, and is remembered for her splendid work at funerals, as well as at other times.

We wish to acknowledge with much appreciation the telegram of good wishes of the Council Bluffs young people. This kind remembrance was a great comfort to the district chorister, to whom it was addressed, and she wishes to thank those young people, and their pastor, for their thoughtfulness for the institute. The institute was a success, and although it was not attended by as many of the musically talented of the district as we would like to have had, we think it will be a working basis for future accomplishment, and hope all will be more ready to participate in these events in the future.

At the prayer service we had the pleasure of renewing our acquaintance with Bishop E. L. Traver and wife, who called at Kirtland on their way home from visiting relatives at Nauvoo, Illinois, and their son who is at Graceland. Through the kindness of Bishop Traver and wife, Sister Sinclair was able to visit her sisters here, and we wish to thank him for his kindness. These little kindnesses between Saints make Zion seem as though it is to be a reality.

We thank all who so nobly gave of their time and talents to make this institute enjoyable. We spent a very pleasant week-end with musical people.

KIRTLAND DISTRICT CHORISTER.

Long Beach, California

Thanksgiving Day is past, and we are fast approaching the close of the year. We hope every branch had as fine a Thanksgiving and as much for which to be thankful as we in Long Beach had. I have long felt that there was something a little selfish about the general celebration of Thanksgiving, since to many of us it is apt to mean that on that day we gather about us our own little group or family and close our doors against the outside world, while we feast and gorge ourselves. True, many of us contribute to the drives for the needy or take baskets of food to poor families, but it seems almost like a salve for our conscience when we know we are going to go home from giving a little and satiate ourselves. Perhaps that is why I so much enjoyed our church Thanksgiving dinner. We were asked, not just to give, but to sacrifice, and give all that we could, for the money was destined for the church debt fund. I believe everyone was happy to be able to give much and have for himself just enough.

Our evening began with a short Thanksgiving service in charge of Pastor W. A. Teagarden; at its close the dinner was served, and what a dinner it proved to be! I am certain I voice the thoughts of the branch when I say that the ladies' aiders far surpassed anything in the way of a branch dinner they have ever done before. Everything from the chicken and dressing down the list of all the "fixin's" was perfection. Credit is due our aid president, Sister Effie Gregory, and her two able assistants, Sister Dicie Rogers and Sister Taylor, who had charge of the cooking. The Junior Aid was in charge of decorating and waiting tables.

After dinner our orchestra gave a splendid concert, which everyone enjoyed and thoroughly appreciated. Immediately following the concert the young people staged a play, written by Sister Mabel Crayne, of Los Angeles. The players were Emmet Crouch as Joe, a young country boy who has fallen in love with Katie, a Latter Day Saint girl. Carol Moran as Katie was charming. Jack Milner acted the part of Joe's very "sot" father, who is prejudiced against the "Mormons." Laura Packard as Joe's mother wants to sympathize with her son, but she knows "Pa" too well. Joe's sister and brother-in-law, played by Alice Engle and Shelby Kerr, plot to get "Pa" to preaching services without his knowing that he is listening to a "Mormon" preacher. Finally the sermons, which seem "strangely different" to him, and the winsome personality of Katie win the father to Latter Day Saintism, and the whole family comes into the church. The humor of the play is brought in by Crystal White, played by Sister Savage, who "suddenly is full o' 'speriences," as we see when she gets tangled up with a "limb o' Satan" in the form of a black cat.

And so with a formal Thanksgiving service, a splendid meal, kindly associations, inspiring music, a good object lesson, and a wholesome laugh, our day ended for us with a feeling that this was a Thanksgiving day indeed.

There is one more thing that should be said along the thought of thanks and tributes; that is, to the splendid young people in our branch. We are thankful for them and pay tribute to them. Where are they, and what are they doing, do you ask? Come to Sunday school; come to Recreation and Expression Department; come to our Aid; but above all, come to our prayer meetings, and you will find them often outnumbering the older ones in attendance. Look for them when you want them, and they are there. Call on them when you need them, and they respond. We are proud of them, and we love them.

We pray that all the youth of the church may soon see the vision of the responsibility which rests upon them—and respond.

Solicits and Proffers Help

We are trying to keep up a Sunday school, although we are very few; only three of us and not many nonmembers to assist us. We have a nice room rented on Main Street and in it have had a few preaching services. A brother and sister, isolated in a nearby town, used to meet with us, but will not be able to meet with us during the winter months. What the church needs is a scattering of the priesthood among those who are isolated. This will help to bring church privileges to the isolated Saints.

If there are any members of the priesthood who are out of work, we will, if they come here, try to get them a position and will be willing to board them until they get work. If any other Saints are out of work, we invite them to write and will try to get them positions, for we would like to see a branch of the church built up here. There are three furniture factories, a woolen mill, and a flour mill in this town of about sixteen hundred people. The factories run steadily the year round. We are about thirty miles from Port Elgin, Owen Sound, and Wiarton Branches. Elders have occasionally come over from Port Elgin and Owen Sound, but we would like to have regular services here at Chesley. We are looking forward to the time when a brother will come and work in the printing office here. He will be able to look after the advertising of our meetings.

CHESLEY, ONTARIO, Box 235.

ARTHUR J. NEALE.

Oelwein, Iowa

December 5.—The long-looked-for cold weather has come, and snow and ice are now the principal features of the landscape. We have been permitted to enjoy a pleasant fall, and although weather predictions for two or three weeks have promised snow and cold, the snows have melted and fair weather prevailed until recently. Zero weather and snow-covered ground are ours at present.

Considerable sickness has prevailed for about three weeks, attendance at church, Sunday school, and all meetings being quite small, but there always is a good spirit shown and the faithful few are usually present. They come, no matter what the weather. The reward for the faithful is sure.

Brother Ervie Weston, his wife, Nellie, and son, Brainard, and three members of the Shippy family, attended meetings held at Waterloo three weeks ago. Pastor George McFarlane was prevented from going by illness in his family. Brother E. R. Davis, president of the Northeastern Iowa District, also Kewanee District, was present and held meetings Saturday and Sunday. Part of the Oelwein crowd were permitted to attend the Sunday meetings, but they certainly were well worth our time and close attention. Elder Davis is a consecrated man and has remarkable business ability in handling all branch work and causing everything to move on smoothly. His talks and sermons were concise. The man is an example of the commandments given in Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon. No matter what your office and station in the church, cultivate a truly humble spirit and a contrite heart. This is essential to all, but especially to those occupying leading positions.

Although attendance of the congregation was rather small, a very good spirit seemed to prevail among the Waterloo Saints. There are a number of families at Waterloo who are faithful to the church, undaunted and courageous. There is much talent among the members, musical and otherwise, and if each Saint would make use of his, much benefit would accrue. We think Brother Fred Jackson has made a successful Sunday school superintendent in this branch, where they have had a number of excellent superintendents.

Brother George McFarlane and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy, now about three weeks old. Mother and child are doing well, and George seems even taller than usual.

Brother Ira Shippy, Sunday school superintendent, has gone to Newton, Iowa, and obtained work as machinist in the Maytag factory. We miss him in the branch. Sister Ima McQueen Gay has assumed the duties of Sunday school superintendent, as she was assistant superintendent. We feel that if her health will permit she will do a good work and fill her office most acceptably. She is one gifted by nature with unusual musical talent. As a small child she could hear a tune on the street and come home and play it on a musical instrument. She can sing any of the parts for female voices. Oh, that all our young people would realize the talents with which they are richly endowed, and use them to help build up their branch and Zion! Could we but remember the words of the beautiful song:

"One day when fell the Spirit's whisper,
And touched with zeal the waiting throng;
Inspiring hope, it courage gave them,
To cultivate the gift of song;
With skillful hands and sweeter voices,
The Master called for service glad;
He knew one heart that so rejoices,
Wrought good surpassing many sad."

Brother William Weston, from Lamont, visited Oelwein meeting Sunday, and with us partook of the sacrament. He has seen forty years of faithful work and has always shown a humble and contrite spirit. One can see that he has laid hold of the rod of iron and is following the straight and narrow way. A meeting where he takes part is always blessed with the Spirit of God, and when he talks the truth and sincerity of his words are impressed upon the congregation.

Elder Leonard Houghton, missionary from Kewanee District and one-time missionary in our district, received a leave of absence for a short time and visited the past week. All enjoyed having him with us, and he seems to fairly radiate with sunshine and good will. He has preached a number of sermons during the week, and following the Religio Friday night gave a talk on "Good manners." This talk, we feel sure, was excellent for young and old, for true courtesy greases the wheels of society. It costs nothing to be polite and kind, and what a vast difference it makes in the world.

Brother Houghton also presided over the prayer and sacramental meeting and gave us some beautiful thoughts, recalling to our minds all we owe to Christ and the solemn feast he has prepared for us, that we may renew our covenant with him. His warning was never to eat or drink unworthily lest we commit sin. Sunday evening he preached an inspiring sermon on Zion and its redemption. His text was taken from Numbers, where we read that the older members of the tribes of Israel were not permitted to enter the promised land because of their unbelief and rebellion. God will do his part if we do ours; if we are not active in promoting the cause of Zion, God will raise up a people who will do the work. God has never failed his people when they trusted him and followed his commandments, but he will not suffer half-way service; it must be whole-hearted or not at all.

Fred Clark and wife have just returned from a three-week visit to their son, Otho, who is on a stewardship farm in Missouri. They report a pleasant time. Their trip included visits to Independence and smaller towns. Brother Otho and wife are an excellent young couple, doing all they can to forward the gospel. Brother Otho is a young elder, having a gift of speech; his wife was a member of our Department of Women, bright, intelligent, and faithful. She also served as our pianist. Times are rather hard on the farms, but in a few years the land can be made to bear abundant crops. Brother Luban Loveland owns land nearby and now has his farm in excellent shape, bearing good crops.

The Religio program committee is getting busy preparing the children for the Christmas program.

We have been well pleased with the addition to our branch of the Vickerstaff sisters: Elizabeth, a high school student and good musician; and Bonnie, now Mrs. Charles Shippy, our choir leader, district chorister, and leader of the training committee for the children. Her methods are practical and seem to get right to the heart of things. We have quite a number of nonmember children whose parents do not associate with any church, and we hope to get the adults interested through work with the children. If we can only get this gospel before the honest in heart in this community, we shall feel that we are progressing.

We, though small in number, have some earnest workers for the Master. One sweet soul whose health is poor has never failed in her duty to God and fellow man. We feel that one day her children will arise and call her blessed. Modest and unassuming, she would not want her name mentioned, but we are sure it is in the Lamb's book of life. Let every Saint endeavor to have kindness. Let no one feel our neglect, especially in our home and in our church.

"We have careful words for the stranger
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But too oft for our own, the careless tone,
Though we love our own the best."

From the Hoosier Capital

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.—Indianapolis Branch has had much for which to be thankful, and the Saints are glad to be able to report a continuation of united effort for good.

Due to the alertness for the comfort and welfare of the Saints manifested by our efficient deacon, William H. Davis, our church has been adequately seated with opera chairs, which also add to the appearance of the building.

October 31 we were favored with a visit from President F. M. Smith, which was very much appreciated. His splendid counsel and advice to the Saints was a source of inspiration to move forward toward the redemption of Zion. Come again, President Smith, whenever it is convenient; you will always find the Hoosier glad hand extended.

Interest in the study of the Book of Mormon is increasing in the Department of Recreation and Expression, which holds its study period Sunday evening at 6.15.

The Sunday School Department fittingly observed Thanksgiving Day, the program being arranged and carried out under the direction of Sister Edith Davis-Hamar.

Pastor Robinson and wife have recently enjoyed a very pleasant visit from their daughter, Sister Gracia Robinson, of San Antonio, Texas. They also motored to Burlington, Iowa, and spent Thanksgiving with their son, Harry, and his family.

The dominant theme of our Sunday school work during the month of November was "Thanksgiving," and on Sunday, the 20th, the entire membership of the branch made a special thanksgiving offering to assist in carrying on our work.

Elder A. E. Nieman, of Columbus, Ohio, was among our recent visitors and assisted in the services. We are always pleased to welcome visitors.

Patriarch A. E. Stone, of Kirtland, Ohio, has been with us during the past month, laboring in his official capacity, ministering comfort and cheer to the Saints; and his sermons, filled with good, sound, logical advice and fatherly counsel, have been an inspiration to us, creating a desire to do more for the advancement of the gospel cause, and a keener sense of the necessity for personal preparation for acceptable work for the Master. He has gone home to spend the year end with Sister Stone, promising to return the first of the year. We trust he may be able to do so and continue his good work in our district.

Our Department of Women is still carrying on its good work, and we are continually hearing words of commendation for its untiring efforts.

The Sunday School Department is busily engaged in the preparation of its Christmas entertainment to be given Saturday evening, December 24. The usual Christmas tree, with all the trimmings, will have part in the program, and a visit is expected from Santa Claus.

Soon the year will close, and as we write "Finis" upon 1927, may we do so with a keen desire for service and a firm resolution to do even better in 1928, God being our helper.

Wheeling, West Virginia

Corner Forty-second and Jacob Street

December 4.—A word or two from our branch in this part of the vineyard may be of benefit to HERALD readers.

The work is moving forward under the supervision of Pastor O. J. Tary. Our prayer service Wednesday night was in charge of O. J. Tary and Samuel Martin. This was an especially good meeting, and God's Spirit was present.

Recently we have been favored with a visit from Brother John Martin from California, who was called home on account of the serious illness of his aged mother. We are glad to say that she is getting along nicely, and we hope soon to have her in our midst again.

Brother and Sister Serig visited with Wellsburg Saints last Sabbath.

Our Religio, under the direction of J. B. Winship, is moving along, although not so rapidly as we would like.

The Women's Department meets once a month to consider the different ways in which they may financially help the branch. We also have a scripture lesson. Sister Dena Winship is our leader.

Sister Shank is very poorly at this writing, having recently undergone an operation for goiter.

Our Sunday school is preparing a Christmas entertainment.

We are praying for the advancement of this wonderful cause.

November 30, Graceland Day we more than went over the top on our quota. At the eleven o'clock hour Brothers Howard Reynolds and Frank Fry occupied, stressing the need of education which may be acquired by study and by experience. Brother Frank, a student at Graceland, was home for the week-end and spoke very gratefully for the opportunity the college is offering to him with other young people to prepare for better service which comes from a rounded-out character. Elder Fred A. Fry spoke along the same line at the evening service, and we think at the close of the day many felt a deeper interest and a stronger desire to help Graceland in her labors of love and devotion to the church, by offering the means by which the young may become better fitted for the task that lies before us, solving the problems of the redeeming of Zion.

We have been favored with a number of speakers from other branches during the past month, among whom was Elder G. Scott Daniel, district president. He was with us on Thanksgiving morning for prayer service and remained until Sunday, giving us three practical and instructive sermons.

Again our hearts have been made sad by the passing of Brother Fred C. Oviatt on November 7 in an Omaha hospital, following an operation for hernia. A better neighbor would be hard to find, and a friend to the poor and needy could always be had in Brother Oviatt.

On November 22 Sister Carrie Pitts was called home after weeks of suffering from heart trouble. She was a noble woman and a dependable worker in the Department of Women. We miss these two good people and deeply sympathize with those bereaved.

We have another cradle roll member, a son, born to Brother and Sister Fred Smith.

Kewanee District Young People's Convention

The fourth young people's convention of the Kewanee and Eastern Iowa Districts was held at Rock Island, Illinois, during the Thanksgiving vacation, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, following the custom of the last three years. Our speakers were strangers to most of us, but when we parted we felt that wherever they may be our love and confidence follows them, for in Brother and Sister Blackmore we found wells of living water, and they leave a spirit of demonstrated consecration and active faith that shall ever glow in our memories. Brother Blackmore is pastor of the large branch at Cameron, Missouri, while Sister Blackmore has charge of all the junior activities, including junior church, of which she has made a specialty.

For some reason young people's convention always calls up a host of memories which center around Brother F. M. McDowell and Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley, for they gave us gracious and inspirational lectures during the first two years. Somehow we think of them as the Big Brother and Sister of our convention, and to them we shall always owe a debt of boundless gratitude. Now, building upon the foundation which they have laid, Brother and Sister Blackmore have added to the structure, supplying practical and tangible material with which we may construct a perfect life, and thereby contribute to the home, the community, the branch, and ultimately Zion.

The attendance was somewhat larger from the very first meeting than that we have had previously, and the crowd increased from one to the next, at last culminating on Sunday evening with the largest number that has ever been present at any district gathering held there. The class periods were exceptionally interesting and instructive, and every service was enjoyable. Meals were served in cafeteria style in the basement of the church at a reasonable price, and visitors were hospitably entertained in the homes of the Saints of both Rock Island and Moline. The weather was delightful for any gathering, and many drove long distances to attend.

Each morning at 8.30 a prayer and testimony service was held, being in charge of Brother Houghton, Brother Sackfield, and others. The themes were well chosen, and the sweet spirit of consecration prevailed. The attendance was not large until Sunday, but an enjoyable meeting does not depend upon numbers entirely.

At 11 o'clock Friday morning Sister Blackmore had charge of a class period, which brought out several noteworthy points on the purpose and theory of religion. What is religion? It is essentially a human thing. True religion is not a set of knowledges, but it is an attitude; a way of living; a way of doing things. Religion is defined as a particular way of looking at everything. To teach is to cause to know, to do, and to be. One is teaching every minute—when you are scolding a mischievous boy you are teaching him to dislike you and the lesson besides. Give him something helpful to do, and his attitude changes. In teaching, employ the hands and eyes as well as the ears, by working out stories in a sand table and having them provided with an abundance of handwork material which will emphasize the spoken story. Do not teach isolated stories—even Bible stories—but connect them with some phase of everyday life, as the idea of correct and happy companionships with the story of Mary and Martha. A world of opportunity lies in the field of story-telling.

Saturday morning Sister Blackmore continued her theme of religious education by a logical and reasonable development of some excellent methods of teaching. "As the twig is bent, so will the tree grow," and, Sister Etzenhouser insists, a hospital down in the valley can never take the place of a good fence round the edge of the cliff. For efficient work, our church should form three concentric circles around the child; namely, the home, religious education, and social service, each in turn broadening the scope of the child and still surrounding him with a protecting arm. A child is born in an adult world, but they are not miniature men, and for this reason many things have to be adapted to their needs.

Junior church is one of the most excellent devices for effective teaching. Including ages 5 to 14, the following program has been found successful:

1. Worship, including music, call to worship, a prayer, and a response. The softest and sweetest music is indispensable in creating a quiet and listening attitude, as well as impelling reverence. The call to worship may be a song, such as "I need thee every hour," or "The Lord is in his holy temple, and all the people keep silent before him." A simple but beautiful call to worship is a tiny poem which reads:

"We fold our hands that we may be
From all our work and play set free.
We close our eyes that we may see
Nothing to keep our minds from thee.
We close our ears that we may hear
Nothing but our King most dear.
We bow our heads that He may know
We pray because we love him so."

After the prayer a lingering response is sung: "Oh, come to my heart, Lord Jesus; there is room in my heart for thee."

2. The Bible reading should be short, but always one in which the children themselves take part, alternating between boys and girls, or leader and children. This increases interest and reverence for the reading of the Bible.

3. The story or lesson chosen should be full of meaning and colorful in description, so that it may be emphasized with illustration and handwork. Colored chalk is splendid in this connection.

4. The sermon by some member of the priesthood should always be short, suitable to the occasion and capacity of the children, and if possible illustrated.

5. The story may include nursery rhymes, human interest stories, picture stories, Bible stories, and a myriad of wholesome narratives that mold the ideals and interests of children.

6. Junior church is an ideal time and place for preparation of special day programs. Beginning two months before the holidays, and weaving the numbers into the regular work of the class, it becomes a joy instead of a burden, and the presentation is natural, and void of the confusion which usually marks a hurried program.

Sister Blackmore gave a practical demonstration of junior church on Sunday morning, during the regular Sunday school hour. Although under considerable disadvantages, the ideas and suggestions which were so concretely displayed before us caused a deep appreciation for the need of junior church in every branch. In a sense it has a work peculiarly its own, and one which can be beautifully accomplished with a little preparation, much forethought, and patience.

Brother Blackmore gave a splendid lecture on "Stewardship" Friday afternoon, enlarging upon the various phases of that timely subject. "Since stewardship includes the complete development of our resources, capabilities, and opportunities, let this be the criterion for judging the problems of young folks. Being stewards over our physical powers, can we intelligently and conscientiously weaken our bodies with cigarets and dancing? Can we be extravagant in our tastes and preserve our dignity as stewards over our temporal things? Mentally, are we justified in excessive joy-riding and reading any book of our choosing—or none at all? Spiritually, are we cultivating the attributes which build for eternity? Spirituality is not a matter of spending a lazy day on Sunday, however, for a lazy day is not a holy day; neither is an occasional gift of spectacular power (as speaking in tongues) an indication of high spirituality. Spiritual food comes as a constant stream of inspiration from heaven, and the quiet, unassuming goodness of a loving heart is the greatest evidence of divinity within. The man who spends all his time reading the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, while the weeds grow up and scatter seeds to the neighbors, is far from spiritual. The man who has no time for good music and the beautiful in art and literature is omitting a part of the development God intended for our social natures."

Brother Blackmore continued his subject of stewardship on Saturday in his characteristic manner, which sears its message deep into the souls of his listeners.

"We are all stewards, but are we faithful stewards over our physical, mental, spiritual powers, and over our opportunities for social, cultural, economic, and spiritual growth? A lot of men in this church are kicking because they find themselves back numbers, and it is a proven fact that anything we are not up on we are down on. A chronic kicker invariably kicks himself out.

"Did Jesus leave a number of writings? Did he leave the Bible? No; but men wrote of their religious experiences, and now we read them and worship the book. Jesus left men; he left an apostolic office, and men in that office spoke by inspiration to the people concerning the conditions in which they lived. Is not the spoken word from men today as valuable as from those long since dead?

"Zion will be realized only through a long process of experience. Any economic system can not be considered apart from the people who are to develop and maintain that system, and a mere change of location will not change the dispositions of our people. If God did create a Zion for us, we should not long be able to keep it perfect, for our natures must become rounded and molded into a condition that shall retain a high spiritual personality. Though we are now upon a pinnacle, tomorrow we may find ourselves again in the valley, and it is our goal to reach a condition of permanency in spiritual elevation.

"What we are now is a product of our biological heredity, the legacy of our parents, ancestors, race, and sex. Just as this is obviously true physically, it is equally true of our mental capacities. Our social heredity, government, school, etc., as well as our ever-changing environment, have a marked influence upon us in fixing our standards and ideals. In presenting the gospel to foreign peoples, it must be interpreted in terms of the nation to which it is given."

Sunday morning Brother Blackmore discussed in practical detail the "church that will save the world." That church must demonstrate the ideals of the Christian religion as well as prove that it is of divine origin. Perfect organization must express its superiority in terms of a more abundant life. Why are sixty-five per cent of our church members women, and business men are seemingly uninterested? If we make our religion so practical in everyday life, construct our business upon the ideals of Christ, and demonstrate to the world a Zion in fact, then shall we prove that it is more than a beautiful theory—it is divine.

"Sin" provided an engaging theme for an interesting discussion Saturday afternoon. Brother Blackmore drew forth a number of definitions, such as Transgression of Law; Non or wrong use of our attributes; Anything that hurts some one else; Act of wrongdoing; Anticipated transgression of moral law. One after another the weak points in each definition were discovered, for, after all, it is quite evident that each transgression of physical, mental, or moral law brings its punishment, yet in many instances the offense was entirely void of wrong intent. In fact, when we sum down a list of sins, we find that what may be sin for us is the best possible course for some one else. In that case it is quite dangerous to judge for another the sin he seems to be committing; nor should our ideas be set and fixed. The glory of God is intelligence; there is a soul in man, and the Spirit of God giveth him understanding; therefore, when I do something against my own intelligence, then I am denying God's intelligence to me, and I am sinning against his Holy Ghost. When I sit down twelve hours on Sunday, I lose those hours of opportunity to store up treasures in heaven, and I shall forfeit the reward and suffer remorse through the eons of eternity. Hence, to me, every sin is an unpardonable sin. I may receive forgiveness, but forgiveness is a subjective thing—an attitude of forbearance and love, while pardon means a complete freedom from punishment. The prodigal son received forgiveness, but no pardon was tendered him. He must reap the fruit of his sowing, and there was no reward for wasted years of opportunity. For this reason the passive sin is far more treacherous and deadly than the active sin; for the one who commits an open transgression is conscious of deserving punishment, while he who simply sleeps upon his rights, and is lulled into lukewarm indifference, is a prey to the archenemy of our souls.

Saturday evening an unusually varied and original program was enjoyed, featuring several short comedies, songs, jokes, and embarrassing situations were provided for the credulous audience. The Lighthouse Play, and the Line of Suckers proved to be especially entertaining, while Brother Blackmore introduced some tragic songs about being "Preached to death," and the "Whippoorwill with the whooping cough." Sister Blackmore told us the long-drawn-out story of the "Three wells," which, because of its length, was not quite so highly appreciated as "That something" which we all enjoy so much on Sunday morning. Sister Blackmore has an admirable talent in story-telling which is always welcomed.

As a climax to a very delightful convention, nothing could have been more impressive and thoroughly admirable than the dramatic presentation of Elbert A. Smith's pageant play, "Remember Cumorah." With elaborate costuming and suitable settings for every scene, it was truly a creation of art and beauty that depicted the remarkable story with realistic vividness. Leslie Davis took the part of Joseph Smith, and T. R. Willets the part of the minister. Lee White impersonated Mononi, and Sister White represented the church. Elizabeth Dewrose took the combined parts of the three Nephites, and Gerald Davis, from a parchment scroll, read the history of the great events so beautifully portrayed, while the Kewanee quartet repeated the theme in words of song. From every nation came a representative, attired in native fashion and bearing the national flag, ready and eager to respond to the call of the church. Overhead upon a screen, the airplane and radio stood as eager servants for the cause, and all the forces seemed combined in consecrated willingness to serve.

With the memory of all this still fresh and vivid in our minds, we must go Zionward. We can not fail when all is waiting for our hands to complete and glorify the work so wonderfully and miraculously begun a century ago. While Zion the Beautiful beckons us, no trivial ambition can frustrate His mighty plan, for every soul must feel that burning reconsecration.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Sunday, December 4, we closed a series of meetings here which had continued for two weeks. Evangelist Ammon White was the speaker. During the week preceding the services, the pastor advertised the services in the local paper, paying for some space and using some free space, also posting notices in the store; a number of written invitations were sent out, and the Saints invited their friends. As a result a good crowd was had at the first meeting, and attendance increased. The Saints gave fine support, and we had a number of nonmembers with us. A song service preceded the preaching, also Brother White read a chapter out of the Book of Mormon. The sermons were of a fine order, the speaker enjoying good liberty, and in his plain way presenting many truths. His explanations were easily understood, and he used a chart to make some things plainer.

One evening a troupe of Boy Scouts from one of the local churches was in attendance, also a quartet, two men and two women, from one of the downtown churches came out and sang for us. Their help was appreciated.

The meetings commenced Sunday, November 20, and three Sunday evening collections were taken to defray expenses. Members and nonmembers responded to this, all being blessed as a result of these services.

We expect very soon to baptize two persons who have attended church for some time. This series seems to have enabled them to make up their minds to take the step which will bring them into the church.

The local papers gave us some space every night, which served as good advertising. This will help us some, but would be of greater help were our church in another part of the city. We have the best thing in the world, but not the best place in which to give it to the world.

The Department of Women is busy. The members had a cooperative luncheon at the home of Sister R. E. Lewis, Thursday, December 1.

We have had some sickness in the branch. Sister C. Lewis, Sister A. Scott, and others have been ill, but are better at this time.

An Appreciation of Church Opportunity

This church plays a unique part in the life of this community. In a day when ministers are everywhere deploring the lack of church attendance, we fill our church with a record attendance. Impossible—not at all. We did it last Sunday night.

In an age when great men are said to be all mercenary, we have the opportunity of hearing, free of charge, a truly great man tell in powerful and compelling language, a philosophy of life that would make the most cynical at least agree to its logic.

At a time when the price of the most ordinary entertainment is at least a dollar, we can come here and be entertained by real artists, for nothing. We hear, Sunday after Sunday, the voice of a singer who would be paid a substantial salary to sing in any other church, who gives her service willingly and gladly, because she has an affection for this place. All she asks is the loving appreciation of her art. We hear an orchestra that, under other circumstances, could play with credit in any hotel or dance hall in this country. They could play in any theater and win applause—and for this service, they would be paid substantial salaries. But they give us this music, Sunday after Sunday, and on all special occasions give it—and we pay nothing to reimburse them for their time and talent, used for our pleasure.

We hear a choir every Sunday, led by a leader who would be a find for any other church. To get a director who has spent years learning music from the standpoint of appreciation and theory, devoted to the church and to the choir, willing to give service just for the joy of serving is indeed a rarity. I challenge anyone to find as well qualified a leader, who serves with the same devotion and the same intangible and scanty returns, in comparative obscurity, and who does it so cheerfully and so well. We pay nothing—not one cent—to show our appreciation.

And we come here and sit in a comfortable church with stained glass windows, wonderful acoustic properties, wonderful lighting, its air of spaciousness. Can you picture in your minds the ordinary church of the ordinary branch in other districts in the church? You can count almost on one hand the churches that this organization has that are really worthy of note. It is not unusual for our people to be meeting in an old store building, or a schoolhouse. And when many branches have a church building it is of the plainest structure, put up with the primary idea of keeping expenses down. And consider what we have.

How many of you spend $5 a year for the upkeep of this church? When the collection plate is passed you, how many of you give as generously as you would give if you knew your contributions were to be advertised from the pulpit?

We go to a theater and pay $3 for an orchestra seat. The upper balcony sells for $1. And yet we come to church, refuse to sit on the front seats, and think we are virtuous if we put a quarter in the collection plate.

There is an amusing story that is illustrative of this point: A ten-dollar bill was bragging to its brother, the dime, that it was some money. He said, "I can buy a pair of shoes, or a hat, and I can buy a half dozen pairs of silk socks," and so on, with a lot of variations. The poor little dime kept silent for a long time, but finally said, "Well, you have me beat on most things, but when I'm given in a church collection, I'm some money." Now people, we are going to make a strenuous effort during 1928 to pay off this debt.—Contributed to the editorial column of the "Walnut Park Review"; written by Agnes Adams.

Graceland Chats

Fifth Annual Football Banquet

Graceland College officially closed her 1927 football season Friday, December 2, when a three-course banquet was served in honor of her football men.

The basement of the Coliseum was given a beautiful Hawaiian setting. The program opened with Hawaiian songs. Then "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played, which brought everyone back to America once more. A few Graceland scenes ended the program.

As is the custom, three footballs that have been used in practice are voted away by the squad to three men of the team. The men receiving these trophies were, Captain Lloyd Stephens, John Topham, and Donald Jones. Leland Norris was elected by the letter men as captain for the coming year.

The toast carried out the theme of "Gridiron Memories," with Mr. Cheville as toastmaster. Craig Siegfried responded to "Huddling," and showed that huddling is the planning or the calling of the signal which directs the next play. President Briggs explained "Tackling," and stated that we must not stop tackling when the football game stops, but must tackle our obstacles all through life. Miss Lewers responded to the toast "Cheering." She brought out how cheering keeps the men fighting for the school that is behind them. Harry Slick responded to "Kicking Goal," and said that it was only possible after huddling, tackling, and cheering, or after planning, working, and boosting. Lloyd Stephens, the retiring captain, gave a short talk expressing his regret at having played his last game of football for Graceland. He also stated that football prepared a fellow to better meet and participate in the game of life.

The yell, "Go, Graceland," and the song, "Graceland for ever," gave a final impression to the football banquet, which will be an outstanding memory of our Graceland days.

Prayer Meeting

About seven o'clock Wednesday night, many Bide-a-Wee girls gathered in one of the rooms for a little preparatory prayer meeting. We sang several songs; then we were led in prayer by Marjorie Williams. Many beautiful prayers of thankfulness were offered. After the girls had poured out their hearts in prayer, we went over to the chapel to the large prayer meeting. Here the faculty and students had gathered, from their homes and dormitories, withstanding the storm which was raging outside. The chapel not being sufficiently heated, we decided to have our meeting in a classroom in Briggs Hall. It is simply wonderful to have so many young people together, who in the spirit of love and humility are preparing for greater service in our Father's kingdom. The meeting was opened with the hymn, "Lord, we come before thee now." Prayer was offered by our fellow student, Homer Doty. Roy Cheville made the opening remarks, telling us of a poor, rich boy's Christmas, giving us the theme, "Are we rich or are we poor in things of the Spirit?" Many beautiful thoughts were expressed. This being the last Graceland prayer meeting of the year, several resolutions were made. The meeting was such as to inspire every one of us and such as will not be forgotten. The closing prayer was given by Roy Cheville.

Christmas Giving

(Written for Graceland Glimpses, the Academy English journal.)

The world today is forgetting the grind of life and the greed for worldly goods, and has stopped to give to their loved ones and needy. Children give of their light-hearted childhood pranks. Some have not worldly goods to give, but they give kindness and love. Some give that they might receive. But that is not the spirit of Christmas. Christmas is giving the best that is within us. Many years ago a Father gave to the world a new life. This new life showed His children the true way of giving. Today is to celebrate the birth of that life given to us, that we may enjoy the true spirit of giving. Nature has always given us of her bounty and beauty. Have you really caught the "spirit of giving"? How do you give? Do you give with a spirit of love? Let us spread out our rays of service of giving as the sun. Let it spread over the universe so everybody can feel the true "spirit of giving" on this Christmas morn.

Dean Foster Lectures at Chapel

We students appreciated very much the message brought to us by Doctor John Foster, dean of men, of the Iowa State College at Ames.

Dean Foster congratulated us for our privileges to further our education. He told us that people gave money to institutions like this and many others so there would be a new group of doctors, engineers, and lawyers to fill vacant places. To carry civilization successfully on, we must have this new life added.

Doctor Foster told of his recent travels in Europe and pictured to us some of the devastated scenes that the great war had caused, where hatred had prevailed. He urged us to work to strive and to pray for world peace. His description of the rising conflict between the so-called Christian nations, which would result in another great conflict, was very vivid. The differences between the Greek and Turk are becoming very bitter. The Christian nations of the world, who should be striving for world peace, are bringing about the great conflict.

The scene that caused Dean Foster to feel saddest was when he visited the birthplace of the Prince of Peace and saw there a soldier in full armor guarding the property of several religious denominations.

We appreciate the heart to heart talk by Dean Foster. We feel that we are with him in striving, working, and praying for world peace. He spoke very highly of our standards here at Graceland and the success of many of our students who have gone on to Ames and other institutions to further their education. We are glad to become acquainted with Dean Foster and hope he will come again.

Intersociety Debates

On Saturday, December 3, the preliminary intersociety debates were held. The Victorians debated the Niketes, and the Alpha Pi Sigmas the Kappa Deltas. The question under discussion was, "Resolved, that a Federal department of education be established, with a secretary in the President's cabinet."

The debates were very interesting. The arguments were so well presented that it was difficult to tell which was the best, but the judges decided in favor of the Victorians and Alpha Pis.

The members of the teams were:

Affirmative

Victorians	Kappa Deltas
Floy Roberson	Pearl Leise
Ann Morgan	Verna Garver
Louise Hogan	Hazel Willard

Negative

Alpha Pis	Niketes
Lena Pratt	Margery Williams
Eula Morrison	Ethelyn Hield
Marjory Gamet	Pearl Boylon

The finals will be held Saturday, December 10, in the chapel. The affirmative will be upheld by the Victorians and the negative by the Alpha Pis.

Council Bluffs Branch

Central Church 307 West Pierce Street
Belmont Mission Church, 1618 Avenue B
Riverside Mission Church, 3100 Avenue C

The annual district conference of Southwestern Iowa District was held in Council Bluffs from December 2 to December 4, with only a fair attendance, but with excellent results and spirit on the part of all present. The election of district officials resulted in Brethren H. H. Hand, John A. Hanson, and Daniel E. Butler occupying in the presidency; Sister Elsie Butler as secretary; T. J. Smith, treasurer; J. F. Mintun, historian, with C. W. Forney as his assistant; J. R. Epperson, district superintendent of Sunday schools; Lee Landon, district superintendent of Recreation and Expression; Sister Bessie Mattison, superintendent of Women's Department; and the sustaining of the bishop of the district.

The district expressed a willingness to cooperate with other districts in a reunion in 1928, if other districts are of like mind. But there was an expressed desire to hold a reunion somewhere next year.

Hamburg and Boomer Branches were disorganized for lack of a sufficient membership and interest to continue the organization. Brother J. F. Garver was present and rendered much assistance by counsel and preaching the word. An excellent sacrament and social service was held Sunday afternoon, at which time the Spirit was, in a peaceable and powerful way, felt by all.

A letter containing Christmas greetings, signed by about eighty names, associated with a small financial remembrance, is being sent to the foreign missionaries, Paul M. Hanson, Peter T. Anderson, and E. Y. Hunker, who are still in foreign fields in mission work, and to Nels P. Hanson, who was formerly in Denmark, and has not arrived at home yet. Three of these formerly resided in or near to Council Bluffs, and one, E. Y. Hunker, was formerly a missionary in this district.

The services held by Brother Floyd M. McDowell, assisted by Brother John A. Gardner, from the 13th to the 20th of last month, resulted in creating a great demand on the part of some for more active service in the church work, and at the business meeting just held two were called to the office of priest, Lee Landon and Merl Spence. These brothers assisted in the efforts which resulted in these meetings being a success. Of these meetings others have written and the columns of the HERALD have given publication.

The daily newspaper of the city, The Council Bluffs Nonpareil was liberal with its space to us, and the conference adopted a resolution of appreciation, which was published by the paper, with a brief history of the conference.

At the annual business meeting of the branch held the 5th inst., George R. Beaty was again elected the president of the branch, with Nels Hanson and Fred Wilkinson, associates, P. H. Heuermann was again made pastor of the Riverside Group, and Clarence Bratches was chosen to have charge of the Belmont Group for the coming year. This is Brother Bratches' first responsibility of this nature.

The statistical report shows a net loss of twenty-six in the recorded membership of the branch, but we have more resident members than previously. The number transferred, which was one hundred and forty-nine, are those about whom for years the local officials have known nothing. The present recorded membership is nine hundred and forty-two, while one year ago there was nine hundred and sixty-eight. Of the present number now on the record one hundred and seventy-four are out of the city, and one hundred and fifty-one others are either out of the city or do not attend; so our contributing membership by attending the services once in a while, or those who are regular attendants and financial supporters, numbers about six hundred and seventeen. There are four hundred and eighty-one members in the three Sunday schools, and each school is growing. The Women's Department reports its members for the past year as having made 1,961 visits to the homes of Saints and others in need; distributed 1,153 pieces of literature; given 531 days' service to those who had need, and made 165 hospital visits. They have 138 on the cradle roll. There are seven chapters of Temple Builders, with eighty-four members, one Blue Bird Band, and three Oriole circles. They have contributed over four hundred dollars to the aid of the branch.

The budget for the next year is $4,215, which we hope will pay all past indebtedness and keep up the overhead expenses of the branch.

The junior church work is reported favorably, the church school is growing, and all reports are encouraging. We learn that the entire receipts collected for the expenses of the young people's campaign for the meetings held by President McDowell were $144.45, which will more than cover all the expenses. Of the amount of the receipts $59.45 was raised by the young people, and turned in to the financial clerk.

Evidence is in existence that we are living in perilous times. Last night some one broke into our mission church at 1618 and stole about a ton and a half of coal. Breaking in through a window, this was left open and the water meter froze, causing quite an expense. Last winter we met some loss by some one taking fuel from the same place.

Did you ever stop to consider what would happen in this world, if we would transform all the energy used in scolding and denunciation and attempting to fix the blame for evil, into a united effort to replace it with good? If every city and town and hamlet had all the playgrounds and recreation and civic centers needed for all its population, young and old? If we had all the libraries and schools we need? If we put more thought and humanity into living and less into the mere earning of a living?—Doctor Russell H. Conwell.

Independence

Stone Church

Patriarch Ammon White spoke at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning concerning the helps, gifts, and blessings which are instituted in and promised to the church. He divided the ordinances of the church into two classes: The absolute, or those obligatory for the fulfillment of the law, such as baptism and the laying on of hands for ordination to office; and the optional, or those which are privileges of the Saints and obedience to which will bring blessings to those of faith, including the blessing of children and the laying on of hands for the sick.

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace," was sung as the morning anthem by the Stone Church choir under the direction of Paul N. Craig. Lilly Belle Allen sang the soprano solo parts. Pastor C. Ed. Miller presided over the service.

The gifts and blessings in the church are conditional, continued Elder White; they are promised to those who follow in the way of Christ and believe; they are effectual only through faith. The Saints should not only call for the elders, but should pray, ask forgiveness of their sins, and have faith that God will provide as is best for his children.

Religio program Sunday evening was again presented by the small girls of the Stone Church congregation. Ruth Harder sang a pleasing song, being accompanied at the piano by her sister, Joy. There was a reading by Lucille Watkins, and a well-rendered piano solo by Joy Harder.

The usual large Sunday evening crowd filled the auditorium at an early hour and seated themselves preparatory to witnessing the previously announced pre-Christmas program. A number of beautifully tinted copies of famous paintings were shown upon the screen following the brief song service, led by Elder John F. Sheehy. Paintings of madonnas, by renowned masters, scenes of Bethlehem, the visitation of the angels to the shepherds, the three wise men, the Star of Bethlehem, the babe in the manger, were explained by Pastor C. Ed. Miller who read appropriate scriptures and poetry. Song slides of Christmas hymns aided the congregation in several songs.

Then the audience was reminded that Christmas is very near and that there are missionaries in the field who will not this year be permitted the joys of home and family. The Stone Church congregation has one missionary in foreign fields, a young man staunch in the faith, eager, zealous, and happy in the glorious work—Elder E. Y. Hunker; and in order that the Stone Church might send Christmas greetings and a message of loving remembrance and cheer, thirteen young men were asked to take up a collection. About thirty-five dollars was contributed to send to "our missionary."

"The spirit of Christmas," a play in which the spirit of glad-giving enters a missionary's home, brightening up dull prospects for a happy Christmas, bringing home loved ones, cheer, and happiness, was a feature of the program. The characters were Mrs. Charles Koehler, William Gould, Ruth Holsworth, Lois Jeane Williams, Aileen Bullard, Herbert Barto, Albert Brackenbury, and Elbert Dempsey, Mrs. Dewey McNamara directed the production. The presentation was enhanced by music from a hidden quartet. This play was rewritten by Sister Mollie Davis from a play given in the East several years ago.

"The Messiah"

The tenth annual Christmas rendition of "The Messiah" will be given at the Stone Church next Sunday at 8.15 p. m., under the direction of Paul N. Craig. Mrs. George R. Cowden, soprano; Mrs. Raymond M. Havens, contralto; Edward Brackenbury, tenor; and Albert Brackenbury, bass, will be the soloists. Accompaniment will be played by Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist.

Admittance will be by complimentary ticket. These tickets are available to adults upon request at the Textile Company, 228 West Maple Avenue, or by addressing The Secretary,

"Messiah" Choir, Box 141, Independence, Missouri, and inclosing stamped, addressed envelope for return of ticket.

Laurel Club Activities for 1927

This year has been a busy twelve months for the Laurel Club. For twenty years the club has tried to work in harmony with the church officials. When they undertook the work of furnishing the kitchen and dining room of the Auditorium, they realized they had a goal toward which to work. At first the members of the organization thought and figured in terms of hundreds of dollars, but when they think of the dimensions of the kitchen, thirty-four by seventy-two feet, and the furnishings—ranges, cupboards, ice chests, working tables, storage, closets, silverware, linen, and the thousand and one things it takes to make a complete working kitchen, they find they must think in terms of thousands of dollars. But the Laurels are not thinking of faltering or turning back; they are looking forward to 1930 and further.

The activities of this body of energetic women for this year have been many. First came the ministerial banquet, served in the dining hall; the deacons' plate lunch at the Institute; young people's reception in the dining hall; fathers' and sons' banquet in the dining hall. They were requested by Hienz to superintend a demonstration banquet for the priesthood. This also took place at the dining hall. Dinners and lunches were served at the Auditorium during the week of the Harvest Home Festival. A bazaar was conducted at the Auditorium during General Conference, a fish pond on the Campus July 5, the proceeds to be used to help in the upkeep of the Campus. Bake sales and rummage sales were gratifying in results, and as the Laurels believe, helped people to help themselves. Dinner was served three days for Gleaners' Convention. Nor must the fall bazaars be forgotten. While the workers did not realize as much from the bazaars as they have some other years, they realize that they are not the only ones now holding bazaars at the dining hall. They do not wish to appear selfish and are grateful for the assistance and patronage they have received.

Two pageants, "The Restoration" and "Remember Cumorah," were financed by the Laurel Club, the White Masque Dramatic Club working with them in the presentation. Both pageants were very successful and were witnessed by large audiences. The sisters have not forgotten the generous offering contributed by the Saints following President Frederick M. Smith's appeal for their support at the time "The Restoration" was given in General Conference.

The club took a prominent part in the Independence Centennial Celebration, held in October, and its members feel that there is a bond of friendship between the club and the townspeople.

During the fall they entertained a distant member, Mrs. Mae Mather, from Los Angeles. She is in sympathy with the club in all its undertakings.

Recent Laurel Club election resulted in the reelection of the entire staff of old officers for another year. The sisters feel that they are ready to start in next year with a renewed determination.

There are many ready to assist the Laurels, who themselves have a reputation for being willing assistants. Everyone is interested in the completion of the Auditorium. Laurel Club accomplishments told in financial terms will reach about two thousand dollars, and they have achieved other ends this year, here a little and there a little, which can not be measured in dollars and cents.

Second Church

A number of our members are taking part in the special classes in religious education, held at the Library Building and at the Institute.

Afternoon prayer meeting on Sunday has been discontinued in order that all the priesthood may attend classes which are being conducted at the Institute Building. With this exception all regular meetings of Second Branch are being held with benefit accruing for those who participate.

Sacramental service Sunday, the 4th, was of very high order.

Sermons in the recent past have been delivered by Bishop B. J. Scott, Apostle J. A. Gillen, and Elders A. K. Dillee, J. M. Terry, A. W. Whiting, and Alonzo Whiting.

At the Sunday school business meeting last week, the following officers were elected: superintendent, Floyd Mortimore; assistant superintendent, Will Inman; primary department superintendent, Hulda Hansen; junior department, Vera Redfield; intermediate department, Alice Chappelow; secretary, Blanch Edmunds; treasurer, Theodore Scott; chorister, James Willoughby; pianist, Sister Floyd Mortimore.

Liberty Street

Sunday morning at eleven o'clock Liberty Street Saints met together in prayer service, Elder W. D. Tordoff being in charge of the meeting. A very spiritual hour was enjoyed.

"Stolen apples," a short play, was presented by the boys' class at the Religio hour Sunday evening.

Brother Tordoff concluded his series of meetings Sunday evening, his subject being "The ideals of the church," his text John 15: "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me." The necessity for our being loyal to Christ, to home, to church, and to our fellow men was stressed.

Miss Evelyn Shields was baptized at 2.30 Sunday afternoon by Pastor Leonard White at the Stone Church, and confirmed by Elders White and Tordoff.

Enoch Hill

Meeting for the election of Sunday school officers for 1928 convened at Enoch Hill church December 6, in charge of S. A. Thiel, superintendent of Sunday schools in Independence, and R. E. Whitsett, local superintendent. Election of officers resulted as follows: superintendent, R. E. Whitsett; assistant superintendent, D. B. Logston; secretary, Ruth Ballinger; treasurer, J. M. Quick; chorister, William Worth; pianist, May Chronister; superintendent of the primary department, Sister Charles Warren; assistant superintendent, Sister John Jones. The body decided, upon motion, to empower the superintendent and assistant superintendent of the primary department to select their own workers. Sister Clemens was chosen chairman of the Christmas program, with Sister Street and Sister Swalley as assistant program workers.

The beginners and primaries will give their Christmas program in the basement of the church during the Sunday school hour Sunday, the 18th. Sister Charles Warren, superintendent of the department, and Sister John Jones, assistant, are in charge of the exercises. Fathers, mothers, and friends of the little folks are invited to be present.

Our former pastor, Elder J. W. Brewer, preached his farewell sermon at the morning hour. For ten years Brother Brewer has been associated with the Saints of Enoch Hill and for several years has served as pastor. His labors are appreciated by the Saints, his friends and neighbors. He expressed gratitude for the cooperation which has been given him and confidence in the progress to be made by the branch. Not only did he speak words of admonition to the children and young people, but he cautioned the parents to do their duty, to teach their children the word of God—the truths of the gospel—that they shall not be held guilty of negligence in their God-given trust.

The evening's speaker came from Walnut Park District, Brother Chester Constance, who employed as his theme

"God is love." That we should show our love for God and man by bearing the fruits of love is the opinion of Brother Constance, who expressed his joy that the gospel is so plain that it may be understood by children. Before we can assist in the work of establishing Zion, we must forget self in service for others—we must truly love our fellow men and serve them even as Christ has served us.

An appropriate duet, "None of self and all of thee," was sung by Brothers Charles Warren and William Worth, jr., to conclude the service.

Spring Branch

The inclement weather of the week probably had to do with the lessening of attendance at the various services. The Religio Friday night came more nearly drawing its normal attendance than the other services, there being about sixty present. The program was furnished by local talent.

Sunday morning prayer service was in charge of Jesse Smith and W. A. McLain. The theme was "Baptism for the dead." The Holy Spirit was present in a large measure.

Elder J. M. Terry was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. He predicated his remarks upon the thirteenth verse of the third chapter of Saint John: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven."

H. J. Badder occupied in the evening, taking the subject, "Our responsibility," as a basis for discussion. In the first part of his effort he departed somewhat from the prescribed custom and propounded several questions to various ones in the audience, using their answers to bring out his points. Many expressions of appreciation for his message were heard after the service.

By vote of the evening audience, it was decided to omit evening service next Sunday in deference to the Messiah Chorus at the Stone Church.

Gudgell Park

Wednesday evening, November 30, Gudgell Park held its annual business meeting and elected or reelected officers to serve with the Saints of this district during the coming year. The corps of workers selected is as follows: Pastor, P. A. Sherman; assistant pastor, John Inman; custodian, Clarence Martin; supervisor of the Department of Women, Sister Lelia Inman; Sunday school officers: Superintendent, John Inman; assistant superintendent, John Myers; secretary, Roy Sherman; treasurer, Clarence Martin; pianist, Sister Roy Sherman; chorister, Sister Esther Kemp; publicity agent, Sister Sadie Burch; librarian, Leonard Sherman. Brother Clarence Martin informed us that we still owe fifty dollars on our building and forty-one dollars on our two lots. Upon checking up our financial status, we happily found that with the aid of the Sunday school and the Department of Women we can wipe out the debt and can begin the new year with a clean slate. We are most thankful. Our Sunday school collections have been above the average.

On August 11, 1925, the women of Group 41 (Gudgell Park) organized into a working body, organization taking place at the home of Sister John Wolfe. Our object was to build up the community, to help the church in every way we could, and to be more sociable among ourselves. We have succeeded inasmuch that every woman of the group, member and nonmember, is an active member of the Department of Women. All have loyally supported the work. We have earned money by quilting and knotting comforts. Sometimes we go to the home of a sister who needs help with her sewing. These are pleasurable occasions, for we take cover dish luncheons and spend the day. Then the sister who has been helped gives us a dollar; besides we have our free will offering. Thus we increase the sum in our treasury. The department also has had several socials, all pleasant memories, and each has added to our financial accumulation. Once a chicken dinner was served, and as a result of the effort twenty-eight dollars went toward the lumber bill and the first payment on our lots. The sisters pledged to pay for the lots, and they have not missed a payment.

Sister Roy Sherman suggested the penny-a-day system as a solution for our financial problem. Some of the members did not think much of this plan, but when Sister Nina Tucker, one of the captains, sent in twenty-one dollars and ninety cents, and Sisters John Inman and John Myers also were busy, the increasing amount of pennies looks encouraging. This seems to be a profitable plan. A bazaar and bake sale netted about thirty-three dollars.

We have visions of a beautiful big church standing in the future on the front of our lots. Our little church home is almost too small for our needs, and the congregation is growing. We thank the bishops for their advice. By God's grace and the hearty cooperation of each individual, in less than two and a half years we have a church home, and it is paid for.

Kansas City Stake

Argentine

The evening speaker for Sunday, the 4th, was Elder W. S. Brown; theme, "Christ the giver." Today, Elder Alma R. White discoursed on the peaceful mission of Christ at 11 o'clock, and at 7.45 Elder R. S. Salyards, of Independence, Missouri, preached instructively a sermon on the prophecies concerning the coming of Jesus the Christ, reading Isaiah 53d chapter as a lesson, and citing the various prophets who predicted his coming to earth and his mission to all the world.

Stake Missionary W. D. Tordoff will commence a series of special meetings on Monday night, the 12th, and continue for the remainder of the week, or longer.

Grandview

The congregation was the recipient of a dissertation by Priest E. P. Sanders November 27. Reading from the seventeenth section of Doctrine and Covenants, he explained a priest's duty. He especially stressed the importance of early home training. Dividing the church membership into the four following classes, he made some very fine points: 1; those who do things because they love the work. 2; those who do things because of duty. 3; those who do things because they are urged. 4; those who do nothing; each class requiring different labor by the priests when they visit.

Bishop F. B. Blair met with Grandview Saints Wednesday, November 30, and conducted a round table discussion on financial problems of the church. Elder Cyril E. Wight addressed them on December 4 on "false impressions."

The Gleaners Class served a rabbit supper November 29 in the church basement. The proceeds were used to complete payment on the new outdoor electrical sign.

The Women's Department held their annual bazaar and chicken dinner December 2 in a vacant business building, rent free. They cleared about $275 for the church debt.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

December 5.—Winter has arrived to stay, and prospects for church services are fading. The last two services in November were held at Almora and at Deer Creek, and both were enjoyable.

The correspondent wishes to acknowledge an error in the previous month's items. The statement was made that Brother Frank Tucker and family had paid one hundred dollars tithing during the year, according to the bishop's agent's report. It was Brother and Sister Abner Tucker who made the payment.

One would naturally expect November, the month of Thanksgiving, to be a good month for tithing receipts, but it was one of the poorest. Most of the members of the branch are farmers, and the season has been rather unfavorable for agriculture.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

This beautiful fall weather finds the Saints eagerly striving to carry on the Lord's work.

November 13, Elder J. M. Henson was the speaker at eleven o'clock, using for his theme Ecclesiastes 3:14.

A Thanksgiving program was rendered November 18, the Oriole Girls and Blue Birds each giving a play. Stringed music was contributed by L. C. Moore, Frank Hargis, Sister Emma Good, and Verl Moore. The program was in charge of Sisters R. L. Fulk and Grace Burkett.

November 20 Arthur Henson was the speaker of the morning, his topic being the Building of Zion. Elder O. C. Henson spoke that evening.

Elder L. C. Moore was the Sunday morning speaker, the 27th. The majority of the Saints in the afternoon attended the funeral of Sister Bessie Wesner, at Centralia, Illinois. Sister Wesner was well known to the Saints of Southeastern Illinois District. She was loved by all, being a true Latter Day Saint. Her home when she died was in Saint Louis, but formerly she lived at Centralia. Elder John W. Rushton preached the sermon.

In the evening Elder R. L. Fulk, missionary was with us and delivered an inspiring and educational discourse.

Every Monday evening still finds us in our class study. Much interest is being manifested. We are studying, "Problems of Industrial Zion."

We are looking forward to a protracted meeting in January by Brothers R. L. Fulk and J. R. Lentell.

Elder V. D. Ruch in Des Moines District

Elder V. D. Ruch was secured by District President H. Castings to preach the home-coming sermons in six of the branches in the district. Owing to the fact that he could stay only until Christmas, some were disappointed.

Runnells was selected for the first of the series, beginning Sunday night, November 6. Attendance was fair during the week, reaching the climax on the 13th, when many of the members who are now living elsewhere returned to worship at the shrine where they first heard the gospel and where they faithfully served during long years, made pleasant by happy association in the Master's cause.

J. E. Laughlin and wife, who now live at Oskaloosa, and Brother and Sister Young were in attendance, together with Brother Castings and family, of Des Moines. The former and latter families have had an important part in the development of the work at Runnells. They were guests of honor and had charge of the Sunday services.

Brother Ruch's sermons were appropriate and helpful discourses, through which much counsel and instruction were given. His manner of delivery is pleasant, positive, and simple. Children were interested in his sermons as well as adults. On Wednesday his subject was "Norway, its customs and peoples." His word pictures of this land of the "midnight sun" and hospitable Saints made us want to know more about our brothers and sisters in that far-off land. His experiences there seemed wonderful to us.

The subject for the eleven o'clock service on Sunday was "Unanswered prayers." This sermon revealed why our prayers are often unanswered, the cause being the trial of our faith, or our not having been sufficiently humble. The principle of forgiveness was emphasized, and the Saints were admonished to exercise this virtue so that our heavenly Father would forgive us our trespasses.

The Department of Women served a splendid dinner in the basement of the church to one hundred people and more.

At two o'clock meeting was called to order by J. E. Laughlin, and a spiritual prayer meeting was had. Brother Castings addressed the Saints for a short time. Elder Ruch offered the opening prayer. During the service Pastor C. B. Hartshorn and his associates, Doctor G. F. Hull and William Robinson, and wife came in; also N. V. Anderson and wife, from Des Moines. They made valuable contributions in testimony to the service, and we were cheered by their presence.

The evening service closed the series, Brother Ruch leaving immediately thereafter for his next series at Boone. He left behind a group of people who had learned to love him in his brief stay, and who are more firm in the cause of Zion as a result of his association.

After a week of splendid services at Boone, he started at Perry, then at Rhodes, where all reports are that the best meetings so far were enjoyed.

Leaving many with tear-dimmed eyes and being loath to go himself, he was taken by Brother C. M. Richeson to Newton, where he is now. He started there on Monday night, December 5, about twenty-five Saints and friends greeting him at the home of Sister Marie Ackelsen.

Brother C. E. McDonald had held meetings at the same place the week previous, to help the Saints organize for the home-coming series.

Brother Ruch has accomplished much good by his short visits, and many hope for his return at any time the Presidency and Twelve can spare him.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

November 28.—The Saints' church on Tuesday, November 22, was the scene of the marriage of Miss Ruth Peterson, daughter of Brother and Sister Nels J. Peterson, and Paul Schmidt, son of Brother and Sister A. Schmidt, of Floral. The ceremony took place at 4.30 o'clock, Elder C. E. Diggle officiating. Following the ceremony, Miss Lila Gendron sang "Because." In the evening a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and the wedding dinner was at six o'clock. The many beautiful gifts received by Brother and Sister Schmidt testified of the esteem in which they are held. The Saskatoon Star, which has always accorded our people every courtesy, published the announcement of the engagement and marriage the week preceding and printed a very good account of the ceremony, together with photographs of the bride and groom.

Brother and Sister Moran and sons, Clifford and Dan, recently left this branch for London, Ontario. The Saints went en masse to the station to say good-bye, presenting them a Community Silver berry spoon and pickle fork as an expression of brotherly and sisterly love. The intermediate class, to which both boys belonged, gave them each a well-bound volume as a remembrance.

Members of the local Department of Women have just completed a warm quilt which they intend to donate to a sister who has ten children and little time to sew. They are now busy preparing a parcel for the "Star Fund," which provides comfort and cheer for hundreds of destitute children in our province. At the same time the department is studying home management, Sister Laurel Whiting, R. N., as teacher.

The program, decoration, and buying committees for our annual concert and Christmas tree, were appointed yesterday.

As Christmas time draws near, we are planning what gifts will be most acceptable to our dear Master, for again it is his birthday and we must not forget him, whose loving sacrifice means so much to us. We lavish gifts upon each loved one in our own families upon the occasion of their birthdays. Why, then, do we forget our loving Savior who has done so much for us? Perhaps he feels as a little, faded, gentle mother we once knew, who used to bake a three-story cake for each child as well as for her husband, and always journey to town to purchase a little remembrance for each one on his birthday. But no one thought to do likewise for her. How her gentle heart must have ached when the day came and went unnoticed! When she grew old and was an invalid, she spoke of it in her weakness one day, and only then did her loved ones realize what might have been.

About twelve years ago the writer and her husband decided to ask their friends, who had been in the habit of remembering them, to give to the cause of the Master what they might have spent on gifts for them, setting the example by so doing. It has always brought them much happiness, and, besides, what seemed at first like a sacrifice, proved instead a blessing, for the hurry and worry of Christmas were exchanged for peace and joy. They no longer have to lose sleep planning for thirty-nine different, useless gifts, nor wear out the poor overtired clerks who look upon Christmas as a nightmare.

If we would please our Savior, let us commemorate his birthday by making the children, the needy, and the sorrowing happy. Or perhaps we may share the peace and plenty of our homes on that day of all days, with some one who otherwise would not have the joy of a home Christmas.

San Diego, California

There has been much stirring up in our San Diego Branch this year, and now there seems to be a tendency among our people to slow down and take stock, to prove and digest that which we have received.

Among the newly ordained mentioned in our last letter, a young priest seventeen years old, Leland Wetherbee, has preached his first sermon, which was earnestly delivered and well received. He seems equipped in every way to be one of our strong ones when time has done its work in him. His father has filled an office of the priesthood with credit for many years. May God help these new ones to remain staunch through the trials they must meet on the way up.

Our new deacon, Marce Harder, is a man who is qualifying in a surprising manner; in fact, is even now walking ahead of his office—his first sermon proved that. His mother and father are old-time Saints. It must be a source of joy to his parents to know that he holds the honor and respect of all the Saints here, who believe he will walk in the footsteps of his father, who is one of our ordained workers in the East. "To him that hath shall be given." Deacon Harder is busy multiplying his talents, and God is bound to honor his efforts.

We have had an unusual amount of sickness, attended by high fevers and bodily distress and many calls for the elders. The Lord answered the faith of our people and the earnest prayer of our elders, and at his command the angry waters subsided with all except one little six-year-old girl, Julia Bell Thompson. She is still suffering. I wish our readers would all unite in their evening prayer and ask God's special blessing on this little girl, who earnestly maintains that she is going to develop for foreign missionary service; and who can say that she will not?

Our Sunday school superintendent, Sister Melvin, and her aged mother, while on their way to Religio last month, suffered an accident in which their car turned over. Our president, Elder A. T. Gray, reached the hospital about as quick as did the ambulance, and although no one thought the aged mother would live, they both did live, and stand as a testimony to the latter-day work.

It is an unusual thing for a patriarch to visit our branch without notice, but it happened last Sunday when Brother McDowell spent the day here and gave us a wealth of information. He handles the lights and shadows in such a way that much can be conveyed to the people without tiring them. When he had completed his sermon, all felt refreshed.

Church Physician Teel had been announced to preach for us Sunday, November 27. At the last moment he found he had a patient in the hospital that he could not leave, so arranged with Brother McDowell to fill his place, which he did with credit. In the middle of the morning service, Doctor Teel reached us. In the afternoon he gave us an outline of the work of the Health Department, in which he intends to devote his valuable time as soon as he can arrange his private affairs. He also gave us much information on health. He is interesting because of the way he weaves in the gospel and Zion throughout his talk. He afterwards talked to the priesthood on the same subject. Doctor Teel will prove one of the great factors of Zion.

In our priesthood meetings we are busy studying the "Problems of Industrial Zion." I wonder if everybody knows of this wonderful little book! If every Saint would obtain a copy and read it carefully, we would hasten Zion by many years. The most interesting meetings of the week are the priesthood meetings, and this little book has a big part, with us. Our leader, Elder A. T. Gray, has become so filled with the Spirit of Zion that he is ready now to turn over his property to the cause of building a temporary settlement here if the Saints will do likewise. It's a great plan and strictly according to church laws, but to describe it would take up more space in this letter than can be allowed.

Brush Creek, Illinois

December 7.—Another month has rolled around, with our branch in the Zionie march.

The young people's prayer services are moving on to success, being held each Tuesday evening in charge of our young workers, Ancil Burroughs and Virgil Burgess.

The Department of Women holds an all-day meeting each Thursday. The place of meeting is in the dining hall. Thanksgiving Day the women set upon the tables a bounteous dinner and invited their husbands to dine with them. Several were unable to come on account of a funeral, but about fifteen partook of this splendid meal. In the afternoon the crowd numbered in the twenties.

Sunday school is progressing. Ancil Burroughs is superintendent.

We have set our Christmas offering goal at one hundred dollars, and are in hopes of soon reaching it. To date eighty-eight dollars and twenty-six cents has been paid into the treasury.

Several Saints report having completed, or nearly completed, reading the Book of Mormon.

The Temple Builders have taken up the study of mothercraft. They are now working on a Christmas star drill.

The Sunday school in cooperation with the other church divisions is planning a program for Christmas Eve.

Thursday night, December 1, the Department of Women gave a pie supper in the church. Proceeds are to be paid upon a new carpet. This event proved a success, clearance being about twenty-one dollars and fifty cents.

The Religio met Friday night, December 2, under the supervision of Assistant Superintendent Virgil Burgess. The lesson study of the Doctrine and Covenants class was splendid, the subject being the gathering to Zion. Many thoughts worth treasuring up were expressed at that session. We were pleased to have Mount Vernon represented in the class.

Again Brush Creek Saints were privileged to renew covenant with the heavenly Father in sacramental service, December 4. Everyone seemed aware of his responsibility in discharging his duty to the best of his ability.

Our church home is being remodeled on the interior. We expect to have it transformed into a more beautiful place of worship in the near future.

Most of the Saints here are planning to attend the conference at Centralia, Illinois, the 9th, 10th, and 11th. I am afraid some plans will be altered, for it is raining this morning, ruining the roads, and making it a task to reach the hard road, which is about eight miles away.

The Department of Women has ordered a book on psychology to study in class work.

FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

Officers' and Teachers' Meeting for December

By C. B. Woodstock

In the past year we have sought to direct the discussion of the officers' and teachers' meetings through study outlines appearing monthly in the SAINTS' HERALD. We have felt happy and blessed in the contributions and trust good has come to the cause of Sunday school effort which we love. With the birth of The Department's Journal in the past year and its rapid growth in popularity as well as in efficiency, it is expected that articles, outlines, and discussions appearing in the Journal will find extensive use in the constructive work of the officers' and teachers' meetings during the year before us. The Department's Journal is the official journal of the departments and should be a working guidebook, furnishing source material and inspiration for every field of religious education.

Accordingly, the following outline will conclude the present HERALD series. We are under promise, however, to keep HERALD readers informed of the progress of Sunday school and related departmental activity throughout the church by frequent contributions to HERALD pages.

Some Outstanding Principles of the Teaching Process

1. Teaching and learning are essentially two phases of a single process. On the part of the teacher, it is an effort to arouse, excite, and direct the self-activities of the pupil. On the part of the pupil, it is a definite response to the teacher's effort, in which he reproduces in his own mind the truth to be learned; he is stimulated to sense, think, discover, plan, originate in the field of his ever-broadening experience. For the purpose of directing our own endeavors as teachers, we may note the following characteristics of the teacher's effort.
2. The aim or purpose is to lead the pupil to have a new, a broader, deeper, or clearer experience through which he shall attain growth and power.
3. If we would teach a new truth, it must be brought to the pupil in such a way as to hold his interest until the truth can be recognized and rethought and relived by the growing mind.
4. If we would enlarge concepts, deepen sympathies, arouse and strengthen right desires, we must tactfully present the new or related material so that it has a strong claim upon the attention and interest of the pupil. Only through interested self-activity does permanent growth take place.
5. There can be effective teaching only when the class is attentive, and attention can be held only through interest. Children are always thinking in the line of their dominating interest.
6. The wide-awake teacher studies the interests of his group and is alert to seize every opportunity to adapt his subject matter and method to the existing interests, leading from trivial or common-place interests to higher and more worth-while ones.
7. Attention and interest may be gained in a variety of ways; an attractive picture, an interesting story, a teacher's winning personality, his customary resourcefulness, his sympathy with life interests of the class, novel methods and variety in class procedure.
8. All effort to command, to compel, or to buy attention are worse than fruitless. They dissipate energy, generate ill will, discount our message, and defeat our purpose.
9. The teacher must have a clear objective, a keen sense of what he wishes to accomplish in the class hour, and a deep appreciation of its functioning value in the life of his class membership. This he must get through a fresh study of his lesson material, from its application in his own life, and from his close acquaintance with the life interests, experiences, and needs of his class.

10. The need of the pupil must always be the law of the school. To drone over certain material in the quarterly lesson, to read to the class from a quarterly or from a supposedly "interesting" book, or to wander afield in any aimless discussion, certainly is not teaching. The use of every moment of class time must contribute definitely to the accomplishment of general or specific aims set out for the hour.
11. Out of all good teaching the pupil is led to or through a field of valuable experiences, from which he derives new knowledges, new appreciations, new loyalties, new ideals, gains powers of self-control and ability to control forces about him.
12. Most vital in the teaching process must be the ability to give our pupil the power of self-direction, self-control, independent thought, and discovery for themselves.
13. In Sunday school teaching we wish to build up a knowledge of certain facts or principles considered basic in our religious life. However, we must not be led into the mistaken belief that mere knowledge of moral or gospel principle is a guarantee of Christian living.
14. With the knowing element, there must come a rich feeling element, or experience, the satisfaction of which shall serve to perpetuate the experience in habits and attitudes.
15. The final purpose of our teaching effort must culminate in furnishing the pupil with a real motive for the choices we wish him to be able to make in the experiences of his everyday living.
16. Religion worth while must function in every phase of one's conscious life. It is ours to so understand, live, teach, and inspire, that our pupils gain in powers of right choice because they have learned to appreciate truth, beauty, power, and purity, and they have trained themselves to be loyal to the noble ideals of a Christian life.

The above should furnish an abundance of material for thought, discussion, and verification. Let the local conditions supply the field in which the principles shall be applied. Let each teacher check up his own work in the light of conclusions which are reached.

The Reward of the Conqueror

By Mary E. Gillin

The "crown of the victor" rests today
On the brow where pain has been;
And the "smile of peace" has come to stay
On the face where care we've seen.

He is done with earth—is ready to go—
Is ready to journey along;
On the tired face shines a heavenly glow,
Does he hear their welcoming song?

For many long years he gave his best,
Though humble, he filled his sphere;
And to every soul that has stood Life's test
Heaven's Light—heaven's Peace will appear.

Institute of Religious Education

Lamoni, Iowa

June 6-17, 1928

Leaders in departmental work and other students of religious education will be pleased to learn that active plans are in progress to provide for the sixth annual convention or Institute at Lamoni in the coming June. So successful have the previous gatherings been that the "June Institute" has come to be one of the fixed institutions of the church.

Each year the faculty is made up of the most able leaders in specific lines to be found in the church. The curriculum includes the subjects considered most vital to the developing program of the church. The attendance includes hundreds of young people and leaders of the young who meet for intensive training in subject matter and methods, for renewed inspiration, and for free and frank discussion of problems pertinent to the various fields of religious educational endeavor.

It is proposed that the 1928 Institute shall especially stress the subject matter, methods, and materials available, as means for the effective development of Christian character, the building of Zion in lives suited to the Master's use. The courses will be designed in related groups, so that students may choose most of their work in one or two special fields, while participating in the general inspirational and social features of the Institute.

Detailed plans will be announced as they mature.

Students of religious education will begin to plan now on attendance.

Our Departed Ones

COBLENTZ.—Emma Jones was born October 7, 1855, and departed this life November 20, 1927. July 28, 1870, she married Simon Inman, and to them were born five sons, three of whom are living; two, with their father, passed away several years ago. In May, 1883, she married Allen Coblentz, who died fifteen years ago. To them four sons and three daughters were born, all of whom live to mourn the loss of a loving mother. In her forty years of residence in or near Boyne City, Michigan, she endeared herself to the hearts of many, and beautiful tributes have been paid our departed sister. During the rearing of her large family, she was never too busy to assist a sick or sorrowing friend or neighbor. On August 21, 1927, she united with the church, which she had attended for many years, and she was a devoted member up to the hour of her death. Leaves to mourn one brother, ten children, thirty-eight grandchildren, three great-grandchildren. Funeral was held in the Saints' church at Boyne City, conducted by Elder W. E. Alldread. Interment in Maple Lawn Cemetery.

WESNER.—Clara Bessie Richards Wesner was born June 25, 1888. She married Everett M. Wesner March 24, 1907. United with the church October 2, 1910. She lived a faithful life, was always hospitable and kindly, doing her duty with generous and cheerful disposition. Many esteemed her and hold her memory in affectionate reverence. She passed away November 23, 1927, at her home in Saint Louis, after a painful illness. There mourn for her demise, besides her husband and little daughter, her father, six brothers, William, Raymond, Oliver, Amos, George, and Johnny, one sister, Mary, and many other relatives and friends. John W. Rushton, of Saint Louis, conducted the funeral service, being assisted by Charles Wesner. Interment in Centralia, Illinois.

THOMASON.—Julia Thomason was born at Bergen, Norway, April 22, 1837, and with her parents came to La Salle County, Illinois, when she was a child. There she lived many years. February 10, 1857, she married Osmond Thomason, and six children were born to them, the youngest two having preceded their mother to the other side. She entered the church June 17, 1866. For more than the past nine years she has lived with her daughter, Ellen Bertha Hayer, wife of C. F. Hayer, of Lamoni, Iowa, where on May 20, 1927, she died after a long illness. Her companion preceded her in death nine years. Sister Thomason is survived by one brother, two sisters, her four children; Franklin O., of Independence, Missouri; Henry M., Missoula, Montana; William A., Eagle Grove, Iowa, and Ellen Hayer, of Lamoni; fourteen grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. Funeral sermon was by Gomer R. Wells.

BLACKMORE.—Martha Isabelle Blackmore was born April 13, 1869, at Merlin, Kent County, Ontario, and was united in marriage to George L. Blackmore March 25, 1895. To this union were born three children, Joseph Oscar, Beatrice May, and Emily Anne. Sister Blackmore united with the church in June, 1895. Died Saturday, November 26, 1927, at Kansas City, Missouri. Funeral November 30. Sermon by Joseph Luff. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

What Are They?

Little blue fox babies about three weeks old, from the Alaska strain that are raised by the Shiawasee fox farms. Where we purchased our blue foxes, the above is an average litter, so one can very easily see why dollars in foxes soon grow into more dollars.

We have purchased 10 pairs for our company, and in the next few months they will produce. Do you want to participate in an industry of this kind—one that the multiplication table of nature gives you the increase? Our Silver Foxes are coming along with their increase; and as we have always talked about the Silvers the most, we are giving the Blues the first mention this time.

With the ladies of our country wearing $500,000,000—one half billion—in furs annually and the United States only producing $70,000,000 in furs, we are doing all we can to get into the industry and get our share. Silver Black Fox pelts advanced 20% in the last few months, and Blue Fox pelts advanced 10%.

Why you should put money in FOXES

You should see the mail that comes to our desk from some of the largest fur companies on earth asking us, "How many pelts will you have this season?" telling us to ship what we have express collect, or they will send their representative to our ranch who will purchase them there. Why?? ? Because the demand is greater than the supply, and those who can afford fine furs are increasing faster than you can increase the furs; foxes produce once a year. A quotation from C. M. Lampson, of Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Company, London, England, largest furriers in the world, recently made this statement: "If every Silver Fox in captivity were killed at the time the fur is prime, any city the size of New York would absorb the entire output within six weeks."

Investigate. Then you will invest. Write us for information.

Happiness

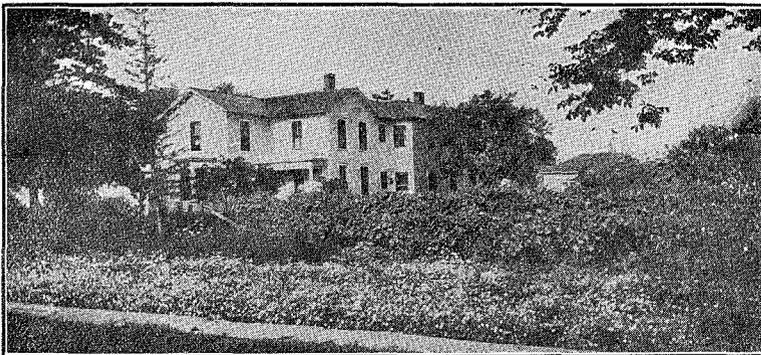

"Happiness," says Beecher, "is not the end of life; character is."

Good character, of course, he means. As good character is formed, and the closer we in character building approach the perfect one, will not happiness abound to an increasing degree? Happiness, while not the end of life, may well be considered as one of the rewards or fruits of virtue. And so, after all, happiness is worth a mighty effort to attain.

Another Dormitory Burns

For the second time within the year 1927, a dormitory used by Graceland College students has burned to the ground, and the work of the college is made just a little more difficult.

"The Gables," destroyed by fire December 17, the second dormitory of Graceland lost by fire within one year.

On January 2 the dormitory which had been used by the girls for a number of years, erected on the campus as a result of the splendid efforts of Graceland College Patronesses, was burned while the girls were at church, more than a mile distant. While no lives were lost or even endangered, the loss to the college and to the girls was considerable. There was no interruption of school work or the school life of any girl because of the fire, friends rising in Lamoni and elsewhere who made it possible to continue by providing both clothing and quarters.

In the forenoon of December 17, just as many students had left and were leaving for their homes, to spend the Christmas vacation, another building, known as "The Gables," was burned to the ground. The Gables was occupied by Graceland boy students as a dormitory. The fire opened in a shed just west of the main building, which acted as a torch and set the main building in flames. A strong west wind made the fire swift and certain. Origin of the fire is not known. About eleven o'clock in the morning the fire was discovered, but before the fire company could reach the scene the main building was ablaze and the firemen could not check the progress of the fire, the building being completely destroyed, though most of the goods of the students and most of the furniture was taken from the building and saved.

Dean Lonzo Jones and his family were in charge of the building and living there. Their goods were saved from damage.

The Gables was built by Elijah Banta sometime in the eighties of the nineteenth century and was occupied by Brother Banta and his family for many years. When the Department of Women succeeded in causing a home for children to be opened by the church, this large and well-built frame house and twenty acres of good land were purchased and made the Children's Home until the institution was closed by order of the General Conference of the church in 1926. During the fall, and just preceding the opening of Graceland College for the school year, it was transformed into a dormitory for boys, and twenty of these made it their home and are now under the necessity of finding new quarters. Only six of these were in Lamoni at the time of the fire. We feel sure the splendid Lamoni community and the college authorities will be able to arrange for them in such a manner as to guarantee no interruption of their school work. Those in Lamoni are now quartered in Herald Hall, another dormitory.

Lamoni loses one of her fine old places, the college loses accommodation for her students and buildings which likely should be valued at $12,000 to $15,000, insured for as high valuation as the insurance companies would approve, about $7,000.

"The Gables," formerly Children's Home, occupied as men's dormitory, Graceland College.

This loss of room for students, in addition to the loss of Patroness Hall in January, leaves a crying need. It may be possible to get along without supplying a new building for a while, but we do so at the expense of the school, I believe. R. J. L.

Pen-Point Pick-Ups

Some one has said, "Every rose has its thorn." This is true because it is a rose, with fragrance rich and beauty rare; therefore, pluck it not carelessly; pluck it ruthlessly, the thorn is quick to warn. Every achievement worth while has its height beyond the ordinary.

Every success, no matter what or where, is attained through sacrifice and consecration. These two factors at least are basic to every achievement.

On November 9 there appeared in the Outlook an article from the pen of Edna Saint Vincent Millay, under the caption of "Fear," which for its irony has not, in my opinion, been equaled in many years.

In the article the writer reviewed the action of the State of Massachusetts relative to the conviction and execution of two, whom she would not name, and who, according to the evidence, had been found guilty of a grave crime against the State.

In the discussion of the case, she adroitly withheld her conclusions as to the justice of the charge under which they were condemned to die. However, her implications were, or at least she presented her observations in such language that those who read would be justified in the inference that, through fear, justice failed to obtain.

I was, and am, interested in some of her observations relative to the element of fear. Aside from the subject under which she wrote, some of her criticisms were worth while.

There is no question in my mind but that the element of fear plays an important role in the great drama of life. Fear is a close relative to doubt, which, in turn, begets jealousy and hatred. This being true, it becomes at once an enemy to the higher aspirations of life physically, spiritually, and, in fact, in any realm where nobler and holier impulses might tend.

It is true that, through fear, justice is often defeated; well-organized plans miscarry; rulers are deposed, and lofty ambitions mortally wounded on a field once glorious with hope.

Fear, or the lack of courage, has destroyed homes and reduced to a hovel, scattering the inmates of what might have been a loving household, dwelling within a palace.

Fear disqualifies the individual from reaching heights where power magnificent prevails, and where, through splendid influences, others might be encouraged.

Fear and cowardice encourage deceit and lying, which, in many instances, are made to do service as substitutes for courage and straightforwardness.

Fear has no place in God's divine plan; courageous men were chosen in times past to carry out his great purposes among men, as reflected through Moses, Joshua, and Paul. The Master had but little use for fearful men. "I was afraid," said the one to whom the householder had given the one talent. Putting it in the vernacular, it would be: "I was told that you were indeed a hard taskmaster, requiring that I should go forward fearlessly and enlarge upon my stewardship. I might fail in the venture, hence lose that which was intrusted to me. So in order to be safe, I went and hid the thing in the earth; but here it is, just as it was received, for I was afraid."

Yes, fear is the enemy to progress; it is the weight which binds us to the sordid conditions of worldly offerings. It is the factor responsible for our tardiness in making the individual contribution to the forces designed in the sacred heritage of stewardship, which is to bring about Zion. It must be true that fear has no place in God's economy.

That which is representative of our heavenly Father is this: Love casteth out all fear; it requires faith and courage to demonstrate the love of God—a love expressed through service. We can not conceive of love undemonstrated. We serve courageously the thing or cause we love. How we admire Colonel Lindbergh for his fearlessness in going forth to battle against the physical elements! How we cheer the brave soldier as he goes forth to battle for his home and liberty! Yes, he is a hero!

Equally great are the brave men and women who go forth armored and equipped in battle for the cause of Christ and humanity; to battle against poverty and sin in all their forms. In the field of physical combat the brave soldiers may die; in the cause of Christ and humanity the real soldier must die to selfishness and lust, if we can rely upon Paul. "Yet to die is gain," says the Apostle of old; die to lawlessness and rise to gloriousness. One must be great to die for any cause.

The church today is calling for each and all to enlist as "soldiers of the Cross." God is calling for Zion.

Corrections in Holloway-Wheaton Debate

In HERALD of December 7, page 1439, from Evening and Morning Star, 1: 16, it reads, "We believe they are now complete, if not in every word, at least in principle." It should read "correct" instead of complete. Page 1440, Apostle John E. Page's ordination is stated as taking place in 1835. It should be 1838.

Civilized Nations in Bible Days

BY BISHOP A. B. PHILLIPS

It has been supposed, and many still hold the notion, that the intelligence evidenced in the writings of some of the biblical authors was comparable to an oasis in the desert, or to knowledge amid people of rude savagery. It is true that uncivilized and barbarous peoples were to be found in those days, but so may they be found today.

On the other hand, the fact that such a great statesman as Moses received his education from the Egyptians is significant of the civilization maintained there. From the Bible writers we may learn many things significant of the advancement of various other nations also, but our study may be greatly assisted by what modern research has revealed. Much may be gathered from a comparison of the works which they left behind them, and the pronounced traits and influence of each nation with respect to others may be quite clearly seen by this means.

It is from the studies mentioned that we learn of the astonishing advancement made by some of the ancient nations in the arts and sciences, clearly showing us that a high order of civilization extended far beyond the times of ancient history, and was in fact far advanced when written history begins. Small as the known world may have been to these ancients, as compared with ours, it was teeming with intelligently directed life expressed in numerous activities indicating culture and refinement, virile power, and great and far-planned purposes.

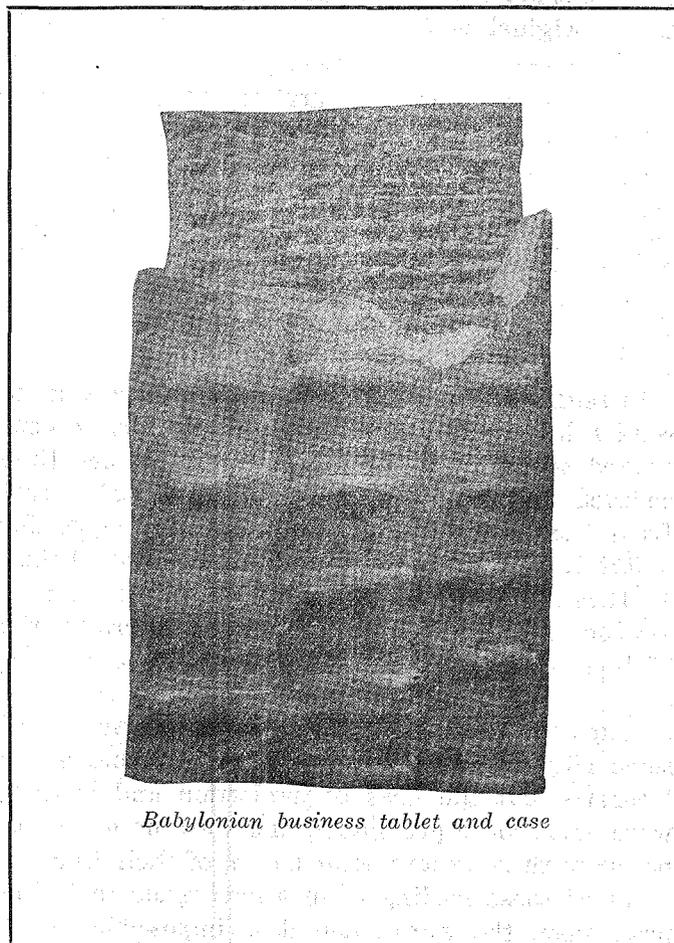

Of the nations which have left evidence of civilization in a marked degree in the more remote periods, the Egyptians, Babylonians, Assyrians, and Greeks are prominent. In a somewhat later period we find the remains of the Romans, Phœnicians, Cretans, Elamites, Dravidians, Persians, Syrians, and others, showing a high degree of development in many respects. The modern student of art and sociology finds much in the remains of these peoples which is of remarkable interest.

Ancient Art and Industry

The notable advancement reached by ancient nations of Bible lands is strongly indicated by the character of their diversified activities. They included the art of writing, engraving, carving, architecture, masonry, shipbuilding, agriculture, astronomy, baking, painting, medicine, music, and musical instruments. They were remarkably proficient in metal, glass, wood, stone, and leather work, and in brick and pottery making. It is not strange that nations having developed certain of these advantages should exert a wide influence upon neighboring nations. It thus happened that at times the Hebrews learned many things from the peoples with whom they had political, business, or other relations.

Certain principles of law and business traceable to ancient times include some of particular interest held by the Babylonians. Because of the magnificent libraries which they possessed, these principles could be taught and observed quite generally. Evidence of this has been found in various places. In a single room at Telloh, the ancient Lagash of Sumerian civilization, more than thirty thousand inscribed tablets were found some years ago by Sarzec. Many of the tablets contained business contracts, some of which were written about 2500 B. C., but make interesting reading today. Many libraries existed, including a voluminous religious literature that evidently was largely legendary.

Babylonian business tablet and case

The Babylonian code known as the Code of Hammurabi was found on a pillar by de Morgan in 1901 at Susa, the Shushan of the Bible, having been taken there by an ancient Elamite invader of Babylonia. Some of the laws of this code are remarkably like those of the Mosaic Code, the Ten Commandments. It has been suggested that the Babylonians may have received them in part from the Sumerians, who are thought to have been descendants of Shem, the son of Noah. In this case the laws given by God to Noah and his sons may have included some as given afterward through Moses.

We thus may note a close connection between certain features of ancient Babylonian law and more or less similar ones administered in the Hebrew nation from the time of Moses. If the Babylonians derived some of their laws from descendants of Shem, it is not hard to understand how these laws may have suffered change from time to time. As represented by Moses, therefore, they would not be identical with those of the Babylonians, even if we may conclude that both codes are traceable to God as the original source.

Of astronomy the Hebrews are believed to have known but little, though Abraham had a degree of familiarity with it, perhaps having learned to some extent from the Chaldeans who, in turn, appear to have come from Babylonia in the time of the Sumerian civilization. The Chaldeans are mentioned in various books of the Bible at different periods, including the time of Job (1:17). It seems that Job knew something about astronomical matters, as did David and a few other biblical writers.

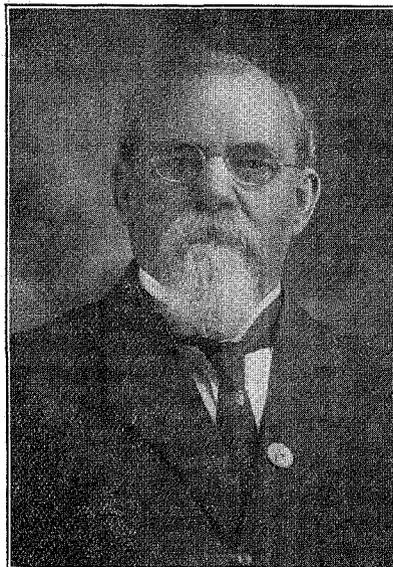

In regard to chemistry and medicine, many ideas were held by the ancients that would not be considered scientific in our time. It was at one time believed that ancient alchemists could make gold from the baser metals, and papyrus recipes for imitating gold have been found in a tomb at Thebes. To Hermes, the god of Egypt, was ascribed the invention of the arts and sciences. Hippocrates, the "father of medicine," wrote books on the subject, and among the Greeks the science was considered of importance. In the Bible we have evidence of some slight knowledge of the subject among the Hebrews, but the laws of sanitation and hygiene were much more prominent, and were no doubt superior to those of any other nation of their time.

All of these leading civilizations made their impress upon the world, and it is impossible to accurately estimate the benefits that have been in various ways passed down to our own age. Without the benefits of the past upon which to build, it seems certain that we should not have reached our present advancement, and could not therefore enjoy many things of common use which were thus made possible for us.

CHAPTER 16

Some Promises of the Lord Fulfilled

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS

In the spring of 1885 I attended the General Conference at Independence, Missouri, which was held in the brick church in the eastern part of the town, the evening preaching services being held in the courthouse on the square. I had not planned to attend this conference, for I felt I could not afford the expense. But one evening during our family prayer the Lord directed me to attend the conference and he would see to it that I received sufficient means to cover all expenses.

I had been invited by Sister Wilcox, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, to come there to preach, and as this was on the way to Independence, I decided to stop en route. While on my way to the train, Brother Ullom met me and handed me a ten-dollar bill. I preached in New Philadelphia for a week or more. At the close of the last service a man arose in the audience and asked if I had any objections to their taking up a collection for me. There being no objections, ten dollars was raised.

Continuing on my journey, I stopped at Sandwich, Illinois, where I was again presented with some money, a brother slipping a bill into my overcoat pocket just as I was about to board the train. My next stop was at Bevier, Missouri. At the close of the service on Sunday, a Sister Davis invited me to her home the following day for dinner, insisting that I be there, as she had something for me. Upon arrival at her home she went to a bureau drawer, and taking out a five-dollar bill, handed it to me and informed me that she had been commanded three weeks before, by the Lord, to put that amount away for me; that I was on my way to Independence and needed the money. In every place I stopped I was given money, until by the time I reached by destination I had sufficient funds to meet all expenses and also return to Brother Ullom his ten dollars, with something left.

Just before leaving this conference for home, the late Joseph Smith, under the influence of the Spirit, informed me that I had been solicited by certain ones to identify myself with a secret society and that upon my return home they would continue to urge me to join them, but that I was to have nothing to do with their organization. The president of the Wheeling Branch at that time was one of the leading officials in a popular secret society, and had been urging me to permit him to present my name for membership. Brother Joseph was not acquainted with this fact, as I had never spoken to anyone about the matter. I acted upon the advice given me, and upon my return home, when again approached on the subject, I declined and gave my reasons therefor: I belonged to one society, the true Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and that was sufficient for me. Jesus Christ did not become affiliated with any of these worldly things, and such societies existed in his day, too.

My mission again being in Ohio, the Virginias, and western Pennsylvania, I returned to New Philadelphia and delivered a series of sermons in a large school building, baptized quite a number of people, and organized a branch. I met with considerable opposition, but the Lord stood by me. We erected a church building, and the branch prospered; is still in existence, and in a very good condition.

In the fall of 1885 Apostle Josiah Ells came to Wheeling to accompany me to a four-day meeting at the Nauvoo Branch. A few nights previous I had dreamed that he came from Pittsburgh to my home, took sick, and died there. Upon his arrival he seemed in the best of health; some one had presented him with a new silk hat, and he made a fine appearance. He was always good-natured and one of the finest men in the world with whom to be associated. I told him of my dream and jokingly informed him that I did not want him to fulfill the same, to which he replied smilingly that he was ready to go any time.

The evening of his arrival I had a double wedding ceremony to perform; he offered the opening prayer, and I completed the service. The next day we took our departure for the special meetings. Sunday afternoon we had a wonderful social service, in which the Spirit of God was manifested through the gifts of the gospel. Brother Ells was spoken to in prophecy and told that the hour of his departure had come. The Lord complimented him on the service he had rendered and said that he was going to take him unto himself soon.

That night Brother Ells was taken to the home of Brother Wayte to spend the night, while I was sent to the home of another brother. Early Monday morning a messenger came for me, requesting that I come to Brother Ells at once, as he was very sick. I went and found him in a serious condition. He requested that I have the Saints gather in and conduct a prayer meeting in his behalf, at the close of which he informed me that he felt much better and that he wanted me to take him to my home, some twenty miles away, calling attention to my dream and saying that he wanted to die in my home. I brought a carriage, took him to the train, and we were soon at my home. He was so much improved after we arrived there that after supper he took a short walk up and down the street. But the next morning he was sick again and continued to grow gradually worse until he passed away at the end of six weeks.

During the early part of his sickness, Brother Ells told me that he had requested the Lord that he might be conscious at the time his spirit went out of his body, and that the Lord had told him his desire should be granted. He wanted me to watch and see if the promise were verified.

We had one of the best doctors in the city attending him, but he informed the doctor on his first visit that it was useless to continue to come, as he was sick unto death. Brother Ells, being a physician, was able to diagnose his own case. Just before leaving, the doctor informed me that he liked the old man and that he intended to continue coming every day, and that it would not cost anyone a penny. He kept his word. The doctor claimed to be an infidel, but Brother Ells would engage him in conversation and preached many sermons to him; told him all about the gospel, where the spirit went after death, the first resurrection, and the millennial reign.

On October 19 he was gradually growing weaker, and we were momentarily watching for his passing. I was sitting on the bed fanning him while his son held his wrist, watching his pulse. We supposed he was virtually gone. The doctor came to the bedside just at this time and remarked to me, "He is gone, isn't he?" to which Brother Ells answered in a weak but distinct voice, "Doctor, I am dying, but all is well." The doctor whirled right around and left the room, very much affected. Then Brother Ells spoke to his son and said, "My pulse has about stopped beating"; to which the son replied, "Yes, father." He then said, "Good-bye." I noticed that his eyes were now set, but he tried to turn his face toward me, and as he did so he raised his finger up before his face and pointed upward to show me that he was going, and immediately his spirit had taken its departure. We prepared him for burial, at which time the doctor remarked that he had seen a great many people die, but that Brother Ells was the first Christian he had seen pass away. He further said, "Wasn't it wonderful that he could say when he was dying, 'All is well'?" The doctor had evidently been much impressed by his talks with Brother Ells, for shortly thereafter he became a member of the Methodist Church.

Brother Ells had arranged all the details pertaining to his funeral, such as pallbearers, text, subject, and the preacher, the last being myself. A great and a good man had been taken to his eternal reward. Had he lived until the fourth day of the following March he would have been eighty years old.

Some little time before Brother Ells died, he related to me his experience with the church in Nauvoo, Illinois. He stated that he lived next door to Joseph Smith the Martyr, in Nauvoo; that the families were on intimate terms, he being a very good friend of Joseph, and his wife being a very good friend of Emma Smith, and that they were in and out of each other's homes practically every day. He said it would have been utterly impossible for Joseph Smith to have had more than one wife and he and his wife not be acquainted with the fact. He said that on the day Joseph was summoned to Carthage to answer to the charge of having destroyed the printing press of the Expositor, he had accompanied Joseph and Hyrum, John Taylor, and Wilford Woodruff on the journey. After traveling for some distance, they all stopped at a well to refresh themselves and horses with drinking water, after which they rested by the well, when Joseph spoke to Hyrum and said, "You go back to Nauvoo and look after the women and the children and the church, for I have to die. I have to lay my head down on the sod, as they will not be satisfied until they shed my blood; but you do not have to die." He continued to urge Hyrum to return to Nauvoo, but Hyrum said, "No; I shall not go back. Where you go I go; if they kill you they will have to kill me, too." Brother Ells continued no farther with them, but returned to Nauvoo with some of the horses, while the rest continued their journey to Carthage. It was not long until the news came that Joseph and Hyrum had been killed and that John Taylor had been shot.

Not long after the death of Brother Ells, my wife and baby departed for Pittsfield, Massachusetts, to live through the fall and winter with her parents. I accompanied her as far as Cleveland, Ohio, then went on to Kirtland, where I spent Thanksgiving Day with the family of E. L. Kelley. From here I went to Conneautville, Pennsylvania, where I preached a series of sermons, baptized several, and organized a branch: was kept very busy until the General Conference.

On March 29, 1886, our second boy, David Welcome, was born in Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

CHAPTER 17

Called to the Apostleship

General Conference convened at Lamoni, Iowa, April 6, 1886, at which time Jason W. Briggs and Zenos H. Gurley, with their families, requested that they be permitted to withdraw from the church, which request was granted. They and some of the other prominent men of the church could not agree on some matters in regard to the Zionic problem. The latter brother had been released from the Quorum of Twelve a short time before, but at a fall conference at Gallands Grove he had come before the conference and made a statement in which he promised to magnify his calling and was reinstated, at his request, to the apostleship. But it appeared that he could not adjust himself to the demands made upon him from the church, hence the withdrawal.

The General Conference at this time passed a resolution stipulating that no one could be expelled from the church until he had been tried by an elders' court, and such expulsion had been recommended by said court.

Just before the close of this conference, it was shown to me by the Spirit that I should be called to the office of apostle at an early date.

I was reappointed to the States of Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, and Western Pennsylvania, and devoted my entire time to missionary work in these States. I preached in new places and baptized a number, among whom were the father and mother of Richard Baldwin. I also continued to preside over the Pittsburgh and Kirtland Districts.

The early part of 1887 I continued my missionary work and organized a new branch at New Washington, Ohio, baptizing a number at this place. Richard S. Salyards entered the mission field with me at this time.

A month or two previous to the General Conference of 1887, held at Kirtland, Ohio, Josiah Ells appeared to me in a dream and signified to me that I would soon be called to take his place as an apostle in the Quorum of Twelve. A short time prior to this I had been given another dream, wherein I saw four men called to the apostleship. They stood two and two, and Brother Luff and I were together. When I awakened I could not recall who the other two were, but I was confident that when the call came there would be four called. Many people gathered to Kirtland for this conference, which was one of the most spiritual conferences we had ever held, peace and harmony prevailing throughout.

Early on the first Sabbath morning of the conference, I dreamed that Joseph Smith had a revelation during the night and that my name was mentioned. I awoke and related my dream to my wife, at which time the Spirit rested upon me. She asked me how I would feel if it proved true that he had a revelation, but my name was not mentioned. I informed her that I was quite certain my statement was true. About an hour later M. T. Short knocked at our door, and upon my answering his knock he asked me if anyone had informed me that Joseph had received a revelation during the night. Upon my replying in the negative, he informed me that such a revelation had been received and that four men had been called to the apostleship. I asked him if he knew who these four men were, but he did not, as Joseph would not reveal their names.

The revelation was given to the Quorum of Twelve for their approval, and they had it before them all day Monday, so it did not come before the conference for their action until the following day, Tuesday.

Monday evening I was walking down in front of the Temple when I noticed Brother Blair and Brother Luff on the other side in front of the hotel, engaged in conversation. Brother Luff, beckoning me to stop, came across the street and suggested that we go into the Temple, where he asked me if I were acquainted with the names of the four men who had been called to the Quorum of Twelve. I replied that I knew two of them. He finally wrote the names of three of them upon a piece of paper, J. W. Gillen, Heman C. Smith, and G. T. Griffiths. I then informed him that his name should come before mine, and he admitted that I was right, although very much surprised that I knew.

In my dream of the previous morning I had seen myself in the room with the Quorum of Twelve as they were considering the revelation; one of the older members, whom I knew well, stated that he thought it very strange indeed that the Lord would call such a young and inexperienced man as I into the quorum. A few days after the conference had adjourned, I spoke to one of the Twelve about the remark made concerning me by the brother. He immediately became very indignant and said he would like to know who in the quorum had been telling tales out of school. I thereupon informed him that such a thing had not happened, but that the Lord had revealed it to me. He admitted that what I had received was correct, that the brother had so spoken, but he thought it very strange that the Lord had made it known unto me.

I was ordained to the office of apostle under the hands of Joseph Smith and William H. Kelley, Pres-

HOME EDUCATION

Rights of the Very Small Child to Liberty

BY DONA CLARK HADEN

I am sure you like to think of the small child as an individual of the greatest importance, for haven't we thoroughly seen from the study of the Word that he is truly considered the greatest in all the kingdom?

The heart of a trained nursery mother is often pained when she sees the behavior of the parents toward the very little child—all day long he is haunted with such words as: "Keep still," "Don't," "Quit that," and a multitude of others that make the little child feel that there is nothing that he really can do. Can you imagine how his little heart must ache when all day long he continues to hear, "Don't do that," and "Don't do" the other, until there is really nothing left for the little fellow to do?

The educated parents of today are changing this attitude. The children of the next generation are not going to be so mistreated. Parentcraft is regarded as an essential subject, and the educational program is not considered well planned unless the individual has had a course in it. The small State of Iowa has seventy-five parentcraft classes, and they are being organized in many States throughout our Nation. Wouldn't it be nice if our public schools would change their curriculum just enough to add parentcraft?

The instincts of a little child are God-ordained, and have a purpose. These natural instincts say, "Wriggle and twist, kick and climb, creep and run, feel things, smell and taste everything on which you can get hold." So the body grows and the control of the muscles becomes perfect. The adults of the household say "Don't," "Quit that," "Keep still." Luckily, for the present health and future happiness and welfare of the child, the words do not make much impression. But the result of such behavior toward the little child leads first to irritability and nervousness, and later results in friction between parent and child. It makes the child weaken in will power to continually repress and scold and hinder ident Smith being the mouthpiece. I was appointed with Apostles W. H. Kelley and E. C. Briggs in associate charge of New England and the Middle States, as well as Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. I was continuously in charge of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia, and West Virginia, from 1888 until 1892.

him from doing the very thing the natural impulses within him are urging him to do.

Later on I should like to give a list of suitable play materials for the small child; also a list of games to suit the needs of the different stages of development.

By understanding the little child, we are able to look out on the world with the same viewpoint as he does, and by so doing make him happy and help him in the development of a worth-while character.

Not long ago a small child of two years was left in my charge for the afternoon, and it happened to be my writing day. After she had her nap and felt ready to play, I gave her a few of the playthings that she always chose when she came to the nursery, and for a few moments she seemed quite happy. Then I watched her (not allowing her to know I was looking her way). She searched until she finally found my pencil, which I always keep ready for use on the phone table, and she began writing on my Children magazine. My first impulse was to take it from her quickly, and had I not known from the study of child behavior and from the excellent teachings of such good psychologists as Doctor G. Stanley Hall, that noted genius of child study, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, and our latest-discovered child specialist, Angelo Patri, I might have resorted to the old-fashioned way of scolding her; but instantly the suggestion came, "She wants to imitate." I found a piece of paper, large and clean as the one I was using, but not so valuable, laid it on her nursery table, and she quickly carried her little chair to the table and seated herself correctly (with both little feet flat on the floor), and her little hands worked hard to hold the paper in place and write and write and write. I am sure she was happy, for when she had written an entire page she felt that she had finished a great task, and brought it to my desk for me to see. Her face was filled with happiness. She had been given her right to liberty. She would rather write, for that was a new experience, and she had wished to do so before, no doubt, but for fear of being scolded had been weak willed.

America would have many geniuses if it were not true that many of our little people have their hands whipped when they reach out for the material that would develop them into masterful artists.

I knew a little girl who showed a marked tendency toward making good in the field of drawing, but unfortunately she was deprived of mother and father early in her life and made her home with her grandparents, who were poor both in finances and in education. Her grandmother scolded her because she spent so much time drawing (for every moment she could get to herself she spent in drawing scenes), and finally refused to buy her any material, and of course this made the little girl sad. Her bedroom was near her grandmother's sitting room, and after the poor little girl had gone to bed with her heart aching over the thought that she could not have the material her heart craved most, she found relief in crying, sobbing softly. She did not know that her grandfather had known about her difficult problem, but she was cheered when she heard him say, "Ma, don't you think it would be better for us to buy Mabel some of them pencils? They don't cost much, and she gets a heap of joy a-markin' with them. I wish you'd let me git 'her some tomorrow." Grandfather won, and Mabel became the artist for her class. The year-book that she made for her graduating class was the most beautiful of any that had ever been published in her high school.

Give the little child the liberties that justly belong to him, for by so doing you are serving the heavenly Father. After all, we are only his helpers, and we merely assist him by allowing these precious little people to have the material that will assist them in developing the talents that he gave them. I feel happy in the thought that parents are discovering, through study, that they are dealing with valuable material when they have a sweet little child placed in their charge, and we are willing to justly award the child his liberty. This does not mean that he must never be corrected, but we must deal our corrections kindly and justly, always being fair and reasonable, remembering that he has a right to his liberty.

Finger Play

The Squirrel

"Little squirrel, living there in your hollow tree,
I've a pretty cage for you; come and live with me.
You may turn the little wheel, that will be great fun,
Slowly round, or very fast if you faster run.
Little squirrel, I will bring in my basket here,
Every day a feast of nuts. Come, then, squirrel
dear."

But the little squirrel said, from his hollow tree,
"Oh, no, no; I'd rather, far, live here and be free."
So my cage is empty yet, and my wheel is still,
And my little basket here, oft with nuts I fill.
If you like, I'll crack some nuts for you and me,
But the squirrel has enough, in his hollow tree.

Note: Make the squirrel in the hollow tree by placing the thumb of the right hand through the opening made with the left hand clasping the left

NEWS AND LETTERS

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Rockford and Eleventh Streets

About fourteen or fifteen years ago we built our little church in Tulsa, at the corner of Rockford and Eleventh Streets. We labored strenuously to accomplish this undertaking. The men-folks had opposed the movement from the beginning, but the sisters said, "We want a church building." And the brethren, to console us I presume, told us to "Go after it," and had a bit of fun at our persistence. One brother said, "If you can raise five hundred dollars, I will put another five hundred on top of it."

The sisters, by common consent, decided the best way to start was with prayer, and pray we did. We fasted and prayed continually. One sister whose faith in prayer was deep suggested, "Let us set aside one day a week to fast and pray for our church building." Later, one Thursday afternoon when we had met for aid work, this sister asked how many were willing to put aside the work that afternoon and have a prayer meeting, the theme to be to implore God's help in our efforts to obtain a church home. All were willing. And when that prayer meeting was over, every woman there said with tears in her eyes, We will have our church. We were a happy group.

In less than a week from that time the lot was bought and plans made to start the building. Now we have had this nice little branch all these years. We have been anxious these years to tell the people of this city about the restored gospel. We preach in that little church at the corner of Rockford and Eleventh Streets, believing there are many honest-hearted people living here and feeling that many will be gathered into the kingdom of God when they have opportunity to hear the gospel explained. We have been told by visiting elders that a great work would be done in Tulsa sometime; and we feel that time has come.

A series of meetings has been arranged by our missionary in charge, to begin the first of the year. When we heard our pastor announce the series and say, "We will pray over it and get ready for it," we thought the time had at last come. We believe there is a mighty work to be done here, one which will take our united effort in fasting and prayer as did the building of our church home. The same power is here now as was then to hinder us, not in the church but in Satan. He has already raised his head, selected his material, arranged his line of battle, almost before the plans were made for our meeting. We must not let him frustrate us by any of his subtle dealings and cause contention and strife among us; we must not forget to fast and pray, to ask God to help us do those things which we can not do alone. Dear Saints, we can not afford to be careless now. The time is here. It is our opportunity. Let us fast and pray mightily that God will not suffer anything to interfere, but that we may work together in harmony and love, each doing his duty.

Jesus said that if we do not warn our neighbors, the blood of their garments will be on our souls. The time is here for first, just leaving enough space for the right thumb to peep out, representing the squirrel's head. Make the cage by putting the right and left hands together, palms in, forming a roof, and make the wheels by turning the hands round and round each other, first very slowly, then faster and faster as he "faster runs." For nuts, form an oval with the thumb and front finger; and the hammer is made by pounding the two fists together.

us to warn Tulsa. We can not afford to lightly pass it by. Let us begin now to prepare to make this meeting a success for this city, as well as for ourselves. This we can do by starting right now to pray for the outpouring of God's Spirit upon the members of the branch, and by putting ourselves in a humble and receptive attitude. Let us ask God to pour out his Spirit upon our missionary, that he may speak with power and assurance to the convincing of those that hear him. Let us stand as a united membership back of our missionary, our pastor, and our priesthood, that no opposing force may hinder the spread of the gospel at this place and time.

Jesus said: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." Saints, it is our time to ask, seek, and knock. May the Lord help us to vision our opportunity and prepare for it.

December 8.—The bake sale held by the Department of Women November 17 was a success, sales amounting to twenty-one dollars and sixty cents. Sister Tom Hunter was head saleswoman. The sale was held at Monson's Trunk Factory. Three dollars was also donated by isolated sisters. The department expects to have another sale before January 1.

Prayer service last Wednesday was held at the home of Sister R. T. Walker. This week the Saints will meet with Blanche Farley.

The Sunday school is busy preparing for a Christmas tree and program to be held at the church Christmas Eve.

Irma Walker has finished reading the Book of Mormon. The class held on Sunday evening studying the Book of Mormon is more interesting as time goes on.

Barbara Thompson, of Clifford, disposed of most of her household goods and returned home to Canada with her son, Eber Thompson, and will stay indefinitely. Later she may make her home in Fargo.

Ella Mae Peterson has gone to Minneapolis to spend the winter.

Rhoda Hunter, of Erhard, Minnesota, recently visited at the home of her son, Tom Hunter, of Fargo.

William Shackow is again confined to his bed, by a relapse following his recent illness. Saints hope for his speedy recovery.

A party for the girls was given at the home of Sisters Avis and Irma Walker Saturday evening, December 3. A pleasant time is reported, and dainty refreshments were served.

Sister C. M. Brown and daughters, Elsie and Bernice, and Sister William Shackow spent Thanksgiving with C. M. Brown at Georgetown.

Sister Jacob Muffle, of Straubsville, who recently underwent a serious operation, has returned to her home feeling much better.

Sister James Langton, of Lawton, North Dakota, visited with her daughter, Sister Arthur Thompson, of Fargo, on her way to Independence, Missouri.

Elder Swen Swenson made his farewell visit to Fargo, in November, and has now returned to the home of his daughter at Cameron, Missouri, to spend the winter. Saints hope he may return to the land of the north next summer. He preached several of his always interesting sermons while here. Some of the thoughts he left were: We must live so that we can get an answer from God, not be satisfied because others receive answer; ask God every morning to help you, and in the evening remember to thank him. We must stand as witnesses for Jesus Christ. Those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled. We can not do much with people who are full of traditions and are satisfied. When you get an answer from God, you then have something by which to live, to die, and to be resurrected. People are being rocked to sleep by being told they can be saved by the blood of Jesus Christ. Without blessings from heaven, there is not much in religion. If religion does not reach the home, it amounts to nothing. If we do not expect anything when we pray; we are making a mockery of prayer. Answer to prayer is what helps us to stand trials and temptations.

Elder Thomas Leitch spent Thanksgiving Day with Saints at Duluth, also visiting Saints at Minneapolis and Clontarf, Minnesota. Other Thanksgiving visitors were Sisters John Konietzka and Avis Walker, who were guests in the home of Alfred Rife, of Sheldon, North Dakota.

Elsie Brown has several students in her music class.

Sunday morning, November 19, a Thanksgiving program was given by some of the Sunday school students after a short Sunday school session.

Elder J. A. Gunsolley gave an interesting talk following the program. His visit was a surprise, and he is always welcome. He also preached a few sermons, including a Thanksgiving sermon Sunday morning. He said we should thank God on all days and especially on days set apart. Sabbath is being kept less holy than ever. There is ample reason why the Lord stressed the command that we go to the house of prayer to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. We have no right to give our energies, time, or contributions to any other cause than the gospel. Should obey the gospel every day. Our ministers are responsible and must tell the truth regardless of bread and butter. We can not dismiss our ministers if we so desire; they are called of God.

He spoke on "Scriptures, true and false," and "Divine authority." Returned to Duluth November 22.

On Sunday evening, December 4, Pastor Thomas Leitch preached from the third chapter of 1 Timothy. He emphasized the methods parents should use to teach their children, stating that the home is not what it used to be; now it is only a place to eat and sleep. We should study the word of God and not waste time reading magazines and novels. Unless we continue from day to day, what will our chance be at the judgment? We should honor and respect the house of God. The word of God will make us wise unto salvation. We should deal honestly with all men.

Elder Leitch also served the sacrament Sunday, the 4th, and a spiritual season was had.

Florence Rife, of Sheldon, is staying with Sister A. H. Thompson.

On Thanksgiving morning some of the Saints attended at the Bungalow Church to offer up prayers of thankfulness for the blessings of the past year and especially for the blessings of the true gospel.

Mrs. Casterton, of Minnesota, is visiting her sister, Blanche Farley, of this city.

It is almost time for the annual business meeting, and soon the New Year will be greeting us with new opportunities to serve our Lord and Master better than we ever have in the past if we will only put forth the effort. With a prayer of thankfulness to God for his mercy and love in our hearts, and seeking forgiveness at his hands, we bid the old year adieu and wish all Saints a happy New Year.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

Our annual branch meeting was held December 5, with a marked degree of the Spirit present. Elder R. L. Fulk presided over the meeting, and officers were chosen for the coming year as follows: Pastor, J. M. Henson; clerk, Frank Hargas; pianist, Avva Lowry; chorister, L. C. Moore; superintendent of Sunday school, M. F. Lowry; secretary, Eva Henson; superintendent of Religio, Eddie Colvin; secretary, Loyd Lowry; head of the Department of Women, Sister Halick Milliner.

We are looking forward to a greater degree of the Spirit in the coming year.

M. F. LOWRY.

Saint Louis, Missouri

From The Bulletin for November 27

District conference is in session at Belleville, Illinois. We are advised that Brethren Garver and Edwards of the Quorum of Twelve are expected to be in attendance.

Visitors during the recent weeks to our church include, among others, Brother Burwell, of Louisville, Kentucky, and Brother Will McClain, of Independence, Missouri, a brother of Elder J. R. McClain of this city.

During the past week we had visits from Brother and Sister G. S. Trowbridge, Brother and Sister C. Ed. Miller, and Brother and Sister G. A. Gould, all of Independence, Missouri. They were attending the Missouri State Sunday School Convention, which was in session at the First Christian Church in this city. It was pleasant to renew acquaintance with old friends and meet new ones.

During the Sunday school convention last week, some excellent features were presented by several well-known teachers and workers. Two, which the editor was privileged to hear, were exceptionally good. One by Doctor Lemmon, of the Christian Church of the city, on the "Social ideals of Jesus," appealed to us very much. He stated that there were two schools of thought generally, one represented by Doctor Hutton, of England, who took the position of the Hebrew prophets that the new order would be the results of reform and reformatory processes through the State, the other school represented by Bishop Charles Gore, of England, that regeneration of the individual is the keynote of the social message. The speaker declared that the ideal state finally depended upon an ideal character. Jesus was that ideal character and the presentation of his life in terms of comprehensiveness, universality, and urgency was the task and duty of the church.

Another striking speech was by Mrs. Overton, of Chicago, Illinois, on the "Changing order in the home." This lady said: The home is not a static institution, but is subject to constant change determined by the attitudes of the persons who make it. Especially women are concerned in this because of their changed attitude towards the problems of labor, home-building, and child-bearing. Then youth has changed very much in its attitude towards the home and parenthood. She defines home as essentially a relationship between two people, a man and a woman, who find each in the other that which each feels he needs.

Davenport, Iowa

December 12.—Once more the Christmas season has come around, and close upon its heels a new year is to be ushered in. Have we the true Christmas spirit in our hearts, and do we realize the importance of carrying that same spirit with us throughout the year as did the Christ who so long ago set the example, and whose birthday we celebrate at Christmas time? Do we have that same love for our brother and that spirit of giving and helping that symbolizes the life of Christ? Dear Saints, these are questions that each one of us must answer for himself. And should we find ourselves wanting, let us not forget that we have a Father in heaven who is ready to help us if we will but put our faith and trust in him.

With the new year comes renewed hope, energy, and a desire to accomplish more in the coming years than we did in the past ones. We should have this hope and desire, for are we not living in a time when everyone must work? There is much work to do and so few to do it.

Two weeks ago three young people were baptized here and have entered wholeheartedly into the work. Our new officers took office Sunday, December 11, and all feel the need of working together so that they might accomplish the work more effectively. Cooperation among branch officers and all departmental officers is a thing well worth working for, and when you have it the branch will succeed.

A father and son banquet is to be held next month, after which a program will be given for the benefit of the entire branch. We are anxious to see what kind of a program our fathers and sons will put on, and look forward to the event with interest.

The various departments are planning many interesting events for the coming year. Among them a dramatic club, monthly socials to be put on by the Religio, and an attendance contest to be supervised by the Sunday school.

Brother Kress is beginning another series of meetings December 13, at another one of the Saints' homes here. We find that we can reach a good many Saints and nonmembers this way that we could reach in no other way. Last Tuesday night instead of having a preaching service we had a get-together social time at the Gettert home. All joined in the games with a will, and we had a fine time. Ice cream and cake were served.

Brother Richards, our new branch president, has organized a fine class of boys for the study of the Book of Mormon, I have noticed more than one from the other classes gaze rather longingly at that class.

It is my sincere hope that every branch in every Nation is looking forward to the new year with a determination to make it a banner year.

We wish a merry Christmas and a happy and successful New Year to all readers of the SAINTS' HERALD.

December 11.—Most of the evening sermons of last month were based upon the Book of Mormon and the principles of the gospel. Floyd Carpenter, a very able Book of Mormon scholar, has been the speaker.

Apostle Frank Curtis stopped over night on his way from Lancaster to Milwaukee November 16, so instead of our having prayer service he preached to us, using for his text "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." Brother Curtis set up the church as it existed in the days of Moses, showing there was a presidency at the head consisting of three men and that this presidency was assisted by the twelve and the seventy. He showed that the church Christ established in his days was after the same pattern, for Christ is the same yesterday, today, and for ever.

Elder Holloway came here from the debate in Lancaster and stayed over Sunday, when a surprise was given him at the Sunday school. It was his birthday, and Brother Clark had visited the members to get contributions for a gift for Brother Holloway. He was presented an overcoat. Elder Holloway was speaker morning and evening, giving an account of the debate.

Charles Clark, sr., is again at home with his family for the winter. He occupied the pulpit the evening of December 5, using for his text, "For ye are bought with a price."

Thanksgiving Day the Saints assembled at the church for morning worship, which consisted of a prayer service and a sermon by Brother Holloway, after which a banquet was served in the basement.

Sister Boehmer, who has been away visiting during the summer, returned to Madison and has taken up her abode with us.

Sister Jake Miller, who underwent an operation some time ago, is able to be around again and says her health is better than it has been for a long time.

Sister Clate Weeks, of Chetek, is here for a few days, making preparations for the burial of her husband who passed away at Mendota Hospital Tuesday night. Funeral was held at the Mendota Chapel Saturday afternoon, the sermon being delivered by Brother L. Houghton. Singers were Sister Mary Woodstock and Sister Carpenter.

Those who attended district conference from Madison were Brother Clark and family, Lee Root, and Leda Colbert.

The Department of Women held a food sale at Wirths' shop last Wednesday.

Leda Colbert was called to Chetek Saturday on account of serious illness of her father.

We feel we have made some progress in church work the last year and hope for better accomplishments in the coming year. We wish all the Saints a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

Stewartsville, Missouri

December 12.—The meetings held by Brother Twombly, beginning November 6 and continuing for one week, were enjoyed by all. Many young people attended. Brother Twombly is a friend of the young. He left a greater desire in the hearts of all to hold fast to the truth. The meetings which were to have been held by Brothers Richards and May were postponed until January, since so many of the farmers are busy gathering corn.

The Temple Builders gave a short but impressive pageant for Religio November 6. It was entitled "Stewardship in pageantry."

The Thanksgiving community program was held at the Saints' church Thanksgiving night. The Four Leaf Clover Quartet furnished the music and Brother Ralph W. Farrell, radio pastor of K L D S, gave the address. He held the undivided attention of the entire audience throughout his discussion. After the program the usual business meeting was held. An offering amounting to thirty dollars was given to the welfare fund of our city.

Sunday night, December 4, our branch observed Golden Rule Sunday. Several appropriate talks were given by Sisters Madge Head and Della Ault, and Brother Zenas Lewis. Special musical numbers were presented. The branch raised fifteen dollars to help relieve the suffering of the orphans of the Near East.

At the present there is a contest on between men and women of the branch to see which side can raise the larger amount of Christmas offering. We hope to be able to give a worth-while offering this year.

There is to be a Christmas program and tree at the church Christmas Eve. Plans are now under way.

The Department of Women held a food sale and bazaar Saturday, December 10. Receipts were over sixty dollars. The sisters are accomplishing a good work.

Brentwood Branch

We are enjoying an unusually warm fall and early winter. Saints of Brentwood Branch have been busily engaged in the routine work usual in small branches.

The Department of Women has been quite active. They have quilted four quilts in recent months and have orders for a number more. The Temple Builders are active, too, raising funds to defray the cost of the purchase of a lot adjoining the present church property, which lot is to be used for recreational purposes. They recently gave a "merchants' supper" and at present are selling toilet articles, thereby raising considerable cash.

The Sunday school has been holding its own, and while no material growth of members is noted the department is growing in knowledge and is not dropping off in membership.

Semiannual business meeting convened December 5, the principal business being the election of officers. Quite a spirited meeting was held, several new officers being chosen. Elder Roy Remington was chosen presiding elder; Elders C. J. Remington and F. F. Struebing, counselors; Sunday school superintendent, F. Mills Nelson succeeded himself for the third term. Ivor N. Cooke, the reelected financial officer, made a stirring appeal for the support of the newly elected treasurer, and he reports hearty response.

Elder John Edwards, of the district presidency, spoke upon the subject, "What is the gospel of Jesus Christ?" and Elder C. J. Remington, "How shall I know the gospel of Jesus Christ?" on December 11. These sermons were received by attentive audiences.

Our sick are numerous, and as a consequence the ranks are somewhat depleted. Brother Ira Day's entire family, his wife and four children, are ill with bronchitis. Sister Hazel Nelson and her babe had a slight attack of pneumonia. Sisters Malloy and Miles have been ailing and unable to attend meetings as regularly as they would like.

Mabel Woods and husband are happy over the recent arrival of a baby girl.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

December 9.—The Saints of the Philadelphia Branch have been blessed and encouraged within the last two months by visits from Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths and General Sunday School Superintendent Woodstock. The talk which Brother Woodstock gave Sunday afternoon regarding the work to be accomplished by the various departments was very instructive. We believe these visits of general church officers are very helpful in keeping local Saints more closely in touch with the work of the church in general.

The two younger children of Brother and Sister Albert N. Hoxie were baptized on Thanksgiving morning and confirmed during the prayer and testimony meeting.

We were pleased to have our chorister, Sister Clara Thumm, with us again last week. Her young son, John Stone, is doing very nicely. Sister Thumm started right in with special music for Christmas. The work of the choir had been carried on nicely by Brother Beckman during Mrs. Thumm's absence.

Last Monday evening we had our regular monthly meeting of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school. Some time was spent in discussing the proposed new course of study. While no decision was made regarding it, we believe all the teachers are anxious to work towards any methods which will result in their being better able to train our children to be good citizens and good Christians. The election of branch officers followed the Sunday school meeting. Brother Stoff was sustained as branch president with Brother Willard Hettrick as one of his counselors. There were very few changes in the rest of the branch officers.

CORRESPONDENT.

San Francisco, California

The Little Brown Church—Eighteenth and Danvers Street

On College Day, October 30, we had with us three who had attended Graceland. They occupied seats on the rostrum and gave short, interesting talks. The collection amounted to twenty-eight dollars.

The Sunday school held a social at the home of Sister Ganz, a special lunch box affair. The time was very much enjoyed and netted twenty-two dollars.

November 6 sacramental meeting was well attended. In the evening Apostle J. A. Gillen was speaker. The branch priesthood held their meeting the 8th and discussed church affairs.

Sunday, November 13, was music day at the church. The forenoon was given to music. Helen Rood, district musical director, addressed the Sunday school on "Music appreciation." She had a Victrola there and played pieces and described them to the children, telling them how to listen to music, and making it interesting to all. This was followed by twelve selections by the orchestra composed of four violins, three cornets, one trombone, one clarinet, one saxophone, one drum, as well as the organ and piano. We are justly proud of our orchestra and are grateful to Brother Carol Holden, leader. Edwin Burdick, district orchestra director, was present and addressed the meeting.

In the evening Priest Frank Seal preached on faith. It was a good address.

November 19 Pastor John A. Saxe was the morning speaker, and Elder E. B. Hinton preached in the evening. The following Sunday George S. Lincoln spoke in the morning and Deacon Cecil Smith in the evening.

Forty-eight persons attended the December sacramental meeting. This was the most spiritual meeting the Saints of this branch have had for a long time. No time was wasted. Paul once said, "How is it, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm [hymn], hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation [prophecy], hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying."—1 Corinthians 14:26. All this we had at our meeting. The Holy Spirit was with us in power, to encourage and help in our work. The faith of the Saints was strengthened, and we had the assurance that we are the children of God. What a glorious work we are engaged in, and how wonderful it really appears when seen by minds enlightened by the divine Spirit.

We are much encouraged by the statement, "The redemption of Zion draweth nigh." Our branch has full assurance that we are engaged in the great work of God, revealed in the restored gospel. We were never in better spiritual condition than now.

Denison, Iowa

December 10.—We are happy to report the branch as rendering full service in almost every department of the work. Our Sunday school went over the top in the Christmas offering, and as Christmas is drawing near the spirit of giving is felt throughout the branch. Arrangements have been made for a Christmas program in charge of Sister Ward Johnson. The children are looking for the usual visit of Santa Claus, while the thoughts of the older Saints reflect upon the birth of Christ, how he entered the world as a child, and "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man," and how he was slain upon Calvary's cross that we might have life.

Thanksgiving Day was made a day of worship by Denison Saints. It dawned bright and clear, and at nine o'clock a number of the Saints gathered at the little church on the corner to thank God for his goodness and mercy. At eleven Brother Carl Winey, of Deloit, Iowa, addressed us, his talk being upon God's spiritual and temporal blessings to his children. At noon a basket dinner was served.

Three hours later Brother Ward Johnson favored the congregation with another talk which was thoroughly enjoyed.

We rejoice to be able to report that dear old Grandma Montgomery was with us upon Thanksgiving Day and favored her friends with a reading in the volunteer program given by the Saints at the evening hour. We must commend the Saints of Denison for their willingness to respond whenever a call is made for service. The priesthood are kept busy going here and there wherever duty calls.

District Sunday School Superintendent Myrl Myers, of Deloit, was with us a week ago Sunday, giving us words of encouragement. He left many thoughts upon which we may meditate and which if applied to our lives will prove beneficial to us. We extend to him an invitation to come again.

The choir has been meeting at the homes of the Saints. Sister Cruzan is directing, and we wish to commend her for faithful service.

A Halloween party was given the Saints at the home of Brother and Sister Lindgard. The evening was spent singing songs and playing games. Refreshments followed the merry-making.

We have had but little sickness among us, and for this we are thankful.

Loydie Winnans is visiting his sister, Sister B. Yarrington, of Cedar Rapids. His father, Brother Loyd Winnans is transacting business in Nevada, Iowa.

Sedalia, Missouri

Missionary H. V. Minton came November 27 to begin a series of meetings, and continued a few nights. Weather conditions became so bad that only the Saints had the courage to leave their firesides to receive instruction. Words can not express what was left in our hearts after our brother's sojourn with us. We had not realized we stood so much in need of the help of one who might assist us in the problems confronting us as a branch. We all had the desire in our hearts to go forward and help build a Zion condition in our midst, but the way was not always open, and sometimes our vision became obstructed. We were in need of some one who in a Christlike way would improve us, leaving the feeling in our hearts that it had been done for love of us—some one who himself had a sincere desire to be a true disciple of Christ. This our brother has done, in the beautiful truths that were presented, in the kindly visits to our homes, and in the helping hand extended in our behalf. We feel greatly strengthened and have determined that his efforts shall not be in vain.

On account of the approaching holidays, when many of the Saints will be leaving and others preparing the Christmas programs, it seemed advisable to close the meetings. But there was sadness at parting, the sadness which comes to all God's children when they are of one heart and mind.

An illustrated lecture on the life of Christ was given by Doctor G. W. Rodgers during these meetings. This strongly appealed not only to the Saints but to the nonmembers. Some who do not belong to the church were heard to remark that if they could hear our message more frequently presented like that, they would be able to understand it the more. Missionaries, please take note, for I, too, remember how hard it was to understand all that was spoken to me, and had it not been for the Spirit of God urging me on and my determination to understand why it did urge me, I might have given up.

The Saints in the branch earnestly desire to do the will of the Master, and in honor of Brother Minton's efforts we dedicate this little poem to him to prove that we caught the vision he held out to us.

Pioneers in Zion

Our duties here in Zion
 Call for a valiant band,
 To make the progress God would have Requires a firmer stand
 Than we have shown in former days.
 So we've resolved to make
 A better fight to do the right,
 And help you strengthen stakes.

To make a place where God can dwell
 In hearts as well as homes,
 To weed out all unselfishness
 Where seeds of truth are grown,
 To lift and build, to pray and fight,
 We all would help to shake
 Out every evil from our lives
 And help to build the stakes.

To build them strong as bands of steel
 That glisten in the light,
 A place where troubled children seek
 When striving for the right;
 And we would lend our might with thine
 That Zion might take shape;
 So teach us what we ought to be
 As dwellers in her stakes.

CATHERINE NITZ.

Sperry, Oklahoma, Conducts Successful Meetings

December 10.—Elder Hubert Case has just closed a series of meetings here which we believe to be the most successful our branch has ever had. The meetings were in session every night for four weeks, and at each service the pleasure of the Lord was manifested in the freedom of delivery and effectiveness of speech that Brother Case enjoyed.

Forty-nine new members were added to the church. Two thirds of those baptized were adults. Six or seven other persons, converted to the truth and beauty of the gospel during these meetings, have definitely expressed their desire to unite with the church at the earliest opportunity.

A reception was given at the church for the new members Monday evening following the close of the meetings.

The various departments of the work at Sperry are keeping pace with the work of the ministry. Our Sunday school attendance reached the three hundred mark every Sunday during the meetings, and a good average is being maintained since the close.

A committee has been appointed for the preparation of the Christmas program. Goldie Stevens, one of our outstanding workers among the young people, was named chairman.

The Department of Women has its session every Thursday. The members find it necessary to meet all day to accomplish the work that is before them.

Brother Selma Stevens reports continued success in the Department of Recreation and Expression.

"All in all, we're coming along just fine," says W. P. Rumsey, pastor.

This branch is moving forward in all departments. We have been very busy this fall and winter, especially with the special events we have had.

September 25 the pageant "Remember Cumorah" was given in the church. It was a big success. There were more than fifty in the cast, all costumed, with special stage scenery made and arranged by Brother Anton Konstantin. The arrangement of the entire pageant was in the hands of Mrs. William Nichols, assisted by Mrs. Paul N. Belleisle. The stage was beautified by four curtains, borrowed from one of our local theaters. The electric lighting and stereopticon pictures were in charge of Brother William Nichols. One of the features in the massing of the nations was the native music played by our orchestra as the actors came on the stage, representing their particular country. The entire production was well worth the effort and time spent in building up the program. Every participant tried to do his best, for almost the entire audience was made up of nonmembers. The church was packed to its capacity. We distributed literature that explained some of our church history. We had some newspaper articles, and one paper printed a picture of one of the scenes.

Many of our members pledged to reread the Book of Mormon, and a class was formed in the Department of Women the members of which are studying the Book of Mormon and church history. Later on, the Department of Recreation and Expression was organized, and one of the classes formed was to study the Book of Mormon quarterly. Elder Paul N. Belleisle was made superintendent of this department.

October 21 a banquet was given by the choir and orchestra in the basement of the church. Brother E. LeRoy Squire read a paper on the right interpretation of music. Brother Squire is our musical director, and he with his two organizations are doing good work, supplying music for our regular and special church services. Once a month on a Sunday evening we have a musical program. The membership look forward to these events.

October 30 was observed as Graceland College Day, Elder Charles R. Hield giving the Graceland talk in the morning. Our quota of twenty-five dollars had previously been announced, but when the contributions were counted we found we had doubled our quota.

We understand that when quotas are made they are made according to the enrolled membership. We imagine there are many branches like our own, where about half or a third of the membership are out of touch with the work of the local church, and they can not be counted with the active members. Then there are those living so far away from the church that we see them only once a month, or once in three or six months. We have members attending our services whose journey from their homes to the church requires one and a half hours, and part of this time they are riding on express subway trains.

If you are not acquainted with Greater New York, with its five boroughs, you can not comprehend the vast territory it covers. An estimate was made recently of the population of Metropolitan New York (that means people living within a radius of forty miles from City Hall, Manhattan, old New York). It was found that 10,000,000 people were living in this area. Trains, boats, subways, autos, etc., bring people even at a greater distance to their business in New York every day. Some of the big buildings in the city contain 10,000 employees. You can see that it is almost impossible for some of our members to attend week-night meetings in our church in Brooklyn. We hold one group prayer meeting in a section about seven miles from our church. Regardless of some handicaps, we are making progress in our one church in this great city. We hope the time will come when we will have churches in all of the boroughs of New York.

November 13 was local Departmental Day. The heads of departments were the speakers. They told of their work and of their future hopes.

November 18 the ladies had their annual bazaar. The members of this department work hard making things for their year-end sale. This year they realized about $300.

Apostles Roy S. Budd and Clyde F. Ellis were with us for a short visit this fall. When the young people's convention was held at Boston in October, a dozen of our young people went over to the convention, accompanied by Brothers Budd and Ellis. On Brother Ellis's return from New England, he stopped over with us for a few days, giving a talk in our church Thanksgiving Day and the Sunday following, the Sunday evening service being an illustrated lecture on the South Sea Islands. The lecture was enjoyed by all. It was instructive as well as entertaining.

Brother and Sister Howard Mousley entertained about thirty-five young people in their home the evening of November 26. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the host and hostess had prepared some surprises for the participants in the games and at the banquet. Sister Mousley is teacher of a class of young ladies in the Sunday school, and it was in their honor that the party was arranged.

Beginning December 4, Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths was the speaker in the church. He gave us some fatherly talks Sunday and two nights during the week.

New York being the largest port of entry into this country, we naturally have visits from Saints coming from or going to Europe. A month ago Elder Oscar Johnson and family stopped in Brooklyn for a couple of weeks, but his stop-over was a forced one. Two days out from Sweden his youngest child was taken very sick and had to be operated on immediately. This meant that when they arrived in New York the child had to be taken to a hospital. It was an anxious time for the parents, but when the child was able to be taken from the hospital, they resumed their journey to Independence, Missouri. We now hear that the child has almost recovered.

Since our report in the middle of the summer, we have added some new members to our group. Elder J. A. Jaques and family from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, have taken up residence in this city; Mildred Chatham from Detroit, Michigan, is attending school here; Elder Charles R. Hield and family are living in Brooklyn. Brother Hield is teaching in one of our colleges. Mrs. Bessie Laughlin and daughter Aleta are attending Columbia College; Brother Oscar Moorman and family from Independence, Missouri, and the widow of Patriarch Joseph Squire, from Kirtland, Ohio, are now connected with our branch. In addition to these, we have four new members baptized during the year.

The poet says:

We are building every day,
In a good or evil way
And the structure as it grows
Will our inmost souls disclose.

Build it well whate'er you do,
Build it straight and strong and true,
Build it clean and high and broad,
Build it for the eye of God.

December 13.

London, Ontario

At the regular meeting of the Department of Women last week the following officers were elected: President, Sister A. Gallagher; vice president, Sister Annie Sheridan; secretary, Sister L. Lott; treasurer, Sister E. Maker; flower committee, the president and vice president; relief and service, Sister Ward; social convener, Sister S. Henry; cradle roll superintendent, Sister L. Lott; organist, Sister S. Henry; home class superintendent, Sister Nellie Harrison; teacher, Sister Ebsworthy; supervisor, Sister L. Winegarden; monitor, Sister Edith Armstrong. The various departments have been very busy this year as reports indicated.

Brother Raymond Sinclair met with a painful accident while at a practice game of hockey. A companion skater ran over his foot, cutting one of the tendons, which necessitated an operation. The foot has been resting in a plaster cast. It will be several weeks before Brother Ray will have the use of his foot.

The quarterly business meeting of the branch was held last week. The main item of business was the election of officers for the coming year. Elder J. E. MacGregor was again chosen president. He named Elders W. A. Hardey and J. Winegarden as his counselors. Brother Arlo Hodgson was sustained secretary, Brother A. Farrow to assist. Brother Bert Falkner was appointed chorister. Sister Dorothy Timbrell, who has been our organist for some time, will act in that capacity for another year. This year Sister Dorothy acted as chorister as well and worked hard to prepare the choir program for the various services. The finance committee, composed of Brothers T. Timbrell (chairman), J. E. MacGregor, J. Winegarden, J. Vashinder, C. Alford, H. Ward, S. Ebsworthy, and W. A. Hardey, was sustained for another term. Brother W. A. Hardey will act as publicity agent and solicitor for the bishop's agent. Sister Grace Perry will assist Sister Timbrell at the pipe organ. Bishop J. C. Dent kindly acted as returning officer at this meeting. A special committee was appointed to put in a new baptismal font under the platform in the basement.

While in attendance at our anniversary services, Brother and Sister Duesling, of Waterford, in going up York Street in their car were run into by another car, damaging Brother Duesling's car and causing injury to Sister Duesling and their granddaughter, Irene, who was riding with them. They have fully recovered from the mishap.

The wife of Brother Charles Insell, one of the oldest members of our branch, is seriously ill at Victoria Hospital. She had a slight stroke some time ago, from which she has never rallied, and hopes for her recovery have been given up.

Sister Farrow has for some time been suffering with an affliction of the eye. Through the prayers of the Saints and the kind intervention of a loving Father, she is feeling much better.

The various classes and officers of the Sunday school are preparing for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment. Brother Lincoln Rankin, superintendent, is working to make it a success this year, as it has been in the past. "Uncle John" and "Aunt Cynthia" are on the job as usual to assist.

Many expressions of sympathy were extended to Sister Henry and family in the death of their husband and father a few weeks ago. Mr. Henry did not belong to the church, but Sister Henry has been an active worker in the Department of Women, and all sympathized with her in her bereavement. Elder Frank Gray had charge of the funeral service.

Early last Sunday morning services were held for the baptism of Miss Lillie Noble, Mrs. Edith Rowling, and son, Ernie. Elder Frank Gray officiated. Confirmation was by Elders Gray and Winegarden and Bishop Dent. Pastor J. E. MacGregor assisted.

Hilo, Hawaii

Being only a young member of the church, having been baptized by Brother Chase about a year ago, I hesitate somewhat to write you this letter. However, as I feel sure you will be interested in hearing about the work on this island of the Pacific, I am giving you an account of our last sacrament meeting, at which we were favored with the presence of Elder G. J. Waller, who was spending a couple of days in Hilo in the interests of the church work.

Since Brother and Sister Chase left us, we have been left largely to ourselves, and therefore we appreciate the occasional visits that Brother Waller makes when on business in Hawaii.

Brother Waller spent Saturday visiting the members, whom he urged to come to the sacrament meeting the following day and to prepare for the same.

Sunday morning we were greeted by a bright sunshine, and as we prepared our minds and souls to be worthy to partake of the sacrament, we could not help thanking the Creator for letting us live and enjoy this beautiful earth, which on these islands of the Pacific he has adorned with green trees and flowers for the happiness of his children. Kneeling down to offer my morning prayer, I especially thanked my God for having led me to this beautiful place where I was privileged to hear and obey the gospel in this, the eleventh hour of my life. I also prayed for our beloved Brother Waller, that he might find just the words for my special needs, to strengthen my faltering steps so that I might become more faithful in my devotion and love for my brothers and sisters.

Preceding the sacrament meeting, the Sunday school met, and young and old were present to partake in this service, the meeting being presided over by a young Japanese brother. The Sunday school closed its session early so as to give Brother Waller an opportunity of addressing the members before the sacrament meeting. Several nations and races are represented in the membership of this branch, which numbers about seventy, fifty-seven of whom were present at the sacrament meeting, which was very encouraging to all of us, as our meetings of late have not been well attended. Unfortunately, like children, we would allow our petty grievances to interfere with our devotion to the church work and to each other, and therefore we needed and appreciated the words that were spoken by Brother Waller, with a fatherly spirit and understanding, to prepare us for partaking of the sacred emblems of the sacrament.

It was Brother Waller who brought this gospel to these islands of the sea, and knowing the needs of all of us he is able to chasten or encourage us as a loving father does his children.

I am convinced that on this special day, God, through his Holy Spirit, gave him power to touch each heart that caused us to repent of past sins, errors, and neglect of duties, and led us to resolve to do better in the future with the help of the divine Spirit. I am sure that all felt the presence of this Spirit, for our testimonies revealed it clearly, and I am sure we were all united in love; so we feel now that having had a new start through the new birth that has been given us, we can go forward, working in unity and love as we should do.

I am sending these words to your readers, hoping it will assure you that in this far-off island of the Pacific, there are hearts that love you, and we hope some day to be invited to live in that beautiful Zion, where we can sing praises to the Lord, who will then reign as our King.

Let us all pray for each other, that we may be faithful unto the end, that we may all inherit the crown of eternal life.

MINNIE BROWN.

Ionia, Michigan

December 8.—On Friday evening, December 2, Ionia Saints were much pleased to have as their guest Bishop A. B. Phillips, of Lamoni, who spoke forcefully on the financial interests of the church. He said that to love God with all our might, mind, and strength and our neighbor as ourselves was the very root and essence of stewardship, and when we do that we shall be willing to keep the financial law.

We were sorry we could not have him with us longer.

We are preparing for Christmas exercises to be held Thursday evening, December 22. Fern Moran is busy training the children. She is being assisted by the teachers and by Lena Aelick.

Sunday evening services are of a missionary nature, and our little church is filled. Many nonmembers are interested, and one dear old German lady is rejoicing that she has heard the restored gospel. Tracts have been secured for her in the German language, and we are praying that she may soon be one of our number.

We are rejoicing in the spirit of love and unity which exists among us and the gifts of the gospel we have recently enjoyed.

Far West Branch

We enjoyed an active little prayer service November 30, in charge of George Petersen. Only eleven were present, but eight testimonies were offered from eight earnest hearts.

A good sacramental and prayer service was held December 4, Pastor G. B. Koger and Priest H. O. McKee presiding. Pastor Koger gave the Saints of Far West a good sermon that evening, his subject being, "Let us speak the truth from our hearts."

The Sunday school voted that morning not to have a Christmas tree and program this year because of our recent engrossing activities in that line.

The blizzard that swept down upon Far West December 7 kept us from enjoying the usual weekly prayer service.

John Hovenga, pastor of the Maple Grove Branch, preached Sunday morning, December 11. Deacon M. M. German spoke at the evening service.

Under date of December 9, Elder Ray Whiting wrote from Minneapolis, Minnesota: "We have just passed through one of the worst blizzards we have had in Minnesota for many years. Trains are delayed as much as twenty-nine hours. Roads are full of snow, from three to nine feet deep. It was quite difficult to get milk, as it must come in from the country. All that can be done is being done that no one shall suffer. One or two in the Twin Cities froze to death, but so far as I know none of the Saints are in want for anything. Two or three of our brothers were forced to remain at their places of work all night, but they were well cared for."

Independence

Stone Church

The Stone Church Sunday school will present "The new star," a play written by Mrs. M. H. Siegfried, next Sunday evening, beginning at 7.30. This play was chosen for presentation to the Stone Church congregation in commemoration of the centennial year of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, it being concerned with Book of Mormon incidents and characters. Mrs. J. A. Gardner is directing the production.

"The needs of the church today" was the subject of the sermon by Apostle James A. Gillen at the Sunday morning service.

The Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "God is our refuge," by Dudley Buck. Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, played "Meditation de Thais," by Massenet, as the offertory.

Reading the scripture lesson from Matthew 7, Apostle Gillen emphasized the thought that the most satisfactory evidence that men are followers of Christ lies in the fruit they bear. "To as many as believed on Him, gave he power to become the sons of God"; and our discipleship with him is conditioned by the fruit which we bear.

The church needs a deeper, clearer, more significant conception of God's purposes among men, said Apostle Gillen. It needs faith in God and in ourselves to carry out his purposes. It needs big men and women, consecrated, who have caught the significance of God's purposes, and who bear good fruit.

God blesses us according to our power to receive. The need of the church is great, but it can progress no faster than its individual membership.

"The Messiah"

For the tenth time in annual succession, the Messiah Choir presented a performance of the Handelian masterpiece, "The Messiah," in the Stone Church auditorium. From 8.15 to 10 o'clock Sunday evening the crowd of music lovers and critics, which early filled the Stone Church, sat in rapt silence as the chorus, composed of more than two hundred voices and directed by Paul N. Craig, sang the famous oratorio. The production was the result of careful preparation of a well-balanced choir, conducted by an able leader. "The Messiah" has not had a better performance in this vicinity for years," said the Kansas City Times Monday morning, the 19th, and those who heard it will agree with the statement.

The work of the soloists was done with understanding, each seeming to delight in his part. Mrs. George R. Cowden, who last year took the same part, was the soprano soloist, Mrs. Raymond Havens, contralto, Edward Brackenbury, tenor, and Albert Brackenbury, bass. Organ and piano accompaniment was played by the Miller brothers, Robert and George, and their competent work was a strong feature of the splendid rendition.

Institute Christmas Festivities

Annual general assembly of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences will be held tomorrow night, the 22d, at 7.30 o'clock, at the Institute Building. This gathering is always one of the high points of the year's work; the students seem to catch the spirit prompting the faculty to sacrifices which make possible the achievement of the Institute. Present and former students are urged to be present at this assembly and enjoy the association of friends and fellow workers. An item of the evening's experiences is the taking of a picture of the forty-six members of the faculty.

The faculty of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences will entertain college students visiting and residing in Independence, on the night of December 27, Tuesday, at eight o'clock. This is the one time of the year when old college pals may get together. Please notify your college friends of this event.

Interesting Personals

With the near approach of the holidays, a number of church officers who have spent the year laboring in scattered and distant fields are to be seen on the streets in Independence. Their faces are wreathed with smiles; they are happy to be permitted to spend the Yuletide with loved ones and dear friends. Among these are President Floyd M. McDowell, Apostles J. A. Gillen, Clyde F. Ellis, Roy S. Budd, F. Henry Edwards, J. F. Curtis, and E. J. Gleazer. Some of these men have worked up to the last minute, arriving only the first of this week, but they are here, and they are happy. Apostles Williams and Garver are at their homes in Lamoni, Iowa. Myron A. McConley recently attended the priesthood institute held at Denver, but by this time he is probably back in Los Angeles with his wife and little daughter. Apostle Hanson is spending his Christmas in foreign lands. To him this year are denied the joys of the season with his family, but cared for by the heavenly Father, who gave to the world his Son on the first Christmas so many centuries ago, and surrounded by his brothers and sisters of the faith, we know he too will have a happy Christmas.

Saturday and Sunday President Frederick M. Smith spent with the Saints at Wichita, Kansas. Apostle Gleazer also was there. Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael went to Lamoni, Iowa, last week and on to Des Moines, but arrived in Independence the first of this week. Bishop J. A. Becker departed Saturday night, the 17th, for the Lone Star State. He does not expect to be at home until the morning of Christmas Day.

On Sunday, December 11, occurred the death of Brother Thomas C. Hattey, a member of the church for many years, at his home in Independence, Missouri. Born in Windsor, England, December 20, 1858, he came when a small child with his parents to Toronto, Canada. Later he moved to Independence, which he has since made his home. Through the instrumentality of Elder Joseph Luff he became a member of the church while yet a resident of the Dominion of Canada. He was ordained to the office of priest August 11, 1878, by Elder Luff. A sufferer for several years, Brother Hattey had during the last few weeks of his life endured torturous pain which led him to the act which ended his earthly existence. Funeral services were conducted at the Kansas Street Church, December 13, in charge of T. W. Williams, the sermon being delivered by Elder Joseph Luff. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Liberty Street

At the morning service we were favored with a vocal solo by David Stewart, "I come to thee."

Elder R. D. Weaver was speaker, his text being taken from 1 Corinthians 13: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing."

In the evening Apostle James A. Gillen spoke to the congregation upon the topic, "And God said."

The Christmas cantata, "The adoration," by Nevin, will be given at the church Christmas Eve by the Liberty Street Choir, directed by Sister Leona Robinson. Much time and practice have been spent upon this entertainment. We shall be favored with a violin solo by David Stewart, a euphonium solo, Philip Turner, a twenty-minute reading, Mable Merle Briggs. Everyone is invited to be present.

Walnut Park

On Wednesday night, December 14, a business meeting was held at Walnut Park, the principal purpose of which was to elect heads of departments for the coming year. Brother Samuel Smith was chosen associate pastor to Brother Howard Andersen; Orlando Nace was reelected head of music department; Brother Griffin, Sunday school superintendent; Sister Howard Andersen, publicity agent, and Sister Ruth Bryant, district secretary. The Galilean Class of the Sunday school, taught by Pastor Andersen, presented a three-act play, "The path across the hill," on Friday evening. The church was packed to overflowing, and the enthusiastic audience fully appreciated the splendid performance. Miss Agnes Adams directed the play, with Earl Cox as business manager, and these together with a splendid cast, worked long and hard that the play might be the success it was. Girls from the class assisted as ushers, and music was provided through the evening by the Walnut Park Orchestra, directed by Brother Nace. A silver collection amounted approximately to forty-five dollars. This was contributed by the Galilean Class toward the elimination of the church debt.

The eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning was occupied by the Department of Women, Sister F. R. Schafer, supervisor in District 3, being in charge. The invocation was by Sister George Gould. "Faith of our fathers" was rendered by the choir in a pleasing manner. Sister Walter Adams read the financial statement of the Walnut Park Women's Department for the year, and this was very gratifying. We feel these sisters are to be commended for their splendid efforts. According to the report, over one thousand dollars have been earned by the women in their various activities throughout the year, $441.03 of which comes from their "penny a day" and "talent" funds. This amount was turned over to the bishop December 17, to be applied on our building fund. An inspirational talk was given by Sister John Schwab, in which she told how with her "talent" money (ten cents) she had worked until it had grown to more than twenty dollars. This was the largest amount of "talent money" turned in by anyone. Miss Agnes Adams then sang "The city four square."

The principal speaker of the morning was Sister Alice Cowan, supervisor of women in Zion, who truly came up to our every expectation in her address. Sister Cowan believes the work of the Department of Women is threefold: first, home making; second, helpmates in church work; and third, helpmates in raising funds. She expressed her pleasure at the financial report in which, she said, the material result is not all which comes from these efforts, but new talents have been discovered, and all have learned to work together in love.

A quartet composed of Brother and Sister Earl Cox, Miss Margaret Gard, and Kenneth Morford sang, "Take time to be holy," which was a fitting close for the service.

At the Religio hour, six o'clock, the usual large attendance was present. Much interest is being shown in this department. The program was given by student nurses of the Independence Sanitarium and was much enjoyed.

We were fortunate in having as evening speaker Apostle Clyde Ellis, whose discourse was most helpful, his subject being "Repentance." His remarks were based upon a portion of Doctrine and Covenants 4:10: "Say nothing but repentance unto this generation." His sermon was much appreciated by the congregation.

Englewood

The Saints of Englewood held their annual election of officers Wednesday evening, December 7. Elder D. O. Cato was chosen pastor. Brother C. F. Davis filled this place for some time, but this business required so much time out of town he thought it best to be relieved. Brothers Fike and Ely have been taking care of the work in the absence of Brother Davis and deserve credit for good service.

The program given by the older people during the Religio, December 9, was a very enjoyable feature. This department seems to be thriving under the direction of Brother Joe Farrow.

On December 11 the Sunday school elected Brother Hougas superintendent, and we are confident he will fill well the place formerly occupied by Brother Lee Moore, whose work has taken him to Saint Louis.

Sunday morning, December 11, Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker at eleven o'clock, and Elder J. M. Terry occupied at 7.30 a. m. Those who attended these services certainly went home with a keener appreciation of the gospel and its power in the lives of men and women.

Tuesday, December 13, the Department of Women held its annual bazaar and chicken supper, which proved to be one of the most profitable gatherings of its kind held in Englewood.

Elder E. T. Atwell spoke to us December 18 on evidences of the Messiahship of Jesus. His was a masterful effort. One of our missionaries who happened to be in town over the Sabbath, Elder H. E. Winegar, spoke Sunday evening, and the least we could say for him is that he is equal to the task assigned him anywhere, any time.

We are very busy with the usual holiday activities, Christmas programs, cantatas, etc., but are happy to be busy in the Lord's work.

Enoch Hill

Elder F. J. Lewis was the eleven o'clock speaker at Enoch Hill Sunday morning, using as his theme "Faith in God." He was awarded good attention by the audience of Saints.

In the evening Bishop B. J. Scott delivered one of his good sermons to an audience made small by the rendition of "The Messiah" at the Stone Church. A number of Enoch Hill musicians sang in the Messiah Chorus.

Tomorrow night, Thursday, the regular Christmas program will be presented by members of the Sunday school. Sisters Clemens, Street, and Swalley are in charge of the entertainment.

Sunday morning at eleven o'clock Evangelist U. W. Greene will deliver a Christmas sermon. In the evening stereopticon slides will be one of the features of a varied program.

Kansas City Stake

Fourth Church

At 6 p. m., October 29, the young people, dressed in costumes, met at the church. Cars were provided to take them to the home of Brother and Sister Foster, Olathe, Kansas, where nothing had been left undone in preparation for a real Halloween party. There were seventy-two in attendance. After an enjoyable evening, sandwiches, pumpkin pie, and cider were served.

Attendance at regular services for the month of November was 104 at 8 o'clock a. m. Sunday prayer service; 443 at Sunday school; 227 at 11 o'clock preaching; 114 at Religio; 242 at 8 p. m. service; and 248 at Wednesday prayer meeting. The early Sunday prayer service is very spiritual, the young folks being in the majority, showing their interest, and we are sure the spiritual food received at these services will help them to be Zion builders.

November 22 the group surprised our pastor and family with a pound party, the social evening thus spent being enjoyed.

The Progressive Club (Women's Department) held their annual bazaar and chicken dinner November 29, the Blue Birds, Orioles, and Temple Builders assisting. About $125 was made. The sisters this year divide the meeting day in two parts; first, sewing, and at 1.30 p. m. study hour, with Sister Tyra Lucking as teacher. They felt the study of the New Testament was important, and by so studying have become better acquainted with Christ. His teachings, applied to their lives, will help them to be better mothers.

The Sunday school is growing, and interest is good. An attendance contest opened December 11, with Marion Sneed captain for the Reds, and Verdine Smith captain for the Blues. The contest is to end February 1, 1928.

They have $160 towards a mile of pennies which was started the beginning of the year, which will be used for a nursery room when the goal is reached. The church building is too small for present needs.

Patriarch F. A. Smith preached December 11, at 8 p. m., urging all to apply gospel truths to their lives, so those they associate with will know by their lives what they stand for.

Second Church

On November 16 occurred the marriage of Alice Marie Evans and Mr. Claud E. Baker at the home of the bride's grandparents, Brother and Sister F. A. Evans, 1223 Cliff Street. P. J. Raw, uncle of the bride, pronounced the ceremony. About forty of the immediate relatives and a few close friends were present. Shortly after the ceremony, they left for Wichita, Kansas, which will be their future home. Sister Alice was a teacher in the Sunday school and will be missed by her class in the primary department.

Elder H. R. Higdon was assigned to North Kansas City by the stake officials and has already held two meetings there, at which J. Charles May has been the speaker, about thirty being present each time. They are handicapped to some extent, as there is no public building which can be secured in which to hold meetings, but must be held in a private house. J. E. Hamilton, 1215 East Twelfth Street, has opened his home for that purpose. Meetings are held on Tuesday night of each week and will continue during the winter. Tuesday was selected in order that others in different parts of the stake could attend and assist.

Elder Thomas Newton has returned from his mission and has visited us and preached twice and will occupy again next Sunday evening. He assisted in establishing the work here on the west side many years ago, and is a welcome visitor here. Bishop F. B. Blair and Priest E. S. Zink have occupied during the preaching hour; and last Sunday Brother Sanders, of the Armourdale church, was with us and preached a sermon that showed much labor and preparation, and was edifying and instructive.

More than a month ago we finished raising the amount assigned us for the Christmas offering. Sunday school and Religio are doing well. A Book of Mormon normal class has been added to the Sunday school, which we hope will accomplish much good.

Monday evening one more was added by baptism. Edward Martin was baptized by the pastor, F. A. Evans, and we rejoice because of this; his wife, Alice Martin, has been a member for many years. Several of the children are members also.

The Scandinavian Mission

A letter from Elder E. Y. Hunker, missionary to Scandinavia, now working in Sweden, written from Stockholm, December 1, is published in Zion's Ensign for December 22. Brother Hunker speaks in an interesting way of his being led to take up the work in foreign countries, having enlightenment as to how he should do this while he was in attendance at Graceland College several years back. He tells of his arrival in Norway in September, how that he went to begin again a foreign mission and was received with gladness by the Saints, of the satisfaction he took in the work, and of his disappointment at being transferred to Sweden, because of the difficulty he knew he would have in speaking the Swedish language and of his unacquaintance with the people and the work. He says that the outlook for work in Norway is better than at any time since his acquaintance with the mission, which covers a period of several years. He also speaks of the return to America of the Johnson family, who have been in mission work there for seven years, and pays them a high tribute for courage and faithfulness in their missionary work.

Notwithstanding the discouragements which Brother Hunker holds to our view, one is not surprised to find that he also is succeeding in presenting the gospel message to the Swedish people.

A close perusal of his letter will carry to the one who reads the humble, truthful, yet withal the courageous spirit of this missionary of the Reorganization who is writing his name for future generations to honor as one who took the gospel across the sea at great sacrifice to himself and with a devotion which must bring the support of the Author of the work. Read Brother Hunker's letter in Ensign of December 22.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni Services

The visit of President F. M. McDowell and pre-Christmas activities have been the central features of the week. The college administration is scheduling a series of lectures by representative men of the church during the winter season, and that of President McDowell opened the series. The pre-Christmas programs came early this year because of the departure of many college students last week-end.

The services at the Brick Church Sunday, December 11, drew large congregations and proved very inspiring. As the voluntary of the eleven o'clock service was played, the vesper chorus of the college, twelve young men directed by Franklyn Weddle, marched to the platform, together with President McDowell and Roy Cheville, the ministers of the morning. The opening hymn was an old familiar one, "God is marshaling his army," and the congregation entered into it enthusiastically. The request was made that all stand reverently for a moment at the close of the prayer, and as they did so the male chorus sang as a response the hymn arrangement of the Lord's prayer. Very quietly the audience was reseated, touched by the worship in song and prayer.

The sermon was a masterful pulpit discourse. The enthusiasm and devotion that come only through loyal activity to the cause of the church were breathed through the sermon. After reviewing the vision of the church, President McDowell affirmed that the church today, in order to accomplish her task, must have in its membership, (1) a firm conviction of the divinity of her purpose, (2) a charging with spiritual life, and (3) an adventuring faith to move out. It was a message to old and young, reassuring that the Church of the Restoration moves on and that God calls his people into immediate tasks.

The annual Christmas concert was given Sunday night. The choir, the A Cappella Chorus, and vocal and instrumental soloists combined in one of the most appreciated sacred concerts given in Lamoni. It was not a spectacular program of musical effects, but one that pictured the story of the life of Christ and carried the meditations of Christmas. Following was the program:

- Voluntary Hymn, "It came upon a midnight clear"
- A Cappella Chorus
- Hymn, "To us a child of hope is born"
- Congregation
- Invocation
- Elder W. E. Prall
- Hymn Anthem, "Come, all ye faithful"
- Choir
- Responsive Reading
- Choir and leader
- Anthem, "Glory to God" from "Messiah"
- Choir
- Cherubim Song, Tschaikowsky
- A Cappella Chorus
- Harp Solo, "The Angelus," Renieu
- Doris Weegar
- Vocal Solo, "Cradle song"
- Frances Hatch
- Ladies' quartet, "Little Town of Bethlehem"—Mrs. Carrie McElroy, Miss Mabel Carlile, Mrs. Wanda Derry, Mrs. J. H. Anthony.
- Instrumental Trio—Charles Ballantyne, violin; Kathryn Skinner, cello; Doris Weegar, harp.
- Hallelujah Chorus from "Messiah"
- Choir
- Sermonet, "Jesus' message to youth"
- F. M. McDowell
- "Beautiful Savior," Christiansen
- A Cappella Chorus
- Benediction.
- Hymn, Postlude, "Silent night"
- Choir

At the College

Each morning this week at eleven o'clock President McDowell has lectured at the college chapel. These have been his lecture subjects:

"The riddle of existence," a discussion of the revelation of modern science, yet its inadequacy to give man a goal and program of living.

"Adventurous youth," a description of youth's love for adventure and consequent need for a philosophy to guide in their ventures.

"Companions in the adventure," a plea for partnership with God and those who are working with him.

"Certain rules of the game," a stimulating review of former lectures on this subject, "Can we do as we please?"

"The great Christian adventure of tomorrow"—a summary of the needs of Christian living and a plea for Gracelanders to launch into the program of the church to make it real.

During the day President McDowell has been busy in personal interviews and meetings, giving the thing in which we seem generally so deficient—pastoral discussion in the problems of life and the work of the church. This visit has given much to the tone of the school.

December 14, the Wednesday before the close of the college, occurred the annual vesper service. Decorated in cathedral setting, with altar candles and evergreen festooning, the chapel invited to worship. The processional of the vesper chorus of young men, the response to prayer, and the music combined in a very impressive service. This year the address was given by W. E. Prall, the local pastor. In interpreting the life of Jesus, he placed three basic foundations as explaining his life—his early home training, his choice of vocation, and his selection of companions. These essentials made direct contact with collegiate life. As the strains of the recessional hymn died away, the audience that filled the room filed out quietly, the meditation of the Christmas message resting with them.

Logan, Iowa

Graceland College Day was observed by our branch with a splendid program at the morning service, in charge of the Graceland and ex-Graceland students present. We had twelve. The platform was decorated with flowers and Graceland colors, and the student body occupied the platform. The pastor was on the platform. He is not a Graceland attendant, but his wife having attended, he claims he is brother-in-law to Graceland College, so we let him participate.

Brother H. L. Peyton, who has recently attended Graceland, gave us a splendid talk, setting forth some of the fine things for which Graceland stands, which make it a college in a class by itself. Those taking part on the program were: H. L. Peyton, Mary Peyton, Alice Worthem, Louis McKain, Gerald and Ruth Gunsolley, Ruby Adams, Merel Hill, Walter Killpack, Homer and Nellie Jackson, Clair Crabb. We are proud of our Graceland, and we hope she will grow into a university before long. We just about doubled our quota, and we have been watching the HERALD for an announcement, to see if the required amount all over the church was raised. Please let us know.

Rolla Salts and wife are the happy and proud parents of a fine baby girl, Opal Darline, a sacred trust placed in their care for the molding of a life for service. We must tell you of another little newcomer, William ("Billy") Ray Gamet, seven and a half pounds, a boy; indeed and we are sure he is going to be a preacher, from the noise he makes once in a while. What is home without a baby? God bless these little buds of promise that come into the homes to bind father and mother closer together and make life sweeter!

We have had some of the visiting brethren of the priesthood from other branches to speak for us, and they are always welcome. We hear the sweet tones of the Christmas bells at this time of the year. We have also heard some other bells ringing, such as wedding bells, and it calls to memory that Sister Alice Worthem has become Mrs. Miles Runkles. We wish them much happiness and joy in life's journey.

Branch business meeting was held December 16, at which time officers were chosen for the coming year. A few changes were made, and we hope the new officers will take hold and lead our people Zionward. Brother Gerald Gunsolley was made branch president, and we are sure he will make a success of his new work, for he has a vision of tasks to be accomplished. A vote of thanks was extended by the branch to our retiring president, Brother W. R. Adams. He has occupied this office nearly eighteen years and is glad to be released and give the reins to a younger man, and hopes to see the work continue to move forward. Reports from the different departments show good work done in the past year. We are proud of our primary department, with Sister Myrtle Crabb as its leader. Who can beat this record—fifty-three enrolled; average attendance forty-two? The future of Logan Branch is assured.

We are approaching the holiday season and are sure there are many things for which we as a people ought to be grateful. As we enter into the days of another year, may it be with a resolve to be more fully devoted to the church and its progress, that when we come to the close we may be able to see a marked degree of advancement.

We wish the Saints throughout the world a Merry Christmas in all that this means, and we trust that the New Year, 1928, shall hold many a choice blessing for God's people.

The Work in Hawaii

A letter from Elder Gilbert J. Waller, dated December 2, speaks very hopefully of the condition of the church in our island territory. After speaking of their organized efforts as a priesthood, Brother Waller says: "The inclosed copy of letter from the deacon of the Hilo Branch, who is a very faithful young man and occupies a responsible Government position, will please you, I am sure, as it gives evidence of a marked improvement in the conditions there. I feel that this young man is called to the office of priest, and when I next visit Hilo I may take up this matter with the members of the priesthood. He is best qualified to preside over the branch. If he continues developing as he has in the past, he will make a valuable man for the church. He is part Hawaiian."

The larger part of the text of the young deacon's letter is interesting, because of its comprehensiveness and directness. It reads in part: "I am inclosing herewith my report for the month of November, including a check to cover the amount, $28.41.

"Since last sacrament meeting, there seems to be a marked improvement in the spiritual condition of the branch. This was especially noticeable at our last few prayer meetings, especially in offering testimonies and prayers. The Spirit of the Master was certainly with us, thus showing to us that the Master will always be ready to pour out his Spirit among us when we are ready to receive it.

"Brothers Kanui, Puuohau, and myself were out visiting this last few days. I enjoyed the visits very much; and not only that, but I was glad because we were able to help and strengthen the sick which we found in some of the homes."

Brother Claud Young, of Portland, Oregon, asks that a request be made through the HERALD for fasting and special prayer by the Saints at the January sacramental service for his wife, Sister Besse Young, who has been very ill for several months and is now in the state hospital for the insane at Salem, Oregon. She is rational at times and has faith that only by the mercy of God she will be healed of this dreadful physical and mental affliction that grips her. The doctors have not helped her, and they give no hope of recovery to her husband, mother, and friends. Sister Young is a very talented musician. She has raised her voice in praise and thanksgiving many times during the past years, and she has inspired the Saints by the spirit of her songs. We know she is in the hands of the Lord, and we pray that the Saints will remember her at the sacramental service and in their prayers around their family altars.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Sunday, November 6, was the advent of another joyful day for the Saints of this branch. The Sunday school in charge of its efficient superintendent, Sister L. B. Shippy, opened at 9.45 a. m., with seventy-six present. If those attending Sunday school sessions only pay heed and treasure up in their minds the instruction given, it will be a lamp to their feet and a light to their pathway to guide and direct them along life's perilous journey and eventually bring them to the haven of rest that the Lord has promised his faithful children.

Sacramental service on this date was in charge of Pastor Robert E. Cowden, assisted by Elders L. B. Shippy and C. J. Cady and Priest J. Clyde Holmes. About sixty were present at this service. The babe of Brother and Mrs. M. R. Schall was blessed by High Priest C. W. Hawkins, and his name, Myron Reed Schall, the name of his father, was recorded. Brother Schall has lately graduated from Stanford University and says that he is making preparation to go into church work in whatever capacity he can best serve. His wife is not yet a member of the church but is very near the kingdom.

Following the ordinance of blessing came a season of prayer, testimony, and song, spiritual and instructive. At the close of this service Brother Meeder Smith and Sister Hulda Shinn received administration. Visitors present were Brother Schall and wife, from Palo Alto; Sister C. H. Gilbert, Hollister; Sister Nellie Gilbert, San Francisco.

Religio at 6 p. m. was in charge of one of our old-time faithful superintendents, Sister Minnie Bates, whose presence was appreciated by all. She is the grandmother of the present superintendent; she has not forgotten how to preside, and we had an interesting session.

Wednesday, November 9, another spiritual prayer meeting was enjoyed. The Spirit moved with such power that everyone in the meeting had to respond to its uplifting influence, the last to respond being a nonmember, a man who does not belong to any church. He arose and bore testimony that the Spirit's power was so great he could not keep his seat. Words of encouragement were given him by the pastor, who presided; and an expression of cheer also was given by one of the other elders. This was a one hundred per cent prayer meeting.

Sunday, November 13, regular services were held in the church and good meetings were had. Pastor Cowden was the morning speaker, and Elder C. J. Cady in the evening.

Another good prayer meeting was had, presided over by Elders Shippy and Cady, the night of November 16. At this service Brother Meeder Smith was administered to by those in charge, and a wonderful degree of the Spirit was given, evidencing the recognition of the Lord.

Uniting with the various departments, the branch held an appropriate Thanksgiving service Sunday, November 20. Pastor Cowden was the morning and evening speaker, Elder Cady assisting in the morning and Priest Harley V. Bates in the evening.

Brother Paul Trotter and family, consisting of his wife, mother, and Paul Junior, from Monterey, motored over through the rain in the afternoon and were in attendance at the evening services. The Religio session was particularly enjoyable.

The following Wednesday evening there was added to our growing list another spiritual prayer service, in which the Saints were given recognition and cause to rejoice.

Regular services were held November 27, Elder L. B. Shippy in charge, Elder C. J. Cady the speaker. At the evening hour, Elder Cady presided and Elder Shippy spoke.

The evening of November 29 there was held what we termed a "sisters'" prayer meeting. Elders C. W. Hawkins and C. J. Cady were in charge, and they were the only real men present, but the sisters are not slackers, and they did their part "womanfully." They made it a one hundred per cent meeting.

Battle Creek, Michigan

December 9.—Battle Creek Branch is running along smoothly. The program committee is busy getting ready for the Christmas program. Sister Young is chairman of this committee and is an efficient worker. She reports a good Christmas program for this year.

About fifty-five Saints from Battle Creek drove to Lansing to see the play, "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon," which was presented by the Lansing Branch. Members of the cast were trained for their parts, and the Saints who came from a distance felt well repaid for their trip.

At the Battle Creek celebration of the Book of Mormon, District President George Harrington was with us and gave us an interesting talk. I am inclosing the picture of a cake which was made by Brother Schaller and Sister Young. Inscription on the cake read, "Book of Mormon, 1827-1927, 100 years." It was very pretty indeed and showed good workmanship.

Brother and Sister Hyatt, of Independence, Missouri, are spending the winter in Battle Creek, where Brother Hyatt is employed by Nichols and Shepherd Threshing Machine Company. We are glad to have them with us.

Brother and Sister Robert Evans were visitors of Brother J. W. McKnight, of Galien, Michigan, where they had an enjoyable time and heard an able discourse on the Book of Mormon by Brother McKnight.

Elder Harrington, district president, has been holding meetings at Buchanan, Michigan.

Brother Kuhn who has been attending college at Kalamazoo, Michigan, is in the hospital at that city. Brother Kuhn has been suffering with mastoid trouble. He is reported to be gaining slowly. Let us remember him in our prayers.

Sister Evans and Sister Robbins were visitors of Sister Cease last Sunday.

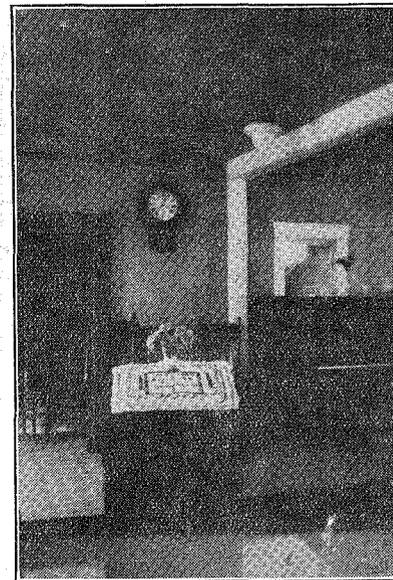

Sister Minnie McCarty has arrived home after spending a few weeks with her sister, Sister Mae Pappas, of Detroit. She reports a good time.

A shower was given Sister and Mr. Vincent Reed, who were recently united in marriage. They received many useful presents.

A baby girl has come to gladden the home of Sister and Mr. John Harrison, of Detroit. Sister Harrison is a member of this branch, daughter of Sister Robbins of Battle Creek. Brother Andrew Cease has returned home after visiting his sister, Mrs. Thomas Hardy, at Onaway, Michigan.

A baby boy has been born to Brother and Sister Ashley, of Battle Creek.

Bishop A. B. Phillips, of Lamoni, Iowa, has been with us for three days, delivering three sermons that we shall do well to remember. We were sorry to have him leave and shall welcome him back.

Conference Notices

The annual district conference of the Little Sioux District will be held at Missouri Valley, January 13, 14, 15, 1928. The Saints are urged to make plans in advance to attend the conference, as arrangements have been made for an interesting program. On Friday evening at 7.30 the program will be in charge of the district Department of Recreation and Expression, while Saturday will be devoted to important business, this being the time for the annual election of officers. Saturday evening at 7.30 Elder Charles J. Smith will present an illustrated lecture; Sunday will be devoted to class work, prayer services, and preaching. Besides the district missionary force, we have the promise of a representative of the Presiding Bishopric and a member of the Quorum of Twelve. All branch presidents' reports should be in the hands of the secretary as soon after the close of the year as possible, in order that there will be time to have them summarized. All district officers, department heads, etc., should present a condensed report covering the year's activities. G. Scott Daniel, district president, 1606 Villa Avenue, Sioux City, Iowa; Mrs. W. R. Adams, Logan, Iowa, secretary.

Requests for Prayers

Brother and Sister James Drader, of Bantry, North Dakota, request the prayers of the Saints for their daughter, Lydvia Barkus, who has cancer. Sister Drader, who writes, expresses her faith in God that if it is his will he can heal her daughter.

Our Departed Ones

GILLIAN.—Rosina Pilgrim Gillian was born in Toronto, Ontario, November 23, 1869. She was baptized a member of the church in Toronto, March 19, 1907. Her husband, John Henry Gillian, was killed a few years ago while riding his bicycle. Sister Gillian departed this life at the home of her daughter, Vada Cluskey, 257 North Lisgar Street, Toronto, November 23, 1927. She leaves a son, Harold, of Detroit, and her daughter, Mrs. Cluskey. Funeral was held from the home, Elder John Shields preaching the sermon.

ANDERSON.—Nora Houri Anderson passed away very suddenly at her home near Shellbrook, Saskatchewan, October 4, 1927. She was born July 14, 1886, near Prince Albert Saskatchewan, a descendant of God's children upon this continent. Married Edwin Byron Anderson in April, 1911. When the fullness of the gospel came to her she was quick to obey, being baptized October 3, 1915. A more patient and kind Saint would have been hard to find. She was known to all as a real mother. Twelve children came to bless her home. To them, as fast as they were able to understand, she taught the truths of the gospel. Funeral services were conducted at the home by Elder E. L. Broennan. Interment in Sturgeon Valley Cemetery. Besides her husband and children, Sister Anderson leaves her mother, several sisters, and a brother.

FRISBIE.—Myron Eugene Frisbie was born May 17, 1855. In November, 1879, he married Fannie A. Johnson in Oakland County, Michigan, and to them were given six children, three boys and three girls. Of these, Elva and Lena, and also the wife and mother have been gathered to the great beyond. In 1900 Brother Frisbie married Alta M. Burdick at Ovid, Michigan, and to them two sons were born, one dying in infancy. Brother Frisbie was baptized into the church in 1888. His was an unimpeachable character. He was a watchman for the Rio Industrial Plant. After an illness of seven weeks, he died November 26, 1927. Surviving are his wife, four sons, Clayton, of Detroit; Ray, of Lansing; Ira, of Ovid; and Guy, of Lansing; one daughter, Mrs. Glenn Sager, of Flint, Michigan; one stepson, Boyd Fitch, of Detroit; fourteen grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, four brothers, Jay, of Detroit; Ira, William, and Albert, of Shepherdsville; and one sister, Mrs. N. B. Goodfellow, of Ovid. Funeral was conducted at Jarvis-Estic Funeral Home, Lansing, November 28, 1927. Elder S. W. L. Scott preaching the sermon, assisted by the Baptist minister. A procession of thirty-eight cars followed the body to Ovid Cemetery, twenty-nine miles from the city, and attended the committal service.

CLARK.—Isabelle Young was born in Pittington, Durham County, England, July 19, 1837. In 1855 she was united in marriage to Edward Henry Clark, and to them were born four sons and four daughters. The family came to America in 1881, locating at Cable, Illinois. They later moved to Gilchrist, where Mrs. Clark united with the Reorganized Church February 8, 1908. The family moved to Matherville in 1912, and it was there that Sister Clark passed away November 13, 1927. She is survived by the following children: Mrs. Isabelle Watkins, of Oklahoma, James, of Peoria; Mrs. Mary Maurer, Mrs. Anna Allison, and Thomas, of Matherville. Her husband and three children, Robert, Edward, and Barbara, preceded her in death. Funeral services were held at the Saints church in Matherville, Elder George Sackfield, of Rock Island, officiating, assisted by John Lindburg, of Matherville.

SLACK.—Nese Slack was born September 15, 1878, in Harrison County, Missouri. Married Charles W. Slack March 15, 1896, and to them were born ten children, eight of whom are living. She joined the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 23, 1906. Died after a four months' illness, November 17, 1927, at the Independence Sanitarium, Independence, Missouri. Sister Slack was a member of the South Bend and Mishawaka (Indiana) Branch. Funeral conducted by J. W. McKnight. Surviving are her children: Walter, of Decatur, Illinois; Roy, of Harrisburg, Illinois; and Fred, Claude, Charles, jr., Almeda, Homer, and Edward, at home; two grandchildren, her father, Edward Wooten, of Wichita, Kansas; J. W. Wooten, of Wichita, and Mrs. Sarah Murry, of Detroit, Michigan.

HATTEY.—Charles Thomas Hattey was born November 8, 1891, at Toronto, Ontario. Was baptized May 27, 1900, by his father, Elder C. T. Hattey. Passed away at his home in Toronto, October 4, 1927. Besides his wife he leaves to mourn, father and mother, two brothers, and six sisters. Funeral sermon was by Elder John Shields. Interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

ATKINSON.—George William Atkinson was born in Beetown Township, Wisconsin, January 25, 1851, and lived near Beetown all his life. In 1872 he was married to Caroline Mayne. One daughter, Stella, blessed this home. Shortly thereafter the mother died. About four years later Brother Atkinson married Martha Elizabeth Mayne, and five children came to bless this union, two dying in infancy. About thirty years ago Brother Atkinson came into the church and has always been a firm believer of the gospel. He died December 12, 1927, at the home of his son Frank, leaving to mourn his departure his wife and four children, Stella Klarman, Ocea Marshall, Della Kartman, and Frank; two sisters, Mrs. Susan Redman and Mrs. Emma Welsh; seven grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Funeral services were held December 14, 1927, in the Saints' church at Flora, Wisconsin. Interment in the little cemetery near the church. Sermon by Elder Leonard Houghton.

WYATT.—Lydia Ann Brimhall, daughter of Norman and Samantha Lake, was born at Ogden, Utah, June 7, 1855. Her father owned a large farm where the city of Oxford now stands. Her mother lived in the eastern States at the time of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Her mother belonged to the church at that time and stood much persecution for the cause she loved. Lydia Ann was the only one of her large family belonging to the Reorganized Church, the rest being affiliated with the Utah faith. She was baptized by Joseph Smith, son of the Prophet, in Salt Lake City. Married John E. Wyatt in 1870 and to them were born five children. Three children and her husband preceded her in death. Died September 17, 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anna Laura Jones, Burley, Idaho. Surviving her are her daughter, Mrs. Jones, and a son, B. F. Wyatt, of Burley. The funeral was conducted from the Christian Church, sermon by R. B. Chamber, of Rupert, assisted by Arthur Condit. Music was furnished by Velma Connel, of Rupert. Interment in Pleasant View Cemetery.

HOLMES.—Claud Holmes was born June 22, 1880, at Pomeroy, Kansas. Died November 26, 1927, at Kansas City, Missouri, aged forty-seven years, five months, and four days. He leaves three sisters and other relatives. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in his youth by Elder Roderick May.

Conference Minutes

FLORIDA DISTRICT.—Conference was held with Pensacola Branch, December 3 and 4; presided over by President F. M. Smith and Apostle R. S. Budd. After his arrival District President A. D. McCall was associated with them in presiding, but was unable to be present at the opening session. Statistical reports from Pensacola, Alafloza, Milton, Local, and Coldwater Branches, and the nonresident group showed a gain of 39 members since last report. Flomatom and Santa Rosa Branches did not report. Annual election of district officers resulted in A. D. McCall being reelected district president by unanimous vote. S. G. Allen and C. T. West, vice presidents; C. T. West, district secretary; E. N. McCall, district treasurer; S. G. Allen, district superintendent of Sunday schools; Mrs. S. G. Allen, district Sunday school secretary; C. C. Rummel, superintendent of Recreation and Expression; Mrs. S. G. Allen, superintendent of Women's Department; Mrs. A. D. McCall, district chorister. S. G. Allen was ordained to the office of elder by President Smith, at Sunday morning prayer service. At the preaching services, there were those present from the entire Florida District, and some from the Mobile District, as well. President Smith was the speaker Saturday at 7.30 p. m., Sunday at 11 a. m., 2 p. m., and again at 7.30 p. m. The Saints of the South have had a rare privilege in becoming acquainted with the man chosen to lead latter-day Israel, and much appreciate his visit.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.—District conference met at Bevier, Missouri, November 20 and 21, President B. S. Tanner and S. J. Joyce presiding; William C. Chapman, clerk. Minutes of previous conference read and approved. Bevier was the only branch reporting. Elders B. S. Tanner, C. J. Peten, F. Lofty, and S. J. Joyce reported, also Priests Ivor Surridge, F. L. McKane, Carl Weeks, Orville Tremain; Deacons W. T. Hicklin, and W. H. Payne. The district treasurer's report was read and referred to the auditing committee to report next conference. Higbee Branch was declared disorganized. Business meeting of the conference was changed from Monday to Saturday. The district being fifty years old February 16, 1928. It was decided to hold a celebration, and the president and secretary of the district and presidents of Bevier and Macon Branches were elected a committee to make arrangements. Time and place of next conference were left in the hands of the district presidency.

The Blue Bird Manual

This new edition of the manual of the Blue Bird Band, originally written by Estella Lentell and revised by Lenoir Woodstock, is a pretty booklet of sixty-four pages in blue paper cover, filled with good helps and interesting reading and instruction intended primarily for girls of pre-adolescent age, and particularly for those who would become or who are members of the Blue Bird Band. It contains:

- How to Organize
- Helps for Leaders
- Program Suggestions
- Conduct of Meetings
- Ceremonies and Activities
- Special Songs, Games, etc.

It justifies the title of Blue Bird Manual, and may be purchased through your branch publicity agent or direct from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, at the price of twenty-five cents.

The New Year

With this number, the SAINTS' HERALD completes its seventy-fourth volume and its sixty-eighth year, and in greeting our readers with wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year we can not but express the hope that we shall throughout the year be helpful to them and uplifting, and merit continued support given us by our readers.

We face the year's work with our eyes fixed upon the goal of the church, and with an increased zeal for the accomplishment of Zion, and we feel our task to be to promote in every way the interest of the gathering of the Saints. Around these objectives cluster a large group of activities, not the least of which is that of teaching one another the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the promotion of a richer and fuller fraternity. To these tasks we devote ourselves with an earnestness which we trust is an index of our loyalty to the cause for which this paper has stood for more than two thirds of a century.

It is our hope that we shall not only increase the number of our readers this year, but also the number of contributors to our columns, with the purpose in view of increasing the number of approaches to the interesting and profitable subjects of study and information which go to make up the advance to perfection which Paul had in mind when he said, "Leaving not the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, let us go on to perfection."

So, dear readers, and members of the HERALD family, we join you in the determination to make this year the best of our journalistic life. Onward to 1930 and beyond, for Zion the Beautiful beckons us on.

The Value of Christmas

Christmas is just another holiday, or it is the most far-reaching and important day which comes in the course of the year.

If it be just another holiday, then we have lost its real significance—have permitted the cause for its setting apart to be buried by a multitude of minor or insignificant customs.

Should we conclude that is first in importance and significance, it is obligatory upon those who observe it under this comprehension to see that no superficial custom, no matter how catchy or pleasing its character, shall be permitted to obscure its meaning or to divide its purpose.

The preparation which precedes the celebration of the twenty-fifth day of December as a holiday extends farther than does the preparation for any other holiday—it is almost world wide, and in this comes very near to standing alone. It extends over a longer period, occupying an intensive use of at least thirty days in business, home, schools, and some other divisions of life.

The preparation involves more in the use or investment of money and property than does the preparation for any other, and reaches into every avenue of trade with which America and the modern world is concerned.

Society, good and bad, high and low, wholesome and dissipated, uses more time in providing for the celebration of the day than is used in anticipation of the recurring of any other date or period.

No time of year is so nearly universally used for the renewal of every desirable association or friendship or family tie, whether the purpose be high or low, philanthropic or mercenary.

Since the earliest hour of my memory, to me the joys of the Christmas season have been accompanied by some thoughts given by men or women who are serious minded and could not bear to leave an opportunity unimproved to impress me that the true value of Christmas lay in the fact that the lesson of giving could then be taught as fundamental and desirable. Dutifully I have tried to absorb this thought, though the tide of custom and the general comprehension of the people with whom I have been associated have made it difficult for me to conceive this as correct.

Finally, after some years spent in maturity, I read a passage from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants which gave me a new thought, though the subject of the declaration was outside Christmas and its meaning. The passage was one declaring woe unto the rich man who would not impart of his substance to the poor, and woe to the poor man who was not satisfied, and who laid his covetous hands upon the goods of others. Of course I had thought of the enormity of the offense of the rich man; but my mind had not been fully open to the poorness of the man who could not be satisfied and could not banish covetousness.

And so the Christmas season has come to mean to me, not only a time for giving, but a time for receiving, a time when one must consider all sides of all questions that bear upon life and its activities. And its value lies in the lessons of life which it teaches me. To give because I would bring joy, and my gifts will therefore be of a character to suit a need of the recipient. To receive because I would be benefited not for the moment, but as a loving father, a solicitous brother, a friend, would seek me out and benefit me for the present and for all time.

Christmas teaches the big lessons of life, and in that it is the great day of the year. It must not be perverted by cheap customs or by formal observances, but freedom must obtain in order that the conception of truth may be adequate. R. J. L.

Love's Omnipotence

Love made the starry universe above,
 For God who made the universe is Love,
 When God would teach mankind to know his name,
 He breathed into man's soul a living flame
 Of deathless love; transformed an inert clod
 Into an image of the living God.
 The God of Love gave man his highest dower
 When in man's heart he put love's mighty power,
 For love alone ennobles man's estate
 And makes his puny being strong and great;
 Removes him far above the earthly plane
 And sets him 'midst the angels' heavenly train.
 The love God breathed on man with his first breath
 Upholds him until life shall end in death.

—E. Guy Talbott.

War registers the failure of religion to function in the social order in accordance with its essential genius. . . . The fact remains that in Christendom a war means and can mean nothing less than the impotence of the Christian church in face of its unique and essential responsibilities. Whatever is to be said of the past, we can not escape the fact that another war will expose the spiritual bankruptcy of ethical religion. The church may carry on its institution life; it may exhibit many virtues of personal piety and organized charity; but unless it does something fundamental about war, its inaction and impotence will be a confession that the world church is morally unequal to its world responsibility, that its transforming power is unequal to the power of evil, that the gates of hell do indeed prevail against it.—Charles Clayton Morrison.

CHAPTER 18

In the spring of 1888 the General Conference was held in the basement of the Stone Church at Independence, Missouri, and was a very lively and interesting conference.

At the Sunday morning service, the late Joseph Smith was to preach, Mark H. Forscutt conducting the service. A short time before the service started, Brother Joseph arose, walked out to the edge of the platform, and beckoned me to the platform. Upon my arrival there, he informed me that he wanted me to offer the invocation. In a very harsh and emphatic voice I demanded to know why he wanted me to offer the prayer when Brother Forscutt was there to assist him. He merely signaled for me to take my place on the platform. I never felt so miserable in my life. The chills ran up and down my back. I started to yawn, and it seemed I could never stop. I could not think of one thing about which to pray, and every time I looked out upon that audience I felt worse. After the singing of the first hymn (and the singing was good, although it did not seem so to me), Brother Forscutt announced that I would offer the invocation. I remember walking up to the stand and placing my hands thereon. The next thing I knew, that dark, horrible cloud that seemed to hold me down was taken away, the Holy Spirit descended upon me, and I began to pray. My voice changed, the tears streamed down my face, and when I finished nearly all of the audience were in tears. I never had such an experience before; I simply prayed through the Spirit.

At the close of the service, I apologized to Brother Joseph for my rather abrupt statement before the service, and he advised me never to refuse to perform any duty that I might be called upon to perform, but to do as I was requested and leave the consequences with the Lord. This I have endeavored to do, responding many times when it seemed to me a stupendous task.

On the 7th day of August, 1888, our third boy, Frank Edwin, was born in Kirtland, Ohio.

At this time I owned nearly one half of the Temple Lot, having procured it from parties who had paid the taxes on it for twenty-one years. This plot covered almost all of that part upon which the grove now stands, to the left of the Temple. I used to plant potatoes to within about ten feet of the Temple. I later sold the same to the church and moved the house to a lot on a back street, adding another story, as well as making an addition to the front of it. This house was at one time used as an office by Joseph Smith the Martyr.

I continued to preach in this mission, baptizing many, and was wonderfully blessed of the Lord in my work.

On December 6 I had an interview with Mr. Daniel D. Spalding, a nephew of Solomon Spalding, in the presence of Mr. Jerome Beardsley, at Conneaut, Pennsylvania, in which he told something of the writings of his uncle concerning the American Indians. This interview is recorded on page 612, volume 4, History of the Church, and is as follows:

Q. What is your given name, Mr. Spalding?

A. Daniel D. Spalding.

Q. How old are you?

A. I am eighty-two years old.

Q. How long have you resided in this vicinity?

A. About sixty years.

Q. How closely were you related to Solomon Spalding?

A. He was my father's brother.

Q. How old were you the last time you saw your uncle?

A. Between ten and eleven years of age.

Q. Then you remember him well?

A. Oh, yes. He was a very sickly man, and the last time I saw him was at Conneaut Creek, just before he went to Pittsburgh, where he died shortly afterwards.

Q. What did your uncle do for a living?

A. He was a land agent, and my father said he was a scoundrel and used to cheat the people out of their money and property.

Q. Was he much of a scholar?

A. No. He had some natural talent, but he was not very smart; but very lazy. Then he wrote the manuscripts that the Mormons call the Book of Mormon to make money out of it.

Q. How did the Mormons get the manuscripts?

A. I don't know. (Here his daughter, a lady about fifty years old, replied, "His widow gave them to Joseph Smith, jr.")

Q. Is there not a story afloat that Sidney Rigdon stole them?

A. I had not heard that before.

Q. Mr. Spalding, did you ever see the manuscripts or the Book of Mormon?

A. No.

Q. What did Mr. Spalding write about?

A. I heard my father say it was a story about the Indians.

Q. Was your uncle a minister?

A. He was not; neither did he belong to any church.

Q. Then you do not know whether the Book of Mormon and the manuscript are the same or not?

A. No. Only what I have heard people say; have not seen either.

CHAPTER 19

In the spring of 1889, the General Conference was held at Saint Joseph, Missouri. President Joseph Smith was absent, being in California.

Apostle E. C. Briggs and I were in associate charge of the mission of the States of Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and Western Pennsylvania, and it was during this year that we separated the Kirtland District from the Pittsburgh District. I performed ministerial labor throughout the two districts.

Elders James Moler, Thomas Matthews, D. L. Shinn, J. L. Goodrich, Lorenzo Powell, J. T. Beatty, L. R. Devore, James Brown, and T. W. Williams, as well as a number of missionaries, were under my direction during this year.

In the spring of 1890, General Conference convened at Lamoni, Iowa, at which time Apostle E. C. Briggs and I organized the Third Quorum of Priests and the Second Quorum of Teachers.

One of the most important revelations given to the church through President Joseph Smith was given at this conference, and the experience of approving it was similar to that of approving the revelation given in 1887. The Quorum of Twelve and the Presidency had sought the Lord in earnest prayer and fasting for this revelation, and the Spirit of the Lord was present to such a degree during its reading before the conference that there was not a dry eye in the assembly; even the children present were touched by its power. All went home from the conference rejoicing.

I was again appointed in charge of Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and Western Pennsylvania, those under me being just about the same ones as in the previous year. Throughout the year I continued to preach with an effort to build up the work and to direct the missionaries under me.

On September 20 of this year Brother George H. Blakeslee, Presiding Bishop of the church, died at Galien, Michigan. This brother had been as a father to me, and I felt very sad upon learning of his death. He was possessed of wonderful executive ability, and while not an orator, he could excel anyone I had ever heard in exhortation. The Saints had implicit confidence in his integrity. E. L. Kelley, one of his counselors, took charge of the bishop's affairs until a new bishop could be chosen.

A short time before the death of Bishop Blakeslee, E. L. Kelley had related to me a dream, asking my opinion of it. In this dream he was told that the time was coming when he would occupy in the office of presiding bishop, and that while in that position he would also act as a counselor to President Joseph Smith. He was also told that while serving as presiding bishop and counselor to the President of the church, he would be filling the same position as did James, the Lord's brother, in the ancient church. Neither of us could understand how the dream could be fulfilled. However, in the spring of 1891 Brother Kelley was ordained presiding bishop, and in 1897, he, with Alexander H. Smith, was called by revelation to act as counselor to Joseph Smith, in which office he served for five years. Thus the dream was literally fulfilled, the fulfilling of which proves my contention that Peter was president of the church, and that James, the Lord's brother, was the bishop and acted as counselor.

On December 3, 1890, our fourth boy, William Henry, was born at Kirtland, Ohio.

The spring conference of 1891 was held at Kirtland, Ohio, at which time the name of E. L. Kelley was presented for ordination to office of presiding bishop, which ordination was approved and provided for by the general church body. This was a very spiritual conference. My mission continued as before, with the same missionaries. All of these men were faithful and active in their work, good mixers, and took well with the people. I truly deemed it an honor and a privilege to be associated with such a splendid group of men.

In 1892 the General Conference was held at Independence, Missouri. From this conference I was appointed to the European Mission, associated with Apostle J. W. Gillen. We set sail from New York June 27 of that year on the steamer Etruia, accompanied by John R. Evans, Richards, Sorensen, and a few others. One week from the day of sailing from New York we arrived in Liverpool, England. We went to the Hotel Liverpool on the following Sunday and held a meeting, arranging our program for ministerial work for that point and for other parts of Europe. Brother Gillen and I then went to Birmingham, while Brother Richards and Brother Evans went to Wales. I also labored at this latter place for a short time previous to the mission conference at Leeds.

Thomas Taylor, with whom we sojourned while in Birmingham, had been in charge of the mission for many years, and a more true and faithful man could not be found. Some time later he was ordained bishop by E. L. Kelley, of the First Presidency, and myself. While here we also met C. H. Caton, secretary of the mission.

At the mission conference at Leeds we met Joseph Dewsnup, sr., whom I consider one of the most active and intelligent ministers the Reorganization has ever had in that country. He was a true and faithful servant, an executive by nature, and possessed a commanding appearance. Some thought he was a little rigid in his enforcement of the laws, but my personal observation showed him to have a very tender heart. One of his sons, Joseph, jr., followed in his father's footsteps in the ministry, he, too, being very faithful until the time of his death.

During the first year Brother Gillen returned to the States, but I continued until midwinter of 1894.

I formed the acquaintance of some fine and noble Saints. The great majority of them were not rich, but they tried to provide for us, and sometimes at great sacrifice on their part.

We experienced some very fine spiritual meetings at the mission conferences, having as many as one hundred elders present.

It was at the first mission conference that I met John W. Rushton, who was then a lad of about sixteen years. He manifested at that age a natural gift for public speaking. He was quite a student. He was employed in a drug store and was held in high esteem by his employers, as they felt they could trust him, regardless of the responsibility they placed upon him. Brother Rushton was ordained a priest while still a boy, and did all within his power to magnify his calling. When it was known that the "boy preacher" was going to occupy the pulpit, there was always a good crowd to hear him. This excited jealousy among some of the older men, but the young man continued to go forward. I never saw him become "heady" or high minded, but he continued to pursue his even way, always displaying a spirit of love and kindness towards those with whom he was associated. He is a splendid mixer and makes friends wherever he goes. He is a capable minister and fills the pulpit creditably before an audience of any grade of society.

John R. Evans remained in this mission with me, we returning together to New York. He was beloved by all and accomplished a work of lasting good. He was patient, kind, and considerate of others, and the mission missed him much when he left. He went from house to house, praying with and instructing the Saints in their duties toward God and man.

While on this mission, January 10, 1893, our daughter Harriet Margaret was born at Kirtland, Ohio. She was walking and playing around before I ever saw her. I was denied the pleasure of her association in her early baby days. This was a new and trying experience for me. Through the providence of God she still lives, and with her two sisters, Martha Lucretia and Catherine, is a source of pleasure and comfort to me.

The West for want of proper judgment and poise, believes in change of any kind as a remedy for the tedium of work and idleness; it values as progress whatever increases sensuous pleasures, and neglects whatever conduces to the purity of the eternal spirit. Nervous restlessness is not the mark of true civilization, and the steady backsliding of every class into lower depths of worldliness, irreligion, and frivolity is utterly inconsistent with true progress.—Mr. Ramanathan, Solicitor-General in Ceylon, in 1908.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Realism and Idealism of Forgetting

Address of Doctor Homan, November 27 1927, at Walnut Park Church, Independence, Missouri. Mrs. A. Morgan, reporter.

I am more than glad to be with you again, and I have always held the while I spent with you some little time ago as one of the really bright spots of my life. I have felt that there was a spirit here—some will tell you I say that wherever I go, but I don't; but it seems to me there is a spirit here that the moment I stepped inside the church reached out to greet me. There's a spirit of—oh, I don't know whether you call it organization, or call it loyalty, or shall we just get right down to brass tacks and call it just a good, honest, clean, wholesome Christian spirit.

It seemed to me that with the talent you people have here in a musical way, and with this sort of a spirit back of you, there is no reason why with the advantages of this church, and organization of this church, it could not be extended for miles and miles. In fact, there will be no limit to this sort of an activity that springs from that sort of spirit.

I am glad for the song that was sung this morning, for I feel confident that if you people could all stand and repeat that song with me, and at the close of that song you would say, "That shall be my creed," I could just quit and go home. I would have the whole thing done. You people would be just as far as you will ever get until you are translated to that eternal home, if we just lived up to the creed that was given in the song, "My task." I wish every one of you would get the words of that. I wish every one of you would get those words on a little card, and save that card, and set it up in front of your desk, or the place where you have your trials and tribulations, the place where you meet the world, and look at it once in a while, and read it occasionally, and live it all the time.

I have chosen for my subject this morning, the realism and idealism of forgetting. It sounds just a little bit like school, and that blackboard makes it sound more so, I know, but you will have to pardon the sounding and the blackboard, because I am going to use it and can not help that sounding the way it does.

I am going to explode the whole subject by saying we can not forget about anything we do. It is an impossibility for you and me to forget. I suspect that we will have to rewrite some of the things; I suspect that the Recessional will have to be rewritten from the way Kipling has told us, "O Lord of hosts, be with us; I can't forget; I can't forget," to "O Lord of hosts, be with us; I can't recall; I can't recall"; just as good meter and means the same thing.

You and I have stored up in our memories every experience we have ever had, and we can not get around it. How should we bring this up? It takes an associate thought, a similar thought, or something of that sort to make us recall certain experiences in our past.

Now we talk a great deal about forgetting. We wonder just exactly what we mean by forgetting. I think the most of our forgetting and forgiveness is like that of Pat who was fatally injured, and the priest came to him and said, "Well, Pat, you are going to cross the Great Divide," and Pat replied, "I will; no doubt," and then the priest said, "Well, Pat, one of the things you have to do is to forgive everybody," and Pat sort of raised his head. "Do you forgive everybody?" "Does that include Mike?" "Yes." "Well, I will forgive him," and then, under his breath, he said, "if I die. But if I live, I will see about it later." That is about the kind of forgiveness most of us have. When some one does us some little funny trick, we will "forgive him if we die."

I occasionally do research work in a dictionary, when I can not bluff my way through; and in looking up in the dictionary the word forget, I found it said: "To obliterate; to completely annul; to completely restore." Now we can not do that. That isn't the creed I am going to preach to you this morning. Not at all—in regard to the question of forgetting. We can not obliterate. We can not obliterate our past experiences. They are there, and there to stay. We may have grown away from the situation where they are, and find ourselves in a new situation, so that we recall with difficulty; and we may go on moving ourselves from situation to situation, and so on, until it is much more difficult to recall the particular thing.

How wonderful that is, that particular part of the forgetting business, when it comes to a great grief or sorrow. Some know what it is to stand beside an open grave, and to think the world has gone; and how wonderful it is, in a short time, comparatively, to move out to new situations and surroundings, and the association recalled is more difficult all the time. Wonderful! Marvelous!

I want to talk about the business of remembering, first, before we talk about the forgetting. You and I have memories, I suspect, and that you have heard frequently when you have gone home and forgotten the meat for dinner—or something else that was quite important that you should remember—that you have been quite forgetful, when you are not. You stored that thing away, but you were not very careful about where you stored it. That is the difficulty.

For instance: I am going to draw a large circle on this blackboard. I will draw it, and you imagine it is a circle. I am going to call that the subconscious mind, for the subconscious mind is the thing inside our make-up that goes on all the time.

You know, I sometimes have felt in my heart to wish we could revise our Good Book in regard to some of the things it says, and when we talk about, "Out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh," and "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," I wish I could change heart to mind, because it follows along ancient traditions to believe that the heart is the seat of mental things; but it is simply a pumping engine that keeps blood pumping all through our system.

Here we have the subconscious mind. Now the subconscious mind, to change the name of it a little bit, would be a mental storehouse. A mental storehouse; what is it? That is the place where we put all of our experiences, and rescue them when we want to.

I picked up one of our magazines day before yesterday and found something like five times in that magazine where a course in memory training was offered; where your memory could be trained to many times its present capacity for, oh, say, something like $15.95 a course. But you don't need to pay that. You come over to my desk some day and I will tell you in ten minutes how to do it.

If you want just to file your experiences in your memory book until it gets just about so full, and then go in there and try to pick out some experience, you will have trouble; like going up in that attic after you have lived in the house twenty years, to find something. Instead of that, you must divide your mental storehouse up into its separate divisions, and we must have a division for each thing, and then put the particular thing we are storing away in its place, and know where we are putting it, and what sort of facts we are putting it with.

For instance, if you take French history: We would be very foolish to put Napoleon over here with some other mixture of mental experiences that we have had. We would put Napoleon up there with Marie Antoinette probably, or some of the Louises up there—Louis XIV, Louis XV, Louis XVI, or some of that bunch, who tried to reign once upon a time in French history.

When I think of Jesse James we are in the field of Jesse James's endeavor—and try to place him.

It seems to me that I would almost have two places for him. I would have a place in the Middle West history of the United States, as a peculiar sort of individual who thought he had certain rights to do certain things that he liked. I would have another group of men in history who have robbed other men—Robin Hood. I can not think of one without thinking of the other. Even their activities were the same. Jesse James had the same sort of story to tell—of robbing certain men to pay the poor widow and so on.

If we were more careful to put that same sort of thing together, then when we tried to recall it would come easy. If we would do a little thinking when putting away the facts, then we would know just exactly where to go and get that very fact and bring it out again.

Margaret Magregor wrote a book or two, and she claimed that there was a conscious entrance to the subconscious, and that she was capable of closing up her conscious entrance, and then her subconscious mind "just wandered around," and she wrote her book under that sort of condition, I suspect. At least, the book sounds like it. When you read it you think it is only a little bit of mental wandering. Her idea is that you can close that up just as in a dream.

What is a dream anyway? A dream is the subconscious activity of the mind, when we are in the transition from sleeping to waking, or waking to sleeping. You never dream when sound asleep. You always dream when half awake, and you will awaken some morning and come downstairs with a terrible tale of woe—that you had dreams a-l-l night. But you just dreamed a part of the night, and maybe a small part at that. For instance, the time that it takes anyone to dream the longest dream is twenty-four seconds. Why, the biggest volume or book on earth would not record the dreams you would have in one night if you could dream all the night. That has been experimentally tried out; so that we know. In fact, I have a report on one very healthy individual who was permitted to sleep just twenty-two seconds, and she spent three days at a county fair—in twenty-two seconds. So you get an idea of how fast your brain can travel if you set it loose.

Now, don't turn that brain loose in Kansas City, as far as speed is concerned. You begin to get an idea, don't you, that with that sort of speed how wonderfully we could do things if we just set our minds to the task. You know that we don't. We growl and we grumble.

We have a great task before us that is really worth while, and yet we sit down and say, Oh, I can't do it! Then, after a while, some one comes along and they go right after that task and accomplish it, get paid for it, perhaps, and we sit down and say, Well, we haven't any luck, anyway. You mean that we haven't any ginger; any pep. We are downright, honest-to-goodness, cross-your-heart lazy. That is the reason we didn't accomplish the task, or get it done.

I wonder if I just tried for ten minutes, if I could have a little statement from some of the mothers here as to the way their daughter's trunk looked when she came back from college sometime. If you were to ask them for something in that trunk, if it wouldn't take some time to find it. So you readily see that every experience that we have had is stored away; but how? We can not forget it. Now, in the realism of things we don't want to forget. Oh, I have heard people say, If I could just forget! A girl came to me with rather a sad experience back of her, down in Kansas City, and she said to me as I talked things over, If I could just forget! I said, No, you don't want to forget. In the first place, you can't. It is silly wishing that we could forget something we can not. You don't want to. You want to weave all these mistakes into some sort of fabric; so every time you look at that fabric it will guide you as you go on, and will make your life better, and more noble, because you have made those mistakes in the past. Don't go along and make a lot of mistakes, for you and I have enough mistakes, as it is, if we could see them. We made a mistake once upon a time. Therefore, we don't need to make that one again. We can go on and watch out for those little stumblingblocks.

Then the idealism—we don't want to forget some of the things. We don't want to forget some of the scenes we have seen. I don't even want to forget that evening when I stood on a great hill in one of our Northern States and watched the sun set. I don't want to forget that evening, a little bit later, when I stood beside one of those gigantic rough pines that have stood the storm of years, and stood there against that pine and listened to its whisper in the silent air above me, and looked out over that marvelous Lake Superior. The moon was coming up, and its beautiful ribbon of light was glancing and dancing down to me, and I saw boats go back and forth. I don't want to forget that scene, and that is a little bit of God's painting, and it is much more marvelous than the paintings of man. Why should I forget?

Then occasionally you and I need to remember a certain cross that we have had, that we may go back and regain the faith we had at that time.

I will tell you a little story of a different church than this. That doesn't make any difference. We believe God lives in all churches. Just like the family relation. Every family has marvelous people in it, and every family has one member that we worry about; that we are not just proud of. So I want to go into the Northland just a moment, and take you to the city of Duluth; to the Saint James Orphanage, run by good Catholic sisters. As you look out over the hills and across that magnificent valley, you can imagine it at one time clothed with the great pines of the north. It is a late October evening in 1918. It has been smoky all day; terribly smoky; and as evening approaches, cars go whizzing past on the road leading to the city of Duluth. Every boat has docked. Every known thing is done, because word has come from the north that a forest fire is raging—the terror to northern people. Word has come down as early as noon, that the fire is advancing at the rate, in some places, of sixty miles an hour; but out there at the Saint James Orphanage at half past five a great big fire truck, trying to do what it could, has stopped, and the fire chief is speaking to Sister Rose. He stepped down and said, "We have room here for about a dozen on this truck. Do you want to go? No; we can not take your one hundred and twenty children. We have got to get down in our part of the city in about an hour, because the firebrands will fall all over the city of Duluth tonight." Sister Rose turned to the custodian janitor, and said, "You may go if you want to. I don't know that you can do any good here." The janitor, an old man, looked at her and said, "Desert the children here? No; I won't," and he stepped back in the doorway. She turned to the novices—three of them there. "You may go back if you care to." There were just three sisters left there then, but the novices stepped back and said, "Not if the children can not go; we will not." Then she turned to the three sisters and said, "What say you?" They said, "We will stay with you."

Sometimes we talk about the bravery on the battle front, and I grant you there is bravery there. You and I were drawn into service a few years ago and had a chance to go over and travel over No Man's Land, and the people gave us great ovations as we marched down to the station, you remember; and we forget, sometimes, as Edgar Guest has told us, that it is the mother at the side of the boy who is marching to the front who suffers. There is just as much bravery sometimes in some little incidents of life as on the front: back there in that little old living room when somebody opens the paper and looks anxiously and fearfully over the list of dead and wounded—just as much as there is on that stormy battle front.

The fire truck went on down the street into the city, there to station its men all over its section, watching for burning brands that would be falling inside of an hour. The children were put down in the basement of that place. The three sisters, the novices, and the janitor were put down in there with them, and then Sister Rose went up to that upper window looking toward the west, where great long shoots of flame were blazing up; and falling down on her knees there, she began to pray, with her crucifix to her lips, while the roar grew louder and louder, and the glass in front of her began to check, or break every which way; and she bowed her head down and waited. The roar came and the roar surrounded her, and the roar passed, and she raised her head and saw the fire down in the northern end of the town, that it had gone around her and swept on, in all its fury, burning out something like one hundred and twenty homes on the lake shore.

One evening, when I was in the home, I happened to be passing that western window, and Sister Rose was standing there looking out toward the west, not noticing me as I came up; and I, not thinking of the solemnity to her, said, "Sister Rose, you can thank your God"; and she said, "I do sometimes wonder if you men are not sometimes cynical; if you do not occasionally wonder if there is such a thing as a special Providence." Then she told to me the story as I have told it to you, and said, "Every once in a while, when I get down and out; when I feel that everything is against me, too sick and tired to work, almost, I come up to this window, and I regain the faith I had once upon a time, and go down from this window absolutely filled with faith in the God that I serve."

That's the way with you and me. We don't want to forget. We must go back, once in a while, to regain that faith, and we have got to go back to the Cross, where we got it in the first place—experience the tragedy, whatever it is, and then come out reborn, ready to fight the fight of life. So, we don't want to forget!

We don't want to forget the beauties of everything about us. We don't want to forget the symbolism of things. You and I by our memory must remember the beauties of symbolism, for you can not look down into one of these magnificent flowers, or any flower on earth, without standing there with your head uncovered almost—look down into the little faces of these flowers and see some beauty in them, with which nothing man-made can compare.

In our cities we have a glass-flower house where they manufacture all kinds of wonderful glass flowers. It is true, but I am a little bit like Riley, who said, "Just give me a good old June day somewhere, with a little bit of flowers along the way, and I think it will be marvelous."

In that very connection of the beauty of things, of the experiences we have, James Whitcomb Riley again said that you and I have forgotten our childhood. That is what is the matter with youth today—we older people have forgotten our childhood. The boys and girls come to me saying, "Doctor Homan, I feel like I would blow up." No, you can not do that. A boy came to me—just a fine fellow; I know him quite well, and I said, "Zell, what in the world is the matter with you tonight?" He said, "When you get through I would like to talk to you." "I am through now; go ahead." Then he told me a marvelous tale. He didn't dare to tell it to his mother as he did to me. I am not one of those stern-faced fellows who believe that as soon as a boy gets to be ten or eleven he should be grown up immediately and be very straight-laced. Now, dignity is a very fine thing. I have often wished I had more of it. Zell told me he was having difficulty with his lessons; with his studies. And his difficulty consisted of about this: Every time he picked up his geometry to study, there was a little figure with brown eyes and brown hair that stared right at him out of that page. You know—I went through that, and you did, too. Everybody has been through that. Don't shake your head. I know you did. Everybody has had that experience, and Zell was in the worst or best of it—whichever it is; I don't know which. Poor boy! Now, there was my chance to forget that little brown-eyed, no, blue-eyed, auburn-haired lady that used to peep out at me (don't look over at Mrs. Homan; she hasn't auburn hair)—peeping out at me from my study book—and at the end of the first month I had my report card. Father looked it over rather seriously and said, "Son, this thing has taken a decided drop." Well, it was worth the price; to have a poor report card just one month that I might see those dancing blue eyes across the hall. So I remembered, although, as I said, it was my chance to forget and say, "Zell, I am ashamed of you." But I didn't. When Zell said brown eyes, I substituted blue. When he said brown hair, I thought, Oh, those magnificent auburn locks, and I said, "Zell, I don't blame you. I think she's fine myself. She isn't quite as fine as one I used to know, but she is all right," and then we sat down to see what we could do that he might gain his footing again in the educational world, and not altogether in the sentimental world; and I said, "Go home." Now here is the point: I said, "Zell, why didn't you go alone and tell this story to your father and mother?" He said, "I tried to last night—my best—and they wanted to know if I was ill, and one said that I probably needed an ice pack on my head." What is a boy, what is a girl to do, when they have to go outside of the family for counsel? Let's not forget.

My dear school-teachers, some of you are young and have a little imagination. If you will just let your eyes close for a minute and get back into the first great subconscious field of childhood experiences, you will not see Johnnie Jones standing on his head; you will see T. B. Homan standing on his head over there, and it will temper every bit of your correction with justice. So, why forget, anyway? Let's remember. Let's go back and live with youth again.

I have always been interested in a picture I saw once, of a man reaching down with his foot, trying to kick something out of the mud of a gutter beside the way. No; you can not do it. You can not reach down with your foot and kick anybody out of the mire. You have to reach down with your hand. You don't need to get your hand so grimy that it is everlastingly grimy, in the mud and slime. Not at all. But every once in a while you may find a jewel really worth while, and if you can reach down and lift that jewel out without besmirching yourself, then reach down and get the jewel that is worth while.

So, let not you and I forget our youth. Let the memory of our youth temper every act of leadership. You know, I like that term so much better anyway than I like any term of correction. If you and I remembered our youth, we wouldn't have any problems with the youth of our day. Everything would be there that ought to be, and our problems of youth will go.

Oh, I get so tired of people saying to me, every once in a while, Don't you think the world is worse today than it was? Heavens, no! It is better! It is lots better than it ever was. But say! if the energy of the youth today were turned into useful channels, there would be a marvelous lot of good things we could do.

Now, in this idealism of forgetting, and the thing I said we couldn't do—and that is, forget—let me just talk with you first about what we should do with those scenes that we can not forget; the mistakes of life that we can not forget. I think I said just a little while ago that we should take all these past experiences and store them away so that once in a while we could take them out.

You know they used to require all teachers to take an examination by certificate. I think they do yet. I haven't taken an examination for so long that I am quite sure I would fail if I should take one. They increased the standard; the old certificate required eight branches; then they raised it to twelve; then to sixteen; the state certificate reached out to twenty-two, and then to twenty-nine different branches. Every once in a while I look around and think of the years I spent in college and in training until I get quite puffed up. I say, There is nine and a half years above my high school; what a marvelous man that ought to make! Yes, it should; but does it? Then I look back in an old book I have and there is my old first certificate, where I tried to get started in my educational career, and that certificate has such startling grades as 56 in grammar; arithmetic, 60; history, 51, spelling, 100. I can't even do that well now, and then I try to look at that certificate and think, Well, there is no wonder it took nine and a half years to make anything out of me that is worth while. So it isn't where you start. That hasn't anything to do with it. It is the ambition that you have, and the fact that you can weave all these experiences into something that will be of profit and help. You can take the scenes of life really worth while to you and let them be modeled into the sort of a figure that shall guide you.

Some one asked me the other day, "You take two old people who really love each other all their lives; do they get so they look alike?" Yes, they do. They get the same expression around the mouth, and they will grow marvelously like each other, because they have followed after idealism they have had in each other. So, if we can remember our mistakes (we can not forget, but if we can remember them) it is the ideal thing: to remember and to fight. To remember, on the other hand, the marvelous experiences and be better for the recalling. The moonlight scene on the lake; the tragic fire that swept over the hills—all that sort of thing, and out of it to have born again the faith that causes us to get in front of our task. The mistakes are the things that are going to help you do this.

"My Task"—that has for each a creed to live—for you and for me. It doesn't make any difference whether we differ a little bit in church theology or not. That doesn't make any difference whatsoever. We are not going to be asked when we get over there, what church we belonged to. What part of town we came from. We are going to have our record there, and that will be:

To love some one more dearly every day;
To help a wandering child to find his way;
To ponder o'er a noble thought, and pray,
And smile when evening falls—
This is my task.

To follow truth as blind men long for light;
To do my best, from dawn of day 'til night;
To keep my heart fit for His holy sight;
And answer when he calls—
This is my task.

And then my Savior, by and by, to meet;
When faith has made her task on earth complete;
And lay my homage at the Master's feet,
Within the jasper walls—
That crowns my task.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Little Journeys with the Editor in Chief

Dixie Land

After only a short stay at home (two days), I left Kansas City on December 1, on a Frisco train, headed towards Dixieland. An itinerary had been sketched out at the office which was calculated to keep me pretty much on the move for two weeks or a little better. I was looking forward to the trip with some degree of special interest, for the itinerary included several points which I had not visited, and so I was expecting to meet a number of groups of Saints whose acquaintance I had not yet formed, in a field or in fields of which my knowledge had been formed through reports from missionaries and local men and officers.

The day on which I left home had been a very busy one, with councils, interviews with officers and department heads, both in Independence and Kansas City. Daughter and I had spent the latter part of the afternoon down town in Kansas City, and about half past five she left me and my traveling bag at the Union Station, where I found space on a Pullman attached to Frisco train No. 105; and the hours until bedtime were spent doing some writing which demanded attention.

On awakening next morning, the train was nearing Memphis, a city through which I have once or twice before passed without other than what the train men call an "operating stop." The time between Memphis and Birmingham was passed in work at the table in the space I was occupying. It was a rainy, gloomy day, and I saw little of the landscape. About twenty minutes after three in the afternoon, the train reached Birmingham. There I was under the necessity of changing roads, which also meant a transfer to another station. This is another city through which I had previously passed only with a brief train stop. So I detrained with the sensation of stepping into a strange city, but the feeling of strangeness was dispelled by the cordial greetings of "C. J." and "Bessie" Clark, who are so well known in the Florida and Alabama Districts. They in their car took me across the city to the Louisville and Nashville Station and pointed out as best they could in the hurried trip some points of interest in this "magic city" of the South, with its marvelous industrial growth. Brother and Sister Clark urged me to stay over night and make the trip to Pensacola next day by car, as they expected to attend the conference, which was my first "objective." But the rainy day, with thoughts of the muddy roads and the probable delay in reaching Pensacola, decided me to stick to the older method. And this gave me only a few moments to visit with these old-time friends and with Brother Chandler, who came down to the Louisville and Nashville Station to see me. So saying au revoir to the Clarks with agreement to see each other in Pensacola, I boarded the Louisville and Nashville bound for Montgomery, which was reached about seven o'clock. A wait of two and a half hours was utilized for reading and refreshments. Then, as I sought my bunk, I went to sleep with the thought that the morrow would find me in a territory new to me.

On awaking, a look through the window in the dawn's early light revealed glimpses of the foliage and flora of the semi-tropical lands. I was up early, so that by the time Pensacola was reached I had shaved and cleaned up. Off the train I found no one awaiting my arrival. I was a stranger in a strange land; but one who has "knocked about" the country as many years as I have, feels more or less at home at any railway station, so I sought the lunch counter and then secured copies of the local papers and scanned the news while waiting. But no one came, at least no one whom I knew. I finally decided that "the folks" either thought I wasn't coming, or that I was able to shift for myself, so I made my way to the church, and in about a half hour I landed with my bags at the corner of Jackson and F Streets, the address I had learned from the papers in a news item concerning the conference and the meeting. However, while I presumed I was at the right location, for I saw at the corners mentioned a neat, plain frame building which had the appearance of being a "meeting house," I saw no sign which assured me, and I appeared to be too early, for there was no one around. So, leaving my bags in a grocery store across the street, I took a stroll, looking at the surroundings, and enjoying the crisp air (for it was cold—unusually so I was afterwards told), and seeing what I could on foot.

At last, from a distance of a block or so away, I saw some one drive up to the church. So, strolling back, I asked the one person in the car who he was and told him I was "Smith." The man was Brother Rummell, a Saint. So we were at once acquainted, even though we had never met before. It is quite remarkable as well as pleasant to experience how quickly Latter Day Saints, even when meeting for the first time, feel "at home" with each other.

It was not long before cars began arriving, along with foot passengers, and I was soon meeting not only the local Saints, but others from various parts of the district, and even from Alabama. And I was soon feeling at home, especially when I met Brothers Budd and Bailey, of the general missionary force, and Brother D. M. Rudd, a one-time missionary, and Brother Jesse M. Simmons, also former missionary.

The church building at Pensacola, though unpretentious and plain, stands as a monument to the willingness of the Saints there to sacrifice for the cause. It is a frame building, and as seems to be the rule in the South, of lighter construction than those further north. It is perhaps thirty-two by fifty feet in size, with the usual end entrance opposite to the platform and pulpit. I learned on inquiry that the work was done largely by the members, and both men and women worked, most of the work being done evenings and week-ends "after working hours." I learned that in some instances Saints who were building their own homes, suspended work on them and spent time, labor, and even money on the church rather than on their own homes. Things seemed neat and tidy, and I am sure that a group who can and will "pull and work" together as those Pensacola Saints have evidently done, will soon be adding desired conveniences to their church plant, and will not cease their labors till their church home has been beautiful and improved to meet the needs and just wants of the branch.

By the time the hour of ten had struck, quite a gathering was in the church ready for the business of conference, the Wests, Allens, McBrides, Rows, Rudds, etc. The district president not being present, the conference was called to order by the secretary, who is also one of the vice presidents. Brother Budd and I were asked to assist the district president, and Brother West being secretary, I did what I do not often do, took the gavel. It is my custom to watch the local men handle the business, for it gives me a better idea of the real conditions than otherwise. It was largely a session of routine, reading reports, etc. Reading of reports is to some people somewhat of a bore, and yet they are of great interest to those trying to get a survey or general idea of conditions. Perhaps we have drifted into a stereotyped way of reporting, the fault lying with style rather than substance. I feel sure that methods of conducting district conferences may be advantageously changed, and the business sessions of our conferences put among the most interesting and this, too, without "scrapping" or engaging in forensic battle.

As was the case in the Indiana conference I recently spoke of in the HERALD, the noon meal at Pensacola was common, and was also a "free for all." I do not mean to say by that it was poor or even ordinary, for the food was excellent, but common because all shared. It had been planned to put the tables out under the live oaks, but the chilly air and lowering clouds caused the decision to be reached to set the tables up in the house.

Those Southern women on that day, as on the next (Sunday), showed they had made due preparation, for without hurry or bustle, with merry chatter and laughter, the plethoric baskets were opened, the feast spread, and all who wanted partook. The meal over, the table was cleared, baskets repacked, the crumbs swept up, and the usual order resumed.

Between the lunch hour and that for the convening of the second business session, Brother Rudd in his small Crysler took Brother Budd and me out to see a bit of the surrounding country, to a new flying field or aviation center, to see the sand-clay or clay-sand road, and the wasteland left after the native heavy timber had been cut off, and some of the turpentine groves where the pine trees are bled by wounding for the sap from which turpentine is extracted. All of which was interesting to me, a stranger in those parts.

The two o'clock session of business was under way when Brother A. D. McCall, the district president, came in, but we were well along in the business, so I kept the gavel and "finished up." In the election of officers I was pleased to see there, as elsewhere, a unity which caused the business to be disposed of smoothly. Under the head of new business, Brother S. D. Allen, an old-timer and stand-by, introduced some resolutions which were educational in their effect and discussion, and furnished about the only diversion from routine. Most of the officers were reelected, and the corps is one which ought to carry on the work of the district with smoothness and progress. Of the details, the secretary or news agent will probably report.

In being domiciled at the home of Brother and Sister Rudd while in Pensacola, I was made to feel at home, for as they are former Iowans, and I was Hawkeye raised, there was that bond which always exists between persons from the same State who meet in distant lands. To make this homey feeling stronger, Sister Rudd told me that the tablecloth on the supper table had been used many times in their Iowa home when my father, Uncle Alex., and others of the older workers had partaken of her hospitality.

The evening hour was preaching, and those who arranged the program had put me on for a talk. The house was well filled, and I enjoyed the opportunity to get better acquainted with the Saints of that district. I felt, as I have in several places, under a bit of disadvantage at first because of being among them for the first time, and sensed that I was being scrutinized by some who were comparing "rumors" with what they were seeing and hearing. But the friendly feeling grew until by the close of the conference I felt the pang of friendly parting.

Sunday was a busy day—and warmer. With prayer meeting at 8.30 (Brothers Budd and Bailey in charge), Sunday school at 9.30, preaching at 11 a. m., 2 and 7.30 p. m., with common lunch at noon, the day was crowded with activities. The warmer day permitted eating the noon meal out under the trees, and the fine feeling of friendliness prevailing made the day a happy one.

As speaker at each of the preaching services, with a ride into the country in Brother Simmons' car in the afternoon, made my day rather full, but I was glad to serve in an endeavor to give the Saints a glimpse of Zion as I see it and the laws on which it will be built.

In the forepart of this "journey" I spoke of Brother and Sister C. J. Clark planning to drive to Pensacola from Birmingham. Well, about noon they came; and the mud-spattered condition of their car told rather eloquently the reasons for the delay. I had made a wise choice in staying on the rails. But Sunday brought forth the sun, part of the day anyway, and I got a glimpse of the famed Florida weather. I'm glad I did, for on that day I saw about the only sunshine of the trip. Gray days and wet ones were the order, it seems.

And so that Florida district conference passed into history. I was a bit weary as we drove away from the church that Sunday night bound for Brother Rudd's home. I was weary, but felt that on the whole it had been a day and a conference which had worked to the interests of the church.

For supper Sunday night, we were at the home of Brother and Sister J. E. Row. Brother Row is president of the branch, a laboring man, and he and his wife are a "team" in church work. "They say" she is a better talker than he is. Of this I can not say, for one can not always tell how well these taciturn fellows can talk when they get started or have a chance. Their home lies on the outskirts of the city, and is one of those in process of building but stopped till the church was finished. Each week sees a little work done. It's a home not large in size, but abounding in fine hospitality. And there I was introduced to the Florida oysters. I had not thought of Florida as a producer of crustaceans and bivalves; but besides oranges and guavas, pears and peaches, alligators and reptiles, it seems that Florida along the gulf coast is quite noted for oysters, crabs, and red snappers, to say nothing of Spanish mackerel and other piscatorial delicacies. Well, that evening we had oysters in several styles and shapes. There's one consolation—they're not fattening, so we obese persons can tickle our palates with them without concern about the "calories" of food consumed.

As I lay upon a comfortable bed and before I closed my tired eyes that Sunday night, December 4, I could not but run over the events of the two days, in endeavor to evaluate them in the light of church progress; and I could not but feel that the signs were favorable. Brothers Budd and Bailey of the missionary force had rendered good support, the local workers and district officers had cooperated in a goodly way, and as good-byes were said to and by departing Saints many expressions were heard which made me feel that I had helped the brethren give a boost to the work which would be for good. I felt that new friendships had been formed and old ones fortified—saintly friendships which are helpful to the cause.

I am hoping the time may not be long before I can renew acquaintances in the Florida District. God's blessing upon these Saints and friends.

The Stone Church

Some weeks ago, after a trip to Columbus, Ohio, where I had recreated for a few days as a guest in the hospitable home of Brother and Sister Harry E. French, I had "dropped" in on the Toronto Saints (who outside of my host and hostess, Brother and Sister "Jack" Hughes, did not know I was coming), and spent the Sunday with them. I stopped on my way home from Toronto at Buffalo, with another stop planned at Chicago, en route to Omaha to attend the district conference there. I was in Buffalo some three or four hours, and as I sat in the office and lounge of the Buffalo Athletic Club talking with the business man I had gone there to see (a Mr. Smith, by the way), I was reminded that the day was Thanksgiving. Our day of thanks is not celebrated in Canada, and it had, for the time being, been crowded out of my mind.

And so it was that on that day I sat alone in the dining room of the club at Buffalo, eating a Thanksgiving dinner. So the menu said it was, at any rate. It was, as was evidenced by a large family party near me, and several smaller ones in other parts of the room. I enjoyed seeing that glad party more than I did eating my lonely meal. And I made up my mind then that I'd plan some way to be home for Christmas if possible. And I was. Today is Christmas, and I was with my family, for we were at "Alice's" for the family dinner. Of that I shall not here speak, for it is of the Stone Church I started to write.

In the past several months my trips to various places in the interests of church work, directly and indirectly, have kept me away from home much, and I have not occupied the pulpit at the Stone Church for many months, and yet if any pulpit is "mine," that is it. The assistant pastors last week asked me to "occupy." I was still a bit weary from a round of preaching on a crowded itinerary and was disposed to decline, or rather urge that they get some one else. But remembering the times, and that here if anywhere was a congregation I could call mine, because of my official relations to them, I finally said, "Yes, my assistants, I'll occupy," though I knew there would be little time for preparation. But Christmas Day is replete with memories which recall history ancient and modern, and those cluster closely around the ideals and objectives of the church. And so this morning daughter and I left home in the car, bound for the Stone Church.

The Stone Church! What a complex picture that calls up in the minds of us older ones. It was not a new building when I came to Independence with the family, some twenty-one years or so ago. For years it was the largest auditorium in the church, and it is likely that more General Conferences have been held there than in any other building. And when one long and intimately associated with General Conferences comes into the building, many memories are likely to arise recalling scenes pleasant and some not, connected with those periods of great activity. It is good, is it not? that the passing of time enhances the pleasurable memory images and softens the asperities of those of the unpleasant ones. Besides, the building has been the home and center of so many local organizations and activities that there clings about the building such a wealth of tradition that it has become dear to the hearts of thousands. It may be called old, as buildings in a new country are rated, yet it stands a substantial structure likely to function for many years in the activities of the Saints, and gather round it additional traditions and memories which will enhance the love with which it is regarded by the Saints.

I can not but admire the courage and foresight of those who fostered and promoted the move to build it. It was an undertaking almost as large if not as large for the Independence Branch as is the building of the Auditorium today for the whole church. Yet it was done, was paid for, and stands today a fine monument to the faith and zeal of those who sensed the need for it.

I always approach the building with more or less of a feeling of reverence. And I can not forget that it is the home of a congregation which ought to be representative of the church, a congregation drawn close to me by official relations.

As we this morning reached the Stone Church, from all its doors were emerging the Sunday school scholars, a goodly sight. The warm greetings from friends and old acquaintances were good to receive, and made me glad to be back home. Time enough to greet a few old-time friends on entering the audience chamber, and then as the choir, its numbers decreased by absentees "visiting" at home or at family dinners, etc., filed into the seats of the choir loft, I took the "stand" with Brother C. Ed. Miller, and Brother Robert Miller's musical fingers were coaxing sweet melodies from the old but fine-toned organ, the choir was soon in action, and I was looking out upon the Stone Church congregation. I confess to mixed emotions. Memory was at work. Before, in different places where I'd look, familiar faces of long-time friends and faithful Saints. Just in front of the pulpit in their accustomed places, sat faithful men of advancing years, patiently enduring the advances of senility, while the goodness of their lives shone out from their wrinkled faces topped by the silver of their thinning locks. There was Brother Garrett, remembered by many as editor of the Ensign, and Brother Henry Mills, who has given us several hymns and a son to carry on his work, and beside them Brother B. C. Smith, faithful for years as a deacon, and father of our architect, Harry. Off to the left, sitting quietly beside his faithful wife, is a former stalwart of the church, gentle Bishop Kelley, loved and respected by all who know him. And so my mind dwelt momentarily upon many in the audience, whose lives of faithful service were known to me.

Interspersed among those familiar faces were others more or less strange. Some I recognized as having seen in distant fields; others were new to me. But it was "my" congregation, and my heart glowed with a certain rich pleasure the while it sank with the sense of responsibility I must carry towards them. I hesitated to stand before them as a teacher, even while my heart yearned to lift them up towards God.

It is Christmas, and thoughts today cling around a character whose mission has left its influence upon all mankind. And so the burden of my endeavor must be around that character. The choir had rendered its efficient services, the notes of the last solo had died away, and Floyd was saying to me, "Do you want an introduction?" and I knew the time for my contribution had come. As I rose my heart was glowing. Could I help that congregation? I tried. And in trying I was drawn closer to them. Were they to me? God grant it.

But I was home. How blessed, in such holiday seasons, those periods of review and spiritual evaluation, it is to be among home folk.

May the Stone Church long stand to house a devoted congregation! And may that congregation, the nucleus for Zion, draw ever closer to the source from which alone will come the strength through which Zion shall be redeemed and we do our work in building a beautiful city to be inhabited by the pure in heart.

This Christmas has been to me a sacred one. May the New Year bring us all happiness.

At Home, Christmas Night, 1927.

Joplin, Missouri

Twenty-First Street and Annie Baxter Avenue

Preaching service Sunday evening, December 18, began after the opening song and prayer with a beautiful quartet number, "Glory to God," a selection from "The Messiah," presented by Brother and Sister C. E. Wilson and Brother and Sister J. E. Leslie. The sermon was by Elder Thurman.

"Man in his own weakness is not able to accomplish anything. He must take God into partnership with him," were the opening words if W. S. Thurman, of Labare, Montana. "It is necessary to have a desire in mind, to have a goal ahead of you, in order to obtain the greatest good from that which you undertake, and with this desire, breathe a prayer for its accomplishment and go at it whole-heartedly," he continued.

Brother Thurman, who has passed the age of seventy, is still strong in this work. Thirty years ago found him an infidel, but after a thorough investigation he united with the church. It took faith and resolution to follow the teachings of Christ at that time because of the fabrications that were told the world. Much courage was necessary to say, "I do not care what others say so long as I know that God is with me." Many an evening, after a hard day's work, has been spent magnifying his calling by teaching the ways of Christ to his fellow men. Although not closely associated with the church for several years, he has continued his investigation and makes the statement, "There is some good in everything you read, so continue to read and study."

When more members of the church catch the spirit manifested by Brother Thurman, we shall be able to go back to the home town and find more old-timers there than there are now. However, many of the old stand-bys are true, and they are the ones to receive salvation.

The entire Christmas Day will be given over to the Sunday school, with the superintendent of that department in charge. After Sunday school session, the graduation exercises will be held in the various departments. Christmas offering will be turned in with the true Christmas spirit, and a program is to be presented. Elder Virgil E. Sheppard, whom we are all glad to have back at home after his attendance at Graceland, will deliver a sermonet.

At 7.30 a three-act play, "The Christmas star," will be given. Characters are: Mr. and Mrs. Bond, Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Gray; the Christmas Star, Marguerite Sheppard; Fife (the maid), Eva English; Jimmy (a street boy), Adele Barquette; Thomas (an English butler), Chester Carter; a group of the children of Santa Claus and Christmas spirits. Several appropriate selections will be given by the orchestra under the direction of May Holthausen. The orchestra, although small, has steadily gained in effectiveness and now presents better music than many large orchestras.

The church is more gorgeously decorated than ever before, and its decorator, Curtis Pearson, should receive praise from all who see it.

An Appreciation of My Sojourn at the Sanitarium

After having been an occupant of a hospital bed three different times at the Independence Sanitarium, I feel called upon to write my impressions and appreciation of such experiences.

May 22, 1924, I was an inmate of the Sanitarium as an operative patient. I passed through an ordeal, as many have done before me, pain, sickness, and peaceful release from same through administration. I enjoyed the peaceful atmosphere within the walls, built by God's command that his people while in suffering might be nourished by faith while being ministered to by gentle nurses and skilled doctors.

December 28, 1924, I was again taken there, this time to receive into my arms a little son, one of God's greatest gifts to us, and at the same time to enjoy an impression of being watched over and brought through this trying time by the angels.

November 16, 1927, I went to the Sanitarium again, as a medical patient, suffering much in body and in mind. I find the same gentle, sweet influence. Every care for the body is ministered by the blue-and-white-robed maidens who have taken upon them the work of caring for the sick. The doctors in their conscientious manner employ all the skill at their disposal to find and eliminate the thing which is destroying health. Men of God visit the sick, giving unto them the ordinances of laying on of hands until it seems the heavens open unto us, and we feel God is near and is listening to our cry to him.

Thank God for a wonderful place where even in pain we can be brought almost into the very presence of God when we need his comforting presence. Only the sick know the joy of it.

Writes of Parents and Children—Asks Prayers

Sister Patsy Peevy, of Brooklyn, Alabama, who recently sent her request for the prayers of the Saints to the HERALD writes to thank those who have been interested in her illness for their letters of kindness. Some of the remedies suggested have brought her a measure of relief. She expresses the wish that she may continue in faith and be resigned to the Lord's will, and asks a continuance of prayers in her behalf. Her prayer is that if it is not God's will to heal her, she may at least have relief until he is ready to take her to the other side. To the Saints in general she writes these cheering words: "How delighted I am to pick up the HERALD and see the progress that has been made in the past five or six years. I feel my prayers are being answered when I read of the good work going forward. I have no report of branch activities for the HERALD, as do others who write for its columns, for I am isolated and have been denied church privileges for six years. I joined the church when I was twelve years old and have always been interested in its progress. My heart is in the work, and I pray that I may live to be back in church work once more and see my children engaged in it.

"The happiest memory I have is of when I called my little ones about me at the fireside before they retired, and talked to them along the line of duty, and read a verse in the Bible before we had family prayer. If parents would do their duty toward their children, it would be much easier for missionaries to convert souls to Christ. I pray that each Latter Day Saint will think concerning his duty toward his children, his friends, and his neighbors. It seems that many parents do not realize that they are responsible for the example they set before their children. Children, as a rule, think that which they see their parents do is all right. Saints, do not forget to be true to your children. Pray with them, and you will see the effect of your labor. If they depart from their training when they are young, they will return to it when they are older. And what a satisfaction it is to the parents to know they have done their best.

"May the Lord bless every Latter Day Saint and wake all to a sense of their responsibility to society and cause them to exert themselves to accomplish the goal—Zion redeemed."

Artland, Saskatchewan

December 16.—On September 25 we, too, celebrated that great event of September 22, 1827. The Michigan Branch, just across the Alberta border, joined with us in our necessarily crude presentation of "Remember Cumorah." Necessarily crude because it came in the midst of our very busy harvest. Perhaps some will say, "Well, it must have been crude," when I say that we had not one rehearsal of the whole pageant. We were truly blessed in our efforts, and, taking all into consideration, it was a success. One change we made in the pageant: following the singing of "Crown him Lord of all," instead of the "Hallelujah chorus," from "The Messiah" we had all stand and sing "The angel message," 206 in Zion's Praises. There were thirty-two in the cast. A good spirit prevailed throughout the presentation. There were about one hundred and fifty present, among whom was a sprinkling of nonmembers.

During the past summer some member of our local priesthood has each month gone to administer the sacrament to the small group of Saints situated a few miles south of Battleford. The first Sunday in November it fell to the lot of Elder A. J. Cornish to go. Sunday morning, although it was cold and looked like a storm, Brother and Sister Cornish and their two daughters started in their car on their one-hundred-mile trip. In the afternoon, after the services, it began to snow, and they thought they had better come home that night. The snow continued to fall, making the road very bad. A few miles this side of Unity, their car skidded and broke a rear wheel. No one was hurt. They had to walk about three miles to a farmhouse and hire a man to take them to Rutland. There are a few Saints located at that place. The husband of one of the sisters brought the women of the party home. Brother Cornish stayed to get his car the next day.

The Saints of Ruthilda held a harvest home festival November 6 and 7. They invited Elders W. J. Cornish and E. Leslie Mogg to attend and help out. On Saturday, November 5, Brother Mogg and family and Brother Cornish drove to the home of Brother Lockyer, branch president there.

Three services were held on Sunday. Monday evening a community Thanksgiving supper was held in the hall, with a program following. An enjoyable time was reported by all. Brother Mogg had intended driving home in the night, to be here for work Tuesday, as this has been a very busy fall. But the snow that had fallen Sunday night and Monday prevented this. Tuesday morning, however, roads were again passable, and they started home. It was very dangerous driving, with just enough snow to make the roads slippery. Seven times during that one hundred and forty-seven miles home they skidded into the ditch, but no one was seriously hurt, and they reached home in safety at eleven o'clock that night. We are indeed grateful.

We regretted very much that snow had come to stay, for there were many acres of grain not yet threshed. Several of our neighborhood will have to wait until spring. Weather conditions have been rather discouraging this fall, and threshing has progressed very slowly on account of these conditions.

Our young people are busy at present practicing for the Christmas program, which is to be held Wednesday evening, December 31. The day school joins with the Sunday school, as all but three of our thirty pupils come from Latter Day Saint homes.

We wish all HERALD readers a Happy New Year.

San Francisco, California

Park-Presidio Branch

December 17.—Park-Presidio Branch has had a number of activities during the past year, and each and every one has proved to be a huge success. This is due to the efforts of the Ruth's Club, which organization has been zealously laboring to further the church work in our district.

Tomorrow, Sunday the 18th, at 10.30 the Sunday school has planned to have a Christmas program, and all of our members (thirteen in number) have been called upon to take part.

Wednesday evening, December 21, members and friends are to be invited to the residence of Brother and Sister Holling, where a real Christmas celebration will be held.

The writer was much pleased the other day when Mr. Trimble, editor of the Richmond Banner, called his attention to a letter of thanks sent by Brother J. A. Gardner, our publicity chief. Mr. Trimble appreciated this letter. Acknowledgments of that kind are of great value to the church.

Our branch is up and going. We are all pleased with the progress we have made this last year, and we look forward to greater success in 1928. May the membership as a whole enjoy the peace and harmony that prevails in our little branch is the earnest prayer of all in Park-Presidio Branch.

A. L. HOLLING.

Central Chicago

Sixty-Sixth and Honore Streets

Central Chicago Branch held its regular semiannual business meeting November 12. All officers were sustained. The work of publicity agent was separated from that of clerk, William Keir being chosen to fill the office. This leaves W. I. Cochran branch president, with H. P. W. Keir and J. J. Oliver counselors.

When we view the work of the past year, we feel hopeful for the coming twelve months.

The choir has chosen Sister Belle Simmons for its conductor. Brother George Lewis is her assistant and president of the choral society. Harmony prevails, and we are delighted that we are to have another year with Sister Simmons. Olive Sherman and Lorina Kueffer are pianists.

Brother Richard Keir remains superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and he has many plans for an active and pleasurable season.

The Sunday school has probably been the most active and enthusiastic of all the departments this last year. Sister Bell is an able superintendent, who keeps prodding those who may have a tendency to lag. The result is satisfactory.

The monthly meeting of the teachers and officers, consisting of officers, teachers, and substitute teachers (one for each class), has become quite a large affair. We meet at the various homes, transact business, and have a social time. Only real reasons keep the members away.

On December 1 a get-together was inaugurated by the Sunday school. Each class sponsored the sale of something. It started at half past five, and by the time one had purchased something from every booth he had a splendid meal.

Later in the evening a program was rendered, each class furnishing one number. We spent a very pleasant evening, and the proceeds amounted to more than one hundred dollars.

There have been quite a few cases of illness, and many blessings.

John Thoman is again among us, after having been confined to his bed for three weeks as the result of an operation for appendicitis.

A little girl has come to gladden the hearts of Brother and Sister Arthur Pement and the four little brothers.

Apostle D. T. Williams preached an excellent sermon for us last Sunday.

We welcome Brother and Sister Charles Irwin back to Chicago. It is good to have them again with us.

Attendance at prayer services is good. A pleasant spirit prevails, and we feel that we are on the upward trend.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Corner Eleventh and Washita

Coffeyville Branch feels that the past year has been successful, but the Saints plan to advance farther and do bigger and better things in the new year.

Sacramental service was held Sunday, the 4th, with Brother O. E. Pender in charge. There was a good crowd, and all enjoyed a quiet hour of prayer and testimony.

We have been much pleased to have Sister Ella Biggerstaff, of Jefferson, Kansas, with us several times in the past month. Sister Biggerstaff has lived at Jefferson the last few years, but before moving she was an active worker in Coffeyville Branch. We hope she can be with us more often.

The weekly prayer meetings have not been so well attended as usual, but we are hoping for an increase in attendance when the weather is warmer.

Branch President G. G. Cadwell, of Independence, Kansas, has been with us several times in the past month. Brother Cadwell has been very faithful and done much good in the past year. We know he will continue his work during the oncoming year.

The annual Christmas program was held Sunday, the 18th. A large crowd was present to enjoy the entertainment. After the program, Santa Claus gave each child a bag of candy. Little Edith Biggerstaff, who has been ill with typhoid fever was able to be there.

The Sunday school and Religio will hold election of officers Wednesday, December 28. We feel that the officers in all departments have done their best to make this a successful year, and we believe the new officers will help us to do bigger and better things in the oncoming year.

Des Moines, Iowa

December 20.—The work here in Des Moines is progressing very satisfactorily. Two weeks ago the Sunday morning service was turned into a financial meeting. Money was needed for the new church building, and with Henry Castings in charge the Saints rallied to the front with over eleven hundred dollars. We feel this was a very fine demonstration of their consecration to the task that is set before them—that of erasing the debt. Truly, the Saints of this branch have done well in their sacrifices for the church. There have been dinners, bazaars, and entertainments given for the benefit of the building fund.

Last Sunday, December 18, was the day of the Des Moines home-coming. It was a day well spent in the Lord's house. A very good attendance was had at the Sunday school session. During the morning service a splendid spirit was manifested. At this service Evan and Joseph Lilly offered to pay the expenses of feeding all who were at the meetings that day. This they desired to do in memory of their mother, who was a devoted and ardent worker in the church. A rising vote of thanks was given to the Lilly brothers.

The speaker of the morning hour was Bishop A. Carmichael, and his sermon was enjoyed by the Saints.

The afternoon meeting was turned into a prayer and testimony service, and many of the Saints took part.

In the evening the entire Religio hour was given over to the program, and everyone seemed to enjoy it. The night speaker was Elder V. D. Ruch, the returned missionary.

Home-coming was fairly well attended, considering the cold weather. Representatives were present from Winterset, Newton, Runnells, Perry, Rhodes, and other places.

Chatham, Ontario

Annual business meeting of Chatham, Ontario, Branch was held Monday evening, December 5. The election resulted in choice of the following: President, Richard H. Jones; counselors, Vernard Prichard and Royal Wood; secretary, Royal Wood; paying deacon, Thomas Vince; receiving deacon, James Cancanon; chorister, Alice Jones; organist, Muriel Jones; leader of Women's Department, Sister Thorpe; publicity agent, Francis G. Reynolds; auditors, William Clarke and Earl Vince; Sunday school superintendent, Vernard Prichard; Religio superintendent, Leslie Wood.

The priesthood were all sustained. Reports pertaining to membership for the past year were as follows: 1927, membership, 227; 5 lost by transfer; 2 lost by death; 5 gained by baptism; 2 gained by transfer; making the total of 227 for the year ending. This shows we have neither gained nor lost in membership, but we feel we have made progress satisfactory in other ways.

Our pastor brought up a building program, which, although it staggered some, was passed unanimously by the body. It means that every member will have to work hard, if the money ($800 or more) which is needed is to be raised. It also means that our pastor has faith and confidence in the Chatham Saints to put this thing across. May we all work together in unity and love, that this great work may go on. "Forward to 1930" is our slogan here in Chatham. Give the new officers in your locals every support, and remember them in your prayers, that God will direct them in their efforts to accomplish the work laid out for them to do.

FRANCIS G. REYNOLDS.

New Branch Organized

The scattered members of Miami, Florida, were recently made glad by a visit from Apostle Roy S. Budd.

For some years past there has been a Sunday school here, that part of the work having been opened by Brother James Armour and family, I believe, and later followed up by Brother John A. Fisher and family. It was not until the early part of 1927 that any definite step was taken toward effecting an organization. Then a mission was organized, and Brother John A. Fisher selected presiding officer.

Apostle Budd arrived in Miami on the morning of November 25 and held a meeting that evening in the home of Brother Lawrence Willey and family and the following evening at the home of Brother and Sister Adams and family. His sermons were very much enjoyed by all.

Sunday morning, November 27, the Saints again met at the home of Brother Willey, where a spiritual prayer meeting was held. At the close of this meeting, Brother Budd stated that he felt the time had come to consider the organization of a branch.

With twenty-five charter members, the organization was begun. Two of these members are elders, two priests, and two teachers. Since then one elder and his wife have had to move away. But on the evening of November 29 Brother James Armour was ordained an elder. For the present we are meeting in the homes.

We should be pleased if district and branch officers would see to it that members of their localities, who are contemplating visiting this part of Florida this winter for short or long stays, are furnished the name and address of our branch president, Elder Lawrence Willey, 133 East Fifth Street, Hialeah, Florida. We assure them a hearty welcome when they get here.

HIALEAH, FLORIDA, Rural Route 1, Box 665.

Cherokee, Iowa

417 Clark Street

December 19.—We are still striving to let our light shine in this part of God's vineyard, and while bad weather and sickness have been very persistent during the past month, interest in all services has been very good. The midweek prayer services are spiritual and very helpful. Sacramental meeting was well attended and blessed with the spirit of love and unity; nearly all present took part. Truly, God will bless us if we but do our part.

E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, was a visitor December 11. We enjoyed one of his good talks at the morning service.

We have missed Brother Crippen during the past six weeks. We have tried as best we could to fill his place, but we miss his presence and support in all departments of the work. The Saints are praying for his speedy recovery.

Christmas is at hand, and everyone is busy with plans to make some one happy. We hope all the poor and needy, sick and afflicted, will be found and cared for by the Samaritans who are out doing good at this time of the year. If only the good work were kept up the year round, how much more our Savior would be pleased with our efforts.

Our Sunday school will give a program and Christmas tree entertainment Christmas Eve. The Christmas offering for missionary purposes now amounts to about forty dollars.

Pastor A. R. Crippen was able to be at the church Sunday morning for the first time in six weeks. He gave a fine sermon but is still quite weak from his recent illness. His recovery is very slow.

Apostle J. F. Garver, District President E. L. Bedwell, and Missionary Charles J. Smith arrived Tuesday, December 13. Brother Garver gave two good talks on the two nights he remained with us. He said he came to talk with us, and he talked both with and to us. His visit was an inspiration and help to us. We trust he may soon be permitted to visit us again.

Brothers Bedwell and Smith went to their homes from here after making arrangements to return about the middle of January to hold meeting of several weeks' duration. A personal house to house canvass of the Saints will be made to try to encourage and arouse them to greater activity and to awaken interest in the meetings. We are looking forward to a great meeting this winter and feel sure our missionaries will do their part if we do ours.

Midweek prayer services will be held in the homes of the Saints during the winter months. The first one this week at the home of Brother and Sister William Leonard. Sister Leonard has been ill a long time and needs the prayers of the Saints.

Annual business meeting has been postponed until January 14 on account of the illness of Branch President Crippen.

Sister Carrie Hahn, of Mallard, Iowa, one of the most faithful of HERALD correspondents, sends the following message to the editors December 10: "We have no news this month, for we have had no visitors, and bad weather has kept many of our people from attending services. The Saints are striving to do their duty to God and to the church, and have enjoyed many blessings during the past year. For these we are very thankful. We are looking forward this week to a promised visit from Apostle John F. Garver. Mallard will be found trying to let her lights shine."

Spokane District Advancing

The church work in Spokane District shows a decided advancement in the past few months, due largely to the adoption of the coordination system at the conference last spring. The Spokane Branch, under the leadership of Brother Jott Bronson, assisted by a splendid group of departmental workers, put this plan into operation about July 1 and gave the district a splendid example of what can be accomplished by working under this system. Spokane is located near the center of the district and has about half of the membership, with most of the district officers also located here. So naturally this branch is looked upon as an example to the rest of the district.

The midwinter district conference was held at Spokane December 9 to 11, and if there is any question about the "midwinter," anyone attending and facing the raging snowstorm for thirty hours would have been convinced that it was winter with zeal. And yet the snowstorm did not cool the splendid spirit that was present at every meeting. Quite a few out-of-town folks were not permitted to attend, because the roads were blocked by the deep snow. Those who did attend came by train. Brother Oscar Case, district president, presided over the conference, and Brother Eli Bronson, of Portland, Oregon, and Brother P. R. Burton, of Spokane, Washington, represented the general church.

Friday at 2.30, Sister P. R. Burton, district superintendent of Sunday schools, held a round table for the teachers and officers. Brother Bert Hart addressed the meeting, and his kindly advice was good and well received. At 3.30 Elder Burton addressed the Department of Women on the subject of "Home life the foundation of Christian character." He said "Zion must and can only be the result of home training; the Christlike character will be the result of habits formed by proper impressions received in the homes of those who have caught the vision of Zion. Mothers who have caught the vision can mold the lives of their children as the potter molds his clay, and from the actions of these wonderful characters will the beauty of Zion shine."

At 7.30 p. m., the district Religio put on a very splendid program under the supervision of Sister Orpha Coleman. At the close of the program, the Choral Society met the outgoing folks in the church lobby with some splendid candy, which was sold so quickly that Brother Holmes, our new bishop's agent, hardly got a taste, but even that fact did not hinder his ever-present smile.

Saturday morning and afternoon were devoted to business, good sessions were held, and a good spirit prevailed. Brothers Ruben Porter and Clarence Crabb were recommended to the conference for ordination to the office of elder. This action was approved subject to the action of the First Presidency. The reunion committee was reorganized, and other matters were attended to regarding the reunion site for next year.

Brother Burton was the speaker in the evening; his subject was "The Spirit of God beareth witness of Zion." Many were moved to tears as he related some of the sacrifices that had been made by the pioneers of the Restoration who had caught the vision of Zion and were giving all they had that the vision might be a reality. He mentioned Emma Smith and her journey to Illinois from Missouri, all the hardships of which did not cause her to lose sight of the goal; how she lived in Nauvoo and raised her boys that she might give another leader to the church, because that was her part in the redemption of Zion. And that in the process of time Frederick M. took his place, and he, too, is engaged in this great work, putting into it all the fire and zeal that he possesses; urging all to speed up the work that it might be accomplished in our day. Why? Because "The Spirit of God beareth witness of Zion."

All Saturday night King Winter raged in all his fury, and Sunday morning churchgoers found the ground covered with deep snow. But everyone went. First a splendid prayer meeting, which was well attended; and a good spirit was present. Sunday school was under the supervision of Sister Burton and her district officers. Regular class work was suspended, and a drama, "The opportunity of the Sunday school," was presented by members of the Spokane Sunday school. A splendid lesson was given through the rendition of this drama.

At the morning service, Brother Eli Bronson, of Portland, was the speaker, and he used for his subject, "Why art thou come?" In a splendid way he continued with the thought of the night before, putting it squarely up to every church member to do his or her part in the great work that lies before the church. His sermon was very encouraging, and many were moved upon to do more in the future toward Zion and her redemption. Brother Bronson was a missionary in this district for several years, and is loved by everyone. It was like a home-coming for him, and everyone was glad to see him again. The music and singing were under the supervision of the local chorister, Sister Rachael Porter, and Sister Grace Woods, her assistant, and was of a high order. The local choir has been asked to prepare a program for one of the broadcasting stations of Spokane for one evening in January. Due notice will be given in the HERALD, so all who desire may tune in.

The interests of the Herald Publishing House were very ably looked after by our new district publicity agent, Brother W. W. Woods. Some time ago he ordered at his own expense quite a large sample of church books and papers. These he had on display at the rear of the church, and many Saints were permitted to see for the first time some of the splendid books the church has for their use. He was very busy taking subscriptions and ordering books. Brothers Holmes and Burton were busy taking tithes and offerings and selling church bonds. Brother Burton reported $142.07 collected the first twelve days of December, with splendid prospects ahead. The hope of this district is "Every member a tithe payer," and we are making headway and hope to have this done by October, 1928. A small and tired crowd greeted our district missionary Sunday evening for the closing service of the conference. He said one thing about his sermon would be good—it would be short. And short it was, but was well received.

Our missionaries have been very busy the last six months, laboring at Vay and Sandpoint, Idaho, and Spokane, Washington. Meetings will start in Spokane January 1 at the church, corner of Third and Smith. Everyone missed our missionaries in charge, Brothers Gillen and McConley, and we are looking forward to the reunion when we may all be together again. Quite a number of the district priesthood expect to be present at the priesthood convention in Portland the first week in February. CORRESPONDENT.

Worker Visits New London, Iowa, Mission

A series of missionary meetings was held at New London, Iowa, December 4 to 11. New London is a mission under the direction of Burlington Branch. The speakers were Elders D. B. Sorden and F. C. Bevan. The week preceding the services was marked by an advertising campaign, which was well carried out under the direction of Elder Sorden. Each house received a printed announcement of the meeting; the local paper carried an advertisement; Sister O. Calloway, who lives there, used her telephone to good advantage, and personal invitations were extended by her and other Saints of the mission. As a result, the services were fairly well attended. One evening twenty-five nonmembers were present. Some of the Burlington singers and players helped with the music.

As a result of work done by Brother Bert Kanz and others preceding these services, to keep the mission going, two fine men were baptized. We feel the church will have reason to be proud of these new members. Work at New London will continue as a mission under direction of Elder D. B. Sorden. Services are to be held there Sunday evening at 7.30 instead of Sunday morning as previously. Those who live near New London will be welcome at the Sunday services.

Second San Antonio Branch

912 North Colorado Street

December 16.—The Saints of San Antonio and of the Southwestern Texas District have had great reason to rejoice during the past few weeks. Spiritual food has been showered upon us, and with beneficial results. The prayers of the Saints have been almost immediately answered, for, within a very few days of a letter addressed to President Frederick M. Smith, and before President Smith had had time to communicate our desires to anyone, we received a letter from Patriarch Ulysses W. Greene, advising us of his intention of visiting San Antonio immediately.

Brother Greene arrived on the morning of October 23, and was scarcely more than off the train before he was in harness, delivering the gospel message to the Saints of the Second San Antonio Branch, who had anticipated his arrival and welcomed him with joyful hearts and a cooperative spirit. For several weeks Brother Greene occupied Sunday mornings at the Second San Antonio Branch and in the evenings at the First San Antonio Branch, the Saints of the Second Branch turning out in force at each service, going in some instances as much as ten miles to the First Branch to enjoy Brother Greene's discourses. One of the beautiful things observed in these joint evening meetings of the members of the two branches was the spiritual unity and good fellowship, an apparent desire for cooperation, not only that harmony might exist among the members, but that the services might prove successful.

Cooperation and total effacement of individual feelings of jealousy or selfishness will work wonders in any instance, and wonders were accomplished in this series of doctrinal discourses! If Brother Greene's visit to our city had accomplished nothing more, his visit was a blessing to the members of both branches in recalling and establishing a more thorough spirit of brotherly kindness among us. Let us pray that that spirit, now seemingly reestablished, will never again wane, but that both branches may move forward with one accord and one aim, that we shall love our neighbors as ourselves, and that the gospel may be permitted to reach out and enfold those who have never had the opportunity of hearing it.

Following several weeks of services between the two branches, Patriarch Greene caused arrangements to be made by and between the district elder, R. E. Miller, pastor of the First Branch, and Elder R. E. Chrono, sr., pastor of the Second Branch, for a series of meetings to be held each evening and on Sunday mornings, beginning November 20 and ending December 4. The first half of this series was held at First Branch, with the membership of the Second Branch in constant attendance. During and as a result of this first series of meetings, there were eight converts, with seven baptisms on the morning of November 27, the eighth convert being baptized the following Sunday morning, December 4. The second series of meetings was held at the Second Branch.

Second San Antonio Branch desires to express sincere appreciation and deep obligation to the members of the district as a whole, but more especially to the choir, the chorister, Miss Mary Barber, and the organist, Miss Emma Jackson, of the First San Antonio Branch, for their hearty cooperation and willing acceptance of the extended invitation for them to take complete charge of the musical program during the series of meetings held at the Second Branch. Unfortunately, our organist, Mrs. Zora Carnes, was confined to her home through illness, our chorister, Mrs. Minetta Isaacks (always a favorite and greatly appreciated as a soloist), was absent from the city, while a number of our members were detained at home through illness. These absences seriously handicapped Second Branch to the point where we had almost despaired of a successful conclusion of the previously advertised meetings. This condition and the willingness of the choir of the First Branch to step into the breach and help us out, went to our hearts, and we love them for it.

As a preacher it would be difficult to find Brother Greene's superior. We have said before, "He grows upon one in an unexpected manner!" As a spiritual man of God, sincere in purpose, honest and earnest in his daily life and communication with the world outside the church, he can not be surpassed! As a man and a friend, we ask no better example than he. Truly, daily contact and discourse with such a man of God, should, and in time we believe would, soften the hardest heart and cause even criminals to turn from the paths of sin to follow his meek example.

In his departure from San Antonio on December 6, he took with him the love and prayers of all, that his journey might be a safe one, and that he might again return to us to accomplish even greater good. In bidding him good-bye, we did so with sincere regret.

December 10 brought to the Saints of San Antonio still another and greatly appreciated blessing, in the persons of our beloved President and Prophet, Frederick M. Smith, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer, who were nearing the end of a circuit which we understand included Florida, Colorado, Oklahoma, and other States.

It was our pleasure to listen to President Smith upon three different occasions last Saturday and Sunday and to Apostle Gleazer Sunday afternoon. And if we were impressed with one thing more than another, it was that they came to us with no words of apology in explanation of things which in the past has occasioned erroneous impressions in the minds of some who did not and could not understand. Each of these men of God stood before the Saints of this district upon a solid platform of truth, and fearlessly proclaimed and declared their sincere belief and conviction in the justice of the church program, its meaning now and eventually to both the individual Saint and to the church as an institution. It is our personal conviction, that if each member of the church will accept and subject him or herself to the gospel in its entirety, and to all that the gospel includes for the good of the people as a whole (which of necessity includes stewardship and the church program as contemplated), there will be no more occasion for complaint or dissension. In bidding us good-bye, Brothers Smith and Gleazer left in the hearts of many a different and more appreciative feeling and understanding of the church and what it stands for. We feel that the Saints of this district have not seen enough of the higher officers of the church, who are able to bring to us first-hand information. We have been sadly neglected in that respect in the past, and we feel that this visit of our President is one of the very best things this district has ever experienced. Our hearts and prayers go with these, our brothers, wherever they may be led, and we shall rejoice with them in the ultimate consummation of their plans for the church.

And now back again to the Second San Antonio Branch and its progress. We have recently added to our membership through the services of Brother U. W. Greene, four new members. While our branch shall again pursue the even tenor of its previous activities, we shall in no way cease in our efforts to spread the gospel and add to our numbers.

Handicapped by illness and absence from the city of the officers of our Sunday school, we were unable to make the impression we so much desired upon President Smith and Apostle Gleazer, who honored us with their presence last Sunday. Apostle Gleazer was kind enough to take charge of our Bible class, much to the edification of the class. We appreciate and thank Brother Gleazer for the lessons he brought to us. Brother Smith was invited to address the Sunday school and accepted the invitation by delivering a message which all who heard can follow to their advantage and the benefit of future generations.

Our hearts were touched and fully repaid for our efforts of the past, in the words of Apostle Gleazer, when he expressed his surprise and appreciation over the "different physical aspect" of our little branch from what it presented to the eye when he visited and reorganized our branch last July. Our regret was that for once San Antonio (or its official weather man) failed to live up to our reputation. This is the city "where the sunshine spends the winter," but for once the sun hid his beautiful face behind the clouds.

Pensacola, Florida

Corner Jackson and F Street

Annual district conference of Florida District convened at Pensacola, Florida, December 3, at ten o'clock. The district president not having arrived, District Secretary C. T. West was in charge.

President Frederick M. Smith, Apostle R. S. Budd, and District President A. D. McCall were chosen to preside over the conference.

The forenoon was spent in organizing the conference, reading and approving reports, and transacting other routine business. Upon adjournment at noon, the tables were thrown together and a very important business session followed, the nature of which we leave to the reader to guess.

We met again at two o'clock. At this session the election of district officers was held: District president, A. D. McCall, of Brewton; secretary, C. T. West, of Coldwater; treasurer, E. N. McCall, of Brewton; musical director, Helen McCall, of Brewton; superintendent of Sunday school, Stephen G. Allen, of Milton; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, C. C. Runnell, of Pensacola; superintendent of women, Mrs. Stephen G. Allen, of Milton, Florida. C. T. West and Stephen G. Allen were chosen counselors to President A. D. McCall. At this session the recommendation of Stephen G. Allen for ordination to the office of elder was approved. It was voted to hold the next conference at Coldwater Branch in April. We adjourned to meet again at 7.30 to hear President Smith speak. We had indeed looked forward with pleasure to the time when we could meet and hear the voice of our prophet and the President of the church of God. We were not disappointed in the wonderful sermon he delivered.

Sunday morning the Saints met at 8.30 in a service of prayer in charge of Apostle Roy S. Budd and Missionary J. W. A. Bailey. This was indeed a peaceful hour, one well spent in prayer, testimony, and song.

The usual Sunday school hour was turned over to Apostle Budd and was well spent, being given over mostly to junior service. There were sermons by President Smith at 11, 2.30, and 7.30. This was a day of rejoicing for Pensacola Saints. We only wish we could have had more time to spend with our visiting brothers and sisters from Mobile, Bay Minette, Flomaton, Dixonville, Coldwater, and Milton, and from other places. We hope they can come again and that we shall become better acquainted, for we are as one big family and feel that these gatherings are only a foretaste of the joy to come when we can live and reign in peace with our Savior. It brings to our minds the words of that dear old hymn, "What a joy will be there in the great resurrection." We were glad that President Smith could stay until Monday and get at least a glance at our city. We hope he will want to come again.

Monday night Apostle Budd preached a wonderful sermon on "Repentance." It found lodgment in the hearts of the people. Brother Budd left us Wednesday to join President Smith in Flomaton and to go on to Mobile. We appreciate our association with these brothers and the many encouraging words spoken by them.

Tuesday evening Brother Bailey delivered his instructive lecture on "King Solomon's temple" and its holy significance, illustrating it with many beautiful slides. This was a continuation of Brother Bailey's series of meetings, started about a month ago, and which he was forced to close on account of being called to the bedside of his mother in Saint James, Missouri. He continued until Thursday night, at which time he was called to Milton to preach the funeral of Brother Chesser's daughter, who had been burned to death in Birmingham.

Friday night we held a little farewell party for Brother Bailey at the home of Brother and Sister Myers. After a good social time, refreshments were served, and Brother Bailey was presented a Parker fountain pen with the initials J. W. A. B. engraved on it. Then Brother Bailey called the group to order, and we truly appreciate the fatherly counsel and words of encouragement and beautiful prayer offered in our behalf. We felt sad to say good-bye, for there is an uncertainty as to just when he will be with us again.

We would not forget to express our appreciation to Brother Woodstock for the many good words contributed by him to the different departments. We especially enjoyed the two-day meeting held at Coldwater Branch and the hospitality of the Saints there. We only wish we could have these helps and visits more often, for we realize there are many trials along life's journey and we can not always have sunshine. We desire to shoulder our part of the work and be found numbered among those who are marching to Zion, never looking back, but forward toward the goal.

Toronto, Canada

December 18.—We were surprised and pleased about three weeks ago to have President F. M. Smith drop in unannounced. He said he wanted to see us in our "working clothes." He came in shortly after prayer meeting had started. In the afternoon he visited Woodbridge, where the district officers were holding a "district day." The Saints of Woodbridge and the visitors from nearby branches were equally surprised and delighted to see Brother Smith. He was the speaker at Soho Street at seven o'clock, when he gave us some idea of the church from "behind the President's desk." He gave us such a "heart to heart" talk as only President Smith can. We got some idea of his stupendous task and went away with our faith increased when we realized how earnest and devoted he is and when we caught a glimpse of his broad vision and his profound faith in God. We are always glad to have our chief executive officer drop in, announced or otherwise. Brother Smith visited our famous Winter Fair when here.

We have just completed our bowling tournament under Eldon Oliver's guidance, and W. J. Bavington's Beavers are the winners. Toronto claims to have the largest hockey organization of any city in the world. We are proud to announce that we have entered a team in the church league bearing our "colors." We have some very good material lined up, and under George Young's direction we are looking for good results.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely; the classes are well attended, and there seems to be a splendid interest throughout the school.

The Department of Women under Mary Wilson is moving along quietly but effectively. The organization staged its annual Thanksgiving banquet and its annual bazaar, from each of which a tidy sum was realized.

Our elections of officers are nearly completed. In the branch the officers are much the same. J. L. Prentice was reelected president. In the Sunday school W. J. Bavington and Faye Gould McLean were reelected to the superintendency. In the Department of Recreation and Expression there was quite a change: Murrel A. Whitehead and Eldon Oliver were elected to the superintendency, and in a warm contest that has lasted for years for the office of critic, B. H. Hewitt was successful. The former critic, Doctor C. A. McLean, withdrew from the field.

We are planning on starting our new church next year.

The Sunday school Christmas tree held last night was a pleasing event. Sisters Needham and McLean worked hard to put it over, and much credit is due them. Santa Claus arrived on time and delighted the little folks with presents.

From present indications, the work in Toronto is going forward. Our people are getting a more profound idea of our responsibility. May God help us to move on with the courage of our convictions and with an unflinching knowledge of the gospel.

HERALD readers in this part will be sorry to hear that Sister Floralice Miller is seriously ill in the hospital, and will hope and pray for her speedy recovery.

Independence

Stone Church

Good attendance, the spirit of reverence and worship, special music, and whole-hearted cooperation between teachers and pupils characterized the Sunday school session Christmas Day. A special reading, "The greatest gift," was contributed by Mrs. O. R. Miller.

Christmas morning at the Campus was celebrated by pictures of the Christ Child and a play "Playing Santa." As a present this year, in carrying out the theme of the month "Giving," the children were unanimous in giving five dollars to help Sandhedens Banner. One of the teachers, Brother E. E. Stonger, doubled the amount, and ten dollars will go to the Scandinavian mission.

The hour of eleven found the Stone Church Choir seated in the choir loft. Under the direction of Paul N. Craig an excellent musical program was presented to the congregation worshipping in the church and the radio listeners. The anthem, "The first Christmas morn," by Newton, opened the program, and was followed by "The message of Christ," by Lansing. Solo parts were taken by Miss Lilly Belle Allen and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind. A Christmas carol, "The infant Jesus," by Yon, was sung by Miss Vivian Latta. Robert Miller, the organist, contributed his share to the Christmas program, rendering "The coming of the Magi," by Morse.

Members of the Sunday school, assisted by members of the White Masque Dramatic Club and directed by Mrs. J. A. Gardner, dramatized a Christmas play "The new star," written by Mrs. M. H. Siegfried. In four scenes, thirty-six people in costume presented a series of incidents of Book of Mormon history found in Helaman 5. The play was witnessed by a large audience, every seat in the building being occupied.

Institute Christmas Surprise

A happy surprise was given the faculty of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences following the annual Christmas assembly and worship service held in the chapel at eight o'clock, Thursday evening, December 22. The faculty had previously requested the students not to give their teachers individual presents, and to this the students agreed, keeping their resolution to give the faculty one big gift a secret.

Asked to make this evening one of sacrifice and to forego the evening meal in order to perform some act of giving, most of the teachers came to the assembly supperless.

The hour of worship was marked by the spirit of peace and reverence, a bond of unity and love. Teachers, officers, friends, and pupils crowded the assembly room to hear the beautiful music, to see the pictures. An impressive number on the program was a reading from Ben Hur, by Mrs. A. B. Taylor. Apostle F. Henry Edwards talked on "The life of Christ."

At the close of the program, the faculty, in charge of Elder John F. Sheehy, was requested to remain in the chapel. All other guests marched downstairs and were divided into three groups according to the Christmas songs they knew. Then, led by a young woman dressed in white, those who all fall have labored so diligently to impart knowledge were ushered into the banquet hall. There the surprise awaited them—the gift of the pupils to their instructors—tables were spread for a feast.

During the banquet the groups of students sang Christmas carols, and there was saw music by Charles Dell. At the close of the meal, Presidents Frederick M. Smith and Floyd M. McDowell in behalf of the students expressed appreciation to the teachers.

Next came the picture of the thirty-eight members of the Institute teaching staff who were there. There was no escape for bashful tutors. The students saw to that.

After an evening of school-time associations and Yuletide joys, the guests sought their mail at the Christmas post office, and wishing each other the merriest of Christmases and the happiest of New Years separated for the holidays.

Liberty Street

Apostle J. F. Curtis was our speaker on Christmas Sunday. He read as the basis of his sermon Luke 2:1-11, stating that if the spirit which was in Jesus comes into our lives we will show a greater spirit of unselfishness toward our fellow men. Christ demonstrated Christianity to the world.

At the Religio hour we were favored with two songs from the primary department of the Sunday school, a reading by Betty Crawford, talk by Brother J. B. Barrett on "The life of Christ," and a short play "Mother Baker's Christmas."

The cantata "Adoration," by Nevin, was rendered by the choir Sunday evening. It was directed by Sister Leona Robinson. "The other wise man" was given by M. Merle Briggs, and a violin solo by David Stewart.

Walnut Park

Christmas morning the entire program was presented by the Sunday school, beginning at 9.30 and lasting until 11.30. As the superintendents took their places the girls' chorus in the balcony softly sang Christmas carols. The service was opened with prayer by Superintendent R. Barnhardt, and the following program was given: Orchestral selection under direction of Brother Nace; Bible reading, Agnes Adams, piano accompaniment, Margaret Gard; song, by congregation; reading, Ruth Bryant; Christmas story, Helen Gard; orchestra number; reading, Betheen Barnhardt. Recently Brother Charles Blair presented for consideration of the Sunday school a slogan, which he suggested we adopt for the coming year. It is as follows:

"We will serve God.

We will love our money and consecrate the same in helping to pay our church debt.

We will refrain from spending our money for selfish purposes.

We will love our sisters and brothers before ourselves.

Where there is a will there is a way."

Needless to say, this slogan was unanimously adopted. In keeping with this it was suggested by Brother Blair that we as a Sunday school bring a Christmas consecration offering on Christmas morning and give it to be applied on the Walnut Park debt. This we did toward the close of the service and more than one hundred and fifty dollars were collected. This amount was encouraging. In conclusion of the hour treats were given to the children. The Saints spent a very pleasant morning together. Sunday evening Religio classes convened at six o'clock. At seven all assembled again in the main auditorium, and the Religio program occupied the remainder of the evening. It was directed by Earl Cox. The choir sang, "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus," the solo part being taken by Brother Fred Horn; an appropriate reading was next given by Sister Miller, from the Stone Church, followed by a beautiful contralto solo by Sister Margaret Gard. At this time Brother B. J. Scott read a letter from Brother and Sister Glaud Smith. Brother Smith was formerly our pastor and is now located in Los Angeles. The letter was full of good cheer and best wishes for the Saints of Walnut Park. Little Margaret Lowrey sang for us a pleasing number accompanied at the piano by Master Frank Horn. We were again favored with "Gloria," an anthem, after which Elder John F. Sheehy delivered a Christmas sermon. It is a pleasure to have Brother Sheehy with us.

As a fitting close to the day a tableau was given, portraying the Magi bringing their gifts and worshipping at the manger where the Christ Child lay.

Enoch Hill

The Sunday school presented its Christmas program last Thursday night, the 22d. Features of the entertainments were drills, songs, and the treat for the children. Sister Clemens and Louise McDonnell were in charge. The church was crowded with parents and friends of the little folks.

Last week members of the priesthood and their wives, some fifty-five in number, entertained with a party at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Warren, the guest of honor being the retiring pastor, Elder W. J. Brewer. Games were played and good music enjoyed. At the close of the evening a purse was presented to Brother Brewer, who expressed his gratitude to the priesthood for the thoughtfulness and co-operation they have manifested during the years of his pastoral labors in this district. Speeches were made by Brothers Sarratt, Warren, and Whitsett.

The primary department, supervised by Sister Charles Warren and Sister Jones, gave its Christmas program Sunday morning after Sunday school. The chief number was the Star Drill.

At the eleven o'clock hour Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker. Brother Greene, having some time ago spent more than a year in Palestine, announced his intention of taking his congregation on a tour of that part of the Holy Land which centers about the City of David, Bethlehem. He took his hearers over the road from Bethlehem to Jerusalem, linking many of the places with incidents in the life of Christ. The customs of ancient and modern inhabitants of this country were touched upon in connection with the work of our Savior. His discourse was most interesting.

The regular Christmas observance was had Sunday evening beginning at 7.30. It was celebrated by the showing of a series of pictures on the life of Christ. The choir sang several appropriate songs, and Nellie Kramer gave a reading.

Next Sunday evening Apostle James A. Gillen will speak in the church on the hill.

East Independence

December 11 Brother J. Holsworth and Brother Rasmussen were the speakers, and a week later Brother Raveill and Brother R. E. Foulks occupied. All gave interesting talks along the line of home training, emphasizing some phases of this work for the particular benefit of the young people.

Prayer meetings have been held each week. Group 40 has been holding prayer services for its members but voted to discontinue separate meetings and to join with groups 38 and 39.

Christmas Day at the eleven o'clock hour a program was given. The program committee, consisting of Sister Madge Thatcher, Sister Addie Thatcher and Sister Immer, was handicapped on account of the short time had in which to prepare, but the program was all that could be desired. It consisted of dialogs, readings, music, a short address by Pastor Self, and saw music by Brother Charles Dell.

All seemed to take an interest, and in this way the program proved a success.

Santa Claus appeared on the scene and with the help of the superintendent gave each one a treat of candy and an orange. The Saints felt that the true spirit of Christmas was among them and because of it enjoyed the entertainment.

In the evening a short program consisting of two readings and a solo was rendered. Then Brother Harvey Minton gave an address which was illustrated with stereopticon pictures—scenes from the life of Christ. We have the promise from Brother Minton that he will come back to hold a series of meetings. Brother Minton considers this his home because his parents live here. The Saints of East Independence rejoiced to have him with them.

Gudgell Park

On December 15 the Department of Women elected officers for next year. Sister Clarence Martin is to be leader, Sister Ada Boon, treasurer, Sister Roy Sherman, secretary. At this meeting the sisters found they had about fifty dollars, and voted to turn thirty-five dollars over to the lumber fund, and, with the fifteen dollars they had paid the week before, wiped out their building debt. The women have done well this year by cooperation and God's help. And this department with the Sunday school felt it could afford a little Christmas celebration. The Sunday school provided a generous treat for all, also a fine program. Sister Ada Boon and Sister Clarence Martin, aided by Sister Roy Sherman at the piano, drilled the little folks in their parts. The Saints thank these untiring sisters for the fine entertainment provided. The little people did their parts well, and we wish particularly to mention little Rose Marie Barnhard, who entirely forgot her lines and told her mother, "The tat dot my tongue."

This Christmas morning, owing to the fact that some of our members were entertaining, others being entertained, and the rest of us wishing to be, our Sunday school was not held. However, those who were out to hear Brother Herman C. Davis at the eleven o'clock hour were well repaid for attending.

Since this is our last report of the year, Gudgell Park correspondent wishes HERALD editors, contributors, and readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year. Let us each do our bit in 1928 toward the redemption of Zion.

Englewood

The Christmas program given Thursday evening, December 22, was a success. Childish minds at this time were occupied with an attempt to decide which is the best holiday in the year, but when Santa Claus arrived and the treats were passed out the question was settled for this year at least.

Attendance and enthusiasm at Sunday school are to be commended. The retiring superintendent gave us some interesting figures indicating the progress made by the school during 1927. We are sorry to lose Brother Lee Moore but are satisfied some one else will profit by our loss.

The two sermons delivered Christmas Day deserve more space than we can give them. One can not but profit by such experiences when men with the ability and faith of these missionaries, Elders C. A. Kress and E. A. Davis, stand and with power proclaim the mission and message of the Master of men.

We assure you Englewood is looking Zionward with a full realization that it can not be reached without a great deal of effort.

Spring Branch

Lethargy has found no place in the prayer services of the past week or two. Attendance has been good, the time fully occupied, and a fine spirit attending.

A Christmas program was given to a full house Friday night, after which old Santa distributed gifts to many and treats to all.

Exceptionally good things were in store for us Sunday in that Elder Hubert Case was our speaker in the morning and Apostle J. A. Gillen in the evening. Brother Case opened his discourse with the reading of the great annunciation and from that gave a fine portrayal of the life and mission of the Christ and the fruits of the gospel.

Brother Gillen's subject was "God's way is the better way" and as a sub-text he chose "Bearing fruit." He used the Sermon on the Mount for a scripture reading. He said that we do not "get religion," but we "give religion," that our works are the test of our discipleship.

The two sermons were wonderfully refreshing and instructive, and each speaker held his audience tense throughout the discourse.

The combined choirs of Spring Branch and the Church of Christ and assisted by numbers from Liberty Street and Second Church Choirs rendered the cantata "Bethlehem" at the Temple Lot Church Tuesday night the 27th, and will give it at Spring Branch Church Thursday night, the 29th. This is under the direction of Corrine Haines French, Catherine Haberlein at the piano. Solo parts will be taken by Mary Fields Edmunds and Mrs. Clarence Wheaton, sopranos; Mrs. Frank Good, contralto; J. G. Fairbanks, tenor; David Stewart, bass. The public is cordially invited.

Rhodes, Iowa

On November 28 Brother Ruch came to our branch to begin a week's series of meetings with our home-coming Sunday December 4. Brother Ruch preached himself into the hearts of the people; after the first night there was a good crowd with interest. All of us enjoyed listening to Brother Ruch tell of his experiences in Norway, and the children especially enjoyed his singing in Norwegian.

On Sunday at the social service several were wishing that Brother Ruch could remain with us longer, and as that was impossible Brother D'Arcy, of Boone, consented to stay and preach to us another week. The sermons we heard in the two weeks will be bright spots in our memories during the coming months.

While we missed some of the faces we see at our home-coming, we know that they are as much help to the branches where they are now as they were to the old home branch.

On December 14 we held our branch business meeting with the following officers elected: Branch president, E. G. Beye; Sunday school superintendent, Howard Richeson; Department of Recreation and Expression, Fred Cheville; chorister, V. G. Lents; treasurer, Fred Cheville; Women's Department superintendent, Sister W. L. Pitcher; publicity agent, Sister V. G. Lents; branch clerk, Brother Howard Richeson.

With the cooperation and the prayers of all the Saints, the work in this part of the district should progress.

Elder V. B. Etzenhouser writes from Berkeley, California, of the young people's convention. Among other things, he says: "The convention has now passed into history, and it will make mighty good history, too. While the attendance was perhaps not so large as it was here last year, the spirit was fine. Our brethren of the Twelve were at their best, and their messages and sermons were well received. They gave us much cheer and encouragement.

"At our banquet two of our young fellows, Roy Weldon, a young priest of the Oakland Branch, and William Collins, also of Oakland, (both former Graceland students), responded to the addresses of Brothers Gillen and McConley in a most fitting manner. Professor Lillard, president of the Sacramento Junior College, gave the principal address. He told me that he knew of Brother McDowell through his writings. Said he had made a study of his articles on junior colleges. Said if he speaks as well as he writes he is a wonderful speaker.

"We had a very fine Thanksgiving service, both at our church and at the mission. Brother Gillen was with us, and he seemed to enjoy it very much."

My only aim has been to set forth a philosophy of social work compatible with lasting social progress. I have striven to describe it in such terms that it can be accepted not only by Catholics, not only by Protestants, not only by Jews, but by every person who believes in the supreme dominion of God.—John A. Ryan.

Ministerial Conference

A ministerial conference will be held at Syracuse, New York, January 7 and 8, beginning at 2.30 p. m. on the 7th. P. L. Weegar, district president New York District.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.—District conference held at Centralia, Illinois, December 10 and 11, District President R. L. Fulk in charge, assisted by Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Counselors Jeff Henson and L. C. Moore. Ministerial reports were had from Elders W. M. Brown, Charles Wessner, Ernest Roberson, J. M. Henson, J. R. Lentell, L. C. Moore, W. M. Clements, Deacon E. S. Choate, Teacher Carrol Dillen, Priest Arthur Henson. Statistical reports came in as follows: Centralia, 55; Poplar Creek, 71; Springerton, 89; Parrish, 123; Tunnel Hill, 185; Marion, 88; Mount Vernon, 81; Brush Creek, 231; Skillet Fork, 22; Dry Fork, 44. District officers elected: district president, R. L. Fulk; counselors, Jeff Henson and L. C. Moore; secretary, Myrtie Choate; bishop's agent and treasurer, O. C. Henson (sustained); Sunday school superintendent, Ivan Casey. A vote of thanks was extended to F. L. Sawley for his faithful work as Sunday school superintendent. Louis Desmels, Frank Hargis, and Arthur Henson were appointed heads of Recreation and Expression; chorister, Ruth Lewis Holman; head of hygiene department, Doctor W. E. Phillips; head of dramatic club, Ina Casey. It was decided to hold the district reunion at Brush Creek Branch. Clyde H. Simmons and James Slover were ordained to the office of elder. It was left to the district presidency to set time and place for next district conference. Adjournment to meet at the call of the district presidency was had.

Our Departed Ones

ETTINGER.—Nellie Ettinger was born January 11, 1866, at Effingham, Illinois. On December 25, 1888, she married J. G. Ettinger, who with five children, an aged mother, two sisters, two brothers, and fourteen grandchildren are left to mourn. She united with the church June 13, 1896, being one of the pioneer members of Taylorville Branch, and it was largely due to her untiring efforts that the branch was raised up at that place. Her constant desire was that she might be counted worthy of being one of the "jewels"—so recognized when the Master comes. Died November 15, 1927. Funeral service was held November 17. Prayer was offered at the home of Elder William Vanbooser, after which the body was taken to the church, followed by a large number of relatives and friends. Elder F. T. Mussell conducted the services.

LAWN.—Thomas James Lawn was born December 10, 1862, in Santa Cruz County, California. Lived the greater part of his life in Sacramento, California, where he died Saturday, November 26, 1927. For many years he has served as one of the local ministry, holding the office of elder, being assistant pastor of the Sacramento Branch at the time of his death. He was a faithful member of the church for fifty-four years and stanch in his testimony of the truthfulness of the latter-day work. He leaves his widow, Frances M. Lawn; two brothers, John A., of Hollister, and Doctor Ray, of Watsonville; five sisters, Mrs. Anne Waters, Mrs. Alice Gilbert, and Mrs. Walter Waters, of Hollister; Mrs. Luella Hawley, of Berkeley; and Mrs. Eugene Snow, of Santa Rosa, California. Funeral was from the local chapel, sermon by District President Guy P. Levitt, prayer by Apostle M. A. McConley, with the pastor, Elder W. H. Dawson, assisting.

KARLSTROM.—John Leonard Karlstrom was born October 25, 1878, at Monson, Massachusetts. Was baptized August 23, 1904, at Joplin, Missouri, by Elder James A. Gravis. He was faithful to the church until the last. Died at his home, 23 and Marden Lane, Joplin, November 27, 1927, leaving his wife, Mrs. Grace Karlstrom; his daughter, Genive, and son, Alvin; his father, of Porterville, California; two sisters, Lyda, of Verdigris, Oklahoma, and Alma, of Porterville, California; two brothers, Elder O. C. Karlstrom, Joplin, and Bishop A. V. Karlstrom, Independence, Missouri. Funeral services were at the Saints' church; sermon by Elder T. J. Shepherd. Interment at Forest Park Cemetery.

"A Part of the Community"

LIKE the school and the church, our institution is really a definite part of the community. Ours is not a business in the full sense of the word—BUT A SERVICE INSTITUTION. Realizing this, we leave no stone unturned in helping our clients in every way possible—in doing our bit to lessen their sorrow.
